Well, I am clearly saying now—and this cannot be challenged because it is within the ambit of this House—if they wish to pass an amendment to the Trade and Business Licence Law, saying that all companies cannot do retail business, pass it. But don't blame the Government. What has been done and this was what came out of one of the select committees some time back . . . the legislature has amended the Local Companies (Control) Licence Law and instead of a minimum of 12 years for local companies licences, it is now a maximum of 12 unless extended. There was an amendment in 1997 as the Honourable Chief Secretary has clearly stated, which has separated the Trade and Business Licensing Board from the Immigration Board, which allows for more in-depth looking at licenses to be done.

The question of how the court decision will be interpreted is a matter in due course as it affects the Local Companies (Control) Licences, anyhow, for the Trade and Business Licences Board to make a decision on. So I don't really understand and, in fact, it is unfair for Opposition to try blaming Government for doing nothing within an area—and this hasn't just started now. This has been going on.

I mean, as the honourable mover of this motion, the First Elected Member for West Bay, knows and the second, this issue has been going on for years. It is not just this government, it's previous governments as well and it is governments made up differently from how the present government is made up. We have all known this problem is there. But the solution is very simple. And to be frank, I am going to be brief but if the time spent on this debate had been put in the Select Committee on Immigration, and Trade and Business, the law could have been drafted as a very short amendment brought back to the House in a select committee report and put through the House. That is the solution!

It is no good blaming the Government. We cannot pass regulations. We cannot pass laws. I mean, we can pass regulations, but not in this area. If the law wants to restrict the giving out of a specific type of licence and it says it cannot be given to a company that is not Caymanian owned, or in this case at least 60% Caymanian owned under the Local Companies (Control) Licences Law or even more than that . . . if the legislature wishes to say it has to be 100% Caymanian owned, then they must legislate for it here. That is the simple solution to the answer.

So at the end of the day no matter what is done, Mr. Speaker, this legislature and I think the Select Committee of the House that is now sitting, if this is that urgent, then bring it up in there. It is probably going to sit in another week's time and deal with the matter.

So this is once again just something where an attempt has been made to blame Government when we are agreeing with a motion and to attempt to say that a duty which rests on this Legislative Assembly and not only Government—I want to repeat that—the Select Committee of the Legislative Assembly can draft an amendment to the law and bring it here. Any one of the Opposition can bring an amendment to a law—this is not restricted to Government.

What I would suggest is that we forget about the politics of this, forget who is right and wrong and if a practical solution needs to be done, the select committee probably will be sitting next week on Immigration and Trade and Business Licences, and then legislation can come back here as to what needs to be done. So I put forward a solution. It is my personal view (and I point that out) but it seems to me that a lot of time has been spent debating a matter which has a simple practical solution that lies within this House.

I would just like to mention as well that in going to the many graduations that we have seen recently at the schools, both government and private, and also letters in the paper recently, that the conduct in this House . . . I really think the time has come where we must look at debates constructively and try not to get into a stage of anger or a stage where the conduct of the House could be looked by those school children as saying, 'Are they the people who are talking about discipline in the schools?' when they are listening to these things on the radio. I think it is just timely to urge that.

I know, Mr. Speaker, that you do keep order. But I would just like to mention that because when you look at hundreds of children there and they are very disciplined then it does give us a lot to think about, as to how we should conduct ourselves in this honourable House.

So my support for this motion continues. However, I have put forward, as I see it, the only solution to this problem that is clearly within the ambit of this House is if there is a problem with the law in this respect then let us legislate in this House, let us go in the Select Committee, let us draft what needs to be done and bring it to the House and put it through. I have put that forward constructively because that as I see it is the ultimate solution to this problem if the legislature seriously wants to solve it. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The floor is opened to debate. If no other Member wishes to speak, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much. The job of a Member of this House is to be so watchful, so careful, and so observant of the needs of his constituents or the needs of the entire country, that if he sees a situation that is not being handled and is not being dealt with correctly, or if we know that the Government is being one-sided, or taking sides, or that the Government is not doing anything about it, then it is our duty to come to this House to find ways and means of addressing those problems. This motion is such today.

Mr. Speaker, two members have gotten up to tear down the Opposition on this Backbench for a matter that the Government of the Cayman Islands should have done something about a long time ago. I am not here to talk about Governments thirty years ago or eight years ago. I am here to talk about this present Government—one which the Minister of Education is the Leader of Government Business.

He is not the Minister of Commerce and Works neither is he the Minister responsible for Communications and Environment, whichever one we want to put these licences under. But this Government is responsible.

I had hoped that I would not even have had to reply to this motion because it is technical in stages. But, you know, Mr. Speaker, having listened to the Minister of Education and the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, I cannot leave the misleading things without trying to correct them because what the Minister of Education was saying, is completely misleading. I don't know yet what the Fourth Elected Member for George Town was trying to say—

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, with respect, on a point of order.

The Speaker: I was about to call.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: He said what I said is misleading the House. I think he should explain that or withdraw it, sir.

The Speaker: Yes, I was just about to call on that. I think there are other words and that was his point, you have made yours but please explain it.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: That's right, I have made my point that he is misleading the House and I am going to tell you how he is misleading the House, Mr. Speaker. Would you allow me to?

The Speaker: I would just want to record that he has a right to say that you are misleading so let us not get into an argument on that today. Please explain what you are saying but I am not prepared to entertain it, misleading.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, you will have to find the word because I really don't know what else it is. He is confusing the issue, that is probably a good way to put.

The Speaker: Make your explanation, please.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I had planned to deal with him last but since he rose on a point of order, I will deal with him first.

The Minister, as usual, confuses the situation when he knows they should have acted. The best thing that they can do is to confuse the issue and then try to blame whoever is raising the matter for not getting something done. So that is the Government's hobbyhorse these days. That is their defence—to confuse the issue, then to blame the Opposition.

We cannot blame the Opposition in this matter. The Opposition is doing its job in bringing this to the forefront in this legislature.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Minister went on to talk about legislation is made here, trying to make us believe that this matter . . . in fact, that is what he had said: that this matter can be solved by legislation or an amendment.

Mr. Speaker, the solution of this matter is not within the hands of this House and no legislation has to be amended in this case. The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that Government—

[Interjection: Let it go!]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Not in this case! The Government answering a question here some time ago said that the company, Esso Standard Oil, has no licence but for that of bulk importation and distribution of fuel. That is what the Government said. The Government told the House that! The company does not have a licence to retail oil and gas. The company does not have a licence to operate a convenience store. The company does not have a licence—that is a fact! So do not blame the Opposition. Do not come to this House and say that it is within the hands of this House.

You know, Mr. Speaker, I am really getting tired of the Minister trying to confuse the whole House and in turn the country. And in turn blame those of us on this side that say we are Opposition.

Mr. Roy Bodden: He is over there laughing now!

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: It makes him laugh! He who laughs last, laughs best.

Mr. Speaker, the Government says that they don't have these licences. Then what really needs to happen, Mr. Speaker, as we amended the motion to say the relevant Board must be allowed to do its business, and then we see Government talking to one side but would not talk to the other side, we have to question what is going on and that is why the motion is partly before this House today.

Did the Minister of Commerce, did the Minister of Environment, did the Minister of Education ever talk to the owner of that service station?

Mr. Roy Bodden: They begrudge him!

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Did they ever talk to him? Did they talk to the people from Esso? I have seen them within this legislature talking to certain ministers. This is not right.

And when the Opposition see these kinds of things, we have to protect our constituents, the people of this country.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I know a little bit about it when I say that the complaints have been going on for years, as the Minister of Education said. The people came to me when I was in Council and I talked to them—but I was not the Minister responsible, I could not take a paper to Executive Council but I did raise the matter. I did say to them that something ought to be done. But the answer then was one that I am hearing again today—that this is a private thing. It is not a private thing! It is not between two companies just so, Mr. Speaker.

The Government of this country has a job in that the Government licenses companies. And, Mr. Speaker, when we see the Government prosecute a Jamaican national living in this country for 30 years but this company can go on—

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Government doesn't licence companies. The Trade and Business Licence Board, before that the Immigration Board licenses these companies.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I take that point. He is right. The members—

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: On another point of order without intervening in the matter, the prosecution in the islands is a Constitutional responsibility of the Attorney General rather than the Government. Although the Attorney General's Office is part of the Government but it is a matter that is within the responsibility of the Attorney General. So I simply point out that.

Thank you.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: No, I am not questioning that. Mr. Speaker, both are correct. And I want them to know that I am not really saying that the Government is responsible. I take the point by the Honourable Attorney General—matters are put to him and it is weighed on its merits or its legal or illegal whatever. I think he made the correct point.

I would say this concerning the Minister of Education interjection: While they do not grant the licences, they appoint the people that grant the licences. The political system does that.

The country has a board appointed by the Executive Council of this country. And what needs to be done is for that Board to do its job. When we have the Deputy Chief Secretary (the Chief Secretary at the time because he was acting) came here and said that the company had no licence, then what was happened? As I said, what we look at—and I am not questioning the honourable courts, what I am saying is that when we see a Jamaican national sentenced to one month for hiring people without a permit and if he breached the law, then the law was breached—I have no question with that. What I am saying is: Why has this company, Esso—a multi-national corporation, millions of dollars at its disposal—been allowed to carry on these businesses without the requisite licences? That is the crux of the matter before us. Not an amendment by this honourable House to any legislation.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Education was specific to say that we must attend the committee meeting and organise an amendment to say oil companies can't retail oil.

[Laughter]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I know that he has to defend the Government but really he should have sat down at that point and let the Minister of Commerce or the other Minister who was responsible for this answer. He should not have taken this on!

Mr. Roy Bodden: True!

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: He should not have taken this on because it is utter nonsense. No amendment is needed to the Trade and Business Law of this country. What is needed is for the company to be licensed and what is good for the goose in this country, must be for the gander.

Do we continue by saying, Mr. Speaker, that a poor man and his wife who struggle to do a business . . . and I have been at both ends of this thing. They sell and you can't? I said no! If you worked and built up a business and you want to sell, once you go through the right channel, you should be allowed to sell if you come to that point in your life that you don't want to operate your business. But in this case, this man wants to carry on his business, he wants to be able to—and he has built it up, Mr. Speaker, and this thing has got to touch us.

Don't say that we are playing politics. I don't live in George Town but even if I lived in George Town—and the truth is, the man is my constituent, somebody pointed out, I just realised that! That has nothing to do with it! It has happened before and it will happen again.

They must realise that this motion goes beyond the specific case. But do you know what? Even if somebody wants to say that is what it is all about, let him say that. My position is that a wrong has been committed in this country and whether it is from George Town, West Bay, North Side, East End or Cayman Brac, it is wrong. And if it was wrong for the Jamaican national who lived here 30 years, it is wrong for the Esso Standard Oil with the billions of dollars. It is wrong, wrong, wrong, wrong!

The motion goes beyond this specific case at hand, Mr. Speaker, because we don't want it to happen to anyone in the future. That is what this is all about! And what is going to happen, Mr. Speaker, is that if they are allowed to continue and they get away with this one, they are going to do it to others.

We have a law—and I want to make that clear to this House and to the country, Mr. Speaker. We do not need to do as the Minister of Education has said, we do not need to bring an amendment to the Trade and Business Licensing Law. This has nothing to do with that. What this is all about is that this company is operating in at least three different areas without a licence to do that kind of business. In so doing, they are hurting a local company; they are pressurising them. We can't allow that.

Since government has been aware of certain instances, and since it has done nothing about it, we had to bring it to the forefront. So, Mr. Speaker, it is really nothing as the Minister of Education has said. I think that he should not have even spoken in this debate because he really seemed like he didn't know what he was talking about—but he knew what he was talking about. I know that he has better sense than that! He was confusing the issue!

Mr. Speaker, as to the debate on the matter by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, I still don't know where he was at. And, Mr. Speaker, I wish you had intervened. He mentioned at some point in his speech about having to look at the entire good of everybody. What that was all about I still don't know. Not one or two retailers, he said.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Let him insinuate whatever he wants to. If what is being done to this one company—this one retailer—is allowed it will trickle down to other retailers. That is the crux of the matter.

The fundamental problem is that Esso does not have the proper licences. They are not licensed to do the business. How can anyone even hint that they must be left alone? How can we leave it alone if they are wrongfully doing what they are doing?

He talked about competition. You know, he is another one that is seriously confused! The situation of Esso operating a business without a lawful licence has nothing to do with competition, has nothing to do with nationalisation. And he should be the last one to talk about nationalisation. Nobody is saying anything about nationalisation—this has nothing to do with what Jamaica did. He read the wrong book this morning or last night.

We are saying here, Mr. Speaker, that a multinational corporation—which doesn't have a licence—is preventing a legitimate Caymanian company—probably so licensed within our laws—from being able to serve its customers and from significantly realising returns on its investments and labour, which is at the very core of our free enterprise system we talk about. That is the crux of the matter. The inability of this company to operate without curtailing the ability of Caymanians to benefit from its products and services.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town was completely out to sea—without even a boat! Even without a life vest! He was lost! He didn't know what he was talking about and he is another one who should not have spoken in this debate. Only to get up and think that somehow he can get the best of us. He has a long way to go and he better understand that!

Mr. Speaker, I think that those of us on this side who say that we are Opposition have done the right thing in bringing this motion to the House. I think, Mr. Speaker, we are asking . . . and the Honourable Chief Secretary recognised it. He must have recognised it because he accepted it. So how can the Minister of Education contradict him by confusing this situation? The Honourable Chief Secretary said he knew that this was happening—he said that!

The Speaker: Just refer to him as the Honourable First Official Member.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Sorry!

The Speaker: Refer to him as the Honourable First Official Member.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Yes, okay, Mr. Speaker. The Honourable Chief Secretary—the Honourable First Official Member.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think I need to say anymore on this. The fundamental problem is that Esso Standard Oil does not have the proper licences, they are not licensed to do the business, and I don't see how anybody can say anything else. That is the crux of the matter. The end result is that they are pressuring a local company and we are saying to the Government to get their relevant authority to act and it should be done quickly because they know it is a problem. I would hope that the political arm with five members is not stopping the official arm with three members from getting its job done.

Mr. Speaker, one last comment on the conduct of Members of the House.

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, Parliament is the house of debate—and heated debate at times. We can carry on and go too far, and we have at times. But those members that provoke it are the biggest sinners. Those members that get up and call people fools, idiots, that talk about people who don't have education and have no sense—that is the kind of thing that brings the heated debate. The Minister of Education—who is the Minister responsible for schools—ought to be in the lead with conduct.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 15/99 as twice amended. All in favour, please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 15/99, AS TWICE AMENDED, PASSED.

The Speaker: We shall now suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:37 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12:13 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Government Business, Motions, Government Motion No. 4/99, 10 Year National Strategic Plan (1999 - 2008). Debate continues.

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 4/99

10 YEAR NATIONAL STRATEGIC PLAN
(1999-2008)

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we recognise that the needs of our country, our society, are dynamic. And we must plan for the changes taking place now and those changes that will come in the future. This is a good motion, one that I hope to rise to and put forward my ideas as I view the present and the future.

Mr. Speaker, I have long recognised the need to plan long-term in order to be able to cull a society that fits the needs of the people of these islands. We have a few resources and we must compete in the world market to survive and prosper. We are an open country and are exposed to the fluctuations of global business and demand cycles. When the world sneezes, we catch a cold. That is, when market conditions change we are rapidly affected.

We have grown fast over the last thirty years and the quality of life, or as I like to put it, the wellness of life, has improved on most fronts. Many people, however, did not think far enough into the future in the beginning of that thirty years to sufficiently plan for the kind of world we are living in and developing today. Thirty years ago, the in-thing for a young person was to get out of school and get a job. The banking industry and construction with tourism was booming so the attitude was let's get what we can get.

I am glad that some of our people have done well. But for the physical growth and development of our nation, for nation building in the new millennium, we find most of our people to a great extent not prepared. Far too many of our people are not prepared to take advantage of global markets and the advanced technology that will drive economies in the new millennium.

The Vision 2008 Plan has within it tremendous needs, wants, and things that are a 'must do' if we are to survive. As legislators and proponents of this plan, we really need to get out in the highways and byways of this country to involve our people and let them know the kind of country we are trying to build over the next 10 years and beyond. The greatest challenge I see for this plan is that of being able to take our people along with it. We cannot build over a nation within ten years, and from what I hear we are in a mode of 'want.'

Some people 'want' but don't want in this country. Mr. Speaker, in saying that, everybody wants the same standard of living—nobody wants to regress to where we were thirty years ago. And those of us who care about those at the lower end realise that they are still far behind and not equipped educationally to come to grips with the changes that are being demanded; nor are they equipped to take advantage of the opportunities that exist and that we are striving to create in the next millennium.

We have to ask: Can we keep the standard of living but live with the kind of restrictions that, for instance, certain environmentalist say are needed? Can we keep the standard of living and, for instance, slow down development? The key will be to balance the two. Mr. Speaker, if we keep everything as is right now today, the banking sector will continue (we hope), but not all our people work there. If we kept everything as it is today, the big employers will continue—Cable & Wireless, Caribbean Utilities Company, and Government will continue but not all our people work there.

If we build larger bureaucracies, if we put in tighter restrictions, if we take away the rights of people to sell their land at the price they want, if we do away with real estate and development companies, if we harass investors, what then? The sad thing is, Mr. Speaker, even with some magic we are able to keep things as they are today, those same big employers I mentioned would be forced to find other open environments to do business in which resemble what Cayman used to be.

Where do we go from here? Would the people in the safe jobs—the banks, CUC, Cable and Wireless, National Trust, Government, make a living and plan for the future? Raise their children? Pay their bills? But would those people who are not in those safe jobs be able to do those things? Will they even have a job?

The competitive environment surrounding us has changed tremendously. Thirty years ago, we were unique in our liberal attitude seeking to attract foreign direct investments. Both developed and developing countries today, Mr. Speaker, are going all out to attract high value projects. Some of them even offer very generous incentives including, in some cases, outright grants.

Thirty years ago, there were no banking alternatives in the Turks. Thirty years ago, there were no safe off-shore opportunities in the British Virgin Islands. Thirty years ago, Cuba was not poised to be a power house in the Caribbean tourism market. Mr. Speaker, thirty years ago, the Cayman Islands stood as the prime option for investment and growth in the Caribbean basin. That is a fact!

Many of our competitors have the advantage of lower land and labour costs. We are constrained by our size and limited resources. Labour costs are still high, but we do know in a lot of cases it is one-sided because far too many people in construction and in tourism are getting wage levels that are not manageable in today's economy. But it is not the Government's job to depress labour costs, but rather to create and foster an environment where higher wages are balanced and sustained by opportunities for business and workers alike.

We do need to step in when we see that advantage is being taken of our people. It is a partnership between worker and employer, and the sooner that some people get that in their minds, the better off we are. Mr. Speaker, business cannot carry on without labour. Labour would not be able to be labour without business with a salary paid. I think at least one person in the House ought to recognise that fact.

Our realm, in any case, must be to create better paying jobs. Also, when we hear statements made about people not being able to buy property and why they cannot buy it—we should ensure that each piece of property is used efficiently and yields full economic return. Now, in order to achieve this market forces must be allowed to prevail. For the value created by the market place, as I understand it, translates into opportunities for wealth to be shared by all those persons involved.

If a person is forced by whomever to sell his property for a lower price than he might otherwise get (whether that person is rich or a man on the street who owns a little lot), he is then unable to share the normal profits with those who work for and with him. What am I saying? That sort of Government control smacks of Communism an ideology that has failed the world over to provide any benefit to the people it purported to help.

You don't create housing opportunities for the lower income by artificially suppressing land cost. You create those opportunities by giving people the tools and the assistance necessary to choose for themselves where they want to live, the kind of opportunities and assistance that we brought forward in the last couple of weeks in the motion for housing. We should not try to force down the level of people's aspirations but lift them up so that they are able to have what they aspire to. That is what is needed, Mr. Speaker.

We must balance the country's needs in housing, industry, commerce, and recreation to provide the opportunities that all our people desire. We seriously need to be watching at the same time the overall cost of doing business in these islands. Mr. Speaker, for us to remain competitive in the new millennium, higher costs in these islands should be justified by higher performance and capabilities. We know that that is not altogether happening especially in government's capital expenditure.

Mr. Speaker, some of the plans in Vision 2008 are costly in terms of money. But we know that all things cannot be done at one time and government will have to prioritise. For these islands to remain successful, it is not good enough to operate the system according to existing rules—trying to do what we have always done. Although it is necessary to constantly fine tune existing policies and replace them sometimes, it is even more important to review the overall framework of policies from time to time and decide when fundamental changes have become necessary.

I don't think the Cayman Islands—this government or any other government—can do in the future as we did in the past. In fact, that is most obvious from the challenges we are facing. To begin with, government has to lead by example. If we are asking our people to do something, to further the vision of the islands, we must enable them to do so. The old way of managing will surely need realigning to achieve this future vision. All that our people want, all that our people will demand of us, will not be able to be done as quick or in the fashion they want it. And, Mr. Speaker, we as managers, we as legislators will have to say so openly to them—even at the risk of losing votes.

It's no use coming in here talking about land cost, saying you don't mean one thing, then going on the street and saying that people are selling their land too expensive. I think I covered that already but that is what I am talking about. We cannot talk out of both corners of our mouths as legislators. We must openly tell people that all the things that they demand of us, all the things that they might want, might not be able to be done as quickly as they want it or some of them might not even be able to be done.

Mr. Speaker, I will give you an idea of what I am talking about. When I was a minister in Executive Council and trying to get sports off the ground, I spoke to various people and looked at various plans. The plan we came up with for facilities was one of regional centres—a centre in West Bay, a centre in Frank Sound for the Eastern districts, and a larger centre in George Town with a track with smaller fields and a district for practice. Unfortunately, only one person, the Elected Member for North Side agreed with that. Nobody wanted that. Everybody wanted their own centre because that is what their people were demanding of them.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: In the Government, the National Team, policymakers and supporters, everybody wanted their own because that is what the people were demanding. Everybody wanted to see something in their own constituency, in their own district. Well, we got them but at what price.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps it would have saved tremendous money if we had had a regional medical centre in the Frank Sound area with all its facilities rather than the three clinics we have. Not to say that the people don't deserve it but we are talking about cost and utilising the available resources in the best economic way possible.

Again, we went to what the people wanted—everybody wanted a clinic in their own district and so that is what we got. Not criticising any minister because at times I was the minister responsible. We as legislators have to have fresh ideas, change old habits and be prepared to explain to our people why something cannot be done the way they ideally wish it to be and guide them to the solutions that will enable them to achieve it. That's what we have to start doing.

Mr. Speaker, Look at the recurrent cost of all these facilities I just mentioned. Everybody wanted it, the people were screaming for it for twenty-five years. Vision 2008 gives us a chance to move forward. Fresh ideas, change old habits and explain to our people.

Mr. Speaker, there is much concern for the future of the natural heritage of the Cayman Islands, particularly the preservation in a sustainable fashion of our environment. It has always been my position that we need to establish an equity balance between development and the environment, as I said in the beginning. In recent months, there has been much said about the dangers of over-development and the impact upon the natural heritage that we are entrusted to safeguard for our children. We cannot have our cake and eat it too, if we are to offer to the future Caymanians the type of living standard and opportunities our generation has enjoyed.

In response to this pressing challenge, we need to do more than talk. We are obliged by the trust that the people have placed in us to find solutions. Not just expedient solutions, Mr. Speaker, or solutions that have a short-term political benefit but true solutions, visionary solutions that will balance the needs and desires of all the people of the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, I suggest we turn our gaze to the future, which the Vision 2008 compels us so to do. In doing so, work together with all concerned citizens to create a pattern and a formula that balances these needs and provides a blueprint for the sustainable and profitable future we all wish for our children and our children's children.

A little more than a full generation ago our islands were a fishing tank, more commonly called "The Islands that Time Forgot," where infestations of harmful mosquitoes endangered the lives of livestock and children. Slightly more than a generation ago, our people had to leave the islands for any hope of a brighter future. Our mothers, our fathers, and some of us in this honourable House today played a part, had the vision to think of our islands as a place where a higher standard of living could exist than there ever had been in the Caribbean before. A place, Mr. Speaker, where we could take the swamps and make them into a safe and healthy paradise. A place where the world would come to do business and, oh, how we have prospered.

The courage of those dreams and the will to make them a reality has made the Cayman Islands today the envy of the world. But the past successes that we have achieved are no insurance for our future success and security. We need to look forward again and map out a future that will ensure the past gains and provide for future growth and prosperity for all our people.

Mr. Speaker, it is with these concerns in mind that I would like us to stop talking and begin planning for the future that is at our doorstep today. An example of what I am expounding, Mr. Speaker, is the balance between development and environmental protection, the use of our current resources to create the kind of sustainable growth to meet future expectations and desires of the people who live here.

As we heard from one member and from others in the community, one current topic that has been hotly debated is the best use of our developable land and its relation and impact on the natural heritage of our islands. Mr. Speaker, there has been much said about the dangers of development but little of constructive use on how to deal with it. By now, we all recognise the need for balance in our approach. Indeed, one of the key pillars of the Vision 2008 Report boldly outlined in the opening statement of purpose is (and I quote): "That healthy natural and built environment and a balance between the two, is essential for social, economic and political well-being and prosperity." This is a fine goal but how are we to achieve it?

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that Vision 2008 contains some of the answers if we have the courage to embrace them. What are we to do to balance the real benefits, for instance, of a large project like the Ritz Carlton, which was mentioned by one with the critical on-going concern for the preservation of our mangrove wetlands. Do we put our heads in the sand and hope it goes away? Mr. Speaker, do we drive out the very development that has given us all the standard of living of which we are so proud? Or do we seek a sensible and balanced approach whereby the benefit of development can be enjoyed by the current population and at the same time create a basis for a living heritage of our children.

The pressing need facing us now is to find our way to the future we all want. And to do so, we need to chart our course and take the first steps. I believe that the first course is a thoughtful balance of the benefits that development brings and to couple those benefits to the longer term goals of preservation, both of our natural resources and the economic opportunities in a sustainable way.

As I said, Mr. Speaker, Vision 2008 contains some of the answers. The first step on this course can be found on page 72, Action Plan 7, Step 1 (and I quote): "Further the onus [for protection, that is] must be placed on the developer to identify and implement mitigation measures for the impact of the project."

Mr. Speaker, what does this mean? It means that rather than fighting development in the areas that offer the highest growth and opportunity for the people, we should encourage, we should insist that developers work with the people to see that this type of partnership for the future is made a reality.

The Speaker: If this is a convenient time in your speech, we shall suspend for lunch. We will resume at 2:15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12:50 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2:37 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Government Motion No. 4/99.

The First Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we took the break for lunch, I said we needed to educate our people on the things that will be demanded of them in order to fulfil the Vision 2008 plans. I said we need to be competitive, to be able to cope with emerging markets around us. I also said that we couldn't create better paying jobs by killing business but that sensible discussion is needed, and that business and labour should be partners.

I said we couldn't under price our land, as we should ensure that each piece of land is used efficiently and yields full economic returns.

Mr. Speaker, I said that if a person were forced by whatever means to sell his property for a lower price than he might otherwise get, he would be unable to share those profits, and that government or any entity or person using that sort of thinking or that sort of control over the market place is using an ideology that has failed—namely, Communism—the world over to provide any benefit to the people that it purported to help.

Mr. Speaker, I had said that you don't create housing opportunities for the lower income by artificially suppressing land cost. We need to create those opportunities by giving people the tools and assistance necessary and that is what we had attempted to do in the motions passed in the house a few days ago.

I also talked about the need to balance development with our natural environment. We need to be cognisant of the critical ongoing concern for the preservation of our mangrove wetlands as against any large development. I said that the Ritz Carlton Project was pointed out by one Member.

Then, Mr. Speaker, do we put our heads in the sand and hope that all this goes away? Do we drive out the very development that has given us all the standard of living of which we are so proud? Or do we seek a sensible and balanced approach whereby the benefits of development can be enjoyed by the current population and at the same time create a base for a living heritage for our children.

The pressing need facing us now is to find our way to the future we all want and to do so, we need to chart our course and take those first steps. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the right course is a thoughtful balance of the benefits that development brings and to couple those benefits to the longer term goals of preservation, both of our natural resources and the economic opportunities in a sustainable way.

The first step on this course can be found on page 72, Action Plan 7, Step 1, and I quote: "Further the onus [that is the onus for protection] must be placed on the developer to identify and implement mitigation measures for the impact of the project." Mr. Speaker, what does this mean? It means that rather than fighting development in the areas that offers the highest growth and opportunity for the people, we should encourage, we should insist that developers work with the people to see that this type of partnership for the future is made a reality.

Mr. Speaker, what would be good for these islands (since the Ritz Carlton was mentioned) is if the developers of the Ritz Carlton Project were to purchase lands in the central mangroves and donate them to the National Trust as mitigation for the development of lands, which have already been dyked by the necessary efforts to drain for the removal of the mosquitoes, the lands that they are developing.

Mr. Speaker, public energies should not be squandered in opposing validly approved plans, rather they should be spent in working towards this type of positive initiative. And I am not just talking about the Ritz Carlton, it could be any project. The report on page 76, Action Plan 3, Step 3, goes on to say that the purchase of the lands should be paid for out of the environment protection fees. Mr. Speaker, why don't we ask from the developers of the Ritz Carlton and all future developers to offer this mitigation in addition to the fees that are already paid by them? The fees can then be used for other conservation projects.

Also on page 76, the statement aim of the report is to (and I quote): "Officially declare the North Sound and its remaining fringing mangroves an area of national importance."

Mr. Speaker, the report also on page 76, goes on to say in subsection 3, "Amend immediately the Planning law to prohibit any further removal of remaining mangroves (with the exception of access channels) within 300 feet of the outer edge of the mangroves fringing the Western and Southern periphery of the North Sound..." Mr. Speaker, again looking at this topic and looking at what was said by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, this is exactly what forms part of the approvals of that development as I understand it, and is reinforced by its environmental guidelines and impact study which forms part of the approvals. This should be the model for all future applications for development on the islands.

This is an opportunity, Mr. Speaker, rather than a problem. It is an opportunity for us to create in a real and tangible way a precedent for how we want our islands developed. And they have said so in this Vision 2008. I say, let us welcome the opportunity for this private investor funded mitigation and enshrine the necessity for detail studies and guidelines along with creating a direct link between development and the effectual ownership of the entire central mangrove by the people of the Cayman Islands for all time.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that this is a healthy way to go. We cannot roll back the hands of time. Development will have to go [on] if we all want to have a good standard of living. Further, Mr. Speaker, let us guide our people in the appreciation of their natural heritage by adopting the proposal from page 77, Action Plan 6, Step 3, and I quote: "Implement an educational campaign targeting public and private sectors regarding the necessity and process of Environment Impact Assessments."

This need not be something that is far fetched or a dream for the future, we can have it today, I believe. Let us agree that an environmental impact assessment becomes a part of all future development applications and that we also insist that these developments provide at their own expense educational centres accessible to all our people which will teach our children about the heritage we are striving to protect.

This type of educational centre I am talking about is one where recognised experts, biologist from around the globe, come to study the environment of our islands and teach our people about them, whether in the classrooms, town halls but preferably on the central mangroves itself. This type of centre has been successfully established in other countries, which have taken a concerned view of their future natural heritage. In the future, we can train our own people to pass on the appreciation of our heritage to future generations without anyone being able to push in their heads that development can't go on because you are destroying everything.

Let us pull together and use the resources, skills, and energies of all people who love the Cayman Islands to move forward to provide the future we want for our grandchildren, a future they will look back and thank us for.

Mr. Speaker, development and the natural environment can work together but it has to be a balanced approach—not one-sided. If we are going to offer the continued standard of living that we are used to we have to have that balanced approach where both co-exist. Mr. Speaker, how else are we going to pay the kind of mortgages that we pay for our homes? How else are we going to raise our children and give them the necessities of life? Yes, government pays for their education, at least up to high school. But government, too, has to get funds. And where else will they get funds from? The only other place that we will get funds is if we move into direct taxation—and nobody on this side of the House ever talks about that.

Development is where funds come from. And anybody on this side or anywhere else who believes that they can stand up to get political mileage for a few votes and tell people that you have to stop them from charging for their land what they want to, or that you have to stop development is not doing the country any favours. If they are doing all that, then they must come and say where the country is going to get the money from to do the things that everybody needs.

Not only [do we have] wants, Mr. Speaker, but we all have a standard of living, thank God, that we all want to keep. Who wants to go back to the days of outside toilets? Who wants to go back to the days of the caboose? Yes, this is part and parcel of our heritage. Mr. Speaker, but who wants it? Yes, we all like the cake that is baked on the caboose, but we all would not want to give up sleeping in a good bedroom to get that cake from that caboose. Who wants to go back to plantain trash bed?

Mr. Speaker, we have done well. The country has done well over the thirty years. We have failed in certain areas but by and large we know where we have come from and we ought not to let anybody destroy what we have for political mileage.

There was mention about who worked on the plan, some 46 percent outsiders and 50-something percent Caymanians. Mr. Speaker, I have never been one that believed I can't be told something or I can't be shown something. We don't know that much that we cannot learn something. And we have to stop using and we have to get to a position in this country . . . and we talk about diversity of the population. Well, we have to get to the position where we stop using foreign nationals as scapegoats too!

Yes, some of them might not be able to vote, but some of them can offer and have offered to us—and I say some because not all make their contribution and can tell us certain things because of what they have been through, what they have learned from their own countries. Some people ask me, Mr. Speaker, why I go to conferences in the Caribbean or go to conferences in some countries. I say 'to learn sometimes what not to do'.

You can learn from any situation. I hope that we can get to a position where immigration is not used for political reasons, vote catching and vote gathering. Mr. Speaker, the biggest job of this plan, some of the most difficult areas to deal with for the plan to accomplish are those that talk about changing the way people think. That, in itself, is a long-term education, to change attitudes. When people are used to doing things in a certain way, it is not easy to turn it around.

The plan talks about Caymanian morals and spiritual values. And how do we bring people back to the morals we talked about, for instance? How do we do that? We have to start in our homes. We have to start in our schools. We have to start in public forums. We have to start when children's minds are elastic enough to gather that information, to understand what we are talking about but we have to do it. I said earlier that we have to sing the same tune—every district has to learn to raise the child.

They talk about, it takes a village—a global village? Mr. Speaker, it takes our own village—we start here to raise a child, but we must all sing the same tune. We must all sing the same song to the same tune. That's how we are going to get passed some of these problems.

Mr. Speaker, globalisation, the rapid rate of technological advancement, has created a completely new competitive landscape. Changing the way business is done, creating new projects, creating new services and markets. Cayman must be prepared to enter that in the new millennium—we must be even more fleet-footed and move decisively to meet these changes.

Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the team on the work they have done. I congratulate the ministry. This is an important document—not everything I agree [with], not everything can be done overnight but it is a plan that the country needs. You have to have a plan to move forward with.

I congratulate the Permanent Secretary, Mrs. Basdeo, on her management. Now, we all have a job of educating our people and bringing our people along so that they can take advantage of this new millennium, we talked about. We have policies that need revamping now and we need new policies. We know, as I said earlier, we cannot continue to keep doing business the same way we used to. And where we are at fault, let us acknowledge our fault and move forward.

The new millennium is upon us. These are challenging times. I am glad to be alive, I am glad to be a legislator—I am part of it all. I plan to rise to the challenges before us for the 21st Century and pray that Almighty God will continue to bless us in the next thirty years, as He has blessed us in the last.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The floor is opened to debate.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Cayman Islands National Strategic Plan (1999-2008) is the brainchild of our former Governor, Mr. John Owen. These islands, therefore, owe a great deal of gratitude to him for this plan and other key initiatives introduced by him during his tenure as Governor.

But let me quickly add that I am pleased to note that the present Governor, His Excellency, Mr. Peter John Smith, has continued to develop upon the foundation laid by his predecessor. Vision 2008, which was first announced by Governor Owen in his 1998 Throne Speech, is but one of a number of reform initiatives introduced during his tenure in office, the others being the reinvention of government, fiscal reforms and the public sector management reforms and freedom of information.

Mr. Speaker, Vision 2008 is nonetheless one of the key initiatives introduced to provide for a better and more responsive style of government. Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning did a good job in his comprehensive presentation of the motion now before the House. Similarly, my gratitude goes out to the news media for the great job that they have done in educating the public about this plan, Vision 2008.

While it is not my intention during my short contribution to extol the excellency or virtue of the plan as such, (mainly because I am cognisant of the fact that the most crucial aspect of this exercise still remains to be accomplished) I nonetheless recognise the major efforts that have been made by the planning team and others involved in this exercise.

Mr. Speaker, the most important part of this plan is yet to come—and that is the implementation phase of the plan. In Mr. John Owen's 1999 Throne Speech, he stated that the two key challenges facing these islands today, will be the OECD, EU and G7 initiatives; and the implementation of the Vision 2008 Plan. So, Mr. Speaker, he has placed the implementation of this plan amongst the top 10 percent of the matters that require to be dealt with.

Mr. Speaker, though the OECD, EU, and G7 initiatives will have a major impact on the success or otherwise of the implementation of this plan, it is not my intention to go into any detail on that subject except to say that Vision 2008 and all other similar exercises will be relegated to the wastepaper basket or at best become an academic exercise if we are unable to reach a satisfactory agreement in regard to the Cayman Islands position within the global marketplace and more specifically as it relates to the OECD group of countries. In this respect as regards the OECD group of countries, we have demonstrated in a number of ways our commitment to maintaining a quality jurisdiction which acknowledges our responsibilities to the international community.

Mr. Speaker, let us not lose sight of the fact that the 10 Year National Strategic Plan is exactly as it says—at this stage it is only a plan. Some people have described it as “blueprint for the future,” others a “design” or a “scheme.” But it is basically a plan. The success of that plan will be determined by the success of its implementation.

The foreword to the plan states (and I quote): “The 10 Year National Strategic Plan is based on the belief that the Cayman Islands can continue in harmony and prosperity if we implement the recommendations of Vision 2008 according to the principle of balance growth and integrated policy development.”

The plan, as is stated in that paragraph, is based on the beliefs in the continued smooth and uninterrupted future development of these islands. But it should be noted, Mr. Speaker, that it is highlighted that implementation of the recommendation of Vision 2008 is the most crucial aspect of this exercise. In other words, the key challenge of Vision 2008 still remains to be accomplished. I, therefore, trust that all those responsible for the success of the plan thus far are totally committed to its implementation. It is only then, that any conclusions can reasonably be reached as to its success. This does not, however, take away from the hard work and efforts of all that have contributed in bringing the plan to this point.

Let me, therefore, congratulate the Vision 2008 team under the able leadership of Mrs. Joy Basedo, the Executive Director. And, of course, her assistant, Mrs. Hyacinth Connolly, the Strategic Planning Facilitator. Also the Planning Team members and the Round Table leaders and last but by no means least, the Strategic Integration Group under the able chairmanship of the Governor, responsible for the co-ordination of the various initiatives including the Vision 2008 Plan. I was somewhat disappointed to have not heard more mention made of the role that was played by the Strategic Integration Group.

Mr. Speaker, many of the previous speakers have spoken on the plan. But I do not intend to spend a lot of time speaking on the plan because as I see it, it is list of wishes for the future, beliefs, a blueprint of what we would wish to see happen. I will concentrate somewhat more on the implementation phase of the plan.

We have seen a number of very good plans come and go, Mr. Speaker. But there has to be a will for the implementation of those plans for them to be successful.

A key ingredient to the mix of initiatives necessary for the successful implementation of the National Strategic Plan, or Vision 2008 as it is known, is to have bipartisan political support of the plan. Mr. Speaker, my good colleague from Bodden Town, the Third Elected Member, stressed that point and I could not agree with him more that one of the beautiful aspects of the preparation of this plan is that it received the support of both sides of this House. So, no one will be able to gain political mileage by saying to somebody else, 'it is your plan and if it doesn't succeed, you are responsible'. We are all responsible for this plan. So, it is our duty and responsibility to see that it works.

Mr. Speaker, the crucial ingredient that remains to be accomplished is that of the implementation of the plan. This can only be accomplished by the full support of the same people that prepared the plan, the people of the Cayman Islands. It will be calling for human resources to support it, it will be calling for certain funds to make it work and we will have to depend on the same people that have asked us to put their objectives in place in the form of this plan.

A number of strategies and objectives have been included in this plan. But how will these strategies and objectives be implemented? Has sufficient attention been given to the necessary commitment and training of senior civil servants and their staff? What is the human resource policy in this regard? Why is it that the key individual responsible for putting this plan together, the Executive Director, was not allowed to continue until at least the first implementation phase of the plan was completed? Why is it that she is returning to full-time work in the portfolio on the 14th of this month? The question remains who is to co-ordinate the plan? I realise that the Vision Office is still running and will be put in place but we all know that the success of any organisation depends on a good leader.

Mr. Speaker, in addition to who will co-ordinate the plan, what new way of thinking is required? We have a number of senior civil servants that have been accustomed to doing things in a certain way. Are those individuals being afforded the opportunity to obtain effective training that will prepare them for this next phase of this plan? How will this information or communication be facilitated? Mr. Speaker, the most crucial question is: When will they begin?

There is no use for members to get up in here and talk about the excellencies of this plan—it is such a beautifully bound plan, it has a pretty cover, it is going to do wonders for this country... That is not so! It will do nothing for the Cayman Islands unless it is properly implemented.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the main question is that effective training be put in place so that the permanent secretaries and their departments and units, ministries and portfolios will be able to do the proper implementation of this plan.

I will just take a minute to look at the Key to this plan. From page 60 it makes reference to the setting of priorities. It says here, Mr. Speaker, under setting of priorities that the strategies and action plans developed within the Vision process cover a vast range of subjects, all of which are important to the community. Integrated growth management requires policy development and implementation to be an on-going process. Throughout this area of the Key, reference is made to the need for effective implementation of the plan.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to be speaking on this particular point for a bit longer because it is so important and I am wondering whether there is enough understanding and realisation within the top echelon of government that sacrifices will have to be made at the top level of the senior civil service personnel in order for this plan to become a success.

Mr. Speaker, programmes begun in the initial phase with policy formulation and data collection, which may continue into the second phase for implementation and the third for programme assessment and modification. It is also important to note that the sequence of implementation of our suggestive objectives is much more important than the time period suggestion. That is very important, Mr. Speaker. There is no use—the people that will be responsible for directing these initiatives, sitting back and saying that they are not prepared either in their minds or with the knowledge that they have to take this plan into the next phase of implementation.

The same thing will apply to the financial reforms when we get to them. We here a lot of talk about accrual accounting, that is the password in this House, and I wonder sometimes if a lot of the people talking about it realise how much work is going to be entailed in doing this. This plan is no bigger or no better except for the fact that it had the input of our Caymanian people, for instance the tourism that was done. But where is that today? Where is the tourism plan? And I am not going to say how much better our road system would have been if the Master Ground Transportation Plan had not been scuffled.

Mr. Speaker, the planning team is cognisant of the fact (and I am reading from the Key, page 61) "That government resources, both human and economic are finite and that priorities must be set so as to achieve balance development in the most efficient manner. The planning team is also aware that the greatest efficiency and public benefit will be derived if the action plans are implemented in a balance and integrated fashion consistent with the unifying theme of developing in harmony and prosperity which vision has established."

Mr. Speaker, I will be touching on the area of the phasing as I move along but I cannot stress too strongly the importance of us getting the proper human resources, the economic resources put together in order that this plan can now move ahead. Why is it so important that it moves ahead in this balanced manner in which I have just referred to? The importance is that it is not our plan, it is not the plan of any Member of this House—it is the people's plan. It is the people that put this plan together. So we have a duty and we have a responsibility to see that it is implemented in a timely and proper manner.

On setting priorities, the passage goes on, therefore, within the framework of integrated growth management, the following criteria was used in establishing priorities and allocation to phases: "Urgency: The determination of carrying capacities for our natural environment, built environment, economic, human resource, social and cultural, cost effectiveness and implementation logistics." Mr. Speaker, I would just like to pause here.

We have heard a lot of rhetoric about the destruction of the natural environment. Mr. Speaker, until this country is prepared to accept that there needs to be a happy balance—a balance that the people of this country can live with—then the Vision 2008 Plan is just a big academic exercise. It will not be put into any kind of implementation phase. We need to understand that some amount of destruction will be done to the natural environment.

As much as we would hate to see some of the trees in this country pulled down, if we are going to talk about developing the Cayman Islands under a sustained plan of development in accordance with Vision 2008 Plan, then we have to be sensible and understand that some sacrifice will have to be made.

The same situation will occur with the marine environment. We want to bring in more tourism, our docks getting busier, we are importing more stuff, then we will have to expand the docks. To expand the docks, it might mean that there will be some degree of siltage. Mr. Speaker, one Member in this House used a phrase, I don't think it is original but it was appropriate. I don't think it was used in the appropriate circumstance but one cannot have one's cake and eat it. I think that Member was taken to task by one of my good colleagues.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, we also have to look at the cost of operating these islands. Many people believe that despite the fact that we have perhaps the paradise of the world, not just of the Caribbean in which we live, that we are fast pricing ourselves out of the market.

It has gotten so bad in the Cayman Islands that it is difficult to say what is the standard of living of people in the island. How do you measure one's standard of living? It cannot be measured by the yardstick of one's salary—it must be measured by the purchasing power of that salary. What can you obtain with that salary? And what are the other amenities that are available to the people living in the country?

We also hear, Mr. Speaker, that our per capita income is so high. That is a big joke! What we have to take into account is that at least 45% to 50% Gross Domestic Product (GDP)—or the income generated in these islands—is shipped away from these shores, is transit income. It is taken back to the country where these people come from!

We need to also face the reality that many of our people are suffering in these islands. Some people can't even find a decent place to sleep, a decent room to put their children in. Up to yesterday, my colleague and I (and this happens quite often), the First Elected Member for George Town, had to listen to the very sad story of one of our constituents. This is all a part of looking at what we want our islands to look like by the year 2008.

We want ensure that our people are taken care of. Not just to be able to present a beautifully bound volume and say this is what we have put together for the next year. The greatest asset of these islands that must be protected is our people. In this whole equation, we want to ensure that their interests are well protected.

Mr. Speaker, if you would like to take a break, I would be pleased to do that.

The Speaker: Is it convenient to you at this time?

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4:19 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Government Motion No. 4/99. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment because the Member who was speaking is not here.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I know that the last speaker, the Third Elected Member for George Town is tied up in another important meeting here and it's just about time for adjournment. So I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until next week Wednesday at 10:00 p.m.

The Speaker: If I may ask the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning. A Paper has been circulated that they have asked for the Immigration Select Committee to meet on Wednesday and Thursday of next week. I don't know if that has been approved by the House.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Second Official Member has kindly agreed to put that committee on Friday and Monday instead, so that the House could go on Wednesday and Thursday and finish this motion, sir, and get it out.

The Speaker: So the question is that this House do now adjourn until Wednesday at 10:00 a.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House do stand adjourned until 10:00 a.m. on Wednesday.

AT 4:21 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10:00 AM WEDNESDAY, 7 JULY 1999.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 4/99

10 YEAR NATIONAL STRATEGIC PLAN (1999-2008)

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On Friday (2 July), I commenced with my contribution on Government Motion No. 4/99. During my introductory remarks I paid compliments to various individuals directly involved in the preparation of the Vision plan including former Governor, John Owen, whose brainchild resulted not only in the birth of the Vision 2008 Plan but also in a number of other government reform initiatives.

Mr. Speaker, I also quoted from Mr. Owen's 1999 Throne Speech when he stated that the two key challenges facing these islands were the OECD, EU, G7 initiatives, and the implementation of Vision 2008. And, Mr. Speaker, how true!

Before continuing on that, because the 10 Year National Strategic Plan is so broad-based it covers the whole operation of the government and sets the plans and objectives of these islands for years to come, I feel and I must compliment you Mr. Speaker, for allowing the latitude you have on this most important plan, since every aspect and facet of our country is directly or indirectly impacted.

I was concerned when I read yesterday's paper but at the same time I wish to compliment the Caymanian Compass for the very comprehensive article written by one of their journalists on one of the major pillars of our economy, tourism. One might ask what has tourism and finance to do with the 10 Year National Strategic Plan. My answer would be it has everything to do with it because the success of any forward planning will depend on the continued growth and development within these two key pillars of our economy. Therefore, when I see a problem in tourism, I begin to wonder about the success of any plan we are now making for the future. But, Mr. Speaker, that said, I do feel that the Tourism Department and the Ministry are doing an excellent job, considering the amount of competition they have to cope with.

I want to congratulate Mr. Hue for the comments he made on this most important article. Indeed, Mr. Speaker with your permission I also wish to briefly refer to the editorial that was done on this major subject. It was such an important subject that it was given the full attention of the editorial in yesterday's paper.

Reference was also made about the economy by one of our leading business people in this island, Mrs. Gailya Hall, in her speech as she took over the reigns of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Speaker, we cannot ignore these matters, and I am not here to try to push this out of proportion because I do believe (as was said in the paper) that we have time to correct the problems that are facing these islands. I, like others, find it somewhat ludicrous that the Department of Tourism (DOT) would want to blame the NATA conflict in Kosovo and the shaky financial markets across the globe (in view of the Y2K crises) to the slow down the tourism market in Cayman. That could be some of the problem, but I do believe and I share the view of others that the major problem facing these islands now is that we are perhaps pricing ourselves out of the market.

Mr. Speaker, I have long said that we needed to put a lot of attention on the situation occurring in Cuba. We might feel that because of the devastation caused by the Communist government in Cuba that we have nothing to fear from that country. When I see that there is only a growth of 2.5% in tourist arrivals in Cayman as compared to 33% in Cuba, then I begin to sit back and wonder exactly what is going on.

I also note that we can hardly blame certain external factors for the slowdown in our tourism growth when many of our Caribbean neighbours are experiencing fairly good growth. Even Jamaica, which has been accused of having so much problems, has a 3.9% growth. I believe that we are indeed pricing ourselves out of the market and that we are not giving the sort of value for money that can be obtained by the value-conscious tourist elsewhere.

That is why, Mr. Speaker, that during the budget debate I was extremely critical of the increase that was placed on families in these islands in regard to book rentals, etcetera. I felt that the necessary funds could have been found elsewhere and that we would not have to continue to burden these families with these kinds of costs.

Mr. Speaker, for whatever reason there is a misconception that the Cayman Islands has such a high standard of living, that everybody shares in that standard of living. The per capita income of these islands is perhaps the highest in the Caribbean and maybe some parts of the world. But what is hardly known is that there is a transient amount of this per capita income that does not remain within the Cayman Islands. At least, 45% of that per capita income is attributed to the contribution made by expatriates working in these islands—most of who send their funds back to their native lands.

I think it was the First Elected Member for George Town that reminded us in this House recently that of the total budget agreed by the Government, there is only approximately 70% that we can say we receive value for money on. That relates in money terms to about $90M that we are not receiving value for money on. We could do a lot with that money.

Mr. Speaker, there are many areas that we need to be concentrating on. We still have a lot of time as regards the tourism industry to do something about it. Let us start concentrating on the area of value for money. Let us once again look at the tremendous cost that is being placed on the shoulders of the people that are expected to do business within the economy.

I trust that the Ministry for Tourism and the Department of Tourism will indeed accept my comments in the good spirit that is intended, and that is to assist in this crucial problem. This is not a matter for any of us to play politics with. We could get up here on the Backbench and we could be very critical and some could say, 'Oh, it is easy to criticise. Now let's find a solution'. I am speaking for myself (and I am sure for others from the Backbench) when I say that I am also interested in finding the solution because I have nowhere else to go to live. I have to live here like many of our fellow Caymanians. Let us put our shoulders together and try to address this major problem, even if it means reducing some of those fees and revenue enhancement measures that were brought to this House recently. Let us again look at it and see how we can give more value for money, how we can reduce the cost of living in these islands.

Mr. Speaker, sometimes I wonder why even in the churches, the Rotary Club and other organisations, we find so much attention being placed on areas like Haiti and other areas for Outreach missions when there are so many dire needs right within our own country. I alluded to this problem on Friday, but I will again say that charity begins at home. We should start looking at the problems that are facing our own people due to the high cost of living and the lack of value for money. Some of them have to hold two or three jobs in order to make ends meet. It is not a question of being greedy, it is a question of being able to feed their children.

I would recommend to any government of which I may be fortunate to be a part of in the future, that one of the first areas of attention should be to look at the plight of the poorer people in this country. Mr. Speaker most of the taxes from which the Government is able to earn the enhancement measures has to be taken from the people even though we might say that there is no direct form of taxation in these islands. The consumption tax—or indirect form of taxation—borne by the people is creating an unbearable burden. That is one of the areas that I would ask that urgent attention be given to.

We are not talking here about political rhetoric, we are talking about basic practical realities of life. Even Mrs. Hall in her inaugural address when she was elected the President of the Chamber of Commerce said that some of the main issues included the rising cost of doing business, immigration matters, long-term economic planning, traffic concerns, government and financial reform. She also mentioned the UK's White Paper and, of course, the single most important problem facing this country, the OECD tax harmonisation proposals. But, Mr. Speaker, things are not as rosy as some of us politicians would like others to believe. And I again congratulate the Caymanian Compass for giving this most important issue front-page coverage.

The other main pillar of our economy is finance. I am mentioning this because it ties so well into the Vision 2008 Plan, without which the plan becomes an academic exercise. The major challenge facing the Cayman Islands today is the OECD, EU, and G7 initiatives. Mr. Speaker, notwithstanding the amount of time that has already been placed on this important subject, I am still of the view that more time should be given to it. It should be placed as the top priority item in the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, there are many issues yet to be resolved and I will not go in to many of the details because this can be better dealt with at some other forum. One that we need to be looking at at present is engaging more directly into a proactive stance on issues that are important to this whole exercise. As we were reminded on a recent trip to the UK by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the treasury officials and others, the UK stands firmly behind the initiatives and it is not their intention to see these fall by the wayside.

Mr. Speaker, let us get down to the task of engaging countries such as the United States in direct dialogue so that it is made very clear to the international world what our position is on these crucial subjects.

In order for us to maintain sustainable and continued economic growth, it is important that the people of these islands be fully trained, that top priority be given to training our people within and outside of the public service. I am cognisant of the fact that training is now being given to our senior civil servants and others within the service as I am aware is also being done within the private sector.

Mr. Speaker, one of my concerns is that sufficient training will also be necessary. It is all well and good for us to say that the success of Vision 2008 will depend upon a trained civil service. But if the political directorate is not given equal training, then they will hardly be in a position to cope with the new challenges that will face them. This is why I believe that the people of these islands will look very carefully at the selection of their representatives in the next election. From what I hear on the Marl Road, they are already concerned that a proper selection of people capable of leading this country over the next few crucial years of our history will come forth, be counted and take up the responsibility of leadership in these islands.

Trained human resources are the key to our success. There is no use in our people complaining about expatriates taking our key positions unless they make the effort to get the necessary training and unless the opportunities for the training are made available to them.

Mr. Speaker, it is also important that those officials responsible for higher administration learn the heart of delegation. I have said here in the House before, and I say again, that some of the key people are spreading themselves too thinly. They are becoming jacks of all trades and masters of few. The intention is good, but the results are disastrous. In order for this country to continue as the fifth largest financial centre in the world and continue to receive the respect of the international market, the Cayman Islands must pay serious attention to the development of Caymanians to fill these key positions.

I was reading a report made on the Bahamas, and one of the things that they proudly stated—and in which they also ridiculed places like the Cayman Islands on—was the fact that most of their key service providers are Bahamians. Most of their top civil servants, most of the top people in the private sector are Bahamians. Mr. Speaker, before I am taken wrongly, let me quickly say that we are happy to have the expatriate professionals that we have to bring into these islands. They are doing a fantastic job. What I am saying here is that more attention must be given to training our own people to fill these top positions.

I also feel that government must pay more attention in ensuring that where Caymanians are qualified and capable to fill positions, they are not unduly and unnecessarily held back.

Mr. Speaker, recently in this House I mentioned the problems that we will face again, come the preparation of the Year 2000 Budget. It was precisely against that background that I recommended that urgent attention be placed by the Finance Department of the appointment of a think tank so that ideas could emanate from the private sector and become involved in the whole budgetary process. But, here again, this most important exercise is lagging behind.

I know, Mr. Speaker, that if this is not done with all the talk about trying to bring the budget in line with the accrual accounting process and the other technicalities that will be brought into that process, we will again be asking that more and more taxes be placed on the backs of our people. We are not coming up with new and innovative ideas for that process; we are following the old system introduced in the mid-sixties. The only thing that we have done with the budget, for instance, is to improve the presentation because the volume has gotten larger but the basic principles of the budget remain the same.

Mr. Speaker, it is also important (before I move away from the economy) especially in the private sector that we attempt to carry on the business within our financial industry above board so that there can be no criticism from the international forum. We are within a global economy and whatever is done in the Cayman Islands is known in New York, London, Frankfurt, Tokyo, Hong Kong, Singapore, just to name some of the key financial centres that we have to compete with. Already we have places like the Bahamas rejoicing in a way that the Cayman Islands, being a British Overseas Territory, will be at a disadvantage under the new OECD initiatives. They, as an independent country, will not have this problem.

Even though I know they are terribly mistaken about this, because it was made known in no uncertain terms that independent countries like dependent countries will be taken to account for their stewardship in this regard, we should understand that there are many of our competitors, our neighbours, that would like to see the demise of our financial industry. This is why I have to congratulate the Government for taking very stringent measures against any bank in this country found to be working outside of the Basle System of Banking or of the Code of Conduct that has been approved between the bankers. Mr. Speaker, long may this continue.

On the question of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), the European Union (EU) and the group of G7 countries, G7 initiatives, we should understand that these will significantly and materially impact upon most of the ongoing government reforms. Mr. Speaker, the ongoing reforms as we know are the Vision 2008, the Re-invention of Government, the Public Sector Reforms, Management Development and, of course one of the most important, the Fiscal Reforms.

The philosophy of the plan as expressed in the foreword to the plan, and I quote, "The 10-Year National Strategic Plan is based on the belief that the Cayman Islands can continue to develop in harmony and prosperity if we implement [and I stress that word, Mr. Speaker], if we implement the recommendation of Vision 2008 according to the principles of balanced growth and integrated policy development." It was against this background and with this knowledge in mind that I suggested in this House that there is no place at this point in time for euphoria or rejoicing over the Vision 2008 Plan, it is merely and basically only a plan. The rejoicing should come when we have at least implemented the first phase of the plan.

On Friday last, Mr. Speaker, reference was made to a lot of good plans that have come before this House such as the Tourism Development Plan prepared some time ago, the Master Ground Transportation Plan, just to name a few. The implementation process is the most important process of any plan. This is also the reason why I stated that until the first phase of the plan has been implemented, the Executive Director that was responsible for putting the plan together should remain with the process and that her portfolio should not demand her return to active office in that portfolio until this implementation process is completed. It is no use completing the plan and leaving it before any form of implementation is done.

I want to make it quite clear that I am not blaming that very talented lady for the work she has done because I have already congratulated her. I am just basically stating that the most important part of the whole equation remains to be completed.

Continued development in harmony and prosperity can only be assured if we are able to maintain a sustainable economic growth in these islands, not if the UK allows the OECD, EU, G7 or any other international group of companies to disrupt our harmonious way of life or adopt initiatives that may adversely impact upon our economy. In this respect, it is most relevant to make reference to the promise made by Mr. Robin Cook in the White Paper entitled "Partnership for Progress and Prosperity" between the UK and Overseas Territories that a genuine attempt is made to make this promise become a reality. If we are to have progress and prosperity, then we will need the assistance of the mother country.

In view of the various pressing initiatives from the OECD, EU and G7 group of companies, the key point that I wish to make here is my hope that the UK will demonstrate by action what it has committed in writing to do for their overseas territories. More importantly, the phrase, "Partnership for Progress and Prosperity" is not just mere words.

It is interesting to note that when it comes to the financial affairs of the City of London, which is the second largest financial centre in the world, that the UK through its Finance Minister, Mr. Gordon Brown, has, since the issuing of initiatives, clearly stated where the draft directives and the taxation of interest and savings is concerned that the Euro bond market of London will be protected. One of the reasons I understand that this particular initiative that has been issued by the EU has not yet received the full and unfettered support of the UK is because it could have a dangerous impact on the economy of the UK, in particular on the Euro bond market within the City of London.

I have said that to say this, Mr. Speaker, that if the UK is so mindful of taking care of its own position then we would expect that they would show similar concerns for the interest of their overseas territories including the Cayman Islands.

I have been requested by the local branch of the CPA to speak on this very subject, OECD, EU, G7 initiatives at the upcoming Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference here in the Cayman Islands. It is my intention to make those attending understand quite clearly the type of operation we have in these islands, the well-regulated financial centre we have in these islands. As previously stated, I will not be spending a lot of time on the 10-Year National Strategic Plan, Vision 2008 Plan. This is history. It is, as I said, Mr. Speaker, a plan.

My concentration is on the implementation process of the plan and, as was said, this is against the background that a lot of good plans have gone through this House and ended up in File 13. I also feel in this regard that it would be unwise at this time to close down the Vision 2008 Office. This office needs to continue so that the implementation process can be properly monitored and co-ordinated.

Mr. Speaker, it has been acknowledged by the Planning Team that the plan is based on our core principles, beliefs and values, the things that we hold most dear. In considering this motion to accept this plan, one has to bear in mind that we are accepting a plan that should rightly be called the people's plan. This was one of the few plans that received the full input of the people of these islands, and for that, I wish to congratulate the Executive Director and those responsible for so ably carrying out the policies of the person whose brainchild the plan was—the former Governor, Mr. John Owen.

As also mentioned during the commencement of my contribution on Friday last, the Executive Director and her team, together with the news media have done a fantastic job in educating the public about the contents of the plan. There is, therefore, no need to utilise the time of this House to read in detail the contents of the plan. Many copies have been printed and made available to the public. So as I mentioned, I will continue to develop on the need for proper implementation.

I would be remiss also if I did not pay some amount of gratitude to the honourable minister who piloted this motion, as it was under his portfolio that this plan was formulated. This is why I am calling on him to ensure that it does not take its place on the dusty shelf of history but that every effort is made to ensure that it is properly implemented and that the proper staff is put in place to do this.

The brunt of the implementation effort will out of necessity be borne by the civil service and this comes at a very crucial time when our human resources are severely stretched by the requirements of several other initiatives mentioned earlier—such as the Reinvention of Government, the Fiscal Reforms, etcetera. In order for us to meet the implementation challenge, we will require strong and committed leadership from the top down. I realise that there are a number of speakers that have not yet spoken on this motion and that there are those who may try to remind me that implementation is the next stage and they will deal with that when the time is right. Let me quickly advise them, Mr. Speaker, that the necessary mechanisms will have to be put in place now. For example, it seems that at present, the implementation of the Vision 2008 may have to take second place to the financial reforms.

Mr. Speaker, I heard one of the senior officers of government remind certain individuals in a meeting of the danger of over-extending the limited and scarce human resources, and that because of this over-extension a lot of very important departmental work is being ignored or scarified on the altar.

Whilst it is important that the other reforms, in particular the fiscal reforms, move concurrently with the Vision 2008, we have to be at the same time realistic in understanding that many of the same individuals will be needed in the implementation process of the various reforms.

Mr. Speaker, if you wish to take the break now, it would be fine.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:28 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12 NOON

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Government Motion No. 4/99. The Third Elected Member for George Town continuing.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Earlier in my contribution this morning, I made reference to the 10-Year Tourism Plan, the 1992-2002 plan, and stated that this was considered to be an excellent plan. As a matter of fact, this was regarded also as the people's plan as Coopers & Lybrand were only the facilitators. Had that plan been followed, it is my view that we would have seen the positive effects of it in our tourism market today.

As regard the MGTP, even though that was scuttled back in 1989 I think it was, we are today seeing certain parts of it still being brought forward in the form of the Crewe Road Bypass and the Harquail Bypass. These were all considered under that plan. Mr. Speaker, I have said that to say that whilst the Vision 2008 Plan is accepted as being a plan of the people, I think it would be incorrect to state that that is the only plan that has come to this House with the support of the people.

I also wanted to mention another point that was raised in the editorial in the Caymanian Compass of Tuesday, 6 July. That was the point of over-crowding, traffic jams, and I have already dealt with the high prices. Ever since the present government came into power in 1992, we have been told that a National Roads Plan would be brought to this House. That is some seven years ago and we are still being told that it will soon come. More priority needs to be placed on this very crucial issue. This is not to say that the present minister is not trying his best, but there comes a point where one's best may not be good enough. And I do believe that if there was a National Roads Plan in place concerning the amount of work that minister has done and is doing, that his job would be made easier.

One of the big mistakes that the Opposition at the time—now the Government—made back in 1989, was to remove the road corridors from the composite map. That was a major mistake. In order for the government to put through proper roads in this country to alleviate the traffic jams, those same road corridors would be necessary but it is now impossible because many of the corridors have been built upon and it would make it ten times as expensive to put similar corridors in place today.

That shows, Mr. Speaker, that when a Government comes to power, or even as Opposition we should have one aim in view and that is do our very best for the Cayman Islands—not to show our power or to oppose for the sake of opposition but to do the very best we can for the people we serve.

Mr. Speaker, returning to the crucial question as to who will coordinate the efforts of the implementation. This question is most important as without the answer to that question the Vision 2008 plan will fall away and there will be no results because the results will come in the smooth implementation of the three phases to the plan and, in particular, phase one. I have been talking about the phases to the plan and just so that this is made clear to the listening public and to the House, let me say that those crucial phases will be spread over the period 1999 to 2008. Phase 1 will spread over the period 1999 to 2001.

Mr. Speaker, I propose to confine the rest of my discussion mainly to the Phase 1 as I feel that if the mechanisms are put in place for the successful implementation, that this will go a long way in the success of the other two phases, phases 2 and 3.

On page 60 of the Key to the Plan, we see that the plan sets certain priorities that have to be met. The strategies and action plans developed within the vision process cover a vast range of subjects, all of which are important to the public. The integrated growth management requires policy development and implementation to be an ongoing process. For example, programmes begun in the initial phase with policy formulation and data collection may continue into the second phase for implementation and the third, for programme assessment and modification.

It is also important to note that the sequence of implementation of our suggestive objectives is much more important than the time period suggested. Therefore, if the sources are available to implement programmes ahead of the suggested schedule, this should be undertaken provided that the related objectives from each earlier phase have been met.

Mr. Speaker, there are certain additional resources which will also be required: personnel for the changed management process; Legal drafting personnel; expert personnel to build human resources capacity; and expert personnel to develop an integrated information resource.

On the need for legal drafting personnel, legislation will be required to establish the following new statutory bodies, many of which will subsume existing bodies. Mr. Speaker, this in itself is a major task.

Legislation will be needed for the Growth Management Board, the Infrastructural Development and Management body, the Human Resources Authority, the Information Technology Authority, the Emergency Management Agency and Tourism Authority.

On the implementation process also, implementation will require the collection, analysis, and integration of many types of information. In order to effectively implement phase 1, which covers this year through the year 2001, the following framework must be considered for establishing the top priorities. This framework includes:

- 1) The adoption and implementing growth management and change of management policies;
- 2) Creating the legislative and regulatory framework for implementation;
- 3) Building the information base required for prudent management;
- 4) Building human resource capacity;
- 5) Informing the public;
- 6) Integrating medium and long-term financial planning for phases 2 and 3;
- 7) Integrating public sector reform.

Mr. Speaker, we are looking on a vast amount of work to be accomplished.

I am just speaking now about phase 1. And I would like to have a look now at the phase 1 suggested objectives and these are:

- Formally adopt and implement integrated growth management as an over-arching policy
- Identify and appoint key personnel responsible for the management change
- Charge inter alia with guiding the transition to integrated growth management within a fixed time frame.
- Also, to integrate vision with existing government initiatives
- Reprioritise the legislative review process to give priority to legislation required to initiate implementation. This might even entail additional strain on the Legislative Assembly and on the Legal Department because in addition to the normal work that they have to do, this additional legislation will have to be put in place.
- It would also be necessary to enact legislation to create the boards and authorities, which will apply the integrated growth management policy across and within existing ministries and departments.
- It would also be necessary to enact legislation to modernise the process of governance and to provide for greater community participation.
- New immigration reform and other legislation will be necessary, some of which, I have already referred to.

Mr. Speaker, repetition bears emphasis. Let me repeat that under the legislation recommended in the action plan Strategy 1 will deal with Crime and Drugs Legislation and Boards; Strategy 4, the Family; Strategy 7 will deal with Little Cayman; Strategy 8, Open and accountable government; Strategy 9, Infrastructure; Strategy 10 Growth management.

I will just look at Strategy 1, the legislation recommended, just to give an indication of the amount of work that will be needed to put the implementation plan in place. It will be necessary under this strategy to appoint advisory board and establish legislation to ensure its proper function. It will be necessary to review and amend laws prescribing sentencing for juvenile offenders. It will be necessary to enact legislation governing use of photo ID cards et cetera.

Mr. Speaker, there will be a lot of work involved in the implementation plan and that is why I repeat that it is so important to have a leader of the calibre of the Executive Director of the Vision 2008 Plan—Mrs. Basdeo—become intimately involved to lead out this most important phase, as she has the ability and respect of those individuals that will be needed to carry out this plan. I trust in this respect that His Excellency the Governor will see fit to release Mrs. Basdeo from her present duties as Permanent Secretary in the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning and re-assign her to head up this most important area of work.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate that there are other members of the House that have not yet spoken and are no doubt anxious to also speak on this most important subject. So, in conclusion I wish to leave the following questions to be answered and to be given top priority by the honourable minister under whose portfolio this subject falls.

Question 1 is (again), Who will co-ordinate the implementation stage of this most important plan? Let me repeat, Mr. Speaker, that I would warn against hastily closing the Vision 2008 Office at this time and I think it should remain to function until, at least, the first phase of the implementation process has been completed.

The second question is, How will the various strategies be implemented?

And, my third question, Is sufficient attention being given to securing the necessary trained staff to carry out the various strategies?

Finally, may I once again convey my sincere congratulations to the Vision 2008 Team under the able leadership of Mrs. Joy Basdeo and Mrs. Hyacinth Connolly, the Strategic Planning Facilitator. Of course, the planning team members and roundtable leaders, again, to Mr. John Owen, our former Governor, for his foresight. And, to the members of the Strategic Integration Group, which continues to function under the able chairmanship of His Excellency, Mr. Peter Smith (our present Governor). I am pleased to see that he is continuing to build upon the solid foundation laid by his predecessor in the development of the 10-Year National Strategic Plan, the Vision 2008 Plan.

Mr. Speaker, I trust that my comments will be taken with the good intentions with which they have been said and I wish for this process God's blessing and success for the future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise in support of Government Motion No. 4/99 and to also make my contribution to the 10-Year National Strategic (1999-2008).

Mr. Speaker, the launch of this national plan is indeed a very important and special one for the people of these islands and for future generations to come. When our former Governor, Mr John Owen, spoke of Vision 2008 in 1998 Throne Speech, he made it quite clear that it was a plan meant for the people of these islands. It called for hard work, commitment, and dedication on the part of those who became involved.

Now, this plan has been accepted by Government as the way forward. It is the people's plan and one in which the people of the Cayman Islands have been very involved in; working to create a national plan that will set them on a successful course for the 21st Century.

Mr. Speaker, the cover of the small booklet that was laid on every Member's desk, said it all—"working together to shape our future." That is indeed the way this plan will work—working together. And that is hand in hand and in harmony.

I encourage every one who became involved in this important initiative to stay committed to this plan. Even though concerns have been voiced, in that this plan will be shelved only to collect dust, Mr. Speaker I must disagree. Anyone looking at the Vision 2008 Planning Team members will realise that committed and outstanding citizens of these islands came forward and put many long and hard hours into this plan and I cannot honestly see those members not seeing this through.

Mr. Speaker, the Vision 2008 is the blueprint of how we will cater to the needs and desires of all our citizens. It is about quality of life and creating a Cayman Islands that our children and our children's children will be happy and proud to live in. Without a vision and a blueprint for our future, all of our actions would be meaningless.

It is at this time that I pause to applaud the efforts of everyone involved, beginning with the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning; and the Executive Director, Mrs. Joy Basdeo, and her very hard-working and energetic team. I clearly recall the first meeting held in the district of Bodden Town, and I also remember the mood of Mrs. Basdeo—she was very upbeat and positive. She made it known that no one was going to discourage her. She was ready and willing to hear the views of the people and they were just as ready and anxious to develop a plan that would indeed better the quality of life that we in the Cayman Islands have been so blessed with and to also find the right balance for continued prosperity and social harmony.

Such meetings continued for months throughout every district and many long and tiring hours were seen by Mrs. Basdeo and her team. Anyone who has a plan in hand will see that many hours were spent on this plan. I say congratulations on a job well done.

Now, I would like to congratulate the Vision 2008 planning team members. Again, Mr. Speaker, those involved gave many long hours of their time all because the plan is based on their beliefs and values. It is the people's plan and one we know will undoubtedly need funds, the Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning mentioned in his presentation will have to be brought to Finance Committee for approval of funds. Mr. Speaker, I feel quite confident that this will meet Finance Committee approval.

Moving to the Vision statement, Mr. Speaker, one of the things that I took specific note of is that the people of the Cayman Islands would like to see Cayman Islands remain a God fearing place—this was at the top of the list. I wholeheartedly agree and this is indeed the cornerstone of my own philosophy.

Mention must also be made to the key recommendations developed from the strategic plan in the area given highest priority was on crime and drug abuse. Mr. Speaker, I fully support the recommendations that will develop and implement a policy of zero tolerance to crime and drugs. The recommendations include wide community involvement and education.

Regarding community involvement, I say to each and every one listening, get involved and make it your business to assist in stamping out crime and drugs. These are our islands and if we intend to live in peace and harmony then each of us must be involved. Let us come together and send a message loud and clear that crime and drugs are not acceptable.

Mr. Speaker, in winding up, I would like to make special mention of the students who became very involved in Vision 2008 through activities in schools. The schools through partnership with the Cayman Islands Post office were invited to participate in a competition to design a commemorative issue of stamps. The students were asked to paint the things they would like to see in Cayman's environment in ten years' time. The winners were thirteen-year-old Sarah Henley of George Hicks High School. She was the overall winner. Her design of a coral reef is on the thirty-cent stamp. Seven-year-old, Ryan Martinez of Cayman Prep School was awarded second place for his design of three fish and a turtle. That is on the two dollar stamp. Ten-year-old Jessica Cranston of Bodden Town Primary School won third place and her design of a Cayman House is on the ten-cent stamp. Twelve-year-old Sarah Cuff also of Cayman Prep School won fourth place with her design of fisherman on the North Sound and her design is on a forty-cent stamp.

Mr. Speaker, these winning entries would become the first stamp issue to be designed by young children in these islands. Today, four students' stamps have gone world-wide. Governor and Mrs. Smith, along with other members of government attended a function held in their honour at the Airport Post Office just recently. It was obvious from the smiles on these young students' faces that they were very happy and excited that their efforts had been recognised. Mr. Speaker, I felt very proud that three out of four of those students live in the district of Bodden Town—Sarah Henley, in the Village of Newlands; Ryan Martinez in Lower Valley, and Jessica Cranston in Midland Acres.

Mr. Speaker, I would like at this time to once again congratulate the winners and to encourage them to stay involved and to continue their good work.

Mr. Speaker, I commend this motion and I support Vision 2008. I pray for God's continued blessings on these Islands and its people.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? Since it is so near to time we usually take lunch, is it the wish that we suspend for lunch at this time?

Before taking the suspension I would like to ask honourable members at the break this afternoon that we meet in the committee room for an informal meeting of the Legislative Assembly. Thank you very much.

We shall now suspend until 2:15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12:40 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2:40 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate on Government Motion No. 4/99 continuing. The floor is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer my contribution on this motion. I would like to first thank all of those who had significant input into this effort led by the Permanent Secretary in the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning. I must say that it was a commendable job done by her and her troops. I know we in Bodden Town, the three representatives there, were able to take part in the debate with much input from the people within our community.

Throughout the islands, as we witnessed in our district, there was significant input. There were some reservations, but the overall feeling I got was that people were quite interested in taking part in changing the direction that these islands are going in, and to have their stamp on anything that we will do in the future.

I honestly feel that the more contribution from the public, the better and the more successful this effort will be. I feel that all parliamentarians to a certain degree have offered support to this and as we go forward into the new millennium, it certainly gives us a basis and a framework from which to work and to move forward.

I would just like to briefly touch on a few of the strategies. As has been pointed out, the very first one is one of the biggest concerns in these islands at this time. That is the concern of drug abuse and crime. They seem to be so finely entwined. As we know within the walls of Northward Prison, the majority of people that are incarcerated there have had at some stage involvement in drugs. So, to address one area of this without the other it is not easy.

The idea of zero tolerance is something that many people will say is a great anticipation in trying to accomplish. But, Mr. Speaker, I feel that if we don't reach for the top, we could easily get caught at the middle or the bottom. So if we don't go for the zero, we may end up with much, much less than what these islands expect from us as legislators.

As pointed out in one of the strategies—and it has always been my philosophy—the best form in addressing the long-term benefits or reduction in drug abuse is through education. In the first strategy, one of the action steps says appoint a drug education representative in each school. I do know that there is a lot of drug education within the curriculum at this time, but I feel that it has to be of a greater concentration than what we are now experiencing. This is been looked at through the National Drug Council and the education side of it.

I do know as I said earlier in another debate that the Commissioner of Police through a programme known as DARE has selected two policemen to go into the schools to deal with and teach the children. This area is at an earlier level than what we have been accustomed to, that is, we normally don't deal with this until the middle school or high school. This area will concentrate on the final year of primary school and this makes me feel good as I feel the sooner that we get the information across to these young people, the better it will be for us.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Lions Club for the tremendous amount of time and money that they have put into the Quest Programme. This has been quite successful. There needs to be more concentration, more teachers taught in the aspect of presenting this to the children in the schools. I know that there is now a concerted effort after meeting with the players in there, the Chief Education Officer, the Ministry of Education Department's Secretary and the National Drug Council that we will continue to emphasise the importance of education.

We can build all of the prisons and all of the support services we want, but if we don't get the children educated and let them know the dangers that are there, it will be all in vain.

Mr. Speaker, the other area I will speak briefly on is education. We have a very good system of education here and we continue to build on it. Emphasised in the thoughts that came forward from the public was increasing the tertiary and secondary—university (I should use that terminology for the people to understand what I saying). The more we can educate our young people, the better prepared they will be as they go forward in life because once they have the education, it is easy for them to find work.

Many of the high paying jobs are going to non-Caymanians. We have to prepare our young people to take up these jobs. And they cannot be prepared if we do not provide a system of education where they can be educated at a higher level than what we are seeing at present.

Mr. Speaker, another area talked about in the Vision 2008 is the strengthening of the family unit. We all know that these islands have been built on that family tradition and its incumbent on us to do whatever is necessary to make sure that we keep that as intact as possible.

The more services we can provide for our people, Mr. Speaker, the better it will be. I know that within my ministry in regard to the youth, there are concerns about the provision of a secure remand [centre] and eventually part of this will be used as rehabilitation for the young people, which at this time in our development we do not provide locally. I look forward that as we continue to go down the line, we will be able to move forward and provide the services.

We do know that with our elderly there still remains much to be done. Our elderly ancestors who have brought us to the position in these islands are on occasion not remembered. Within the Social Services Department, we are looking at improving these facilities. We are looking at providing another rest home in North Side. We have already identified a facility in Bodden Town where studies have revealed there is not as dramatic a need as in some of the other districts. But we feel that since Bodden Town has the facility, we will now work on developing that. Funds have been put in the budget to start on Bodden Town. And, also for possible plans, if time permits and funds are available, to the earlier development of the facility in North Side.

Mr. Speaker, also touched on in the Vision 2008 Plans are the continued improvement of health care in these islands with emphasis on prevention. It specifically talks about mental health and wellness. This I fully support and I think this is indicated in our health strategic plan, which as we go forward should make things much easier for us as we have already had this foundation in place.

As I said earlier, our emphasis in the new millennium will be in providing services to those who are mentally challenged. We must cease having to send our people overseas to areas where the services provided are not to the standard that we expect here in the Cayman Islands. Having to deal with that will be an expensive venture but whatever we need to do, we must.

It was interesting to note, Mr. Speaker, that in regard to the handicapped and those that are not included in the main stream of life, that there was significant emphasis put on this. We do know that set down on the Order Paper by one of my colleagues from the district of Bodden Town, there is a motion to address this. I think, this is very timely and it is hard to believe that many of the things that we now say we need have not been put in place before. We certainly look forward to dealing with this because this is an area of our population that has been neglected for too long.

It really irks me when I go to some of the business places, the banks and other office buildings, and I see areas designated for the handicapped and people just use them casually. We must put a stop to this! Hopefully this will be emanating from the motion coming later to this House which I feel is something that we must give our full support to.

Mr. Speaker, the last area that I will talk on is immigration. I think for us to go forward in the development of these islands we must now deal with immigration—the many varied and difficult problems that we have had to face when we know people that have been here for twenty-five and thirty years and still do not have security of tenure. They do not know whether they will have to go back home to a place that they are not familiar with for almost three decades. I do not suggest that we open our doors, but we must look at this sensibly and for those that qualify and for those that have contributed to the development of these islands over the many decades they have been here, they must be given due consideration.

I would like to once again give credit to my colleague, the Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning for the undertaking. We all know of the many difficulties and hardships that he experienced in his ministry with the absence of his Permanent Secretary. But, Mr. Speaker, I feel that down the line what these islands will benefit from, will have been worth the sacrifices made.

For many years, we have been talking about a plan on the way forward. We now have this in place and it behoves us to work on this plan together for the good of these islands. I see some good days ahead of us and there is so much that we can do by working together and sharing this vision, it's a vision that will benefit most of our Caymanians and those that are living here with us.

I ask God's guidance on this effort and I would like to once again say that I give my full support to this effort. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps there is a disadvantage in speaking to a motion of this nature, not only so late in the afternoon but after so many others have spoken, because many areas have been covered in the debates that have taken place since the Ministry of Education moved this motion. Nevertheless, I hope to be able to shed some light in certain areas that will be thought provoking, and perhaps be positive in this new and exciting plan for the country.

Mr. Speaker, when this plan was launched about fifteen months ago, this emanated from the UK's desire for dependent territories to have a country plan. Now, many of the country plans that have developed in other territories do not really extend themselves as far as this one has and perhaps there are two ways to look at that. But I believe if all of the other areas are covered, the way this plan has been done can certainly create the country that we wish to see as the Cayman Islands by the year 2008.

Mr. Speaker, everyone has congratulated the many, many individuals who have been involved thus far with developing this plan. While I am not one to spend a lot of time in that area (not because I am mean but I just think that people know how people like myself feel when it comes to appreciating their efforts), nevertheless, I do believe that all of the hard work that has been put into the preparation of this plan should be recognised. The individuals from within the various communities who have spent many hours in dialogue (and I am sure they had their own little fights amongst themselves which is healthy most of the time) should be congratulated for the commitment on their part in playing their role in the development of this plan.

As the planning team and the members of the roundtables met and worked in unison, Mr. Speaker, they developed 16 main strategies and 208 action plans. We now have two documents—the actual Vision document and the second document is the “Key to the Future,” which is a guide to the Vision 2008 Plan. So with all of the work that has been put into it, what we have now is a plan, which in summary is said to be a formal set of guiding policies created to provide for the national direction of the Cayman Islands. I am going to interject here and say that I am one (certainly not the only one) of those who for many years has been preaching the sermon about some type of forward planning.

Mr. Speaker, when we talk about forward planning and when we talked about it in the past, those of us who had our convictions, which were very strong about this, could see that there was not proper management of resources, whether they be financial resources or human resources in the public sector. That was the main basis why we have been calling for this forward planning. Now, what has been developed is . . . and I say this with the best meaning in the world and I trust it will not be misunderstood, but Vision 2008 is basically the wish list of the people of this country. It is the list that they have created, which if it is achieved will bring about their utopia—our utopia—the country that we would like to see and the country that we would like to be living in, in the future. That is what this plan is.

The people who participated in the preparation of this wish list were not to my knowledge given terms of reference with regard to how we were going to create this utopia. So after all the accolades are poured on now, where we are at right now, as the Minister of Education has brought this motion, is what is the next step forward. To my mind, that is where we are.

At the same time, we have been going headlong into financial reform initiatives. We have also been dealing with what is termed reinvention, which, as I understand, is basically the public sector reform initiatives. Mr. Speaker, what is very clear to me at this point in time is that this wish list that has been created, this utopia that all of us would like to see the Cayman Islands become . . . we now are at the point where we have to be looking into where the nuts and bolts are going to fit and how we are going to fit them and what we are going to fit together to achieve the goals.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps if we had not had our little discussion awhile ago, I would have taken time out to go into a few more preliminaries before I got into the meat of my contribution to this debate. But taking that into consideration, perhaps I will be safely able to bypass certain areas and get right down to it. As my good friend, the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town would say, I think I am correct in saying, let's cut to the chase—something like that . . . anyway.

The Vision 2008 plan cannot become a reality. I say this again: it cannot and it will not become a reality unless each and every one of us legislators, and the citizens of the country sitting in the private sector, and the public servants in the civil service—all of us—buy into this plan. Every one of us has to claim ownership at the level that we are at if it is going to work. So while the political directorate and its sometimes adversaries, like myself, will get at it on occasion and we will bring out opposing thoughts on issues, this one above all else that has come thus far is the one that we cannot afford to deal with in that fashion. I stand here today saying that and meaning it from the bottom of my heart.

That is not to say, Mr. Speaker, that there are not going to be times . . . because this is not something that you are going to achieve overnight. And this is not something that you will go at one time and when it is over, it is over. This is going to be a way of life for years to come and that is not to say that during certain times, for instance, that the Minister of Education is not going to take a position regarding dealing with this plan that I might disagree with. And, of course, I am going to tell him that I disagree with him and I am going to tell him why I disagree with him, and then decisions will have to be made.

But while being an integral part of the whole process that does not have to extend itself beyond the point of making sense. I am speaking as much to myself right now as I speak to anyone else because I know that I too can be guilty of going a little bit overboard when certain things cause me to get a little bit more excited than usual. Let us do the best we can to look forward with this plan rather than just simply using it to strike a position to score points. The Minister of Education knows full well what I am talking about. And while I speak to myself, I speak to him also. We will see how we can work together on the issue in times to come.

It is very important for us to have a crystal clear understanding of the way the public service functions today. Perhaps I will do the best I can to throw some ideas out as to how I see the public service transforming itself into the way it operates to be able to achieve Vision 2008. As I mentioned, everyone in the country has a role to play. The real truth of the matter is the public service is going to play the most important role in achieving Vision 2008. I will explain that.

Mr. Speaker, any change that we need to bring about to make this country better for the people to live and thrive in, is going to be an exercise that exacts some type of cost. Now, in many instances those costs are going to equate to money but in many other instances accompanied with the monetary cost there will be commitment. There will be human resource development and there will be policy directives, which are revolutionary in their own right and which, Mr. Speaker, is where the commitment comes in.

I know I speak for myself, sometimes I have to step back and really look at something before I am willing to accept a change. This is what is going to happen. Many things are going to have to change. I make a plea to all of us involved to think about this carefully. The reason why we should have no fear of the changes that are necessary is because those changes cannot be thrown at us all at one time. The players in the game fully understand that the process has to be one where everyone moves along in unison in order for these changes to be effected in such a way that the best results are achieved.

I started to talk about the way the public service is structured at the moment. This is not an easy task for me. Perhaps it would have been more appropriate if a person who was in the service itself were taking the job on, but nevertheless, I guess I will give it the best attempt that I can and hope that any gaps left can be filled, not necessarily by any debate but when the time comes for action.

If we look at the way the service is structured and the limited amount of accountability that exists at present, what we find is that when it comes to fiscal policy and being held to task for the way the country's money is spent, the Financial Secretary is accountable to the Legislative Assembly. In other words, he is the person who holds Finance Committee—he chairs it, he brings finance bills, he delivers the Budget Address and basically at the end of the day, he is the person who falls accountable to the Legislative Assembly.

Then, stepping down a rung in the ladder, if my count is anywhere near correct I think we have 38 controlling officers. That would include permanent secretaries. The way the system works right now is that those controlling officers are accountable to our Public Accounts Committee, which is made up of elected representatives of the Legislative Assembly.

Executive Council, which constitutes the five elected representatives and the three official members, with the Governor being its head, at this point in time has no accountability to the Public Accounts Committee. So there is a paradox! The real truth of the matter is that it creates a huge comfort zone for elected members of Council. This is no reflection on the Council that exists now because this has been the case forever. So let them understand that I am not suggesting that they try and invent a situation to give them advantage—nothing like that. That's not what I am saying today. When I am ready to make that kind of statement, I will craft it in a different fashion so that the Minister of Education can immediately look up and realise that there is something coming.

The point I wish to make with this, is that the way the system works, we have the elected arm of Government—who is in truth and in fact responsible for policy but while their permanent secretaries are then responsible for the heads of departments below them, the permanent secretary is the chief advisor to the minister. The permanent secretary also has the responsibility to ensure that the proper procedures are carried out in implementing the policies that emanate from the Government. But if something goes wrong—and we have seen this happen in here—and I can be challenged at any time) . . . here is where the paradox is: If anything goes wrong and the Public Accounts Committee is investigating certain inadequacies, for instance, arising out of an Auditor General's Report, a minister is not called to answer any questions. You see? There is a problem there because in truth and in fact, neither the ministers nor the public servants are comfortable and it always ends up in a question of who shifts the blame back and forth. Publicly it has to go one way; privately you hear it another way.

What I honestly believe happens on more than one occasion is that ministers face a situation where they are outside of the regular forum where debate takes place, they are held responsible for certain things that in truth and in fact they might not even know anything about. That's on the one hand. Of course, on the other hand the opposite can occur also. Public servants can be taken to task and hauled over the coals, simply protecting their ministers because they can't otherwise do because when I finish with them, I am finished with them—they have to go back and live with the minister after that.

The reason why I have chosen to talk about this for a few minutes, Mr. Speaker, is simply because anyone in his or her right mind who lives within a regime of that nature must want it to change if the right things are going to occur. I am not just talking about change for the sake of change. I am talking about a change in the way you do business.

Let me give you an example, this will be near and dear to the Minister of Education. I stood up and argued with him for five years about building a school. It turns around now and within the system he finally says, 'Ok, we are going to build a school!'. So, nine months later, he is taken to task again because the school has not started. When he explains it—and I want everybody to understand that I am not going at anybody this afternoon, sir. This has nothing to do with individuals. But what happens with that, Mr. Speaker, in truth and in fact, is the Minister really has no control over when that school will be built!

Am I correct, Mr. Minister? Or are you not willing to answer me? Am I correct? All right. Here is why I am saying what I am saying and I want to explain this because we have to understand the nuts and bolts and why we have to change. Not only does the Minister have no method by which he can control when something is to be built, but he has nothing at the end of the day by way of recourse to determine what it is going to cost—it cannot be right.

Of course, the flip side to that is the comfort zone—they can always say, 'Well, it is not done. You can't blame me.' But who in his right mind would want that responsibility if there is not something to go at, something to achieve and something to be held accountable for? Mr. Speaker, that has to be wrong!

As a result of that (and not just that alone) we end up with a total lack of accountability. And whereas we talk about authority and responsibility accompanying the accountability, there is no sequence of events which allows for anything to happen the right way to get the right result.

Do you know what happens, Mr. Speaker? I am going to tell you what happens—and here is the paradox, fantasy or whatever you want to call it. People like myself on the Backbench, in order to be seen to be doing our job, apply every inch and ounce of pressure that we can on the ministers to get certain things done. We stand up and say we are the representatives of the people, this is what the people need, and this is what the ministers must do. Good!

We have established that the ministers don't have any control over when something is done at the end of the day because of what is commonly termed as the bureaucracy. They also do not have any determining influence on what something costs either. But we are telling them that we want it done. Inevitably, Mr. Speaker (and every minister who sits there can only say yes to what I am saying now), the majority of things that get done are carried down to the wire. It's a rush all the time and at that point in time, you have no control over cost. Am I not correct? It is frightening!

But the question here is not who to lay blame on—all I am doing here this afternoon is trying to point out some of the inadequacies to show why we have to change. It is not about blame! It is not a question that you must not learn from your mistakes, but Mr. Speaker, deciding who or what group to blame doesn't mean anything.

I have been here nearly seven years and that has been the order of the day—who's to blame. Of course, the reason why that is the case all the time . . . and you almost get into that syndrome, Mr. Speaker, because you cannot do anything else but find somebody to blame when something goes wrong. I think we have established that.

But let us look at the mechanisms in place for the minister's policy to become a reality. They too have their problems because there is no clear cut, straightforward mechanism which outlines what they have to deliver, what would be the outcome, and the whole chain of command becomes built on who is who and how long you have been there. But the primary focus is never on performance. Mr. Speaker, I am here today to say that the people who are in the civil service—regardless of what anyone else wants to say . . . if there was role clarity, if everybody knew exactly what their job description was and if everyone knew that they were going to be paid according to their performance—our civil servants would perform!

Some people talk about the inefficiency of the service and you need to get rid of a bunch of them and that kind of foolishness. Mr. Speaker, that is not the case in my view. If you hire a person and he comes into a situation where all he has to do is to boil one egg hard every morning—end of story. He is going to get used to simply boiling that little egg—no challenge, no security of tenure and you gradually just pull one little plug in his side and drain his life away slowly but surely. That is what happens to many of our civil servants; not because they cannot perform or won't perform but the system is not one that is conducive for them to buy into the ownership of the performance that is required.

Mr. Speaker, I will stop here for one second because I think it is appropriate to interject. The Third Elected Member for George Town in his contribution this morning, mentioned the fact that it is a considered opinion even by many of the senior people involved in the process directly that government at best gets 70 percent value for money. I am going to just make one simple statement here: If we have the ability to create the circumstances under which the public service functions where you can maximise efficiency to the point that you are not wasting $90,000 a year, do you realise how much more we could do?

Look at all the things that we keep fighting about in here! After tremendous pressure is put on the Minister of Education, when he looks at his circumstances and knows what he has to do—he has to deliver to the Finance Committee a $56M tap just for physical facilities that the country needs now. Where are we going to get $56M? Somebody tell me because I don't know! But the country needs it. The people are screaming for it—and so am I because from where I sit that's my job. I can't deliver it. That is only one area.

Then what is really worse, when they get to budget time and they look at what they really cannot avoid doing, they say, 'Well, these are our recurrent expenditures.' That includes personal emoluments statutory obligations, whatever. 'This is what the projected budget is like. If we want to do these capital projects based on what our recurrent costs are going to be this year and what we project to be our revenue, we are going to have to borrow some money. But the amount of money that we are going to have to borrow to do these projects, if we take that down to them boys at the Legislative Assembly they are going to maltreat us. They are going to kill us. They are going to eat us up.'

Well, we accept that we are going to have to borrow some money. This is the government now, Mr. Speaker. I am sure you understand what I am saying.

The Speaker: I am following you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: But perhaps our best bet then is, let's look at the debt. Let's see how much we will have paid down by the end of last year so that we can know how much we can add back on to the debt so it won't look so bad and see how much more we can squeeze out, that between what we are going to borrow and any little excess we might have on recurrent might do it . . . it cannot work!

There is only one choice now. We have got to find additional revenue. Of course, we have to deliver the budget in four days to the Legislative Assembly so gentlemen get your thinking caps on you have got to work hard now. So they bust their brains for two nights and they figure they got something worked out. But you know that is the same old dead horses that they tax to get additional revenue, they simply add on to that just a little bit more.

And mind you now, so that the government will understand, when they get in that untenable position they cannot do anything about it then. Either that or cut the capital projects. So how do they say that again? You're damned if you do and you damned if you don't. If you don't do your capital projects—you are damned, and if you do them without increasing the taxes then you are going to borrow too much money so you are ruined again.

I am simply trying to paint this little picture so that it proves that it is not only in the interest of the country but it is in the interest of any government to want to change the way we do business. How wonderful it would be if any government could create circumstances in the way the public sector performs where they can almost safely look at their nation and say, 'Listen, we are almost absolutely sure (barring any unforeseen disaster or something of that nature) that it will be at least three to five years before we have to be looking at any revenue measures because we have tightened up the ship.' We are creating that much more efficiency so that the cost of running the country is not increasing tremendously because we are being more efficient. So that means the demands to increase our revenue are less so we don't have to come to you and slap you across the side of your head once every year till it tun yu giddy because you don't know how you are going to live for the rest of the year with the extra charges and you don't have to worry about that, we are a good government.

I know the government would love to be in that position, but I know, and they know, they are not...

I am sorry.

The Speaker: May I interrupt you just a moment? Is it the wish of the House that we continue without an interruption or that we suspend for the afternoon break?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if you don't mind, sir, just a short break. It doesn't have to be long but if you don't mind.

The Speaker: If you promise me that it will be a short break. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3:46 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4:11 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Government Motion No. 4/99. The First Elected Member for George Town continuing debate.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, having given that little passage through the way in which I see certain aspects of government working at present, I want to explain the reason why I have attempted to point that out is because when we look at Vision and we look at the goals and objectives that we wish to meet, it is without a doubt going to have a dramatic initial impact on the financial resources of the country.

The point in hand is simply this: It is necessary for us to become more efficient in the management of our financial resources if we are going to be able to have a semblance of a chance to achieve the goals and objectives that are set. Which brings me now to talk about what I see basically as the formula in a nutshell to achieving Vision.

Perhaps, the little formula that I am going to be talking about will not capture everything, but as I go on maybe those areas that are missed can be addressed. If we are going to become more efficient and get more value for money, then financial reform initiatives are going to have to take place. It is accepted by one and all that there are inefficiencies and we will now have to move on to create the necessary reforms which will allow for better management of our financial resources.

If that is going to happen it means that we have to have a very, very serious look at how we are managing our human resources because it is going to take the human resources to create the financial reform initiatives because they are not going to happen by themselves. And running parallel to financial reform initiatives is the area of personnel, not just personnel management but personnel development. And I need to use some little examples to show how I see the situation and how I see the way forward.

If we are going to be speaking of remuneration based on performance, if we are going to be talking about role clarity (which basically means a proper job description for all of the individuals involved), then we have to take any position and look at it from the top down or from the bottom up, anywhere we want to look at it—a clerical officer to a permanent secretary. When that role is defined, the next step is to make proper assessment as to whether the individual in that role is equipped and tooled to perform what is expected. You see, Mr. Speaker, we have a great advantage here at this point in time. Most countries that had to deal with any type of reform, whether it be public sector management reform or whether it be financial reform, have had to deal with it under crises—when they are ready to go belly-up if they don't have a big brother to call on, when they are ready to go bankrupt. So they have to resort to these measures simply because if they don't, they die.

We are not dead yet! So we have the opportunity now to be sensitive and this is why I don't think anyone should be scared. We need not be scared. We all need to just buy into this thing.

Mr. Speaker, people have been hired in the past (and I am specifically taking about the civil service now) and as time has gone on... You have some areas in the service where people are not challenged to the length that they need to be or should be, given their ability, background and/or training. And you have a few other areas where job descriptions by evolution have shifted in various areas and the people who are doing the job really, some of them are not equipped to do what they are called on to do. I know it exists. You have people who have been acting in posts for years and have not been confirmed and there must be reasons for that. But there is no criticism to be levelled here all we want to do is to talk about...

Let us identify these things and once we have proper phased action taken, we can equip these people. Once we establish the roles that they have to play and what their job description is, then we simply take them and we have to equip them to do those jobs.

Let us take, for instance, changing over from our cash based system to accrual accounting. It is only fair for people to assume that this changeover from a cash based accounting system to an accrual accounting system is going to cause some problems. It is only fair for people to expect that it is going to cause some problems because the truth is we know that not everyone—and I am not talking about just about in the Treasury, I am talking about the various individuals in the department that has to deal with it in on a day to day basis. Not all of them are going to be knowledgeable and equipped to be able to have a change that is following and without hitches.

I am not an accountant. I don't claim to be, but I believe that I understand the basics of both systems. Once we get into the accrual system and people are equipped to be able to deal with it, it is not going to be any more work than the other one but there are some fruits to be picked at the end of the day because there are many, many positives in changing from one system to the other. I will explain that in a minute, Mr. Speaker, but what I want to say before I say that (even if it is a bit repetitious) is that is one of the changes that people might immediately start to get nervous about because it is something new to them. Mr. Speaker, it is not going to be any different from what they are used to now, once they learn it and it is no more difficult to learn than the system they are into now.

Let me show you a far-fetched situation and show you what is possible in a cash based accounting system. If I were the Government with a cash based accounting system and I do not want the members of the Opposition or the members of the Backbench to know everything that is going on at year end, for instance, I have the ability to ensure that there is no overdraft at Barclays Bank in the government account. If I have general reserves, I can transfer what I need to transfer out of general reserves into that account, so that on the 31st day of December it shows a positive balance and the very next working day after New Year's Day that we go back to work I just transfer it back out. And when we talk about the year-end figures, it is made positive. It is as simply as that.

The other thing that I could do if I were the government under the present system is that I could basically say, 'Well, before December 31st such and such bills—just don't pay them. People aren't going to die, it is okay. When we come around into January, we can pay them.'

A cash based system simply records physical exchange of money. That is what it does. So while you can use a cash based system and show a pretty true picture, you can use the system if you so desire and paint a picture that is not true.

The basic difference between the two is that in your accrual system you deal with your assets. I noticed the Acting Third Official Member was perplexed there when I made the statement so I had to quickly say what I was saying to make sure that I was not painting the picture only half way. The truth of the matter is, Mr. Speaker, the point I wish to make is that you cannot run a system whereby you don't have the ability to know (what those old people use to call) the true position, that is the system we have in place now. It is nothing untoward to anyone. I am not suggesting at this point in time abuse or anything like that, I am just saying the system allows for that and if I was even talking about running my home . . . For instance, if you came to me and you asked me, 'Well, what's your position?' I [would] say, 'Well you can check my bank account; you can check my current account and you can check my savings. I give you authority. I will call the bank and tell them to give the Honourable Speaker those figures for me.' Both of them are in credit, a fairly healthy situation and it is going to immediately give you the impression that you can do some business with me if you want because I am all right. But what I am not telling you is how much I owe outside that I have not paid—therein lies the basic difference. We cannot do it like that! At any point in time the country must know what its cash position is and what commitments it has.

You see, we have argued endlessly in Finance Committee when we come down to capital projects and the debt service ratio and all this stuff and we have never . . . I want to take that back before I say it. I don't want to say we have never—what I want to say, Mr. Speaker, is on many occasions, because of the system, we are not able to make a true determination before we have to make certain decisions on exactly what the country's position is. Now that is a fact!

And we must be able to do that but, you see, accompanied with that are calls for proper prioritisation and proper planning. In using the analogy I want to show the type of human resource development that is going to have to take place in certain areas and that is just one of them.

I know it is that time so perhaps I can continue in the morning.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Ruth Rutty

The Speaker: Honourable members of this Honourable House, I rise this morning to offer condolences to the family of the late Mrs. Ruth Rutty who passed away recently.

Mrs. Rutty was the wife of Mr. Aston S. Rutty, MBE, a former Member of the Justices and Vestry of the Cayman Island. He held numerous other positions, retiring as the District Commissioner after a long career in Cayman Brac. She was also the mother of G. Burns Rutty who was a Member of this Legislative Assembly.

Mrs. Rutty was loved by all. I have also been asked by the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to express special condolences and their love for her as she was highly respected in the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Thank you.

Item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question 76 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 76

No. 76: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources what is being done to educate or advise the general public about the boundaries of Replenishment Zones and Marine Parks?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The Department of Environment continues to maintain active systems of environmental awareness campaigns. With reference specifically to marine parks regulations and boundaries, there are several programmes to keep the public informed. These programmes include the following:

1) A system of buoys clearly marking the boundaries of marine parks and replenishment zones has been installed across protected lagoons and sounds.

2) A system of range markers visible by boats has been installed to delineate parks' boundaries on shores not enclosed by fringing reefs.

3) Large information signs with maps of marine parks areas and text of marine parks regulations have been located in strategic coastal areas with public access as well as displayed inside many public buildings.

4) Information brochures produced by the Department of Environment are distributed to visitors at airports and harbours, hotels, watersports shops, as well as to residents through the Government Information Services and the Department of Environment. A waterproof version of the brochure is produced for local boat operators.

5) Public education campaigns are conducted including school visits and the production of the Coral Forest, a teachers' guide to coral reef education which covers many aspects of marine conservation in the Cayman Islands including the location and rules of the marine parks. Two copies of the Teachers' Guide have been made available to every school in the Cayman Islands.

In addition to projects by the Department of Environment, other public and private agencies provide marine parks information including Port Authority, Department of Tourism, Government Information Services, local tourist magazines and local television and the Internet.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say how many marine parks and replenishment zones there are. And if there are sufficient marine officers to monitor and control abuse in these areas.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and National Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the last part of the question with regard to the number of marine officers, I honestly believe (and this is my opinion) that we could definitely do with more marine officers in order to police it properly. The correct amount of parks that he has asked for, I don't have that figure with me.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the Honourable Minister can confirm whether or not these marine parks and replenishment zones are monitored and patrolled on a 24-hour basis.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and National Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: They are actually patrolled, not on a 24-hour basis because of, like I said, man power. We could use some more manpower but they are monitored and that is as much as I can tell you on that.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say whether or not they are any marine parks or replenishment zones that are not designated or marked as outlined in his answer.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and National Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, not to the best of my knowledge. It is my understanding that the map I referred to a while ago shows exactly where the replenishment zones and the parks are, and they have been marked. I am not here to say that some of the marks may not have been removed but should that be the case, I would be happy to have them put back.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I get the impression that in order to know where these parks and replenishment zones are you need a map. What is being done to educate or advise our visitors who may not know that they need a map in order to determine where these particular parks and replenishment zones are?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and National Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the last paragraph of the answer to the question states that the same information I mentioned with regard to the map and other identification for these areas, is also in the local tourist magazines. It is my understanding that they are posted also in hotels by Tourism. So I don't know what else we could do. Also, like I pointed out here, it's on the Internet and also on television.

The Speaker: Any further supplementaries? The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the minister could tell this House whether there are plans to get more manpower on it?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and National Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that the department will be taking all steps possible to make sure that these areas are policed properly. To do that they would probably have to look for more manpower and, of course, perhaps a couple more boats.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: With respect to enforcement, can the honourable minister confirm whether or not the department has its own boats, or is it that when they recruit, the person who they are recruiting has to have that boat in order to hold the position?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and National Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The department has its own boats. What I am saying is that I don't think that we have sufficient to police the island the way that we should. As far as the other part of the question with regard to somebody having to have a boat, I am not one hundred per cent sure about that.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move onto question 77 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 77

No. 77: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources what is being done to avoid damage to corals by the anchors of boats and ships?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and National Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Anchor damage poses one of the greatest threats to the health of our coral reefs. Efforts to prevent this damage include:

1) The installation and maintenance of public moorings on frequently visited dive sites in Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. To date the Department of Environment has installed 281 moorings including six new sites for Cayman Brac earlier this month. Five new sites will be installed in Grand Cayman later this year. Our mooring programme was the first in the Caribbean and is by far the most extensive.

2) In addition to dive sites, it was recognised that significant damage was being caused by anchors from visiting yachts. Five moorings have been installed in the George Town anchorage for vessels up to 100 tonnes and an additional five moorings will be installed at Spotts later this year.

3) Discussions are in progress for the provision of moorings for yachts larger than 100 tonnes.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the honourable minister can confirm whether or not there are sufficient public moorings or buoys that boats can tie up to in the popular dive areas such as Stingray City and the Sand Bar?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I would be speaking out of line if I said that I was sure that there was sufficient around those areas because with the growing number of boats that are now utilised in the Sand Bar and other dive sites I believe it is almost impossible to say that we have sufficient. However, if there were an area that the member has some ideas about I would be happy to send it on to the department.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the honourable minister could supply the list (because I know he would not have this at hand this morning) of the 281 moorings.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I give that undertaking. I will have that supplied to the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Item number 4, Government Business. I would entertain a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) in order that we can take Government Business on Thursday in preference of Private Members' Motions.

Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I move that the relevant Standing Order be suspended so that we can continue with the business of the House.

The Speaker: I put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Government Business continuing, Government Motion No. 4/99, Debate continuing thereon. The First Elected Member for George Town continuing

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 4/99

10 YEAR NATIONAL STRATEGIC PLAN (1999 - 2008)

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we closed off yesterday, I was about to move on to the area of human resource development and management. Just before I get there, having had the evening to think some more, I want to quickly add a few thoughts to my contribution with regard to the financial reforms.

I will quickly lay a case down so that people will understand the inefficiencies that exist, in my mind at least, and sort of promote the urgency for change. Someone said to me recently that the government is singly responsible for whatever inflation takes place in the country and whatever rising cost to do business that occur in the country. They were leaning towards the tourism product but I was taken aback by the statement and I thought about it. While I will not at this point in time subscribe to that very broad statement, I want to use the statement to show why people will come to that conclusion.

Earlier on I spoke about the way budgets are created nowadays and the reasoning behind any revenue enhancement measures that are delivered. While I know that the private sector is an integral part of a stable economic environment, by way of not allowing inflation to run away, if we look at what transpires by way of these revenue enhancement measures and the accompanying fees that go with it, we can understand. If the government—and let me make this very clear now when I speak of the government, as I spoke yesterday, I am continuing in that same vein. When I speak of the government this has nothing to do with the bodies that are there now, this is simply the mechanism which triggers the operations of government at present—that's what I am referring to.

We find, for instance, that there is no steady and meaningful gathering of information and policy decisions with regard to raising government revenue. And the whole reasoning for this is because there is no forward planning with knowledge beforehand of what financial resources are going to be needed to be able to accomplish the goals that are set. The goals that are set at present, are goals that are taken at random, so to speak, because there is no plan.

We can find where there has been no increase in a certain field. Let us say for instance, licensing of vehicles. People will boast that there has been no increase in this fee for ten years. So you have the ordinary person who has a budget to live by, living with the thought that every year it is going to be X amount of dollars to license the vehicle. Just like you have to find insurance and everything else, you know when the time comes this is what you are going to find. Without any warning, all of a sudden because of a government decision—and nothing has been done for ten years—the cost of that will double or sometimes more than double with the stroke of a pen.

I am not here now questioning whether whatever that cost is is not a real cost. I am talking about the way that it is done. You find that your ordinary consumer doesn't have an opportunity to plan his life. That is just one example but that spills over into everything else. And when there are sudden increases given to people, then you find that the merchants who also incur these costs are simply going to sit down and calculate immediately the method by which they are going to pass the cost on—that's only natural. There is nothing devious about that, that is just the way commerce works. So the whole ball starts rolling from actions taken by the government.

I will site another example, Mr. Speaker. When we look at what is publicly talked about and things that we argue about in this Legislative Assembly and in Finance Committee, and we hear about the tremendous construction costs when we do capital projects, I was talking about that earlier yesterday. But there is an extension to the argument. When we find that we are saying that the government is paying X amount of dollars per square foot for construction of a government building, it is only natural that the private sector is going to use that as a benchmark. It's simple! The entire effect of that comes down to those who cannot afford it—it doesn't stop until it reaches them and the only reason why it stops at them is because there is nobody else after them.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Preach brother, preach. Tell it like it is!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So all that does is show us the reason why we have to change the way we are doing what we are doing.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Hear, hear!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: You see, we can even go as far with the price that government has to pay for capital projects whether it be roads or buildings or whatever. Because of the way that we end up having to do them, the cost may well be actual cost. It may not be inflated cost but if we go through the whole process that has to take place from A to Z, when we add all of the little bits of pieces put together, that is why it comes up to that. We have to find a way to do it differently that is what I am saying.

There is no accusation that people are ripping anybody off. It's just the way you achieve what you achieve. If you need your car serviced and because you have to go through four different mechanics to do it, it must cost you more. Simple! Just adding that to the line of argument, that along with other things that I have said plus things that I haven't said, give rise to the thought that final reforms must be fast tracked as best as possible.

And I daresay that there is a pleasant thought to that because I think that one and all have to accept that this is a necessity and that is well on the way. So perhaps it's simply a matter of allowing due process to take place before we can see some accomplishments in that area.

Mr. Speaker, what I haven't really said (which I need to say at this point in time with regard to accomplishing the Vision) is the wish list that I have spoken about. It is going to fall directly on the public service to bear the brunt of accomplishing the Vision and providing the mechanisms and the tools with which this can be accomplished. I daresay my thoughts are that the three most important factors to allow this Vision to become a reality are what I have previously discussed as: Number one, the final reform initiatives; and number two, the personnel human resource development, the people in place to do whatever it necessary to make these changes come about; and third—and very near and dear to my heart—is going to be freedom of information.

I am going to leave freedom of information for a little bit and just take a few minutes to talk about the demands that are going to be created for further development of human resources.

You see, Mr. Speaker, it is my view that the way the system operates now is a bit confusing for one and all and I will explain that. It seems to me (and I have taken people to task in Finance Committee based on what my understanding was at the time) that the Personnel Unit, the original concept of that was to be able to manage the government employees, to structure the hiring and the discipline and the succession planning of these individuals. Now, as time has gone on in the government system, I believe that the way departments work at present because of lack of role clarity and because of cloudy circumstances, there may be a difference of opinion in some areas as to who is responsible for what. The truth of the matter is in the chain of command, heads of department will obviously know much more what the requirements are for that department to function but we always find that when it comes to personnel matters, people are saying, 'well, the way I understand general orders' and blah, blah, blah. That is not responsibility.

I can only write a note or write a memorandum saying this is what's happening and then somebody else has to take charge and deal with it. I think that there may well be a gap there as to how that function is to be carried out properly. So, that needs to be taken in hand.

Mr. Speaker, I daresay that at present (no one's fault, that's the way it is), the Personnel Department is in no way geared to play the role that is going to be required in these changes because the reform initiatives that have to take place demand for a type of human resource that is not readily available in the service. Not because of the number of bodies but the bodies don't know, simply because they haven't been exposed to what the demands are. So again we come back to role clarity, job description and that type of thing.

When it comes to the management and the development of human resources, there has to be serious and careful consideration. And there has to be a move to put in place the mechanism with the will to parallel those accomplishments that need to be realised in that area with all of the other reforms, otherwise nothing is going to happen. So there lies the importance of the human resource development. It simply means that we have to ensure that when the systems are put in place to create the efficiencies, that the bodies are there, trained and tooled properly to be able to work those systems—that's what it means. So one cannot go without the other.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when it comes to succession planning, that is going to be an area that I believe certain responsibilities and powers will have to be delegated and distributed in the chain of command in order to allow for that to happen. But it doesn't quite end there—let me tell you. There are people who might not wish to discuss certain things that I want to talk about but we need to now, Mr. Speaker. Now, is the time!

We have situations that occur with petty jealousies between personalities and because of those types of clashes and because the system isn't crystal clear and transparent to deal with those circumstances, we find a whole department suffering because of that. Again, not to be apologetic, but the point in all of this is to simply accept that these problems exist. As far as I am concerned, when we talk about the Public Service Commission, that has to involve arbitration. Because naturally if you have any checks and balances in your system, you must have a circumstance where if anyone feels that an injustice has been done, that they have recourse, which is obvious and that has to be the case. Because if it is not, then you are given the authority and the power to make decisions into too much of a lop-sided situation—you can't have that.

If I am the head of a department and you are working under me sir (I am certain that will never be the case—I am just speaking hypothetically) then if there is an injustice from me as head of the department to you, that you feel is an injustice, you must have natural recourse. If the situation is put in place properly, chances are it will happen ten times less than it might have happened before (or might be happening now) simply because either the head of department knows that that circumstance exists and is not going to take that chance. I am not going to expose myself to be shown that I have done something that is not in order.

In all of the planning, and all of the thoughts that are given to that, I think we need to evolve ourselves into that circumstance in order to be able to move forward. I know I haven't addressed the issue in total, but I think that is enough of that basically, not just to show inadequacies that exist, but to show what the needs are that will drive the change which will allow us to accomplish the goal.

Mr. Speaker, freedom of information—which I termed as the third main ingredient to accomplish all of these changes which will allow for Vision to become a reality over a time—has been termed by others as the lubricant in the whole thing. If the whole thing is an engine then it needs the oil to lubricate the pistons for them to fire, to give you power to move forward. And that's what freedom of information is.

Mr. Speaker, it wasn't very long ago when a private member's motion was passed in this honourable Assembly calling for a select committee to get together to bring about the necessary legislation. That is in the works. And while in my zeal I may wish for things to happen a bit faster, I begin to understand because of so many things happening that you cannot expect blood out of stone. So I am satisfied that that will get there but it is very necessary also to parallel . . . and I am going to urge the government at this point in time to practise and to preach, and to pass it on to all of the players involved. Even though the legislation is not in place yet, let us begin to practise as if it were in place and certainly we will all be better off.

There is an increasing demand by the public for information regarding government's activities. In previous years, I daresay that government operated on the premise that everything was secret except what you wanted the public to know. That is inherent—again, there is no accusation. People who are here now, people who have been here for a long time, people who have been part of the government for a long time have just gotten into the system. That's the way they found it, that's the way they live it and that's the way they know it. That has to change. We need to be doing exactly the opposite.

We need to be living on the principle that everything should be public except information that for obvious reasons warrants confidentiality and would put the state or individuals at certain risks.

Mr. Speaker, there is this growing demand from the public as I said before for openness. One might ask, what are the reasons the public should have access to official information? The first one, which is very obvious, is simply to enhance and increase the knowledge and the awareness of the public. Simple! Another reason is also to allow for the public to appreciate government more and to appreciate why certain decisions are taken and certain actions are taken. Many, many times certain decisions that are made by government, certain actions taken by government bring about a big uproar in the public because all they know is the action.

On the surface, the action seems not be in the best interest of the public so they are going to automatically react, but I believe that on many occasions if along with the decision made the accompanying reasons are given, the public would have a much better understanding. I am not saying that everybody would agree with the decisions but I believe that there would not be half as much uproar as we have. It wouldn't be half as many as the whole big crusades that go on. But not only that, Mr. Speaker, the truth is, the entire mechanism of government belongs to the people of the country. Any power or authority that any one of us hold is by virtue of the people of the country allowing us to hold it—regardless of what system is in place.

So, Mr. Speaker, the government must be accountable to the public. The greatest way that they can be shown to be accountable to the public is by being willing to give the public whatever information they wish to receive, within reason.

Just so that people don't misunderstand my line of argument, I will show a few areas where obviously we cannot treat that same principle across the board. I accept that there will have to be some types of rules that govern the disclosure of information. If there are matters that are of national security then obviously you cannot have that information being disseminated. There are also circumstances—probably more so now than ever before, Mr. Speaker—which will have a direct impact on the economic stability of the country. I respect that government has to make a decision whether certain information if it were disseminated would be more harmful than good—I don't have a problem with that type of stuff. There are also matters, which might have a direct impact on crime prevention or detection.

It is not to say that proper legislation should not accommodate all of those areas but I am saying that freedom of information being the lubricant in the engine—here is what it is going to do: When you have an entire system in place that is called the public service, and the public knows that they have access to information, and the public service knows that the public has access to information. . . that alone is the greatest check and balance that could be created to allow for all of these workings to be done thoroughly, correct and to the best ability that it can be afforded.

If we look into the chain of command, we have the policy makers, we have their advisors, and we have the people who are going to implement the policies. Having freedom of information legislation in place and practising that on a daily basis within the service will allow for the quality of advice and the basis of decision-making to be automatically enhanced because it creates immediately the accountability that is desired. That has to automatically extend itself to more respect from the public for the institution of government.

Let us get down a bit lower, Mr. Speaker. You know, I can stand here this morning and think of probably a dozen instances when rumours and marl road talk have had seriously impacted the lives of individuals in this country. For those who have never had to encounter it, it may not seem to be a big deal. But, you know the way it works now, Mr. Speaker, when myself and the Minister of Education get at it sometimes, here's what happens with that system: I do not have access to information and once he knows (this is hypothetical—but I like to use he and I because he can live with it) that I am his political adversary, okay I cannot expect him (when I go to him) to give me whatever information I want—it just doesn't work like that, I know that. The situation being reversed would be the same thing—I understand that.

So you know what I have to do? I have to make judgment calls trying not to be devious putting two and two together to make about ten, and out of frustrating circumstances I cannot get up and speak on the floor of this House and only be able to say two and two and say it adds up to ten! Listen, this is frightening. So I have to use whatever methods I can muster up, again, like I said, trying to make the best judgment call that I can, not involving other people or exposing them by asking them to give me information which I know they shouldn't be doing. When I add it up to make ten, I have to make a case because I believe it—remember that. It is not just because I want to show him up but I believe I am right even though I don't have all of the pieces together.

When I am making a case like that, I have to find some way to fill the other six pieces. By the time it is over, it is not impossible that my end story and whatever I accuse him of doing might not quite be the case—it is possible. If there were freedom of information legislation that could not happen. Of course, there is another side to that coin too. If I were the minister and he were I, and he was adding six out of his own mind to make ten, and I knew all ten, I would lash that on him so fast it wouldn't be funny. But in any case, I just used that little example to show the value of freedom of information.

If we look at the most serious aspect of it, Mr. Speaker, every arm and every part and parcel of government must be accountable for its actions. The only sure-fire way for them to be accountable is for information to be free. That means there can be no hiding behind this cloud, not only of secrecy but of . . . not deviousness. Mr. Speaker, that is not what I want to say because that is not the line of argument. But let us leave it at this shroud of secrecy. There can be no hiding behind that at any level and for government ministers that can happen to them on the chain of command going down. They must understand too.

Freedom of information and accountability works positively from the top down or from the bottom up either way you take it. I mean if they are going to be accountable to us at the end of the day then they must have the mechanisms throughout the chain of command for everybody else to be accountable to them. Simple! That is not the case now. So, Mr. Speaker, those three ingredients in my view once taken seriously and everybody put to work will allow for the Vision that has been proposed to become a reality.

Mr. Speaker, when we look at the circumstances that we live with today, the government has no choice but to restrain the growth of public spending and at the same time improve the level of services it provides for that same public. As onerous a task as that may seem, there is no choice anymore. Government is always under public scrutiny and freedom of information allows for the transparency that is being called for, something I dearly believe in.

You know, Mr. Speaker, I am going to leave off that topic now, but I want to say something and I say this purely from very personal insight. I know that human beings, including me, can fail. I firmly believe that being in this arena [all of us] should advocate and try to ensure that there are as many checks and balances (within reason) as possible so that I cannot fail. Some people might think different but I want it simply known. And as I said, I speak personally. I am not afraid to say that because for some of us our integrity is our lifeline and that should be the thought throughout the entire system from top to bottom and from bottom up. If that is the case, we must be better off. We cannot be infiltrated. I am not going to expand on that but I mean that from the bottom of my heart.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to take a minute here with your permission. There is a book called Managing Change, and one short paragraph in it basically sums up a lot of things. I would just like to read it: "Overall the pressure for reform has been so enormous that governments across the Commonwealth have been forced to question the fundamental roles and responsibilities of the nation's state. Many Commonwealth governments have adopted a variety of strategies including redefining the relationship between policymaking and administration and introducing greater accountability, task definition and performance measurements. [That's just different ways of saying role clarity and performance based remuneration.] Many have increasingly delegated the control of resources. Governments have become more aware of the need to work in a collaborative fashion with all stakeholders and have accepted that they must improve levels and quality of service."

Mr. Speaker, that sums it up. We are no exception. None whatsoever.

When it comes to the leadership, Mr. Speaker, leadership in government must establish the direction. The quality of leadership is going to take on a whole new meaning. The way I see this thing working is no longer should we find ourselves up in here arguing about who is responsible for what. This is not my responsibility, it is our responsibility. Everything is our responsibility but accountability must be fine-tuned to where the buck falls in a certain spot and that's it. Everybody knows what he has to do, everybody knows what he is responsible for.

Mr. Speaker, you have been here longer than most of us and I am sure you have lived the frustration of seeing that wheel spinning round and round, and getting nowhere. Being accountable doesn't mean that you want to have a system in place where people are accountable for their actions so that you can do them something—that's not the whole point. That is what some people fear because they haven't swum those waters yet. That is not to be feared. That in itself, is what gives rise for people to perform better.

Mr. Speaker, the changes are afoot. I am convinced without a shadow of a doubt and we have probably said it and I may have said it before now. But where we go from here and how we do what we do to achieve the wish list that the people of this country have helped to create is going to be the most important part in the history of this country. We have been out to sea for too long without a sense of direction. The fuel is running low. We now know where we have to get to as a destination. We need to chart the course to get there before the fuel runs out.

Change has to be managed. I know we can't just thrust change on people and expect the right reactions. That is where leadership comes in, Mr. Speaker, at all levels. A leader does not necessarily mean the Leader of Government Business, the Governor, the Chief Secretary, a Member of this Legislative Assembly. Leaders come at all levels. The human resource development is vital. The financial reform initiatives, which are taking place now, are vital. Having freedom of information as the lubricant to the engine is as vital as either one of the other two.

I believe that we have the ability to see this thing through. I believe that there is enough knowledge from within us, once the commitment is there to achieve the goals. Mr. Speaker, this is no time for petty squabbles. The future of my children is at stake. My children are not just who live with me at home, the children that I see walking on the road, going to school with mine, they are mine too. That is how I must feel—that's how all of us must feel. And, if from where we sit we do not make that commitment to direct the way this country is going to head, then we have failed our children. We cannot expect to run out of steam now and figure they are going to come behind and cure it all. It will not happen.

Luckily for us, even the tremendous growth that this country has experienced was accompanied by many of our former leaders who had their own types of vision, which has helped tremendously. Luckily for us, we don't have an untenable situation where we don't know where to turn. The least that we can do (because we have been blessed to find ourselves in that circumstance) is to do what is right.

I am nearing the end, but I need to say this: The greatest sin that any one of us could commit is to try to cause for any direction in our role as parliamentarians because of where we are going to end up. That is the greatest sin any one of us could commit.

If my best contribution is going to mean sitting in this little corner and doing what I think is right—trying to come from an informed position, trying to learn all about what is happening—that's fine with me. In fact, that is wonderful because I cannot have a better feeling if I know I have done what I could do. And do you know what else? If we do it right, God has a certain way of making everything else fall in place. I am sure you have lived that. Let us not worry about what's going to happen to us individually tomorrow. Collectively, if we move forward individually we will be fine. If we move forward individually, one of us might end up being responsible for the demise of all the rest. And, if we talk about onerous responsibility—that's onerous. That is what we need to be thinking like.

Mr. Speaker, there is a time and a place for everything. This is the time for all of us to be one. I am prepared for it. I am saying publicly that if we do not do what is right, we will all pay the price for it.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The floor is opened to debate. [Pause] If no other member wish to speak, does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I must say that I am very proud of the high calibre of debate that this motion has drawn. I am very proud of the constructive and optimistic debate, and also the non-political way in which this motion can be handled.

I guess I would like to open with what the Honourable First Elected Member for George Town finished with, and that is that collectively if we move forward individually we will be fine. I think they are probably some of the soundest words of advice that I have heard and he pointed out the dangers of trying to move forward individually. That really is the importance of ensuring that this legislature on matters that affect the national interest such as this 10 Year Strategic Plan for the Cayman Islands, Vision 2008, that this legislature and the people of these islands move forward collectively.

If that happens on major issues Mr. Speaker, then I am satisfied that the future of this country is well secured and that our children will be able in generations to come, to reap the benefits of this country, which we must ensure that we hand down to them.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to deal with as many of the matters collectively amongst members who have put these forward. The Third Elected Member for George Town put forward some very crucial issues and asked I think all of the important questions at the end of his speech, questions that were well developed throughout. Unless we collectively answer those questions that the Third Elected Member for George Town posed (and there were four of them)... questions which were also stressed were from the First Elected Member for George Town and the Fourth Elected Member for George Town in their debates and also by other honourable members, especially the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town in her short but very important contribution to this debate.

I would say that all members who contributed to this including my colleague had very constructive and very important fundamental aspects of this debate.

Mr. Speaker, as was clearly put forward by the Third Elected Member for George Town very early in his debate, the success of the Vision will be based on the success of its implementation. And that is a very crucial statement, it's one of the questions that he asked and all speakers... Here I am quoting from the Third Elected Member for George Town when he said "it is the duty and the responsibility of the legislators to see that it works," meaning that Vision 2008 works.

"Implementation [he went on to say] can only be accomplished if the people of the Cayman Islands make it happen." That is in my view, one of the foundations of this plan and how it will work.

Mr. Speaker, I am also happy to know that in this policy document, the 10 Year Strategic Plan, that not only did all members of the public have input but all members of this Honourable Legislative Assembly had input from the very early stages. So what we have here has the ownership, it has the full backing of this Honourable House and of the people of the Cayman Islands.

This 10-Year Plan has been referred to by one of the members as the wish list for the Cayman Islands. I would like to advance that one step further and say that Vision 2008 is really the foundation for the future stability and continuity of the Cayman Islands and is in my view basic to what our children will inherit in the future. If we carry this out and we carry out the three stages of it then I am satisfied that my two children as well as all the other children in these lovely islands will have a guaranteed future.

A lot of input was taken from the youth of this country. We must remember that the team leaders, many of them are our young people and this is why the National Strategic Plan is a very vibrant and viable policy plan. A plan that covers all aspects of where this country wishes to be by the Year 2008, and as a result, it has in my view the very best chance of succeeding on implementation.

I would like to apologise for not acknowledging this group at the beginning. It was quite rightly pointed out by the Third Elected Member for George Town. I would like to acknowledge the very significant role played by the Strategic Integration Group, not just in Vision 2008 but also on the financial reforms, the public sector reforms and the transparency reforms, if I may refer to them as that, that are moving at this time.

Mr. Speaker, the Strategic Integration Group is ably chaired by His Excellency the Governor. I am indebted to him despite the short time that our new Governor has been on the island. He has very effectively and efficiently taken the chairmanship of the Strategic Integration Group, he has given his assurances of standing behind Vision 2008. Without His Excellency's commitment (and we have that commitment) then the implementation... Or I should put it this way: the implementation is assured with the Governor's commitment behind it.

Also on the Strategic Integration Group is the Minister for Tourism; the Third Elected Member for George Town, Mr. Linford Pierson; the First Elected Member for George Town, Mr. Kurt Tibbetts; the Honourable Financial Secretary; the Honourable Chief Secretary; Deputy Financial Secretary; Deputy Chief Secretary; my Permanent Secretary, Mrs. Joy Basdeo and myself. Secretary to the Strategic Integration Group is Mr. Peter Gough, and also from the Government Information Services, the Director.

This group is responsible for the co-ordination of the government initiatives and as I would be putting forward and endorsing what the Third Elected Member for George Town put forward, I believe that it must now take a bigger role and begin to deal with how the implementation of these reforms will come about.

Mr. Speaker, I also endorse what has been said by the Third Elected Member for George Town. It is important that Mrs. Joy Basdeo, my Permanent Secretary, who has lead these reforms to this stage be considered an integral part of the Strategic Integration Group's decisions. So I am very grateful to His Excellency and all honourable members of that Strategic Integration Group for the amount of commitment, time and the experience and guidance that comes from it. When you add up the experience of that group, you will find that it is one of the most experienced and able groups of people that this country could really ever pull together under one chairmanship.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to also thank the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town for his contribution, for his dealing with the 10-Year Plan in a constructive and very analytical way. And for the guidance that has been put to this Legislative Assembly by that member and the other members that I referred to.

There was some mention of the fact that in the polling [approximately] 40 percent of the views were from non-Caymanians. But it is important that this policy document fit not only the people of the Cayman Islands but it also deals with those who are resident amongst us, who are also an integral part of the Cayman Islands. The residents in this country are very important to us, their views must be considered very seriously even though as legislators our over-riding duty is to the electorate of this country. But bearing that in mind, we must balance the views of expatriates who are among us.

This was probably raised in relation to the immigration policy, [which] is really being looked at by a Select Committee of this House. I have undertaken to ensure . . . and I believe that the views of the Vision 2008 will go to that select committee and will be looked at considered very seriously.

Mr. Speaker, taking into consideration points raised, I will be basically repeating and also endorsing statements made by honourable members in this House. The Third Elected Member for George Town dealt with the importance of balance when it comes to the natural environment and development—that is ably covered in the plan. He mentioned that the greatest asset of these islands is our people, and that is also borne out in the 10 Year Plan.

Mr. Speaker, the Vision 2008 mentioned (and this was raised by the Third Elected Member of George Town) that the major challenge facing the Cayman Islands today are the OECD, EU, G7 initiatives. Those initiatives and the meetings we have had on this, the Third Elected Member for George Town has been a very important and integral part of that team, together with members and ministers of government who had been dealing with this. I am happy to say that all members of the Legislative Assembly have kept this important issue out of politics. It is a big enough struggle trying to deal with these measures which are put forward by the largest countries in the world. We are not now just dealing with the United States. We are dealing with France, Canada, Japan, Germany—these are the countries that run the world. We, therefore, have to take seriously the changes that they are seeking to bring about which is basically to change the economic order of the world and we have to bear in mind that they run the world.

So we must put forward positively, in a very firm way, the views of the people of the Cayman Islands to them. The fact is that they have to take our interest into consideration when dealing with these issues, and the United Kingdom has been very good support to us throughout our dealings with the OECD, EU and the G7 measures. But we must remember also that they are a part of the Group of 7, European Union and the Organisation for the Economic Co-operation Development.

Mr. Speaker, another statement made that I endorse is that trained human resources are the key to our success. That really goes to the crux of the development of this country, we have to develop and train our people, unless we do that we will never reach the full potential in this country. I must say, I had actually prepared considerably notes but I believe that speaking as I am basically doing now from areas that I feel are important and near to us that other members have put forward is perhaps the way I will deal with this. So if you don't mind, I will not try to group heads as I was attempting to do, I think I will continue along these lines.

Many other good suggestions put forward were the importance of our key people and that is, all of us not spreading ourselves too thin. That can be a danger, I have come under tremendous pressure myself while my Permanent Secretary has been leading the executive of Vision 2008. I had hoped to get a senior staff in her place, unfortunately, in the last 20 months the Personnel [Department] has not been able to give me that staff. So I have had to basically deal with a lot of work on my own that I should have been given staff to deal with. But, Mr. Speaker, I say that not to complain, because I basically work nights, weekends, evenings and I also sit in here (I don't mind saying) and I do listen to members. But I have now had to learn to do my work for government while listening to members at the same time.

I am saying this to show that I believe that no sacrifice is too great for the success of the 10 Year Strategic Plan. If the time comes when a decision is made that my Permanent Secretary should be placed elsewhere to assist with Vision 2008—because she is in my view (and I am endorsing what the Third Elected Member for George Town said) having been at the creation of the document, Vision 2008, best able to assist this country in the implementation. If my ministry must suffer as a result of that, that price, while high, is not too great a sacrifice for seeing Vision 2008 being implemented.

That, I think, has to be at the top of the Legislative Assembly's agenda. And the full backing of the legislature of the ministers of government and of the top civil servants, and all of the ranks of the civil service. There has to be the commitment for the implementation coming from all ranks of the civil service. We in here as legislators cannot alone deal with the implementation of the National Strategic Plan. The implementation has to come from the commitment of the top and all ranks of the civil service and the training, therefore, has to go with it. It is no good for us putting civil servants in there who do not have the training and I believe along with the training will come the commitment to implementing Vision 2008.

The think tank that was put forward by the Third Elected Member for George Town . . . I know the Financial Secretary has already started this and has had at least one meeting on the budgetary process. That honourable member said that the brunt of implementation would be borne by the service and I fully endorse that.

Now, I have really been able to get fairly copious notes and I would like to thank Tricia who is in here with us, she is part of the team of Vision 2008. I have been able to get notes only from the debates of the First Elected Member for George Town and the Third Elected Member for George Town, therefore I will be quoting from them as they sum up in many ways what many others had said.

The First Elected Member for George Town mentioned that he had always pushed for forward planning and this is correct. That is crucial to the country. At last, we now have (as that honourable member has mentioned) a comprehensive document which goes well beyond what other countries in the Caribbean and around the world in fact have done. In fact, some of these reforms are now on the way in the United Kingdom.

So this legislature and the people of these islands have made one very large leap forward with Vision 2008. When the First Elected Member for George Town stated that Vision 2008 (the plan) cannot become a reality and “will not become a reality unless each and every one of us from where we sit in the Legislative Assembly, permanent secretaries, civil servants and citizens—all of us, claim ownership if it is going to work,” I fully endorse that statement. He mentioned the importance of ensuring commitment. And also, the public sector must play the major role in making Vision happen. That I know has been stated by many others.

Mr. Speaker, the importance of ensuring that the reforms are carried out, the integration of those reforms will be a challenge and there is no two ways about that. The ability in this debate for members to look very frankly at, I guess, the past five to six years in this House and the way the First Elected Member for George Town took examples of the problems that are in the system and analysed them . . . I am very grateful to him and I believe this House is because these problems do exist. But I believe that the reforms will clear up the vast majority of these problems.

For example, while ministers in this honourable house answer for why a school hasn't been built on time or built within cost—while we have responsibility . . . and I must answer and I must take responsibility for that. The reality is at the end of the day, I have no direct control over being able to direct that it be built within a certain time or with a certain amount of money and have the ability to enforce it.

The government makes policy and I or Executive Council can make a policy that the school shall be built but if at the end of the day it is not, then other than my having to apologise and have responsibility for it, I cannot personally direct that that school should be built within the specific time and for the amount of money.

Mr. Speaker, as the member mentioned, every ounce of pressure that backbench can put on government, they put and they do that very effectively. But it is good that at least we both understand that unless there are reforms in the system, the reality is that no matter how much pressure the backbench puts on us, we can only do so much and no more. Believe me, the public must be aware that if we could just direct that things be done and have the ability ourselves to carry it out then obviously we would do that. Why would I or other members of Executive Council stand here and take all of these knocks?

I believe that between the revenue measures, the public sector reform, the transparency measures and Vision 2008, this will all come together. I believe that we will reach the stage where we will be able to guarantee the outcomes of what this legislature, what the Executive Council or ministers, whichever level it is at . . . because ministerially we really have very little authority and Executive Council basically makes decisions and then the Legislative Assembly makes decisions and laws.

I fully endorse (and I have said this time and again) the reforms that are underway and if there is one thing throughout my political career that I have never looked forward to it is the budget process. The First Elected Member for George Town stated that the budget time is even worse. You look at what you cannot avoid doing and he went on to say that you then have to make hard decisions on what can and cannot be done.

Mr. Speaker, clarification of roles beginning with roles of the members of the Legislative Assembly, their duties (if we want to call it that) Ministers, Executive Council, civil servants; clarification of roles and job descriptions is critical. It's vital to getting the teamwork, to getting the continuity needed to deal with the reforms and the co-operation that is needed.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to deal with some further matters that were raised. The Public Accounts Committee is chaired by the Third Elected Member for West Bay and the problems pointed out there are that they are not dealing with policy nor does the Auditor General deal with policy. They are really dealing with matters that relate to how those policies are carried out and value for money, among other things. Ministers, therefore, do not appear before the Public Accounts Committee as the matter of policy itself rests with the Executive Council and the accountability for the spending of money rests with the controlling officers and their departments. Depending on whom that controlling officer is, it is normally someone in the department and also with the ministry at the civil service level that division I think is very important that the civil service not be involved in the political matters but the division also creates certain problems with Public Accounts Committee perhaps trying to get to the bottom of a matter.

I am happy though (and this has been acknowledged by the United Kingdom) to give credit to the Public Accounts Committee. We are the only territory which is up-to-date and has an active Public Accounts Committee. It is highly critical of us at times, and that is something we must accept while in government office and seek to correct areas that the Public Accounts Committee has pointed out. But there are territories where the Public Accounts Committee has not sat for years. So there is accountability here and I think it is a very important part of the functioning and the public accountability that the public must be able to see and hear what is happening within government. The Public Accounts Committee is the democratic body that deals with that.

Succession planning for Vision 2008 is very important, this is something that the Strategic Integration Group will have to deal with head on at an early stage.

Despite the criticism—and I think the public realises that I have borne the brunt of criticism in this Honourable House, which I know that while I remain as a Member of Government is something that I must bear and learn to take a lot of. Many times I take it without answering because if we have to answer every allegation levelled at us as politicians, I am even speaking more generally now, we would spend the rest of our lives answering.

The level of debate that we have seen here goes a long way to let me appreciate that despite the harshness of debate in a democratic society, there are times when we can constructively move forward together as we have done now.

I am going on to touch on freedom of information and transparency, which is at the heart of the public sector reforms because it is not only from the civil service point of view, but the government and the public service must make available to the public the maximum amount of necessary information that can be made available. I fully endorse that. I would like to show two examples of how I have played my part in pressing this matter forward because as members of this House quite rightly said, if information is put out to the public, there can be no doubt then on what basis government's decisions or the statutory bodies' decisions are made.

We have to reach a stage where we achieve the maximum of this, but it takes reform within the government and within this honourable House. When the Freedom of Information Law comes about, Question Time is going to be restricted within very narrow limits because information is then in the ambit of the public and cannot be asked here. That I think will be healthy for this country. But to do it, you have to have a government with broad shoulders and a government prepared to accept the challenges, to accept that mistakes will be made and to put forward constructive corrections. Until that day comes, no matter how much legislation we pass here, there will not be an effective and efficient system.

[I would like to thank the] staff within my ministry and the Department of Education—especially my Permanent Secretary—for their support in what was probably the first major decision on freedom of information. That came when we established an Independent School Inspectorate that has gone into seven schools and has reported on those seven schools. And, just two days ago at the opening of a seminar relating to school inspections, the Chief School Inspector, Mr. Victor Green, mentioned that it had taken Britain one hundred years of inspections before they released the first inspection to the public.

Mr. Speaker, we began our Inspectorate on the basis that we would release the information to the public and I had to weigh carefully the fact that when you totally expose the system, when it is then subjected to very critical analysis and the Inspectorate says this is wrong, that is wrong, this is good, that is good—that it could have serious political ramifications for me. But that step was taken at a very early stage and I would just like to read again (because I was reminded of this, at the opening of the Inspectorate) what I regard as a classic editorial by the Caymanian Compass.

They have levelled criticism at me over the years starting from day one but it is good to see that they are also prepared to acknowledge when something good is done for the country.

I would like to read this very quickly. It is headed, A Quiet Revolution. “Last month with very little fanfare, reports on three local schools assembled by the School’s Inspectorate were released to the public.

“The inspectorate, a wholly independent branch of the Ministry of Education, came into operation in 1997, its job to monitor and report on educational standards in Cayman. The publication of the Inspectorate’s first three reports, for distribution to the schools and parents, is a highly significant moment in the history of education in the islands.

“The ministry had a choice to publish or not, and, to its great credit, chose to do so. Going public with the strengths and weaknesses of local schools is an admirably positive step towards transparency and accountability within the education system. It has meant that, for the first time ever, objective and independent assessments of standards at local schools are available to parents. That is information that all parents and guardians in every country deserve—or perhaps have the right—to have, but too often do not.

“Publication of the reports establishes the honesty of the Ministry of Education, gives much credibility to its stated aim of raising educational standards, and encourages trust between the Ministry and parents.

“Now the reports have been published, the schools are using their own self-assessment reports in conjunction with the Inspectorate reports to produce action plans. The purpose of these will be to bolster areas which have been identified as weak. The Inspectorate is to monitor the implementation of the action plans, and each school will continue to evaluate its own work on a regular basis.

“If staff at the schools concerned can remain motivated to see through their action plans in the coming months, it seems likely that real improvement in standards will quickly follow.

“It remains to congratulate the Inspectorate staff for carrying out its mandate with such thoroughness and professionalism. The inspectorate reports—detailed, concise, and objective as they are—provide an extremely valuable framework for upgrading the quality of education in the Cayman Islands.” [Caymanian Compass, 24 November 1998.]

Mr. Speaker, when we talk of transparent—that is, what transparency is all about. My ministry had the faith in the education system to put independent inspectors in it to look individually at the schools and the private schools have also followed suit. Two of them have now been subjected to the inspectorate and the result is as this has stated, the strengths and weaknesses go to the public. If you have confidence in what you are doing, there is no problem with putting those out to the public.

I know there are weaknesses in the system but I also know it is a strong and good education system. I had no hesitation in taking that step to say to the public, 'Here are the weaknesses of the system and here is how we are going to correct it.'

Mr. Speaker, one other novel thing was introduced in the inspectorate system and that was self-assessment. Until we are able to assess ourselves and look at our own weaknesses and our strengths then we cannot ever move forward positively and confidently. This has now become an important part of the school assessment for the Inspectorate—teachers and staff have to sit down and analyse their strengths and their weaknesses. And the Inspectorate is here to assist the schools in raising the standard of education and dealing with the problems in those areas. Mr. Speaker, I am happy really to have taken this step. I know there will be times when reports will come out that there will be criticism levelled at the ministry, but I am prepared to take that constructively and to move forward and correct it.

Mr. Speaker, other areas where transparency has been brought in—the Planning Authority minutes are available to members of the public. They call most of the time I would say. They actually have members of the public before them to make objections or representations. It is an open process—nothing could be more open than that but the system functions despite... And we do get things levelled at the Planning Authority, at the Planning Department but that is good. I am always happy to have constructive criticism, the damaging part is at times politics—be that within this House or outside—get in and then we have a destructive criticism or a destructive approach. That doesn't help the country.

But with the two major departments that I have and also with Cayman Airways, I lay those accounts every year. I know what happened in the past. In the past with Cayman Airways . . . and I have that recorded, I know that the ministers in charge of Cayman Airways did not answer questions that affected the trading of Cayman Airways because they said it was a private company and, therefore, it could not be questioned in this House and this is indisputable the way it was.

Mr. Speaker, I did away with that rule. I answered questions and I answered them as long and as full as I could. And, I know even you have commented that sometimes seven to eight page answers are a bit long. Yes, they are. But I try to give full information and so do the other members of the government. So I have nothing to hide. I have nothing fear. I look forward to having the Freedom of Information Act in place and when it comes it will be merely endorsing the steps that I have taken with matters such as the schools, Planning, and Cayman Airways.

As far as freedom of information goes, that's good for this country and when it does come forward, like I said, I believe I have already gone along and other members have gone a long way with complying. Nothing can be more transparent than subjecting our schools to an independent inspection that's published to the people, to the parents, to the guardians.

I am wondering if we may be able to take a break before I go on to the fiscal measures.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:35 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12:05 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Government Motion No. 4/99. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning continuing.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The importance of changing government's accounting cash system to the universally accepted accrual system cannot be over-emphasised and several members went into this. At present, government has no balance sheet. It basically only has a cash flow accounting system, which operates much like a person who operates a business on pure cash and whether he pays for his house or he pays for food, it is treated in the same way. At the end of the day, he looks at what remains as his cash balance.

The accrual system will improve the system in many ways but one of the main ways will be when payments are made or money spent, for example on a building, it will not come out of profit and loss but it will go on to show as an addition to capital. In effect, that money has not gone away, it has been turned from cash into an asset. This is what the private sector people really understand and it will show a considerable different light, a far more accurate type of system, one that is universally understood.

Mr. Speaker, I look forward to the introduction of that part of the system. The system will also carry with it the reforms relating to the output of the departments and the statutory authorities. This too is important because it changes the present (if I may call it) one-line cash system into something that is much better understood and far more effective. And those reforms are moving ahead. With these four major areas of reform moving, it is critical that the reform in the human resources, the training of the personnel is in place because that one is crucial to the other three. The integration of the human resources reform and the finance transparency and Vision 2008 is going to be a challenge. But they have to be moved forward in an integrated way at an early stage.

One moving forward and leaving the rest behind is only going to partly achieve what we are seeking to do because all of the reforms depend on the civil service, our human resources. It all depends of our finances and a lot of the policies in Vision 2008 depend on those. As well as there is an interrelation throughout on the four areas of reform. So the overall integration of these reforms has to be dealt with at an early stage.

Mr. Speaker, the questions asked by the Third Elected Member for George Town that need to be answered are: Who will co-ordinate the plan? Who is responsible for clarifying roles and responsibilities? Who will assure proper performance? Are roles, leadership, ministries and support staff properly defined?

It says, integration of various initiatives and allocations are scarce human resources needed to address these top priorities. Danger of over-extending the limited human resources.

The delivery of the National Strategic Plan is basically a policy document that the duty rested on the acceptance by this honourable House, the acceptance by the Executive Council (which has already taken place), and the acceptance by the public at large (who really put the plan together). This part of the work is finished—thank the Lord, and we now have a 10-Year Strategic Plan covering all three islands and every aspect of the three islands. That document is a policy document that at this stage is substantially complete and subject to certain further costings and then the implementation must take place.

While I cannot and I do not have the authority to give the answers to these questions, what I will do from my personal point of view—I need to stress that it is my personal view . . . and it may well be that the Governor in the Strategic Integration Group or this House may well see some of what I am saying in a different light. I accept the democratic process and naturally, whatever decisions are made on the integration and the implementation of Vision 2008 I will play my part to the best of my ability.

Mr. Speaker, I think that the co-ordination of the plan should rest with the Strategic Integration Group that is chaired by His Excellency and has two members from either side of this honourable House on it, and the other members I mentioned earlier. I think once a decision is taken there, either with the Strategic Integration Group in its form as it is now . . . I would rather it be expanded because the brunt of implementation will fall on the civil service, there are no two ways around it. The political element, us in this House with government, cannot effectively deal with implementation because the civil service is non-political. It's not under a politician. So I believe that major role should lie with the Strategic Integration Group.

I think once that decision is made, the other three questions can be answered. But we have to be careful in relation to performance that the Strategic Integration Group as it has four politicians on it, is not seen to be crossing over and entering in any way the responsibility and the performance aspect of civil servants. It is with that caution that the Strategic Integration Group should sit down at an early stage now and decide how we will go forward with the implementation and the integration of the plans.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that the Strategic Integration Group will need the assistance of the equivalent of an expanded Vision 2008 Office. Perhaps, and here I don't intend to try to say who or which ministry that should be under. I think that's the decision for the Strategic Integration Group. But there has to be basically a permanent implementation secretariat equivalent in place that will assist the Strategic Integration Group with driving these policies forward because the policies are just not going to happen.

The civil service is going to need the training. They are the people who will make this work. And, therefore, as mentioned by several other members, the brunt of the implement is going to fall on the shoulders of the civil service. To avoid excessive pressure and excessive over-extending of those limited human resources, the necessary training and appropriate support staff must be put in place. I believe that regular reports from the Strategic Integration Group indirectly to this honourable House, to Executive Council, is most important.

Remember, the National Strategic Plan is a rolling plan that will be updated as necessary—but not less than every two years. So within two years, as is necessary, the plan will be revised and updated. That ensures that where there are problems, it can then be effectively corrected.

The plan is about as near to perfect as any country could get, especially as we can get. I know that it carries the support of the people of the Cayman Islands. However, we cannot over stress the importance and the complexity of putting into action what the plan now says. To do that, it is going to mean that every member of this House, every member of government, every civil servant is going to have to accept the change that is coming about.

There is no way that a plan of this magnitude and importance can be implemented without a change of mind and attitude to accept the changes and to look at them positively. Sometimes not just we ourselves, or not just civil servants, sometimes people will look at something and they will give ten reasons why it cannot be done. It may take them an hour to do that, whereas in five minutes they could come up with one good reason why it should be done and get on with it. There has got to be a positive attitude, a changing attitude with ourselves, with the civil service.

We have to accept that the public is our client, the public is our customer—we have to give service, we have to perform. Matters of the excessive cost, for example on buildings in the government sector has to be dealt with! We have to ensure that there is value for money spent and our duty is to ensure that with the implementation the systems that are necessary to support and to deal with good projects on a least cost basis are put in place.

I know that it is going to be difficult at times for some people to take a different approach. But I believe that if the right approach is taken, if a person knows that what they are doing is their best and they have a positive attitude then they will succeed in making the Cayman Islands a better place.

I would once again like to thank all members of the planning team, the roundtables, the Vision 2008 office, and the members of the public who took part. Also to thank members of this honourable House for supporting it and to really call on honourable members here to continue that support while the momentum is on with the National Strategic Plan. We have to move forward with it.

I would like to end by saying that I am very proud of the high calibre of debate in this House on this motion and the constructive, non-political approach taken to it. And to echo what one member stated that if collectively we move forward, individually we will be fine.

Mr. Speaker, the country now has a comprehensive ten-year strategic plan. It is one that I believe is implementable. I believe that it is one that will assure that our children in the future will inherit what they are entitled to. I believe that the ownership of it is with the people of this country and that in the years to come, we will look back on this development plan as being one of the major milestones in this Christian society that we have achieved.

The credit goes to the people of these islands for telling us what they wish to see. Our duty with them now is to carry this out, to implement it to get into the first stage and to effectively see that we achieve what the people foresee as their vision for the future.

I would like to end by asking God's blessing on this ten-year plan and that He assist us in moving it forward along with the country and the people of the Cayman Islands. Thank you.

SECOND READING

THE ELECTIONS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Elections (Amendment) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move the second reading of the Elections (Amendment) Bill, 1999, which I think was circulated to members back on 7 July.

The Speaker: Sir, do you wish to speak to it? Please continue.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

That bill emanated from the work of a Select Committee of this whole House on the Elections Law. The committee was established on 21 April 1997 following the passage of Government Motion No. 2/97. As the House will recall, you appointed the Honourable First Official Member to Chair that committee of the whole House.

The Committee met on five occasions between late 1997 and June of this year, and following the June meeting, it produced its second interim report. For the benefit of the public more than members, I will just reiterate the recommendations contained in that report.

"The Committee wishes to report that it has reviewed two issues, which it considers necessary at this time to be put into place. These relate to amending the Elections Law to make provision for a permanent register of electors in the islands and for voters registration cards."

"The Committee, accordingly, considered and agreed to a draft bill to incorporate these provisions. The draft bill, entitled A Bill for a Law to amend the Elections Law (1998 Revision), is appended hereto and forms part of this report."

"The permanent register will be based upon the register currently in force and will be updated shortly after the coming into force of the amended legislation. The register, thereafter, is to be updated on a quarterly basis to provide for the addition to the roll of those who have become qualified as electors since the previous updating. It will also provide for the removal from the register of persons who have died or who are no longer qualified by other reasons such as non-residence or conviction for criminal offences."

"Information concerning deaths, criminal offences and other matters is to be provided to the Supervisor of Elections. Voters' registration cards will be instituted and are to be produced by the elector when he or she votes on the occasion of any general or by-election."

"The Committee, therefore, recommends to this Honourable House that the Elections Law be amended as set out in the draft bill and that the amending legislation be presented to this Honourable House by the Government as soon as possible."

Mr. Speaker, it is against that background that the draft bill, The Elections (Amendment) Bill, 1999 is, therefore, before the House. It is fortunate for me, sir, that members having served on the Committee and being eminently familiar with the recommendations, and I expect with the content of the Bill, require no great elaboration. I therefore wish to humbly recommend the Bill and trust that it will meet what members have expected and that they will find it possible to give the Bill their full support. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Elections (Amendment) Bill, 1999 be given a second a reading. The motion is open to debate. Does any Member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, just to say that I am in support of this Bill for there are certain matters that the Bill covers that are very progressive in that we are going to a permanent register for persons who are eligible to vote in a general election.

Mr. Speaker, it will keep abreast when people become of age and it strengthens the electoral process in that persons will not be easily left off of the voters' role. In previous elections, this has caused much confusion, time, and effort on the part of the officials who prepare the country for a general election.

I believe this makes our electoral process much more democratic than it has ever been. It will give people a card and this too is important because it will form identification. Cayman is no longer the island that time forgot. We are becoming a fast metropolis in our own way with immigration and I find that this card useful.

There are matters, Mr. Speaker, not covered in this Bill which the government has promised to continue the committee on. That is, the matter of absentee votes. This has caused confusion in the past and it is something that I desire to see straightened out. While this Bill, as I said, doesn't cover it, it must be looked at. And, we have had commitment, I should say, from the government on this particular item that they will come back and revisit that aspect of the electoral process.

Mr. Speaker, I am happy to see this Bill before the House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I wonder sometimes if the government is stupefied. It is their bill and they sit gaping at this side of the House. If no member gets up to speak then the Bill goes to the voting stage, and the government—which I consider owes the country at least an explanation—gets off without stating anything at all. I hope when the new millennium comes that whatever constitutes the government is not so stupefied.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill is accurately described as consisting of a housekeeping exercises. Certainly, there is nothing controversial. The move to have Voter Registration Cards or Electors Identification Cards is one which is in keeping with worldwide trends. And certainly, a permanent register of electors (as they will now be called) is again a move toward efficiency and good scientific management. I have long held the view that this was an objective we should aspire to in the Cayman Islands as it would make the business of managing elections much less cumbersome than every year having to go through a lengthy and expensive registration process.

I noticed, Mr. Speaker, that there will be a card held by each elector. Each elector will be required to hold it in safekeeping as, presumably, without the card a person will not be allowed to vote because that card confirms the identity of the person. I have to ask, because we already have drivers' licences, whether there was any possibility as to combining the two functions on one card. Of course, one could lay the argument, the more cards you have the greater risk you run of losing or misplacing them. I toss that idea out that sometimes it is good when we do these things to find out if we can save expenses and be more efficient. Rather than have a multiplicity we can have one unit serving many different functions. I don't know whether this is so, I am merely asking if there was any exercise carried out to find out whether it would be workable or not.

Mr. Speaker, I have a question concerning the section dealing with offences and people being denied the right to vote as a result of certain prison sentences or the length of some sentences. I address it by saying that this is almost a universally applicable situation where if you have sentences of certain lengths—indeed in the United States, if you commit certain felonious offences, they ban you from voting for life. So I say to the persons who raise the query that the government was not proposing anything extraordinary or depriving anyone of any universally acclaimed or accepted right, it stands to reason [that] if you have sentences beyond a certain duration that you be denied the business of voting, at least temporarily.

The business of voting in a democracy carries serious obligations and serious responsibilities. I don't think that anyone in his right mind would stand to disenfranchise people for flimsy reasons. But people who are prone to a psychopathic behaviour must access the consequences of such behaviour before they commit the act. They cannot expect to be psychopaths and social outcasts and have the same rights and privileges as people who are law abiding.

I think that should set those concerns to rest. As was echoed by the First Elected Member for West Bay, the business of absentee ballots has not been dealt with in this Bill. I would like to say that I don't consider this Bill all inclusive because I think if we follow international trends, there are other issues. I well realise that we have other legislation that governs the behaviour of political aspirants and electors. But I am reminded that in the United Kingdom and in the United States at this time there is a lively, if not sometimes acrimonious, debate going on as to the business of money and votes, and money as it influences political behaviour and public policy.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that this is an issue which we in the Cayman Islands should always bear in mind and always keep an eye out for. Even although there was no necessity to include such provisions in this law, I am serving notice on the government that we in the Cayman Islands are certainly not exempt from some of the more odious practices when it comes to these things.

Let us not, when we have this Bill, rest on our laurels and think that this Bill addresses all issues for all times. I believe that the Bill is worthy of our support. Certainly, it puts us in a position where we can be more effective and manage more scientifically the business of voter registration and a permanent register of voters as it applies to our jurisdiction and in our situation.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 46

The Speaker: Before I call on another speaker, I would like to call on the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, to move the suspension of Standing Order 46.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 46 as the Bill has not yet been gazetted, even though it has been circulated as I understand it for some time. It did come out, in any event, sir, of a Select Committee so all members have had notice for a long time.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Order 46 has been suspended.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 46 SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, this Bill has made its way to the floor of this Honourable House after it was dealt with in a Select Committee of the whole House. I think that we all had a good opportunity to have added whatever we needed to add to this particular bill. Anything that is failing here, really is failing because of the responsibility of the whole House.

It is important, Mr. Speaker, that we also realise that the Bill was moved forward because we wanted to deal with this whole question of having a permanent register of voters or electors. And this will, I think, facilitate the whole electoral process and perhaps assist and in making it a bit more democratic because some persons are annoyed by the fact that every four years after they have been registered the government comes back to register them again.

I have heard comments, 'Well, I am supposed to be on the list. I have registered, why should I do it again?' It is good. I think the people will be happy to hear that there will be a permanent register and that we can proceed from there to add or subtract the names of persons that reach a particular age to qualify or people that are deceased to be struck from the list.

Mr. Speaker, I would like also to briefly say that I am happy that we can move along with this and I am willing to revisit this particular bill at any time. But I do realise also that we have had a great opportunity to make the amendments that were necessary. And that is what we did, the Committee of the whole House, and what we have here I believe was the unanimous decision of everyone. So it is not surprising, therefore, that we agree with this Bill as it now stands.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted to rise and offer my support. One of the things I wanted to take this opportunity to do is . . . for some time (since 1992), it has been put forward that the boundary line between the two districts of Bodden Town and George Town needs to be looked at. This was arbitrarily put there, and it would be timely for this line to be properly demarcated in the not too distant future.

My understanding is that right now the West Side of the Spotts Newlands Road is termed as being part of the George Town District and the East Side is the Bodden Town District.

Otherwise, Mr. Speaker, I think this is a timely piece of legislation. It has brought a degree of modernisation to the process that we use in our election process here and as we go along I would appreciate that this be addressed in due course. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I also rise to offer my support to the proposed amendments to the Elections Law dealing with the establishment of a permanent register and the issuance of a Voter Registration Card.

Mr. Speaker, the permanent register, for the purpose of the listening public, is that list that exists as of November I guess, or October 1996, whenever the last election was. It is very frustrating, and I have gone through three elections so far and each year had to go through the same process of registering people. Mr. Speaker, what is also amazing and frustrating is that in one year there are certain people who qualify. In the next election year, those same people are disqualified for some reason or the other. Mr. Speaker, I think one of the greatest rights that we have in any democratic society is the right to vote or to choose our leaders.

The issue of a permanent register I know was discussed. And according to the Supervisor of Elections, he has the capacity to produce a list of those persons who were approved for the issuance of a postal ballot in 1996. As far as I am concerned, that list should also be apart of the permanent register that we are now discussing here this morning because that is also a very time consuming and frustrating exercise. It is just that we have been very fortunate in the past that we have had health practitioners who co-operated with us and went out and certified that these persons who were applying for postal ballots did qualify because of one reason or the other. What it has done over the years is that those persons who cannot make it to the polls, some of them have been deprived of the right to vote because their application was not approved. A doctor did not get to them in time in order to certify that, yes they are still handicapped or unable to get to the polls.

In my mind, I think the voter or the elector should have the right to choose what form of voting he would exercise. If it means that he comes to the polls then he should have the right to come to the polls. If not, he should have the right also to maybe apply for an absentee ballot to vote in absentee. I think that's the stage we need to arrive at in this country as far as the political electoral process.

Mr. Speaker, I think, it will make it much easier on all of us because as was mentioned in the recent parliamentary conference . . . I was sitting in one day listening to some of the debate, what came across very strong was that politics is well and alive here in the Caribbean. In other words, our people are interested in politics; they want to be a part of the election process. I think we should do whatever is in our power to make it as easy as possible for our people to exercise that right.

The other thing that the permanent register will do is allow many more of our young people who are turning eighteen the opportunity to vote. As I understand it, the list will be upgraded quarterly. I would daresay that somebody on the list up until maybe the end of September, in other words turning eighteen by the end of September, should have the right to vote in the upcoming general election.

I also believe that it is a good idea to have a voter registration card. It makes it easier on everyone if on the day of election you go to the polls, you present your card, it has your ID number on it. Whoever the polling clerk is, checks to make sure that that is you and you are given the opportunity to vote. But there are built-in contingency plans that will allow that person to vote even if he arrives at the polls and does not have a Voter Registration Card. Because we live in a small community and those things will happen, but chances are you can find someone there or allow the person to produce some other form of identification so that you know who it is and also give them the [privilege] to exercise the right to vote.

Mr. Speaker, I know we are not finished with the process as far as reviewing the Elections Law, but I look forward to the day when we can go to the polls after an intensive political campaign and know the results shortly after the elections—in other words, shortly after the polls are closed. In smaller districts, maybe Bodden Town and North Side, maybe even Cayman Brac, it is not a very big deal to have to sit there and go through a list or go through a count. But in the electoral districts of West Bay and George Town it is marathons. I remember the last election, I think, George Town was not finished until the next evening. In other words, Mr. Speaker, it was probably in excess of twenty-four hours at the polls or in counting.

Mr. Speaker, I do congratulate the mover for bringing this piece of legislation. It has my full support and I look forward to us in Committee dealing with some of the other issues that has to be addressed in the Elections Law.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Chairman: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, this Bill has arisen from many sittings of a select committee of the whole House, so all members of this House were in that committee and the Second Interim Report was laid on the Table. That set out the several meetings that we had. I would just like to stress that this is a Bill, which has originated from all of the members of this House, was one in which we all had an opportunity to speak on.

Just to clear up what was mentioned by the Third Elected Member of Bodden Town, of what government was doing on it, to say that this was a joint issue that all of us had the input. Mr. Speaker, I know that there are other areas that are still under review but all members of this House are reviewing it, and this is set out in Clause 5 of the Interim Report, which says: "5. Other Matters under Review: 5. 1 The committee further wishes to report that it is in the process of reviewing a number of other issues and that it will in due course report to the House."

So it is not a matter for government to look at the issues raised as such, but for the whole House to look at the issues raised and that includes government and all members here who would look at the other matters arising under the Elections Law.

Mr. Speaker, the Bill is very important. It went through quite a bit of scrutiny by all members of the House and it will provide for the registration cards for elections. One query that was raised was that there is an amendment to Section 37(4) that does permit voting if the polling clerk is satisfied that the person's name appears in the register and is entitled to vote—even though he has not presented his card at the polling station.

I would like to just stress that it would be most important for the polling cards to be brought when a election is on. But the Election Supervisor and his staff are very good at making sure that full information goes out and I am sure that that will happen in these instances.

Mr. Speaker, as to whether you can combine a driver's licence or any other type of identification card with this is really matter that the member who raised it should take up with the committee. Let the committee look at it. I don't think it is really for government itself to look at this. Once matter becomes subject to a select committee of the House, it is normally that select committee that is empowered and is in the best position to make decisions on this. I really would think that what the member who raised it probably meant to say was that it is something that should be looked at jointly by all members of the committee.

I think the amendment is good, sir, and I support it and I am glad that its been kept in a non-political and fairly neutral way because that is the way an amendment such as this should be dealt with, sir.

The Chairman: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I too rise to give support to this Elections Law (Amendment). The Bill, as the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons clearly states, is to amend the 1998 Revision of the Elections Law so as to provide for a permanent register of electors and registration cards.

Other members have spoken, and, certainly, I think it's fairly clear that this will allow for a more efficient process at the end of the day once these measures are put in place. So, Mr. Speaker, there aren't too many things to really add to what has been said.

What I would like to point out, as has been pointed out before, is that this Bill itself is certainly all encompassing. There are other issues to be dealt with that other and I believe need to be dealt with when it comes to certain amendments to the law itself. But suffice it to say that these two issues were issues which were seen to be able to be done in an expeditious manner. So rather than hold these off until other issues were dealt with down the line, perhaps get these out of the way and allow for the system to commence with these changes prior to the next election.

Mr. Speaker, mention was made regarding the absentee voters' list. It was the Third Elected Member for West Bay who mentioned that. What I would just like to point out with that is that while in many instances if there were a permanent absentee voters list it would make life easy in picking up any list to call it the permanent register, the first step would have to be that the list itself was verified. Not only because of any deaths or whatever, not only people who are incapacitated physically are on this list and there are people who are overseas on a temporary basis for school and for other reasons, who for the next election might not fall into the category of being able to be put on an absentee list.

Also, I think, we need to think very carefully with regard to simply allowing individuals for any reason whatsoever to be put on an absentee voters' list. One of the main reasons for not being able to vote in absentia as one wishes to, Mr. Speaker, was to ensure that an individual's right was protected. While I don't suggest that this is something that happens every day, or whenever election time comes, I think the thought has been that there are individuals who would bow to pressures from others and find themselves voting for individuals who, if they were given the choice and they went into the box by themselves, they would actually have voted for somebody different.

So to leave that to a circumstance where it allows pressure to be put from the outside and certain types of individuals be coerced to vote by this method would certainly not necessarily bring about what is in their best interest. I think the point is valid and for that reason. I think we have to be very careful if we were to consider going that route.

Mr. Speaker, I want to make slight mention of another issue with regards procedure here. The government can say what they wish after I say what I am going to say. My understanding this morning is that the Business Committee met on Friday to decide on at least today's agenda if not for the rest of the week. The Acting

First Official Member who obviously is the mover of this Government Bill had no knowledge that that was going to be his chore this morning until he saw the Order Paper. Now, I hope he is not offended and thinks that I am drawing him into an issue here that I shouldn't, but the issue does not concern him—it concerns procedure.

Everyone has spoken about how the committee met and all members of the House had ample opportunity and they are well prepared for this debate. I don't have a problem with that. I am not talking about myself, but I would like to know what kind of Business Committee it is that operates in such a manner? And, since they think now that I cannot think for myself a little bit further down the line, I know the first answer they are going to come with—that is not their responsibility. Whoever was leaving and whoever the person was that was going to act for that person should have had communication to take care of that.

What I would like to know is: What kind of communication went on to advise that this Bill was coming this morning? That is my question.

You know, Mr. Speaker, that is just a small example. The Business Committee cannot operate the way it has been operating. I am not questioning how busy people's lives are. I understand that. I am not suggesting that people don't have much on their plate and many things to do. I am not just being nasty for the sake of being nasty, but I want to make a point. The Business Committee as it is constituted must operate the right way. I don't even want to bring in and make serious issue of all of the other private member's motions that have been there, that they found every excuse in the world not to put on because we are only meeting this week.

I am not going to fight over that even though I have in my mind just reason to do that. I am trying not to stray too far from this debate itself, Mr. Speaker, but perhaps some people don't consider certain elements of the business of this country to be of major importance—I do. I have been in this Honourable Legislative Assembly . . . I have been part and parcel of things that have been passed in this House. While I respect that it was my responsibility also, I had no idea exactly what I was participating in—because of the way it was dealt with—until after the fact. I had to turn around and come back and fight against it, to try and get it straightened out.

Remember, I am not saying that I was not responsible. I am just saying how life happens. The way the Business Committee operates, we have no idea on occasion (to put it loosely) what's going down. So if you are not totally prepared for everything—and that is physically impossible—and the government says that they are not ready for this and they are not ready for that.

So I am saying, Mr. Speaker, that regardless of schedules of individuals and or groups, including the government, the Business Committee must operate in a better fashion. People have resigned from that committee because of how it is operating. The government can take whatever issue they wish. Whatever the decision is and whatever is being done, the point is it must be done not in the manner that (as the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town puts it) displays *ad hoc*cracy.

We know what the Standing Orders call for. We know the way things are supposed to be done. And I don't care what kind of schedule . . . if the meeting has to be held 8:00 in the morning or 8:00 in the night, it should be done on a timely basis. Time and time again I sit in the common room and people are scrambling to hold a Business Committee meeting to decide what the next day's business is going to be about. It cannot work like that and it must stop!

To be repetitious to make sure the point is made, regardless of schedules and overwork and overburden and over-responsibility, if the business of the House—which is the business of the country—is going to function then it must be done properly. And, if the members who constitute the business community cannot do it properly then let somebody else do it!

POINT OF ORDER

(Point of Relevancy)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am going to take a point of order.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am not finished yet.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I have sat here and listened to this for a considerable period of time and I am taking a point of order this time on a point of relevancy. The motion here is the Elections Law. Alternatively, I would ask you to give me an opportunity to reply to the different areas of impropriety that has been levelled at the Business Committee—of which I am chairman.

The Speaker: I will permit that, but on a previous occasion I recommended to all honourable members that we meet informally to discuss this. I don't think that we are going to get anywhere here in this Chamber. We know what's happening and we know what we want to do, but if we meet informally I think there is more chance of getting to understand the problems that both sides are having.

But you certainly can have an opportunity. If you wish to have it at this time, you may or as soon as the First Elected Member for George Town is [finished]. But you can reserve that right.

The First Elected Member for George Town, please continue.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I crave your indulgence to hear me out, sir.

The Speaker: I will do that, but understand what I am saying.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I understand you very clearly, sir, and I understand what the minister has just done. But the minister must understand by now that I was not born yesterday!

I am going to say to you, sir: If you are going to allow that minister to answer, then let him do so now because he will not corner me to speak last. I am on the floor of the House and he has already spoken, sir. I crave for you to do that.

The Speaker: I can only catch people's eye so if you want to continue your debate, continue it. Please continue, First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I will continue, sir. But I know what I just said to you and I know what you just said. I am going to say this before I continue: If the minister refuses to pick up the option now and does so when I am finished speaking, sir, today is going to be a difficult day because I understand what the minister is doing. I am not trying to put you in a corner, Mr. Speaker, but it is only fair what I asked for.

I would like, sir, before it is over that we have a clear course of action, if we could.

The Speaker: Before we go any further, let me say as Speaker of this House, it is my duty to move the business forward and we have a lot of business that we need to be dealing with. I have asked honourable members to attempt to condense it enough that we can conclude deliberations on Friday—remembering that this Honourable House reconvenes for its September sitting on the 8th day of September.

The Legislative Department takes time to prepare. We will have questions, motions, bills, and everything coming forward. So in order that everything can be ready for the September sitting, we need some time and this honourable House needs to adjourn until September 8th on Friday. I would like to see what is on this Business Paper concluded today and each day forward so that we can achieve our goal, and I ask the co-operation of all honourable members.

If we want to have a time set down for an informal meeting, we will sit after hours—we can sit here until midnight if anybody desires. I am prepared to stay as long as anybody else, but I do not see that that is getting the business of this House completed and I beg for the co-operation.

First Elected Member for George Town, do you wish to continue?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am quite happy to continue but the Minister of Education was trying to get your eyes, sir. Obviously he wishes to say something.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I quite agree with what you said. I am not in here to get into a fight this morning and I want to make that clear because this is not going to help the House. But I think an explanation to what the First Elected Member [for George Town] has said and the allegations and aspirations cast, need to be dealt with.

Mr. Speaker, firstly in relation to the Deputy Chief Secretary, the decision to put the Elections Law down today was taken by the then members of Executive Council, not in council but unofficially. It is just unfortunate if the course of action that perhaps he saw fit (and I don't know what sparked the First Elected Member from George Town to do this) was to deal with that in the open arena. All I can say sir, if there was no communication on it, the Chief Secretary and the other members were in there when these things were done.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, all staff of the Legislative Assembly with the exception of one or two members were out during the time that I tried to hold a Business Committee meeting. Everyone was at the Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference and I only saw one person in here and, at a later stage, a second person. Whether that is correct or not, I don't know. But the Chairman is here and he knows how many staff were at the CPA.

[Laughter]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What I tried to do, Mr. Speaker, was during the time before the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association [Conference] began . . . again, I really wish along with this you ask the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town if he is going to laugh to try not to laugh so it goes into the mike.

[Laughter]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: While you are addressing the behaviour in this House, it perhaps suits you as well to look at those whose behaviour may or may not be less than what is desired of honourable members in this honourable House.

I held a meeting of the Business Committee and present in that meeting was Mr. Dalmain Ebanks, Mr. McKeeva Bush, Miss Heather Bodden, and the Honourable Julianna O'Connor-Connolly was off the island at the time. We did that on Friday.

Now whether or not that one person, that one staff was able to phone or not . . . but I don't know, sir. I doubt it because she was under tremendous pressure, and I thanked her for it. I had to spend some time sitting with her to try to get the minutes done. So I just need to understand the position last week . . . and you, Mr. Speaker, spent time also at the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Conference and the staff here, I must say, was extremely pressed and there were only one or two here.

Now, if notification was not given then the only thing I can do is to apologise for it. But the public just needs to understand that the harsh allegations that have been made, the circumstances, which I submit, Mr. Speaker, the lack of staff in the Legislature last week had to be known to the First Elected Member from George Town because he must have seen many of the staff at the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Conference. That is the most I could do.

A meeting was held. I know that the Chief Secretary knew that the Bill was going to be on from a week ago and basically the committee did what we felt was right at the time. And I hope that clears it up. I don't really want to get into any fights and I don't want any bitterness in here, I am just tired of it because people are beginning to talk generally that we act like little children in here. The time has to come when it stops.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am going to close my contribution regarding the amendment to the Elections Law. I am going to again reiterate my support for the amending bill. But just like you allowed the Minister of Education to speak, sir, I am going to crave your indulgence for just a couple minutes without getting into what he talks about "a fight" to just reply to certain remarks.

The Speaker: I would ask you let's try not to get another reply and another. Let yours be final, please.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I have the greatest of respect for you, sir. He got his so I am having my final. I don't see any chance of anything after this. He can talk to me in the Common Room or he can do something else but I don't see you allowing him to speak again.

Mr. Speaker, all I want to say is this, and I have found on many occasions that when you make a point, people (as is their usual style) take it personally. Of course, obviously what affected the minister a little while ago, the most important thing to him was what the listening public thought and he voiced that. He wanted the public to understand. He thinks I am saying what I am saying for the public to understand certain things about he and his actions.

Frankly, I never thought about it like that, although I realise it now. I was simply trying to get the business of the country done in a fashion that is not the usual style of being reactive. The lame excuses the minister just used are real excuses. What the minister needs to understand is that every one of us knew that this conference was going on and the dates were set for the conference. In fact, we suspended to allow the staff to do what they had to do because of the conference. So the minister knew long ago what it was going to be like.

But what he is trying to say, Mr. Speaker, is that in the middle of all of this is why he couldn't have his meeting. Had he thought of it for a second, knowing what he was going to be up against, he should have had the meeting before or called the meeting at a time when it was going to be allowed. But, Mr. Speaker, it is not important in my line of argument as to what wasn't done right in this specific instance. The point I am trying to make is that the Business Committee, as the minister well knows, needs to function properly. Whatever methodology has to be employed to allow it to function properly, let it happen. That is all I am saying.

We cannot continue to have a million excuses every time. He is talking about wasting time in this House, Mr. Speaker, and every time we have to get up to talk about it it's because... For instance, questions. We have spoken about that a thousand times and every time you get up, his only reply is acting like children and yah, yah, yah....

We don't want to hear that either! We want them to do what they have to do. If the business of the House was conducted properly, we wouldn't have anything to say but to deal with the business. But do you know what the minister needs to understand, Mr. Speaker? I don't care what he wishes the public to understand. He needs to understand that the public understands that the back-bench in the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands is as important as the government bench, and it functions as well—if not better, sir. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? Does the Honourable Acting First Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was sitting here thinking that a week ago this time I was on the North Sound and I was pulling my son behind a boat while he and a friend skied. This morning, I came here feeling a little bit like the newly hired waiter, and thought I would be quite content for the people who had actually prepared the meal to talk about it. I was doing all right for a while.

Anyway, I do acknowledge that, yes I wasn't aware that the Bill was coming up. But that didn't pose any insurmountable amount of problem personally. Life is full of surprises and I always try to convert those into opportunities rather than to see them as obstacles.

I want to thank the members who spoke in relation to the Bill and for their worthwhile explanations and comments. I think it has already been made clear that by no means is the select committee concluded. The committee is still standing and there are other issues it is considering. Obviously, from the debate this morning there are some issues which members feel need to be considered, and it was interesting just hearing one member advocate the choice of how to vote and another counter with the merits of providing a sterile environment for the actual casting of that vote.

I mention that only to highlight that indeed it is the members of this House, the real practitioners of this election process, who are obviously most able to give full consideration to the issues relating to the election process. I am confident that the committee as it continues to deliberate will no doubt bring to resolution some of the issues that are still in members' minds.

I simply would wish to thank members for their input and for their support and I am grateful that we can move this Bill forward to the next stage. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Elections (Amendment) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The bill has accordingly been given a second reading.

AGREED: THE ELECTIONS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1999 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: I think this will be an appropriate time to take the morning break. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:20 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11:55 AM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Bills second reading.

SECOND READING

THE COMPANIES MANAGEMENT BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Companies Management Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel A. Walton: Thank you, sir. In accordance with the relevant Standing Order, I beg to move the second reading of a Bill entitled, The Companies Management Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: Please continue

Hon. Joel A. Walton: Mr. Speaker, this Bill repeals and re-enacts in a much more modern form the original Companies Management Bill, which was enacted in 1984 and had the revisions in 1986 and 1998. In addition, there were a number of amendments over the years.

Among other things, it provides for a system of regulations of company managers by the Monetary Authority and really deals with bringing company management practice in line with the other key pieces of legislation that I am referring to; the Banks and Trust Companies and Insurance and Mutual Funds, which we have over the last several years updated. This is, therefore, the last major piece that we have been working on for the last couple years to be updated.

Members will be aware, sir, that there have been a number of developments both locally and on the international front, as well in the whole area of financial services and their regulations. Cayman, as members are aware, has been on the forefront for many years particularly in the area of money laundering, drugs and similar type crimes. This piece of legislation certainly speaks to enhancing that image.

In addition to developing the legislation, we also spent time and consulted with practitioners both locally again as well as internationally, persons who work in this area to get their feedback. What we have before us is a result of that consultation as well as of government's own decision.

Sir, I recommend this Bill to this honourable House as presented. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The question is that the Bill entitled, The Companies Management Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. It is now open to debate. Does any Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to support the Bill for a law to repeal and replace the Companies Management Law, 1998 (Revision) and to make provision for the licensing and control of the business of company management, and for incidental and connected purposes.

Mr. Speaker, the present law on the books was actually enacted after a series of consultations with the private sector back in the mid-1980's. At a time when (as the Honourable Acting Third Official Member said) narcotics were the thing of the day. Although we did not have any guideline to use, I know that piece of legislation did blaze some trails in the company management area, simply because when the committee sought to put forward legislation of that type, there were none available that we could find in any particular jurisdiction.

Therefore, I think after 13 - 14 years, it is always time to re-look at legislation with a view of bringing it into the most current...to deal with the company management operation in a much more comprehensive and current way. Additionally, to place the regulation of company managers within the control of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority. I believe the legislation before us does serve the purpose of upgrading the legislation as well as setting out the requirements, which I believe is essential to have in dealing with managers of companies for other individuals all around the world.

I do not propose, Mr. Speaker, to make any long speech but basically to say that I believe this piece of legislation is timely. It does cause a movement forward in terms of causing this legislation to be modern in its outlook and to apply its various causes to the operation of company management business in this country. I give this piece of legislation my support.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I rise to also lend support to this Bill, which is short titled The Companies Management Bill, 1999. I think, one of the most important objectives of the Bill is simply where the memorandum of objects and reasons says that the Bill provides for a system of regulation of company managers by the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority. I think what that will simply allow for (but which is very good, given the atmosphere that the Cayman Islands regime operates under) a way in which all information that is necessary is held by the relevant authorities and a specific set of rules and regulations are issued by the government for which that authority will operate under.

At the same time it will give the people who operate as company managers, the dos and the don'ts so that there is no question as regards to what is acceptable and what is not acceptable.

While there are other areas in the Bill which are specific to certain activities, I think, the over-riding good in this Bill is the fact that there is a method by which company managers and the management of companies will be properly regulated. I don't profess to have full knowledge of all of the details and the workings of it but for that I depend on the experts in so crafting this Bill. I do know that what I glean from it generally is certainly in good order and very timely. I, therefore, support the Bill.

The Speaker: Any other Member wish to speak? The floor is opened to debate.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: This bill is one of the several regulatory bills that have been put in place to ensure a very high standard of business in the Cayman Islands. It covers the management companies, which are basically the companies that manage or provide registered office or other statutory functions for companies that are registered here. Many of the provisions in it follow the regulatory provisions that exist in the Banks and Trust Companies Law, the Insurance Law, and laws relating to funds.

It will to a large extent follow the present practice of what goes on now in relation to management companies. We have to ensure and we have an obligation internationally as well as locally to make sure that companies that are managed here that they are done so in a way that is acceptable under the normal accepted international standards.

The Financial Action Task Force and the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force, which is chaired by our Financial Secretary, Mr. McCarthy, has set out very detailed guidelines relating to banks. Many of these guidelines that have been developed over the years have also been applied very applicable because many areas of it are not applicable such as capital and lending ratios and those sort of matters which are peculiar to banks.

Mr. Speaker, the Bill will bring some regulatory sanctions in relation to the management companies and I am sure that the overall purpose of the Bill will be to raise the standard of the business of company management in these islands. I think that this is necessary and important so I give the Bill my support and would ask members to please support it also. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The purpose of my contribution is to make the House aware of an amendment which will be coming to this Bill at the Committee Stage and to outline that amendment, and to indicate that because of that amendment (with the agreement of the House) it would be appropriate to defer the committee stage until slightly later this week to allow the amendment to be circulated and inform members.

The gist of the amendment is to make it a requirement under this law that service providers, that is the company managers, maintain a record themselves. They don't have to file it, but they would have to maintain a record themselves of the beneficial owner of the company or the controller of the company. This is in order to comply with the 'know your customer' principle, which forms an important part of the due diligence expected in the financial services industry. I am making this contribution, as it were, on behalf of the Third Official Member. The Financial Secretary advised me of the necessity for this amendment and that amendment is in the process of being put together for the House.

I apologise for the late intervention on the point, however the requirement for this was only made known recently and has apparently been acknowledged as an appropriate standard and an appropriate way in which to deal with it. I think for further elaboration at the time, it might help to know now that the purpose is that in the event of there being a concern about a company, that authorities would be able to know that the company manager had access to the information as to ownership. But the authorities would generally not have access to that information in the sense of it being a filing requirement.

With those few words, that's all I would wish to say at this juncture but I would be prepared to obviously talk further to the amendment at the appropriate time. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The floor is open to debate. [Pause] It appears as if no other member wishes to speak, does the Honourable Acting Third Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel A. Walton: I just want to say thanks to members for their support. And, as highlighted by the speakers, this whole area of company management and the formation of companies and maintenance of companies, in the terms I use—are the window to our financial services industry. As such, it is important that the principles as highlighted by the Honourable Attorney General, that is, 'know your customer' principle, are adhered to in this area as well.

In terms of the longer-term development of our financial services industry, it is therefore key that in all areas, including company management, that we hold the persons who work in this jurisdiction responsible for knowing their clients. It is not a situation where we expect that the information will be made available to us as regulators, but it is important for us to know that the persons who we regulate, that is, the company managers, have that information at hand.

Once again, I thank members for their support on this Bill and would recommend that we move it forward to the next stage at which time we will have the amendment inserted with the agreement of this House and yourself, sir. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Companies Management Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. I shall put the question: Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The bill has accordingly been given a second reading.

AGREED: THE COMPANIES MANAGEMENT BILL, 1999 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider a Bill entitled, The Elections (Amendment) Bill, 1999.

"WHEREAS a significant amount of time has elapsed since Cable & Wireless (Cayman Islands) Ltd. was first granted a monopoly status in the Cayman Islands;

"AND WHEREAS the technology for and the use of electronic mail has been improved to the point where it will, in the future, conflict with the role of the Post Office as a mail carrier;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government enters into negotiations with Cable & Wireless (Cayman Islands) Ltd with a view of allowing the Cayman Islands postal service to become a supplier of electronic mail."

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder? Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Private Member's Motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 19/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Do you wish to speak to it? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Perhaps what I need to say, first of all, with regard to the fact that the government is seconding this Private Member's Motion, rather than the original seconder—Mr. Roy Bodden, the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town—is that somehow I think it is important for the general public to realise that it is very difficult for a member to operate in this Legislative Assembly without any type of support from other individuals on the backbench.

I find that this is a situation that the public needs to pay attention to because it could very well mean that in the future I might be curtailed from being able to bring private member's motions to the House. I thank the government for deciding to second this motion since the member from Bodden Town withdrew. Perhaps, when he gets up to debate this particular motion, he will give the public an idea as to why he decided after he helped to craft this motion, to form it, why he found it necessary not to second the motion at this particular time.

I don't want people to believe that somehow I am a supporter of the government anymore than I am a supporter of anyone else in here. I have taken up my position according to the issues and not according to personalities. Obviously, if this was an important issue to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, I don't believe that my personality or anybody else's personality should be important in terms of this motion being seconded by him.

I would like to say that I have tried to bring motions to the Legislative Assembly that will not just deal with structural issues with regard to government and the bureaucracies but also motions that are practical. It shows a foresight on my part and I believe that that's part of what I am trying to demonstrate here. I think a typical example of this type of motion, of course, was the motion with government establishing its own health insurance policy. I think that motion was one of the first motions, if not the first motion that I brought here as a private member and it was very well supported by all members of the House. I do believe that some progress has been made in that direction.

Another motion, Mr. Speaker, that I feel I need to mention—because I am trying to say also that I feel that there might be some type of attempt to shut me down—is the motion with regard to the establishment of a Roads Fund, which I brought here. I thought that was also a very practical motion because again it gives the government the possibility to do things that will improve the actual physical or material condition of the country.

Now, this motion with regard to electronic mail service is that if we think a bit about this, there has been a lot of talk about a Cable & Wireless monopoly. I am not going to get very deep into the philosophy here except that I am going to say that this motion is based upon the idea that the postal services being a facilitator for information, which means mail data. Data, being not carried electronically but data carried physically before. It seems to be logical that somehow the post office would want to remain in that particular kind of business and would want to go through the kind of progressive technological changes that any company would go through in order to face the new millennium.

It would mean that the post office in the future would not be curtailed in entering into this area of electronic mail service. I will give one example of the electronic mail service. I understand at the moment that the post office is not connected to the Internet, which I find kind of strange. I do believe that they should be connected to the Internet. Not everybody in the post office should necessarily have access to it, but I believe at least the postmaster general or maybe one or two other people should have access to the Internet because it is an important issue. And, I am quite sure that the minister responsible for this particular area knows a lot more about what I am talking about than I do because I believe that he was also very privileged to have been at a conference that was held here recently with regard to these particular issues.

I am going to leave most of this to him, but what I am encouraging by bringing this motion is for government to be futuristic with regard to the transportation of data. Data does not have to be transported by horse and buggy, because if we look at the development of the mail services over a period of time, we see that the postal service has moved ahead. Again at this particular phase, moving towards the new millennium, the post office needs to move ahead again.

It means revenue for our country that we need. It means that Cable & Wireless does not have the total monopoly to make profit of everything simply because they felt that they were on the ground floor in terms of providing us with telecommunications. But, of course, it is obvious that the post office was also on the ground floor in terms of providing us with the transportation of data. So I am saying that the post office has as much right to expand its mail services into the electronic area as Cable & Wireless has to expand its telecommunication services into the data part.

Now, I believe that this is something that can be worked out with them without any kind of difficulties. I think that the Cayman Islands government has already shown that this is possible with regards to mobile radios and things like that. A system, I think, was worked out in that particular instance.

Mr. Speaker, I will basically wait to hear the reply of the government and wait to hear the reply of other members with regards this private member's motion that I have introduced. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to second this motion. I believe the motion is timely. If we understand the world of Internet and way in which it is spreading throughout the consumers particularly in the United States but not necessarily only there. There are places that you can go into as a consumer, connect and retrieve your emails as well as other activities and you have to pay, obviously, a fee for it.

I believe if you travel to United States, there are places that each one of us if we have email can go into and can retrieve our email even though the box is in Cable & Wireless in George Town. When we have these email situations, Mr. Speaker, we have an area that dispatches it, we have an area that sends it on to the destination, it has an area that receives and there is also another aspect of how do you retrieve it given that you are not exactly in the location to which it was sent. You can go into the United States, you can hook into Compu-

Serve, you can call up your email that is sitting in a collection box at Cable & Wireless.

I relate to it as a collect box because it is a box that captures all the email messages that are sent to you. I believe the timing is right for the member to move this motion and as I understand it, not only because I am seconding it but the government is in support of this particular private member's motion. I think it is a timely motion. It is in step with the future direction that we should be heading into, not only an email and electronic services but in many different areas but this is one of them.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker. I support it and government accepts it.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I do not have any problems whatsoever in supporting this private member's motion. But I think perhaps over and above what the Minister for Tourism has said regarding his support for the motion, perhaps, the government should find itself in a position to at least speak to the motion from the point of view of explaining the practicalities of how it will work with the post office. I am not suggesting that there are any problems there, but perhaps it would make life a lot easier for us to ensure that everything is clear and in support of the motion that they have done due diligence to ensure that it is practical.

Perhaps, we can get that response out of the government just for all purposes and intentions to be very clear with it. I certainly don't have any problems supporting the motion, sir.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I support this motion. As technology and especially information technology moves forward, as the use of electronics in nearly every area and every phase of the business society moves on, it is important that the post office and other sectors of government keep pace with cutting edge of technology.

The days are now here where we will find that the electronic technology that for some while has been largely used mainly by large institutions such as banks, stock exchanges and others has now come down to many of the smaller business. There are those who would appreciate this type of electronic mail. It would allow many of the smaller businesses and persons to get this service, which otherwise they may not be able to get.

The franchise with Cable & Wireless, obviously, would have to be looked at from a legal point of view to ensure exactly what it permits and that is why the motion has been drafted as the mover has put it, to enter into negotiations with Cable & Wireless.

I think this is a very important area. Mr. Speaker, we have to go, I think, even more rapidly into the information technology and into the electronic world because that is the way that the world is moving these days. It is important that the service not only be efficient but that it also be reasonable in cost.

So I support this, Mr. Speaker. I think it is a good motion. I think the idea is good and my all means it is a matter that the post office, the government will look into, sir. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? If no other member wishes to speak, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, maybe I should quit while I am ahead! But I feel that this motion could be very significant with regards to the physical and economic conditions of the Cayman Islands. Small things can lead to very big consequences. There is revenue that the government of the Cayman Islands could earn if this motion is taken seriously and if it is not turn into a political ploy.

There is a need for us as a country, as a Legislative Assembly to find ways of improving the revenue of the country without taxing the people. There is nothing wrong with the government who already have a foundation in the postal service department extending the services in areas that would allow them to make revenue that could be used to subsidise things like the cost of school uniforms and books. Rather than the poorer people in this country having to occur cost because government needs funds, these are areas that government can go in, in order to make revenue to subsidise other non-revenue earning institutions.

The question, therefore, is how serious will this motion be treated by the government? How serious was the government treatment of the motion to set up a road fund? Is there a particular politics that have to do with accepting motions but not accepting the responsibility to deal with these motions in a wise and prudent manner? Why has the Minister that is responsible for Cable & Wireless and this particular postal service not given us the benefit of his expertise, especially when I mentioned the fact that we as recently as two weeks had a conference here dealing with telecommunications? Where I understand that persons who are making bold statements to say that if people in the Caribbean region do not do something about the price of the internet so that our people can have access to the information world out there then we are going to suffer from the point of view of our social and economic development.

These are questions, of course, that could be brought into this motion because this motion is talking about making available to our people the benefit of this technological development, that no company should have a monopoly on, more so than the people themselves.

It is true that we have over 8,000 Internet users at the moment in the Cayman Islands, probably with those persons that are involved in having the internet based also in America, probably, 10,000. This is a tremendous amount of revenue for Cable & Wireless and there is no reason why the government of the Cayman Islands could not find some way of tapping that little resource and perhaps making a little bit of money.

Like the developer in Time Longer dan Rope, Mr. Wilder, was always thinking about making a little bit of money. Maybe the government should think that way too. I mentioned that, Mr. Speaker, because I really wanted to put in the fact that I didn't see a lot of people at my play and I thought it would be good for them to be there and see some of these things.

So my point is, I have come to a very critical point in my political career in this House. In my very short time here I find myself caught between the government and members of the backbench. I don't believe that things are being played fair.

Now, I don't want this motion to die simply because there are people in this House that might think that I am a little bit too much of a freshman or an up-start because my record from the point of view of being a freshman, Mr. Speaker, I am going to be fifty-one years old in October. A lot of that time in those fifty-one years I spent on the streets of this island trying to be recognised for what I am and I didn't have to come here to argue with anybody in this Legislative Assembly about who I was. So when I come here, I am coming here to argue a point about what is good for the country and not what is good for Frank McField and not who you think you are and this and that and the other thing. I am not interested in that because we can do that on the outside anytime.

I am interested in people taking what I do from the point of view of my legislative duties seriously as long as I present it in a serious manner. This motion, Mr. Speaker, from the very beginning when it was seconded by the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town, was a serious motion with the possibility of good consequences for these islands. We cannot allow our personal feelings or our political leanings to interfere with what is good for the country—this is good for the country.

And, if it is not good for the country, I would like to see who is going to vote against it and say it is not good for the country because it is not good for the country, please vote against it. But if it is good for the country, don't disassociate yourself from it because you want to punish somebody because people cannot punish me that way. I have been punished already and I will be punished again, if needs be for standing up for what I believe. But I am not going to bring to this House any nonsense. I am not going to try to persuade anybody to second any motion of nonsense, this is a creditable motion.

All I am asking at this particular point is that the motion doesn't die because of expediency on one side of the House or on the other side of the House. It would be real tragic if this motion was not treated seriously simply because it was brought by me, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, who is an up-start freshman, who thinks he knows everything, who wrote Time Longer dan Rope nineteen years ago and made some predictions that came true; who had to be punished then because he wanted to introduce pre-schools to the Cayman Islands. I don't want to go through that again at my particular age.

The people of George Town elected me because they felt that I am feisty, that I will stand if something is right. I won't stop fighting for it but if something is wrong, I am not going to support it. They know I am that kind of way. They know I am a McField. They know I am outspoken. They knew that. They had a chance to see me in all kinds of conditions and yet they voted for me.

I believe that that was not a mistake. I believe that I have done a good job with the limited power that I have here to bring motions to the Legislative Assembly, to have them debated, to have them passed and to have them worked on by government. I am putting the government on notice, Mr. Speaker, with regards this motion.

I want to introduce to them the TV show, Public Eye and the newsletter magazine, The New Vision. I have organised myself with the possibility to scrutinise their behaviour as well as the behaviour of members of the backbench and other persons. If other people want to do the same thing that I am doing, they can go ahead and do it. But if the government does not move to treat this motion seriously within a specific time, then I am giving notice that I am going to bring my control of my media upon them, to show that it was not done in good faith. I don't want to believe that. I want to believe that this is something that if it is investigated, that if it is treated seriously, the people of these islands can benefit from it in the future.

I am going to stop with that. I thank everybody for supporting this motion and to remind them of the fact that I am not against anybody and I am not for anybody other than the people of the Cayman Islands.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 19/99. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 19/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: We shall now suspend proceedings until 2:15 p.m. for lunch.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12:50 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2:28 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Private Member's Motion No. 18/99 to be moved by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 18/99

CONSIDERATION FOR THE PROTECTION AND ASSISTANCE OF THE PHYSICALLY CHALLENGED

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to move Private Member's Motion No. 18/99. Consideration for the protection and assistance of the physically challenged.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the motion, sir.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden do you wish to speak to the motion?

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Private Member's Motion 18/99, Consideration for the protection and assistance of the physically challenged.

"WHEREAS there are a number of persons in our Caymanian society who are physically challenged;

"AND WHEREAS over the past few years, physically challenged persons are entering the mainstream workplace and are becoming more integrated;

"AND WHEREAS there is also an increased need for handicapped parking to be provided and demarcated at all buildings catering to the general public;

"AND WHEREAS there is a need to further enhance and promote facilities which provide for the varied needs of the physically challenged;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government considers enacting legislation which ensures that the physically challenged, as well as other special needs groups are provided for when public buildings are constructed;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government considers mandating laws for the provision of appropriate handicap access to all facilities and aircraft;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT provision for placards, disabled stickers and handicap licence plates be provided for the physically challenged."

Mr Speaker, before I begin my presentation, I would just like to make mention of Miss Rotania Nicholson, who is physically challenged and who has taken time out of her work schedule this afternoon to be here. I would just like to make mention of that and also to say a big welcome Rotania.

Mr. Speaker, I think everyone would agree the timing could not be better for discussion of this very important issue. We are still feeling great pride in the recent success of our Special Olympic Athletes. These seven outstanding individuals brought home a number of medals from one of the world's largest sporting event of 1999, which was held in North Carolina just recently. Just to make mention of that article that appeared in the paper on Wednesday, June 30th on the sports section of the newspaper, "Athletes bag five medals" and the article went on to say: "The Cayman Islands team has won five medals in the first four days of competition at the Special Olympics World Games in North Carolina.

"Michael Jackson, 17, won gold in the 400 metre race walk. Not finished, he stormed on to take a silver in his division's shot put competition.

"The world games are Jackson's second taste at international competition. Last year, he competed in the Special Olympics 1999 Caribbean Pentathlon Competition.

"Kevin Anglin, sped to a big gold medal in his division 400 metre race walk. This is Anglin's first time in international competition. He has been involved with Cayman's Special Olympics Programme for eleven years.

"Mackie Smith, a former Cayman Islands Sports person of the year won a gold medal in the Bocce singles competition.

"Leonardo Bodden grabbed the bronze in his 50 metre freestyle swimming event. He set personal best in both his prelim race and in the final.

"Bodden's coaches believe that there may be another pentathlete in the making for 2003 World Games. Though small of stature, there is a lot of courage within this small, wiry frame they say. This is Leonardo's first International Games but he is already making a name for himself as something of a spokesperson for Special Olympics Cayman Islands, says his coaches."

Mr. Speaker, this is what can happen if given a chance. We have also just seen on the news media that six local persons with disabilities recently completed a "Joy of Diving" course taught by handicapped drive instructor brought in by the Department Tourism. And, I will also refer to that Caymanian Compass of Thursday, July 1st which says, "A young Caymanian girls shrieks with delight having just completed her first underwater dive. The youngster was among six local handicapped people who were taught the rudiments of scuba diving on Tuesday by a team led by disabled dive instructor, Fraser Bathgate, of the UK's National Disabled Diving Centre (NDDC). The Hyatt loaned its beach pool for Tuesday's training session.

"Mr. Bathgate has also trained eight local diving instructors to teach the handicapped to dive. The NDDC trip was organised by the Department of Tourism, which has been actively promoting diving for the disabled in the Cayman Islands."

In addition, the Cayman Islands Department of Tourism, as I said, has been promoting diving for the disabled in a number of overseas event and publications.

Also, very importantly, the Vision 2008 exercise which we as we all know included the involvement and participation of a large percentage of the population devotes two of its action plans to persons with disabilities. Mr. Speaker, these can be found on page 19 of the National Strategic Plan, and I would just like to take a moment to read them.

"Action Plan 9, Specific Result. To develop and expand care for the handicapped. [Action steps are as follows:]

- "1. Establish a Committee from existing resources e.g. Social Services and Public Health to evaluate and enhance existing services for the handicapped.
- "2. Provide services and aids to enable the handicapped to remain in safe and familiar surroundings where necessary.
- "3. Seek alternatives to Government-provided care in individual homes.
- "4. Evaluate and provide, where necessary, day care facilities in all districts.
- "5. Provide transportation, where necessary, to approved day care centres.
- "6. Encourage families to assume more responsibility for their handicapped.
- "7. Provide financial assistance where necessary.
- "8. Support existing activities, e.g. Special Olympics."

Also, Mr. Speaker, "Action Plan 8, Specific Results. To protect the handicapped and ensure their inclusion in mainstream life. [And action steps are as follows:]

- "9. Educate the public to accept the handicapped as valuable members of the workplace.
- "10. Promote the creation of job opportunities for the handicapped.
- "11. Initiate programmes to develop and utilise the knowledge and skills of the handicapped.
- "12. Provide, maintain and encourage the use of safe community parks.
- "13. Enact and/or enforce laws that protect the handicapped against all forms of abuse.
- "14. Update, enact and implement the existing policies and laws, which deal with the financial and other needs of the handicapped.
- "15. Enhance existing educational facilities to ensure inclusion of the handicapped.
- "16. Encourage and support families to fully integrate their handicapped within the family unit.
- "17. Mandate and ensure the provision of proper handicapped access and facilities in all buildings and other areas open to the public.

Mr. Speaker, certainly we have already made many strides in the right direction. In terms of access, the current regulations from the Planning Department calls for handicapped access in all new construction and in certain existing buildings. In terms of education, two very important facilities: The Sunrise Adult Training Centre and the Lighthouse School.

I am going to take this opportunity to say that I am pleased to report that funds have been appropriated for the upgrading to the Sunrise Adult Training Centre and I am sure that the folks there will be happy to hear that. Also to such a degree that it is time today for a new Lighthouse School and I know the Minister of Education is doing everything he can to make sure that this school becomes a reality.

Mr. Speaker, when I first decided to bring this motion, I honestly and truly did not realise the magnitude of the disability problem. I would just like to take a moment here and just read a letter that I received from a friend regarding a situation with her mother. The letter reads, "There is no access for the handicapped in most places. One has to lift the person and the chair into most places. Seven Mile Beach seems to be the only place that has access. Shopping is impossible. You have either pop in and out, leaving the person in the car in the hot sun or don't shop.

"Every time I take my mother out, I have to be ready to fight over what little handicapped parking there is. I am sure that there are people that don't go out or get taken out because of this." Even at the hospital, my friend took her mother and could not find any handicapped parking.

"I feel that one of the biggest reasons that this is a problem is because everyone knows that the signs are not enforced. Guards try but they do not have the power. One has to be ready to have a nasty fight. This is upsetting to all. My mother will say that she doesn't want to go out then she is very upset sitting alone in the car or being left at home."

That's one of the letters that I have received so far on this motion.

Mr. Speaker, when I began the research on this issue, I had the privilege of meeting Miss Beverley Beckles, who is the Chief Executive Officer of Trinidad's National Centre for persons with disabilities. She was in Cayman recently doing an assessment on the Sunrise Centre and I have to take this opportunity and thank Mrs. Joy Basdeo and Mr. Nical Carter of the Education Ministry for giving me a chance to meet her.

Mr. Speaker, she helped me learn more about the issues of the disabled, directing me to more and more reading. She also caused me to broaden my thinking to include all persons with disabilities not just the physically challenged. The more I researched this issue, the more I became convinced that it is time for the Cayman Islands to join the ranks of other progressive countries who are actively working to address the needs of persons with disabilities.

The United Nations estimates that in the world today, there are more than five hundred million persons with disabilities. The World Health Organisation estimates that in any given population, ten percent of that population has a disability. Applying this ratio to the Cayman Islands, you can see that we are talking about several thousand people.

In order for a country to be called progressive, it must meet the needs of all its citizens. It must not turn a blind eye towards the needs of any fraction of its diverse community. Because we are a progressive country, the time is now to step forward and take a position of advocacy on behalf of the physically challenged. That is why I am introducing this motion.

Mr. Speaker, I will pause here to just make mention that young Jules Fraser just came into the Chamber with his mom, Cathy Fraser. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Dalkeith Bodden. Welcome Jewels.

I have been so overwhelmed by the response to this motion so far. The input and the interest communicated to me by my constituents and by the public as a whole have only serve to re-enforce my conviction.

I would like to read a very touching letter I received from a young woman whose situation turned out to be the catalyst for my introducing this motion. Mr. Speaker, I was at the Agricultural Show this past February. I stopped to speak to this woman and her husband, who are in fact good friends of mine. They had come out to enjoy the show with their young son, like so many other families had done that day. But it turned out to be much more difficult than they had thought it would be. I was quite saddened when I heard the husband tell of the difficulty he had encountered trying to get his wheelchair-bound wife to the show. He had tried to explain to the Officer-in-charge that they needed parking space near the entrance but they were given no special treatment and had to park quite far away. The lady's husband had been forced to roll the wheelchair with their young son on her lap over a significant distance of rough ground.

Naturally, they were very upset that they didn't get a convenient space but they didn't give up and go home either. They were determined to enjoy themselves like everyone else.

I remember thinking to myself that this wife is younger than I am. I thought, if it is that hard for her at her age, imagine how hard it is for elderly persons with disabilities. Thinking about that couple's situation and the courage they showed that day has given me the determination not to give up on this issue until we have the proper legislation in place to make their lives and those of others like them easier.

Mr. Speaker, with your permission, I would just like to read the letter that I received from this lady that I met at the Agricultural Show. It says:

"Dear Miss Bodden: Thank you for providing an appropriate forum where in I can express my personal views and concerns as a wheelchair bound Caymanian.

"I am forty years old and the mother of a two years old. Until April 1997, my life was normal. My husband and I both worked; I had worked since finishing college. I loved working and staying active but life change for all of us when I was diagnosed with a rare malignant brain tumour.

"Now, two years later, I am glad to be alive having survived extensive neurosurgery, chemotherapy and radiation. Early last year, I arrived home from the States, having been separated from my child for most of his life. It is truly a gift to be have been given a second chance at life and the opportunity to raise my child, but the transition from being strong, active and ambulatory to being wheelchair bound has been most difficult here in Cayman.

"My wheelchair is necessary because of nerve damage inflicted as a result of my treatments. The same treatments that were necessary to save my life also changed it, making me, unable to walk.

"I must admit that I haven't considered the issues of the disabled until it happened to me. Maybe it is just human nature but too often we fail to either appreciate what we have or consider others less fortunate than ourselves until the unpredictable happens.

"Due to my own experiences, I began to look into our laws and into the availability of services offered to the disabled here in Cayman. What I have discovered is consistent with what I have encountered as a disabled person functioning in our society.

- "1. There is no legislation in place that even speaks to wheelchair accessibility to buildings and other facilities.
- "2. The current health care plan does not address this issue although we are hopeful that the soon to be published Vision 2008 plan will (which I mentioned earlier).
- "3. There are no placards, disabled stickers or handicapped licence plates to indicate that the driver of a vehicle is disabled. Thus spots reserved for handicapped persons are used by the general population without regard for those who really need them.
- "4. Likewise, there are no laws enforcing the rights of the handicapped to use reserved parking spots and unfortunately, I have found a basic disrespect for the needs of the disabled especially in the young people.

"On occasion, they have refused to move their cars to accommodate me. There are few wheelchair ramps on our island, making the accessibility to buildings and business minimal.

"I need to work and want to work. I want to be able to get out of my house and do the things that I use to work as an ambulatory person but I am unable to negotiate steps and I have developed a terrible fear of falling on them. Even if I could gain access to buildings, most bathroom facilities are not wheelchair accessible.

"Travel is almost an impossibility as we have no ramps at the airport and access to all aircraft must be by the use of stairs. Of necessity, my health care has to be in the States, thus my use of the airport facilities is frequent. Access to the other side ramps is often blocked by cars. It can be most frustrating to persons with ambulatory disabilities.

"Overall, our country is progressive in many ways but our concentration has been focused on issues that concern the normal population. Maybe the time is right to start thinking of the very real needs of the disabled in our society.

"I never thought it could happen to me. I never expected to be disabled or wheelchair bound but life can change in an instant from one day, a moment to the next.

"I ask you to please let the Government know what the problems are and how difficult life can be when one is in a wheelchair. Please encourage those who govern this country to adopt legislation to protect and assist those who are disabled. We need to be able to work and function in society and travel like everyone else.

"There is so much more to tell you especially regarding work place discrimination that I have faced but I was unable to return to my former job because of wheelchair inaccessibility. But for the purposes of raising issues with our legislators and raising the awareness of our society, maybe this letter will suffice.

"I want to thank you for your representation and your interest in helping others in Cayman. Thank you, too, for listening and caring."

Mr. Speaker, as we begin to analyse the needs of persons with disabilities living in Caymanian society and those who are visiting our shores as tourists, we must consider addressing their immediate needs first. The most pressing need involves access to public places including our beautiful beaches and also to schools and churches, businesses, rest rooms, parking areas and transportation.

In the schools today, most children with disabilities are attending normal classes and it is also very important that these special needs students are provided with the best care and attention possible. Persons with disabilities need to be provided with a handicapped sign that clearly identifies the vehicle in which they are travelling and ensures them access to handicapped parking. This needs to be done through the Licensing Department so that the signs do not get into the hands of the persons who do not need them.

I would also like to appeal to the Police and security officers to help ensure that handicapped parking is used only by those for whom it is intended. But, Mr. Speaker, this will take the co-operation of everyone in our society to make sure this is enforced. I believe we must all be more sensitive to the presence and the needs of persons with disabilities living in our own community. A public awareness campaign would go a long way in educating people to this issue. There are many lines of communication and they must all be kept open. We need ads on the television, radio and in the newspapers. I would even go so far as to say that I would encourage local companies to sponsor these ads as public service announcement.

I would also make a plea to the community service clubs and others to consider helping support the purchase of a dedicated van to cater to special need persons who require public transportation.

Mr. Speaker, we must remind ourselves that this issue is about people. People, who have often been forgotten in the past and in the fast pace of our day to day economic and business oriented progress. As a nation, we should align our thinking with that of other progressive countries by adopting the United Nations definition of disability, which states and I quote: "Any restriction or lack resulting from an impairment of ability to perform an activity in the manner or within the range considered normal for a human being"

This includes not only the physically challenged but the broader group of all those in our society with special needs. The wheels are in motion. Internationally, we are seeing more and more being done to protect and assist persons with special needs.

Here at home, an increasing number of local employers are hiring persons with disabilities who are quickly becoming vital members of the work force. To name just a few, Fosters Food Fair, Jacques Scott, the Hyatt, the Hospital and the Post Office.

Mr. Speaker, I hope many of you saw the article in last Friday's Caymanian Compass about a young woman who's blind and who happens to be in the Chamber this afternoon, Rotania Nicholson, who works at Fosters Food Fair. Rotania is another extraordinary example of courage and determination. But the article also demonstrates very clearly how everybody wins when we open the workplace to persons with disabilities. So I believe, we will see this happening more frequently.

Mr. Speaker, the article appeared in Friday's newspaper of the Caymanian Compass and I must say that this article was truly an inspiration to me. The headline on the article said, "Blind woman does not lose sight of goals." And it began, "They will have to use a crowbar to get me out of here." That was Rotania's answer when asked if she liked her job at Foster's Food Fair.

This is her first real job complete with pay cheque after many months and numerous attempts at gainful occupation. Now, the terms have turned and it is Foster's who would not want to see her leave.

Mr. Speaker, this young lady had so many set backs and so many rough times in her life but you know what? She didn't give up. She finally got a job at Foster's Food Fair and I am very happy to see her, I must admit that again. She truly has been an inspiration to many people who know her and the fact that Rotania had a lot to offer and that there was so much she could do in spite of her handicapped that Foster's Food Fair went to an extreme to make sure that everything as far as the switchboard, with her sending calls to other extensions were, put in Braille for her to be able to read the numbers.

So today is a fine example of what we can get from these physically challenged people.

Internationally, the Cayman Islands are encouraging tourists with disabilities to visit our beautiful islands. In the July/August issue of Horizons, you will find an excellent article promoting diving for the disabled. That appears on page 35 and it says: "Diving for the Disabled. Over the last few years, the Cayman Islands has seen a marked increase in visiting divers with disabilities: deaf, blind, paraplegics and quadriplegics. Two groups of disabled divers who visit Grand Cayman on a regular basis are the Moray Eels on Wheels and the Houston Disabled Scuba-Divers Association.

"Blind people enjoy the sensation of the water medium around them and they can communicate with their dive partner by using hand pressure signals. Deaf people have an advantage over most hearing people because they can use sign language to talk under water. Paraplegics and quadriplegics can rely on another diver to help them move underwater or those with some mobility use special aids such webbed gloves. Some even use under water scooters for manoeuvring.

"The Handicapped Scuba Association (HSA) was founded in 1981 by American dive instructor, Jim Gatacre. Since then, the HSA has been educating the SCUBA diving industry and individuals with physical disabilities.

"Locally, Red Sails Sport caters to these special divers and has ramps leading to the dive shop and on to boats spacious enough to take wheelchairs. They also boast five HSA certified instructors, some whom have learnt sign language."

Mr. Speaker, it is our duty to make these islands accessible to these visitors once they arrive. Cayman Airways has also shown an excellent example in transporting handicapped person to and from our shores and others need to follow suite. There are many ways to help. I was delighted recently to see in the media that CUC presented a cheque to the Sunrise Adult Training Centre to help fund a trip to Canada for the residents. Mr. Speaker, I refer to CUC today, which is a biannual newspaper of Caribbean Utilities Companies and they always put in a little community involvement page. I was very pleased when I read this article regarding the Sunrise Adult Training Centre and they had included several pictures with Miss Karen Thompson being a part of these adults at this training centre.

Members of the CUC Committee Involvement Team visited with the trainees at the Sunrise Adult Training Centre in West Bay. The trainees were treated to pizza, ice-cream and cake, and they in turn treated the team to an hour of musical entertainment. As part of the visit, a cheque for $1,500 was presented to Anesia Woods, President of the Sunrise Caring Association to cover the travel cost for one trainee to participate in a field trip to Toronto, this past summer. (I guess it was just June they went on this trip).

Also, CUC adopted one of the athletes and that was Kevin Anglin, who participated in the Special Olympics also this past June.

Mr. Speaker, I think everyone will agree that in a progressive society, persons with disabilities must be able to move about freely so they can perform the many activities the rest of us take for granted in our every day lives. I believe that in the Cayman Islands, we can create a social and physical environment that favours the full interrogation of all persons with disabilities in our society. That means children, adults and the elderly. By encouraging self-reliance, we will promote the involvement and participation of persons with disabilities in this country's socio-economic growth and development.

As a community, we must work together to eliminate marginalisation and discrimination against persons with disabilities, are realise that everyone has a right to live with dignity and respect. We must protect the rights and individuality of the disabled as active and useful members of our society.

Mr. Speaker, before closing, I would just like to read another letter which I received from one of my constituents that he wrote back in 1997 to the Government regarding this very issue.

"Public facilities to aid the physically handicapped and physically infirm. An appreciable number of persons within the society are physically disabled. In spite of their being handicapped, they are obliged to conduct their personal affairs in the public arena, as well as many of them are actively involved in other community activities. Their physical handicaps present daunting challenges in trying to cope with the demands on their restricted mobility. Consequently, they experience much inconvenience and hardships, because there is a severe lack of those facilities normally provided as aids for the handicapped. These are common place and in fact considered indispensable in other progressive countries. Added to the indigenous handicapped, are a number of tourists who visit weekly, primarily by cruise ships. These too experience difficulty in getting around because of lack of public facilities for the physically handicapped. Their mobility is restricted and so is the enjoyment of their visit.

“Being myself physically handicapped, I can positively emphasised with other physically challenged persons. In conducting my personal business and in my involvement in a wide range of public activities, I too experience the inconvenience and frustration caused by the severe lack of those amenities so helpful to the physically challenged. Accordingly, from a purely altruistic motive, I wish to bring the situation to the attention of Government for the purpose of its being put into perspective, in order that it be accorded a degree of priority for positive action, which is considered to merit.

“The facilities that are seen to present a pressing need are:

- "1. Designated spaces on all premises - public and private - catering to a wide cross-section of the public.
- "2. Ramps to facilitate the use of wheelchairs and mobile walking aids.
- "3. Hand rails, where it is necessary to negotiate steps and stairs, both for entering and existing. An example of one style of these and the function they serve may be seen at Kirk Home Centre.
- "4. Special toilets with hand rails (as installed in the Airport Terminal Building), in all buildings or places catering to a wide cross section of the public, especially where these serve tourists in the main and other places where such conveniences should be provided. Such as public toilets, restaurants, medical clinics, hospitals, community centres, places of entertainment - cinemas and theatres and shopping centres, where they should be central (communal) toilet facilities, catering to the general public.

“This could be taken into consideration as the planning requirement for future developments in this area.

“With respect to the designated parking spaces, these should be provided on such premises as medical clinics, pharmacies, supermarkets, banks, hotels, restaurants, shopping centres and other shopping establishments and all other places catering to the general public. Such parking spaces should, for very obvious reasons, be located as near as is possible to main entrances. Handicapped parking spaces require to be protected by law, whether on public or private premises, from being violated by other motor vehicle operators. This is what is happening on the few premises that currently provide these. However, without the backing of the law, owners are powerless to prevent violation. The spaces serve the convenience of handicapped drivers as well as handicapped passengers.

“To have these facilities put in place by property owners will require the force of law. Hence the approach to Government. These are necessary to provide for the safety, protection and certain aspects of the welfare of an unfortunate group in the society—the physically handicapped and the physically infirm. Their disabled conditions render them very vulnerable to mishaps and injury, from which they look to the State for protection.

“I would like to direct the problem to the Ministry, under which primary responsibility for dealing with the subject of providing public facilities for the physically challenged falls. Unfortunately, I find myself in a quandary, as I am unable to identify, even after making some inquiries, the appropriate Ministry to which the matter should be addressed. This is because it appears to be one of those subjects with different aspects that impinge upon the concerns and interests of more than one portfolio. For example, one facet of the subject relates it to Medical and Health, while another points to welfare. Tourism could have more than a casual concern in the manner, to the extent of taking the initiative to stimulate action to address the problem. Mandating the facilities that are being recommended will implicate the Planning Department. Would this responsibility imply that the portfolio responsible for Planning be also responsible for initiating action to introduce necessary legislation required to have the facilities put in place?

With “the law in operation, particularly as this will affect existing properties, which undoubtedly will be required to comply with some or all of its requirements, it would seem that monitoring and policing compliance with the law by existing properties, would be outside of the province of Planning. Consequently, another enforcement authority will have to be identified to cover the sector. This accordingly would direct the search elsewhere, for the ideal portfolio to take on full responsibility for all aspects of the subject under discussion, from evaluating its merits in terms of serving a community need, to ultimate action and implementation if Government decides the problem should be addressed.

“Because the facilities being sought are all 'structural' in nature—parking signs, ramps, hand rails and toilets; the portfolio under which Works fall would seem to be the most appropriate to take over the matter. It is assumed that Government would lead the way in complying with law, which the Department of Works would oversee. It has the Personnel and the expertise that render it the ideal agency for monitoring and enforcing compliance with the law by the Private Sector.

“These observations of mine are no doubt far fetched as I probably am not seeing the woods for the trees. Accordingly, I find myself with no alternative but to approach His Excellency for guidance on the matter. I apologise for the unorthodox approach, but I hope you will sympathise with me in my dilemma and be good enough to direct me or direct the matter to the appropriate Ministry for necessary actions. I trust that the problem will be deemed to justify Government taking up the matter and that early action to alleviate the situation will ensue."

Mr. Speaker, that letter was written in 1997 and I think it is time now that we move forward with this issue that has been put forward here this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker, honourable colleagues of this House, this is our wake-up call. Now is the time to rise to the occasion and become proactive on behalf of these very important and valuable members of our workplace and our society.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 18/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I deem it appropriate to begin by thanking the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town for bringing this motion. I believe that the motion is worthy of our favourable . . . and let me put it a different way, unanimous approval to what is being requested within this motion.

I know that in dealing with the Traffic Law we have a series of amendments which should be coming forward to the House to deal with handicapped parking as well as the need to have disabled stickers on licence vehicles, where appropriate.

Some years ago, the government did some modification to the sidewalks along Seven Mile Beach to assist the physically challenged persons and we did some small amount of work in George Town as well. An example is the post office, and to some degree along Shedden Road. But I believe it is a small token as to the real requirements to allow physically challenged individuals to interact and take part not only in the work environment but also in the social and other recreational environments.

Certainly when we think of access to prominent public buildings such as the Glass House, or the Tower Building, or the Legislative Assembly, to name just a few, and maybe we should even include the Courts Building, there really isn't any wheelchair access from what I understand. And I believe that it is timely for the government to provide that type of access for these challenged persons.

Sometime as we walk around and take for granted the blessings of Almighty God, we do not reflect in totality on those who are not physically able to negotiate steps, sidewalks where there aren't ramps—to negotiate even the public beach in essence. So I support the motion being brought and I certainly support comments even that public buildings in future should incorporate facilities for physically challenged persons. Rather than constructing the building and then have to amend the design, incorporate it into the design from the very inception.

We know that there are many other items, Mr. Speaker, that need attention but I believe (as the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town put it) it is a wake-up call to all of us to begin to focus more clearly on this particular area and to seek to provide what is necessary for those persons to be able to move freely and take advantage of any situation in this country as we do.

I know that many other members wish to speak so I will at this stage thank and commend the member for bringing this motion.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am happy to support this motion and wish to congratulate the mover for doing such an excellent job in presenting her case and in doing the background work that was necessary to put forward her views and to also thank her seconder.

Physically challenged individuals in this country and their parents have come through most difficult times. We can imagine the stress that is put on families dealing with the various challenges. And, I know about them for I have an aunt that has left two severely handicapped children who are older than me. In recent times, my mother has been committed to a wheelchair for the balance of her life. So I know what this means. What I don't know is to have to deal with a child in my home.

I am happy that government departments in recent years have taken up the challenge of employing physically handicapped persons. I refer to the hospital because I know that several from my constituency, the district of West Bay, work there. Several private companies are doing the same. The Hyatt hotel is one of the bigger ones and one of the longer standing companies that has been doing this.

It is a joy to visit these physically handicapped persons. They have ambition. I can think of one Mackie Smith, as we know him, who works with the Environment Department. I know him from when he was a little boy and it is a joy to see how he has improved through his own initiatives sometimes. In referring to him, I know that his joy in life would be to work in the Fire Department because that is what he wanted to do. He wanted to be a fireman but he went on to be Sportsman of the Year, just 2-3 years ago and has now represented our country in the international arena.

We have Kevin Anglin, Daireen Powery—they are the kind of person that we should forever be wanting to do something for. Oh, what a good thing it would be that many of those not physically handicapped could have their kind of ambition and drive.

Mr. Speaker, while on this subject, I want to draw government's attention . . . the member moving the motion mentioned the Sunrise Centre and some of these persons that I have been talking about started out at the Sunrise Centre. And, the Minister of Tourism made mention of focusing more clearly. But is government focussing more clearly, or is it just talk? I have in my possession an agenda for the Finance Committee, which is asking for more funds to build yet more prison space. But we still have the atrocity of the Sunrise Centre not being what it should be to deal with the students at that facility in West Bay.

It has long been a place that the Fire Department has condemned. I am only reiterating here what I have already put on record so I am not going to take the time of the House to go through all of it, but a good place to start to focus more clearly as the Minister of Tourism has said, is to start with that. That is something that is needed and we shouldn't be about building prisons and leaving this kind of facility in a condition that does not enhance their education.

Programmes cannot be properly carried out there because of the kind of building it is. And we are now moving it—five months away from the new millennium and we still have this kind of facility.

I am thankful for all that government has done because I know that government does take some care if they get a request in dealing with handicapped persons like the removal of duties from vehicles and all these sort of things government has done in the past. I appreciate that, that is one aspect of it but they need to do something about that Sunrise Centre—pronto!

I want to thank at this point the various service clubs that have over the years been the ones to sort of carry the load for the community. The Rotary Club has a special day where they go and be a buddy to handicapped persons. Not just at the Sunrise Centre but those in the homes.

Mr. Speaker, government needs to pay attention to several other areas. Families have enough stress on them if they have a physically challenged person in the home. And sometimes I know homes that only have physically handicapped persons in there and we are still sending them garbage fees. If government has to take care of these people, where are they going to get the money from to do anything else? So these are the kind of things, I guess that we as representatives need to be more vigilant on but that government needs to pay more attention to also.

This is a good motion, Mr. Speaker, one of the better ones that have come in recent times. There is no fight on either side about it and that is a good thing to see. I am happy that I can support this, and again thank the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town and the seconder, the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town, for bringing to government's attention these various needs for our physically challenged. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise also to give my support to this motion and I want to congratulate the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town for bringing such a motion to the House.

Mr. Speaker, the physically handicapped are people that throughout the world are always supported by governments or business sectors and it is high time that we got out there and did our bit to help them in the way of life. I feel, sir, that nothing can be more appropriate than helping the handicapped. I want to say this because I give it my full support and I want to let the Second Elected Member know that I congratulate her on a good motion. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I also rise to offer my support for this very important private member's motion. The issues relating to the physically challenged are issues that I (as a representative since being elected in 1988) have been fighting to see some improvement in. I want to say that I personally appreciate the sacrifices, the commitment and also the level of support that I see being extended to our physically and mentally challenged individuals at such institutions as the Sunrise Centre in West Bay.

The staff there and those students are surviving under very, very unacceptable conditions. I know the First Elected Member for West Bay and I have been fighting for a very long time, for example to try to get the salaries of those members of staff upgraded to a level that reflects their level of commitment, the hard work and the hours that they put in. Mr. Speaker, until now the last thing I was told was that it was going to be moved from, I think Education to Social Services. Under there, they could deal with the issues of salaries. And, Mr. Speaker, that still has not been done.

The building itself has been condemned by the Fire Department and the basic necessities, the basic programmes that are necessary for these people to continue to enjoy a certain amount of independence and dignity are still not in place. First of all, you cannot add too many services because you don't have the space and a further reason, the programme survived based on the level of commitment that the staff that operates there has.

I was very pleased the other day when I was at the airport to see such a large contingency of the physically and mentality challenged individuals going off to compete in the Special Olympics. There were not only students, there were adults who had volunteered their time probably to a large extent at their own expense taking time-out to travel with their special students so that they could compete and enjoy a little travel and a little different surrounding.

We have done well here recently in the area of our specially challenged individuals. But there is much more that can be done and has to be done. Like the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town mentioned these handicapped ramps and that type of thing. Mr. Speaker, unless you are handicapped you cannot appreciate how difficult these things are to people who find themselves in a wheelchair. I think we need to become much more sensitive to the needs of other special individuals.

I think personally if it is not a requirement at the present time that all new buildings built here in the Cayman Islands should be required to have special ramps for the physically challenged.

Mr. Speaker, I trust that the government will give this request, the urgency that it desires and requires and I am pleased to offer my full support to such a request. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I had the very special privilege of being involved with the graduation ceremony or school leaving ceremony for the Lighthouse School this year. And as I was giving out a reward to a young lady, I asked her for a kiss. She gave me a kiss and she said, "sure." What I am trying to say is that sometimes I feel that rather than using the word "challenged" to describe these people, we should use the concept of "special." These persons are so special because their emotions and their feelings are not inhibited by ambitions, selfishness, envy, and the greed that some of us so-called normal people have.

Now, I was privileged enough, Mr. Speaker, to have been involved with the Lighthouse School from the time I came back in 1977 and became a social development officer. I was able to get a van from the Canadian Development Corporation that was located in Jamaica at that time, and between them I think and the Lions Club, we were able to get a van. I became the first driver for the kids at the Lighthouse School back in 1978.

It was a very special task that I had getting up every morning, going West Bay to pick the kids up and drive them to the Lighthouse School. We still had Rev. Shepherd, who was basically the person who started to get us in this country interested in the situation with regards these very special people.

I believe that Darwinism is very outdated. The theory about the survival of the fittest. I think that the society that is fittest from a humanistic point of view, is a society that can give care and attention to those persons that cannot produce the same material abundance that the more healthy ones are capable of doing. What these very special people do is they produce an emotional product because, like I said, they are not inhibited the way we are. So I have had a very special relationship with the kids from the Lighthouse School from 1978 until today. They still say, "Hello, Dr. McField" when they see me.

It is incredible how they remembered me all through the years and would always when they saw me, say, "Hello, Dr. McField." Because at that particular time, we had Miss Jacqui Smith, who was a therapist at the Lighthouse School as it was located at the Church in West Bay before it moved. But over the years, the government of the Cayman Islands seems to have become more and more receptive to the idea that it was worthwhile to invest in these very special people.

Therefore, I must say that I commend the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town for bringing this motion because she, with her feminine instinct, has brought it in such a way as to give it the type of sympathy that it really needs because they are very special people. Maybe somebody with that type of sensitivity needed to put forward the case for these very special people because we need to understand it in a language that is not overburdened, but a language in itself that is very special because it talks in a very special way about human relationships and human bonds and the role in which emotions and care play in re-enforcing it.

As we go away and progress in our society, and we go away from this Caymanianess, from this very special Caymanian philosophy that I have talked about here occasionally, it is good that we have persons that can call to our attention the fact that we are not paying enough attention, in fact, to these very special people. It is also very good because God has his purpose for everyone and [as] always God has his purpose for these very special people. He must have had a reason to have given them the qualities that He is giving them and I do believe the qualities that He is giving them are very special qualities and we need to stop once in a while and think about that. Because those of us that consider ourselves not to be challenged are very keen about running over the next one and still we say in doing so that we are altruistic.

I support this motion. I commend the two members from Bodden Town for bringing this motion. But in winding-up I would just like to say that I had a motion here that was seconded by the same member that seconded this particular motion. And, I would like the public to know quite clearly that sometimes I am hearing that I am losing support in George Town because I am supporting the government. Well, the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town is obviously a supporter of the government, so I don't know whether or not that means now that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town is also a supporter of the government, since the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town has supported the motion of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

I think what we have learnt from this, is that what people support or should support (which is the point I was making this morning) is the issue at hand. We should always make that of paramount importance and not let personalities or our emotions stand in the way of how we do our job. I commend this motion to the House. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Being the seconder of the motion I suppose that I should give it support other than my support during the vote, which I certainly will be giving. I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that there was a time in this country when circumstances did not allow us to be as aware as we are now of those persons who are different than we who have all of our physical and mental capabilities. And, if we didn't have someone in our immediate family who was so challenged, we were not bound to be aware of the differences and the challenges and all of the effort it took for these persons to just be able to cope, let alone strive successfully in our communities.

Certainly in the Cayman Islands we came upon the occasional person who had vision impairment and who had some hearing impairment but over and beyond that cases were rare of impairments and certainly of multi-impairments. Today, with the growth of our society, we are bound to encompass and meet people who have these kinds of challenges. There needs to be special attention and special care and special arrangements made in order to accommodate them, and help them to realise their sense of worth. They too have a role to play; they too are worth something in our society and they too deserve to feel a sense of self-importance and to realise a sense of what Abraham Maslow (the renowned psychologist) termed "self-actualization." So it was for this effort that this motion was brought.

Having listened to the various honourable members who contributed, it is clear that there is consensus that we realise that we need not only to accommodate these people but [also] to help them arrive at a position where they too can contribute in ways that they may wish to contribute. And, I am happy to be part of these kinds of efforts.

Mr. Speaker, it wasn't until I travelled out into the wider world that I came upon these kinds of conditions. And, indeed, it brought to me a sense of culture shock, particularly during the years that I spent in Canada, where I saw people with multi-handicaps. But by the same token, persons who were not prepared to let the handicap or their challenges set them back in life; persons who were not prepared to take second place and indeed who sometimes became resentful when we normal human beings were seen to be patronising—you know, over attentive towards them or sorry for them, is a nice way to put it.

In one of my classes at university, Mr. Speaker, during my undergraduate years, there was a lady who had a sight impairment. She came to classes with what they called a 'seeing eye-dog'. Many times, I took the bus with her in the evening time and when I say evening I mean dark evening. She came to classes with this dog and she sat right at the front. She took the bus—and it was fascinating to watch. Do you know what? Because that dog was so trained, he could help her cross busy intersections. When the light was green and it was time for the pedestrians to walk, that dog was trained to sense that. But not only was he trained to take her across busy traffic, he was also trained to protect her from molestation from anyone who wanted to molest her, if that was the case. I was absolutely fascinated.

But what fascinated me even more was when I engaged this lady in conversation. She did not see herself as being any different from me. She didn't want anyone to take any notes for her. She didn't want anyone to do anything for her other than what was the normal course of activities. When we treat these persons as equals, many times they can perform just as well as normal persons.

Now, the rate that the Cayman Islands has developed physically speaking has necessitated that in all buildings... We have not been able for whatever reason to take into consideration the fact that people may need to access wheelchair ramps, they may need to access elevators in ways different from us. So this motion is designed to bring to the attention of the authorities that it is necessary now for us to do this. And, that this is so is made more important by the fact that our whole way of life is changing.

Globalisation and information technology is making it necessary to change our ideas about the world of work because most people now will be contributing by clicking a mouse or inputting information. Even the traditional kinds of backbreaking labour, as we knew it decades and years ago, will be replaced by robotics and by computers programmed by people who click a mouse and input information to computer keyboards, which makes it all the more important for us to accommodate these things.

Motor cars and the way motor cars are manufactured and designed now, Mr. Speaker—there are motor vehicles designed to be handled by paraplegics and even quadriplegics. All of the controls are on the wheel and the dashboard. It is necessary, of course, for them to be able to see. But even as we speak, there are experiments in the auto industry which will allow people who cannot see to be able to drive a motor car because the motor car would be computer controlled. It would have its own radar devices and it will have its own sensors to tell it when it is too close to another vehicle or when it is veering off the path.

It is not far fetched to say that within the next decade, people whose vision is impaired will be able to drive as well as people who have conventional sight and who have all of the normal faculties that we have, which makes it all the more important for us to begin now to accommodate these people and to prepare for these adjustments.

In bringing this motion, the motion I believe is not seeking so much as to feel sorry for these people as it is to level the playing field and give them a chance so that they may make their contributions. Because they too must feel a sense of dignity and feel that they are contributing, and feel that they have something to give to the society, that their labour is important and that their contribution is important. So we are not trying to bring a kind of motion which is patronising to these persons in any way as much as we are trying to create a sense of consciousness and a sense of awareness, which will allow us to develop an appreciation and to level the playing field so that these persons can realise their contributions and they can realise their sense of self worth.

I have to say that motions like this, for whatever reason and without being gender oriented, seems that the delicate touch of the female is more appropriate to getting across certain emotions than those that men would do. And, so I have to commend the mover because there was a certain delicacy and a certain passion, which is sometimes difficult for men to muster on these occasions and that too has its merits. And, the mere fact that so many people communicated with the mover, the importance of this and supported this move, shows us that within the Caymanian society, there is a crying need for this to be addressed.

Mr. Speaker, I don't have to say much more. Other than to say that I am happy to have been associated with this effort and to lend my support to anything that helps people, whether they are challenged as we might say or whether to use the older and more antiquated and certainly inappropriate now term, whether they are disabled. I am happy to lend my support to anything which allows them to realise their true sense of self-worth, which allows them to reach that point that Abraham Maslow called self actualisation.

As a legislator, I think it is my responsibility to do that because no doubt some of them live in my constituency as well. But I am not now only limiting myself to the narrow political boundaries of my constituencies because I am a cosmopolitan and I believe the world in a manner of speaking is also my constituency. One of the things that we can learn from this, is that, as the world becomes smaller and as we enter a new age, these kinds of challenges should not dissuade our Caymanian people from venturing out into the world. Physically, that may mean getting on a plane and going some where else, literally, as well as it might mean just sitting down by a keyboard clicking a mouse or inputting information, whether we have to us Braille or not.

I am reminded that in the United States Senate, and for the life of me I cannot remember the name of the Senator . . . my inability to recall that name, Mr. Speaker, I can only attribute to the fact that I have so many things going on in my mind now that it is virtually impossible and not to any other condition. Certainly, not to any condition that is brought on by age—although I am entering that era too. But there is in the United States Senate a senator who has lost both legs and one arm and believe you me, I was moved as I read his story. What was unfortunate about that . . . because people who have to make these kinds of adjustments have a tougher life than people who were born or who from early in childhood have these disabilities.

This senator became disabled because he was a Vietnam Veteran. He went out on a patrol in Vietnam and tripped on a land mine. At the same time that they were ambushed and so for him, this was indeed a difficult transition. And, I am saying what a great lesson this man must be sending to persons within the United States and all who have read his story, that at his age he lost his two legs and one arm, and yet he didn't let that deter him. He dresses himself and he has a motorised wheelchair and he comes in the Senate.

You know that there are not much higher than a person like him or any person even under normal circumstances could go in public life than to be a senator. Indeed, one would say, the only thing much higher than that is to be the Secretary of State, the President or the Vice President.

So I am saying that a good lesson for us to realise and to learn is that these challenges should not deter us from trying to realise our ambitions but by the same token, it is encouraging and helpful to know that we have legislators who are capable of putting in motion agendas and efforts which will help such challenged persons overcome the physical difficulties they may face. And, it is fitting that Rotania Nicholson is here because I too am familiar with her story and I hope that one of these days, she can be a source of inspiration to other challenged persons, to let them realise that once your mind is made up and you believe in God, you can overcome any obstacle.

Mr. Speaker, it would be remiss if I didn't take a little time to answer the query offered by the last speaker. Does seconding this motion mean I am a supporter of the government? No I haven't joined the government; but I think my record here shows that I have always supported the government when they have brought motions worthy of my support.

Does seconding this motion means that I am endeared to one person more than I am endeared to one other person? Not necessarily so, Mr. Speaker. I believe it is my democratic right to refuse to second a motion that I do not wish to second for whatever reason. And, I am not giving my reasons for not seconding the motion here.

I only want to close by saying I am happy that I could offer the support that I have offered to my colleague and the government on this occasion. It is a worthy occasion and it would be politically unsound of me to do less. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. After the last speaker, I don't think any of us need to say too much more. This has become a way of life here in the Legislative Assembly when this type of motion comes forward, and I would like to take this opportunity to commend my two fellow Bodden Town colleagues, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town who seconded.

Mr. Speaker, as the First Elected Member from West Bay said, this is a profound motion and probably one of the most far reaching motions ever tabled in this Legislative Assembly. The effect that it will have on people who need our help and which help we must give without any reservations whatsoever.

The gentleman that was here early on, Jules . . . and I see Rotania is still here and I would like to extend a warm welcome to Rotania here. Just to give a little background as most of us as the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town said he has knowledge of here and I think all of us as legislators have. Incidentally, my first contact with Rotania was through the kindness of the mover of this motion, the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town, when she was working at the T.V. with a lady that was there. They brought her condition and situation to my attention and I am pleased to say with Rotania in the Gallery that we are very much looking at this situation.

I have talked to the First Elected Member from George Town on ways that we can assist and I am pleased to say that we are coming to a position in this case where we can get genuine for her and I know that Miss Nicholson will make these islands proud as she goes forward and as we help her prepare to make herself better.

Mr. Speaker, the comprehensive presentation done by the Second Elected Member of Bodden Town indicates to me and this House and the islands that the political maturity to which she has now arrived at. The tremendous amount of effort and time that has been spent on the research, the many people that she sat and talked with is of a very time consuming effort and we must take our hats off to her.

As we say and was evidence, the passion with which she delivered this. It was, you know, in her own special way but this comes as no surprise to me as I have watched here literally over her entire life time. And it was because of this knowledge of knowing her and the time of person she was in trying to help not only the elderly but anybody that needed help that made me strongly encourage her in 1995 to enter into politics where it is now paying off for these islands.

Mr. Speaker, this motion, for it to have any real effect, there are sections in it and the penultimate resolve says that we consider mandating laws. I feel, Mr. Speaker, that this is the only effective way to make this have teeth in it. And when I go to some of these business establishments who have taken the initiative to provide these services for the physically challenged and I see people just casually driving in there and parking, leaving their cars running, their stereo going full blast, I know that it was not designed for this. And, we must make sure that whatever needs to be put in place within the next few months, that this be dealt with urgently because there are many people out there who can benefit from the provision of these services. Most of these services as we know as you go to United States and anywhere in the world are strategically placed close to the buildings where people can have easy access going in and out to the buildings.

I look forward, Mr. Speaker, as we go forward with this motion as has been indicated by all members the full support, it is bipartisan and once again it is a pleasure for me to be linked with the two representatives from Bodden Town—the mover, the Second Elected Member and the Third Elected Member. I wish and hope everything goes well with this and in a prompt manner.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, thank you. Perhaps it is fitting for me to be one of the very last speakers to this motion seeing as I have made my life fairly easy and there is not much more that actually can be said. Unlike my usual style, I am going to make an exception this afternoon and I am going to actually echo the sentiments of others and congratulate the mover of the motion. Not just in my usual style but actually to agree with the last speaker about her. As you know that is not my usual style.

But, Mr. Speaker, the mover of the motion has put forward a case that is compelling. That takes nothing away from the contribution of the seconder of the motion but you see, we know he is that good. So we expect the best from him at all times.

While others have gone into various aspects and merits of the motion, I won't be very repetitious. I am not going to take very long. I want to extend an argument that has been brought to the floor of the House by the last speaker, the Minister for Health. When he spoke about the second resolve section of the motion. Which reads, "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government considers mandating laws for the provision of appropriate handicap access to all facilities and aircraft." I am going to extend the argument in this manner, Mr. Speaker. I don't speak with vast knowledge and I am going to be making a few assumptions but I think the assumptions are fair based on the circumstances that prevail today.

I think the mover made mention that as of now, it is a policy within the Department of Planning and/or the Central Planning Authority that approval for any public buildings now calls for access to be provided for these physically challenged or special people, depending on which way we want to term them but we know who we are talking about. Now, that has been the policy, I think, in recent years and you would have found that the newer structures have this type of access.

The Minister for Tourism in his contribution made mention of steps that government has taken in recent times to provide access and facilities for these people. Like with sidewalks, I think he mentioned by the Post Office and a couple of other areas. But I want to go further with the argument because the government now if they are going to lead by example and it is obvious that this has been a wake-up call for all of us. The mover has said this is our wake-up call so let us accept the wake-up call and not stay in bed. The government must now immediately provide proper access to government facilities and I mean immediately—this very building that we are in.

I am curious to know how young Jules got into the building today. I think I do know but I am just saying it certainly had to be not a nice time and not a joy ride for him.

Now, having said that, the reason why I am not even thinking for a split second about whatever cost that are involved is because the cost that are involved here have been cost not just to government but to private sector as well. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town mentioned that the vast majority of these individuals are not looking sympathy, they are simply looking a level playing field to access the various locations to be able to do what they can do, whether it be working or otherwise.

So, therefore, the onus in my view, I call the name of the government first so that the government can lead by example but it doesn't end there. So I am expecting to see in a very short time whatever government facilities there are, that were constructed and plans approved for without such facilities being in place for that facility to be created. It is only then that my other extended argument, in my view, can be put forward but I am going to let it fly as a seed to be sowed right now.

I cannot advocate retroactive legislation so I could not suppose but I couldn't try to encourage the government either by way of regulation or by law to say that they should create the necessary legislation that all buildings, even buildings that were passed a long time ago must have this type of facility in place. Simply because of the principle. I cannot be one who is supportive of retroactive legislation just by principle alone. But I hold the view that if the government were to do so and lead by example then the government could easily say that all premises have a reasonable period of time—six months, twelve months whatever is considered to be reasonable in order to fall in line.

Thereafter whatever that reasonable time is, there after, these are penalties that will come forward. I am suggesting that for the simple reason that if we believe that this is as important as we say it is then that is the route we take. We are not being insensitive to people who own public buildings, we are leading by example and we are giving everyone fair time to be able to do it. However, if we don't do it then we are not taking the motion as serious as we should and that is not trying to push anything down anyone's throat. I believe that the private sector in this community will be quite sensitive enough and it is only to make sure that they get their wake-up call and that those buildings that don't have proper access for these types of individuals will be given these access once the focus and the energies are channelled in those directions.

So I am simply recommending to the government that they take steps along those lines not to be insensitive about the circumstance but to let everybody know as they have lead by example that this is something that is considered to be of importance and it must be done. I merely make that suggestion following along with whatever else has been said and, I too certainly will know what I have to do when it comes time for the vote for the motion, and I certainly give it my support.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I too rise to give my full support to this motion, being Private Member's Motion No. 18/99 for the consideration of the protection and assistance of the physically, (and I would add) mentally handicapped or challenged.

As our population as increased over the past few years and particularly so to as the number of special needs persons in our community throughout the three islands making up the Cayman Islands. Fortunately, Mr. Speaker, in recent times we have become much more cognisant to these needs and perhaps more readily to react to the needs of the special needs persons. And, although much as been done to assist the special needs and I chose to use that terminology I suppose to handicapped because I believe by so doing with the latter, we are by implication implying certain negative or derogatory innuendoes in that regard.

Having worked with these special needs children as well as older persons when I did my teacher training several years ago in Florida as well as in Cayman, I can personally say that one of the most rewarding experiences is spending time in trying to teach these children, whether it was in arena of sports or whether it was in classroom for English lessons. I think the mistake that many of us have made more often than not is to view them as lesser than norm but when one takes the time to become closely associated with them, we can sometimes see that perhaps they are much more sensitive in areas than we would consider ourselves normal are.

I was recently privileged to be in North Carolina with the Cayman delegation for the Special Olympian athletes and indeed it was a proud moment for me. But I daresay, it was even a prouder moment for the athletes as they competed on an international level and did extremely well, in that they brought back medals ranging from gold to silver to bronze. I should also like to congratulate the parents who spent an enormous amount of time with these special needs children not only from a financial perspective but indeed from a social and physiological perspective as well. The churches, too, have played a very integral part in the socio-economic development of these special needs persons and they too are also warranting our congratulations here today.

While I am so doing, I would like to congratulate the mover as well as the seconder for this timely and most significant motion. I believe it is a motion that will go down in the annals of history as being sprinkled and indeed unsaturated with a great deal of care and of consideration for the present needs as well as for the future needs of these special persons.

When one also looks at the recent exercise that was carried out by Vision 2008, I believe the mover and the seconder can rest assured with the public's full endorsement that the time is right to fully consider and attend to the needs of these special persons.

Mr. Speaker, although much as been done as far as infrastructure and education in this area, there is still much more that can be done. I know speaking from my area on the Brac, there is still several schools that are in need of handicapped ramps. I know the Spott Bay School, in particular, where there is at least one special needs student attending. That needs immediate attention and the child in which I am referring to as come a very long way and indeed I would submit that it is a miracle that the child is alive, even yet today. Anything that we as a government can do to further facilitate and enhance a fuller and a better quality of life for this individual as well as others in this similar physical needs, then I believe it would also be a step in the right direction.

In travelling back and forth, I also noticed quite frequently that there is much difficulty when such persons have to board or leave the aircraft and that there is no appropriate facilities to assist these persons. Often times, it is quit crude the way they are lifted from the ground. I can imagine the intrepidation that must be in the hearts of these young ones as they are taken back and forth, especially the young lad who has to travel quite a bit from here to the United States. So perhaps some thought should also be given in this regard to be able to alleviate this problem.

Mr. Speaker, I would also wish to bring notice as some other previous speakers have already so eloquently done to the fact that although the planning law and regulations have made various provisions for putting in place parking facilities for the special needs person, more often than not, the John Public will take these spots for the mere reason of it being much more easier to access or easier from the building. I believe that government as well as the remaining honourable colleagues should seriously look at putting in place the very necessary and requisite mandatory legislation and/or regulation so that a fine can be attach to persons breaching or contravening the various statutory provisions that are put in place and that they are indeed vigorously enforced. Because without so doing, I believe that infringements will continue.

Mr. Speaker, I don't believe that it is just a reckless disregard but perhaps some persons may not cognisant or fully sensitive to the needs of these special needs persons. So I am not advocating merely a mandatory, rigid regulation to be put in place but also that an education process should go hand in hand with it if we are to see the results that I believe we are all hoping to achieve.

Mr. Speaker, with those few words, it is my great pleasure to fully support this motion.

The Speaker: I believe all members have spoken.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Private Member's Motion No. 18/99 is one that undoubtedly the whole House supports. It is a very important motion. It is one that is very wide reaching, very complex.

I would like to commend the Second Elected Member from Boddén Town. The presentation has been one of the most thorough and highly researched speeches that I have heard in this house throughout the period I have been here. Very comprehensive and it went into all aspects of what is an extremely complex and far reaching issues.

The areas that I would like to deal with are those that relate more directly to my ministry and this motion I think touches literally every ministry and every person in these islands. Firstly, with new public buildings, the building code that is used is the United States Southern Building code and provision for the physically challenged are provided in the new buildings. There are obviously buildings that have been built in the past, not just here but in the United States and Europe which do not have the facilities. But I think we have a duty as did the Minister of Transport when we saw that the sidewalks in town were warped, for example, by the Post Office was probably the most obvious one but also along the full Seven Mile Beach. The government or legislature at considerable expense has started a rectification programme.

Also the parking at the new places now have the handicapped parking spaces and in due course the law will cover those to ensure that there is enforcement. I take the note made of the bathrooms of the airport and I will definitely take this up with the Civil Aviation Authority because the new arrivals area and the extension of the departure area, all of those are now ramped and have the necessary facilities but I do realise that these bathrooms are older, they do not have that.

Mr. Speaker, I, too would like to acknowledge the persons who were in the Gallery in the Chamber earlier—Rotania Nicholson and also the Frasers. Mr. Speaker, Rotania was the first successful main stream student to go through the John Gray High School and I think this quite an achievement to the principal of that school, Mrs. Flatley, and her year head and staff for making it possible and also I would like to thank the students and staff who assisted her.

I, too, would like to extend my thanks to people such as Mr. David Foster, the people at the Hyatt and others named by the mover of this motion for the way that they have assisted the physically challenged. The ministry has consulted an International Labour Organisation person on developing the Sunrise Centre further and Miss Beckles, who I know met with the mover of this motion was here in June, and we are happy that her visit was timely and that we should receive a report from her in August of this year. In that we would hope to have the future plans that we need to deal with the physically and the mentally challenged.

There are funds in the budget both for the Lighthouse School and also for the Sunrise Training Centre. Miss Beckles and the International Labour Organisation are very important to how the Sunrise Training Centre will be dealt with because it is very important as is being done with the Lighthouse School where we have a highly specialised architect involved in ensuring that the highest standards are met. It is going to be expensive as we know but it will be worth it to the challenged children who will be spending the larger part of their lives at one or other of these schools and centres. We have also in the new schools provided for the physically challenged but quite rightly as was send earlier, as is, for example, this building that we are in is not ramped for wheelchairs and I guess, perhaps, charity begins at home. The day may well come when one of these seats here may be filled by someone who is physically challenged.

So I accept that we need to do more within the schools... Yes, sir, I would actually finish if you would just extended me a few more minutes.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: I just wanted you to move a motion that we could suspend Standing Order 10(2) in order that we can continue beyond 4:30 p.m. We were we supposed to be going until 6:00 p.m.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Just finish this today? Yes, sir. I move a motion to waive the Standing Order relevant to extend this beyond 4:30 p.m. to finish the motion.

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 10(2) to go beyond 4:30 p.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Please continue, I apologise for the interruption. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Not at all, sir. The importance of having these islands especially the public areas accessible to people who are physically and mentally challenged is one that, I think, undoubtedly carries the outmost merit. I will be happy when this comes to support the necessary legislation for it. I know with the building code, we will also be looking at updating that as it is now about three or four years old. And, in the course of doing that, I know that the Building Code Committee, which is a very important committee to planning will be looking specifically at insuring that new buildings are as accessible and useable. Accessible and useable by persons who are physically challenged.

I would like to again commend the mover of the motion, I would not go into... as she was very detailed in the Vision aspects of this, that was read out and it did feature very heavily at page 19 of that plan, which was strategy 4 and as she read action plans 8 and 9 and onwards. So I would like to commend the mover again for her very thorough and able opening of this and to say that she has a hundred percent of my support and I believe of everyone support here and that within the areas of the schools or education, and planning and public buildings such as the airport that are under my ministry or a statutory authority of my ministry that we will do our utmost to ensure that these are as fully accessible and useable by the physically challenged.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does the mover wish to exercise her right of reply? The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I guess it is in order for me to say or quote the words of a little song we sing in Sunday School: "Oh, happy day; Oh, happy day; Oh, What a happy day."

Mr. Speaker, first let me express my sincere thanks and appreciation to government for accepting this motion. Also my appreciation to my colleague, the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town for seconding this motion. Also, to my other colleagues who occupy this side of this honourable house, my heart felt thanks for all your support.

All the debates were so upbeat and enthusiastic and at this moment, my heart is extremely full.

Mr. Speaker, I am extremely encouraged to see that the wheels are already been set into motion and that things will be moving forward on several fronts regarding this motion. I hope that from my presentation, this afternoon, the listening public and everyone in this honourable house can appreciate the strength of my commitment to this issue. It was something that needed attention and I was not about to let this opportunity slip by once I knew all the hard facts.

Mr. Speaker, you can bet it took many long hours to research and it certainly opened my eyes but after that there was no turning back. Everyone inside this Chamber and inside these walls can be assured that once I latch on to something I believe in, I will see it through to the end. When I believe in something where it concerns my people, especially those who are less fortunate, I am committed to going about and beyond the call of duty.

I would also like to re-emphasise my commitment to Vision 2008. This issue like after-school programmes for which I introduced a motion earlier this year, is clearly addressed in Vision 2008, the people's plan. And, Mr. Speaker, this issue is about people. People who are just like the rest of us with the same feelings, aspirations and dreams. The only difference is that they were born a little different or perhaps they met with an accident or age has not been kind to them. Any one of us could find ourselves in the same situation today, tomorrow or next year. That is why we must all do our part to ensure that all persons with disabilities feel that they have a place in a caring, God fearing society.

Mr. Speaker, before I close I would like to make an appeal to everyone to please reach out and embrace this issue. We all have a part to play and our lives will be so much richer for it. Over the years I have attended and participated locally in many Special Olympic events and I have gotten very close to many of the athletes. Mr. Speaker, they are all so loving and so hugable. It is always such a rewarding experience to see the effort and dedication of these young people while others in their situation might give up and lose hope, they do not. In fact, by their actions and attitudes, they give the rest of us hope. I think we all have plenty to learn from them.

Mr. Speaker, many years ago, persons with disabilities were locked up and kept at home. Today, thank God, things have changed and we even see them travelling all over the world and competing in sporting events and bringing home medals. This just proves that the concerted efforts of caring and committed people can bring about change and progress in our society.

Mr. Speaker, if everyone takes and active and an on-going interest in developing this caring attitude, I feel confident that the Cayman Islands can become the society of which we all aspire for the next millennium.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 18/99. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 18/99 PASSED.

POINT OF PROCEDURE

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of procedure, sir, I don't know if the Chair is in a position to inform the House as to what is the order of business come Wednesday, and particularly Thursday, since Thursday is Private Member's Motion day and I know that I still have a couple motions of which I am the seconder, sir.

You know that I always like to be conscientious. I would certainly appreciate some idea as to what might be coming so that I can avail myself of any opportunity for preparation that there may be between now and then, sir.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I will be calling a meeting of the Business Committee tomorrow. As the honourable member knows it is a democratic committee made up of me as Chair, three backbenchers and the Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture. At that stage, we will have to take decisions. All I would say, sir, despite all of what went on we did have a full day. We achieved a lot today, for which I am very thankful. And, we will always endeavour to try to get sufficient on...and I understand questions will be ready for Wednesday to try to get a full day.

However, as you know sir, sometimes things go quickly, sometimes things go slowly so I cannot do any more than that, sir. All I can say is that... Yes, sir, what I am happy to do and what normally would be done is if a motion is put on that relates to mover, then the mover would be contacted by the Legislative Assembly to say the motion is first or second or third or wherever it is. We will have a formal meeting tomorrow afternoon and as I understand it, business will only have to be fixed for Wednesday morning because Finance Committee is Wednesday afternoon, as I understand is now the situation.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Tomorrow? Oh, man!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, that's what I was told, sir. I will sit down on this one. This is not my baby.

[Laughter]

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, what I am asking then is if we are going to meet Wednesday afternoon, as we were informed we were going to meet tomorrow afternoon, what time will we meet on Wednesday and then how much business can we conduct as the minister just said we will have a full day?

The minister suggested we will have a full day. He is calling the Business Committee and now we hear Finance Committee will meet.

The Speaker: The Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel A. Walton: Thank you, sir. I am going to try to help a bit on the Finance Committee item.

Initially, we had planned it for tomorrow afternoon but in circulating the papers and making the arrangements, it is actually Wednesday at 2:00 p.m. instead. The meeting shouldn't... I like to judge Finance Committee meetings right, but members have seen the agenda and it is really quite small and presumably if we go until 6:00 p.m. on Wednesday, I don't see why once we have done Finance Committee, sir, go back into the House . . . I mean it is up to the Leader. But Finance Committee shouldn't take us more than I guess two hours. So leave us with two hours for Wednesday afternoon, if we go on until 6:00 p.m.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 9:00 a.m. on Wednesday morning, sir.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do adjourn until 9:00 a.m. on Wednesday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House do stand adjourned until 9:00 a.m. on Wednesday.

AT 4:45 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 9:00 AM WEDNESDAY, 4 AUGUST 1999.

Employee levels as of:	31 November 1998	10 June 1999	Change
North America	18	13	(5)
Total:	36	29	(7)

As of 10 June 1999, of our permanent employees based in Cayman (being 236) we currently have 14 work permit holders where the employee is married to a Caymanian, and 17 expatriate work permit holders. CAL is very proud of its record for employing Caymanians and that only 7 percent of its workforce in Cayman are expatriates on work permits. The majority of these are in our maintenance area where specific skills/licences are required.

Total employment at CAL over the last 2 ½ years has varied from a low of 299 employees in January 1997 to a high of 323 in September 1998. Mr. Speaker, I am not going to try to go through the list of these but they are all attached with names as well for the benefit of members because it is three pages.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if Cayman Airways has any specific policy regarding succession planning or any initiative in place in that regard?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: In relation to the top positions, we have probably sufficient staff to deal with the continuity that we need. What we do not have in place and is something that is being looked at by a new human resources senior officer we have just employed . . . we have to be looking really with deputies or people who can fill into the four main senior positions and the managing director's position.

At present, we know we have continuity within that and those staff have a well-rounded training so that for a short period continuity would not be a problem but long-term successive planning, we do not have the people in place for that at present in all areas. I would just mention, sir, that it is a costly exercise. I personally think it is a very important exercise and I hope that the new human resources director will give recommendations on it in due course.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Minister just mentioned the word "training." Can the Minister say if there is any specific policy throughout Cayman Airways with regard to training? Would he be able to explain how training for employees is initiated?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This morning, unfortunately both the managing director and the deputy are off the island. What I do know, sir, is that we have had training from the senior positions through to all levels of positions. It follows to a large extent the International Airline Travel Associations courses. They have been taking different areas including senior management, and training has been very important under the new managing director's guidance. I know it is continuing. I just cannot give specifics, unfortunately, at this stage because I don't have that staff here with me. I do know that there is a training programme in place.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: To be a little bit more specific regarding training, first of all, can the Minister state if he has any knowledge of any request for training in the recent past that has been denied? And, also in the area of maintenance is there any pointed effort with regard to specific training requirements that may be required for staff who are now employed in the maintenance section who need this training to upgrade themselves to a certain level in order for the maintenance department to function properly?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I do not know personally of any request for training that has been refused. That's not to say that did not happen and I would have to inquire.

The maintenance department is under continuous scrutiny by the United Kingdom Civil Aviation Authority and I do know that the staff who are in positions where they should be licensed or trained, do have that training. In fact, both the Civil Aviation Authority and the Federal Aviation Authority have oversight on maintenance and I know that, for example, at present—this week a routine audit is going on by the United Kingdom's representative on the civil aviation side.

Now, the other area of the question asked whether we have people licensed in one area that could get further training or be upgraded into another area or higher category. I am sure that that would be a possibility. I don't unfortunately have the details of this. I guess the only assurance that I would like to get across is that the maintenance facility we have, the staff are trained. They are under the scrutiny of the United States of America Federal Aviation Authority and the United Kingdom's Civil Aviation directorate. And they do comply with that and the International Air Transportation Association (IATA) Guidelines.

We have an impeccable record, Mr. Speaker, on maintenance. If there is anything at all that needs to be done on a jet, it doesn't fly. And that assurance I have been given time and again by the head of maintenance, sir.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Honourable Minister tell the House how the present staff complement compares with the numbers prior to the downsizing exercise?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry, I was speaking to two staff [members] that just came in. I apologise. Would the Honourable Member please repeat that question?

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House how the present staff complement of the airline compares with the numbers prior to the downsizing exercise?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I understand that we are about thirty less than prior to the downsizing.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister also tell the House how any staff numbers will be affected by the acquisition of the third aircraft? Is there any anticipated staff increase, and if so, in what areas?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We will need three additional crews but all of the other departments have sufficient staff to support the three jets.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Including maintenance. Yes, the facilities we have...and this is perhaps where the costly aspect comes in but the administrative staff, the maintenance facility and the support facilities can actually cover far more jets than we now have.

However, that doesn't mean to say, sir, that...and I repeat this because once we went on a rapid expansion process on the basis that adding jets because of overhead would not increase beyond direct costs. Fuel and staff and that sort of thing was what created a lot of problems in the past. So we are going to see where these three jets when they settle in . . . and just exactly how we are doing and look at it carefully.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Getting back to the staffing. In the answer the Minister says, "...at this time Cayman Airways has 22 vacancies for permanent employment." Can the Minister state if these vacancies are vacancies which simply have not been able to be filled? Or are they are vacancies that the airline has found it can function efficiently without filling? Exactly what are the reasons why these vacancies exist?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, when this question was put together we did have 22 [vacancies]. That has been reduced now to 16. I understand they range through all departments and interviewing is going on at present. As I said, we recently were very lucky to have a Caymanian Human Resources Director come on and she is trying to fill these [vacancies]. But there will probably always be some there because there are 300 staff. People come and go.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can see a little bit of impatience so I will make this my final supplementary, sir. Can the Minister give an undertaking that these posts that are still vacant be looked at carefully with a view that if there is any necessary training for individuals within the company to be able to be upgraded (if that is possibly the case) the leading could be towards more succession planning and filling these gaps with trained individuals who are already in the stream of employment at the airline?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That is the policy of Cayman Airways. In fact, not only do we have probably the best record here of hiring Caymanians—we have 93% of our work force as Caymanians or persons married to Cay-manians, only 7% of our work force are non-Caymanians. I am happy to say that all of the senior managers, with the exception of one, are Caymanians. So many of the top positions have been filled. The policy is to try to fill those positions from within the company either by further training, further upgrading or whatever, before we go outside the company to fill them.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to question number 79 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 79

No. 79: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning what is meant by Baroness Symons (the United Kingdom Minister for Overseas Territories) in the Report of the Caymanian Compass of Tuesday 25 May 1999 that says, and I quote, "All this adds up to a pretty formidable checklist. But if our partnership is to be based on self-determination and the greatest exercise of control over their own lives by people in the territories..."

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Baroness Symons is the United Kingdom Minister who answers in the House of Lords for the United Kingdom Overseas Territories. Her speech must be read as a whole and not a short passage taken out of the context. I cannot give an opinion on what she meant, but I would suggest that her whole speech be given the literal meaning of the English language.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the whole speech pertained to the review of the Overseas Territories, and I had no reason to quote the entire speech. However, if I would take it in the literal meaning of the English Language, I would take it exactly on the part that I quoted that "...our partnership is to be based on self-determination and the greatest exercise of control over their own lives by people in the territories..." It is very plain what I am asking and I think that the House and the country deserve to know exactly what is happening with this review. What is happening and why would this be said in the House of Lords on a speech concerning the review?

That's all I am asking, Mr. Speaker. If the Minister cannot say anymore—and I guess he cannot say any more . . . but what I would ask is that government somehow find out through the Foreign Office what is meant by this. We are left to wonder. We all know what "self-determination" means when the United Kingdom says it!

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am afraid I cannot really help the Honourable Member any more. I understand what he is saying but she is a UK Minister—I cannot give an opinion on it.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I am curious to know if there is any possibility for us to understand anything that is being said, if we do not understand the language in which it is being said. Since what human beings usually use as a vehicle of communication is language, if we fail to understand the language then we are going to fail to understand the language here. "All this adds up to a pretty formidable checklist. But if our partnership is to be based on self-determination and the greatest exercise of control over their own lives by the people in these territories . . ." I will turn this into a question. But what I am saying here, this to me seems pretty clear here that if our partnership is based on self-determination it is a checklist. It is not to tell them this is what they must do.

Since we have people in government, they have to be able to understand something about the language of people that they are negotiating with or are talking with. I would like to ask the Minister whether or not it is his understanding here that Baroness Symons is suggesting clearly that we have ultimate rights to determine our internal domestic policies?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I have to be careful not to get drawn into this too far, but if we look at what the Member has just read, obviously it is a hypothetical situation that is being put. Baroness Symons says, "But if our partnership is to be based..." I cannot comment beyond that. It seems she is putting . . . well, that speaks for itself. It is obvious, Mr. Speaker, that the position with the United Kingdom has always really been that the colonies decide whether they want to advance their constitution or not, if that helps in any way.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I know we are not going to get any more out of the Minister than what he just said so I am not going to waste the time of the House. But permit me to say that we are getting various signs from this review, various indications. We know what self-determination means. I would ask that the Government of the day to approach the Foreign Office to find out exactly what these kinds of statements mean. We cannot be caught off guard on these situations. If there is something going on between the United Kingdom [and] Government or the Foreign Office and the Executive Council here, then we ought to know.

I take what the Minister says with the highest regard that they don't know. However, that does not leave the country in a good position because the Minister has said—and we have to take it, as he said, in the literal sense of the English Language—self-determination means independence. The review is one based on partnership so when they put the two of those things together, what is Baroness Symons talking about? She is talking about independence for the country.

I appreciate you allowing me the statement and I am asking, sir, that they take that into consideration.

The Speaker: Would you please turn it into a question.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I am asking that they take all that I have said into consideration and probably ask the United Kingdom Government to give us full, fair and clear facts of the situations rather than this sort of language that can be turned upside down, inside out.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, as I understand the position, the United Kingdom's position has not changed over the years in that it is a decision of the people of the Cayman Islands whether or not the constitution of the country is to be advanced. That has never changed and nothing in her statement or in Mr. Cook's or anyone else's has changed that position. It is not a decision for members in this Legislative Assembly to decide on changing the constitution. That rests solely with the people of the country for the United Kingdom to get a clear indication whether to remain as the country is—a dependent territory under the United Kingdom.

I don't mind making it abundantly clear, that is my position [and] it always has been. Life here is good. We remain as we are. And, there is nothing that the United Kingdom has done or said which changes the fact that they honour and they will listen to the wishes of the people of the dependent territories on whether or not to change the constitution of the country.

As we know when the people last spoke they spoke loud and clear to let the constitution remain as it is and to leave the power vested in a group of people rather than being put in the hands of one person that happens at a later stage when the constitution is advanced. So, I have no doubt in my mind in that respect. We have had no indication otherwise that the United Kingdom's position has changed. The decision rests with the people of the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: I had caught the eye of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I wanted to ask the Honourable Minister if in his earlier answer he meant that the Government didn't understand what the speech was and so because of that he was not prepared to take this portion out of the context.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Under the Standing Orders, I am not required to give opinions, and really I would never give an opinion on a United Kingdom's House of Lords statement. All I said on it, which I hope was helpful, was that her speech must be read as a whole and not a short passage taken out of context. Basically that is the way the English Language is interpreted, it is called the Golden Rule of Interpretation.

If you look at the speech as a whole and you interpret it in the literal or ordinary meaning of the English Language . . . but I am not going to give an opinion and I cannot give an opinion, sir, on what she may have meant. But I can say what the UK's position to us is that any advancement of the constitution must be after the people of this country request it—not the politicians, the people of the country.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, allow me please to clarify what I said earlier. In no way could anyone say that I was asking for any change. However, when a Minister—one that has responsibility for Overseas Territories speaks, and when you look at her speech in all that she said, the full context of the speech, she talks about the review, and she talks about the partnership. She says that the review is a partnership and talks about determination and the partnership is to be based on self-determination.

Now, we can give it any interpretation, but self-determination is self-determination and control over their own lives with self-determination taken together can only mean one thing. All I am asking—and the question has not been answered—whether the Government intends to seek clarification on this aspect of the speech because they themselves are saying they don't know. So it would hold them in good waters if they got a clarification of what was said. Thank you, and that's all I am asking, sir.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning do you wish to reply?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, like I said I am not going to give an opinion on it. What is the full speech was sufficiently clear to me. As I said earlier, I know what the United Kingdom's position is and I have repeated that several times. Any advancement in self-determination—

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I don't think the Minister is answering the question. What I am asking the Minister is if he can get clarification on what she meant on this part of her speech. And if he cannot do that, all he has to say is he cannot do it or they don't think it is necessary.

The Speaker: It is really not a point of order but if the Minister wishes to reply. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Not really! Only to say, sir, I am not confused with the speech and I have no reason to ask for clarification. I mean, I don't want to get to this stage but I am not going to go back on what I wanted to say to the [Member] and I didn't impute anything earlier that the First Elected Member for West Bay was saying anything about self-determination. Let me make that clear. I never said it and I never imputed that. But I have never heard of anything like this happening before and the position is clear, I don't need to go back, sir.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, it is quite clear to me that the concept of self-determination has to do not just with independence but it has to do also with remaining within the status quo, which would be the dependent status quo.

The next point, in terms of the sentence structure here, is the exercise of control over their own lives by people. Well, the exercise of control over lives could mean the exercise of control in terms of continuing in the status quo or changing the status quo. The question I understand here . . . and I will turn this into a question because I am asking if this could not be the case here that we understand the English Language. The Government needs to have a position because if we are dealing with the situation with regard to the human rights issue, the question that people are asking us, and we have a right to ask the Government that's responsible for policy, whether or not we could be interpreting this at the moment as meaning that we will be able to make the decision with regard to the implementation of these specific human rights requirements within the Cayman Islands.

I also know that we have spoken with British MPs with regard to this and that their idea is that this is a conscience issue. We want to know how far has the Government gone in examining or requesting information from the United Kingdom with regard to what kind of exercise of internal sovereignty we will be allowed to have with regards the checklist specifically stated here.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Let me be very blunt on this. I am not going to vote to change the law on homosexuality, if that is what you are talking about. I don't believe anybody else in here is going to do it.

The United Kingdom has certain legislative authority, which it did with the death penalty—what more can I say? My position is clear. I am not going to support any changes in that law and I think that is what you are referring to.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to ask the Minister then, since he has answered the question bluntly, if he is not going to support the change with regards that particular requirement—if he is suggesting then that this will be legislated by the United Kingdom by Order in Council, and if so, will he accept that?

The Speaker: I think we are getting outside the answer to the substantive question. If the Minister wishes to answer, he may. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

I think if you want specific answers, you should ask specific questions.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I think I have said enough, sir. The Member knows the position.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, we can elicit a different type of answer by leaning the question in a different direction.

Having said what the Minister has said on the possible change in the law regarding homosexual activity, can the Minister state if the Government has taken any position yet with regards making any attempt to negotiate with the mother country regarding the issue rather than simply leaving it to what is crystal clear, and to put it bluntly, as the Minister might say, 'This Parliament is not accepting it,' and just simply waiting for Britain to do what they have to do by Order in Council?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Out of courtesy, I am going to reply to this, but I think we are getting so wide now.

What I personally have done and I have gotten an opportunity to speak to the Minister was to refer her to a section in the European Convention on Human Rights, which says (words to the effect because I don't have it before me) that local conditions should be taken into account in applying the sections of the Convention. I have also pointed out the very deep religious feelings that exist in the Cayman Islands and so have the other islands.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, that has been acknowledged. Somewhere in the White Paper a reference is made to the Law on Sodomy, there is a quotation saying that they understand that the beliefs in the territories—I think, they use the words, "...are on deep-seated religious feelings...". And we really asked them to take this all into consideration and really understand that Europe is a different place to the Cayman Islands and some things, you know, may be accepted in one place may not be accepted in others.

I will continue every opportunity I get to urge that a satisfactory settlement on this be brought about as best I can. I would also ask members here who just had an opportunity to meet with some UK MPs to voice the same line of argument and any other lines of arguments that we can have that could assist us in this area.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I can assure the Minister that that was done. I would also like to thank him for being so courteous by being willing to answer.

I don't know when the answer to this question was put together but does the Minister know that in future regarding this issue or similar issues, he will be dealing with somebody else not Baroness Symons?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I realise there have been changes in the Cabinet. The players do change a lot more often these days than maybe 12 - 15 years ago when we had talks. But I will keep voicing it. I have also voiced that to Mr. Cook. So what I am saying is that at every opportunity that we get, we do voice this and I would ask members here to please do the same because from time to time, we have visiting MPs here or we have visiting people from the UK.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member of George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I appreciate the Minister's answer but perhaps even though he has answered in the way that he has, can we get an undertaking from the Minister that there will be a certain commitment not just at every opportunity that arises but a certain commitment which will seek audience to ensure that this message is sent to them before any drastic measures are taken, such as an Order in Council?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, let me just first say I don't have responsibility obviously for foreign affairs but I know we put this in writing. In fact, I believe nearly every Member of this House, as far as two or three years ago, when the three questions were asked before the White Paper came out . . . so I know it is there in writing. I know we raised it at the Dependent Territories Association—I am sure it will be raised again whoever goes to the upcoming Dependent Territories Association Conference. We will keep it fully up-front as often as we can and in as formal a situation as well as informal.

I have found, sir, that the English are very good at moving through their files. They have a continuous civil service and I am saying this very constructively. They are always well-briefed on talks at that level. But out of abundance of caution, as I think the First Elected Member for George Town has raised, we will keep it as often as we can in the forefront with them and endeavour to get a solution that is acceptable to everybody as far as we can. But I should say the European Convention on Human Rights binds them, it binds us.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to question number 80 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 80

No. 80: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning what is meant by Baroness Symons, the United Kingdom Minister for Overseas Territories, in the Report of the Caymanian Compass of Tuesday 25 May 1999 that says, and I quote, "Her third issue was improvements to the composition of legislatures and Executive Councils and their operation" and what effect would this have on our Constitution as it exists?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am afraid the answer to this is same as the last one, which basically says that Baroness Symons is the United Kingdom Minister who answers in the House of Lords for the United Kingdom Overseas Territories. Her speech must be read as a whole and not a short passage taken out of the context. I cannot give an opinion on what she meant, but I would suggest that her whole speech be given the literal meaning of the English language.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay, supplementary.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, I wonder if you will permit me to read at least the section that we are talking about from that report to see if that could help the Government give an answer.

The Speaker: I don't think...he said it must be read by us.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, who would it be read by then, sir?

The Speaker: Go ahead and read it.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you. And I quote, Caymanian Compass, Tuesday, 25 May 1999. "In the White Paper they had drawn attention to five issues which she highlighted as typical of those on which modernisation would focus.

"First, measures promoting more open, transparent and accountable governments.

"Rights of access to information are essential to the ability of people to engage in political activity effectively. Without, there will be low expectations, lack of participation in and unrepresentative government," she said.

"We hope the governments of the territories will encourage public attendance at and reporting on meetings of the legislatures; speedy publication where appropriate of the debates and decision of the main organs of government; high standards of accountability in public life and a willingness to explain decisions and policies to the electorate."

"Second, freedom of speech and information. 'Here I include a free and effective media,' the Baroness said. 'If people are to be able to make informed decisions they must be able to obtain their facts on which to base them.'

"The freedom to debate and hold different opinions is a key factor in creating and maintaining democratic and free societies.'

"Her third issue was improvement to composition of legislatures and executive councils and their operation. 'We need to ensure that the electoral process is fair and inclusive and that once elected members of Overseas Territory Governments put into practice, the concept of collective responsibility for government policy and decisions, and that those who hold elected Office maintain the highest standards of probity,' she said."

Now, Mr. Speaker, I read the part that has to do with this particular question. I could also read the part that had to do with the other question but what is she talking about when she says that, "Her third issue was improvements to composition of legislatures and executive councils and their operations"? I contend that it is not clear and I am asking Government if they could get some sort of answer from them on this whole thing. Now, I know that the woman has left, there is a new Minister but still the policy remains.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What the Honourable Member read out there, all of the good qualities that should exist in a Government, if she had been writing about Cayman's Government, she couldn't have written any better. We comply with all of that! We have a high calibre of Government, we come here—I even answer questions to statements such as I have done now. The very press has stated things like our school inspectorate how open and everything it is. As far as the Government goes, I think we fulfilled the Cabinet model of Government fully.

[Laughter]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I answer, as I did today on Cayman Airways, something that 8 - 10 years ago, nobody answered questions on Cayman Airways. They would say it was a private company and quite rightly normally a private company never answers—I have those quotes, sir, clearly.

I can't really say any more. I mean what do members think about the composition of the legislature. Maybe she was referring to trying to get the level of debate in here much higher so we would be a good example for school children and others in the territory.

So as far as the Government goes, we fulfilled Baroness Symons' good statements that were made there and we will endeavour to continue to do that and I suggest that the legislature try to comply as far as possible with good behaviour and do things that set good examples for our young people out there for debates.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I want to thank the Minister of Education for that very facetious answer—which was not an answer but a statement on what he thinks is a good government that they are performing.

Mr. Speaker, he talks about collective responsibility—if the Government was following collective responsibility and if the good Minister of the United Kingdom was not talking about the bad operation of government and their collective responsibility then what happened yesterday is certainly not good government. When a Minister who is responsible for a subject refuses to answer it in the Legislature and another Minister gets up and has to do it for him. Now, if that is good government then I think the Minister from United Kingdom...

The Speaker: Would you turn this into a question? This is not time for statements.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, I am only doing what you allowed the Minister to do, you know, to make a long statement and then at the final...

The Speaker: He was answering not asking.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, I was getting to it. I am just doing the lead up to it as is allowed I believe, but thanks for your stopping me in my trend.

What I am asking is, if all that is going on is good government then why (and I am doing this out of his supplementary answer) would Ministers not answer questions if things are done in the highest probity?

Things like Pedro Castle, I cannot get answers after three months and we cannot get a debate on motions after three months? And, if things are done in the highest probity, why then would the Minister of Agriculture, Environment, Communications refuse to answer a Minister about electronic mail?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, this obviously has gone well outside—

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No, but let me just say this: The reason—and the Member knows this—is that the Business Committee felt that on the Pedro Castle matter, until the Attorney General had made this report where facts could come to the legislature rather than running the possibility of warping the truth or giving opinions in a vacuum, it is better until the facts come out. I believe that members should be prepared to debate matters important like that on the facts and those facts will come out—that was the reason there.

Mr. Speaker, on motions, many times I have seen members of the Backbench not even support the motions that they second. So if we are asking, much less speaking on them, I don't want to get into this sort of thing. But all I would say is that maybe what Baroness Symons was referring to is that the procedures on this House should be followed when Question Time is on. Perhaps people should not make statements.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, really!

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: How long is this going to be allowed this morning? The question is really straight forward. Her third issue was improvements to the composition—and my question, and please allow me Mr. Speaker. My question only arose out of that dissertation he gave about their good government.

And the point of order is . . . well, the Speaker should understand that it is relevant. And really, I will not even attempt to sit here and listen. I will go into the members' room because this has turned into a fiasco, Government has—

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, after this we will go on to the next question.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, please. Only to say the word "composition" relates to people. Maybe Baroness Symons was saying we need to have a higher calibre of members in the House. Maybe she was saying we needed to have a different type of Member in the House. I don't know. I cannot give an opinion on it. But composition means the people who make it up. It's her opinion. All I would say, sir, is that I try to answer as far as I can.

Here we have an example of supplementaries going very wide, I would say sir. I realise that's the House prerogative and I abide by it. But this is what sometimes happens. Maybe the time has come to shorten the length of questions—maybe not every day on questions. We could split it up so that there is a specific time on each question—maybe ten minutes or twenty minutes—that will be up to you, and then just cut it off there.

The Speaker: Do you have a supplementary?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: Final supplementary. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Obviously, the Minister for Education was overdue and this morning was the morning that could not pass for him to get some of his usual kicks. However, be that as it may, can the Minister say with regard to question number 80 on what the Baroness referred to with regard to legislature and executive councils and their operation, if in the extended thought process of the government, that the government has sat down at any time with regard to the issues in the White Paper (which all of these questions surround) with a view to forming any opinion or position on certain questions?

Or is it going to be a circumstance that will be held over and held over until the last final moment possible to have any position taken so that the country can know what is going to be put forward to the mother country with regard to the issue?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Firstly, Baroness Symons when she spoke was dealing with all dependent territories. So it doesn't necessarily mean that every statement made in there applied to the same extent to every territory.

Now, we have a Select Committee, as I understand it sitting on this. It has been for that reason that we have not been able to talk to the television [station] on this. I understand that certain opinions will be coming out of that Select Committee in the form of reports as usual that are laid here. I don't want at this stage to do anything that is going to affect that report because we all know the procedure. Therefore, until we get a further feedback from the people of the Cayman Islands on the White Paper, then I believe that—

[Inaudible Interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I know I don't chair it. I think it is the Financial Secretary because part of it is the OECD which we know the position on. But I think you will agree, the First Elected Member for George Town, that we need to get the necessary feedback from that. But the position in relation to those three questions and the earlier positions when we are able to speak on it, I mean government did state what it felt at that time.

However, at the end of the day we obviously have to abide by the wishes of the people of the Cayman Islands. And if the Select Committee of the whole House comes up with measures based on the majority of the electorates, then obviously I have a duty to follow that, sir.

The Speaker: Moving on to question number 33, which was deferred from the 1st April 1999, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, let's see if the Government knows anything about this since they didn't know anything about the last two.

QUESTION 33

(Deferred on Thursday, 1 April 1999)

No. 33: Mr. W. McKeever Bush asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources to say what was the reason for the injunctions against the Caymanian Compass to stop the publication of the contract between Cable & Wireless Ltd. and the Cayman Islands Government?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: When the Government Telecommunications Officer was first informed on Friday, 4 December 1998 that the Caymanian Compass intended to publish in the following Monday's edition a summary of the main provisions of the licence together with some editorial comment from a version of the licence which purported to be obtainable on the Internet, the Government was concerned to ensure a number of things.

First, that since the terms of the contract between Government and Cable & Wireless Ltd were contained in a document marked "Confidential" that any disclosure in the Caymanian Compass of the details of the Licence did not injure the long-term commercial interests of the people of the Cayman Islands by fettering the commercial freedom of the Government in future negotiations with Cable & Wireless Ltd or others.

Second, that the source of any information regarding the contract had been authenticated and confirmed as the exact wording in the Licence. Although aware of the Internet site, Government did not know of the extent of the publication nor the authenticity nor the availability of the document available on the Web.

Third, the Government's willingness to permit publication of the Licence did not breach any terms of confidentiality contained in the Licence and make it liable for damages at the suit of Cable & Wireless Ltd. That is, any such agreement to the Caymanian Compass publication needed the consent of Cable & Wireless Ltd, the other contracting party.

In order to satisfy itself of those essential facts, the Government asked the Caymanian Compass to voluntarily postpone publication until those matters could be cleared up. It refused. In order to satisfy itself of the points mentioned above before consenting to publication of the proposed article, the Government therefore had no alternative but to seek the injunction.

During the remainder of December and part of January, the Portfolio and the Legal Department made enquiries about the authenticity of the document on the Net and the extent of the dissemination, the extent of the proposed Caymanian Compass article, the views of the other contracting party, Cable & Wireless Ltd – and considered the long-term commercial implications for Government in permitting the proposed publication. Government concluded that on balance it favoured allowing the proposed article to be published.

As a consequence, the Attorney-General was instructed to discontinue the injunction proceedings and those proceedings were formally withdrawn on 28 January 1999.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister explain exactly what is meant by "...fettering the commercial freedom of the Government in future negotiations with Cable & Wireless or others" bearing in mind that in this day and age it is obvious that there are tons and tons of competitors who would love a shot of providing the same services in these islands.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I would have to say that I interpret this to mean that Government was trying its endeavours to make sure that all i's were dotted before any sort of agreement could be reached with the Caymanian Compass.

The document, like the Member mentioned, was marked "Confidential." It was a confidential document, that is, the licence. And I think the Cayman Islands Government would have to look at the long-term effect that it could have with regard to future negotiations between Government and Cable & Wireless had they just taken it ad hoc and gone ahead and said, 'Yes, publish it'.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Is the Minister then saying that the Caymanian Compass asked the Government for permission to print it? Because if I remember correctly I think he said, rather than just going ahead and giving permission— and the answer doesn't state that the Compass was requesting this permission. Obviously, the Printing Law would call for any liability to fall with the Caymanian Compass not the Government. I don't know if the Minister understands the point I am trying to make, but I don't find it salient from where I sit the fact that the licence being published by the Caymanian Compass because no liability at that point in time in my view could fall on the Government, it would have to be the publishers.

So in making the point about "...fettering the commercial freedom of the Government in future negotiations..." all I am saying is that I do not see where that is a real issue and it seems like much is being made out of it to justify the action. I am wondering if the Minister can clarify that position.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I don't know how much I can clarify on this but what I would say is that although the subject matter falls under my ministry, when it came down to this decision it was a full Government decision with the legal advice from Legal Department. Of course, I am not a lawyer and I cannot say too much more on it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the answer states that this is a confidential document. Can the Minister say how this confidential document got on the Internet?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I don't have a clue as to how it got on the Internet. I was as shocked as anybody else to know that it was there and I think also that the parties from Cable & Wireless that I spoke to, apparently they were not aware of how it got to the Internet.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Can the Minister say who had possession of the document? Cable & Wireless and his ministry? Is that correct?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: To the best of my knowledge that is correct. Cable & Wireless being the party concerned would have had a copy and the other copy should have been with the ministry.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Was there any investigation carried out to see where this breach of confidentiality, if that is what they say it was, took place?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that investigations were carried out within Cable & Wireless, and I know within my ministry we tried our best but we could not put our hand on anything as to where it could have leaked from our ministry. I cannot say anymore about Cable & Wireless.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say approximately how many pages exist in this document?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I have seen this document only a few times. I don't recall the number of pages but if it is important to Member, I will definitely get that information.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state the reason why this document is considered by the Government or by both parties to be a confidential document?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: This document was actually put in place before my time as minister responsible for this. It is my understanding that it is somewhat a private company and, therefore, the dealings have been directly company to government and the franchise, itself, was a confidential one.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Surely, sir, while Government did the negotiations with Cable & Wireless on behalf of the people of this country, it is obvious that it is the people of the country—who pay the bills—whose rates are determined by way of that franchise.

Let me change the way I asked the question since the Minister has just said the document was created and deemed to be confidential before he assumed the authority. At this point in time then, is it Government's position that the document will still remain a confidential document, notwithstanding the fact that others have already seen it by way of the Internet or whatever else, is that still Government's position?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I know of no changes from the way it was.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say whether cost was incurred for these injunctions, the proceedings, and who paid the cost if cost was incurred? Somebody had to write it, somebody had to answer.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my understanding that any such action on behalf of the Government would definitely be handled through the Legal Department so I presume that the cost would be absorbed by them.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: What I am trying to determine is that Government issued an injunction against the Caymanian Compass, how was this resolved? Was the Compass... I knew they withdrew the injunction but—who stood the cost? There had to be some cost associated with that injunction. I would presume that there are costs associated with an injunction.

Mr. Speaker, what I am trying to determine is, when the Government put the injunction on, they would incur cost naturally, but also the Compass must have incurred some cost. In withdrawing the injunction, did the Government had to settle with the Caymanian Compass or settle the Caymanian Compass bill?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I am not in a position to say if Government settled anything for the Compass. The most I can say on it [is that] matters such as this would be handled through the Legal Department and settlements would be taken care of at that level.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I did not see the document (and please allow me this) on the Internet and maybe I don't know but can the Minister say whether the document on the Internet had an address or gave an indication of where the document came from?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I have heard what the Member said. I really did not see what was on the Internet and I am not in a position to say if it had anything attached to it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The Minister indicated that there were investigations. Can he say whether this investigation covered that aspect? Presumably, someone would have gone to the Internet to see if there was an address, his ministry did an investigation as he said which came to no avail. Did they check the Internet to see if there was an address?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, what I said was that we did carry out investigations within my ministry and it was to no avail. We could not point a figure on any one individual who might have given this information to the Internet. As far as Cable & Wireless doing their check, I am not in a position to say whether they contacted the Internet or not. I know for sure, I don't think that anything like that was done through our ministry. We were looking more or less for—if there had been something within our ministry that had been leaked out and we could not come up with anything.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: This is the last that I have, sir. Since the word investigation was spoken and the Minister has said there was internal investigation, I am not clear whether the Ministry of Communications carried out an investigation, searched the Internet to see the document to see who put it on the Internet, whether that carried an address of some kind.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I cannot say anything more on it than what I have said. I know to the extent of our investigation within the ministry. I know of nothing going to the Internet or checking with the Internet. Maybe Cable & Wireless did but I have heard nothing about it.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. The House will now go into Committee to consider the Companies Management Bill, 1999.

The Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel A. Walton: Thank you, sir. On the Companies Management Bill, 1999. I wanted to move a motion to defer the Committee Report and the Third Reading on that bill until the end of business for this meeting because the amendment is not ready and it has not been circulated.

The Speaker: I think we will have to go into Committee to do it. The House will now go into Committee as I said.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 16/99

CARIBBEAN UTILITIES CO. LTD RATE INCREASE

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 16/99 entitled, Caribbean Utilities Co. Ltd. Rate Increase, which reads as follows:

"WHEREAS Caribbean Utilities Co. Ltd. (CUC) has announced another rate increase to the general public;

"AND WHEREAS at the present time Caymanians/residents alike are concerned and affected by the continual rise in the cost of living here in Grand Cayman;

"AND WHEREAS there is concern that the rate increase by CUC is not justified or warranted;

"AND WHEREAS in this day and age a guaranteed rate of return is no long justified;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government take steps to appoint a specialist in the utilities field to assist in negotiating with CUC to determine if the proposed rate of increase can be deferred or withdrawn and to attempt to negotiate a change in the guaranteed rate of return."

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 16/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In order to appreciate the present situation, I think it would be good for those of us here in the House as well as the listening public to be reminded as to where we came from with regard to the role of CUC.

Regarding the history of CUC, I recall as a boy Government owning the utilities company (that is the light company). Back in those days, many Caymanians even though we had a power plant owned by Government, lived and survived by the use of the lamp light. I also recall, Mr. Speaker, they had set rates or set schedules as far as the service was concerned, it would be on during the day I think it was, and go off around 6:30 p.m. or came on around 6:30 p.m.—I cannot remember exactly...but we had set schedules with regard to the service.

I also recall the frequent interruptions that we had with regard to the service. The plant would be down or we had some problem or the other with regard to the service. So, I believe that the Government of that day was anxious when they were approached by a group of private individuals that had an interest in purchasing and running the utility service or company here in Cayman Islands, that we now know as CUC.

I don't have the details, Mr. Speaker, as to what Government granted that service at, as far as the price, but the group was granted a franchise. In that franchise were a number of attractive incentives with respect to the group prepared to assume the utilities company and run it as a private enterprise.

Mr. Speaker, at the present time we grant concessions as far as items being brought into the country by CUC. For example, it says here, "All capital assets specified, the rate of duty is not to exceed 10 percent." The last information I have is as of 1996. Due to the custom value of those items, those capital assets were $21,555,936, which Government got $2,155,593 as far as customs duties were concerned. All consumable goods such as lubricants are charged the normal 20 percent. All goods, materials, and supplies, the rate that was charged was 15 percent. The total concessions to CUC by Government in 1996 amounted to $2,160,229.

Government has offered a number of attractive incentives to this country for providing a service here in the Cayman Islands. In addition to that, CUC under its franchise agreement is guaranteed a 15 percent minimum return annually on investment. I was thinking about this the other day. You know what I am talking about because you are a businessman like me. There can be a huge difference between a rate of return as far as a percentage and the percentage return on sales because in the case of CUC, the rate of return is based on the value of its assets—which are huge.

Mr. Speaker, that is a significant concession as far as CUC is concerned because we who are in private business, if we don't make a profit, we don't make a profit. What we do is keep trying, keep improving our management. We try increasing our market or improving our market to attract people to the business and hopefully, one day we will make a profit. But CUC does not have to concern itself with such matters because they are guaranteed under their franchise agreement a 15 percent minimum return annually on their investment.

The question and the concern that I have is that when CUC at the end of the year tallies up what it has made and comes to Government and says, 'Well, we only made 10 percent return on assets,' who does Government have on its staff or at its disposal that can look at this submission from CUC? Look at how it is calculated and be in a position on an informed basis based on experience and speciality to be able to refute or question the information or the request that CUC is putting forward to justify their specific proposed increase in rates?

Mr. Speaker, I would challenge Government to let this House know if there is such an individual or group that Government has available for this purpose. I don't think it does, Mr. Speaker. And that is one of the requests that is being put forward in this motion.

The other question is who determines what can be included in the asset base on which the return is based? Mr. Speaker, if I was CUC and I had such a lucrative return, I would throw everything in there. Maybe these are things that no longer exist. But who is in a position to confirm what assets are available, what assets qualify to be included in the base upon which this return is calculated?

In this day of openness and transparency, I think the people of this country deserve to know the rights and the conditions of this franchise agreement. Not only this one, I heard some question this morning with regard to Cable & Wireless—the same thing, Mr. Speaker. We are talking about monopolists in a country.

If the franchise agreement is a fair agreement or a contract between the two parties then what is there to hide? What is the reason for the secrecy? It would be good if the Minister who is going to reply on behalf of the Government were to give us basic information. For example, the length of the franchise agreement—whether or not there are any review clauses in the agreement. What I mean by that is where Government and CUC have the right to sit down maybe at five-year intervals say, 'let's look at what is in this agreement and see whether or not we [can] mutually agree that it is still relevant and practical or do we want to change some of these conditions to better reflect the conditions of the time'. That is something that I would also like for the Minister maybe to advise us on because it affects every citizen in this country.

I am aware that CUC accounts are published. Why is it that that information is not also available from Cable & Wireless? Why is it that their accounts are not audited annually and published? No reason! Not to my mind, Mr. Speaker.

As I mentioned before, both you and I are in business, and I know even the Minister who is going to answer on behalf of Government knows what it means to be in business. And, our rate of return is based on our efficiency, that is, how well we promote sales, how well we contain costs and the type of product/service that we make available to the public. I believe that it would be good for Government, first of all, to employ someone who has the expertise in this particular area to deal with CUC.

And I think it would be also in CUC's interest as well to come on a voluntary basis, sit down with Government. What do they have to lose? There is nothing they have to lose. See whether or not at this stage any concessions may be possible, including the guaranteed rate of return of 15 percent.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the issue of utilities in this country is one that affects every citizen. Like I said, when I was a boy most people couldn't afford it anyway so they didn't take advantage the light or the power service. Many of those people did what they had to do at night under the light of a lamp. Today, every home, every business in this country depends heavily on CUC.

I was just talking the other day to a gentleman who was about to retire and he said to me, "Mr. Jefferson, I am retiring today."

And I said, "Well, congratulations. Where are you going to be going and what are you going to be doing after this?"

He said, "Well, first of all, I am not going to be retiring in Grand Cayman because it is too expensive, I am going somewhere else."

Mr. Speaker, we boast of one of the highest standards of living of anyplace in the world here in the Cayman Islands. But another fact that we have to face up to is the cost of living in the Cayman Islands, it must also be one of the highest in the world. An essential service like that provided by CUC, every time you have an increase it affects that cost of living because if CUC adds 15 percent or 10 cents or 20 cents a kilowatt to their rates as an increase, the supermarkets and every other establishment that has that service is going to pass it on to the consumer.

So I think that we have a responsibility in this country to try as much as possible to be fair, reasonable and see what we can do to control—and even possibly reduce—the cost of living to the general public.

You know, Mr. Speaker, we also boast of being one of the richest countries in the Caribbean and probably in the world but it would frighten you (and you are aware of this, Mr. Speaker, even in your own constituency) how many people live on a fixed income. I would daresay that if Government took a policy of stopping those social services subsidies that are given to our senior citizens, many of them would probably die from starvation because a lot of them that $250 a month is basically all they have available as far as an income to support themselves.

Mr. Speaker, they are very conscientious, very responsible. They are conscious of the fact that they have to pay their light bill, pay their telephone bill but when you have limited resources, it can only go so far.

So, I also believe that from that standpoint we have to be responsible and see what we can do to contain the cost of living. The utility service is only one part of cost. What amazes me is what people are paying today by way of rent. I remember when I first got married in 1973, we rented a 3-bedroom home for three months, and we paid $150 per month. We moved from there and went to a newly constructed 2-bedroom place and we paid until I moved into my home, $135 per month.

Today, I am talking about single parents who have a child or two paying $1,200 - $1,500 a month just for rent and in order to do that they are holding two jobs and in some cases three jobs. Why? Because they want to be in a position where they can provide for their families as well as anybody else. But, Mr. Speaker, you got to have a pretty good income where you can pay $1,500 a month for the rent. Your lights is going to cost another $200 - $250. Everybody has a car—you have a car loan. It all adds up. You might say, well, people don't need all those things—Mr. Speaker, when it comes to utilities, it is a must, everyone takes advantage of the service.

It is a good service, it is a very reliable service, and I think CUC has done well to keep up with the demand here in Grand Cayman for electricity. But we have to keep the cost of this service reasonable and where the average person can continue to support and afford the service.

I have done a little research with regard to the cost of utilities around. I printed from the Internet, a particular publication on Bermuda and it says that in Bermuda the cost of utilities is one of the highest in the world. Mr. Speaker, I was not able to get the cost of it here in Grand Cayman but I would daresay that Bermuda's utilities cost is not higher than we have here in Cayman.

Mr. Speaker, I think that there are two approaches that could be taken on this particular issue. CUC could easily say, 'Gentlemen, we have another 15 - 20 years on our franchise agreement. We are going to require that Government complies with the conditions of that franchise agreement regardless of what is in that agreement.' And hope that when it comes up again for renewal that they have a sympathetic government that would extend the contract again for another 20 - 25 years with similar conditions. Or, they could, in good faith, sit down with government and look at the conditions of the agreement—especially those contentious areas, such as the rate of returns etcetera—and try to arrive on a joint basis what is fair and reasonable. It is left to see what course of action CUC takes on this matter.

I believe that (and I am not talking about this government only but any government) where you have exclusive services in a country, services such as telephone or electricity, it is the responsibility of that particular government to ensure that they have the expertise in house to effectively monitor what goes on in these particular companies. Mr. Speaker, I have not seen the franchise agreement for CUC but I remember when I was a civil servant that a senior civil servant was commissioned to go through the franchise agreement and put in layman terms what the conditions were—it was that complex.

Now, I think they are operating under a new franchise agreement since that, but I have not seen that one either. But, Mr. Speaker, these things are done by design. One of the conditions that the franchise agreement or CUC has also extended to government is to say, 'You can have a representative on the board.' Now, can you see me or some other person here in the House who are laymen in these areas making any worthwhile contribution or looking out for government interests or interests of the people on that particular board? Mr. Speaker, it is just a prestigious position to be in, to say, 'Okay, I am a Member of CUC Board,' but you are not in a position to make any worthwhile contribution.

I think Government would be very responsible for looking into the possibility of employing somebody with that kind of expertise and skills. I also believe, Mr. Speaker, that before any proposed rate increases are approved, this should be done. What happens if CUC has to wait three months or six months in order to put a rate increase in place? Do you think that is going to cause that company to shut down? I doubt it, Mr. Speaker. I really honestly doubt it.

Now, let me say that I have nothing personal against CUC or Cable & Wireless or any other company doing business in this country. As a matter of fact, I must say that I admire what they have done, that is CUC with regards to training Caymanians, with regards to promoting Caymanians, and with regards to the contributions they make financially to community, to basketball and football and all the other non-profit organisations that depend so heavily on such contributions.

They are a good company with good management, very well run, offering good service. But I think it is my responsibility and the responsibility of members in this House to ensure that the exclusive right they have to provide such a service is done in a fair, affordable and should I say justified manner.

So, Mr. Speaker, I trust that Government will see fit to accept this motion in the vein in which it is presented. It is presented strictly out of concern for the welfare of the people of this country and I await to see what Government has to say. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take the morning break. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:47 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12:11 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Before we continue with debate on Private Member's Motion No. 16/99, we will have Administration of Oaths. Mr. Bulgin, would you come forward to the Clerk's table, please? Will all honourable members please stand?

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

By Mr. Samuel Bulgin

Mr. Samuel Bulgin: I, Samuel Bulgin, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors, according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: Mr. Bulgin, on behalf of all honourable members, I welcome you to the Legislative Assembly for the time of your service. Please take your seat as the Acting Temporary Second Official Member.

Please be seated.

Does any other member wish to speak on Private Member's Motion No. 16/99? The floor is open to debate.

The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to accept Private Member's Motion No. 16/99 and I speak also on behalf of the Government. We all share a similar view on the matter and I will say that the motion is indeed timely.

However, Mr. Speaker, as all members are aware CUC's present franchise has a clause that offers a guarantee of a 15 percent rate of return to the company. I must point out that this is nothing new because this was put in place by a previous government several years ago. This is not to say that we should not endeavour to have a review of the franchise.

Mr. Speaker, a few years ago, this Government had an audit carried out to check into the company's operation, that is, CUC's operation. This exercise was carried out by a reputable company. However, it did not reveal any wrong doings by the company. I believe it was about three years ago that through negotiations between the Government and CUC, we were able to (through their assistance) hold back on an increase in rates for, I think it was a year, a year and a half.

I say that to say that over the years—at least since I have been in office and responsible for CUC—I have found the company to work along with Government and I believe that we will be able to sit down as a Government and a company, and look into the concerns which have been aired this morning by the mover of the motion. I believe that the end result will be something that will be favourable to the people of this island.

Mr. Speaker, electricity nowadays is a must. I believe that through the good services of CUC this country has moved from strength to strength. I am sure I am correct in saying that our tourism sector and financial sector would not have been what it is today, if it was not for the good service, the dependable service of electricity to the Island. With this goes a cost, but as I pointed out a while ago, I believe that through talks with the company, through the appointment of a specialist by the Government, a person who is well versed in electrical matters, as the motion is asking for, we would be able to come to some sort of agreement with the company.

I must also say that while we look at electrical rates from the point of view of being very expensive, not only should we give credit for good service but we must also give credit for the amount of good jobs, good benefits and especially the training of our Caymanian people that this company actually offers. I believe I am correct in saying that the two companies on the island who have been over many years now offering excellent training and good jobs to our people, is CUC and Cable & Wireless.

So, Mr. Speaker, the Government is pleased with the motion and from our side we are accepting it and we will do whatever possible to carry out the wishes in the motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town caught my eye first.

Dr. Frank McField: I rise to give my contribution to this Private Member's Motion, No 16/99, and to say that it is good to know that the policy of the Government is in fact to accept as many Private Member's Motions as they can. This differs from the Governments previous position of rejecting as many as they could. But being the type of person I am in terms of taking the position I take (because I have said that I would take my position based upon issues and not based upon party affiliation or team affiliation or whatever), I need to caution the Government again with regards the acceptance of motions because once they have accepted it, they need to implement the motions and if they are not implementing the motions then they are doing the people a disservice.

With regards this particular motion that says, "AND WHEREAS there is concern that the rate increase by CUC is not justified or warranted; AND WHEREAS in this day and age, a guaranteed rate of return is no longer justified. . ." the Government is agreeing to basically the principles of the motion. But if we read the motion, and I will read the motion for clarity to show that if the Government is agreeing with the motion it is important that the Government states whether or not it is agreeing with the last resolution in terms of the action of whether or not it is agreeing with the motives for the motion leading to the resolution.

It says: "WHEREAS Caribbean Utilities Co. Ltd. (CUC) has announced another rate increase to the general public;

"AND WHEREAS at the present time Caymanians/residents alike are concerned and affected by the continual rise in the cost of living here in Grand Cayman;

"AND WHEREAS there is concern that the rate increase by CUC is not justified or warranted;

"AND WHEREAS in this day and age a guaranteed rate of return is no long justified;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government take steps to appoint a specialist in the utilities field to assist in negotiating with CUC to determine if the proposed rate of increase can be deferred or withdrawn and to attempt to negotiate a change in the guaranteed rate of return."

So part of the motion is that the guaranteed rate of return of CUC be negotiated. I don't know if the Government seriously intends to do that. So we need to look at the motion, look at what they are agreeing to, look at the implications of what they are agreeing to to find out whether or not it would be realistic or it would be consistent with their political policies at the moment to do that.

Would they be differing from their past policies in going along with the specific requirements and implementation of this motion? Thereby we find that perhaps we are into a "politrick" type of situation

It is important that we look at CUC's position with regard to the August 1999 1 percent rate increase. CUC told the media, and us, that they had announced that (based upon unaudited results) it will be necessary to increase rates by 1 percent effective August 1 1999. CUC is saying that they are basing this on unaudited accounts. Why does the Government accept a Private Member's Motion to look into this when the Government should be in a position to know that CUC is basing this increase upon unaudited accounts, to talk to CUC if the Government feels that maybe this is not justified. From the very beginning, it doesn't have to come to this political arena to be looked into. So, somehow I believe that the Government's is trying to give the impression somehow that they are in agreement with what is being expressed here in this motion, when in fact what's being expressed in this motion is in direct contrast to the stated policies of the Government.

If we noticed what the Minister was saying, he was talking about the good services of CUC—the promotion and training of Caymanians. I agree with all of this. I agree that CUC has played a vital role in terms of shaping and developing our economy. But the question that the consumer has at this particular point, is to what extent should the growth of this country be on the back of the poorer people of the country.

Now, CUC has an answer to this and it is important that this be brought here and the Government who makes fifteen cents out every dollar that CUC earns should have been able to come here and show us why the Government has gone along with CUC's policies. And, if there is a need for change, why they feel that there is a need for change. You just don't agree with what Opposition is saying or what Backbenchers are saying without showing why there is a commonality in terms of positions because anybody can get up and say, 'I agree with you'. The question at the end of the day is, can they reasonably agree with the position of the Backbench with regards this position on CUC?

The Government makes fifteen cents out of each dollar. Now, if the Government is making fifteen cents out of each dollar that CUC earns then the Government has an indirect or a direct interest in maintaining their revenue. Therefore, in maintaining this kind of structured pricing, the Government is making more than CUC. Of course, they are!

You know, we find this also when we look at Cable & Wireless. How can the Government say it is representing the consumer, when the Government is also representing its desire to get a piece of that dollar to balance the budget?

I happened to have gone to CUC, Mr. Speaker, when I heard about the situation. I sat down and had a talk with those persons. They presented me with the plans. One of the things that I would like to mention in fairness to CUC, is that CUC is talking about growth and growth management. CUC is not in a position to make any statement with regards how this island grows. How this island grows will either be managed by market factors or by the Government making policies or making suggestions that will cause the island not to accelerate with regards to growth, to the extent where it begins to put the stress on the development of infrastructure. If it begins to affect the development of infrastructure then you will have CUC, Cable & Wireless and other companies putting a similar effect on the development of the infrastructure.

One of the interesting things, Mr. Speaker, with regards infrastructure...because I spoke to CUC and I said to them, "Well, why don't the companies that are responsible for infrastructure get together to decide what is a manageable amount of growth." If they are talking about an average of 13 percent growth in a country, that growth means that there must be a growth in the infrastructure. It means there has to be a growth in roads, there has to be a growth in buildings and so forth and so on.

So, we have for instance, seen in terms of infrastructural growth in 1979 that there was a production of 130, 000 tons of rock that was produced by a particular operation that supplies rocks for roads and for buildings. By 1999 (this year) it is 652,772 tons that is mined. Now, the mining of this particular rock is related to the growth of the economy. If you are not willing to manage the growth of your economy then you cannot manage the supply because the supply is based upon the demand. So if you demand more roads, if you demand more buildings, you will demand more rocks and therefore, the particular industry will relate to the specific market demands and produce more rocks as a result of it, thereby, perhaps incurring other costs in other areas.

CUC works on a similar principle that if you have more buildings being built, more people coming into the country because more hotels are going down, CUC generators have to work harder. They have to replace their equipment, they have to update their equipment, they have to extend and change the basic facilities to facilitate the growth and, therefore, they are going to charge us the price.

Now, when we brag about being the most developed country in the world, of being the most sophisticated country. We need a sophisticated and functional electricity plant, we need a sophisticated and functional telephone company, we need sophisticated functional hospitals, schools and everything. But we find at the end of the day that the average person has to pay a bigger percent for development than anybody else. One of the reasons why this is so is because there is no increase in the wages and salaries of at least 52 percent of the working people in this country.

The fact that CUC is talking about a 13 percent increase in inflation since 1995 as one of the reasons for them to increase their prices, the fact that the working person is talking about that increase and rejecting that increase because they are saying there have been no corresponding increases in their wages in salary is what we have got to talk about.

We have got to talk about this because it appears that as a result of the machinery of development going faster and faster, stress is being placed on infrastructural development, which has to take place at such a pace that does allow the infrastructural facilities to get back and return their money and re-invest it. They have to go out and borrow more money from the banks in order to keep up with this infrastructural development, which means bank interest and different things like that have to be paid. But where are the funds for this really coming from? It is coming from taking out of the pockets of the average person. The average person that is making below $1,500 a month.

Now, CUC says again that the average residential home is paying $65.28 in rates today, at the new rate which started August 1st, will only be paying $65.88, which is an increase of 60 cents per household. The residential facility that is paying $125, $126 will only be paying $126.46, an increase of a $1.20. And, the commercial that is paying $304.90 will only experience an increase of $3.00. The big business that are paying like $13,500 per month, at the moment, will only experience an increase of $150. So they are saying that there increase will not have that much of an effect on what the average person is paying.

So this is the soft sell that CUC has. It is saying 'Okay, we have to make an increase. We have to make it in order to keep up, in order to deliver the service for you that you all are so proud of but for that service you have to pay.' We all realise that we have to pay for the supply if the demand is there. But what I am concerned about is that the merchants now will go and they will use this increase to suggest somehow that there should an increase in the price that they are charging for other goods and services and that everybody has the right to increase what they charge for goods and services except for the common man.

The politicians can increase the cost. The civil servants can increase the cost for their service according to inflation, according to what is needed in order to remain at a particular surplus profit but the working person surplus, if he had any in the first place, is being dwindled away over the last 5 -10 years, simply because there is no corresponding increases in wages.

What people are saying or what I think I understand them to be saying is that they have less today than they had yesterday. And one of the reasons why they have less today than they had yesterday (on an individual basis not on a country basis) . . . they are not saying that the electricity doesn't work better, the telephones don't work better, the streets are not better and the schools are not better—they are not saying that these things are not better. But then again, they are saying that their individual pocket books have less in them today.

They are more in debt today and not just because of bad management, also because the cost has gone up. The ability of their wages to purchase for them what they want, what they choose to buy for themselves, not what Government chooses to deliver for them by way of free education or medicine or whatever but what they choose to purchase for themselves. That choice is being taken away from the individual consumer and this is what the individual consumer is talking about to a certain extent.

We can see that the Government is making fifteen cents on each dollar that CUC makes and, therefore, that dollar can then be used to redistribute in the society. That the Government can then talk about the fact that it doesn't have an active tax system because it has other ways of taking money out of the economy back into Government to redistribute. But who is paying for this? Not the commercial companies that are dependent more on the services of CUC than the little guy that might be able to turn on his lamp, or might be able to use some kind of solar energy, or might be able to use some type of an alternative energy form that he is not totally 100 percentage dependent upon electricity being supplied by one company.

What I find interesting, and this motion brings to me how Government gets involved with so many conflicts because there is so much conflict of interest that Government finds itself in. Government is on one hand a partner of CUC not as a representative of the people so much but as a bureaucracy that needs revenue to survive.

On the other hand, it wants to say that it is looking after the general good of all the people with regards the price of a consumer item. Now, we can see why Government desires to have monopolies continue to exist because the Government desires to see the continuation of the monopolist status of CUC and Cable & Wireless, has very much to do with the Government using these economic entities as a way of financing their activities, and thereby being able to give the general population the opinion or the feeling that they are not being taxed in their country. In other words, that the general population is not paying directly for the further development of their country. This is a deception!

I am saying it is time for us to see that this is a form of taxation. The ability of CUC to operate the way they have operated, the ability of Cable & Wireless to operate the way they have operated is a form of taxation. The Government is taxing the people by allowing these corporations to have the control over the consumer, which they do. That is the point.

Now, what would happen if the Government were to remove itself? The Government would lose too much revenue in the first place. Government cannot be an independent arbitrator here. The Government cannot be interested in having an independent arbitrator come in to examine the situation to make any decision. Why would the Government be interested when they are making more money from CUC? So why did they accept the motion? Why do we come to a position where we are trying to somehow... Every time I come here and I try to remove a wall so people can see, somebody comes and try to put the cover over it again.

This was my same concern when I did the motion with regards Cable & Wireless. It was a simple situation, Mr. Speaker. The Government has a vested interest in the perpetuation of the monopolist status of Cable & Wireless and CUC, for the mere fact that it provides a tremendous amount of revenue for the Government to use. Maybe in a lot of instances, we are lucky here because we don't have to spend our money on armies and embassies, this and that, and the other thing. Maybe our people do get direct benefit from that in a roundabout way. Maybe that is a good way of doing this thing. I don't know, Mr. Speaker, I am not going to make any judgements about that.

But I want to bring to the attention of this House, to the attention of the Government, to the attention of the listening public that Government cannot be serious about accepting this motion. The reason that Government cannot be serious about accepting the resolution, which is, "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government take steps to appoint a specialist in the utilities field to assist in negotiating with CUC to determine if the proposed rate of increase can be deferred or withdrawn and to attempt to negotiate a change in the guaranteed rate of return." Government cannot be serious about this.

We know that when compared to other countries the electricity prices, for instance in the December 1998 bills, in countries like the US Virgin Islands were $49.56. In the Bahamas, it was $71.88; in the Cayman Islands, $83.05; St. Vincent, $85.35; Bermuda, $91.39. We are not the highest but we are certainly not the lowest. The issue here is not so much about price because price is something that is not objective. The price could be the result of the quality of the service so I cannot say because people are paying $49.56 in the US Virgin Islands that they are better off than we are here because the quality of service there might be worse than it is here.

If I am driving a good car and the other guy is driving a not too good car that gives him a lot of trouble, then it might have been worthwhile for me to pay $20,000 for my car and not have to maintain it all the time rather than be driving around with a $5,000 car that I have to take to the mechanic each day and, therefore, the cost could be very deceptive. So we are not going to really argue price.

What we are arguing here is the situation. The situation of situational ethics. A situation whereby rather than us getting into examining, dissecting the dilemma which the Government has an institution, not the Government as individual members of the National Team or the elected government or whatever, the Government as an institution of the people. The kind of situation that the Government has an institution of the people in a growing society finds itself where it has come twenty years along the line from needing a company and needing the possibility to tie itself, to guarantee revenue for itself by guaranteeing revenue for the company because that is basically what the Government is doing.

The Government is saying we will guarantee you revenue because you will guarantee us. So we will guarantee you being able to make this profit because you will guarantee us that we will have 15 cents out of each dollar profit that you make. That was a situation that might have been convenient for us 20 - 30 years ago. The question is, today can we continue to massage ourselves with this type of incestuousness when we find, for instance, a fact that Cable & Wireless [and] CUC are becoming two institutions that are getting more flak today than Government is even.

CUC and Cable & Wireless to the general consumer, seem to be the bad guys because they are the ones that are putting up the prices rather than the Government putting up the taxes. Because the Government doesn't have to put up the taxes as long as CUC and Cable & Wireless put up the thing.

Government is manipulating to a certain extent. The people need to see how the whole thing functions; how it is not just CUC, a company from abroad; how it is not just Cable & Wireless, a company from abroad making all this money but the Cayman Islands Government as an institution participating in this mutual exploitation of the Cayman Islands people in order to achieve development within a specific amount of time.

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for a moment? It is my understanding that Finance Committee plans to convene at 2:00 p.m. I think that this would be an appropriate time that we suspend for lunch in order that we can return at 2:00 p.m. and that at the conclusion of the Finance Committee we will resume in the Legislative Assembly. Is that the agreement of the House?

The Speaker: Right! We shall suspend proceedings until the deliberations of Finance Committee have been completed.

Item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Presentation of Papers and Reports. The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

THE NATIONAL DRUG COUNCIL OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ANNUAL REPORT 1998;

THE NATIONAL DRUG COUNCIL FINANCIAL STATEMENTS SIX MONTHS ENDED 30 JUNE 1998

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I beg permission to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, the First Annual Report of the National Drug Council and the Council's Audited Financial Statement.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it? The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I must advise members of this honourable House that under the National Drug Council Law, 1997, Section 24(1), the Council "shall within six months after the end of each financial year, forward to the Minister responsible for Health, a report on the operations of the Council during that financial year along with a copy of the audited financial statements as at the close of the previous financial year."

The Minister is also required under Section 24(3) of the National Drug Council Law, "to cause copies of the Annual Report, the Financial Statements and the report of the Auditor General to be laid on the Table of the Legislative Assembly not later than 30 June following the end of the financial year to which they relate and to be Gazetted."

The National Drug Council (NDC) was officially launched in January 1998 by the Minister of Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation and a staff office for administrative support was at the same time formally handed over to the NDC. The fixed assets contained in the office premises were also transferred.

The NDC is governed by the National Drug Council Law passed by the Legislative Assembly in September 1997. The NDC was given the responsibility by the Minister of Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation for co-ordinating, implementation of the Cayman Island's National Strategic Plan for Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

In order to do this the NDC established a sub-committee structure as follows:

- NDC Prevention and Education Committee chaired by Mrs. Tessa Bodden, National Drug Council, Chairman.
- NDC Treatment and Rehabilitation Committee, chaired by Dr. Steven Pickering, National Drug Council, Vice-Chairman.
- NDC Law Enforcement and Legislation Committee chaired by the Chief Justice, the Honourable Anthony Smellie.
- NDC Finance and Statistics Committee chaired by Mr. Carlyle McLaughlin.

In addition, an administrative committee chaired by the NDC Chairman, Mrs. Tessa Bodden, was set up to oversee the operation of the National Drug Council Office on behalf of the Council.

Co-ordination of the National Strategic Plan began immediately under the direction of the NDC and its committees. The National Drug Council also began implementation of its specific obligations set out with the National Drug Council Law, and those action plans assigned to it under the strategic plan for drug abuse prevention and rehabilitation.

Additionally, the NDC began co-ordination of anti-drug efforts by government ministries and departments, private sector agencies and individuals through the extended NDC committee structure. Emphasis was given to drug education and prevention measures pertaining to young people. Immediate efforts were also directed to drug importation control measures and to drug rehabilitation policies. Broad based governmental and private sector involvement supports the NDC at every level and this has proved invaluable in the successful functioning of the NDC so far.

Mr. Speaker, this first annual report of the NDC, in fact, represents only the first six months of its operation ending the 30 June 1998. Through this medium, I extend congratulations on an excellent beginning to the Chairman, Mrs. Tessa Bodden, and all other members of the NDC and its sub-committees as well as those persons in organisations who have given freely of their time and support of the efforts of the NDC.

As required by the National Drug Council Law, 1997, Section 24(3), I shall arrange for the Annual Report and Audited Financial Statements to be gazetted. I look forward to the second annual report of the NDC, which will reflect its many achievements during the second year of operation, which just ended on 30 June this year. Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, you also wish to lay on the Table the National Drug Council Financial Statements.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I gave in both of them. Thank you.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Moving on to item number 4 on today's Order Paper. Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers. Question number 81 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 81

No. 81: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources what steps are being taken by Departments concerned to eliminate or control the discharge of effluent from "live aboards" in the areas of the Yacht Club, the Marina Club and Rackley Canal.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Sewage pollution in the marine environment is an issue of concern and has been a topic of collaborative investigation by several government agencies in recent years. As the number of commercial and recreational vessels increase and the arrival of visiting yachts grow, the problem becomes increasingly critical.

The problem is unfortunately more complex than posed in the question. Effluent discharge from live aboard vessels in the areas named does need regulation. The solution to the problem, however, includes regulation of all marine effluent discharge including commercial charter vessels and recreational vessels and in all near-shore areas such as Stingray City and George Town Harbour. A study conducted by the Department of Environmental Health and the Water Authority identified North Sound tourist charter vessels as one of the leading contributors of sewage pollution.

Given the complexity of the problem, the solution cannot be the immediate enforcement of a zero discharge policy for all vessels operating in Cayman waters; consider the repercussions to the tourism industry if that course of action is taken. A comprehensive investigation has begun involving several government agencies including the Department of Environmental Health, the Department of Environment, the Shipping Registry, the Water Authority, and the Port Authority. Consultation will be sought from the private sector including watersports' operators, marina owners, and other interested parties.

The solution will neither be immediate or inexpensive. It will involve: extensive collaboration between various agencies, revisions to several laws and new regulations, installation and maintenance of numerous shore reception facilities, retrofitting of marine sanitation devices on many local vessels and public education programmes. Although the task is difficult, we are dedicated to the preservation of the marine environment and the protection of human health. The solution to the problem of marine sewage pollution will be implemented as expeditiously as possible.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the Honourable Minister can state the nature of the negotiation with such statutory authorities as the Port Authority with regard to their role in controlling this very difficult problem?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my understanding that all parties concerned, those that I have mentioned here, have been supportive and fully participating in trying to curtail the problems. So included in that is the Port Authority who has been working quite closely along with the other departments.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In light of the importance of this issue, I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say what kind of timeframe we are going to be working with because as he is aware our tourist industry depends a whole lot on the existence of a clean marine environment?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I am not going to say as quickly as possible, but what I would say is that we are going to press forward to try to have something done, at least in the coming year.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say if there are any interim measures that can be introduced at this stage until the whole situation can be looked at, to at least reduce the problem at the present time?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my understanding that the departments mentioned here have been working quite closely with the operators in the waters and encouraging them, for example instead of dumping this effluent in the water to do so when they come ashore and I think some of them have been co-operating with it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Given the answer that the Minister has read, no real reference has been made with regards to having dumping stations provided for these vessels. Mention was made about retrofitting some of the vehicles but that still doesn't alter the fact that there will need to be dumping stations. So while the answer doesn't address it, I am wondering if the Minister could make any comments in this area as this will be a vital part of the solution.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my understanding that this is one of the areas that the different departments have been concentrating on, trying to identify various areas that would be suitable to facilitate the operators of these small boats. The reason I said that some of them will have to be refitted is my understanding that some of them were not constructed to hold that much and that is why I mentioned that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister also state if, bearing this in mind, this might prod the government to move quickly with what it has to do with regard to the private member's motion addressing the public open space down by the SafeHaven Project? It is my understanding that the Port Authority does intend to provide such a facility there once the land is vested with it.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I believe that what the Member has said is correct. I think that the government will do whatever is necessary to assist the parties concerned so that we can have facilities in areas such as he has mentioned.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state what action has been taken thus far since the government accepted that private member's motion regarding vesting the property with the Port Authority?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my understanding that some agreements have been met between the Port Authority and the Government with regard to the vesting of it, so it is in train.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In the developments mentioned in the question, that is the SafeHaven, Rackley Canal . . . I wonder if Honourable Minister can say whether or not he is aware since they are marinas that one of the planning requirements for approval would have been that they would have to have a sewage hook-up or like the First Elected Member from George Town mentioned, a dumping station?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my understanding that this is the situation but we have to realise that at least two of marinas are somewhat old and I don't think that these regulations were in place at time. But these are matters which will have to be brought in by the group that is actually looking at it now and it is very good and very important question.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If there are no further supplementaries that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Moving on to item number 5 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Continuation of debate on Private Member's Motion No. 16/99, Caribbean Utilities Co. Ltd. Rate Increase. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town continues his debate.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 16/99

CARIBBEAN UTILITIES CO. LTD. RATE INCREASE

Dr. Frank McField: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It becomes clearer and clearer to me each day that the government must develop policies that are precise and consistent, and that are published so that the general population for whom these policies are made have an idea of what the position of their government is.

I feel that with regard to the private member's motion, which deals with the CUC rate increase, that the government in accepting the motion has only confused the general population. The government knows that its position cannot clearly be that of the mover and seconder of this motion and the others who will be supporting this motion. Because of the existing contractual agreement with CUC, they have to have a different position.

The resolve part of the motion says, "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government take steps to appoint a specialist in the utilities field to assist in negotiating with CUC to determine..." The government is saying that it will accept a specialist to assist them with negotiating with CUC, to determine if the proposed rate of increase can be deferred or withdrawn. The rate has already started 1st August. Now, probably they will be looking towards withdrawing it. I don't think that we will see the Government wanting to withdraw and I don't think that the last part of this resolve (which means that the government negotiates to change the guaranteed rate of return) will be negotiated.

I made the point yesterday that the government has a vested interest in the profitability of CUC—not just as a supplier of electricity but as a supplier of revenue to the government. The government derives its revenue from CUC and thereby uses CUC as it uses Cable & Wireless as a form of indirect taxation on the people.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the CUC has put out a brochure in its Annual Report 1998 and it says, "Where your dollar went—fuel and oil. Our generators consume an average of 52,000 gallons of fuel and 460 gallons of lube oil each day to meet electrical demand. We spent 20 cents of the dollar on that."

"Duty to Government on the fuel and materials in 1998 amounted to over US$12 million, that is, 15 cents out of their dollar."

"Labour and materials, our dedicated staff and well-maintained equipment provide a safe and reliable electricity service—that cost them 22 cents."

"Loans and loan interest. During the year 1998, $8.4M was paid in interest and principal payments on the loans and preference shares—10 cents of the dollar."

"Capital expenditure in order to meet the new demands, $19.9M was spent on the plant expansion, upgrading the transmission and distribution system and connecting 871 new customers—24 cents was spent on this."

"Dividends. Approximately 60 percent of our shareholders are residents in the Cayman Islands. They receive quarterly dividends on their investments—9 cents was spent."

Out of each dollar that CUC spent in 1998, the government got 15 cents. So let us be realistic, let us not mislead the public. Let us take up the position that we must take up, explain the position. If the government feels that this is a viable, more desirable way of taxing its citizens then it should explain the position to the general population rather than trying to merge their policies with the politics of the Backbench for the sake of expediency.

We see this happening over and over again. In Question Time we just had the First Elected Member from George Town ask what happened to the private member's motion with regard to the SafeHaven property. I have asked what happened to the private member's motion regarding the health insurance scheme for government. What happened to the private member's motion with regard to the Road Fund? What happened to all of these private members' motions?

Government has developed a new politics—which is politricks—because it says that since the basic population has been saying that the government will not accept the good ideas of the backbench, the government seems now to be accepting all the ideas of the backbench in order to merge everything. But that's confusion. Politics has to have a division line. We have to take sides in order to expound and in order to reveal the substance and the contents of the issues at hand.

We are not just a people who take opinions from the public or consensus from the public. We also help to form consensus by our deliberations with regard to issues that the country is facing.

So the issue here to me is, yes, CUC is a monopoly. Yes, Cable & Wireless is a monopoly that is charging now for megabytes to unload from websites that they have to pay nothing for. People are complaining about that because they believe that is heightening the prices in a very unethical manner. But the government is going to get a part of the profits of Cable & Wireless at the end of the day. So if Cable & Wireless is really over-charging the people, the government has a conflict of interests.

On the one hand, they say that they are a regulatory body and they are the group of people, the institution that is interested in good infrastructure. On the other hand, they are the group of people who want to have a taxation system—without saying that that taxation system exists. So they want to have a taxation system and policy that is totally mystifying but a taxation system that hurts the poorer people. In all cases, it burdens those persons who have children, who have families who are at the lower income bracket of our society. We have at the end of the day, a taxation system in this country regardless of whether or not we want to accept it.

When CUC is putting up the prices, it's the taxes going up. A lot of times we understand that when government puts up its duties, its fees, other companies do the same thing. We can see a direct correlation between government revenue and the price the consumer pays in this country.

It is my contention that [with] the acceptance of this motion government needs to get up and explain what they mean when they say they accept this motion. When they say it is a valid motion and it deserves consideration by them, they need to get up and make this a little bit clearer to us. They need to get up and tell us, if they made US $12M from CUC last year, how much did CUC make? With the guaranteed 30 percent did they make $24M and the government $12M? And if so, what's the direct relationship? Why would government be able to go to CUC and negotiate if it stands to benefit almost equally as do the shareholders of CUC? This is where the government is finding itself all the time—a conflict of interests.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to just correct that. It's the guarantee for the 15 percent on their investment. So it would look like the government and CUC are tied in terms of who makes what profit. So, who are victims? Not the government. Not the bureaucracy. Because if the bureaucracy had to find other sources of money rather than taxing the consumers or taxing by way of consumption, the bureaucracy would have some problems re-adjusting itself. It prefers to continue to tax, tax, tax by way of consumption.

So the consumption tax, which is what CUC does . . . it levies that 15 percent for government on us the consumers. When CUC is saying at the end of the day that they need more money because there is more demand, they had 871 new customers in 1998 alone . . . It goes to show the great boom in this country and the expansion is on the back of the poorer classes of people because that is where it really is—they are paying for it. CUC is saying, 'We need to take more money from you in order to fuel this expansion' . . . who did they take it from? They took it from the poorer classes of people in the country!

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for a moment? I understand very clearly the point you are making but my notes tell me that you have repeated this seven times. Please move on with another issue.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I think it's time that I move on to another issue. I am sorry if you seem to be bored by that point. I know we have to get our business finished but I think it is a very important point to labour.

The Speaker: But you have repeated it seven times.

Dr. Frank McField: So, I don't really have much more to say because I had the opportunity of speaking yesterday and I just wanted to bring that point back to the public's attention. I know it's a hard point especially for the emergent classes in this country but I continue to say that it is time that the government of this country pay more attention to the kinds of affect that their policies are having on the poorer classes of people in this country.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, as seconder of the motion, I of course support it. Having been one of government's three representatives on the CUC Board, I do know some of what they do. I cannot say I know all of it because I was not privileged to too much, and certainly I do know about their training policy and we all know about the good service they give. As government's representative there (you are not CUC's representative) . . . I better say, I am no longer on that board since I resigned from Executive Council.

The current CUC licence was agreed with government over a period of time stemming from 1977 to 1986. The first revision occurred in 1977 and involved a new fuel price adjustment clause. The fuel clause is standard and provides for the automatic passing on of fuel price increases and decreases to the consumer. This represented the first amendment to the original licence signed in 1966 between the Cayman Islands Government and a Kentucky group of investors who purchased the company and its licence to operate the utility.

Another group of investors purchased the company in 1976, correctly 96% of the ordinary shares. At this point, the company was in sad shape with over one island wide power outage per month and 35% of their installed generating capacity was off-line due to lack of spares. The plant and line crews were excellent. The staff was excellent but they lacked the tools to apply their trade. Nevertheless new money was injected and the electric utility service improved correspondingly over the following years.

I don't think anybody can quarrel that we don't have a good service, albeit there are certain things that happen at times that we have a lot of complaints about.

After the fuel adjustment clause was implemented, a return on asset formula was agreed by government. This formula was the product of discussions and negotiations [among] Executive Council with Captain Charles Kirkconnell, who had the responsibility for Public Works and Utilities, CUC, and a United Nations Utility Consultant, Mr. Bradberry.

The company was allowed to earn a 15 percent return on average assets for the year. More specifically, the asset base included all plant and equipment on a depreciated basis, a working capital allowance, and an allowance for fuel inventory not to be more than six weeks.

The numerator of the equation is represented by net profit after all expenses, including depreciation, but before interest expense. This agreement seemed to work reasonable well for many years and in 1996, Caribbean Utilities Company's licence was extended under the same return formula, the fuel adjustment factor for another 25 years.

Mr. Speaker, lets say back in the early 60s and 70s, it was necessary for the country to get that kind of agreement. It was necessary because we were just getting off the ground in our development. So concessions probably were necessary to attract reliable companies. But as I said back in 1986, I was only two years then a member of the House, I didn't feel that they needed to give 25 years. Anyway, the business climate is as such today that we should be able to pick, choose, and refuse to get the best for the country.

Mr. Speaker, the introduction of a fuel factor in the late 1970's when the price of diesel went from US $.53 per imperial gallon to US $1.30 did not include any duty at the time. However, government (as we have heard) currently charges $0.50 per gallon of diesel fuel purchased. The fuel clause does not attract a profit and simply passes on increases and decreases to the public. This basic 15 percent return formula seemed reasonable, as I said, when it was introduced especially in view of the prevailing interest rates at the time.

Certificates of deposits at the time, for instance, were earning over 18 percent and short-to-medium term bank loans were, of course, higher than this.

The situation, today, Mr. Speaker, is very much different as Caribbean Utilities Company can borrow longer term money at 8 percent to 8.5 percent to purchase equipment and on which a 15 percent return is allowed plus a 5 percent depreciation allowance for fixed plant and hire for vehicles.

On the positive side, this has permitted CUC to raise reasonably priced equity and debt capital. On the negative side, our people, the consumers, all of us have been subsidising a 6 - 7 percent spread. That is the difference between the company's cost of borrowing and other cost of capital, and the allowable return.

For instance Mr. Speaker, a normal North American electric utility adjusts the allowable return in relation to the annual average weighted cost of money to the utility and the permitted return is determined by a public board based on a very detailed and costly rate case submission made by the company.

Mr. Speaker, although CUC's return formula operated reasonably well and has provided probably the best and most reliable service in the Caribbean basin area, it could be subject to abuse. My reason for making this statement is that the large spread between the company's allowable return and the cost of financing would encourage additional investment in new equipment to replace older but still reliable equipment, which is carried on the company's books at a value net of depreciation. That was some of the problem I had while I was on the board and passed on these to government as I know the other two members did, Mr. Walton and Mr. Phillip Barnes.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, a 15 percent return plus a 5 percent depreciation allowance on a new, say, $5M generator creates more earning for the company than would a 15 percent return on an older equivalent unit, which has been depreciated down, to say, $1M. The formula that the Executive Council at the time agreed on encourages the company to constantly invest in new generators, lines, vehicles, buildings and so on, and to correspondingly dispose of older units. This should provide a higher level of service and dependability—and it has, as all of us have said. But it certainly comes at what I think is a high additional cost to our people, even after taking into account the additional maintenance expense associated with the older units. This is the problem that I have with those things plus the 25-year period.

Mr. Speaker, we hear that they have a watertight agreement. While we say that, the cost of living is already too high and everybody is feeling the pinch. Electrical bills, while CUC says they are not the highest in the region, they are very high for this country and for some people. Government ought to move on this aspect of it.

Now, I am not going to get into any argument about why government charges CUC a fee. I will say, Mr. Speaker, that I think government should get something out of the monopolies, but they should ensure that what they get is not taken out of the poor people. Mr. Speaker, the cost of living is not going down in this country; wages in certain sectors while they have been risen in this House have not risen correspondingly in the private sector and, in particular in what I call the casual labour force.

Tourism is down, that means that those poor people are already having it hard in the hotels and condo industry with small salaries and less gratuities. Those in the restaurants, for instance, will make less salary, and with the increase, no merchant is going to accept more cost and not pass it on and here again the people will pay more. It is all a trickle down effect. While it is 1 percent on your direct bill, it goes on to a company that pays $25,000 - $30,000 a month or, let's say more than that per month. You can see that that company would have a big increase and, therefore, in such things as retail stores it is going to added on and our people bear the brunt of it.

The poor people feel the pinch because the economy is down in their sectors, the hotel and tourism sector, so their take-home pay is less. Gratuities are down and we hear that some of them are still not paying all that they should be paying because they are paying whom they shouldn't be paying. I don't know what is being done about that. So the poor man's pay is less. He is hit from anywhere because when he goes into the stores he has got to pay more there. Hit from all sides!

Mr. Speaker, this specialist that we are asking for, should be in all utilities. Not just CUC [but] should be in all utilities to look at what is happening in terms of essential services provided to the country in order to ensure that we are getting the most efficient service for the most reasonable price. As a good example of why there should be re-negotiation is the Water Authority and I speak also because I was Chairman of the Board and Minister responsible, and have some knowledge about the running of the Water Authority.

The Water Authority for some time realised the need to upgrade the existing sewage facility and we know that that is an essential service in certain aspects of the country. But due to financial considerations, the upgrade has not yet been fully implemented due to the fact that the Water Authority has to find the most cost effective manner to do this upgrade, which is necessary to maintain an infrastructure equivalent to the needs of our development.

I am sure if the Water Authority had been guaranteed a 15 percent return by way of a rate increase that system would have been completed a long time ago. I am only using that as an example.

Mr. Speaker, in light of the vast technological advances that have been gained in our world, a thought should be given to the possibility that a monopoly existence is not necessarily in the best interest of our country in terms of utility companies and the service they provide.

The conference [24th Conference of the Caribbean, the Americas and the Atlantic Region of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association] had some discussion on this. But when you read and when you listen to the news and you hear what is happening in the region, even when you look to England and see what the British telecommunications are doing, we have to sit up and take notice. The government would be foolish not to because (And I am not going to be long on this, Mr. Speaker) . . .

What is happening from what I can gather is that all of those countries are saying that it is better for us to have some sort of back-up service. For instance, if Cable & Wireless went down completely, then who would provide service? We know what [would] happen and whether we can say that we only have room for one electrical company, I don't know if we can say that about the other large utility company, Cable & Wireless. I don't want anybody to get the impression that Cable & Wireless has not provided a good service or that it did not do training because for a time in this country they were the only ones that expended vast sums of money to do so. But what I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that the time has come for the country to take note of the vast increase in technology.

We have all sorts these different companies today—MCI, ITT . . . and you go right down the line. All sorts of technological advances that can assist the country and while we love Cable & Wireless we have to think about the country first.

So, Mr. Speaker, Caribbean Utilities Company negotiated an agreement in the best interest of the people they answer to—that is, their shareholders. The question must be whether the government negotiated the best deal possible for their shareholders—that being the people of these islands. And so, it is timely that we look at this.

As you have been here some 20 years yourself, Mr. Speaker, you know that this discussion is not new. We have spoken about this over and over and especially it comes to light whenever there is a rate increase on the one hand for CUC. But now Cable & Wireless is constantly in the news about what's happening, and so we no longer can say it only comes once a year or once every five years. These problems face us every day now and I would hope that government would use this opportunity to get a specialist that is going to deal all around and look at the whole situation.

As to why we bring a private member's motion, well, we will see what they do now. They accept the motion and I heard what member said that the government is accepting motions because that is the "politricks" of the day. Well, we shall have to do what we can as representatives to keep them in line to make them do their job. But we brought a motion because we saw a need. That's why motions are brought, and every member in the House brings motions at time. It is not to talk frivolously or to attack government; it is to discuss a matter such as this.

And so I don't think any member should cry foul because there is a private member's motion that someone else brings. I think it is a good motion, it is certainly a good opportunity for government to get the ball rolling now to do something. They have to act and they have to act fairly and squarely, and they should not mislead the House about any of the matters. They should not duck the questions. They should answer these things with the purpose and intent necessary to get the job done for our people. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Time is an important commodity here. (Pause) I cannot wait too much longer.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This motion has been the subject of quite a bit of debate but I would like to deal (without getting into the politics of it) with some of the facts of the situation. The first one is that CUC operates under franchise which I understand was given back during the 1984 - 1988 . . . I think. It was given, I believe, for 25 years. I have not been able to get a copy of this, unfortunately. But there is a franchise that was granted by an earlier government and it was not a government that I was in so I don't know a lot of the details.

But the first fact is that there is a contract. That contract is a franchise which gives CUC the exclusive right to generate electricity subject to the law, and I believe there are certain exemptions either maybe in the franchise or the law where you can't permit, say, a private house or a private development or some type of development to do their own electricity. That has, I think, rarely been used, if at all. But what it does not do is to give a second utility company a right to set up in competition the CUC so that is the first problem with this type of franchise.

The second one is—and I think there was confusion on this with the Fourth Elected Member for George Town but, at least, someone who mentioned that government gets 15 percent of the profits of CUC . . . that's not correct. The 15 percent, which is on a formula based, I understand (because like I said we were not in the government when this was done) on the Federal Power Commission of the United States. It allows to the investors, the shareholders, a fixed rate of income of 15 percent per annum based on that formula. Now, that doesn't necessarily mean 15 percent of the net or gross income because it is a formula that is used in the United States for controlling the price of utility companies.

So the government, as I understand it, does not get 15 percent of the profit at all. In fact, government, I think gets practically nothing. I think they only get a franchise fee—I don't know if this is annual or whether it was original or not but definitely they do not get a percentage of the profit. So there is no incentive for government, as was alleged, not to strive to keep rates low.

The only area that the government would receive anything would be from, I guess, whatever was imported such as fuel. But I believe that some of the machinery, at least in the early stages, was also allowed to come in duty free. So it is wrong to say that government would be influenced by some large fee that it is getting—that is not correct. The 15 percent on the Federal Power Commission formula goes to the shareholders, of which some are Caymanians—a small amount of shares. And, the others are held by non-Caymanians I would think.

The rate of return . . . and we have to understand this. The motion quite correctly refers to negotiating with CUC to determine if the rate increase can be deferred, withdrawn, or an attempt to negotiate a change in the guaranteed rate of return. They do have now, as I said, a franchise, a fixed contract. If that is to be altered, sir, then it has to be altered through negotiations with their consent. If we as a government do anything that is in breach of that franchise, we are liable to be sued and to have to pay damages for it—that's the first thing I want to point out.

So it is not a matter of this government or any government in the future going to CUC and just unilaterally of our own accord saying, 'Change the rate of increase or don't take the rate of increase'. CUC has to agree to anything which they change within the written franchise agreement. If they don't agree, sir, then if we are going to honour that contract, there is nothing that we can do. We can talk to them and we have talked to them, we continue to talk to them and I know the Minister has set up . . . and there has been correspondence and everything on this.

Also, the government has had a right under the old franchise, I believe they have same right here, to putting in 1 - 3 directors or something. I know the First Elected Member for West Bay was a director for four years as government's representative on it. This is another way that CUC can be influenced.

POINT OF CLARIFICATION

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker. If the Minister would allow . . . Two other persons for government and I—Mr. Walton (the Deputy Financial Secretary) and Mr. Phillip Barnes, an accountant.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes. So we have a right to three. I thank the Member for stating that. So that is another way in which some influence can be brought on CUC.

Mr. Speaker, I guess the reason behind doing the franchise, when it was down 12 - 14 years ago, was to have in mind that also imposed under that franchise, sir, is that a certain level of quality of electricity has to be kept. And in fairness to CUC, they have provided a good electrical supply. I don't think any of us who have been into other countries, especially in the Caribbean with the many outages, we do have a good electricity supply but we are paying a high price for it. So with the guarantee of the quality of service, in it the franchise as also guaranteed the rate of return.

But it restricts the return to that 15 percent on that formula so that they are not permitted to just increase that to 25 percent, that would need government's approval. Same as if that was to be reduced to 10 percent, it would need CUC's approval. I guess what I am trying to get through here, sir, is that there is a legally binding contract made by a previous government which this government has to honour. Within that contract, we can endeavour to negotiate and induce or get CUC, either through the ministry or also the influence that our three directors would have on that Board . . . Even though I should point out, sir, that as a fact they are a minority on the Board, they are obviously not a majority.

So I think, sir, that the motion is good. I think the motion has set out the way this has to be dealt with, which is what was dealt with in the past, which is to negotiate with CUC. Now, when that franchise comes to an end, it is very important that the government that is then in power—it is at that stage that a total revision of the franchise can be done because obviously it is at an end and there will be negotiation before it ends to renew it. Whether there have an option to renew or not, I don't know about that. If there is an option to renew then probably may not be any extend of negotiations depending on what the renewal carries with it. But it is at a time when the franchise is at a end, the government then, as the government back in the mid 1980's or whenever this was signed would have done, they then have a right to re-negotiate the new terms of it.

So, I agree that it is obviously affecting the cost of living. Government would rather not see a rate increase. Government would also continue to negotiate in many areas that we feel we may be able to get CUC to agree to changes. What obviously the government cannot do or should not do is, is to just go in and break the contract—that would be bad, I think, speaking personally. If that was done, I think it would have to be done through legislation in this full House.

Internationally to break major contracts is something that doesn't go down well anyhow and nobody is proposing that. But what I am saying is that while the franchise stands, the government and CUC are bound to live within it and if our directors on the board, as well as ourselves whatever we can do to keep the rate as low a rate as possible and to ensure, which is also our duty that there is strict compliance with the franchise then we will continue to do that. But until the franchise is up and a new one has to be negotiated.

I believe that getting changes in major terms in it will be difficult to do because obviously it is not something that CUC will agree to easily. But once, again, we will talk and negotiated with them and also, I think, the time has come because the last specialist we appointed was several years ago to look at this. We will get that again as the motion has called for and based on that, we will look at the recommendations...

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That person came from the United States, as I remember it, where he had experience in auditing power companies. Because in the franchise I specifically remember . . . you know it has areas relating to like inventory, to the reserve power, the extra amount of producing capacity that they have to keep, which guarantees a continuous supply because the peak hour...

Also, he did a complete look at the company at that stage and gave us advice and I would have thought before the franchise was signed this last time that the government then probably did the same thing. But I should say that annually an auditor does certify that the rate of increase is justified under the franchise—I need to make that clear so that expert is always in place. The formula comes from the auditors or a firm of accountants, rather, who will say that the rate of increase is justified or not justified under the franchise. If it is justified then obviously they have the right to do so.

So I believe that the motion is good and I am sure that it will be carried out, an expert specialist in that area will be brought in and we can then look at what the review brings about. Government can do really nothing more than that at this stage. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The floor is opened to debate. The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just rise to say that I give this motion my full support because I feel that it is a good motion and something needs to be done. I hope that government will see to it and get whatever can be got at the best for the country. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The floor is opened to debate. (Pause) This is the last call. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, in all fairness to all concerned I think that it is only right and proper for all members of this honourable House to support the motion regarding the CUC rate increase. Perhaps I will be dealing with it from end to beginning rather than beginning to end, but, first of all, I want to make a few comments on what the last speaker from the government mentioned so that he doesn't start thinking right away . . . He doesn't have to worry, I am not necessarily going to disagree with comments that he made.

The first thing that I want to talk about is where the motion calls for government to take steps to appoint a specialist in the utilities field to assist in negotiating with CUC, to determine if the proposed rate of increase can be deferred or withdrawn and to attempt to negotiate a change in the guaranteed rate of return.

Mr. Speaker, acting on behalf of the people of this country, I would certainly say that if any positive results can come from such action it would be an ideal situation. If the government has the will to deal with this, then perhaps the government should take a serious look at what type of expertise it wishes to draw on bearing in mind the results that it wishes to achieve.

Now, if I played devil's advocate and said that I am CUC, there is not much at this point in time (and the minister has said this) that I would be willing to give with regard to the guaranteed rate of return. While I am no expert in this area, because of the phenomenal rate of growth that the country has enjoyed (although that too is not showing its prices) it means naturally that the demand for the provision of electricity has also proportionately increased for the supplier. As a result of that obviously the rate of capital investment in the equipment to provide this amount of electricity has also increased.

If we want to try to be fair, we can understand that certain things have been happening out of the norm. But you see, Mr. Speaker, in the line of arguments that have come forward, I think one of the big questions with the formula that has been talked about is exactly how is this rate of return calculated. And I am not going to get into that because at this point in time, I don't believe that I have the knowledge to go through a debate in that area to bring about a conclusion in my mind, I just don't have that knowledge at this point in time. But I believe that that would be the crux of the matter. And, I believe that determining exactly what that position is will decide whether or not there is any room for negotiations.

Now, needless to say, the points that have been brought out by other members are things that are noteworthy. One of the things that government must always be conscious of... And here we go again. I am going to do the best I can not to be repetitious but I going to probably need to draw on some things that may have been said before to try to make certain points. When I say that the government always needs to be conscious of certain things, the point that the First Elected Member from West Bay brought out is certainly a valid one.

Because of our system which does not call for direct taxation, the government finds itself in a position where it naturally leans toward duties on imported products and, again, we all know it is in that area that the majority of recurrent revenue is gained by the government.

Now, having established that, the downside of that is while government collects a direct revenue from the time the goods are imported into the country, by the time those goods are distributed by the importer and they reach the consumer, the amount of duty that the government collects is multiplied hundred fold in some instances, I would say. And the consumer actually pays (to talk the old time language) umpteen times more than what actually government gets. So in effect, for instance with CUC, if the government charges 50 cents a gallon duty on diesel, CUC has a fuel factor which is put into the Bill to the consumer.

Now, that is your first lick as a result of government needing money to operate. To provide the services for the people of the country the Government charges this duty. Then when that happens, CUC naturally in working their formula has to lay off those charges to their customer. If it ended there, it wouldn't be so bad but CUC customers are everyone—the grocery store, the dry cleaners, everybody. So the person at the end of the chain, the last link in the chain—which is the consumer—gets the multiplier effect and by the time the consumer pays the final price, you would almost wonder if it wasn't better for the government to work out how many people there are in the country and whatever the total is they get from CUC, they just divide it amongst the people and say, 'Here, pay this for us one time,' and then they don't have to worry about it.

I know it doesn't work like that—I know that. I am just trying to show the realities of what our system makes us have to live with and no one can tell me that it works exactly in the proportions that it should—it can't. If you have a supermarket that is selling 4,000 different types of goods on the shelves for instance, their increase in electricity—how can they work it out that it be exact amongst those goods? It is not going to happen. It doesn't happen! And you know they are not going to work it out to be any less. So I am not blaming anyone, I am just simply saying that this is the way the circumstances work out.

Now, having established all of that, the onus is on government at all times to create the balance with being able to provide the services that are demanded by the public, [and also] to provide and at the same time balancing the methodology used to create the revenue that they must provide the services for. A lot of people don't really take the time out to fully understand the full circle that the whole thing goes.

When the country demands the services from the government, the government has to sit and try to determine how it is going to get revenue to provide those services for the country. But at the end of the day, the country and the people who demand those services have to pay right back for the services that the government provides. Of course, by the time it is all over, they pay several times over the value of the services provided. It is a fact.

Now, while this may not seem totally relevant to the issue at hand, the point that I wish to make about that is while government has to balance this act, the truth of the matter is government has to be looking in the wider perspective now for down the line as to how they are going to deal with these issues because that franchise will come to a conclusion.

I wasn't going to speak and I will come to real reason why I want to speak. What kind of got me off a little while ago, Mr. Speaker, is when the Minister said, "We cannot basically do anything now until that contract is up and then we re-negotiate." Now, I am not going to stand here to try to tell the Minister what to do, but for government to take that position, in my view, is a seriously retarded thought process. And as I am reminded, if that is the view they are taking then what is the sense in accepting the motion. But it is not about getting into CUC being the bad guys, that is not the whole point.

The fact of the matter is, the genesis of the motion, as I understand it, came from a desire to give some relief to the consumer because the cost of living is high. And at the end of the day any help that can be given with regards to lightening the load for the consumer is a responsibility that we all share.

Mr. Speaker, so that I don't have to go around in circles, let me tell you what I really believe—I am going to tell you how it really is. Time and time again, over and over, private member's motions have come from this side of the House and have been accepted by the government and you don't hear or see tidily-squat as a result.

It is easy for the government to accept and the word that the First Elected Member for West Bay used 'and pontificate' on motions by wanting to act in concert with concerns of the backbench. But, by the time it finishes doing all of that, it is almost as if the file is closed, the drawer is locked and that is the end of the story.

Now, perhaps, it may seem to be unfair of me to stand from this side of the fence and (as the Minister for Education would term it) cast aspersions and make accusations. But, Mr. Speaker, why I say that is purely on experience. And you have been here longer than I have. And I won't ask you to nod or deny but I know you know what I am saying is true. I know that but anyway having said that the real point is when motions like these are accepted, I would like to believe that at the end of the day no matter what the result is that the government is prepared as a matter of simple courtesy—which is something it has not done in the past—to come back to us and say, 'Well, ladies and gentlemen, this is what transpired. This is the gist of what occurred and basically this is the result.'

You know, I remember one of my first encounters in this honourable House with Mr. Haig Bodden, God rest his soul. He said, "If you want something to die, put it to a select committee." And I am sure he was talking about his own experiences with select committees. But perhaps that thought needs to be extended. If you really want something to go nowhere, get government to accept a private member's motion!

[Laughter]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Sometimes I may seem a bit harsh, but it is not with disrespect. Sometimes I feel the need to deal with it like that because that might shake them up enough so that we might start to see some results. And, I am not changing the thought about what I might not know goes on because I don't deal with it day to day. If they don't come back and tell us, we cannot know and that is what they have not been doing. So, we have to work on the premise that nothing is done. If they want us to change our minds about that, then deal with us and let us know what happens whenever something happens or when it doesn't happen and why it didn't happen.

You know, Mr. Speaker, you hear us talking about transparency and accountability, I really pray to God that that message can be absorbed like how a sponge takes in water. Whenever we get to the point where that is the way the government functions, there would be no need for all of this back and forth arguing.

I was to pass a little joke about a file that was just handed to me. But I am not going to bother with that because it was done in the right spirit and I don't want to make that seem the wrong thing. That was really just a joke.

But the point I wish to make (and it is nothing to do with individuals) is that I honestly believe that some people . . . you know, like you walk into a bedroom and the bed is in a certain position and you almost believe that is the only way you can lie down; that you cannot move the bed if the breeze is coming from a window that is in a different position. The way we do things is not because how we found it means that it must stay like that.

[Inaudible Interjection]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Anyway, so as not to prolong the issue Mr. Speaker, let me just say that I support this motion. And let me seriously hope that the government is prepared to act on the motion having accepted it and within a reasonable amount of time come back to this Legislative Assembly, for the benefit of members and for the benefit of the wider public, so that the public will understand if anything happens, what has happened and what didn't happen and why it didn't happen. Let us see if by chance we can get a different way of them doing business. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) If no other member wishes to speak, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, let me start by saying thanks to all honourable members who spoke on this motion for their valuable contributions. I think the message that came through loud and clear from all was that there is a general concern among all members with regard to the cost of living, the cost of utilities and a need for some type of control as far as these franchises or monopolies are concerned.

Mr. Speaker, I did ask the honourable minister to maybe provide some general information with regard to the franchise agreement. He was unable to do that because he did not have access to it at the time. I think his Permanent Secretary is away and has that information. But for the general public, I think it is important for us to kind of let them know as much as possible what is contained in the franchise agreement.

The franchise agreement, according to information I have, started in 1966 and has been renewed and revised since that. The latest one was licence issued on January 17, 1996 amended by the supplementary license executed on October 16, 1989 and further supplementary license executed in 1994 for 25 years. So according to my calculation, the present franchise agreement will be up in the year 2014. Not a whole lot of time left, Mr. Speaker.

Like I said, I appreciate all the contributions that have been made. But I would just like to basically maybe speak to some of the comments made by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

The mover (which is me) and the seconder (the First Elected Member for West Bay) both recognise that at the present time government is bound under a franchise agreement. This government is no different from any other government before them in honouring whatever commitments are in place with regard to such contracts. What this particular motion calls for is for the possibility of government and CUC sitting down in good faith on a voluntary basis in a spirit of co-operation, in a spirit of determining whether or not before the year 2014 when this franchise agreement comes up for renewal, there is any possibility of any concession as far as the consumer is concerned.

When I was in the civil service back in 1977 - 1978—and I think the Unity Team Government was in power—I recall (and I mentioned it in my opening remarks) that there was a call for a review of CUC's franchise agreement. The economist of the day, Mr Jimmy Hunter, was commissioned to carry out this exercise.

It is also my information that, that that particular government also brought in a United Nations expert in power utilities recruited to study the situation. His name was Mr. J. J. Bradberry, an Englishman. What his review determined is that returns or profits of CUC over the previous ten years, in some instances had amounted to as high as 27.5 percent. It was all done based on the correct formula.

As a result of that exercise, there were certain changes that were made to the licence. Unfortunately, it also, I guess as a concession, brought about the 15 percent guaranteed rate of return on assets. Mr. Speaker, what was interesting was that... I am reminded that was 21 years ago that this particular investigation was carried out.

What was also one of the recommendations of this particular expert, Mr. Bradberry, was that there should be created a Utilities Commission which would be government's watchdog and regulator of both CUC and Cable & Wireless—the two monopolists that operate in this country.

Mr. Speaker, like I said before, that was 21 years ago that the need was recognised for such a body or such expertise. My motion is calling for government to once again make available to themselves not on an interim basis but on a permanent basis as part of their establishment, a person or persons with the expertise to be in a position to advise government properly when they are dealing with these two monopolists, that is, Cable & Wireless and CUC.

Mr. Speaker, when this motion was tabled (which was back in May, I guess) CUC had just announced its proposed increase that was supposed to take effect from the 1st August 1999. We are now dealing with the motion on the 5th August—I don't know if they put the increase in place. But, you know, from a public relations standpoint, it would be good if they had done it for CUC to consider making the decision to say, 'Okay, we need the 1 percent increase but because of the cost of living in the country and the concerns that have been expressed not only by legislators but by members of the general public, we have decided that we are going to defer this, at least for another six months or a year.' It would be good, Mr. Speaker.

We are always advised and made aware of increases but I, for one have heard very little from companies who are prepared to give the people of this country a break by saying, 'Okay, we are reducing the cost of our goods to the general public'. So, Mr. Speaker, if they have put into effect the increase, I am calling on CUC to consider doing exactly what I have said.

It is also based on unaudited accounts, which means that their auditors have not audited the accounts and we all know that there is possibility of adjustments as a result of any audit because there is always a possibility of error. Like I said, from CUC's standpoint it would be a good public relations gesture at this stage where people are complaining about the high cost of living in this country.

You know, Mr. Speaker, I faithfully attend my office in West Bay on Tuesdays and Wednesday, from 5:00 - 8:00 p.m. and I am amazed at the people who come to see me. The majority of the complaints that I deal with is trying to get assistance for persons who have problems making ends meet financially. If it is not requesting waiver of school fees, it is a request to the Social Services Department for the little monthly subsidy in order to help those families survive and continue to enjoy some decent level or standard of living.

I believe it would be very wise for government to make the comment to say, 'Okay, we need an expert in this area. Let's put it in the budget. Let's go out and find somebody who is capable of filling this position and let's bring him on board.' What was interesting, Mr. Speaker, as a result of my research was that the area of utilities control and regulation is an area that most places right now are dealing with, including the United States. Where they have brought about deregulation, where consumers have the option of choosing their supplier as far as electricity or even telephone services. That is good because what happens with that element of competition, the providers of those services have to be very careful and very conscious of the fact that they have to compete.

You and I both watch US television and when it comes to utility rates with respect to telephone charges, I mean, it has become so competitive. I am talking about now 5 cents a minute in the evenings. I look forward to the day in this country when we have those kind of rates even on a local basis, Mr. Speaker, between here and West Bay, or here and East End, it is much higher than that. But it is all because of the competition that exists in that country.

Now, I don't know if there is room for another utilities company in this country. I don't think there is. Is there room for another telephone company in this country? Maybe there is but under the present agreements that we have in place it is not possible, not at the present time. Maybe when these franchises come up for renewal, we can look at all of our options. So in the meantime, we need to do whatever we can do in order to control the cost of these services.

The other thing to keep in mind is that there is a tendency if no one is aware of it for someone to take advantage of the situation. I was made aware recently—I will give an example of what I am talking about—that we have brought in the Health Insurance Law and we have brought in the National Pensions Law, and there are some people who are still not totally familiar as to what is required under those laws. Some employers are telling employees, for example, that they are not responsible for providing that service or they have to pay for that service for themselves. Or the attitude is: If they don't ask, let's not tell them.

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for just a minute? Is it the wish of members that we just continue on rather than take a break?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I think so.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: So like I said, if they don't ask, let's not let them know what they are entitled to. The same can be true of the utilities that we have in this country. I personally believe that if were not aware of the rates that exist elsewhere, that we would not have seen the kind of concessions we have seen recently, even by Cable & Wireless. If nobody is complaining about it, why should they make any adjustments? Do you think it is because of public conscience? Mr. Speaker, companies today don't have any conscience. The business is making money and the more the merrier.

So we have the responsibility as members to use whatever influence we can in order to ensure that our people have a fair chance of surviving in this country financially and otherwise. Mr. Speaker, I am not expecting Government to say, yes, to this motion and then 6 - 9 months later, when I come back with a question, which says, 'give me an update,' they tell me, no, nothing has been done. I think this issue is so important that if I were government and the minister responsible, I would push for it as far as the appointment of an expert in the utilities area to help deal with controlling and monitoring the activities of these two utilities that we have in this country, that is, Cable & Wireless and CUC.

You know, Mr. Speaker, what is unfortunate for us, is that when they come to sit down with us—and I have not had the opportunity of being in any negotiations—do you know what happens, Mr. Speaker? They employ the very best personnel available to conduct those negotiations on their behalf. The franchise agreement is so complex that you would have to employ what those people term a Philadelphia lawyer to interpret it, it is not simply and that is by design. So if you on the other side don't have that kind of expertise available to you, to know what your obligations are under those particular agreements then you are at a tremendous disadvantage.

Yesterday I mentioned the increase in the cost of living and the cost of rental in this country, and I mentioned that until I moved into my own home, I was paying $135 per month. I also recall in those days, my utilities bill being about $35 per month—that was a long time ago. My most recent one—I would not tell you how much that was. But I am not a squander, I try to be careful, I try to instil in my kids the importance of limiting the use of their air-conditioning and cutting off lights in order to conserve. But, Mr. Speaker, it is still very, very expensive. I believe that the people of this country will appreciate the effort that was made here in the last two days and the contributions that have been made by all members. I believe that the people are excited about some possibilities and I would just urge government to get on with the job of putting in place some of the requirements or request that have been brought forward in this particular motion.

Mr. Speaker, if it is too late for us to have the rate increase deferred or refunded then, at least, let's put the expert in place so the next time CUC comes up for such a request, we can pass it on to that particular body and say, 'Okay, well, have a look at this. See whether or not it is justified and advise us accordingly.'

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your patience and I thank all honourable members who have spoken for their valuable contributions, and I look forward to this very important issue being addressed. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 16/99. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 16/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion 20/99 to be moved by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 20/99

DEVELOPMENT OF A STRATEGIC APPROACH TO CRIME AND RECIDIVISM

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I have Private Member's Motion No. 20/99, the Development of a Strategic approach to crime and recidivism. I will read it.

"WHEREAS crime, deviant and anti-social behaviour has been on the increase in these islands for many years;

"AND WHEREAS Government has not yet presented to this Honourable House a strategic approach for the reduction of crime and recidivism in spite of the fact that a study on crime was commissioned and completed;

"BE IT THEREFORE THAT the Government make available plans for addressing the matter of crime in the society and be it further resolved that any such plan evolved out of dialogue with elected members of the Legislative Assembly."

Mr. Speaker, I am not sure that I have a seconder for this particular motion. There seems to be some concern that the motion is a good motion but it is a repetition so I don't know what the members' position will be with regard to this motion. When it was first presented to you of course, it had a seconder. But at this particular time, the seconder has withdrawn so I am not sure that I do have a seconder for this motion.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder? Is there a seconder for Private Member's Motion No. 20/99?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, can you just give us a second? Let's see if the person is in the Chamber or not.

The Speaker: Thank you. I will.

[Pause]

The Speaker: This is my final call, do we have a seconder?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I respectfully like to second the motion, sir.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town, do you wish to speak to it?

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I guess it would be appropriate at this particular time for me to thank the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town for being such a gentleman and seconding this motion. I believe that this motion—although similar motions have come before this House and have been debated—is a very important motion.

I need to take this opportunity to advise my constituents that I am finding myself in a more difficult position in the Legislative Assembly with regard to my ability to get their business done. I believe that this might also cause me to have to take very drastic alternatives in terms of my position and the allegiances in here since it is impossible for me obviously to exist as an individual, especially when the good government that had given me the indication that they would second this motion was not willing to get up to do so at this time.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I told you for a long time that you are welcome on our side!

Dr. Frank McField: I find these types of situations a learning process for me. But I guess that the government position has much to do with what I said in Finance Committee yesterday with regard to the importation of aggregate. I don't see what the importation of aggregate and communism has to do with this particular issue but somehow I suspect that the apprehension at this particular time to support this very important motion has something to do with it.

The whole question in this country that we cannot discuss crime because it will affect tourism is nonsense. From 1977, when I came back to this country and began to work as social development officer, when we were aware of the fact that juvenile, anti-social behaviour, criminal behaviour was on the increase, what we had people saying was, 'Don't let us talk about it because it is going to affect investment, it is going to run away the tourists.' There has always been this kind of secrecy type of mentality—lets keep everything a secret from everybody including ourselves—to a point where we begin to have chaos with regard to the breakdown of the social institutions in our country and we have an inability to really be able to deal effectively with them.

What other proof of the existence of the breakdown of the social control mechanisms in this country [do we need] than the Caymanian Compass editorial that dealt with the number of persons that are being held in our prisons today? Any tourist, any intelligent person, be he in Berlin, London, New York, has access to this information. Obviously, if we have people in prison, it means that we have crime. So what is the problem with discussing crime if we are discussing the fact that we have overcrowding in the prison and we need money to finance the building of more cellblocks? What is the problem here? Are we saying that we have exhausted the debate with regards to causes and possible solutions for crime and recidivism in our society? Have we exhausted the debate?

No, we have not. Have we actually really commissioned and had a study done with regard to the social and economic causes of crime? No, we have not.

This motion, Mr. Speaker, is not repetitious. It is a fresh look at a condition that exists in our country that begs for examination.

Mr. Speaker, what is crime? because we might even differ in terms of our definition of crime. What is legally defined as a crime and what is morally defined as a crime could be at variance. It could be at this particular time that in our attempt to discuss crime, we need to discuss morality, we need to discuss the norms of society, we need to discuss the changes in the norm and the role which criminal behaviour actually plays as a signal of the change in the norms of the society.

I believe that crime in our society, anti-social behaviour in our society, juvenile delinquency in our society is but one manifestation of the rapid changes in our society with regard to the physical and economic growth without a parallel change in the management of the moral life of the nation. Tradition tells us what is right and what is wrong. And the law as an institution, the courts as an institution uphold by way of legal codes, the customs, the traditions, the norms of the society to the extent in which they are capable of doing so.

But maybe we have so much crime in our society because of the fact that we define crime and criminal behaviour in such a way that we have more crime in the society than we would have had if we had a different definition of crime. Crime has to do with punishment; it is the punishment that defines the act as being criminal. Without penalties, acts would not be criminal. So the mere fact that we have criminal penalties for acts in our society that might not attract penalties in other societies could be one reason why we have the amount of people in the prisons that we have today. That is a consideration!

I have not seen any report suggesting this particular point of view, therefore I do not see why the debate on crime and recidivism in our society is exhausted.

One of the reasons why people might be returning to prison is because the particular offences which they are committing are offences that have more to do with the offence of morality of the society rather than the offences that will endanger the society from a physical point of view. In other words, the person who might be taking drugs might not necessarily be an actual physical threat to the society. It might be more of an affront against a moral position of the society. This is the reason why punishment is not important so much here as rehabilitation.

Mr. Roy Bodden: True!

Dr. Frank McField: These things have not been put forward, at least I have not heard of them. Therefore, I do not understand how the debate on this question has been exhausted.

I brought this motion because I thought what the government has in its possession, with regard to a study that was commissioned, is a victimisation study. It is a criminal victimisation study on a Caribbean island and this is what I consider to be a crime study. There is a difference between a crime study and a victimisation study because victimisation deals with the result of action by criminals or people with a social or anti-social behaviour. A crime study deals with the social causes, the economic causes, plausible causes of the behaviour which results in the victimisation of property of persons. There is a clear sociological distinction to be made here.

Now, in the introduction to Kate A. Painter and David Farrington's, Institute of Criminology Report, it is said that the island's government funded the present criminalisation survey in order to establish a base-line measure of crime, fear of crime, and public perception of crime and the police. There is no way in this report that it says that this report deals with the causes of crime. Now, if we go back to what was called for with regards the motion dealing with this . . . and again, Mr. Speaker, I am not trying to cast aspersions at this particular time because I don't think it is necessary. But we have to understand what it is that all honourable members at the particular time wanted, including the minister responsible for this at this particular time.

In the words of the person that brought motions at that particular time, they wanted to be able to understand the social, economic, physiological causes of the growth in criminal activities and juvenile delinquencies in the Cayman Islands. We have no study that has produced these answers as yet. Therefore, it is consistent to say at this particular point, with our very recent concern with what's happening at Northward Prison that we begin to look again about fulfilling this particular need.

Now, as I said, the reason why I brought this motion is because I believe that the victimisation survey is not a crime study. And it is not a crime study for the reasons that the author of the survey says. It is not a crime study; it is a victimisation study. It attempts to measure crime, the fear of crime and public perception of crime and the police. We need to get together in this honourable House and we need to consider seriously what we are going to do with regards developing a strategic approach to crime and recidivism.

The large numbers that we have in Northward is 1) because of the criminal behaviour; and 2) because that criminal behaviour is not rehabilitated, is not changed into socially acceptable behaviour.

Now, if we had at Northward persons that were real hardened criminals, it would be a totally different kind of consideration that we would even be making. On one hand we are morally . . . Caymanian people would say, 'This is our position morally—that's wrong, that's wrong and that's wrong'. Maybe we do exhibit a degree of inflexibility with regards our moral position and maybe the exposure of Caymanian people to different types of influences cause a certain percentage of our population not to be able to adhere as strictly to the fundamental principles of our moral society and, therefore, we find a certain number straying from the fundamental attitudes of the Caymanian social conscience or moral conscience.

These people find themselves before judges being convicted. These people find themselves in jail. These people find that they don't want to change their way of life because to them they are members of a particular sub-culture. They begin to feed themselves and support themselves in a particular consciousness that exists in society as a result of it.

Now, when we watch the police deal with certain types of drugs—marijuana in particular—in the society, we see that there are groups of people that have formed themselves into little pockets of sub-cultures, little communities based around basically those particular drugs, basic attitudes, music, different styles related to that which comes in conflict with the general moral position of the established society. This is classified as criminal; classified as a threat to the moral order of the society. It is sent to the courts and they go to prison and it continues to be this way.

Now, government, in terms of looking at a strategic approach, can take up the position that is taken up with regards to the National Strategic Study and sort of say, 'You want to have zero tolerance? You want to have this? You want to have that?' But how realistic is a lot of these so-called strategic assertions? because all you are asserting is what your ideal is. You are not really doing any kind of service or examination to see what in social reality is possible. There are definitely cultural conflicts in our society. There are definite persons that have decided to live different than we live—and they do live different than we live and they do go to prison and they are prepared to go prison as a result of the fact that they are living different.

The question is: Can we afford to keep them in prison all their lives? The question is: Must there be a change just on their part or must there also be a change in how we perceive what is dangerous, what is destructive to the social and moral order and the general good?

I believe that in most societies that have gone through periods of change, what we have seen is an adaptation of that particular view the State has on what has to be maintained. Because even when we look at crime and punishment, and we go back into the days when one individual committed a crime, we didn't just punish the individual, we punished his whole family—we stoned them. Now, today it is not an emotional reaction anymore. It is a calculated reaction in order to maintain the general good by a calculated system of social control.

Therefore, we cannot just say, 'Well, because he does that I want him punished in this particular way' because the judicial system does not work that way anymore. It has to be rational. It has to be reasonable. It has to be calculated. The penalties have to somehow relate—or should relate—to the society's fear of itself being destroyed by the particular act. So, somehow we have to begin to judge people (or the acts that people commit that are criminal) in relationship to whether or not we think that threatens in the immediate sense the maintenance of the moral order.

There are certain things that are going on in our society and we need to understand what causes them. From 1977/1978, when I came here, we were dealing with problems with alcoholism in our society, with drugs in our society. Everyone knows it started with smoking marijuana and people go maybe to harder drugs and so forth and so on, the pattern. But the question is: What causes people in the first place to get involved with marijuana? What causes people in the first place to get involved with alcohol? Not that you get involved with alcohol but you take alcohol as your saviour. What is the specific social and physiological reason and process? If we can figure this out, we can rehabilitate.

One of the reasons why we want to know what causes crime, asocial behaviour and juvenile delinquency is because we believe it is caused by identifiable social, physiological or economic causes. And if we remove those causes, we can remove crime, asocial behaviour, and juvenile delinquency. So, the reason why we are looking for the causes is because we are at the same time looking for the solutions. That is the reason why.

Now, when we admit, therefore, that we are social beings and that we are influenced by values and ideas, and that we can go down the bad path and that we can re-construct the personality, that we can rehabilitate the personality, then we are basically saying that we accept part of the problem for what's gone wrong with our society. We are accepting part of the problem for the people that are in Northward and we are just saying, 'Well, you see they are bad people. They are in Northward because they are bad people and we, as decent people in society, have no blame—the society has no blame.'

Society, in trying to find social causes, understands that this is not a moral accusation in saying that the society is wrong or that the so-called prisoner or criminals are wrong. What we are saying is that things can go wrong in the social order but that things can be fixed in the social order just like things can be fixed in the natural order. So if a person happens to have a disease, we will find that the small disease is caused by small things, and the small disease bears a bigger disease... So there is an elevation of the sickness, the illness within the natural order within the body. The same way is there the beginning of the disease and the social, physiological order and the elevation of the problem as we go on.

Now, the State can play a role in trying to fix it or the State can play a role in perpetuating it, actually giving it a home to live in. Prison is a home for social disease to live in, it perpetuates it—it doesn't actually cure it. Nobody has ever testified to the fact that prison has solved the problem of crime in any society. No society has solved the problem of crime. Crime is equal across the board. Every society is affected by crime. In every society, crime is natural. So why are we going to try to hide it from other people when every society over the ages has had to deal with this? Why did Moses make the Ten Commandments if there were not problems back then in terms of behaviour that was considered to be a threat to the order of society? Why did they do it back then?

We are not to be afraid of crime by saying that we don't want to deal it, no more than we are afraid of AIDS and saying that we don't want to deal with that. We are discussing AIDS in our society that is an illness. We are discussing cancer; we are discussing other kinds of diseases. Crime is a social disease that we must come to discuss and manage just like we discuss and manage the physical illnesses in society. This is why I don't believe that the topic on crime and recidivism is exhausted.

Mr. Speaker, I am not the only person in this Legislative Assembly that has a social conscience. I am not the only person that has thought about the problems of the common people. I am not the first and I hope to God, I won't be the last. I believe though that sometimes not only just my personal experience but also my professional experience gives me an insight into some of these problems that some other members might not necessarily have. I am not just talking as an academic; I am talking as a person who has been able to participate and observe behaviour that is considered to be asocial.

I believe that we cannot afford to criminalise as the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town always says, too large a number of our population. One reason is [that] we are a country that operates with a tremendous labour and skill shortage so we cannot afford the luxury of disposing of labour, we need to recycle it. We need to try to always re-integrate those persons that we lose by way of social illnesses. We need to continue to do this in order to secure and protect the State because the State will find that its greatest threat will come to it not from people challenging the moral order but from people challenging the State's monopoly on violence.

Which means that the State as it is constituted has the ability to bear arms and to protect the people and the citizens by use of these arms as necessary. But when you have other persons in your society who are taking this very supreme prerogative by organising themselves, by arming themselves because they are at variance with the State then this will create a greater threat than the threat to the moral consciousness or the offence to the moral consciousness.

The State has to make a very calculated decision. If we are always offended by the affront to our morality and if we lock people up as a result of that without even understanding the causes of why they are doing what they are doing, will have more and more people in prisons.

When I came back here in 1977 . . . and the good Minister of Education was talking about being one of the first people involved in the building of the new prison. It is true because I was actually recruited in 1977 to come back here to be the Director of Social Services, and part of the brief was to be involved with the establishment of a new penal system here. Of course, it never materialised. It materialised perhaps with my frustration and my being ousted from the service, but at that particular time I was also against the building of that prison because I was saying that if we saw this as the security then we would not see other rehabilitation possibilities as our means of securing the continual existence of the State.

You had to make a choice—you made a choice to build the building to incarcerate people in order to secure the State rather than to spend money on rehabilitating people in order to secure the State.

At that particular time, we were talking about no playgrounds, no facilities for children . . . and this is one of the things, of course, that the First Elected Member for West Bay had an opportunity to do when he came into the government in 1992, to bring a lot of these programmes there had been a lack of (in the old days) simply because we believed that security did not cost. And, if it does cost that the cost should be related to the physical incarceration of prisoners.

I have always stressed that prison in the Cayman Islands because of the type of prisoners that we have, should be a place where people are forced to learn. It is the greatest punishment for a lot of them that don't want to learn and didn't learn in the first place. If they had to go from 9:00 am to 3:00 p.m. to school, can you imagine if they had to sit there and concentrate for longer than five minutes without talking unruly and bringing back their whole social cultural dynamics into play? Imagine if at the end of the punishment they were able to be rewarded and would be able to see that punishment as a reward? Imagine if we could turn punishment into reward and that we would still have our pound of flesh by incarcerating them but at the same time we would not have them turn against us when they came out because we would have given them the equipment to be able to understand why we insist that (a) the moral order be preserved, and (b) we would have given them the possibility to support themselves with good self-esteem.

I believe that one of the reasons why we have a social behaviour and juvenile delinquency and eventually crime because it graduates, it starts with the child and he [goes] to different stages and he becomes a criminal. A criminal doesn't happen like that overnight, a criminal is produced. He is socialised into becoming a criminal. It's a process and to get it stopped, you have to reverse the process.

I have called for the establishment of schools within the prison, in particular when we are dealing with our Caymanian people. Now I am not saying necessarily that you shouldn't give people dry bread and treat them a little rough so that they might not want to come back to prison, but I don't believe that people love going to prison anyway. Maybe they love the crimes they do . . . let's not call it crime. Maybe they love the behaviour that we commit them for more than they fear the prison. So they make a choice, like all men make choices.

Adam and Eve made a choice too. But we are told that when Jesus came to save us that he gave us the possibility to reverse that choice so that we were not stuck with that choice forever and ever. We can give the people who end up in Northward, the possibility to reverse the choice, Mr. Speaker. That is what I am saying. I am saying when we are spending money to build the prison in Northward we could also be spending money to put teachers in Northward.

Why is it that we are willing to invest money in the concrete? Why is it that we are interested in investing money only in putting prison officers there and not teachers to a certain extent? Prisoners could be occupied also studying. That is a social control type of situation rather than sitting idle in the yard talking, creating and perpetuating that same kind of social, cultural dynamic that has caused them to get into trouble in the first place. We could be creative about our solutions. Why is it that we cannot in the Cayman Islands find indigenous solutions to recidivism? Why is it that we are looking at America? They have boot camps in America. They are working for America, a very hardened type of situation. It works for America. It might not necessarily work for Cayman.

All you have to do is to go up by the prison and see how many families and girlfriends are up there visiting them, giving them the feeling that they are not totally cut off from society. So we might not be able to remove ourselves as far from our prisoners as people in other countries, therefore we might not be able to be as severe with the punishment as people in other countries. But that does not necessarily mean that punishment equates to rehabilitation. Punishment is not rehabilitation and this is what people need to learn.

You can punish people and feel good about it, but the next day the people come back and do the same thing again and you have to punish them. In other words, you have to punish yourself in order to punish other people. This is what I said in Time Longer Dan Rope. I said it doesn't make sense to punish yourself in order to punish somebody else. No! We need to become a little bit clearer about the differences between rehabilitation and punishment.

At the moment, government has programmes to punish. It does not have programmes to rehabilitate. The problem with punishment is that once the crime is caused by social malfunctions with regards the person's internalisation of the norms of the society that punishment will only aggrieve that, will only make that worse. Rehabilitation will locate the problem and will correct the mechanism. And, I am saying that we need to look at this with our experiences in the physical sciences, medicine and how doctors work—it is the same with the society. Government, therefore, needs to get together to look at this.

And the Minister of Education said yesterday that this was a good motion. He said so in Finance Committee, so I don't understand why the government didn't come forward today and second this motion. I mean they shouldn't do this to me, you know, because the budget will soon be here and they know...

[Laughter and inaudible interjections]

Dr. Frank McField: No sir! I am putting them on notice now that this kind of behaviour doesn't set right for me. They know that I stand on issues. They know I stood on the issues of the importation of aggregate because of my position with regards to that, and for them to try to get back at me with that cheap shot goes to show that they don't believe I stand on issues at all.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I told you that you don't belong over there.

Dr. Frank McField: So, the Minister for Education said that the motion did not have a seconder, but it was a good motion in Finance Committee and the people will hear that broadcast tonight. The question is: Why didn't somebody from government come forward to accept this motion? Or do they intend to reject it?

I can tell you Mr. Speaker, I have not said all yet. I am going to leave it for the last because this is my field now and I am going to have my heyday.

The Speaker: Does any member wish to speak? The floor is opened to debate. (Pause)

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, surely the government needs to reply to the motion so that we can have an indication whether it is going to be accepted or not, sir.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

Serjeant, would you call the other members into the Chamber please?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I trust that you will not misunderstand my intention sir, but perhaps given the quandary that the government might find itself in and allowing some chance to gather their wits, maybe this is an appropriate time sir, because of the activities this afternoon, for us to break so that we can do what we have to do, and perhaps they will be refreshed and with sound mind tomorrow morning to reply to the motion.

The Speaker: I am in the hands of the House.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we gave ourselves until tomorrow. We know that we have other matters to deal with. Some members are leaving the country and we specifically gave ourselves until tomorrow to complete business. And I think we have to utilise every bit of time that we have. If the government chooses not to speak, I mean, then we pass the motion those of us that are in support of it.

The Speaker: I am totally in the hands of the House, the floor is opened to debate. The motion has been moved. Does any other member wish to speak?

STANDING ORDER 38 - CLOSURE OF DEBATE

Mr. Roy Boddin: Mr. Speaker, under Standing Order 38, I move that the question be now put.

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Seconded.

The Speaker: I put the question. Those in favour of Private Member's Motion No. 20/99, please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 20/99 PASSED.

FIRST READING

THE LIQUOR LICENSING (AMENDMENT) (NEW LICENCES) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Liquor Licensing (Amendment) (New Licences), Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Bill has accordingly been given a first reading and is set down for a second reading.
Bills, Second Reading.

SECOND READING

THE LIQUOR LICENSING (AMENDMENT) (NEW LICENCES) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Liquor Licensing (Amendment) (New Licences), Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Bill has accordingly been given a second reading. The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I seem to have inherited the fate that every time I come here, either on the last day—and in this case, perhaps the penultimate day—I end up with a Bill related to this piece of legislation.

[Inaudible Interjection]

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: I guess if I keep this up...

Sir, the Bill currently before the House seeks to provide or to make provision for the moratorium imposed back in October of last year to be given more flexibility and for hotels to be (as a category of licences) exempted.

The law which was passed in October and in effect placed the moratorium on the grant of all liquor licences with the exception of occasional licences provided that moratorium would remain until such date as may be determined by the Governor, who would cause notice of the date to be published in the gazette. So, in effect, we disconnected the power to issue liquor licences under all but one category.

True to my pattern, I would propose to move a slight amendment during the Committee Stage, which will have the overall effect of . . . I guess to use the electrical analogy that I started off on, to have the effect of putting in a switch in respect of the other categories. In other words, providing not just the power as the law currently does for the moratorium to be lifted, but for it having been lifted to be re-instituted and in turn lifted again.

In fairness, sir, the hotel category should have been excluded with the occasional licences. It certainly was never perceived by the government that the hotel category was an area of real problem. It wasn't the area of acute propagation. In fact, a liquor licence in respect of a hotel is obviously only an accessory, but in today's world an essential accessory that the hotel needs to have. Unlike other categories where the principal purpose of having the licence is often times to simply dispense of alcohol, that is not the case in the hotel licence. And, so these minor amendments seek to do those two things: 1) To exempt the hotel category; and 2) to provide this more flexible switching facility that will in due course allow the moratorium to be lifted in other categories but also allow it to be re-imposed.

So, with those few words, I commend the Bill.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Liquor Licensing (Amendment) (New Licences) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. The motion is opened to debate.

Does any member wish to speak? If no member wishes to speak...The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. I moved a motion, I think it must have been in February of this year, which asked government to put a moratorium on the district of West Bay getting any more licences.

Mr. Speaker, we never had any thought about hotels and the motion at that time did not ask government to institute a general moratorium countrywide. However, Government amended the motion at that time to say that it should go countrywide.

Well, that was again a time that government for whatever reason was jumping on the bandwagon to knock out what I was attempting to do—perhaps any credit that would have been coming my way. Nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, what they did was to cause this dance of the confused.

I don't know whether this is being done for the hotel opposite the public beach. The question I had is whether that hotel should be built anyway next to the public beach—the major public beach in the country. And, whether, in fact, this liquor licence will go on the little piece of beach that they would use.

I would have loved to hear more about it. Nevertheless, I am not going to offer too strenuous an objection. I just want to say to government that they should be careful about amending private member's motions and they should give it much more thought when they do so because it seems that the thought arises once the private member's motion comes here just to see how they can divert attention from what backbenchers are trying to do.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? If no other member wishes to speak, does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply? No?

The question is that a Bill entitled, The Liquor Licensing (Amendment) (New Licences), Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE LIQUOR LICENSING (AMENDMENT) (NEW LICENCES), BILL, 1999 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Presentation of Papers and Reports, Public Assistance Programme. The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

PUBLIC ASSISTANCE PROGRAMME AUDIT REPORT

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to table the Internal Audit report on financial assistance programme.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: When my ministry took over the responsibility for the subject of social welfare in November 1997, it assumed responsibility also for the Financial Assistance Programme. At that time, I requested my Permanent Secretary to arrange for an audit of the programme as I felt it made good sense to understand the status of the subject. I envisaged that any recommendations coming from this report would assist my ministry in the future administration of this programme. In fact, this was one of the results of the audit.

The internal auditor who was assigned to this case worked many hours to understand how the programme operated. The objectives of the audit were as follows:

- To determine whether the guidelines criteria that were established by the former Ministry of Community Development helped in achieving the intended goals of the public assistance programme.

- To ensure that all existing recipients of public assistance have all qualified to be in this programme by meeting the established guidelines and criteria.
- To ensure that there is proper documentation and files to support each application of the existing recipients of public assistance.
- To determine whether all approved applications for public assistance has been reviewed or re-assessed on a routine basis.
- To establish the basis for the amount of money that is presently been paid to recipients of the public assistance programme.
- To verify that the bank accounts given to the former Minister of Community Development are, in fact, the bank accounts of the recipients.
- To verify that only approved persons are receiving public assistance.
- To verify that only designated persons are collecting public assistance cheques on behalf of those recipients who are unable to do.
- To determine whether recipients of public assistance are eligible to collect more than one government subsidy.
- To verify that the payment and receipt of public assistance cheques are done in accordance with Financial and Stores Regulations (FSR).

The auditor, in order to verify his findings consulted with the Minister of Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture, which had previously been charged with responsibility for the programme, the Department of Social Services and various banks. All of these findings are elaborated on in the actual report.

Emanating from this report are seven recommendations, which the ministry has agreed to implement. These are:

- 1) Revised criteria should be developed which clearly state the requirements applicants have to meet in order to qualify for the government's Financial Assistance Programme. These criteria should address, particularly, the issues of need and disability.
- 2) Revised guidelines should be developed for the assessment of applicants. Mr. Speaker, this will involve certain cosmetic changes and other relevant changes to the application form.
- 3) A timetable should be agreed by the Ministry of Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation and the Department of Social Services for the re-assessment of approved recipients on a routine basis.

In addition, all current recipients of government financial assistance should be reassessed. This has been something that has been advocated over the past years.

- 4) Files containing all materials related to each applicant should be kept on a confidential individual basis.
- 5) The Ministry of Social Welfare and the Department of Social Services should review the option of going to a system of graded payments rather than paying a fixed amount each month.
- 6) During re-assessment of approved clients, the names of the banks as well as the bank account numbers should be verified. Any changes should be recorded and the Treasury Department should be advised to enable the revision of existing computerised data.
- 7) The decision taken on each application by the members of the Financial Assistance Committee should be recorded on that application form and members should sign in the designated area of the form. Family members should be discouraged from signing as referees for applicants in order to reduce the possibility of any charge of publicity.

Presently, my ministry is working in conjunction with the Department of Social Services to implement these recommendations. Since 20 April this year, the operation of the programme has been transferred to the department of Social Services, as the social workers and community development officers are the individuals who are equipped to perform the financial assessment of the applicants.

The infrastructure of the department is also more conducive for the administration of such a programme.

Criteria for the assessment of applicants to this programme have been revised based on the recommendations contained in the audit report. The issue of need of the applicant has been a particular point of focus has this assistance has come to be seen more as a right to everyone over 60, rather than its original intention, which was to assist older citizens and the disabled were genuinely in need.

Mr. Speaker, my Ministry, as well as the department of Social Services are aware of the responsibilities associated with regards to the utilisation of public funds. Currently, each applicant is assessed on the revised criteria to determine if he or she falls into the category of individuals who qualify for assistance through this programme. The revised criteria is as follows:

- All persons seeking financial assistance from the Department of Social Services must be assessed to determine the level of need. It must be ascertain that the person or persons cannot meet their basic need.
- All support from family and friends must be identified.
- Adult children are responsible for maintaining their elderly or disabled parents and grandparents under the Maintenance Law, 1996 (Revision), section 5. As such, contact will be made with all adult children and adult grandchildren to ascertain what assistance, if any, they can provide to their parents or grandparents.
- In accordance with the Poor Person's Relief Law, 1997 (Revision), section 4, any person receiving Government financial aid who has or comes into any property shall be vested into crown.

- All information that is shared must be confirmed with the relevant persons, employer, and agencies prior to assistance being granted. The following information must be provided, such as:
- Medical certificate, in cases, where the person is seeking help due to ill health or disability.
- Place of employment and length of time at this job.

Mr. Speaker, the provision of financial assistance by any government is by its very nature, a very sensitive one, in addition, to being very difficult to address. My ministry and the Department of Social Services intend to use the recommendations contained in this report to deal with the administration of government's financial assistance to those of our citizens who are genuinely in need.

Mr. Speaker, in closing I would just like to say that in talking with the past Minister (that is, the First Elected Member for West Bay) he commented on a number of things and I would take this opportunity to share that. In that four-year period when he was responsible, there were three different Permanent Secretaries and one Acting Permanent Secretary. None of the matters mentioned were brought to his attention at that time. There were several other staff changes in Assistant Secretary in a four-year period.

We know that when this originated and when we came into government in 1992, the people were only getting $50 a month, and through a lot of assistance from that minister at the time, it was brought to $200. This year, we brought it to $250 and next year, God willing, we will have that amount up to $400. Thank you.

The Speaker: Presentation of Reports.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I wonder if the Chair would allow me to ask the Honourable Minister a brief question or two regarding the report he just tabled and read, sir?

The Speaker: Yes, I will. Make them brief, please. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I would just like to ask the Minister if during the course of the investigation and the compilation of that audit if the previous Minister was asked to provide any information or were his services solicited in any way in the compilation of the report?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, my understanding is not indirectly, just probably the officers in the ministry.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I wonder if the Minister is in a position to say why this was not so since the report clearly deals to a large extent with policy matters? And if the Minister wasn't asked for an explanation or a reason then I would think that it has to be seen somewhat as a reflection on the report that the Minister was left out when he was the sole person responsible for policy.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, do you wish to answer that?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the main idea was to look at the current state, to find out why... On background stuff, I would probably have to talk with someone in Internal Audit and share that with the House.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Oh death where is thy sting? Oh grave where is thy victory?

The Speaker: Moving on to number two, Central Planning Authority and Development Control Board, Annual Report. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

CAYMAN ISLANDS CENTRAL PLANNING AUTHORITY AND DEVELOPMENT CONTROL BOARD ANNUAL REPORT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, the Cayman Islands Government Central Planning Authority and Development Control Board Annual Report 1998.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will first read from the Executive Summary and then I will make some short comments in other areas.

"In 1998, almost $263.8 million worth of development was approved by the Central Planning Authority (CPA). The 1095 developments approved, represented a 28.8% increase from 849 in 1997; however, the value was down 12% compared to 1997's value of $290.9 million. The Development Control Board (DCB) also had a busy year (that Board serves for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman) with 155 approvals valued at 428.8 million in 27 meetings. This represents a decrease of 4.9% in number of approvals, and an increase of 233% in value.

"There has been little change in the distribution in terms of numbers by sector. The four (4) sectors that continually receive the majority of applications are Houses, Apartments/Condominiums, Commercial and Other. The distribution of applications according to districts have also been constant with George Town, West Bay and Bodden Town having the most development activity.

"The district of George Town has historically had the majority of approvals and 1998 was no exception. The 502 approvals valued at $147 million accounted for 46% and 56% of the totals respectively. The second place position was again shared between West Bay and Bodden Town. Bodden Town had more approvals but the values were considerably less than that for West Bay. The positioning in North Side and East End remained the same as in 1997, when East End had less applications and a smaller value. In 1998, North Side's approvals doubled and the value increased by 79.3%. East End's number of approvals only increased by 2 but its values increased by approximately 273%.

"The number of approvals in each sector did not change significantly with the exception of houses. In Grand Cayman, the order of each sector was Houses, Other, Apartments/Condos, Commercial, Industrial, Government and Hotels. However, unlike 1997, all sectors but Government and Industrial had a slight increase. Houses had the largest change with a 41% increase in the number of approvals. In the Sister Islands, the distribution between sectors made rather noticeable changes with a 300% increase in Industrial, an 80% increase in Government and a 28.6% increase in Apartments/Condos.

"The CPA was able to process 916 agenda items. (That is a very heavy load but I must say that the Authority runs very efficiently and the secretariat is very efficient.) This represented an average of 23 applications (excluding Final Certificates, Enforcements, Matters from the Director, etc.) per meeting, approximately the same as the average processed in 1997. The actual number of applications on the agenda were down as smaller applications were processed administratively beginning in the second quarter. Administrative approvals have led to an improved level of service to the public and a slightly smaller workload for the Central Planning Authority."

At present sir, we have delegated from the CPA, either to the Director of Planning or in some instances the Director of Planning and the Chairman of the CPA, the power to deal with houses, matters such as signs and other smaller matters. If it is controversial then it goes on to the full Central Planning Authority.

"Of the 916 applications for new developments that went to the CPA, 795 (86.7%) were approved (which is quite a high number)."

The other area I would like to make reference to sir, relates to areas that are found at page 33, Review of the Development Plan 1997. Mr. Speaker, I am sure members will remember after twenty years of one development plan—which finally in 1997 a new development plan came in—Executive Council gave a directive that committed the CPA to complete the review within 15 months and also along with this sir, "The Long Range Planning Section, in conjunction with the DCB has been able to complete a first draft of the development plans for the Sister Islands." These plans should be available in the not too distant future.

This, I know, is a very controversial area but I think this government succeeded in what previous governments that I was also in failed to do and that is: To actually get a development plan put in place which is now providing for the orderly development of the Cayman Islands. It was overdue. It should have been revised every five years. I know government was able to deal with it until recently.

Maybe I have become too brave with this, sir, to try to review it. I can within 15 months [Laughter] but some things have to go about politics and it is good for the country that this be done and it will come back to this Legislature obviously for final approval. It will be out shortly, hopefully, not just for the amendments for Grand Cayman but also the new plans for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I am very happy to say that appeals, which were backed up I would say for 8 or 9 months, are not as nearly as bad as appeals in the Labour [Office]. They have now been reduced—they are current. In fact, there were only 19 appeals against the decision of the CPA during 1998. Of those, eight were heard, seven were pending when the report was made—some of those have been dealt with. And of the eight appeals heard, four were allowed and four were dismissed. So it goes to show that the appellate system is working well.

I would also like to point that a lot of the time of the DCB and the CPA is taken on actually hearing people. They do have hearings where people go in and appear before them and this takes time but it is good. This is a democracy and transparency has to be there also the public can decisions of the Board if they wish.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Chairman of the DCB and her deputy, and also the Chairman of the CPA and his deputy. I would also like to thank all members of that Authority and Board for the dedicated work that they have put in because whether we appreciate it or not, the future development of this country rests clearly in the hands of those people—how the country is going to go physically. What is going to be brought as a balance between development and preservation of as much as we possibly can for the country stays in their hands.

I would also like to thank the Director of Planning and all of his staff. We have some very good dedicated staff there and they have done tremendous work. Mr. Speaker, this was also brought out in the fact that the department received the Governor John Owen Award for merit in systems that they had introduced. In fact, applications which two years ago were taking about 90 - 100 days (of which, 4 - 4 1/2 weeks by statute has to remain because notices have to be given) those had been reduced to about half the time. Now, it has reached 40 - 45 days, of which about 30 days are statutory.

Also, sir, the simple applications like for houses are actually now dealt with within 24 hours in many instances because this is administrative. And I consistently say to them and the other departments that I have is that you must facilitate the public, you must try to find solutions when the public asks for them and you must smile with the public and treat them as you would any other customer or client and you must give service. I should say, with all the feedback that I have had, there have been improvements in the front-line staff at the Planning Departments, both here and in Cayman Brac. I am very grateful for this because our duty—not just theirs but also mine—is towards giving service to the public. So I would like to commend the staff and commend the CPA and the DCB, and the staff in Cayman Brac as well for a job well done.

Our aim for this coming year is to work on this and increase it because we should never be complacent with the levels that we have reached.

Lastly, I would like to say that the appointment of the Building Code Committee is now taking place and as soon as we can get the development plan out of the way, we will be looking at revisions to the building code. So I would ask members to accept the report and to assist in any way possible especially when the budget comes up with whatever is necessary for the planning. Thank you.

The Speaker: Item number 4 on today's Order Paper. Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question number 82 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 82

No. 82: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to provide a list of the major promotions undertaken by the Tourism Department since June 1997 until June 1999, giving a breakdown of the costs.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The attached list (see Appendix) provides details of all major promotions undertaken by the Tourism Department.

ment between June 1997 and June 1999. This list is really too long for me to try to read it but it breaks down the promotions done in London or by the London Regional Office as well as the promotions done in United States. If anyone has any questions, I will try my best to answer it.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister say if the department undertakes any assessment of the effectiveness of the promotional campaigns? And if so, would the Minister tell the House what form such assessment takes?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, the Department of Tourism and the assessment of conducting a promotion in a particular area can be tied to the zip codes of persons coming from that particular area simply because the persons upon reaching immigration have to fill out an immigration entry card, which gives their address and their zip code. So there is a way of making some assessment on the promotion and how much it has produced.

Realising, of course, that the promotion that is done...and we need to refine this a lot more and work is progressing on this as I speak. You could do a promotion today and the person takes the decision to travel in January or February 2000 so we have some additional work to be done but certainly we can relate to a promotion done in a particular area with the zip codes of people who are coming to the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House how these areas are arrived at for targeting promotions?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, the targeting of persons that we wish to attract to the Cayman Islands are persons whose household income is about $75,000 (and we sometimes say $100,000), but we have to bear in mind that the income of a household in the northern portion of United States is slightly different from the income of a household on an average in the southern portion of United States. So we say $75,000 or more.

Utilising all the tools that are available to us, we can pinpoint throughout the United States what city they are from, what street they live on and what house number it is, and that is our methodology for deciding who to invite to promotions when we do them.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The material given us here shows that there have been quite a bit of promotions done for and within British Airways. Can the Minister say how this is paying off, if they are reaching their $75,000 visitor through this particular item? And, how much is done with Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer to that question is that the traffic coming to the Cayman Islands from Europe and from UK would be divided between direct flights out of Gatwick (which is done by British Airways) and other flights which link London or Gatwick to Miami and then pass on to, in some cases the Cayman Airways, and then maybe to other airlines as well. But we do know from the statistics of air arrivals that the UK market is doing very well indeed in terms of the numbers of people who are coming to us.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: The material given us shows British Airways Holiday—Sponsorship, British Airways Holidays—Joint Advertising, British Airways Tickets—BSAC Film Crew, British Airways Tickets—Press Trip, British Airways Tickets—Film Crews, British Airways Holidays Joint Mailing, British Airways—Cayman/Bahamas Promotion, British Airways Flights—Blind Date Film Crew. . . . Mr. Speaker to name a few. How has this affected the $75,000 income target and how much as been down with Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The methodology we use in terms of deciding whether a person is coming from the income group that we speak of, which is $75,000, is by the Airport Exit Survey. The Airport Exit Survey does indicate that a significant number of individuals who come to us (and I don't have the number available to me) is in that group. I am not going to say that everybody is in that group because that would not be truthful.

But we do know that British Airways Holidays is a major tour operator in United Kingdom and they book people who wished to travel to the Cayman Islands, whether they want to come directly on the British Airways flight from Gatwick to Grand Cayman, or whether they wish to travel by British Airways to Miami and then transfer over to Cayman Airways. We do know that Cayman Airways provides the handling service for British Airways in the Cayman Islands. So there is a good amount of income being earned from that process as well as other areas.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, this is the third time I will be asking this question. How much has been done with Cayman Airways?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Are you saying Cayman Airways or British Airways?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, the answer that is being provided is for traffic coming to Cayman from the United Kingdom and from Europe. Cayman Airways office in London did do some bookings in this particular period of time but we do not have a Cayman Airways Holidays operating out of London. I am told that the Cayman Airways Operation in London was recently closed as well.

We could find the data but we are not providing data here about British Airways, in particular. We do know that the statistics indicate...and when we look at those statistics that come out on air arrivals it is broken down by airlines. And we do know that British Airways that is coming to the Cayman Islands would be coming direct from London so there is a direct link.

The number of people who are coming to the Cayman Islands on Cayman Airways shows in the statistics but it doesn't [show] whether they are coming from London or United States or other parts of the world.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The substantive question asked to provide a list of the major promotions undertaken by the Tourism Department since June 1997 until 1999, giving a breakdown of the costs. That is the original question.

My question is—and a lot of it seems to have been done in the United Kingdom—how much has been done for or with Cayman Airways in that time period?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, now the question is clear to me. Cayman Airways and all our representatives whether it's in Europe, Canada, United States or London, are promoting every occasion that they do promotions, they are also promoting persons travelling on Cayman Airways. So any activity that they are doing, in terms of promotion and trying to attract people to the Cayman Islands is two-fold to attract people to the Cayman Islands and in that attraction to the Cayman Islands, they are recommending that they travel Cayman Airways.

So there is a partnership and there is activity whether it is in the Los Angeles region, or the Chicago region, or the Miami region, or the Houston region, or the New York region, or in London—the London Regional Office—or in Europe.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) & (8)

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) so that questions may be taken beyond the hour of 11.00 a.m.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I second.

The Speaker: The motion has been moved and seconded that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time continues.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) & (8) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 O'CLOCK.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I wish to ask the Honourable Minister whether the Cayman Islands Department of Tourism operates a web-site whereby persons can access vacation packages directly through the Department of Tourism?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The Cayman Islands Department of Tourism does have a web-site, which provides the relevant information to a consumer who search that web-site for information on the Cayman Islands, whether we are talking about diving or accommodation or where their church service would be held when they are in the Cayman Islands. They also have a listing that indicates you can call a particular 1-800 number into the Cayman Islands reservations service in Miami.

We are not as yet at that second developmental stage, which would allow consumer bookings of air travel. We have not reached that stage yet simply because we have a number of travel agents who have been good to us over the years and we know that they are at the moment quite nervous about many airlines, including American Airlines, who have cut their commission rates in terms of their sales of tickets on American Airlines among others, and there is a nervous state of affairs by travel agents of these bookings situations directly on a web-site.

It is something in the information technology that is going to happen and I think travel agents are trying to prepare themselves for that day and be as competitive as they possibly can be. But we have not moved to that stage yet because we do not want to offend the people who have worked so well with us. The movement to do direct bookings on the site is under consideration but we have not taken the step yet.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I am happy that the Minister has thrown that light on the matter because I was going to ask the Minister in light of the fact that we are always seeking to get the best value for money spent, how is the Department for Tourism then preparing to change their advertising policy so as to take into consideration the fact that more and more people will be going on-line and using the World Wide Web to connect directly rather than going through a second or third party? And, when might we expect that this development would be taken into full consideration by the Department of Tourism.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: One of the things that we are working on, as far as the web-site is concerned (and I think the Member who is asking the question is all too familiar with the information technology world and the many different web-sites that are out there) is the linkage between our web-site and those search vehicles such as Yahoo among others to make sure that there is a link and there is easy access to our web-site so that we get what we call more "hits" per month, meaning more consumers are actually searching our web-sites. That is one of the areas that we are working on at the moment.

I am unable to say to the honourable Member exactly when we are going to move to this second stage, that is, direct bookings. But we do utilise the web-site for advertising purposes in order to spread the word as widely as we possibly can around the globe about the facilities that are available in the Cayman Islands, and we hope to move to that next stage when we believe it is advisable to do so.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I guess I am taking a risk here, but I have gone through this document and there is a tremendous amount of expenditure here. Cayman Airways is not in here and I am going to ask that the Minister turns his attention (when promoting this country) to Cayman Airways. I think that is fair to this country, I think that is fair to Cayman Airways.

Mr. Speaker, the question that I would like to ask is contained in here is Aviation Week 1997, $114,695.22; Aviation Week 1998, $151,671.32; Aviation Week 1999, $73,827.03. Quite a difference in the three or, at least, in 1999 that is compared to 1998 and 1997. Can the Minister say what is the difference? And can the Minister say how this is affecting our tourism in a time that it is supposed to be a weak tourism product?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Just to perhaps start at the beginning. Cayman Airways does not have an advertising programme in any part of the world that I know anything about. The only way Cayman Airways get exposure in Canada and United States and other areas of the world is by the Department of Tourism. That is just a fact.

[Inaudible Interjection]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, we are talking here about promotions that are being done with other individuals. We know that the advertising programme in the United States cost somewhere in the area of $8m. When we do promotions or advertising in glossy magazines such as Conde nast Travel, just to name a one, there appears the Cayman Islands and also Cayman Airways. So we are doing as much as we can in that particular area. I am quite pleased with the way in which that is moving forward.

There is always the possibility of doing more and we are looking to see how we can do more. The second part of the question regarding aviation . . . we know that for Aviation Week we bring a number of our people down to the Cayman Islands from different regions whether it is the New York region, or Chicago, or Los Angeles, or Miami, or Houston and we do know too that there is some cost involved with such a major promotion to the Cayman Islands.

We have been working diligently to try to get more sponsorship for this particular Aviation Week. To date, we seem to be gaining some ground, although I point out to the Member that the $73,827 is a figure to date, there may be more items to come. I do know that we are gaining and getting more sponsors for the event, therefore it will end up being less spent by the government or by Department of Tourism.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries we will move on to Question No. 83 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 83

No. 83: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to provide a breakdown of materials purchased locally for road works since January of 1997, giving the type of material, quantity, cost and name of the supplier.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The attached list (See Appendix II) provides a breakdown of amounts paid by government for locally purchased road works' materials for the stated period (actually it dates back to 1993). The suppliers are as follows:

Aggregate and Marl:

Paul Bodden
Caymarl
Crighton Properties
Midland Acres
Quarry Products

Bitumen:

Mariani Asphalt
Asphalt Emulsions

Hot Mixed Asphalt:

Island Paving
Caribbean Paving

Signs, Paints and Signals:

Vulcan Signs
Stimsonite
Control Specialists
Cayman Coating
Eagle Traffic
Forrest City
Tropical Imports
Peter Wight Holdings
Naztech
A L Thompson
Testron International Safety Zone Specialists

Drains and Wells:

Watler & Hislop
Industrial Services

This list reads from 1993 through to April 1999 and is broken down in terms of the dollar value of aggregate and marl (one category); bitumen (another category); hot mixed asphalt (another category); signs, paints (lines), and lights (signals) (another category); and the drains and wells are broken into two categories, maintenance and capital.

For the year January 1997 (although we have information for 1993 - 1996) per aggregate and marl, the Government spent $5,134,377.67. In 1998, the figure was $1,311,180.92. In 1999, $3,392,032.

For bitumen, in 1997, $80,837.27; in 1998, $49,774.01; and 1999, $64,611.51.

Hot mixed asphalt, [in 1997], $278,190.31. In 1998, $673,727.53. In 1999, $134,386.96.

Signs, paints (lines), and lights (signals), in 1997, the total spent was $104,461.47. In 1998, $74,188.83 and in 1999, $80,194.05.

Drains and Wells, maintenance in 1997 was $196.00. In 1998, it was $9,600.15. In 1999, so far, through April 4th, we have not spent any money on maintenance or drains.

Drains and wells, capital in 1997, $222.50. In 1998, $416.75. We have not spent any money on drains and well in terms of capital during the first three months of 1999.

When we look at these totals and these would include from 1993 coming forward to April 1994, for aggregate and material, the Government spent $12,615,723.96. For bitumen, we spent $538,328.35. For hot mixed asphalts, $2,082,338.40. For signs, paints (lines), and lights (signals), $556,629.22. For drains and wells, maintenance, the total spent for maintenance is $33,897.12. For drains and wells, the capital amount spent in terms of drilling and setting up drains and wells, $34,265.03.

The total for the three years for all of these items, 1993 - April 4th, 1999 is $15,861,182.08.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I noticed that the amount spent for aggregate is substantial. Could the Minister say to what extent this indicates government's need for this material? Can this need could be substituted by other types of fill with regard to the building of roads? For instance, while building the Harquail Bypass you could use the marl in that area to build this or do you need the aggregate to build these roads?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer to all the Member's questions is that if you are travelling through swampy area you have to use aggregate, you have to use the short rock, the huge boulders, among other different sizes of rock.

My understanding is that as you reach above the level of the water in the swamp, you come then to an area where marl could be used. But, in addition, while we are going through the swampy areas, we have to dig and make sure that we are building roads on a solid surface. So if you have a deep mud hole of 10 feet or 3 feet or what have you, that too has to be filled with rock to make sure you have a solid base. Otherwise, when you have these heavy trucks travelling over it, that is why you find in different parts in Cayman . . . I guess, in years gone by, you find a particular area sinking because of the weight. The fact that the base of the road was not built on solid ground as the Good Word says.

Obviously when you are in an area where you are not building in water then, I think, it's possible that marl can be used.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Would the Minister say at what point, what year, with regard to what particular project did the government become conscious of the need for aggregate to construct roads in swampy areas? When did they change their engineering strategy with regards the construction of roads? Would he say at what time this took place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, that is really a good question because when we travelled around Cayman in the days of early life, we found that marl was always used for building roads. I believe it is only in recent years that we have really come to the full conclusion... And, then again, Mr. Speaker, when we recall (and this does take a bit of recollection) that they were quarrying areas along Spotts . . . there is a quarry area almost directly across from the Spotts Landing which is now all grown up. But if you get through that bush, you will find that there is a quarry area.

To the best to my recollection, some of that was used for the building of the airport runway. And really, sometimes we took decisions to avoid going through the swampy areas because of the absence of substantial amounts of aggregate to deal with it.

I believe that if we look at the statistics (and this is how I am interpreting it, it is subject to correction), for example the huge jump between 1996, where we had $930,000 purchase of aggregate and marl, and then in 1997, we had $5.1M . . . I think that can be related to the Harquail and the fact that it was a substantial piece of road, approximately a mile or so long that was basically built through swampland and obviously we need the aggregate to carry out that exercise properly.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Would the Minister say if once the government became aware that rock mining was necessary or should be encouraged in order to create the base for the roads in the swamps, whether the government, in terms of creating the demand, in terms of planning the road strategy, gave any kind of consideration for where the source of that rock would come from? In other words, in being directly now responsible for creating a demand, not just the private sector is creating the demand, but the government now participating by a desire to build more roads and better roads, did the government give any consideration where that would come from? And if so, what was the result of that consideration?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I believe the supply of material for roads has always been in private hands, if I remember it correctly, even in the days when I laid on the floor of my mother's house and looked out of the door and saw Mr. John Smith and others building roads in West Bay, the marl was not coming from a government source, it was coming from a private sector source.

Many people do mining in the swamps. People do dredging. Government has not conducted any of those sorts of exercises.

I recall some years ago, maybe in the last five years or so when I think there was some scientific work done and testing and that sort of thing in terms of what materials should be used to build roads through the swamp. I think the decision at that stage was that you do need aggregate but beyond that, I am unable to say.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I thank the Minister for the answers he has given me because I guess he knows already where I am leading. Does the Government in terms of its development strategy have an integrated approach to development? We understand that we need roads because if we don't have roads, we have congestion. If we have congestion, we realise that tourists won't come here and if we have a decline in tourism, we know that we have a decline in the circulation of the dollar.

So in terms of wanting to build roads, obviously, the Government is not just building roads, it's preserving the economic prosperity of the country as a whole. So because mining has an impact on the physical environment, I wonder whether or not in trying to work out this integrated approach, how much attention Government gave to where this rock was coming from that is being supplied to them? Not just that it is being supplied by private companies but does the Government have anything to do with this supply base?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: When I earlier referred to quarrying being done years ago adjacent to the present Spotts Landing (as well as other areas in Spotts), it was done in cliff. It was done in areas that the private sector decided was a good area to get rock or to dig into the swamp and get marl. My understanding is that many people who own land in cliff areas then wanted to supply materials to the Government or to other people—not just the Government.

I can only say that the Government in all that it does tries to create the environment for business to do more business and not to get involved with competing with the private sector in terms of what they are supplying. So I am trying my best to give the honourable Member a decent answer but I don't believe that the Government other than the Department of Environment and Planning setting down approvals for quarrying or dredging really gets involved much more than that on this issue.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Just one more supplementary and then I am finished. When the Government sets out to build roads... I mean, if I was building a house I would certainly check to see that I had enough supplies to build the house. Whether or not that supply is being supplied by a private company or not, I would check with the company to make sure that they have enough lumber for me to build the house so that I don't run out of the lumber. So, I wonder whether or not, when the Government proposed to build the Crew Road Bypass [and] the extension of the Harquail Bypass - the roundabout which looks like it is going to be in a little bit of a swampy area, the Government did any investigation or any inquiries to find out whether or not the suppliers would be able to supply them with the amount of aggregate needed to complete these projects?

Did the Government just blindly enter into this programme without knowing whether or not the supply would run out? And, is the Government at this particular point aware of whether or not they will be able to complete these projects by way of having the supply needed in existence here on the island at the moment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, when we were dealing with aggregate and marl, we quoted a number of suppliers; Paul Bodden, Caymarl, Crighton Properties, Midland Acres and Quarry Products. I believe, quite frankly, the Government has relied on these private sector individuals to meet the requirements. If the cement boat doesn't come to the Cayman Islands, I mean, where would you get cement? You know, when people are building their houses today do they really go and make sure that A.L. Thompson and others have the lumber there? I think they take the decision and go to the bank and they take the mortgage and they get on with it.

What I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that, the Government really doesn't try to assess who is supplying what. I think we try to create an environment where everybody can make a little bit of business.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House what is the procurement system with respect to aggregate and marl? Whether the Government operates through either a tending process or has contracts with the various suppliers named?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In accordance with the power that we have under the Financial and Stores Regulation, bids are supposed to be received before anything is awarded.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House what is the procedure when materials are needed on relatively short notice, when going through the bidding process would not only be inconvenient but it would be time consuming?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Other than repeating what I said earlier, I wanted to have with me this morning a representative from Public Works. Unfortunately, he didn't have a jacket with him so we couldn't bring him into the Chamber. I would undertake to provide the information in writing, if I could because I don't want to give the House information that I have doubts about. I would rather spell it out in detail and circulate it to all members if they wish.

POINT OF PROCEDURE

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: On a point of procedure, if the Minister has brought a staff Member down and that Member doesn't have a jacket, I am sure that none of us here will note that, and I am sure the Speaker will allow it. If he is still here, I think we should bring him in so that we can get information. I don't see the House objecting to that—now if he was naked . . . that would be a different story!

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, as I suspected, he has since left the building.

The Speaker: So you will answer in writing?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, why I interjected is because I just came in and he was there. So he just left.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I am just going to take a chance and say that when we work in Finance Committee with the appropriation of funds for Government for capital projects, the way the whole system of capital projects finances is working at the moment—

The Speaker: You will turn this into a question before you are finished.

Dr. Frank McField: I certainly will, Mr. Speaker. The way it works, can the Minister say that it would be consistent with the way in which the capital projects expenditure and appropriation works at the moment that the Government or the Public Works Department has to be conscious of what is in place in order to be able to complete a project? In other words, if they are starting the construction of roads, they have to have taken note of their supply, where it is coming from, what price it is being supplied at, whether or not the supplier is reliable or unreliable. All of these things would have to be taken into consideration. Whether or not that is the point, that they do take these things into consideration? And if they do, have they done that with regard to the building of roads?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I thank the Member for the question but the procedure as regards capital expenditure and the budgeting function of it, I think everybody assumes that whatever is needed will be there. I mean, even new suppliers are available if there isn't. At the moment, we know that when things get short, there are other people who jump into the fray.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.
The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure whether or not you are going to say that this is an opinion but I would like you to make a ruling on this. Would be reasonable that the general public would assume that the Minister is avoiding this question and that he is partly avoiding it because he is getting legal advice from his colleagues?

Would the Minister say whether or not he as the Minister responsible for roads is not in a position to say what type of aspects are taken into consideration by the Chief Engineer at Public Works? If the Minister is not in a position to tell this House then let the Minister say he is not in a position to tell this House what is taken into consideration by Public Works engineers when they are going along with a capital project and with expending public money with regards a capital project.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think I indicated earlier that I didn't want to give any answer in this House that I have some doubts about and I undertook to provide information in writing to be sure that I have the correct detail.

I am not going to say what Public Works does. Most of us when dealing with the budget assume all the information or material that is going to be needed will be available either by local source or overseas because the item that is in the budget that we may be dealing with is deemed by all of us to be urgent to supply the needs of the public of this country.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say (since he is not aware of what Public Works does) as Minister responsible for roads, if he took any steps to see whether or not the supply of aggregate with regards the construction of roads was sufficient in order to complete the Harquail Bypass and the Crewe Road Bypass?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I believe that my responsibility as a Minister is to decide on a policy that the roads need to be constructed in order to relieve the traffic flow in this country, whether it is the Crewe Road Bypass or the Harquail Bypass or any other road that is needed to expedite the smooth flow of traffic in this country. I believe that is my responsibility. The detailed technical work is not mine. That is passed on to the civil service.

The Speaker: Moving on to question number 84, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

No. 84: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to provide the accounts for the overseas' offices of the Department of Tourism, including any travel expenses from January 1998 to May 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The attached list (See Appendix III) provides the accounts for the overseas' offices of the Department of Tourism from January 1998 to May 1999.

Mr. Speaker, I am not about to read every item on this list because it looks like a dozen and a half items, moving from the top of the page down to the bottom and spreading across, it also looks like, at least, a dozen columns. But just to indicate that the category that we are talking about and the information is broken down between the Miami Administration, the Miami Regional Office, the Chicago, Los Angeles, Houston, New York Regional Offices. The Dallas District Sales Manager, the Tampa District Sales Manager, the Atlanta District Sales Manager, the Maryland District Sales Manager and the Boston District Sales Manager.

It varies between advertising to banking charges, to employee benefits, to direct mail, to telephone costs, to training, to marketing meetings, to postage, to travel, to promotions, to the leasing of the building, water, the salaries of the individuals and the total is approximately $8.4M for all of those activities.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House what is the relationship with these various offices as regards the Department of Tourism in respect of any expenses occurred? That is, whether these various entities make decisions on their own or whether any of these transactions or there is any ceiling on any transaction which would necessitate approval coming from the Department of Tourism before such expenditure is entered into? And if so, what is that threshold?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Firstly, it may be beneficial to the listening public to clearly understand when I say the New York Region, exactly what area that we are talking about because we are not just talking about the regional office, which is situated in Manhattan. While the office is situated there, the office is responsible for doing promotions in Connecticut, in Delaware, in the district of Columbia, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Virginia and West Virginia.

When we talk about the Chicago region, given that the regional office is in the city of Chicago, it is also responsible for the State of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio, Wisconsin.

And when we deal with the Miami Regional Office, which is in Miami, it is also responsible for doing promotions in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Tennessee.

The Houston Regional Office is located in Houston. It is responsible for doing promotions in Arkansas, Colorado, Kansas, Louisiana, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas, and Wyoming.

In Los Angeles, where the regional office is situated, it is responsible for Alaska, Arizona, California, Hawaii, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

Each one of these offices is headed by a regional sales/marketing person and they have specific power and authority to carry out promotions and to manage their team. Whenever in doubt, they have a responsibility on any item to ring for direction from the Director of Sales/Marketing of United States, who is based in the Miami Administration in Miami. If he then is in doubt about his authority to deal with or authorise that particular item, they then have to revert to the Director of Tourism, who is located in Cricket Square, George Town.

We know that the advertising programme and public relation programme is approved prior to entering a particular year. So that programme is agreed with the regional sales managers and the director of sales and marketing in United States. I am just focusing on United States because that seems to be what we are headed at but I want to point out that the programme is agreed with other countries as well such as Canada and the UK and Europe.

The Public Relations Programme, for example, in the year 2000 and the advertising programme in the year 2000, would be agreed prior to entering that year—the Regional Sales Managers, the Director of Sales/Marketing in the United States, the Director of Tourism and the Ministry of Tourism. So that is the approval system that is required.

And then we leave the people who are in the field who are most familiar with their particular area to direct the promotions in their respective areas. If there is a change that they want to it, having worked it for a bit then they need to come back for proper approval to Cricket Square.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say what the advances, I guess that means, were for the $176,630.77 under the Miami Administration? Is that advances, the abbreviation, ADV? Can the Minister say what that is? Can the Minister say what amounts out of this have been paid for their local travel throughout United States? Theirs meaning anyone in Cayman, including that of the Minister.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: This information, which we have is really sort of hot off the press this morning and I know that the system that they operate is that they do get advances on occasions to do promotions because the petty cash that they operate from is not sufficient to do particular promotions. Once the promotion is done and all of the bills are in hand, they then forward their claim and come back to the Treasury and clear the advance. I am not aware of any item in here for the ministry or for Cricket Square.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. Do you have a follow-up? Excuse me. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I don't know if the Minister answered what amount out of this was paid for their travel throughout United States. I am sorry he said he answered. I am sorry, I didn't get it.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town gave way to the First Elected Member for West Bay so Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, go ahead.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House what arrangements are in place by the Department of Tourism to ascertain that the best value has been received for many spent by these various entities? And what is the ultimate obligation of these various entities to the Department of Tourism for monies used by them for these various services?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I hope I can answer the different areas of this question because I think it might have more than two parts. But I think the bottom line is that we look to ensure that the Government is getting the best possible value for the money spent.

Now, in this area of tourism, an assessment of what he does or she does—there isn't any concrete line over which you cross. Or put another way, it is difficult to say precisely, exactly what happened or what you got but when we look at the total value of money contributed to the economy of the Cayman Islands over the last seven years, in particular, let's use that or five years, whatever we want to use. We definitely can see without any hesitation that the value that we are receiving, something in the range of $500,000,000M - $600,000,000M from tourism spending in this country, I believe, that is value for money. Not to go on to say, Mr. Speaker, that more work cannot be done and more refining cannot be done because that is exactly where we are headed with this entire exercise.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay caught my eye before.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Is that right?

[Laughter]

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say whether or not the Department of Tourism and the ministry have a policy with regard to travel. That is, I am talking about airline travel. Is it a policy that all staff fly first class, club, economy? What is the policy?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I am going to dance on this one. I basically say that you know when we travel to different parts of the world, let's say from here to Malaysia, or from here to Singapore, or from here to Sri Lanka, what is it that we want for ourselves? The best possible period of travel! Simply because when we get off the plane, we have to go to work.

Now, if you are going to put everybody in economy class and he/she is worn out when he or she gets there, you then have to put him or her up for a night in a hotel. So you have to really try to weigh one cost against the other but I am not trying to avoid the question from the honourable Member. I don't want to give too many details here, Mr. Speaker, because I don't think it is to our advantage to do that. But realising, of course, that the persons who work for the Department of Tourism also work for Cayman Airways so that their travel, if we are speaking about the US sales team, their travel is a decision made by the airline that they are travelling on, as to where they sit.

When we are travelling as a ministry or as the Department of Tourism from here to some other part of the world, it would depend on the length of the journey. If we are going to London, we are governed by our decision which we took, I think back in 1993—although we are eligible (under government regulations) for first class, we travel club.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say what sort of policy they have in regard to automobile ownership, automobile rental?

The Speaker: I think we are actually straying far from the substantive answer but if you wish to answer it, you may.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Mr. Speaker. If I may. . . the Minister has given us a list of expenditures which totals $8.4M and in this there is an item for automobile. So I do not think I am outside the question.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We know that (as I mentioned earlier) when we are dealing with the regional offices around United States, they are responsible for different areas other than their home base. They may be living in Manhattan but they have to do promotion in Pennsylvania or some other place that is quite far away, so they elect to fly over there rather than doing any other source, and as a result, they rent cars to carry out their work. So there is some automobile cost on a rental basis. I am not sure what is meant by ownership.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, I saw the item in this list for $96,361.84 and I wanted to find out whether we own cars or whether they were renting. For instance, if they brought in people here to do promotions, whether they rented individual cars or they got on a bus or what is the situation. This is $96,361.84 but I heard what the Minister said.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, generally, we do a combination. We travel by bus on occasions and we travel by rental car on occasions. It depends more or less on the event and how many people are actually attending the particular event. If there are a lot of people sometimes we do the business. When there are one or two people, we do a car.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries.
The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: This is a follow-up to my question on the travel policy. Let's say, for example, the Minister, the Director and other members of staff are flying to London for a promotion, do all fly club or does the Minister and Director fly and everybody else flies economy. What is the policy?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: If we are travelling on a promotion to London and the Minister and a Member or two from the ministry, the Director of Tourism is travelling, the present policy is that those can be allowed to fly club class. Ordinary members of the staff, Mr. Speaker, not to leave an inference, would not fly club class.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I see some funds here expended for training. Can the Minister say what kind of training would have been done in the Miami administration? And if we are spending $8.4M and we are getting $500M, how much have we gotten in this last year and a half?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: On training, we carry out a number of different training exercises for staff to improve their skills in a variety. It might be information and technology, being able to do their work on computers because all of the offices around the world have their own computers and they are tied into Cricket Square so that they have access to information in Cricket Square. It may be air arrivals and what is the position with air arrivals at the end of May or April, or any other time plus other information. So we do a number of training exercises including training exercises for persons who are in charge of the Cayman Islands reservations services. There about nine individuals who are in that area and obviously we needed to do training when we establish the website, in order to do bookings because they are dealing directly with travel agents now that's connected with the web-site activities.

So there are a number of training exercises that go on in that sense.

Mr. Speaker, I think the First Elected Member from West Bay raised the question in relation to $8.4M being spent between the period of January 1998 and May 1999. I believe, Mr. Speaker, although the statistics are not yet available for 1999, and if they are not available for the 1998, it is a sure bet that they are not available for 1999.

So, I am sure that when we total up all the contributions made by tourism to the Cayman Islands, some of it we can measure and some of it we cannot, simply because when have an opportunity to go by Foster's, or Hurley's. But more particular, Foster's because they are on Seven Mile Beach and we see the number of people who are actually shopping in those stores, and they are not counted as part of tourism analysis—they are counted as a wholesale or retail operations of business. But, I know, without fear of conviction that the contribution would be slightly increase about the $500M.

The Speaker: Moving on to question number 85, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 85

No. 85: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications and Natural Resources what is being done to monitor or control the impact or stress of dives on dive sites or reefs?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the current efforts to control the recreational impacts to reefs include the Department of Environment's extensive media campaigns that include leaflets specifically intended for divers on how to avoid impacting the reef. The Department also works with schools and other learning organisations to promote environmentally responsible behaviour in and around the marine environment. In addition, the Department of Environment has, on a number of occasions, met with the two watersports' associations in Cayman to highlight its concerns regarding the overuse of the marine environment. Snorkel and dive boat operators are encouraged to brief their guests on the protection of underwater features prior to each dive.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Can the Minister say whether there is any policy coming out of the discussions with the water sports associations in regards to the stress created on dive sites or reefs?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Definitely, there will be a policy taken with regard to what has been mentioned. However, the department working along with the dive operators are still working towards something that will be beneficial to all concerned and as soon as that is completed and recommendations made to me, we will definitely have to take a policy.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say what mechanisms are in place, should I say monitor damage by divers, etcetera, with respect to maybe enforcing the law?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The Department of Environment and the Marine Department of the Police are constantly monitoring these sites and working quite closely together to make sure or as sure as possible that no abuse is being carried on in these areas.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I am aware that especially the Marine Conservation Patrol basically has boats. I am not sure if they are glass bottom boats or whatever it is, but how do they determine whether or not there has been any damage to our reef, for example. Do they have also divers or do they go in and inspect these sites to make sure that such abuse is not taking place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Since 1996, the department has in place a monitoring programme. This includes not only patrolling on the surface of the water in boats and just visiting the sites but it also includes dives to each site to make sure that nothing is happening there that should not be happening.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In the answer the Honourable Minister mentions that there have been discussions with the water sports associations. I wonder if he can say whether or not the issue of numbers, that is, the number of visitors that may visit dive sites on a daily basis have been discussed because I am aware or I am told that because of the numbers that we have, as far as visitors are concerned, that is, where the numbers creates tremendous stress on our reefs?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the question posed by the Member is a very good one. This is really one of the major concerns of the department responsible and I can only say that while it is a concern, they are working quite closely with the dive operators to try to make sure that overcrowding does not occur in these areas.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? There are no further supplementaries. That concludes Question Time for this morning. As we are so near to lunchtime, is it the wish of the House that we continue or take a break? Continue?

POINT OF PROCEDURE

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Before we move the adjournment, I crave the indulgence of the Chair to record my displeasure with the way the business of the House is being conducted. And, Mr. Speaker, that in no way is any reflection on the Chair since you are not responsible for setting the agenda. But, Mr. Speaker, I regard this week as a colossal waste of time because if today is an example, we have come here and basically all we did was answer a few questions and ratify some committee work.

Originally, when the Order Paper for today was passed out, it contained several private members' motions and while I regard the fact that today was not private members' motion day, the government when it suited them was always willing to waive the suspension of Standing Orders to get the business done.

I bring to the attention of the honourable House the fact that some of the business—namely the Referendum Law—has been around . . . September coming will have been a year and this business has not been dispensed with yet. You know that we will be going into elections next year so it is limited what can be done.

I regard the procrastination as a serious trespass on this business of democracy. And I noted a few days ago, the Honourable Leader of Government Business was quick to get up and say that we should always conduct ourselves in a way where we set the best example to school children and others listening—an obvious reference to the fact that there was some laughter and an air of jocularly amongst some members of the honourable House at that time.

Well, Mr. Speaker, conduct is not only reflected in jocularly and laughter but is also reflected in the way we handle the items on the Business Paper. And, certainly, the Honourable Leader cannot say that he has not been procrastinating, or that handling the business of the House—and by inference the country—in such a way is not displaying a lack of maturity, if not downright contempt for what should be happening.

Now, I am particularly concerned because I have a large number of questions on the Order Paper, which have been begging answers for some time. I know that some honourable members of government treat questions with a cavalier disregard. In case they don't understand the logic, I use questions to effect positions that I take in motions and debate. And I repeat, most often the questions are not my personal questions but they emanate from concerns of my constituents or the wider public. So I place a significant amount of credence on the questions and when I don't get the questions answered, Mr. Speaker, I can only say it is a poor reflection on the way the business of the House is administered.

Now, I would like to express my strong objection because I consider these past few days a monumental and colossal waste of honourable members' time and I would hope, Mr. Speaker, that in the new millennium, the government takes a more serious attitude towards the business of the House than how it is presently handled.

I don't find this as a joke, Mr. Speaker, believe you me. I am fighting to contain and control myself from getting overemotional because I believe that we are too well paid to indulge in this waste of time. And I end again on this note: Irresponsibility and poor behaviour do not only mean mud-slinging one another and laughing but it also has a reflection on the way we make up the Order Paper, the way we handle the business of the country and the respect we pay to private members' motions and honourable members' questions.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, my reply to that will be brief and in two parts. Firstly, to say that the public surely appreciates that we are getting near to elections so this politics will go on.

Second thing, sir, is that the Business Committee is run democratically, it sits, it takes its decisions (as does this House) by a majority of members and there are going to be minority members at times who may not want something to go one way. We get that in the House here—democratically run.

At present, Mr. Speaker, I think there may be four motions. There are practically no questions left, I know I only have two and several of the members have very few.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What I would like to do is to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Wednesday, 8 September at 10.00 a.m. and also to move that all of the remaining business sir, questions, motions whatever be put into the next session.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Do you think it will be answered then?

The Speaker: Before putting the question on the adjournment, I would like to thank members for the courtesy and tolerance to the Chair and to thank the Clerk, the Deputy Clerk, the Office staff, the Hansard Officers, and the Serjeant of Arms for their efficient service. In particular, I want to single out Miss Anita for her service to all of us and the good food that she has provided to us. And, to wish all Honourable Members, as they have a short period off, I hope you will get some vacation time.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Before we stop I just wanted to remind members of the meeting I set at 2.00 p.m. I will endeavour to get the people that would be providing the information here earlier if members would be acceptable to holding on for awhile. Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that this honourable House do adjourn until 8 September. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. This House do stand adjourned until September 8 at 10.00 a.m.

AT 12.28 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM WEDNESDAY, 8 SEPTEMBER 1999, AND THAT ALL OF THE REMAINING BUSINESS BE CARRIED OVER TO THE NEXT MEETING.

Item number 3 on today's order paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question number 86 stands in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This question is somewhat late in coming and I would have asked that it be removed from the paper but nonetheless the answer may be readily available.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 86

No. 86: Mr. Linford A. Pierson asked the Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development. To state: (1) The amount of the 1998 Capital Expenditure to date and whether it is estimated that the remaining approved balances will be expended by 31st December 1998; (2) How much of the capital expenditure which is financed from recurrent revenue (but unexpected) forms a part of the current surplus/deficit account.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Before I give the answer, I would just like to comment on the observation made by the Honourable Third Elected Member for George Town.

First, I would like to thank the honourable members of this House for their indulgence because there are quite a lot of parliamentary questions that have been outstanding with the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development for quite some time. But honourable members are aware of the activities in which the senior staff in the Portfolio, such as the Deputy Financial Secretary, the Assistant Financial Secretary, and I are engaged. I do not think it is necessary to go into details on these because members are very much aware of this.

Mr. Speaker, so many things are happening. I am just asking for your indulgence on this. I am planning to talk to you later on today and hopefully I would share with honourable members that there is a need for me to be absent from the House next week. Not that I would be leaving the island but I will be applying for leave because we have the Commonwealth Finance Minister's Meeting that will be starting on the 21st.

Mr. Speaker, we have over 240 delegates that have been booked so far to come into the Cayman Islands. We have got quite a number of Prime Ministers, Finance Ministers and others, and it is very important that this event be organised properly. The staff that is presently working on this event are very committed to it. But I think it is necessary for me to be there to make sure that the presentations that I will have to make are prepared and also that the organisation and arrangements are in order.

So, once more, let me thank honourable members. The Deputy Financial Secretary and I will try to do our best to answer as many of the questions as possible. Once more, let me thank honourable members for their indulgence.

The answer: (1) The unaudited Capital Expenditure for the period January – December 1998 was $31.2 million. The approved estimates for 1998 was $41.7 million, therefore, the unexpected amount for 1998 was $10.5 million. (2) $3.17 million was transformed from the surplus/deficit to the Capital Development Fund, as budgeted.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I noticed in the (2) section of the answer, the $3.17 million was transferred from the surplus deficit to the Capital Development Fund, as budgeted. I wonder if the Honourable Member is in a position to state the balance on the Capital Development Fund or from the latest accounts available.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The balance on the Capital Development Fund as at 31st December 1998 was $4.1 million.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I wonder if the same Honourable Member is in a position to state whether those funds are earmarked or just kept for general expenditure?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Honourable Members will recall that in order to ensure that the amounts that were transferred out of General Revenue into Capital Expenditure remained in that account and not returned to General Revenue as a part of the Surplus and Deficit Account, a decision was taken to set up the Capital Development Fund Account, which means that whatever monies are to be received in that account during the course of a given year by way of transfers from General Revenue will go into that account. And, whatever is not spent at the end of the year will form part of the balance remaining against that account to be carried into subsequent years.

So the unexpended balance from 1998 has been brought into 1999 as a part of the Capital Development Fund Account.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Member state then if it is correct to assume that the $10.5 million that was unexpended as of December 31st 1998 should have been put into this Capital Development Fund?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Honourable Member is correct. The unexpended balance as at the 31st December 1998 will go into the Capital Development Fund Account. There are two components to that, Mr. Speaker.

Firstly, the Honourable Member is aware that in 1998 there was a loan...

Mr. Speaker, I will have to correct the information that I gave to the Honourable Member. When I said that the balance of $10.5 million remained, that was against the budgeted account. The budget will not be transferred because there are two components to the funding of the Capital Development Fund Account. There is the revenue transfer or transfers from General Revenue and the draw-down against loan financing.

Mr. Speaker, firstly, every attempt is made to use up the amount that has been transferred into the account from General Revenue and whatever is to be expended in addition will normally be drawn down from the loans that have been approved. At the end of year, the budgeted approvals lapse and it is only monies remaining that have gone into the account itself, whether drawn down by way of excess loans or excess amounts over and above what would be required to defray the expenses in the account and the money is transferred from General Revenue. Whatever unexpended balance remains in that account, this is what is transferred into the subsequent year.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So, is it fair to assume then that if $10.5 million was not spent by December 31st 1998 on capital projects and even though that amount would not go directly into the Capital Development Fund when preparing the 1999 budget, it would have been a fairly close estimate as regards to how much would have been spent and that amount was then added into the 1999 budget to ensure the continuity of the projects. Thus meaning that the funds that were not used up in 1998 would simply be there to form part and parcel of the 1999 budget.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Mr. Speaker. But to be very clear . . . although the sum budgeted in 1998 was $41.7 million, the amount expended was $31.2 million, which means that by way of draw down against the loan accounts plus the transfer from General Revenue . . . when we add $31.2 million and we take the $4.1 million that has been transferred into the account from the General Revenue or the balance remaining at the end of the year, it means that approximately $35.3 million worth of funds would have gone into the account as such.

So at the end of the year, the unexpended balance of $44.1 million would have been carried over into 1999. Where the $41.7 million takes on specific relevance, this was the level of authorisation, which means that if expenditure were incurred up to that limit the $41.7 million could have been utilised in full.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In (2) of the answer, the Member mentioned that $3.17 million was transferred from the Surplus Deficit Account to the Capital Development Fund. I wonder if the Honourable Member can say what was the balance in the Surplus Deficit Account as at 31 December 1998?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, that answer is to be provided in a subsequent question but it is approximately $9.1 million.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was wondering whether we could get an assurance from the Honourable Member that in view of the statement he made earlier regarding his very busy schedule, that in future any member sitting in for him as Acting Financial Secretary would provide the answers to questions that are put forward.

I recognise his busy schedule, Mr. Speaker, there is no question about that. But there is always somebody that acts in his place and these answers could be provided by that individual.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I am in agreement with the Honourable Member. The Deputy Financial Secretary will be acting next week and we have agreed that we are going to try to answer as many as the questions.

I must say that while I have been tied up on other issues, the Deputy Financial Secretary has been tied up as well because not only is he involved—although it may not be quite evident to the core group as such that is working on the OECD initiatives in terms of other aspects of this work itself—but he is heading the Financial Reform Initiative. At this point in time, he has to prepare for the budget in the year 2000 and in effect, he is spearheading that because this matter was discussed with His Excellency the Governor and also members of Executive Council, and it may have been mentioned to Members of the Legislative Assembly just to make sure that all of urgent matters to be addressed are being dealt with on all fronts.

We realise that it is very important for this Honourable House to be provided with the information that is being sought through Parliamentary Questions. So we take on board the suggestion by the Third Elected Member for George Town and we will try to get out as many of the Parliamentary Questions and provide responses to them as possible.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, just so that it will be very clear . . . I think in quick discussions with the Third Elected Member that suggestion was not necessarily meant for the questions that are on hand at present but in the future. It was just a general comment.

Could the Member state in light of the various supplementary answers that he has given whether or not the entire amount of funds that were authorised to be borrowed in 1998 by the Government were drawn down?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The amount authorised to be drawn down in 1998 was $19.5 million. But based on the projected expenditure indicated by the Public Works Department through the end of the year, it suggested that the full amount of money could have been spent or near to that amount. So to ensure that funds were on hand to defray expenses as they were incurred, the money was drawn down. The full amount of funds was not used and the Accountant General took the decision to put the unspent balance on a fixed deposit account optimising the interest that could be realised through the period.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I will try to paint a quick little picture for the Member and maybe he can correct any assumptions that I make that are incorrect in my question.

The Honourable Third Official Member has on more than one occasion (including this morning) stated that the principle applied by Government is to use whatever funds are available from the recurrent revenue with regards to capital projects before drawing down on any loan available.

Now, he has just said that in order to meet anticipated expenditure, which was suggested by the Public Works Department, the loans were drawn down in total. Is there not some type of contradiction there? If the loans are authorised and negotiated, one does not need an extremely long period of time to be able to draw these loans down.

So, my question is: Would it have been found to be necessary to draw these loans down prior to finding out for sure whether it was going to be needed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I can assure the First Elected Member from George Town that there is no contradiction. Not only would this $3.17 million be used up first before any monies are drawn down from loan balances, we also spend against whatever free balance we have from General Revenue. The point at which we will stop to use the balances from General Revenue is where it can be seen that it will put the Government's account into an overdraft and we know that overdraft interest is normally an interest penalty position.

Mr. Speaker, when it comes around to the end of the year (and the draw down is not normally even throughout the year) the Honourable Member would have heard the information from prior answers. The draw down is normally left until the very last minute. However, Mr. Speaker, when it comes around to the month of December—especially when the Treasury is going to close off (that Honourable Member and also there have been occasions in the past where even the Auditor General has commented on this)—the Government has taken the position that we should not have any bills incurred within a given year that are carried over into a subsequent year. Over estimation occurs sometimes, and this is unfortunate but we are guided by the projection that is given in terms of all of the expenses to be met in terms of what is likely to be spent.

Although the Treasury cut-off will be set, for example, the 15th December, if there are any substantial expenditure that we know about that will have to be met before the 31st of the year, we will have to budget and provide for that.

So, this is a case, Mr. Speaker, and what would have been lost here would have been the differential between the interest that would have been paid had the money not been drawn down, or the interest which would have been safe because we know that there is a gap between what we realise from fixed deposits and what is paid by way of loans. Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, that window from the point of the draw down of the full balance of the excess of the $4.1 million that was put on deposit. This is where the expense or a component of an unnecessary expenditure would have occurred.

On the other hand, I think we have to look in terms of what renders the financial statements accurate at the end of the year. That honourable Member and quite a number of others have always been concerned in terms of expenditures incurred that are not treated as accounts payable but yet they are defrayed in the subsequent year. So, when we balance all of these factors, I think we can justify what has occurred.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, two additional supplementaries.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I just want to make it clear, I am not questioning the justification of what happened, I am simply testing the system to find out if there is any other better method.

Having found out what was spent and what wasn't spent, and having drawn down funds that were unnecessarily drawn down (even though it was not known until after the fact), it is fair thought then to wonder why not take the money and put it back on the loan?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, that would be a very useful concept if we could establish with the banks what is called a rolling loan balance. But this in itself creates a bit of a problem in terms of having to refund it to the bank and then subsequently ask for that money to be released to us. It is a concept that we can explore, but it is one that will have to be thought through very carefully because there could be penalties that would compensate for the interest that would otherwise be lost.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, final supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I heard you the time before. Perhaps, then I need to be listened to very carefully because it is my last one. First of all, I am assuming that what the Member is saying is that there is not a position by the Government with the local banking institutions whereby they can pay on a loan whatever they find themselves with the ability to pay. Assuming that that is correct, the reason why I ask what I asked about putting the money back in . . . in proper prospective does that not create some type of difficulty with the concept of the budgeting process with regard to actually having monies on hand to carry forward into the next year that are actually borrowed funds?

In other words, if you tell me that at the end of the year when everything is added up and all of accounts payable are taken into consideration that there is a surplus of [approximately] $9 million and that includes funds that have been drawn down on loans that have not been used up. . . Well, if that is not the case then that needs to be clarified. But that is the way I am hearing the picture. And if that's what I am hearing then we are carrying forward funds showing a surplus into the following year when that surplus is decided upon by how much money was borrowed even if the money that was borrowed for capital projects was not spent on those capital projects. But that is the picture I am getting.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the Member has raised two points and I will concede that, firstly, the unexpended balance that would have been drawn down would have gone forward into the subsequent year as a part of the surplus. But that does not necessarily mean that the surplus would be fully made up of the unexpended balance that would have been drawn down against the loan.

Secondly, all loan arrangements with the various banks allow for early repayment without penalties. What I attempted to explain to the Member earlier, Mr. Speaker, is that if the money is put back into the account (assuming that it will not be needed in 1998 and then having to be taken out again in 1999 because in 1999 there is a certain amount that has been budgeted to be transferred from General Revenue. That would have been used up and whatever money is remaining in the Capital Account would have been used up. We would then look at whatever free balance would be existing in the surplus and deficit account, what we can use at Barclays Bank, then we will use that and then we will resort to draw down against the loans.

Until the Government's balance becomes threatened, Mr. Speaker, every method is used to ensure that savings are realised and whatever free monies can be made available are used up.

What is very important, Mr. Speaker, and I think the value that can be challenged here in terms of what could be conceded, let's say the unnecessary component of expenditure are the funds that have been drawn down in terms of the interest of that and we will have to deduct from that the savings that would have been realised in terms of these monies placed on fixed deposit. But the honourable Member is very much aware of the system and what we have in place is that whatever monies have not been spent against a loan that has been raised in a previous year is normally used up in the subsequent year unless a conscious decision has been taken or where it can be foreseen that, that money will not be needed then we allow the undrawn balance to lapse. That has occurred on many occasions where loans have been raised for X but the amounts drawn down have been Y. So it is less than the balance or the overall limit that was approved.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I know what you said, sir, and I appreciate what the Honourable Third Official Member has explained. I am just craving your indulgence to clear the issue once and for all with one final supplementary, sir, if that is possible?

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George-Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you very much, sir. I quite appreciate exactly what the Third Official Member has explained with regards the system and I also quite appreciate the way the system works but all that I have been driving at through my questioning comes to this point: Is it not a more clear method if you find out that you don't need to draw down on certain amounts of funds at the end of the year—and I appreciate the timing involved in it and I appreciate when you are doing the budget for the next year that there is an overlap, I quite understand that. But would it not create a more clear picture, a truer picture if those funds that were not needed for that given year were not taken but placed into the borrowings for the following year since it was the following year that you are going to use them?

That is where my own line of questioning is coming from. Perhaps the overlap doesn't allow for that—I don't know. I am simply trying to be black and white about the situation. If you don't need it now and you are going to need it next year then it must reflect in the borrowings for next year—that is what I am asking.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the honourable Member is right and that is the principle that is normally observed because I have mentioned earlier that where loans have been approved and the full amounts have not been drawn down, the undrawn balance is normally made available to be drawn down in a subsequent year. Unless when the overall financial position is assessed it can then be determined that that unspent balance will not be needed.

But, Mr. Speaker, just to clarify a point and I think that this is something that may have been of concern to the honourable Member. When I said earlier that there was a balance of $9.1 million on the General Surplus and Deficit Account—this $4.1 million on the Capital Development Fund Account that is a separate $4.1 million, it is not inclusive in the $9.1 million.

For general information: On the Environmental Protection Fund, there was a balance of $100,000 separate, not included in the $9.1 million. Under Housing Reserve Fund, a balance of $700,000. On the Infrastructure Development Fund, a balance of $3.9 million. Overall balances when taking into account the General Reserve of $10.5 million amounted to $28.4 million so the balances are segregated.

I concede the principle in terms of the $4.1 million being drawn down but the practise that will be observed and continue to be observed in 1999 and beyond—having established the Capital Development Fund if there is a case where the amount that is drawn down exceeds the amount that is required to defray expenditure, this money will not be used up, it will be available in subsequent years.

For example, in the year 1999, where approximately $26 million has been programmed by way of loan funds, if it can be established when it comes around to the end of the year that only X million dollars out of that will be needed then X million out of that will be drawn down. First of all, the Members of the Legislative Assembly will have to give approval on the budget for the year 2000 for that un-drawn balance to be spent together with other needs that will be established as a part of the Capital Development activities for the year 2000.

The Speaker: Moving on to question number 87, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 87 (Deferred)

No. 87: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development what is the total public debt to date.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, in order to ensure that we had information to provide an answer on today's date, we had to take the balance of public debt as at the 31st March of this year. So, if the First Elected Member from George Town will not object to that, I will give that information. If not, I can ask for this question to be deferred and we can update it to the most recent information that will be available, which will be the end of June.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. The Honourable Third Official Member could easily fill my shoes but I could never fill his. The question being answered up to March 31st, I would be quite happy if the Honourable Third Official Member were to delay the question and get the answer up to a more recent date and we can get that answer when that information is available. I am happy with that.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, in accordance with Standing Order 23(5), I will ask that the response to this question be deferred until it can be completed providing the information up to the end of June. Thank you.

The Speaker: I will put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The question is deferred to a later sitting.

AGREED: QUESTION 87 DEFERRED UNTIL A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: Moving on to question number 88 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 88

No. 88: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development what is the surplus/deficit position of the Cayman Islands Government for year end 1998.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the unaudited surplus balance as at December 31st, 1998 was $9.11 million.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. To clear the air following up on previous supplementaries to another question, does this $9.11 million include any funds drawn down from loans?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the expenditure that we are dealing with here that is normally funded from General Revenue, this normally comprises of recurrent expenditure, statutory expenditure, contribution to other funds and contribution to capital development.

Mr. Speaker, none of these expenditures allow for any loan funds to be co-mingled as a part of the on-going balance. So, all of the items that I have mentioned would have been funded from the General Revenue raised for 1998, which amounts to $248.3 million. So, the $9.11 million remaining at the end of the year would be after meeting all expenditures and transfers.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Based on the projected estimates for the 1998 budget, is the Honourable Third Official Member in a position to give us some type of indication (even if it is not an elaborate answer) as to where savings might have been realised or where revenue might have been increased to create this surplus, which is certainly over and above what was projected in the 1998 estimates.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Firstly, the savings would be realised from two components. We would have the performance of revenue over and above that budgeted and we would have savings on recurrent and the other categories of expenditure excluding capital development.

Mr. Speaker, the budgeted recurrent revenue for 1998 was $248.1 million. The actual collection was $248.3 million so we had approximately $148,000 in excess of budget. However, Mr. Speaker, on recurrent expenditure, the original estimate was $206.9 or $206.87 million but the actual recurrent expenditure through the end of the year was approximately $198.7 million. So, when we take the differential between these two, we are looking at approximately $8 million.

The other $1 million would be a mismatch of items, making up the $1 million. I can provide the specific details on this to the honourable Member so he can see how the $9 million has arisen.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The $1 million, the little mish-mash business is not a problem. It is obvious from the answer that the Member has given that the surplus is derived in the vast majority by way of savings not increased revenue. Could the Member pinpoint in some detail where those savings were realised, or is that a figure that was realised throughout many, many departments? I mean, was there any significant area where a savings was realised? That's what I am trying to determine.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, it was realised across all departments of Government. I can undertake to give the honourable Member a breakdown of this information.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, several years ago (I think it was as far back as 1995) the Auditor General expressed his concern in his report regarding the financial treatment of advance accounts. He felt that certain advance accounts were being wrongly treated and that they should be written off against the surplus and deficit account thus inflating the surplus by the absence of those write-offs—the surplus and deficit accounts were inflated. I speak specifically about the overseas medical advances.

I wonder if the honourable member could state, if these advances were written off, whether there would still be a surplus or whether the accounts of Government would rightly and properly be placed in a deficit?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The honourable member is correct. The Auditor General for quite some time has expressed a concern. Honourable members of this House has expressed the concern and we are all concerned about the state of the advance accounts as they apply to overseas medical. As at 31 December 1998, I think that balance was in the region of approximately $15 million or $16.6 million.

If this was written off, it would create a deficit in excess of $5 million. But I would advise this honourable House . . . and the Third Elected Member for George Town will recall that during the Budget Session part of the surplus that had been identified for 1998 had been earmarked in order to write-off a portion of the overseas medical advances account that can be deemed to be uncollectible.

Mr. Speaker, Internal Audit has done an exercise on it and I must say that they have submitted the report to me and it is on my desk. I am aware of the fact that the Auditor General is presently doing an exercise on this and we are hoping to have a position arrived at in order to apprise members as to the state of affairs on those advance accounts before the end of the year. However, I would caution against the writing off of those accounts. I am very much aware that there are certain procedures that have been adopted by the Honourable Minister of Health whereby persons that are owing money are being encouraged to come in and make full settlement, with discounts being given for bills outstanding over a given period.

Mr. Speaker, if this is brought to Finance Committee and a decision is taken to write-off those loans without a proper analysis done to determine, for example, what is uncollectible. . . I have looked at the list and I have seen the names of persons on there that I know have got the capacity to pay, in terms of their lifestyle and their places of employment, the positions that they hold.

Mr. Speaker, members will be surprised when they see the make-up of that list and also to hear the difficulty that the hospital is experiencing in terms of collecting those funds. So, I would suggest that while the monies can be transferred out of the advance account into the loan account, we need to identify, for example, what is collectible in the short term. The Minister as I mentioned has undertaken an exercise that seems to be bearing fruit up to this point in time. That needs to be looked at very carefully, the decision to write-off given sums of money. I know that all members of this honourable House are very prudent and practical persons but I do not think that write-offs should be arrived at quite easily without a thorough analysis of the balances.

The Speaker: Before asking a next supplementary, I will ask if you will move a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) in order that question time can continue.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8)

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move that the relevant Standing Order be suspended so that Question Time can continue.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I beg to second that, sir.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that we suspend Standing Order 23 (7) and (8). Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question time continues.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER (7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I would like to clarify that I was not suggesting that the Treasury Department should write off advance accounts without giving due attention and scrutiny to those accounts. The point that I was making is that the present structure of the accounts (and I will turn this into a question) is somewhat misleading because advance accounts . . . as we know, "advance" is due, is an asset, and it is inflating the asset position of Government and at the same time inflating the surplus position of Government thus producing incorrect accounts. That write-off could be done by transferring those accounts to loan accounts, properly done, so that we do not have this inflation position.

Mr. Speaker, this is not only my position but it is indeed the position of the Auditor General. Would the honourable Member undertake to have these adjustments done so that we can go into the New Year with these accounts cleared up and properly stated?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the concern that the honourable Member has just raised is not only his concern or the concern of the Auditor General, it is the concern of the entire Government. Also I am deeply concerned about it.

The assets of Government are only being overstated by the component of the advance account that can be deemed uncollectible because once a thorough analysis is done to identify what portion of that is collectible, that will constitute realisable income over a discreet or defined period of time. It does inflate the surplus and deficit account given the present system that is used because we try to defray...we recognise money spent as expenditure in any given year regardless of the flow of funds that will be realised from those expenditures in subsequent years.

So on this basis, it does overstate the surplus and deficit account, and we are all aware of this. As I indicated earlier, before that decision is taken this analysis should be done because it is much better to carry what I would refer to as a known disparity in the accounts to make sure that the decision supporting changes in those balances correctly reflects the decision that the Government would want to take that is expedient for the Government and country rather than to rush ahead and just make the adjustment.

I do understand the concerns expressed by the honourable Member. These are the same concerns by the Government. But as I said earlier, the Honourable Minister with responsibility is looking seriously at this and there are certain measure that are on the way. In fact, there is a submission that he is getting ready to put to Executive Council with certain recommendations. But every effort will be made in order to try and sort out this balance. I realise that it cannot be something that is allowed to become protracted. It has long been outstanding and it needs to be dealt with but at the same time whatever can be returned to Government needs to be looked at very carefully.

The Chairman: Are there any further supplementaries? No further supplementaries, moving on to question number 89 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 89

No. 89: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources if Executive Council has met and decided on any minor dredging applications in recent times.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Executive Council has granted approval for works in relation to two projects, namely Heron Harbour at Red Bay and Limestone Investments, south of Britannia, which are projects involving inland residential canal systems. Both projects involve some dredging in order to provide water access into the North Sound.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Minister state if there are any other applications similar in nature to these two, which have been dealt with which are pending?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my understanding that there is at least one outstanding.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if there is any intention to deal with the matter regardless of whatever the decision is?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The answer is yes, it will definitely be dealt with. However, these things do take quite a bit of investigation before a decision can be taken.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister tell the House of those two projects that have been approved, how long have those applications been in, and those which remain outstanding to be dealt with, when were they received?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: In the case of Heron Harbour, this is something that has been around from 1992 and the other has been a couple of years. However, I would also point out that since these two projects were approved, approval was also given for the one that I mentioned that was pending.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House what is the reason why it takes so long to arrive at these decisions for what seems to be a relatively straight forward venture?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, it seems like a long time but it was held up because of a very important matter. The extension of the Airport had to be taken into consideration when dealing with Heron Harbour and trying to work around that to satisfy both areas did take some time. I know that the parties for Heron Harbour met with Government on different occasions, as a matter of fact, I was a party to it on one occasion and we tried our best to work out things and finally we came to a decision.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if any of the hold-up in dealing with these applications regardless of what the decisions were was due to a belief that perhaps these applications may have had to come to the Legislative Assembly since there was a private member's motion regarding dredging approved a while back?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The original application as I understand it would have had to come to the Legislative Assembly and perhaps it did in a way help with the hold-up but it was not really the full reason why it was held up.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, just to be very clear to the Honourable Minister, my question wasn't relating to any one specific application. My question was relating to all of these applications. In light of that, perhaps the Minister would like to answer the question again because I was not asking about any specific one.

I am asking if the length of time that it has taken to deal with applications of this nature is partly due to this private member's motion that was approved and that there was a thought that these applications should come to the Legislative Assembly?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Initially, that was the situation but as members are aware, I think the Governor met with them on one occasion on dredging matters and thereafter a different decision was taken.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the Minister just mentioned a meeting with some of the members of the backbench. My next supplementary is asking for a precise and clear answer. My question is: Can the Minister now state then if the legal advice, which he has said in the past was being sought regarding the position of Executive Council being able to make decisions on certain matters which involved certain types of dredging . . . is that matter cleared up? And, does Executive Council now have a direct position, which they are taking on the matter?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I would say yes, to the answer because legal advice was given to Executive Council with regard to the matter and I should hope that with this advice, we will be able to more speedily deal with matters before us.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, with that in mind, sir, could the Member then tell us exactly what Council's position is now, having received that legal advice?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: As I said before, any such matter will be dealt with more speedily than before.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I asked the Member for a clear and specific answer. The Honourable Minister has not answered the question. I am asking the Minister to give me Executive Council's position. I am not asking how fast the matter is going to be dealt with.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, until Executive Council makes a complete ruling on this, I can say no more to the Member than what I have said. I know the legal advice I have been given and I feel certain that matters coming before Executive Council will now be dealt with more speedily.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So, in truth and in fact what the Minister should have said was that while legal advice has been given, Executive Council does not have a position yet.

The Speaker: Are you finished with your question?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I wanted to make sure that it was a question, Mr. Speaker, I am asking him if what I just said is correct—is that correct or not correct? And, if it is not correct then let us know exactly what the position is, please.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I can say no more than what I have said. No decision has been made by Executive Council and I cannot tell the Member any more.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, the supplementary that I would like to address to the Honourable Minister is that if the Executive Council has not made a decision with regards their policy on dredging, how were they able to arrive at a decision to allow these projects to dredge—how was that decision based?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the projects which have been mentioned in the question were dealt with as individual projects outside Government making an overall decision with regard to dredging.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I don't suppose it would be (and I will turn this into a question) a bad idea for the Legislative Assembly to know what the Government's position is, how the Government arrived at a decision to allow these particular entities to dredge when certain persons that have applications before the Government, we are told we don't whether or not they must be brought to the Legislative Assembly.

For the general knowledge of the public, I think it would be in the interest of good government for the Minister to say what is the criteria at this particular moment with regards to making decision, i.e, dredging. If he could tell us this.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, a motion was brought before the House dealing with major dredging permits. Prior to that, we are aware that in the Governor's Throne Speech it was said that there would be no more dredging in the North Sound. However, the projects that we were talking about were minor dredging applications and these were not affected by the motion, which has actually held up major projects.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I noticed that the Member has used the word "major." I would like to know what is the amount of dredging that is being done or has been requested to be done by these projects.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that in the case of Limestone Development, it was something like 20,000 cubic yards and in the case of Heron Harbour, which was a much bigger development, it was about 160,000 cubic yards.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say what is being done with this fill that is being dredged? Does he have any idea if it is being sold or what is being done with it?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Presently, the technical staff is working along with the developers in question and a decision will be taken as to whether this material will be utilised and paid for or if it will be referred to Government.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to apologise to you and the Minister for not having paid sufficient attention to his answer because I didn't expect that answer. Is he saying that no decision . . . that is, the Government's position has been made as to what will be done with the marl or the fill that is dredged?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, it is normal that the technical staff work along with the developers when it comes down to the amount of material that is removed. If it is the situation where the developer needs some of the material, it is my understanding that the Government will be paid for the material and in the event that Government needs the material, the material will be moved to Government premises.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say if the understanding or the agreement which the Government has with the developer at the moment is an agreement or understanding in relationship to the ministry or in relationship to the Government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I will have to say, Mr. Speaker, if the ministry is involved, the Government is definitely involved and vice versa.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say if it is the Government's policy to require a royalty and what is the exact methodology employed here—do you arrive and decide at a royalty when you are making the decision to give the permit to dredge? Or do they dredge and then you decide on a royalty afterwards? Do you collect the royalty before or do you allow the dredging and then collect a royalty afterwards? What is the specific Government's methodology and whether or not that is being followed at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the department would be working along with the developers and then a recommendation would have to be made to the ministry and then in turn passed on to Executive Council for a decision before the licence would be issued stating the amount of royalties that are recommended.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: So do I understand the Minister correctly in saying that the only decision that has been made so far has been the decision to allow the entities referred to here in his written answer, to dredge?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Yes, Mr. Speaker. It is just as stated in the answer to the question and before anything can be done, a licence has to be issued.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town, two supplementaries.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say what other permits or requirements would the entities have to meet in order to be able to dredge? Do they need Water Authority permits? Do they need an environmental impact study? What do they specifically need or it is just the approval in itself, sufficient permission for them to begin some kind of activity?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: This would come as a recommendation from the DOE once the project has been checked out properly and along with that the developers would definitely have to submit to Government a full schedule of the development.

The Speaker: Do you have a follow-up? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

I will allow the Elected Member from North Side after. Go ahead, if you have a follow-up.

Dr. Frank McField: I just wanted to find out if the Minister at this particular time is aware of whether or not any of the entities have started any time of dredging or excavation of material.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: To the best of my knowledge and the advice that I am receiving, nobody has started as yet.

The Speaker: The Elected Member from North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Would the Honourable Minister tell the House the application that came to Executive Council from Heron Harbour and Limestone Investments for what type of licence was this application—was it a coastal works application? Was it a dredging permit? And what are the terms of the coastal works licence once issued by Executive Council?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Both applications in question here had planning approvals for canals to be cut inland. The coastal works licence, which was granted by Council, was in relation to tying the project with the North Sound. So, it was just a canal that they actually had involved within the coastal works licence.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: If I understand the Minister correctly Executive Council did grant a coastal works licence—is that correct?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: What was granted by Council was for the approval for works. Nothing was carried out until the licence was entered into with both parties.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Would the Honourable Minister say who grants that licence when the work is ready to commence?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The licence will be drawn up by the Legal Department and signed by the Governor.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: The licence will be drawn up on behalf of the Ministry for Agriculture, communications and Natural Resources? The Legal Department will draw this up on behalf of the ministry—am I correct in understanding that? Not just the Government, it is on behalf of the ministry who deals with coastal works licence?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, it would be on behalf of the ministry but it would go back to Executive Council to be ratified.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable Minister would say if a letter from a Government Minute was sent to Heron Harbour and Limestone Investments giving approval in principle and what were the terms that had to be met by these two companies before a lease or a licence could be drawn up on behalf of the Government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources. I can only allow two more supplementaries and then we have to go on.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, a letter was sent to both parties advising them of the approval from Executive Council and that they would have to meet with DOE to finalise what would actually be in the licence.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister regarding the other applications that are outstanding if he is in a position to tell the Honourable House when those applications will be dealt with because it is my understanding that there are developers who are put off by the inability to have their request granted.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Member is speaking of major dredging applications?

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: No, Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Honourable Minister that what I am talking about is minor. There is one development in the vicinity of Heron Harbour, a little to what I would call to the south or east of Heron Harbour, there is one such application that I am referring to. The gentleman is a constituent of mine who has come to me on numerous occasions expressing his disappointment and how he is being financially affected.

I am aware, Mr. Speaker, of the motion limiting the business of major dredging that has to have the approval of the Legislative Assembly, what I am talking about is minor work.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Member for that. Now, I think I understand which project he is speaking of. Just to say, at first this was very minor, it was just the removal of plugs and then the developer found that he needed to do a little more so this is how something can be held up. However, the approval has been given and he too has been sitting with DOE working out and fine-tuning what will go into the licence.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (6)

The Speaker: Moving on to question number 90 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town but prior to putting that I need a suspension of Standing Order 23 (6) in accordance with Standing Order 86 that Standing Order 23 (6) says not more than three questions requiring an oral answer shall appear on the Order Paper in the name of the same Member on the same date and any question in excess of that number shall not be called by the Presiding Officer.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 23 (6) in conjunction with Standing Order 86 to allow more than three questions to be asked by one honourable Member.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The Third Elected Member for George Town

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I second that motion.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(6) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW FOUR QUESTIONS UPON THE ORDER PAPER STANDING IN THE NAME OF THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN.

The Speaker: Question number 90 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I am absolutely certain that the Chairman of the Business Committee knows better than this but he wants to prove that he has no problems with us asking questions, and I really appreciate. But I am sure there could have been no mistake on his part by allowing more than three questions to come on the Order Paper.

QUESTION 90

No. 90: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning is any policy regarding pension benefits for long serving employees of Cayman Airways Limited?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the answer: There has not been a pension policy in place at Cayman Airways Ltd prior to the current requirements under the Pension Law. Currently, all employees are covered under the Pension Plan that is administered by the Chamber of Commerce. Under this plan, the current level of employee contribution is 2-5 per cent of the employee's monthly salary and Cayman Airways Ltd matches this amount.

Employees who are currently under the age of 41 years will be required by the year 2002 to contribute the maximum of 5 per cent. Employees who are between 41 and 46 years will be required, by the year 2000, to contribute the maximum of 5 per cent. For those employees who are 46 years and older, the mandatory contribution is currently at 5 per cent.

A retirement policy was introduced in April 1999 that allowed employees 65 years and older to voluntarily retire before September 1999 and receive a severance payment of one week's salary for every year worked up to a maximum of 12 weeks, plus travel and cargo benefits on Cayman Airways Ltd. Only a few employees have expressed an interest or have accepted this offer.

Cayman Airways Ltd is continuing to develop a retirement policy that falls within the Cayman Islands' Labour Law and also ensures that a balance is achieved between company requirements and social obligations.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, first of all, let me just let it be made very clear to the Minister that I appreciate Cayman Airways' position at present. I am fully aware—well, when I say fully aware, I am fairly fully aware of the circumstances under which Cayman Airways and its Management and its Board has to operate with regards to policy because cash flow is tight and the company is running on a lean line, so to speak and we all understand that.

My questioning with regards this matter is not with expectations that are onerous and cannot be dealt with. I am just looking at it from the very last sentence in the answer, which the Minister reads, "Cayman Airways Ltd is continuing to develop a retirement policy that falls within the Cayman Islands' Labour Law and also ensures that a balance is achieved between company requirements and social obligations."

Given the fact that there are not necessarily a very large number of employees who remain there, who have over ten years of service, has Cayman Airways and/or the Board ever tried to consider looking at those longer term employees with regards to trying to achieve some type of circumstance, which would allow for them spending the rest of their normal productive working years at Cayman Airways but at the end of the day still being able to look forward to some type of pension which would allow them the normal circumstance understanding that the pension plan that Cayman Airways has engaged in, does not begin until next year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The only previous pension was many years ago and I understand that that was run for a short period and it was cancelled. Beyond that Cayman Airways basically now complies with the law and that basically is where we are at present.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I took time out to clear the air from the very beginning so that this one ends up right. So, the Minister has said that basically there is nothing more than what have been given in the answer at present. I understand that.

I want to bring to the Minister's attention and I will turn this into a question but so that he can fully appreciate the reasoning behind the substantive question. While Cayman Airways is a limited company and it is not necessarily thought of either as one of the Government authorities or as an arm of Government or as Government itself and for various reasons, we don't want it to be like that. At the same time, many of the staff at Cayman Airways consider their tenure there and their contribution as parallel to people in the civil service, to people with the authorities—with the Port Authority or with the other authorities, who all have at some point in time been able to provide some type of pension benefits.

Again, I grant the circumstances that Cayman Airways faces and I grant that it is not easily for either Management and/or the Board of Directors of Cayman Airways to simply look at the company's financial position and say, 'This is what we are going to do to keep a bunch of Caymanian employees happy'.

My question is this: Would the Minister consider having some type of position looked at with a view to possibly bringing it to this Legislative Assembly? Not for a minute am I trying to suggest that the employees themselves must not shoulder a certain amount of responsibility if they are seeking when they get to that age to start reaping the benefits of a pension—not to make their own contributions parallel to whatever can be done but I am asking the Minister to consider getting all of the facts together, understanding the length of tenure for the employees. Understanding that what is happening now with the newer employees is not something that is not workable but there are several employees (although it is not a huge amount) who have been there for ten years and over—some fifteen, some twenty. But if there could be some type of proposal whereby if Cayman Airways is not even in a position to fund this circumstance on its own, for us to be able to know what we are up against, to try to get the situation in line because once it is in line then continuity is no problem.

The problem we face is what went on before, to the time the pension started and perhaps if there is some method by which it could be looked at with a view to bringing forward something that could bring this in line to allow those people to look forward to a decent pension—considering their earning power at the time and over the various years, and what it would have been and what they would have contributed. Even if it is a circumstance that Cayman Airways itself cannot deal with, as a one time shot—understand this clearly, I am not suggesting for Government to be looking towards a continuing burden or anything like that—to try to bring the circumstances up to where it is acceptable and palatable to these employees. Would the Minister consider getting something like that together, bringing it back to us so that we can have a look at it to see if it is something that we might wish to look at? In order, to at some point in time view them with pension benefits in line with everyone else that is involved in the government services.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, by all means I will ask the Board and the Management to look at this and get the information on this. As the honourable Member knows until four years ago, the Government's pensions were not funded and still heavily under funded. We move now from $6 million pension funds of Government to, I think, it is $50 million or $60 million. So we put about $10 million - $12 million every year into that. So it is a policy of this Government to assist in bringing the pension fund, in fact, we are the only government that has ever made any effort to bring the pension fund that is under-funded as far up to date as possible.

In line with that policy by all means, we can ask for this to be looked at and for it to be brought back here for this House to have a look at it and make a decision on.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? No further supplementaries, we will move on to Question

No. 91, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

WITHDRAWAL OF QUESTION NO. 91

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I would have to be grossly inconsiderate to ask this question after the inquisition that we submitted the Honourable Minister to. Believe you me, he is not such a good friend of mine but he is not my worst enemy and I would have to spare him another inquisition, sir. So I respectfully beg to withdraw the question.

The Speaker: I shall put the question then that this question be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question number 91 has been withdrawn.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 91 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. Is it the wish of the House that we take the morning break at this time or we continue with Private Member's Motion?

We shall suspend for fifteen minutes and may I ask members to let's try to return [within] fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.49 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.19 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Item number 4, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 26/99, Request for Government to consider the purchase of properties, to be moved by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 26/99

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT TO CONSIDER THE PURCHASE OF PROPERTIES

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am wondering whether I have to read the old motion or read the motion as...

The Speaker: I would suggest reading the old motion first and have that properly seconded.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, sir. Mr. Speaker, I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 26 standing in my name, which reads as follows:

"WHEREAS there is an obvious need for the Government to be able to service the needs of the community and country;

"AND WHEREAS it is obvious that in the near future there will have to be some expansion of the Legislative Assembly precincts;

"AND WHEREAS the West Bay Cemetery is nearing capacity and in need of property to expand upon;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government consider the purchase of the properties namely: George Town Block OPY, Parcel 24, adjacent to the Legislative Assembly Building; and West Bay South Block 5C, Parcel 123, adjacent to the current West Bay Cemetery;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT such consideration be done so that arrangements for the purchase be done at an early convenience so that funds may be available in next year's budget;

"AND BE IT FINALLY RESOLVED THAT such negotiations be done directly with the requisite property owners so that commissions can be eliminated."

The Speaker: The seconder. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 26/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Before I move directly into the motion, I am wondering whether at this point I could deal with the amendment.

The Speaker: Certainly! Please proceed.

AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION 26/99

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for allowing the amendment and it reads as follows: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52 (1) and (2), I, the First Elected Member for West Bay seek to move the following amendment to Private Member's Motion no. 26: In the third "WHEREAS" by inserting "and Boatswain Bay cemeteries are" and deleting "is"; by inserting the following new second resolve: "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government also consider purchasing the property known as West Bay North West (WBNW) Block 4b, parcel 28, which adjoins the Boatswain Bay cemetery to the east."

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the amendment, sir.

The Speaker: The amendment has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to the amendment?

What I was going to say to you, maybe you may wish to read your amended motion and speak to that in its entirety, which would cover the amendment, if that is the wish of the House.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The amended motion then reads:

"WHEREAS there is an obvious need for the Government to be able to service the needs of the community and country;

"AND WHEREAS it is obvious that in the near future there will have to be some expansion of the Legislative Assembly precincts;

"AND WHEREAS the West Bay and Boatswain Bay cemeteries are nearing capacity and in need of property to expand upon;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government consider the purchase of the properties namely: George Town Block OPY, Parcel 24, adjacent to the Legislative Assembly Building; and West Bay South Block 5C Parcel 123, adjacent to the current West Bay Cemetery;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government also consider purchasing the property known as WBNW block 4B, parcel 28, which adjoins the Boatswain Bay cemetery to the east.

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT such consideration be done so that arrangements for the purchase be done at an early convenience so that funds may be available in next year's budget;

"AND BE IT FINALLY RESOLVED THAT such negotiations be done directly with the requisite property owners so that commissions can be eliminated."

The Speaker: Before you go any further, the amendment has been duly moved and seconded. The question is that Private Member's Motion 26/99 as amended in a notice provided to members (and I would add the amended motion has been read for clarity) that is open to debate. Does any Member wish to debate or would they prefer to just take the vote on that and debate the entire motion as amended?

I will put the question to the amendment. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The amendment is carried.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION 26/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: I will now ask that the honourable Member speak to the motion as amended.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I believe this motion is one that is not controversial. We all know that there needs to be cemetery expansion in most, if not all districts in these islands. Also, Mr. Speaker, those of us that work and have to be around this building most of the year, realise that we have run out of space here and there needs to be serious expansion of this Legislative Assembly—talk which has been ongoing for some time.

I would like to thank the seconder who really brought it to my attention—about the expansion needed here at the Assembly and the identification of the adjacent property. I will leave him to deal with that and I will deal with the matters affecting the district of West Bay.

Mr. Speaker, the need in my district is very obvious. Back in the years, 1989 - 1992, the Third Elected Member of West Bay and I got agreement from the current Third Elected Member of George Town for some general expansion and clean-up of the cemeteries, which he at that time was responsible for. We did a general clean-up of the North West Point Cemetery and we also put in retaining walls and got government to build vaults for the first time in that cemetery.

This, Mr. Speaker, put that cemetery in good standing. Mr. Bodden, the elderly gentleman that we put in as caretaker between the years, 1992 - 1996, when the present Minister had responsibility for it, is doing a good job of keeping the cemetery in good shape. I would like to thank him for the excellent job he has done.

Also, between the years 1989 - 1992, again, the Third Elected Member for West Bay and I got government to do some work in the Boatswain Bay Cemetery. Some vaults were also put in for the first time and retaining walls were made. The lady that cleans that cemetery has for many years done an excellent job and we have no complaints about the Boatswain Bay or the North West Point Cemeteries.

However, the Boatswain Bay Cemetery is in need of expansion. The property known as WBNW Block 4B, Parcel 28 (which is adjacent to the cemetery) butting and binding the cemetery on the east side is available to government. In fact, Mr. Speaker, the owner of that property has been approached many times over the years to sell that land but he always recognised that government would need it at some time or another and so he always refused to sell it. The property is over some one-and-one-half acres and it available—he will sell it to government.

Mr. Speaker, the West Bay Cemetery (that is, the one on the main road) is the cemetery in the worst condition. We have virtually run out of space with the exception of a few vaults. The last vaults built there were built on a space that I thought was sort of left as a walkway or a roadway through the cemetery, although it was a sizeable roadway. But they had to put in the vaults. The space that exists on the side adjacent to the main road on the north side of the cemetery is very small, with one or two coconut trees in it. We have said that that could be used for parking.

Mr. Speaker, the property known as West Bay South 5C, Parcel 123 has been in some controversy. When I say that, at one point the owners were claiming that some graves had encroached upon their property and they were negotiating with government to build a wall, albeit not troubling the graves but getting compensation for their property on the beach side. I believe and I understand that government might have agreed to even build a fence—I don't know. But I believe after a meeting called by the Third Elected Member for West Bay and I, with some of the families concerned, the property owners have agreed to build their fence so that the graves will not be disturbed.

I feel, sir, that because of the obvious need that exists for burial ground that government should now negotiate with the owners to purchase that property, which is also known as the Fletchers' Property. I would hope, sir, this could be done quickly. When government purchases the land—whenever that is—there needs to be proper development so that, for instance when you have to take a casket into the cemetery, the walkway as it now is . . . so that you cannot walk side by side holding the casket properly, you have to negotiate your way into it. So, it is with some difficulty that that has taken place.

I also believe that government should buy it and that a properly defined roadway to the beach be made. There is a public beach well used by residents and tourists because of a popular reef in the back of the cemetery. Many persons are complaining about what the users of the beach are doing the cemetery—they bring bottles of water and wash their feet off on the walls. Those sorts of things are happening. And we all know how we try, most Caymanian families, to look after gravesites and respect our deceased families.

So, a properly defined roadway to the beach and proper signage needs to be in place. I don't think that I need to say anymore there, Mr. Speaker, than that property can be used and needs to be used.

Mr. Speaker, I have had some discussions with the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac also about the Creek Cemetery, which is adjacent to the Police Station. That also needs expanding and as I understand it, the owner of the property where the expansion can take place is willing—and, in fact, need the funds. So that should also be looked into along with these other matters.

Mr. Speaker, I would guess government is now in the process of budget preparation and we suggest, sir, that these requests be put into the budget for next year, God willing. Property will not come cheap now and will only be much more costly in the future. Government, however, can negotiate purchase contracts for over a period of years with some of these owners; but in some cases, if they are not willing—and I believe you are going to find people willing—as I said, for instance, the one in Boatswain Bay has kept his property specifically because he knew government would need it. But if there are any problems with the others, government can move to acquire.

You know, Mr. Speaker, government does not acquire anybody's land without trying to pay them the proper market value and I suggest that's what should happen.

Mr. Speaker, I don't know what the census will reveal but I don't believe that the population of West Bay is decreasing. I believe it is increasing. I don't believe the mortality rate is decreasing. So, as I said, there is obvious need and I would hope, sir, that government would move quickly into this matter and, as I said, negotiate purchase contracts with the individuals.

Mr. Speaker, the matter pertaining to the Legislature will be dealt with by the seconder of the motion, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

I thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, you will be well aware, sir—as your record here spans many years—that the legislature has grown to the point now where for some years we have been thinking about ways that we may reconfigure the existing precincts so that it can more easily accommodate what appears to be a growing parliament.

Mr. Speaker, we have been talking about expansion of the precincts in one form or another for many years—ever since I have been in this Parliament (and compared to your tenure, I am a relative new comer. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the time has come for us now to go beyond talking and to seek some action.

I am reminded of the census coming up October 10. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that when the results of that census are known, that we can look forward to a population somewhere in the vicinity of about 40,000 according to informed and educated persons and indicators. That being the case, we certainly would have to think of those constituencies that have significant increases of population somewhere down the line increasing their representation in terms of the number of members who sit in the Assembly. Certainly, George Town and West Bay immediately come to mind and not far behind will probably be Bodden Town, if current trends continue.

What we are going to be faced with is an increase in membership. Already, Mr. Speaker, our parking lot is congested. When all the members are in attendance and the staff, one has to negotiate a parking area with the greatest of caution. Certainly, there is little or no room for manoeuvrability. That is compounded by the fact that those persons from the Press who cover the proceedings of the Legislature have no assigned parking spaces within the Legislative Assembly precincts. And, the staff from the ministries who often have to come to the Legislature to be in contact with their ministers or honourable members as well as those who have to serve as witnesses to various committees and who have to be on hand for questioning and technical support to the ministers find it inconvenient.

Indeed there is absolutely no parking pre-assigned or available for these persons. Some of them have to walk from the Government Administration Building. And, Mr. Speaker, believe you me there is nothing wrong with the walk except sometimes it is inconvenient when the weather is inclement or if they have to take a load of material—which is not infrequent (technical material, books, hand-outs or what have you). It makes it rather difficult to walk from the precincts down to the Legislative Assembly.

Sometimes when it is raining, Mr. Speaker, I feel sorry for these people. You know, a short while ago, one of the persons who covers the meetings of the Legislative Assembly came in and I had remarked to that person about the walk in the rain. So there is a need for us to address the problem of parking and also there is a need for us to address the problem of providing more physical space for the people who work in the Assembly to be able to manoeuvre, to store things and to have office space.

Mr. Speaker, I am reminded that as Members of the Legislative Assembly not even the ministers have any office space assigned to them in this building. We have but the barest of conveniences, that is, little lockers akin to what you would find in any high school. There is no cubicle where a member can sit at a little desk or take a phone call in some privacy. We have what I would call a modest library or research area . . . and that is good, but it needs to be expanded. I can make the comment that perhaps before we talk about serious expansion of that, members might like to consider utilising it more frequently.

So, Mr. Speaker, we are in quandary. There is a piece of property adjoining the Legislative Assembly, the piece of property identified in the motion. I believe it would be timely and sensible for us to explore the possibility of acquiring that. For, Mr. Speaker, even if we exercise the option to go upstairs to add another story on to this building, we still are faced with the problem of parking. So, I am saying that while we have the option of expanding the physical building by going upstairs, we still will be faced with the problem of inadequate parking space.

Now, I believe for the sake of efficiency, security and for a general improvement in our working surroundings and working atmosphere that the parking space of the Legislative Assembly should be so constructed that it can accommodate all of the persons who regularly work at and visit these precincts and still allow enough space for the casual visitor or the customer who may come to access laws from the Legislative Assembly. So the government cannot really be wrong in acquiring additional property.

I must admit, however, Mr. Speaker, I don't know any intricate details as to whether the owners of the property mentioned would be interested in selling or not. We merely threw this out for the government to explore the possibilities. We well understand the fact that we cannot impose any expenditure on the government, hence we are asking the government to consider this.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a controversial motion. There is no need for any acrimony. It is a straightforward business proposition. I hope that the government will see fit not only to entertain the notion of acquiring the property to expand the Legislative Assembly but also (as my colleague, the mover, the First Elected Member for West Bay, proposed) that they could also seek additional properties to expand the cemeteries in his constituency. Indeed, while at that, give a general look towards the cemeteries in the other constituencies.

I know that the Minister had made some statement sometime ago in a debate about the government and their commitment to find additional space. So, I leave this, Mr. Speaker, with the government and I am reminding the Minister that I am calling in my favour now for not subjecting him to that inquisition earlier this morning. He is not going scot-free. I expect that he is going to accommodate my request at this time. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: This is the time that we normally take for lunch, if you wish. We shall suspend until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.07 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 26/99. Does any other Member wish to speak? (Pause) The floor is opened to debate. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, my contribution to this motion will be short, but I will concentrate more on the issue of the purchase of the property adjacent to these premises, and I just want to air my views on it.

First of all, if we look at exactly how we are situated, sir (and I am not quite sure of directions so I won't attempt that) I am little bit befuddled here. But directly from where I stand to my left is the George Town Town Hall. Directly behind us is the Tower Building, both being owned by the Crown.

We have this problem that was raised by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town with regard to parking, and he also raised several valid points proving the need in the very near future to expand the size the structure. The motion is asking for the acquisition of the vacant property between the AALL Building, and the Wholesome Bakery property, the back of it butting and binding the Legislative Assembly property and also the Tower Building property.

Looking at the big picture (and it is the way I am trying to put it forward for future use even if in years to come the government develops some type of master plan for housing) the various agencies which operate central government, whether we are including the judicial branch or the legislative branch, acquisition of that property in my mind can in no way cause anything but sensible cohesion at the end of the day. So if the train of thought in the future were that you were not going to continue to occupy the Tower Building with government departments or you were mindful to relocate the Legislative Assembly—I am not saying this is going to be the case but even if you were coming to that view what the government would probably have, even though there are four different parcels of land involved, is combine the largest single parcel in OPY.

So the investment in the property in my view simply gives the government the latitude to be able to think both medium and long-term with regard to whatever its plans are. So over and above all of the other reasoning that has been put forward, I am trying to say that the land will not spoil and I believe that it makes all the sense in the world because what we might end up with is a situation where we have no choice—but no land. That is very possible.

While some of us may not be here when anything is done (for more reasons than one) about this building, we still have to be looking down the line as to what is happening. So, from that perspective and over and above looking if the size of the building is going to be increased, the requirements for parking and all of that, I think when we put all of the government properties which adjoin this building into perspective, it would behove the government to be looking towards purchasing that vacant property.

The other sensible thing about it is that it is vacant property. You could not be forced into a circumstance of buying an already constructed building, whose configuration may not suit the desired use as has happened in the past where what you had to do to renovate or fix is just as bad as if you had started from scratch.

I am only just making those few points along those lines to say that I believe the government should certainly consider accepting the motion. Although, I spent the past few minutes just dealing with the property adjacent to these precincts, I will also just take a minute to touch on the other aspects of the motion which entail space for a cemetery. Again, while the motion limits itself with regards to whatever space we are talking about for cemeteries, I do believe that there is a need for government to be looking at all of the properties with regard to space for cemeteries to ensure that, again, they don't get caught with their pants down, so to speak; so that you don't find yourself in a position where you have to purchase something and the price you have to pay is because you have no choice. Mr. Speaker, so many times we find that all we are doing is outing fires rather than looking forward and planning properly and being able to be more cost effective.

So, I just want to say that I support the motion and I trust that the government will see the logic of the motion and find it within them to accept it. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The government is pleased to accept the motion presently before us. We are very well aware of the problem as outlined in the motion and I am pleased to say that we have already in place and in our hands, a report from a committee that was set up sometime ago to look after the needs for cemeteries throughout the islands. This I hope to lay on the Table of the House at a later date.

Mr. Speaker, the property which has been mentioned in the district of West Bay adjoining the Boatswain Bay Cemetery and the main cemetery, it is a fact that both areas are now stricken for space and we must take the necessary action to make sure that we have secured adequate space for future years.

The committee met on several occasions. As a matter of fact, certain areas were visited and the suggestions were actually placed in the report. Also, there was a suggestion from the committee that instead of us continuing to utilise beach land (as it has been for many years now and, of course, we are aware that there is a shortage of this expensive land) that we should turn our thoughts to other areas seeing that nowadays we are in a position to use equipment to create burial grounds on less favourable properties.

We are pleased to know that members who have spoken from the backbench are in support of government making this move and we also support the idea that we should try our best to have something placed in the budget which will soon be discussed among us. We will have to take into consideration that this will have to be added to the list of priorities, which we will have to sit down and prioritise to make sure that we can tackle this problem before it is out of hand.

So, Mr. Speaker, with those few words, I am pleased on behalf of the government to say that we accept this motion and we will try our best with the help of the backbench to do whatever possible to facilitate this great need.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer my support to this private member's motion. I think the merits of it are very good and essential, and it is something that makes sense. It falls in line with our philosophy of forward planning.

With respect to the additional space for the Legislative Assembly, I support that 100 percent. I think, even though it might be a little bit expense—that is a reality here in Cayman at the present time as far as land is concerned—it is not going to get any cheaper. One of the quandaries that government finds itself in right now is that it needs to expand but it doesn't have any land on which to expand. So they are out there, all over the place spending hundreds of thousands of dollars a year in rent when they could be...

If twenty years ago, the politicians had the foresight to buy up some property, we could have built our own building, financed it because of our good credit and it probably would have been years up the road as far as the financial position is concerned.

With respect to the properties to be acquired for the two cemeteries in West Bay, it is a fact that we are running out of space especially in the central cemetery. I believe it would make sense for us to approach the adjoining landowners with a view of acquiring the property for possible expansion. Not only for the cemetery, Mr. Speaker, because you are talking about not only a valuable and costly piece of property but also a sizeable piece of property and you could possibly have space for something else that the district might need by way of service.

The Boatswain Bay Cemetery is in the same position. It is filling up very quickly. And as the First Elected Member for West Bay mentioned, the property owner is interested in government having it. He has seen over the years that government would be in need of the property and I think it just makes sense for us, Mr. Speaker, to start negotiations and try to acquire it as soon as possible so that government will be in a position as the demand requires it to contain and provide the services that we need.

Believe you me, a cemetery is a very essential service in this country. Here we have a great deal of respect for a loved one that is deceased and we want to make sure that they are put away in the most decent fashion. Mr. Speaker, we have always taken pride in doing that and maintaining those burial grounds. I think the whole issue of this motion makes sense and I do give it my 100 percent support. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer my support to Private Member's Motion No. 26/99 as amended. The motion asks the government to consider purchasing certain properties, namely, the property in George Town adjacent to the Legislative Assembly Building and two properties in West Bay for cemeteries.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to confine my comments to the purchase of property for the Legislative Assembly Building, although I do support the other two proposed purchases. A number of members have spoken on that and I need not comment further.

As you know, I am the Member responsible for the Legislative Department. For some time, I have been concerned about the fact that we have outgrown this building in many respects. This building has served very well but with the passage of time and with additional members added when we increased the number of elected representatives from 12 to 15, we began to run out of space. I believe it is pretty evident that both the Committee Room and the Common Room with the added numbers can be referred to as the proverbial sardine can, where we are squeezed in.

It is only appropriate that we consider an expansion to this building to cope with today's needs. But before that can be done, it is necessary to purchase land, and there is very little land around this building. We certainly need to get a bit more. And, I am certainly pleased to see from those who have spoken already that there is a will to go again with this. I hope that we can as a government purchase the additional land, and then I hope we can move on to expanding this building to continue to serve the needs of this country.

So, without further ado, I offer my support to this motion. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: We have approximately four minutes before the normal hour of adjournment if any other Member wishes to speak. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I guess that we will probably think that by the time it comes to our death that we wouldn't need property any more, but there seems to still be a time when we need to consider a place in the ground. It just goes to show how very important land really is at the end of the day as we need it when we are born into this world and we need it when we are going out of this world.

It would be a good idea at this particular point to do the necessary expansions I believe for cemeteries not just in this particular area. I think it would be wise for the government at this particular time to consider overall what type of needs we will have in this country over the next 20 - 30 years with regards to burial places.

I know also that the Prospect Cemetery is itself getting used up and I feel that maybe we need to have government do research as to what will be the requirements of the country.

With regards to the Legislative Assembly, I certainly hope that the government can purchase the property at this particular time. I also was very interested when you were looking at McDonald Square and I thought that would have also been a very good and reasonable addition to the Legislative Assembly because it is built already. So, perhaps [it is something] that the Chief Secretary can take into consideration. I know that the place has been up for sale and I also know that the Chamber of Commerce has moved in there so it might cause a little bit of complication. But, basically, as I was aware of the selling price at that particular time I thought it would be an ideal place, at least in order to be able to house your additional auxiliary services.

So I hope that the government takes those basic two points—the one with regard to the McDonald Square Building in relationship to the Legislative Assembly's need for additional space; and also, with regard to cemeteries they could get the Minister who is responsible for this particular portfolio to perhaps do an assessment of what the needs will be in this country over the next 20 - 30 years.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until tomorrow morning at 10.00 a.m.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 a.m. tomorrow. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.32 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM THURSDAY, 9 SEPTEMBER 1999.

EDITED

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports Women, Youth and Culture]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for absence from the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation due to a death in the family, and for late attendance from the Third Elected Member for George Town.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable/Official Members. Question number 92 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 92

No. 92: Mr. Linford A. Pierson asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development to state the latest available figures on the following government accounts: (a) surplus/deficit account; (b) all advance accounts; (c) public debt account; (d) general reserve account; (e) the reconciled cash at bank balances; and (f) contingency warrants pending approval by Finance Committee.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The balances on the various accounts as listed will be given as at 31 July 1999 with the exception of (e), which deals with the reconciled cashbook at bank balances. The Treasury's reconciliation is up to 31 March. However, we have the cashbook balances as at 31 July.

a)	Surplus/Deficit Account	$18 million
b)	All Advance Accounts	23.3 million
c)	Public Debt Account	86.1 million
	▪ Public debt (central Government)	69.2 million
	▪ Self-financing loans	16.9 million
d)	General Reserve Account	10.9 million
e)	Reconciled cash at bank balances	2.5 million cr (at 31 March 1999)
f)	Contingency Warrants	0.41 million (of which $.38 million is covered by blocking)

The unreconciled balance as per the cashbook as at 31 July (and this will be more relevant) is $1.7 million.

This is showing an overdraft balance in the cashbook. But this does not take into account debits and credits on the bank statements not reflected in the cashbook balance. These items are outstanding.

Most deposits that would have gone into the general accounts with the banks would have been reflected in the cashbook.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: To preface my supplementary, I would just like to thank the honourable member, and to congratulate his department for having the figures up to 31 July. I think this is a major improvement in the financial records of government. I know that I sometimes might be critical, and I hope it is constructive criticism. But in this case I want to congratulate the honourable member.

I wonder if the honourable member is in a position to give a breakdown of the advance accounts.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: First let me thank the honourable Third Elected Member for George Town for his compliments. But I will have to share those with the staff within the Treasury Department, the Deputy Financial Secretary, and everyone working together as a team.

The information the honourable member is asking for will be available during the course of the morning as these answers were finalised less than fifteen minutes ago. The Accountant General came down and left her files. She has just stepped out of the Chamber to ask that such be brought down to her. When she gets back into the Chamber that information will be available.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: My compliments were intended for his staff and his department. The general reserve account at $10.9 million, I wonder if the honourable member can state if the proposed $2 million transfer is included in that figure?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The $2 million that was approved when the budget was being considered in January of that year where a decision was taken to transfer the $2 million from the surplus and deficit account for the year ending 1998, that is not a part of the $10 million as yet. That will be transferred later on in the year.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I wonder if the honourable member can state 1) whether that is intended to be transferred from the surplus account as it is now, or is he waiting to have a bigger surplus account; and 2) with the $2.5 million credit in the bank account, have all outstanding bills been paid?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: All bills are paid on a current basis. We do not hold back bills in order to try and effect improvements in the cash balance.

As the honourable Third Elected Member for George Town is aware, there is an approval in place that has been granted by the Finance Committee, hence the Legislative Assembly, for $4 million. This is the authorised limit. If by chance that balance is to be exceeded, it will mean having to come back to Finance Committee to explain the financial circumstances of the Government. But what I have also asked the Accountant General to do is to get a list of fixed deposits we have placed with the various banks to show what the net effect will be once those are offset against the overdraft position.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: It seems that my good friend is a little touchy this morning. I wasn't suggesting that his department holds back bills. I wonder if he could say with the general reserves at $10.9 million, how far away this is from the three-month reserve level that was recommended by the Public Accounts Committee?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I would like to assure the honourable Third Elected Member for George Town that I am not touchy this morning. I am just being candid. But I think it is necessary to explain because one method of attempting to keep the overdraft limit in line would be to delay the payment of bills. But I just had to point—

[Inaudible comment]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, it would not be appropriate for me to comment on that observation.

I just thought it necessary to point this out because the question was raised as to whether bills were being paid on a current basis. I thought it was necessary to offer that clarification.

The general reserve balance of $10.9 million is very far away from the three-month provision. It was agreed, as discussed on several occasions in this House, that a general reserve balance should be fixed at the equivalent of three months of recurrent expenditure. It will take us some time to get to this limit, but we have indicated that as part of the financial reform review process the government is taking a very concerted decision. Whenever surplus funds become available, a part of that surplus is put into the general reserve account.

Also, once the financial reform initiatives are finalised, it is hoped that a structure will emerge where a determination will be made as to what portion of recurrent revenue will be applied to defray recurrent and statutory expenditure; what percentage will be allocated to the capital development fund and other funds. A specific percentage will be set in order to be put into the general reserve account.

Once the general reserve account balance is reached, what amounts to the equivalent of three months of recurrent expenditure for a given year, then a decision will be taken at that time as to how to effect certain adjustments whereby if recurrent expenditure is seen to increase over and above what it was in a previous year, then it may not necessarily mean having to put in 2 per cent, for example, of recurrent revenue. It could require a sum less than that.

Whenever recurrent expenditure falls below (we have not seen that happen as yet) . . . with the process now in train it is likely that we could see recurrent expenditure remaining constant or possibly seeing some reduction because as soon as we have transparency, effective costing of all government's expenditure where it will be known by members of the Legislative Assembly, the public at large, the government, then that is possible. So, when we get to that point a decision will be taken in terms of how the percentage that is to be allocated from recurrent revenue will be adjusted on an annual basis.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: The honourable member stated that the reconciled cash at bank balances at 31 March 1999 was in a credit of $2.5 million, that's an overdraft I imagine. I wonder if the honourable member could say what the actual current bank account is at present.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: When we say the balance as at 31 July, it should be reflected as a debit balance. That is a good balance. The one at the 31 March of $2.5 million is not an overdraft. The balance as at 31 July, $1.7 million, that is an overdraft balance. That would be in terms of how the cashbook structure is set up.

According to the Accountant General, it has just been explained. So we have a debit balance as at 31 March of $2.5 million, which would be a favourable balance, and the balance as at 31 July would be a credit balance of $1.7 million overdraft. Offsetting that as at 31 July was a short-term fixed deposit to a value of $7,067,006.85. So the net effect of that is in excess of $5 million.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: For the interest of the listening public, a debit balance in a cashbook is a good balance, and a credit balance—contrary to public opinion—is a bad balance. It is an overdraft in a cashbook. So the $2.5 million debit makes a major and a substantial difference from the answer given in the paper.

I know the honourable member stated that he would give a detailed account of advance accounts. I wonder if he is in a position to give a ballpark figure, if no more, of the percentage of the amount that may be written off of the total advance account.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: First let me respond to the honourable member by saying I agree with his position in terms of a debit balance in the cashbook being a favourable balance. This is the way the answer has been developed. I corrected this at a subsequent point in the response that I gave in saying that the $2.5 million that is shown as a credit should in effect be a debit balance, which is a favourable balance.

The one at 31 July of $1.7 million is a credit balance. That is an unfavourable balance, but that is the balance that is offset by short-term fixed deposits of $7,067,006.85.

The breakdown on the advance accounts, that information is on its way from the Treasury. It's in transit and we are hoping that it will arrive here soon. But when we look at the write-off, it's likely to occur in the area of the overseas medical advance account.

Before I give a guesstimate as to what proportion of that is likely to be written off, what percentage of that . . . it could be as much as a third. I would not want to run the risk and say that at this point in time. But I think a proper analysis as is now being done will need to be established and this information shared with members of the Legislative Assembly so that a conscious decision can be taken as to what criteria will be used to govern the write-off process.

As I said at an earlier point in time, we have many persons who are in a position to pay, but the loans that are standing in their names are not secured. But this does not mean that we should not seek to effect recovery. We have some loans that are secured but based on the income of the individuals in question it will be somewhat difficult for them to make repayment of the full loan balances that are there. However, some of these loans will be secured. A question will have to be determined as to whether the security should be held in place until they were become deceased, if government should seek to realise the properties by converting such properties to cash or, in effect, selling such properties.

We have to look in terms of the entire structure of the advances, how they are set up at this point in time and to make a determination where it can be established beyond any doubt that the loans are definitely not recoverable and such loans are not secured. The appropriate decision will be for such amounts to be written off. But that information will have to be provided and such analysis is underway at this time.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: In section (f) of the answer dealing with contingency warrants, it is noted that $.38 million is covered by blocking which leaves $.3 [million] that would not be blocked. I wonder if the honourable member could give an indication as to the current policy of government regarding contingency warrants?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: First, as the honourable member will note, there are attempts being made that during the course of the meeting of the House to try and have an agenda for Finance Committee and for meetings to be held on a more regular basis. An indication of this is that the contingency warrants . . . while I said that all balances were as at 31 July, the contingency warrants with a value of $410,000 that was at yesterday, which would be 8 September. That suggests that there is a reluctance to use contingency warrants as was done in the past.

The honourable member will observe that given the detailed scrutiny that was paid to the budget for the year 1999, which in effect we know that all known expenditures were provided for during the course of the year, this not only covered recurrent, but capital expenditure.

However, with the best budgeting practices in the world, one cannot envision unforeseen expenditure. There are cases. For example, we had the case of refugees who arrived in Cayman. Although we thought that would have been a phenomenon that we would not have seen for quite some time, this required having to spend approximately $25,000 to defray the cost. So this had to be approved.

But, as the honourable member will note, of the $410,000 that will be appearing on the next agenda of Finance Committee, $380,000 of that sum will be offset by savings that have been identified in existing votes. So, in effect, the net amount is negligible. Every effort is being made to minimise the use of contingency warrants.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I want to thank the honourable member for that detailed explanation. I am happy to see that contingency warrants are not now being used as supplementary expenditure. I wonder if the honourable member could give the assurance that this is not now happening as we had suspected was being done in the past where contingency warrants were being used when, in fact, supplementary expenditure should have been approved by the Finance Committee.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The answer I gave previously would in effect be confirming that government is taking the time to ensure that the budget presented to the House on an annual basis covers all known expenditure. That in itself, endorses a policy whereby every effort is being made to minimise not only the use of contingency warrants but the need for supplementary expenditure.

The Speaker: Before asking for another supplementary, could the honourable Third Official Member say how much longer it will be before the information arrives? We have gone on with an enormous number of supplementaries on this particular question.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: It could probably be another fifteen or twenty minutes or half an hour. If the honourable member is agreeable, I could provide that information to him in writing.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I will not continue with too many more supplementaries, just to get a clarification from the honourable member—

The Speaker: You will accept the answer in writing, as he said?

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I will, Mr. Speaker.

This is on the public debt. I notice that we have a public debt of $69.2 million with self-financing loans of $16.9 [million] giving a total of approximately $86 million. I wonder if the honourable member is in a position to say if this is in keeping within the ceiling of 10% established by Finance Committee, and exactly what the percentage is at present.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The portion of recurrent revenue that is being used up to meet loan financing is in the region of about 6.8% at this time. Therefore, this is definitely less than the 10% ceiling that has been set.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, the next question is number 93, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

No. 93: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs what is Government's disposition regarding the implementation of Private Member's Motion No. 8/94.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs

Hon. James M. Ryan: Private Member's Motion No. 8/94 called for the introduction of compulsory photo identification cards in the Cayman Islands. The motion was accepted by Government, however its implementation was delayed pending completion of the house numbering and street naming system.

When Motion 8/94 was presented there was no voter registration card system in the Cayman Islands as the motion indicated. At the last Meeting of the Legislative Assembly, the Elections Law was amended to introduce voter registration cards and this amendment will be implemented as soon as possible.

Following the census next month, we will have specific details of the population in the Cayman Islands, and on completion of the issue of voter registration cards it is expected that we will be able to determine fairly accurately the number of persons resident in the Cayman Islands who will not have identification cards. It is anticipated that identification cards for these people will then be issued if necessary.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable member say whether government is prepared to give any consideration to a card being so comprehensive that it could also serve as a driver's licence identification card to prevent persons from carrying a plethora of cards bearing the same basic information?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, this has been discussed. I believe the member was present when we were in select committee discussing the voter registration card. He will recall that the question came up about one multipurpose card. But the method of producing the voter registration card is going to be somewhat different from the Cayman Islands Driver's Licence, for instance. It may be difficult, if not impossible, to have one multipurpose card, although I know that would be the wish of the population in Cayman. We will look into that.

The voter registration card has not yet been issued. We are looking into the equipment for the issuing of those and this will be borne in mind.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTION 93

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Before I get to my question, if my memory serves me correctly, Private Member's Motion No. 8/94 was intended to assist with identification cards for underage persons entering places such as barrooms where they are not supposed to be and to assist the bartenders in keeping them out.

The last sentence in the answer says "It is anticipated that identification cards for these people who will not be covered [I assume by the voter's registration cards] will then be issued if necessary." Can the honourable member explain what he means when he says "if necessary" if we are not going to cover persons under age 18 with an identification card?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: As the member will know, there are driver's licences issued in the Cayman Islands now that have a photo on them. In fact, there are some 23,475 driver's licences now in effect in the Cayman Islands. If you look at the number of registered voters as of the last election, that number was 10,450. While we know there is a lot of overlap, there will be some persons who will have a driver's licence who won't have a voter's registration card, and perhaps the other way around as well. So we will have to look at the total number of people who have either a driver's licence or a voter's registration card and if there are those who have neither who are 18 years old or there about, we will have to look at the issue of a photo ID for those people.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable member say whether the government has given any consideration to the status of this compulsory ID card when implemented? That is, whether it is going to be mandatory for persons to have it on their person at all times, or will it be entirely up to the discretion of the person? Perhaps a little elaboration will help the honourable member to understand what I am talking about.

In many circumstances when the police come upon people and ask them for their names, I read sometimes where the police have problems because people give them false names and false addresses. In such a system where it is compulsory to have your identification, that would significantly ease the police work, particularly in places where there are significant numbers of the population who may not all be familiar to the police.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: That aspect has not yet been considered. It is something that may need to be legislated for and I think that can certainly be looked at. Perhaps I can elaborate a little more and say that what I am hoping is that the equipment that is purchased for photo registration cards that we can piggyback on that equipment for the issue of photo ID's for person who are not registered voters. But I think the honourable member's suggestion of making it mandatory is something that is very worthwhile and certainly will be most useful for police work, and something that we can seriously consider. I thank him for that.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I have one other request that I would like the honourable member to consider. When we come to the issuing of these identification cards, I would like the honourable member to consider that persons being issued with a card should pay the cost of the card. In some jurisdictions I have read where when that practice is followed people take greater care of the cards than when the cards are just issued by the government. They lose them, then go and get an automatic replacement at no cost to themselves.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I thank the honourable member for that suggestion. I think it is a very worthwhile one and it certainly makes a great deal of sense. As I said, it may be necessary to legislate to deal with it. But I think those photo ID's should be paid for and then people will value them and take care of them.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question number 94, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. Before that, I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Mr. Roy Bodden: I respectfully move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I second that motion.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 94

No. 94: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development to provide a breakdown, by amount, of the public debt, loans and guarantees for which the Cayman Islands Government and its Statutory Authorities are obligated.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: A breakdown, by amount, of the public debt, loans and guarantees for which the Government and its Statutory Authorities are obligated as at 31 December 1998 follows:

Public Debt	$ 76,236,638
Self-financing loans	17,536,462
Contingent Liabilities	149,947,691
Statutory Authorities	11,358,430

The figure for the Statutory Authorities is broken down as follows:

Port Authority	$9,941,766
Water Authority	1,416,664
Civil Aviation Authority	0.00

I should mention that the figures for the public debt self-financing loan and contingent liabilities could have been available as at 31 July 1999, but the Accountant General, in talking with the Statutory Authorities [found that] it would have caused a delay to wait on the figures to be prepared by the Authorities as at 31 July. So to maintain consistency, the information is given as at 31 December 1998.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I note that in the answer to a previous question the honourable member stated that the public debt as at 31 July 1999 was $69.2 million, with self-financing loans at $16.9 million. I am wondering if he can clarify whether the public debt of $76 million at the end of December 1998 and the amount of $17.5 million at that same date would be referring to the same account as was presented for 31 July, and whether there had been an increase, if it is in those figures, and what has caused that increase?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, if you will just bear with me for a second, I am lining up the information. [pause] In the earlier answer that I gave, I gave the breakdown of the public debt as at 31 July as being . . . [pause]

Mr. Speaker, the information that I gave, as referred to by the honourable member, states that the balance as at 31 July was $69.2 million. We are showing as at 31 December 1998 the balance being $76.2 million. So, in effect, there is a reduction of $7 million between the end of the year and 31 July, and I have been assured by the Treasury that this is as a result of repayments that would have taken place during the course of the year.

It must be borne in mind, and we have shown from schedules that the majority of loans that are owing by government are short term. So as a result, the principal repayments are quite high. It is not unusual to have had this substantial reduction. But we have to bear in mind that this does not take into account . . . We had no draw-downs against the loan of $26 million that was approved for the year 1999 up to that point.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I note that the honourable Third Official Member mentioned that there seemed to be a policy of government to be involved in short-term loans. I wonder if the honourable member can state if that is considered the best policy for government to follow in view of the very high interest rates that have to be paid on these loans and in view of the fact that most of these loans are supporting long-term capital projects.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: As explained on previous occasions, the government would very much like to seek long-term financing. First of all, at a given point in time we used to be able to access not only long term financing, but to do so at concessionary interest rates. For example, with the Caribbean Development Bank there are two categories of loans or financing. We have the ordinary resources fund and we have the special development or resources fund.

The special fund is normally for major projects and will allow for interest rates to be provided at a subsidised level. When we compare what it will cost us in the market from such institutions to provide long-term financing, and we compare the interest rate that we will have to borrow at from Caribbean Development Bank, and compare that with our local financial institutions, there is not much of a significant difference.

Although there is not much of a significant difference, we do find that Caribbean Development Bank will only provide loan financing for certain special projects.

There are certain projects that fall outside of their lending policy. As a result we have been seeking financing from the local banks. Ideally we should be seeking long term financing because we know it allows for a better management in terms of repayments, and it also reduces the amount of money that will be taken from general revenue on an ongoing basis.

One way of doing this is to look at the possibility of bonds or to look at other means in terms of debt securities by the government. But this is something that will have to be considered very, very carefully because once we enter into financing through bonds, the discipline will have to be inculcated whereby the sinking funds will have to be set up to ensure that what would ordinarily not be paid out on an annual basis if such were being financed through regular loans would go straight into such a sinking fund. So at the maturity of the loan the balance in the fund would be sufficient to defray the loan balance.

As a part of the financial reform initiative that is underway all of these aspects will have to be considered. We know that we are trying to streamline the entire financial operation of government. We will have to look at how to minimise costs. But a difficulty we have—and this is one that we are seeking to address—is because of our very high per capita income we are being penalised by most lending institutions such as Caribbean Development Bank and others. We will have difficulty in accessing certain funds because of the success we have had in the Cayman Islands with our standard of living.

These are areas that we need to look at. We have been having talks with Caribbean Development Bank to suggest to them that what we need to do in terms of the ordinary approach taken in arriving at per capita income is to break that down where we take out the component of how we arrive at what is called an indigenous per capita income rather than just taking the global figures which is the GDP divided by the general population base.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I note that the honourable member mentioned an issue that I have been speaking of for some time, and that is the possibility of government borrowing through bonds or similar vehicles. I wonder if he could say whether any thought has been given to this type of borrowing rather than having to do short-term borrowing? And whether the Treasury is operating a sinking fund to provide for the repayment of the principal of loans?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: If I deal with the latter part first, we know that there is a statutory provision in the budget that on an annual basis provisions are made for the repayment of loans on an ongoing basis. Therefore, the loan repayments are being met as they arise. We will not have a situation where we are just loaded with the interest up front and the principal maturing at a given point in the future. Both principal and interest are being paid off at the same time.

A concerted effort has not been made to seek the raising of financing through bonds, other than several approaches that have been made to government that would suggest that most of the institutions that would attempt to raise financing on behalf of government through bonds . . . I can recall two or three approaches having been made. The last one was in the region of about $100 million.

This is to make it viable for the agents as such. They will have to take into account how much they will realise in terms of assisting the government. When we looked at the public debt position of the government during the debate on the 1999 account, when the discussion took place we saw that by the year 2012 most of the loans outstanding would have been paid off.

As we go forward into the future we have to look in terms of how we can refine the raising of financing. But there is a discipline that comes by raising monies through bond financing in that the structure will have to be put in place that makes it mandatory, even if it becomes more viable for a lending institution that will be proposing, or an agent that will be acting on behalf of the government to raise loan financing, even if monies are raised over and above what is required to defray capital expenditure, that that money not be used unless the projects proposed are exhaustively scrutinised as is now being done and arrangements put in place to meet the repayments as and when they fall due.

This is something that we have to look at, but the mechanisms to support that, as the member has alluded to, will have to be in place.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I hate to be taking away this question, but I would just like to ask the honourable member if he is in a position to state . . . he gave in his answer that the government guarantees for Statutory Authorities was something like $11.4 million at the end of December 1998. The exact amount was $11,358,430. I wonder if he is in a position to state what this amount is to date, and how much of the guarantees are collateralised against a particular Authority?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I should point out that there are two aspects to the monies that are owing by Statutory Authorities. Those loans that have been guaranteed by the government on behalf of the Statutory Authorities, for example the Water Authority, if we were to look at the schedule that is attached, it can be seen where for the year ending 31 December 1998 . . . I will just get the information in a minute, Mr. Speaker. I will have to show the difference on this. [pause]

Forming part of their contingency balance, for example, is the amount guaranteed by the government and for which an amount of $13,806,903 was owing as at 31 December 1998. That is included as a part of the contingent liabilities.

The $11,358,430 represents amounts that are owing by the Statutory Authorities that they have raised on their own without guarantees from the government.

The Speaker: I think I am going to have limit you to two additional supplementaries.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, are you saying the Third Elected Member for George town has two more, but mine are separate?

The Speaker: We are now at 11.20. So let us say three additional supplementaries then. Share it up. The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: The honourable member mentioned that some $13 million is included in the contingent liabilities. I wonder if he is in a position to give a breakdown of the contingent liabilities, which I note is in the amount of $149,947,691.

The Speaker: I note that that is in substantive question number 95 to follow.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, in light of the concern you just raised, I was prepared to withdraw that question, sir. Maybe if you let the supplementary question go ahead I would withdraw this number 95.

The Speaker: Thank you. I think this has a substantial amount of information that would be good for the members.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, are you going to allow me my two questions then, the final two?

The Speaker: Certainly. But I am saying that I think question 95 should go forward because—

Mr. Roy Bodden: Yes, sir, 95 will go forward.

The Speaker: —it has a lot of information in the answer. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, your supplementary please.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you. I have two supplementaries. I want to ask the honourable Third Official Member if government has considered widening the sources to which they access loans to include sources where we could get long-term monies at reasonable interest rates given our good credit rating and our success as an international financial centre. And is this in any way hampered by our relationship with the metropolitan country?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The honourable member has raised a very good question, one that we have been exploring. We know that we cannot access funds through the World Bank because we are an Overseas Territory. As a result we do not have access to funding by the World Bank. The European Investment Bank will only make monies available for private sector entrepreneurial initiatives. And there is no willingness to assist as has taken place in the past.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: My final supplementary has to do with the information regarding the Port Authority loan. I wonder if the honourable member could tell us how this loan of $9,941,766 collateralised? I have a concern with that and the proposal by the same Authority to borrow $14 million.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I do not have the details as to how the various loans to a value of $9,756,696.73 are collateralised. But the assumption can be that these loans will be collateralised against the assets of the Port Authority. I could ask for the specific details to be made available and for such to be provided to the honourable member.

The Speaker: We will move on to question 95, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 95

No. 95: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development what are the contingent liabilities of the Government from December 1995 to date.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Contingent liabilities of the Government from December 1995 to date are as follows. They are given on an annualised basis with the supporting schedules attached.

1995	1996	1997	1998
$101.8m	$171.6m	$157.5m	$149.9m

Attached for Members' information is a breakdown of the above amounts for the years 1995 to 1998 (see Appendix).

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I wonder if the honourable member could explain exactly what are our contingent liabilities. Does government just have a contingent interest or could it actually be called upon to make repayment of any of the liabilities in the event the holders of the loans should fall down in their payments.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The honourable member has just explained what the contingent liabilities are in that the government can be held contingent liable. There is a probable risk associated with these loans that in the event that the institutions or organisations that government has issued guarantees on behalf of . . . to be more specific, if the Statutory Authorities are not able to meet the obligations against these loans government could be held liable for the repayment of the loans. But it should be borne in mind that it is very unlikely that such would be the case.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I want to assure the honourable member that I am always willing to assist, and if I have helped him with an answer I am very happy about that. But the purpose for asking the question (there's always a 'but') is that I would like to know whether in the case of companies like Cayman Airways and others that may be having a bit of a problem, whether this would be regarded. I don't want to carry that point any further, but whether this would be regarded as actual liability or a contingent liability. And in answering, could the honourable member explain to the listening public how it is envisaged that Cayman Airways, for example, will be able to pay off these contingent liabilities.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The financial records of Cayman Airways would suggest that the amounts that are shown on the statement presented to this honourable House, that the necessary repayments on these obligations are taking place on an annual basis.

I would not want to get into the details of the financial operations of Cayman Airways at this point in time, but I would think that the amounts that are owing as set out in the schedule will be carrying a minimum risk to the government.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: That was the answer that I wanted from the honourable Third Official Member because I am looking forward to not having to approve any sort of additional financing to government for any of these contingent liabilities based on the answer I just received.

I wonder if the member can confirm that that is what he meant.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: As at this immediate point in time I will agree with the honourable member. But as the member can appreciate, it would be difficult for me to attempt to give a reading of the future. One can attempt to be as optimistic as possible. We are hoping that the government will not have to find itself assuming an obligation for any of these amounts that are owing by Cayman Airways. We just can hope that such will never occur. But from all indications at this point in time the management of the airline, there is nothing at all to indicate that the risk is more than probable.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: So that we get the figure of $149 million in the proper perspective, I should mention that of that amount, $117 million is in respect to a public service pension fund. I wonder if the honourable member would comment on the progress being made in the developing of this fund?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I should mention that the government is fully committed to minimising this liability over the shortest period of time. For example, the fund got started in 1992. As at 31 December 1998 the balance in the fund was $39.9 million. As members will observe from the Estimates for 1999, it will show that government has committed to transfer into the fund an amount of $9.71 million, approximately $10 million.

That is not only to fund the current cost, but the past service cost which can be seen to be quite a substantial amount in terms of $3.2 million to fund past service cost liabilities. So when we look at this, if government continues at this rate this gives a very good indication that every effort is being made to minimise this past service liability within the shortest period of time.

We know that the pension cost is a burden at this time on general revenue. The government continues, not only to make the annualised pension payments from general revenue but, in addition to that, sets aside a sum of money in order to be applied against the past service cost or the outstanding amount owed. So government is tackling this from all angles.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 96, standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTION 96

No. 96: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture if it is the Government's intention to complete the park in Hutland, North Side, during 1999, seeing that it has now been cleared and filled.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: It is the Government's intention to include in the budget for 2000 a provision to deal with the creation of a park in the Hutland in North Side. Government looks forward to the support of all honourable members in order to provide this much needed facility for the people of North Side.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Seeing that there were no funds in the 1999 Budget for this project can the honourable minister say where the funds will come from? And what was the total cost for the land to be developed as a park?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: It is my understanding that the work was done by a vote under the maintenance vote in Public Works. I am not privy at this time as to the quantity, but I can undertake to supply it in writing as soon as it is in my possession.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I wonder if the honourable minister can say which maintenance vote was used to do this work at the Hutland?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Again, I would have to beg the member's indulgence to get that information from the relevant persons at the Public Works Department.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say what they are doing with the plans for the rest of the parks in the country?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: As the honourable members will recall, in the last Budget Finance Committee approved for the further development of the park at the Frank Sound in the district of North Side, and also the Airport Park in George Town, following the plans that had been put in place for some years now.

We were not able to move forward with the other plans due to budget restrictions. In the draft estimates which we are in the process of preparing now, we have submitted a similar fund for the continuation of two more parks following the plans that have been put in place.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say whether any provision is being made for a park to be located in the Bodden Town district, that is including Savannah? And can the minister say what has happened to the proposal to establish a little community park in the Cumber Avenue area that some efforts were expended on in 1996 prior to the election?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: As previously indicated, all plans are still in place at the ministry. They undergo current review. We bring them forward and in accordance with the funds supplied, we are expeditiously moving forward with Public Works to get the plans put in place. I can also say that in the very preliminary draft estimates that the ministry has put forward to the budget unit, I don't recall the exact sum, but I know that the representation did come in to ask for the Savannah/Newlands park as well as to have a look again at the one on Cumber Avenue, the park in East End and the Park in West Bay were the ones being put forward for the draft estimates for this coming budget.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say what the urgency was to clear the property in the Hut? Not that I don't appreciate it, but when I asked the ministry was not aware that a piece of land had been purchased in the Hut for a park. Can she tell the House what the urgency was to have the property cleared seeing there were no funds in the 1999 Budget to do any work on the park?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: It is my understanding that a request came in from a very prominent and caring North Side citizen who was an adjacent property owner. He indicated to various members of the government that it was a government owned property, which was confirmed, which was purchased back some time in 1997, and that it had become a nuisance in that there were rodents. He suspected that there was also some drug activity there. Government took it upon itself to clear it from that perspective. It was not at that time, nor is it now, cleared or developed for the sake of a park. The ministry's intention, as I said previously, is to include it into a park development programme in the year 2000.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Seeing that this piece of land is overgrown again with bush, can the honourable minister say if it is the government's intention to keep the property cleared seeing that this gentleman had a pest problem until it is developed into a park?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: With the original request brought to the ministry's attention, as well as other ministry's, it did not come in as a park request, but for the clearing of the property. If such a request is made, as is now being brought to my attention, it can be passed on to the relevant ministry. I am sure as they do with all government properties; it is the exercise of diligence and prudence to keep them as clear and clean as possible within the constraints of the budget.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say (a) what park in West Bay are they planning to continue with or build in the year 2000? And (b) will this project started in North Side for the cleaning of properties to ensure that it is not used by people who use drugs, and so that rodents don't become everyday pests could be extended to other districts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: It is my understanding that that has always been the practice of government once the request comes in. If a request comes in, whether to my attention or to the relevant ministry, I can undertake to do whatever in my responsibilities and powers to see that it is cleared up, again within the budgetary constraints we have to operate under.

As to the other part of the question, each district had plans prepared from the time the past minister was in there. So whatever plans were in place, the ministry staff, together with the budget unit and myself have looked to continue that process. We have made no changes. Unless changes have been forthcoming from members for a particular matter it remains the same to be developed over the next few years.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Although we have gone off into other parks rather than the one referred to in the question, the honourable minister said that funds would be provided in the upcoming budget for other parks. I wonder if the funds that were provided in 1999 will complete the Frank Sound Park. Or will there be monies in the budget for the year 2000 to complete that project because it's been on the books since 1995. I think it's about time we got it completed. There's been no work going on and it is now September 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I can speak in relation to the Frank Sound Park since funds were approved last year in the budget. My briefing from the ministry and public works was that as instructed priority was given to the Frank Sound Park. They expect that it should be completed, save the usual exceptional circumstances that they have no control over. Unfortunately they were not able to work concurrently with the one at the Airport so the one at the Airport will also come. I have also asked staff to look at various projects to see what will not be completed so that we can make provision for a re-vote, but only as an exceptional circumstance. Public Works has been directed to complete the projects for this year, as far as it lies within their power.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Is the honourable minister in a position to say how much work has been done on the Frank Sound park since the budget was approved?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am not in a position to say because I did not see it as a part of the supplementary question. Having said that, I am more than willing to get that information, or any other similar information related to the parks in the various districts.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say whether any work was done on it?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: In response to a question I posed during my briefing, I was assured that work had been done at the Frank Sound Park and that none had yet commenced at the Airport Park for the reasons I have set out hitherto.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay, two additional supplementaries.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say whether this work was to the extent of a filling phase or what.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I don't have the details of the extent of the work, and that's partly because I was briefed and we have the intention to go around to the various projects. I have started doing some of the project visits, but I have not yet commenced the park visits in Grand Cayman.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question number 97, but before doing that, like yesterday, I would like the suspension of Standing Order 23(6) in order to take the fourth question standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (6)

Mr. Roy Bodden: I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 23(6) in order to accommodate four questions which stand in my name.

The Speaker: Seconder?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I second the motion, sir.

The Speaker: The motion has been moved and seconded in accordance with Standing Order 86. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(6) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW FOUR QUESTIONS UPON THE ORDER PAPER STANDING IN THE NAME OF THE THIRD ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN.

The Speaker: Question 97, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 97

No. 97: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources what percentage of the telephone system in the Cayman Islands has been digitalized by Cable & Wireless.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: One hundred percent in all three Islands. Cable & Wireless decommissioned the last mechanical telephone exchange in 1991. This significant event was well publicised in the local media as it was also the 25th anniversary of Cable & Wireless operating in the Cayman Islands.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say whether to accommodate this digitalisation Cable & Wireless has ensured that all of its technical staff has achieved the appropriate level of training to deal with all the service calls necessary in keeping up with this digitalisation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: That is my understanding, that there is adequate staff and trained staff to deal with it.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister give the undertaking to look into this matter as I have been assured that such is not the case and indeed, in some cases, to service some equipment staff is brought in from overseas and there may be a fear that some of the Caymanian staff will eventually be displaced if not properly trained.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I thank the member for the information he just passed on, and I will definitely give the undertaking that I will have it checked into. I also wish to say that we are aware that Cable & Wireless has done their share of training of staff and I am sure that if something has fallen down in that area that they will do whatever they can to bring it back up.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I realise that this supplementary falls slightly outside the ambit of the substantive question, but perhaps the honourable minister has this information. I wonder if he can say if there are any restrictions under the Cable & Wireless franchise in regard to the granting of permission for local people to get involved in the e-commerce now being talked about.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I do not have the franchise with me and I would not like to comment on it. But I will definitely check that for the member and pass the information to him.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would like to ask the honourable minister if he is in a position to say if this digitalisation is completely Y2K compliant or whether Cable & Wireless will have to do any further work in order to make the digitalisation Y2K compliant.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my understanding that they are prepared for Y2K. Everything is in order, as far as I know.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not that concludes Question Time for this morning. We will now suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.54 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.25 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 29/99, Request for Government to consider the purchase of properties, as amended. Does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 26/99

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT TO CONSIDER THE PURCHASE OF PROPERTIES

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I support this motion on the basis that the honourable minister for Agriculture supports it, namely, that it is subject to prioritisation and subject to funds when the budget is looked at.

I can well see that there is need for extra property at the respective cemeteries. Actually, there are other cemeteries that also need to be looked at for the purchase of land and other things. Dealing first with the cemetery in George Town, I think the time has come when we need to look at doing a seawall, as a considerable amount of graves are getting nearer and nearer to the sea. It could well be that the hurricane ridge of rocks there could be affected in a heavy hurricane. I don't think it should cost a lot and it is something that I have asked the minister to look at. Also, that cemetery has basically just about run out of space for any new plots.

I know that the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources has had a study done. Whether or not it is fully done, [I don't know], but a study was carried out in relation to cemeteries. What was found is that in several of the districts there are shortages. Specifically in George Town generally there is a feeling that there are perhaps only 260 spaces left which is basically about a two and one half year life span for that property. So George Town itself needs further property in Prospect. It also appears in the Bodden Town area, and I think that was mentioned earlier, there would be need.

I understand that at the Creek Cemetery in the Brac, land is needed there. So maybe the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, who is responsible for the cemeteries, once he gets a total report on what is needed, will need to look at this in this budget.

The study was done by a committee, or is being done through a committee. So I can see where it is important to have the cemetery land extended and also the upkeep on those has improved in the last few years. But I would urge that that be looked at because I know with the two cemeteries near my parents' families (and they are in two separate cemeteries), my predecessors, from time to time I think that we could always do more to improve them.

Now, having said that, the other part of this motion is a different matter. The government accepts this motion on the basis of prioritising and obviously looking at cost. I believe that the property that is put forward to purchase next to this Legislative Assembly is going to be very costly. I think it will be several million dollars. It's prime property. When I look around at this Chamber, we have the best Chamber, the best Parliament, best Legislature in the Caribbean. There's a lot of space here. It's a nice gallery. It is a lovely Chamber. There are no two ways about that.

I appreciate that we need more space in the areas for staff, the expansion of staff over the years. And also perhaps in some other areas, a few more meeting rooms. But I would ask that the Public Works, or whoever will be dealing with this has a look at the present building, also the amount of land that is around the building, also the fact that this was built as I understand it strong enough to take a second storey. To have to purchase land for several million dollars, $2 million whatever it is, even if it's $1 million, that's a lot of money, and then to put a building on it, seems to me that it would be far better to deal with extending here.

When it comes to parking, we also have a lot of property across the street. While we will look at it in a budget, I think it is important that we get our priorities right. Much has been said here about saving small amounts—$15,000, $20,000, whatever—because it was being spent on MLAs or cutting corners here and there to save money. And here we have a vast amount of money that is getting ready to be spent for the benefit of MLAs. And this is no small amount of money.

I think we have to get our priorities right. I have heard it preached so often—

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, sir.

POINT OF ORDER

(Misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Yes, sir. The honourable minister is misleading the House. This is not proposed to be spent for the benefit of MLAs. And the honourable minister, with his tenure here, should not say something like that. He is being mischievous. This proposal is for the benefit of the country, sir. Members of the Legislative Assembly come and go.

The Speaker: I understand what you are saying, and I would prefer if you don't particularly specify MLAs, but for the benefit of the Parliament as a whole.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, sir.

Obviously, it was not my intention to mislead. What I am really saying is for the benefit of the public or the Parliament . . . well, it will benefit the Parliament, let's face it. Then this is quite a sizeable investment.

It has to be looked at in conjunction with the need for schools, for example. More schoolrooms are needed and other areas have to be balanced, whether it is more facilities for the youth, parks, whatever. Really, at the end of the day it is better for us to look and spend money, I think, on the public generally, especially the youth of the country, rather than on the Parliament or something that would assist the Parliament.

So, what I am saying is that the two pieces, or three pieces, four pieces now I understand, of land are in different brackets. What is out there for the cemeteries I can understand. That is basically a necessity. I ask the question, really, and we look at this in the priority when it comes up, is this a necessity at this time because it is a substantial amount that is going to be spent.

If perhaps the real problem is parking, then the alternative may well be on other land that is available. I know that parking is a problem in town. I guess we must share our burden along with the public. It's tight here too, but everyone has problems parking in any city or any town. I don't think the Parliament should be any exception to that.

So I am happy to support the motion, but I needed to make clear that when the question of priorities is looked at that I would be looking at seeing what would be more of a priority, what would benefit the public more, in the spending of several million dollars at this time. So, it would be different if all of the needs of the island were already met and we had the luxury of several million dollars that we could spend as the Parliament wished.

So, I support the motion, subject to the priorities and subject to the budget process which is coming up shortly. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate, does any other member wish to speak? The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: I rise to give this motion my support. I know these properties are needed very much, especially in West Bay in the cemeteries. So I will say that the quicker we can get on to it, the better. So far as the Legislative Assembly, we do need parking here too. We might need the building right now, but we need parking. So that's my verdict on that.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you.

The private member's motion currently before us seeks to cause government to consider, I take it in the year 2000 budget, to purchase two properties in West Bay adjacent to the cemetery at the entrance of West Bay, and the other at Boatswain Bay. Just this morning having taken another closer look at the Boatswain Bay Cemetery and also at the West Bay Cemetery, there isn't any doubt that there is need. Therefore, I give my support to those proposals.

I am aware, of course, that government sometime ago accepted a report on this very subject of cemeteries and the needs throughout the six districts. As I understand it, a committee has been established to deal with the recommendations of that report. Therefore, having accepted the report which speaks to this same issue, perhaps in a much more global way, I certainly can offer my support to the request as presented in the motion on these two properties in particular.

I believe there is nothing wrong with considering the additional space required by the Legislative Assembly, particularly for parking. I think it will come down to whether or not there is sufficient money to do it all. I have no difficulty with considering, which is what the request has asked for. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you. I rise to give my support to Private Member's Motion No. 26/99, subject to a few observations.

As previous members of this honourable House have indicated, there is a dire need for similar consideration to be given to all of the six electoral districts. As the

First Elected Member for West Bay has so ably put forward the request for his district, I would implore that when consideration is being given by Executive Council, and on through Finance Committee, that time be taken to review the detailed cemetery report and our survey so that we would be in a better position to make an objective prioritisation of the various needs in the districts and act accordingly.

Speaking specifically for my own district, I know that although much has been done over the years, in particular with the support of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and I, property has been secured for the Spot Bay Cemetery, which is pretty much up to speed except for necessary parking requirements. There is also a need in the Creek area. So I can appreciate members coming forward with these requests because we can all take judicial notice that property will only appreciate and never become any cheaper, and do the necessary acquisitions of these various properties that would enable us to extend the cemeteries.

We know that various other methods have been used by other countries, but I feel that I can confidently say that some of those methods will never be accepted here in the Cayman Islands due to various beliefs that we have. So we have to continue on while doing an analysis of how we can better utilise the space that we have afforded onto us. But, having said that, I think we must give due consideration to the respect that has been paid to our burial grounds and our cemeteries over the years and with the plan also look to see how we can actually plan the cemeteries to give it the due respect needed.

If I can now briefly turn to the request for the expansion and/or extension of the Legislative Assembly. I concur that there is need for extra parking space. We do have almost the bare necessities now, but even with that, I am sure that members will appreciate the various restrictions due to the limited space and the attempt that was made to accommodate the numbers in the House. But it severely limits the needs for the press, the extended staff that we have here, and even other members of the community who may have need to park near the building for various capacities they may have.

I am fully cognisant of the fact that it would be quite a bit of money and I can appreciate the thought that it has to be looked at in a more global prioritisation but that is not said to diminish the necessity and the urgency to look at the two requests at this time and if at all possible give due consideration to include it in the upcoming 2000 budget.

Perhaps what we could also agree to do is when giving consideration to give some time to sit down and hear the various needs for the districts. For example, I know that whenever I attend a funeral at the Prospect Cemetery, not to mention the one in central George Town, there is an extreme need for a cemetery extension. I know, having been on the Planning Board, that there is a private endeavour in this regard. But in no way do I think that that should be the only way because we will always have the poor with us, as we are told in the Good Book, and government having the social conscience must make various and appropriate accommodation to bury our dead.

So I believe the time has come to complete, if it has not already been completed, a detailed survey for that procedure to be followed, and then we take necessary steps as prudent representatives of the people to put those facilities in place as soon as possible.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: I rise to offer my contribution to Private Member's Motion No. 26/99 for government to consider the purchase of properties, brought by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

I think I am safe in saying that in my opinion the need for additional land for cemeteries is something that is much needed throughout the islands. Every time I attend a funeral, if there is no problem with burial space, there is certainly a problem with parking.

I will draw reference to a past discussion in this honourable House regarding the purchase of additional burial ground property for the district of Bodden Town. I am pleased to hear from the honourable minister in regard to his ministry, that a study is being carried out and a committee is now in place reviewing this very urgent matter.

I am also in agreement that government consider the purchase of additional space for the Legislative Assembly. Members who have spoken before me have aired their concern regarding the reason for this additional land. When in session, not having additional parking certainly creates a problem for the press, the staff of honourable ministers, the staff of this parliament and whoever has to attend parliamentary proceedings. Presently, not only is there a lack of parking space, but the allotted spaces are too narrow and lead to unnecessary congestion.

I would also like to take this opportunity to re-emphasise the commitment of this government to provision of facilities to cater to the needs of the handicapped and special needs, for instance handicapped parking, with the appropriate signs and handicapped ramps. I will not go into any lengthy explanation as to why this is necessary as honourable members will recall my motion dealing with this special issue just a few weeks ago which was supported by all honourable members of this House.

At this time I would like to give this motion my full support. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you.

When I opened the motion I said it was not controversial. Well, I should have known better. After listening to the Leader of Government Business, and his attempts to say things that were not mentioned, and after listening to his colleagues, the Minister of Tourism also, I don't know . . . I think they have shattered my hopes for getting the things gone. That is probably what they wanted to do. But, nevertheless, they say they recognise the need.

I would like to thank all members for their contributions. As I said in my introduction, the need is obvious throughout the country. However, there are needs more urgent in some districts than others. The Minister of Education said that there were some 261 spaces in George Town. I know he won't find that in West Bay. We are at the end, I believe. And I believe the minister responsible recognises that also and I appreciate how he dealt with it.

They used big words and a lot of play was made on "subject to funds" and "prioritisation." But I had hoped that the need for burial ground was a priority. The Minister of Education tried to pose the need of property for Parliament against schools, and why we don't need it for Parliament. Well, it's obvious why we need it for parliament. I am sure that the builders and framers of this building did not envisage the kind of growth that has taken place in this country. It is obvious that we have a grand building that will stand the test of time. But we do not have the space. And for anyone to say that this is properly laid out doesn't know what a properly laid out building is—certainly not for our needs now.

Anyone who cares about conditions about how people work only needs to look and see the crowded conditions of staff members here. They only have to go through and see the amount of paper that is around the working areas of the staff here in this Legislative Assembly. They would then understand that there is need and now is the time to do it. The land next to us here may cost a lot now, but think of what it is going to cost later on. Think of how the cost of property has increased around George Town. And the Minister for Education knows that.

He was facetious enough to say that we have space across from here. What space do we have across from here?

[Inaudible interjections]

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: That parking lot out there is partly taken up with the Minister's bus people, plus other parking people, plus other needs. So how do you tell people to go across there and use it?

With all of the property and the needs that have been mentioned, one thing government can do is enter into an agreement for payments to be spread over a period of time. I am sure that the people he has to deal with will be reasonable.

[inaudible interjection]

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I don't know if the minister knows what the reason is.

There is not a lot of space in this Chamber. And I think somebody mentioned that this is not being bought for members. I don't see how he could pose the purchase of that land against what he said was $15,000 for Members of the Legislative Assembly. I don't know where that figure came from either. I really don't know where that figure came from. And I really wish that the minister had not debated, really. Because this . . . I took the motion dealing mostly with cemeteries, just one piece of property there. Why should we have controversy over where we are going to bury our dead?

Nobody is asking that we build a building on the property across there. But if you don't buy that now—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER (Misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The honourable member is misleading the House. I supported fully the cemeteries. I said nothing of building a building on the cemetery land, I fully supported that. I queried the others.

The Speaker: He is right on that. He did support the purchase of the land for cemeteries.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, tongue say anything after he learn talk. I have to wait and see after what I heard from those two ministers.

The Speaker: But we are talking about what was actually said in this Chamber at this particular moment. He did support the cemetery purchase.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, so he did say that he supported it but we must keep in mind the priority. Now, what does "subject to funds" mean? What does that mean? Where is the commitment?

Do you know something? We do need schools, and he has been told that for years. He should have moved in due time. He should not have been caught the way he has been caught. And if he really wants to talk about money well spent, . . . I don't know why in the world we have to spend $12 million or $14 million to get a primary school. Now they must really go down there and look at those figures and look at how the money is being spent. How much do you have to pay for quantity surveyors? Millions of dollars?

Really, Mr. Speaker, it is time if they want to really talk about value for money that they sat down and looked at their big projects—$14 million for Port, $12 million for schools, $100 million for this and the next thing. Do you want to prioritise? Prioritise those things! That's what you should be doing.

As far as this Legislative Assembly goes, there is a lack of space. This Legislative Assembly needs a library in the worst kind of way. You are talking about the best parliament in the region? It is the only parliament in the region where we don't have a proper library. And this is one of the most successful—so they say—countries in the region.

We are today dealing with complex issues. This is not back in the 1960s. The country is facing all sorts of serious issues. We need to have computers, access to the Internet. We must have an improved library facility for research and other things.

Mr. Speaker, when you come in here, when we come here every time we come whether it's for sittings of Parliament or committees we have constituents who come here to see us. We have nowhere to see them. We have to use the space in the ladies bathroom sometimes to see people. Doesn't the Minister for Education know this? Or is he satisfied and content with the fact that they have office space in town and they have a big office there.

When the people want something done, they are not going to wait until you get to your office in the constituency. There are times when matters are urgent and they have to come here. You have nowhere to meet them. We stand outside in the corridor and talk with them where everybody hears their business. People are cognisant . . . and it is the people he's serving!

Mr. Roy Bodden: True!

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Or he's supposed to serve.

So I don't think that the request is out of place when we consider that they have no property. What property do we have around here? What property do we have left here? With the increase in staff there is no space, you are jumbled up.

I don't know if anybody mentioned when we have the press here. These people serve this parliament. Where do you have it? One piece of land is left here. That's the next piece of land. And I think it makes common sense for government to negotiate a contract with payment over a period of time for this property that is available and that is needed now.

I don't think I need to say anything more about the West Bay cemeteries because the minister knows that it is an obvious . . . like I said, they are building out by what is supposed to be the driveway in the cemetery. They are building vaults there.

So, I hope that when government sits down to do the budget, and I know they are in the process now and that's why we took the time to bring it at this time, that they will see the need, that they will make an attempt to negotiate in such a way that they can get the property, get use of the property, yet pay over a period of time.

I don't know anything about a committee. I don't know anything about a report. If they have a report they should have tabled it in this House. I certainly did not see any report. I know nothing of it.

The Minister for Tourism who got up and spoke, of course because it's dealing with West Bay, said that we must bear in mind that we are asking them to consider. We are asking them to consider, but we are expecting action because they know there is a need. If there was a way that we could have put otherwise, I would not have used the word "consider" but that's the word we had to use because of the Standing Orders. Otherwise we could not bring the motion. But they know when we say that we mean they should go do it. And this is not a frivolous attempt. So when they stress consider, don't think that this is something frivolous.

I would hope that when they prioritise that politics will not get in the way of what is most urgent.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 26/99. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 26/99, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99, Referendum Law, to be moved by the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It is getting close to that time, but perhaps we could just move the motion and get it seconded and perhaps you will allow for the luncheon break then, sir. If that's okay with you.

The Speaker: If you want to take the luncheon break before you move it, that's fine with me.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It's your choice, sir.

The Speaker: Please move it.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99

REFERENDUM LAW

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 11/99, entitled, Referendum Law, which reads:

"WHEREAS there is growing compatibility of the referendum with the parliamentary representative system of government and it is also recognised that the referendum is wholly consistent with parliamentary sovereignty;

"AND WHEREAS an increasing number of matters of national importance demand widespread public participation in the decision making progress;

"AND WHEREAS it is rare for a general election to be fought on a single main issue and the result of an election indicates, at most, an undifferentiated approval of a whole range of policies;

"AND WHEREAS only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government takes the necessary steps to cause section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1993, to be amended to allow the electorate to initiate a referendum;

“AND BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT once this amendment is achieved, the Government takes immediate steps to bring to the Legislative Assembly a Referendum Bill setting out the terms and conditions under which referendums may be conducted.”

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 being duly moved and seconded is now open for debate. At this time we shall suspend proceedings for lunch until 2.30 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1.09 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.42 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

This motion is not brand new to this Legislative Assembly. Really all that has happened since September of last year is that we have made some cosmetic changes to accommodate the fact that the government's view that the way it was worded was ultra vires the Constitution.

Before I start to build my case, so to speak, let me just lay the groundwork so that my train of thought and line of argument will become clearer as I go along.

When we look into the Constitution as it now reads, Part IV, section 29 (which deals with Power and Procedures in the Legislative Assembly) section 29(1) reads: “Subject to the provisions of this Constitution, the Governor with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly may make laws for the peace, order and good government of the islands.”

Subsection (2) of section 29 reads: “Without prejudice to the generality of subsection (1), a law may make provision for the holding of a referendum amongst persons qualified as electors in elections to the Assembly on a question declared by resolution, adopted by a majority of the elected members of the Assembly, to be a matter of national importance and specified in such Law.”

In order for everyone to understand clearly, what this is basically saying (in my own words) is that if there is a matter of national importance and any elected member of this Legislative Assembly wishes to bring a resolution to this Legislative Assembly regarding this matter, once there is a majority then once that resolution is passed by that majority it can trigger such referendum to take place and the next step would then be for a bill to be brought to the House regarding the specific matter and then to be approved and become a referendum law. So, any referendum law referred to as the Constitution in its working state would now have to be a specific matter and would have to be brought via a resolution through the Legislative Assembly by one of its elected members. That is my understanding of it.

As I said in my opening remarks, when the motion was originally brought the government's argument was that it was ultra vires the Constitution. What we have done is reword and restructure our Resolve sections so that the motion itself is not ultra vires the Constitution and basically the Legislative Assembly now has a decision to make whether it accepts the intent of the motion or not.

In my view, when it first came, in order to bypass the intent of the motion and not address that, the arguments were channeled in the other direction so that the intent of the motion was not addressed. Now, in order to deal with this motion we hold the view that government must either agree with the intent of the motion, or disagree with it. I hope that we will be able to put forward a reasonable enough case that government and other members will find that they can support it.

As my good friend the Leader of Government Business would say, I want to deal with referendums, “speaking generally” about it. With your permission, I would like to read a few short excerpts to build my case. These excerpts come from a book entitled Referendums Around the World, edited by David Butler and Austin Ranny [?].

When it comes to the practice of referendums, this book in its opening remarks reads: “In any referendum a mass electorate votes on some public issue. A referendum can be initiated in many ways and take many forms. But most democracies have at some time held referendums. In a few countries these have been institutionalized into a regular part of government. In most, they have been ad hoc affairs designed to solve a specific problem.”

As they go on dealing with referendums, under the subheading of “Forms and Functions” they say “The subject matter of referendums falls into four main categories: Constitutional issues; territorial issues; moral issues; and other issues.” I am not going to go into long detail on all of these, but I will read some short excerpts under the fourth heading of “Other Issues.”

Under “Other Issues,” Mr. Butler and Mr. Ranny say, “In some countries citizens have the power to insist that certain matters be put to popular vote.” They go on to say “In most countries the decision to hold a referendum has laid with the party or parties in office and they have called referendums to suit their own political convenience.” Needless to say, Mr. Speaker, I think that statement is a fact— “In most countries the decision to hold a referendum has laid with the party or parties in office and they have called referendums to suit their own political convenience.”

I grant that we do not at present have organised political parties. But we do have this Legislative Assembly consisting of the three Official Members and the 15 Elected Members who represent the voters in this country. The way the Constitution works now, regardless of what motivates the members, the fact is that the only method by which a referendum can take place in these islands is, as I have said before, after a resolution is passed by a majority in this House which triggers the need for a bill to be brought and made into a law dealing with a specific issue.

So, we go on and we examine some of the arguments that people have brought forth as to why they don't think it is sensible or wise to allow the electors—that is the voters in a country—to have a vehicle by which they can trigger a referenda. Some people hold the view that referendums are habit forming. And these people who argue against holding a referendum on a particular issue often use what this book refers to as “the thin edge of the wedge” argument.

It says, “Although there are some people who want to bring this argument forth, history has proven that in western democracies there is no sign of an addictive tendency.” Simply meaning that history has proven that there is no sign that people will just loosely use that vehicle for their own whims and fancies. “Although most countries have employed referendums once or twice to deal with particular problems the floodgates have certainly not opened.”

This book was written after much research. And if anyone refutes the arguments I am bringing forward they can use their own facts to disprove what I am saying.

It goes on to say that there are also some people who hold the view that referendums are instruments for radical change. The truth of the matter is, if we check history, the verdicts of referendums have tended to be conservative. I won't go into all of the details to prove that at this point in time, but I can prove it. And if someone does not accept this to be a fact, let them disprove it.

This book also addresses the United Kingdom and referendums. It says, “The United Kingdom is the only democracy in Western Europe without a codified Constitution. The British Constitution, it has been said, can be summed up in eight words ‘Whatever the Queen in Parliament enacts in Law.’” Those are the eight words, “Whatever the Queen in Parliament enacts in Law.”

“Thus Parliament could, if it wished, submit any item of legislation to referendum. In the absence of a codified Constitution, however, the referendum cannot ever be required as an instrument to ratify legislation.”

I am going to repeat that, Mr. Speaker, because if you're not careful you will really miss the point—not meaning you, sir, just speaking generally there, sorry. “In the absence of a codified Constitution, however, the referendum cannot ever be required as an instrument to ratify legislation.”

“Moreover, there is no reason why any British government which normally commands a majority in the House of Commons and therefore controls Parliament should wish to call a referendum. Why should it seek to put at risk its own legislation by calling for the verdict of the people upon it?”

“Until the 1970s the referendum was thought of as contrary to the British Constitution. The Constitution, it was said, knows nothing of the people. The central principle of the British Constitution—perhaps its only principle—was that of the sovereignty of Parliament, a principle which was developed during the 17th Century, well before the coming of universal suffrage. From this point of view the referendum could be seen as a threat to the sovereignty of Parliament as a means of constraining members of Parliament in a direction they might not wish to take.”

So this whole line of argument about referendums, when this book addresses the way the British Parliament works, what it has said is that the way the Westminster system works, it really doesn't suit parliamentarians to expose themselves to referendums if indeed they run the risk of finding a different decision from the decisions they have made. If the thought is completely different nowadays and we are into transparency, and if we are into accountability, then I hold the view that we should not be thinking along those same lines. That way of thinking must also change if that is what we wish to do.

In dealing with this point and summarising it, I am saying that if we as representatives of the people have no fear of communicating with the people and allowing them a method by which we can be guaranteed that we hear what they think, we hear what they wish to see happen, then we should have no fear of allowing them a vehicle by which they do not have to depend upon us as parliamentarians to bring about a referendum which would give an indication as to what the majority of electors wish to see happen with a particular issue.

I want to use a document, which I was going to save until later but I am simply going to take a bit of time to make my points as to why I think this should happen. Then I guess we will hear from the government as to whether or not it concurs, and why not, and we will take it from there.

It was not many months ago (a very short time actually) when the Leader of Government Business—the Minister for the subject of Planning, under which the Vision 2008 National Strategic Plan was developed—brought the document and tabled it. We all debated the document and in a motion that he brought the document itself and its intentions were accepted unanimously in this Legislative Assembly.

When we all talked our wonderful talk regarding the Vision document . . . I don't know how many of us really went through the document. I am going to refer to the document and its attachments so that we will know what the people of this country expect to have happen in regard to referendum because it was said by many of us how many hundreds of people representing the very diverse population that we have spent many hours developing the document, developing what they thought they would like for the Cayman Islands to be like by the year 2008, and much hard work and many opinions were sought to collate those thoughts to produce this document. We praised these individuals for their hard work, their conscientiousness, and we agreed with what they brought forth.

One of the documents (which is an attachment to the main document) is called “The Key to the Future.” This document has several sections regarding very specific issues. On page 41 (which is Appendix 3), “Legislation recommended in the Action Plans” (of the Vision 2008), under Strategy 8, which has as its subheading "Open and Accountable Government," there is a list of plans such as to "enact fiscal responsibility law; enact legislation to enshrine freedom of speech; pass freedom of information law and amend existing law to comply with its terms."

God knows, Mr. Speaker, that it makes me proud to know that the people of this country listen.

Plan 6 was to "pass legislation re: ethical standards for public officials; amend campaign funding law." Plan 8 "enact legislation to provide for an ombudsman" or a complaints commissioner. And, by the way, we brought that motion but the government saw fit not to accept it.

The second to the last plan reads "Amend Referendum legislation. Ensure by legislation that public funds are not used to influence the outcome of any referendum." It says "Amend Referendum legislation." But there are those who might ask what that means. In the main book itself, "The National Strategic Plan," which gives a much broader perspective and more in depth delivery of these plans, for this same strategy 8, which is "we will promote open and accountable government" it says this, "Enact legislation which will facilitate greater citizen participation in governance."

When the summary document refers to "amend referendum legislation" the main document explains all of that because it says "Enact legislation which will facilitate greater citizen participation in governance." And this document was prepared with full knowledge of what exists in the Constitution today. That means that if the people of this country were happy with the way the Constitution reads and allows for a referendum to take place in today's world they would not recommend any amendment would they. But they have! I trust that we all take note of that.

I was saving that for last. But I have decided against it because this is so important that we are not going to play any games here. We are going to be right up front. There was a thought that some had not really taken note of this, and maybe might find themselves falling a bit short in their reply to the motion. But we are being fair, open and everything else.

I want to go back to the Minutes of Meetings of the Select Committee of Elected Members to Review the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1972. This was during the 1991 Session of the Legislative Assembly. While they were doing their reviews of the Constitution they talked about a Judicial Service Commission, they talked about an Ombudsman, and they talked about Voter's Referendum.

The first line in these minutes under Voter's Referendum says, "The Committee noted that the CBA draft [I am assuming that to mean the Caymanian Bar Association] suggests that the power of ballot remain." Specifically, the minutes say this, sir: "Mr. Truman Bodden supported a provision of a referendum and suggested that the government had a fear of its introduction."

Mr. Roy Bodden: Ha, ha, ha, ha! Read on!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I will read it again, sir, just to remind some of us. . . and I did not create these minutes. I was simply assisted by staff photocopying what was existing. It says: "Mr. Truman Bodden supported a provision of a referendum, and suggested that the Government had a fear of its introduction."

It goes on to say: "A proposal to hold a referendum should be determined by a majority vote of the Elected Members of the Legislature, or by a petition of a reasonable number of electors, Mr. Truman Bodden advocated."

Mr. Roy Bodden: Read that again brother!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So you see, Mr. Speaker, in 1991 Mr. Truman Bodden found himself in the exact same position that those of us who are advocating a referendum by the people find ourselves nowadays.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Hear, hear!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: He was on the backbench when he was advocating that. He has had an opportunity since then to press for that, but he chose not to because by then he was on the government bench.

What we are saying now is that we do not wish to wait until we get on the government bench!

Mr. Roy Bodden: Consistency!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: We want it done now, so that when we get on the government bench, it will have already been dealt with, sir.

What changes an individual's mind after being on the backbench and sitting on the government bench with regard to which line he or she takes on an issue? For the love of me I don't know. Maybe someone can explain it.

So what Mr. Truman was saying in 1991 basically was that as the Constitution now reads he agrees with it, but he also said that he wished, and he had a great desire to see the additional method of employing a referendum to be there which would be by a petition of a reasonable number of electors.

POINT OF ORDER

(Misleading)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I was wondering if the honourable member could let me have a copy of the minutes because the word "or" is in there. On a point of order I think there may be, subject to my looking at what was said, some misleading of the House. Obviously he hasn't said where he got this from, but he is reading from a document. If I could have a copy . . . because I think there were alternatives to what was said. But I don't have a copy and that's been a long time ago.

The Speaker: Could you provide him with a copy?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I said what this document was sir. It is Minutes of Meetings of the Select Committee of Elected Members To Review the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1972. “These minutes formed part of the Report of the Select Committee. It was in the 1991 Session of the Legislative Assembly tabled in the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands this 28th day of October 1991.” This document is right in the back there. The minister can ask for a copy and he will have no problem getting it. This is the one copy that I have sir.

But in case the minister doubts for a second that I may read or try to mislead—like I have seen him do . . . and he can come or go whatever he pleases, it doesn't matter to me. I am going to read it one more time.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Read it brother!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It reads, and I quote: “A proposal to hold a referendum should be determined by a majority vote of the elected members of the Legislature, [comma] or by a petition of a reasonable number of electors, [comma] Mr. Truman Bodden advocated [full stop].” That's what it says.

[The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning rose]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I have read what it says, sir, and unless it is a point of order I ask—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It's a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

POINT OF ORDER
(Misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The point of order is this: What that said was a majority or members or a petition. So he cannot let that be interpreted as an “and.”

The Speaker: He read “or.”

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes sir, “or.” But he is then saying that instead of an alternative both were being promoted at the time. That says “or” not “and” if you follow what I mean. It's an alternative—either by the House or by a petition. It's not by the House and also by a petition. That is the point of order I am making, sir.

The Speaker: I fully understood that it was “or.” I think he emphasised “or.” So I cannot accept that as a point of order. But please read it one more time.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I can read it one more time, sir. But I tell you what, if you give me permission to read what else I have the minister will leave the Chamber because it will make it crystal clear then.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Read it!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: But I will ask what you asked me one more time.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Read whatever else you have!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In fact, so that the Clerks and nobody else has any trouble, I will ask the Serjeant-at-Arms to photocopy that. But I will read it one more time.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Roy Bodden: He has some more for you too!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: And as soon as I read it I will hand it to the Serjeant-at-Arms and he can get it photocopied and return my copy to me afterwards.

The Speaker: Thank you for your cooperation.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Lay it on the Table.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In fact, I will ask him to make two copies so that the minister can have one and I can lay one on the Table.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Good. I want to see him get out of this.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: With your permission, sir. It says “A proposal to hold a referendum should be determined by a majority vote of the Elected Members of the Legislature, or by a petition of a reasonable number of electors, Mr. Truman Bodden advocated.”

The Speaker: One or the other.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is exactly what I read all the time, sir. Okay?

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I wasn't arguing that.

But Mr. Speaker, trust me, sir, you have known me long enough, and he will not find me hanging on the limb.

Mr. Speaker, I will give it to the Serjeant-at-Arms now. Thank you.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Read the other one you said you have. Read, brother, read! Read, like you said, my friend.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, with your permission sir, I have copies of Hansards of certain dates—

The Speaker: Quote the dates, please.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I will as I go along. They are perfectly relevant, I believe, to my line of argument.

Thursday 30 May, 1989, 10.05 AM. Private Member's Motion No. 11/89—what a coincidence!—and here we are Private Member's Motion No. 11/99! Lord, what ten years can do to a man!

Mr. Roy Bodden: Make him forget it, Lord!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The debate on this Referendum Law which was the motion, sir, continues.

Mr. Truman M. Bodden says “Thank you, Mr. President. Yesterday when we adjourned I had started setting out the reasons for having a referendum law.” By the way, he's the mover of the motion.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Who was the seconder?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: He then was in the same shoes that I am in today. If there are no further similarities between us, at least we have one now sir!

I read again, “Yesterday when we adjourned, I had started setting out the reasons for having a Referendum Law. I was developing the argument at the time that basically the people, having put us in the Legislative Assembly, have a right at times to give us directions on how we should deal with major national issues.” [1989 Official Hansard Report, Vol. 1, page 581]

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, can he read that again? Did he really say that?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am quoting Mr. Truman Bodden, sir. And I am not calling his name; I am doing as you have asked me to do.

He went on with several different areas, and I won't get into all that, using examples of other territories and such the like. He went on to say “They went somewhat further to entrench beyond the change of the Constitution certain things relating to the Election law so there could not be alterations of boundaries. I think the classic statement of referendums is set out in Roberts-Wray, Commonwealth and Colonial Law. That has a very short, but very effective paragraph. It says, ‘Submission to popular vote prevents hasty action.’”

“Submission to popular vote prevents hasty action.” [1989 Official Hansard Report, Vol. 1 page 582]

Mr. Roy Bodden: What?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: “That is the theme of what I would like the Members of this House to look at: submission to popular vote prevents hasty action. I know that this has been looked at before. I want to draw the distinction between what I am trying to achieve and what came before this Honourable House on 6th March, 1986. It was a Motion that set out in considerable detail the rights of the people to call a referendum in instances where there was a petition by the majority of registered voters, or by a motion in the Legislative Assembly. The machinery itself was not limited to major national issues. This is the main distinction that I find. I tried to set out the procedure being a period of 90 days to bring it in.”

He goes on and he talks, and he talks, and he talks some more. Then he gets down to this little section and he said “They may well find that it should only be triggered by a resolution of this Honourable House. In that simpler form I would find it very difficult to understand why the people of this country are not regarded as sufficiently important so that they should be given the right.” [Ibid. page 583]

Mr. Speaker, I am going to read it again, and I want him to get up and try and tell me that what he wanted to achieve in his 1989 motion is not crystal clear. He said “They may well find that it should only be triggered by a resolution of this Honourable House.” And I stop right there for a second. That's the way it works now. At that time it was not in the Constitution. But since then that's the way it has been in the Constitution. Our line of argument is exactly what he says next. Here's what he says next: “In that simpler form I would find it very difficult to understand why the people of this country are not regarded as sufficiently important so that they should be given the right.”

I am going to say it finally “. . . so that they [meaning the people] should be given the right.” He is making a very crystal clear distinction between the way it is enshrined in the Constitution today and the way we are asking for it to be done. And he is saying that he will find it very, very difficult to understand why the people of this country are not regarded as sufficiently important so that they should be given that right.

I pause for a second here. The Serjeant has completed the photocopying and I would like to lay that document on the Table.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: And, of course, with kind courtesy he is also going to give the minister a copy so that he can do what he wishes with it.

I think the point is made. But he was not quite finished, as is usual when he's on a role he repeats himself, and repeats himself, and he repeats himself again. You see, he has this inimitable style when he wants to convince the people of this country about something, whatever that something is . . . he will repeat it enough times because he has learned that if he says something often enough—whether or not it is true—the people will believe him.

He goes on to say, “Are we in here to take the advice from members of the public voters in the electoral districts on major issues? Or do we believe that once we have come in here, we are so big that we can never humble ourselves to ask for guidance.”

Mr. Speaker, I say again what a difference ten years can make!

“In life generally . . .” and oh, Mr. Speaker, when you hear the word “generally” you know it's him talking! He says “In life generally we must listen to people; we must learn to take advice before we can give or- ders. Without that, many times we could make decisions that could hurt the country.”

After he talks a little bit more of course, sir, he says “Lastly, it will ensure that submission to the people will prevent any hasty action on a major national issue. Thank you.” [Ibid. page 583] And then he sat down.

So you see, Mr. Speaker, it is obvious to me that when the minister (who was then a member of the backbench) brought this motion, he found himself in the very same position I find myself today—fighting for what he believed was right for the people of this country and going down making sure he gave it a good fight.

But because the government of that day did not see fit to accept his motion, and because there were not enough members to support his motion so that it would see safe passage through this Legislative Assembly, surely it doesn't mean that he should find it in himself today to say ‘It's my turn now, so I am going to do you the same.’ I know that that minister does not think like that. I know that.

And I would like to believe that that minister and his good government will find it in their hearts to support this motion. I could never burn the oil that late on countless nights to put together a better argument than he put forth in his [Private Member's] Motion No. 11/89. I also believe that he still believes what he said—if he does, then certainly he will prove it.

He was the mover of the motion. So after everyone spoke, he still had to wind up. He got up a second time, and he had made notes of all the other people's deliveries. When the President asked if any other member wished to speak, and no one got up, he said, “In that case, would the mover wish to exercise his right of reply.” So he got up.

This little sentence is not really relevant, but with your permission I would like to read it. As he started he said, “There seems to be a lot of confusion. Sometimes that confusion can be self-determined and be brought on to one's self for a purpose. When you do not have anything constructive to say, you create confusion. One of the things a referendum can avoid is confusion, there is no doubt what the people have said.” [Ibid. page 590]

He went on to say “But what worries me is that one good morning the people of this country are going to wake up and find that a major national issue has moved through this House with very little public debate. They could well be stuck with something which, if they had a right to give their opinion on, and if there had been the time to air it publicly and take their views the damage would not be done. Once the damage is done there is no way of reversing that type of damage. You can try it, but it only worsens it.” That was a very profound statement. Very, very profound!

He continued to address other issues that members had spoken on. Then he went on to say “While I am in this House as a conservative, I am going to look very carefully at any major national issue that comes here. But I know there are going to be times under this democratic process in this House, when I will be in a minority. There are times when the slowing down process to expose issues to the people is going to become crucial. I am not afraid of that process.”

He also went on to say “I think when the member for Bodden Town gave the examples of Jamaica and Latin American countries doing a referendum (which came out against the people who put it) is really the reason for it. That points out very clearly that those in power, or anyone on the Backbench, may not necessarily know the views of the majority of the electorate.” [Ibid. page 591]

That's what he said in 1989. And by inference, what he means is that if we had this vehicle and people knew that they had the right to petition a referendum on their own volition then that would have been a safety net to ensure that government and/or backbench would always on matters of national importance hear the views of the electorate.

There are more areas that I will address, if necessary. There are more interesting excerpts, if necessary. I am sure there are others who want to talk about the motion. And as the mover I will have the right to wind up when everyone has spoken. So I am not going to go into any more detail at this time. I am sure the seconder and others will bring points across. I will listen very carefully to arguments that may come against the motion. I only trust that those arguments are legitimate and salient. I will just sit patiently now and wait to hear what everyone has to say.

As I am closing, let me make it very clear that there are those of us who believe that any form of open democratic government should never fear giving the public such a vehicle. Remember what the motion says in its last Resolve section “AND BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT once this amendment is achieved, the Government takes immediate steps to bring to the Legislative Assembly a Referendum Bill [and here's what's important about it] setting out the terms and conditions under which referendums may be conducted.”

Setting out the terms and conditions under which referendums may be conducted. That means that if there are any immediate fears about the process, these fears can easily be addressed to ensure that everyone is quite satisfied with how this can be done.

So, to support the motion is not blindly walking into anything. If we agree to give the people of this country that vehicle, all we have to do is sit down and reasonably create a framework which will trigger that vehicle which is a framework that is an acceptable and palatably one. So let not any arguments come forth about the fearing of this or the fearing of that. We have the ability to create a framework to take away all of those fears.

What this is going to come down to is either a belief or a disbelief in a concept of a type of governance. We are saying that extended beyond the style and policies of governance that we have now, we wish also out of an abundance of caution and out of a desire for transparency and accountability to give the people of this country the vehicle of referendum simply to ensure that when we ask them for us to be their representatives that there is no fear on their part that they have to wait for four years to have a check and balance. Let them have that check and balance as we do our work between those four years. Thank you.

The Speaker: Yesterday afternoon it was discussed about adjourning earlier. Honourable Third Official Member, do you have a time?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yesterday when the briefing took place with the members of the Legislative Assembly about the visit that was made to Paris to meet with the OECD forum, it was pointed out that there was going to be a meeting this afternoon with the Government Sector Consultative Committee in order to give them an update as well. This meeting is due to commence at 4.00 PM. As a result, it was being asked that an early adjournment of the House be allowed.

The Speaker: If it is the wish of the House, I think this would be an appropriate time then for us to adjourn, rather than stop a speaker in the middle of his debate. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 AM tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 3.46 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM FRIDAY, 10 SEPTEMBER 1999.

EDITED
FRIDAY
10 SEPTEMBER 1999
11.01 AM

[Prayers read by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town]

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, who is absent due to a death in the family.

I would like to apologise for the late start but we had procedural matters that had to be taken care of.

Item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers . . . but before doing so, I would like to ask the Honourable Minister for Education if he would move a motion to suspend Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) in order that we can take questions beyond 11.00 a.m.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) so that questions can be taken beyond the hour of 11.00 a.m.

The Speaker: Let's put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. [Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) has been suspended].

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: I will move on to item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers. Question no. 98 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 98

No. 98: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Third Official Member with responsibility for Finance and Economic Development to define the terms of reference under which the Medium Term Financial Plan is being developed.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Medium Term Financial Plan or Strategy (MTFS) will form an integral part of public sector fiscal reforms and bring a medium term dimension to government financial planning. Its broad objective is to provide a guide to the prudent management of our public finances over a three-year period. The terms of reference of the MTFS are:

- To review the recent economic performance of the Cayman Islands and provide an in-depth analysis of Government finances;
- To identify the major issues that will require attention over the ensuing three year period;
- To formulate a strategy for achieving a clearly defined set of fiscal objectives which are in line with broad economic goals and priorities. This strategy will be guided by an appropriate set of policies on revenue, expenditure, public debt management and general reserves.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Member tell the House when this strategy comes into effect how is it going to be different from the way which we currently operate our finances?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, it will be useful for me to give a timeline as to when this will come into effect. As the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town will appreciate, we are now in the process of formulating the financial reform initiatives. We are hoping that by the year 2001, we will be underway with the full implementation of the MTFS [and] the Public Sector Investment Programme (PSIP) on the basis as outlined in the answer.

But it will work on the following basis in the month of June in the year 2001: It is anticipated (based on the progress that is envisaged over the time for developing the reform initiatives) that the MTFS and the PSIP will be presented to this Honourable House in the year 2001, in the month of June. The MTFS will cover the total public sector inclusive of central government, statutory authorities and government owned corporations. It will present the proposed financial activities of all three bodies in one document on a consolidated basis over a rolling three-year period.

The PSIP will set out the associated capital development projects over a rolling three-year period on a consolidated basis as well. In September of the year 2001, the pre-budget strategic policy statement will be presented to the Legislative Assembly and the pre-budget strategic policy statement will focus on central government initiatives primarily. However, it will also capture those financing activities of the statutory bodies and government owned corporations that impact central government's financial position.

In November of the year 2001, when the budget is presented, this will be the nuts and bolts document that will focus on the one-year time slice of the MTFS PSIP that relates to central government. It is planned that budget 2002 will be the first year that the government will present the budget document on a full output basis and accounted for on an accrual basis. So in effect, what we have here that is envisioned in June of the year 2001, the MTFS PSIP (I know I am repeating, Mr. Speaker, but if you will allow this for emphasis) will be presented to the Legislative Assembly. This will sweep up all of the capital projects at that time that are envisioned by the government.

It will also look at what is being proposed within the statutory authorities and Crown corporations. The reason for this as pointed out for example, the Water Authority may set out in its annual plan capital works that will require laying a certain amount of pipe in order to supply water to the given districts within the Cayman Island, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. It is necessary for this to be dovetailed with the capital works of central government. For example, if central government is planning road works, we would not want the road works to be done by central government and then we have the situation where the Water Authority comes along and digs up the road.

It is not a question that this will be purposefully done but where we haven't got linkage this is likely to occur. And where, for example, a road surface has been interfered with, we know that the strength or integrity is not normally there as if it was allowed to remain intact. So, all of these things are being done, Mr. Speaker, in order to create linkage across the entire structure of government, not only central government but also the statutory authorities as well.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Member tell the House if within this three-year period we will be operating under a full accrual system, or is it anticipated that we may need a slightly longer time before we reach the level of a full accrual system of accounting?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: As I indicated earlier to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, we are anticipating that in the year 2002 we will be moving into a full accrual accounting system. The reason being for the year 2000, the budget will be presented on an input/output basis because some departments have progressed in terms of the financial reform initiatives as such pertain to their departments at a much faster rate than others. So, we will be looking at what the budget will be in terms of the budget presented on an output basis.

Then in the year 2001, we will have a repeat of the same activity but by that time, it is hoped that all departments of government will be able to present their budget on an output basis, as well as showing the input linkage. This also will create a transition for members of the Legislative Assembly to observe the changes that are being made in terms of where we are and where we plan to go.

By the year 2002, the evaluation of all assets within government departments . . . or let's say that all assets at the disposal of given departments of government valuations would have been developed because the budget in terms of moving into an accrual basis will have to take into account depreciation and all of these factors that are presently left out of the cash accounting system. So at the end of the day in order to get a full picture in terms of the overall cost of providing services to government or arriving at the cost of output, for example being provided by the Police Department [and] the Education Department, it is not only the cost as presently stated in the estimates for recurrent expenditure or capital expenditure, it will take into account the depreciation component as well.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In previous times, whenever mentioning the MTFS, there has been an accompanying title, which is referred to as the PSIP. While I believe that part of the substantive answer overlaps into this PSIP (as it is commonly termed) could the Honourable Third Official Member explain the relationship between the two? Perhaps, we can get a fuller picture if that is done.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the PSIP looks at the list of capital projects to be undertaken by the government and the MTFS looks at the financing of those projects over a medium-term period, and it also looks as well at the financing of the government's entire operation. So, this creates the linkage between the two aspects, the PSIP with the MTFS setting out how the financing of governmental activities will take place over discreet periods of time.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Member say what will be the direct ramifications of government operating within these new parameters when one begins to look at government's broad policy?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Firstly, Mr. Speaker, Honourable Members will recall that during the earlier part of this year, the Honourable Minister for Education tabled the Vision 2008 document in the Legislative Assembly. This document sets out the high level priorities of government.

Now, it is around those priorities that a decision will be taken in terms of what segment or component of those high level initiatives or priorities that are determined as essential for the benefit of the country will be pursued in a given period. From these priorities, then, the policies of government will emanate. For example, if it is to foster better protection within the community, this could mean having to look at the policing system. If there is a need in terms of having to, let's say, expand the operations of the Police Department, what types of mechanisms need to be in place? Because when we talk in term of broad outcomes and so on, it becomes somewhat esoteric. But in order to achieve this we will have to become very specific in terms of what are the components or elements of activity that will need to be in place in order to achieve the desired result.

The same will be in terms of education and looking across all sectors. So, when the government establishes a policy, then what the budget will do, or the financing activities, or the progression of all of these activities will create linkages and steps in terms of achieving the overall objective that is being sought.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to Question No. 99 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 99

No. 99: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning what are the major implications of the National Curriculum for Government schools in the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The major implications of the National Curriculum for Government schools in the Cayman Islands are envisaged as follows:

1) Changes in the approach of teaching styles, methods and testing procedures.

2) The standardisation of learning outcomes for all students across the system.

3) The standardisation of textbook material which will enable students moving from one Government school to another to have access to the same texts.

4) There will be more empowerment of teachers in the area of methodology in order for them to meet various learning styles in the classroom.

5) There will be an increase in the number of workshops held to ensure the successful implementation of the National Curriculum.

6) An increase in the literacy standards of students and better prepared students at the secondary level for the world of work.

7) The raising of overall students' performance in all subject areas.

8) A greater level of accountability on the part of teachers, students, parents and the Education Department personnel.

9) A new and more meaningful approach for student assessment.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House which entity will be responsible for drawing up the performance criterion which measures mastery in the curriculum subjects? And also, whether such criterion will be administered on an individual school basis or whether it will follow the curriculum and be administered among national lines?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The answer to the first supplementary is that it will be the curriculum of staff at the schools. The answer to the second is that it would be on a national basis.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House whether these performance criteria will be drawn up simultaneously as the National Curriculum or whether they will follow at a later stage?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The answer is yes.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, yes, meaning that they will be drawn up simultaneously with the National Curriculum. Or, yes, it will follow at a later stage?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, simultaneously, sir.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Could the Minister explain to the House what constitutes the area of staff, which is dealing with the National Curriculum within the Education Department? Since it seems like the question is not very clear, exactly what sections make up the group that is dealing with developing this National Curriculum?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There are eight teams and they comprised both the private sector—members of the public—and also the Education Department officials.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister tell the House if, when these teams were being put together, there was any type of specific training identified for the individuals involved that would ensure that they were properly equipped to be part and parcel of creating this new National Curriculum?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, most of them are trained teachers and curriculum advisors in the section.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister give the House an update on the stage reached in the development of this curriculum to-date? And, specifically could he say whether the core curriculum subjects have been completed as yet?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, mathematics has two key stages completed. Science has the draft for key stages 2 and 3 completed. Social Studies - key stage 1 has been completed, work on key stage 2 should be completed in December 1999. Language Arts - key stage 1 has been completed and key stage 2, draft curriculum has been completed. The sessions with teachers of key stage 3 were conducted.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House, compared to the objective set out in his National Strategic Plan in Education, 1995 - 1999, how far has this preparation of the National Curriculum reached and how many of those objectives have been achieved to this stage?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The timing (which I think is what the Member is referring to) is online with mathematics, science and social studies and it is hoped that the fourth stage will be finished within about another year.

I would like to point out that this is a very major task when you undertake to redevelop and redo the full curriculum within the schools, and it has to be done right because this is something for many years has not been attempted. Even though a certain amount of pressure can be put to get this within a certain time, there has to be some tolerance in relation to ensuring that it is done right. It is critical that it's done right because it affects the youth of this country, the school children. It is the largest single task set out in the strategic planning, and it is the most important.

Mr. Speaker, I can assure members that the level of importance that it demands is given to it.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Honourable Minister that members of the House are well aware of the size of the undertaking and appreciate its importance. But, by the same token, I would like the Member to try to give the House an idea of the timeline in which this project will be completed, especially bearing in mind that there are constant changes in both methodology and some of the subject areas. Also, would he give the House an indication of what work is being done on the language arts curriculum?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I already mentioned the position on the Language Arts but if I have to go back to that, I will.

- In Mathematics (as I mentioned) key stage 4, which is completion, will be completed in the year 2000.
- In Science, key stage 3 is to be completed this year and key stage 4 in the year 2000.
- Language Arts, key stage 3, this year. Key stage 4, year 2000.
- Social Studies, key stage 2 in this year. Key stages 3 and 4 in the year 2000.
- History, key stages 3 and 4 - the year 2000.
- Geography, key stage 3, this year. Key stage 4, the year 2000.

These are the target dates.

- Information technology, key stage 3, this year. Key stage 4, year 2000.

The balance of these are to be completed in the year 2000: Religious Education, Music Education, Physical Education, Foreign Language, Art and Design.

I think the second supplementary was on Language Arts. Key stage 1 of Language Arts, draft curriculum was completed and approved by the National Curriculum Advisory Committee. Key stage 2 of the draft curriculum has been completed and is to be presented for review on feedback in October. Sessions with teachers of key stage 3 were conducted and the goals and learning outcomes were completed and incorporated into their present curriculum and one workshop was held with teachers of key stage 4 to appraise them of developments at the other levels.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, we are going to have to limit it to two more supplementaries.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I was about to tell you that I have a couple more supplementaries but I just wanted to get back to one answer that the Minister gave.

When the question was asked of the Minister regarding the qualifications and training of the people involved in the preparation of this National Curriculum, I think, his answer was that they were trained teachers and curriculum advisors. Is that correct? That was what—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: [Inaudible comment]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: No, just nod your head. I was just asking if that was the answer so that I didn't have to go over it at the beginning.

That was the answer. Anyway, getting back to that, can the Minister state if it is recognised in broad circles that the preparation of such a thing as a National Curriculum requires certain specific type of training for the individuals who are involved in that process?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, within the team are specialised people. Where there may be gaps, people are brought externally to supplement specific areas.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, a final supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the area of Social Studies can the Minister state, whoever is in charge of creating the curriculum for that subject, if there is any specific training that has been allowed that individual? Or, has anyone been brought in to supplement that need in that specific area?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The answer, sir, is no.

The Speaker: Moving on to Question 100, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 100

No. 100: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources what is the status of the Government Guaranteed Housing Programme for middle-income earners?

Hon. John. B. McLean: Renewal agreements for the Government Guaranteed Home Mortgage Scheme have been sent to CIBC Bank & Trust, the Bank of Butterfield International, and British American Bank.

Once the banks have advised the Ministry of their approval of the agreements, arrangements will be made for the respective bank presidents and His Excellency the Governor to sign the agreements. Thereafter, the banks and government will be in a position to begin processing applications again.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister give the House an indication of when these agreements may be ratified?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that one will be signed today, hopefully—the one with British American Bank. Hopefully next week, we will have another [signed] by CIBC.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister give an indication to the House of what is the reason why the renewing of these agreements has taken so long?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I would have to say that I apologise for this, but it has just been one thing after another. The matter was brought first to Finance Committee, then it has been to and fro between the banks and the government. But, thank God, we have reached a position now where we should be off to a good start in a very short time.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Will the Honourable Minister give the House an undertaking that when all the agreements have been ratified that he will ensure that proper notices are placed in the public through the media, so that interested persons may know that they can again access these, seeing that the members of the Legislative Assembly have been bombarded in the recent past by persons who are both interested and anxious to access the source of this money so that they may put their mortgages into effect?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: Definitely, I give that undertaking, sir. We will do whatever we can to promote it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Honourable Minister say what are the changes in the renewing of these agreements?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, for example, the new ceiling limit has been increased to $150,000. The scheme was presented to Finance Committee and the same terms and conditions that were adopted there, will be what will be in the scheme.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Honourable Minister say if there are any material changes to the schemes that for instance, of common-law couples, parents and children being able to apply together?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the areas that the Member mentioned were some of the troubled areas that to the best of my knowledge have been corrected so that we can try to assist the various people he has mentioned.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, when the Minister says, "...troubled areas..." can he explain those two points?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw the words that I used and refer to the areas that the Member mentioned. It is my understanding that these were some of the areas that actually held up the scheme, going to and fro, and whatever the problems were . . . these have ironed out.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: What I am trying to ascertain is whether those clauses in the agreement have been removed or not.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: As I was trying to indicate to the Member, I don't have the exact wording of this with me. I undertake to give it to him in writing.

The Speaker: Any further supplementaries? If there are no further supplementaries, we move on to Question 101 but prior to that I would ask for the suspension of Standing Order 23 (6).

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (6)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 23 (6) to allow for a fourth question to be asked by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (6) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Question No. 101 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 101

No. 101: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources what is Government's policy with regard to the "rebalancing" proposals aired by Cable & Wireless (CI) Limited at the 14 May 1999 presentation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: Government's policy with regard to the "rebalancing" proposal aired by Cable & Wireless (CI) Ltd, at their 14 May 1999 presentation was for Cable & Wireless to present the proposal to the public for input. However, ongoing talks are being held between Cable & Wireless and the Ministry, the latest being on 3 August 1999.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would ask the Minister to give the House an undertaking that he follow this matter up with his usual diligence as I have reason to believe that the rebalancing may lead to some Caymanian staff being affected by virtue of the fact that they may not be given sufficient and expected opportunities for re-training.

I am speaking particularly in the area of engineering—the Department of Engineering—those posts described as technicians and senior technicians, and also that there is the possibility where some staff are recruited from overseas to do work which was normally done by some young trained Caymanian technicians.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: I give the Member that undertaking, and I would like again to thank him for passing some information on to me yesterday in the same regard. I definitely have already asked for information on this and I will keep him appraised as soon as I have something on it.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries we will move on to Question No. 102 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 102

No. 102: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works (a) what is the total cost of the Pedro St. James Castle Project to-date; and (b) how much has been drawn-down from the Caribbean Development Bank (CDB) loan to-date.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The total cost of the Pedro St. James Project was estimated by CDB in the 1996 appraisal report to cost Cayman Islands $8,676,000 upon completion. The project was done through a three-phase project: Research, Planning and feasibility, and restoration and construction. A breakdown of the restoration and construction costs are:

PARTICULARS	CI$
Pedro Castle Restoration	1,364,000
Visitors' Centre Construction (which includes the multi-media theatre, café, washrooms, gift shops, the resource centre as well as offices)	2,259,306
Furniture, fixtures and multi-media (meaning the equipment)	1,335,000
External works	1,103,000
Architecture and Engineering	723,000
Construction Management	149,000
TOTAL RESTORATION AND CONSTRUCTION COST	$6,833,306

When we add the financial cost which includes commitment fee of Cayman Islands $57,246 and loan interest of $203,437, the two totalling $260,683, and add the land acquisition including stamp duty of $852,500, the primary capital costs then amounts to $7,685,806.

Now, when we add the recurrent part of this, adding the start-up cost and the pre-operating expenses for a period from early 1997 to the end of December 1998, it amounts to $730,582.

The total cost to government for research, planning and feasibility, restoration and construction, land acquisition, stamp duty, start-up cost and pre-operating expenses was $8,677,071. When we put this against the estimates, which were done in 1996 of $8,676,000, we see that those two figures compare very favourably.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I don't know whether they are favourable or not

The Speaker: If I could interpret one moment. I don't think you read the second page.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Sorry, Mr. Speaker. The amount drawn down on the CDB loan to-date is US $4,228,412.10. A further claim of US $1,612,429.04 has been submitted to CDB.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The recurrent expenditure . . . am I understanding the Minister correctly to say that this is only $730,582, presently? If that is so, what years is he covering?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, in answering the question, we were guided by the estimated cost done by CDB and relating the answer to the construction of the project. We realised, of course, as each year goes on, there is a subsidy to the Pedro St. James Project. The subsidy is included in the start-up cost and the pre-operating expenses totalling $730,582 for the period 1997 (as I mentioned earlier) until December 1998 because it was in December 1998 when the project was officially opened.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: So can I ask the Minister to say the amount for this year for ongoing expenses?

The Speaker: I don't think that comes out of the substantive answer but if you wish to answer, you may. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, what I would mention is that on Business Paper No. 1, there are two questions dealing with the income and expenditure of Pedro St. James—number 26 and 11. So I propose to answer those next week.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, that question came out of his supplementary answer but can I ask whether it is safe to say (if I am understanding correctly) this year's subsidy—whether the $600,000 will be added to the $730,582

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Firstly, we are dealing with the capital cost and the construction of the project and once that phase is over, then we move on to the operational cost of the project, which would naturally include the sum that the First Elected Member from West Bay was talking about. It is allocated in the 1999 budget.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am still not understanding whether this year's subsidy is added to this amount. When I ask what is the total cost to the Pedro St. James Castle Project to-date, I didn't mean that.

The Speaker: I think in his previous answer, he said to 1998. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the Honourable Minister can give us a breakdown of item 4, external works for $1,103,000?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Under external works heading, there is actually an array of items that are done, namely, the entrance features to the castle, the landscaping, the signage, the site elements, the services that have to be put in place, the stonewall that goes around the project, the parking areas, the grassy areas, the pathways that lead around the projects is all part of the external works. I don't have that in terms of a dollar figure to each one but that is what it covers.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say in item 4, what amount out of this was for landscaping and whether it also included the wall and how much was for that wall?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, this is the area that I understand the Auditor General is examining and we are awaiting his full report as to the details.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, so, while the Minister said it cost $1.1 million, he cannot say whether that included the landscaping and how much was paid for the landscaping and the wall that I am talking about.

The Speaker: Would you turn that into a question.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am asking whether that is so.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I did indicate that the total sum covered an array of items including the landscaping contract and I don't have those details with me at this present time.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker on the second page, (b), the Minister mentioned the amount drawn down from CDB. The loan to-date is US $4,228,412.10.

I wonder if the Minister can say what was the total commitment from CDB? And the second part of that question is with regard to the claims that have been submitted at one point, $6 million, whether or not there is any concern with regard to being reimbursed for that amount?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The claim was submitted approximately 3 - 4 weeks ago to CDB and there is a further document that's required by the bank. My understanding is it is being provided and hopefully within a short period of time, we should get a definitive answer.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Minister state exactly how the project was financed to this point, I am assuming it is completed? What I mean by that is the claim that has just been made of US $1.612 million to CDB been paid out to contractors or otherwise already? How has government paid that money? Also, if memory serves me right, the loan from CDB was suppose to be US $5.79 million. Can the Minister state if the rest of the funding for this cost that is indicated in the answer came from general revenue or other loans? Or exactly how the was entire project financed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My understanding is that the project was financed partly by government and partly by a loan from CDB. I don't want to quote percentages because I might get it wrong off the top of my head.

The funds have been paid out. The funds have been approved through the Finance Committee and through the budgetary process. We are now claiming from CDB those funds that have already been approved. There was some additional documentation required by the bank and as I understand it, there is only one letter missing as far as meeting all the requirements that the bank has required and that should be received shortly to be forwarded on to the bank.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say whether this 1996 appraisal is the first one, the second one, or was this the only one? I do recall a figure of [approximately] $5 million to do the project.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: There were two appraisals that I am aware of. The one we are talking about is the one done by CDB in 1996. There was an earlier estimate carried out or done by Commonwealth Resource Management, which amount to approximately $5 million.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say whether claims made to CDB have been honoured? This claim that was submitted 3 - 4 weeks ago, which claim is this as we were told in November that they had submitted a claim at that time.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: All claims submitted to CDB with the exception of the one, which was submitted about 3 - 4 weeks ago, have been refunded by the bank.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say which claim is that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, this is a sort of a clean-up where we categorise all of the items that are left to be claimed, and it amounts to $1.6 million. There are a variety of items that have been sent down. I don't have the claim with me. Otherwise, I would spell out in detail.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, government seems not to have a lot of things when they are answering questions. Was this claim the one to do with the external works?

The Speaker: That question was asked before.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Was it? By whom?

The Speaker: Was it the Third Elected Member for West Bay?

[Interjection: No!]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: We have asked a lot, you know, but we have not got any answers.

The Speaker: But that particular question has been asked.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: No, no! Mr. Speaker, I am asking whether the claim made to the CDB was the external works claim.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As I understand, the claim being made covers a variety of areas of the project. Some of it, I assume would be the landscaping contract, some would be the furnishing contract, some would be the multi-media theatre and its furniture, among other items.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say whether these have been rejected?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The claim has not been rejected.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Could the Minister then say, if it has not been rejected, whether there is a discussion as to the accuracy of the claim and whether there is further discussion then to ascertain the full amount?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier, there was a requirement by the bank to submit documentation which they did not find present at the time of the original submission, which was 3 or 4 weeks ago. My understanding is, as of two days ago, all of the documentation has been received with the exception of one letter, which we hope to receive shortly.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Just for the sake of clarity, when he says "receive" does he mean the ministry is receiving this documentation to send to CDB? And, if they are receiving it, whom are they receiving it from?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The project was supervised by Public Works—in dealing with the visitors' centre, in dealing with the external works, the majority of it if not all of it. So, it is Public Works that is requesting the additional documentation to satisfy the bank. And once they receive it, they then forward it on to CDB, which is the procedure established for a long time.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, is Public Works receiving this from home? That's the question. The contractor? And, if that is so, since there were contracts why did they not have that documentation and why this absence of documentation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As I understand it, the bank is requesting additional information, which I understand as been received from Commonwealth Historic Resource Management to be forwarded on to CDB. One letter from them is what is awaited and as I understand it, it should be arriving at Public Works shortly to be forwarded to CDB.

The Speaker: I am going to have to limit this to two more questions because we will be here all day.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, sir. We could.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: [What] is Commonwealth Resource Management? Is it a local company? Is it a foreign company? Is it registered locally? Who are its directors? Who are its material owners?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, there is a question set down (and I propose to answer that next week) which covers the majority of what the member is now requesting.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member of George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Since that question was not dealt with, perhaps there may still be two supplementaries.

I noticed in the substantive answer, the total cost estimated by CDB in 1996 was C1$8.67 million and I also noticed that in the answer, the total cost to-date compared with that estimate by CDB in 1996 is $8.67 million—well, call it $8.68 million so it is just about the same. I had earlier asked about how the project was financed and in the Minister's answer he discussed the various linkages which added up to the total being paid out. Can the Minister state if the estimates over the years for the cost involved as time went on for the project would then come up to the amount of money that is being borrowed from CDB, taken away from this total?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, there are some areas of that, which I think need more detail on my part to answer accurately. I don't want to say something that may not turn out to be correct but the principle is that Government pays a portion and the bank pays a portion. If we draw down on all of the loan, which the claim now, I think, would put it close to that amount, if not that exact amount; then the portion that has been arranged initially with the bank and the acceptance of Government of that loan to fund this particular project, I think, the principle would naturally follow that the portion that we were suppose to pay will be paid... And I say, if, because we have not received the claim yet or funding of the claim. If the claim is met, it would, I think, put a total draw down on the US$5.7 million from CDB.

The Speaker: Final supplementary. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, with the greatest of respect, we are still on that same one because he needed some more detail to make sure that he answered my question. I am going to make it very clear. I am not trying to be rude, sir, but I am still on the same one. I am going to make it very clear just so that we both understand each other.

The answer says that the total cost of the project was $8,677,071—that's what the answer says. We know what the amount was for the loan. I quote that figure $5.79 million because that is what we have seen but there is no argument about how much that was, whatever that amount was. That's what I know it to be [and] that's why I am using that figure. I am working on the assumption that this claim of $1.67 million will be honoured and that there will be a total draw down on whatever the loan was given by CDB. But we know that the funds spent into the project, approved by Finance Committee, the funds were not all at one time and it was over a period of years certain amounts were used.

What I am asking the Minister to tell is: Given the total cost that is put on paper here [and] taking away the total draw down from the CDB, whatever that difference is—if the amounts approved by Finance Committee and spent over the years during the projects ongoing construction and everything else until it was completed—if those amounts when all added up will tally with the difference between the total cost of the project and the CDB loan? That's what I am asking.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think the answer to that, Mr. Speaker, is yes. I wanted to look at some other data that I had in my office to be absolutely sure but I think the answer is yes.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

Going on to question number 103, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 103

No. 103: Miss Heather D. Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources if there are any plans to construct a civic centre/hurricane shelter in the community of Savannah/Newlands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: Whilst budgetary provisions were not made in the 1999 Budget and construction plans not prepared, land was acquired contiguous to the Savannah Primary School to eventually construct not only a civic centre, but a new post office as well.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: As soon as these plans are in order, could the Honourable Minister make sure that the three representatives from Bodden Town are included so that we can give some input on it?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: I am very happy that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town has activated this. Taking into consideration the last hurricane . . . it was seen that it was highly necessary that we look at this area and try to have some constructed where persons living in that area, especially in the lower areas of Savannah will be able to shelter safely during a hurricane.

So I would like to say that I feel certain that government will take the necessary steps—since she has actually motivated it—to try to include something in the budget, at least for the plans, so that we can get on our way with the facility that is so badly needed.

The Speaker: Any further supplementary?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, with your indulgence, since we are dealing with civic centres, I wonder if the honourable minister could give us an update on our civic centre that has been proposed for West Bay for the last six years?

The Speaker: That is not a supplementary but if the Honourable Minister has the answer [then he can reply].

The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John. B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I think this is outside of the ambit of this question. The most I can say to the Member from West Bay is that, I think as he knows well, some funds were put in for the plans for the West Bay Civic Centre but there has not been anything else on that. And, as far as George Town is concerned, it is my understanding that properties were identified. I think coming up on the budget time we should try to include all of these very important matters for the civic centres

The Speaker: The concludes Question Time.

I have a question. Do you think it is appropriate that we take the luncheon break at this time because it is so near, and say we return at 2.00 p.m? We shall now suspend for lunch until 2.00 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.51 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.16 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTION

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99

REFERENDUM LAW

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have circulated an amendment to this motion and I would now like, if I could, to read it and move it.

The Speaker: Go ahead, I waive the two days notice. Please continue.

AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION 11/99

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, sir. It says amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99. "In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning, seek to move: BE IT RESOLVED that Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 be amended as follows:-

"BE IT RESOLVED that the fourth recital (paragraph) be amended by the addition of the following words at the end thereof 'and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments.'

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the first operative part of the said resolution being the penultimate sentence be amended by the removal of the word 'the Government' and the insertion of the following words: 'subject to and after a referendum under section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1993 whereby the electorate vote for a referendum to be initiated by the electorate, the Legislative Assembly.'

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the following be added at the end of the Motion: 'AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments.'"

The Speaker: The amendment has been duly moved. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, sir. I would wish only on this to speak to the amendment itself, reserving the right after the amendment to speak on the main motion. This is the reason why I put it up front because that will save time.

The Speaker: Understood.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This amendment does two things and two things only. The first thing that it does is to the state that before the Constitution of the Cayman Islands can be amended, there should be a referendum whereby the electorate of this country votes for those specific amendments. That section has been amended in the recital part and the recital that was in the main motion has now been added to the operative part.

So what this will do is that before the Constitution of this country can be changed, we say (and so says, I would assume, the backbench) that there should be a referendum on those specific issues. It states clearly . . . and let me read the actual motion itself as I see there's a bit of concern there. The amending part says, "AND WHEREAS only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance;" We are moving to add to that, "...and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments."

I know there can be no doubt in this House that every Member would not wish to—or should not, I hope—change the Constitution of this country without having the people of this country express their clear wishes. In the past that was done in two ways; one was a general election whereby specific sections of the Constitution were made an issue; or the alternative way (as has been put forward in this Motion) is that of a referendum.

The Motion itself specifically says that there is growing compatibility of the referendum with the parliamentary representative system of government. It is also recognised that the referendum is wholly consistent with parliamentary sovereignty. It goes on to talk about the increasing matters of national importance to man wide spread public participation. So what this part of the Motion is saying is that before the Constitution of the Cayman Islands can be changed, there should be a referendum on the specific issues, specific changes that are required to be made.

Any change that is made in the Constitution of a country is a major and serious change. Change in the Constitution of a country (and I will deal with this further on) is the most sacrosanct part of a democratic country and any time the Constitution is changed, the public should have a clear say in those changes. We have to put this in retrospect. This country began its economic progress . . . we began to flourish as a result of changes in the Constitution of the Bahamas. That is where we got our start—it was the flight of business from the Bahamas to Grand Cayman.

There can be no doubt that changing or even talking about changing the Constitution is something that is very serious. We saw it recently. One of our competitors started talking about it. In fact, they did a referendum about advancing and changing their Constitution and there was a flight of business out of the country—we got some of it and luckily the public there spoke loud and clear. In the referendum, the government that put forward the change, the Chief Minister had to resign.

So any move to change the Constitution of this country, the public must have their say on it. They must have a right. So that section strengthens the motion as it now is and merely fleshes out the fourth recital of the actual motion itself.

The second part of the amendment basically says that here the motion is establishing that a referendum should be able to be initiated by the electorate of the country. But the motion itself breaches the very principle that it is advancing, in that it is seeking to change the Constitution and insert a section in it on referendum without seeking the views of the people under the present system of referendum that exists.

Quite simply, there is now in the Cayman Islands Constitution the right to have a Referendum; a right that can be instituted very simply by a motion being brought to this Honourable House and once adopted, a law then must follow with it.

At present, under Section 29(2) (I would like to read this), "Without prejudice to the generality of subsection (1) [which is the right to make laws] a law may make provision for the holding of a referendum amongst persons qualified as electors in elections to the Assembly on a question declared by resolution, adopted by a majority of the elected members of the Assembly, to be a matter of national importance and specified in such law."

So, what the Constitution now says is that the same way that this motion has been brought to change the Constitution and extend—because that's what it would be doing, extending the referendum provisions of the Constitution—no one has gone back and asked the public about this change of Constitution. What we are saying, Mr. Speaker, at present there is a right for a backbencher...and I want to make this abundantly clear, any Member of this House including a backbencher can bring a motion. The motion can say that they wish to have a referendum on a matter of national importance and then a law must be introduced in this House, which will specify the questions and carry out the referendum.

The provision that is in this Constitution is workable by any member of the backbench, simply by bringing a motion to this House and requesting a referendum. So, it is not as if there is now no provision in the Constitution for bringing a referendum—there is! But the motion itself is actually breaking the very principle it is purporting to bring in. In other words, this Motion is asking that a referendum be initiated by the electorate but has not availed itself, taken the opportunity of using the provisions under the Constitution, for a referendum and asking the public, Do you wish to have the Constitution changed? Do you wish to insert a section, which gives you the right to initiate a referendum?

So, Mr. Speaker, we support the motion with the amendments because I have . . . and I am quite grateful to the First Elected Member for George Town. How well he propounded what I have said about referendums over the year. Let me say this, sir, I have told the people of this country that my debates are going to be kept high. I am not going to get too far into that other than further down to defend what has been said. But the reason why there is a referendum in the Constitution of this country today and the reason why there is Section 29(2) in this Constitution is because I, Truman Bodden, sir, fought, and fought, and fought, and this was inserted.

I can tell you several other sections that I fought to get into the Constitution. So, I also fully support what is in the Constitution. And, quite frankly, anything the public of this country in a referendum makes a decision, it is a duty of this House to carry out the wish of a majority of the public of this country. We are here as representatives.

The second part of the amendment is really saying, look, since everyone agrees that the referendum is how you get the wishes of the people then you should go back and get the wishes of the people on this point. Because a lot of things have to be looked at as to how specifically this will be done. It has to be looked at, if the public wishes to have this inserted. And by all means if the public of this country wish to have the referendum inserted as initiated by a certain percentage of the electorate, I accept it. This is a democracy.

What I am saying is, do not break the very rule that you are attempting to introduce by bringing an amendment to the Constitution without having gone back to the public and asked for their views in a referendum.

Mr. Speaker, I will go into the merits and the demerits of some of the issues that relate to the main motion further down, but at this stage in the interest of transparency and democracy—we are always talking about transparency in this country—then let us go back to the public and ask them their views on this change of the Constitution to add in the referendum. I think the public would be very suspicious of us, if in an attempt to bring in a rule, we basically broke the rule that we are bringing in.

In other words, we are saying here that there should be a referendum and we are going to change the Constitution to add to the present referendum, yet nobody has gone back to the public with the referendum to ask them what they want. It seems so basic to me sir, that if the backbench believes and they feel that this is important—and I think that it is a very important issue, an extremely important issue, the provision of a referendum—that there is a very clear section in the Constitution that provides a simple procedure. All it takes is a private member's motion or any motion in the House that will call for a referendum and after that a law will be brought in to ask the questions that need to be asked to the electorate.

So, let us be positive and let us do what we say we are doing in this Motion. In fact, as long as this section has been here—and I think it has been in since the amendment was in 1993, five to six years—it has provided a very simple process for calling a referendum. And despite what has been said by backbenchers, no one has ever brought a motion to the House for a resolution to call a referendum. I know and I have certain sections of the motion that I would read. And I know basically who in the past have supported referendum and who have not.

Amazingly, despite all that was said about me in the early stages of this, no one was able to come up here and say anything other than that I was the one who first put a motion to this House, maybe second I don't know. It was back in the 1980s—1989. Apparently there may have been one in 1986 but I put the one in 1989 to bring in the referendum in the country and the Constitution itself has this insertion because I was one of several. Okay? I wasn't the only one who supported the referendum being put in the Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment itself enshrines the democratic rights of the Cayman Islands to ensure that no one will touch the most important part of this democracy—our Constitution—unless they have gone back to the public and asked the public specifically, do you want these changes? Whether they are changes for a Chief Minister, changes for any amendment to any sections of it or any changes. I submit that the most important decision that can be taken is one that affects the most important document in the country.

I have kept this debate high because this is too important an issue to get into politics. I am pleading with members here. We are now looking at changing the Constitution of this country and it should not drop into politics, it should be dealt with on the merits. So the motion to us is acceptable with the amendments which I would just like now in summary to run over.

What the first amendment does is add and make more specific the present motion by adding: "...that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments." That is the first amendment. So there should be no change to the Constitution unless there is a referendum and the people speak and tell this House what they wish changed, if anything.

The second part which states that...

POINT OF ELUCIDATION

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of elucidation, please.

The Speaker: Will you give way?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I will give way, sir, I don't want to have politics here.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town on a point of elucidation.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: As I said, it is a point of elucidation and perhaps if the Minister would hear carefully what I am going to say he might make very clear to me what, as of now, I am not quite sure I understand.

If I understand his first proposed amendment correctly, what is now going to happen is that the fourth Whereas section in the motion is going to read: "AND WHEREAS only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments."

Unless something is dreadfully wrong between my ears that does not read as a proper sentence...I don't know where I am missing what. Can somebody else read because...

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am just wondering if the Member would say if he understands what I am saying.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I understand the intent. But I am saying that from where I sit to be asked to vote on it, it cannot be left like this. That is what I am saying—the very first amendment.

Perhaps, if the Minister takes the time and reads it out, the Minister might understand what I am trying to say.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, what I tried to do was rather than changing unnecessarily the motion, I merely added something on to it. I could very well instead of adding on to the fourth Whereas, put this as a fifth Whereas. I have no problem with that. (I am wondering if the member would just follow me.)

What I was saying sir, is that we could have just taken this and put that as a fifth Whereas totally separate rather than running with the sentence. I didn't want to change your sentence because I too had doubts on some things within that section. If that is what would make it acceptable then by all means I could put it as a fifth Whereas.

To be frank, sir, then I could remove the fourth Whereas clause out of the last operative part because that is irrelevant to me.

So, what I could do, is this, if I could just read the motion and I wonder if the First Elected Member for George Town will follow me on this. The motion reads: "WHEREAS there is growing compatibility of the referendum with the parliamentary representative system of government and it is also recognised that the referendum is wholly consistent with parliamentary sovereignty;

"AND WHEREAS an increasing number of matters of national importance demand widespread public participation in the decision making process;

"AND WHEREAS it is rare for a general election to be fought on a single main issue and the result of an election indicates, at most, an undifferentiated approval of a whole range of policies;

"AND WHEREAS only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance [I could then have just added, sir] and whereas the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments;"

I am happy to change it to that if that makes it acceptable.

Okay, I understand. But I didn't want really to change up the motion unnecessarily but if that will make it acceptable, I am happy to change it. In which case, sir, the last resolve clause would just follow the fifth Whereas clause and it would just say, "BE IT THEREFORE FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments." I am happy to do that if it makes it acceptable.

All I am trying to get in and I think members understand is that the Constitution should not be changed unless there is a referendum for the specific issues and the public response to those issues.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, again, just to make the point very clear. The point I was making with the way it reads is that the amendment that is proposed—which is added on to one of the WHEREAS sections of the original motion—to me seems to be a resolve not a whereas—simply because it is suggesting that something should be done.

It is not stating a fact—that's what I am trying to clear up and I am not talking about accepting or rejecting. I am just saying let's get it put the right way that you want it to be put. That is all I am saying.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can really leave out the amendment to the WHEREAS clause because that is not the operative part.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I just wondered because of the problem here, if it wouldn't help if we took a short break so that this matter can be cleared up.

The Speaker: That's exactly what I was about to recommend. Let us suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 2:50 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3:31 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended. The Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Continuing to really wind-up on the amendment (and I will do this on my reply on the amendment because I am only speaking on the amendment). What I would be seeking to do is leave out or remove the first resolve section of this motion, which really only deals with recitals. It really isn't necessary to the balance of this motion.

So the first part that said, "BE IT RESOLVED that the fourth recital be amended..." I have no problem with leaving that recital the way it is. So there are two things and I will just sum up. I would like to explain this again because there seems to be some confusion. I can understand where there can be confusion because the amendment to the Constitution relates to a provision in the Constitution that is in itself a section dealing with the referendum.

But let's take any other section . . . let's say that there was an amendment to the number of seats in the Legislative Assembly. What this motion is saying is that before there is an amendment to the Constitution, there should be a referendum of the people to get them to say what specific amendments they wish to have. In this case, what the motion itself is seeking to do is to amend the Constitution to add a section, so to speak, or add a part to Section 29 (2) of the Constitution, which would allow the electorate to initiate a referendum.

The first part, therefore, was originally the middle part. What that is saying is that in this case before there is an amendment to the Constitution to extend the provisions of the referendum section of the Constitution, there should be a referendum initiated under the present Constitution. The present Constitution provides a process whereby any member of this House—whether government or backbench—can bring a motion as it says to (I would just like to read that again), "Without prejudice to the generality of subsection (1), a law may make provision for the holding of a referendum among persons qualified as electors in election to the Assembly on a question declared by resolution [that is, anybody in the house can bring a motion. And it goes on to say] adopted by majority of the elected members of the Assembly to be a matter of national importance and specified in such law."

So, presently, there is a section in the Constitution that has been there since 1993 that makes provision for a referendum.

Now, the motion that is being brought, instead of bringing a motion under Section 29(2) to ask the people whether they wish to amend the Constitution by having the electorate initiate a referendum . . . in other words, extending Section 29 of the Constitution by amendment. Then instead of doing that a motion was brought. What I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that this motion—since it is amending a section of the Constitution—should itself go back to the electorate of the country to have their wishes.

I know it is a bit confusing because the amending section relates to the referendum. But in a quick summary sir, what we are saying is, firstly, any amendment to the Constitution . . . there must be a referendum. And secondly, in this case (because the motion itself is amending the Constitution) then there should be a referendum to find out if the public wishes to have that extension or whether they are satisfied with the section that is in there. But I stress, again, Mr. Speaker, there is a clear section and it follows (as I will show when I am dealing with the full motion) the English procedure for holding a referendum.

This is how it is done in the United Kingdom. You have a specific law for each specific referendum and the questions and procedures are set out in there. So, the United Kingdom have put in here the type of referendum that is used in the United Kingdom and that is different from what is used in federal countries, such as the United States or in the Cantons of Switzerland.

So, I repeat again, sir, there is a section in here—and I am happy that I was one of the people who pushed to get this in—that specifically allows a resolution in this House by anyone and that can trigger a referendum through a specific law.

The second point is that we are saying if the Constitution is to be amended then there should be a referendum. Since the motion is seeking to amend the Constitution in the referendum section then there should be a referendum of the people before that amendment is made and go back and ask the people what they want, that's all I am saying. In fact, the referendum is a way in which the public will have to state what they wish to see done. Its submission to the popular vote prevents hasty action, [so said] Roberts-Wray, something I think the First Elected Member for George Town repeated.

That's all I am saying with this Motion—go back to the people and ask the people what they wish to have done about amending this part of the Constitution. When I reply at the end of this amendment, I would at that stage seek to remove the first resolve section of it.

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 is now opened to debate. Does any Member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Motion put forward by the First Elected Member for George Town is something that I can support. When the motion was put last year...

The Speaker: I must say we are now speaking to the amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 not the substantive motion.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, I might not get that chance, Mr. Speaker, so I better say it now. But, Mr. Speaker, if you will allow me to say, when that first motion was put forward last year I couldn't vote for it as it was. But now the resolve in this motion is different from last year's and I can support, in the substantive motion, that is.

Mr. Speaker, the problem that I find with what the Minister of Education is doing . . . he uses the words, 'go back to the people' because that would sound good. But looking at the full motion as it would be amended, he is asking the electorate to vote for a referendum to be initiated by the electorate. The Legislative Assembly would take the necessary steps to cause the Constitution to be amended to allow the electorate to initiate a referendum.

Well, I suppose, that's what we have lawyers for—this kind of stuff here. I am taking the chance to say this and I know I am taking the chance to say this, Mr. Speaker, but I am going to say it. This would clutter up democracy. This would clutter up the democratic process.

Why make the process so difficult, Mr. Speaker, that you set up a machinery to get a vote to decide that you must set it up. That's what this amendment is saying. While it is good to say let the public do it, the public quite understands. They are not stupid, you know. They understand what this process would do. They want the process from what I am hearing, and we have the way with the present Constitution to be able to amend the Constitution. We are not taking something that will say, change into full ministerial government, we are not changing the number of seats in the House, we are not changing the Governor's powers, we are not changing the electoral process—none of that. Those are things that I would say we would have great difficulty in.

But how could they concoct this God only knows. It just shows why the country is in a state of flux because of this kind of thwarted thinking. I cannot see why we would need to set up machinery to get a referendum for the people to say, yes or no, for whether we can amend the Constitution to allow or to initiate a referendum.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for allowing me the time. I don't think that this makes sense. I think this is just political posturing by the government being laid by the Minister of Education—who's a lawyer and can twist words to fool up everybody. And that is what this is—nothing but fooling everybody.

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, he is saying [I am] twisting words to fool people and in my view that is unparliamentary. I am not twisting anything. I understand what I put forward, if he doesn't, that's his limited problem.

The Speaker: I would ask you to withdraw the twisting, please.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I will go back to the word "clutter-up." Mr. Speaker, I would ask you to ask him to stop his insulting when we are dealing with a serious matter.

I will withdraw that if that makes him happy but why does he have to be nasty all the time and talk about people being limited? I am not a lawyer and I have never purported to be one. And, I tell you this: I quite understand what he is doing. And it is because I understand that he gets up there and talk about me being limited. I am not that limited that I don't understand that the process that he is trying to set up is only going to make it more difficult, more expensive and thwart the process of democracy.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Fourth Elected Member for George Town

Dr. Frank McField: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe that what we are discussing here with regard to the original motion, the original intention is that the people have strongly suggested that they would like to have the right to initiate referendums as they felt necessary, and that they would not like this process only to be controlled by elected members of this House. It is quite clear that the amendment brought by the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning is an amendment that only makes the understanding of the purpose of the original motion more difficult.

It makes it more difficult for the public to understand exactly what our motives and intentions are here and it creates the possibility for the motives and intentions that were formed in genuine concern for the improvement of good governance in this country to be taken out of proportion and be put back into that old cloth of they want to change, they-want-to-destroy-the-country type of mentality that has been used in this country for so long to frighten away progress and constructive changes that are necessary.

Mr. Speaker, to say that it is not understood from the very beginning by the Minister of Education, and by the Government, and by other persons that really all of us know that in the Strategic Development Plan that we adopted here in this House, the people said that they want to be able to have more open and accountable government. And, that the instruments for more open and accountable government has to be in the Constitution. So, the Constitution as we know it is really a series of instruments for good governments to make government possible.

Any of these instruments, from time to time, can be seen by sensible and democratic people to have flaws. Therefore, it is not criminal for the people themselves to have spoken in relationship to the Strategic Development Plan in saying that they have a great desire to be able to participate more in their democracy and not make their democracy simply a system that is controlled completely by elected members. They therefore want the right to be able to initiate the referendum, and not just how the referendum is initiated by the government.

I think it is quite clear that, that is what we are debating. I think it is quite clear that the intention of all members of this Honourable House is to find a reasonable solution to this particular predicament without giving people the idea somehow that we are tampering with the Constitution.

Now, change means change. Alteration means alteration. If I say I am going to change my jacket, Mr. Speaker, it means I am going to take it off and put on a new jacket. If I say I am going to have my jacket altered, it means I might have the arms altered or the pocket altered or something altered but I certainly have not changed my jacket because the jacket remains the same jacket that I had before the alterations. We talk about minor alterations; we talk about major alterations.

So, let us not be using words that are not going to be helpful in allowing the people the possibility to make reasonable decisions with regards what it is that we are discussing, what it is that is needed, what it is that we are trying to accomplish.

We are not trying to suggest any change in the Constitution. We are trying to include an amendment, which the people themselves suggested in the referendum, which was the Strategic Development Plan. This is a form of referendum and as a matter of fact, it might even be considered to be a bit more democratic in the sense in terms of the methodology that was used to arrive at these conclusions. Government spent a tremendous amount of money to be able to Table the Strategic Development Plan for the next ten years and now it is the first opportunity to be able to implement one of the major principles of this—they are saying that it needs to be more complicated.

So we have to go back to the people again for them to tell us that they want more democracy. In other words, they want to be able to initiate referendums just like elected members can initiate referendums. They want to spend more money in order to be able to come to this conclusion.

Now, I know that it is possible that we can make this issue more complex and more confusing than it should really be. I know that it is possible for us to drag it out into the next election and for there to be the talk about who wants to change the constitution and who doesn't want to change the Constitution. I know this goes all the way back to the first time we ever had a Constitution or instruments for the Government of this country. But that is not the real issue.

The real issue here is that the mover of the original motion has brought a proposition to this Honourable House that has been the desire of the people because he knows that a large majority of people in this country—especially young educated people—feel that their democracy could be improved if there was a Referendum Law. Now, we were told before that there is a Referendum Law in the fact that there is in the constitution the possibility for referendums to be taken but only referendums that are initiated by elected members. That is not what the people are talking about. The people know that their elected members can well initiate the referendum but the people are not interested in that; they are interested in their ability to be able to begin this process.

What happens if you have 15 people in this Legislative Assembly that think all the same—you end up one day, perhaps, with all of us in the same group thinking the same way. Then there is no way that the people can safeguard themselves against the Parliament of the country because when we are talking about parliamentary sovereignty, we are talking about the sovereignty of elected people; we are talking about the sovereignty of the people.

Maybe it is about time we understood that we are not talking about our individual or collective sovereignty in here but we are talking about the sovereignty of the people. If the people have no method, no instrument to challenge the total power of the elected Government then the people have been placed in a very subservient position. The people's democracy is flawed.

If the people's democracy is flawed and if we have heard the people talking about the fact that they want greater representation and we don't believe we are getting representation, and I hear it everyday and everyday. If we have a motion that is brought to improve this representation, especially at the eve of changes that are going to come to this country, anyway. Because when we are talking about the OECD, the White Paper, Britain granting citizenship, human rights issues, environmental issues and when we are talking about constitutional issues, the British White Paper is talking about constitution issues.

Why is it that they can initiate discussions with regards the constitution but if we here in this Honourable House or the people initiate discussion with regards the constitution we are seen like bad servants trying to lead our masters astray, trying to ruin the house, trying to bite the hands that fed us? I believe there comes a time, in terms of the political maturity of a people when they can sit down reasonably and talk about their rights and their responsibilities without being afraid of doing this.

I believe, therefore, that people have a basic right to challenge their Government. Not only just during elections each four years but also more often if that is necessary and if that is found to be convenient. I believe that anyone who tries to postpone that process, to make that process less possible to be understood by people are really beginning to confuse the entire issues here.

Mr. Speaker, with regards to the amendment, the specific object of this amendment is that we are going to have a referendum, to ask people whether or not they would want more rights. You are going to tell me that there are actually people in this world that believe that you have to ask a person if they would like to have their rights—I don't believe that I have to ask anybody if they would like to have their rights. I believe everybody wants to have their rights. So the right to initiate the referendum would be a fundamental right enshrined in the constitution, it is not so now.

The only persons that have that right are people who are elected for four years. And that is a long time when we live in a changing world like this and we want to be able to give the people, especially in a small country like this, more opportunities to question supremacy, or rule, or guidance, or leadership. There is nothing wrong with what was intended in the original motion that we have been battling with in this House for several sittings, for several months.

I supported the original intention and I believe that although I find that one can debate the goodness and the badness of referendums, I believe that the people in all countries like to have the say. [They] like to feel that regardless of whether or not they have governments that they still are the ones that make the government and that they are the ones that can unmake the government, and they don't all the time have to wait four years before they can have any time of input.

So, the fact that this amendment has been brought, the fact that if we do not vote for this amendment, some people would want to say that we are trying to change the constitution rather than telling the people that we are amending the Constitution, we are altering the Constitution in one specific instance and that instance is the instance that they have already instructed us that there is a flaw from their point of view.

They are saying that although we have legislators have the right to call referendums, they as a people are denied that right. And we are saying that we must now spend more money to ask them the same question again when this question was very well researched, very well discussed and very well documented in the Strategic Plan that was laid in this Honourable House by the same Honourable Minister that as now brought this amendment that, I think, takes this issue out of the context of reason and puts it in the context of illusion.

So in this particular sense, I think, that we must pay specific attention to the fact that we are not just going to have people getting away with saying, 'They want to change' because ultimately here this amendment is asking for the same thing in the final analysis. What the amendment is actually saying is that they would like to go through the process of consulting the people with regards this particular change.

Some of us feel that the people have been consulted, the people have spoken and that the cost of having had this done has been costly.

Now, I would like to really say with regards this particular amendment, again, it might just put us back like how we were when we were dealing with the last one in October 1998. We debated the last referendum, a private member's motion, in October 1998 and now we are in September of 1999—almost a year. And maybe another year will pass before we will get any kind of Referendum Law in this country. In the meantime, it is important that the people be given the vehicle.

Should we do something in this country, for instance, that they don't like specifically with regards to the White Paper and the OECD? We would not want people in this country to think that the reason why we are playing around with a Referendum Law that could be initiated by the people is because we don't want the people to speak on the issue of British citizenship, homosexuality, taxation and others. We would not want this to happen, Mr. Speaker. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I want to begin by remarking that it seems to me over the years that certain people have always been predictable. I like to deal with predictable people for those are the easiest people to deal with, for obvious reasons.

Now, I listened carefully, and in popular parlance there is a word that is used frequently "spin-doctor." And, in politics you have spin-doctors too, you know. I noticed that some people like to drag around the frightening notion that those people who when they advocate improvements to the instrument which is used to govern us, the detractors like to say that we are advocating constitutional change and this is a bad thing as if somebody had leprosy or somebody had one of the more contagious diseases that are common now.

Mr. Speaker, far be that from the truth. What was being proposed is far different from anything like that. The amendment that was introduced by the honourable member who introduced the amendment, namely, the Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, and the Leader of Government Business, only serves to compound an issue which should simply be straightforward, clear and concise.

What we are talking about and what we were seeking is a method by which the people could cause a certain action to be triggered. And his amendment is doing nothing to make that more available and to make that more easily achieved. Indeed, all his amendment is doing is confusing and confounding the issue as is not unusual.

Mr. Speaker, what we are talking about is, simply put, people power—the ability of the people to have their voice expressed, which is not possible now. We know that a referendum can be triggered by any or all of the members of the Legislative Assembly. But we want to see that expanded so that it can be triggered by members of the public. Now, are we saying that we are so arrogant that we don't want that extended? Are we saying that we are such know-alls and we are the arbiters, ultimately and only, that it should rest and be reserved only amongst ourselves? Or are we saying that we are prepared to offer true democracy?

Mr. Speaker, that brings me to a good point: People talk about transparency and democracy, and I noticed that some people inside here were blowing their own trumpet by saying they were the originators of the business of the referendum. Heaven knows I don't begrudge them any kudos that they might take from that but that record pales along side the record of other people who have been here labouring. Would to God they could take that same position with the regard to the Bill of Rights—which they killed.

Mr. Speaker, the essence of true democracy lies in the people having a direct voice. This amendment, sir, does not do anything to enhance that. This amendment doesn't do anything to enhance the people having a direct say in having their wishes heard. What was proposed, let me say clearly and unequivocally, was not anything about constitutional change.

And I want to say something else: Certain people on the Government side have for years been putting millstones around my neck. They have not succeeded in preventing me from getting elected, for I have here a 1996 Manifesto of the National Team, where it was claimed that I was one of the proponents of constitutional change along with Mr. Linford Pierson—both of us got elected. So I am not scared, Mr. Speaker, of taking a position. But I am not advocating any constitutional change.

What I am advocating is a change that the people can have a say in the truly representative democracy. The essence of democracy as it originated historically in Athens, Mr. Speaker, is far different from what we do now because they held town hall meetings, where the people told their representatives what they wanted done and their representatives did that.

Mr. Speaker, this same document on the last page says, "We will continue to support letting the people have their say in referenda where necessary on major issues." Well, how can the people have their say in referenda on major national issues when you are preventing them from constructing the instrument so that they can trigger the referenda? Mr. Speaker, it is time those people who talk the talk, walked the walk because they have been talking the talk now for ages. So let me see them walking the walk now that they have been talking.

Simply put, if our positions are so similar—and we are going to put it to the test because I guarantee you, the backbench will not be outsmarted—we still have one more move to make. We are going to see who is who as the expression goes because this whole Assembly, all honourable members will have a chance to put their actions where their words have been.

I want to end this note by repeating the words of Thomas Jefferson—not the Minister of Tourism [laughter]*—*that Thomas Jefferson who was one of the founding fathers of the United States. He said, "I know of no safer depository of the ultimate power of the society but the people themselves. And if we think them not enlightened enough to exercise their discretion, the remedy is not to take it from them but to inform their discretion."

Mr. Speaker, what we would like to see is a situation where the people can ultimately exercise their right. And, we can talk about transparency, accountability and all the other buzzwords that some of us have easily adopted now, but all will be to no avail if we deprive the people of this right—a fundamental right it is too—to trigger a referendum on any issue they deem important.

I know the Minister of Education is always honourable and I look forward, Mr. Speaker, when we make our little move, for him to narrow the gap and come and join hands, as has been done in the past on a few occasions. I agree with him that this need not be adversarial and we don't want it to be adversarial, but it is a little political. I disagree with him when he said it shouldn't be political—it has to be political, Mr. Speaker, because what we are talking about is people power. But it doesn't have to be adversarial so I will end on that note, sir, and thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town. The debate is continuing on the amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. What the Third Elected Member just read and I quote again, "I know of no safer depository of the ultimate power of the society but the people themselves. If we think them not enlightened enough to exercise their discretion, the remedy is not to take it from them but to inform their discretion." That, sir, sums up the whole intent of the exercise that has been going on since yesterday regarding referendum.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if I am understanding correctly what the amendments we are debating right now seek to achieve, it is as follows: It basically is asking that if we are moved by the thought that the people should have the authority and power to initiate a referendum, if that thought should be enshrined in the Constitution, which calls for an amendment to the existing Constitution, then we would like to prove by asking them permission to amend the constitution to allow them to have more people power. That is the first thing that it wants to achieve. That is my way of putting it but I am sure that it is understood.

The second thing that the amendments wish to achieve is this—and this is very important because the Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning is going to be totally shocked when this is all over this evening. I can assure him! What I perceive as the second desire of the amendments is to ensure that anytime any change is desired in the Constitution that it must be done by referendum. That is what I understand to be the second desire and if that is what makes everyone comfortable, I do not have a problem with that.

Now, we could get back to the original or rather the first amendment that I was just talking about and others have spoken about it before. I am going to say right here and now, what happened yesterday (because only one side had been given about the motion) is that the Minister found himself in a box. And I have to give the Minister credit for coming back here this morning, finding a method to get himself out of the box. I do not have a problem with that because I too can change positions and say that had the roles been reversed, I would have attempted to do the same thing. So I don't have a problem with that.

Now, the Minister obviously could not simply lay down play dead and say, 'Yes, my Government supports this motion'. So the Minister had to get into some very intricate details to prove that he also has a thinking Government and one, which can rationalise certain things and perhaps even look into a matter further than it has been looked at thus far. I don't have a problem with that. In fact, that is good sometimes for us to be able to enjoy dialogue like that without being adversarial.

Now, while as the mover of the original motion, I personally do not see why we have to utilise the methods that are being put forward in the amendments, because I too firmly believe that the people have spoken in many different ways to say that they want more participation in the governance of the country and the best way possible is for them to have this power to initiate a referendum rather than depending on their representatives.

So, while these amendments are taking the position that since we want to make sure of this and since it requires an amendment to the constitution, let us make sure that the people want the constitution amended. Different method but same thing achieved as far as I am concerned. So, because others and I—and we will find out today if everyone is of the same mindset—consider this to be of the utmost importance, I believe that it would not serve the people of this country for us to fight over how we achieve the same goal. I want the Minister to understand crystal clear that if I were playing a game this evening, he would have a real fight on his hands because I could do that.

I also want him to understand that I could put up a fight that he would be hard-pressed not to try to find some middle road himself. But you see, right here and now, understanding exactly what has happened, understanding the movements that have been made, I don't consider it to be worth that. I really don't!

Mr. Speaker, we are now debating the amendments put forward by the Leader of Government Business to the original motion. We have to get through that part of it and we also have to get back to the original motion but as far as I can see [and] as far as I can understand, I believe that the only difference is within the original motion and what is being put forward as amendments are these:

1) The original motion asks for us to do what is necessary to make the amendment to the constitution to allow the people the authority to initiate a referendum. That is the original motion. The amended version that is being sought is saying if we want to achieve that, let us not simply do it and let us ask the people if we can do it. Semantics, as far as I am concerned but not worth fighting over.

2) The second amendment, which is saying that the Constitution being what it is, let us take this opportunity to say that from here on in, from henceforth and forevermore until another group of people want it to be different, let us ensure that any change to the Constitution is done by seeking the advice of the people through referendum.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to ask your help, sir, and I am going to ask the help of everyone in here this evening. I think we all understand where we are at. But, you see, if it is all so important and if our beliefs are genuine and we want to see this thing happen, here is what I would like to see us do, if we are not going to fight over it.

Mr. Speaker, I believe Standing Order 24 (9) allows certain motions to be brought without notice once you are prepared to do the necessary. Now, I want everybody to bear in mind that I am not necessarily the most well versed in this whole idea so I am only going to put forward the idea. And whoever has to put the niceties together, if we are so minded, let them do so because it doesn't matter to me. But if we are serious and since everybody feels now that perhaps we are about even—since it is all said and done, let us say it cannot be too much different. No one wants to concede, but forget about that. Let's just say we are even now.

Then what I am prepared to propose, sir, if it is the will of this Honourable Legislative Assembly, is to ask the Leader of Government Business to seek leave of the Chair to bring a motion right now, to create a resolution to bring about a Referendum Law to go to the people of this country. Ask the people of this country if they wish Section 29 (2) of the Constitution to be amended to allow them to initiate a referendum. If that can be done, sir, I think we can leave this evening, shake hands and know that we have done justice to this country.

Now, if that cannot be done, then, sir, we have a real fight on our hands.

I am going to sit down, now, and seek your guidance, sir, so that we can find out whether it is the wish or not of this Honourable Legislative Assembly to do that.

The Speaker: The first thing I would say is that we have approximately four minutes before the normal time that we are to adjourn and I would recommend that you put this off until Monday.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, sir, I hear what you are saying. But with respect, if you will bear with me, some people are leaving the island . . . This is fresh, this is good, this ripe and this is ready to go. It will not take long if the people are minded to do so, sir. I would crave your indulgence if this Honourable House is of a mind to do that, to allow that to be done and to be voted upon before we leave here this afternoon, sir.

The Speaker: I have some procedural problems because if you notice Standing Order 24 (8) reads: "No motion may be proposed which is the same in substance as any motion which during the previous six months has been resolved."

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I hear you, sir, but please bear with me.

The Speaker: I am only thinking that now—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: But, sir, the motion that we are talking about is nothing that has been done before—nothing! I am sure the Leader of Government Business will agree with that. This motion is brand new. All other motions have been dealing with the matter of a Constitutional amendment. What this motion is about is to create a referendum law.

The Speaker: Yes, in accordance with the Constitution. Make sure you follow up on that.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am not suggesting that you are not understanding, sir. The only reason why I am saying what I am saying is surely we must be able to find a way to differentiate those two, if we are mindful to do so.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member do you have any comment you would care to make? Am I putting you on the spot? I honestly do not like to rush into something without proper study.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am very sorry but we can take ten minutes and break and we will come back. I don't have a problem with that, sir.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In any event, I think I ought to make some kind of contribution on a Constitutional issue—not from a political standpoint...well, if you are bemused by that I will explain.

Having listened to all of the arguments, the original motion contains a resolution that Government takes the necessary steps for section 29 (2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order to be amended. That, in turn, has prompted the amendment which seeks to say that before any such amendment is proceeded with, there ought to be a referendum on the matter, and also seeks to establish the general principle that in relation to constitutional change, any such change should be prefaced, presumably from here on in as the First Elected Member for George Town said . . . should be subject to a referendum.

I felt it might be helpful as a relatively I hope, disinterested but not uninterested participant to just share some brief thoughts. These are that the context of the referendum provision in the Constitution, if you look at section 29 of the 1972 Constitution (I won't detain you unnecessarily) it says, "Subject to the provisions of this Constitution, the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Assembly, may make laws for the peace, order and good government of the Islands." That is the basic law-making power that exists and that's primarily why we are here.

If you look at the amendment that was made in 1993, it says that section 29 shall be amended by renumbering the same as subsection (1). So what I just read out is sub-section (1), and adding the following new sub-section, and I will just take a moment to read it out because I think it stands repetition. "(2) Without prejudice to the generality of subsection (1) [in other words, just what it says, let sub-section (1) stand] a law may make provision for the holding of a referendum amongst persons qualified as electors in elections to the Assembly [so in other words, the status quo is that there can be a referendum as we all know and the participants in that referendum would be the electorate of this country] on a question declared by resolution, adopted by a majority of the elected members of the Assembly..." This as you know can happen now if a motion were brought by anyone here, I think to this House, and it was resolved if a majority of the elected members—not the official members, the elected members—resolved to declare that the question which was part of the motion was a matter of national importance.

The law that would follow that resolution would specify the question. That is my reading of it. And, then in due course the law would cause the referendum to be held. I believe it is that kind of law that you are contemplating now in the latest suggestion.

What I wanted to share really was not so much my own thoughts on the matter but this is a standard text, Constitutional and Administrative Law [by] E.C.S. Wade and A. W. Bradley, 11th Edition, which is maybe a little out of date but that is 1993. It talks about Parliament and the electorate. I don't want to detain you at this hour but I think it is perhaps worth hearing this. And I am not advocating the British position but it talks about it.

It says, "Under the British system, the electorate takes no direct path in legislative decision making save by electing the House of Commons. In some Constitutions, for example the Republic of Ireland and the Commonwealth of Australia, constitutional amendments may take effect only with the consent of the electorate obtained by a referendum."

Really what that is saying is that some constitutions take the view that you should only be able to change them if you first have a referendum. So there is some authority for the approach that is being advocated. But this is the part that I wanted to refer to in particular. It says further down the page, page 95 for anyone who wants to look it up, "While advisory referendums do not directly affect the legislative authority of Parliament, if referendums were to be mandatory for certain constitutional reform, this would affect the position of Parliament and it would be essential to define in law the limits of their use."

I believe it is that kind of thought that the architects of the provision in 1993 had in mind. That while creating an additional avenue for the views of the electorate to be brought forward by means of a referendum, I mean you here are the mouthpieces of the electorate, by and large. They bring you in on a platform, they expect you to do certain things. But issues will arise in the course of your tenure, which you may not have consulted them about in the political process. And, while I am not teaching anyone, I hope, to suck eggs, I am trying to share my view of where you are.

In thinking about incorporating the requirement to hold the referendum, you may also want to think about including at some point in time (not necessarily now) asking the electorate whether they feel that the requirement to have a referendum be entrenched in the Constitution also so that you strengthen the Constitution in that way.

In other words, that not just giving the electorate the ability to initiate a referendum, which I assume would still come, even though they initiated it to this House to be debated upon and resolved on and decided on in whatever way you think is appropriate. Just taking a slightly wider view of it. I say this because I have quite strong views on constitutional issues and, in particular, in relation to Overseas Territories.

Constitutions are generally self-given in independent countries, and I am not advocating independence. In an Overseas Territory situation, they are, as it were, devolved if you like by the parent government, therefore there is less scope for a say in some senses as to what they contain, they are modelled on the Westminster Model. I will finish very shortly.

What I want to say is that I believe it is a positive step to subject any proposed change, regardless of who is proposing it, to a referendum if it is a matter that's important. It may also be worth contemplating at some point in the future building into the Constitution such a requirement not just giving the facility for it to the electorate to initiate it but to have a safeguard there to ensure that the Constitution itself cannot be altered other than under certain conditions, which would include the consultation in whatever form you think is appropriate by referendum with the electorate.

I apologise for the length of the intervention. I hope it may be of some use. My understanding is that the implication of what has said, Mr. Speaker, is that the amendment as proposed would be acceptable, both in the specific case of the desire to have the electorate initiate...sorry, I was distracted.

Perhaps, my words are falling on deaf ears in certain quarters. What I want to say is that the specific amendment, I think has been accepted. The general amendment has been accepted and I think it would be for the Leader of Government Business to indicate the acceptability of the last proposal. Technically, I see no objection to it as a matter of procedure.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I propose we take a ten minute break and come back.

The Speaker: I want to make this abundantly clear. I have a responsibility to this country and to all honourable members here. I feel if every member has the intent that they want to go along with this, there is no reason why we cannot give a commitment to each other and deal with this appropriately at a time when we have proper time. There is a [sitting] to start again on Monday at 10.00 a.m. All of us have commitments. I have an aeroplane to catch and others have commitments.

This is a very serious issue. I support the issue wholeheartedly, but I do not think it is something that we should rush into. I think we should think it through properly.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Speaker, I didn't intend to rise again, but in view of the old adage that, you know, make laws in haste and repent at leisure, I believe it would be wise to reflect on it too. Not to move away from the position, but to consider it carefully and to formulate the steps from here on it.

I have no difficulty with what's been proposed. I have already said that. I think it would be wise to deal with this—

[Inaudible comment]

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: No, I appreciate that, Mr. Speaker. It has not been a subject of a vote. I don't want to intervene further but I am associating myself with your position on the matter.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Mr. Speaker, I believe that your words and the words of the Second Official Member are wise.

In principle, I believe, what should happen is that on Monday, the Legislature should sit down informally and try to work out the resolution because it is not something that can just be pushed together quickly. The resolution, itself is going to have to comply with the Constitution. I am always worried about doing things in haste, as you said, sir, and this is a serious matter.

It is a change to the Constitution and I think maybe the way forward is to talk about this on Monday as to how we deal with the motion that will be brought in relation to this part.

I can give the undertaking that on Monday, we will sit down with the full House and look at the way forward on this specific matter.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak on that? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just to make it abundantly clear, the reason why I took the position that I took is because I wanted indication that action would be taken. I do not have a problem with what has been said but I did not want to leave here this afternoon unsure in my mind as to where we were going. How we have to get there and how carefully we have to tread, I can appreciate. I will do it in the same careful manner.

What I am seeking, sir, is an indication that what has been proposed is something that can be looked at and whatever ways and means of achieving that can be ironed out. I am not questioning how we do it. I am questioning the will of this Legislative Assembly to do it and I would like an answer if procedure allows for that, sir.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I was just really going to repeat what I said earlier, which is basically that we are prepared on Monday to sit down and work on the resolution, which under this Constitution will bring into effect the resolution for a referendum on this issue but it has to be properly done, sir. It is a serious issue and it is not something to rush into this afternoon especially at the end of a week at 4.35 p.m. or wherever we are now, sir.

The Speaker: I would like to thank members for their tolerance on this. I think this is the proper procedure and I would now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday morning at 10.00 a.m.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 a.m. on Monday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.45 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, 13 SEPTEMBER 1999.

EDITED
MONDAY
13 SEPTEMBER 1999
10.30 AM

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Item 2, on today's Order Paper, Administration of Oath of Allegiance to Mr. Arthur Joel Walton, JP, to be the Honourable Temporary Acting Third Official Member.

Mr. Walton, please come forward to the Clerk's Table. All Members will please stand.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE (Mr. Arthur Joel Walton, JP)

Mr. Joel Walton: I, Arthur Joel Walton, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: On behalf of Members, I welcome you to this Honourable House during the tenure of your service. Please take your seat as the Honourable Temporary Acting Third Official Member.

Please be seated. Item 3, Raising of Matter of Privilege. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

RAISING OF MATTER OF PRIVILEGE

GOVERNMENT MINUTE

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, before we get into Question Time, I have a business matter that I would like to raise as Chairman of the Standing Public Accounts Committee.

In March of this year the Public Accounts Committee tabled its report on the Government's 1997 Accounts. I recommended that the debate on the report be deferred until June which gave government sufficient time to do the Government Minute and be prepared with answers. The item was not dealt with in June. We are now here in September and I still don't see it appearing on the Order Paper.

I would like to enquire as to where the government is in regard to its Minute in response to the Public Accounts Committee Report on the 1997 audited accounts.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: As I understand it, the Minute should be ready for debate in this House, because I guess we will be going on for several days still. I understand that the member would like to have it debated early. I understand that we should be able to get it and to debate it in this meeting.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for West Bay, I don't want a projected debate on this, but please let your question be short and we will get short answers.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: No, Mr. Speaker, I wasn't going to ask a question. I was just going to make a very short statement. The concern I have as Chairman is that if we don't deal with that Government Minute in this sitting, the Public Accounts Committee is now dealing with a special report on Quarry Products. We still have to deal with the 1998 accounts. So in November we could be dealing with three different items in regard to the Public Accounts Committee. Taking into consideration that November is our Budget Session, it makes it very difficult for us to deal with all of those items.

I appreciate what the Minister of Education has said in that it is the intention of government to deal with that matter in this meeting. Thank you.

The Speaker: Question number 104 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 104

No. 104: Mr. Roy Boddén asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce and Transport and Works to state the number of permits issued to mini-bus owners or drivers since the Department of Transport and Licensing came on line.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Since the establishment of the Vehicle Licensing Unit, 69 permits have been issued to operators and drivers of minibuses operational in the Cayman Islands.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Can the honourable minister say how many of these 69 permits are new permits, and how many were carried over from the former system?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The system that has been utilised is that many of the permits to drive vehicles have been categorised about the time that we took responsibility for the subject. So what has been issued are permits that are in a sense all new, but some of the people who were driving before are now properly categorised on the Omnibus licence.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister give us a breakdown of the 69 permits by district?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The way we have categorised this matter is the number of buses that are licensed to do specific routes. In West Bay there are 34, in George Town (meaning the jitney around the George Town area) there are 5; in Bodden Town there are 6, in North Side there are 3 . . . [pause] Sorry, Mr. Speaker, I was just trying to make sure that I understand the categorisation. Let me start over.

West Bay, 34; George Town, 5; Bodden Town, 6; East End through Bodden Town is 6; East End through North Side, 3; and then direct to North Side is also 3.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say if there are any applications for permits pending? And how are they dealt with, is it on a first-come-first-served basis?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We have about eight applications being considered and they would have to be considered by the Public Transport Board which is established under the Traffic Law and Regulations.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: These drivers have been given designated routes to the districts. I wonder if the honourable minister can say what system is in place to ensure that the drivers are following the designated routes.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: This is an area where we requested two additional Public Transport Inspectors in the upcoming budget. Their employment is being finalised. These are the two civil servants that will be responsible for monitoring, in addition to other duties, that these operators on the various routes observe the routes and do not move into other routes for which they are not licensed.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House how applications for Public Transport License are dealt with and whether any special consideration is given to applicants applying to service a district route when those applicants are resident in that district?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The routes which I named earlier—the West Bay route, the George Town route, the Bodden Town route, the North Side route, the East End route through North Side and Bodden Town. . . at the moment we have sufficient drivers to deal with all the needs of the public on those specific routes. So there is no vacancy in terms of needing another bus to supply the need the public has. Therefore any application from any one of those districts would be put before the Public Transport Board and considered on its merit when we have a vacancy or a need.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House what the policy is for licence holders wishing to increase the category of the vehicle? I know of at least one person who has applied to upgrade from a 15 to a 30 seat capacity, but seems to be having problems with the Department of Licensing. Can the honourable minister say what the policy is toward those kinds of cases?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The policy has been to utilise 15 seat buses, simply because of the number of them who had already been in the business when we took over, to allow everyone to have the opportunity to make a reasonable amount of income on a daily or weekly basis.

In monitoring and looking at these various routes (West Bay, George Town, East End, Bodden Town and North Side) we do realise that in dealing with the East End and North Side routes in particular that a 30 seat bus would probably be the way forward. But we have to bear in mind that there are people on that route at the moment and we have come to the point where we say what's there at the moment is delivering the service required by the public.

If we add additional buses to the route arbitrarily the income earned by those individuals will be less. So we need to be careful about the over provision of seats when it's not demanded by the public.

However, having said all of that, we are monitoring the situation and when the demand is right we will look at 30 seat buses for East End and North Side in particular and, to some extent, it may have to influence the traffic to Bodden Town because some of it then goes on to East End and North Side.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would ask the minister to tell the House what the ultimate intention of the Department of Transportation is in regard to the establishment of clearly defined and demarcated bus stops because I have been receiving complaints from a number of my constituents that the buses are a traffic hazard in that they sometimes make sudden stops without signalling in traffic.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Let me thank the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town for that question. He has touched the top priority of the Vehicle Licensing Unit and that is to have bus stops and the proper signage. The addition of these two public vehicle inspectors will assist us in that whole process in not only designating specific areas as bus stops but also monitoring what goes on in those particular areas.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: Can the honourable minister tell the House how many of the drivers are Caymanian?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Let me thank the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay for his question. As I mentioned in the answer there are 69 permits. Of those 69, 54 persons are Caymanian and the other 15 are persons connected to a Caymanian, either the spouse of a Caymanian or something along that line.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the past there was a problem deciding if the category of omnibus existed. Can the honourable minister explain whether this is now in legislation, or is it policy? Exactly how has it been developed and how is it separated from the category of taxi?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The Traffic Regulations actually envisaged the separation and categorisation of licence, meaning a licence to drive a taxi, a licence to drive an omnibus, a licence to drive a tour bus, a licence to drive a limousine, and in policy we have sought to implement that regulation as mentioned realising that at some stage we are going to have to come with an additional regulation to grant specific authority to those licenses. In other words, the regulations allow the categorisation. But we want to come back with a regulation that specifies exactly what the policy is in relation to that category, or should I say those categories.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the minister clarify whether these regulations he just talked about were regulations approved by Executive Council, or were they brought to the Legislative Assembly as is sometimes the case, although not necessarily the case.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The regulation referred to earlier (when I spoke about the regulation indicating a need to have a separation and categorisation of licence) that regulation is the Public Passenger Regulation 1995, which was approved by Executive Council, laid on the Table of this Honourable House as required under the Traffic Law and approved fully.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In his answer to these supplementaries the honourable minister alluded to a time when specific legislation, that is via regulations, will be categorising the omnibus section specifically. Can the honourable minister state exactly what time is anticipated for this? And what method is being used to create these regulations to ensure the smooth operation of this category which is always crossing over into the taxi area where there is a friction, to ensure that the situation is clear, straightforward and that this friction does not continue.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The need to have a specific regulation to deal with this categorisation as I mentioned earlier, and the fact that The Public Passenger Regulations 1995, actually indicates that there should be a separation (and we have sought in policy to separate these particular licences for taxi driver, omnibus driver, drivers of limousines, drivers of tour buses, to name some) . . . the Ministry and the Public Transport Board and the Vehicle Licensing Unit, are examining the Traffic Law and Regulations with a view to upgrading it and making any amendment necessary. At that time we will look at the specific regulation in dealing with the categorisation of the driver's licence, whether it's taxi, omnibus, limousine, or tour bus operator.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question number 105, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 105

No. 105: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to provide the details of the income and expenditure of Pedro St. James since it has been opened for business.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Mr. Roy Bodden: I respectfully move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I second that motion.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Out of an abundance of caution, let me ask the question again.

No. 105: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce and Transport and Works to provide the details of the income and expenditure of Pedro St. James since it has been opened for business.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House how these actual figures compare with the projected figures set out for the project?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I do know that the revenue forecasted in the budget for 1999 is significantly less than $182,897. I note too that unfortunately I didn't walk with that budget with me. These are actual expenses we are talking about. The question is, how does this compare to the budget submitted. I am trying to answer that, although I don't have it with me. I do know that a brief review of it over the half hour this morning and the sales through the end of August 1999 is already significantly above the entire projection of revenue for 1999 in the estimates.

I know too that the expenses as forecasted in the budget for 1999 are running a little ahead of those forecasted expenses. What I would undertake to do, since I don't have the document with me, is to prepare that comparison and submit the answer in writing if the member wishes.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I thank the minister for that proposal, and I would certainly appreciate it, as would other members of the House.

Can the honourable minister tell the House what kind of advertising is being done to promote this project? And can he give us some examples of where this advertising is being done and whether there is a firm with a specific contract to promote the project? Or is it done as an adjunct of the Department of Tourism?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: There is a specific question set down for whether or not we have a company responsible for marketing. I don't know if the member would like to wait until that question comes forward. That should come forward probably on Wednesday.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The honourable minister said that sales were beyond projection thus far this year, and that the operational costs, the expenses, are also running a bit beyond projection. Can the honourable minister explain what has caused the sales to be beyond projection? And what has caused the expenses to be beyond projection?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Trying to answer that intelligent question without the data in front of me would be running a risk. But I do know that in terms of the revenue we actually were successful in obtaining tour packages to Pedro from the cruise ships in the early part of 1999, as well as we have a package going on today. I believe to some extent that is part of the increased income in terms of admissions.

I also think that the revenue from the hosting of events and the revenue from the gift shop will likely be running a little bit ahead of the projected. But I was just trying to look in the overall figure which, to the best of my recollection, the total projected income was around $135,000 for 1999. Looking at this over $182,000, is basically what I am referring to. But I am just throwing these figures up at the moment as a guide as to why I am making this statement.

The expenditure side of it I am unable to answer intelligently simply because I need that document in order to compare. This thing is so itemised. As I said earlier, I undertook to provide this information to members and if the honourable member is in agreement, I would undertake to provide that also in a written form.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether any efforts are currently being undertaken to promote the grounds of Pedro St. James as an ideal haven for weddings, receptions and other events of this nature, particularly as we will soon be entering the festive season and some income could be derived from these private functions.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Efforts are underway. Actually one of the first requests we received for someone to be married at Pedro St. James was during the time of the restoration of the Great House, which meant that the visitor's centre was not yet built. So we have been receiving requests for people to be married at that site.

In recent times we have been calling around to allow the conference room at Pedro St. James to be utilised for small meetings of 15 or 20 people. We are calling around in the industry to promote that particular aspect of it and we are getting some . . . it's early days, but we are getting some pretty warm reception to it.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: It is my understanding that in the recent past there have been some changes in the operation of the Café at Pedro St. James. Can the honourable minister tell the House how these changes have improved the service and enhanced the products offered? And is he in a position to give an indication of what kind of reception and return one might reasonably expect from these changes?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I wish to thank the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town for that supplementary because it is an area that we have been dealing with and we made some changes in that particular area.

When we look at the gross revenue through the period of the first nine months of 1999, realising that the new arrangements would only affect July and August of 1999, the income for January of 1999 was running in the area of $1,900; February was $1,800. March was a significant figure, but it was the time when we had the cruise passengers coming to the site, $5,300. In April it was $1,288. In May it was roughly $2,100. In June it was $2,700. In July it was $3,810 and in August it was $4,878.

So there's an increase in July and August. It seems that the new arrangement put in place is attractive to the persons utilising the Café. We have been calling around to respective people who know very well the manager of the Café and her ability to please you with good food, as well as some moderate amount of advertising in the Caymanian Compass.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say who is responsible for producing the financial statements that we have before us this morning? And does the Castle have a fulltime person responsible for producing accounts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I thank the Third Elected Member for West Bay for that supplementary. We have a fulltime financial controller of Pedro St. James. The lady is a chartered accountant of some substantial background and she is the person providing these accounting statements and facts for us.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, I think we have answered Question 106 [in Question 105]. Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, are you satisfied with the answer to 106? Do you have any supplementaries on that?

QUESTION 106
WITHDRAWN

No. 106: To provide a breakdown of the income and expenditure of the Pedro St James Castle enterprise since January 1999.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I had long ago decided that it was superfluous and I crave the leave of the Chair and the House to withdraw the question.

The Speaker: I need a seconder. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: I beg to second the motion sir.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that question 106 be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. QUESTION 106 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. I think this would be the appropriate time for the morning break. We will suspend proceedings for approximately twenty minutes.

Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for late attendance from the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question number 107 is standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, the truth of the matter is that I forgot this question existed since it has been such a long time since I registered this question—probably a year already! It is kind of interesting because if you take away this particular question, we will only be left with three questions upon the Order Paper for today. I will ask the question in any case, but I think I am more or less aware that this lease agreement may have been completed.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 107

No 107: Dr. Frank McField asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources at what stage is the proposed government lease extension for Block 12C Parcel 11 and Block 12C Parcel 215 in the West Bay section of Grand Cayman.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: As all Members of the Legislative Assembly know, the application for extension of the head lease for Block 12C Parcel 11 and the lease of Block 12C Parcel 215, was laid on the Table of the Legislative Assembly and subsequently debated. The motion was defeated and the lease extension and lease of the two parcels in question was approved. The payment of US$4 million was also made to government at this time. All necessary documentation was executed.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: There certainly can't be any supplementaries because the question has been with the minister for too long for there to be any supplementaries. Everything has happened since the question was filed.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 108, standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTION 108

No. 108: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Temporary Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development how government verifies the need for Caribbean Utilities Co Ltd to increase the cost of electricity in order to meet the guaranteed 15 percent on investment.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

DEFERMENT OF QUESTION 108
Standing Order 23(5)

Hon. Joel Walton: Mr. Speaker, you may notice some hesitation there, sir, but I was not aware that this particular question was being put to me. I would ask that it be put down for a later date under the relevant Standing Order.

The Speaker: The question is that this question be deferred until a later sitting. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 108 DEFERRED UNTIL A LATER SITTING.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, if I may sir, as the first member of this parliament asking this question I would like to record my disappointment in that the question had been received by the Legislative Department a long time ago and placed upon the Order Paper this morning for answer by the Honourable [Temporary Acting] Third Official Member who had no knowledge of the question.

The Speaker: Moving on to Question 109, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 109

No. 109: Miss Heather D. Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture to provide an update on the Bodden Town district library.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: To date the following work has been undertaken at the Bodden Town Library:

Roof	Foam insulation has been added to present roof.
Windows	All 12 windows have been installed
Stud-work	50 per cent has been completed
Electrical work	50 per cent has been completed
Fabrication of Counter	Work station (8x6) has been completed but cannot be installed until stud-work and electrical have been completed.
Air-conditioning	Installation completed.

No major delays are being experienced and the expected date of completion is 5 November 1999.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: I would just like to thank the honourable minister for this answer, as she is aware that the children of the district of Bodden Town have expressed some interest in this project and it is a much needed facility in the district of Bodden Town. I would just like to thank the honourable minister for at least giving us a date for completion.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House what arrangements are being made, or have been made to ensure that the library is stocked with appropriate reading material? And also, can the honourable minister tell the House if there will be any facility in the library so that persons interested can have access to computers possibly with a view to accessing the World Wide Web?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: The Chief Librarian as recently as last week was at the Bodden Town

Library to do a full book analysis, as well as a computer analysis for the requirements. In addition to the computer section she wrote to Computer Services on 10 September, the Y2K Office, setting out a good number of items she has requested. In addition to computers (although the member did not ask for this), items like fax machines and other information technology things to bring the district of Bodden Town into the modern technological world as has been done in other aspects. I would be happy if the member has specific requests to make an appointment with him to meet with the senior librarian to make his requests known.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I didn't say that I had any specific arrangements. I will certainly be available to offer any assistance or ideas that would be utilised and appreciated. However, I am more interested in finding out if the minister is able to tell the House what the working budget is for books and other such items, including fax machines and computers as she mentioned.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am only in a position to partially answer in that I have in my possession the request for the computers which was $9,090. That was sent in on the 10th. I would have to undertake to get it from the senior staff in the ministry and the senior librarian.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether or not there is going to be any kind of special dispensation which could cater to school age children, particularly those in middle and high school, which would enable them to be supervised as they undertake school assignments and projects?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: It is my understanding that it will have a seating capacity of about 31, once completed. And as is done in the George Town Library in particular, although the librarians are not specialised in supervision for this age group, what has been done, and what we intend to continue within the budgetary constraints, is for the children who come after school to be in a quiet and positive environment and they will be able to do their homework.

I was just in the George Town Library last week observing what happens. There are a large number of students who come in and there are three or four staff members there. Whenever questions are asked of them, the endeavour to answer. I would however say that the member is quite right in that more emphasis should be placed into looking at this. I know that a motion was unanimously passed in this House for an after school programme which would cater to similar things. And the library is perhaps one of the most productive environments for learning. Maybe it could be a joint effort where we could put it together, once there is the sufficient personnel and space at that facility.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I thank the honourable minister for her willingness to explore this area. I seek to extract an undertaking from the honourable minister that she will investigate into the feasibility of this happening as I believe that there are persons in the community who have expressed a willingness to volunteer their services in this regard. I certainly, if requested, could suggest how she may get in contact with such persons.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I would like to thank the member for his interest in this area. I should also like to combine my response in asking the member to supply the names so that my ministry can contact them, and we will be more than happy to take them on board. The interest of the children is of paramount consideration.

Secondly, I am more than delighted to give an undertaking in this regard.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

I have received a request to suspend proceedings to enable deliberations on the referendum motion to continue. If that pleases the House we shall now suspend for further deliberations on the referendum motion.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 10.46 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.15 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99. The floor is open to debate.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99

REFERENDUM LAW

(Continuation of debate on Amendment)

MATTER OF PROCEDURE

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I have spoken already, but on a point of procedure, I have debated the amendment, but in further consideration I have come to the conclusion that the amendment brought by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning is ultra vires the Constitution.

The reason I am saying this (and if you will just allow me a few seconds to explain) is that when we look at section 29 of the Constitution, "Powers to make Laws," it says, "Subject to the provisions of this Constitution, the Governor with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly may make laws for the peace, order and good government of the islands."

And in section 30 it refers to this as being subject to the provisions of the Constitution and the Governor and Royal instructions. It also says in 39 (2)(b) "provided that the Governor shall reserve for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure any bill which determines or regulates the privileges, immunities or powers of the Legislative Assembly or of its members."

Also in the Constitution there is mention of the Secretary of State. In other words, the Legislative Assembly in itself is not a sovereign body. The Legislative Assembly itself is not the beginning and end of our laws. So, the powers of the Secretary of State, the powers of the Governor, the powers of Her Majesty the Queen are already enshrined in the Constitution. Therefore, for the Legislative Assembly to now enact a law that would be contrary to those powers, that would not take those powers, it would be ultra vires the Constitution.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the right to reply on this matter.

What the motion and the amendments are doing does not fall within section 29 or within section 30 because no law is being made. Let me just make clear what the amendment is saying. It is saying: "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance [which is from the original motion] and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments."

There is no question of passing a law in this House that is ultra vires the Constitution. There is no law before the House.

The second point is that the Fourth Elected Member for George Town has spoken on this amendment already. Nobody raised this. A lot of members have spoken on it and now, at a very late stage, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town is trying to find a technicality to defeat the right of the public of this country to make a decision through a referendum on whether the Constitution of this country should be changed. That is exactly what the substance of the member's submission is trying to do—that the public not be given a right to have its say on changes to the Constitution of this country.

I submit that neither the motion nor the amendment is ultra vires the Constitution.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for George Town, I do not intend to allow a long protracted debate on this. Let's get to the point and—

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, more speed less haste. This is a very important point and the fact that I did not see the contradiction before does not mean that the contradiction does not exist. I think it is important from a point of procedure at this particular point—since he was allowed to bring the amendment to the original motion—that now, as it is called to my attention by getting advice to be able to suggest to this honourable House that this might be the case.

However, in addition to the fact that my submission is that this amendment brought, or the last part of the amendment brought by the Minister for Education is ultra vires the Constitution—because it limits the power of the relevant authorities—I would also suggest that according to Standing Order 25(3) that an amendment shall be relevant to the motion to which it relates. This particular Standing Order has not been observed in this particular case because—

The Speaker: Let me interrupt you at this particular point. Please take your seat.

As Speaker of this House I approved this amendment. I looked at it very carefully. My decision was that the amendment would be accepted. I issued the approval and it has come before this House and I stand by my decision. I see nothing more democratic than for the motion to be dealt with on the floor of this honourable House and a vote taken as to whether the amendment to the motion will be accepted or rejected. I intend to proceed in that way.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, believe it or not, I am trying to be reasonable. I do believe that I deserve to be given at least a few minutes as we have spent a lot of time here before.

I would like to raise another point. The amendment is brought in two propositions, and they are separate. We should at least have the right to vote on these propositions separately—unless, of course, we are not going to have any democracy in here today.

The Speaker: I can assure you that there is democracy in here, and there are provisions under Standing Order 13, “If a motion embodies two or more separate propositions, the propositions may be proposed by the Presiding Officer as separate questions.”

Is there any further debate on this issue? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Does that mean that I will at least be able to exercise the minimum right of voting on these propositions separately?

The Speaker: Yes, I will grant that permission.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Sorry, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The question of whether you split the motion, is that at your discretion however you wish to do there? If you wish to put them separately, we would be happy with that, or if you put it together, we will be happy, sir. But we don't object, I should say sir.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would just like to say that it is unfortunate that these situations arise in which we compound what was a seemingly straightforward and clear request. I have to express disappointment. But in expressing that disappointment, I am certainly not suggesting that there should be any curtailment of the democratic rights of anyone, irrespective of the position they may hold.

I hold the view that the first part of the amendment is clear, reasonable, and self-explanatory, even though it may be a bit onerous. I still contend that what the final resolve section of the amendment does is not going to go down well with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO). I remain to be convinced that it is not going to be struck down and nullified by them even if passed by this House.

What I see it doing is putting us in a position where there can be no changes to the Constitution except by referenda. As I am going to show in the substantive motion (when I speak on it), in the past the FCO has shied away from these positions. There is at least one glaring case in the annals of constitutional development in the Caribbean where the British government was not disposed to this kind of thing. I am going to raise it right here. It is contained in a book entitled Britain's Dependent Territories—A fistful of Islands, by George Drower [?].

Chapter 6 is entitled “Vox Populi.” I crave the indulgence of the Chair, because this is very important. If I had realised that this was going to come at this time, I would have photocopied this and been prepared to table it and have copies for honourable members and you Mr. Speaker.

It's important because it enlightens us on the position of the British government. I quote: “There were times when the British government had to decide what the wishes of the inhabitants of a territory were on certain questions. A means by which the vox populi might have been quantified was by referendum. However, the system tended to be regarded as being alien and the British government was skeptical about applying it. Posnet [Sir Richard Posnet, the Dependent Territories Advisor in 1978, told the author George Drower] 'It's always been a traditional British view that in the Parliamentary governmental system you don't have referenda. In the colonies we always took the view that if a government got elected it was for the government to speak for the people.' I think there was probably apprehension about treading into this unknown ground where it might lead us if we started having referenda.

"To inculcate confidence in the local colonial governments Britain relied very much on elections. Yet, in territories such as Grenada, Dominica, St. Lucia and the Seychelles, election outcomes were as much influenced by personal popularity of the leading contestants as they were by the inhabitants views of decolonisation." It goes on to talk about Brunei, Tonga, the British Indian Ocean Territory.

I want to highlight the case of Grenada. This is a most celebrated case because it goes to show, and it bears out my position that the British government is not going to look kindly on their ability to alter or change the Constitution being tied up by us having to come back to the people in a referenda, which is what the third resolve in the amendment moved by the honourable Leader of Government Business is doing.

In 1951 when Eric Gairy came upon the political scene in Grenada, he formed a party called The Grenada United Labour Party. He decisively won the 1951 general elections. He was opposed by a man named Herbert Blaize, of the Grenada National Party formed in 1955. Gairy was an articulate ex-schoolteacher and Drower said that there were grounds for doubting his integrity.

In 1962 there were investigations by a commission of inquiry. They found that he had intimidated Grenadian public servants and misspent British government development funds on the lavish refurbishment of his official residence. Such was the extent of his squander-mania that the Colonial Secretary, Reginald Maudley [?] had to take the drastic step of dismissing him from his position as Chief Minister.

Herbert Blaize then took over. But because he was ineffectual as an orator and wasn't an accomplished political activist his regime lasted five years, but he was voted out of office. To discourage the Grenadian people (because it was Gairy's intention to lead them into independence) from needlessly seeking independence they inserted an Article into the Constitution which stipulated that before independence could be granted to an associated state a referendum would have to be held in the territory in which more than two-thirds of the votes cast needed to be in favour of independence.

In order to protect itself from unwelcome behaviour in such territories, Britain had also inserted Article 10(2) into the Act, which enabled it to unilaterally decolonise an associated state by a simple Order in Council. Gairy went to Lord Shepherd (who was the FCO officer with responsibility for Grenada) and requested on the grounds of his interpretation of Article 10(2) as Chief Minister that the country should have gone into independence. Okay?

Mr. Speaker, what happened was that in the election that followed, Gairy won 13 seats to the Opposition party. He did not campaign on any independence issue. Indeed, it wasn't until 48 hours before the election that he produced the party manifesto. It was not an issue.

There were 18,774 people who objected to Grenada going into independence. But because of the agreement that had been struck before, the British government allowed Gairy to have his way. They realised afterwards that they had made a mistake simply by trading away their opportunity to ultimately curtail any change and leaving it up to Gairy and his supporters using what Gairy said was a referendum, even though 18,774 people objected.

Believe it or not, if you read this chapter, you will see that the British government will never again accept that. They like to tell you that they hold ultimate responsibility for the Constitution. I am saying that if we take this resolution it is going to be struck down because the British government is certainly not going to trade away what they consider to be their ultimate right and authority to change the Constitution by leaving it in the hands of the people—albeit they are knowledgeable and responsible—as a result of any referendum.

Mr. Speaker, I believe sir that this business can best be served by a proposal which will allow this matter to be thoroughly aired and cleared. It is unfortunate that events had to take this turn. The substantive motion was reasonable. This amendment has arisen out of nothing more than political one-upmanship. It is a sign that we lack political maturity and a certain basic ability to settle down, deal with the issues as they should be dealt with on the merit of the issues. I regret to say that I am disappointed that some people use this as an opportunity to have their way to tie up the system, to place Parliament in a precarious position and have us labour under the threat that if we don't support this motion then it will come back to haunt us.

Believe you me, I have been here long enough to say that I have seen many false dawns. This is another one sir. And I regret that events had to take the turn they have taken. I am not saying that a referendum is the be-all and end-all. But I am saying that what was proposed in its original form was substantially different from this.

Quite frankly, it is not my decision. And I am not questioning the decision of the Chair, but I would say that the final resolve is completely out of whack with the other two sections of the resolution in this amendment, and completely different from the substantive motion.

This is a House of democracy. Far be it from me to suggest that people should not have their say and that democracy should not have its course. Whatever position I take I am prepared to defend. I resent to the umpteenth anyone who thinks they are going to threaten or intimidate me.

Mr. Speaker, do you know what kind of nigger I am sir? I rise to my height when my back is against the wall. When people come with those kinds of threats where my credibility might be on the line—be it political or otherwise—and I know I am right, the kind of inculcation I had and the kind of upbringing I had, I will go down fighting. I will die for my belief.

Let me say that I am going to take a position which I believe is honest and which in the end will be in the best interest of country and constituent. I want to end on this note: We may lose the battle, but the war is yet to come. It is unfortunate and regrettable that what should have been a good motion and what was brought out of good intention had to evolve into a political battle for one-upmanship and possibly the election in the year 2000. I will not abandon my honesty at this time and subject myself to political expediency.

Mr. Speaker, I take the dimmest view of what is being attempted. Thank you sir.

The Speaker: If no other person has anything to say at this particular time, I think we will return to the amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99. Debate is open on that issue.

Mr. Roy Bodden: That's what I debated, you know.

The Speaker: That's what I thought, but you were skirting around so much.

Does any other member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you.

My comments will be limited. I will not be making the points I had initially planned to make on this amendment mainly because I also intend to speak on the substantive motion.

This amendment has come about as a result of the substantive motion that called for an amendment to the Constitution. It says: "BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government take the necessary steps to cause section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1993, to be amended to allow the electorate to initiate a referendum." As a result of this resolution in the substantive [motion], the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning brought an amendment.

I think quite a bit of thought went into this amendment. Down to the point of the second resolution in the amendment, halfway down, I think this amendment would have been quite okay and well thought out. The offending part (if there is one) of the amendment goes on to touch on a separate proposition. I will read that to clarify the point I am making. It says: "BE IT RESOLVED that Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 be amended as follows: 'BE IT RESOLVED that the fourth recital (paragraph) be amended by the addition of the following words at the end thereof 'and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments.'"

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the first operative part of the said resolution being the penultimate sentence be amended by the removal of the word 'Government' and the insertion of the following words: 'subject to and after a referendum under section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1993 whereby the electorate vote for a referendum to be initiated by the electorate, the Legislative Assembly.'"

It is this last resolve section that has caused some concern to the backbench. It says: "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the following be added at the end of the Motion . . ." It repeats here the resolution that had been made previously when it says, "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance . . ."

Mr. Speaker, if it had ended at that point there could not have been any major objection from this side since the amendment would have been totally relevant to the substantive motion. But when it went on to say ". . . and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments . . ." that has brought in an additional proposition to the motion. This is where there is some amount of concern on this side of the House.

We are aware that provision is made in Erskine May on page 343 under the title "Object of an amendment and the effect on debate," that a different proposition can be brought into a debate. Having brought this in, I would not consider it to be strictly ultra vires the motion. It says here "The object of an amendment may be either to modify a question in such a way as to increase its acceptability, or to present to the House a different proposition as an alternative to the original question." I think the procedure in that respect has been followed quite carefully.

But I believe that to accept that section I just stressed in the amendment, that is "that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments," would have hamstrung this government and any future government that might wish to make a simple amendment to the Constitution. What this section is basically saying is that if you want to cross a 't' or dot an 'i' or make a change, then it must go to referendum. I think that could create a lot of expense on government and an inconvenience and an imposition on many of our people, the very people we are representing.

I know that this is a very ticklish amendment to debate because one does not want to give the impression that one is taking away the right of the people. That is not what the backbench is suggesting in its concern. We are saying that since this is a totally different proposition than the substantive motion envisaged, then this should be brought as a substantive motion on its own standing. It should be brought separate.

If it is government's intention that no amendment at all should be made to the Constitution without a referendum . . . that is such an important issue that it should be brought as a separate motion or resolution to this House, and not be combined in the amendment dealing specifically with the referendum. This is where the confusion has arisen.

Just to highlight the importance of our concern, many amendments have been made to the Constitution over the years. And most of these have been taken into a select committee of the whole House where the public has been given the right to come in and discuss these matters with members of this honourable House before any change was made. A similar arrangement could take place, as I have suggested to my colleagues if the substantive motion were taken into select committee where the public would have the opportunity—and the right—to come in and give their view on any changes that may be necessary to the Constitution.

Like some members of the government bench, I am concerned that no one should be able to amend the Constitution without the express wish of our people. But what happens in a general election or a by-election and the national manifesto of that winning group who won (by, let's say, a landslide victory) suggests that they wish to put in certain measures that may even be a change to the Constitution? Does it mean that before the government who won in the landslide victory in the general election could put in place any of the things they stood for in their manifesto a referendum could be called by some minority group? After the majority of the country has agreed on an issue could it be changed and those manifesto points not be implemented because of this amendment to the Constitution? This is a very serious issue. I think we need to think long and hard.

As I said, it's a very smart move. Nobody can fault the mover in bringing this amendment. It's a very smart move. But we have to go beyond that. I know the gentleman who brought this. I have a lot of respect for his intelligence. I know that this is a very smart move. But we have to go beyond that and ask ourselves, Is this in the best interest of government? Is this going to enhance good governance? I think the reasonable answer will have to be, No it cannot, if it means that before a government can even take the simplest of measures to improve the Constitution (there was an amendment needed to improve the Constitution) then you are going to have to go through the vigour of a referendum.

I would say that if there was any guarantee that a referendum was a sure way of getting what is best for the country, by all means let's support it. But history has shown us A classic example of this was a referendum in 1959 when the ruling party under Sir Norman Manly brought a referendum in Jamaica expecting a certain result. But it ricocheted on him. He got an opposite result altogether. So a referendum, especially when it is emotionally charged, may not always give that result.

I would like for the honourable minister in replying to this amendment to bear these few points in mind: 1) That it will make redundant any manifesto produced by a group in a general election, even though they have been voted into office based on that manifesto. If their manifesto states that a change should be made to the Constitution, before that change can be made a referendum will have to be brought and voted upon by the people to say 'yes' even though they voted based on that manifesto. We must bear these points in mind.

As I mentioned, there are a number of things that could disqualify voters and electors. Changes have been made to that through a select committee. We have had changes made to the Constitution whereby we could install a ministerial type of government where "Members" could call themselves "Ministers." That did not go to a referendum, but it went through certain processes. It has not made the governance of this country any weaker. I think we can still boast that we have one of the best governed territories in the world today, especially in the Western Hemisphere.

I don't want to stand here and try to speculate on the motive for bringing this amendment and this particular point. I don't think it would be in order, and I will not do so. I can only ask the honourable minister bringing this amendment if he would consider the points I have raised and decide in bringing it whether that particular area of the amendment is in the best interest of the people of this country. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I can keep my reply very short and we can get this vote out of the way now. I would rather do that.

The Speaker: I have to ask if any other member wished to speak on the amendment. The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? [pause] Does any other member wish to speak? [pause] Last time, does any other member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you.

Not claiming to be a constitutional expert, I have very little to say on this amendment. But let me say that I do support what the amendment calls for in that I see nothing wrong with the people of this country having a say in regard to any constitutional amendment.

I recall back in 1992 or 1993 a previous group decided to make the Constitution an issue. As a result, most of them lost their seats. I am not prepared to run that risk. I believe that the people should be consulted in the right forum on any matter concerning the Constitution. I see no reason why the medium used could not be a referendum. I don't have anything more than that to say. That's the position I am going to take.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to the amendment? If not, does the mover of the amendment wish to speak to it?

Then I shall put the question. Those in favour of the amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 please say Aye, those against No.

Ayes and *1 audible abstention.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I thought these were going to be put in two proposals as the Fourth Elected Member for George Town requested, and I thought you said that you would grant that.

The Speaker: I wish you had called that to my attention. I did say that. If that is the wish, Madam Clerk can we go back?

I think we will leave it as it is. I think this is the proper time to take the luncheon break and at the conclusion of the luncheon break we will debate the substantive motion. Proceedings are suspended until 2.15 PM.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.30 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended. The floor is open to debate. [pause]

Does any member wish to speak? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I am happy to have the opportunity to speak to the original motion. Being a new member of Parliament I am not going to say that I am as familiar with procedure as other members. Perhaps it takes me a little longer to recognise what I might consider to be certain types of discrepancies or contradictions in regard to the formulation of motions or amendments. I will try to suggest that my reason for wanting to support the original motion is that it appears that the government has spent good money employing consultants from across the sea, as usual—

The Speaker: Can I just interrupt you for a minute? You said to the "original motion." Let us understand that we are now debating Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended. Please continue.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I know that I am debating it as amended.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Dr. Frank McField: But I think that I can also refer to the original part of the motion since—

The Speaker: Absolutely, but I just wanted to clarify that point.

Dr. Frank McField: Exactly. Thank you, sir.

What I am trying to do in terms of building my argument is to say that my support came by way of the original motion, not by way of the amendment. My support for the original motion—and I think I can clearly distinguish between the motives of the first proposition and the second proposition as was composed in the amendment. So I will have to speak first of all saying that from the point of view of the concept of referendum, or referenda, I have always been suspicious as to the merits of this particular method of arriving at a democratic answer to a country's direction.

In other words, I do not believe that a country should be governed by referenda, because if we do that we are subverting the very will and effort that go into electing a government every four years.

But I was mindful of supporting the original motion before it was amended because I felt that this was the desire of the people because it was expressed in the Strategic Plan, the Vision 2008 exercise. And I concurred with members of the backbench that have been attempting to bring this to the Parliament seeking approval for some time now.

As amended, I believe that I am faced with having to make other types of considerations. The amendment causes me to want to say, first of all, that it needs to be made clearer to me and my constituents what the exact power of this Parliament is. What is the exact authority of this Parliament? I mean, we probably have not had this debate before, but I think it's a meaningful part of the debate since the motion as amended is talking about approving a motion, approving a proposition that is, in my understanding, stronger than the Constitution.

This motion as amended has to be considered a subordinate motion when measured by way of the Constitution that is not a Constitution in the sense that most people get together and agree upon a Constitution and the rights and obligations of its citizens. Our Constitution is an Order.

In fact, when we look at our Constitution, the beginning says "The Queen's Most Excellent Majesty in Council. Her Majesty, by virtue of the powers conferred upon Her by section 5 of the West Indies Act 1962 (a) and of all other powers enabling Her in that behalf, is pleased, by and with the advice of Her Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:" She orders! We didn't order. We didn't agree. It was ordered.

The Constitution is an order. We are a subordinate Parliament making a subordinate legislation which is supposed to be supreme to Constitutional order?

The Constitutional Order clearly is a reflection of the power and supremacy of the British Parliament. In other words, we understand that from a local point of view we are allowed to make legislation in consultation or with consultation with the government. I think that if we look at the passage in our Constitution dealing with our Governor we will see some things. The original motion was talking about a referendum. This motion is talking about Constitutional change.

The amendment deals with Constitutional change, although the legislation is a parallel legislation the important thing to remember is that the effect which that legislation wants to change, wants to have, is that the Parliament no longer has the authority to do what the Constitutional Order has said that the Parliament has the authority to do.

This is a serious flaw, for us to not have understood from the very beginning that a parallel legislation, a parallel authority is being placed here to supersede the Constitutional Order.

We did not create the Constitution. We did not bring in this Constitution—not the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly. It is quite clear, therefore, that it is not our Constitution; it is the Foreign Secretary's Constitution. It is the Queen's Constitution. And Her Constitution is Her Order as to how Her Dependent Territory—the Cayman Islands—should be governed. It is an instrument for the good governance of Her Dependent Territory, or Her Colony, the Cayman Islands.

Therefore, the Cayman Islands Parliament owes its existence to this Constitutional Order—not to any assembly of citizens in order to create a Constitution and in order to enact a Parliament. In most cases, the Constitution comes first, then the Parliament. In this particular case it is so again, but it is not the Parliament here that enacted this Constitution.

Now, I like to think that although I am not a legal mind, that logic has to do with common sense. And that common sense tells us that if there is an amendment here, if we are debating the fact "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate . . ." it is saying that in order to change the Constitution you have to do a referendum. This is a major piece of legislation that would only be possible if it were in the Constitution. And in order for it to be in the Constitution, the British government, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has to be involved.

We have never initiated any Constitutional changes ourselves. It has always been initiated, as the Third Elected Member for George Town explained this morning very capably, as a result of some forum of discussion between Constitutional Commissioners and the people of the Cayman Islands.

Do you want to have a referendum law? Because a referendum law would give the people in the particular sense it was being suggested originally, the possibility to initiate a referendum without having to be completely dependent upon elected members. But when you put a proposition in that which is now calling for the ways in which the Constitution can be changed or amended, that it has to be by way of referendum—which is a contradiction to what the Constitution already says.

The Constitution already makes provision for the amendment of the Constitution and now we are here enacting a law for the change of the Constitution. I believe that that is beyond our authority, that it is ultra vires. It is beyond the authority of the individual members in here, and it is beyond the authority of the institution to enact a legislation that would handicap, that would tie, that would pin down the authority of the Crown.

If certain people don't like the fact that this is the case, they can go and do what they want. They can say that they want to be independent—which I am not suggesting, of course, because I don't see any reason why we should. But they can go and say that they want to be independent. But they cannot say that persons who see a flaw in this argument are trying to change the Constitution without the consent of the people when that has not been ever the case. The Constitution has been amended, has been altered in this country by reason of the fact that certain elected members, certain members of the population, were satisfied that certain alterations would improve the government of the country and the Foreign Office concurred and got involved in changing the orders which we had received from Her Majesty the Queen.

Now, I would like to seriously find out how this Constitution can be seen as anything else but an order: "This Order may be cited as the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1992" this "Order", with a capital 'O'—and it shall come into operation on such-and-such a date—

"shall"—and it's an Order and it Shall happen and it Shall be done. And there's a complete difference. We have nothing to do with the Order and when it came in and so forth and so on.

Of course, behind the scenes we all know that certain members of our society were consulted. But it had nothing to do with legislation. It had nothing to do with referendum. Why is it that the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, would venture so far to do something that in his 20 years or so of being involved in public office he has never attempted to do? He has never attempted to cause this Parliament to enact legislation that would be ultra vires the Constitution, that would be outside the authority of the Constitution.

Now, I said that he used the situation of persons calling for a referendum and the desire of certain members here to satisfy that basic call from the people to twist this situation into what it is, to weave it into what it is.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am taking a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER
(misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It's on two basis: The honourable member is misleading the House. I have never put forward any instrument here, nor in this motion, that is ultra vires the Constitution. In fact, I thought that had been settled earlier. Secondly, he is referring to words to the effect that I am misleading the House. He can't justify either one of those, sir. He is misleading the House in that respect.

The Speaker: I have been following carefully what he has been saying. But the way they have used "Order" that is a procedure that the United Kingdom does in handing Constitutions down to its dependent Overseas Territories. It's an Order in Council. That is a normal procedure. Therefore, I fail to see . . . I thought we had settled it when we were talking earlier this morning on this ultra vires. I cannot accept that we are doing anything here that is not in accordance with the normal procedures. I thought we had settled that.

The amendment was put forward. It was accepted by the majority. The motion has been amended. How much further we intend to go with this, I don't know. But I am here to say that our job is to uphold the Constitution and we are doing that. I will not accept that anyone here is misleading. I ask that you withdraw that misleading statement.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, and the listening public is listening. And I am going to go back over something again for their benefit.

The world ultra vires does not suggest that any criminal or badly motivated act has been committed. You have used the word yourself and if you would like I will read to you the letter you wrote to the Third Elected Member for West Bay where you used that word. I am quite sure that when I read that letter it will be shown that you did not mean that that honourable gentleman was in any way acting outside his capacity.

I, therefore, am not meaning that the honourable gentleman is acting in any ill-mannered or wrong way, but it is that these errors can occur. He is not God, Mr. Speaker. He can err also.

Please allow me to question and debate what I have before me in a reasonable manner without shutting me down. Mr. Speaker, all I am asking is a possibility to air what I consider to be my constituents' concerns.

I know the difference between an order and I know that the Constitution is still something that comes into being as a result of an order rather than being enacted by the individuals who are a part and parcel of the Constitution.

But the honourable Minister for Education is saying that I am saying something else. If he has a problem with that, Mr. Speaker, I can deal with the problem. But I feel that if I cannot debate this motion from my understanding of these things, but I have to be subjected to other people's understandings then that is not a free discussion.

The Speaker: You discussing it on how you understand it and pointing to a specific former speaker, quoting him and saying that he is misleading are two different things. I have no problem with you expounding on what you believe. But when you point to an individual member of this honourable House, I cannot accept it.

Do you follow what I am saying to you?

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, if I said he was misleading the House I will withdraw that. Seriously, I understand that.

The Speaker: Speak generally, but do not speak to that individual, please. You have withdrawn that, now please continue.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, also in the debate maybe I could make a remark to the honourable gentleman, if possible. Mr. Speaker I have tried and I think that I have proved to the people that I have supported the side that I consider to be the reasonable side and I fluctuated in my support for the government and the back-bench as such. I don't think it's in the interest of the honourable gentleman to alienate me any further from the government, because they are going to come with the budget soon.

I think the honourable gentleman has to remember. . . Okay, Mr. Speaker, people say things in here too and they don't get shut down all the time.

The Speaker: I am not shutting you down. I am simply saying that I am not taking sides. I am trying to keep procedure. If you have something else to say please continue.

Dr. Frank McField: I never got shut down when I was on the side of the government. People will remember that too!

The Speaker: All I am saying is don't take me too far. I am doing my job, and I am just asking you to do yours.

Dr. Frank McField: I think that I have effectively found a flaw in the honourable gentleman's reasoning. I can debate that on television because I pay for that myself, and that is my airtime. I would just like to say that if he thinks that he has somehow thrown me off by coming in here and objecting, . . . he makes me a little nervous and irritated but I am still capable of going on.

This gentleman has brought a motion that will deal with establishing a new criterion for the amendments to the Constitution. I think that he will agree that he is saying that the Constitution should now, if it's to be changed or amended, be done by referendum.

I would also like to point out that I was in a conversation with members of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office here in this Legislative Assembly and they discussed with me and other members the fact that they felt that the Constitution of these islands needed to be modernised. The Minister for Education said to me that he has no knowledge of this, but all elected members of the backbench have knowledge of the fact that we were specifically told also why it might be necessary to make some alterations to the Constitution.

I am not sure that alteration means that my suit is a little too big or whatever, but not change in that it would be a new suit. It wouldn't be a new Constitution. They would like to involve us in the exercise, like they always involve us in the exercise. But what is important today is that the Labour Party in Great Britain, and the philosophy they have and the fact that the Labour Party has tried to reform the House of Lords, the Labour Party is also trying to make certain reforms within the Colonial Territories also that will not make them look as if they are some kind of medieval colonialists.

They have an image in Europe and in the world to protect. They have to develop local autonomy. They have to make sure in the United Nations and in Europe as well that they carry out and uphold certain international conventions—not just with regard to the OECD. There are other conventions that Great Britain is a party to besides the OECD that we as a country have to pay attention to, that we as a Parliament do not have supreme powers to make decisions about.

If you are going to try to be a new person, and you are going around with the same old clothes, people are not going to say you are a new person until you change the clothes. You have to actually tailor the suit to fit you. What I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that that is exactly the kind of situation that Great Britain is in at the moment, that Tony Blair is in at the moment. But how can you tell people that you have a democracy working in the Cayman Islands working well, when people who question the functionality of the entire instrument of government are considered to be some kind of terrible people? You are going to close the debate down on that?

What I am saying is that if we look at what they have to defend or what they have to achieve, because we are involved in a partnership, they are saying that perhaps it is time now, for instance when ministers of government who have to get permission from the Governor when they are leaving the island, should perhaps not be required to do so because it makes the Governor in that particular sense a kind of total, supreme, omnipotent person which does not really go along with our modern concept of democracy and people's participation. There is a conflict there.

We have managed the situation very well over the years, but there could be problems in the future. I have talked about deficits in democracy in regard to the way in which our Constitution operates. So, I am not going to run away from my examination of the Constitution, my seeing the Constitution as a document that should guide us to improve ourselves and that in cases where we don't think the improvement is working we shouldn't amend it and improve it. We are all about improvement. We are a growing country and the Constitution must grow with us, just like we must grow with the Constitution.

There has to be a growth process. Change is all around us. We have seen where fiscal responsibility, the Confidentiality Laws, all these laws that government has brought in, all of these exercises, the reinvention of government, all these things mean change. Ultimately they will have to have some effect upon the way the Constitution operates. Is the present Constitution sufficient enough to take in all these changes that the good Minister of Education himself has been involved in bringing to the government administration?

The good Minister of Education was the person who brought the Vision 2008 exercise here, where we are talking about greater participation by the people, where we are talking about the people putting together a national programme for the next ten years.

So we are not talking about one dictator, or five dictators or 15 dictators, we are talking about consulting the majority of the people. The British government is concerned with representational democracy with accountability from the point of view of ministers and so forth, and so on. Therefore, there might be a necessity for some kind of Constitutional . . . not change, but alteration, in the future.

I respect my people's intelligence. I respect the people's ability to be able to make better decisions than certain people in this House give them credit for. And the people are always telling me that—maybe because of the side I am on because the people are telling me that I better not be on another side.

[Members' laughter]

Dr. Frank McField: And I listen to my people.

So, when certain people think that they are going to play old tricks again, they better listen to those people too. I listen to the people. I am a full-time politician, all of the time. Okay? And I am saying, Mr. Speaker, that I believe, and I know that there are intelligent people out there—more intelligent than you would ever think. And they know that change is a necessity, especially in a country that has grown so rapidly over the years economically and socially.

So how can you tell us that you are going to make certain changes possible, and at the same time make certain changes so impossible? Why is it that this House, that the government here, accepted the Confidential Relationship Preservation Law? Why did they go to New Zealand and pay all that money to bring that group of people here to change the way in which the budget would be prepared and debated? The possibility of persons in the community having some kind of say for the budget to be brought here. Why are they doing all these changes if they think that change is so negative?

Why didn't they go to the people to see if the people wanted all these changes? Why did they go along with all of these changes to make people believe that change was what they felt was necessary and all of a sudden you want to tie down change because you know change is coming in regard to the Constitution? You want to tie it down so that you can go out there and scare people about it and use a referendum to defeat the people's progress. It can happen, you know.

A referendum is a very difficult thing at the end of the day because people are going to vote according to what they perceive. If persons are going to make them perceive that there are these evil, terrible people waiting to change this country, then the people might hold back on that change. It's like putting your foot on the breaks when you're driving 100 mph. And you know what that is, it's sudden destruction. That is what I think has happened with this amendment to this very, very altruistic motion. It's like putting the breaks on while going 100 mph. So you don't even have to hit anything, and you're going to have a problem.

If I am going to talk about how the Constitution should be amended, I believe I should be given a chance to discuss that with my constituents to find out what they think about it. That's the reason why this amendment should never have been brought in here. This is the reason why I am going to find it very difficult to accept this amendment.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning laughs about that because he thinks he has me in a trap now. He thinks he can go out and say 'He wants to change the Constitution.' That honourable minister has been saying things about me or somebody else, but when I do what he wants me to do he doesn't say bad things about me. And people have been listening. They know. They follow the debates.

I am saying that I don't want to change the Constitution. But I will discuss with any reasonable member of this House, or of society, or any reasonable member of the British Foreign and Commonwealth Office any kind of adjustments or alterations that will make our democracy more representative, more accountable, more transparent.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Preach! Now you're talking.

Dr. Frank McField: Now, I know that people have gone off to Paris to discuss. But I sit here and I predict what the result of their deliberations will be because I have an idea of what they are talking about. I don't have to be there to know what they are talking about. I have an idea.

I was in Europe. I studied European history. I studied European political thoughts. I know Europe. I know what they are trying to achieve. I know the British Parliamentary system. I know England. I know the Labour Party. I know members of the Labour Party in England.

If they desire at this particular time to work with us toward developing a progressive colonial relationship that all of us can be content with and proud of, and nobody around the world can take potshots at them because of it and therefore they can feel comfortable with it, like we feel comfortable with it, I have nothing against it. That's basically it.

People who have been going away and negotiating to come to say that they didn't know anything about the desire of the British government to modernise the Constitution when they said it in the White Paper . . . if we go back to the White Paper and read specifically they are talking about transparent and accountable government and they want to make sure that they put in place the instrument to make transparent and accountable and representative government possible. What's wrong with their contemplating that? What is the good Minister of Education afraid of?

Why does he continue to sing that ancient song? Because elections are coming? Because we are not going to get elected if we talk about a Constitution? Well, the Constitution is part of our business, and we should talk about the Constitution. And we do have respect for the Constitution. And we do have respect for God and we do have respect for our fellow man. But it doesn't have to be the same respect that he has because he is not God.

I want people to know in this country that I have a right to have my feelings independent of him. I have a right to have my say independent of him. I have a right to make my deliberations and my conclusions and my decisions independent of him—or the government!

Mr. Roy Bodden: Preach!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, with respect, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER
(Misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am not trying to stop the member from making, within the Standing Orders of this House, what he can do within his democratic right. So it's misleading for him to say that I am trying to stop him from speaking and expressing his views. I mean, he's been there standing for the past three-quarters of an hour expressing his views. I am not stopping him. It's misleading to say so, sir.

The Speaker: I was wondering if he was referring to me or you. But basically, I would rather you keep it off of a personal vein. Fourth Elected Member for George Town, continue.

Dr. Frank McField: I will keep it out of that, Mr. Speaker. But the truth is that the Minister of Education did not say this on the floor of the House, he said it to me in private. And God knows between me and him, he saying he, he, he, he until the election comes. So, of course I am a little defensive. I am inexperienced.

But I would like to say that the right to freedom of discussion is a very important right. And I would like to read from this White Paper, "Partnership for Progress and Prosperity." Somebody asked me why they call it the White Paper. I guess we all know that's because it's a discussion paper. But it's obviously a discussion paper for members of the British Parliament because we certainly have not been discussing it with them. I have had the opportunity to speak to some persons, but that has been very limited.

Under Chapter 2, page 13, [paragraph] 2.8 says: "The governance of the territories must have a firm base. Democracy, human rights and the rule of law are all as relevant in the Overseas Territories as elsewhere. The principles which should underlie modern constitutions are clear. There must be a balance of obligations and expectations, and both should be clearly and explicitly set out. Future action will focus on: - measures promoting more open, transparent and accountable government; - improvements to the composition of legislatures and their operation; - improving the effectiveness, efficiency, accountability and impartiality of the public service; - the role of Overseas Territory Ministers and Executive Councils and their exercise of collective responsibility for government policy and decisions; - respect for the rule of law and the constitution; - the promotion of representative and participative government; - freedom of speech and information; - the provision of high standards of justice; - adoption of modern standards of respect for human rights."

"2.9 Discussion of Constitutional change is already underway. We are planning for the example . . ."

"Discussion of Constitutional change is already underway. " And the minister said he doesn't know anything about this? Is the minister saying that he doesn't know anything about this, Mr. Speaker?

If the minister doesn't know anything about it, why are we using him to go to England and those places to talk to these people?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Are you prepared to give way?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I have sat here very tolerant for a long time. What the member said is that he met the two UK Government officials and they raised certain things with him. I was at that time in Paris. I was not here. That's why I said to him that I knew nothing about it—obviously, no more than knowing two people were coming. They met with them. That's the first point.

The second point, sir, I have not been in any constitutional discussion with the UK about changing the Constitution of the country. If that is what he is implying that is untrue. The White Paper refers to it, but if I may just refer to a couple of things, since we are on the White Paper, what the White Paper says on page 9 is: "What degree of interest was there in changing the territories' constitutional relationship with the UK? Apart from some limited reference to Crown Dependency status similar to that of the Channel Islands, there was no widespread interest in a change in the current constitutional relationship."

The next point I would like to make is that the imputations made about this legislature changing the Constitution . . . let me just tell you what Britain's—

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

(Misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Dr. Frank McField: The Minister will get a chance to discuss. It's my turn to speak and I was gracious enough to ease him in on a point. But now he's going—

The Speaker: You gave way, give him an opportunity—

Dr. Frank McField: But he's debating, Mr. Speaker. I mean—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, if the honourable gentleman didn't want me to reply, he should not have given way. But if gives way then he must take what comes with it. I am reading from the White Paper. I just have one other thing to read and I will sit down.

The Speaker: Let him read his point.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker with all due respect—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I don't want any hassle with him. I will just sit down and let him go on sir.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I don't get to do this to anybody. So—

The Speaker: The procedure . . . I mean, you did not have to sit down. You could have said 'I am not going to give way' and that would have been it. It would have ended the argument. But you did give way.

He said he is not going to pursue it, so go ahead. Fourth Elected Member for George Town, continue.

Dr. Frank McField: I think that I allowed him to make a point because I did not want to suppress his right. But I think he was abusing that privilege because he was going overboard.

When you read a book, Mr. Speaker, and you only read the first nine pages, you're a bad reader. You have to keep reading until the book is finished. So don't tell me what page nine says, when I go to page 12—

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, the honourable gentleman shut me down. If he would like me to read the whole of the White Paper I will read it. But he stopped me from reading the White Paper. So now how can he tell me that I didn't read the whole White Paper when he stopped me from reading it?

The Speaker: Please, please, gentlemen. Let us get back. We are now here to debate Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 entitled Referendum, as amended. Let us get down to relevance. Let us be relevant in our debate.

[inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: I appreciate that. But this is not getting us to the point that we are supposed to be getting to. Please continue.

Dr. Frank McField: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I really must apologise to the honourable gentleman for calling to his attention these facts, but it does say here "Partnership for Progress and Prosperity" Chapter 2. And for all those persons who might have copies of the White Paper, we see it mentioned here.

Now, the reason I am saying this is that if we accept this particular part of his motion—which we have . . . we have accepted basically because we wanted to give people the right to enact referenda themselves, to initiate it themselves, rather than just us initiating it. If there is going to be any constitutional change in a country it is important to consult the people. I would not be for any constitutional changes that would not involve consultation with the people, but we have had constitutional changes in our country before. What people are talking about is constitutional advancement to the point of independence. They are not just talking about us amending things to allow certain things to function better, they are talking about us going and taking that step to be disobedient to the United Kingdom.

But certainly, nobody is against our improving the government by having more accountable, more responsible, more transparent and open government. Nobody is against that. And the United Kingdom has identified certain anomalies in the Constitution. I mentioned one that was mentioned to us in regard to the Governor having to give permission for ministers to leave the island. That's kind of archaic when there's no military threat or anything like that. That was back when the Governor was still a military head and that kind of military feudalistic type of relationship is what the British Parliament wants to get away from and we know that by the way in which they are trying to reform the House of Lords.

So, why is it then that this honourable gentleman has used this opportunity to insert into our intentions something that will result in tying the hands of those persons?

I am not trying to get them to have less say, I am trying to get them to have more say. But to say that it is in the interest of good government, especially at a time when we are dealing with the OECD, when we are dealing with the White Paper and those particular reforms and we can send a scary feeling out to the people. We can make the people believe that the United Kingdom is the bad wolf coming down here to do all these terrible things, including changing the Constitution . . . and we don't want that do we? because they just want us to go the bad way.

So we know that a referendum in regard to the alteration of the Constitution at this particular time is bad timing. Like I said, I have made my trips to London before. I have made submissions to London before. And I believe that they did read them. I am willing to go back to London tomorrow if necessary, because if we have a government in this country that is to be really responsible, then I am saying that it cannot vote at this particular time for this proposition as it is.

This cannot be accepted by reasonable people because it will cause unreason to exist among the general public out there. It will create an avenue for people to destabilise this country. It will put the government itself tied between Executive Orders from Britain, and we know that the Council in Britain has a right through Executive Order to order the Cayman Islands to do this or that. What happens? Somebody should get on the telephone and maybe call those people we are talking about up at the Foreign Office and find out if this is their intention; if they see a need for it in some of the colonies, including this one, before we bring a motion like this and accept a motion like this that is binding.

Mr. Roy Boddén: True!

Dr. Frank McField: That's all I am saying.

Good, responsible leadership has to do with more than making people afraid of their future. Good responsible leadership teaches people how to react to the difficulties that they might encounter along the lines as they progress. And it teaches them how to dismantle those difficulties and how to put them out of their way and how to continue to progress. We do not put stumbling blocks in the way of change when change is perhaps the only reality—everything changes.

We come into this world. We grow up. We grow old. We die. Others come. Others want different things. Plants grow . . . everything changes. Change is a reality. Why make it so difficult for change to happen when we have come to accept that our country has grown so fast over the last 20 years that we need significant change in regard to government administration and we see this in regard to all of these things.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to say in conclusion that I find the fact that the Minister of Education believes that he could bring a motion to this House to bind future legislators as a principle in regard to constitutions and constitutional laws and parliaments as funny. As he brings the law here, another parliament could come and change it because he knows that the law would only be binding because it's only a ledger's law. It would only be binding until it was changed.

In other words, although he would make this law, the majority could come back in here tomorrow and change it. Or when there's a new election they can come back and change this particular thing. It is not a major part on a major legislation. It's not in the Constitution.

If he wants to enshrine it in the Constitution then he could protect it from being changed perhaps later on easily because the Constitution being that superior thing would be more difficult. But if just brings it here because he wants to say 'I am bringing something to say that in order to change the Constitution you have to have a referendum' . . . that in itself is changing the Constitution because you are making a parallel legislation that is telling the persons who have been in power up until now that the status quo has been that the members of the Legislative Assembly, the British government and so forth, have had the authority to amend the Constitution as they have felt the need arise.

Now, he has brought legislation to bind us—not to bind the British government, because he can't bind them—but to bind us from being able to do what we were elected to do. That is major legislation.

When I was elected I was elected under the powers of this present Constitution. So this minor amendment, this subordinate law, is trying to act as a major amendment which supersedes my election. The Minister of Education knows . . . and I am not looking at any law book, I am arguing on my feet here. I am saying that for you to bring this legislation to limit my powers is to supersede the power which I was given. This should be an issue that he should run with in the next campaign. This should be a manifesto issue. This is a major, major issue. And this is the reason why I have said from the very beginning that the fact that it's come so far with this particular issue is incredible because tomorrow we could have great difficulties because we have to organise a referendum.

Part of the reason why the people supported the referendum, part of the reason why I support it is because it was proven that in many cases it's not used that often anyway. So the country could be spared, and the people could still be given the feeling that they do have the rights, although they do not exercise it. So I could go along with that. But when you are going to use that opportunity to say 'I am going to make sure that they don't make any changes, they these don't make any changes' . . . and you put yourself in that situation and tie everyone else's hands without giving us an opportunity to go to our constituents and discuss it—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER
(misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I have been listening to this for some time. The member is saying that this motion is tying his hands to change the Constitution. It's misleading. What it is saying is that a referendum should be called and to follow the wishes of the people on the amendment. But it doesn't tie the member's hands in any way unless he wishes to do something against the wishes of the people—which he then can do. It doesn't even stop him from doing that. So it's misleading to say that the motion is tying his hands from changing the constitution.

The Speaker: That's an elucidation.
Please continue.

[Members' laughter]

Dr. Frank McField: That's hallucination, that's what that is!

[Members' laughter]

Dr. Frank McField: All I say is that one of the things I actually enjoyed about having the two members of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office out here was that they were frank. I said to them right away, "Speak frank, and Frank will understand you." If you want something, regardless of what it is, just say it and we can deal with it. But don't hide what your intentions are. They did not come that way.

They were two very, very, very important persons. You could tell the confidence with which they came.

One of the things that was said, and it was also said to the press, was that the issue of homosexuality has taken precedence. People have put that to the forefront when we should be discussing human rights, because human rights do not have to do with homosexuality. The homosexual question will be a question down to conscience in any case. But there are more important human rights issues.

The Speaker: Once again, that is not relevant to what we are debating here this afternoon. Please let's get back to the motion we are debating. I appreciate that you have rambled quite a bit and I have given you a lot of latitude, but we are really not getting on with the motion. Let us not bring homosexuality and human rights into this at this particular time.

We are debating the referendum today.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I know the difference between a referendum . . . believe it or not, Mr. Speaker, I not ramblin' and people don't tink I ramblin'. There is a comment there because—

The Speaker: I have asked you and I have made a ruling. Please follow it.

Dr. Frank McField: It is my debate, and if I cannot be allowed to make my debate then I shall sit down.

The Speaker: Thank you.

I am calling your attention to tedious repetition. What you are debating must be relevant to the subject you are debating. If you want to go ahead continue. But I am telling you what I mean.

Dr. Frank McField: What I am discussing here is a procedure that the member wants in order for there to be any change or alterations in the Constitution. One of the things we have been calling for in this country is a Bill of Rights. The Bill of Rights has to do with Human Rights. If the Minister for Education gets us to a position now we will have to take a referendum to have a Bill of Rights. Am I right?

Because to have the Bill of Rights now in the Constitution you would have to have a referendum to have a Bill of Rights. Now, the reason I brought up the homosexuality thing was because that pushes people away from wanting a Bill of Rights. But it's important for people like me who believes that you need rights in this country because people are so willing to take them away from you, even when you have them and it's obvious that you have them.

So all I am saying is the difficulty created here is that people need to have rights that are known and respected and that are not the result of somebody else's conscience. If I am to depend upon certain people's conscience, I would be in a terrible position. I want to depend upon my rights. Therefore, I mentioned the rights.

The point the Minister of Education is bringing here would bar the possibility for this honourable House to vote for a Bill of Rights now or in the future, unless they went and repealed this legislation. And he knows why he did it. It would effectively stop there being a Bill of Rights in this country and this was the intention.

POINT OF ORDER

(misleading)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, this is totally misleading the House. This motion does not stop a Bill of Rights from coming in. All it is saying is go back to the public on a referendum if you are going to change the Constitution and put in a Bill of Rights. Consult the public. It doesn't stop any changes to the Constitution provided that a referendum is held prior to it. That is all the motion is saying. So it is not taking away these rights that the honourable member is referring to and that is, in my view, grossly misleading.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for George Town, this issue has come up two or three times. You yourself stated that you would have to go to the public to get permission. That is what the Minister of Education and Planning is saying. You are both agreeing on the same point, yet you say he is misleading the House. I am not understanding your point. You are saying that if you want to amend the Constitution you'd have to get the permission of the people, you want to give the people the right to make that decision.

So when you say that this is depriving them, you are misleading because you are making the point that that is giving the people that [right].

Do you have anything else to continue on?

Well, this would be a convenient time to take the afternoon break.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, before we take the break, sir. As a schoolteacher, I am concerned. I hear honourable members calling it "referandum." The word is not "refer' an' dum," it is "refer'ɔn'dum." As a Parliament we should set the example. We can't be calling the word "referandum" when it is "referendum."

The Speaker: I agree with you. And the plural has a different pronunciation also. Anyway, we shall suspend for 15 minutes. Thank you, Mr. Teacher!

[laughter]

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.36 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.15 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town continuing.

Dr. Frank McField: I have tried to show the importance of this change. I think that some things are slow in coming to my attention in regard to particular motions, the amendment of the motion and the process of voting on the motion. I would just like to refer back to the last amendment we had to the Constitution, which was in 1993. In this we have amendments in regard to section 29 of the Constitution which this particular motion refers to.

It says here, that "section 29 of the Constitution shall be amended by renumbering the same as subsection (1) and adding the following new subsection (2) Without prejudice to the generality of subsection (1), a law may make provision for the holding of a referendum amongst persons qualified as electors in elections to the Assembly on a question declared by resolution. Adopted by a majority of the Elected Members of the Assembly to be a matter of national importance and specified in such Law."

If we are calling for a motion to make this possible, my question is the correctness of the procedure that allowed this amendment to be possible in the first place. In other words, that the nominated members—not the elected members only—voted on the amendment to this particular proposition. It is my contention, Mr. Speaker, that that exercise was not necessarily in keeping with section 29(2) of the Constitution which speaks specifically about electing members and alienates the elected members from the nominated members because of the importance placed on such an action.

I would like to, if possible, have some kind of clarification in regard to this because, like I said, it is something in addition that has been brought to my attention in regard to this particular development.

The Speaker: I have taken legal advice on this. I will ask if you can point out a section in the Constitution that says that the Official Members cannot vote. I would be most grateful. I understand from the Constitution that the House is made up of 18 members, three of which are Official. I see no provision to preclude the voting of Official Members in our Constitution.

Dr. Frank McField: I am reading from a book The Legal Status of British Dependent Territories—The West Indies and North Atlantic Region, by Elizabeth Davies—

The Speaker: Before you do that, I have asked a question. I asked if you could point out a section in the Constitution which . . . because the legal advice that I have taken, I have followed.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, are you asking me to read the relevant section of the Constitution?

The Speaker: Where it says the Official Members cannot vote on an amendment to a motion.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, if you would allow me to read what this book says, I think we can get to that point. I don't necessarily want to tie this down, but at the same time, I think there is some indication here that . . . it says, with regard to the Motion 3/90, "An additional problem the government faced with this proposed amendment concerned the circumstances when it may be appropriate for the Official Members of the Legislative Assembly not to take part in any debate of any vote on a particular matter."

And the Governor made a statement at that time to this, "I consider the distinction to be drawn is on the one hand between things which are in the Constitution and to change which requires an amendment to the Constitution and on the other hand things which are enabled to be done under the Constitution and which may be done without any amendment to it. The motion to change the composition of Finance Committee is not in my view, and I am so legally advised, a Constitutional matter in the sense that it alters the Constitution or proposes to do so."

Therefore, I am advised that it was the feeling that on constitutional matters that the Official Members would not vote. We know, of course, with regard to the relevant Standing Orders that we went through a similar procedure last July. And at the end of the day, the Governor decided (Mr. Owen) to relieve the Official Members of that collective responsibility to vote on those particular issues. What we are discussing here today and arguing about here today are issues related to our constituent responsibilities.

I beg that you look at this issue again because it certainly has influenced the outcome of the decision.

The Speaker: I beg to differ with you on the outcome or the difference. The actual division was 11 for and 4 abstentions. You take three from 11 and the amendment would still have carried.

Dr. Frank McField: That is fine. But if we had had (as was indicated earlier) two propositions, it is quite possible that the division would have had different results. I still believe that in the interest of transparency and openness that we seriously look at what could be done here. As I said, these are serious issues that relate to the constituents.

As I was saying before, if we were elected on one manifesto and we are coming here and talking about a constitutional issue and a change in regard to the method in which the Constitution has been normally amended, that is something that should be the concern of the elected members since the Constitution says with regard to the issue of the referendum, and since this is what we are talking about and discussing a motion to make that possible, that the same standards should be applied here.

The Speaker: I just want to make it very clear. I made a decision that all members of the legislature would vote on this. The vote was taken, and as far as I am concerned that issue is behind us.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: All I can do is my best to assist the Chair. I believe I have done my obligation in assisting the Chair to see the possibility of some flaw in terms of the reasoning.

I believe that whenever a mistake is picked up, it is always helpful to be able to correct it. It is my opinion—as it was my opinion at the time I brought the motion in July—that there is this particular reason.

I would just like to get back to part of what my debate was in regard to the Bill of Rights. What happens today will be discussed, I am quite sure, for some time. I, for sure, will have the good opportunity to rebroadcast my position in regard to the move on the part of the Minister of Education to change the methods by which amendments to the Constitution can be done.

I believe that we do not want to make it impossible for the people of this country to have their rights enshrined in a constitution. I believe that people's rights are important, that they know their rights, that they know their obligation. I believe that a modern constitution would be a constitution that spoke not just of how government should be organised and the particular powers of each department or each branch of government between the Judicial, the Legislative and the Executive branch, but it will also speak about the people. A good constitution, if it is modern, speak about the rights and the obligations of its citizens, and not only mention the citizens by way of them being electorates.

I feel that this motion could prevent a timely resolution to this particular desire on the part of the people for a Bill of Rights. I feel that as far as I know people really would like to have a Bill of Rights as much as they would like to have . . . [pause]

Mr. Speaker, I am in a habit, when I get a note, to read the note. Since I just got a note from the Chief Secretary that says, “I shall be grateful if you would remove your vehicle from the designated parking space for the First Official Member and desist from parking there in the future.” I just thought that since that was so relevant to my debate that he should pass it at this particular time, and knowing the habit here that when a note is passed we usually read it . . . I just thought it might give me an indication of where an Official Member’s position is in regard to this debate.

So, like I said, I believe that I will have occasion to deal with these issues because I was elected here. And I have the right to talk in regard to the people’s rights. The people are saying that they would like to have their rights known, and that each person who is in office, whether or not they are official members or elected members, know that the people have rights and that they observe the rights of the people and that they violate the rights of the people only by paying the price for it because it would be illegal to violate that law that gave the people the rights.

Now, if I am reading correctly, because I do have a little basic appreciation for psychology, I know that there are things happening in this country. We know that there are some people who are considered to be a part of the old regime, let us say. Those people do not want certain things to stop. I am talking about rights; I am talking about the fact that if it is important for the Minister of Education to bring this particular amendment, how come it is not important for him to bring a Bill of Rights to this House and pass a Bill of Rights through this House so that the people can be assured that their rights will be observed by any government now or in the future?

The one-sidedness of this situation goes to show to me that there are those people who would go to any extent to stop positive change in this country, thinking and telling people that all change is bad and only people that talk about change are bad people but they are the only people who can initiate the change.

Hon Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, once again, a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Hon Truman M Bodden: I don’t go around telling anybody that change is bad. The honourable member is telling an untruth.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, sir.

Hon Truman M Bodden: He has been talking on me all along

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, sir.

The Speaker: [addressing the First Elected Member for George Town] Please be seated, let me deal with one point of order at a time I cannot deal with two.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town, what did you say?

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I think that since the Minister of Education is going to dispute what I am saying anyway, let us get the Hansard and see what it was that I said for transparency sake and we will see.

The Speaker: You realise that we are within a minute of the hour of interruption?

Dr. Frank McField: Sure, Mr. Speaker, I realise that. But, the people’s business should take as long as it should take for it to be done right.

¹The Speaker: We have reached the hour of 4:30 PM, the time of interruption. We will get the Hansard and I will deal with this tomorrow. I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this honourable house until 10:00 AM tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4:30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM THURSDAY, 16 SEPTEMBER 1999.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question 110 is standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 110

No. 110: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works if there are any plans to computerise the quantity surveying section of the Public Works Department.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Yes, consideration is being given to computerising the quantity surveying section of the Public Works Department. It is hoped that this will be completed by the end of 1999.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state exactly what the function of this section is within the Public Works Department?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The unit or section basically carries out some amount of quantity surveying work, assists in the administration and where necessary also deals with quantity survey work for the private sector.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The minister just said that the unit or section does a certain amount of quantity surveying work. Can he expand on that portion of his answer so that we can understand exactly what type and how much actual quantity surveying is conducted by this section?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Just for the record, the officer heading up the quantity survey section (one person) and a recent graduate working in that particular area do estimates for small and minor works projects. The larger projects are actually put out to tender to private sector quantity survey firms.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if this situation has prevailed for quite some time? Was this the intention when the section was formed? Or, because of the magnitude of work involved, has it evolved to a circumstance where much of the quantity surveying is jobbed out?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: When we try to relate it to where and how the quantity survey section began, in the 1970s (which is when I understand we set up that particular unit) . . . we do know that the quantum of the capital expenditure was rather small. So he was able (whoever he was at the time) to do most of the work. In moving forward, while he does perform certain functions in that area of quantity survey and is now assisted by a young graduate who returned in the summer, we still require in 1999 much of this work to be done by the private sector.

The quantity survey section, I may add, has reviewed a number of quantity surveying software packages. These packages that have been reviewed (two of them) have not been found ideal as there is difficulty in conversion from the metric unit to the imperial, and the level of detail is not considered appropriate. Public Works is looking into a quantity surveying software package that is currently in use locally in the private sector called "Zector." If this proves suitable, it is hoped that the computerisation of the quantity surveying section could happen before the end of the year thus putting the department in a position to do the majority, if not all of the work of quantity surveying on the capital work in the 2000 Budget.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if at present . . . and perhaps he doesn't have to go back that far. Let us use the last two or three years. Can he state on average what quantity surveying has cost this department by having to job out to the private sector?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We do know that the cost of putting these projects to the private sector for some firm to carry out the quantity surveying work is based on a percentage of the overall cost of the project, normally. We do not have that detail here this morning. If the member wishes we can supply it in writing to him and that is about the best offer I can make on that issue this morning, sir.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister then state, without having it computerised, what method is used to check (and I am assuming that this is necessary to do) bills of quantities that are sent back by the private sector with the capital projects that Public Works manages?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The executive quantity surveyor at Public Works carries out a general review of these bills of quantities which are arrived at by a private sector firm, but they do not go in detail to check every single item. There is a general review of it. I think the feeling is that these people are professional in doing these quantity surveys, or bills of quantity I should say. It is just a general review of what is presented to Public Works as the bills of quantity on a particular project.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if at present the quantity surveying work that is needed to be done in the private sector is done by tender? If not, what exactly is the process?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The services of the quantity surveyor to provide bills of quantities on Public Works projects are done by tender. We know that there are basically about four companies or firms that provide this service on the island.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state what method is utilised and the individuals involved who decide what pre-qualifies companies for being able to tender on the quantity surveying section of any capital project?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer is that 95% of the work is tendered to these four firms providing quantity surveying work for the Department of Public Works. However, when we get to very large projects we know that there are basically two firms that provide this work. Their bills of quantities recommended to Public Works are then reviewed by the Executive Quantity Surveyor of Public Works.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if it is accepted by the professionals in the Public Works Department that at present the situation within the quantity surveying section is unacceptable to say the least, in that it is not anywhere near as cost effective as it should be?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: May I say that one of the reasons for moving in the direction of computerisation of the quantity surveying section of Public Works is that the production of bills of quantities on all capital projects should be done in house. Therefore, in the majority of cases, if not all cases, it is less expensive in terms of overall government spending. We are also requesting in the year 2000 budget an additional quantity surveying post to ensure that we are in a position to do all if not 90% of the quantity surveying work needed by Public Works on government capital projects.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I appreciate the minister's skirting the answer, and I won't pursue it. For the record, I would like to advise the minister that I would be very grateful if the information he said he would provide in writing a while ago were done in that fashion so that I can get that information.

Can the honourable minister state as he has said that it is recognised that being able to do the majority of the quantity surveying in house is more cost effective, why it is only now that it is being recognised since this is a circumstance that has prevailed for several years? The quantity of the workload has been to this level for several years. Why is it only now being considered for that section to be computerised?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I used to use an analogy that apples don't drop until they are ripe, but I don't think the First Elected Member for George Town would appreciate that one!

What I must say is that given all of the reforms and movements in government, much of these matters including this one probably came under review for some time but action didn't come forward as early as all of us would wish. I think in 1999, or late 1998, it moved in that direction. We are seeking to establish the computerisation of the quantity surveying section to ensure that government becomes more cost effective in terms of the estimates we provide and the construction of buildings falls within a reasonable figure that the majority of the public would expect. That is basically the answer I am trying to give to the honourable member on this particular one.

Even when you move down the road, and we must recall that the quantity survey section is one person carrying out this amount of work. We talked about the amount of capital expenditure work budgeted for in 1999, it hasn't been far different from that figure if you even go back five years from today. So, there is one person carrying out this amount of work. Now we have a young graduate who came to us in the summer. Even if you move to two people, if you have to do the calculations by hand it is difficult.

I am just trying to answer the member. I am not saying that he doesn't appreciate this. I am just trying to answer the member in my own words. It is difficult to deal with $30 million to $35 million in capital projects with somewhere between 75 to 100 different projects, even for two people to carry out that function. It is the reason why . . . and I am not being defensive, I am just talking about the way forward. Many things are going on in government. There are all sorts of reforms taking place—reforms of the public service, reforms on the financial side of government, there's Y2K. . . there are so many different reforms.

People are tied up doing a variety of things. I think much of that activity has created some amount of awareness that some sections and some parts of various departments—including ministries—need to be reviewed, and systems being utilised need to be upgraded and brought up to modern-day operational needs.

I believe that review has taken place, sorting out of software packages and trying to select one does take some time. I believe in my heart that Public Works is moving forward to try to find the one that they believe is going to be the most effective in doing the work. Because what we are expecting is that once we have the software package in place there will be no need, unless it's a very limited need, to go outside for quantity survey work. I think that is in the right direction.

The Speaker: I will allow two additional supplementaries.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The minister just mentioned in his explanation a figure of $35 million worth of capital projects. So that we can have a fairly good idea of what we are looking at, if the government were to engage in $35 million worth of capital projects for which bills of quantities needed to be produced, if there are 75 projects, what kind of costs (since he mentioned that costs are usually done on a percentage basis in the private sector) would that mean for the Public Works Department being billed by the private sector for that amount of quantity surveying?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: That's a reasonable and fair question. I would hesitate to try to answer that verbally today. We do know that even when you are dealing with $35 million of capital expenditure we are not talking about a variety . . . well, put another way: We are talking about a variety of projects. It could mean playing fields, jetties or ramps, it could mean educational facilities. What I am saying is that we would prefer to give the member, having researched it properly, in writing.

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I am trying not to answer a hypothetical question on the floor of this House.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: The minister said that one of the benefits of computerisation will be a savings. Can the honourable minister tell the House how significant these savings will be on computerised analysis vis-à-vis man hours?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: This too, I think requires a complete examination. I would say thousands of dollars. But I think it requires a full examination in order to give the member in all fairness a proper answer to his question. We prefer to research it and come back in writing.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 111, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Before asking the question, craving your indulgence, may I make a comment sir?

The Speaker: Will you eventually change it into a question?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: No, sir. I am making a comment to the Chair. I am asking the Chair to allow me to make a comment before I ask the next question.

The Speaker: Be brief please.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: With the greatest of respect to the Chair and to you personally sir, I just wish to make the observation that while I totally appreciate the fact that you have to try to get on with the business of the House as time is not something that one wishes to waste, when it comes to Question Time, until we have a different system where there will be no need for this type of inquisition to go on from the backbench to the government, it is one of our only methods of recourse to get information not only for ourselves, but that which the public seeks through us.

On many occasions, while it seems to be a time consuming affair, there have been lines of questions put forward which have been stymied midstream. At the end of the day, the whole effort appears to us to have been wasted because there has been no conclusion to the line of questioning.

I simply ask your indulgence. I am not seeking a free hand to ask all day or anything like that. Appreciating your reasons (and understanding that you are not doing it because you can), there have been times when probably from where you sit it may not reach the same significance as from where we sit. We are the ones doing the questioning while you simply have to look at the overall picture to conduct the business of the House in an orderly fashion. I am simply making the observation, craving your indulgence.

As I said, I am not seeking to ask questions for as long as we want. I am just trying to explain that. If you don't want to comment I will just continue.

The Speaker: I thank you for that.

I would like to ask the Clerk how many supplementaries have been asked on question 110.

We have asked 11 supplementaries on this question this morning. In Speaker's conferences this discussion has been tabled on numerous occasions. Other Parliaments actually deal in seconds on supplementaries. I try to be as lenient as I possibly can, but I feel that you can just get so much information. We have seen that the honourable minister is having to refer . . . he's been writing. Certainly if you don't get the opportunity to ask the question, if you ask the honourable minister privately I am sure he would give you the information in writing.

I do not desire to restrict for sake of restriction, but I do appreciate what you said. We have to move on with the business. I do stretch the time as much as possible. I have allowed 22 supplementaries to questions in the past. I am trying to do the very best I can in presiding.

Let us go on with question 111.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you very much sir. Just to let you know before I ask the question that what I just brought up had no bearing on the last question we asked. We were happy with that one. It was just an observation.

QUESTION 111

No. 111: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works what policy and procedure has been adopted by the Public Works Department with regard to tenders for capital projects.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The Public Works Department (PWD) follows procedures in accordance with the Financial and Stores Regulations. Tenders in excess of $100,000 are considered by the Central Tenders Committee. Tenders under $100,000 are considered by PWD's Tenders Committee.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The first part of the answer, where the minister said that tenders in excess of $100,000 are considered by the Central Tenders Committee, just singling that portion of the question out, can the honourable minister state exactly what procedure has been adopted in regard to these tenders?

What I am trying to determine is (if the minister will hear me out) exactly what takes place from the beginning—how the information is disseminated in regard to inviting the tenders. How do the tenders come back in? Do they go straight to the Central Tenders Committee (CTC) by the mere fact that they are over $100,000, or are they passed through certain channels? If they are passed through certain channels, do other people deal with the tenders in any form or fashion before they are examined by the CTC?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I was going to ask the Honourable Acting Third Official Member to answer the question because he's normally the person responsible for the Central Tenders Committee.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If that is to be the case, then I would divide the question in two. The honourable Acting Third Official Member can answer the question when it gets to the Central Tenders Committee. But I am certain that the minister responsible can answer the first part with information passed on by his staff.

What I am really trying to determine is what happens before those tenders get to the Central Tenders Committee. What exactly is the process?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I wasn't trying to get anybody else involved, I was trying to give as much information as possible to the member asking the question. The whole scheme of things is that you have a particular project that has been approved by the Legislative Assembly. When we have all of the costs involved (and sometimes we don't) in the project and all the necessary details we then put the project out to public tender. That process actually begins with the involvement of PWD and the department.

Once it moves forward to go to tender, it then has to involve the chairman of the Tenders Committee who normally agrees (unless it has changed since I was there) and with the two other officers in the advert that goes to the public in order to ensure that all of the players involved agree on the content that is put in the paper to tender a particular project. It is stated in that advertisement in the Caymanian Compass that the tenders on that particular project should be forwarded to the Chairman of the Central Tenders Committee.

The Speaker: Before taking another supplementary, I would ask the honourable minister if he would move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) so that Question Time can continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am happy to move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if, when the advert goes out inviting the tenders, PWD has nothing more to do since it is supposed to go directly to the Central Tenders Committee, as he just stated?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Once the invitation for tenders is done as we just talked about, those tenders are then submitted . . . and normally it also appears in the advertisement in the Caymanian Compass that the tenders should be submitted to the Chairman of the Tenders Committee. So PWD has no involvement at that point.

There may be some exception when it comes to . . . there's no exception to that particular aspect of it. But there is PWD involvement in the assessment of the tender having been submitted, is what I am trying to say.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I am understanding the minister correctly he is saying that the tenders are addressed to the Central Tenders Committee, but on receipt of the tenders the PWD is called in to have some dealing with them before they are actually decided upon. Is that what the minister is saying?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Normally tenders are submitted to the CTC Chairman. Then what happens after that depends upon the Chairman and the Committee as to what they need in terms of evaluation of these particular tenders. In some cases it is referred to PWD, to assist with the analysis of the tenders that have been submitted, depending on the project.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. Joel Walton: Thank you. As this matter is now in the realm of the Central Tenders Committee, perhaps I can help the House on this point.

Yes, tenders that come through the CTC are advertised to come back to the CTC. The CTC, having received those tenders will call a meeting specifically to open them at which time we will normally have the department implementing the project, a representative from that department, and usually if the PWD is involved in that project, they will also be there. Also sometimes where you might use outside assistance to help with the valuation of tenders, that person or that company might be there as well.

We open the tenders at the CTC level. We record them. We then hand them over to the department and PWD if they are actually implementing the project, that is, or consulting or whatever the case may be, from a local company, who then evaluate those projects for their technical relevance, that is do they meet the terms of the tender. That group, having been done, which is normally what we call the departmental tenders committee group, will then make a recommendation back to the CTC as to their findings and recommendations. The CTC at that point will receive a presentation on that and take a decision on its own based on the advice received.

At that point it will inform the bidders of the decision of the Committee and concurrently also advertise that bid. The successful bidder would then be put in a gazette saying that company was successful.

So the process is that all tenders come into the CTC, are opened by the CTC, but handed over to be assessed for the technical relevance. Recommendations then come back. CTC takes a decision and gazettes it and advises the companies who bid it. That's the process at the CTC level.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I wonder if the honourable minister can tell the House what process is carried out on pre-qualifications to allow persons that would care to tender on capital projects for government over $100,000?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We advertise in this pre-qualification exercise for parties who are interested in providing service to come forward and state their qualifications among other sorts of requirements. At that stage those that come in are evaluated by the relevant department, be that PWD or whichever department is involved.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister tell the House the exact person within the PWD that opens these pre-qualifications and decides on who can be accepted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The persons are normally selected by the Chief Engineer in accordance with—

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: That is my understanding.

I will try to answer that again. The Chief Engineer appoints senior staff to carry out this particular work.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister elaborate on that a bit, and actually tell us which senior staff?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: It would depend upon the project. If it's a road project, it would be senior members of the PWD. If it's a building project it would be senior members of the PWD responsible for that particular section of the PWD. And there may be advice coming from an outside firm that is perhaps being utilised on that particular project.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say if he is aware of any companies that have reached the pre-qualification requirement but have not been allowed to bid on the project?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My information is that we are unaware of such a project.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state (after consulting, because I am certain he will not know the answer to this offhand) if there have been any instances of companies who have been pre-qualified by the relevant authorities who have tendered bids and after the bids were tendered they were not opened or examined even though they were pre-qualified?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, this particular question could best be answered by the Acting Third Official Member who normally deals with tenders.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. Joel Walton: My understanding of the question is that we have moved beyond the pre-qualification stage now. We have pre-qualified a company and received bids from those companies who have been pre-qualified and those bids are not opened. Is that where we are at? We are not that far down?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I will clear the matter up, sir. I will rephrase the question and be very direct since it seems that's the only method.

We have been advised that there has been at least one occasion where a firm that is totally owned by qualified and competent Caymanians was pre-qualified to bid on certain parts of major capital works projects. They were told that they pre-qualified so they should go ahead and prepare their bid. They did that. But it went no further than when they stuck it in the envelope and sent it where it had to go.

We were told that members of the Public Works Department did this. We were told this. We don't stand on the floor making any accusations; we are simply questioning and looking for the truth. That's all we are asking.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think some clarification would be helpful if the member could say whether the amount tendered was $100,000 or more.

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In excess of $100,000?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. Joel Walton: As this matter relates to a bid over $100,000 perhaps I can assist. There are two systems which operate. I will just explain those systems first in an attempt to try to answer the questions being put.

In terms of straight construction building contracts, when you pre-qualify companies, invite them to bid, they should send in (and they usually do) a price responding to the tender saying X amount of dollars for X amount of services. All those bids are opened.

The second type of system relates to consultant services where you might have a specialist type of building. Take a case in point, the hospital that was constructed many years ago. We have a similar situation. A more recent one was probably the Lighthouse School. It was a different type of school. We have a two-envelope system: We request a technical bid, and we also request a financial bid. If it were $100,000 all those bids should have been sent back to the Central Tenders Committee. They will then open only the technical bids first. They will hand those bids over to be evaluated by the technical people who will then come back with a ranking system and will basically say 'Firm number 1 had 76 points on a technical scale of 100. Firm number 2 had 50 points on a technical scale of 100. And firm number 3 had 60 points on a scale of 1 to 100.'

At that point because the technical capability of the company is probably more relevant in a consultancy situation, we will then only open the first bid. That is the bid of the highest rank technical company. If that bid is . . . we then have the technical people negotiate from that point with that company.

If the bid is above the pre-tender estimate, . . . let's suppose we expected the project to cost a quarter of a million dollars, and the bid was above that. Automatically we will say it's costing too much, even though you may be the number 1 ranked technical company you are costing us too much.

So those are the two systems we have. One is for straight build type contracts, which is an open all bids. The primary reason here is financial as opposed to technical because usually when you pre-qualify construction companies they have the same kind of capability, as distinct from a consultant service. There is actually a separate guide to consultants which we use in the public service to help us distinguish between these types of . . . it probably started in the early 1990s when we started to get into areas like marl and mining and hospitals and those kinds of things that were a little bit different from the normal.

I must say that we had a recent situation where we had our two envelope system and it so happened that all three companies were so close together in terms of the technical capability, within 25% or something like that, that we took the decision to open all three. There was very little difference. But where you have this difference of 75 to 50, you focus on company number 1 because that's the most qualified of the three companies.

You can have a situation where a bid is not opened. And it is not opened because on a consultant contract, on a two-envelope system—which is made known up front, by the way, it is not something we do after the fact. We tell the company it's a two-envelope system where we will deal with the highest technical rank first. If we are able to negotiate the terms we are seeking, the other bids will be returned unopened.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The honourable member used the terminology "the highest ranking company." And I understand what he means by that. Perhaps the only question left to ask on the matter is, Who are these technical people, and what are their qualifications to decide on who is the highest ranking with the technical bid?

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. Joel Walton: I will describe a situation to try to typify what normally happens. Let's suppose we are seeking to install an incinerator—and pardon my use of the particular project—at the landfill site. It has in it technical knowledge of incinerating technology and how it is used. It has in it some type of architectural drawing and some knowledge of construction.

The technical people you are talking about will usually be a representative, normally the controlling officer or head of the section in the department. In the case of the incinerator it would be the Chief Environmental Health Officer or the person in charge of this type of disposal. We then have a representative of the PWD who is involved in the architectural/costing as well. In some cases we use outside assistance. Let's suppose that the PWD might not have that particular expertise available at that point in time. Sometimes we will contract it in.

So it's usually a mixture of departmental experts, PWD experts and sometimes private sector experts which we use to give us that ranking on the technical capability.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 112, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 112

No. 112: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works if there has been any restructuring of the Public Works Department in recent times.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Executive Council has approved a restructuring of the Public Works Department (PWD). The existing PWD structure identified roads, architecture, building construction, quantity surveying and building maintenance as separate units with accounting being a function of the Quantity Surveying unit. This structure has come under pressure in recent years.

The new structure proposes two distinct units of roads and buildings, each under a Deputy Chief Engineer and a separate support unit. A Financial Controller will be in charge of all accounting functions within this support unit.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: It is my understanding that the roads unit has always managed to bring their projects within budget. But this objective has escaped the building unit. Can the honourable minister say what the reason for this failure is, and how will this restructuring enhance their ability to come within the budget of the project?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The new structure as it relates to the supplementary question being asked, combines architecture, the building construction and quantity surveying with the view of causing a much more (for lack of a better word) streamlined organisation and hopefully more effective in terms of the way in which it carries out its business. The mere fact that the quantity surveying section is being combined with the building construction and architectural section does lead to a better streamlined organisation and hopefully with everyone doing their best would assist us with gaining economies of scale with this new unit.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the answer, the minister refers to the two distinct units. Then he refers to a financial controller who will be in charge of all accounting functions within the support unit. Can the honourable minister explain the relationship of the support unit to the other two main units so that we might get a better picture of the functions of the department in its new mode?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: What we are looking at is bringing together the previously separate units of architecture or building construction, of quantity surveying and building maintenance, into three new units. They are as follows:

- Building Unit, which deals with the planning and advice, design, project management, construction management, and maintenance.
- Road Unit, also dealing with planning and advice, design, traffic engineering and transportation planning, construction management and maintenance.
- Support Unit, which deals with the administration, with personnel issues, with financial issues and purchasing.

Full implementation of the new structure should be completed in the next month or two. We have job descriptions for the new posts that are currently being reviewed and graded by the Personnel Department. On completion of this there will be two new deputy chief engineer posts and a financial controller post will also come into effect. So we are looking at a bit of an upgrading in the process of trying to make it more cost effective and effective in terms of its responsibilities in the future.

The Speaker: the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say if prior to the restructuring there an analysis done to determine why the building construction, architecture, and quantity surveying units fail to achieve parity with the roads department in realising budgeting objectives?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Sometimes in the design phases and also in the carrying out of the particular project and manning it and moving it forward, . . . we all accept that we would like to see much more happen. The way in which the structure is presently being put forward and to some degree being pulled closer together put under two new deputy chief engineers, is with a view of getting better coordination and better control over the projects that are carried out by PWD and hopefully a better costing to government.

The Speaker: the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I thank the honourable minister for that answer. Since he did not specifically address what I asked, I presume that there has been no prior analysis.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, sir, I am still waiting to find out if there has been any prior analysis.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We have employed an individual on an intermittent basis who is advising the department on its entire administration and the way in which it carries out projects and the cost. That individual has not identified any substantial overruns. In cases where projects have come forward and we have a token sum in the budget to begin with, sometimes we don't have all of the information required. Sometimes there have been items placed in the budget that we don't have the final cost included and that is increased as we go forward when we do have the final estimates. We don't have those situations and we are working diligently to ensure that we get better control over what happens with the budget, with the government, with Public Works and to be as effective as we possibly can in dealing with government whether it's recurrent expenditure or capital expenditure.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am assuming that the restructuring is either directly or indirectly as a result of a consultant who came down to take a look at the way the department was functioning. Can the honourable minister state what type of inadequacies were identified in the quantity surveying section outside of the necessity to computerise that section? Can the honourable minister state if there was any other inadequacy identified or any need for improvement in regard to that section?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think when we look back at this whole area, some years ago there were some decisions taken. I can't quote the exact year. We decided to utilise people in the private sector to help us with quantity surveying. I don't fault anyone for doing it. We are moving towards putting in place all quantity surveying that can be physically done within PWD because there are some special projects that come along from time to time. We are seeking to employ another person in the year 2000, in addition to the young graduate who came along.

I think it would be difficult for one or two persons to carry out effectively the amount of work involved. That's why we are moving in that direction.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Is the minister saying that the answer he just gave was the inadequacy that was identified? I asked what inadequacies were identified, if any. So I am now asking the minister if that is what was identified.

Mr. Speaker, for purposes of clarity, what I was trying to elicit from the minister was the type of comments, not specifically but in summary, which were made on examination of this department in regard to what needed to be done to upgrade its efficiency to be more cost effective. The minister answered, but he answered by means of suggesting a way forward. I am asking if that was what was suggested by this examination.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: What was actually recommended by the person looking at the overall structure of Public Works and the work they normally do is the restructuring that I have mentioned with a view of trying to do a more comprehensive unit within the department, putting a deputy in charge of two particular areas, one dealing with buildings with all of its ramifications, including the quantity surveying section, and the unit responsible for roads, whether it's new roads or the maintenance of roads, and then having a separate support unit which deals with the administration and personnel issues.

I guess that my answer is, when we look at Public Works overall the movement forward is seeking to gain a much more structured and have all the units coordinated under two deputy chief engineers so that the administration of the work and the forward movement of the work and the carrying out of the work is done with as much efficiency as it possible can be done with physically.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I will make this my final supplementary.

The Speaker: Thank you very much.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just to move on to the personnel side of things, so that we can get a clear understanding of the way forward for this department, if I understand correctly, the Public Works Department has a chief engineer and a deputy chief engineer at present. Is that correct?

Anyway, just let me finish asking and perhaps it can be made clear. Let me not say what my understanding is then, but in the organisational chart at present, you have someone at the helm and I am not quite sure what happens below that. Now that this reorganisation is in process and it mentions two deputies, can the honourable minister explain what the difference will be in the chain of command with what exists and what will exist once this reorganisation is completed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Just to start from the beginning, we have a chief engineer. Underneath that, in terms of structure, we have a building maintenance section, a quantity surveying section, the administration, the road section, and a building section (meaning construction rather than maintenance of buildings).

In the new arrangement we will have all matters related to roads, whether maintenance or the construction of new roads, under the new chief. Under buildings, we will have architecture, building construction, quantity surveying, and building maintenance under the other new deputy chief engineer.

The Speaker: I have a request that we suspend for the morning break at this time as the honourable minister has a press release to CITN. So we will take the morning break for 15 or 20 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.50 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.17 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Question Time continues. Are there any further supplementaries?

If not, before moving on to question number 113, I would ask that we suspend Suspension of Standing Order 23 (6) in order to allow the fourth question to be taken. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(6)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(6) to allow the other question to be taken.

The Speaker: Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(6) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW A FOURTH QUESTION UPON THE ORDER PAPER STANDING IN THE NAME OF THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN.

QUESTION 113

No. 113: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works who authorises the Public Works Department to do road repairs or maintenance.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Recommendations are based upon criteria such as importance of the project to traffic safety, drainage and number of residents affected. Following review of the report and consultation with the district Members of the Legislative Assembly, the Ministry of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works then authorises PWD to carry out the road repair projects in each district.

The Island-wide routine scheduled maintenance, such as grass-cutting, verge clearing, pot-hole patching, striping and signs maintenance and drainage related activities, are programmed by the Roads section of PWD. These works are authorised by the Chief Engineer, based upon the funding approved in the budget for Roads Maintenance. The maintenance activities are required to preserve the capital investment in the road network.

Road repairs (minor or major) to the main road network are treated as maintenance activities. This is because of the importance of keeping major roads functional at all times. Major road repairs to collector or access roads are treated as capital projects and are done on a district basis with annual road visits being made to each district by Members of the Legislative Assembly, PWD and the Ministry of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to view which roads require work. PWD then compiles a report containing the estimates for each project, as well as a recommendation of which projects should be carried out.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This may seem like it's coming from a very funny angle, but it is something I do not quite understand and I would like to have it clarified. In the first paragraph of the answer the minister refers to "Following review of the report. . ." I take that to mean that that report would likely come from a member of the public, or a request, so to speak. I am saying that because the answer reads: "Recommendations are based upon criteria such as importance of the project to traffic safety, drainage and number of residents affected."

I would assume that it is possible that it might come from the public. It is possible that it could be an observation made by the department itself. But the next sentence says, "Following review of the report and consultation with the district Members of the Legislative As- sembly, the Ministry of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works then authorises PWD to carry out the road repair projects in each district.”

The question may sound funny coming from me, a member of the Legislative Assembly at this point in time, but exactly what role do MLAs play in this whole process?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My answer is referring to maintenance of roads. MLAs play a role in terms of which roads get major improvement in terms of capital works. This is really the recurrent expenditure area of the budget at PWD that we are responding to, if I understand it correctly.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The reason I am asking the question, and if the minister will look at the last line in the first paragraph, “Following review of the report and consultation with the district Members of the Legislative Assembly, the Ministry of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works then authorises PWD to carry out the road repair projects . . .” I was thinking different from maintenance, because the question deals with repairs or maintenance separating the two issues. I just want to clear that up before you follow up with the answer.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Maintenance is really decided by PWD in terms of what roads need maintenance work. When we are dealing with major work on roads, capital works on roads, as the member very well knows because we have been on road visits on a number of occasions, we pay a visit to the district in looking at roads and then the members of the district make some decision about which roads should be repaired, given the amount of capital funds available to carry out that work.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: My understanding of what the minister just said refers to the last paragraph. And I hear all of that. I am not talking about annual road visits.

Let me make it clear by using an example. A member of the public who lives in a certain area would call into the department and say ‘Listen, the road I live on has deteriorated tremendously. It really needs some repairs. Would you please have it done as early as possible?’ That member of the public is then told ‘If you really want this done contact your MLA.’ Okay? There’s no problem; I just want to get it very clear.

So the person then contacts a representative. (And I am using myself, since I am the one asking the question. But it could refer to any one of us.)

At that point in time it becomes obvious that in the decision-making process the Members of the Legislative Assembly play some role. Now, I have been a representative for seven years. I have never been told what my actual role is, or should be, in this regard. I am seeking clarity. Is this policy? Does it vary with a government? Where does it come from? That’s what I am trying to get at.

While it may suit us to look good to our constituents, what type of uniformity dictates what is done, given the funds? Is it competition? Does it depend upon who the representative is? Does it depend upon whom he or she knows? What exactly is the way in which such work is done is what I am asking.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think we can break this into two parts. If it is a routine maintenance activity, the PWD will take that decision basically on its own. If it were a major job on a road, the individual would be told by PWD to contact their MLA simple because the job seemed to require a significant amount of the allocation for the district. They would want to take input from the MLAs on this matter before taking action.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is reasonable. I am very grateful for the first time in seven years to have an understanding. I won’t bother to ask how long this policy has been in place, but I want to make an observation and ask the minister to make a comment.

The reason I asked the previous supplementary question is because I have difficulty with the system. As the answer said, “Following review of the report and consultation with the district Members of the Legislative Assembly, the Ministry” then authorises. Regardless of who the shoe fits, the problem I have with this type of policy is . . . and I will be blunt, but, again, it’s hypothetical. I am not making accusations that this is the way it works presently. But perhaps the minister might find himself on the opposite side of the fence from me. Perhaps I represent a district that has four representatives; the other three are on the minister’s side, I am on an opposing side. It would be viewed, whether by perception or by reality, that the other three representatives would be able to get a lot of work done, please their constituents and people like me will be left out in the cold.

Remember, I am not saying that this is the case because, trust me, if it were the case I would say so. I am trying to say that the possibility exists. It also puts the PWD in almost an untenable circumstance because it’s left to the whims and fancies of individuals. So while there has to be a certain amount of trust given with a certain amount of positions, I think this is one of them.

The way the circumstance works now must have room for improvement. Perhaps the minister can comment.

I am not trying to say that as it works now things don't get done. I am just trying to see if there is any possibility of getting a streamlined system which would allow for priorities to operate properly, depending on which repairs are more urgently needed, and not by who speaks the loudest or knows who the best.

I am asking the minister to comment.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Perhaps it's not good to go over old ground, but to talk about the way forward. The way forward is that all MLAs will have an opportunity to make input on what roads get repaired. We have actually paid road visits, granted that some MLAs were committed to other activities and could not attend. But I think in general the majority of MLAs were there.

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: What I am leading up to saying is that when we pay a road visit, we look at a variety of needs, whether it be drains, or the road needs repair, or there is too much traffic and perhaps it should be more than just sand sealed, those sorts of areas. But once that decision is taken we then prepare a costing of what PWD thinks should be done and that is coming back to the MLAs after the visit. Then we decide the way forward taking their input. Normally what happens is that we have anywhere from $200,000 to $500,000 to carry out this roadwork and it's always inadequate. Therefore we need input from each MLA as to which ones they wish us to do so that we don't go in one direction when the MLAs want us to go in a different direction.

Although we cannot always agree on every issue, we try to forge that coming together with a unified decision to deal with the repair of roads. We are on our way to that. We know that we have not given the Fourth Elected Member for George Town the results of the road visit, but that's in the works.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I can assure the minister that the question was not asked because of what he just said. I know he knows that.

But since he mentioned that, it begs another question. The budget comes in November and monies have to be spent by the end of December. The process being what it is now, and we are nearly through the month of September, by the time such consultation takes place and decisions are made, I would venture to say that we could at least be looking at a month to six weeks down the line which puts us to the end of October. So we are looking at November and December to do road work before we start the whole process all over again.

Given the background with the minister having taken over in recent times there may well be reason for this to exist. But I would like to believe that the minister would not consider this to be a satisfactory situation. Does the minister have any comments in regard to being able to improve the timing of this type of work so that the department itself can actually plan and function more efficiently and be more cost effective in regard to getting this type of work done?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think 1999 is not a good year to be guided by in terms of our operation of this particular vote because the 1999 budget was not fully approved until April. So there's a pretty tight timeframe to carry out all the work we need to do. I wouldn't say that's a major factor, but to some extent it is the reason why we haven't been able to carry out more work than we have at the moment. But we are going to really get on with it.

I believe that we just need to sit down and talk, the MLAs and PWD, and have a discussion about the way forward so that we (meaning PWD) don't go off in one direction when the MLAs want us to go in a different direction. I think it's better in situations like this where you are a little bit uncertain (and everybody has a certain degree of uncertainty) to just caucus and talk it through, and see what we can come up with.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister say then, given the circumstance, if he would consider the following proposition: Even though the actual budget process and whatever funds become available are totally dependent on the entire Legislative Assembly and that process through Finance Committee and getting approval, it would not preclude the road visits with the potential wish lists. So my view is that you don't have to wait for approval to go through the exercise of identifying the need when it comes to the district roads and going through the process of costing them.

Perhaps this could be done much earlier in the future, regardless of the budget process. By the time the budget process is completed you have all of your information available to you. The only process left is prioritisation, given availability of funds. Perhaps if you were able to view it in that light the whole process might be able to function more orderly, more expeditiously and the PWD itself might actually be able to function better.

Would the minister consider looking into doing it in that fashion? This is not the first time I have suggested it, and in my time here, although we did a road visit not so long ago for George Town, it had been the first in five years that the district had a road visit that I knew about except when the former minister refers to his lawyer and their private visits.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think when we look at the history of the seasons in Cayman, it would make sense to try to carry out much of this work before we get to the month of May. Once we get to the rainy season it's kind of difficult and to some degree not cost effective to be constructing roads. But that is a bit of an aside.

I believe that the way forward is to caucus on it and to try to work up some agreement that is acceptable to the member of the Legislative Assembly and do our road visits early. When we get to January we should actually be starting work, not actually starting the visits and trying to come up with some estimate of what the cost of repairs will be. I think it needs to be done, for example this year, the later part of the year, those road visits, to determine what is needed in the year 2000, and get the estimates done so that when January 2 comes and we go to work, we know exactly what we need to do and we have the input of the members of the district and we can get on with the work.

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I take every suggestion on board.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 114, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 114

No. 114: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce and Transport and Works to state what recommendations have been made by the Economic Council with regard to the maintaining of the Caymanian economy.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The Economic Council has not been re-appointed since 1996. The Department of Economics and Statistics Department advise government on economic matters.

The Government, however, established a Business Consultative Committee in 1997 with board representation from the private sector. There is representation from the Chamber of Commerce, Restaurant Association, Real Estate Association, gas station owners, Merchants' Association, Watersports, Tour Operators (ground), heavy equipment operators, Taxis and Merchant Representatives of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

So the Business Consultative Committee was established in 1997 to deal with these particular matters.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether the terms of reference of the Business Consultative Committee is basically the same, or similar to those for the Economic Council? And also, can he give the House an indication of the most recent meeting of the Business Consultative Committee?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think in dealing with this issue we need to bear in mind that much of our time has been spent in a variety of meeting, including meetings of the Legislative Assembly. The last meeting of this Business Consultative Committee was held on 4th May of this year.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say whether the Business Consultative Committee advised on the composition of the tax package, and whether they made any recommendations regarding alternate sources of revenue which government could tap into other than the conventional tax packages?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I have to say, subject to checking the file, I don't have any recollection of that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister then state if this committee was invited to give their views before the tax package was brought?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: It is not normal that you invite suggestions from the public before coming to a tax package. It's not normal.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister then state if the fact that this is not normal is because it won't be acceptable to the public?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think when we deal with tax issues there are some people who understand there is a need for government to be funded in order to carry out the service it is providing to them. There are also some people who question whether you need to do it or not, and there are some who would decide that it shouldn't be done. But I basically say that as an array of views that may come from time to time.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning. I think this is the proper time to take the luncheon break. We shall suspend until 2.15.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.08 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Item 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99, as amended. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

SPEAKER'S RULING ON POINT OF ORDER (Raised 15 September 1999)

The Speaker: But before I call on him, when we adjourned yesterday we were dealing with a point of order. I have in my possession the [unedited] Hansard transcript of 15 September 1999, end of tape number 33. I quote what the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said from this transcript:

"I am talking about rights; I am talking about the fact that if it is important for the Minister of Education to bring this particular amendment, how come it is not important for him to bring a Bill of Rights to this House and pass a Bill of Rights through this House so that the people can be assured that their rights will be observed by any government now or in the future?"

"The one-sidedness of this situation goes to show to me that there are those people who would go to any extent to stop positive change in this country, thinking and telling people that all change is bad and only people that talk about change are bad people but they are the only people who can initiate the change." [1999 Official Hansard Report, page 970]

There are two interpretations that can be made. There is no doubt in my mind that he is speaking in reference to the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning. But, giving him the benefit of the doubt, he did say "there are those people who would go to any extent to stop . . ." and he did not single out the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning in that part of it.

But I want to call to the attention of this honourable House that under Standing Order 35(3) "It is out of order to use offensive or insulting language about other members." Suborder (4) says, "No member shall impute improper motives to another member."

I want to caution all members. We must be very careful when speaking. I can only be guided by what is written. I cannot be guided by intent. I have discussed this with the Fourth Elected Member for George Town and he assured me that he was speaking generally. But to me, the inference is to the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning. Giving him the benefit of the doubt, I caution him—say you are speaking generally when you are speaking generally, and do not speak to an individual person.

So, please continue.

Dr. Frank McField: If I must be hung, Mr. Speaker, then I prefer to be hung.

The Speaker: Please repeat that. I didn't hear you.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, what I am saying is that if you are saying that I was talking to the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, then it follows that you are saying that you are agreeing with the Honourable Minister's position, if I was talking to the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

The Speaker: I said that I was giving you the benefit of the doubt. But I asked all honourable members—and I am speaking generally to all honourable members of this House. . . when speaking be very careful and enunciate what your intention is.

Please continue with your debate.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99 AS AMENDED

REFERENDUM LAW

(Continuation of debate on motion as amended)

Dr. Frank McField: Thank you.

In summing up my arguments on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 Referendum Law, I would like to state that in my debate I was not questioning at any point your ruling in regard to my use of the concept of ultra vires. I know that yesterday I might have said "virus" but I don't believe that this is at all a germ.

I believe that if I am given the opportunity to show that there is a difference between constitutional change and constitutional amendment, and that what the Minister of Education has done is cloud the waters; bind the two concepts together in such a way that it would be very difficult for the listening public to distinguish between our arguments here in regard to the fact that some of us believe that an amendment should not have been made to this [motion] to suggest that constitutional amendment could only be made by way of us holding a referendum . . . I believe that that particular concept should be with regard to constitutional change and that constitutional change has to do with the change in the link between the Imperial Parliament and the subordinate Parliament.

Therefore, when the Minister of Education got up yesterday to recite from page 9 of the White Paper, he read with regard to constitutional status. He said “What degree of interest was there in changing the territories’ constitutional relationship with the United Kingdom? Apart from some limited reference to Crown dependency status, similar to that of the Channel Islands, there was no wide-spread interest in the change in the current Constitutional relationship.”

When he read page 9 he was really talking about the fact that the people of the Cayman Islands and the people of the British Dependent Territories, on a whole, do not desire that there be any change in the constitutional relationship between the Imperial Parliament and their local legislatures.

When we read on to page 13 (and I have already mentioned this point), we find that the Imperial Parliament itself has an interest. It is my contention that their interest in good government and political stability is being interfered with by reason of this motion. In fact, this motion interferes in the constitutional amendment process, and it therefor interferes with the Imperial interest and is ultra vires the Constitution.

My position is based upon the understanding that the Imperial Parliament still treats its dependencies on matters of Imperial concern as subordinate to the Sovereignty of the Imperial Parliament. According to a Constitutional expert, A. V. Dicey, “. . . the veto of the Crown was used occasionally to prevent colonial legislation which, though approved by the people of the colony and by the legislature thereof, might be opposed to the moral feeling or conviction of Englishmen.”

We have seen situations like that where the British Parliament has basically disallowed certain laws on our statute books. Capital punishment is a good case in point. I would just like to read briefly from a passage here.

The Speaker: Quote your source please.

Dr. Frank McField: My source is the Introduction to the Study of the Law of the Constitution, by A. V. Dicey. This is the 1925 Edition. I have a copy here of what I am reading to be laid upon the Table of the House.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Dr. Frank McField: “What is the difference between the relation of the Imperial Parliament to a self-governing colony such [as] New Zealand, in 1884, and the relation of the same Parliament to the Dominion of New Zealand, in 1914?” This is basically an example of a case.

“Before attempting a direct answer to this inquiry it is well to point out that in two respects of considerable importance the relation of the Imperial Parliament to the self-governing colonies, whether called Dominions or not, has in no respect changed since 1884.

“In the first place, the Imperial Parliament still claims in 1914, as it claimed in 1884, the possession of absolute sovereignty throughout every part of the British Empire; and this claim, which certainly extends to every Dominion, would be admitted as sound legal doctrine by any court throughout the Empire which purported to act under the authority of the King. The constitution indeed of a Dominion in general originates in and depends upon an Act, or Acts, of the Imperial Parliament; and these constitutional statutes are assuredly liable to be changed by the Imperial Parliament.

“Parliament, in the second place, had long before 1884 practically admitted the truth of the doctrine in vain pressed upon his contemporaries by Burke, when insisting upon the folly of the attempt made by the Parliament of England to exert as much absolute power in Massachusetts as in Middlesex, that a real limit to the exercise of sovereignty is imposed not by the laws of man but by the nature of things, and that it was vain for a parliamentary or any other sovereign to try to exert equal power throughout the whole of an immense Empire. The completeness of this admission is shown by one noteworthy fact: the Imperial Parliament in 1884, and long before 1884, had ceased to impose of its own authority and for the benefit of England any tax upon any British colony. The omnipotence, in short, of Parliament, though theoretically admitted, has been applied in its full effect only to the United Kingdom.

“A student may ask what is the good of insisting upon the absolute sovereignty of Parliament in relation to the Dominions when it is admitted that Parliament never gives, outside the United Kingdom, and probably never will give, full effect to this assertive and more or less fictitious omnipotence. The answer to this suggestion is that students who do not bear in mind the claim of the Parliament to absolute Sovereignty through the whole of the British Empire, will never understand the extent to which this sovereign power is on some occasions actually exerted outside the limits of the United Kingdom, nor, though this statement sounds paradoxical, will they understand the limits which, with the full assent, no less of English than of colonial statesmen, are in fact, as regards at any rate the Dominions, imposed upon the actual exercise of the theoretically limitless authority of Parliament.”

Mr. Speaker, that’s pretty long. The point is that I am not a lawyer, and I am not a student of Constitutional Law, and I don’t know that many of us here in this Parliament are lawyers or students of Constitutional Law. I don’t know how many persons in our society who are Caymanian and lawyers or students of Constitutional Law who are interested in the outcome of this debate.

But one thing I believe is that my attempt indicates that the question under consideration is not a simple one. It is not as simple as us getting up in here and moving a motion to enact a law that I believe would cause the interest of the Imperial Parliament to be impeded and as a result of that I believe would be ultra vires the Constitution.

I have said that in limiting this we should also realise that in section 38 of the Constitution the Governor has reserve powers. How would this particular piece of legislation affect the reserve powers of the Governor to act according to the instructions from Her Majesty's Government? In other words, if the Governor were instructed tomorrow to move forward and strike from the Constitution the fact that Ministers must gain his permission to leave these islands, and if Her Majesty's Government felt that this was a rational and expedient amendment, what would the process then be to allow this to take place? Does the motion, as amended, not interfere with the supreme authority vested in the Governor by the Crown to govern Her Majesty's territory with her blessing and consent?

The part of the Constitution that refers to the powers of the Legislative Assembly, section 29, says that “Subject to the provisions of this Constitution, the Governor with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly may make laws for the peace, order and good government of the islands.” So, with advice and consent he makes the laws. We don't make the law—we advise and we consent with. It's a process. We need to understand a little bit more about the process. We need to understand a little bit more about the constitutional basis upon which we arrive at the process. What is the British Constitutional position?

What would a Member of the British Parliament say in regard to this particular piece of legislation? What would he or she understand by the concept of Parliamentary Sovereignty? If the British Parliament is Sovereign, and our Parliament is subordinate, then it goes to say that we are not a process complete in ourselves.

I know that in the amendment we have the words “and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment . . .” Now, to use the words “recommended for amendment” that sounds like all we are doing is recommending it. But we know that when the Legislative Assembly recommends, it recommends by way of a formal motion. So a formal motion in the Legislative Assembly is more than a recommendation. The word “recommend” is a weak word to use in this context because that recommendation has the power of the law given to this Legislative Assembly by way of the Constitution. So when the Legislative Assembly actually recommends, it is not like I am recommending somebody to someplace for a job. The word “recommend” within this particular context has a completely different implication.

It would appear that if in the year 2000 there were persons willing and able to put up a team of persons to run in the next election, and part of what they wanted to have as their political manifesto was the amending of the Constitution—not change the Constitutional links between Great Britain the Imperial Parliament and here, but change the way in which the government actually functions here . . . not in terms of the relationship of parent to child, but in relationship to the child's activities—and they decided, for instance, that they wanted to remove something from the clause that they feel might impede achieving their objectives, they would not be able to put it in their manifesto and when they came into the Legislative Assembly be able to do it without going back to the people by way of a referendum.

This suggests to me that this type of motion is a very powerful motion indeed; a very potent motion if it can prevent something from happening—even when you go out and win by way of campaigning to the people. You win a mandate to do something and this motion still prevents you from doing it.

This is no ordinary motion. This is no ordinary debate. This is no ordinary time. It is significant because it has the ability to impact the Constitution and the power which the Constitution gives persons once they are elected under the Constitution. If it's going to impact the power you have once you are elected under the Constitution, then it means that it impacts the Constitution.

If it's impacting the Constitution, it is changing, altering the Constitution. The question again is perhaps a point of opinion, how significant the impact would be. But those of us who have been with this particular amendment for some time are beginning to realise that the specific repercussions which it could have in regard to political behaviour and practices in this country could be so significant that it would have to be considered as a major amendment to the Constitution.

The original motion, the first part of the amended motion says that the government should seek to get approval from the people to amend the Constitution in order to allow the people the right to initiate a referendum. But, this now is not talking about amending the Constitution in order to place this particular part of the amendment in the Constitution. Why isn't this going to be placed in the Constitution? Because maybe if this were placed in the Constitution the people who would be responsible for placing it in the Constitution (that would be the British Government) would find that is, in fact, ultra vires the Constitution. It contradicts principles and powers that already exist in the Constitution.

It is beyond its authority. It is asking for the people to have an authority that in a Dependent Territory the people only have as a result of Her Majesty the Queen. The people have no final authority except by way of the generosity of Her Majesty the Queen. We are not a federal country. We are not a republic that was established by way of the people getting together and constituting themselves, and assembling themselves into a nation and getting their rights as a result of the Constitution. We enjoy our rights and privileges—all of us—as a result of the generosity of Her Majesty the Queen.

I think that I am not a constitutional expert. I don't read constitutional books. But I happened to have had that little book because someone gave it to me some time ago and I went through it. I forgot about most of it and just decided at this particular point to try to at least make sure that my argument in the final analysis was not just about politics. It's about the legality issue as well.

I am going to ask whether or not this is the time to be doing this particular major piece of alteration without going to ask the people if this should be the case. I believe that this is going to be something that we are going to regret if this happens. I know it's going to be happening because the government has the numbers. I don't think it is fair that our democracy has come to the point where three members—who were not elected—who did not have to go through that process; three members who will be spared that process come November of the year 2000—might now be able to act as the final decision-making persons for an act that is political.

That is totally political because I believe that the intention of the Minister of Education is different than the intention of the First Elected Member for George Town who brought this motion. I believe that the intention of the First Elected Member for George Town was to amend the Constitution and that the intention of the Minister of Education is to prevent the Constitution from being amended.

The fact that two opposite desires must co-exist in one motion when we have so much time to come here and do these things; the fact that no notice could be served to our people; the fact that this will go through like a lightning bolt and by the time we realise the consequences of this it will be too late . . . if constitutional issues from the point of view not of constitutional change (which means to change in the relationship between the mother country and us) . . . We are not talking about that because most people can perceive how that change is and why it is not desirable to change. But we are talking about perfecting a document that is a working document to allow us to be able to improve that.

If that is an issue as we understood that should be dealt with by constitutional experts, people who have expertise in these issues. Why are we putting issues like that out for referendum? Why? These are not the types of issues that you bring to a referendum. You bring to the referendum the issue of whether or not you should have constitutional change but not with regards the technical details of the Constitution because that is something that lawyers and constitutional experts should be dealing with.

I think I have already indicated my weaknesses even in trying to communicate the concept that A. V. Dicey in his Law of the Constitution is trying to impart to us. So what I am going to leave honourable members with is the fact that the issue of the Constitution is a very complex issue. I do believe that this is one of the reasons why the Minister of Education never really easily suggested constitutional amendments. He understood from the very beginning the importance of all principles working together within the Constitution and not contradicting one another.

But the mere fact that the constitutional aspects are so complex means that we should not solve the issue of whether or not we have constitutional change by way of throwing it into the political arena for persons to kick around on an emotional rather than a rational basis. Who would be prepared to carry this to the people if there was a need for it? Would the Government be willing to do that? Would the Government be looking for the same results that it prophesied that it wanted? How will it be organised? Would the Government, therefore, have more resources than people outside to dictate and determine the outcome of the referendum? Would they?

Would the Chamber of Commerce (if it got involved) have more power to do so than smaller people or individual people? Who would win in the public sector, in the private sector with regards this issue if we threw it out there and allowed it to be decided in the private sector? Who would be the persons who would be able to mount the resources to create the perception to arrive at the conclusions that they wished? Who would be those people? I was just reminded because we think that when, for instance, Hitler wanted to make a war, he asked his people if they wanted total war and they said yes, because they had already been programmed to say yes, to what he asked.

Honourable members here mentioned the situation in several countries with regards these referendums and there is no more correct indication of what is good for the country. The question with regards the referendum before it was being done gave the people a possibility to also initiate the referendum just like the elected members. But not because I go along with that, not because I think that it is a perfect system of arriving at a perfection conclusion and I have said this.

I want the Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning, when he gets up to remember to deal basically with some of these questions that I have. To see if he can convince me to vote along with him because I would like to vote with the Government again, as I feel lonely already being away from them. I cannot get too far away from the gentleman because when he smiles it makes me feel good somehow.

I have to get back close to the government, so if he can persuade me by his legal and political arguments—because we know he is good at the legal and political arguments—if he could show me by way of constitutional theory and constitutional law why his amendment affects the interest of the Imperial Parliament and the rights and powers and the privilege of the Imperial Parliament, and why this motion is not ultra vires the Constitution, I should be very grateful.

If he does, I shall vote with him. If he does not, Mr. Speaker, I shall vote against it regardless of whether or not people say that I am trying to change the Constitution because I noticed that in 1992 he was involved with changes in the Constitution.

I have here the Minutes of Meetings of the Select Committee of Elected Members to Review the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1992. The names of the members who were present at the first meeting of the 19 December 1990 are listed, and the Honourable Minister was one of those persons.

The recommendation which was done in this Private Member's Motion—at the end said, "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House recommends that the implementation of any recommenda- tions for constitutional changes with the exception of the paragraph number 3 above, shall not take place without the changes being the subject of a general election." If he was agreeing to this in 1990, why does he change his mind now?

Why doesn't he still allow it to be the subject of a general election if it should happen? I would like to leave that on that honourable Member's conscience. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The floor is opened to debate. The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to give my contribution Private Member's Motion No. 11/99. First, I would like to go on record concurring with the first recital, in that there is, in fact, a growing compatibility with the referendum as it relates to Parliamentary sovereignty. Here in the Cayman Islands, we enjoy a system of representative government, but it is also recognised that the referendum is wholly consistent with Parliamentary sovereignty.

Mr. Speaker, today I am sure we would all agree that we live in a very complex world with many, many complex issues and equally complex resolutions and/or solutions. I also concur, Mr. Speaker, with the second recital of the motion which goes on to state that there is an increasing number of matters of national importance, which I believe demand widespread public participation in the decision-making process of our government.

Further, at a general election, we all know there are many, many different issues that are discussed, and it is not unusual, sir, for there to be a general mandate of these various issues as would be set out in one's manifesto. Nonetheless, Mr. Speaker, I believe that it is rare for a very clear, concise, and specific mandate to be given to the various members from a general manifesto at a general election especially as they relate to specific national issues.

I would therefore then submit that it can be argued that the vehicle of a referendum, if it is properly structured, has the potential of enabling this Parliament or indeed any other Parliament with a very authentic vote. It can be also argued, Mr. Speaker, that a referendum offers a more direct form of voter, public, or citizen participation. However, having said that, I believe that we should all take cognisance of the fact that such a vehicle also has the effect of increasing the influence of the more articulate in our community.

Our society has developed not only from a cultural perspective, but, indeed, also from a very technical perspective that has become quite sophisticated. Consequently, sir, there are many in our society that feel that the decision-making power of parliamentarians today should be infused with the democratic right that can be achieved by means of a referendum because it can infuse a much more democratic expression.

Mr. Speaker, the referendum on major national issues can be in my view a meaningful attempt to reshape the traditional decision-making process in order to better accommodate the various strategies of citizens' participation. Of course, the question will constitute what major national issues are, and I believe much time should be put into this area because this can lead to very controversial debates in trying to ascertain in the first instance what are the major national issues.

In today's modern society, Mr. Speaker, I believe that any reasonable and prudent parliamentarian would not want to deny an opportunity for our citizens to become involved. To do so would undoubtedly be viewed as a betrayal of the democratic process or indeed the democratic tradition. It is also a common view, Mr. Speaker, that a referendum is the only way in which Parliament can find out for sure exactly what the people want and be really specific in so doing.

I also understand, Mr. Speaker, and indeed fully respect parliamentary sovereignty, but I do not believe that a referendum (if it is not abused) is alien to the principle of parliamentary sovereignty. It is therefore my view that a referendum is wholly consistent with parliamentary sovereignty because Parliament, as we all know, can of course be bound by referendum. Although one would not expect all honourable members to go against the wishes of the people, they are nonetheless free to do so.

One of the characteristics, sir, of this Parliament is that it cannot divest itself of its sovereignty. The referendum cannot be held without parliamentary approval of the necessary legislation, nor, if a decision comes from the electorate, could that decision be made effective without us giving further parliamentary approval. It is also my view that any proposals for constitutional change, should be, and must be, subject to the wishes of the people here within the Cayman Islands through the means of a referendum.

The Constitution is the people's Constitution, and I believe that the people of the Cayman Islands should have a say and their wishes should be adhered to. They should have a say whether or not the Constitution should remain intact, whether it should be amended and/or changed, and what changes should be invoked. Because that is subject to further Parliamentary approval, hence the reason for the non-tautological argument that Parliament, indeed, is still supreme.

I submit, sir, that this decision, being a very fundamental right that we are seeking to give the people, should not be left to a handful of politicians—regardless of who they are—because at the end of the day the general elections, as the substantive motion sets out, do not give a very clear, specific mandate but indeed give a general mandate to each of us here in this Honourable House.

Mr. Speaker, before any referendum can be held, I also believe that questions dealing with principle and procedure will also have to be settled before we can move on. For example, whether there should be a simple majority or a certain percentage, or whether there should be two-thirds of the vote in favour of proposal. All these issues will have to be carefully considered in due course. Perhaps, sir, we should also be looking at whether or not it would prudent or practical to set up what I would term a Referendum Commission. I would submit that such a commission should be set up because it could be responsible for drafting the question that would be submitted to the people and also for the supervision of the conduct of any said referendum.

Mr. Speaker, participation in government is by no means a new idea. It has been around for many, many years and even in our little country, I believe this is probably the third motion that has come before this Honourable House dealing with public participation in government. However, it has often been blurred by our traditional representative form of government, that is, where the public was able to participate in government by the means of their elected representatives. Indeed, that has worked quite well for a long time. But, as we all know, the times have changed and there are much more pressures, both on the domestic front as well as on the international front, and the private sector and the community on a whole too has become much more busy. So it becomes more difficult from election to election to get the full input from the people. I believe that the vehicle of the referendum is a good way to achieve a clear mandate or a clear direction from the public.

Mr. Speaker, the amended motion in my view does not compound nor does it confuse the original motion; but I would respectfully submit that instead it extends this fundamental principle by, first, providing for full public participation in the decision-making process of the people's government.

Second, in principle the amended motion allows for the public to not only participate in the decision-making process by way of a referendum, which will be protected and entrenched in the Constitution—hence the reason the government thought it was necessary to amend section 29 of the Constitution by way of this motion so that this right would not be arbitrarily changed by politicians coming here afterwards—but indeed it would be entrenched in the Constitution. Much thought and consideration would have to be put into it before any change could be made because we felt strongly that the voice of the people should not only be heard but it should be protected in so doing.

Mr. Speaker, with your permission I would like to briefly refer to page 9 of the White Paper, which referred to the United Kingdom Overseas Territories, of which we know the Cayman Islands form a part thereto. It states, sir, as a matter of fact, that there was no widespread interest in a change in the current constitutional relationship.

Further, on page 12 of the same White Paper, it goes on to say that the UK has no intention of imposing independence against the will of the people concerned, which would indeed include the will of the people of the Cayman Islands. Since this, I would submit, is an express commitment on the part of the UK Government to the people of the Cayman Islands, then I would pose the question, What better way to ensure the wishes of the people of these islands as it relates to constitutional change except through the vehicle of a referendum?

No one could say that the wishes of the people were not adhered to or that there was a silent majority or that there was a general mandate. There would be a very clear indication of what the people want as it related to the Constitution of this country. A straightforward question would be put forward asking a specific [question] and requiring a specific response of either yes, or no.

Once this is done, parliamentarians will not have to rely on general mandates as has been done in the past. With general mandates . . . [and] being human beings, it is not usual, Mr. Speaker, for it to be tainted with subjective ideologies or even subjective interpretation of what the people would have put forward by way of a manifesto. I would submit, also, sir, that the new purported partnership, as was set out by the Right Honourable Robin Cook in the White Paper, was very clear and precise when it said it would not impose constitutional change against the wishes of the people.

I believe that UK cannot . . . neither should they go back on this express commitment and impose independence on us here within the Cayman Islands. There are also many other major national issues. For example, the gay issue, which I am sure that the people of the Cayman Islands would like to have a very specific and direct say in. And I would submit that the referendum perhaps would be the most suitable forum for this to be done as soon as the need arises.

Mr. Speaker, with these very brief and hopefully reasonable submissions, I would like to say that I wholeheartedly support the amended motion and I would like to make it absolutely clear that my support is two fold: First, based on my collective responsibility as set out under the Constitution but also, second, my commitment is of a personal nature. From a personal perspective, I can give these amendments to this motion, which was already passed, my full support and I would ask all honourable members to do likewise. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other honourable member wish to speak? I just wish to remind members that we are speaking to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended.

The Honourable Member for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to first look at the motion as amended then go on to deal with some of the questions that have been thrown out, and also clarification of [certain] areas. The original motion prior to amendment (or as amended but the unamended part) stated as follows: "WHEREAS there is growing compatibility of the referendum with the parliamentary representative system of government and it is also recognised that the referendum is wholly consistent with parliamentary sovereignty . . ." As the Minister for Community Affairs specifically stated that puts it beyond a doubt and I think destroys any argument put forward by the Fourth Elected Member from George Town that a referendum, whether in the Constitution or otherwise is wholly consistent with parliamentary sovereignty.

It goes on to state in the Motion: "AND WHEREAS an increasing number of matters of national impor- tance demand widespread public participation in the decision making progress; . . ." That too, is true. I support that.

The third says, "AND WHEREAS it is rare for a general election to be fought on a single main issue and the result of an election indicates, at most, an undifferentiated approval of a whole range of policies; . . ." Once again, Mr. Speaker, that is quite right of those three, and the following fourth one states, "AND WHEREAS only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance; . . ."

Now, everyone in this House, as I understand it, was prepared to support the original motion, of which those four paragraphs do not change. Let us look at what that establishes first. The first Whereas clause, the first recital, establishes that a referendum is consistent with parliamentary sovereignty. So, an argument that a referendum which allows the people of the country to have a say, which is used in countries such as the United Kingdom, and it is indeed in our Constitution, that that is against parliamentary sovereignty is incorrect.

It also shows, sir, that a general election is rarely fought on a single main issue. That is correct. Many times a general election is the result of many issues; sometimes several main issues are involved in it.

Lastly, the referendum is the way that the people can express their wishes to give a clear judgment on a single issue. So, the motion establishes that the best way to get the wishes of the people of any country is to take the issue back in a referendum. Now, if that is the best way to get the wishes of the electorate in a country, why, then, on the most important issue in any country—the changing of the Constitution of the country—it is the best method to get the people's view on the electorate. For the life of me, I cannot see how anyone who accepts that the referendum, as it says, makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue. . . how in the world can anyone then say you should not go back to the public before you change the Constitution of the country?

The most important, the most national issue that you can have in a country is the changing of the Constitution of the country. And, all that has been added to these general sweeping recitals that has sparked the controversy is the fact that one of the amendments said you should go back to the public and ask the people on specific changes to the Constitution—that is wholly consistent with the motion that has been put up.

Mr. Speaker, speaking generally, anyone who does not want to change the Constitution of the country behind closed doors has nothing to fear from this amendment. It says goes back to the public, ask them the specific changes to the Constitution. They will tell you in the referendum and then you make your recommendations from this Legislature to Her Majesty's Government requesting the changes or recommending the changes.

Now, it seems very clear that at least some of the members who abstained on my motion clearly understood what the motion itself meant. And the mover of the Motion, the First Elected Member for George Town, right at the end of his speech summed up what he understood the two amendments to mean.

On page 942, at the top, if I may just read this: "The original motion asked for us to do what is necessary to make the amendment to the Constitution to allow the people the authority to initiate a referendum." [Official Hansard Report, 10 September 1999]

The government wholly agrees with this, sir. Like I said, as that honourable member read, I first put that forward in 1989, which by the way I will show was actually voted against in 1989 by two of the people who now support this motion—one of them was the seconder of the present motion.

The First Elected Member for George Town went on to say, "The amended version that is being sought is saying if we want to achieve that, let's us not simply do it and let us ask the people if we can do it." Semantics as far as I am concerned but not worth fighting over.

"The second amendment, which is saying that the Constitution being what it is, let us take the opportunity, say from here on in, from henceforth and forevermore until another group of people want to be different, let us ensure that any change to the Constitution is done by seeking the advice of the people through referendum." [Ibid.] Totally correct. That is all that second amendment is doing.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, the amended part of our amendment uses the first half of what the First Elected Member [for George Town] put forward and the last part of the amended motion, which was an amendment. It says, "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance..." Not my words [but those of] the First Elected Member for George Town.

What we added, "...and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments . . ." there can be no doubt that at least some members of the backbench understand that what we are doing, to use the words of the First Elected Member [for George Town], reading again, "...from henceforth and forevermore until another group of people want to be different, let us ensure that any change to the Constitution is done by seeking the advise of the people through referendum."

Now, Mr. Speaker, anyone who represents the people of a country should never be afraid of going back to the people in a referendum and asking them what they wish to be done on a specific matter. Basically, the motion before amendment was saying that, generally, not just for the Constitution. But the way it was worded I submit was wide enough that any matter where you needed a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance, then you should go back to the public with a referendum. All the amendment did was to specify that the Constitution should be one of those national issues that you should go back to the public on.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, the Constitution of any country is the most important earthly document in it. It is the basis for this Legislature, for the Judiciary, for your high position as Speaker of this Honourable House. It is the basic document of democracy in a country. And the amendment that was put forward falls in my view within the principles set out in the original motion. The only thing that the government has asked in the amendment is to specify one of the national issues upon which a referendum should always be held.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the question in this Honourable House to any other member who is getting up to speak after this, whether in his or her view, he or she feels that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should be changed without a referendum. [It is] a very simple question. If the answer to that is, yes, then no one has anything to fear from the motion as amended. It is good democracy. In fact, all of this talk about transparency and accountability . . . how can you have accountability when there are people who are saying that you should not ask the public what their views are on changing the Constitution of the country? That's not transparency.

Transparency is lacking when members sit in that committee room in secret as has been done in the past—I am not referring to this Legislature, sir, and I will show that—and decide there to recommend to the United Kingdom to change the Constitution of this country and refuse to go back to the public in a referendum, or in a general elections, or anything else and recommend serious and very drastic and far reaching changes that would have been probably two out of the next three steps towards independence for this country inside a secret room. I know, Mr. Speaker, because I was in there!

I was one of a small minority who wrote a report and was laughed at when I tried to get the members of the Legislature to go back to the public before the Constitution was recommended for change. Mr. Speaker, I see a bit of laughing over there but let me just . . .

History is a funny thing, sir. Those who experience it appreciate it. I had the experience on more than one occasion (because this lasted over a period of time) of seeing some of the most major changes to this country in this little document that I am holding here, which was the report of the Select Committee of Elected Members to Review the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1972.

The amending motion that the government supports that says that before this type of recommendation can be made to the United Kingdom a referendum should be held to ask the people their views, is the only thing that will preserve democracy in the long term in this country. And it is the only transparent way to go. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that members who are prepared to stand in this House and say they are not prepared to go back to the people of the country on a referendum to get the public's views on changing the Constitution or on any other national issue that deserves it are not true representatives of the public. We are here to represent the public and we have a duty to consult the public whenever the Constitution of this country is being changed. And anyone who puts forward anything else, the people of this country had better think long and hard before they think of them as representatives again. That is my view, Mr. Speaker.

Now, in that committee room . . . and perhaps I merely will refer to just a few of the things in this, I don't want to spend a lot of time because this is now a public document, sir. It has been laid on the Table and it is the report of the Select Committee, and it has been used by other members here. The majority report, because there was a minority report attached to this that was signed in one part by [five] members—Mr. John McLean; Mr. John Jefferson, Jr; Mr. McKeeva Bush; Mr. Haig Bodden and me . . . just flipping through to get to the area of the referendum, which is the area I would like to deal with.

There were changes, for example, first, to drop the Chief Secretary's official position. And it goes on. I don't know if I am going to go into detail, but it dealt with the Public Service Commission and ensuring that the elected members were involved in that. It dealt with things like assignment of responsibility and it dealt with some interesting areas, such as, the appointment of a Chief Minister, the appointment of a Leader of the Opposition. It even created a Deputy Chief Minister with the other ministers being appointed by the Chief Minister or by the Governor upon the advice of the Chief Minister.

There was a section that dealt with this, and was read by the First Elected Member for—I am sorry. It comes after . . . it is listed under Other Matters Provision for Referenda. It says, "By majority consensus it is recommended that a new Constitution makes provision for holding referenda. A referendum shall only be held in regard to issues of national importance. Holding of a referendum should be subject to passing resolution in the Legislative Assembly by a majority vote of the elected members. A referendum shall be advised in scope only and the Legislative Assembly shall in due course pass a Referendum Law."

So, this was dealt with there, Mr. Speaker, and it came on the heels of a motion that had been put forward by me some two years before in 1989, which I will deal with shortly. But attached next to it is the dissenting statement of a minority of us trying to deal with things such as the independence of the civil service from political control and also, the rejection of the Chief Minister, the Leader of Opposition and all of that. This document is very important, Mr. Speaker, because with very rare exceptions (and I don't want to create controversy on this but this is a fact) . . . there may be two persons involved.

The government of day that put forward these recommendations to the United Kingdom was not able to retain its seat even in the Legislative Assembly. The total government lost its seat. One didn't run, sir, and when the United Kingdom got it . . . because these are only recommendations (unlike what has been said earlier) . . . neither am I trying to put forward any law in here that is ultra vires the Constitution, I will deal with that. But what happens in the process, is that the Legislature will recommend to the United Kingdom what changes should be done.

Amazingly, when the United Kingdom got this, they would not act on it and they said that it should be made an issue in the next general election, which is basically the way that the United Kingdom deals with this. I could pause here if you wish, sir, to take a break at this stage but I just realised it is nearly 4.00 p.m.

The Speaker: If it is the wish of the House, we can continue right on. Please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, this document is one that everyone here should remember who was involved with it. And there can be no doubt that the major issue and probably about the only issue (because there was very little difference in many respects [between] the government and the opposition) was the question of whether the country should move forward or not. In that election, the public of this country spoke loud and clear. The answer was, we don't want the change.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town—who signed the majority report with all of these wide-sweeping recommendations—was very fortunate to have run in the 1992 election in the company of the National Team. And we said clearly in the Manifesto that we would not appoint a Chief Minister and take these drastic changes. I think this is now history in that that honourable member (along with the [rest] of the National Team, more or less) was elected. But, I submit if an approach had been taken to move away from that honourable member (speaking generally) those who put forward serious changes to the Constitution against the wishes of the people, the people have a way of sanctioning them in the general election.

Now, the question has been asked over and over, why would we put forward that there should be a referendum before the Constitution of the country is changed. The answer, Mr. Speaker, is very clear. In 1991, the 1972 Constitution was taken into a Select Committee (of which the minutes have subsequently become public and I can say that). It was changed in some of the most drastic ways and there was no referendum, there was no general election. This document went off to the United Kingdom as the recommendations of the majority of members of that Select Committee. It is very clear . . . and this is why I use the word "recommendations." This uses "recommendations" in one part and it uses "proposals" in the other.

In paragraph 16 on page 5, it says, "The Committee submitted to the Commissioners, the preliminary recommendations for proposed constitutional changes, the afternoon of 10th January 1991," which reads, "Select Committee Submission to the Constitutional Commissioners." It says, "The proposal set out below reflects a majority of consensus of members' and individual opinions in views of members are reflected in the minutes of meetings." So, the question [is] why should we ensure that the Constitution of this country is never again recommended for change to the United Kingdom by politicians taking those decisions mainly behind closed doors?

If members are not going to repeat that, then they have no fear of telling the public, making a declaration that the members of this House now will [never] repeat what was or what could have been one of the darkest days in this country if those constitutional recommendations had been accepted against the wishes of the people of this country. They were not in line with the wishes of the people. There is no doubt about it. In the 1992 election, the people spoke loud and clear.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the arguments put forward against having a referendum to change the Constitution . . . several things have been put forward and I am just going to deal with them. From time to time, I may say who the members are. One Member mentioned crossing the t's and dotting the i's of the Constitution. Changes to the Constitution are always serious. It is never dotting i's and crossing t's. The United Kingdom procedure for changing a Constitution is like this: This very dark, gray book that I hold in my hand here, it's going to be for serious changes but in any event, Mr. Speaker, it's the Constitution of the country. If the people want to have their say (which I think they should have) then the referendum should cover it, either by the people initiating the referendum, which I wholly agree with.

I put it forward in 1989. In fact, I was the first person I believe to put forward the wide-ranging type of motion on the referendum. That was three years earlier. I don't really know what that said.

Much was also said about a fulltime politician and intelligent people. I believe that all members of this House work very long, hard hours as politicians. And it doesn't really give anyone, whether they are fulltime or over intelligent, the right to usurp the people's right to have a say in a referendum on whether a national issue should be put through, changed, or whatever.

I guess, speaking generally, maybe the definition of a fulltime politician may be one who has no other job. But that doesn't give a basic right to say that other people who have had other jobs in the past don't have as full a right to say . . . and that they don't work long hours. Many of us work—especially the Ministers and the Official Members—nights and weekends and put in many times far more time than people who spend the full day in a job. The statement that change is a necessity . . . Mr. Speaker, some change is a necessity, some changes are disasters. And the changes that are disasters are those made by people who feel themselves too big to consult the public on important issues. They do not represent the public in those circumstances.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town said a lot about transparency and accountability. But I submit that there is no transparency when a member expects to sit here, or sit in secret and change the Constitution of this country—

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER
(Misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Dr. Frank McField: I believe that the Minister is alleging that it is my intention to sit here in secrecy and change the Constitution of this country. That is misleading the House and the public.

The Speaker: I didn't—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am not going to say that. I think he is anticipating that I am going to go on to say something about him. I don't want any controversy on this. This needs to be kept above politics. I am not referring . . . I am just telling you now, because I don't want to waste time. I am not referring to the honourable member.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Okay, sir. Thank you.

The statements about transparency and accountability, there are those—speaking generally—who preach transparency and accountability, but they don't practice it. There are many people who promote something; they stand up, their words sound good, but look at their actions. The only way there can be true transparency and true accountability in this Legislative Assembly is to go back to the people with a referendum when it is needed to ask them 'Do you want us to change the Constitution in this respect?'

Now, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town has consistently said words to the effect that the last section of the motion is ultra vires, that the motion is going to impede the Imperial Parliament, . . . Well, it's the first time I have heard so much sympathy about the Imperial Parliament. Normally, the statements made about the Imperial Parliament are never sympathetic by some members of this honourable House.

Putting jokes aside, Mr. Speaker, what this motion is saying (and if it is read carefully it will come through) is that members of this honourable House should only recommend to the Imperial Parliament a change in the Constitution of the Cayman Islands after a referendum whereby the electorate votes for the specific amendments. That, sir, is not ultra vires anything. Anyone who believes that they represent the public, and that the public should have a right to tell members of this House what they feel on Constitutional changes or any other issue that goes up in a referendum has the right to do so. Nothing is ultra vires.

The second point is that this motion is not seeking to create a law which is ultra vires our Constitution or ultra vires the "Imperial Parliament." In fact, it has nothing to do with legislation. All that the last paragraph is saying is that members of this House should, before recommending the United Kingdom change the Constitution, go back and ask the public what they think. Quite frankly, anyone who thinks himself too big to do that has ceased to truly and fully represent the public of the Cayman Islands.

The reference to section 38 of the Constitution by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, . . . I have to deal with these in some detail sir, because these were dealt with in some very considerable length by the member. But section 38, which is "The Governor's Reserve Powers," is clear. Nothing that would be done by this motion will affect those powers. In fact, Mr. Speaker, you have already ruled on this. I am not even too sure why I am replying to something that was ruled out so many times. But it had been dealt with in depth, and perhaps the public should know the true legal position on it.

Reference was also made to section 29, which is the section that gives the power of the legislature to pass laws. There is no conflict with that either. In fact, I submit that this whole argument put forward by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town is one which confuses the public more than it clarifies anything because the points that were taken, such as these references to the Constitution and ultra vires, are just not so. And the public can accept that that is not the position because in effect the references by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town about a law being ultra vires the Constitution . . . this part of the motion doesn't deal with a law to begin with. So there is no law being recommended in this part.

Secondly, what is being done is merely that members here should not in the future recommend amendments to the Constitution until there has been a referendum.

The position is very simple and anyone can understand it. And it was so clearly put by the First Elected Member for George Town, he understands clearly (and I believe other members understand clearly) the choice is simple: You are either for allowing the people of this country to have their say in a referendum before you change the Constitution, or you are not. If they are not, then members should stand up and honestly answer the question: Are you for allowing the public of this country the right through a referendum before they change the Constitution, or are you prepared to change the Constitution without going back to the public? It's very simple. Two very simple questions, Mr. Speaker. Anyone can understand it.

But, Mr. Speaker, the issue is being clouded because there are those who are dancing and prancing and they don't want to answer that very simple question. I challenge the members who speak after to answer that simple question and to say so on the floor of this House. And to go further than that—

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, since the challenge has been taken up by the First Elected Member for George Town, let me ask that member if he is prepared to change the Constitution of this country without going back to the public on a referendum? To use his tactics, I will sit down and give the First Elected Member for George Town the right to stand up and tell me.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am not afraid to answer the minister's question, when he talks about "to use his tactics." But I don't think God is going to take away the breath from my life when I wind up the motion. I can assure him that I will not skirt the issue; neither will I twist it and bend it around. And the public will hear my truth

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That undertaking, that the honourable member will answer it in his reply, I accept. He is a man of his word and I am sure he will answer that. It's a very simple question: Is the honourable member who speaks at the time (not referring to the First Elected Member for George Town—whatever honourable member speaks) . . . just answer the simple question if he will change the Constitution of this country without a referendum. Or, will he change the Constitution of this Country without a referendum without going back to the people?

If the answer is, 'Yes, I will go back to the people in a referendum before I change the Constitution,' then—

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of clarification.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am not going to sit down for clarification, sir. The honourable member knows the last time he sat down and I got up, we got into an argument. I don't want to get into an argument, sir. So I am not going to sit down.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Going on, sir, and I don't really know why such a simple question upsets people so much, . . . anyhow, what I would like to do because this is a very important issue is to go on just briefly (because there are just about five minutes left) to look at a few other areas that have been raised.

The statement was made about being governed by referenda, which I assume is saying that the powers of this House under the Constitution . . . or, I don't know whether the member may have meant the "Government" when he said "Govern," . . . but what has been done here, . . . in any event the referendum that is now in the Constitution is one that any member of the House can initiate through a motion. I would like to go on to show tomorrow that if members are so minded to bring a referendum on a specific issue, then the government, or any backbencher under section 29(2) can then bring the law which will define the question.

Therefore, there is no question of governing by referenda because as it now stands under the Constitution, and there has been no move to change this process with the original motion, and obviously not with the amendment I made, it is for the holding of a referendum after there is a motion and a law passed. So at the end of that the results of that referendum would come back to the Legislative Assembly, and that's whether or not it's initiated, as the First Elected Member [for George Town] put forward, and as I did in 1989 and during those early days, and also in 1991, . . . whether or not it is initiated by the public or in this House, there is a process in here. But the referendum is not law that binds the Parliament or the country.

In other words, I have been told that in some states referenda can be binding. At least in Sovereign Parliamentary Democracies they are not binding.

I was just wondering if we were at the hour [of interruption]. Are there two minutes left to go?

The Speaker: We have about four minutes, according to this clock.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, with all the statements I am making, at least I am not abstaining on anything. I will deal with abstentions tomorrow, sir.

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: As the easy road out when one doesn't wish to make a decision.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, sir.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That minister does not have the ability to ever know what is on my mind when I make a decision whether that decision is no decision or not.

The Speaker: That's a statement.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I am allowed to finish, sir, I will make my point of order.

The Speaker: Go ahead.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What the minister has just said—and I know that in his reference he is referring to me—is trying to tell me why I abstained from a certain vote. And I am saying to him that he will never live long enough to have the ability to know what's on my mind. So he's misleading this honourable House.

The Speaker: Under what Standing Order are you moving your point of order?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, when you hear "misleading" sir, do you ask the rest of the members about which Standing Order? I said he's misleading, Mr. Speaker. If you don't accept it, make your ruling. I am saying that he is misleading the House with the last statement he made.

The Speaker: I cannot rule that as a point of order because he did not specify the First Elected Member for George Town.

Honourable Minister, please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I will move off that. I don't want to get into any arguments, sir, just to say that I am not referring to the First Elected Member [for George Town.] I am sorry he took it that way. I am not referring to him. I think this is too important to get into politics.

I think it is probably just about time, sir . . .

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 AM tomorrow.

The Speaker: Before putting the question, I have been asked by the Third Elected Member for West Bay to move a motion under Standing Order 11(6) a matter of importance. I have waived the two-day notice.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

RAISING OF PUBLIC MATTER Standing Order 11(6)

IMMIGRATION BOARD POLICY ON DEPENDANTS OF WORK PERMIT HOLDERS

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you for granting me permission to deal with this very important issue this afternoon entitled, Immigration Board Policy on Dependants of Work Permit Holders.

The Cayman Islands were established as a country on the Christian principles of deep faith and belief in God, respect for one's fellow man and the sanctity of the family. At the present time our Immigration Board Policies which were handed down by Executive Council do not allow work permit holders of a certain category to have dependants here with them attached to their work permits. The policy also does not distinguish ordinary work permit holders and those married to Caymanians who may have dependants who may wish to join them here in the Cayman Islands with the consent of the Caymanian spouse.

Many of these dependants, that is the children, are also born here in the Cayman Islands while their parents are working here in the islands on a work permit. As an elected representative, I have witnessed many heart wrenching incidents where persons on work permits, whether or not married to a Caymanian, are told by the Immigration Department and the Immigration Board that they have to send home or abroad their one month old child to some family member while the permit holder continues to work here in the Cayman Islands.

On many occasions, if the permit holder does not have someone overseas they can send the child to the work permit is cancelled which then not only causes an economic hardship to the permit holder, but the loss of services to their employer.

New policy to be considered by government: Mr. Speaker, I feel that at the time of the application for a work permit that the issue of dependants should be considered and should weigh heavily on the Board's decision on whether or not to grant the work permit. The policy on dependants should not be discriminatory in that privileges in respect to dependants are based on the type of work permit held. My experience indicates that families are as important to a waiter or waitress at a hotel as they are to an accountant who may be employed by a bank.

The policy in regard to work permit holders married to Caymanians: Whatever policy is established for dependants, special consideration must be given to requests for persons who are married to Caymanians especially when the request has the support of the Caymanian spouse.

Also, dependants are not limited to children, but include spouses of permit holders. Why should someone who is granted a work permit not be allowed to bring his or her spouse? I feel that if this were allowed we would have less marital problems here in the Cayman Islands caused by permit holders becoming involved with Caymanian spouses for companionship once they move to the islands.

Dependants who are born to permit holders while they are working here in the Cayman Islands should be allowed to remain with their parents here in the islands, at least until they reach school age.

The reason I feel so passionately about this issue is that just yesterday, one of my constituents, who is married to a young lady from abroad with an eight year old child which the couple wish to have live with them here in the Cayman Islands, was told that the wife could stay but that the eight-year-old must return home.

The Caymanian runs the risk of losing his entire family, who he loves deeply and has worked so hard to establish and, I might add, is financially capable of supporting. I trust that the government takes into consideration the concerns and injustices I have raised, and will take immediate action to change such an insensitive and inhumane policy as it relates to dependants of work permit holders. The new policy on dependants should be sensitive and fair and should promote the principle of a strong family.

In the case where the dependant is a child, it would be fair to require evidence that admission has been obtained from a school in the islands for the child to attend. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Immigration issues and policies have always generated debate as to their application, fairness and relevance to the particular jurisdiction. The Cayman Islands are no different in this respect, since decisions on Immigration issues in one form or another influence and impact us all.

Executive Council in issuing policy directions to the Immigration Board and the Chief Immigration Officer must always be mindful to strike a delicate balance between the needs of our community and our ability to adequately absorb and address the needs of the increasing numbers of persons who come to work and live in these islands. These decisions are not always easy, and everyone will not be pleased by the results.

On the issue of dependants of work permit holders, Direction 3 of the Immigration Directions (1998 Revision) allows for all holders of work permits, except domestic servants and unskilled workers, to have a ceiling of three persons to be admitted as dependants. Admittedly, no specific provisions are made for the dependants of persons married to Caymanians and I trust that this issue will be adequately addressed during the current review of our Immigration Law now before a Select Committee of the whole House.

The new policy which is proposed by the Third Elected Member [for West Bay] must also take into consideration the sheer number of work permit holders currently residing in the Cayman Islands, and the tremendous impact such a policy would have on our schools. Would we have to allow more domestic helpers in to care for those dependants? The same must be said of children born in the Cayman Islands to work permit holders who are not permitted to have dependants.

I am aware that both the Immigration Board and the Immigration Department work to ensure that both entities are working in tandem on this issue, and no separate permission to remain in the islands will be given by the Immigration Department where the family head is the holder of a work permit. The department is therefore ensuring consistency in the policy.

In any event, the Third Elected Member for West Bay can raise these issues when the Select Committee on the Immigration Law resumes shortly. Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that this honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM tomorrow morning.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The Speaker: There are no apologies this morning.

Item number 3 on today's Order Paper. Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers. Question 115 is standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 115

No. 115: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works who authorises travel, food and entertainment allowances for the United States sales and marketing staff of the Department of Tourism?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, Before I answer the question, may I just say that I have basically given an overall view on this area? for the benefit of members and the listening public to fully understand the context of this entire travel, food and entertainment allowance as it relates to the overall Department of Tourism operations world wide.

The answer: As part of the overall world-wide marketing and promotional activities of the Department of Tourism, there are occasions when it is necessary to provide a form of official entertainment to those individuals and/or organisations that have been supportive or that have the potential to enhance our own efforts to attract visitors to these Islands. These activities may take the form of trade shows, sales blitzes, or presentations which include breakfasts, luncheons or dinners, in addition to ongoing public relations and advertising programmes.

The responsibilities for the day-to-day administration of the overseas' activities of the Department are as follows: (a) In the case of the United States of America—the Director of US Sales and Marketing; (b) in the case of the United Kingdom and Europe—the Regional Sales Manager, UK and Europe; and (c) in the case of Canada—the representative agency retained by the Department of Tourism.

In the USA, depending upon the particular activity, the responsibility for providing official entertainment may be the particular regional sales manager responsible for the region in which the activity is taking place. In similar manner, such activities on the continent of Europe would be the responsibility of the particular representative agency retained by the Department of Tourism in the country in which the activity is taking place.

May I add, Mr. Speaker, just on that list—Germany, France, Italy, Spain, and the Benelux countries?

As a general rule, all planned marketing and promotional activities are contained in the Department's Annual Tourism Marketing Plan, which is the basis on which the Department's annual budget is prepared, given the flexibility to adjust and adapt to the inevitable changes in our variety of markets, as and when the needs arise.

All expenditures are subject to the Financial and Stores Regulations and to processing through the department's accounting section in Grand Cayman, and through the Treasury, and, of course, are subject to audit.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the case of United States of America, [did] the responsibilities for the day-to-day administration of the overseas' activities of the Department lie with the Director of US Sales and Marketing? Can the Minister state if in the Annual Tourism Budget there is a specific amount allocated for travel, food and entertainment expenditure?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer to that question is yes. It would be the under the votes dealing with official travel and subsistence for the respective regions.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state what that amount was in this last budget?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, sorry for taking so long. There is always a need to consult on some of these supplementaries.

In my previous answer to the supplementary, members would see that this amount would form part of the operational cost of offices in United States. We would have in our office the breakdown of that figure, which would indicate the operational cost for the US offices in some budgets. I cannot remember whether it is also the case with 1999. We have an operational cost and then we have an allocation by each regional office, be it New York, Houston, Miami or others. So, I think, subject to checking the accuracy of what I am saying, it is in the ballpark of about $2 million.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Is the Minister saying that the budget for travel, food and entertainment, those specific categories, is $2 million for the year? I don't think so. My question was limited to those three areas.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, there are two items normally found in the budget. One deals with the operational cost of the regional offices and district sales offices in the United States; and the other, being the salaries of those particular individuals who are directly employed by this government.

If we are going to ask specific questions about travel, food and entertainment, I would prefer to answer those in writing to any Member because it is a massive document and I don't have it with me. I am not trying to find an alibi; I am trying to make sure that I give an accurate answer.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if this is the way that the question is going to have to be answered, I am not so sure whether it is sensible to continue the line of questioning because the amounts are important with regard to making any discoveries as to the ceiling and such the like. So, perhaps I will ask one more supplementary and maybe the Minister can take it from there as to how we are going to proceed.

My line of questioning is to ascertain whether there are ceilings put on these types of expenditures based on a track record, or whether this individual who has the authority can deal with it as he or she pleases. What type of controls are in place with regard to what is considered reasonable amounts to be spent in this area during the course of the year? Surely, there must be some control.

I understand in the last paragraph of the answer what the expenditures are subject to, but for what I am asking now, I don't think that there is much relevance between the two. I am asking specifically how it is dealt with.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, to take a normal sort of routine, operational matters in the US dealing with promotions and/or entertainment, if it is the normal entertainment that had been done in the past, there should not be any hesitation on the [part of the] individual to sign off on it. If it is something that appears to be more than the ordinary, first of all that would certainly be something that needs to be cleared with the Department, and with the Ministry in some cases. So, there is some amount of discretion but obviously if you are going to go and do something that is far different from what we have done in the past, most of the time those promotions that we are talking about that would require additional sums of money would first be discussed with the Department of Tourism and in some cases the Ministry before we even proceed.

So there would be some amount of consultation before we get to the point where we are signing off on the individual cost.

Mr. Speaker, there is really no specific ceiling except that the provision in the budget itself, would give you the maximum that could be spent on any promotional activities for a 12-month period. I think, given the experience that we have had—and let's say this too because it may put some perspective on it: The Regional Sales Managers in Houston and in Los Angeles have been employed by us for twenty years. The Regional Sales Manager in New York has been employed by us for at least twelve years, maybe more. The Regional Sales Manager in Miami has been employed with us for approximately six years, maybe more. The Regional Sales Manager in Chicago was first a sales representative before she became the Regional Sales Manager. So she has been with us for six years.

[Inaudible comment]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am leading up to that.

So, the base of the promotional activities has a clear understanding of what is normal within a budgetary provision. If they want to have a special promotion for a particular activity, whether it happens in New York, or Chicago, or Houston, or Los Angeles, or Miami, they would work up the promotion by first beginning there, then coming to the Director of Sales and Marketing. If he is in doubt about his authority to carry it out, and if it is a special promotion, he would not do it on his own, he would consult with the Department of Tourism, and in some cases the Ministry would be consulted by the Department before we moved ahead with that particular promotion—it may require an additional sum in the budget that we had allocated to something else so it would mean shifting some of that money to cover this particular activity.

I have gone through all of that to say . . . and the Director of Sales and Marketing has been with us for probably eighteen months, but he is someone who was very much in the travel industry in the United States. He used to work for Certified Tours for a number of years. Actually, we recruited him from his own wholesale travel agency—not quite the right terminology but I think the public will understand what I am talking about. It is a wholesaler who deals with a sort of group activity and marketing of the product and deals through a travel agency. His particular agency has on more than one occasion won prizes at Cayman Islands marketing shows, which we put on every May. So he is well versed in the market in United States and in dealing with him over the past 12 to 18 months I have found him to be a person who uses his discretion, but knows not to go beyond the borderline and take authority on what he does not have.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister is in a position to give the House some idea of the cost of travel, food and entertainment, particularly for United States sales and marketing staff over the last year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, we cannot guess at this answer. There are two things I need to say: The question relates to the last twelve months or somewhere in the year 1998. I think we should come back with a written answer. I will also point out that I did answer a question in the House for a period of 1 January 1998 to May 1999—the total cost of operations in the United States. In those figures that we gave, there is a travel vote and a subsistence vote. And if you put those two together, I think we would all see what it is.

I cannot remember at the moment, off the top of my head, what the figure is. I am hesitant to give a figure to the House and to the public that could be labelled later on as misleading the House. I have no intention of doing that and that's normally why I say I would prefer to answer it in writing.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I appreciate the Honourable Minister's reply, and I will await a written answer. But there are a number of supplementary questions that were asked on the floor of this House over one year ago, and I now say to that particular Minister that there has never been any follow-up on them. That is the reason why members are a little bit reluctant in accepting written answers. But I will await his reply.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Let me just say that many times Ministers promise to give information, and some times it does not happen, but I think it is right for the Member who did not get what he was promised, to prompt us and say, 'Well, where is the letter?' because let's face it, many of us are doing a variety of things in our ministries and we don't always claim to be perfect. But I am not in any way casting any aspersions, I am just saying the bottom line is, if you don't get your answer, please tell us, 'You know, you promised me so and so, can I have it?' No problem!

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if in the accounting procedures regarding these three categories of expenditure there is a method allowing the individuals who actually sign off on the expenditure and incur the expenditure on behalf of the Tourism Department to know what expenses were allocated to certain individuals? Or is that not part and parcel of the procedure and it is just all put in the whole kit and caboodle?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, normally what happens is that the individual officer, be the Regional Sales Manager in New York, or any of the others that carry out a particular promotion or activity on behalf of the Government, would submit a claim with supporting documentation to the Department of Tourism. And that obviously follows through, subject to checking by the Department of Tourism, on to the Treasury. If it is cleared with the Treasury, the cheque is then issued to replenish their vote. That is really the process.

So, from the documentation you can actually see who is responsible for the claim and what activity was carried out on this particular occasion.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town. Two additional supplementaries.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if in the recent past there has been any notice of any excessive expenditure in these areas by the Director of US Sales and Marketing himself? And, if any question has been raised, whether this should be looked into because it seems to be over and above what it should be?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, quite honestly, I have not seen any. I have checked with my assistant who came this morning to help me—they don't know of any. So, my answer is, we don't know of any.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Minister has promised certain answers to a supplementary question in writing and those answers will probably evoke more questions. Perhaps, it is best at this point in time—obviously, we are not going to get any further with the line of questioning—to simply advise the Minister that there will be further questions on this matter simply to find out exactly what the circumstances are. And, if need be, they will come in the form of separate questions in November.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, moving on to question no. 116 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 116

No. 116: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works (a) if the Pedro St James project is now in full operation; and (b) If there is an ongoing promotional advertising programme for the project.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer also is in two parts: (a) The Pedro St James National Historic Site has been in full operation since December 1998.

(b) Dealing with the promotional advertising programme for the project. There are ongoing promotions and special advertising programmes in place to continually promote the Pedro St James site. Scheduled cruise ship passenger tours visit both Pedro and the Botanic Park on a daily basis. The site is also promoted in major local publications such as, Horizons (Cayman Airways Limited in-flight magazine); What to do in Cayman; Destination Cayman; Key to Cayman; Britannia; and the Cayman Islands Tourism Web Site.

All special and major events are advertised in the Caymanian Compass.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if in the annual budget subsidy for the Pedro St. James Project there is a specific amount for advertising and promotion? And, if there is, what is that amount? Can the Minister state since January of this year, what portion of that amount has been spent?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The allocation being a part of the subsidy to the Pedro St. James . . . my recollection is that it's around $25,000—it could be $35,000 in that subsidy forming part of the advertising and promotional part.

The subsidy is somewhere in the range of $600,000. What I am saying is that of that amount, about $25,000 to $35,000 is dealing with advertising and promotional activities.

May I just go on to say that some of these items that have been mentioned as the advertising and the publication . . . some of it had it paid by the Department of Tourism. Because it is a block vote (and I think we all understand what a block vote is), I don't have the detail the Member is asking [for] today. When we track how much of the $25,000 or $35,000 is spent . . . I don't have that with me but if he wishes I can undertake to provide in writing to him.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister then say how is it possible to be giving this Honourable House information with regard to expenditure and income with the operation of the Pedro St. James if the Tourism Department is paying some of its bills?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, there have been some arrangements from quite some time ago, probably early 1997 that the Tourism Department has assisted with. They not only assist Pedro St. James, they assist all of the accommodations and water sports operators in the Cayman Islands. What was asked specifically about the expenditure of Pedro St. James and the income, we are relating that to what was actually paid for by Pedro St. James, and that is the only honest answer I can give today.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister would say whether the business at Pedro St. James is improving and what type of entertainment is being held there?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The activities at Pedro St. James are increasing. Pedro St. James is a popular site for weddings, including cruise ship weddings. There is now a new manager, who I spoke about yesterday or Monday. There is a new manager of the café, it's a local person who provides local cuisine, and much more activity is going on in that area than in the past. There are cruise ship passengers touring the site. We have other ground operators and the cruise ship lines. I have spoken to the Vice Presidents of several of the cruise ship lines that visit Cayman with a view of promoting tour packages from the ship to Pedro St. James and to the Botanic Park. So far, the response is positive.

So, I believe we are getting on with the proper promotional activities as well as seeing the results of those activities now and in the future.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Getting back to the question regarding expenditures for the promotion of the Pedro St. James project being paid directly by the Department of Tourism and not having any specific records . . . Does the Minister recognise that this procedure is incorrect, to say the least? And does he intend, this having been aired, to make an attempt so that whatever area (although we are speaking about the Pedro St. James area now) falls under his ministry there is some methodology whereby proper expenses can be accounted for in these various areas?

Obviously, as of now it is impossible to truly determine what something is costing to operate. So, could the Minister make comment if this is going to be left as it is? Or is anybody looking into it? Or if anybody recognises that it should be like that or is it that they are just satisfied, that's fine and it is going to go on just like that?

The Speaker: Before calling on the Honourable Minister to answer the question, would you move a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) that Question Time can continue beyond 11:00 a.m.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am pleased to move the suspension of the relevant Standing Order to allow other questions to be answered and also to allow other supplementaries to be put.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) have been suspended.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Question Time continuing. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I will just crave your indulgence for a few minutes. It is not just today that I have been in the Government, and I have been in the financial area of Government. I made that point to say that I witnessed the establishment of the Port Authority. I witnessed the establishment of the Civil Aviation Authority. I witnessed the establishment of the Water Authority, among others. In the beginning, they never paid for every relevant expenditure that you could address to that particular statutory authority.

It's like having a child. It takes a little while for it to grow up. It needs some nurturing. But the objective is to steer it in that direction where it first pays all operational costs, salaries and other types of operational costs—the first objective. The second objective is to pay for not only all operational cost but all relevant statutory costs as well. When we have achieved that objective, we then have a proper allocation of expenses and truly identical to any kind of operation that you would have in any part of the world, whether it is the private sector or public sector. That is the direction that we are taking with Pedro St. James.

It officially opened on 5 December 1998. This is ten months afterwards, and we are moving in the direction to ensure that we increase the income of Pedro St. James and the Botanic Park—in other words, the Tourism Action Board—so that we can breakeven on operational expenses, move to the next stage, where you have additional income over expenses to allow for payment of the relevant statutory expenses. So that is the direction we are heading and will move with that as quickly as we possibly can.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Regardless of the analogy that the Minister makes, it doesn't change the fact that it should be considered necessary to be able to account for all expenditures for whatever—whether it is a department or whether it is the Pedro St. James Project. And if he is talking about comparing that to a child, by the time the fifth child is born, the mother should be able to handle it better than the first one!

Anyway, the next question that I have with regard to this Pedro St. James Project is the advertising and promotion. Can the Minister outline exactly who or what department is responsible for coming up with the types of promotion and the type of advertising that is being done? Has there been any sort of assessment made as to what will bring about the best results with regard to spending money on promotions?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, answering the latter part of the question first . . . in my view, the best results would come from what happens in the harbour here, from January through December of any particular year. If we have almost 900,000 cruise ship passengers, and we can get a percentage of that to tour the Botanic Park and Pedro St. James, I think that is ideal. And that is what we are headed for.

Now, there are two possibilities: you can go and set up a marketing operation and spend another $120,000 and produce the same results. If I could use my own influence to cause this percentage of the 900,000 cruise ship passengers to go to Pedro St. James and the Botanic Park—if we are talking about cost effective, I think that's the better way forward. That's the direction we are heading.

So, we have Pedro St. James on the Cayman Islands Tourism Web Site, meaning anyone in any part of the world can call us up, see what's available and to understand that when they visit the Cayman Islands, this is an interesting facility to visit and to experience while here.

Those who are travelling to us from Miami or Houston by Cayman Airways can look in the Horizon magazine, which is on board the aircraft from every route, and see our advertisements. If you are travelling by Delta or American [Airlines], you can view it in Destination Cayman.

My view, Mr. Speaker, is that it is more important to obtain the results than it is to spend a lot of money on a marketing programme with somebody representing you. If we feel that we have the wherewithal to accomplish it, that's the route I am going to take. And I do feel that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Minister needs to understand that I recognise right now that I am certainly not in a position to be trying to raise a child—that is, his responsibility! But I wasn't suggesting how he should do it. So, it's fine the explanation he has given.

Mr. Speaker, regarding the arrangements with the cruise lines, can the Minister explain to us the cruise ship passenger tours? I am assuming these are package tours, can the Minister state what these arrangements are at present? How long do they go on for? Or is it just an arrangement that there is no fixed contract with time limits or anything like that and are there any plans to attempt to extend these packages to possibly other cruise lines if all of them are not involved at present?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Dealing with the latter part of that question, I apologise if I did not make that clear. But we are working diligently with the relevant persons of all the cruise lines that call on Cayman in order to have the sale of packages on board for those passengers to visit both Pedro St. James and Botanic Park.

Normally, we have an annual contract with the tour operators, which means that at the end of that contract, the contents of the contract can be reviewed.

The Speaker: No further supplementaries? We will move on to Question no. 117, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 117

No. 117: Miss Heather D. Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works (a) to advise if the Spotts Beach jetty, which was destroyed by Hurricane Mitch last year, was insured; and (b) are plans in the works to have it rebuilt.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Yes, the Spotts Beach jetty is covered under the existing Government insurance "all risk" programme.

Plans are being finalised to rebuild the Spotts Beach jetty along with the South Sound Cemetery jetty and the East End jetty, all of which were destroyed by Hurricane Mitch.

SUPPLEMENTARY

The Speaker: Supplementary, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Honourable Minister for that answer. I am sure he is aware that this was indeed a welcome facility and the frequent visitors look forward to seeing it replaced. Can he give us a specific date?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: I will repeat the question. I said to the Minister, I would like to thank him for the answer and I am sure he is aware that this was indeed a welcomed facility and the frequent visitors look forward to seeing it replaced. Can he give us a specific date as to when it will be replaced?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My apologies, I was having a little chat with my colleague because in the answer I did not mention that the jetty in Little Cayman is also going to be replaced together with the others. My apologies on that.

I want to thank the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town for her supplementary question. I don't have an exact date to give her [but] what I give her is my assurance that I am going to use all my influence to make sure it is done as quickly as possible.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we are moving on to Question No. 118 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 118

No. 118: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works what were the personnel changes in the United Kingdom's Department of Tourism within the past twelve months.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In May 1999, the United Kingdom's Regional Sales Manager resigned and a new Regional Sales Manager was recruited shortly thereafter.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, when the Honourable Minister mentioned "recruited," I take it that that means that the replacement came from outside the organisation. That being the case can the Honourable Minister tell the House what procedures are in place to ensure that continuity is maintained and that there were no significant change in objectives that would affect the market in such a way as to lead to a decrease in the traffic?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, may I begin by saying I have always been a strong supporter of promotions from within the organisation, if it is at all possible. We realised that to implement this feeling, which we have, we also need to be certain that the individuals within have the ability to rise to that level when these resignations do come to the surface.

We have in that office two sales representatives who have been with us for a relatively short period of time, probably in most cases, with one of them not more than about four years. So if the individual within did not measure up in all our judgments as being in a position at the moment to rise to that level, perhaps some years down the road he could be. What we were successful in achieving [was] a recruitment of a gentleman who appears to have substantial experience in similar operations such as ours as he was the regional sales manager or something of that title for another country in this world of attracting people who travel.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House what is the staff complement of this office in the UK?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The staff complement is five and maybe I should have added too (about this gentleman whom we recruited) that we also gave publicity to it in the Caymanian Compass not very long ago.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, would the honourable Minister tell the House how the recruitment was done? Was the interview conducted by any member of staff from Cayman's Department of Tourism or Ministry and if so, how many? And where were these interviews conducted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, let me thank the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town for his supplementary.

This post was advertised in the relevant publication and/or newspapers in the United Kingdom, and we actually got flooded with applications, to put it frankly. The applications were sent to Cricket Square and from Cricket Square on to the ministry. We then decided on a short list of individuals whom we thought warranted an interview.

May I back up to say that the office in London also made recommendations to us?

Having settled on the number of persons whom we would interview, these individuals were interviewed at the Cayman Islands UK Office in London using the Conference Room. They were interviewed by the Permanent Secretary of Tourism, the Director of Tourism and myself.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to Question No. 119 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 119

No. 119: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture to provide a progress report on the Bodden Town playfield project.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Work is approaching completion on the Bodden Town playfield project. The grass on the field, which has caused the main delays to the project, has strengthened significantly and it is anticipated that it will be playable in late October. Work on modifications to the Civic Centre washroom facilities to provide changing facilities for the football pitch commenced at the beginning of August and are approaching completion. They are expected to be completed by the end of September. Work on the landscaping to the car park has commenced and the local community has agreed to assist with the planting.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House the scheduled time for completion for this project, and also, whether there have been any cost overruns as a result of the project running beyond the scheduled completion time if that has been the case?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: The anticipated completion date as provided by Public Works was the end of July. And, as it relates to overruns, it is my information that the total expenditure as of 8 September this year was $985,577. The final cost is estimated at $1,150,000 and this has increased over the previous reported expenditure to allow for the inclusion to cover the three bleachers and the construction of a hard court. However, it is still below the March 1997 estimated project cost of $1,188,175.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: The Minister has said that there have been problems with the grass. Can she say if the laying of the irrigation lines was responsible for causing some delay?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, I am informed that the under-field irrigation system, because it was the first of its kind to be installed here in Cayman, proved to be more complicated to install than was originally anticipated by the Public Works Department.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could give the House a breakdown of the total water cost on this project in Bodden Town, payable to the Water Authority.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: The staff of the ministry and I have those figures in our possession, but we can undertake to provide that in writing to the Honourable Member.

The Speaker: The Elected Member from North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I look forward to receiving the written reply. My other supplementary, Mr. Speaker, . . . in June when the question came on the North Side playing field, there was no intention at that time to provide covered seating for either the Bodden Town playing field or the Old Man Bay playing field. My question is: Whose decision was it now to cover the Bodden Town seats and if there has been a decision taken to offer the same thing to the Old Man Bay playing field, that of covered bleachers?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am reliably informed that there are estimates being put in now for the North Side bleacher covers and I am informed by my Permanent Secretary that the plans for covered bleachers in Bodden Town were in there from the inception.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, in June when this question arose, we could not locate those plans that said covered seating was there because the same thing was in the original plans for the Old Man Bay playing field. My question is: How can we now come to the House and say we have found the original plans for Bodden Town but we haven't found the original plans for the district of North Side and we are now proposing new plans for them?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am informed that the position is that the original plans for Bodden Town—which the ministry has found—included the covered bleachers; and the plans that were found for North Side do not. But the ministry agrees with the Honourable Member that it is a necessity, seeing the climate in which we live, and we have put forward estimates to do the same in the year 2000 Budget, subject to approval.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say if the funds provided in the 1999 Budget to complete the Bodden Town facility included covered bleachers? If not, is there a supplementary provision being done to do this?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: It is my understanding from the information I have just gotten that it was included, sir.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: I wonder if the Honourable Minister could give us an update on the basketball hard court as to whether this will be resurfaced as well.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: It is my understanding that the funds are provided for this year are only sufficient to do an overlay of the existing hard court. But because it is the ministry's intention to try to put walking or running tracks around all of the football fields in the districts that do not presently have them, the decision was not taken to put in funds for a complete new court. Public Works is now looking at the matter to see whether the track would infringe on the existing court, and if that is the case, then we would have to look at a new court which means we would have to get more funds in the year 2000 Budget as there are not sufficient funds for a new court at this stage.

The Speaker: The Elected Member from North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, this is a follow-up to my last supplementary. I am at a total lost to understand that the cost of covered bleachers for the Bodden Town playing field was included in the 1999 Budget, when on a supplementary [question] in this Parliament in June, the answer was that there was no intention of putting covered bleachers at the Bodden Town facility. How can I now be told that the amount of money that is needed to cover the bleachers in Bodden Town is included in the 1999 Budget? The Minister's information that she has been given in June, or today, is misleading.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am glad the Member made a distinction that the information I was giving was misleading rather than I was misleading the House because I have no intention of doing that at any time during my tenure in this Honourable Parliament. Suffice it to say, the information which I have received from my Permanent Secretary and senior staff is that it was always the intention to include covered bleachers at the Bodden Town playing field and that there is sufficient in there to do that.

I gave a commitment because I, like the Member, agree that not only North Side but Cayman Brac or any other field that we put, because of the climate in which we live, there should be covered bleachers. And once I am given the money, once it is put in there, I am more than happy, subject to the work force resources of the Public Works Department, to accommodate any reasonable request from any honourable Member in this House, sir.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I would request of the Minister an undertaking that when the play field is ready to be opened, that her ministry would contact the football playing fraternity in Bodden Town so that the opening ceremony, whatever it may be, can be something which is conjointly done between the ministry and the football playing fraternity as I believe that some members in this fraternity have some ideas which could serve to complement what the ministry is planning.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to thank the honourable Member for that input in that regard. I am informed that the ministry has already, that is, the Sports Officer, made contact with the Football Association and they have already proposed tentative dates for North Side as well as Bodden Town so that there could be a game at that time to open it. So, we are seeking their participation and if there are any other ideas, not only for Bodden Town or North Side, when we go to open, we will be glad to accommodate it into the programme realising that it is in the specific districts and I would like to have members involvement as much as possible.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I will just ask the Honourable Minister if she could repeat for me if she said that the Football Association has days set aside for the opening for these fields—Is that correct? If you could just repeat the reply.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: They have suggested a date that they could host a game if we wish to open it at that particular time.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, this is not so much a question as an observation. I think that the observation is one that could be taken on board by the Minister and it could serve to be cost saving and improve services in the future. It regards the hard court at the Bodden Town play field.

For many years, as many people know, I have been associated with sports in Bodden Town. It is unfortunate that the system being what it is, no opinion was solicited. I noticed that the parking lot is so constructed that it could have been made into at least three basketball courts. I discussed this with Coach Voote [Victor] O'Garro who concurred what has happened though is that the parking spaces are allocated and so fixed that it would be difficult to make the conversion now, particularly as it would involve some expenses. But had either I myself or the coach been shown the plans, we could have made that suggestion and there would have been no need for further expense to build a new hard court now. And this court accommodating three basketball courts at the same time could have taken a tournament of the size usually played in the Cayman Islands.

So, I am asking the Minister in the future when these kinds of projects are being done, if she could seek input from other sporting organisations which may be able to offer observations as to how the sites could be improved and how monies could be saved by incorporating two or three different sports facilities on one compound.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I fully concur with what the Member has said. But I am sure he will appreciate that the Bodden Town play field was before my days and, hence, it was not possible for me to share it with him. But I agree with any major projects like that it should be shared. But at the same time, we can also share the responsibility if any members have ideas or have a speciality in the field.

I can speak for my ministry, the door is open and I welcome comments and direction, and in any way we will try to accommodate the honourable members because at the end of the day it is not who actually does the field or completes it, but it is in the best interest of the persons who have to utilise it.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Could the Honourable Minister tell the House, with regard to the landscaping at the Bodden Town play field, what is the completion date?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Although, there is not a completion that I am aware of, I know that the Public Works Department is in a process of repairing the beds for planting and buying the plants. As far as I am aware, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town has offered her services to do the landscaping free of cost, and the cost to the Public Works Department for the project is estimated to be $25,000.

The Speaker: No further supplementaries? We move on to Question 120.

QUESTION 120 Deferred

The Speaker: I note that the First Elected Member for West Bay is absent, I would ask that this question be deferred to a later sitting. I shall put the question to the House that those in favour of deferring this question to a later sitting, please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question 120 has been deferred. That concludes Question Time for this morning.

AGREED: QUESTION 120 DEFERRED TO A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: At this time, we shall take the morning break. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:43 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12:15 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Government Business, Bills. Before we take the first reading on this Bill, I had asked for the suspension of Standing Order 46 and 47 so that we can take—

The Honourable First Official Member.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 46 AND 47

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move the suspension of Standing Orders 46 and 47 to allow the Elections (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill, 1999 to be read without the requisite notice being given and for it to go through all stages in this sitting.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 46 AND 47 SUSPENDED TO ALLOW THE ELECTIONS (AMENDMENT) (NO. 2) BILL, 1999 TO BE READ WITHOUT THE REQUISITE NOTICE BEING GIVEN AND FOR IT TO GO THROUGH ALL STAGES IN THIS SITTING.

Bills, Second Reading.

SECOND READING

THE ELECTIONS (AMENDMENT) (NO. 2) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Elections (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Honourable members will recall that following the decision of the Select Committee on the Elections Law a bill was presented to this House during the last meeting and, in essence, that bill, which was passed, allowed for the introduction of a permanent register and electors registration cards.

When that bill passed through Executive Council and was sent to the Legislative Department to be put on the Order Paper, it included two dates which had to come into effect before the permanent register could in effect happen, and those dates were dates calling for certain information to be submitted to the Supervisor of Elections. The Legislative Department had the government agency deal with the printing of the green bill and inadvertently the two dates were omitted. And I want to make it clear: It was not the printer's fault. It was one of those things that just happen, the Peter Principle—if anything can go wrong, it will.

The two dates just got left out although they had been agreed. The short bill today therefore seeks to fill in the blanks and add those dates.

The relevant section is 17(b)(4) and there is (a) and (b). The dates are 10 November 1999 and in (b), the 31 October 1999. And so, while it had been previously agreed, it was just one of those things that was left out. It is important, in fact it is vitally necessary that those are added, hence the reason for this Bill.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Elections (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. The motion is opened to debate. Does any Member wish to speak?

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I would just be curious to what extent this change in the Election Law will affect the rights of persons to qualify as electors, according to the relevant sections in the Constitution. Perhaps when the Honourable First Official Member gets up to speak, he will let us know to what extent this law can work independently of any alterations in the Constitution.

The Speaker: Actually, that was part of the debate on the Election (Amendment) Bill, No. 1 from 1999, which was passed in this House earlier. This bill is only taking care of what the Honourable First Official Member said. So I would ask that you read the Bill that is before the House carefully. This is really only putting in two dates.

Honourable First Official Member, would you like to comment on that?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was not present when the amending bill actually went through during the last meeting, but I would have thought that there was opportunity for airing that. Certainly in due course, publicity will be given on process, which in fact is the introduction of the permanent register which has already been passed by this House, and the introduction of electors' registration cards. So, I think, there will be ample opportunity for that to be explained to the public.

All the Bill is doing today is adding in the two dates as I mentioned earlier. I will just read the section so that it will be clear. Its [section] 17(b)(4) and it says, "In addition to the returns required to be submitted under subsections (1), (2), and (3), the Registrar General, Clerk of the Court and Chief Medical Officer shall on or before the 10th day of . . ." and it was left blank there. In fact, it is the 10th day of November 1999, "transmit to the Supervisor a list in respect of the matters respectively specified in those subsections for the period from 31st August 1996 to 31st October 1999."

So, it's just those two dates to be filled in to complete that piece of amending legislation.

I would just like to thank honourable members for the tacit support and I commend the Bill to the House.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that the Bill entitled, The Elections (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Bill has accordingly been given a second reading.

AGREED: THE ELECTIONS (AMENDMENT) (No. 2) BILL, 1999 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider a Bill entitled, The Elections (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill, 1999.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, continuing his debate.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99 AS AMENDED

REFERENDUM LAW

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The amended motion before the Legislative Assembly at present, basically does two things. It seeks to extend the Referendum Law to allow the people of the country, the electorate, to initiate a referendum, which the Government fully supports. It also makes a very clear statement that, "AND WHEREAS only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance . . ." which we fully support as well, and that has been adopted in the amended part of the motion.

So, the first amendment says that if the Constitution has to be changed, then it should only be changed after a referendum. That specific part is followed by the more general part, half of which is the original motion and half of which is the amended motion. It is really, as I understand, this last section that has caused the concerns by the four members of the Backbench or Opposition. That section reads, "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue for immediate relevance", which is the original motion, Mr. Speaker. We added, ". . . and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate votes for the specific amendments . . .", which is clearly referring specifically in the last part to the Cayman Islands Constitution.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, on the amendment that is being opposed by or spoken against in opposition by the four—

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Five? Which five? I think the abstentions were four and those who spoke against it were only four. Oh no, it was five. Oh, the abstentions were four because the Fourth Elected Member for George Town was not in the Chamber at the time. I am sorry, that is correct.

So the five Backbench members who spoke against the amended motion, the first half of which is really their motion, which is a general statement; the second part is the amendment, which says that the Constitution should not be changed until there is a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments.

So, basically, the questions, in simplistic terms, before this Honourable House are should the electorate of the country have a right in a referendum to vote for specific amendments to the Constitution? If this motion is supported, as eleven of us did, the answer is yes, the electorate should have a right to vote. And, if such members, I should say, who have spoken against the amendments . . . it seems to me a clear indication that the answer to that question is, no, the public should not have a right to vote in a referendum before amendments are made to the Constitution.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: What Standing Order are you rising under?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, as occurred yesterday, sir, the Standing Order which deals with misleading. Now, if you would like me to look the number up for you, sir . . . if you give me a minute, I will do that.

The Speaker: I presume you are talking about Standing Order 24.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Anyway, I think it is fairly obvious what I am dealing with—the minister is making misleading statements.

My understanding of what the minister just said is that the four people who abstained from voting for the amendments to the original motion clearly are saying that the public should not have the right via referendum to decide whether there should be any amendments to the Constitution or not. That, sir, is misleading, because abstaining from supporting his amendment does not clearly indicate that. It could be for several other reasons why the four people abstained. Certainly, those arguments will come forth in the debate.

At this point in time, sir, he has no right to be misleading by suggesting that abstaining means that those four people do not want the public to have that right. In fact, it is devious of him to make the statement.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, may I have a right to reply, sir?

The Speaker: Certainly! Under Standing Order 35(4), it says, "No members shall impute improper motives to another Member."

I have listened carefully to what he said and if you care to repeat what you have said Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, I will give you that opportunity.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir. What I said was that members who spoke against the motion obviously did not support the amendment to the motion. It is just that there were some . . . not even all of the members... I don't want to have a hassle on this... Let me withdraw anything in that area and move on if I may because I just don't want to begin this way.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the only way this matter will be cleared up, sir, is to get the transcripts of the last two minutes of what the Minister said and I would humbly ask you to let us get that so that it can be read so that it can be clearly understood what his intention was.

Mr. Roy Bodden: True!

The Speaker: If that is the issue, we shall suspend proceedings for lunch until 2.15 p.m. at which time I will get the Hansard and I will make my ruling at the end of that time.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.40 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2:47 PM

The Speaker: When we took the break, I undertook to get a transcript of the Hansard as to what had been said by the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, and I said I would make my ruling on a point of order raised by the First Elected Member for George Town. I quote from the Hansard, it was 17 September, quoting a part of it, "So, basically, the questions, in simplistic terms, before this Honourable House are, should the electorate of the country have a right in a referendum to vote for specific amendments to the Constitution? If this Motion is supported, as eleven of us did, the answer is yes, the electorate should have a right to vote. And, if such members, I should say, who have spoken against the amendments . . . it seems to me, is a clear indication that the answer to that question is, no, the public should not have a right to vote in a referendum before amendments are made to the Constitution."

Interpreting what he has said, he is quoting his opinion, it clearly says, ". . . it seems to me . . ." and, I think, each honourable Member is entitled his own view when debating. So it is not a point of order.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, would you please continue.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker. On a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order, and what Standing Order you are rising under.

Dr. Frank McField: I am rising under Standing Order 35 (4), and I am asking you to refer to Standing Order 88(1) and to further refer to Erskine May, page 386, where it says "The misrepresentation of the language of another is an allegation." In fact, it is not permitted.

I would just like to show you why it is misrepresentation—

The Speaker: Just give me the quotation under Erskine May again please.

Dr. Frank McField: It's page 386, "Allegations against Members."

[Pause]

The Speaker: Are you challenging the ruling that I made on the previous point of order?

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I am not challenging anything that you say or do, I am just trying to clarify a question here. If the language used in the original motion is misrepresented, I am saying that the minister has misrepresented the language and the intention of the original motion which suggests that the people should have the right to initiate a referendum in regard to any matter that is of national importance, and the amendment of the Constitution is an issue of national importance.

The Speaker: I will have to defer that for further consideration. It is a very serious matter you are raising and I reserve the right to give my decision at a later time.

Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, please continue with your debate.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, before the honourable minister resumes . . . if I could just clear up a matter. When he says ". . . so the five backbench members who spoke against the amended motion . . ." does that include the member for the district of North Side? Because she did not speak on the amended motion.

The Speaker: I don't see the five backbench members in this. I quoted the paragraph after that.

What the First Elected Member for George Town challenged was that he imputed improper motives to them. And he said "it seems to me" . . . and those are the operative words I am going by. He is expressing an opinion. He is not making a statement.

The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I understand that ruling very clearly, sir—even though in the past when I have said it's my opinion, the same honourable minister got up and asked me to withdraw it because I didn't say it was my belief.

I am talking about the second paragraph of Mr. Truman Bodden's speech where he says "so the five backbench members who spoke against the amended motion . . ." Can he state who the five backbench members were?

The Speaker: I think I can ask him to withdraw that. I have a problem with that.

Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, will you withdraw the "five"? because not all five really spoke.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir, I will withdraw that. Where I got five, if you will look just up above that, it's a confusion between four and five. But I will withdraw that. Sorry.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, just on an additional point, if you will be so tolerant as to allow me to make it.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like you to refer, when you do consider your decision, to my contribution—

The Speaker: I will ask you to come in and we will have some private discussion. I will get all of your points before I make a ruling. I give you that assurance.

Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, what I would mention on this is that if there has been any misinterpretation it has been the allegations of the Fourth Elected Member for George Town that my motion is ultra vires the Constitution and the Imperial Parliament. That is a blatant misinterpretation which you, sir, in fact, ruled against, or spoke earlier on. So if we are going to get into that game, nothing could be more serious than the fact that this House is debating my amendments which are ultra vires the Constitution and the Imperial Parliament. So if you would like to look at a misrepresentation and to pick things up, would you please rule on that at the same time?

I will now go on because I have never really seen so much in relation to what is a very short, simple question. I am saying that on the amendment that says, and I will read it again, “that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments”—

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER
(Misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Dr. Frank McField: The minister is misleading the House. The amendment does not say that.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I am reading from the amended motion that I put forward.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, the amendment is in more than one resolve. And he concentrates continuously on the last resolve of the amendment as if the first part of the amendment—which was introduced as a result of the original motion—has nothing to do with the motion as amended.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I surely have every right to talk about any part of the amended motion. As I understood it . . . and the First Elected Member for George Town said words to the effect . . . and I better get this right because I don't want to—

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I am not . . . no, no, I am not saying.

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Just hear me out first, okay?

What the First Elected Member has said . . . and that's why I haven't been concentrating too much on it. But Mr. Speaker, I have every right to concentrate on any part of the motion that I feel like. Surely, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town can't tell me what to concentrate on.

What the First Elected Member for George Town said (at page 942) was, and let me just read this: “The original motion asks for us to do what is necessary to make the amendment to the Constitution to allow the people the authority to initiate a referendum. This is the original motion. The amendment version that is being sought is saying if we want to achieve that let us not simply do it, let us ask the people if we can do it.”

Then he said, “Semantics, as far as I am concerned, are not worth fighting over.” That is clear.

As I understood it, the objection was really to the second part, even though . . . let me just read what the First Elected Member for George Town said there too. He said “The second amendment which is saying that the Constitution being what it is, let us take this opportunity to say that from here on in, from henceforth and forevermore until another group of people want it to be different, let us ensure that any change to the Constitution is done by seeking the advice of the people through referendum.”

I am dealing with what I understand the main objection is—not to the first part, at least not by the First Elected Member for George Town (not to the first amendment)—to the second amendment. This is what the members that spoke concentrated on.

The Speaker: You are quoting from the Hansard?

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I sure am.

The Speaker: Of what date, please?

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Yes, sir, the date is 10th September, 1999 (part of tape 22), at page 942.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: This was what I read earlier. So what I am saying, sir, is that as I understand it, and . . . maybe I am wrong on that. Maybe there is opposition to both amendments. But, definitely not from the First Elected Member for George Town, as I understand when that honourable member said, “as far as I am concerned not worth fighting over” means not worth fighting over. So I was concentrating on the second part even though I am not saying—let me make it clear—I am not saying the First Elected Member [for George Town] is making a determination on that. He is merely saying ‘make sure I understand it right.’

But if I feel like speaking on any part of the motion, surely I have a right to do so.

The Speaker: Please continue. That's not a point of order. You are speaking on the motion as amended. You have the right to speak on any portion. Go ahead. Please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Thank you.

I would like to go on to deal with the point on Vision. The Vision document has clearly set out at page 58, Action Plan 8, specific results: “To allow for binding national referenda to be called by petition of the electorate in circumstances in which the electorate de- termine that a referenda is appropriate.” I fully agree. This motion is asking for that and my amendments are also supporting that.

The action steps: “Immediately review current Cayman Islands referendum legislation, referendum legislation in other countries, amend the referendum legislation necessary and implement regulations to allow for binding national referenda.” It goes on. “To be called by petition, signed by electorate representing a ‘percent’ of the total number of the registered electors in the Cayman Islands. Ensure legislation that public funds are not used to influence outcome of any referendum.”

Maybe that should have also added that other people don’t take and pay money to legislators to help influence the outcome of the referendum. Maybe that should have been added in there.

“(4) Question to be asked at each referendum should be set by persons initiating this relevant petition.” Mr. Speaker, this deals with a Law. The one thing the National Strategic Plan Vision document doesn’t deal with is the Constitution. But I have no doubt in my mind if the question had been asked ‘Would you like to have a referendum before the Constitution is changed?’ the answer would have been, yes. It’s clearly in line with the principle here.

So this, as the First Elected Member for George Town, used it (and I think some subsequent members), supports the motion that is before the House. I support what is here. I fully support the right, as I have said before, of the electorate to have a right to initiate a referendum. But, even more, before there is a change in the Constitution, a referendum should be called.

If there is no fear of being honest, being open, being transparent and accountable, then there is no fear of going back to the public with a referendum.

I just want to read two things. If you think, Mr. Speaker, or anyone in the country thinks that when I said in 1991 the Constitution of this country was going to be changed by politicians, elected members here, in the committee room without going back to the people. . . I just need a minute to find this. [pause]

I am reading from the Minutes of the Meeting of the Select Committee to Review the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, the bound copy of 17 September 1991, page 2: “Mr. Ezzard Miller was of the view that following the next general election the new House would automatically be constituted under the revised Constitution.”

No doubt that the new Constitution would have been brought in prior to the elections. And also on the page before that there is this statement that is not attributed to him: “The new, or amended, Constitution would emanate from this and the Commissioners’ Report.” In other words, it would emanate from the report of the Select Committee and the Commissioners’ Report. “Any recommendations affecting an increase in membership or qualifications to candidates or voters would come into effect sometime early next year in time for the Elections Law to be amended with the other changes such as the Chief Minister and other Minis- ters coming into effect immediately after the next elections.”

The point I am making sir, is that the public of this country, and this House, has to realise that this is not just something that has never happened. In 1991 the view then was that the Constitution—

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Mr. Roy Bodden: He’s Joseph Goebbels!

POINT OF ORDER (Misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Dr. Frank McField: The minister is misleading the House because I have before me the same document and there is a resolution here. And at the end of the resolution it says “BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that this Honourable House recommends that the implementation of any recommendation for Constitutional changes with the exception of the paragraph numbered 3 above shall not take place without the changes being the subject of a general election.”

[Inaudible interjections and general uproar]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, what I read was the intent of two government members. And I have every right to put that forward because their intent was clearly set out in here. What was being dealt with there was after a lot of opposition from the small group of us who opposed this, that subsequently . . . and perhaps he would refer me to the page in that—because this has 190 pages in it—where he read from. But that was a resolution some distance on after several of us had raised this, and probably after the Minority Report was put in.

So, as I did when I quoted, could the member refer to the page, and I will explain that part.

The Speaker: I can only accept a point of order on the page that he’s talking about. He quoted a specific number. If you have a point of order on that, I will accept it. Otherwise I cannot.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the point of order, knowing that history will make quite clear what the minister is saying.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, this is the opposition’s motion that the member is reading from. Yes, we put that in there. All right? It was moved by Mr. Gilbert McLean, and seconded by Mr. McKeever Bush. Of course we put it in.

Mr. Roy Bodden: We?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This was in 1990, Mr. Speaker. What I am reading from was [said] in 1991, at the end of this book. But the point is very clear: There was intent to change the Constitution of this country by some members of this House—without going back to the public. That's the statement I am making sir. And that statement is correct.

So, there is ample cause to worry about having the people in a referendum given the right to have a say before the Constitution is changed.

Mr. Speaker, I was dealing with Vision when I was interrupted. The "Key" also sets out in relation to the referenda. But I point out again the Vision document doesn't deal with Constitutional change.

I would like to deal with some specific points that were raised during the debate, some of which were leveled at me, some of which I was requested to reply to.

What the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said on 10 September, at page 939, was "Mr. Speaker, to say that it is not understood from the very beginning by the Minister of Education, and by the Government, and by other persons that really all of us know that in the Strategic Development Plan that we adopted here in this House, the people said that they want to be able to have more open and accountable government. And, that the instruments for more open and accountable government has to be in the Constitution. So, the Constitution as we know it is really a series of instruments for good governments to make government possible."

And at the end of that, "They therefore want the right to be able to initiate the referendum and not just how the referendum is initiated by the government." That's quite correct. And what the government is saying in the amended motion is that the people should have the right. And if good government, open and accountable government, comes from the Constitution, then the Constitution should only be amended in an open, transparent, and accountable way. That way is by a referendum, I submit.

Why there would be opposition to the very principle propounded in the motion to the amendment that says that a referendum should change the Constitution. . . . and the justification of it was set out by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, at the same page, when he said "The there is no way that the people can safeguard themselves against the Parliament of the country because when we are talking about parliamentary sovereignty we are talking about the sovereignty of the elected people; we are talking about the sovereignty of the people."

Mr. Speaker, how in the world are the people going to be sovereign if you don't let them have a right to say before you change the very document that the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said is the basis for open and accountable government? How can anyone who says that the Constitution of the country is what is needed for more open and accountable government, and that the people should have sovereignty (the elected people), yet say that it is not right for the people to have the right to a referendum to decide whether or not the Constitution itself should be changed?

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

(Misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I graciously bowed to your ruling that we would deal with this question that I brought up in regard to the particular formulation of this motion, and the minister has now ventured back to say that I am saying that the people should not have the right to use a referendum to decide whether or not the Constitution should be amended.

The minister is again misleading the House, since the motion in the original sense says that the people have the right to use the referendum in regard to any issue that is of national importance; and that the issue of amending the Constitution is an issue of national importance. Therefore, it is not reasonable for him to conclude that I am saying that they should not have the right to decide about the amendment of the Constitution by way of a referendum.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: But, Mr. Speaker, the honourable member didn't vote on the motion, and I don't know how he would have voted. I am not trying to say that. So, if that is what he is thinking, by all means, I am not trying to impute that at all. I merely—

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

(Misrepresenting the language of another)

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order, and I need to know what Standing Order you are rising under because I am—

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, we can go back to the same Standing Order 35(4), 88(1) and Erskine May, page 386, "The Misrepresentation of the Language of another Member."

If the minister is going to be allowed to play around this particular issue to make it seem as if I am saying that the Constitution should be amended without consulting the people, that is misrepresentation of the language. I am saying that the referendum is an instrument, when it can be initiated by the people, to influence whatever decision is being made by this honourable House. Therefore, the minister is misrepresenting my language and my motives, and my intentions. That is unparliamentary.

The Speaker: Just let me get some information. You said Erskine May, page 386, Standing Order . . . quote the numbers again.

Dr. Frank McField: Since our Standing Orders do not adequately cover this, I used our Standing Order 88(1) to say that we have to therefore refer to Erskine May. When we refer to Erskine May, we see that when a member can misrepresent the language . . . because we are all dealing with language. And how we communicate has to do with language. If he is able to twist my language in such a way that the people believe that I am suggesting that the Constitution should be changed without consulting them, then he is doing a disservice to me. That is unparliamentary!

If the minister wants to say that, I think he should come out and say that he believes that the Fourth Elected Member for George Town wants to change the Constitution of this country without—

The Speaker: Let us not get on to a long debate about this. Prior to Standing Order 88(1), you quoted another Standing Order. That is the number I am asking for.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I quoted Standing Order 35(4) with regard to imputing improper motives. That is not a sufficient Standing Order to deal with this since imputation of improper motives has to do with him misrepresenting my language. Therefore, I referred you to Standing Order 88(1), which suggests that if our Standing Orders are insufficient to deal with the situation we refer to Erskine May.

I referred you to page 386 of Erskine May, which deals with allegations against members. It deals with expressions that are unparliamentary and call for prompt interference by the Speaker. One of these is number 2, "The misrepresentation of the language of another, and the accusation of misrepresentation."

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation, and Planning, in view of the fact that I have this under review, would you go on to another subject? It's not fair to continue with that. I would have to suspend proceedings for at least the rest of the day for me to do the necessary research on this. So, in the essence of saving time, go on to another subject.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir. I accept that.

The Speaker: I appreciate that.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I will move on to another subject.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you.

I will go on, then, to what some of the other members said, and areas that I was asked to refer to. I will get a non-controversial transcript.

I will take us back to the reference that was made to 29 May 1989. Let us look at what happened, because people—especially the First Elected Member for George Town—read extensively from my full and unwavering support of a motion that was brought to bring in a referendum law in 1989. Several things were read, things which I quoted, such as "submission to the popular vote prevents hasty action," and also areas where I had fully supported it.

Now, one of the things that was said by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town was an interjection into the speech of the First Elected Member for George Town. I am reading from the Hansard, page 918, 9 September 1999. The First Elected Member for George Town was referring to me when he said, "He was on the backbench then when he was advocating that. He has had an opportunity since then to press for that, but he chose not to because by then he was on the government bench."

Mr. Roy Bodden interjected, "Consistency!"

Let us look at that remark made by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, and let's go back to those minutes that the First Elected Member for George Town was reading from.

We find that I spoke on the motion (it was my motion, which I fully supported) . . . I moved [Private Member's] Motion No. 11/89 and it was actually seconded by you, Mr. Speaker, and that's the only reference I will make of that. But after I spoke then it goes on at page 588, and this is Mr. Roy Bodden, and I am quoting from the [1989 Official Hansard Report Vol. 1] "I Believe that a referendum law will be more of a nuisance in our case than it would be a benefit. As a consequence of that, I cannot support the motion. Thank you." Those are the words of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town—who seconded this motion before the House in 1999.

So, Mr. Speaker, if that honourable member wants to talk about consistency, I was consistent then. That honourable Member is by no means consistent now. What he fought against—the referendum law—and voted down in 1989 . . . and I have here. There were only five of us who voted Aye (at page 593), and, specifically, not an abstention but a very clear No right at the bottom of the list of Division No. 12/89, "Noes: 9" right at the bottom, "Mr. Roy Bodden."

From my point of view, and talking in relation to me, I am not inconsistent; I don't sit on the fence and I don't hop around all over the place with my views. On this subject I have always been for the referendum.

While I am on the question of consistency, I also took quite a bit of flack (I use that loosely, I guess) from the First Elected Member for West Bay, who obviously supports the 1999 motion. At page 589 of the same [1989 Official Hansard Report, Vol. 1] that honourable First Elected Member for West Bay said this about the motion for the referendum law: "I think there are politics involved in this. I am not going to support it. This is probably the only time that I will vote with the Government, but I am voting with them to throw this piece of rubbish in the garbage can where it belongs."

Consistency? Can you imagine a member in 1989 (who is a member now) criticising me for bringing a motion to have a referendum, or an amendment to have a referendum on the Constitution before change? That honourable member's view at that time was that the referendum motion (in 1989 that we were trying to get through), as he said, was a piece of rubbish and he was going to vote with them to “throw this piece of rubbish in the garbage can where it belongs.”

The public surely has to clearly understand what is genuine and what is not. So in reading [from] the [debate] on this motion in 1989, if anyone has to be criticised . . . and what would have been much clearer to the public is if the First Elected Member for George Town had chosen to read what the seconder of his motion, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, said when he said that a referendum law “is more of a nuisance in our case that it would be a benefit.” And a supporter (who is not here), and I am not going to say anything more in relation to these two members . . . but the other one said at that time that it was a piece of rubbish to be thrown in the garbage can.

When minutes such as these, where I clearly put out what I felt was good for the country to have a referendum—which was sadly voted down, . . . and in fairness, let me just say that the other people who supported the motion were Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. (the Ayes at page 593); you, Mr. Speaker; Mr. Gilbert McLean; Mr. John McLean, and I. These are the people who fought then and over the years to get a referendum so the people could have a say in this country.

I stand by what I said then because the same words have been used by the mover of this motion, the First Elected Member for George Town. I must say he made a very good choice because I had done a lot of research on this and I want to just remind . . . and I won't spend much longer on 1989, sir. I will get off of it for good.

The First Elected Member for George Town read that “in Roberts-Wray's, Commonwealth and Colonial Law [there is] a very short, but very effective paragraph. It says, 'Submission to popular vote prevents hasty action.' That is the theme of what I would like the Members of this House to look at: submission to popular vote prevents hasty action.

Another area that was quoted, and I believe quite rightly quoted, . . . in fact, most of the early part of this speech was mostly quoting me where I said, “But what worries me is that one good morning the people of this country are going to wake up and find that a major national issue has moved through this House with very little public debate. They could well be stuck with something which, if they had a right to give their opinion on, and if there had been the time to air it publicly and take their views the damage would not be done. Once the damage is done there is no way of reversing that type of damage. You can try it, but it only worsens it.” [1989 Official Hansard Report, Vol. 1, page 590]

Once changes to the Constitution, advancements, are put in place, with the exception of only once historically that I know about, there is no going back. It is a road from which there is no return. Once advances are made it's too late. So there's no use in crying over spilled milk, once an issue has been dealt with such as the Constitution without going to the public.

Also, sir, quoting from the Hansard . . . in fact, this is actually a statement . . . I don't know if it's meant to be a quotation, but it isn't in quotes. It's in the Hansard at page 921 (9 September 1999), the First Elected Member for George Town. He said: “As I am closing, let me make it very clear that there are those of us who believe that any form of open democratic government should never fear giving the public such a vehicle. Remember what the motion says in its last Resolve section 'BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT once this amendment is achieved, the Government takes immediate steps to bring to the Legislative Assembly a Referendum Bill setting out the terms and conditions under which referendums may be conducted.'”

The important part is the first part: that those who believe any form of voting democratic government should never fear giving the public such a vehicle. I will add a little rider of my own, and say that any form of open democratic Legislative Assembly should never fear giving the public such a vehicle.

If the referendum is a good vehicle for government, it's even a better one . . . and the government fully accepts that. It is even a better open democratic vehicle for the Legislative Assembly. As the First Elected Member for George Town said, we should never fear giving the public such a vehicle. The government has no fear of giving the public such a vehicle at all. We are for the motion. We have extended the public's rights. We are giving the public more rights under the amendments and therefore no one in this House should fear giving the public the right to a referendum before there is Constitutional change.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Good in Spanish or English.

Another statement, since the honourable member . . . it's good that we still have a sense of humour in here.

The First Elected Member for George Town also said . . . and do you know an amazing thing, Mr. Speaker? My statements and the honourable member's statements are saying the same thing in many instances, because we are quoting each other.

What the honourable member said at page 922 of the Hansard of 9 September 1999 (and that's the First Elected Member for George Town) was, “What this is going to come down to is either a belief or a disbelief in a concept of a type of governance. We are saying that extended beyond the style and policies of governance that we have now, we wish also out of an abundance of caution [my words many times before] and out of a desire for transparency and accountability to give the people of this country the vehicle of referendum simply to ensure that when we ask them for us to be their representatives that there is no fear on their part that they have to wait for four years to have a check and balance. Let them have that check and balance as we do our work between those four years.”

I fully endorse that. Give them a right to a referendum. Especially when I adopt those words of the First Elected Member for George Town, give them a right in one of the most important matters that will come before this honourable House—the right to a referendum before a change to the Constitution.

By and large, what has been said here . . . the same as that honourable member read and presumably did not disagree with—statements that I made supporting the referendum—I support the statements that that honourable member has made which relate to supporting the referendum. In fact, some of this was said better than I could have said it, and very effectively.

So I know that when the time for that vote comes the two people whose views are so similar (nearly feeling like statements of Mr. Haig [Bodden] here) . . . I hope and pray that there is no difference in the outcome of the vote. And that's a hope.

At this point in time, as far as dealing with what was said by the First Elected Member for George Town, the larger part of it is very much in line with . . . and I would submit, could be used to support the principle put forward in the motion as amended—the amended motion—that the people should have a right to a referendum before there is any changing of the Constitution.

Looking back at my notes, I notice as well that the First Elected Member for West Bay referred to my amendment cluttering up democracy. But what it is really doing is opening the eyes of the public to democracy rather than cluttering up democracy. That word 'clutter up' has created a lot of trouble in the past for someone who said that.

So, the 1989 stage was, I submit, in relation to the motion before the House then, totally consistent. In fact, it has taken at least the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and the First Elected Member for West Bay who voted against the referendum with such strong statements against it, nearly ten years. Whenever their minds changed, I really don't know, but at least now we are happy to know that they see the light and they now are happy with having a referendum. I hope that whatever happens, it won't be another ten years before others see the light to allow a referendum before a change of the Constitution.

I would like to go on to deal with the White Paper.

The Speaker: Would this be a convenient time to take the afternoon break?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It would, sir. Thank you.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3:47 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4:14 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning continuing debate.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There has been quite a bit of talk and interpretation in relation to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Document, "Partnership for Progress and Prosperity—Britain and the Overseas Territories."

Mr. Speaker, this document deals with several things, but it has been mainly around one aspect of it, which has attempted to interpret the document to use it to show that the United Kingdom would want to have constitutional change in any territory, which is not in full accordance with the wishes of a majority of people in that territory. The document at its very inception sets out the Partnership for Progress and Prosperity, and in my view it is a genuine attempt by the United Kingdom to deal with areas or problems that have arisen, some of which for many years have really not been fully dealt with.

The simple things were things like the change of name by the United Kingdom of the Dependent Territories to "United Kingdom Overseas Territories," and the reflection and statement, I guess, that was made on British citizenship. Throughout, I will show that what the United Kingdom finds important ensuring that the rights of the people . . . and it consistently refers to the rights of citizens of the territories, of which the Cayman Islands is one; that they should be listened to and should be taken into consideration when applying these different changes.

It is clear to me that what is important in major changes was the decision of the citizens of the country and not necessarily the politicians. There are several references in here and they show what is a very clear picture of how the United Kingdom will deal with its relationship with us as a United Kingdom Overseas Territory.

The first paragraph I would like to refer to it is found on page twelve of the document, paragraph 2, subparagraph (2.1), it says, "Britain's policy towards the Overseas Territories rests on the basis that it is the citizens of each territory who determine whether they wish to stay linked to Britain or not."

Mr. Speaker, what better way to make that determination—which would be a change in the Constitution—but through a referendum to the popular vote of the electorate? Despite how some members may feel about the importance of this Honourable House, at the end of the day it is the citizens of the Cayman Islands who will determine whether they wish to stay linked to Britain or not.

I will read on, the United Kingdom says, "We have no intention of imposing independence against the will of the peoples concerned." From time to time rumours go out when there is a build-up of anti-colonial and anti-British policy stirring, if something isn't done, whether that be changing some part of our law or whatever that [is], Britain will say the Cayman Islands must go independent. It's really nonsense, Mr. Speaker. This is the United Kingdom's policy. They said "We have no intention of imposing independence against the will of the people concerned."

Mr. Speaker, from the time I was involved in politics, in fact, from the time I was in government as Acting Attorney General in late 1960's early 1970's, the standard phrase has always been that a colony could remain if it wished, or it could go if it wished—not at the wish of the UK, sir. And, despite changes of government and through my political years from 1976 to [present], they have remained consistent to the policy—that it is for citizens of each territory to determine whether they remain linked to Britain and to determine whether their Constitution is advanced to independence or not.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, luckily for us, when that drastic, bleak, and damaging document to change the Constitution in 1991 was sent up to the United Kingdom, the United Kingdom in its wisdom said (or I assume would have said) 'it is good to know what the majority of MLAs in the country want, but before the country can change its Constitution, we want to hear from the people.' And the people, Mr. Speaker, spoke loud and clear in the 1992 elections and the Constitution was not advanced. So out the door went the hopes and aspirations of a few power-hungry members to be Chief Minister or Leader of the Opposition or whatever.

Mr. Speaker, another section that I would like to refer to is paragraph 2.6, page 13, where it states: "Consultation with the territories showed a clear expression of their wish to retain the connection with Britain." Mr. Speaker, that was their findings just a short time ago when this document was prepared and subsequently published. I don't believe . . . in fact I know that a couple of years ago (two years back let's say) there was obviously a very clear intention of the majority of Members of the Legislative Assembly not to advance the Constitution of the country.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of clarification.

POINT OF CLARIFICATION

The Speaker: [Addressing the Honourable Minister of Education] Will you give way? He is rising on a point of clarification.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I will give way for one minute, sir. But I don't want to get into hassle on this. Maybe I better not give way because we about to the end of the line.

The Speaker: We only have four minutes to go to adjournment.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Everything has been nice for about ten minutes, maybe I better not give way, sir. Unless the member has a point of order I am not going to give way. I will just try to get through this afternoon without any more hassles.

So, Mr. Speaker, there is a statement in there by the United Kingdom (and I will just read it again), "Consultation with the territories showed a clear expression of their wish to retain the connection with Britain." A few years ago (two years back) certain questions were sort of floating at the time and maybe that is where that part has come from. But the words, "clear expressions" were used and I think that's important.

Mr. Speaker, don't get me wrong, if there are Members of the Legislature who want to talk to Britain on constitutional change, of course Britain will talk to them. But that had better not happened without the clear guidance of a referendum. On page . . .

Mr. Speaker, it is amazing how just reading things seems to stir my good colleagues of the Opposition across the floor to such a stage that they are getting me confused, I cannot even find the rest of what I was going to read now. [Laughter]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Maybe that's the approach!

[Laughter]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Oh!

The United Kingdom also made a pledge at paragraph 2.5 in which they said, "We are committed to ensuring good government, sustainable political, economic and social development in the Overseas Territories and to guaranteeing their security and defence." The partnership will be based on consultation and mutual understanding. No question of forcing the Cayman Islands to go independent against the wish of the people.

The Speaker: I think that be a good note to end on. We have reached the hour of 4.30 p.m.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, sir. I am very happy to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday morning at 10.00 a.m.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do adjourn until 10.00 a.m. on Monday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until 10.00 a.m. on Monday.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, 20 SEPTEMBER 1999.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 121

No. 121: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation how personnel matters are handled within the Health Services Department.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: Within the Health Services Department, there are three principal areas of Personnel matters, these are: (i) recruitment; (ii) renewal of contracts; and (iii) staff development and training. The functions of benefits, administration, and remuneration are carried out by government's Personnel and Management Services Department.

Recruitment: The Health Services Department is responsible for preparing the job description and providing and completing the appropriate form(s) for a vacant post. The post is advertised through the Public Service Commission (PSC). The department shortlists applicants for an interview. The interview is conducted in conjunction with the PSC. Once a candidate has been selected, a recommendation from the interview panel will be forwarded to His Excellency the Governor from the PSC. Acting on the instructions of the Governor, the Central Personnel and Management Services will issue the contract of employment.

This process is followed for the recruitment of all staff, except for the employment of temporary short-term staff and the employment of group employees (security, housekeepers, kitchen and facilities staff). These employees are recruited directly by the department.

Renewal of Contract: Contract renewal requests are initiated by the officer, his immediate Supervisor and Senior Manager. Subject to the outcome of the officer's performance appraisal, the Director of Health Services, in consultation with the appropriate senior manager, will then make a recommendation to the PSC. The PSC will review the submission and forward its recommendation to His Excellency the Governor for approval. The Central Personnel and Management Services will issue the Governor's decision to the officer.

Development and Training: In order to maintain a satisfactory level of skills and standards, the Health Services Department identifies development and training needs for the staff. Minimum continuing education and training is required by most professions in order to maintain registration, membership, and licence. Much of this training is provided in conjunction with other institutions, some locally, but most overseas.

Long-term training (in excess of six months) is coordinated and administered by the Government Personnel and Management Services Department.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say if he is consulted in regard to renewal of contracts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: Information is shared with me, but I would say that we are not allowed direct consultation under the Constitution.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say what kind of information is shared with the minister in regard to the renewal of contracts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: Generally speaking it's background information and performance of the individual, things like that.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say if the Public Service Commission is in the habit of going against the recommendations of the Director of Health Services, and is he aware of any recent instances of this happening?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: Not being totally involved with this, I cannot say specifically. But I would assume, as in most things, they are not necessarily bound by the instructions or guidance of the Director of Health Services.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I know that it's not that honourable minister's habit of being evasive. I think that what I have asked is within his accountability to this Parliament. Within the realm of that brief, can he as minister say if recently the Public Service Commission did not accept the decision of the Health Services Director?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: No, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say if there have been any improvements in the recruitment process in regard to the time it takes to bring someone on board?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: There has been some improvement. One of the things we are looking forward to I think came out in the Vision 2008, that large departments, like the Health Services Department, be given their own personnel managers and the ability to recruit.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister state if the qualifications of the individuals who have contracts with the hospital are examined a second time, or is it just accepted that the persons were employed and upon renewal of the contract no consideration is given to the re-examination of the qualifications of the individual concerned?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: I feel sure that the department and the Public Service Commission would look at this in very great detail.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say how many doctors' contracts have been renewed over the last year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: I would prefer to research that information and make sure. I will give him that undertaking.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to officially request that information, and I would also like to have included in the written request (if possible) the qualifications of each individual doctor who has had his or her contract renewed over the last year.

The Speaker: Would you turn that into a question? I don't know how the honourable . . . The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: Mr. Speaker, I will give that commitment. I have made a note of it.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I just want to follow up on the recruitment process. I am pleased to hear that the Health Services is working towards having its own personnel department. I wonder if the honourable minister could say if the process allows the quick employment of a professional we may need at the hospital, rather than having it sit for three to six months while the application goes through the current process. We then run the risk of losing that individual.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: The normal period is around three months. But if there is an emergency, a locum may be employed on a temporary basis.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the substantive answer, the minister said that the employment of temporary short-term staff and group employees, that is, security, housekeepers, kitchen and facilities staff, is done directly by the department. Obviously that means that these matters are not channelled through the central Personnel Department and/or the PSC. Can the honourable minister explain exactly what this process entails within the Health Services Department? Is there a special department that handles these types of applications in employing these individuals? Exactly how does it work?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: The usual application form would be completed and then the senior officer would deal with the supervisor or the senior manager of whichever section that would be seeking to employ the person.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister explain the process by which the department on a whole determines the need for these types of employees? Not just who they employ, but the numbers in the various areas.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: The justification of these posts depends upon the budget process. They would have to indicate the necessity for these people and it is dealt with in that manner.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if it is a regular or highly irregular occurrence whereby appointments are made outside of the circumstances the minister just detailed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: I am informed that we are allowed to employ a certain number of people and we cannot exceed that. It has to be within whatever that quota is within the department.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: When it comes to termination of staff in this area, specifically the staff hired directly by the department, where a decision is made by the department that the employee is no longer suitable, can the minister explain what process takes place? As supplementaries are limited, I will also ask if he can explain what recourse there may be for the employee that natural justice occurs during the process?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: I am informed that under Chapter 19 of the General Orders and in consultation with the Personnel Department and with guidance from the Legal Department the termination would be done. There is an opportunity for the offended person to make an appeal to the Head of Department.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I want to make sure what the minister is saying. If I understand correctly, the minister is saying that if the employee feels that his or her termination is not justified, he or she has the recourse to make an appeal to the Head of his or her Department. Is that not a contradiction within itself? since it would have been that same Head of Department that would have been very involved in the termination process?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: I am informed that the dismissal would be from the Head of Section. The appeal would be to the Director of Health Services.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: While I know that the line of questioning may be a bit cumbersome, is it not fair to say that this process is questionable, to say the least? since an appeal of this nature for natural justice to not only be done but appear to be done should be dealt with by some independent source. I am not questioning the integrity of the chain of command within this department, in fact, the question really doesn't limit itself to this department only, it is regarding the process in general. But if you have a Head of a Department who makes a decision (whether correct or not), that Head of Department then deals with Head of Section (as I understand the minister to say) who makes the determination regarding termination. Wherever that is high up in the chain of command, the Director of Health Services, or the Chief Medical Officer, it is fairly easy to assume that they will support their Head of Department and Head of Section.

So I am asking if the minister thinks this may be worth looking into with regard to the process that takes place, not just so that it can be perceived to be correct, but to ensure that it is correct?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: As we all know, this is out of my line, really being a personnel situation. But I am made to understand that this is the process within the Civil Service under General Order 19. I do not have the ability to deal with this. But we all have certain feelings and we could make the powers that be aware.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Not to prolong this line of questioning, but just to say to the minister that I am not questioning the decision-making process. My suggestions are simply based on the fact that no employee who is terminated will feel satisfied with the process as it is now. I respect the fact that this is done throughout. But I raised the question using this avenue to say that perhaps there is need to look into independent arbitration rather than confining it to the same people who dealt with the termination hearing the appeal.

While I respect the separation of powers, I am asking the minister (if he sees any merit to my thought process) to give a commitment to bring this up and have it looked at within the entire service.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: I will give the commitment to share with my colleagues your concern.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just one more matter regarding the substantive answer, and it has to do with development and training.

In the very last paragraph of the answer the minister said "Long-term training (in excess of six months) is coordinated and administered by the Government Personnel and Management Services Department." Can the honourable minister state how the need for this training is identified within the department? Is the department satisfied that the amount allowed at present is sufficient; and with the new health services being up and running now (since the hospital is completed) do they expect that need to increase?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: That is a good question. The needs are identified through discussions by the governing councils within the Health Services Department, that is the nurses' section, the doctors' section, ancillary . . . Just recently some of our officers were extremely successful in attending a course in managing health services. As a matter of fact, one of the girls came in second in the world with her exam results. We are all very proud of this. I think another one came in third throughout the world.

The attempt is always there to continue this training. As I said, in regard to funds for training, this is always needed. Sadly, this is one of the areas that may be cut when the budget process starts. But we will try our very best to continue this training. For our health services to be productive and to give the quality of care we want here in the Cayman Islands we must have proper and highly trained staff.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state then if it is considered to be a fact by the department that this very important service may be stymied at some point in time because of the lack of available funds for training considered to be very necessary?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: I wouldn't say necessarily "stymied," but as with most things we can and will attempt to do more training.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, two additional supplementaries.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I only need one. Perhaps someone else might want one.

Mr. Speaker, I respect the way the minister has to answer that question. I will attempt to put it in another fashion. I will not use the word "stymied." I think it is worth airing, not pointing any fingers, because we know there are limitations to the availability of funds, but can the minister state if at present, since the hospital is up and running, whether there are specific identified areas of training which cannot yet be done because of a lack of available funds?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: When this situation occurs the department, in consultation with Heads of Sections, would attempt to prioritise where they feel the greatest impact would be.

The Speaker: Before taking the next supplementary, I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) in order for Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town, the final supplementary.

Dr. Frank McField: The minister has stated that “Contract renewal requests are initiated by the officer, his immediate Supervisor and Senior Manager. Subject to the outcome of the officer’s performance appraisal, the Director of Health Services, in consultation with the appropriate Senior Manager, will then make a recommendation to the PSC.” Can the honourable minister say how important the performance of an individual officer is in determining whether or not that officer would be further recommended to have his or her contract renewed?

And can the minister also say whether or not the time period is important in regard to renewals? If we are dealing with giving a one-year contract or a four-year contract, does that appraisal also determine the length of the contract or is that determined by some other factor?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: The performance of the officer is very important. In regard to the length of the contract, the final decision is made (it is my understanding) through the PSC.

The Speaker: You had a second part to your question? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I was trying to find out in regard to the length of the contract who decides. How important is the actual performance of the officer in regard to the length of the contract.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: As I said earlier, the performance of the individual is of great importance. But the final decision is made by the PSC.

The Speaker: This is your final supplementary now. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, the minister is not answering my question. If he doesn’t want to answer the question he doesn’t have to, but out of respect, let him say he can’t answer the question or he would like to answer this question at a later date. My question is quite clear. I am asking if the appraisal has anything to do with the amount of years that the contract is renewed. Does it play a role in determining that? If he doesn’t know, he doesn’t know.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: Yes, the appraisal of how many years the officer was there does have a significant role and the recommendation is made by the Head of the Department.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 122, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 122

No. 122: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to state what problems have been experienced with the air-conditioning system at the new hospital since its inception.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: The air-conditioning used in the buildings of the new Cayman Islands Hospital is a central chilled water system. This is a more efficient and less costly system to operate than the common DX (direct expansion) systems generally used throughout the Cayman Islands.

Chilled water air-conditioning systems are quite sophisticated and require a number of months to balance airflow and iron out operational wrinkles. This is a normal commissioning procedure and occurs each time a new air-conditioning zone is completed. The process is currently ongoing and no unusual problems have been encountered to date.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister explain what inconveniences were caused by what he listed as “ironing out the operational wrinkles”? And did this cause any significant increase in expenditure?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: That’s a good question. I have been in the Glass House now, just to draw an example, since 1994. They use one of these systems. To the best of my knowledge, they have been trying to balance that now for the last five years. The main discomfort, until the areas are balanced, is the usual thing when it is not at the correct temperature.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I am understanding the minister correctly, the Government Administration Building uses this same central chilled water system, and they are still attempting to get it balanced properly. With this knowledge in mind, would it have been the correct decision to employ the same system in such a large complex as the Health Services Department?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: Once again, that is a good question. I think traditionally, the problem with the Glass House is so many components, and it was possibly not designed for that because there are so many little areas within it. I think that is the difficulty. Maybe I shouldn't have used the Glass House as an example. But as far as I know, in most of the areas where this type of air-conditioning is used—and I think it is used in most modern buildings now . . . that's all I can say on that.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say what type of cost is attached to this "ironing out" process?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: This balancing would be included in the general contract which, as I said, during the commissioning period is just a part of the phase of balancing everything out.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether or not there are any risks to patient care while this balance is being achieved? Also, what are some of the inconveniences to be expected during the process of this (what I term euphemistically) "ironing out of wrinkles" period?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: As I mentioned earlier there would be some discomfort until everything is balanced. But in talking with all of the people who work there, this concern is now sorted out. To my knowledge there is no problem with patient care.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether or not the equipment originally placed in the air-conditioning system was not as sophisticated, or was not the type of equipment the architects and refrigeration technicians had originally required on the plans?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: Any problems with the air-conditioning coils were sorted out significantly before the commissioning of the units throughout the hospital.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Is the minister saying that there were some problems?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: Yes, during the construction phase of the project it was observed that fan coil units which provide air-conditioning to the maternity and medical/surgical rooms were not the ones approved by the project team engineer. The units were subsequently replaced by the contractor with the approved units.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House how this misunderstanding occurred? Was it a genuine mistake on the part of the supplier and the air-conditioning contractor, or was there some attempt to use materials not requested by the original architects and planners knowingly?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: I would prefer to find out exactly what it was. I would hope that it was not done deliberately.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Is the minister prepared to give the House an undertaking to investigate this and come back with the answer?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 123 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 123

No. 123: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation what equipment at the George Town Hospital will need to be made Y2K compliant and what will be the incurred cost of this exercise.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: The Health Services Department commenced Y2K preparations for the three Islands in early 1998 by researching and testing over 3,000 pieces of equipment in cooperation with the manufacturers. It is anticipated that all equipment certification and testing will be completed by the end of September and all essential equipment will be compliant or replaced by 1 December of this year.

Due to the commissioning of the new hospital earlier this year, much of the equipment and systems are new and already Y2K compliant. The following items of equipment will need to be made Y2K compliant:

- Holter ECG monitor
- Bedside monitor (ECG)
- Nutritional analyst software
- Hospital Network Programming Environment
- Blood gas analyser
- ECG and ST module (ECG monitor)
- ECG multiview module
- PC bedside monitor
- Ultrasound unit.

The incurred cost to ensure that the equipment is Y2K compliant is $28,940.00.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell us the target date for having all of this equipment made Y2K compliant, and testing to ensure that it is reliable?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: It is anticipated that all equipment certification testing will be completed by the end of this month, and all essential equipment will be compliant or replaced no later than 1 December.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if any of the equipment in the answer was purchased new since the completion of the new hospital?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: No, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say who is undertaking this work and whether the work undertaken will be warranted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: There is a Y2K team led by a very able manager of information systems who is in the House with me today, Mr. Malcolm Ellis. They deal with all of the people from whom they bought the equipment. We feel quite positive that everything will be quite okay.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I observe that all of this equipment is crucial to the saving of lives and preservation of good health. Will there be any written guarantees or warranties that this equipment, once made Y2K compliant, is absolutely compliant, foolproof, subject to the normal course of operation? I would like the answer because this is obviously necessary for legal purposes.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: Each manufacturer provides the Health Services Department with a document and a statement saying that the equipment is compliant. And on top of that, the Y2K committee within the Health Services Department also verifies this.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Am I then to understand that after the team has adjusted this equipment the manufacturer will give the assurance that the equipment is completely Y2K compatible?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: If some of the equipment needs an upgrade, they would give that letter of commitment.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 124, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 124

No. 124: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture What criteria must be met in order to qualify for the award of support grants in the sporting organisations.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Since 1993, the Ministry's criteria for the granting of a support grant in the sporting field is as follows:

1. The association must be a non-profit organisation.
2. The association must have a development plan.
3. The association must submit annually audited financial statements. The accounting format provided by the Audit Department must be adhered to.
4. The association must submit a progress report of the use of the funds in keeping with the development plan.
5. Special grants may be given if a national association is hosting an event. Associations bidding to host events should consult the Ministry before bidding for the event.

In 1997, the Ministry was informed by three associations that they were interested in hosting events in the Cayman Islands. This meant that additional funds would be needed for sports' grants in 1998. Therefore, the Ministry sought approval from Executive Council prior to the Budget Session of the Legislative Assembly. In 1998, as a follow up of this, the Ministry had contracts drawn up with each of these three associations prior to the games.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House if upon meeting these criteria any other factors are taken into consideration prior to the disbursement of sports grants?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am informed that those are the basic factors that are taken into consideration.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Perhaps I should have made it a little less difficult for the honourable minister by asking if any consideration is given to the size of the sporting organisation in addition to these five criteria.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: The size of the association, insofar as there are six focused sports, that is basketball, athletics, cricket, football, netball, and swimming, those just emanating out of the fact that back in 1993 they were made focus sports, would get the larger percentage of the grants.

The other associations in accordance to their development plans and their performance and also some of them, believe it or not, do not apply even though the ministry has made attempts. So those other considerations will come in on a one-to-one basis.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the very last paragraph of the minister's answer, and in fact the last sentence says, "In 1998, as a follow up of this, the Ministry had contracts drawn up with each of these three associations prior to the games." Can the honourable minister explain the nature of these contracts and the purpose of them?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Coming into the ministry and being fully persuaded that there should be a very strong element of accountability balanced with the need to have the various associations having the funds, I found that there were some associations who for whatever reasons were not adhering to the auditing guidelines and stipulations that were put in place. Out of an abundance of caution I instructed senior staff to have the legal department draw up various contracts, mainly performance contracts.

These contracts set out the obligation on behalf of the government to supply X amount of funds over X period of time, and corresponding obligations by the various associations to do various things, like supply the audited accounts within X number of weeks to ensure that the proper permissions are received before time. It sets out various terms and definitions. They are required to show us their organisation charts the contact persons because that has been a problem in the past as well, and to basically say that this jurisdiction is the binding jurisdiction because often times there are other jurisdictions that are involved in these negotiations.

It also sets out that this agreement will be binding and unless there is a mutual understanding between the two parties then any other collateral terms or provisions will not be binding. We found it difficult to operate on verbal or oral representation and we saw the need to put it in an expressed form, albeit a contract.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Out of interest, I would just like to ask the minister when special grants are awarded, for example those associations wishing to host events, is there any encouragement given to these organisations to raise a portion of the funds they seek themselves, and the ministry or the government could match these funds or arrive at some other acceptable and encouraging ratio. Or do these organisations depend wholly and solely upon government for the full disbursement of the funds needed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: That is one of the reasons why we ask the various associations to first get prior consent from Executive Council so that we can see the extent of the financial or contingent—

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: To host the various games within the Cayman Islands jurisdiction. And the amount of money that we give by way of the grant is only a mere contribution. The cost of it would be much more. I must say that with these three major ones we have had recently, the private sector has been a great source, albeit we see the same ones contributing over and over, but they have contributed to a very vast extent.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether the support grants offered by her ministry are limited to only organisations recognised by the Olympic Committee, or are there sporting organisations which may not necessarily be Olympic recognised sports that would be encouraged to apply for support grants as well?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: We recognise that we are still at a fairly embryonic stage in our sporting development. Although it's an ideal situation where we would like to see all of them as registered organisations, we do realise that in the smaller districts there would be clubs (for want of better terminology) that would still need assistance, and have to be looked upon as exceptional circumstances rather than the general rule.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In the answer provided, item 3 says, "The association must submit annually audited financial statements. The accounting format provided by the Audit Department must be adhered to." Can the honourable minister elaborate a bit on who is acceptable as far as auditors and some of the details on the format submitted by the Audit Department?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: As most members would be aware, the ministry's grants were audited back in 1997. The Auditor General made various suggestions. One of them was for this particular area to be audited. Government offered the services of the Audit Department to assist with the implementation stage. The specific requirements that came forward from the audit are as follows: 1) Associations receiving under $20,000 per annum could be audited by qualified or experienced individuals within the community, or, failing that, a competent person within the organisation could also do the audit. Either person should be independent of the association's management.

Secondly, associations receiving between $20,000 and $50,000 per annum should be audited by a public accounting firm or by reputable qualified or experienced accounting person within the company who's independent of the association's management.

And lastly, that the associations receiving in excess of $50,000 should be audited by a public accounting firm. It is not the policy of the ministry to recommend specific accounting firms, but to leave it in this general perspective.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I want to thank the honourable minister for that information. Taking into consideration the cost of an audit, which can be very, very expensive, can the honourable minister say how flexible the ministry is on insisting on audited financial statements, especially those for public accounting firms.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: That's why we left in the flexibility of an independent in-house audit except in the case of the $50,000 and above, of which there are very few. I think football might fall into that category. They have a much larger budget because they get from international bodies as well. They have complied. The ministry has not received any complaints in this regard.

We did take on board that there would be a cost factor involved and that's why we are happy to see that the recommendation did include this degree of flexibility so that it would not have a cost greater than the grant.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The minister mentioned the contracts for the three associations. But she hasn't said whether or not this is going to be the practice from here on in. Can the honourable minister say if these three were isolated cases, or is this going to be the way it is dealt with from now on?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: We did this in relation to those that host. It wasn't because they were isolated, but the ministry had an experience several years ago where large expenditures were incurred. We felt that we had to stop this gap. This was the beginning process.

I am also informed that there is an application form although we have not contracted with the grants. As you will appreciate, some grants are in the range of $2,000 and all the way up to $50,000. But the basic principle is that they have to come back with the audited accounts. For the most part there has been cooperation.

In respect to the latter part of the question, this is the way we would like for it to go forward so that we can have greater (and I hate to use this word) "accountability and transparency." I should say that the ministry did receive some negative feedback because it was a new concept. But now everyone sees that not only does it protect the ministry, but it also protects the association.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: Has the minister ever received an application from the Boxing Association for a grant?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am informed that there was an application from the Boxing Association which has been approved subject to receiving their audited accounts.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes for the morning break.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.37 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.29 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

While we were discussing Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 on Friday, I said that I would give a decision on the point of order raised by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. It would be appropriate to make it at this time, but I am still having discussions with the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. I wish to defer my ruling until later, with his agreement.

So we will proceed with the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, continuing.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99

AS AMENDED

REFERENDUM LAW

(Continuation of debate on motion as amended)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The motion before the House as amended, if I may just run back over that since it's been over the weekend, then I will concentrate on continuing with the White Paper.

The Speaker: Certainly.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It's Private Member's Motion No. 11/99, moved by Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts, MLA, seconded by Mr. Roy Bodden, MLA. It says:

"WHEREAS there is growing compatibility of the referendum with the parliamentary representative system of government and it is also recognised that the referendum is wholly consistent with parliamentary sovereignty;

"AND WHEREAS an increasing number of matters of national importance demand widespread public participation in the decision making process;

"AND WHEREAS it is rare for a general election to be fought on a single main issue and the result of an election indicates, at most, an undifferentiated approval of a whole range of policies;

"AND WHEREAS only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED that subject to and after a referendum under section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1993 whereby the electorate vote for a referendum to be initiated by the electorate, the Legislative Assembly takes the necessary steps to cause section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1993, to be amended to allow the electorate to initiate a referendum;

"AND BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED that once this amendment is achieved, the Government takes steps to bring to the Legislative Assembly a Referendum Bill setting out the terms and conditions under which referendums may be conducted;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments.” Two very important sections in the original motion, one of them is repeated in the resolve section. That basically says that it is only the referendum that makes it possible to get a clear judgment on a single issue from the electorate.

While accepting the motion, the government put an amendment and merely added by repeating that since the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue that the Constitution should only be recommended for amendment after a referendum whereby the electorate votes for the specific amendments.

Really, the question before the House is very simply put and the one that’s an issue is whether members of this House should recommend an amendment of the Constitution of the Cayman Islands without a referendum whereby the electorate votes for specific amendments. In other words, should there be a referendum before the Cayman Islands Constitution is amended? It seems to be a very simple question to answer if members are prepared to answer it.

I was dealing with the White Paper when we adjourned on Friday. I would like to point out that the United Kingdom has made it very clear, and I quote “Britain’s policies towards the Overseas Territories rests on the basis that it is the citizens of each territory who determine whether they wish to stay linked to Britain or not. Britain has no intention of imposing independence against the will of the peoples concerned.” Naturally, they go on to say that if it is the wish of the people to proceed to independence then they will help and encourage those countries.

But what is important is that the United Kingdom looks to the people of the country—the citizens—to determine whether or not to stay linked to Britain, that is, to determine whether the Constitution should be changed and advanced or not.

As the motion clearly states, the best way of finding out specifically what the people want is by referenda whereby the specific questions are asked. In fact, the motion is basically on all fours with the statement here and the United Kingdom, at the time the report was published, said that, “consultation with the territories showed a clear expression of their wish to retain the connection with Britain.” They went on to say (and this was read earlier) “discussion of Constitutional change is already underway. We are planning, for example, to consult the people of St. Helena and its dependencies about how to develop the democratic rights and civil rights of people living on Ascension Island.”

There can be no doubt that the intention of the citizens of each territory will come about through a referendum as the substantive motion sets out in principle, and as the amendment specifically deals with.

In fact, to the question (this is in the report) “What degree of interest was there in changing the territories constitutional relationship with the UK?” The answer? “Apart from some limited reference to Crown Dependency status, similar to that of the Channel Islands, there was no widespread interest in a change in the current constitutional relationship.”

So, it cannot be argued that the White Paper is a document that is pushing constitutional change on the territories. It cannot be argued that the United Kingdom would impose constitutional advancement on a country, an Overseas Territory, against the wishes of the people. Statements of that sort can only be geared toward causing fear in the people of the Cayman Islands. But the document is clear, and there is no doubt in my mind, over the years the wisdom of the United Kingdom has clearly been brought out against persons who are power-hungry, who want to advance the Constitution of the Cayman Islands and grasp the power of the Chief Minister, grasp the power of the Leader of the Opposition and all the other power that goes with the office of Chief Minister.

The United Kingdom states that Britain’s policies towards the Overseas Territories rests on the basis that it is the citizens of each territory who determine whether or not they wish to stay linked to Britain. Therefore, anyone who accepts the principle that it is a decision of the citizens of the Cayman Islands to determine whether or not they stay linked to Britain, to determine whether or not their Constitution is changed, then there should be no worry if that principle is adhered to by members of this House. It should be quite an easy decision to vote for the government’s amendment that says that there should be a referendum of the people before there is a change of the Constitution.

No matter how much footwork, how much hemming and hawing comes about in this debate, the people of this country need to clearly understand that what the amending motion is doing is asking a simple question to members of this honourable House: Are you prepared to go back to the public in a referendum before you recommend that the Constitution of the country be changed? It’s a very simple question, Mr. Speaker. And a very simple one to answer if members of this honourable House are prepared to be open, transparent, and accountable to the public of this country.

I have heard transparency preached so often, Mr. Speaker, especially from the backbench. Now is the time of the roll call for transparency and accountability. Let’s see who’s prepared to put their “Ayes” where their mouths have been over the years. There is no reason for a complex argument on such a simple question.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It cannot be said that there is going to be any constitutional change forced upon the Cayman Islands by the United Kingdom because they have made it clear that that is not the way that they operate.

Neither is it the way, as happened in 1991, that any attempt to circumvent the right of the people in that instance through a general election, . . . and I just need to stress this, Mr. Speaker. The main motion—not our amendment—basically says that it is rare for a general election to be fought on a single main issue. And only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance. So I do not intend to spend time on the question of the general election, and that has been used in the past by Britain as a means of getting the public's view.

But the fallacy is clearly pointed out in this. If there is to be a specific answer by the public, then specific questions should be put. For example, in a general election, it is possible to fudge and blur specific issues in manifestos. There may be a statement in a manifesto saying 'I don't intend to change the Constitution.' Later on that member might try to explain that as not in certain matters, but in others, or whatever. Or, there may be a question of exactly what is meant because manifestos are never specific.

But in a referendum, the question to the public is very specific. And members of this House have to take a position sooner or later, or should take a position on that issue. I guess the difference is that in a referendum the question would be 'Do you feel that a Chief Minister should be appointed?' Or, it could ask 'Do you feel that the Chief Minister should have powers to hire and fire the ministers—all the ministers, in fact—without giving any reason therefore?' These are specific questions that could be put in a referendum; whereas, in a general election, members of the public need not, or normally will not get the specifics.

While the then National Team—and, obviously, we are all in an independent situation at this stage—

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The National Team at the time made specific statements and specifically said "We are against a Chief Minister." That was specific.

But that was probably the most specific you will find. So what I am saying is that this private member's motion is saying that we should not use a general election to deal with a single main issue. It says the referendum is the way to go. And I agree with that, sir, because the questions can be specifically put.

Politicians don't like specific questions to be asked. They like to dance around the subject. And they don't face up to specific things.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: And the referendum with its specific questions will specifically ask 'Do you want the Constitution changed? Do you want a Chief Minister? Do you want him to have absolute power?' Or, it could deal with 'Do you want to have the civil service under the influence of politicians?'

What I am stressing is that the referendum . . . the law can be drafted so that specific answers come in.

Then there's no doubt. Once the referendum is finished, there are clear instructions by the citizens of this country to this Legislative Assembly. And it's then up to members, if they are prepared, to follow those specific instructions or not.

I am very happy to ask the public of this country those specific questions, if the Constitution is being changed on the specific amendments, and to take their instructions. I think every member of this House should be happy to get that because it is the one time, Mr. Speaker, that you can clearly say that you are certain that you are representing the people of this country by following what instructions they give in the referendum.

There's no doubt involved. There's no politics involved. You come in the House, the public says 'Yes, the Constitution should be changed at (a), (b), and (c),' and you understand that. If they say 'No,' then it's no. Members of this House should not, if they are representing the public, put forward the constitutional change.

One of the things that I would like to deal with comes from the Hansard of 15 September. One of the things that was said by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town is found on page 967 of the [unedited] Hansard Report of 15 September 1999. I objected when that member said, "But when you are going to use that opportunity to say 'I am going to make sure that they don't make any changes, they these don't make any changes' . . . and you put yourself in that situation and tie everyone else's hands without giving us an opportunity to go to our constituents and discuss it—" My comment on that is that the referendum is a simple and certain way of going to the public and discussing a matter with the public. So that is clearly on all fours with what was said there.

The other comment is at page 968, where it was stated, "The point the Minister of Education is bringing here would bar the possibility for this honourable House to vote for a Bill of Rights now or in the future, unless they went and repealed this legislation. And he knows why he did it. It would effectively stop there being a Bill of Rights in this country and this was the intention."

First of all, in several places the Fourth Elected Member for George Town has erroneously stated that what I am bringing is legislation. I am not bringing any legislation. Secondly, the question of a Bill of Rights, if the public wishes to have it, the referendum is a simple way of dealing with it. But, in so doing, I am not giving the people a right to have a voice in a change to the Constitution or a Bill of Rights barring anyone from voting for a Bill of Rights in the future. In fact, it's opening up the people's right.

A lot of what was said before the government accepted this motion, was what a good thing this would be and members didn't understand why I would oppose it. I don't oppose it! I accept the motion. We accept the motion and this is where the dilemma has now come in.

There are several other sections I would just like to clear up. I have the [unedited] transcript of the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. In talking about Grenada, at the bottom of page 957 (15 September 1999), he went on to say “What case that I want to highlight is that of Grenada. This is a most celebrated case because it goes to show, and it bears out my position that the British government is not going to look kindly on their ability to alter or change the Constitution being tied up by us having to come back to the people in a referenda—”

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Oh, I beg your pardon. That was Mr. Roy Bodden. I am sorry. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town spoke for a very long time and —

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for a minute? Please refer to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and not Mr. Roy Bodden.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir, I will. I just read from the transcript here, where it said that. “. . . having to come back to the people in a referenda, which is what the third resolve in the amendment moved by the honourable Leader of Government Business is doing.”

Also, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town said, “What I see it doing is putting us in a position where there can be no changes to the Constitution except by a referenda.”

What I am saying, and this is where the last elected Member for Bodden Town . . . if you want me to call you that.

[Addressing the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town] You know, when you were with the National Team you were the “First.” When you left us you ended up last anyhow!

Mr. Roy Bodden: [Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I doubt that.

Anyhow, to get on to the more serious part. The motion is not saying there can be no change in the Constitution. I want to make this clear because several members raised this. That is not what we are saying. We are saying there can be change, but it must be change that the public—through a referendum—wants. There is nothing wrong with that.

For the life of me, I cannot understand how there can be any doubt that what the amending motion says is ‘If you want to change the Constitution, go back to the people in a referendum.’ So no sort of attempt to misunderstand the amendment can get out of the fact that the question is a simple one: Do members here want to have the right to recommend changing the Constitution without a referendum? If the answer to that is no, they want to go back to the people, then there is no problem in voting for the amending motion.

I have some references here I just need to look up. [pause] The [Fourth] Elected Member for George Town, at page 960 said “So I will have to speak first of all saying that from the point of view of the concept of referendum, or referenda, I have always been suspicious as to the merits of this particular method of arriving at a democratic answer to a country’s direction.” [Hansard 15 September 1999] My question is a simple one: Suspicious of what? Suspicious of the people of the country telling members what they wish to have through a referendum? I don’t know. Perhaps that honourable member will address the several parts that I am now going to read because I am all for a referendum and I would never be suspicious of one of the most democratic rights. Talking about myself . . . this minister would never be suspicious of the merits of a referendum. It’s a good way to—

The Speaker: Honourable Minister.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: We are at a time that I think would be convenient to take the break, if you are at a convenient time in your speech.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir. Thank you.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings until 2.30.

PRIVATE MEMBERS’ MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER’S MOTION NO. 11/99

AS AMENDED

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you.

I was just dealing with some of the areas members commented on, and some they also asked me to comment on.

One of the references was to the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, on 15 September, when that honourable member said on page 964, “I believe that if I am to talk about how the Constitution should be amended, I should be given a chance to go and discuss that with my constituents to find out what they think about it. That’s the reason why this amendment should never have been brought in here. This is the reason why I am going to find it very difficult to accept this amendment.”

But, Mr. Speaker, with respect, the amendment is saying that—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What are you reading from?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am reading from the [unedited] Hansard, page 964, 15 September.

What I suggest, if any member wants to discuss with their constituents, one of the best ways of doing that would be a referendum. Further down the member talked about the White Paper. He said, “. . . they are talking about transparent and accountable government and they want to make sure that they put in place the instrument to make transparent and accountable and representative government possible.” Once again, I would submit that the best way of doing that is by a referendum, therefore, I submit, any reason why the referendum motion, the part that we have put forward, should not be acceptable.

Also at page 963, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said, “I think that I have effectively found a flaw in the honourable gentleman’s reasoning. I can debate that on television because I pay for that myself, and that is my airtime.”

I thought at one stage (and I am subject to correction) that I did see that a Vision Committee perhaps sponsored that. But anyhow . . .

The only other area I wanted to mention was in relation to the actual vote. There was a question about whether the Official Members should vote or not. I submit that as they have done in the past, they are entitled to vote. But the point clearly is that even without their votes, the actual division was 11 for and four abstentions. So it would have passed in any event, no matter how small the majority of votes, because abstentions would not block it. But even without those three votes it still would have been eight votes for and four abstentions. So I don’t think that’s a real pointed issue.

There is just one other reference that I would like to make. This relates to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town when he said words to the effect of “I am not scared, Mr. Speaker, of taking a position. But I am not advocating any constitutional change. What I am advocating is a change that the people can have a say in the truly representative democracy.” [Unedited Hansard 10 September 1999]

I would ask that honourable member to take a position this time—and not an abstaining position—to vote Aye or No. That’s a request because I think that it is that important that honourable members should.

And that honourable member also said, “Mr. Speaker, what we are talking about is, simply put, people power—the ability of the people to have their voice expressed, which is not possible now.” [Ibid.] I am happy to say that that is very much on all fours with what the government is saying, that the people should have their voice to express, but not just for things other than the Constitution, but also for amendments of the Constitution.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Who is that you’re quoting?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. I think I said that.

Mr. Speaker, the question of the appropriateness of this motion, I submit in much of what I have read of what was said by the First Elected Member for George Town especially, the principles he put forth that I accepted, also the principles put forth by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, and the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, put the principles clearly in place that I believe that those honourable members will have a change of heart (I know one didn’t vote so I have to be careful here) and vote for this motion as amended when that time comes.

I would now like to go on to deal in some depth with the area of ultra vires, which I know I touched on before. Ultra vires is basically Latin for the fact that something is beyond the powers set out in the document that it seeks to derive its power from. It is used in instances where a subsidiary document is outside and beyond the scope of the major document.

Now to find out what is ultra vires a document, certain principles have to be applied. Those principles depend on the type of document, but here the allegation was ultra vires the Imperial Parliament (which is the Parliament of the United Kingdom). Then that would have to be a document which in some way would conflict or show that what is being done goes beyond the powers that are set out in the Imperial Parliament.

The Constitution of the Cayman Islands is brought under the West Indies Act, which is an Act of the United Kingdom Parliament. That Act permits Her Majesty in Her Privy Council to make orders. In other words, it is subsidiary legislation made by the United Kingdom by which our Constitution derives its force. It follows, therefore, that the only way that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands can be changed is through an Order in Council.

An Order in Council is not to be confused with an order as we understand it. It is a statutory instrument. In other words, it’s the way the United Kingdom makes regulations. The same as we make regulations under our law, the United Kingdom, through a statutory instrument of Her Majesty in Council, makes this. Therefore, as other members have quite rightly pointed out, the Constitution cannot just be changed by any Law that is passed here, or any Act that is done here.

That is the reason why the amendment to the motion that I brought stated that “. . .the Constitution of the Cayman Islands only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum . . .” because basically what happens (as you well know, sir), a motion is passed here requesting amendment. That goes on to the United Kingdom, or can also derive, I guess, directly from Constitutional Commissioners. Then Constitutional Commissioners normally come out and issues are then dealt with.

What has been put in the amendment can in no way be in conflict with the United Kingdom Parliament because there is nothing in that which conflicts with the Parliament altering or amending the Constitution of the Cayman Islands in any way. There is really nothing that can be done here, and I am not putting forward legislation. I need to make that clear because the Fourth Elected Member for George Town referred to the fact that I was promoting legislation in relation to this. Really, that is not what is happening.

This is a decision of this House that these members would not put forward Constitutional change to the United Kingdom.

Nor is the motion in conflict with the Constitutional instrument of the Cayman Islands. There is nothing in this that affects either the Imperial Parliament or Her Majesty in Council in relation to this Constitution because we do not change the Constitution ourselves, we request it and it is up to the United Kingdom to do so.

If by any chance a law was brought to the House (and that is not what is happening here) by which there was an amendment or a purported amendment to the Constitution, then, obviously, that would be ultra vires. But that is not the case now. But in any event, the Governor would not assent it to if that were the case.

Before I sum up, I would like to take this opportunity to commend the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town for such a beautiful large function of Miss Cayman, and to also congratulate Mona Lisa and all the ladies there, and just to say that it was so good to see such a large crowd in which there was no alcohol being served. I really commend the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town on that principle she stood on, which I fully agree with, and also obviously her Minister for Tourism and the others who were involved.

That's all I wish to say there, because I might not have gotten the opportunity at the end.

This motion is one which really is dealing with a referendum, firstly, that the public would have a right to initiate it—government fully agrees with that—secondly, as the government has requested that before there is an amendment to the constitution there should be a referendum. I pointed out that the main motion, not the amended part, clearly states that a referendum is a preferred way to go, not a general election. I accept that. But I also accept that the United Kingdom has, in the past, used general elections as alternates to the referendum. In fact, as I understand it the United Kingdom, or someone in authority there, has stated that there would be a referendum before the currency in the United Kingdom would be changed to bring the Euro in fully. So they are still looking at referendums.

The position as I mentioned earlier in relation to the vote is basically that 11 members voted for, and four abstained. That is, the person abstaining did not vote for the amendment. I just dealt with the question of ultra vires. I don't intend to go back into that. But I would ask members to support this motion and especially the First Elected Member for West Bay who, on 29th May 1989, in opposing a referendum motion that I brought said, and I quote at page 589, “I am not going to support it. This is probably the only time that I will vote with the government, but I am voting with them to throw this piece of rubbish in the garbage can where it belongs.”

Also, we could have a change of heart from the Third—

Dr. Frank McField: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Dr. Frank McField: If he is debating some of the ideas of the First Elected Member for West Bay, it would be in the spirit of Parliamentary debate to do so when the member would have an opportunity to answer. He knows that the member is attending a Parliamentary Conference on our behalf in Trinidad. I feel that it is not very statesmanlike to debate something controversial without the member being present.

The Speaker: I see nothing in Parliamentary Rules that rules that out. I cannot accept that as a point of order.

Please continue honourable minister.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Thank you.

I hope that the backbench will follow that same principle, and when I am out of the Chamber and for a few minutes not attack me because that has happened time and again. So if that were a rule, it is one that isn't practised.

The other thing I would like to mention is that, notwithstanding the debate ten years ago in which both the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and the First Elected Member for West Bay voted against the referendum motion I brought, that they would now support it, as this gives a second opportunity to deal with that error made then.

The motion does not, as one made in a reference to me, clutter up democracy, it clarifies it. It gives the public the right to have their say through a referendum. In fact, the aim of the amendments to the motion is to strengthen the motion. The motion is now much stronger because it makes a general statement that the most important document in the country, the Constitution, will not be recommended by members, at least those who vote for it (and 11 of us voted for it then), that we will not amend the Constitution without a referendum.

It avoids any possibility of having boiler room, or back room meetings to bring in the wide-ranging changes that happened in 1991. Transparency, accountability, the way to go if members genuinely believe in that then they should have no fear in voting for the amendment, or the motion as amended which will say that the people would have a referendum and a say before the Constitution is amended.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER
(Tedious repetition)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Dr. Frank McField: The point of order is tedious repetition. I wish the minister would move along in his debate instead of going around and around in the same circle dealing with whether or not we vote for this amendment. That's what he has been debating for the last three days.

The Speaker: I have been listening to the repetition, but I think that he is summing up at this particular time.
Please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That's correct, Mr. Speaker.
I should say that I tried to read the ten or fifteen pages that the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said over quite a few days. I think I underlined four lines out of it that I found relevant to me. Anyhow . . .

In summary, and I am moving through my points, the motion will stop any power hungry politicians—

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, you don't like that, I'm sure. Who would want to change the Constitution without going back to the people? That is a very important democratic right. That is a very important democratic right. If somebody truly represents the people, then if they are going to give themselves or their colleagues more power through the Constitution I say go back and get the public to confirm it in a referendum.

And you know, Mr. Speaker, there are those who fear that because they know that the public of this country is very alert, very astute. They will not give any single politician, in my view, such as a Chief Minister, those absolute powers that have not only destroyed, but also corrupted many of our neighbours throughout the last two decades.

Vision 2008, the National Strategic Ten Year Plan, quite rightly put forward in this motion itself the principles of a referendum and a referendum initiated by the people which we accept. Vision [2008] did not deal with constitutional change, but what they put forward, the referendum is obviously a way of dealing with any change, any amendment I should say, that would come about.

The question is really whether members of this honourable House are prepared to go back to the public in a referendum on major issues such as the amendment to the Constitution.

I would like to make it clear, again, that this motion is not saying that there can be no change to the Constitution or there can be no Bill of Rights. All it is saying is ask the public. And surely, honest, transparent politicians should have no problem with answering that with a resounding "Aye." Transparency, accountability, honesty, the way to get that done is to go back to the public for their guidance . . . unless some MLAs may not want to hear what the public has to say. Sometimes that is not necessarily what an MLA may want, but we have our duty while we are in this House to abide by the wishes of a majority of the electorate of this country and there is no way around that.

Those who short circuit it . . . , then the problems of the 1992 election are the clear evidence of what will happen.

I fully support a referendum to change or amend the Constitution. I am all for asking the public for guidance on such a major matter. As far as my manifesto will go, and perhaps I will ask the other members who are speaking if they would be prepared to be precise in their manifesto. I am prepared to put in there exactly what this motion says, that I would not amend the Constitution without a referendum.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There's a lot of noise on this, but, really, honesty and transparency . . . I believe that when politicians get to the stage of doing their manifesto for an election they should honestly put in there whether or not they are prepared to change the Constitution, amend the Constitution without going back to the public in a referendum.

I don't know how members will vote, but I would point out that an abstention is not a vote for a motion.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER
(Repetition)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Dr. Frank McField: The minister keeps coming back to the same point about the vote, about the positions that people take. He's been talking about this for three days. You assumed he was summing up, Mr. Speaker, and he is just continuing to repeat, and repeat and to try to drill that idea into peoples' heads as if it were the only point to be debated here today.

The Speaker: I would ask you to try not to repeat the same thing too many more times.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Sir, I am just about finished.
So, regardless of whatever the play with words (and this is the first time I am using "play with words" sir) may be on this motion—whether it is called "amendment" as the motion says, whether it is called “change,” whether the play with words is called “advance”—regardless of what it is called, and regardless of whether there is talk about little changes or big changes, the one word I guarantee the public there can be no playing on as to what it means is the word “amendment.”

Politicians like to play with words. That is why that word was chosen. It encompasses any amendments. What I may argue as a little amendment (or, in Latin, a diminimus), someone else may say, or the public may feel it's a big amendment. And to put it beyond a doubt and make it totally clear, then in the interest of transparency and accountability the question is a very simple one that this House must answer on that third part of the motion, the amended part. And that is, Is this House prepared to go back to the public in a referendum before the Constitution is amended?

The government supports the motion brought by the backbench. The government has merely strengthened the motion with a very clear amendment. And the question is simple. How members vote is up to them. But at the end of the day, on that third amended part of the motion, the only question that it really boils down to is, Are members, in the interest of accountability and transparency, prepared to let the public have its say on any amendment to the Constitution? For my part, I give that clear undertaking.

I am happy to abide by the views of the public and what guidance they give me though a referendum, and there can be no doubt that that is the most precise way to get the view of the public. There can be no arguing in this House once the public has spoken in a referendum. We can all go to the public and come back with different views. But a referendum, as the main motion says, is the way to go.

Many politicians don't like a referendum because it does take away a lot of what they regard as their power. In fact, the power comes from the people through the election.

So, adopting the motion fully with the amendment, I hope that honourable members will answer that simple question that I put when they get up to speak, and that they will also give an undertaking not to change the Constitution of this country without a referendum where they are given specific instructions by the public, whether we call it “people power” as some of them have called it, or “transparency and accountability.” I prefer transparency and accountability, Mr. Speaker, because this is the true test now of transparency and accountability.

Finally, I can make those pledges. I can say that I am going to put that in my manifesto because you may not like to hear it—

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: [Addressing the Honourable Minister of Education] Please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I have about two sentences left, Mr. Speaker.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I can't understand what is upsetting people so much when I talk about transparency and accountability. I didn't coin the phrase.

I am merely trying to ensure that all members of the House understand clearly that this motion is about transparency and accountability to the public. And if they indeed represent the public, I am asking them to please vote for the amended motion. It is good for the country. It will ensure that our children for generations to come will be assured that nothing will be done in this honourable House in the boiler room or anywhere else to hurt the country.

I believe all members are for the good of the country. I am asking them to please vote for it. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate. Does any other member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: The more I listen to certain members, the more I realise that God gave us all different gifts—some to be rich but boring speakers, and some to be poor, but absolutely penetrating, gripping and energetic speakers. Mr. Speaker, believe you me, I wouldn't have it any other way but the way I am—poor, but good speaking.

The motion went from a simple motion asking for a referendum law, to constitutional change, to the heart and soul of honourable members and all around the universe. I hope that the Chair would be so disposed as to give this poor Third Elected Member for Bodden Town—sometimes referred to as the “Last” Elected Member for Bodden Town—the same courtesy and leeway that was given other members, particularly the last honourable minister who spoke. I will give the Chair the assurance that I will not send the Chair to sleep!

Mr. Roy Bodden: I want to talk about the business of referendums as they have come to be known in this part of the world. Perhaps the most famous of those referendums occurred in the 1960s at the break-up of the Federation when Sir Alexander Bustamante decided to go to the Jamaican people to ask them if they wanted to opt out of the Federation and go into independence, so he had a referendum.

Prior to that, the referendum was not a popular part of Westminster style democracy, particularly in this part of the world. After that, we had the situation arise in Quebec when FLQ on some inspiration garnered from that mischievous French Prime Minister, Charles de Gaulle, when he made his famous Vive la Québec libre! Speech. They held a referendum too—twice under Prime Minister René Lévesque—regarding their departing or remaining with the Canadian Confederation. Subsequent to that, they held two more. In the western countries of the British Commonwealth, we have certainly had some experience with referendums.

In the United Kingdom, it wasn't until Tony Blair came to power that referendums were frequently held in the United Kingdom. In his short tenure, Tony Blair has held more referendums in the United Kingdom than any other Prime Minister throughout history. And you can check the record, sir.

One of the most famous referendums was held in Chile in 1978 when Augusto Pinochet—and that same referendum got him into a lot of trouble. Augusto Pinochet framed a question, and I want to read that question because it is important. He asked "In the face of international aggression unleashed against the government of the Fatherland, I support President Pinochet in his defence of the dignity of Chile." What Pinochet was not prepared for were the results he got from the referendum. The people voted against him. And he wouldn't do the honourable thing and leave office; he stayed in office. And I don't need to tell you what kind of trouble he's in now.

I say all of that to say that there are two types of referendums: There is the advisory referendum, and there is the mandatory referendum. We have been talking all of this while and we haven't said if our referendum is going to be advisory or mandatory. We have to understand that politicians must be given the liberty to take decisions that they see in their interest—which may not necessarily be the wish of the majority. Okay? So, we have to decide whether that referendum we are talking about is going to be advisory or mandatory in nature because there is a significant difference.

I was hoping that the honourable Leader of Government Business would have said what kind of referendum he was talking about. Is he proposing a mandatory referendum, or an advisory referendum? I believe the fact that 15 people are elected to represent their constituents gives them a certain license to make certain decisions.

I am happy to say that since 1989 I have had a change of heart. I have had a change of heart because I have done a significant amount of research. I believe that as the motion says, the referendum is an important an integral part of parliamentary government, particularly parliamentary democracy. So I don't have any embarrassment about saying that I have changed my position. But what I want to be sure of is that I, having been elected here, am not going to put myself in a position where every time I want to do something significant I have to conduct a referendum.

I will also show that referendums are very expensive. That is why they have to be left to only matters of national importance. A referendum is just as expensive as a general election. You have to go on the same campaign. There is a pro side and a con side to a referendum.

In the United Kingdom the government is now talking about limiting the funding. If you are going to have a referendum . . . do you know where the finances come for funding a referendum in some jurisdictions? The government. So the government has to give those opposing the question the same amount of money they give to those who are supporting the question. So we don't want to get into a position where every time we want to do something in Parliament we have to hold a referendum, and then spend the coffers dry holding the referendum. That is why I am saying that a referendum must be reserved for only matters of national importance.

One could be contrary and say that raising taxes is a matter of national importance, so shouldn't we hold a referendum on whether or not we are going to raise taxes? These are the kinds of things . . . building a high school is a matter of national importance. Are we going to hold a referendum to try to decide whether we should build a high school, or where we are going to build a high school?

Trust me, there is logic and merit to these kinds of questions. We have to enter into extremely acute definitions of even what these important national issues are going to be. We may well come to the point where we single it out to one or two issues. We may want to limit the referendum in the Cayman Islands to issues dealing with the Constitution. I will return to this later.

The matter is not as frivolous as some of us may think it is; it has to be well thought out. That is why we were proposing that a referendum law be struck. In my mind, that would be the instrument that would spell out most definitely, and would lend itself more easily to amending and changing the terms and conditions that you would like the referendum to cover.

I have to say at the very beginning that I don't believe, in all honesty, that there is one honourable member here who would try to change the Constitution of this country without widespread consultation with the people. I don't believe that there is any honourable member in here who is so reckless and irresponsible as to do that. And I bitterly resent insinuations that such persons exist in this honourable Legislative Assembly.

As far as consistency goes, Mr. Speaker, believe you me, but for the Grace of God all of us would be inconsistent. I heard the last speaker refer to "referenda" and sometimes I heard him call it "referandum." That in itself is a kind of inconsistency. So let us not be nit-picking and talking this little things when we are debating serious, serious issues.

I have listened intently and keenly, and I have tried to be as courteous as I can possibly be. And heaven knows, sometimes I was challenged to the umpteenth. I don't know how my lip is not bitten off, as many times as I had to bite it to stay in my seat. But I believe that all of us in here hold positions passionately. As I listened to the arguments of all honourable members who spoke, I realised that our positions are not polarised like the North Pole and the South Pole. If you listen intently to the arguments, we are very, very close to saying the same thing—in spite of all that has been said, and all we made it out to be. We hold very similar positions.

I believe that at the end of the day, when the vote is taken, . . . if I were a wagering man I would wager that there is going to be unanimity, or close to unanimity on whatever position we take. I don't think there are going to be any losers. I think we are all going to be winners because we all want the best for the country. But that is not to say that we should be denied the opportunity to exercise our position.

Mr. Speaker, I see you leaning. You weren't thinking of taking any—

The Speaker: I was going to ask if it was the wish of the House that we continue right straight through, or do you want to take a break?

Mr. Roy Bodden: I am prepared to go right through.

The Speaker: Let's continue then.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I believe that at the end of the day whatever position we arrive at will be a position for which the country will be better off. It will be a position that all honourable members will feel proud about arriving at, can defend arriving at, and I believe it will be a position that will be so complete that there will be no need for any further acrimony or debate. It will just be left for us to decide on how we are going to put it so that we can effect the best instrument.

In arriving at that position, I also realise that one of the reasons why we cannot do better in this kind of situation is that some people—myself included—harbour basic distrust and misjudge the intention of other people. That may be the nature of the beast; that may be the nature of politics. I don't know.

But I believe that all honourable members should be given the courtesy of standing up and saying their piece, defending their position, expounding what they believe in. That is the basis of true democracy and it is certainly what we think about practising in the Westminster style of democracy.

Now, I may not necessarily agree with everything the people are saying. But then I have to give them the courtesy to say that. I also believe that there are no ugly people inside here. I don't believe that there is any honourable member inside here who is so power hungry, as some people seem to suggest that they would go and subvert the system given the opportunity. I don't believe that.

I look around day after day (and I do so more than I would admit), every honourable member in here has demonstrated a certain responsibility, a certain pattern of behaviour that, certainly, if it has not endeared him or her to the voters, it has allowed him or her to gain the respect of the majority of voters so as to be re-elected in spite of overwhelming opposition and in spite of sometimes overwhelming odds against it. So I can't subscribe to the notion that there are persons in here whose intentions are so evil that, given the first opportunity, they will scorch out the Constitution and put in Chief Ministers. No, sir. I don't believe that.

Let me tell you what I am concerned about, Mr. Speaker. I really believe this from the deepest recesses of my heart. I would stand to argue this every day of the year if I had to. I want to arrive at a position where there can be no major constitutional change unless the people are consulted and have their input. Who is to say? It may be that their wishes are ignored. It may be that their wishes are denied. That is the business of the political directorate taking that decision. I certainly wouldn't take it. But what I want to be able to do is to allow a situation to happen so that for whatever reason if anyone thinks there needs to be a change they can do so, that it is within their realm as elected members of the Legislative Assembly to do that.

Where am I coming from? The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning wouldn't know this, but I have always been one to recognise the merits of the system we have. As I listened to that honourable minister speak, I realised that his politics and my politics are like North Pole and South Pole on many occasions. Not because there are no similarities, but because he's living in a little cloistered world where he thinks it's only he who occupies that kind of space.

I have to presuppose that every person elected here has certain intelligence. If they didn't they couldn't be elected here. Not necessarily because they had to dispense with the competition, but more importantly, they had to satisfy the concerns of the voters. And one of the basic concerns of the voters is that we have a stable, progressive kind of government.

I am happy that the minister has adopted the term "transparency and accountability." The challenge is to see if that is a temporary adoption or a permanent adoption. Trust me, Mr. Speaker, the minister is going to be put to the test—sooner rather than later—about those words "transparency and accountability" in more ways than one. This motion for the referendum is just the beginning.

When we get the referendum, the next thing will be going after will be a Bill of Rights. And then we are coming back with the ombudsman because all of this has to tie in to what we see as the direction the country should be going in the 21st century. So I hope the minister doesn't think that this is the end of his battle when he gets the vote; this is just the beginning.

But before I ramble too far, I want to show how there are certain similarities in the positions. Trust me (to borrow the expression from my friend the First Elected Member for George Town), I knew there was merit in the Colonial system of government, as practiced in the Cayman Islands, long before the minister. He still doesn't know that I know that there is merit. Do you know where the danger is? The danger with us is that we get prejudiced and we hold opinions about certain persons: Yet we have no desire to involve them in a conversation, and we jump to conclusions. Trust me, Mr. Speaker, where that minister is concerned I am eminently equipped to make this statement. I don't want to cite history because I don't want to deal in that kind of controversy, but there were umpteen occasions when that minister allowed his prejudice to stop him from really finding out what a person stands for. And it is my belief that it is hampering his relationship between persons like the Fourth Elected Member for George Town and me.

I am making a claim even greater than the honourable minister because I have documented that the reason why the Cayman Islands have done so well is because we were able to exploit the Colonial system to our advantage. I call it "voluntary Colonialism." And I have a project that I call "The Millennium Project."

Voluntary Colonialism wasn't my term. I first described it as "benign Colonialism." In the process of discussing it with Professor Rex Nettleford, he suggested that I change the term from "Benign" to "Voluntary" Colonialism. I argued that the Cayman Islands used its position as a Crown Colony, with the crafting of laws like the Confidential Preservation Relationships Law and other similar laws to craft an international financial centre. People were looking for a politically stable climate in which to invest their money. So we have used it.

I also contend that a lot of the problems we are getting into at this stage are what I call the "politics of envy." There are entities, including some of the metropolitan countries, that could not believe that the Cayman Islands, of all the places, could use this position (which was supposed to be a disadvantaged position) to do so well for itself economically and politically.

That being the case, I would be a fool to advocate any kind of political independence. So, if the honourable Minister of Education is trying to saddle me with that bogeyman, I am ahead of him! He doesn't have any document espousing that. But I have one.

We should try to shy away from these kinds of things. I believe that there is sense in the original motion. But I also believe that we have to take time to decide what we want to do. What kind of referendum law are we talking about? How is it going to work? Is it something that we are going to articulate fully in the Constitution? Or is it something that we are going to just have the merest of reference to in the Constitution and develop the intricacies in a law? Are the results going to be mandatory? Or are they going to be purely advisory?

Some honourable member, or minister, made reference to a referendum commission. Well, in some jurisdictions it is popular to have such a commission. But you have to understand that when you increase the bureaucracy you are also increasing the expense on the national coffers. And because you have a commission set up . . . to my mind that gives the connotation that if the commission is "set up," you have to find work for the commission. The mere fact that you set up a referendum commission means that you are going to have to find work for the commission to do.

You could extrapolate from that statement that the referendum commission is going to have to initiate a series of referenda to keep busy. Otherwise nobody will want to be appointed to the commission. They will become redundant if there is no work for the commission to do. So what is my position? I would be happy to set up a law that we only used when we needed it, and eliminate any possibility of increasing the bureaucracy and increasing the expenditure by setting up a permanent referendum commission.

Let me also say, the government . . . and this is a problem in the United Kingdom where Lord Neal [?] who has taken over from Lord Nolan on the standards of public life. What Lord Neal is trying to do in the United Kingdom is try to limit the power of the government to call referendums and to influence the results because the government can do that. The government has access to the coffers. So the result can go the way the government wants it to go and it can be inordinately skewed because if they control the financial resources and they spend more money on campaigning for the result they want, then the other side will be disadvantaged. So I want to lay out the position that while referendums and referenda can be an intricate part of the democratic process, the results can be skewed.

There are instances where they have been skewed. Or, better yet, the results can be ignored if it suits any political entity or faction. So, because we have it in the Constitution that we must hold and conduct a referendum before we make certain changes is not in itself an absolute guarantee that the people will have their wish; it could depend upon the kind of campaign conducted, the financial resources expended and so on and so forth.

It is also true to say that referendums are becoming more popular around the world. But I want to get back to this business about referendums and constitutional changes and constitutional amendments, because that is motivation and the primary reason we are debating this motion.

I believe that in 1993 the Chamber of Commerce conducted a questionnaire. It wasn't a poll. I don't believe it was scientific. It was a questionnaire that the Chamber circulated to its members. The results are instructive. This was in May 1993. Question 9 was "Should there be provision for a referendum in our Constitution?" According to this, and there was no indication of how many members were polled, but 74% said "Yes, there should be a provision for a referendum in our Constitution, and 26% said No." It was further broken down: 37.5% said by a percentage of voters only, 10.4% said by the Legislative Assembly only, and 52.1% said by either.

The second part of the question went on to ask, "Should the results of the referendum be binding or advisory?" Sixty-five percent said that they should be binding, 45% said they should be advisory. It then gave an explanation: "Three-quarters of respondents favour referendum. A full 89.6% of those who favour the concept feel that the public should be able to call for a referendum and a two-thirds majority feel that it should be binding."

We were saying that that was what we wanted: a provision that enabled the public to trigger a referendum.

In support of their view, they write, "If the idea is to have politicians call for them, then that defeats the purpose of the referendum. The voters are the ones who should have the power to initiate referendum, and if we are to be called a democratic country then the right to decide our destiny lies with the people."

While it is plain that a majority of those people polled in 1993 favoured a referendum, a significant portion of them was concerned that the public should have the right to trigger a referendum.

The challenge we have to get over—and it is a significant challenge—is that 65% said that the results should be binding. We have to find out if these attitudes are still the same. If they are, then we have to be careful. It would be my recommendation that while we put provisions for a referendum, or for any constitutional change to come about by referendum only, we should be careful that we do not box ourselves in. As I underscored, I don't necessarily believe that there is anyone in this honourable House who would be so reckless as to weaken their position by any constitutional change without consulting the people. But by the same token, I believe it would be foolhardy for legislators, once elected, to get themselves in a position where they can't do anything without holding a referendum.

I stop short of repeating myself as often as some people have, but I say again that we have to define what we consider to be important international issues. An important national issue does not only end with any change in the Constitution.

I believe that the National Team does not have the best record of consulting the people (and I say that tongue in cheek). You can put many things in a manifesto. Manifestos are only a prescription for success at the polls. Many things can be put in them with little or no intention of following through. One of the things the National Team put in their last manifesto was that they were going to consult the people regularly. Well, you tell me, Mr. Speaker, how regular has their consultation of the people been when they haven't held one public meeting since they were elected? And they certainly haven't conducted any poll.

That was in their manifesto. I don't believe that they want to go and consult the people at this stage—at least not if they walk the same marl road that I walk!

I can only surmise why the Minister for Education, Leader of Government Business, said that he was running as an independent because the National Team no longer exists.

That reminds me—talk about consistency—that there is an element of inconsistency in that. As I recall, the only person who declared that he was independent, on 27th November 1996 was the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. As far as I am concerned, he is the only one who has a licence to get up here at this time and say that he is independent. I didn't hear him make any pledges of alliance to any other faction. But he did have the good gumption on his television show the other night to say that he is creating a little distance between him and the government. I hope the wind blows him in the direction of us on this side here.

What is my position? I have always been honest with myself and with my constituents. When I brought this motion—and this is my second attempt at seconding this motion . . . but before I fully articulate my position I want to say that when the First Elected Member for George Town thought about this motion and came to me, we drafted the motion in rough. The conversation between us went something like this: We both agreed, although we were talking privately and confidentially, that this motion could be the ticket to re-election for the Minister of Education.

I want you to know that we anticipated that he was going to do exactly what he did: He was going to come with an amendment prepared to take the motion out of our hands to make him look like the good guy, and us look like the bad guys. But brains beat brains, and it shall not happen this time. So he has to find another horse to ride, he won't be riding that one.

I believe in being honest. I also believe in being sensible and responsible. Still, for all of that, I believe that there is a sense in which the people expect their representatives to articulate certain positions. I respect the right of the people to have a say in what happens in the country of significance. I would consider it a betrayal of trust . . . I would never expect to engage in any constitutional change without going back to my people. I would never do that.

I want to say—because it is necessary to create some distance between those who talk the talk and those who walk the walk—that I am in regular consultation with my people. I would never attempt to do something covertly. I have a history, heaven knows, of holding forums with them, publicly and privately. I am thinking now of changing my modus operandi because I have discovered that the demographics are changing and that people like to sit at home in the comfort of their living rooms and watch the television. So that is the route I have to go.

I am determined, with God's help, that I will not be a dinosaur. The Ice Age is not going to make me extinct. The 21st Century is not, with the help of heaven, going to make me extinct as a politician, as I predict it will make some other people, irrespective of the position they hold on referendum and constitutional change. I have been in contact with them over the White Paper and over other important issues. And while it is well nigh impossible to get a precise reading on all of the positions of the people, one can quite sensibly arrive at a majority position. Heaven knows that I have always exercised the pledge I made to be in contact with my people.

So I want to lay to rest any insinuation that I am so power hungry that I will attempt constitutional change through the back door. And I want to say that although I believe it was me who made popular the expression "boiler room talk," that was done tongue in cheek. I am not against talking in the boiler room about some issues because as anyone who has occasion to discuss family business will know, some business is better conducted in the drawing room before you go with it on the veranda. So I don't want to give the impression that I will betray any confidence or concern that someone has if they have an important issue which they think would best be dealt with in the confidentiality of the committee room before we take it to the wider public.

I respect the democratic right of every member in here to take a position. And if a member wants to advocate constitutional change, that is that member's democratic right. I am saying that I have to be convinced of its efficacy and I am not doing anything until I get the approval of my people. But I would never cry wolf on any person who harbours that idea because I am not so stupid as to believe that my idea should be the idea of all other honourable members inside of here. We are all different. And that is each person's democratic right.

But I can say that I have never, in the last little while, had reason to believe that there is any member on this side or any other side whose intention is to change the constitution. Far be that from the case.

So what is my position? My position is that the country is doing well under the system of what I call voluntary colonialism. I am sure that from time to time there will be some need and necessity to make assessments. And I welcome that.

We just heard from Mr. Alan Hool that the FCO is prepared to make such assessment. What would be the result of such assessment? I don't know. I full well expect that there is going to be some dialogue between us and them. We have also heard some other things which leads me to believe that the era of constitutional commissioners has passed. That is not the modern trend now.

I think what we are likely to have is a more direct consultation between the FCO and honourable members of the Legislative Assembly. And I am absolutely sure that Britain is not going to allow any change before it goes back to the people. But what I don't know is if Britain will accept the results of a general election, if people campaign on the issue of constitutional change; or if Britain will say it is not satisfied and we will have to show them the results of a referendum.

The history books show us that in the past, where Britain was convinced by a majority of elected members that the constitution was the subject of a general election, Britain accepted that work and accepted those results. I cited the case of Grenada, under Eric Gairy. I cannot speak for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. I am only speaking for myself. And since the honourable minister asked for that pledge, I have given him that pledge.

But given my record, and his record of consulting the people, my people are likely to be consulted by me more quickly than his would be by him. For in four years he hasn't gone to them once.

They had a Canadian Prime Minister once, Mackenzie King. He held seances; that's where he got his leadership style and decisions. Maybe some people hold seances. I try to hold public meetings where necessary.

Quite frankly, I fail to see the significance of all the aspersions and insinuations. It would seem to me, from the arguments by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, the First Elected Member for George Town, those honourable ministers who spoke on the government side, and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town (sometimes referred to by the Minister of Education as the "Last" Elected Member for Bodden Town) that our positions are similar

But the problem has not stemmed from the motion; it stemmed from the operating style of the Minister for Education who saw an opportunity to take the motion crafted by somebody else. The jackdaw gone with the Peacock's feathers. He changed it to suit himself, whip people and get a little political mileage. And I can't blame him for that because this is a house of politics.

The minister is clever at that. And he is singularly the greatest expert of that in this parliament because he did it with the long service and meritorious awards too, you know. That's what he did with that. The minister thought that he was going to outfox us. Which reminds me of the comment he made at the end of the first day's debate to the First Elected Member for George Town. He pointed to his head and said that we should never underestimate him. But he should also never underestimate us because we knew that that was what he was going to do.

I don't want to steal the thunder from the First Elected Member for George Town. He and I bet each other in jest that that was what he was going to do. In spite of all that honourable minister says, his dream is to arrive at a position in George Town where he, the First Elected Member for George Town, the Third Elected Member for George Town and the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, all share the same platform. I want to hear him get up now and say that is not so.

[laughter]

The Speaker: Have you completed?

Mr. Roy Bodden: No sir, I wanted to hear if the minister is going to say that isn't so.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House.

[General uproar and laughter!]

The Speaker: I think that would be quite appropriate.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 125
(Deferred)

No. 125: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture to provide the breakdown of the costs of maintaining and/or upgrading the major playing fields on Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac from September 1998 until August 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I will take the opportunity this morning to speak to the honourable member to indicate that we would not be in a position to give a full response to his question until Friday of this week. So, I will ask honourable members if it could be set down for Friday morning please.

The Speaker: I will put the question to the House that this question be deferred until Friday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The question will be set down on the Order Paper for Friday.

AGREED: QUESTION 125 DEFERRED UNTIL FRIDAY, 24 SEPTEMBER 1999.

QUESTION 126
(Deferred)

The Speaker: Moving on to Question 126, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town. As this question is directed to the Honourable [Minister] for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works, and he is absent, we will defer that question for a later sitting.

Moving on to Question 127 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 127

No. 127: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to provide a breakdown, by district, of the number of persons receiving assistance for housing for the year 1997 through May 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: A total of 70 persons were assisted in 1997; 71 in 1998, and approximately 34 so far for 1999. The breakdown by district is listed on the pages attached to this answer (See appendix).

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Would the Honourable Minister tell the House the procedure for obtaining such assistance?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, once a person has been identified for assistance, an assessment is made by the Social Worker from Social Services. A referral is then made to the Public Works Department who accesses what the cost of the project will be. This information is then given back to the Social Services Department who then, depending on the availability of funds and the need, will have it implemented.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House whether there is any ceiling on these individual applications for assistance or whether the ceiling is determined by the level of assistance needed and by the funds available?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the range that is looked at in the building of a house is between $34,000 and $40,000.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Honourable Minister if he is in a position to say why is there such a large disparity between the monies spent in the district of West Bay and the monies spent in the district of George Town, seeing that the district of George Town is a much large district?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, that's a good question and one that we were prepared for. The Department of Social Services has always found that the greatest number of persons seeking help in most areas of service usually come from the western district. It is also worthy to note that the oldest housing stock on the island is in West Bay.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to ask the Minister where he obtained this information from, that the oldest housing stock is in the district of West Bay.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I understand this information comes from Public Works.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

[Addressing the Fourth Elected Member for George Town] Do you have a follow-up on your previous question? Excuse me sir.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, if the honourable Member has a follow-up, I will give way to him, sir.

The Speaker: If it is a follow-up. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Would the Minister give a brief account of the application process—where is it initiated? Under what type of conditions? Is it initiated by social workers? by the applicants? or by politicians?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: There are a number of contact people. It can come from the Community Development Officer, it can be from the social workers who have identified and deal directly with these type of people in the community; and a person [who] has a concern can also make an approach to Social Services.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I wish to ask the Minister in those cases where applicants are prepared to contribute to the cost, is there any special dispensation made? And also if in these cases the applications are processed any quicker?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, no. Once the person has indicated that they will offer help that will also be assessed and the balance, which will then come from Social Services, would be included to finish the project.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House why there is at least one application in Bodden Town still outstanding for about two years now even when the funds were specifically voted for and approved in the Finance Committee for that project? The application is still in abeyance and the applicant is still without any assistance—and worse, since the time of the original application.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I am familiar with that one, and I have now been assured that this will be dealt with this year.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This question is just for clarity. In 1997, we had one project in the district of North Side. It was a new project. There were no projects completed; yet, an amount of $9,060 was spent in the district of North Side. Would the Honourable Minister explain what this money was spent on?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I don't have that information right here with me. It is possible it was an ongoing project, but I would give the undertaking to [provide] in writing which one it was.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: In looking at the 1999 figures, I notice that only $866 has been spent in the district of George Town for house repairs in comparison to $59,919 in the district of West Bay. How in the world can this be explained?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I am informed that the majority of the requests in the George Town area are for rental assistance and not necessarily housing.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could explain to the House the Government's policy regarding assistance with housing.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: In this area, the main focus would be, as I mentioned earlier, based on the needs assessment of people approaching, whether it be the community worker, the social worker, or the individual.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Would the Minister have any idea as to roughly what has been paid so far this year with regard to rental assistance for persons in the district of George Town?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, we don't have with us right now the district breakdown. Approximately $80,000 has been spent so far this year. But I will give that to the honourable Member.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Would the Minister be able to say approximately how much his department has spent with regard to rental assistance for persons in the district of West Bay?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: No, Mr. Speaker, I would give the undertaking to share this with the honourable Member.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If there are no further supplementaries that concludes Question Time for this morning. But before moving on, I would like to say that I did not receive apologies from the Third Elected Member for West bay but I would also recognise that it is his grandmother that has passed away, and we sympathise with him also.

STATEMENT BY MEMBERS/MINISTERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

(Standing Order 30)

40th ANNIVERSARY OF WOMEN'S RIGHT TO VOTE IN THE CAYMAN ISLANDS

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker and all honourable colleagues, tomorrow being the 23rd day of September, we will be commemorating the 40th anniversary of the elections in which Caymanian women had the right to vote.

Since that time, women in these Islands have made great strides, and are poised to enter the 21st Century as vital members in all sectors of our society. While each of us can credit our own hard work and determination and indeed give thanks to Almighty God for achieving our individual success, collectively, we owe a great debt to the women who have gone before us.

For many years prior to being granted the right to vote, Caymanian women made invaluable contributions to our society. In addition to being the wives, mothers, and caretakers as was seen to be their traditional roles, in times of need and crisis, Caymanian women often stepped into shoes traditionally belonging to men.

Their achievements and courage during these times were taken as a matter of course, and regarded as necessary to hold families, businesses, and indeed the whole society, together, during the years when men had no option but to leave their families to go abroad in order to provide for them.

Our women, perhaps even more so than women of many other western cultures, have long been thrust into the forefront and into decision-making roles. Our mothers, grandmothers, and great-grandmothers filled the dual roles of mother and father in many cases and yet did not expect special praise for so doing.

Their work and sacrifices, while always appreciated were placed secondary to their roles as wives and mothers. Their husbands, children, families, and friends appreciated their efforts at an individual level, but there was very little recognition from the society as a whole.

It was in that environment that the women of the Cayman Islands understood that without the right to vote and serve in public office in a democratic society, their contributions and achievements would never be recognised on par with the attainments of the men of these Islands. They realised that they were worthy of having that right to help determine the destiny of their country, through their fundamental right to play a part in this democratic process.

Today we may find it incredible that before 1959 Caymanian women couldn't vote, or be elected to public office. The strides that we have made since then make not having an earlier political voice almost unbelievable. We owe this voice to the women who petitioned to have their rights acknowledged.

In the 1940s and 1950s, Caymanian society was much different than it is today. Women, while still expected to handle any situation, were supposed to know their place—in effect, to be seen and not heard. The women who signed the petitions in 1948 and in 1957 requesting their right to be acknowledged showed bravery to stand up for what they knew to be right. Because of their efforts, women today do not think twice about having the inalienable right to cast their vote to determine the course of our country.

It is these women, and the women who have since served in public office and in our Legislative Assembly, to whom we must pay homage on this anniversary. They have paved the way for me, the other female members of the Legislative Assembly, and for every woman who takes part in this democratic process. We credit to them the fact that in today's political process, we are seen as equal representatives who are capable of protecting the interests of our people. Our thoughts matter, our voices are heard. For this we must give thanks.

Mr. Speaker, and honourable colleagues, gratitude is what we are showing this week as we recognise the role of women in our Caymanian history and in our legislative system. Yes, we will fill the more traditional roles of mothers, grandmothers, teachers and nurses of this society, but we are also filling the roles of doctors, lawyers, engineers, and yes, even politicians.

None of this could have come about without the signatures on those not so long ago petitions, and the force of those women working to ensure that the 1959 constitution allowed the women of the Cayman Islands to no longer be seen as second-class citizens.

I, therefore, urge everyone to take this opportunity to recognise the important part that women have played in the democracy in the Cayman Islands. We acknowledge and respect the role that our men have played and will no doubt continue to play. As we look back on the end of this century, we do with a sense of accomplishment and with the anticipation of the next century being charted by a mutually beneficial partnership between the men and women of the Cayman Islands.

I also take this opportunity to remind all honourable members as well as the members of the public that there will be a reception at 1.00 p.m. today at the Women Resource Centre to commemorate the 40th Anniversary of the Universal Suffrage of Women in the Cayman Islands.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Item number 6 on today's Order Paper, Government Business, Bills, First Reading.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

FIRST READING

THE HEALTH SERVICES (FEES) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Health Services (Fees) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Bill has accordingly been given a first reading and is set down for second reading.
Bills, Second Reading.

SECOND READING

THE HEALTH SERVICES (FEES) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Health Services (Fees) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the second reading of a Bill to repeal the Health Services (Fees) Law (1998 Revision), to provide for the fees to be paid by the patients of government hospitals on these islands and for incidental and connected purposes. With your permission, Mr. Speaker, and for ease of reference,

I shall refer throughout this statement to the Health (Fees) Bill, 1999 rather than to the lengthy title of the Bill itself.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill repeals and replaces the Health Services (Fees) Law (1998 Revision) and seeks to bring the Law in line with modern requirements, particularly in the light of the introduction of compulsory health insurance in the Cayman Islands. I would like to comment on the salient features of the Bill as presented:

Clause 3: Provides for the making of regulations by the Governor in Council, to specify the fees that are to be paid by patients in government hospitals and health care facilities. This clause has already provoked some comment as a headline in the Caymanian Compass of 8 September 1999 read, "ExCo seeks control over hospital fees." And an editorial in the same issue criticises the fact, ". . . that the bill will allow ExCo to raise fees without the spotlight of the Legislative Assembly shining on the fees first."

Mr. Speaker, as a matter of fact, the impetus to move the fees schedule from the law into regulations to be made by the Governor in Council came from the civil service arm of Government and not, as the headline implies, from the political arm. The reason for this was that it was considered administratively more expedient to have the Governor in Council establish, for example, a cost for a new procedure to be introduced at the hospital than it is to have to bring every such matter to this Honourable House for its approval.

However, all that said, Government recognises that there is much merit in having the health fees subject to scrutiny by this honourable House. I therefore propose to bring an amendment at Committee stage, which will make the regulations subject to negative resolutions.

Clause 4 of the Bill ensures that residents of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who are patients at the Faith Hospital will continue to enjoy a 50% discount over the listed fees unless they possess health insurance which would otherwise cover the whole cost of any service provided at the Faith Hospital.

Clause 5 exempts children of school age from having to pay health fees, but only subject to section 10. This, Mr. Speaker, is one of the changes from the original Bill. School children are dependants of their parents, and are therefore required by the Health Insurance Law to be covered by health insurance.

The effect of section 5 when taken in conjunction with section 10 is to allow school children to be treated free of charge for the minor cuts and scrapes that they might receive at school or for a medical condition not covered by the health insurance policy.

Clauses 6 and 7 exempt Caymanians and their spouses from charges for antenatal care and for contraceptive services subject to Clause 10.

Clause 8 provides that the Director of Health Services can waive all or part of the fees, if he is satisfied that a person is unable to pay for the treatment provided.

Clause 9 lists other classes of persons entitled to free treatment. This includes members and spouses of members of the Cayman Islands Seamen's Association and prisoners as defined in the Prison Law. These categories of persons are exempt from charges but are not listed as such in the Health Services (Fees) Law (1998 Revision), which is another change.

Subsection (2) of this clause regularises administrative procedures agreed with the two Seamen's Association in 1995 and has been in force since that time. Incidentally, Mr. Speaker, the [Caymanian] Compass article referred to earlier was not correct when it stated (and I quote), "The Bill proposes to extend free health care at government hospitals for a patient who is being investigated or treated for AIDS, tuberculosis or malaria, if so certified by the Medical Officer of Health. This is a change from the existing provisions." Mr. Speaker, this is not a change. It has been in the Health (Fees) Law for some years now and for sound public health reasons.

Clause 10 provides that the exemptions referred to in Clauses 5 through 8, and Clause 9 (b) through (e), shall not apply if the patient is covered by health insurance. Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to say that an error exists in this clause which needs to be amended at Committee stage. I circulated that amendment earlier on. I want to thank you for your permission to allow these two amendments to come at Committee stage which will improve the Law.

The Clause should read as follows, "The exemptions from and waivers of fees provided for by sections 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 (1a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) do not apply in respect of a person who is covered by health care insurance, which would otherwise cover those fees to the extent that such insurance cover is enforced." In other words, Mr. Speaker, it is intended that civil servants and their spouses and dependants be included in the list of those who have to use health insurance if they have it.

Clause 11 exempts from fees certain examinations and tests carried out for Government.

Clause 12 makes it an offence to provide false or misleading information when applying for exemption, a discount, or a waiver of fees.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, Clause 13 (which as I have said, I intend to amend at Committee stage) enables the making of regulations by the Governor in Council.

Clause 14 repeals the Health Services (Fees) Law (1998 Revision).

Mr. Speaker, my intention is that in the November sitting I will have these regulations ready. I commend this Bill to the House and ask for the support of honourable members. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Health Services (Fees) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. The floor is open to debate.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My contribution to the debate on the Bill before the House will not be very long, but I do have a few questions that I would like cleared up before the vote is taken.

This Bill, which is the Health Services (Fees) Bill, 1999, calls to repeal in Clause 14 the Health Services (Fees) Law, 1998 (Revision). Perhaps the Minister could give us a brief outline as to what the major differences are between the Law that is being repealed and this new Bill being presented to us.

Secondly, I may be wrong but I think it needs checking into. I think the Cayman Islands Seamen's Association, is now "The Cayman Islands Seafarers' Association." If that is the case, perhaps it is proper to address it correctly before it is made into law—a simple change. I just heard something on the radio recently, and that is why I am making the point.

The other question that I have to ask is in section 5 of the Bill, which the marginal note refers to as dealing with school children. That section reads, "Subject to section 10, fees are not payable in respect of a patient at a health care facility if the patient has not attained the upper limit of school age as defined in the Education Law (1999 Revision)." So, generally speaking, fees are levied on school children but it says, ". . . subject to section 10 . . ."

Now, section 10 refers to "The exemptions from and waiver of fees provided for by sections 5 . . . do not apply in respect of a person who is covered by health care insurance which would otherwise cover those fees, to the extent that such insurance cover is in force."

My question is, For the worker who has the type of health insurance coverage which takes care of his children of school age, if he or she who is responsible for that health care coverage knows that if there is no insurance they will still be dealt with, isn't he going to change his insurance coverage so that he doesn't have to pay for that? It is just something that came to mind. There may be a reasonable explanation, but if we are looking at it from the point of view of insurance coverage And I want everyone to bear in mind I am not suggesting that all children should not receive medical care. I just raise that point because in looking at it . . . and I take myself, for example. I am saying the thought would come to mind why pay more to an insurance company if there will be no fees levied to me even if I don't have the insurance coverage.

Now, there may be a reasonable explanation. But, as I said, in reading it the question comes to mind. So, perhaps the Minister could clear that up. I wasn't just bringing that up to play devil's advocate but I do believe that there should be a reasonable explanation, and suspecting that there is one, perhaps it is timely that it be addressed so that people don't fall into that trap if it is not going to do what I might expect that it would.

So those questions, Mr. Speaker, once they are addressed, will leave me in a position, once I am satisfied, to support the Bill. But just to be conscientious and be able to satisfy my own mind, I raise those few questions. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the Health Services (Fee) Bill, 1999, but I would like to underscore what the First Elected Member for George Town has just said. I had the same thoughts in mind when I decided to speak on this Bill.

My other concern, Mr. Speaker, if health insurance is now mandatory in the Cayman Islands (and I am not saying this to be mean), section 4 says, "Subject to subsection (2), a Caymanian ordinarily resident in Cayman Brac or Little Cayman who is a patient at the Faith Hospital in Cayman Brac is liable to pay fees at fifty per cent of the rate specified in regulations made under this Law."

If health insurance is mandatory, why is it that we are allowing only 50% of the fees to be paid if these persons have health insurance? Or is it not mandatory in those two islands? I just need the question answered.

Mr. Speaker, my other question is section 9 (1) (a). "Subject to subsection (2) and to section 10, fees are not payable by a patient at a health care facility if the patient presents a card issued or recognised by the Director of Health Services identifying the patient to be: (a) a public officer or the spouse or a dependent of a public officer (but only to the extent provided in the terms of employment of the public officer)..." Can I have this explained? I thought all civil servants (or most civil servants) were entitled to free medical. I do not know the procedure now, I do not know what we are speaking about when we say, ". . . the terms of employment of a public officer . . ."

Mr. Speaker, under section 9 (1) (f), "a patient who is being investigated or treated for AIDS, tuberculosis or malaria if so certified by the Medical Officer of Health . . ." Have we reached the stage in these islands where we should now give consideration to those patients who are on dialysis? The majority of those patients, I believe, come from families that cannot afford this expensive treatment and I think with such an illness they will not be able to get health insurance. Should we consider adding these patients to this section?

Mr. Speaker, I support the Minister's move that regulations should be brought to this House, particularly on fees. We hear many times both Government and Backbench speaking of openness and transparency. There is no better amendment that we could bring whereby this Legislative Assembly looks at the fees that will show that we intend to be transparent. And, I congratulate him on that amendment.

Mr. Speaker, with these few words, I offer my support to this Bill.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, many of the observations and comments that I would have raised have already been dealt with by both of my colleagues who preceded me in speaking. I only wish to say, Mr. Speaker, as a general observation that I have heard the Minister on numerous occasions express the desire to take politics out of the health care system. It is certainly an objective I encourage, and I applaud his efforts.

That being the case, however, I wish to encourage the Minister, and ask him for a commitment, that eventually he could come to the point where all of this type of business is placed in the hands of the Health Services Authority because to my mind that will be the ultimate solution. Even when we bring the fees from Executive Council to the Legislative Assembly there is sure to be some arguing and bickering, and probably some adversarial politics—particularly if it is close to elections. Persons may be tempted to jockey for popularity and positions although they know that the proposals are realistic and practical.

So, I would only wish to encourage the Minister to continue striving and making efforts to improve the health services and leave with him the encouragement and the promise of moral support that as he strives forward, he should set his ultimate objective on placing this kind of business in the Health Services Authority.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am sorry I had to leave the Chamber for a brief moment there. I had a call from the office that I had to attend to some business and I might not have been able to fully follow the introduction of this Bill by the Minister.

Mr. Speaker, in looking at Clause 4, residents of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, it reads, "Subject to subsection (2), a Caymanian ordinarily resident in Cayman Brac or Little Cayman who is a patient at the Faith Hospital in Cayman Brac is liable to pay fees at fifty per cent of the rate specified in regulations made under this Law."

I wonder if the intention here is that persons living in Cayman Brac will be paying fifty percent of the cost, that they will be subsidised fifty per cent. When the Minister gets up to answer, perhaps he could tell the people of George Town in particular, why this is so. As I referred to the situation with regard to housing repair, the disparity between what George Town receives . . . and I hate to come here and act as a kind of parochial politician. But what I find more and more is that the district of George Town gets left out and no particular consideration is given to the fact that we do have a lot of poor people in the district of George Town as well.

Now, with regards the fact also that this stipulation could have been put in here that some consideration . . . I want to know specifically upon what reason, what logic, this process that the Minister could arrive at this particular process to exempt persons in Cayman Brac who are not covered by health insurance from paying the full amount of what would be due to Government. And I have had people from Cayman Brac who have told me that they are not interested in welfare. They want to make sure that whatever it is that they get that they earn it and they don't want to be treated differently.

So, I don't understand the polices, how this has been with regards to arriving at a conclusion that they would be singled out, again by legislation, for preferential treatment. What are the grounds on which this is based? I would like the Minister to explain this to me.

Now, the fact that Clause 4 talks about fees payable by a patient at a health care facility may be waived in whole or in part by the Director of Health Services if he is satisfied that the patient is unable to pay all or any of these fees . . . Mr. Speaker, I don't subscribe to giving the Director of the Health Services that type of powers at this particular time. I can see no good reason why one person should have that kind of authority.

The issue of paying fees is a very emotive issue in fact, because it is not just a question of assessment of individuals, but in certain cases families are also assessed. There are situations that arise where the individual might not necessarily be supported by his or her extended families and might not present the ability to pay the fees and might not be beneficiary of some health insurance and something might have to be done here. So, I am not against that consideration but I am concerned when this consideration and decision can be made by one person, that is, the Director of Health Services.

Now, the whole purpose of health insurance is another question here. All persons in the Cayman Islands will be required by law to be covered by health insurance and will have to have their families covered by health insurance. So, the only persons that are not covered by health insurance are persons that the health insurance companies refuse to cover because of some specific reason like the health of the person. In that particular case, I believe that Government has also legislated for there to be a certain amount of money, which is paid by the persons who are covered by the health insurance polices into an account that would be then used for persons that cannot be covered or indigent persons as well.

I need to be able to understand from the Minister as well, what the specific difference between somebody considered to be an indigent individual incapable of paying medical fees and somebody who is by reason of not being insurable responsible for paying medical fees. So, if the persons that we are talking about in Cayman Brac, for instance in section 4 (1), are persons that are not insurable but they are not indigent . . . in other words, we might have a millionaire that might not be insurable but the person is not indigent. We might have someone who has high blood pressure, who is overweight that is not indigent but at the same time is not insurable. To what extent [does] this particular clause affect those types of persons and what kind of authority is the Director of Health Services being given in order to decide whether or not persons pay the fees?

And, in the case of Cayman Brac, people like these only have to pay 50% [while] somebody living in the district of George Town, who has high blood pressure and not insurable has to pay the full amount.

Mr. Speaker, these are these kinds of discrepancies—although I had to go to my office to attend to some urgent business, I came back here and picked this up and right away it becomes obvious to me that these are built-in instances of discrimination. I have to be told what this discrimination is based upon. Why discriminate against a person in the district of George Town who is uninsurable, who has diabetes, who has to go to the doctor on a regular basis and still ends up having to pay the full amount—not 50%. But if the person changed their residency to Cayman Brac, he would only have to pay 50%—what kind of logic is this? Seriously, I don't know.

The fact that this has come before us and I have not seen a copy of this before . . . and I do believe, Mr. Speaker, that we have waived Standing Orders in order for it to come before the House at this particular time.

[Inaudible comment]

Dr. Frank McField: Okay, we had in the White Paper, I am told. So, it is my ignorance rather than—

[Inaudible comment]

Dr. Frank McField: The Member from North Side just helped me out. She said we had it so long that I forgot. Thank you.

But basically, Mr. Speaker, when we are making legislation we need to understand that it is important that everybody feels that the law treats each individual within or around the same. If there are any extenuating circumstances that would cause us to create legislation for preferential treatment under the law, then this should be explained to the fullest. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The floor is open to debate. (Pause) It appears that no other Member wishes to speak. Does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

First of all, I would like to thank all honourable members who have spoken and those who have not for their tacit support. I would like to address first the major differences between this law and the 1998 Revision. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, there are not a lot of differences.

The first one is civil servants, pensioners and school children are to use health insurance when they have it. The point made in regard to that, the way we put in there for the school children was as if they were at school and fell and got scratches and minor stuff. We have a nurse there and we did not see the logic in charging the children for that. It is mandatory under section 4 (2) of the Health Insurance Law that the employers cover the children. So, this does not waive the responsibility of the person to cover the children.

The other difference, Mr. Speaker, [is that] the Director of Health Services, rather than Government, can waive fees. As a matter of fact, the Director of Health Services represents the Government. I know the Fourth Elected Member from George Town mentioned this in his contribution. It is written in there that he waives it. But per se, Mr. Speaker, what happens is a person presents and a committee makes an assessment on this person. So what it really boils down to is advice from a committee to the Director of Health Services [and] this decision is made.

Seamen and prisoners are exempt at present, but not in the present Law, and are included in this revision.

The other change, Mr. Speaker, is in regulations subject to negative resolution. At present, the fees are in the Law and this, as I said, I will bring this amendment to allow this to take place.

I appreciated the First Elected Member for George Town pointing out the change of name from the Seamen's Association. The correct name is the Seafarers' Association. We will have to verify this.

Mr. Speaker, the Member from North Side and the Fourth Elected Member from George Town spoke in regard to the fees for Cayman Brac. My understanding [is that] historically it has been this way, and I think this was based on when the health care facilities were built in Cayman Brac, the Cayman Brac population contributed land and significantly worked on the facilities. This was in the last Law and it was brought forward. I think, this is why that is in there.

The other point is that if people in Cayman Brac (and this is section 4 (2) of the Law) . . . "subsection (1) does not apply [which says Caymanians ordinarily resident in Cayman Brac] in respect of a person who is covered by health care insurance which would otherwise cover the whole cost of any service provided at the Faith Hospital."

Mr. Speaker, another good observation made by the Member from North Side was in regard to dialysis. Consideration was given to this, but we felt, as we do with people that can afford this process, assessment would be made and if they need help as usual, Government would assist them.

I would like to thank the honourable Member from Bodden Town, my colleague, who addressed the area as we go forward in regard to the Health Services Authority. I think this is a good point. At some time in the future, this will come to pass. As a matter of fact, under our National Health Strategic Plan, this was one of the areas that has been talked about and plans have been developed for it.

As I said, in regard to the Director of Health Services having the power to waive the fees, I understand this has been there since 1993. Maybe the wording should have indicated that it was on advice of the Assessment Committee.

Back to the Member from North Side, it has been pointed out that section 9 (1) (a) has been put in there to cover cosmetic surgery and a number of other things. But we can talk about this further at the Committee stage.

Mr. Speaker, in closing, I am pleased to say that with the assistance of the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development, the Management Council of the Civil Service Association, and the Honourable Chief Secretary's Office, Government has been able to finally come to a stage where we will be able to enter into an agreement with a private insurance carrier to provide health insurance for civil servants. In other entitled cases, the name of the company that has been awarded the contract through the Tenders Committee was Caribbean Home Insurance Company. I know the Acting Third Official Member and many other people within the government system have done a lot of work on this.

This is something we have been working on and have been looking forward to for quite a long time. There was a gap in the coverage of health insurance, which with civil servants, their families, and the other entitled members probably covered between 8,000 - 10,000 people. By being able to get this coverage in place, I think it will go a long way in alleviating the difficulties within the civil service system especially when a civil servant has to go overseas and God forbid, if they had to spend anytime in intensive care or the critical care unit, where I understand under General Orders, they were required to pay the difference between the bed cost there and the bed cost here in Cayman. This has been a significant and detrimental impact to some civil servants and I am pleased to know that hopefully by the end of this year, we will be able to have this implemented.

I have also spoken to the Acting Third Official Member, and I know more details will be given. But I just wanted to take this opportunity to say how pleased the Government is, and I feel the entire Legislative Assembly will be, that we have been able to put one more piece of this puzzle into health insurance coverage for the Cayman Islands. Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question. The question is that a Bill entitled, The Health Services (Fees) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Bill has accordingly been given a second reading.

AGREED: THE HEALTH SERVICES (FEES) BILL, 1999 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider a Bill entitled, The Health Services (Fees) Bill, 1999.

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE—11.44 AM

COMMITTEE ON BILL

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and such like in this Bill?

Would the Clerk please state the Bill and read its clauses?

THE HEALTH SERVICES (FEES) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Health Services (Fees) Bill, 1999.

Clause 1. Short title.

Clause 2. Definitions.

Clause 3. Fees payable by patients of the health care facilities.

Clause 4. Residents of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Clause 5. School children.

Clause 6. Antenatal services.

Clause 7. Contraceptive services.

Clause 8. Waiver of fees.

Clause 9. Fee treatment.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 9 do stand part of the Bill. They are open to debate.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, with regard to the authority given to the Director of Health Services . . . and the Minister has said the Director of Health Services will not on his own have to be satisfied but if a patient is unable to pay this would be done through a Committee. I wonder with regard to my question then on section 4 (1) dealing with the Caymanian ordinarily resident in Cayman Brac, whether or not it would be possible to take out [section] 4 (1), since [section] 8 allows the Director of Health Services to make decisions with regard to persons that he is satisfied are unable to pay.

We are not dealing with any kind of economic qualifications here. The qualification is basically being a Caymanian ordinarily resident in Cayman Brac, and I do believe that the Government has to show somehow that if it is going to make that exception to Cayman Brac, why that exception couldn't be made for George Town.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I give way to my colleague from Cayman Brac who may shed some more feeling on this.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: On behalf of Cayman Brac, by way of mitigation I would say, as was said by the First Elected Member from George Town a bit earlier on, the people of Cayman Brac saw the need for a hospital many years ago. Not only did they see fit to donate the land but labour and construction and everything was done. In fact, as I recall, the hospital was built and then Government came on for the recurrent.

Now, Government did make a substantial investment as far as it relates to Cayman Brac [but] not when it compares to what was put in for capital and investment for the hospital in George Town (when the last Minister was in), I believe to the sum of $1 million.

So, Mr. Speaker, it is not just at one spectrum that we are looking. The people in George Town and the rest of the other five electoral districts have a very modern and sophisticated hospital that cost this country many millions of dollars, and I believe it was money well spent. But we at the Brac, although there is paper access, many times don't have the free access when there are emeremergencies and other things. So, if we would want to set off the capital investment that Government was saved by the people of the Brac taking the initiative in constructing their own hospital as compared to Grand Cayman, that in itself would give us a long time of "free medical."

The other factor is that a lot of the residents on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are actually members in one form or other of the Veterans' and Seamen's Associations. So in actual fact, most if not all of the island would already be getting free medical. So, the fact that you are saying 50% are taking it even closer to what the Fourth Elected Member for George Town is endeavouring to get. But I think we cannot forget that significant economical contribution that the people of Cayman Brac made in exercising that initiative.

The other consideration that I believe we need to address is the economic condition. I know that it is said that the Director here can exercise it based on need. Again, there is a geographical difference. This is a very real difference in that we almost have to be there in the jurisdiction. We don't have the commercial activity or the private sector that is offered in Grand Cayman, and even with the Health Insurance Law, it has brought quite a bit of financial hardship on the people not wanting to be in contravention of the Law, but the means are just not there to do it.

I believe that all honourable members when they look closely at the situation, will concede justification and I would be in a better position to concur with my friend, the Fourth Elected Member from George Town, if indeed there were no provision made for an assessment on a needs basis for the people in Grand Cayman but there is a situation there. And I would submit, sir, that puts them in a better situation because if the needs assessment [says] they cannot afford it, then it is a 100% waiver.

I thank you for your patience, sir.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, just as a follow-up on this, I have also been reliably informed that has part of the lease which covers Faith Hospital, this is probably something that is in there.

Dr. Frank McField: Probably? Who owns the Faith Hospital?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I would have to get the contract to make sure, but this is what I have been told.

Dr. Frank McField: Are you telling me that the Minister of Health doesn't know who owns the Faith Hospital sir?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Well, I would assume it is the people of the Cayman Islands.

Dr. Frank McField: Cayman Islands being the plural Cayman Islands not the singular Cayman Brac?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I would rather get the lease, I have not seen the lease on the specific area but I will get this information for you.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Chairman, I do believe that this is a very important part of the debate because if the Minister is exempting Cayman Brac based on their owning that hospital, then it would be good to know whether or not this is the case for those of us that will be asked to ratify this legislation. It is a very important piece of information, if he has based his arguments upon it.

But, I would like to say with regard to the arguments brought forward by the Minister and representative from Cayman Brac that I understand what she is saying and I would like to be able to argue this way for people in George Town also. I believe that the Minister might have argued this way for the people in his district as well. But if we are going to have clauses to exempt people without any kind of qualifying criterion other than that they are ordinary residents of Cayman Brac . . . I mean what are we saying here? How long will this Law last? How long will this be applicable? Will it be for eternity? For the next 25, 50 years? How long?

What about those persons who grow up and never contributed anything? What about those persons who are returning, who might not have contributed anything to the Faith Hospital? Just because other persons have contributed doesn't mean that these persons should now be exempt. Basically, the rationale behind this . . . and I am not saying that Cayman Brac should not be exempt for 50%, but I am saying if Cayman Brac should get 50%, then Caymanians ordinarily resident in George Town could benefit from paying 50% of their medical fees as well. A lot of people could benefit.

I want to know before I vote for this particular clause in here, why it is considered to be okay to have the Health Director and the Committee decide who should pay or not pay in George Town, North Side, East End and in Bodden Town, but in Cayman Brac it is automatically put in the Law that the persons in Cayman Brac [who are] paying fees that are Caymanians ordinarily resident there would only have to pay 50%—not 75%, but 50%.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, from the time I came to this Legislative Assembly, certain legislation of this nature has been in place. We know historically, specifically relating to Faith Hospital, the significant input by the Cayman Brac people into that. If certain members are not comfortable with this, all I can say is we will have to put it to the vote and see what happens.

The Chairman: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I am uncomfortable with this not because of the people of Cayman Brac. I am uncomfortable with this because of the way in which the Government is making decisions, bringing policies here to this Legislative Assembly.

We know that Cayman Brac enjoys a lot of duty concessions as it is. The people of George Town do not have these concessions. We have four elected members for George Town. I said this morning that when we start playing parochial politics, members of George Town, at least this one is forced into making those kinds of considerations as well, especially when elections are coming. If other districts get, and get, and get, and we cannot get anything for our districts our people are going to question our performance.

So, if we are going to play by the rules then all of us need to be paying attention to the central kitty. In other words, when we come back here in November for the budget—when we know the Health Services needs a lot of money—when we know it is going to cost something like $45 million to run these services annually and you feel that you can be so generous, Mrs. Minister, as to put this in legislation, I am going to question this when you come with your budget. The generosity . . . if you can afford it, I am asking you why can't you afford this generosity for the people of George Town.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, when one looks at section 4 (1), it does not say a Cayman Bracker. It says, ". . . a Caymanian ordinarily resident in Cayman Brac . . ." So it does not prevent anybody, legally speaking, from Grand Cayman from coming across to the Brac—including my good friend from George Town. I will be happy to have you there. That's a joke by the way.

But also, Mr. Speaker, there is a proviso in section 4 (2) where it says, "Subsection (1) does not apply in respect of a person who is covered by health care insurance which would otherwise cover the whole cost of any service provided at the Faith Hospital." So, it is not a floodgate provision; there is a stopgap, as it were. If they have insurance and are capable of paying, this would come into effect.

From a more economic perspective, if you wanted to get into parochial politics, when one looks at the demographics of the district of George Town and the whole economic make-up and sets it into the percentage of Cayman Brac, investors and owners of locally controlled companies here, one would see that a significant number of those are Cayman Brackers who actually pay their duties, taxes, levies and all other contributions in here.

So if we really want to get to pensioners, I could easily at some stage make a request that all the contributions made by Cayman Brac businessmen in the district of George Town, be put into a separate fund for Cayman Brac. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, we would never have to get a subsidy in this Honourable House.

The Chairman: Thank you.

Dr. Frank McField: Well, Mr. Chairman, I don't want to get involved with the Honourable Minister for Community Affairs or for Cayman Brac with regards these particular issues because she obviously knows that she is trying to create the impression somehow that what I am arguing about here is what Cayman Brac people get and she knows that is not the case.

I am arguing the logic of Government creating preferential legislation that would affect one group in the island one way and another group in the island the other way. She said she is a lawyer. She has a legal mind. I know she is a lawyer. So she knows that the crux of my argument is not that Cayman Brac should have but that they all should have.

I am asking her to change this particular clause to include the people of George Town as well—not to exclude the people of Cayman Brac—because it has already been proven to me that the Minister knows what the Health Services will be from the point of view of the revenue which it needs and it could be generous enough, perhaps, to do that. I would like to encourage the Honourable Minister to do that at this particular time.

As to the duties that are paid in this country, the duties are consumption duties. The taxes are consumption taxes, so it is not the business person from any particular region that pays the taxes, it is the people who consume what the business person provides, be it services or goods that are actually responsible for paying the taxes because these people do not pay out of their pockets the taxes in this country.

Now, that again is a debatable point but that is not what I am saying when I talk about subsidies to Cayman Brac. I am not talking about the fact that it should not happen, that is not what I am saying. I am asking what can my district and the people in my district—the poorer people especially, in my district also have. We have four people that can vote. You have two people that can vote. If we come down to a question of whom gets what we can outvote you in areas. But we have never played that politics and I am not suggesting that we play that politics.

Obviously, it is not my intention to exclude people in Cayman Brac from having certain advantages. But, in giving them the advantages, we must look at the entire system and the ability of the entire system to make those concessions.

The Chairman: We are in Committee, I think if we are going to go into substantive debate on this, we need to put a substantive motion before the House in the next session.

Is there any other debate on this? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, just for my information because there seems to be a bit of confusion and I am not debating or defending or supporting the previous statements that were made, but with regard to waiver of fees for school children. In the case where the parent has an insurance policy in place and they go to the hospital for treatment of a student, how does that work? Is the waiver only in those cases where the parent doesn't have the insurance coverage? Is that the case? What is the position?

I was discussing this just this morning with one of my constituents and there seems to be a bit of confusion.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, first of all, the parents would be required as the Health Insurance Law, 1999, section 3 (2), says, that the employer or the person must effect and continue on behalf of his unemployed spouse and children.

If the position here in section 5 is, as I said earlier, if children are at school or get a scrape or something and taken to the hospital, we feel within Government that we should not charge at that time for them. But under the Law, the parents are responsible. If there is something, say a certain ailment should come up and it is not covered under the Health Insurance, then Government would consider assisting them.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: But in those cases where there is insurance in place, the parent will be charged for that service?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: They must use their insurance coverage, yes.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Okay, thank you.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just to follow-up on what the Third Elected Member from West Bay was dealing with, and I raised the issue in the original debate. My question is basically, how does this thing work? While I understand exactly what the Minister is saying, and I don't have any difficulty with that thought—about children getting injured or hurt during school hours or while they are playing a game of soccer or anything like that—what happens then in the instance where a parent brings a child to the hospital, what is the type of means test?

I mean, if a question is asked across the counter, 'Is there any health insurance?' and the person says, 'no', what happens then? Bear in mind regardless of what anybody is talking about it is better not to claim than to claim, even if you have it. We all know that, I mean, that is a premise that if you can avoid making a claim regardless of being a good citizen and wanting Government to get it's just due. But all I am trying to find out is how this thing is actually going to work because I really see the possibility.

The way the Law is worded now . . . I understand what its intention is. I see the possibility of a lot of people who have health insurance not wanting to go through the problems of having to fill out paper work, having to make claims and all this type of stuff when it comes to the insurance if they can avoid having to deal with that and getting treatment for the children free. I don't know if you understand what I am saying but unless there is another explanation for it, I see a lot of that happening. I raise it because it is better to deal with it now than to find out the horror story afterwards.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, once again, that is a good question. The individual would be asked if they had health insurance and as I said earlier on, this is required by Law. If, for whatever reason, they do not utilise this under section 12, this is where the penalty would trip in. But I think as we go along, as people start to get used to the system . . . we are still in a learning curve and even I, who had insurance from way, way back . . . it is a period of adjustment.

I don't think that people will be penalised per se until there is a better understanding of how that person can access and get the benefit back from the health insurance claim—if that makes sense.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Again, I quite understand what the Minister is saying. And if the premise under which the Government is operating is that this in itself will cause instances like my hypothetical proposal to occur, but gradually become less and less, after people become acquainted with and understand the benefits with it, perhaps, I won't pursue it much further. But when you talk about penalties, who is going to pursue it? Who is going to make sure that whatever needs to be verified is verified, et cetera?

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, in this situation, as I said earlier on, and I have just been informed that once the question has been put in regard to the individual having coverage, if it is discovered that the coverage is not there for the parent and ultimately the child, it is the responsibility of the hospital to notify the Superintendent of Insurance to follow-up on this.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, through you, sir. I understand you (and I am not going to make a big case of it), but my view is that perhaps the better approach would have been from the other way around rather than the way that it is being approached now. If there are specific ways or specific instances that can be generalised where the Government feels that a child should not have to pay (and I am not taking the case one way or the other) then why not deal with those instances rather than make it such a general statement in the law where you might encounter all of these problems?

If you had worded it from the other point of view then one would have to work on the premise that this is the way it has to be rather than try to make discovery and determine the facts otherwise.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, this is a good observation made by the First Elected Member for George Town and the Third Elected Member for West Bay. This is something that I am not averse to looking at and we can discuss this further on. I thank also the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town because I think he is aware of a number of these things.

The Chairman: Is there any further debate?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: On anything at all or just for that—

The Chairman: From Clauses 1 through 9.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I think that would include the question that the Member for North Side had recently with regard to treatment for people on dialysis. On [Clause] 9, I would like to see with regards free treatment if the Minister would be willing to see if he could persuade us, at least me, why AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria should be treated but not the sickness that needs dialysis treatment.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I am made to understand the reasoning behind this [is that] those three diseases listed there are communicable diseases and could prove a public health risk. But as I said earlier on, if there is someone that needs help with dialysis, we do what we always do, we help them.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable Minister would consider that section 8 be amended after the words, "Director of Health Services" [adding] 'after a full assessment has been carried out and he is satisfied that the patient is unable to pay all.'

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I have no problem with that, Mr. Speaker.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Chairman, I think it leaves the Minister to move a motion that that amendment be done because I would have had to give notice, I believe.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I so move the amendment as suggested by the Elected Member from North Side and supported by the First and Fourth Elected Members from George Town.

The Chairman: Please read it slowly.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Chairman, I will read it very slowly and ask the Honourable Attorney General to say if it is correct and can be included in those words that I am going to read.

It's section 8, after the words, "Director of Health Services" we insert 'after a full assessment has been carried out and he is satisfied that the patient is unable to pay all or any part of the fees.'

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In my opinion in order for the Director of Health services to be satisfied that a patient was unable to pay all or any part of the fees, he would have had to carry out a full assessment

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just a second, please, if I may just say.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I am tending legal advice and I would prefer to be allowed to do that and to explain why I am doing it.

The Chairman: Please continue.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: If the advice is not accepted, then so be it. I prefer to do it without interruption, if I may ask for that privilege. Thank you.

In my opinion, as a matter of law—and that is the only matter upon which I am commenting—in order for the Director of Health Services to be satisfied, he would, as a matter of law, be required to carry out a full assessment. Otherwise, he would not have a basis upon which to be so satisfied.

It is difficult to prescribe in the law what "full" adds to "assessment," in my opinion, because that is a qualification of the word "assessment," unless somewhere the details of that assessment are going to be prescribed. Now, that is possible to do, but my point remains that unless you give some meaning to the words "full assessment" and say what that ought to comprise, it's a matter of interpretation.

And, as I have indicated to you, I am not objecting to the amendment. So, let me just make my position clear. I am explaining to the House and to this Committee what my understanding of the word meaning, "if he is satisfied." It doesn't mean satisfaction in the sense of exercising an arbitrary discretion or satisfaction because he's got a minimum of information upon which to rely. He is required to carry out such assessment as is required to enable him to be satisfied, and if those words are desired by the House to be inserted, I am not here to object to them. I am simply offering my opinion as to what I think the present words mean.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Chairman, I think that the request was that certain words be inserted. Now, the Honourable Attorney General has said that this particular section, which reads, and I will read it, "Fees payable by a patient at a health care facility may be waived in whole or in part by the Director of Health Services if he is satisfied that the patient is unable to pay all or any part of the fees."

Now, there is nothing in this section that tells us about the process that the Health Services Director must involve himself or other persons in, in order to be satisfied. In other words, I can look at something and say I am satisfied by your answer, it is reasonable for me to be satisfied. And if I went to Court, I guess the judge would ask, 'would it be reasonable for me to believe that he was satisfied?' and it might be reasonable.

But the law can even be more specific. The law can say specifically what process the Director of Health Services should become involved with in order to be satisfied and I think that that is what I wanted in my original question with regard to this. I wanted the process to be defined by law that would cause the Health Services Director to be satisfied and not left to interpretation.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, I don't want to prolong a debate on this issue. My point really is that as a matter of law, in order to be satisfied the Director would have to carry out such enquiry as was sufficient in law to enable him to be satisfied.

So, it is not as I said earlier, an arbitrary matter. However, bearing in mind that laws are for people and not for lawyers, it may be that there would be a preference to spell out what the nature of the assessment would be. But my point in that regard is that saying, "full assessment" is a difficult thing to quantify and it might be more acceptable just to say, for example, "after a full assessment has been carried," by whom. It might be preferable to say if you want to put such wording into the law "after such assessment as may be prescribed in regulations made under this law," if you wish to particularise the procedure.

I am trying to say that there are some matters of detail that don't have to be put into the main law that you can leave to be prescribed by regulations. And if you are concerned to have a procedure and you are concerned to detail it, that would be the appropriate way, in my opinion, in which to give effect.

Thank you.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I apologise if I tried to jump the gun when the Honourable Attorney General was going to explain, but that was exactly what I was trying to say. I think the question that arises is understanding exactly what the Honourable Attorney General has said, bearing in mind that laws are made for people not lawyers.

The intention was to try to understand from the way the law was worded, the fact that it was not a solo effort by the Director of Health Services, who took it on his own simply to make the decision.

Appreciating what you have said (and I think, perhaps, while the Member for North Side made the suggestion) I think, perhaps what you have said might solve the problem and cure it, once we have commitment that it will be included in the regulations.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I would agree with that, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: If I may be permitted to adapt the original proposed amendment by the Elected Member for North Side. We might consider inserting in exactly the same place after "such assessment" [add] "as shall be prescribed in regulations has been carried out" or some such equivalent wording.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Chairman, I have no problem with that wording.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, would you care to comment.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I agree with that wholeheartedly, Mr. Chairman. It is good to see we could get this resolved amicably.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member, would you repeat the amendment once to the Clerk and write it down?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I think what was intended was after "such assessment" [add] "as shall be prescribed in regulations has been carried out." And the word "and" I think would need to be added, "and' if he is satisfied that the patient is unable as it says at the present time."

The Chairman: Is there any further debate on Clauses 1 through 9? If not, I would like to propose then that we put the question on . . .

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry, sir, my microphone was not on, I wanted to find out if it is not a good time now . . . has someone checked about the Seafarers' thing? Because if not, you are going to have to come back after it's done. Or can it be done then, once it is done before the law is actually accented to. Is that possible? If they find out afterwards that there is a name change, can it be changed like moving from the bill stage to law—from Seamen's Association to Seafarers' [Association] because it could cause a problem if there is a registered difference in the name.

The Chairman: At the opening of the Committee, members agreed that the Honourable Second Official Member could correct minor printing errors and such like in these bills. Would that be covered in that? The Honourable Second Official Member, since it is the wrong name.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: If it is possible that it is wrong, it would be better to try to get it right at this stage, if it can be done and as long as it is not going to hold up the business of the House too much. I have no objection to doing anything the House requires of me, but I would be reluctant to make an alternations of substance to any law under any—I am sure the House won't really wish that.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [Inaudible comment]

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I agree that it is better to find out now.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Chairman, we will undertake to get hold of Mr. Connolly, which is not an easy task I can tell you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I don't know if this is the case also but is there anywhere for us during the Committee stage to say, that if this is the case then, whoever the proper authority will have the authority then to do it without coming back to us. Can we do it like that? I don't know.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Chairman, I would make a suggestion that we leave the clause that has this in it. Do not put the question on that clause, but you can put it on the other clauses and leave that clause until we get the answer and then put the question on that clause so that you can carry on with the Bill.

The Chairman: I shall put the question on Clauses 1 through 7 that they do stand part of the bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clauses 1 through 7 do stand part of the bill.

AGREED: CLAUSES 1 THROUGH 7 PASSED.

The Chairman: There is an amendment to Clause 8.
The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: If the Honourable Minister has no objection, Mr. Speaker, I would move that Clause 8 of the Bill be amended so as to insert after the word, "services" on the second line, the following words, "after such assessment as shall be prescribed in regulations as been carried out and . . ."

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does anyone wish to speak to it? Okay, no debate. The question is that the amendment stand part of Clause 8. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. The amendment is passed.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 8 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 8 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 8 AS AMENDED PASSED.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The member suggested that I have the power to ask the Attorney General once the name is confirmed as Seafarers' Association that he can put that in before it is assented to. I don't know if he would have a comment on that.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I appreciate, Mr. Chairman, that it would probably be in accordance with the wishes of the House. If it is one single word and it is just a question of getting it right, I have no particular objection. I am concerned, however, to ensure that the integrity of law-making is maintained. I would appreciate your guidance on that matter, if you, as Speaker, are content with that procedure.

You have responsibility for the procedures of this House, then I will accept the mandate. It does fall into the category of a relatively minor matter and, therefore, I wouldn't stand too much on the principle if that were in accordance with your views.

Thank you.

The Chairman: I would consider if the name has been officially changed, then the new name would certainly stand in law and, therefore, that's what we shall have in it. It would be a minor change in my opinion.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, if the Committee is content to allow me to change the name, if necessary, to the new name . . .

The Chairman: Let me put that to the House, then. Does that please the House that the Attorney General do make the necessary change? Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. The Attorney General will make the necessary change in Committee.

AGREED: THE HON SECOND OFFICIAL MEMBER TO MAKE THE NECESSARY CHANGE IF THE NAME OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS SEAMEN'S ASSOCIATION HAS BEEN OFFICIALLY CHANGED TO THE CAYMAN ISLANDS SEAFARERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Chairman: I shall now put the question that Clause 9 do stand part of the bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 9 PASSED.

The Chairman: Would members want to suspend or can we continue and finish this Committee? It should not take long.

[Inaudible response]

The Clerk: Clause 10. Exemption not to apply in certain circumstances.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 10 do stand part of the bill. There is an amendment to Clause 10.

The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. That amendment has been circulated—that Clause 10 be amended by inserting "(1)(a)" after "9".

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Just for the avoidance of doubt, may I confirm with you that it is the name Cayman Islands Seamen's Association that is possibly in question?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [Inaudible comment]

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Very well. Thank you very much.

The Chairman: An amendment has been made to Clause 10. Does any Member wish to speak to the amendment? Is there any debate on that?

I shall put the question that the amendment stands part of Clause 10. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 10 AMENDED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 10 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 10 AS AMENDED PASSED.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Chairman, I have just been notified (and it takes the burden off the Committee and the Honourable Second Official Member) that the name is Cayman Islands Seafarers' Association. We verified this with one of the officers next door. Thank you.

The Chairman: Thank you.

The Clerk: Clause 11. Fees not payable for medical examinations carried out for Government.

Clause 12. Offence.

Clause 13. Regulations.

The Chairman: I put the question that Clauses 11 and 12 do stand part of the Bill. No debate? I will put the question that Clauses 11 and 12 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clauses 11 and 12 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSES 11 AND 12 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 13. Regulations.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 13 do stand part of the Bill—there is an amendment to this.

The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The amendment is that Clause 13 be amended by inserting the following new subsection after subsection (2), which would be a new 3: "(3) Regulations made under subsection (1)(a) shall be subject to negative resolution."

The Chairman: The amendment has been moved, does any Member wish to speak to it? The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation would you care to explain that further?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Chairman, as I said in my opening, this will give the Legislative Assembly the power where when these regulations are made by Executive Council that they will be tabled and then negated. If there is a concern or an objection then the opportunity would be there to debate.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: For purposes of clarity, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What I am understanding is simply that Executive Council will decide and approve these regulations but they will not be enacted until such time as the Legislative Assembly does the same?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: That is my understanding. I will hand over to the Second Official Member for absolute confirmation on that.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, my general understanding of negative resolution is that the regulations would be made that would be subject to a power of disallowance if they were resolved not to take effect in this House. That's my general understanding. I would have thought that this procedure would have been prescribed in Standing Orders and I am anxious at the moment to check the reference there, if you will bear with me.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, while he is checking that reference, just to add the reason why I asked the question. Does it then give the Legislative Assembly should it desire with these regulations to make any changes to what comes from Executive Council? Does it give the Legislative Assembly this authority or does it only give it the authority to disallow a regulation? That is really what I am trying to ask. I just want to know, that's all.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I was wrong in my reference. The reference should in fact be to the Interpretation Law. I am just checking as to the provisions relating to regulations.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Chairman, is the Honourable Attorney General looking at the Standing Orders?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: No.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: The Interpretation Law?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I am looking at the Interpretation Law.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, it's section 28(3) of the Interpretation Law—and it is not my interpretation. I will read from it, if I may. "The expression 'subject to negative resolution' when used in relation to any regulations shall mean that those regulations, as soon as may be after they are made, are to be laid before the Legislative Assembly, and if the Legislative Assembly within the statutory period next after any such regulations have been so laid resolves that the regulations be annulled, the regulations shall be void as from the date of the resolution, but without prejudice to the validity of anything done thereunder or to the making of new regulations."

In general terms, section 28(1) defines statutory period as a period of twenty-one days beginning on the day on which the regulations were laid before the Legislative Assembly. So that it would take a resolution to annul them, to cause them not to have effect.

[Inaudible comment]

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I see no provision for that but presumably that would be a motion brought by any member.

[Inaudible comment]

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Well, I don't know what the rules about motions say, Mr. Chairman, but I can look that up if you like. Thank you.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I understand what is trying to be achieved by the Honourable Minister, but I am wondering if he should go with the negative resolution or whether he should follow the lines of the Development and Planning Law, which says, "No regulations shall be made pursuant to this law unless a draft thereof has been laid before the Legislative Assembly and a resolution approving the draft has been passed by the Legislative Assembly."

It is more or less the same thing but there is a twenty-one day period before someone really has to bring a resolution on a negative, and you may need to increase fees earlier than that. That's all I am suggesting.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Chairman, my understanding with the way to go with this one was the negative resolution. I think that the planning fees one is a different thing.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Well, Mr. Chairman, maybe then we better have the regulations to lay on the table at this meeting, if we are going to repeal the Health Services (Fees) Law (1998 Revision).

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: As a matter of law, the old law would not be repealed until this law comes into effect and any regulations made under the old law—

Mrs. Edna Moyle: [Inaudible comment]

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Well, the fact of the matter is that until this law takes effect, the old law is not repealed.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: But, Mr. Chairman, does this law not take effect once it goes to the printers and the Governor assents to the vellum copy? Is that not under the Interpretation Law of when a law comes into effect?

[Inaudible comment]

Mrs. Edna Moyle: In two weeks.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, I was only responding to the proposition that, you know this law comes into effect now or that the other law is repealed now—and it isn't. It does come into effect whenever the provisions in the law make it come into operation. If there is no date prescribed in the law for it coming into effect, it comes into effect on publication in the Gazette.

I am making the point as a general rule if there are regulations made under a previous law (which this law replaces) and those regulations themselves are not replaced. They will continue, I think, as a matter of law—I am prepared to check that point out—until they are replaced by further regulations.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, through you, sir.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Sorry. If I could just add that in any event—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I thought we could finish without being interrupted now!

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Well, I apologise for that.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This time I was just joking. [Laughter]

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Hoist by my own petard. I think what probably would be sensible in any event would be that the new regulations would come into effect at the same time as the new law so that the question I tried to address might be academic. Thank you.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Again, just for clarity, two points. First of all, does the Health Services (Fees) Law (1998 Revision) have any regulations attached to it? If there are no regulations, then perhaps the Second Official Member might want to comment on that.

Secondly, I want to direct this to the Minister and I am just asking him to think about this. We now understand what negative resolution refers to and not only what it implies but what it causes to happen. The point that the Member for North Side raised, in my view is a valid point because there is a difference between the two, subtle as it may appear.

I think, I quite understand clearly what the Minister wishes to achieve, but I do believe that perhaps it might warrant looking at it from a point of view of the way the Member for North Side brought it about regardless of your legal advice to the left—and that's not being funny—I mean to your left. I don't mean front left either!

Okay, let's do it like this then, if it is possible, Mr. Chairman. Understanding what the two mean, please . . .

[Inaudible comment]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, I understand. Just get them to advise us why one is preferable to the other and perhaps we can all agree on it like that.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: If I could elaborate on when I said, if we repeal the Health Services (Fees) Law (1998 Revision), I can find no regulations. I find a schedule of fees in the law. So if we are going to repeal the law, maybe my mind is being dumb. I am not catching on. I would think that we are going to repeal the fees unless we say with the exception of scheduled fees. I don't know.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Excuse me, Mr. Chairman, to just add to that. Again, with no legal expertise here, I think there is validity to her argument in that what she is saying is that it is very possible for the new law (which is now in Committee Stage) to be assented to and in actual fact the regulations are not before this Legislative Assembly because that might occur between sittings. It is possible for that to occur between sittings. At that point in time, you have the [Health Services (Fees) Law (1998 Revision)] repealed, which includes the fees and you now have this new law, which does not have fees because they are done by regulation, and you have the law enforced but you don't have the regulations enforced.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, I think the problem in practice would be addressed by a commitment from Government to bring the regulations into effect on the date of commencement of the law—that's one point.

The second point, regardless of my argument about whether the previous regulations are being enforced, let's leave that to one side because we cannot resolve that at the moment. I think they would but I am not prepared to take a categorical position.

The other point is that in relation to the power of the House to annul those regulations, in the calculation of the statutory period to which I made reference, you do not have regard to any period during which the Legislative Assembly is adjourned for more than six days. So, in other words, you don't lose the ability to annul any regulations that are brought into force. So, I think that's worth mentioning.

In other words, the twenty-one day period according to section 28(1) of the Interpretation Law anyway, says, "a period of twenty-one days [as I read out before]. . . reckoned without regard to- (b) any period during which the Legislative Assembly is adjourned for more than six days . . ." So, if the House were adjourned when the regulations came into force, the annulment opportunity would still be there when the House resumed its sitting so that there is no loss of control by the House over the regulations on that account.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Through you, Mr. Chairman, which begs the question: Am I understanding then that if the regulations came into effect between sittings that they would be in effect until such time as there was a sitting, if there were to be a negative resolution coming from the House?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Yes sir.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: And, if that's the case (which apparently it is, by you saying, yes sir), then why are we doing like that?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Well, the premise is that if the regulations are subject to negative resolution that they are capable of being annulled by the House. If the House takes a different view and would prefer them to come into effect subject to affirmative resolution (which is the provision of section 28(2) of the Interpretation Law) those regulations would not come into operation until affirmed by a resolution of the Legislative Assembly.

[Inaudible comment]

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Well, in that case, what you may end up doing is postponing the bringing into force of the law until such time as the regulations could be approved by the House, in order to do both at the same time. Unless, you are prepared to continue with the previous regulations until the new regulations are approved.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I quite understand exactly what the Honourable Attorney General is saying now and that was what I was understanding from the very beginning. Now, if that is not the case, then all I need is for the Minister to explain it.

My understanding of what was going on from the very beginning was that the Minister was going to bring these regulations. But to satisfy everybody, and in the spirit of transparency (the terminology that was used) they were going to be brought to the Legislative Assembly, and my understanding was simply for us to make sure that everybody was happy with them for them to be ratified.

Now, that comes under the Interpretation Law, section 28, whatever it is. The other way that it is worded here gives rise to the possibility of those regulations being enforced during a certain period of time before if any part or parcel of these regulations were to be negated by resolution. So, if our understanding was the former then what is the problem about doing it in that fashion? Now, I don't want to make a big issue out of it but my understanding from the beginning was separate from what the amendment is on paper. That's all I am saying.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Well, Mr. Chairman. This is really a matter for guidance by the Minister, but if there were to be a delay between the introduction of the law and the making of the new regulations, for the avoidance of doubt it might be preferable to insert into this bill some saving provision for the existing regulations.

[Inaudible Interjection]

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Sorry, fees rather than regulations, in the existing law. That is if there is to be a gap between the new fees—I shouldn't say regulations—and the coming into force of the law. Altogether, my opinion (for what it is worth) would be that it would be preferable to introduce the new fees at the same time as the new law but it has to be accepted that if this is done by negative resolution there would be a slight gap between the coming into force of the law and the making of the fees under it and the opportunity to negatively . . .

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I am going to give my view. All other members can do as they please. If the Minister's position is that he wishes to allow participation from the other members of the Legislative Assembly who are not on Executive Council with these regulations to let them be ratified, then I would prefer to see those regulations before they are enforced. How this amendment is worded is not in that spirit, and I am not personally happy with going the other route.

Members can do as they please but I am not going to support it like this and they can do what they wish.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Sir, I cannot sit in this Parliament as a responsible representative and just accept that the Government is going to give a commitment that regulations prescribing fees for the Cayman Islands Health Services will come shortly. I would suggest—and I am just going to make the suggestion that Clause 14 be the Health Services (Fees) Law (1998 Revision), save and except the scheduled fees be repealed under The legal minds can put it together. But I cannot accept Clause 14 as it is because legally if we are repealing this law, we are repealing the fees because there are no regulations setting out fees under this law. That's all I have to say, sir.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I accept the point that the Elected Member for North Side is making and I now have a copy of the Health Services (Fees) Law (1998 Revision). Unlike the new law, the fees in that law are contained, as she rightly says, in a schedule. I apologise if I misunderstood that. Therefore, it would be preferable to save those fees until such time as the regulations are made under the new law.

I have proceeded on the premise that the existing fees were made under regulations, but, obviously, they are not. So, I regret having taken that position. But I think the answer is that those fees can be preserved by simply saying its repealed with a saving for the fees in the schedule until the making of regulations under the new law.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Chairman, I would support that saving clause. As the Ministry and the Health Services Department gave a commitment that we would retain these fees for a period of two years, which ends in January 2000 in regards to trying to get the health insurance scheme going and sorted out. I would not anticipate any changes to these fees before January 2000. So, if we could put this in place I have no problem with the affirmative resolution.

The Chairman: Is there any further debate? Do you have anything further? We shall move Clause 14 and then we will ask for the amendment.

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Sorry, Mr. Chairman, I think, it might be necessary to formally move that the amendment to Clause 13 be amended to substitute affirmative rather than negative.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I so do, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: I will have to recommit Clause 13.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, in addition that Clause 14 be amended with

The Chairman: Prior to that, let me recommit Clause 13. It is the wish of the House that we recommit Clause 13, Entitled regulations, and that will have the amendment. Would you care to move the amendment, please?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I move that the word, "negative" be substituted by the word, "affirmative" in the amendment.

The Chairman: The amendment to Clause 13 has been moved. Does any Member wish to speak to it? No debate? I will put the question that the amendment stands part of Clause 13. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. The amendment is passed.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 13 PASSED.

The Chairman: I will put the question that Clause 13 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 13 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSE 13 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 14. Repeal.

The Chairman: I put the question that Clause 14 do stand part of the Bill. There is an amendment.

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that the clause be amended by adding the following words, "save for the fees contained in the schedule pending the making of regulations under this law."

The Chairman: Would you please repeat the last couple of words?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: "pending the making of regulations regarding fees under this law" I have added the words, "regarding fees."

The Chairman: Is there any debate on the amendment? The amendment is duly moved, nobody wishes to speak to it? I shall put the question that the amendment do stand part of Clause 14. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. The amendment is passed.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 14 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 14 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 14 as amended has been passed, do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSE 14 AS AMENDED PASSED.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99 AS AMENDED

REFERENDUM LAW

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, thank you, sir. Out of an abundance of caution sir, before I begin I had better tell you what I am going to do. I noticed when I was speaking on the amendment that you seemed a little lost and when I had to tell you what I was saying, you said you weren't too sure. So, I better clarify myself unless you have occasion to be unsure or call me to account from the very beginning.

Mr. Speaker, what I would like to do now is to speak a little about the referendum proposal that we have and after that I would like to spend a little time on discussing the contribution made by the honourable Minister of Education, Leader of Government Business. I am not going to be humorous this afternoon. This is an afternoon for sobriety and seriousness. I was entertaining the first day, but today I am going to be enlightening, not entertaining.

One of the important things that I think we have to grasp about the referendum is that the referendum system was not truly an integral part of the Westminster style of democracy. I made mention of the fact that the Government of the Honourable Tony Blair has held more referendums in their short tenure in power than all of the other Governments of the past put together.

I am also reminded too that our system of Government, although I think it is a very good system, is not a system without some challenges and some shortcomings. And, I am reminded that Lord Hailsham once described it as "elected dictatorship." His position, I suppose, is not unlike many other politicians. Shortly after that, Margaret Thatcher (when she was Prime Minister) elevated him to the Lord Chancellorship and we never heard anymore from Lord Hailsham about elected dictatorship. I guess, Mr. Speaker, after that it wasn't in his interest to criticise the system that he would have to play such an important and integral part in marshalling.

I am not faulting him. That is not unlike some of us. Once we get co-opted to certain positions and once we achieve a certain elevation, we seem to forget all about the weaknesses and shortcomings of the systems that seemed so relevant and important to us before.

But, quite seriously now, I want to make a brief reference (and I apologise for not having the presence of mind to get you a copy) from a book called Referendums Around the World, edited by David Butler and Austin Ranny. Quite by coincidence, I was reading an article in the Economist magazine of August 14 - 20, 1999 in which they described this text as the best text available on the subject of referendums.

On page 20, there is a section entitled, "Referendums Subversive of Representative Democracy" and they say, "Many opponents of referendums have argued that referendums, though intended to supplement the institutions of referendum democracy, in fact, subvert them in several ways." This, Mr. Speaker, I find interesting. "First, referendums allow ordinary citizens to reject decisions made by elected representatives. Popular initiatives enable ordinary citizens to enact laws without participation by and even over the objections of elected officials. Inevitably then, referendums subvert the authority and diminish the prestige of legislatures, cabinets and executive heads of government.

"Moreover, by providing a politically acceptable way in which elected representatives can evade difficult decisions by passing the buck to the voters, referendums make it easy for representatives to shirk their responsibilities and evade the consequences of doing their jobs."

I want to focus on that for a moment, because I think it is important to make the distinction that in the Westminster style system of government, one of the sanctions that representatives fear in doing their job is the sanction of not being re-elected. So, what we don't want to happen is for us to get in the position where we have the referendum as a tool that every time the elected representatives come upon a serious, challenging, difficult and questionable decision, they take it out of the jurisdictions and precincts of Parliament and put it on the streets to the people, evading their responsibility, running away from decision-making and then they say, 'Well, that wasn't our decision. It was the decision of the people,' and they shirk their responsibility. We don't want to arrive at that point.

I say all of that to say that the referendum will be a good servant, Mr. Speaker, but it will make a bad master because we are elected to take decisions on our own. Our constituents and the wider public trust us, they expect that without bothering them—because that's what it will involve sometimes—we will make certain decisions of our own volition. Then, Mr. Speaker, if those decisions go against the grain of the expectations of the majority of the people, those people hold the ultimate sanction of not voting us in at the next election.

But they will not want for us to come to them in four years, five or six times at great expense to hold referendums to take decisions to find out things that they would normally have expected us to do. Let us remember now, in our system we have a track record, and I believe that that is the strength. That is the check and balance of our system. So, we don't want to get into a situation where we have a referendum law and every time we think there is a difficult and challenging decision, we throw it out to the people and evade and avoid our responsibilities.

Butler and Ranny go on to say (and this is the conclusion of what I want to refer to). ". . . with both government controlled referendums and popular initiatives, referendum measures referred to the voters by governments have generally succeeded more than measures placed on the ballot by popular initiatives." So, Mr. Speaker, there is the case where government sponsored referendums have a greater percentage of success than those referendums initiated by the people.

I believe that whatever we ultimately decide, we should only resort to the referendum in those cases that have been specifically designated important or major national issues. And I believe that in order to do that, we should come as close as possible in this honourable Parliament to unanimity because sometimes even a simple majority will be controversial in those circumstances.

Now, I want to dwell somewhat on the response by the honourable Minister of Education. And I don't have the benefit of having his complete speech, but I have a part of it and I am going to rely on my faculties for the rest. One of the things I noticed is that the honourable Minister of Education has one style when he is dealing with these kinds of matters. And, that style bothers me because it is a style that is inimical to the interest of Parliamentary democracy and inimical to the interest of accepting members' positions on the merits of their debates and their arguments. That style has to do with the promotion of fear because when the honourable minister gets subjects like these, he touts them around like you have to be suspicious of certain people because they want to promote constitutional advancement; they want to promote political advancement; they want to go into independence.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that certain members here are especially susceptible and subject to those kinds of suspicions—present speaker not excluded. What he does is nothing short of a process of indoctrination, where he drums it over and over—these people are power hungry and these . . . I heard that, Mr. Speaker. There were undertones. It was plain and he repeated himself over and over. There is a fundamental rule in teaching that repetition is the key to learning and I am sure, he being the Minister of Education, knows that rule although he was not a trained teacher.

So, Mr. Speaker, he says that over and over, but there is a danger in that. That kind of behaviour is what Edmund Burke (who is one of those people that I like to read) calls "a pious fraud." And, I am going to talk about those kinds of things a little later on because I hold certain things sacred. I say that we cannot deal fairly and honestly if that's the tactics because those are below-the-belt tactics. In boxing, they take away points from you for that, Mr. Speaker, because you are hitting below the belt.

There comes a time when people have to rise above that. When I was greener that's the kind of tactic I would adopt too. But now, believe you me, I am not so uncertain because after being here eleven years, that's plenty water off the duck's back. I am not suggesting that that's in anyway by any means long enough. But I am saying that there is no need for me to resort to similar tactics.

But I want to expose those tactics, and I want to expose that kind of behaviour by the minister, especially as I know the minister knows better, and that I know he does it purely for political advantage.

You see, Mr. Speaker, if the minister had come about and stuck to the arguments and the merits and said, 'Of course, there are some dangers,' . . . I know that there are some dangers and I know that there may be persons who would wish to change the Constitution. But, Mr. Speaker, I don't see my role here as putting any obstacles in their way. If they are so reckless as to want to do that, then let them go out and tell the public that that is what they want to do and try to get elected. If they are not elected, they cannot blame me. Certainly, that is not what I want to do. But, by the same token, it is not my role or responsibility to lay obstacles in the way, to block, to stagnate it, to mire the country in such a position that there can never be any improvement in the instrument.

I don't believe that being ambitious or aspiring to be a minister necessarily means that one is power hungry, as has been suggested. Mr. Speaker, the honourable minister has served two to four terms as a minister. Is he power hungry? Was he hell bent on changing the Constitution, as he seems to imply that other people are? Mr. Speaker, that honourable minister has a bag full of degrees, but there is nothing wrong with that. So, what is wrong with other people acquiring degrees and using those as tools to help them in their understanding and in broadening their representation of the people? There is nothing wrong.

I would like to make the distinction, and I would like if the honourable minister could change his style because that style is not going to work in the 21st Century. Do you know what I figure, Mr. Speaker? I believe that a persons like that honourable minister and me . . . our tenure here is beginning to become limited. Do you know why? If you listen to the talk on the streets, Mr. Speaker, the demographics have changed and are continuing to change. Soon we—the members inside here, the incumbent members—are going to be faced with challenges from younger, equally educated, equally articulate Caymanians who want to represent the people, who have views and who want to articulate those views just as we want to do. And, if we are smart, as I am smart, we will prepare the way by finding protégés, grooming them and moving them.

Mr. Speaker, that is why I like to watch the Godfather film because it teaches me about hierarchy and it tells me, if I am smart, I will move out of the way. I am not glorifying violence or worshipping violence but there is a fundamental lesson to learn: Smart people prepare their successors and have an orderly transition. Those who are not smart stay till they are forcefully removed and as a result of that earn no respect and no recognition in spite of all they may have done.

So, Mr. Speaker, it is quite simple. I cannot be a dinosaur. The Minister of Education is my good friend and I don't want him to be a dinosaur. I am warning him, begging him and beseeching, and I am praying for him not to be like that because I know the honourable gentleman . . . in spite of all that I rail against him sometimes, I would like when his tenure is at its end that he can gain the respect he deserves. I would be the first one to say that I don't see eye to eye with him. I would like him to move on his terms before the tidal wave that I see coming sweeps him off his feet.

There are too many politicians around here who are bitter because they didn't realise their time had come and didn't prepare. That's the key! That is why it is so important for us to get sensible instruments . . . and our job is not to say I have a Constitution so good in a thousand years it won't need any improvement. Do you know what our job is? To get the basic instrument that guarantees certain people the fundamental rights and privileges and levels the playing field so that all Caymanians—including those people who are residents and visitors here—can enjoy the fruits of the society.

Mr. Speaker, I would never advocate political independence for the Cayman Islands because I am sensible. At this stage, I would never do that. Do you know what I foresee? I foresee me, this Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, spending out my political tenure and the country not reaching that stage yet. I am not suicidal. I may be many things, believe you me, so why would I advocate that? And, by the same token, I don't hear the Fourth Elected Member for George Town advocating that. I don't hear the First Elected Member for George Town advocating that. But, what I am advocating is that conditions should be so that if anyone in his democratic right feels that that is what he wants to do, he or she can go and do it and run the risk of rejection.

I don't want to stop them, and I wouldn't say (because they aspire to that) that they are radical. I just know that the forces are against it—economic forces are against it, the people are against it. But I don't want to tie somebody's hands down so that 20 years from now they still cannot move an inch if it is necessary.

So, Mr. Speaker, I take the dimmest view of those kinds of argument. And they don't work. If they worked, explain to me how I have been here, three times elected, and that's the charge that was laid on me. So, we have to be fairer. We have to use some other tactics and it is not responsible to promote that kind of fear because I don't see any Dracula in here, and I don't see any Frankenstein in here.

This motion and the amendment are too important to waste time talking about who is power hungry. You mean because I am elected and I say I would like to become a Minister, I am power hungry? What about the other people who are elected and have become ministers? Are they power hungry too?

Mr. Speaker, there is something else the minister said, that I would like to correct. In commenting on what happened in 1992, the minister left the impression that the primary reason why that political directorate was disposed of was because they advocated constitutional change. Historically speaking that is not accurate. Let us recall now, the most topical issue at that time was the construction of the hospital. The opponents of that called it the "hospital in the swamp." Remember that? The economy was also bad, Mr. Speaker, and there was arrogance among some of the players in the political directorate. Plain, blatant arrogance!

I remember the incident out here. It was a grave mistake. Trust me, I would not have done that. It is true that the Constitution was a peripheral issue but it was not the main issue. I mean, Heaven knows, if they had any other issue beside the two that I just named, some of those people would still be buried. They wouldn't be digging their way out even now.

So, don't try to instil fear by saying that. Here is the position that I take. Someone comes to me and is advocating constitutional change, now you convince me that we should change the Constitution and show me how it is going to significantly improve not only the political position but the economic, social and cultural position and then I may listen to you. I may buy your argument. But to come to me to say you want it advanced just for the sake of advancement . . . a thousand times no. I believe that every political player who has any sense would shy away from that.

So, what I am saying (while I have the minister cheering me on) is that there is no need for him to resort to those kinds of tactics—he must be watching too much wrestling.

[Laughter]

Mr. Roy Bodden: There is no need for that. And now he challenges me to state my position. I have just stated it! And I want to make this rueful admission: When the First Elected Member for George Town and I crafted the motion, we knew that that was exactly what his behaviour was going to be. We knew that he was going to use this as his re-election plank—the main plank. Now, Mr. Speaker, it will be interesting to find out at the end of the day when the votes are taken if he is going to still be swimming on that plank or if he is going to have to be scrounging around to find another one. I believe he is going to have to be looking for another one because there are going to be so many people on that one he is not going to have any space to do what he wants to do. Unless, like I said, he wants to team up with the First Elected Member for George Town, the Third Elected Member for George Town and the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. But if he has any other ideas, he better look for another piece of plank.

Mr. Speaker, I don't believe that the United Kingdom would wish to jettison us so quickly that it would allow a few people with a couple of scatterbrain ideas to come to them and say, 'We should advance the Constitution and go into independence'. The United Kingdom will talk to anybody, particularly if they pay their way to London. I know that, I paid my way twice! They may even buy you a few beers (for those who drink), but that doesn't mean that it is going to go any further than that. And, certainly, the first thing they ask you when you are talking seriously to them is, 'Well, where is your group? Who is with you? How many people have you got? Are you prepared to make this a subject of a general election?'

So, only the unknowing would take the route that the Minister of Education suggested. Certainly, I wouldn't take that route. I know the First Elected Member for George Town wouldn't take the route. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town wouldn't take that route because we all know better. The point I wish to make is that we want to arrive at a position where the Constitution is an instrument of good government where the people have the right to trigger a referendum, but by the same token, the hands of legislators are not tied if they want to take a decision, even if that decision carries the ultimate sanction of them losing their seats.

Do you know what, Mr. Speaker? I wouldn't want to know that I elected someone to represent me and every time they wanted to make a decision, they had to come calling and disturbing me in the middle of the night, at my meal time, at a time when I want to be with my family—'Well, Roy, what do you think I should do? Well, Honourable Third Elected Member for Bodden how should I handle this?' I would say, 'Listen, come, give me my commission back and I will find someone who can do the job without disturbing me all of the time.' So now, can you imagine, Mr. Speaker, if every time I had to vote, I had to go to Bodden Town to hold a referendum? What would happen to me? The sensible people of Bodden Town would flog me and say I am a coward and they will hold a referendum to get me out.

[Laughter]

Mr. Roy Bodden: So, it cannot be that. And by the same token, Mr. Speaker, taking the argument a step further, I am not advocating any change but I say there is a limit to how long we are going to go on with the system the way it is. In any hierarchy there has to be a head. So, maybe we won't want it in our time, but I wouldn't want to handcuff the future members of this Parliament if they want to say among the five ministers there should be what was called in the time of Horace Walpole in the 18th Century, a primus inter pares—a first among the equals. That is a natural.

Mr. Speaker, I see that as the next step in the progression towards a better constitution and a better government. But I am not advocating it for right now. But what is indisputable is the fact that our system has some encumbrances now because who is accountable to whom? I have a title, it is called a manager. My boss is the Managing Director. In the organisation I am familiar with, there is a strict hierarchy and when something goes wrong, I get called. I am held accountable even when it is not my direct responsibility. I am the manager. I am supposed to know what is going on on that compound at all times and if I don't know, something is wrong. And, if I don't know and if I insist on not knowing then they will get someone knows and who will know.

Let us not create fear and think that these things are unnecessary and that because you aspire, you are evil or bad. That is what the minister has been doing throughout and he has it down to a T. He has been doing it throughout his political career. But, Mr. Speaker, check this now. The Minister is the Leader of Government Business, and technically he is the Leader of the Ministers. So, is it now that he doesn't want anyone else to be a leader and that's the tactics for keeping them down.

Mr. Speaker, just Monday when he thought he might have been in a little problem, we saw him buzzing up and down, making the phone calls, calling them—'gentlemen, come, come, come!' Calling the troops in! [Laughter] These little nuances don't escape us, you know.

So, let us not try to project the impression now that the system is so bad, so evil, so grotesque and that those who say it could be run better are power hungry. No, Mr. Speaker, one thousand times no! I agree with the minister that Britain's policy toward us rests on the basis that it is the citizens in the territory who should determine the political outcome. But remember now, we influence how those people think.

Mr. Speaker, believe you me, if you hear some of his constituents talk about Mr. Truman . . . and that's what makes it so serious when he gets up and tells them, 'Ugh! You better watch the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, you know, and you have to watch all those people who want to do this because they are power hungry!' There is nothing I can do to make some people believe because he said that is not so. So, that is why he shouldn't do that. That hurts.

And, do you know what that reminds me of? I heard him telling me about how many votes I lost; Mr. Speaker, did he calculate how many he lost? I lost 500; he lost 700! So we are in the same canoe! Also, Mr. Speaker, that should tell him if he insists on burying me, he himself may get buried quicker. So the best thing he can do—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [Inaudible comment] [Laughter]

Mr. Roy Bodden: So, Mr. Speaker, the best thing he can do is like the old expression says, let a sleeping dog lie. Because while he is busy keeping me out, keeping the Fourth Elected Member for George Town out, saying that we are power hungry, the First Elected Member for George Town is gone with his cake. And then he is calling me, the "Last" Elected Member for Bodden Town, saying that I almost didn't get in. But, Mr. Speaker, he is not checking his arithmetic, you know, seeing that a man stole his majority.

But, Mr. Speaker, I guess, you know that that's the nature of the human being. Anyway, it is nice (even if I have to say so myself) that it can be taken in the spirit in which it is taken.

It reminds me of an old principal of Mico Teachers College, Mr Owen. Sometimes, when he was most serious, he addressed (in what was apparent humour) an anecdote. I get the message because I can assure the Minister that when he tells me things like that and when he calls me the "Last" Elected Member for Bodden Town, I know what I have to do. Trust me. I am doing that quietly and praying hard too, Mr. Speaker. Praying very hard.

But I tell him, tongue-in-cheek, that we are going to leave at the same time. I don't want to leave him in here because then I don't know what he might do when I go outside. So, we have to strike a deal that the two of us are going to leave at the same time and then those that we leave in here, if they misbehave, the two of us will threaten to come back! So, Mr. Speaker, it is only fear now to expect before that departure he is going to give me a little say on that side too because otherwise I wouldn't know how it feels. The only way I am going to leave is if he comes over here for a spell—we are trying to work that out now.

To get back to the serious business. . . I believe that the arguments for the referendum were well established by the First Elected Member [for George Town] and I in the motion. And, I also believe that there is some merit to some of the amendments made by the Minister for Education. But I don't want to leave the Parliament with the notion that when people aspire they are to be distrusted and when they express hopes, and even when they expound certain ideas, that they should be suspect. For, Mr. Speaker, every one of us is born with the innate desire to improve our lot in life—whether that is economic, social or political. The only exception to that are the Calvinists, and I don't even know now if Calvinism as we know it still adheres to this. But the Calvinists were the only people who propounded the doctrine of predestination, which basically meant that if you were born a slave, it was a sin to try to improve your lot, that you were destined to remain at that level. I don't hear anyone espousing to that doctrine, therefore, I don't think it is fundamentally wrong for people who believe that they have abilities to aspire for leadership positions.

I don't think that it should be limited to race. I don't even think that in the democracy it should be limited to education. Let the people choose, say what we stand for and let the people choose. If we are to progress, if this country is to move forward, I believe that it is necessary for us to craft some kind of instrument by which we can hold referendums. I believe that this honourable House has the ability to do that, and I believe it would be fundamentally flawed and unfair of us to try to arrive at a position where we tie the hands of future legislators.

Mr. Speaker, I don't believe that that would serve democracy and I don't think that the United Kingdom would accept or tolerate that either. That is why I am concerned, and having been bitten by that bug, I have a particular sympathy towards people who are unjustifiably labelled because they take certain positions. And, I say again, smart politicians will realise the extent to which their constituents and the wider country will tolerate certain moves and short of someone who is politically suicidal, they will shy away.

Mr. Speaker, what I don't want to become in any facet of my life is a dinosaur. I want to be able to move on. I want to be able to evolve. When the ice age comes, I want to be able to adapt. That is why I like to read and to research because I like to know what is on the cutting edge. That is why I could tell the honourable minister that I have no apology to make about changing my position now, regarding referendum, which is different from what it was in 1989. Because in 1989, I didn't know all the things about a referendum that I know now. I didn't research it thoroughly. It was an ill-informed political position I held.

My position now is more informed. I am not saying that I am an expert because I am not putting myself up as an expert. What I am saying is that I am alive. The mere fact that I can change my mind proves I am alive and open. I am the king of person who should be a representative because I am not stuck in a groove. And, even when I am 80, if God spares my life, I still won't be a dinosaur. I would like to be able to listen and learn, and be informed.

Mr. Speaker, I hope one of these days, before too long, that many people who don't know me well, politically speaking that is, can come to realise that I am as stable, as dependable, as progressive and as successful as they are. I believe if one were to take our measurements, there are no significant ideological differences between any of the members inside here. Believe you me, there is more similarity amongst us than there are differences. If I were a wagering person, I would wager that based on the nature of the discourses that I have heard.

It is only, Mr. Speaker, that some people find it easy to gain an advantage over other people by promoting certain kinds of fears. I wish that we could come to the point, particularly the Minister of Education, where that would not be the tool most often reached for.

The Speaker: Would this be a convenient time to take the afternoon break? or is it the wish of the House that we continue right on, until 4.30 p.m.

We shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.50 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.25 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion

No. 11/99 as amended. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, continuing.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, as I look at my watch, it's a good thing that I plan to wind down. I am not long-winded these days so I hope to be finished within the few minutes that I have left.

Mr. Speaker, Private Member's Motion 11/99 is a good motion. The Minister of Education challenged me to state what my position is—I am not going to state my position prematurely as I still have to listen to the mover of the original motion. But I can say that it will be one of the two positions that we count in the Parliament. In other words, it won't be an abstention. The decision I take is going to be the correct decision, and I will leave it at that.

Mr. Speaker, I want to now draw my conclusion and I want to do that within the two minutes or so that I have left. I guess that it would be remiss if I didn't make some comment in the conclusion regarding the style of the minister who spoke—the Minister for Education. I love this historical figure, himself, a stalwart parliamentarian, eminent historian and one of the greatest Englishmen as far as I am concerned that ever did any time in the House of Commons. I love to read Edmund Burke.

Mr. Speaker, do you know what Edmund Burke said about speeches like what the Minister of Education gave? I want to read it. "Well stored with pious frauds and like most discourses of the sort, much better calculated for the private advantage of the preacher rather than the edification of the hearers." He made those comments in a publication called, The Present State of the Nation. How coincidental!

Mr. Speaker, I want to read it again. "Well stored with pious frauds and like most discourses of the sort, much better calculated for the private advantage of the preacher rather than the edification of the hearers." Mr. Speaker, believe you me, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town could never be that eloquent. And with that quotation I have come to the conclusion of my contribution. Thank you.

The Speaker: According to my clock, we have three minutes before the normal hour of interruption. I think it would be improper for me to accept someone to start their debate at this time—this late in the afternoon. If it pleases the House, I would entertain a motion for the adjournment.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it's the view of the House that we should adjourn until Friday at 10.00 p.m. So I would move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Friday at 10.00 a.m.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 a.m. on Friday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House do stand adjourned until 10.00 a.m. on Friday.

AT 4.29 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM FRIDAY, 24 SEPTEMBER 1999.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

DEFERMENT OF QUESTIONS 128, 129, 120 & 126

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, as you just said that minister is absent due to a death in his family. So perhaps you would allow questions 128, 129, 120 and 126 to be deferred to a later date.

The Speaker: Those in favour of deferring these questions to a later date, please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTIONS 128, 129, 120 AND 126 DEFERRED.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 125, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 125

No. 125: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture to provide the breakdown of the costs of maintaining and/or upgrading the major playing fields on Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac from September 1998 until August 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Several services regarding the maintenance of playing fields in Grand Cayman are 'lumped' together. For example, two groundsmen rotate around the Islands to cut the fields. The cycle takes approximately two weeks. Some school fields that are used by the community are cut by the Sports Office.

The Ministry does not maintain a field in Cayman Brac.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say if, in those fields where there are both janitorial services, field maintenance and other related areas, all of this work is done by one entity or are these duties performed by various individual entities?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: There are two groundsmen on a rotation basis as far as the maintenance is concerned, I am instructed. And there are also a number of ladies who deal with the janitorial with the various fields.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I wonder if the honourable minister would explain why the Old Man Playfield and the Bodden Town Playfield are not included in this list of fields maintained by the Sports Office.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: It is my understanding that because the Bodden Town Playfield and the Old Many Bay Playfield are yet to be handed over by Public Works, that they actually have a separate vote dealing with maintenance there. Once it is handed over to the ministry we will then take up the maintenance responsibility.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Can the honourable minister say if consideration could be given to persons in the districts who own lawn services to maintain the fields?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: The ministry is now in the process of looking into the feasibility of doing maintenance contracts as the need for proper maintenance for all the fields becomes more necessary. It would be open to the regular procedure of going to bids and persons within the districts will have an opportunity to bid within the five districts that now have fields.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I will give way to the Member for North Side.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: This is a follow up to the question I asked before. I think PWD is responsible for the actual football field that was grass, and that has not yet been handed over. Who maintains the grounds around the actual football field, including the bathrooms?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, if I could have a moment please. [pause]

Thank you for your indulgence. It is my understanding that PWD has been paying for the maintenance up until now, including the area the member asked about. The explanation given was because they were experiencing some problems with the grass in that particular vicinity that they continued maintaining it until they were ready to hand it over.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would seek an undertaking from the honourable minister that when the works are placed out to tender, and I realise the constraints set out by the various tendering committees, that some consideration be given to those applicants from the community, particularly when it comes to the work in Bodden Town, and maybe the same will obtain for North Side.

I know that at the Bodden Town Playfield, a gentleman has a company and quite frequently he does the work for gratis. I would be very interested to see that when it goes out to tender these people are not left out, and that the tendering will not necessarily go to the largest companies that will monopolise all of the sports complexes to the exclusion of persons from the districts, particularly those who out of a spirit of community have been doing the work when called upon, for gratis.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Although I cannot give an undertaking per se, in that I do not have the direct responsibility as far as hiring is concerned because it goes to a tenders committee, I can say that I fully concur that there will be more ownership and accountability if, in fact, the successful bidder was within the district. I will let that pass down, for whatever it's worth, once the assessment is done with the tendering committee.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I noticed that the answer relates to playingfields, that is soccer fields. Can the honourable minister say what considerations are being made in regard to maintenance and security of our basketball courts throughout the islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: It is my understanding that maintenance is being done. But because it was not specifically asked for in a substantive question I will have to give an undertaking to supply it, if the member so desires, in writing for those specific facilities.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I appreciate that undertaking. The one that I am particularly concerned about at present is the one on Eastern Avenue. Can the honourable minister say what immediate plans are being considered to address the situation there?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: It is my understanding that the Basketball Association is responsible for the day to day maintenance of that particular hard court.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I privately spoke with the minister concerning the next undertaking I am going to try to extract from her, and I take this opportunity to raise it publicly. I would ask that when the contracts are drawn up for the field maintenance that in addition to what we now know as field maintenance, that is cutting the grass and trimming, that some stipulation be put into the contract for re-seeding. I have been speaking with some of the persons who currently work, and the observation they made was that the field could be much better if they had the authority to re-seed as necessary, particularly on the fields where soccer is played in the off season.

I know that for many years the Bodden Town Primary School field has suffered from over use. To the best of my knowledge, it is not frequently re-seeded. So I would ask the honourable minister if her sports office is responsible for drawing up these contracts and if they could take note of putting that stipulation into the contract.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: That's a very valid observation and request. Indeed, I will pass it on to the Sports Office. The legal department assists us tremendously with drafting up of contracts. But that was the other reason we thought we'd move to maintenance contracts, because of the more scientific approach the ministry is trying to take in regard to the various fields for upkeep.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I have one last observation, and I am going to ask the minister to give an undertaking for this also. One Sunday morning I went down to the Bodden Town Playfield where some people from the community were playing soccer. I received some complaints from the players, and I saw it myself, that the field was being utilised by persons riding horses.

I gathered that there had been other complaints about that. I want to say that I have nothing against horse riding, but I didn't think it was appropriate to ride horses on the Bodden Town Playfield because that field belongs to the Bodden Town Primary School. I was concerned about horse droppings on the field because school was in session. I remarked to the young man that I hoped he had his scoop and bucket. He said he did, but I didn't see it.

Anyway, the soccer players vociferously complained to me and said that they had complained about the horse riding before. These horses are quite large, and circulating around the track they soon make indentations in the field. I don't think it is in the best interest of the soccer players, or the primary school children to have that kind of thing happen. So I would ask the minister if her sports office would keep a special eye out for this. I don't expect them to find the horse riders an alternative venue, but I am sure there are other more easily accessible and more appropriate horse trails that could be found besides the Primary School field.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: As I am sure the learned member is aware, it is a school field. Therefore, it falls under the direct ambit of the Education Department. Consent for use of the field would have to come from the school, not from the ministry. But suffice it to say that I can bring it to the attention of my honourable colleague and I am sure he will do whatever is necessary to address the matter in a most timely way.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99 AS AMENDED

REFERENDUM LAW

(Continuation of debate on motion as amended)

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am pleased to be able to debate this, although I would have thought it would be finished by now.

Upon examining this referendum motion and its full form of amendment, I find it strange and I believe totally out of order that on a matter dealing with a referendum (which this motion is all about) that we have matters about change to the Constitution being dealt with. I thought it strange because I believe that our [Standing] Orders say that such matters should be dealt with by substantive motion. Nevertheless, it has been passed, but I thought I would make that point.

I believe that this motion (because the two do not go and should not go) is out of place in that regard. I don't believe that the Legislative Assembly is lawfully debating something that is properly put before the House. Nevertheless, as I said it has been passed. And not being here, I would have hoped that other members would have taken this same point, as I know they are paying close attention to the orders of this House these days.

Similar motions have come to this House and this referendum motion has been back and forth in this House for some time. I think we need to get to a point during the life of this Parliament where we come to some agreement on the matter of referenda.

The people of this country today are more outspoken than at any other time in the history of the Cayman Islands. We hear more from people these days than I have ever heard in my 15 or 16 years in this Legislative Assembly on matters that affect them, on matters affecting the future of this country.

This is no idle work. This is not time for the political one-upmanship that has been taking place on the amendments to this resolution. This is a house of politics, as some like to say, but I find it strange that the government comes with such an amendment. I said in my short contribution before I left for the CPA conference, that I found it hard to accept that we were moving an amendment, a motion in this House, to ask the people by referenda whether they wanted referenda. I said at that time that we are cluttering up the democratic process (and those were the best words I could use). The roundabout way of doing this is not helping us.

Further, I believe that what the Minister of Education has allowed, or what the House has allowed to happen by voting for that amendment, is asking for trouble. By what we have here now before us, the United Kingdom will have to approve what the Minister of Education asks for; whether or not they approve it is another matter. I doubt it.

The Speaker: Could I just interrupt you for one moment? I want to call to your attention that we are debating a Private Member's Motion, which in essence is asking that the government consider this. We are not posing a law here today. We are posing a Private Member's Motion which is asking that the government consider this. So we do not have a law before this honourable House. Please continue.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I quite know that there is no law before us. But the intention in this resolution before us—and I certainly have to draw that to your attention . . . or else this motion would not be here. The intention is there to carry this through. So I believe that this amendment is an exercise in futility because I believe that the United Kingdom is not going to accept that. If they do, it will be more than they have done in the past with such matters. But one never knows.

I believe that in this matter the only people who are going to loose are the people of the Cayman Islands. That is what is going to happen.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Hear, hear!

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: As far as I am concerned, the last part of that amendment he put is not relevant because we are dealing with referenda and not with an amendment to the Constitution. And that should have been a substantive motion.

Why take this path? It's going to cost a lot of money for one thing, and we are always screaming about doing things to spend money. It will cost money to hold a referendum to ask the people whether they want a referendum when the Constitution provides for it. So you are going to have two times that funds will have to be expended

To say that it is not good for the public to have a say in this . . . as I said, I believe that we are at a time when the country is demanding more say in the affairs of this country. But to say that here . . . and I have to deal with this at this point, dealing with the Constitution part of it . . . however, before I get into that, Mr. Speaker, just let me say that much was made of what I said in 1989 by the Minister of Education. That was some ten years ago! The only man who can't change his mind is a fool or a dead man!

There are many differences between the development of this country, the issues at stake here and now, and that of 1989. There are many more matters that are of significant importance (I should draw to the honourable minister's attention) which exist now that did not in 1989. One such issue is the White Paper, the issue of whether or not we want to be British citizens. That is one such matter that I believe the public would easily take up on referenda. [There are other matters . . .] the Human Rights issue in that White Paper before the country presently. So, if he is reading my 1989 debate to say that I cannot change my mind, then I don't think that he really understand humans.

What he should have read from the 1989 debate was where I said “. . .there is no guarantee that there would be such a clear majority to convince the government to change the matter [whatever the matter for referenda was that I was talking about at that time], if it was a matter dealing with policy, or to bring in a matter dealing with some campaign promise. There is no guarantee that if we were dealing with the Constitution or some other thing Great Britain would see it as being a majority.”

I went on to talk about the referenda held in Malta. “There was once a referendum held in Malta to decide the country's integration with great Britain. The British government did not think there was a majority, although the proponents thought so. So, Malta did not get integrated at that time.” [1989 Official Hansard Report, Vol. 1, page 588]

If the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning had read that section of my debate he would have made more sense out of what he was trying to do rather than trying to use my speech to say that I cannot change my mind.

How we decide on a course of referenda is something that we also need to think about. We could go into a referendum, spend a lot of the country's money and still not get what we want. There is no guarantee that we could get a clear majority in any one vote. So we would have to be careful how we would start the process on referenda.

There have been some suggestions from various people saying that if referendum is initiated by the Legislative Assembly (as it is within the Constitution presently), then only the elected members of the Legislative Assembly are eligible to vote on that proposed referendum. A simple majority of elected members would provide the vote of the registered voters. If it is initiated by registered voters then we could perhaps require something between 10% to 30% of the registered voters to sign the request for a referendum vote. Once the required signatures have been recorded the government would then schedule the referendum vote within a given time.

But what we also have to consider is whether any issue being put to a referendum would bind the government to not implement any law or take any action on an issue that is the subject of the referendum until the voters have had an opportunity to indicate their wishes at the referendum. More than one issue could be voted on at a referendum vote. A referendum vote could take place at the time of a general election. We should require a certain number of the registered voters to participate in the referendum for the results to be binding on government. A certain percentage of registered voters in the districts for a certain number of districts could approve the subject of the referendum. At least an aggregate of 50% of the registered voters who vote in all districts could approve the subject of the referendum. That's for referendum on any subject.

Now, on a matter amending the Constitution, action to initiate a referendum to amend the Constitution would be desirable to automatically require that any amendments to the Constitution be endorsed by the vast majority of registered voters before being sent to the UK for approval. If initiated by the Legislative Assembly then only elected members of the Legislative Assembly would be eligible to vote on the proposed Constitutional referendum.

Then perhaps a majority of 50% of the elected legislature would put the Constitutional amendment to the vote of registered voters in the Constitutional referendum. You can hear how confusing it would be but this is some of the terminology that I would and the next member would have to go out there and talk about.

If the amendment to amend the Constitution is initiated by registered voters, then we would have to require a percentage of the registered voters to sign the request for a Constitutional referendum vote. How much of that would be argued because you would need a good percentage to do so. Once the required signatures would have been recorded then government would decide to schedule the Constitutional referendum vote within a given period of time. And any proposed Constitutional amendment being put to a Constitutional referendum would bind government to not implement any change or take any action on the issue which is the subject of the Constitutional referendum until the voters have had an opportunity to indicate their wishes at the Constitutional referendum.

Only the Constitutional amendment could be voted on at a constitutional referendum vote. The constitutional referendum vote should not be combined with a general election, for instance. At least 60% of the registered voters should indicate in the constitutional referendum vote on constitutional amendments for the results to be binding on government to send to the United Kingdom for approval. At least a majority of registered voters in a majority of the districts should approve the constitutional amendments in a constitutional referendum vote for the results to be binding on government to send to the United Kingdom for approval. And at least an aggregate of 60% of registered voters of all voting districts would have to approve the constitutional amendments in the constitutional referendum for the results to be binding on government to send to England or the UK for approval.

These are matters that we would have to consider. We would have to embark upon that sort of procedure to do all that we are asking for, for people to have a say on issues by referenda, make it possible for that to happen. But this is the kind of process that we would have to embark upon. Controls would have to be put on government spending to fund publicity or promotion of referendum issues. And any person or organisation promoting an issue to be put to a referendum vote would have to declare all sources of funds, assistance, declare in writing special or connected interests and make records of the organisation available for audit or verification by independent non-government firms. Again, the results of all referendums would be binding on government to implement without delay the required action, subject at all times to the final approval of the Crown as long as we remain an Overseas Territory of the United Kingdom.

These are the matters we are embarking upon. So while the Minister of Education believes that he is busting . . . because that is all it has meant. He has only tried to bust the First Elected Member for George Town who brought the amendment. And when he saw that, he decided to put in this aspect—which he knew that people would probably jump on. But if he were serious about this whole thing . . . if you look at the amended motion, he would have said 'that the Constitution be amended' to do as he is asking. But he is not saying that. As you pointed out, sir, he is not saying that. But if he were serious, he would say that. If that's what he really wants that's what he would say. But all he has done is put a spinner on what the First Elected Member for George Town was doing.

If he were serious, instead of saying, "should" he would have said "shall." So he's not serious about what he is doing here. In connection with referenda . . . now I am not talking about constitutional changes because I know what his stated position is. He doesn't want to see any constitutional change. And if you pass it as it is, that's what will happen. Consequential amendments or not, you would have to go to referenda which I think is a matter that . . . well, just look at what it would be if you had to change some word in the Constitution. You'd have to call a referendum to do so.

I don't think anybody wants to change the Constitution of this country to the detriment of these islands. All of us have to live, move, and have our being here in this country. This is where we live. I don't think anybody is going to ask for independence because even though some people support it, they know that the vast majority said "No" to other constitutional changes that were proposed.

But I can say this: We are here in this country in a process of reform. We are reinventing government. We are talking about transparency. We are talking about accountability. And when all of those things are put together the people must be told that there will be some changes in this Constitution. I am not saying that this is advancement of the Constitution, I am saying that there are going to be changes if all that comes.

When the Financial Secretary's Department brought down the people from New Zealand and they had a discussion at the Marriott, I posed the question, "To do this reform that you are telling us, to get the accountability, to get the transparency that the people are demanding, how will that work in our Constitutional framework? Would we not have to change?" Every member remembers that. And what did they say? They said we would have to. And yet the country is not being told this.

We are embarking upon a reform that needs to happen, the reinvention needs to happen; the public wants the accountability, the public wants the transparency in government; but they are not being told that there will have to be some changes in the Constitution. And the Leader of Government Business knows that because in his own profession as a lawyer, and his own background in government he knows that.

So if you change this and it goes the way we are recommending, then what is going to happen? You will have to go to referendum to ask the people whether or not they want it. Well, that is not a bad thing. But we have to be open and frank with the public. There are matters that are happening in government that the public doesn't know anything about that will have to take constitutional changes. And I am not talking about advancement—get that clear.

How long are we going to run a Constitution based on the Leader of Government Business having the Chief Ministerial power—

Hon. Truman Boddén: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman Boddén: Misleading the House.

The Leader of Government Business is totally different from the Chief Minister. Under the normal Constitution the Chief Minister has literally absolute and nearly dictatorial powers to hire or fire the Cabinet. He also assigns responsibility through the Governor. He also has the wide powers of requesting when the Legislature should be prorogued, when it should be started. He also has the right, without assigning any reason, to the firing of a minister who has been chosen by him.

The Leader of Government Business is something that should not even be raised in this House. Properly under the Standing Orders members are called . . . I should be called the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning. The only place "Leader of Government Business" arises, as you know, sir, is the section in the Standing Orders that says that "the Leader of Government Business is Chairman of the Business Committee." Beyond that it doesn't appear in any law, it doesn't appear in any Constitution and it is misleading the House to say that I am the equivalent of a Chief Minister. It is very serious misleading.

The Speaker: [addressing the First Elected Member for West Bay] I would ask that you recognise that fact.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I can say that the difference between the Chief Minister and the Leader of Government Business in several matters is wide. A lot of it too is what he has said. But that is why I am asking if we are going to put up with it forever, for just that reason. As sure as he gave those reasons there are other matters. He is consulted by the Governor, and then he consults with other ministers. That's a fact. They recognise him as the person leading the government—whether that is Chief Minister constitutionally, or "Chief Minister."

The Speaker: But you do recognise that constitutionally all our ministers are equal.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Equal? Mr. Speaker, have you ever been in Executive Council?

The Speaker: I am saying Constitutionally.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I speak from experience. And we are not equal.

The Speaker: I am asking you a question, Constitutionally are not all of our ministers equal?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I would not agree with you on that. But you have your opinion and I have mine, and that's what it is.

The Speaker: I am afraid I am asking you a specific question. I am saying in accordance with our Constitution—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: In accordance with our Constitution it should be equal.

The Speaker: All members are equal.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Should, should, should.

The Speaker: I am not asking that question. I am asking in accordance with the terms of our Constitution all members are equal.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes. That's what the Constitution says, but that's not the way it's being worked. And that is why I am saying that the public ought to know that because I sat in Executive Council for six years (or five years, plus) and I know what obtains.

The way it used to work before, for instance, and these are not matters that you can say are big matters, but it shows you that there are differences if the UK is looking at it . . . before the person who got the most votes was the person recognised by the Governor. Who does the Governor recognise as leading the government today? The Leader of Government Business. And when he travels to the United Kingdom, who appoints him to lead the delegation? Do the ministers appoint him? The United Kingdom recognises him as such and appoints him. That is the position.

Hon. Truman Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I hate to interrupt again, but on a point of order. The honourable member is continuing to mislead in an area that you have ruled. In Executive Council we are all equal.

The Speaker: If you want to make an explanation, please continue.

Hon. Truman Boddén: In Executive Council we are equal, the same as we are equal here. To attempt to say otherwise is incorrect. Some members may do more work than others and that is a fact of life throughout life generally. But the fact that maybe one of us deals with a speciality area doesn't make us anything other than equal which you pointed out sir. Constitutionally we are all equal.

I would really ask you to enforce in here that no one calls me the Leader of Government Business anymore, and that in accordance with the Standing Orders, that they call me the Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, which is really what should be happening sir.

The Speaker: Thank you.

I would appreciate it if we could move on now because I think this point has been made. Let us move on because this is really not relevant to this motion.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, you are right. The Constitution has no place in this debate and it should not . . . well, in all deference to the Chair I will not say that again. I already said how I felt about it. It should have been a substantive motion brought by the minister, and not this amendment. But it is before me and I have a right to debate it.

I can see that the Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning is in trouble, so I will ease up. But the country has to be told the facts. My experience in Executive Council is not that we are all equal because the Governor consults with the Leader of Government Business and the Leader of Government Business consults with the rest of Executive Council, that is elected members I am talking about. Mr. Speaker, that was my experience—

Hon. Truman Boddén: Mr. Speaker, this is a point of order.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: —when the Minister for Education had it. It was my experience when the Minister for Tourism had it—

Hon. Truman Boddén: I am taking a point of order again.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: [addressing the First Elected Member for West Bay] Please sit down.

Hon. Truman Boddén: That is misleading. The Governor consults the Ministers on their respective ministries. If something is going wrong with the Minister for Health, the Governor doesn't call me in and tell me to go and talk to the Minister for Health. It is not true what has been said there. The Governor consults the respective ministers on what he has assigned responsibilities to them on. And he talks to all of us on what he has held responsibility for.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, let me just say that I agree with the minister, that the Governor does talk to ministers about their respective responsibilities. I agree with that.

But I am saying on the overall and larger issues that affect the country the Governor talks to the Leader of Government Business and the Leader of Government Business then gets back to the ministers. That's the way they want it. They don't want to be talking to everybody.

Mr. Roy Boddén: That's true.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Now, Mr. Speaker, if his point is a fact, that ministers on their specification of subjects were to lead delegations abroad, then the honourable Attorney General would lead matters to the United Kingdom concerning things like the PCCL. But who led it? The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, the Leader of Government Business.

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I hate to keep taking points of order, but the honourable member is so misleading the House.

When matters are political someone from the political arena leads it. When matters are official the Officials lead it. The honourable Attorney General, and the honourable Financial Secretary went to the OECD six or eight weeks ago by themselves. It was an official matter. When there are official matters, sir, the Officials deal with it. When there are political matters then it's dealt with, many times by a joint group, I should point that out. Many times the group is mixed. But there's a difference between the two.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The problem with the Leader of Government Business is that he has no responsibility as he is saying—but he has the power. That is my opinion and opinions are perfectly constitutional. But I will move on. Okay?

The Speaker: I think this might be a convenient time to take the break. Proceedings are suspended for 15 minutes.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Yes, Mr. Speaker, especially since the Leader of Government Business is taking on water!

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.45 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.12 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended. The First Elected for West Bay continuing.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In regard to the amendment as incorporated in the motion, as I said, I really don't believe that the Minister was serious and it's a political stopgap measure for the time and I gave the reasons why.

Mr. Speaker, if there are to be consequential amendments to the Constitution, then you will have to have a referenda for it. If you change the membership of the House, if it came necessary to add another Minister to ExCo, then you would have to go to referenda for it. If you found mistakes in the Constitution, which can happen then to get those mistakes changed, you will have to go to referenda as this motion stands.

The question that we have to ask, and it is not a matter of making people have their say because we all say that we want that. That's why you supported the motion as brought by the [First Elected] Member from George Town. We have to question whether the country is to be governed by referenda. That's a question that we will have to pose.

Mr. Speaker, I dealt with some of the matters as a process that we would have to take and it will become completely different in this country. In countries where referendums are done, they are done on major subjects. I only know about one in the Caribbean—one of fame where the question was put to the people of Jamaica whether they wanted to be a part of the Federation or go on their own. And the public voted to go on their own, as an independent Jamaica. And, from the statistics that I used, it wasn't a large, overwhelming majority that chose that, but that's what happened.

If we are to put matters to referenda, then who is going to decide whether they are matters of substance. Who is going to decide that? Is the House going to decide that this particular item of Pedro Castle for $10 million or the Port for $14 million be put to referenda? These are some of the things that could arise.

Who will decide the issues for referenda? Maybe the Leader of Government Business should have thought that process out and sought an amendment in that regard. But to come and say that you must go and ask the people by referendum, whether they want a referendum really While it was political one-upmanship and while it will give people a say, it is a very confusing road to take, giving them a say in whether they should have a say. If that is not confusing, then you tell me, Mr. Speaker!

To use a referendum, as I said about cost, to find out whether you want a referendum is a very costly exercise.

Mr. Speaker, the resolution before us, because it says that we should go to the public, it is a good thing. But I don't know if this makes sense to ask the public whether they want a referendum. So when you get to that part, I intend to use my conscience on what I think is good governance, right and proper for this country and what is not. I cannot say that going that route is good governance. It is not good governance! And, therefore, I doubt that I am going to support that aspect of the motion. Not that people shouldn't have a right to say because that is what the substantial motion is—to give people the right, but not to mess up the process of democracy that we are trying to build in the country.

Mr. Speaker, on these matters we need to give much thought. I am not convinced that it is the most practical way and I believe that we are playing with fire, and the only people that are going to suffer might be the Caymanian public. The United Kingdom, I believe, will want to approve what the Leader of Government Business is asking for. So, I will have to wait and hear if there are any more convincing arguments as to that particular aspect of the motion—the Constitution debate.

I understand that the Minister of Education laid down a challenge to people who might be opposing him in this matter, to say whether they want to change the Constitution. I have a challenge for him to say whether he wants to remain the Leader of Government Business. If he doesn't want it, the obvious thing to do is to give it up. Is he prepared to do that?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate, does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member from North Side.

Ms. Edna M Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I am certain that my contribution to the debate on this motion will take very little time because [Private Member's] Motion, No. 11 of 1999, has given the Legislative Assembly many lectures since the debate started. We have had lectures on subjects like the Constitution, lectures on the words "ultra vires," and lectures on who knows best for the people of the Cayman Islands.

Before I give my little contribution, there is a matter that I need to make very clear. When I abstained on the amendment, I did not abstain because I felt that I should change the Constitution without the say of the people as portrayed after the four Members abstained. I looked in the dictionary to find the definition of the word "abstain" and it says someone who does not vote for or against.

My reason for abstaining, as [stated by] other Members who have contributed to this motion as amended, . . . the resolution says that any amendment to the Constitution of these Islands should be done by referendum. In my humble opinion, that should have been a motion on its own regarding constitutional amendment. I have never advocated advancement of the Cayman Islands' Constitution, and I will never advocate advancement of the Constitution—unless it is the desire of the people of these Islands.

That amendment referring to a referendum being taken before any amendment can be done to the Constitution, in my humble opinion bears no water. If we really want to give the people that right, we should have bought a separate motion to amend the Constitution to enshrine that right within the Constitution. My question is, when this House is prorogued in the year 2000, what happens to this resolution? Is it going to stay? Is it going to tie the hands of the next government or is it going to fall away? Is it only being brought to tie the hands of the present Members of the Legislative Assembly?

Mr. Speaker, if we really and truly want to give the people of these Islands that right, let us be big enough to amend the Constitution and put it in the Constitution, as the mover and the seconder of the original motion did with wanting to give the people of these islands the right to initiate a referendum.

The original motion wanted to give the people the right to initiate a referendum on major issues affecting this country. Certainly, the most major issue of any country is to change the constitution of that country. That could have been included in a Referendum Bill, that this be one of the national issues to give the people the right to initiate a referendum.

The time has come Mr. Speaker, to stop playing petty politics. Let us be serious when we say we want to protect our people, not just to get elected. The time for those things is long gone. I have no choice because we will be smeared at the next election. I am advised by my Leader of the Opposition not to do this yet, but let us be honest with the people of the Cayman Islands, let us not mislead the people of these islands to make them believe that the members bringing this motion, and the members who have spoken against the amendment, do not want to give them the right to have a say in amending the Constitution.

Other members have spoken and I agree with them. I feel that with such an amendment we are tying the hands of the United Kingdom's Government. We look in the Constitution and we see that you must be a British Dependent Territory citizen to be able to vote or to be able to stand for an election in these Islands. If the United Kingdom government requires to change that to British Overseas Territories, do we really believe that the United Kingdom Government is going to say call a referendum? I don't.

We have to be very careful. This thing must be thought out before it ties the hands of every Member of this Parliament. Mr. Speaker, with those few words, sir, I have expressed my feelings on the amended motion.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other Member wish to speak? If no other Member wishes to speak, does the honourable Mover of the motion wish to exercise his right of reply?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99 AS AMENDED

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Having given many hours of thought to this. Having talked to several people who I trust about it and having been given permission by your good self before I wind the motion up for vote, I feel compelled to put forward a further amendment, and with your permission, I will do so.

In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the First Elected Member for George Town seek to move the following amendments that Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended be amended. Mr. Speaker, just for guidance from you, sir, should I read the whole thing before we look for the seconder.

The Speaker: You can read it yes and I would like to have the seconder first.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: You would like to have the seconder first?

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I respectfully beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 has been duly moved and seconded.
Does the mover wish to speak to it?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, if I may just take a point of order on this. At present, there is a motion on the floor that was being debated and this amendment as I understand it, would put the first part of the amendment, reinstating what has already been voted on because a vote was taken 11:0 with four abstentions on this first part of the motion. Therefore, that could not be brought within six months, as it is the same in substance. I will deal with the two sections differently.

That section, sir, is 24(8). As I understand, if this is correct with the First Elected Member, the first part of the resolve puts the motion back to exactly what it was prior to the amendment and the amendment has been voted on. If I could deal with the two sections separately, sir.

The Speaker: Certainly.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, with your permission, may I respond to what the minister is saying, sir? I think if he is putting up a case and asking for a ruling—

The Speaker: Just let me get one thing. Are you asking that you can respond to both of them first?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, if what I have said is not correct that the first part of the motion seeks negate the amendment, if that is the case then that cannot be done at this stage because that part has already been voted on. That is my point sir.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [Inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, I gave you that. Just give me a second. It is . . .

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may interrupt, sir. Perhaps, before the minister does what he is doing, for the benefit of the listening public he might allow me to read the motion. I have not even read it yet.

The Speaker: I understand the Honourable Minister and I have a point on procedure that I want to discuss, but I think it would be appropriate for you to read your amendment.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I will do that now and just to say respectfully to the Chair, whenever the minister is finished raising his point to you, I would crave your indulgence for me to respond. I will read the motion, sir.

Amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as Amended. As I read, Mr. Speaker, "In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the First Elected Member for George Town, seek to move that Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended, be amended:

- 1) In the first resolve by:
 - i. deleting the words "subject to and after a referendum under section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1993 whereby the electorate vote for a referendum to be initiated by the electorate, the Legislative Assembly" as they appear in the first resolve; and
 - ii. Inserting the words "the Government" after the word "THAT" in the first line.
- 2) In the last resolve by:
 - i. Adding the words "any fundamental change to" between "that" and "the" as they appear in the second line; and
 - ii. By deleting the words "for amendment" as they appear in the penultimate line."

Mr. Speaker, for purposes of clarity, what I would like to do is simply read those two resolve sections as they would read in total with the proposed amendments to make sure there is no misunderstanding as to what I seek with the proposed amendments. If I may, sir?

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What it means is that the first resolve section of the motion will revert to its original state when I moved it and it was seconded by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. Whereby it would read, "BE IT NOW THEREFORE THAT the Government takes the necessary steps to cause Section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands Constitution Order 1993 to be amended to allow the electorate to initiate a referendum".

The last resolve section, Mr. Speaker, would read as follows: "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgement on a single issue of immediate relevance and that any fundamental change to the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate votes for the specific amendments."

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, do you wish to speak further to it?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir. On the first part of the motion which seeks to reverse what had been decided by the amendment by a motion in this House just a few days ago, I submit, sir, that cannot be brought. And, I would also refer you to Standing Order 25(7), which says, "When the question upon the amendment to a motion has been proposed by the Presiding Officer, an earlier part of the motion may not be amended unless the amendment under discussion is withdrawn or negated."

That was carried, and it is a bit strange anyhow, sir, because the mover of this motion did not abstain from voting for the amendment, he voted against it.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker! On a point of order.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Sorry, he did not vote against it or for it.

[Inaudible injection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Just listen to me, please. I am not trying to mislead. He abstained—he didn't vote for it or against it. Okay.

The Speaker: I think that has cleared the point.

Hon Truman M Bodden: What he is seeking to do is to reverse the motion that was passed earlier—eleven to zero—because there were four abstentions. So, I submit that question has already been decided and that it is now a part of the original motion and it cannot be put again.

On the second part of it sir, the amendment here seems to be seeking to amend the original motion and at present . . . well up top it says "seek to move that Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended be amended." So, if that is an amendment to an amendment, and I think that is what the Mover is saying, I am not certain just how this is going to be dealt with because there is one motion on the floor now for an amendment. If you have a look sir at Standing Order 27(1), it would seem that this would now come into play. It says, "An amendment to an amendment may be moved and seconded at any time after the question upon the original amendment has been proposed, and therefor it has been put at the conclusion of the debate on the original amendment." I think the word "therefor" probably should be "before" for that to make sense. That is the point I am making to you.

Perhaps the member would let me just try to finish. The one I am reading from has "therefor" and I think it should be "before." So, at present, the amendment that has been put has been voted on and put in place and I think if you look as well at Standing Order 25(7) . . . I agree there seems to be some confusion in that area, but that says “When the question upon the amendment to a motion has been proposed by the Presiding Officer . . .” and on this part of the motion, that was proposed carried 11 – 0, with the four abstentions. But, eleven voted for that. This now seems to seek to amend—

The Speaker: Which number are you reading from?

Hon Truman M Bodden: Yes sir, [SO] 25(7).

It says, says “When the question upon the amendment to a motion has been proposed by the Presiding Officer, an earlier part of the motion may not be amended unless the amendment under discussion is withdrawn or negatived.” What has happened is the amendment has been positively carried, so it has been neither withdrawn nor negatived. I think you would have to consider that on whether this could be brought. If the case is such that these two, and especially the first one, can be brought in, it means that immediately after there is a vote on a motion there could then be another motion to reverse that vote. I think this is what the Standing Orders are seeking to stop. That is the best I could clarify.

Naturally, whatever ruling you make sir, I will abide by.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of the House to Erskine May pages 368 and 369 captioned “Restrictions on power of Rescission.”

The Speaker: Do you wish to further speak to this part of Erskine May?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I think that the passage is crystal clear and speaks for itself. I just wanted to bring it to the attention of the House before we get bogged down in this matter that seems to be so ably resolved here sir.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, if I could just ask you to ask for that whole paragraph because the last two paragraphs seem to qualify the first one.

The Speaker: You are talking from the top of the page right on down?

Hon Truman M Bodden: The last part says, “The power of rescission has only been exercised in the case of a resolution resulting from a substantive motion, and even then sparingly. It cannot be exercised merely to override a vote of the House, such as a negative vote. Proposing a negatived question a second time for a decision of the House, would be, as stated earlier, contrary to the established practice of Parliament.”

And it goes on: “Sufficient variation would have to be made, not only from the form but also from the substance of the rejected motion, to make the second ond question a new question. Similarly, the House of Commons has shown strong objection to rescinding of vote by which the House has made an amendment to a resolution.” It seems that that is clear sir.

The Speaker: I have listened very carefully to what all have said but in agreeing to accept this motion, I referred to Standing Order 24(7) which reads, “If a member desires to vary the terms of a motion standing in his name, he may do so by giving an amended notice of motion, but only if such amendment does not, in the opinion of the Presiding Officer, materially alter the scope of or any principle embodied in the original motion. Such amended notice shall run from the time at which the original notice was given and SO 25(2) shall not apply.”

I considered the original motion that the First Elected Member for George Town moved and this is not altering the scope of what he said. I understand the argument that has been given but that is my interpretation. I think there is no better way to prove this than with the will of the House and the final vote.

Hon Truman M Bodden: As you rule, sir, I naturally accept your ruling.

The Speaker: So please present your amendment. I think this would be an appropriate time to take the luncheon break. We shall resume at 2:15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.54 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.33 PM

The Chairman: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended.

The First Elected Member for George Town continuing.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and just to make it very clear sir, what I am debating right now is my latest amendment to this motion.

The Speaker: That is correct.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, sir. Before we took the break, I had read the proposed amendments out and I had also read the way the motion would be worded incorporating these amendments. Now, in trying to build arguments for this motion, I would like to take each resolve section that has the proposed amendments in it separately, and deal with it. I will deal with the very first one.

I am not quite sure, sir. The Leader of Government Business, or should I say Minister of Education?

The Speaker: Minister of Education.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, sir. So we should no longer say Leader of Government Business?

[Inaudible Interjection]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: We will refer to him for the time being (to keep the peace), as the Minister of Education. That's not a problem, sir.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

[Laughter]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: And Leader of Government Business!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps, for purposes of clarity, I might simply refer to him as "the Second Elected Member for George Town."

The Speaker: No, we don't want that.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can't do that either?

The Speaker: No.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I will follow your ruling, sir.

The Speaker: "The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning" is his title.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Okay, sir. Perhaps, though, you will accept in short as we go along, if I say "the Minister of Education."

The Speaker: Absolutely!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you very much, sir. We have it clear now. Okay!

Anyway, when the Minister of Education brought his amendments, we quickly were able to put the very first one to bed because we all were able to see—including him—that he had added something that was part of a resolution into one of the recital sections. So we got that out of the way and that didn't last very long.

Mr. Speaker, before the minister starts to go over what I said prior to this (because you see, sir, I do know him. Believe me, I do!), I want to quickly address a point that I made regarding the second amendment that he originally brought. I said that it was "semantics but not worth fighting over." At that point in time (because I was so intent with the belief, as I still do believe that the electorate in this country should have the right to initiate a referendum once the terms and conditions are set out properly in law) I didn't want to get into a war over this.

I could not believe, Mr. Speaker (after we went through the first exercise when the Minister for Education said that our first motion was ultra vires the Constitution and we then sought advice and got to understand and accept what was going to be an acceptable version of the motion and set about doing that) that we would end up with a two-week debate on the motion. So, when he brought his amendments, Mr. Speaker, and he repeated what I said (and I am going to just quickly repeat it one more time) . . . what his second amendment (which has ended up to be his first amendment) is saying contrary to what the original motion says (because the original motion simply was saying that we need to use whatever methods are necessary to allow for the Constitution to be amended to allow the electorate to initiate a referendum), contrary to the limitations that the Constitution has in it now, which only allows for a referendum to be held by virtue of a resolution brought by an elected Member and passed by majority in the House, he has turned it around with his amendment and has said that if you believe that the people (that is, the electorate) should have the right to initiate a referendum, then you should have a referendum asking them whether they should or not.

Now, Mr. Speaker, you know this is one debate where we have had legal opinions, Standing Orders, Constitutions, referrals to papers and all kind of stuff thus far. But I want to tell the world something. The people of this country are not paying attention to all of those grizzly details. The people are paying attention to what they want to achieve.

Now, he has said that we must have a referendum to ask the people if they must have the right to initiate a referendum. When I said that I didn't want to put up a fight, as I said before I was just intent on trying to see this thing through. But I have had time to think about that and it is ludicrous, it is stupidity, and it is madness! That's what it is. And, I am going to explain why.

Mr. Speaker, less the minister misunderstands—I am not mad. I am not angry. I am nothing like that. But I have sat and thought about this thing and for the life of me, I cannot see why that is the course we must take. And here is why: If, by virtue of talking to many people, consultations with constituents, paying heed to surveys that may have been done, questionnaires that have been put out and answered, and listening to what the public who made up the Vision 2008 Document have had to say regarding referendum, we have concluded that the vast majority of the people in this country—that is, the electorate, because it can only refer to them at this point in time—would be much happier if they had the right to initiate a referendum regardless of the terms and conditions, even assuming that there is no clear-cut way to ensure that is correct, I want you to listen to this and just tell me if this doesn't make sense. I want the Minister of Education to listen carefully to this too because I know he is going to debate and I want to see which roundabout fashion he is going to twist this in.

Mr. Speaker, I noticed he might have been tempted but he is not going to get up on that and make a point of order with what I just said.

If we, the elected representatives of the people, wish to give the people the right to initiate a referendum and in order to put it parallel to our right to initiate a referendum we want to add it in the Constitution just the way it is now (which allows us to do it); and we were to go through with that exercise and recommend to London that that consequential amendment be done to the Constitution, and the people decided within themselves they did not want to take up that right, what harm is there in it? It cannot do any damage. It can do no harm whatsoever. If we are correct in our assumption, Mr. Speaker, then they are totally happy because they will then get the right.

If our assumption is not quite correct and they don't pick up the option, then there is no harm done. No huge cost to this country. But if in order to decide we go through the cost of a referendum and find out that it is their wish, then we are all going to say, 'Lord, we should have simply done it'. But if we find out (since that is the logic the minister is using) for sure we must have a referendum. If we use a referendum and find out that they don't want it, we still have gone through the cost of a referendum and the time that it has taken to do one.

So, I am saying that to parallel the logic of saying that we must use a referendum to find out from the people whether they want the right or not cannot be equated to simply doing it. And whether they want it or not, there can be no harm done because if they don't want it, they don't use it. But it will not have cost this country the kind of money that it is going to cost to do a referendum.

The second thing about it, Mr. Speaker . . . and I thought about this one. If I were not a Member of this Honourable Legislative Assembly and I did not have the privilege of representing the people of this country, and I were on the outside and a referendum was held asking me whether I as a voter of the Cayman Islands wanted the right to be able to initiate a referendum from the outside or not, before I answer that question I would ask how is it going to be done.

You see, what his amendment is saying is, have a referendum and ask the people whether they want this authority or not. You cannot go to the public to ask them that without first of all having the terms and conditions under which a referendum could be initiated by them so they can understand what they are voting for. You cannot do it! It doesn't make sense!

In Quebec, Canada . . . do you know this problem they have been having? For instance, if Cayman Brac wants to secede from the Cayman Islands as Quebec wants to secede from Canada . . . and they have had two referendums. It is an emotive topic and it is divisive, and all of that.

When they brought the first referendum, Mr. Speaker, they were stopped short in their tracks because that's what the people told them. Exactly what the people told them! So, before they could actually get it going, they had to go making the law and they said, 'Well, if this is what you want, this is how it would be'. Do you see what I am saying? Although the first amendment was voted on and approved, not only is that illogical in my view but it is cumbersome and there are other things that would have to be done to make any sense of it.

Mr. Speaker, please—and when I say, please, that is not just for you, sir . . . but can we listen to this? And without looking at numbers of where the government sits, where the backbench sits and whose side who is on, let's just look at reason and see what we are looking at today. I am asking the members in this House to please look at that. It cannot be right for one split second for this Legislative Assembly to go to the vote for that and to approve that as part of this Motion. It cannot be right!

And, Mr. Speaker, they all know it cannot be right. But I promised and I am going to keep my promise, sir. I am going to stick to the logic of the argument. How can it be more right to have to make a law first (which will take forever), then after the law is made to publish that and say [to the] people, 'this is what it will be so now we are going to hold a referendum to ask if you want the right to initiate a referendum'. Why don't we just simply give them the right? If they want the right, we will be convinced that we have done the right thing. We will then go about making a law to set out the terms and conditions as the original motion asks, and once that is done whenever the people of this country fulfil the conditions under which they can initiate a referendum and they think that the matter is of such importance that they should do so, they can do so. And, if they don't want to do, they don't do so. Argument done!

We will have done our jobs, Mr. Speaker, and we cannot have failed them because we will have given them an option at no cost to them—or us. But, the alternative is to spend money to find out if they want the option. Mr. Speaker, that is almost like going to school on a Monday morning and your mother going to the door to kiss you goodbye and she knows that you have to eat lunch and instead of saying, 'Son, here is your lunch money' she says, 'Do you want lunch money?' That's what it is like.

[Laughter]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, we all know what can transpire. In fact some, if not all, of us probably know exactly what has transpired. I am not getting into that.

I do not have any legal expertise. I will be the first one to admit that. I will also be the first one to admit that I am far from the smartest person around, but I have been around long enough and I believe that I can say that I have enough between my two ears to understand if given certain choices and they are clear cut, which is the better choice.

I am asking the eleven people who voted for that amendment to re-think their position—not because it is going to put them in a state of ridicule, not because it is going to put them in a state where somebody might say, 'well, they don't have good sense'. Nothing, like that, sir. But a little bit of time has passed . . . because I nearly got caught in the trap. I am not ashamed to admit that, but a little bit of time has passed and people have had time to think—others and myself included. And, I am asking them to re-think that position because that position, sir, in my view is not right.

It is going to be very hard to make all the points that I should make about this thing without going much deeper, but I am going to keep the promise that I made to myself. I am going to do the best I can to say with the issue at hand.

Mr. Speaker, I am not through by any means, sir, but I am going to ask you with that in mind because I believe there is enough merit to each individual amendment that I am proposing, that if you could, sir, find it possible when we go to vote on these amendments, to vote separately on the two issues. Please, sir, I don't think that is asking too much.

The Speaker: I will agree to that and I would ask that when the vote is being taken to—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: To remind you. Yes, sir, no problem, sir. That is fine.

So, Mr. Speaker, looking at that amendment, I don't think that I need to continue the argument any further. I think it is clear cut that that is not the better of the two ways if we wish to allow the electorate of this country the opportunity to initiate a referendum on their own steam.

Before I move away from the subject, I think that I have been somewhat forceful in making my point. I do not think I have been unfair. This is important, Mr. Speaker. As I explained in my original presentation of the motion, for good governance to occur, a main ingredient is the participation of the people. This, to me, is our way of showing the people of this country that we want to engage in good governance. We have no fear of transparency although I hear it being used all over the world now, that is, our little world. We have no fear of being accountable to the people.

Mr. Speaker, what I consider to be the most important merit of having a method by which the people of the country can initiate a referendum is this: Once the terms and conditions under which such a referendum can be triggered or initiated are set out in a law, I am certain that this Honourable Legislative Assembly in passing such a law is going to make that law reasonable but straight forward, done in such a way that you cannot just get up every morning as you please and hold a referendum because that is not the exercise. I know the people of this country know that. But once we set it out straight in a law as to how it can be done, Mr. Speaker, the main merit of that being in place, in my view, is simply a further check and balance for the elected representatives to have more incentive to be conscientious as the representatives of the people. That's all it is aimed for.

Let me re-phrase that that's not all it is aimed for. But that is a very important part of the reasoning behind this motion.

Mr. Speaker, as it stands now, general elections are the only true test that we have as representatives. You have been through many of them. That is an every four-year occurrence. We need in this day and age to be what the Fourth Elected Member from George Town refers to as "full-time MLAs." I may not be speaking it in the same context as he. All I am saying to you is the responsibility gets more and more. We have to be conscientious. We cannot think of it as just to get elected and then do what you have to do the next time around to get elected again. This is serious business. This is sacred business.

This is going to give the electorate a check and balance between elections to make sure that we are conscientious in our job. What is wrong with that? Why do we have to go back and ask them if they want that? We should be happy to do it and to stand our ground and know that we are conscientious enough and not be afraid of it.

Mr. Speaker, I just wish to—with your permission, sir—read a very short excerpt from a book called Parliamentary Practice in New Zealand.

The Speaker: Give me the page number, please.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It's chapter 39, page 445, it's the second paragraph. It reads: "A referendum is an exercise in direct democracy, whereas the parliamentary system is the operation of a representative democracy. The two are not incompatible but they raise separate issues. . . . These are held under the terms of the legislation governing them and do not raise special issues for the parliamentary process. But there are two types of referendum which do have a special relationship to the parliamentary process—electoral referendums and citizens'-initiated referendums."

Mr. Speaker, we are trying to allow by way of the Constitution to have citizens'-initiated referendums. There is no argument, no matter how convoluted it gets, no matter how confusing it gets, no matter how long winded it gets and no matter how legal it gets, that can prove that we should go by way of a referendum to ask the people whether they want this right.

Again, Mr. Speaker, just like the story I related about the child going to school with the lunch money. If we have to go and ask the people if they want that right it's the same thing as if I need to leave this Legislative Assembly and go to the Post Office and I decide to go through Eastern Avenue to get to the Post Office rather than walking straight up the street. Same Post Office.

The minister's amendment is asking me (and I know I need the exercise, but that's not the point) to jump into my car drive through Mary Street, go down School Road, up to Eastern Avenue, come down Shedden Road to get to the Post Office, when all I would have to do is jump in the car and drive straight down the road, past CIBC and go to the Post Office. That's exactly what the minister's amendment is doing.

Let me move on to the second amendment. First of all, I need to explain this point. The minister mentioned on more than one occasion during his debate those of us who abstained from voting on his two amendments. He tried to insinuate—and he cannot say that he did not try because up until this morning I heard him trying, until he got caught. He has tried to insinuate that if we abstained from the vote for his amendments that meant that we did not want to go back to the people to find out from them if they wanted constitutional change. He tried to say that.

The minister has been here forever compared to me. But that is one piece of black polish that he knows he can't polish me with. I believe that the people of this country do not know me to stand up on the floor of this House to try to mislead them or to lie to them. I firmly believe that. If that were the case, I would have known about it a long time ago because the people who I represent have good sense.

When we abstained from that vote it was simply because we were not convinced that the affair was one which was in the best interest of the country. And some of us firmly believed that (whether intentionally or inadvertently) these amendments were succeeding in derailing the process we had set out upon when we brought the original motion. I firmly believe that this next amendment I am going to address should stand on its own. I believe that it takes the intent of the original motion much further than the original intention.

You know Mr. Speaker, I have to stand here and wonder what a level playing field is. I am going to tell you what happens in times like these. There are those of us with full knowledge of what people's intentions are, and they understand that there is no ulterior motive, not even a political motive looking for kudos, as they call it; it's something that you believe should be right. They sit down and get a bunch of books about legal this, and that pile of thing that, to build a case to confuse the whole thing forgetting totally what they want to achieve.

I don't envy them. I don't want to be like them, because as big as I am, I love me! But is it really in the interest of the people of this country to spend time trying to decide whether you can use a technicality to derail a process forgetting about what the process wants to achieve? I want people to seriously think about that. If we spend all of our time trying to circumvent situations and to show up who they want to show up because they have the ability to do so with words and referrals and books and all of that type of thing for political expedience, . . . I'd rather be me. They can have it!

I know there are times when that expertise is needed. And I respect that. I am not even saying this with a forlorn hope that they will stop doing it, because I know they will never stop doing it. But all they are doing is making people like me try harder and harder with my little limited two bits of sense between my ears. Do you know what, Mr. Speaker? My heart has never failed me yet, and it will not fail me this time. Numbers might fail me, but I will not have lost.

Down to the second amendment. This resolve was not a part of the original motion. It reads (before the amendment that we are debating now) as follows: “AND BE IT RESOLVED that only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance; and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments.”

As I mentioned to you before, I still hold the view that this should have been a motion to stand on its own separately. Nevertheless, we find it as part and parcel of an amended motion. While I have no reason to change what I believe, understanding and accepting the process and finding it a part of the motion, it has to be addressed.

The amendment I am now proposing to this last resolve in the amended motion in my view makes it more acceptable, more reasonable, more palatable, and more in line with something that this Legislative Assembly can physically work with.

The key to it is this: Where the motion asks (and I won't repeat the exact words at this time) that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment after a referendum, that says to me that any amendment to the Constitution—any amendment whatsoever—that needs to be done must have a referendum. That's what that says to me.

I know that the experts are going to come back with a load of stuff, and they have a right to do so, but they are going to use legalese and that kind of stuff. Mr. Speaker, they can come with all they want to come with, I just hope there is logic to what they say. That's what is important in this debate. Not the ability to head something off because you can pick up on a Standing Order or draw some reference. This is not a court case.

Instead of leaving the amendment as it has been brought by the Honourable Minister for Education I am asking that we add “any fundamental changes to the Constitution should only be recommended by this honourable House after a referendum.” I am simply trying to qualify the type of amendment which will require a referendum to be taken to the people to seek guidance. That's what I am saying.

After struggling with the matter for many, many hours between yesterday and last night, the best description, the best adjective for the word “change” that I could come up with is “fundamental,” “fundamental change.” So what we are debating right now is whether or not this Legislative Assembly should leave the amendment brought by the Minister for Education as it is, which calls for any change whatsoever—

The Speaker: May I just call your attention to . . . this is part of the amended motion. It is not his amendment we are talking about, because his amendments stand as a part of the amended motion, the motion as amended.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I respect what you are saying, but I referred to it simply because he was the one who brought it.

The Speaker: I understand.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It got absorbed into the motion, yes; but he brought it first for that to happen. But I hear what you are saying. There's no problem, sir.

The Speaker: I didn't mean to interrupt you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: No sir, that's fine. I don't think your intention was to derail me. I would have thought that if it were someone else, sir, but not you.

What I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that my amendment that I am bringing now (seconded by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, regarding this last resolve section of the amended motion) is asking for a qualification to be given to “changes” in the Constitution that must be referred to the electorate via a referendum. That's what I am saying. And in my estimation there is good reason why I have done this.

Contrary to what some people may think, this is not just a last ditch effort (as I sometimes refer to in this House). I have a serious problem being asked to vote for this type of resolution when it comes across as all encompassing. I have a problem with that because I don't have to hide behind what I think. I will tell anybody what I think, once I think it. I have a problem with what I perceive to be the minister's intention with the resolution, which is now a part of the amended motion.

I went through the Constitution over and over. I talked to some people. But I strongly believe that there are some types of consequential amendments which we may need to do from time to time, which in no way affect the structure of the governance of this country which we follow in the Constitution. I don't believe that we should have to go to referendum to recommend it to London. That is the basic principle on which I bring the amendment.

I nearly got caught in the trap, Mr. Speaker. I was going to use the argument that for instance the Chief Secretary advised us not so very long ago that in the very near future we are not going to be referred to as British Dependent Territory citizens, but as United Kingdom Overseas Territories citizens. I think that's correct. But there is a difference there.

Now, in the Constitution, there are several sections when it comes to qualifying as an elector which refer to BDTC's—British Dependent Territory Citizens. I nearly took the view that to try and prove to my learned friend, the Attorney General—because I can't prove anything to the Minister for Education. But the honourable Second Official Member (once I can get face to face) and I can dialogue with no problem. But I nearly brought the argument that a consequential amendment of this nature, that what the motion as it stands would do is cause for us to have a referendum to be able to make that change to UKOT's—United Kingdom Overseas Territories Citizens.

In other words, where the Constitution was going to have to be changed to BDTC's to UKOT's . . . and I did hold the view at one time that we would have to take that to a referendum and ask the people. So this whole thing was ludicrous. But I talk to people too. And I found out that it is quite easy, in fact the most likely scenario would be once Britain changes the British Nationality Act and refers to us and other Overseas Territories as United Kingdom Overseas Territories Citizens, then they would simply send down the necessary amendment to the Constitution to put it in the right order by Order in Council. So I am learning slowly, but surely.

I am not going to bring that argument, Mr. Speaker. And I know that the legal minds would have rolled over laughing had I brought it. But I am not afraid to tell anyone, including you sir, that there was a time when I was totally convinced that that was a good sound argument to bring—simply from lack of knowledge. But we know better now.

There is still the difference in what we are seeking in our amendment and the amended motion as it stands. There is still that difference. That motion as amended leaves no room whatsoever for any type of consequential amendment to be made.

Mr. Speaker, I am not taking tales out of school, and I may be running a small risk—perhaps a big risk—but I am going to relate something here now which is totally the truth, but I just want to make a point so that people will understand the purity of the intent of the motion.

When I saw this amendment being brought forward by the Minister of Education, I remembered that it was a short time ago when we were visited by the two representatives from the UK. I think Mr. Hoole is a Constitutional Advisor.

The Speaker: That is correct.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: And the lady's name was Dare, not Dear. That's right. I remember that. Miss Gillian Dare.

She was talking about when we had our little meeting with her, that is the elected members. Some of us were here. Some of us were off the island. When we met with them the lady was mainly concerned with issues in the White Paper. And we talked back and forth about certain things. The idea was to continue dialogue and start getting and passing information with a view toward our getting a clear understanding of the position Britain wants to take and what we can do to make it acceptable to both parties—so we would be happy with this new Partnership for Progress and that they are happy with it.

We understand that there is a responsibility on both sides, so we needed to talk this thing through. We were in the middle of all of that with Miss Dare.

Now when it was Mr. Hoole's turn to talk to us, he made it very clear that his role in these visits to the Dependent Territories was simply that of a Constitutional Advisor. And I am not going to leave it hanging to bend the argument one way. Nothing like that. I am going to explain . . . and there is relevance, Mr. Speaker.

What he basically said to us was that along with this thinking the British Government had where it wanted to explore this new Partnership for Progress to make sure there are straightforward responsibilities on both sides so that we know exactly what the relationship should be, what we can expect of them, what they can expect of us, and such the like, he said that Britain held the view that it was time for the Dependent Territories to review their Constitutions. And his term to us was with a view, if necessary to "modernise" our constitutions.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Tell them.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: We had some questions, Mr. Speaker. But no one should get frightened. We naturally asked our questions. The view was to look at the different constitutions in the different Dependent Territories with a view, if necessary—and I put that in because that was said to us—to modernise wherever.

He went on to explain that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands is by far the most modern constitution of the Dependent Territories. He told us that. And what he suggested to us (and in our talks with him we came to agree upon) is that in light of the fact that Britain might think that some of the Constitutions of the Dependent Territories might need to be modernised, then they must have some type of reasoning that caused them to think that. So we asked him to use the good office of the Governor to give us some type of idea of what they were trying to say to us about this modernisation. We could examine our Constitution to see if there was anything left to be desired.

Let me make it clear that the modernisation Mr. Hoole was talking about was by no means pinpointing any advancement whatsoever. He was not saying that. We pointedly asked him that and his answer to us was, "Listen, Britain is not going to tell any of its Dependent Territories that they must become Independent Territories." He said, "Britain's position is . . ." and I can't quote verbatim, but I know what I am saying is the correct meaning. He said that Britain's position is that whatever the citizens of the country want, and when they examine the wishes comparing the facts, and they give their own advice, and at the end of the day whatever the country wants, that is what the country will get. That's what he told us, which is fine and fair, and to be truthful a relief—to me at least!

But, the point is that I know there is a checklist for us to make reference to. I haven't seen it because the way I understand it is that at the earliest opportunity the Governor is going to call all of the representatives together, lay out this thing to us and then we are going to begin dialogue and get opinions.

Because I don't know what it consists of, I have no idea whether some of the things in it are things that we will need to go to the public with, or if they are simple tidying up exercises. I have no idea. And I am not being fallacious—that's a new one I learned last night. I am not being fallacious about this. In other words, I am telling the truth.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I don't know where he was last night, because I wasn't there.

[laughter]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Third Elected Member for Boddén Town wants to clear the air. He was not the one who taught me the word last night, Mr. Speaker. And that's the truth. We parted company early.

But seriously, Mr. Speaker, the point I wish to make about this is that this is an exercise that is going to happen very shortly. I don't know what its end result will be. It is possible that when we look at our Constitution and the "checklist" that Britain has supplied us with, we might be able to talk to Mr. Hoole again and say 'Listen, we understand exactly what you are doing, and we appreciate what you are doing. But we looked at this. Here is our position. This is our Constitution so we really don't think that we have to go into this any more.' And he will shake hands with us and say 'Fine. My job is done here. I am moving on to the next territory. I am finished.' That might be the case.

But what might also be the case is that . . . for the love of me, because I don't know what the list is I can't use any examples. I am not running from building my case, but because I don't know what that list is, I can't use any specific examples. But it is very possible that there might be some simple amendments to the Constitution which do not infringe on the fundamental principles of our Constitution so it may not be necessary to take to the public (via a referendum) for us to make the simple recommendations.

This tightly wad situation that has emerged out of the turns and twists of the debate of what we considered at the beginning to be a simple motion is kind of funny. There are a few things that I believe for purposes of truth and clarity are necessary to say. No one—no one person, or no one group of persons—should ever try to use the people of this country as a playground, and use tactics for their own purposes to put fear in the hearts of our people unnecessarily. There are people in this House who do it. That is my opinion, sir. And they do it because that is the only method they have left; it is the last straw they are holding on to because everything else has been eroded because some people have a little bit of sense now. That's what's happening.

Talking about this modernisation, talking about this dialogue that we will engage in with this constitutional advisor, who, by the way, made it very clear to us that he was never ever going to be coming to us in the same position as the last set of constitutional advisors we had (which was the Wallace and Smith Commission I think). He referred to them specifically and said to us that he would not be coming as a representative of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office at any point in time making any suggestions to us. He was crystal clear about that.

Mr. Roy Boddén: True!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So there's nothing to be uncomfortable about.

I go to the Post Office sometimes. I went there yesterday. As true as I am standing here, a sensible person stopped me, looked me dead in the eye and said "What are we going to vote for in the referendum? Independence or not?" And the man was serious. The man is not an idiot. But it goes to show that what we do, and what we say in this honourable Legislative Assembly affects the public. We must stop it!

It took me fifteen minutes. I took the time and I simply explained what it was all about. The gentleman was relieved. He gave me his opinion—and, by the way, I was very grateful for that because it gave me a little more heart—and he went about his business. But that is exactly why our responsibility is much more sacred than we hold it in here in my view.

I am certain, absolutely certain, that when that gentleman walked away from me (although I know he was relieved) he must have said to himself 'Kurt must think I'm an idiot for asking him that question.' I don't think he's an idiot, Mr. Speaker, because I understand—I know what happens when people try to use the methods they use just to win. And for the love of me, to win what? Mr. Speaker, if I were a different hombre I would talk about winning, but I am not going to do that.

Getting back to the amendment we are proposing here. I want to just read a few definitions regarding Constitution—

The Speaker: Would you want to take the afternoon break before?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker. That would be kind of you, sir.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.45 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.20 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended.

The First Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: When we took the short break I was going to crave your indulgence to refer to a couple of definitions just to lay the groundwork. I hold the view that it is very important for the people of this country to have a clear understanding of the matter we are dealing with, and to not allow anyone to paint a picture of a situation which does not exist.

Before I read, just to recap and put things in perspective, what I am trying to argue here is my amendment to the last resolve in the amended motion where I am asking for a change. Instead of allowing as it reads now where it says "any change," I am saying it should be "any fundamental change" in the Constitution. That's where the crux of the matter is.

And for as long as we have been talking about the Constitution and the question of changes to the Constitution and the picture that some people chose to paint regarding advancing the Constitution, I think it is time for all and sundry to be very clear of exactly what we are dealing with.

In the Encyclopedia of Parliament there's a definition of Constitution. It reads, "A constitution, in its widest sense, is the whole system of government of a country. The collection of rules which establish and regulate or govern the government, which rules are either part of the law of the land or are established by usage of convention. In its narrower sense, a constitution is a selection of these rules, which have been embodied in one document. All the countries of the Commonwealth, except the United Kingdom and perhaps New Zealand, and indeed most of the nations of the world have written constitutions."

"The British Constitution is unwritten. In other words, its rules have never been coordinated into one or even several documents. New Zealand's Constitution is based partly on the New Zealand Act of 1852 as amended from time to time. But otherwise it is unwritten, so to speak, in the traditional British sense of the term."

"Dicey defines two types of Constitution: the flexible, as one under which every law of every description can legally be changed with the same ease and in the same manner by one and the same body; and the rigid constitution as one under which certain laws, generally known as constitutional or fundamental laws, cannot be changed in the same manner as ordinary laws."

I want to repeat that last sentence: ". . . the rigid constitution as one under which certain laws, generally known as constitutional or fundamental laws cannot be changed in the same manner as ordinary laws." Mr. Speaker, I contend that that's the type of constitution we have.

In Jowitt's Dictionary of English Law, constitution is described as ". . . any regular form or system of government. A constitution may be unwritten, resting mainly on custom and convention; or written, being drawn up in legal form. It may be flexible, that is, capable of being altered by an ordinary legislative act; or rigid, being capable of being altered only by special procedure."

We know that our constitution is, based on those two definitions, one that is rigid.

I want to quote two quick definitions of the word "fundamental." One of the definitions that I just read referred to the word "fundamental." The operative word in the amendment I am bringing is "fundamental." The first definition has "fundamental" as "basic; serving as a foundation; essential; primary; important; that which serves as a groundwork; an essential."

The next definition has synonyms to the word "fundamental": "primary, important, indispensable and essential." You notice the commonality there. In the definition of the word "fundamental" it reads: "Leading or primary principle; rule, law or article which serves as the groundwork or basis; essential part—for example, of the Christian faith."

I read those definitions of "Constitution" which we can extrapolate from to know what type of Constitution we have. The definitions for the word "fundamental" are basically leading up to my argument regarding why I believe the amendment that is being brought now should be the one used in the last resolution of the amended motion. I am saying that we should have no problem saying to the people of this country that any fundamental change that we would want to recommend to London in our Constitution should not be recommended by us—"us" meaning this Legislative Assembly—unless we go to the people via a referendum and ask them what they think.

What the motion as amended is saying before the amendment I have just brought is that any change whatsoever to the Constitution—not any "fundamental" change, any change whatsoever—we must first of all go to the public, have a referendum, go through all of the motions before we make any recommendations to London. So I think I am establishing the difference between what we want to say with our amendment and how we think the resolution should read and how it reads at present.

As soon as we return I am going to go into citing some examples from the Constitution which I want to relate to being fundamental, and some that are not fundamental. I think where contention is going to be with my amendment is how we define "fundamental." But I believe that if we are not just looking for arguments that it is easy to work with the word "fundamental." When we return that is where I will be going next. But I think you are already to quit for today, as it is that time.

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99
As Amended

(Continuation of debate on Amendment No. 2)

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, when we adjourned on Friday afternoon, I was beginning to deal with the second amendment which was brought forth by myself and seconded by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. These amendments are of course in response to the first set of amendments that were approved during the debate prior to this. So, I am just to recap bringing these amendments to the amended motion.

This amendment simply asks that instead of leaving the last resolve section of the amended motion as is (where it says "any change to the Constitution"), we insert "and that any fundamental change to the Constitution . . ." I brought this amendment taking the view that if we left it to say "any change in the Constitution" it certainly could cause disruption for good governance. There may well be required consequential amendments to the Constitution—which are not fundamental changes to the Constitution—and it would be a waste of time and money to have to deal with these whenever they occur via a referendum to the people.

When I refer to "fundamental" change, I refer to a change of great or far-reaching importance, not "consequential." When we look at the arrangement of sections in our own Constitution, Part I [has sections 1 through 4] "The Governor"; "Emoluments of the Governor"; "Acting Governor"; and "Governor's deputy." Those are "fundamental," should I say, to the workings of our government.

Part II talks about the Executive Council and it has its various sections in there about the "Tenure of office [on members of Council]"; "Governor to consult the Council"; "Determination of questions as to membership"; "Assignment of responsibility." Those, too, are fundamental areas of the Constitution.

Under that same section it talks about the "Powers of the Attorney General"; "Summoning of Council and transaction of business," these all have to do with the way in which the country runs, the way the government functions. That is what I mean when I refer to "fundamental."

Part III talks about the "Legislative Assembly," likewise it talks about the "Qualifications for elected membership," that is fundamental. It talks about the "Tenure of office of members of Assembly," the "Penalty for sitting or voting in Assembly when disqualified," the "Right to vote at elections," "Disqualification of electors," and the "Law as to elections." Mr. Speaker, while I presume that arguments can come forth about what would determine what is fundamental and what is not fundamental, I believe looking at our Constitution it is fairly easy to determine what is "fundamental" and what is "consequential."

Seeing as I do have the right to wind up the debate on these amendments I am not going to go into much more detail because I think I have made my arguments very clear as to why the amendments are being brought forward. But I want to explain a scenario, which presupposes that these two amendments are accepted. I want to prove that if these two amendments are accepted that there is absolutely no risk to this country of any government in the future—any 15 elected members (or whatever that number is in the future), any elected membership of this Legislative Assembly—being able to propose amendments to London that are "fundamental" and the people of the country not having the right to have their say in the matter. I am going to prove it like this:

If we allow the public the right to initiate a referendum (which is what the original motion proposed, and which is what the first amendment of these two last amendments that we are bringing is proposing), rather than spending a lot of money and wasting a lot of time we are presupposing that we are going to give them the right to initiate a referendum. If our second amendment is allowed, and if this last resolution is approved saying that any fundamental change to the Constitution will require that a referendum be held to get the people's input, and there is anyone from within these precincts or from without who argues the case, if our proposed amendment to the Constitution was going to be forwarded to London, and the announcements were made by this Legislative Assembly at whatever time in the future that might occur, if that were to happen and that change was considered by the Legislature not to be a fundamental change, therefore they did not have to go to a referendum with it, once the people of this country had the right to initiate a referendum, if there were enough people in the country who thought that that proposed change might be "fundamental" and should be done via a referendum, then they will have the right to initiate a referendum asking for that.

So you see, it is a safeguard if the original motion was allowed to move forward as presented. While we still argue the case that this very last resolve section is taking our motion further than what the intention was, the fact that it has been approved, all we are saying is rather than leave it saying any change whatsoever, we simply want wording that says any "fundamental" change. So, if there is a question of anyone not agreeing with any majority in the Legislature about whether or not a proposed amendment is "fundamental," then, if the public has the right to initiate a referendum, that is the safeguard right there. The public would then have the right to petition the Legislative Assembly and say, 'Listen, while you think that this is not fundamental, we think it is so therefore we want the public's input in the matter.' I want realistically for anyone to say to me which Legislature (should that have occurred) is going to deny the public the right to have an input in that.

Mr. Speaker, the original amendments brought forth to our motion have only served to complicate the effort. That is really all the purpose they have served. Now, if the Honourable Minister of Education has taken this opportunity because he feels strongly about the possibility of any fundamental change to the Constitution being able to occur without the public's input (and I am on all fours with him on that and he knows that), then the proposal that I am making will not change that.

All I am trying to do is avoid the possibility of any consequential amendments being needed for the Constitution having to go to the route and expense of a referendum when it is not necessary. I need to make it very clear that I am totally committed to public input whenever there are important matters and decisions to be made in this country—including any Constitutional change. But, we have to distinguish very clearly the difference between change and advancement.

The public is not greatly concerned about consequential changes to the Constitution. The public's concern is any advancement in the way in which the Government operates without being sure that is the right direction that we should be going in. I have those concerns myself. The Minister of Education knows that and the whole world knows that. So, this second amendment that we are bringing is not for a minute trying to prevent that safeguard being voted upon. It is simply trying to clarify the amendment so that we do not get stuck down the line with simple little matters having to wait for ten years when you have 20 or 30 different amendments that nobody wants to touch, but upsets the order of the good workings of Government before you are prepared to make the proposals to London. That is what we are saying. It cannot be anything but good reasons to that argument.

And, again, if there is a question as to what is fundamental and what is not fundamental, this safeguard will be there because the public will have the right to initiate a referendum if they are not convinced that that proposed change is a change that should be done without their input. That has to be a good argument being put forward Mr. Speaker. I really wish that we could avoid a battle over this and simply use the deductive reasoning that is being put forward, understanding and accepting it and let us move on.

Mr. Speaker, I could say more, but at this point in time I believe that the case is put forward. Others will have their own input into these proposed amendments and I hope and pray that this entire Legislature would not reconsider the whole affair. I want to make sure that I said the right thing. I really hope and pray that this entire Legislature would reconsider this whole affair using logic and reasoning behind it sir. I don't think that there is any vast difference in what we wish to achieve. I am just hoping that we can avoid any further arguments which really bear no relevance to what we want to achieve and let us just get on with it, get these amendments approved, get the final amended motion approved and let us get it done.

Let us prove to the people of this country that for good governance it is our view that we should give them that right and if we want to continue to play it safe to ensure that the public will always have the right to input whenever there are fundamental changes being proposed to the Constitution. Then our amendment is quite in order.

The reason for the second amendment, as I said before, is simply so that we do not get bogged down with consequential amendments and not be able to make these simple amendments which might occur in the future without having to go through the costly affair of a referendum. I will wait to hear the arguments that come forth and hopefully we will get over this without too much time passing. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate. Does any other Member wish . . . the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, this amendment seeks to rescind the earlier decision of this House, at least a part of it seeks to do that, in the first resolve clause which was passed by eleven for with four abstentions. So this seeks to go back and reverse out in the first resolve clause what had been passed earlier.

Mr. Speaker, dealing with the first part of this resolve . . . Back in 1989, I put up a similar motion that was defeated, so government is on all fours with having the public of this country given the right to initiate a referendum. But I must say that one of the several problems with the original motion, if I may now raise this, is the fact that it is a very general motion without any particulars as to how to put into effect a referendum by the people. It has nothing in it that can show you or can guide the public as to what the effects of this motion will be.

Now, I support the referendum by the people. But I would like now (since this has been amended for the third time) to deal in depth with the problem of putting up a motion that does not have in it sufficient detail to create the clarity that the public requires from a House that makes the Laws of the country. I submit that it would be best for this Legislature to work out things such as the percentage of voters, who would be required to sign the petition . . . [Members' laughter]

There is laughter there Mr. Speaker . . . but I am going to show how ill-thought-out this motion really is.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, apparently the First Elected Member for West Bay has seen exactly the same thing. So, we are both in the same position there, that the amendment is very general and does not have any details relating to it. It's just not good enough. There is not sufficient precision to just take and throw this out.

I point out again, government accepts the principle of this, the public should have the right to initiate a referendum.

Let us look at it in some detail. This first amendment is trying to shift the load away from this Legislature back to the government to then produce a Law. At present, the way the motion as amended is (without this amendment in it) . . . what would then happen was if the Constitution itself—now, not a law, the Constitution. . . and I need to make this clear. My original amendment said that if the Constitution of this country is to be amended to insert this, in which there would have to be some detail going with it . . . if you look at the present referendum you will see the machinery is put in there on the structure of the present referendum.

Any member of this House can bring a motion to have a referendum. No one has done it but that procedure is there. It is properly entrenched and the wording that is used carries with it some precision. Now to just go back and say that now government must figure out what this motion means, government must come up with the percentage, government must decide this, government must decide that, is passing the buck.

I am making it clear, Mr. Speaker. We agreed with this in principle but this Legislature must shoulder its burdens. It cannot just pass on a general motion and we be magicians to figure out what the mover, the seconder and the other two abstainers (along with the other two) to that original amendment meant. It is not good enough to just move this rescission motion to the amendment that was in there.

The way this would now work Mr. Speaker, . . . and let me say that I have no problem with the referendum for the public to initiate it, going in some way other than an amendment to the Constitution. But if it is going in to an amendment of the Constitution, it has to be looked at in depth. And I submit that whenever there is a move, and we heard quite a bit of what I am going to suggest is a move ultimately to review the Constitution of this country, then maybe at that stage is the time to get the details. But, at present, the first part of the motion that is seeking to remove the right to a referendum . . . you see, if this goes to the public in a referendum, then the specific questions will be asked. What percentage do you want? Ten? Twenty? Thirty? Fifty? What procedure do you want on this? How is the petition, if it is a petition, going to be certified?

And, let me say this Mr. Speaker, this type of referendum is one that is used in federal states, normally within the state area and not the federal area such as the States of the United States or the Cantons of Switzerland. I have to confess that this is not something that is found in the English books that is used in England. What is used in England now sits in our Constitution and there is a right to bring a referendum on that.

This type of referendum initiated by the people is something used in independent federal countries, in other words, countries that have a group of States or a group of Cantons or a group of semiautonomous parts to it. So, thought has to be given there.

And Mr. Speaker let me make it clear, I have very little problem at all with this part of the motion because I think that the public has a right to initiate a referendum.

That's Government's belief. I originally initiated this in 1989—ten years ago. Unfortunately, it was defeated.

So, I fully support this and I will support whatever is needed to bring that in, sir. If there is a worry on the referendum at this stage, well, that is something that can be looked at. And I don't have a lot of worry about this first part, let me just say, sir. What does worry me, Mr. Speaker, is the second resolve part. I now see a move to attempt to allow the legislature of this country, if it wishes to do so in secret, to recommend to the United Kingdom a change of the Constitution without going back to the public. And, I am going to point out the fallacy of the attempt of this motion to try to bring in fancy words, once again without the details. These motions have not, in my view, been as well thought out as they could have been because they are very general motions.

Now, if the four members who abstained on this are really of the view (as the original motion says, "WHEREAS only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgement on a single issue of immediate relevance") . . . if that is really believed, then there is no reason to introduce into this motion the words which will only allow for any change which is a "fundamental" change.

Mr. Speaker, experienced members of this House know that you don't change the Constitution of a country for minor amendments. It just isn't done. It is one of the highest, most serious documents. Every time there is a move to change the Constitution, there is a review, and then the changes—and if I need to show that I can go back and show it—have always been changes that are not consequential changes.

So, it is not a good argument to now try to say that the public should only have a say on a fundamental change. The position on this is really as the First Elected Member for George Town mentioned (words to this effect) who is going to decide what is a matter . . . I think, he may have said 'of substance,' but it is a fundamental change. Is this House going to sit down and decide what is a fundamental change and then to go back to the public?

Mr. Speaker, the blurring that you heard this morning by the First Elected Member for George Town sets out clearly the fact that that honourable member, with respect, realises that the word "fundamental" is not a totally precise word. It is left to the construction of the facts at the time. Now, who is going to decide that? This question was put by the First Elected Member for West Bay. It's a very good question. Is it the same House that may want the change to go through? What does the public think that the legislature . . . if they want to put a change through, do you think they are going to decide it is a fundamental change?

Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, you have then taken away the very right that has been given. Through a series of small amendments, you can ultimately achieve a major accumulative change, if you follow what I mean. Nothing has been said to even try to explain other than the First Elected Member for [George Town] who picked up the Constitution. . . and that itself showed the confusion that can arise. It is not just good enough to pick up the Constitution and move down through it in a minute or two and say that the areas relating . . . (Pause)

I will find this in a minute.

That honourable member went through some of the different parts up front and tried to say . . . well, matters relating in the first part, say to the Governor, or collective responsibility or whatever, is a fundamental change. That is not good enough, Mr. Speaker. The people of this country need precision. This is not a document that should be left to be interpreted in here what is major and what is not. The time will come when the conflict will be between those who want something changed, and to get it through . . . knowing politicians (and I am not referring to any member in here), but knowing politicians, they will bend what is a fundamental change.

I know it, Mr. Speaker. I have the experience of seeing the way that that Constitution has been manipulated without going back to the public. They will do what is necessary as politicians to serve their purposes and if they want to get something changed then the simple approach is to say, 'It is not fundamental. Therefore, we can put it through and not consult the public.'

Mr. Speaker, the Elected Member for North Side said words to the effect that the most major national issue is to change the Constitution of any country. I agree with that. Any change to the Constitution is a national issue and that in itself differs from what is a fundamental change.

I would just like to take a bit of time to show that the question of what is a fundamental change is open to interpretation, and it is a question of fact which presumably this legislature—there is nothing saying otherwise—will have to decide because we would be the people making a decision whether change should be made.

The question of what is "fundamental" has been dealt with through cases in court. I am reading here from Halsbury's Laws of England, under "Contract," because it was in a case on contract that this was dealt with. It is dealing with "fundamental" in relation to exemption clauses. Basically, the relevant parts are as follows: "If there were a rule of law that no exemption clause, however, could exclude liability for fundamental breach, the nature of the exemption clause would be of vital significance." The judge here—in fact, the House of Lords, the highest court of the land is dealing with two issues—one is fundamental breach and the other is a breach of a fundamental term.

I will show you, sir, the way different interpretations can produce different results. Think of it: Is there a difference between a fundamental breach and a breach of a fundamental term? And you may say that's semantics. Well, it is not.

It says, "Where the clause went to define the extent of the promisors obligation, the possibility of fundamental breach would be pro tanto excluded since nothing can be a fundamental breach which is not first a breach. There was much academic discussion of the nature of the document and puzzlement to its content."

So, what I am showing here, Mr. Speaker, is the fact that the word "fundamental" is an imprecise word that is subject to interpretation. In this case, and other cases as well, the Court of Appeal of England (which is the second highest court of the country) was reversed out by the House of Lords which is the highest court of the land and which makes up the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, which ultimately would interpret our Constitution in the final analysis.

I would like to read this again, "There was much academic discussion [and Lord knows, Mr. Speaker, we have heard enough academic discussion in here] of the nature of the document and puzzlement as to its content [the word fundamental]. Were there two distinct doctrines (breach of a fundamental term and fundamental breach)? Or were they simply alternative formulations of the same doctrine?"

I know this may be hard to follow, I see a bit of bewilderment amongst some members of the backbench, but it goes to show you what the court will look at and the way that words will be dealt with on interpretation of this word "fundamental."

"What was the relationship between fundamental terms and conditions? Could the doctrine be side stepped by quotes shrinking the core of the contract?" That is a very important part of this judgment because by shrinking the core, it allows flexibility of interpretation of the doctrine.

"In the Court of Appeal it was held that this exemption could not avail the defendants because they had been guilty of a fundamental breach but the House of Lords unanimously reversed this decision." This is the point I am making. We are not dealing with someone like me—a lawyer of thirty years. You are dealing with the highest judges of the land. The Court of Appeal probably sat with three House of Lords, it probably sat with five Lords of Appeal. The Court of Appeal made the decision on fundamental breach and the House of Lords reversed them out.

So, Mr. Speaker, if anyone in this House believes they can stand up (as the First Elected Member for George Town did), pick up the Constitution and read some parts out and say, 'Well, this will be a fundamental change, and this would be consequential,' or try to interpret it in that way, we are kidding ourselves. In the real world it is not as simple as that. And if there is a division with the highest courts of the land, then the term "fundamental" is imprecise. That is the message that I would like to get on the use of this word.

I am not sure where the First Elected Member for George Town got this. Maybe it was another lawyer. But, if it was a lawyer, or if he consults a lawyer, he will find that this word is imprecise. Mr. Speaker, there is a saying: Where there is doubt, don't. The motion without these changes of what is a fundamental change is precise, there can be no doubt. The Constitution cannot be changed or should not be recommended for change without a referendum.

Now, I can say, Mr. Speaker, that the Motion that the government has put up is precise. There can be no doubt about it. In this House, it is a very simple thing. Everybody knows what a change is. But, Mr. Speaker, you introduce words such as "fundamental," and you are then getting into an area where the public is going to suffer because of the imprecision of the words.

To go further and show that is a matter of construction, it will have to be this House (unless the First Elected Member [of George Town]) was expecting that the question of what is a fundamental change would be done elsewhere—I don't see how it could. It would have to be the House, this Legislature. "Fundamental right" has another meaning.

[Inaudible Interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Sorry?

[Inaudible Interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, I am dealing here with the word "fundamental" in relation to "breach" and "change" or "amendment." "Fundamental rights" is a different area of the law and there is a lot of judicial interpretation on it, but obviously the change of a fundamental right would be a fundamental change. It doesn't matter what it is called, whether it is a fundamental change or the change of a fundamental principle—I have shown where there is imprecision.

What I want to last read is part of the judgment in the House of Lords in the case of the Suisse Atlantique Société d'Armement Maritime S.A. v. N.V. Rotterdamsche Kolen Centrale in 1966. In that, Lord Upjohn, quoting from the All England Reports (All ER)—

Mr. Roy Bodden: [Inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: And I really don't expect the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town to understand what I am saying but the public will understand the confusion and imprecision that can be brought in with a word.

Lord Upjohn in the House of Lords had this to say (pause) . . . The section is coming from . . . let me loose my train of thought here.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Give up!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am not giving up on this one because I know what certain politicians want to do with the Constitution, and so do the public. I say the word "politicians" okay? I know because I have seen this before and the public has to have a right to make a decision on the Constitution if there is going to be change.

It says, "Whether such breach or breaches do constitute a fundamental breach depends on the construction of the contract and all the facts and circumstances of the case." So if this word is introduced, every time there has to be a change to the Constitution, each part of a section that is being changed, this House will then have to make a judicial interpretation literally on what is a fundamental breach. Is it? or is it not? If it is not, then they can run to the UK and ask the UK to change the Constitution. That I submit, Mr. Speaker, should not be left to politicians of this country.

I hope I am getting clearly through that what the government has put up, there can be no doubt about. There is not a question. The Constitution of this country has never been changed as they said, for dotting i's and crossing t's. That does not happen, Mr. Speaker, when there are changes, . . . in the past what has happened is that constitutional commissioners came down and the United Kingdom always asked what changes in general did we want? They are not going to go back and cross t's and dot i's, do minor changes, do consequential changes—this does not happen. We know that.

We are kidding ourselves here if we believe that the United Kingdom, through an Order in Council of the UK, which is a long, tedious process of Her Majesty the Queen sitting in the Privy Council and passing the Order in Council that makes up our Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, consequential amendments, I can assure the public, are not what they are going to have to worry about. What the worry is going to be And let me just say this, Mr. Speaker, a fundamental change is exclusive to consequential changes. I want to make that clear. A fundamental change is something that goes to the very root of the Constitution, a fundamental part of it, and therefore there is a question of construction, a question of fact as the Law of Lords stated.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the First Elected Member for West Bay said words to the effect (I think, he was probably referring to me) why wasn't there a question to entrench any change of the Constitution. The happiest thing of my life would be whenever the Constitution is being changed again—put in the Constitution that it should only be changed after referendum, entrench it. Mr. Speaker, other countries have entrenched these things and I can show (which I will now go on to do) that I am happy with that.

At least, the First Elected Member for West Bay and I fully agree with that point. If we want this put in a way that this Legislature cannot change it. Then, ultimately, it should be put as a clause in the Constitution that the people of this country would have a referendum before there is any change to it. So, if that proposition is one that is floatable—because I intend to move it at whatever time there is any attempt to change the Constitution . . . because entrenching it, means that this Legislature cannot then change what has been done.

[Inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, Mr. Speaker, at least one thing I got entrenched in 1993 is the right to have a referendum, even though the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town—who raised that—rejected (and I read that) my 1989 motion to have any kind of referendum, much less put in the Constitution. So, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town should be the last one to raise this issue.

I read from the Minutes where that member voted against and spoke against my motion to bring in a referendum. I was lucky to get in the 1992 Constitution, section 29 (2), which gives any member of this House who wishes to call a referendum . . . he can now get it and the public of this country can at least thank me for that. And, Mr. Speaker, it is clearly there. Any of those who are propounding about the referendum, the section is now in the Constitution.

So, while we did not get the part that says the public can initiate a referendum, I asked the Constitutional Commissioners for that—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [Inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, the First Elected Member for George Town (I don't want this to get into an argument) was nowhere around. That honourable member doesn't know what went on in the boiler room in 1990, 1991 and 1992.

I know, Mr. Speaker! In fact, you, sir, seconded the 1989 motion for the referendum that was outright rejected—including the First Elected Member for West Bay who is laughing at this stage, who said, 'Throw the Referendum Law in the garbage can or in the rubbish can or something!'

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, I will read it for you.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the minister is misleading the House. In 1989, there was no Referendum Law before the House. There was a motion that he brought, which he already talked about. Now, he is going to say that we threw out a "law"—there was no law. And if we leave the public to hear that, he will certainly continue in that vein that there was a law. There was no law before the House!

The Speaker: He was talking about the motion of 1989 is my understanding.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Mr. Speaker, he said the "Referendum Law." That's what he said. And, I am saying there was not "law" before the House at the time.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it was a motion I am referring to. So, if there is anything I said that was trying to refer to a law, it was a motion. In fact, what I was referring to obviously was the motion that was brought.

Well let me just read it.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the minister has already read that point.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Is this a point of order?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, this is a point of order on relevance, Mr. Speaker. I would like to see where this has relevance in this particular matter.

The Speaker: This has relevance inasmuch as he is explaining to me what he was saying. Please let him do that.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: [Laughter] All right, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it was a Private Member's Motion that was brought in 1989 that was defeated in the House with five Ayes—Mr. John Jefferson Jr., Mr. Gilbert McLean, Mr. John B. McLean, you, and me. The Noes included Mr. Roy Bodden, Mr. W. McKeeva Bush. So I am referring to the motion, sir.

The Speaker: Thank you. Please continue, the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The question of entrenching and making it impossible to change certain parts of constitutions is something that has existed over the years and has been in many of the Commonwealth countries Constitutions. In fact, the section "Entrenchment" in Commonwealth and Colonial Law by Sir Kenneth Roberts-Wray, page 410 that deals with this says, "As a general rule, any law can be altered or repealed by a simple majority of the members of the legislature present and voting; and in the majority of Commonwealth countries with bicameral legislatures, the concurrence of the upper House may be dispensed with."

Then it goes on, "But to safeguard important principles, minorities with special interests, the constitution or parts of it are frequently entrenched, and occasionally other laws of particular importance are included. Various devices have been adopted . . ." This is the same section that says, "Submission to popular vote prevents hasty action . . ."

And, there is also a principle called "double entrenchment" that has been used in some of the larger countries' constitutions. One of the things that I realised in reading up on this area is the extremes that politicians in other countries have gone to to get around the entrenchment of these sections. The point I am making is that the Constitution of this country should not be left to politicians to have to decide what is a fundamental change and what is not.

Let me just read a section coming from page 417 of Roberts-Wray, under "Canada and Australia," "The Commonwealth Constitution is deeply entrenched. In Canada, several attempts to find a method of amendment of the British North American Act acceptable to all the Governments concerned have failed and certain sections can still only be amended by the United Kingdom Parliament at Canada's re- quest." The public of this country should not believe that politicians wouldn't even try to get around entrenched sections of the Constitution.

That is why, Mr. Speaker, the one thing that politicians do not like is to have a precise section that leaves no flexibility as does the original section that the Government put up on this matter and to which this amendment now seeks to amend. There is no imprecision, there is nothing but certainty in the motion that I moved. It makes it very clear. And, I would just like to read what is being amended. It says, "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance . . ." There is no controversy there because that was the original motion that we accepted and the addition was ". . . and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments." No doubt at all.

But throughout the years, politicians have tried in other constitutions, in other countries to even get around their own constitutions that tie their hands to going back to the electorate.

With all due respect, Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to accept what a majority of the public say, and to come in this House and do everything I can to implement it. The day any member reaches the stage that he feels he should not consult the public, or that he is not prepared to take the views of the public, then he ceases to represent the public. Politicians have always been afraid to get the views of the public. Do you know why? Because the public normally knows what is right and the public will not let them go off and do things with the Constitution—

POINT OF ORDER

(Misleading)

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The minister just said that politicians have always been afraid of taking advice from the public. He is making a general statement, and it is misleading, and I think he should withdraw it, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I think you said it was a general statement.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, my interpretation of that means it includes all of us who are sitting here, and I am saying that he should withdraw it. I think it is misleading.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I excluded members of the Legislative Assembly, that's why I said politicians because these are members of the House. So, I withdraw that part of it. I don't want to have any argument on this. It's too important.

The Speaker: So you will withdraw that?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am happy to withdraw. But, Mr. Speaker, politicians outside of this House have always been afraid to go to the public and the only person, the only politician outside of this Chamber who is afraid to go to the public is one who wants to do what he wishes and not carry out the wish of the public.

There should be no fear in any politician outside of this House going back to the public and asking them, 'Do you want the Constitution changed in this way?' In fact, Mr. Speaker, had it been done in 1992, there may not have been as many casualties in that election as occurred. And that's all we are saying—go and ask the public.

Now, we heard something [and] I was somewhat surprised when I heard it and maybe this has to be considered on this motion. It seems that when a Mr. Hoole was over here (and reference was made by the First Elected Member for George Town of talks with him and another lady from the UK) . . . I would like to just point out that the Financial Secretary, the Minister of Tourism, the Third Elected Member for George Town and I were in Europe. I am not sure whether we were in London or in Paris, because I don't know when the meeting took place. But we were not here and we were not party to whatever talks went on.

Apparently, as the First Elected Member for George Town said, he raised the question of looking and seeing what was desirable (I think, there may have been words to that effect) with changes to the Constitution. Another statement was made—

POINT OF ORDER

(Explanation)

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. The [First Elected] Member for George Town is not in this Chamber. It is wrong for the Minister of Education to say that because (if I should explain) I was in that meeting and so were two ExCo Ministers. So it wasn't just the backbench as [he] might have been trying to imply. The [First Elected] Member for George Town didn't go there to raise anything about the Constitution, we were called and we were brought here to this Assembly because they were brought in here by the Government. They just didn't walk into this Assembly to meet with the Member.

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I take objection to that on a point of order.

The Speaker: It's a explanation and really not a point of order. Please continue.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: It's point of order, Mr. Speaker, that he is misleading the House. Now, I was explaining the point of order but it is a point of order. The [First Elected] Member for George Town did not say that he had gone to that meeting to talk about the Constitution. He didn't say that either, and I was here when he was talking, and certainly he did not come to that meeting to talk about the Constitution. And if I am not mistaken, the Speaker was there also.

The Speaker: No.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: You were not there?

The Speaker: I had a private audience with him.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Oh! But he might have told you the same thing.

But, I should say Mr. Speaker, in explaining the point, that he told us that they were sent here by the United Kingdom Government. Now, if the United Kingdom sent two high ranking officials to this country of which two of the members of Executive Council who are colleagues of the Minister of Education attended, then the Government had to know. The Government had to be involved!

The Government had to invite those people here! But it is for those reasons I am explaining sir, why I think the [First Elected] Member for George Town was explaining about what took place.

The Speaker: Well, actually he did not say that government members were not there.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: He took great pains to say who wasn't but he would not say that two of his colleagues were in attendance.

The Speaker: I still do say that's not a point of order, that is a point of explanation.

Please continue, Minister of Education.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I did not say that the First Elected Member for George Town brought the people here or anything else. I am saying what the First Elected Member for George Town said that Mr. Hoole said.

Mr. Speaker, what's really happening with these explanations, is that at the rate it's going the explanation of the First Elected Member for West Bay is getting longer than my speech. If I may now go on sir?

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Now, one of the things that the First Elected Member for George said that apparently Mr. Hoole said (I couldn't get a transcript of this yet) was that the Cayman Islands has one of the most modern Constitutions of the overseas territories. There should be no change in that good, modern Constitution without the public being consulted and giving their go ahead to change the Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, on many occasions in the past, I have sat and seen these changes put up and the necessary consultations to the public not done. So, all that the government is trying to do . . . and for the life of me, I do not understand how anyone could try to put in imprecision where there is total clarity. That is never the right way to go.

The amendment that was passed by eleven Ayes and four Abstentions cannot be questioned in this House on its clarity. There is no doubt with this. It says, if there is any change to the Constitution then you go back to the public on a referendum. I would hope that we are not going to get moves for any type of boiler room talks about changes in the future to the Constitution without consulting the public. I know the dictionaries are coming in.

But, as a lawyer, and having looked at the cases that involved the interpretation of the word "fundamental," there may be some attempt to say that what the House of Lords and the Court of Appeal were dealing with were the questions of fundamental breach or breach of a fundamental term. But it showed the way you could play with words as well. Therefore, the word "fundamental" should never be used. If that word was so important, section 29 (2) of the Constitution doesn't refer to having a referendum when there is a fundamental matter. It is something to think about.

The reason, I submit, the present Cayman Islands Constitution in section 29 (2) gives the right to a referendum—which I would call my referendum clause because I fought hard to get that in (others can call it theirs if they wish)—but in section 29 (2), which gives the right of any member in this House to call a referendum, does not restrict it to a fundamental issue. Mr. Speaker, the word "fundamental" as I have shown goes far beyond what is a national issue or matter of national importance. There is no reference in the Constitution to the word "fundamental." And I submit that the word is ill chosen and it is only going to create confusion because the people who are going to have to interpret it in this House, will all due respect, are not judges.

If the judges in the highest court of the land had problems interpreting the word "fundamental" in relation to breach and term, then don't expect the calibre of this House to do a legal interpretation with any precision.

So, I have flexibility. I only want to see in the sections of the first part, giving the public the right to initiate a referendum. And I have flexibility to do whatever is necessary to try to get that in. But, Mr. Speaker, I support the second part of this that deals with the whole principle of having the public, through a referendum . . . it's the best thing that this country could have. And, I will go even further, like I said earlier, Mr. Speaker, the best thing to do is to entrench it in the Constitution whenever change comes.

But we have to also be careful in relation to the timing of changes to the Constitution and as was pointed out by certain speakers how often that is done but the right must be there. That's why the percentage of the public to call it, we need to look at this and try to work out some of these matters.

So, I do not have problems with the first part, which gives the public the right, however that can be done. It can be done very quickly through a law, if that is possible then so be it, and later entrench it in the Constitution, so be it. I think it should be put in the Constitution as the First Elected Member for George has put up. That's the best way of doing it. Okay? So, I endorse that part. But anyhow the right can be given to the public then I have no problem with it.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think that the government should be given the task of working out all the details of a motion that really originated (this time) with the back-bench. I believe that this Legislature should decide on the terms of it and that they should not be trying to remove the words "Legislative Assembly" and putting "Government" in. Because what will now happen is that the motion would read, "BE IT NOW RESOLVED THAT the Government take the necessary steps to cause the Constitution to be changed . . ." This House knows that the government cannot change the Constitution. It is pie in the sky.

Whenever the Constitution has been changed, the United Kingdom is going to ask for every member of this House to express his or her view, so it cannot be right to pass the bat onto the government. If the five of us—

POINT OF ELUCIDATION

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of elucidation.

The Speaker: Will you give way?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Unless he will do that in a minute or so, sir, because I don't want to have a long explanation of . . . So, if he can do it in a minute or two, I have no problem.

The Speaker: Do you wish to make . . .

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: If the member would go ahead, I don't want to stop him. Five minutes then.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town on a point of explanation.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, obviously, the minister thinks that I am using his tactic to try and derail him. I will reserve it for when I reply, sir.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, as I understand the motion, what this amendment is doing in the first part, one part of the amendments is saying that the government must take the necessary steps. And if I am wrong, the member should say so.

If this amending motion that we are speaking on goes through, the original motion would then be amended to say, "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED

THAT the Government takes the necessary steps to cause section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1993 to be amended to allow the electorate to initiate a referendum . . ." I don't think that's right. I think the full Legislative Assembly should take the steps to recommend to the UK . . . because I can tell you that the United Kingdom is not going to accept the views of five members of the Legislative Assembly on a matter of changing the Constitution. That is a fact!

Mr. Speaker, there can be no doubt. Look at the motion that went through in 1991, it is signed by all of the elected members other than the five of us who signed a minority report objecting to the Chief Minister—

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Certainly, no motion could have been signed. He must be referring to a report not a motion.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, would you reply to that, please?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am referring to the report here, not a motion.

But what I am saying, sir (and members of this House with experience know it) is that unless something comes signed from all members of the House indicating this, the United Kingdom is not going to act in relation to minority members. That's all I am saying.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If the minister would allow me, I have changed my mind because he is going to spend another half an hour and perhaps that two minutes that he was talking about would clarify the issue with regard to the resolve section. If the minister would allow me.

The last amendment is seeking for that resolve section to go back to its original state where it would read, "BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government takes the necessary steps to cause section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1993, to be amended to allow the electorate a referendum . . ." That was simply worded out of courtesy because we fully understand that a resolution is going to have to be brought to this Assembly and we were simply saying if the government agreed with the motion, the government could bring the resolution for all of us to agree to it and then move on with the process. That's all it was for.

It wasn't trying to restrict that the five members sign it.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I understood this to be the resolution. This is a resolution, which sets out clearly that ". . . the Government takes the necessary steps to cause section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1993 to be amended to allow the electorate to initiate a referendum . . ." This is the resolution that government would have to use and write the United Kingdom. Why would there be another motion? Let's try to give the people this right as quickly as we can because another protracted debate . . .

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am saying that it should be the Legislative Assembly taking the steps to cause the Constitution to be changed because it is no good of government now writing to the United Kingdom and saying the five of us, or whatever, are now writing to you asking you to take the steps to cause an Order in Council. I am saying the full Legislature should not only have that right, but it has that duty. It goes to show you that a motion like this has to be looked at clearly. In fact, I would never take away . . . the last thing I would want to do is to take away the right of this Legislature to make that recommendation to the UK.

The letter to do this, if it is in a motion like this, would be signed by all members of the House. If not, as happened with the report, sir, there would be some who say, 'we don't agree' and there would be a minority part to it.

So, two things on the first part of the amending motion, Mr. Speaker, are that the Legislature should be the body to take the necessary steps to give the electorate the right to initiate a referendum by changing the Constitution. Secondly, and like I said, I only want to see the public with the right to do this and if there is a quicker way of dealing with this, then so be it. If not, whatever way can get this in place, the government fully supports the electorate having the right to initiate the referendum.

Now, the second part, which means we accept the principle in the second part, then what should happen, is there should be a referendum under the present provisions to deal with this amendment or any other amendment to the Constitution. That second part that was already passed eleven Ayes and four Abstentions states that any change to the Constitution should go to a referendum. Because it must be a matter of national importance to change the Constitution of a country and I submit, sir, that we cannot fudge the issue and make it imprecise by putting through this amendment that deals with only a fundamental change to the Constitution.

I have shown, sir, that that word "fundamental" is imprecise. I can tell this House that it goes far further than consequential amendments and this House will have the right to do far more than consequential amendments if the word "fundamental" is put in. The word is one that I would never have chosen. In fact, United Kingdom did not choose it. In the present Constitution section 29(2) deals with giving the right to the public for a referendum . . . and let me read that section. It doesn't talk about any fundamental changes.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are you rising on a point of order?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Mr. Speaker. He has said the same thing over, and over, and over again. So this has to be repetition. Please! And it is very tedious.

The Speaker: How are we going to understand what is being put across to us . . .

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Mr. Speaker, with all due respect. I don't want any arguments with the Chair but our Standing Orders say that a member cannot do what he is doing. It is recorded in our Standing Orders, sir, and I have seen you draw other members up on repetition before.

The Speaker: I will continue to do so, when it is.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Please do so to him.

The Speaker: Will you please sit down? At this time, we shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.59 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.18 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 11 of 1999 as amended. We are speaking to the amendment to the [amended] motion. The Hon. Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Boddin: Mr. Speaker, I was dealing with the interpretation of the question of "fundamental" and merely comparing it with what the Constitution itself uses to trigger a referendum which is that the Legislative Assembly Members will pass a resolution on a matter which a majority of the Elected Members decide to be a matter of national importance. That is their words that I am fairly certain appear in the United Kingdom's Referenda Law. In other words, it need not be a fundamental matter or a matter of fundamental importance because that goes far further and is far more limited than what is a matter of national importance.

Just one other referral that was made in the case I referred to earlier which for short is referred to as the Suisse Atlantique Société Case, it says that fundamental and this part of a longer judgment are such has to go the route of the contract. So, it is not really just a matter which is important or of national importance, it has to go the route of the Constitution. As I read earlier (I won't read it again), that was the judgment then, I think of Lord Upjohn, in which it will depend on the facts of each case and a construction of those facts.

What has not been done (and really Mr. Speaker, what can't be done in this Legislative Assembly with all due respect) is for any one person, or the whole House, in fact, to go through this document—the Constitution, a very long and highly legal document—and try to construe what is fundamental in it and what is not. I submit sir, that this Legislature should not put itself in a position where it may falter on interpreting such an important matter. The word "fundamental" would have been looked at and opined on by the best jurists of the land over a period of years before the case would have moved through the lower court into the high court into the court—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, a matter of relevance. The minister has traversed this ground several times in his speech. I am wondering how much leeway you are going to give him to continue.

The Speaker: That is a fact. But I believe he is summing up the fundamental position at this particular time. Hon Minister, please continue.

Hon Truman M Boddin: Thank you, sir.

Mr, Speaker, the matter is one that the Court of Appeal, House of Lords and the best jurists, the best judges in the land, found a difficult one to construe. But, in any event, this is new. There was once a statement made that the construction of a term (this would not relate to fundamental) when made by different Chancellors who are judges, differed with the length of the Chancellor's foot. It was an example of the way different people can take the same word, look at the facts, and come up with totally different conclusions. So the Legislature, I submit, should always be as precise as it can be.

In summary (and I am getting near to the conclusion), in relation to the first rescission part of the motion, which is the amending motion that is before the House now, firstly there is an attempt to remove the right of the public to hold a referendum to decide on the first amendment to the Constitution that would be going through, and that is to entrench the right of the electorate to initiate a referendum. Government fully agrees with the principle of this. However, if ways other than touching the Constitution (because that is a serious matter) could be found to more quickly and effectively (even if it was not entrenched) give the public this right, naturally, I would be all for that.

But, I believe sir, if there is a move to change the Constitution, we need to get this on the right footing at the beginning. I think that it is a matter of national importance to change the Constitution of the country that then there should be for the entrenching of a clause the public should have its say. I would expect, the public will say that that is okay, but then the public is given a right to decide on some very important issues. The public could be asked to question on the percentage, for example, of voters or the procedure provided the question can be simply put.

The second part of that first resolution, Mr. Speaker, I object strongly to because I think the Legislative Assembly should be the body to recommend to the United Kingdom Government any change of the Constitution. That should not rest with the government. Indeed, as I said earlier, the UK is not going to accept the government putting forward a recommendation to change the Constitution. They are going to want everyone in here to give an opinion on it one way or the other, preferably not to abstain.

Now, for the life of me I don't see why, since all of these things that have been said about the government, suddenly we are going to be enveloped with the most power that any government can have and that is a right to recommend change to the Constitution. We don't want that power, we are happy to share that and continue to share that as it has always been. Now I am not joking on this Mr. Speaker. Those of us who have had to deal with constitutional change, it has always been done and recommended by all members of the Legislative Assembly, either in 1991 through the Select Committee, but there has been some indication from the full Legislature on how that should be done. I really think that that part of the motion should be removed.

If there is a feeling, and I do not have strong feelings on the first part of this, like I said, once there is some way that the public can be given the early right to initiate a referendum then there may be ways that can be looked at. I just want to mention those, sir.

The way the motion is now with the amendment is that the only time there would have to be a referendum to give the public the right to initiate a referendum is if it has to be entrenched in the Constitution. So the important part of what we are saying is that because the Constitution is being changed that the public should have the right to a referendum and that would only arise if there was a change to the Constitution. It may well be that that something should be given, details worked out if it can be done, and I don't know . . . through a law, for example and once it is refined and entrenched.

I should point out that once the Constitution is changed and it is entrenched this Legislature has no power to change the Constitution as such. We can only recommend. And the people who have drafted the Constitution in the past never ended up with consequential amendments and minor things. It was done carefully, it takes a very long time to do, probably nine months or so and it is very careful drafting not just by the Attorney General and/or the Constitutional Commissioners but also legal draftsmen in the United Kingdom.

I am happy with whatever flexibility needs to be done with that motion and if some other way can be sought, I know that is being looked at to give that right. But, I really think sir, if we are going to establish a principle that any change to the Constitution should go back to the public, then this should be something that would go back along with any other changes anybody may want to ask the public about.

In the second resolve part, in summary, at present with the amendment government has put up it says any change to the Constitution there must be a referendum with the public stating what the specific amendments are. This is very important. The way the section now reads is not that there would be a referendum which will ask us, do you want the Constitution to be changed, but also it states clearly that—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. I know you are going to tell me he is summarising but I have listened to him, this is about the second summary he has done of that section.

Now I know he is biding time but if he wants the House to adjourn, then do it. Let us not continuously break the rules for him—

The Speaker: That is not a point of order, please—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am calling on relevance. That is a point of order, repetition.

The Speaker: He is entitled to sum up his debate, and I am not ruling that as a point of order. Please continue Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning. We want to try to get on with this debate.

Hon Truman M Boddan: Thank you, sir.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Well Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: The longer we are interrupted the longer it is going to take.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Well that is true. I just want to draw the Chair's attention to the fact that he has done this several times. Now, how much longer is the Chair going to allow it?

The Speaker: Until the summation is completed.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: So he can continue to repeat himself over and over?

The Speaker: I am not here to be questioned.

Hon Truman M Boddan: Mr. Speaker, when the First Elected Member for West Bay becomes the Speaker he will have that prerogative. Until then, he must abide by the rules like I do. Most of the time that I have spent, unfortunately, has been with members of the backbench interrupting and breaking my train of thoughts. It is very hard. I am sure the public realises that to try to speak when people are making statements and haggling . . .

All I can say to the public is, it goes to show how effective what I am saying is and they can figure out from how many people—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, how much longer is the minister going to debate your point of order?

Hon Truman M Boddan: I am not debating any point of order. I am now going on and winding up. Would you please sit down?

So, Mr. Speaker, on the ...I don't even remember where I was now. This is the problem with—

[Inaudible]

Hon Truman M Bodden: You don't want to hear what I am saying but the public understands. They know.

Mr. Speaker, on the second part of the resolution, firstly, the amendment is seeking to add the words "fundamental change" to the section to permit only a right to go back to the public if there is there is a fundamental change. In summary, what . . .

You see, this is the problem. I have it very hard, I must tell you, Mr. Speaker I have been used to....no I'll sit down either when the Speaker tells me to or when I am finished. If members of this House—such as the First Elected Member [for West Bay]—had a bit more manners and would leave me alone, I would really appreciate it.

What I am saying Mr. Speaker, is all the haggling . . . when I stand up in a Court of Law people act like gentlemen and without any aspersions. It is a totally different atmosphere.

Anyhow, Mr. Speaker, In summary, the amendment is seeking to add "fundamental change" so that the public could then only have a referendum when there is a fundamental change. And—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, Standing Order 40 and 41, tedious repetition. Mr. Speaker, I am asking the Chair to pay close attention. I quite understand that the minister is summarising but he has done that several times. And, by God, don't tell me that the House does not understand what the minister is doing. If he wants to break [adjourn] this House early, then, let us do it. I know what he is doing, but please, these Standing Orders must apply at some point.

The Speaker: I will apply the Standing Orders as they are supposed to be, and I will again call your attention that the minister has complained that you are causing him to lose his train of thought, causing him to have to repeat. I concur that I am having the same problem. Please let us co-operate and let us get this thing over with.

Dr. Frank S McField: Mr. Speaker, on the same point of order. We have a certain amount of tolerance for what the minister has to say, but if he continues to offend by repeating and repeating the same points, he has not progressed one inch with his argument.

Now, if this is not tedious repetition, how can I sometimes be ruled when it is said that I am rambling? At least I do not repeat and repeat the same things.

The Speaker: You are making a speech.

I have said all that I intend to say about this, please let us co-operate. We are all elected here for one purpose.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I have asked you to look at [SO] 40 and 41.

The Speaker: I am very familiar with those and I am watching those very carefully, but I am saying if you continue to break the thoughts of the speaker, he will have to continue to repeat. So, you are causing the situation. Please continue Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, and please allow him to continue his debate. We will be adjourning at one o'clock, so please . . .

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am wondering if we should not just take the adjournment now, I don't know where I am anymore. I am going to be honest. It is nearly a quarter to one, maybe . . .

The Speaker: I am in the hands of the House, and since the motion is moved I will put the question . . .

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker I move the adjournment of this honourable House . . .

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, in the interest of time, please sir, there is no reason why we cannot continue to the time you have set for the adjournment. Thank you.

The Speaker: I agree 100 percent, but I have appealed and asked honourable members to co-operate and I am not getting the co-operation.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, can I address you on that point please?

Mr. Linford A Pierson: Mr. Speaker, may I just make a comment?

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A Pierson: Mr. Speaker, our behaviour in this House is being heard by the listening public. We have a Standing Order to be guided by and we should follow proper parliamentary procedure. You are the Speaker of this House, and your ruling must be obeyed. We cannot have any member of this House arguing with the Chair openly. This is in bad taste—number one.

Number two, it is not in compliance with the Standing Orders. One has to wonder who would be able to sit in that chair and command the respect of the House? If something is not right, Mr. Speaker, I feel that it is your duty and responsibility to call that matter to the attention of the House and to rule on it. But when you rule nobody should be getting up and questioning your ruling.

Now, somebody might get up and say that I am out of line for saying that, but they are the facts. We have got to bring order back to this House. I have sat here and I have listened, you have made rulings and it has been questioned over and over again. You have to put your foot down, Mr. Speaker, and decide one way or the other. But in doing so, I would suggest that the argument on both sides of the House be given equal consideration. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I wish to thank the Third Elected Member for George Town for that. I agree 100 percent, and that is actually what I have been asking for—not just today, but for a long period of time. Let us try to act like parliamentarians. I do not want to hear anymore, let us continue with the debate.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, Sanding Order 40 and 41. Now, in my opinion you have not ruled. If you rule and say he is not repetitious, then I will sit down but as long as you continue to allow him to carry on, it is my right as the First Elected Member for West Bay to question that. Now, when you rule, I will sit down, but up until now all you have said is allow him carry on. These two Standing Orders are specific and I know my Standing Orders—

The Speaker: I have ruled.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I know my Standing Orders as good as the Speaker or as any other member in this House, whether they want to say it is in bad taste or not. Standing Orders must apply for everyone.

The Speaker: I have said to you that I do not consider that a point of order inasmuch as the Honourable Minister speaking is winding up his debate. He is being interrupted, therefore he is losing his train of thought and has had to repeat. I have asked for co-operation and I once again say it is not a point of order and I ask for the co-operation of all members so that we can get through with this debate.

Do you consider that a ruling?

Please continue Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I would tell you what it is but—

The Speaker: We will both have a time later on.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I was at that stage summing up on the second part of the amending motion and I would like to point out that the Elected Member for North Side had mentioned that the most major or national issue is to change....well I am summing up.... the Constitution of any country. I believe that any change to the Constitution

Ms Edna M Moyle: Mr. Speaker, if the Honourable Minister will allow a point of order.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Ms Edna M Moyle: I don't think that my words were "any change" I think I said "any advancement of the Constitution."

The Speaker: I do not have a copy of the Hansard, so I cannot Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I guess that is very material. I had written down ". . . most major issue is to change the Constitution of any country." If I am wrong on that then I would naturally respect your ruling and reverse it. I did try to get these this morning. They are probably ready for Wednesday.

¹The Speaker: During the break, I will look at it and we will rule on it on Wednesday because I cannot get it now.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Sure. That would be good, sir.

The Speaker: That is with your satisfaction, Elected Member from North Side?

Mrs. Edna Moyle: [Inaudible comment]

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe that it is a matter of national importance to change the Constitution of any country to such an extent, sir, that the process for changing in many of the Commonwealth countries has been entrenched in the Constitution through a special process, whether that is say two-thirds of the Legislature or in bicameral parliaments that both chambers would have a say on it. Or in many other instances, the actual Constitution makes a specific provision on change so that this whole question has been regarded, I submit that any change is a change of national importance.

I have also shown that the word "fundamental" was interpreted one way by the Court of Appeal by the United Kingdom and another way by the House of Lords, which is the highest court of the land and of which the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, which is our final appellate court on our Constitution is made up partly of the Law Lords and partly of other privy councillors normally from within the region. The word "fundamental" is a very restricted and narrow word, in that it only changes, which I think it was Lord Upjohn in the House of Lords said would have to go to the very root of the Constitution. So, it goes well beyond an important change or a matter of national importance.

It would only be in a limited number of cases of extremely fundamental changes that go to the route of the Constitution that a referendum would be necessary, if we support this part of the motion, which I believe is only going to cause a lot of debate in the future, whether there be a referendum or not. And, I am not referring specifically to members in here but it could be an area of mischief in its interpretation by anyone who may want to get certain provisions changed and to label them not to be fundamental.

Mr. Speaker, a fundamental change goes way beyond consequential amendments. In fact, consequential amendments are probably the least fundamental of amendments but as I said before, we would have to look at the Constitution and do a construction of it based upon the facts at the time.

Now, who will make the interpretation of what is a fundamental change? I believe that the answer to that has to be—since it cannot be the court—this Legislative Assembly, which would first have to decide on the specific amendments. I don't know whether the amendments could be cumulative or they would have to be fundamental on a specific change and perhaps the First Elected Member for George Town may wish to address. The difference being that an accumulation of changes may in itself trigger a fundamental change, whereas any specific one of the aggregates of changes may not in itself be fundamental. In other words, whether an accrual interpretation is to be applied to this or not, in which case the interpretations could be different.

The amending section to amend the present section that basically says that any change whether it is fundamental or not should be subject to a referendum before the Legislative Assembly, not the Government, recommends to the United Kingdom to change the Constitution, I submit is one that would be very precise and there could be no doubt about what was being done.

Mr. Speaker, another point is that constitutions are not amended for consequential amendments as such. In the past, when constitutions have been amended, it has been normally when any changes are requested by the United Kingdom and whether that was called, I think, as Mr. Hoole referred or as the White Paper referred to, as modernisation or not.

As members know, when members of the Legislature ask for a constitutional change, then normally there has been in the past, a look at any other area of the Constitution. It is really good and the White Paper bore that out. In fact, I will deal with the White Paper in summary further on but bore out clearly that what is important at the end of the day is what the citizens of the country wants, not necessarily what this Legislative Assembly wants. Surely, it has to be right, Mr. Speaker, that the citizens of the country should make the decision as to whether or not the Constitution should be changed, whether that change is one that is a fundamental change or not.

The importance in legal drafting of having a precise document is very important because it leaves no space for people to argue. There is no way that there can be any argument on the section as it now is, before this amendment is put into it that it is clear and precise and one that cannot be clouded with different interpretations.

Mr. Speaker, as the different views were listened to this morning, while my debate was going on, it was clear how many different view politicians can come up with when they decide that they either wish to support, or not support, or abstain, or whatever on the motion. I am all for seeing, as one member put, the people having the right to have a say in matters of national importance such as changes to the Constitution.

Lastly, I would just like to reinforce what the United Kingdom has said. The White Paper from the United Kingdom, sir, is not a matter of a document that if Cayman doesn't accept it, they have to go independent. Or if Cayman doesn't accept what the OECD has put forward, they have to go independent. That's utter nonsense! The United Kingdom statement on this is very clear and I think it is worthwhile repeating in my summary and I am reading from page 12. I will be very brief, sir. It says, "Britain's policy towards the overseas Territories rests on the basis that it is the citizens of each territory who determine whether they wish to stay linked to Britain or not."

Mr. Hoole when he was here, apparently said words to the effect that Cayman has a modern Constitution that works well or that it is good. Also, the White Paper has said that consultation with the territory showed a clear expression of their wish to retain the connection with Britain. What can break that wish of the people is only if this House is prepared to recommend constitutional change. Government says, Mr. Speaker, that the best way to ensure that the public of the country has its say on any constitutional change is to go back to the public on a referendum. Any politician who is not afraid and/or feels himself too big to go back to the public and ask them, then he has nothing to fear from the present motion before the House. I know that the question of the fact that there could be a [number] of minor amendments is really in the past has shown that, that is not so. When changes are made, there are changes of national importance.

Lastly, sir, on the Constitution itself, in section 29(2) now gives any member of this Honourable House the right to bring a referendum, which I will call my referendum clause because I struggled to get that in. [It] states very clearly that ". . . a law may make provision for the holding of a referendum amongst persons qualified as electors in elections to the Assembly on a question declared by resolution, adopted by a majority of the elected members of the Assembly to be a matter of national importance specified in such law."

Nothing in this, sir, says that there can only a referendum when there is a fundamental matter before the House. What is used is a matter of national importance and I submit that, that catches up what in practice would be any amendment to the Constitution.

So, I am asking members of this Honourable House not to support the section of the amending motion that is going to try to restrict the public's right only to a referendum to a matter of fundamental change of the Constitution but to give the people the right in any change to the Constitution that the public should have a say on the specific issue in the Constitution for change.

Mr. Speaker, we cannot be wrong if we are humble enough to go back to the public, giving them the right and saying to them that as representatives of the public, we will not recommend a change of the Constitution unless a majority of the public in a referendum specifically say so. That stands, Mr. Speaker. It cannot be wrong. It is precise. There can no question of argument on it and there can be no way, I submit that the democracy does not . . . the mandate and stand on all fours with it.

Lastly, Mr. Speaker, the question of the transparency and accountability—what can be more transparent and more accountable than for this Honourable House to humble itself to go back to the public in a referendum and ask them to give guidance on any changes to be made to the Constitution? The future of generations to come, the future of the young people of this country must rest squarely on that transparency and accountability because the day that the Constitution of this country is changed

I have maybe two minutes left, sir, and I think it may be better if we finish. The day the Constitution of this country is changed to the detriment of the public, the public has to understand that there is no going back. The United Kingdom is not going to allow the Constitution to be changed backwards. Once the change is done, advancements are made and the country is stuck with it.

I suggest a way to ensure that changes, if they are necessary, can be made. The proper way to do that, sir, is through a referendum. So, our motion is clearly on transparency and accountability and I submit, sir, that cannot be challenged. I have heard people who I know have never even supported me in my life, come to me and said, 'Truman, this is one time you are right. The public should have the right to have a say'.

You must be transparent, you must be accountable and the way to do that is not to put through this amendment but to give the democratic right to the public in a referendum to decide on any amendment to the Constitution. Then our children are safe because there can be or there should be no change without a referendum to the public on the Constitution.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I would now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 a.m. on Wednesday.

Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies for late attendance by the Honourable Second Official responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question 130 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 130

No. 130: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs to state the number of persons aged between 17 and 25 years who have been convicted of criminal offences since January 1999, giving the categories of these offences.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Three hundred and fifty-four (354) persons between the ages of 17 and 25 years have been convicted of criminal offences since January 1999. Attached is a schedule listing the total number of males and females along with the offences for which they were convicted. (See Appendix)

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: What is the government's view of such a large number of persons in this age group committing these serious offences? I wish to ascertain from the honourable First Official Member whether or not government has any kind of policy or strategy that would seek to arrest this increase in crime among this age group.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: A considerable amount of work and discussion has taken place over the past year on criminal offences and on sentencing, and on alternative methods of punishment. However, it is difficult to curb crime. The police have been vigilant. There are community police officers posted in most of the districts and efforts are made wherever possible on prevention of crime.

I suppose the fact of the matter is that there are a certain crimes committed irrespective of the efforts that are made.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I know that that honourable member is always willing to cooperate when suggestions are made for the rectification of certain ailments in the society. I am going to ask for an undertaking that some kind of screening be put in place when these persons are apprehended to try and ascertain their level of education and the kind of skills they have; whether or not they have marketable skills, so as to ascertain what really is the cause of what I would consider, this endemic disease.

If we know they don't have adequate skills, we will be in a position to try to address that before it reaches the critical stage. If they have the adequate skills and they still continue to commit these crimes, then we know we have a far more serious problem in that we have to find out what is causing the criminal nature in some people.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I will be most happy to give the undertaking that a screening be carried out to try to create what I would call a profile on these persons, particularly first offenders and persons in this age group. As it stands today, we get very little information on them, as far as I am aware, until they are behind bars. I think the suggestion is a good one, and one that I am quite prepared and very happy to take on board.

I want to thank that honourable member for his suggestion.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I did a quick calculation. It appears that 57% of the prisoners were incarcerated for drug offences. In light of this fact, can the honourable member say whether or not they have a drug counselling programme in place at the prison? Can he give us some basic details as to what is involved in that programme?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, there is a drug counselling programme in place at Northward Prison. For quite some time there was no building available at the prison to house such a facility. The prison director, assisted by my portfolio, went ahead and got a 40 foot container and equipped it so that members of the counselling centre could have an office to work from for counselling. Regular drug counselling is carried out.

There is no point in my standing here and saying that everything is adequate. There is always a greater need. But much is being done in the area of drug counselling and we have assigned a principal officer to this area, someone with expertise in this is supervising this area. Of course, the actual drug counselling is being carried out by qualified counsellors.

So I think much has been done. Still more can be done, but we are doing our best to offer drug counselling and, indeed, other types of counselling for inmates at Northward Prison.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: It is alarming that such a large percentage of our young people are being convicted of such a variety of offences in the prime of their youth—as 57% (according to my calculations) is drug related. I wonder if the honourable First Official Member would allow the minister responsible for drug prevention to update us as to where we are at with our rehab programme and other steps being taken to curtail this disease in our community.

Once our young people go to prison and get a criminal record, it is very difficult for them to become productive members of our society, and very difficult to find a job. I wonder if we could have some information as to what is going on with our rehab programme and other programmes that have been highlighted to arrest this disease among us.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I don't know whether the honourable Minister of Health is prepared to assist in this area. He may not have come prepared for this this morning. But let me say that there is a concerted effort being made by government through the Ministry of Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation toward dealing with this problem. I am sure that the minister will in due course, if not today, have much more to say about the drug rehab centre.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: As indicated, I was not prepared for this question, but just to let honourable members know, the tenders have gone out and a person has been selected to commence the finishing work on the Breakers rehab centre. The programmes are in place. We have a new head at the Cayman Counselling centre which will become a department now. It's cosmetic changes.

With the appointment of the new National Drugs Coordinator we are really getting out into the communities. We met with the Chamber of Commerce to share ideas and get input. We have met with the Lions Club. Next week (or maybe later this week) we are scheduled to meet with the Rotary Club. We feel that the magnitude of this problem is so great that there has to be total commitment by the entire community to deal with it. Later on today with the approval of the House, one of the components that I want to share with you is the rehabilitation component of the secure remand where at this time there is literally no provision for juveniles unless we send them overseas. And that is becoming increasingly difficult because the United States does not support wholeheartedly these types of persons coming in. But it is a complete effort now, and I know that all honourable members of this House are on board.

But what is happening in Cayman, and I know the Fourth Elected Member for George Town [agrees] is a breakdown in the social fabric. We have gotten away from the recipe that made Cayman probably the most successful young developing society—the family sticking together, going to church, parents knowing where their children are. Until we get back to that, there will be many difficulties.

People are eager to try to make money. While the Chief Secretary can put in more prisons, and we can put in more counsellors, until we focus on the family—

[Inaudible interruption]

Hon. Anthony Eden: That is on it's way.

The Childrens Law, as pointed out by the Member for North Side, will go a long way to putting responsibility back on parents to know where their children are and what they are doing. It was actually pioneered by the First Elected Member for West Bay. I think this will go a long way, but it has to be a total, complete commitment by these islands to once and for all go head on with this drug problem.

We cannot tolerate the dealers and those who are making money out of it. When we look at the courts, emphasis is being put on putting some of these away for a long time. I know the commitment is here, that we deal with this head on, and I ask for the support as we go forward to work on this. It's a long hard road. By sticking together we can put a dent in it.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: I just want to ask the First Official Member if, since the counselling has taken place, there has been a notice in a change of attitudes?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: From reports there has been an improvement in attitude. But it's one of those subjective things that is pretty difficult to judge unless we have hard empirical evidence. But I believe, as do many people in this country, that if we keep working at drug counselling we will make inroads into the problem. If we even save one person, it is one person we have helped.

As the honourable Minister of Health said, there is a full commitment to work at all levels on the problem.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 131, standing in the name of The First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 131

No. 131: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources to provide an update on the proposed Multi-Disciplinary Environmental Impact Study for the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: A steering committee has been established and is currently moving the project through the tendering phase. Some 26 consulting firms expressed interest in the project and submitted pre-qualification data for consideration by the steering committee. Six (6) firms have been short-listed and have agreed to submit detailed tender and financial packages to Central Tenders Committee by 30 September 1999. It is hoped that a contract can be awarded by early November 1999.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if the terms of reference (which I am assuming were established and accepted by the relevant authorities for this study) are for public knowledge? Or are they held under confidential package?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: (I apologise if I sound strange, but I have had a tooth extracted.) To answer the question, I would say that in a short time it should be public knowledge simply because the tenders would have been awarded.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: As I am sure the honourable minister is aware of opposing factions regarding certain of our wetlands which at present would seem to be an issue under Planning. I am wondering if this study (as it is called, multidisciplinary) might include some assessment of these wetlands and the purpose they serve which might give a more reasoned approach to dealing with this matter. Can the minister comment on this?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I am not 100% sure that this would include what the member is speaking of. However, I have taken note of what he said and I am endeavouring to speak to my colleagues to see if it can be extended here because I see his point.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I will turn this into a question, sir, but if you will allow me I need to make a further explanation.

The Speaker: Go ahead.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The reason I brought it up is that while the issue seems to be dealing with the Development Plan, the area designated into the various categories we are talking about in the wetlands I am sure was done with input from the Department of the Environment which is spearheading this study. And I am sure that department came up with the terms and references. I just wanted to expand on that and ask the minister, while he said he is taking it on board . . . I want to seek a commitment because this is going to be an issue that is going to be a thorn in our flesh.

I am sure that everyone in authority would like the situation to be handled as fairly as possible and to get the best results which satisfies the most people. You know without my going into further detail what we are dealing with. Perhaps this would be a good opportunity to establish facts to deal with the matter further.

I am wondering if the minister would give a commitment to do everything possible to ensure that such information is gathered through this study rather than taking another whack at it.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I will give the undertaking that I will try to have it included, if possible. I would only point out that what we have before us is in an advanced stage and would perhaps mean putting a hold on this to bring something else into it. But I will give the undertaking that I will have it looked into and, if possible, included.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: No, Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to seek that undertaking if it is going to hold it up. And if that is the case, then forget what I said. I will say this: I do believe that there can be other ways of handling it, even if it's (for lack of a better term) an addendum to what has been established and gone forth. I am sure it can be handled in that fashion.

So, in asking the minister for a commitment, I am asking for it to be one treated as an additive, rather than a stumbling block.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources, would you like to reply?

Hon. John B. McLean: I think the member would like for me to say 'yes.' I have already given the undertaking so I have no problem with that.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to question 132, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 132

No. 132: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources what is being done to ensure that cruise ships are not continuing to discharge effluent while in the George Town Harbour.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources, before answering the question, I would appreciate it if you would move a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) so that Question Time can continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. John B. McLean: I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The "zero discharge" policy agreed several years ago between Government and the cruise ship industry remains in place. The Department of Environment is presently revising legislation to facilitate enforcement and prosecution of illegal discharges under the Marine Conservation Law. The anchorage areas are patrolled by Marine Enforcement Officers and by the marine section of the Royal Cayman Islands Police. In addition, watersports' vessels, passenger tenders and other vessels operating near the cruise ship anchorages have been encouraged to report violations and have been instructed in the procedure for making such a report.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In the answer provided it says that the Marine Enforcement Officers and the marine section of the Royal Cayman Islands Police are patrolling the area. Can the honourable minister say how often these patrols are carried out? Is it daily? Is it while the cruise ships are in the harbour? How often is it?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my understanding that patrols are done as often as equipment will allow, especially when cruise ships are in the area more or less strengthened.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the honourable minister can say if there were any subsequent incidents of pollution by the cruise ships after the big headlines some years ago when a cruise ship line was fined something like $5,000 for polluting our harbours?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my understanding that from time to time some problems surface in this area. Not to the extent the member mentioned. I think with the limited patrols we have and the presence of those mentioned it has actually curtailed this a lot.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we move on to question 133, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 133

No. 133: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning what are the accomplishments of the Ministry of Education in the area of technical and vocational training over the last 12 months.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Ministry of Education is not directly involved in training and the accomplishments in this area are achieved through those schools and colleges which fall under the Ministry's responsibility.

The technical and vocational courses offered through the George Hicks High School, the Cayman Brac High School, or the John Gray High School, are as follows:

Year 10	Years 11 and 12
Office Studies	Building Technology
Introduction to Accounts	Technical Drawing
Introduction to Typewriting	Woodwork
Introduction to Business	Traffic and Motor Vehicle Studies
Home Economics	Materials Technology
Information Technology	Electricity/Electronics
Craft and Design	Graphical and Material Studies
	Child Development
	Child Care
	Food and Nutrition
	Food Studies
	Information Technology
	Office Procedures
	Principles of Business
	Principles of Accounts
	Word Processing
	Business Studies
	Typewriting

We are aware that these curricula need updating and re-thinking, particularly in light of the expansion of offerings at the Community College at the certificate level. Having made significant progress on the core curriculum areas at primary level, my Ministry sees the revision of the vocational and technical curricula offerings at high school level as a priority for the Education Department during this academic year.

I would like to bring honourable members' attention to new courses introduced at the Community College during the last twelve months. In September 1998, five new programmes were introduced; four of which fall under the category of vocational and technical training, namely, the Legal Secretaries Certificate and a Certificate in Nursing, Office Administration and Condominium Management. This last course had to be cancelled because of nil enrollment.

During the 1998/99 academic year, the College offered nine technical and vocational programmes, 13 programmes at the Associate Degree level and 160 short-and long-term courses through its Extension Services Department or evening classes.

The technical programmes were Accounting, Computing, Construction, Electrical and Hospitality. I am pleased to report that student numbers in these programmes increased in 1998. Enrollment also increased in all the professional programmes offered. These were Banking, Legal Secretary, Nursing and the Association of Accounting Technicians. The Associate of Applied Science degrees prepare students for the world of work as opposed to university transfer, and the offerings include Accounting, Business Administration and Office Administration.

With regard to the Tourism Training Initiative, interest in this is very low and only one student applied for the training grant and was sponsored by Government in 1998. This student subsequently dropped out. Honourable Members should note, however, that enrollment in the hospitality programme doubled in 1998. This is because the structure of these college courses allows every student in technical and vocational courses to work 50 percent of the time.

I do not think this fact is widely known by members and I wish to emphasise it. Our experience has shown that local employers are very supportive of this work/study programme, often picking up the tuition fees for the students. I would also point out that the fees for these technical programmes are very low—$370 per year.

The College is always prepared to offer additional certificate programmes, and while it is reasonable for us to point out what is needed, in the end whether the programme runs or not is dictated by student enrollment. There have been several cases in the past where the College offered some of these programmes, employed overseas' lecturers and had to cancel the programme and the lecturer's contract because of very poor or nil enrollment which meant that the course could not run. Two examples of this were auto-mechanics and professional cookery.

A new and encouraging trend which we have seen developing recently is that businesses employ individuals and sponsor them to attend relevant courses at the Community College or contract the College to offer special courses to groups of employees.

Generally speaking, the take up on technical and vocational courses is low. The College has made every attempt to improve this, even, as I have outlined, offering a work/study requirement for all full-time certificate students. On the other hand, I should point out the outstanding success of the extension studies, or evening classes, most of which take place after 5 pm. In 1998, 1,512 students enrolled in the 166 courses offered through extension studies. I should also like to point out that enrollment figures from the College for the last academic year show that 80 percent of the total student enrollment was Caymanian, irrespective of level of programme.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: In a rare departure from what is usual, sir, I wish to record my thanks to the minister for such an informative and mature answer. I wish the Hansards to show that it is certainly a departure from the usual response he renders to this member.

I see from his answer that there seems to be some area of encouragement to further promote the sponsorship of companies who sponsor students at the Community College and who undertake to underwrite courses for students at the Community College. And also, importantly too, where possible, particularly towards the end of the school year where students from the high schools may not have made up their minds completely as to what they want to do, would he give an undertaking to embark on some kind of PR programme and get the input of the students as well as showcasing what the Community College has to offer in these areas as other incentives for students to enroll in technical and vocational courses offered by the College?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am so happy to know that I am improving in my answers now in the honourable member's sight. I know of his interest in education, that's why I tried to be as thorough as I could. Sometimes it gets a bit long, but I fully agree with what the honourable member said.

We undertake to increase the intensity of the promotion and gaining the interest of students in classes. I think as the honourable member appreciates the vocational and technical subjects are there, the problem we have is getting especially young people interested and into the courses and getting them to remain during that period.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, sir. Can the honourable minister state the number of students in the hospitality programme?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We don't have that available, but I would undertake to get it to the honourable member.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I just want to point out that the minister did say that the enrollment in the hospitality programme doubled in 1998. I just thought since he said it was doubled that he must have had a figure somewhere about.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am just trying to find that information. I don't think we have it here, but, naturally, I would undertake to get it for the honourable member.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say what the difference is between the hospitality programme and the training initiative in tourism?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The tourism training initiative makes a payment to students to go to the courses, whereas the College does not.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: That I know. I thank the minister for that. I do know that. What I am trying to ascertain is the content of the programme. What is the difference?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: If I may explain, because it's a bit complex how this . . . let me just explain.

The programme itself, the education part of the programme is the same for both. What happens is that tourism gives this initiative, or a payment is made to the students to attend. But it's the same course.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I just want to be clear on this, Mr. Speaker. I just want to know that the minister is being clear on it. The content, the subject matter for the tourism training initiative is the same as the hospitality programme, the only difference is that we offered an incentive for the tourism training initiative, a payment. If I am right, I would like for him to say that.

I would also like him to say whether students in the tourism training initiative are able to work part time as well.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: That honourable member has a point. With the tourism training initiative they can't work part time, whereas with the College part of the course they can work 50% of the time. So that is a difference.

I have the hospitality studies certificate . . . it seems there are 12 students registered under that. The subjects that make it up are: introduction to computing, life skills, customer relations, English for business communications 1, and commercial numeracy.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The minister is saying that we have 12 students. So that means that in 1997 we had six?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That's very good mathematics, sir.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yeah, very simple!

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the minister's substantive answer he said in the very last paragraph: "Generally speaking [and that lets me know that he prepared it!] the take up on technical and vocational courses is low. The College has made every attempt to improve this, even as I have outlined, offering a work/study requirement for all full-time certificate students."

Right above that he speaks about "A new and encouraging trend which we have seen developing recently is that businesses employ individuals and sponsor them to attend relevant courses . . ."

There's a new thought in regard to technical and vocational training which addresses the marriage between the institutions and the employers. Understanding that there has been low enrollment historically to these types of courses, I am asking the minister if he would give a commitment to further pursue establishing a real marriage between employers and these institutions. I want to explain why I am asking that.

Many times the difficulty is that the individuals are not prepared to attend these courses not knowing what is going to happen at the end of the road. Perhaps if the marriage could be performed where individuals knew that if they set about such courses and applied themselves and did well that they were almost guaranteed employment, that might make a positive difference. If the employers are as interested as we think they are, perhaps a serious commitment could be given that better results could be reaped. I am asking the minister to consider that in pursuit of injecting more impetus into the results of these programmes.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: At present the College has one person who liaisons with employers and whose duty is to promote. Indeed, we do run special courses tailored to the specific company.

I take the point as to the outcome at the end of the course. I would think that that person would liaise to that extent also to ensure that an incentive for promotion is in there, I could ask that more be done to ensure this. But what I should say is that I am reasonably certain that with the vast majority of companies, once there is a qualification, or they pass the course, by and large they will get some increment in salary, or a promotion, or some acknowledgement.

I also know that some of the courses we have run. . . I have been, up until recently, to the banking and accountants for example, where they actually had a nice ceremony and awards were given out. It was quite a wide variety of companies from which those students came. There were about 30 of them. It was not that small of an amount.

I take the honourable member's point and I undertake to ask the College liaison officer to try to ensure that the outcome will be related to incentives for them to continue. We want them to go on and do as many qualifications as they can.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The minister's answer is fine, and it relates to the question. But just to re-emphasise the commitment I was seeking, it wasn't regarding people who are now employed and seeking to enhance their abilities, therefore gaining promotions in the workforce. It has to do with people who are not employed getting employment once they complete the courses satisfactorily. That's the point I was making.

So, in addition to what the minister said in his answer, I am asking for more. The reason I am asking is because I hold the view that many individuals don't have the desire to get involved with these courses because they don't have the confidence that they are going to go through (for want of a better word) that punishment to get trained and then not be sure that they will be employed afterward.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I know that the Education Department is strengthening the career advisory programme. We always continue to strengthen that, I should say. It is very important, and I did not address that to begin with, but also the incentives are there for people who are looking for work.

But, by and large, once a student has the qualification it's quite easy, or reasonably easy, for them to move into a post commensurate with that position. But the careers advisory is critical to students like that in ensuring that they are ultimately placed at a proper level in a proper job.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just to go a little bit further with this line of questioning, I am addressing that group of individuals who have finished secondary school and are in between leaving school and acquiring a job. Many of them are untooled for any specific type of job. There are a considerable number of individuals who from year to year find themselves being added to that category. When the minister said there is low enrollment for these courses, these people are not likely to take it upon themselves to better themselves. Whether or not government wants to say that it is government's responsibility to engage in actively getting these people into the workforce, the fact is that if we don't it spells trouble. That is the commitment I am seeking in that specific area. Perhaps I wasn't quite clear in what I was speaking about, but that is the catchment area I am talking about.

If we had statistics, I am sure that every year the number increases. I think that's where much more emphasis has to be placed. These people who are not able to be categorised, by and large are people who are going to take it on their own initiative to get enrolled and move on. We somehow have to find the right incentives so that they wish to do so.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: An in depth report has come to me from a Commonwealth Secretariat Advisor that deals with this along with several other things. What we are probably looking at is a careers advisory centre that would cater to persons who are out of school and give the advice necessary. It would obviously have to be liaised with and be complementary to, like a labour board. But its focus is different in that it will be giving professional and specific advice to these people on placing them in jobs and also in training them for jobs and advising on the areas that would be best if they were filled locally.

Within a few months I think you will see information on this coming out.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 134, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 134

No. 134: Miss Heather D. Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning if there is an increase in students diagnosed with Attention Deficit Hyperactive Disorder (ADHD) and, if so, what is being done to address this matter.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It would be fair to say that there has been an increase in the number of reported cases of Attention Deficit Hyperactive Disorder in Cayman. The number of actual children diagnosed with Attention Deficit Hyperactive Disorder as defined by Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM-IV), the internationally accepted guide for the diagnosis of Attention Deficit Hyperactive Disorder is as follows:

Year	Males	Females	Total Cases
1992	4	2	6
1993	2	0	2
1994	1	0	1
1995	1	0	1
1996	7	0	7
1997	5	0	5
1998	32	5	37
1999	6	3	9
Total	58	10	68

The increase in 1998 was due to the decision to include children with attention problems (Attention Deficit Disorder) in the same category as children with Attention Deficit Hyperactive disorder.

The following strategies are being implemented to address the problem:

1. Identified students are formally assessed by multidisciplinary Evaluation Team consisting of three education staff and a medical professional (medical doctor) to determine the specific needs of the child and to recommend the most appropriate programming.

2. In-service training has been provided by Special Needs staff and overseas consultants for regular education teachers and parents to inform them of current research and best practices in assessment and management of Attention Deficit Hyperactive Disorder and other disorders that affect learning and behaviour.

Over the past academic year, workshops on Attention Deficit Hyperactive Disorder and Attention Deficit Disorder were organised and conducted in various Government schools in Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac. These workshops were attended by administrative staff, regular and special needs teachers, and some parents. Some issues addressed were assessment and identification, organising home and school environments, academic programming, behaviour management strategies, medical therapy and research data on the role of diet.

3. Case conferences are conducted by a multidisciplinary evaluation team made up of regular medical doctors or psychologists to discuss the child's progress with family members and to offer additional support as necessary.

4. Special Needs staff and Educational Psychologists staff visit schools regularly to help teachers improve general classroom management skills as well as provide specific techniques to manage and teach children with Attention Deficit Hyperactive Disorder.

5. Special classes are provided, or students are withdrawn from regular education classes to provide more individualised programming. The focus is on improving the child's academic skills while teaching self-management and social skills.

6. Counselling is provided to assist children in improving peer and sibling relationships.

7. A Parent Support Group has been organised to give parents the opportunity to share their experiences for working effectively with their children.

8. Medical intervention is provided as agreed by parents with the medical doctors at the Government Hospital as well as overseas' medical services. Some students are sent overseas for further evaluation by the Mental Health Services at George Town Hospital.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: The honourable minister spoke of "Special Needs staff and Educational Psychologists staff visit schools regularly. . . ." Can the honourable minister give us a breakdown of where these students are per school; how many educational psychologists we have on staff, how many special needs staff; and how often are they able to visit each individual school?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We have two education psychologist staff who visit all the schools. The actual breakdown in the schools I do not have now. But I undertake to get this to the honourable member fairly shortly, sir.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: The honourable member said we have two educational psychologists. The other part of my question was how many special needs staff do we have?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We have four peripatetic staff. We have one assistant education psychologist and we have special education teachers throughout the schools.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I wonder if the honourable minister can tell me then, should there be children with this disorder in the district of North Side Primary School, how often is a special needs staff or an educational psychologist at that school?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that the teachers go on demand. But they do not limit the time when they go. They remain for whatever period is necessary. That's what I have been told.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: If I understand the honourable minister, should there be a student in the district of North Side Primary School with this disorder, it is possible that one of these staff members may only visit that school for two hours per week, maybe three hours per month? If that is the case, does the honourable minister feel that that is sufficient time given to this student, or students, in the North Side Primary School? I am not aware of any students in that school that may have this disorder. I am just asking the question.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that we do have a specialist who would visit there some days. I can only rely—and I must say this clearly—on the specialist's advice I have been given on this. It is a topic which obviously has the attention of this honourable House. By all means, if upon review, because we do have a new intake of students now, if it becomes necessary to increase staff, by all means in this coming budget I would know and be making an application for those.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: That was the answer I was looking for. If we have sufficient staff members to deal with 68 cases of Attention Deficit Hyperactive Disorder and he has more or less said that if there is a need for additional staff it would be brought in the budget. I can assure him that if there is a need for anything in education my colleagues on the backbench will give him 100% support.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I thank the honourable member for those kind budget words.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: In dealing with part (8) of the substantive question, can the honourable minister say who pays for the overseas evaluation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This is paid for, I understand, through Social Services, through government.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Can the honourable minister say when the department recommends overseas evaluation and this is sent to Social Services, on what basis does Social Services authorise overseas evaluation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: On the recommendation of the doctors at the Mental Health Department.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I understand that. What I am trying to ascertain from the minister is what sort of process an individual goes through at Social Services after the evaluation has been processed by the Mental Health Department.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The process is that once the Education Department identifies the need, they are then referred to the Mental Health Department. They then take it on from there. I would assume the needs test is applied—I think that's what the honourable member was getting at. The normal means test would be applied. I don't know for certain, but I would . . . Sorry. It is applied, I have been told.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay, do you have a follow up? Because other members have indicated that they want to question.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, sir, I was waiting for quite a long time now. Can the honourable minister say who . . . now you've gone and broken my train of thought.

[laughter]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Sorry. Can the honourable minister say whether parents are allowed on these overseas evaluation trips?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The reason I am a bit vague on some of this is because it is in the Social Services Department. But we know that parents do support it.

[Inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Sorry. Well what—

[Inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, they do travel. I am sure they do.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: The reason I brought this question to the floor of the House was because I had received a package of information from a concerned parent whose child was diagnosed with this disorder. I would just ask the minister to give an undertaking if he would read this information that I will provide to him, and if he would inform us of what he thinks should be taken as far as these children going overseas. It is from a young boy who is in a school in Tennessee called Advent Home Youth Services. I will provide the honourable minister with this information.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I thank the honourable member for that. This is a very important question. That's why I tried to deal with it comprehensively. But, by all means, I am happy to read what the member has. I also have my support staff here. I will get them to go through that also. Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state exactly what procedure determines that a child falls into this category of mental disorder? In his answer he mentioned an internationally accepted guide. I am wondering if it is brought to the attention of the professionals by the teachers, or maybe a parent and then the child is tested. I am trying to understand exactly how it is determined.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Both by the parent and the teacher. Once it is brought to the attention of the department the testing set out in this statistical manual of mental disorders, which is a standard manual I understand, is then applied. The decision is then taken by professionals as to whether this exists or not, and which one of these categories they fall into because there are slightly different categories.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: You might think this is loaded, but it's not intended to be. Can the honourable minister state if the department is satisfied at present that there is not only sufficient staff to effectively deal with the problem but that the scheduling of staff to the various institutions will bring the best possible results given the number of cases that have been identified in the public school system?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I have been instructed by the department that at present they are able to cope with the staff they have. However, I will be asking for that review and in November it is quite likely another staff member will be asked for.

I would just like to point out one thing that I didn't make clear in the answer. The 68 cases are actually government schools and private schools. It's a service that goes to any child that needs it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: For those of us who may not be entirely familiar with exactly how long this disorder lasts, or if it can be cured or continuously treated, can the honourable minister state if this service that he just said extends into the private school system also extends into the secondary schools?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir. In fact, some of these 68 cases are in the secondary.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If the minister is almost sure that he will be asking for additional staff in the November budget, how can the minister state that they are coping quite nicely at present?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I didn't say they were coping quite nicely, I said they were coping.

Let me just say this: With this type of disorder the more on a one-to-one basis things can be, the better. To be very honest, sir, you can never have enough staff when it comes to this. I think you have probably seen the activity of some of those children. The most I can say is that I am sure we will be asking for more staff.

I would also like to point out that we do have a new school year. As soon as . . .well, I will get a better assessment of the new intake because remember, some of these children may well have come in new to the system too. They might not have been in it before. But I can basically only answer the best I can. I take the member's point, though, sir.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The information says that we have 68 cases, can the honourable minister say how many new teachers he employed this year in this particular area?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: In 1998, when we had this increase, we had three extra LBD specialist and one psychologist added. The department does not have the assessment for the extra nine for this year yet. Remember, we combined the two disorders and we got an extra four staff members then, one psychologist, three LBD.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: What I am trying to ascertain, Mr. Speaker, is whether or not the department anticipated the large increase in 1998 because we had some 32.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: First let me mention that the high increase in 1998 was when we combined the Attention Deficit Hyperactive Disorder together with Attention Deficit Disorder. What I have instructed by the professionals is that this type of activity can't be anticipated. It is something that happens. It's a mental—

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, it's hard to tell how many will have it. But I am sure you don't want to get me into it—

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: On a very serious note, and the minister has mentioned that this is a serious issue, I have had representation from parents of children who have been identified with this disorder indicating that they are by no means satisfied with results. That is, they don't see any positive changes over a period of time.

From the little bit that I have been able to glean I understand that it is not something you might notice very positive results in the immediate term. But it seems to me that it is an area that needs to be (and, as the minister said, you can't spend too much time on it) looked at.

I am hoping that with the audit of the department that I understand is going to take place that special note will be made to examine and assess what the needs really are to try to accommodate those needs with proper staffing. I know it involves money, but it is a very crucial issue and I believe that all must be done to try to get these people back to normal as far as possible. Obviously, if they go through the primary and secondary school system and end up just as they were, they will only be a problem to society afterwards. We can't just displace them and figure they will disappear.

I am asking for a commitment to look into it, and not just bring numbers of staff so that it looks good, but really have a clear assessment done to try to satisfy the needs so that quality time can be spent with these children to bring about the best results possible.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I can well understand how parents can get frustrated with this. And it is a joint effort between the school and parents. But there is a support group that will assist the parents through it.

I would just like to mention that the statistic (having 75 diagnosed) is 1.88% of the total school population; whereas in North America the prevalence rate is somewhere between 3% to 5%. So, thank God, we've been lucky not to have that large an amount of children.

But they are special—

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Reported. I mean, yes. I think that at this stage children who are in the school system, the teachers are sufficiently aware that they do diagnose and report. So I don't think we are missing a lot.

But, obviously, more has to be done. It is a long-term medical solution that has to be dealt with and it is critical that parents, teachers and the support groups are in there to deal with each child on a joint basis.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, sir. I know we have asked a lot of supplementaries on this. I appreciate this one, sir. I would like to ask the minister that when all the professionals have completed their examinations and determined overseas evaluation, it is ensured that a parent—even though they do not have the funds—be allowed to accompany the child. I have had some experience in this aspect where the parents were told they couldn't go. It was quite a traumatic experience for them and they came to me as their representative.

I would like to have some assurance that the parents can accompany the child.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that normally a parent can accompany. The most I can do . . . this is Social Services. I can't give an undertaking, as such. But by all means the ministers from both the medical and social services, . . . the ministers from all the areas are here. I will pass it on. I can give an undertaking on behalf of education . . . and they don't directly do this I am sure they must recommend it.

I take the member's point and I will pass it on.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Perhaps the minister can—since this seems to be more an educational situation and it is only sent to social services for evaluation—do an assessment when they are going to go overseas. Get the minister for social services more involved so that you can make this determination about those parents because as I said, I did go through it and it's quite traumatic for the parent and the child.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I take the honourable member's point. I will ask for this to be gone into and try to correct any problems that arose in the past. I am happy to apologise on behalf of the minister if they did arise. But the main thing is that from here on we get it corrected.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 135, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 135

No. 135: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning if there is any policy regarding parents who cannot afford the increased school and book rental fees now being charged by Government.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Since 1994 it has been the practice of the Education Department to offer parents of school children the facility of staggered payments over the school year if they found it difficult to pay school fees in one lump sum.

Over the summer this year, the facility was extended to include parents of all school children having regard to the increased book rental and school fees.

For persons working with government, this was enabled by weekly wage deductions for group employees and monthly salary deductions for civil servants. Other persons were encouraged to enter into agreements to pay the outstanding sums in regular payments over the school term.

Parents of students with large outstanding balances prior to 1 September 1999, and to whom this courtesy was extended previously, were requested to make a substantial payment on account before another agreement was made.

Parents with whom agreements were made for the current school year were encouraged to pay at least half of the current term fees.

If parents felt they were financially unable to enter into these agreements they were referred to the Social Services Department for assessment and eventual referral to the Financial Secretary for waiver of book rental and school fees.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state by category and by school (primary schools, George Hicks and John Gray High Schools) exactly what the old fees were and what the new fees are? Can he say what the percentage of increase is for each category of fees levied?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The book rental fees were $5 for Years 1 and 2, and $10 for Years 3 to 6, and that went to $50. The primary went to $50

The George Hicks moved to $100 from $12, and to $150 in the John Gray High School from $14.

That is still way under the cost of the rental fees per year that government bears. So it is still subsidised to that extent.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The minister has not quite answered the question. He has given me the former figures and the new figures. I am asking him what the percentage of increase is per category.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I would have to work that out. All I can say is that what was $5 went to $50; and the $12 went to $100 in George Hicks, and $150 in John Gray. Let me just say that it is way below the private schools and it is way below the cost to government.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say how many applications for assistance in the payment of fees he received this year? What kind of problems did they experience in the payment of these fees?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I don't have that. But I understand it's a small amount.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, it is $50 a year in Primary Schools. What I am saying is that there were only a small number of applications for the relief.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say if he can still recall the debate we had here on the budget when he said that he would make sure that anyone who could not afford the fees were exempted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: As I stated then, and as I mentioned, the policy of this government—and it was brought in in 1994—is that something is worked out for those who can't pay, or the exemption is applied. That has been this government's policy since 1994 and it continues, sir.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I am quite sure that quite a few of the affected parents are listening. I would like the minister to say what criteria is used to arrive at need in regard to assistance.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That aspect is done by the Social Services Department. I think the minister answered earlier questions on that. But, for example in the primary school, the book fee rental is the equivalent of $1 per week. In the middle school it is $2 per week and in the high school $3 per week. If they can't afford that then Social Services will assess and it goes back to the Financial Secretary who then waives.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I don't think the minister answered my question. I am asking from the point of view of the Education Ministry, what criteria is used by them to refer persons to the Social Services Department? If someone comes in and says they can't afford to pay, do they do an assessment themselves, or do they just automatically send the people to Social Services?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: As I understand it, if parents say that they cannot pay then they are sent to the Social Services Department. The honourable member will recall that sometime back the auditor general wrote quite a bit on this question of other departments trying to deal with assessments. But the answer is that we do not do the assessment. The actual waiver is by the honourable Financial Secretary.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I told several of my constituents that the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning had promised in the debate on the budget that anyone who could not afford these fees, or were having difficulties . . . as a matter of fact, I think he said with the fees, would be assisted. I sent quite a few people, when they came to my office to complain about the fact that they could not afford the fees. I am asking then, if the Education Department sends people to Social Services, does the Social Service Department then have a separate system of arriving at how to give assistance in direct relationship to education and the inability of people to pay for education because they have not budgeted for those educational needs of their children.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: They would obviously assess it on a case by case basis. They have been doing this for a long time, for example with uniforms where parents can't afford it, and for school lunches. So the system of assessment is in place.

Let me just say that the children are not in any way disadvantaged as a result of that system. The children are taught. I can tell you that there are times when teachers actually take money out of their own pockets if somebody needs breakfast. I have heard teachers say that they get what they need. So we look after the children and Social Services does provide lunches. I have answered that question before, I think. It provides uniforms and a similar service for this.

But that isn't under my ministry and the most I can do is assure you that the undertaking I gave has been agreed upon by the minister in charge of social services. He will see that through. So that undertaking stands, sir. I would like to stress that to the honourable member.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: The First Elected Member for George Town asked a supplementary that had to do with the percentage of increase. I think that is a relevant question to my supplementary question because I am saying to the minister (and I will put this in question form) that it is perhaps because of the increase that we have this difficulty. But could he say, or could the Education Department give exactly the number of people who at they least attempted to assist with some type of waiver for these fees?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I give the honourable member an undertaking that I will get that information. We don't have it at present, sir.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town, we will have to move on. I will allow three more supplementaries.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I was just raising . . . I mean questions have been asked here all morning. This is the first time I am asking any questions.

The Speaker: I am not asking you for a desertion on this.

Dr. Frank McField: I was just getting up to ask if the minister—

The Speaker: Please ask your question.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister at least see that in the future when people come to the office to ask for assistance that even if they don't get it they are referred, that at least some kind of record or statistics are kept on this because it would be very useful in the future.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that we do have the statistics and I will get that for the honourable member.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say if he is aware of any students who have not returned, particularly to George Hicks or John Gray High School, because their parents were not in a position to pay the new book fees, and they are not aware of where they can go to seek assistance?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Whatever children need to go to those schools go to them. If there are any parents who are under any misapprehension about that then by all means ask them to call me, or somebody in the ministry or department. Children are not turned away, if that is really what the honourable member is getting at, on the basis that they haven't paid for lunch or book fees, the $2 per week or whatever it is.

The Speaker: The last supplementary. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Since this is the last supplementary, perhaps the minister better get pen and paper because I will have to try to put all of them together into one.

First of all, when I asked about the percentage of increase, I need to tell the minister what they are and then I can ask the question, since he seemed not to have them. For Years 1 and 2, the increase was 1000%; for the following Years, up to Year 6, the increase was 500%; for Years 7 to 9, based on the figures I was given, the increase is 833.3%; and for Years 10 to 12 the increase (while not exact) is in excess of 1000%.

Regardless of the fact that these fees may not actually cover the costs, regardless of the fact that these fees in the public system are much less than those in the private school system, the fact is that these increases which range from 500% to over 1000% are certainly shocking to say the least.

My questions to the minister are as follows: Why is it that these increases were left to the point where there had to be such a drastic percentage of increase? I understand it has been many, many years since this was addressed. And in regard to the revenue package which this was a part of, if my memory serves me correctly the total anticipated increase in revenue for this was just over $200,000 compared to the entire package of $11.8 million which puts the percentage of this at a bare minimum in regard to actual percentage of increased revenue.

Why then did this have to be addressed in this fashion? If it was a situation where everyone was convinced that the matter needed to be put more in line, why not in graduating stages so that people would know for the next five years this is going to be the increase so that individuals who don't have the latitude to find this money . . . and the truth is, we all know that many of them don't plan it until it faces them square in the face. Why not take these factors into consideration and deal with it in a more palatable manner?

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I guess the fees were not increased from 1983 because, quite clearly, of all the politics around it. But government's undertaking is clear, and you can play with percentages as you wish. If one increases from one cent to one dollar, you have a 10,000% increase, but it's still only 99 cents. What I am saying is that the fees are presently $1 per week in the primary school, $2 per week in the George Hicks School, and $3 per week, approximately, in the high school. Reality is reality.

What is happening, I submit, is that to talk about an increase from 14 cents per week to one dollar per week is a 1000% increase. But in reality it is only a difference of 86 cents per week. And government has given an undertaking for those who cannot afford it, that the children will not suffer and it will be waived.

Now, if the honourable member is trying to say that no one out there can afford to pay one dollar per week for books, out of the children going there, the vast majority of people can pay for this. To try to blow it out of proportion they talk about a 1000% increase when we are talking about $1 per week is the reason why nobody since 1983 has increased it. Everything that's brought here, political mileage is taken out of it.

The Speaker: This concludes Question Time for this morning. Is it the wish of the House that we take the break or continue on until 1.00? We shall take the break.

Proceedings are suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.29 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.56 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Item 4 on today's Order Paper: Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 11/99, as amended.

SPEAKER'S RULING ON POINT OF ORDER

Raised by the Elected Member for North Side

The Speaker: Before we speak on amendment number 2 to the motion . . . before we adjourned the Elected Member for North Side raised a point of order. I want to make a ruling on it.

Quoting from the Hansard of 24 September 1999, the Elected Member for North Side said: "Certainly, the most major issue of any country is to change the constitution of that country. That could have been included in a Referendum Bill, that this be one of the national issues to give the people the right to initiate a referendum." [1999 Official Hansard Report, page 1078]

In a paragraph before that she made it clear: "I have never advocated advancement of the Cayman Islands' Constitution, and I will never advocate advancement of the Constitution—unless it is the desire of the people of these Islands."

If we look at the paragraph that I read first, she did not say "advancement." She said "a change to the Constitution." But, certainly, reading it in its full text it is clearly understood that she was speaking about advancement. The honourable minister did say that he would withdraw that, and I thank him.

We shall continue. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I am happy to withdraw that, and I apologise.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: [off microphone] That should be struck from the record.

The Speaker: Moving on to debate amendment number 2—

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Could I request that that statement be struck from the Hansards? if that is in order with the honourable minister.

The Speaker: I didn't quite follow you. Would you repeat that?

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Will this be struck from the records once it's withdrawn, as it has been by the honourable minister?

The Speaker: If you so wish, that can be done.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: If they strike that out, then the apology would make no sense. It is up to the member. Otherwise the apology makes no sense.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Strike it out Edna.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, continuing the debate.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99 AS AMENDED

REFERENDUM LAW

(Continuation of debate on Amendment (No. 2))

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would like to begin by expressing disappointment and regret that the motion which was brought out of purely altruistic intention has become so twisted and turned that it has now come down to this.

I say again that I believe if we wish to resort to the boiler room that the matter can be settled amicably. From all I have heard, I have come to the conclusion that there is not a world of difference between the position advocated by the Minister of Education, who is leading the government charge, and the position of those of us who support the motion in its original version.

But I suppose that this is a year away from election and such is the nature of the political beast. What I don't want to happen is for the public to be so confused, so misled and so discombobulated that they become frustrated, disillusioned, disinterested and completely turned off, with an effective tool such as a referendum. This is a House of politics. So while I say that on the one hand, I have to bear on the other hand that there are certain members who will feel that they were not earning their keep if they didn't exercise their tongues and their intellect to a certain extent. But I have to say again that the motion in its original motion was brought out of purely altruistic intentions.

Quite frankly, I don't believe that anyone in his right mind would like to use this as a pretext for advancing the Constitution into independence. I believe that if the truth were known, no Caymanian in his or her right mind would wish to alter the status quo that radically. Many Caymanians, from the humblest to the most able, realise that our economic condition and standard is inextricably linked to political stability. So I want to distance myself from those arguments.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town has said over and over again, in spite of all the charges laid, that he is not an advocate of that. But if I were, Mr. Speaker, I would not be ashamed or afraid to express it. As a politician I would be—as I have been—prepared to take my stand even when it's unpopular. But I have never had any reason to advocate that. So I want to clear the air on that once and for all.

I am concerned that in his presentation the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning gave the impression that I am still not in support of the referendum. He cited his 1989 motion, which I agreed I did not support at that time. What the minister did not say was that when we were reviewing the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1972, that I was one of the foremost supporters of the referendum. Contrary to what the minister said—that he was the mover—the minutes of those meetings tabled in the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands on 28 October 1991, on page 3 where it talks about "Voters' referendum" didn't list the honourable minister as the mover. It says "Mr. Truman Bodden supported a provision of a referendum and suggested that the government had a fear of its introduction." It did not say that he was the mover. It said that he supported it.

And reading on down it says, "Mr. Roy Bodden suggested that the issue could not be taken in a frivolous light [that is the issue of a referendum]. A referendum should not be conducted on everyday issues, but rather to the extent of major national issues regarding the introduction of [for example] major revenue measures i.e., that is income tax (not the budget), and not on issues such as the composition of Finance Committee; nor to block legislation. He illustrated the use of referenda within the territories during the proposed establishment of the Federation of the West Indies." [Minutes of Meeting held 4th January 1991, page 3.]

Interestingly enough, by that time even the present the First Elected Member for West Bay—whom the Minister of Education linked with me as being against the referendum in 1989—had changed his position. The minutes, which were tabled, said, "Mr. McKeeva Bush advocated that there are certain issues which should be put to a voters' referendum." [Ibid. page 3]

So if the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning is still trying to say that we are against referendum he needs to go and read these minutes.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Whew!

Mr. Roy Bodden: And since I am on the matter of exposure, Mr. Speaker—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I don't like to interrupt, but I never imputed—

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, does the minister have a point of order?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: On a point of order, then, Mr. Speaker.

POINT OF ORDER
(Misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The honourable member is misleading this House if he is saying that I am saying that that member and the First Elected Member for West Bay were still of the view that they did not support a referendum. I did not say that.

I said in 1989, and I read from it what they said against it. If we keep those facts straight I would appreciate it.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, there's an old Jamaican saying that goes—

The Speaker: Let me rule on this now.

I do not have the Hansard here, but I remember him saying they had a change of heart. So that means that they had to have been against a referendum at that time and that now they are for it, if I remember correctly. So, he does have a point of order.

Please continue the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: What he was saying was that we shouldn't change it.

The Speaker: But he did say that you had a change of heart.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: But he was saying that we shouldn't change it.

The Speaker: Please continue Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I have known for a long time that that minister can give but he can't take. I don't want to be petty because, trust me Mr. Speaker, I have what he said here. I can substantiate that he didn't say what he just said.

But, you know what? I know he's twofaced. I know he's like the Roman god Janus—he has two faces.

Before I am finished, he's going to get up on a couple of more points of order. In this business if you give you have to learn to take. And when he was speaking I sat down, like a diplomat of the United Nations, and listened and took all that he had to say. Now I want to find out how many more times he's going to get up on a point of order he dreamed up and interrupt what I have to say.

But here he says it on page 6. “Well, Mr. Speaker, at least one thing I got entrenched in 1993 is the right to have a referendum, even though the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town—who raised that—rejected (and I read that) my 1989 motion to have any kind of referendum, much less put in the Constitution. So, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town should be the last one to raise this issue. [Official Hansard Report, 27 September 1999, page 1094]

Mr. Speaker, I want to find out where he said that I had had a subsequent change of heart in the speech, sir. I will sit down and let him tell me.

The Speaker: Well, it is my understanding that it was the intention of the House to adjourn for a meeting to be held in the Committee Room at 2.15 pm.

I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: On a matter of procedure. The member speaking has raised a point or order. What is going to happen to that?

¹The Speaker: He raised a point and I said that I did not have access to the Hansard. I will get the Hansard and make a ruling when the House is resumed.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Oh. I didn't hear you say that.

The Speaker: I will take that on board.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 AM tomorrow.

The Speaker: Before putting the question, I have been asked by the Elected Member for North Side, under Standing Order 11 (6) which says, “On a motion moved under paragraph (5), a Member who is not a Member of the Government and who has obtained the right to do so, may raise any public matter for which the Government has responsibility, in order to elicit a reply from a Member of the Government responsible for the matter. After not more than twenty minutes, the Member of the Government shall be called on to reply.”

The Elected Member for North Side.

RAISING OF PUBLIC MATTER Standing Order 11(6)

AMENDMENTS TO THE DEVELOPMENT PLAN

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Mr Speaker, this Honourable House is no doubt aware of a series of meetings held by concerned property owners from the North Side and Bodden Town districts in response to proposals in the latest amendments of the Development Plan.

These meetings (two of which were attended by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and myself) are called to galvanise objections to having large areas of the two districts zoned “environmentally sensitive” and “environmentally protective.” The landowners contend that they hold absolute titles to these areas and insist that they be spared any restrictions which would prevent them from developing these properties to their benefit.

Mr. Speaker, this a critical issue and if the precedent set by events of the 1975 Development Plan instructs us successfully, then these landowners should be given the freedom and encouragement to develop or dispose of their lands to their satisfaction.

I wish to state on behalf of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, other Honourable Members who will identify themselves in due course, and myself, that we support the landowners in their quest for freedom to develop or dispose of their property to their satisfaction. We feel that there is a disparity between what has been done along the West Bay peninsula and some areas in South Sound and what is now being proposed for the wetland/swampland in Bodden Town and North Side.

We can see no good reason why lands vested in the hands of our people by government are now being proposed to be rendered practically worthless to these owners. We urge the government to listen to the concerns of our people and to try to arrive at an amicable and satisfactory settlement. In this initiative, the government has our full support and encouragement. However, we consider it unfortunate and regrettable that government should encourage the National Trust or any other entity to deprive our people of their legal right and wish to distance ourselves from any such moves.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I did mention to the member that I would get a copy and do a reply, since we weren't sitting this afternoon. If I can, tomorrow. If not, maybe after.

The Speaker: You defer replying until tomorrow morning?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir, if you will accept that.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Before you do that, Mr. Speaker, in regard to the response tomorrow morning, it would be at a different point in the orders. I am wondering if the Elected Member for North Side will have a chance to reply in that regard.

The Speaker: We will take that under consideration.

I will now put the question that this honourable House do adjourn until 10.00 AM tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 1.11 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM THURSDAY, 30 SEPTEMBER 1999.

PRESENTATION OF

ROYAL CAYMAN ISLANDS POLICE SERVICE
ANNUAL REPORT 1998

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service Annual Report 1998.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you care to speak to it?
The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr. Speaker, I think the report speaks for itself so I will not elaborate on it.

The Speaker: Thank you. Moving on to item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers. Dealing with deferred Question 129, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

DEFERRED QUESTION 129
(Deferred on Friday, 24 September 1999)

No. 129: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works if the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services maintains all government vehicles and equipment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services (DVES) is responsible for the maintenance and repair of vehicles, mobile equipment, and emergency generators for all Government Departments Units and Sections, excluding the Fire Service in Grand Cayman. In 1985, the Fire Service was given approval to provide the required maintenance for the Department's vehicles and equipment.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services has a mission statement? And, if it does, what is that mission statement?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My understanding is that they do not have a mission statement.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if at present the said department handles the maintenance and repair of police vehicles?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I think the answer to the member's question is, yes, there are one or two, or maybe more than one or two instances where the Police in an effort to get some matter [repaired] quickly do use a private mechanic.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state categorically that the vast majority of repairs and maintenance required by the Police Department on their vehicles is done by this said department?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I would hesitate to say categorically, but I would say the major percentage of the repairs are done by the Department of Vehicles and Equipment. As I mentioned earlier, there are times when the Police take their vehicles to the private sector mechanic.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Minister state which department is the largest customer of the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer to the member's [question] is that Environmental Health is the largest department receiving services from DVES.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister say what sort of apparatus is used for determining when maintenance and repair is necessary on any given department vehicle and whether those vehicles are used for departments? Or are they used privately also?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As I understand it, there is a maintenance schedule on all pieces of equipment at DVES and the methodology used is the number of miles or the number of hours. It depends on what type of vehicle—it may be a truck or it may be a piece of heavy equipment, and heavy equipment cannot be dealt with in miles but it is the number of hours it is worked in terms of deciding when to service.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: What kind of mechanism is used to ensure that government vehicles are used as little as possible for private purposes?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think the member is probably like the rest of us—we see vehicles at times that we think should not be on the road. But there is a section under the General Orders that deals with the usage of Government vehicles and the control of those vehicles is under the direction of the Head of Department. So, it is the Head of Department to ensure that these vehicles are used only for Government purposes.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Is there a policy in place in that regard?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Perhaps, I wasn't as clear as I should have been. The General Orders that speak to the policy in relation to the usage of Government vehicles.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Getting back to the original line of questioning that I was pursuing, can the Minister state if it is a fact that the amount of maintenance that is being done by the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services for the Police Department has dropped over the past two years?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am advised, Mr. Speaker, that the answer to the honourable Member's question is, yes, it has dropped.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If that is the case, as has been put forth by the Minister, can the Minister explain why this is the case?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned earlier (and this is not answering directly to the question of the First Elected Member for George Town) it is the Head of Department that really takes most decisions in this regard and is required by the General Orders to follow a particular methodology of getting repairs done to their vehicles. If you are going to go outside, then you obviously need Government's permission to change it.

The DVES has met with the Commissioner of Police, in terms of resolving this matter of reducing the number of vehicles that are coming to DVES for servicing and the matter, as I understand it, is improving.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, with the greatest of respect, sir, I do not think that my question was answered.

I heard what the Minister said. My question is: Can it be explained why the amount of maintenance done by the department for Police vehicles has dropped over the past two years? I heard what the Minister said but I do not believe that that answers my question. If possible, I would like the question answered.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, as I understand it, the Police do take vehicles to a private mechanic, not necessarily one private mechanic for service to be rendered to it without reference to DVES. Unless, we talk to the Commissioner and understand his side of the story, it may be difficult for me to answer the question to the level that the Member is expecting.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just prior to this, the Minister said that the Director of this department and the Commissioner were meeting to resolve the situation. If that is the case, then surely the Minister must know what the situation is, that's what I am asking. Is there a situation which has to be resolved? What is the situation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, the situation is that all vehicles should be brought to DVES for servicing, and in this case, some of the Police vehicles are not. That's the situation and that is the situation that the Director of DVES is meeting with the Commissioner of Police to resolve. I am not in those meetings so I cannot say to the Member exactly what the details are.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, surely, if prior to this the vehicles for the Police Department were being serviced by DVES, and subsequent to that, the Police Department started farming their maintenance and repairs out elsewhere, there must have been a reason why. I am quite certain that the department must have been told why, and the Director is here, and the Minister has conferred with the Director on every supplementary question that has arisen from this substantive question. Surely, the Minister can confer now, so that we can understand why. That's all I am asking.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, as I understand it, some of the repairs that are being referred to the private sector mechanic(s), the view of the Police is that they can get it done faster and cheaper.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am not a dentist but Lord I just had to pull some teeth, and that is no reflection on the Minister, he is just answering the question at present. In fact, it is not meant to have any reflection on anyone. I am looking for answers.

That being the case, can the Minister state if there have been any other situations similar to this that have arisen whereby other departments have cited that the speed in which they can get their repairs, and the cost of getting those repairs, can be better done by the private sector? And has this been made known to the Director of that department?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: If I am remembering the question of the First Elected Member of George Town, as I understand it there are no other departments that are taking vehicles to private mechanic. I think what is worthy of note as well, is the comment that it is cheaper—not necessarily refuting the faster—to go to the private mechanic than DVES. I believe that is subject to verification. I don't think the department has verified that that is so.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I was only going by what the Minister said. When the Minister answered the supplementary—

[Inaudible comment]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: He did say at a better price. So, I was only going by what the Minister said. However, if that has to be verified . . . That's not really the question that I want to lead into now. Since this is established, whether it's limited to the Police Department or whether it extends further, there are some problems with the operations of that department and obviously, this leads to the question of efficiency.

Can the Minister state, having recognised that there may be a problem one way or the other, and this is not casting any aspersions but just understanding that these things might happen—sometimes the bus leaves us for a while. Can the Minister state if anything is being done about rectifying the situation and what is being done to rectify that situation? I am not referring to any meetings with the Police. I am talking about the actual workings of the department to try to maximise efficiency.

The Speaker: Before asking the Honourable Minister to answer the question, I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) in order that Question Time can continue beyond 11.00 a.m.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of the relevant Standing Order to allow the other questions and supplementaries to be asked.

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) in order that Question Time can continue beyond the hour of 11.00 a.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time continuing.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, we have moved forward to effect a significant change, I believe, by ensuring that the department is fully computerised in order to upgrade a number of services that it does produce. I believe the system that we are putting in place would assist not only with the scheduling of vehicles but also the financial reporting that comes from it and the necessary administrative work that needs to be done within it. Sometimes without it the efficiency suffers and that's how we are trying to address this. There is much more work to be done but that is the first step in the process of dealing with it.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, can the Honourable Minister say whether the loss of business from some government departments stems mainly from the fact that the services offered by DVES are uncompetitive in comparison to what can be obtained privately? Has any attempt been made to get the prices that the private sector entities charge with a view to seeing whether DVES can adjust the prices for the services they offer to make them more attractive and competitive to the government departments, their customers?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I don't have all the details but there is another question set down for income and expenditures of the respective department—I propose to answer that probably tomorrow or Monday. But I do know that from a labour point of view in dealing with the repairs to vehicles and equipment, the labour cost at DVES is substantially less than what a mechanic in the private sector will be charging. So, while I am not in a position to answer it fully, I do know that the 50 percent side of it, the spare parts, I think would be equal to what you would find in the private sector because they are all coming from somewhere in the United States in most cases.

So, although I don't have the figures at hand, I do believe that the cost element of it would be cheaper from the DVES servicing than the private sector in the majority of the cases.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? No further supplementaries, we will move on to deferred question 120 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 120

No. 120: Mr. W. McKeever Bush asked the Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works what the Honourable Minister is doing (a) to arrest the downturn in North American stay-over visitors to the Cayman Islands; and (b) to address the negative effects caused in the country to businesses by this downturn.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The answer to question (a) is: The slight decrease in stay-over visitors in 1999 compared with 1998 has caused the Department of Tourism to take the following initiatives:

- Two special programmes were put in the market (meaning in the United States), Chillin' in Cayman and the Family Summer Programme were designed to generate new business.
- Regular monitoring of the international and regional issues has been undertaken by the Department of Tourism to allow response time to any issue to be proactive rather than reactive.
- Co-operation efforts with Cayman Airways Ltd through seat sales and promotions to generate business southbound from all gateways utilising their code share with United Airlines. It is reported that forward business is growing from beyond the gateways well into the year 2000.
- Recent development of travel packages for Pirates Week to bring visitors down to the Islands for that event.
- Significant increase in the USA promotions by the regional sales staff.
- During the fall we are increasing our marketing of the Chillin' programme which runs through to early December.
- Intensive Sales promotions ("Sales Blitzes") being carried out by all regions in the United States and Canada.

(b) The Ministry has been successful so far in attracting a significant increase in cruise ship passengers, 690,801—over 121,648 more the same period January through August 1998 or an increase of 21.4 percent.

The Ministry has encouraged and supported the construction of more rooms at the Hyatt Regency, new tourist accommodations such as the Sunshine Suites, Comfort Suites, Holiday Inn and Ritz Carlton in an effort to replace the loss of approximately 300 rooms as a result of the closure of Holiday Inn and the Grand Pavilion in 1998.

The Ministry and Department of Tourism works closely with the Cayman Islands Watersports Operators Association to attract visitors interested in watersports, particularly diving.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say what are the results of the seven items he has outlined?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The result of the seven items really dealing with the stay-over visitor to the Cayman Islands is that there are more people coming to the Cayman Islands and the early amount that we said we were down by has now been fairly significantly reduced.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Is it not a fact that the statistics showing the position are down now and by the end of the December, I guess when the year has ended, will be down further in stay-over visitors as compared to last year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I think it is important for us to put the matter in perspective. In May of last year, Holiday Inn with 300 rooms closed its doors and was later demolished. In August of last year, Grand Pavilion closed its business as a hotel accommodation and was renovated to office accommodation so it means that 300 rooms were lost by August of 1998. It also means that in our peak period of visitor traffic, we have lost 300 rooms for every night from January 1st until April 15th.

And when we total that number up, it is a significant figure. Therefore, the fact that we are down results from the lack of 300 rooms for three and a half months as compared to the figures for the same three and a half months—and I am thinking, three and a half months meaning January, February, March and half of April in 1998.

So, the fact that you have lost the rooms, the fact that those particular organisations were in the marketplace in the United States and in Canada attracting visitors to their doors, we lost that element of it too. The advertising that is done by the Department of Tourism is creating an awareness of the Cayman Islands and what it offers. We are not marketing rooms. We leave the marketing of rooms to the hotels, condos, and others who provide that service.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that when we look at it from that perspective, the Department and the staff working in the United States has done a marvellous job to be down only by the amount that we are down. Realising as well that American Airlines in the peak of the winter season in February had a pilot sick-out for ten days, where 6,000 flights of that airline were cancelled, Cayman Airways, also had sick-out. All of that affected the movement of persons to our shores.

I think we need to put this whole picture into some perspective. Yes, we are down. But how much are we down by? At the end of August, we were down less than 77,000 people. I don't believe with a loss of 300 rooms or 600 beds that that is a significant thing to be too concerned about. Concerned, yes, and that's why we have been doing the additional "sales blitzes," going from one city to the next, to the next, in a period of two weeks at a time to ensure that the message gets out, that the marketing is done, that we work in conjunction with the local partners to make sure that they are present when we are carrying out this function that they can market their respective hotel or condominium. I think we are doing well.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say what is the percentage of occupancy in the other hotels in the period of loss he is talking about?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Member for the question. When we took office in November 1992, the occupancy rate in the hotels at that time was 61%. By 1993, it rose to 71.3% and by 1994, it had risen to 77% (not to go through all the details). By the end of 1998, we were at 73.1% and for the first seven months of this year, we are at 78.5%. So, from the hotel point of view, the occupancy is the highest that we have received so far, although I am not comparing the full year, I am comparing the seven months.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Those percentages are they for all the hotels in the island and condos as well?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: No, I was just giving hotels. You asked for hotels, I was just giving hotels.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, what I am trying to arrive at, condos make up room rentals as well. That's part of the tourism product. I would think that the ministry would give a figure that would include (since he says the percentages are so big) the condos as well, since that is the tourism product.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to answer the Member along those lines, but his question was really what is the percentage of the hotels and that's what I was trying to stick to.

I will use the same reference point. The percentage when we took office in 1992, the condominium occupancy rate was 8.5%. By the end of 1993, it was 52.6%. By the end of 1994, it was 55.5%. I don't want to quote all the figures but if we go now to 1998, last year, the percentage was 52.3% and for the first seven months of 1999, the occupancy percentage was 53.2%. So, for the seven months, it was higher than it was for the twelve months in 1998.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Could you say what the percentages were for 1995, 1996 and 1997? And I am glad that the Minister is pleased to answer the question. The question has been here since May.

Mr. Speaker, part (b) of the question would be: In regard to the sick-outs by American Airlines and Cayman Airways, which did not affect the flight . . . that is, Cayman Airways did not affect passengers, the flight continued in any event. What number of flights did American Airlines have in at that time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, what I was referring to is that this sick-out period for American Airlines, they cancelled over 6,000 flights within continental United States, according to my memory when I read the article.

Now, we know that some of those passengers were trying to get to the Cayman Islands and never arrived during that sick-out period. We even saw on CNN that a couple who were recently married wanted to spend their honeymoon in the Cayman Islands and they were somewhere in the area of Cincinnati or Ohio. We actually tracked them down, they did finally get to the Cayman Islands (I think it was five or six days later) and ended up at the Hyatt Hotel. We, meaning the Ministry and Department of Tourism, did pay some respect to them as a result.

But when we look, for example, at the American Airlines figure, it is down by 47,000 passengers and that's the result of it. When we look at the figure for American Airlines coming to Cayman Islands and delivering passengers, it is down by 4,718 passengers.

The Speaker: Are there are further supplementaries?
The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Part (a) of the question was figures for condo occupancy for 1995 - 1997. I will turn that into part (a) of this question and part (b) would be: What did the Minister do to alleviate the problem of the American Airlines sick-out and the result of loss of the 44,000 visitors or passengers, let's say?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, we put a special programme in for families travelling to the Cayman Islands. The Cayman Islands is a significant family vacation designation and we did put in place a programme that allowed kids under the age of 12 to fly free with one parent. That produced a fairly significant number of people coming to the Cayman Islands.

Rather than trying to do promotions all over the United States, for example, the region of Houston that covers a multitude of states from Houston going as far north as Minnesota and as far west as Colorado, did a series of "sales blitzes" in the state of Texas as well as Nevada. That produced a pretty significant number of people coming to the Cayman Islands. We, together with Cayman Airways . . . I want to give reference to Cayman Airways for this programme that we came up with—that kids under the age 12 fly free and kids over the age of 12 but not older than 17 also got a significant discount percentage.

In addition, Cayman Airways has put on other sales in August for visitors coming south from the United States. I am not trying to say, Mr. Speaker, that we couldn't have done more. I think we can always do more if we get the tools to do more and if we have the money to do more. But the approach we took was to create the greatest effect in the shortest period of time. And we settled on the items that we have recorded in the answer to this question.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the question on condo occupancy for 1994 - 1997.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am happy to provide it, Mr. Speaker. In 1994, the occupancy rate for condos was 55.5%. In 1995, it was 53.9%. In 1996, it was 58.2%. In 1997, it was 48.2 percent. At the end of 1998, it was 52.3% and for the first seven months of 1999, it was 53.2%.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for today. Would honourable members want to take the morning break at this time before we go into Private Members' Motions?

We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.28 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.04 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 5 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended, the Referendum Law. We are continuing on the debate on the amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended.

SPEAKER'S RULING ON POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: When we adjourned yesterday, I indicated to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town that I would do some research into the Hansards and rule on a request that he had made in which he said, "Mr. Speaker, I want to find out where he said [referring to the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning] that I had had a subsequent change of heart in the speech, sir."

I want to say that I have researched the Hansard and there were numerous occasions where the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning indicated in Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town had not supported that motion and yet he was seconding Private Member's Motion No. 11/99, and it did not incur consistency.

I want to state what I said. . . and I quote what the Hansard records that I said, "I do not have the Hansard here but I remember him saying they had a change of heart." [1999 Official Hansard Report, page 1121]

Well, the choice of words, "change of heart" was actually my phraseology, and not a quote. I did not say that I quoted the honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning; and, in fact, he did not say that. I concur with the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town that the Minister of Education did not say that he had a change of heart, but he has stated in his speech a lack of consistency.

I hope that that will satisfy the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. I apologise for the misunderstanding, that I said that the honourable Minister of Education had said that.

Debate continuing, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99 AS AMENDED

REFERENDUM LAW

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I full well expect, sir, that you would know that I have had a change of heart. A man of your experience would know that, sir, but that still escapes the Minister of Education. But we will leave him alone.

Mr. Speaker, when we reached the adjournment [yesterday] I made a statement asking you for that clarification. I said that the Minister of Education reminded me of the Roman god Janus, who had two faces. When I say these things, I don't say them lightly. And I wanted to say something when he raised the point of order, but I wouldn't say that either and I am going to tell you why. When it was used in here on 27 November 1996 by his colleague, the Minister of Agriculture, it really hurt me. That was the expression about when you throw stones in a pig-pen and "he that squeal is he who got hit."

I said then that I considered that out of order to use in the Parliament because nobody in here is a pig. So, I wouldn't use it on the minister. Even though I sometimes get hit hard—I stop short of that. I just said that the minister can give but he cannot take. I still remember that, and believe you me, Mr. Speaker, I am just waiting until the opportunity presents itself and I am going to give the Minister of Agriculture a taste of his own medicine because I am still smarting from that because he called me a pig—and I am not a pig.

I said that the Minister of Education has two faces because in the same Minutes of the Select Committee (when we were reviewing the Constitution)—and check this out—the Minister of Education opposed the view that official members should vote, knowing that on page 4, sir . . . "Mr. Truman Bodden, in opposing the view that Official Members have a vote, noted that the Elected Members of the House are elected by the people and in turn it should be the Elected Members to decide upon which matters should go back to the people."

Mr. Speaker, that was his position then. I am going to show you how the two-faced business comes in.

When he was on this side, he didn't want them to vote. He is on that side now. And I noticed what he did the other day when he was in a quandary, Mr. Speaker, he rustled them all over the place—he sent for them. My former college mate, the gentleman who was my senior at college and now the First Official Member, was sitting in the dentist's chair when he got a call to come and bolster the Minister of Education who was in trouble—come and save him!

So, Mr. Speaker, you tell me. These people who accuse me of being inconsistent should find some other label. They should find some other tactic, because I believe that if push comes to shove, the instances that I have been inconsistent . . . as far as they are concerned, their inconsistencies equate to mine or may even be more if we were to check it out. Maybe that's an assignment I will give myself one of these days when I have more time than I have now, and it would be interesting to bring that to the House.

I believe that proves the point of my saying that the Minister of Education has two faces. It justifies my calling him Janus, the Roman god that had two faces.

Mr. Speaker, there is another point I wish to bring because this comes out in debates and I am really worried about this. The Minister of Education (in speaking to the amendment) said on page 1091, "I am going to show how ill-thought out this motion really is" and he made some reference to the motion being ill-thought out again, where he says (on the next page) "And, I am going to point out the fallacy of the attempt of this motion to try to bring in fantasy words, once again, with the details."

Now, Mr. Speaker, when someone says that a motion—which has been approved by the Speaker—is ill thought out, that really doesn't convey a sense of respect for the Speaker. If I approve something as the authority and someone challenges the approval, they are also challenging my authority. So, if we brought the motion to you and you approved the motion, and Minister of Education says that the motion is ill-thought out . . . that, to my mind sir, is not only a reflection on the mover and the seconder but it is also a reflection on the Chair and that is not to be tolerated in the Westminster system of Parliament.

The minister is out of order for making such a statement on this motion because that is not so. Quite frankly, I am surprised that that minister—who preaches decorum and good behaviour—would cast aspersions on the Chair in that way.

Mr. Speaker, the minister went on (at page 1094), "We are kidding ourselves here if we believe that the United Kingdom, through an Order in Council of the UK, which is a long, tedious process of Her Majesty the Queen sitting in the Privy Council and passing the Order in Council that makes up our Constitution . . ."

Mr. Speaker, when the honourable minister says those kinds of things he is misleading the public because the Privy Council does not function that way.

Her Majesty the Queen does not sit in the Privy Council as he implies, and I am going show that. I am surprised that someone who says that he is so learned does not know how the Privy Council functions!

Mr. Speaker, I would like the Chair's indulgence to draw reference to the World Book Encyclopaedia. Under "Privy Council" it says, "The Privy Council is an honorary council appointed by the Crown of Great Britain. Members of the Privy Council include cabinet members, other political leaders, judges, and scholars. Privy Councillors are selected from all countries of the Commonwealth of Nations that recognise the British Monarch as their symbolic head of state. The title of Councillor is honorary in most cases. Council members become salaried officials only when they are given a place in the Cabinet. The Lord President of the Council is a Member of the British Cabinet. Council members serve during the life of the sovereign who appointed them and for six months after the sovereign's death. The full Council meets on rare occasions such as the beginning of a Reign or when the reigning sovereign announces his or her marriage."

"The administrative work of the Council is carried on through state departments, each department is headed by a Minister responsible to Parliament. The Judicial Committee is the highest judicial authority in the British Commonwealth."

It goes on to say that ". . . members of the Privy Council use the title, Right Honourable, before their names and the letters "PC" standing for Privy Councillors after their names."

Quoting from a text called The Rule of Law, page 326, "An Order in Council is made by the [Queen] by and with the advice of [her] Privy Council and those persons who are present at the meeting of the Council at which the Order was made bears responsibility for what was done there. The Sign Manual Warrants or other document to which the Sign Manual is affixed bears in general the counter signature of one responsible minister or of more than one though it is not infrequently authenticated by some one of the Seals for the use of which the Secretary of State is responsible".

So, Mr. Speaker, I hope that clarifies the little misleading venture that the minister left the House with—the impression that Her Majesty sits as Chair of the Council. Mr. Speaker, you know, for someone who claims superiority, he must do better than this—because I will be on him like a pit-bull every time he makes a mistake. I'll be right at his heels to force him to correct the mistake or I will correct it myself. Now, you have to understand that that minister holds a special responsibility to this country because he is also the Minister of Education. How can he mis-educate?

If the Minister of Education is mis-educating the people and misinforming them, what kind of country are we going to have?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The honourable member is saying that I am misinforming the country and mis-educating. That is misleading. It's untrue.

The Speaker: I need to understand just how you are using that . . . are you referring to what you have just said about the Privy Council or—

Mr. Roy Bodden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, that's what I am referring to. Because he is misinforming the honourable members of the House who represent the people of the country.

The Speaker: The point of order is referred to as the Queen rules the Privy Council and the orders are made by Her Majesty, because it is my understanding that she signs them and it is under her signature. Therefore, whether she is present or not, it is given under her authority. So, I think there is a right on both sides.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be satisfied with that.

The Speaker: What I am really saying is that the decision of the Privy Council is not a decision of the Council unless it is signed by Her Majesty.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I don't have my Constitution with me . . . I will run and get it . . . but if the honourable member looks on the front, it says, "Her Majesty in Privy Council."

I don't know what the member is trying to say I misled on, but there can be no doubt. Now, there is a different Privy Council that deals with appeals. That is called the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council and that is sat on by Law Lords.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, do you know what the problem is sir? The minister can give but he cannot take!

I want to read what the minister said. And I am going to leave this. I don't want him to explain anymore. I am going to leave him with this and he will understand what I said. "We are kidding ourselves [this is the minister speaking on page 1094, 27 September 1999] here if we believe that the United Kingdom, through an Order in Council of the UK, which is a long, tedious process of Her Majesty the Queen sitting in the Privy Council and passing the Order in Council that makes up our Constitution . . ." Mr. Speaker, that is self-explanatory. I will leave that with honourable members. They know that I am right, and I appreciate your ruling and thank you for being a peacemaker.

Now, Mr. Speaker, on that same page, the minister went on, and this is how he put his foot in his mouth. He was talking something about some case that he had lost the Parliament about fifty years before he got to this—about some case with the Suisse Atlantique Société. He went on to say, "And I really don't expect the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town to understand what I am saying but the public will understand the confusion and imprecision that can be brought in with a word."

How true, Mr. Speaker! How true that the public will understand the confusion and the imprecision that can be brought in with a word. What he should have said was, that can be brought in by his words, because the confusion and imprecision in this whole debate has been brought in by his words.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I admit that I don't understand legal jargon because Heaven knows I have never been a legal scholar and Heaven forbid that I would become one if I had to use that honourable minister as my motivation and incentive. But—

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. That was raised because the member persisted in this. The front of the Constitution of the country (and this is where he misled) states, "At the Court at Buckingham Palace, . . . Present, The Queen's Most Excellent . . ."

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, let me finish—

The Speaker: Let him finish his point of order then I will take yours.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: But, Mr. Speaker, you have already ruled on it, and he is bringing it up again. I don't mean to cause any disruption in the House, but who is he?

You have ruled on it. It has moved on, so what is he trying to jump into the argument for? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town is speaking!

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Oh yes!

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was saying, sir, that the Minister of Education has every right to say . . . and I concur with him that I don't understand legal stuff because I have never studied law. But for the Minister of Education to say that I lack basic understanding . . . I am going to set the record straight. I am want to ask him if he holds a master's degree which was gained by dissertation and oral examination of four hours in which he was grilled by the most eminent professors of the university?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I hold a Bachelor of Law degree with Honours from the University of London; I hold an Associate of the Chartered Institute of Bankers in London, which is a degree in banking; I hold a Fellow of the Institute of Credit Management, which deals with credit management; I am also a Fellow of the Institute of Arbitrators in London; I am a fellow of the Institute of Commerce in London; I also attended the Honourable Society of the Inner Temple; I am a qualified barrister; I am a qualified attorney. I also did a post graduate course in Law at the Inns of Court Law School.

If the member is trying to say that I don't know how to do a legal interpretation, I believe my qualifications in law are somewhat better than his are.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I thank the honourable minister. I was proving the point that the minister said I didn't understand what he was talking about. Now, I will leave him with this: Add up all of those degrees he just named out and they still don't equate to a master's degree. He still doesn't have a master's degree. So, if he, holding an inferior position, can say that I don't understand him . . . Mr. Speaker, he is living in a topsy-turvy world.

I proved my point because what he just demonstrated is that he is a jack-of-all-trades but a master none! So he still, Mr. Speaker, as far as I am concerned is a little behind. But let him live in his world. I am not trying to convince him.

Mr. Speaker, that is why we have to be careful what we say when we get intoxicated by arrogance, because these things will come back to haunt us. And the Minister of Education must realise that his position can make him arrogant but it doesn't make him safe because I will challenge him any day with wit—and he cannot outwit me. He cannot! Not even when I am sleeping.

Mr. Speaker, the minister went on to say (at page 1095), "The day any member reaches the stage that he feels he should not consult the public, or that he is not prepared to take the views of the public, then he ceases to represent the public." I wonder if that honourable minister would care to say when last he held a public meeting or any other forum in which he met with members of the public.

You know, Mr. Speaker, unless they had to chase him down and meet him at the back door of the Glass House . . . when you live in a Glass House, you really shouldn't throw stones. That minister comes here term after term and doesn't hold a public meeting. What is he talking about now? I find it paradoxical, sir, that he should set himself up as the paragon of knowledge, virtue, and enlightenment on the referendum when his record shows a reluctance to deal with the public in terms of public meetings or forums of that nature. Mr. Speaker, two faces!

And then he talks about the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town being inconsistent. Mr. Speaker, far be it. The facts speak for themselves.

He went on to say, ". . . the public normally knows what is right and the public will not let them go off and do things with the Constitution . . ." The public will not let them go off and do things with other things as well. But, do you know what the problem is with the Minister of Education? He wants to be boss of everything and everyone and that just does not work anymore. So, if his record is any indication, he cannot set himself up as the great communicator because his record is as poor as a church mouse, as the old adage goes.

If we read the newspaper yesterday, the only grade he has in communication is the communication with an X before it—a great "X-communicator."

Mr. Speaker, this business of sowing fear about politicians . . . he went on (at page 1096), "But, Mr. Speaker, politicians outside of this House . . ." Mr. Speaker, are there politicians outside of this House? I don't know of any. All the politicians in the country are right inside this House.

You see? He must be careful. "All of the politicians outside of this House have always been afraid to go to the public . . ." No, Mr. Speaker, I don't believe that. I don't hear anyone outside of this House calling themselves politicians. They may hold public meetings and hold public forums but I don't see any registered politicians outside of this House as of now.

This business of creating fear by repeating over and over that people want constitutional change when they advocate certain things to improve the social contract doesn't hold water anymore. And I am going to show by an examination of his record that the minister really did not exert as great an effort as he could have exerted to have the referendum. If he were as conscientious as he is trying to let people believe he is now, he would have done so long before now because that honourable minister was first elected in 1976.

He was a Member of Executive Council, but we didn't hear any talk of referendums then. Then he came back in 1980 and he got buried. He came back in 1984 and [again] in 1988, and when he did try to bring it in 1989, when he was on the opposition—he was like I am now: unable to do anything except talk. But in 1992, he got back on Executive Council and the whole referendum talk went dead again till we brought the motion. And now he is trying to take it out of our hands.

But do you know what, Mr. Speaker? He is not getting that because the First Elected Member for George Town has it well within his grasp and he has plenty of help on the backbench. So if he is trying to find a little piece of plank to float in on, it is just like I told him, he had better join up with the First Member for George Town, the Third Member for George Town and the Fourth Member for George Town, or else, when the storm comes he is going to be without political refuge.

He can go and talk to them. I don't have to know. I won't even ask them. And they are so discreet that they are not going to tell me.

[Laughter]

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the minister also said that the motion was shallow because we didn't give sufficient detail of what should have been done. I want to just make a brief reference here from a book called Parliamentary Practice in New Zealand, the Second Edition, authored by David McGee. It says on page 132 in regard to motions, "The inclusion of facts or supporting matter in the notice is limited to essentials and this is a reminder that the proper place to argue the case for the motion is in the subsequent debate, not in the motion itself."

I am going to say that this motion and the last amendment we brought is but an attempt to deliver to the people of the Cayman Islands a social contract enabling them and empowering the people to hold a referendum. To cause a referendum to be triggered by a certain percentage of the electorate being able to petition the government, requesting them to put the necessary measure in place is but one blank in what I call this social contract. The other blanks being Freedom of Information, the Bill of Rights and Fiscal Responsibility, one blank in the social contract.

And civil society going into the 21st Century will demand and expect no less of the representatives of the people than to set this social contract in place. I am happy to have been associated with people of like minds on the backbench who see that our society can only be improved by having a social contract that is understood by all of our citizens, which is accepted by all of our citizens, and which all of our citizens can willingly participate in when the time comes.

Mr. Speaker, this is not about the First Elected Member for George Town, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, or the Minister of Education. This about empowering and enabling our people to have a social contract which will allow them to participate fully in the political, social, and economic life and, by inference, the development of their country. Until the late 1980s nothing had been done to illuminate or inform our understanding of politics and how the country is run, and how best we as a country may address these issues and to instruct us as to how civil society in the Cayman Islands should evolve.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am not longest tenured member in here. There are those who held ultimate responsibility and had ample opportunity to put these things in place. They never did it! And so the move has to come from enlightened persons on this side.

Mr. Speaker, whether you like it or not, the leaders of the future in this kind of thinking are going to be people who are currently on the backbench now—the three members for George Town, the Member for North Side, the First Elected Member for West Bay, myself and others. These people are going to be the spearhead of this business. If the government, in particular the Minister of Education, wants to stand in the way, all I can say is that history will be the judge.

Mr. Speaker, before I leave this, I want to make one comment made famous by Machiavelli, that instructor of princes, and advisor of politicians and kings, who said, "There is nothing more difficult to . . . conduct, or more uncertain in its success, than to take the lead in the introduction of a new order of things."

As I have been reading and researching, I have found that to be true. It is most difficult to try to get through some improvement by what Jean Jacques Rousseau talked about (that famous Frenchman who coined the expression "the social contract") the enlightenment of society. There is nothing more dangerous than to try to get that through—even, Mr. Speaker, when one uses perfectly legitimate means. And we have an example of it right here, where we had to bring an amendment in order to rescue the motion from being twisted, contorted, and convoluted by the Minister who holds responsibility for Education.

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order it is unparliamentary saying that my motion is convoluted, twisted and whatever word he used, and I am asking him to withdraw that, sir.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, I would ask that you withdraw those three words. They are unparliamentary.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, out of deference to the Chair, I am going to withdraw the remark. But I would like to draw the Chair's attention to this fact: When the Minister of Education spoke, Mr. Speaker, and you can check the Hansard, sir, I sat like a diplomat, like a gentleman—

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: He is not going to do it, though!

Mr. Roy Bodden: —like a gentleman, and listened to all he had to say. Now, why is the minister interrupting me at every inopportune moment? because he is not breaking my train of thought.

The Speaker: I just ask you to withdraw the unparliamentary words. That's all, please.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have bowed to your ruling. You know that I have the utmost respect and deference for you, sir. I withdraw.

The Speaker: Thank you very much. Please continue.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Okay, sir. But, Mr. Speaker, I will say this now—and I hope this is unparliamentary since I am on the business of quoting now—I am going to quote from Erasmus who was the sixteenth-century Dutch humanist. He said, "Man's mind is so formed that it is far more susceptible to falsehood than to truth." I am saying that we have a tough job. Those who are promoting truth will have a tough job, according to Erasmus.

Mr. Speaker, the minister has a last chance. We can go to the boiler room, and I take this upon myself to make the suggestion and talk this out because I believe if we resort to that, we might be able to strike a compromise. I believe that the minister indicated that he had a problem in that section of the motion which read, "AND BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT once this amendment is achieved, the Government takes immediate steps to bring to the Legislative Assembly a Referendum Bill setting out the terms and conditions under which referendums may be conducted."

I believe he may have had one other point where he said there was a little difference. Mr. Speaker, believe you me, we are convinced that we are right, but we are not so inflexible or fool hearted that we won't talk—and we have been talking, I believe, for long enough.

When we held a little informal discussion earlier, it was suggested by the Third Elected Member for George Town that this should have gone to a Select Committee. I believe now . . . and the First Elected for George Town conveyed it to him. Well, I indicated that that might not have been the best route and I gave some reasons, but in hindsight, I believe that would have solved a lot of the obstacles and the icebergs that we have since come up against.

Mr. Speaker, the motion that was brought originally was the way we should have gone. The amendments now are the way we should go, and if those of us who are supporting those amendments would lose the vote, we have not lost a battle because I believe that honourable members know (including those on the Government Bench) that the amendments proposed by the mover and second order are correct, and can effect what should be effected without the inconveniences that would occur if we go the alternative route proposed by the Minister of Education.

My position is just as Martin Luther King Jr. said, "The ultimate measure of man is not where he stands in times of comfort and convenience but where he stands in times of challenge and controversy." I seconded the amendment, Mr. Speaker, and I seconded the motion. I have argued sincerely, I believe, in the principles we sought to establish. I am happy to be associated with this effort. It comes from purely altruistic intentions and our objectives are clear.

Certainly, Mr. Speaker, nobody can label the First Elected Member for George Town "unstable," "inconsistent," or "irrational," as I have been labelled. I am happy to have been associated with his efforts and the efforts of my other colleagues on the backbench with regard to putting this motion where the people can truly benefit from the referendum.

Mr. Speaker, I categorically and unequivocally identify myself as one who would like to see a modern social contract put in place in the Cayman Islands where our people have the right to trigger a referendum; where there is a Bill of Rights; where we have transparency and accountability and where we have fiscal responsibility. It is the route our country should go in the 21st Century.

I stand by my position and I will end with this: I would like the hard-liners on the other side to believe that there is a chance for both sides of the honourable House to save face, by considering the option I laid out.

Lastly, I want to dispel any notion that may have been left by the Minister of Education that he is the only saviour the country has when it comes to certain things. Mr. Speaker, the record of honourable members in this Parliament will show that all honourable members here live up to a high code of social, political, and economic responsibility. And, there is no honourable member who is so ill-informed or so power-hungry—to use the famous words of the Minister of Education—that they will take this country down any path that the people wouldn't want to go, or that they will try to take the country there without informing the people.

Mr. Speaker, I want to end on one final note. When it comes to consulting the public, the Minister of Education certainly does not wear the crown because his term in office is characterised by an absence of holding any public forum, either on the television or in public meetings, as we know them. So, when that subject is being discussed, he should discreetly leave the environs. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: I think this would be an appropriate time to take the luncheon break. We shall suspend until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.47 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.00 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

RAISING OF MATTER OF GRAVE NATIONAL IMPORTANCE

EXISTENCE OF A SERIOUS SITUATION AT HER MAJESTY'S PRISON, NORTHWARD

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I crave your indulgence to speak to a matter that I feel is of grave national importance.

Since yesterday, we have been hearing about problems at the prison—and again this morning. We have all seen on national television that a serious situation exists at Northward Prison.

We would propose that we take a break, if necessary, or the Honourable Chief Secretary could inform members on the floor of the House of the situation as it exists. As I said, either from the floor of the House or in camera if he feels that is necessary. I believe it is significantly important to take a break.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, as you know I had already asked your permission to raise the matter of the Prison under Standing Order 11(6).

The Speaker: I would prefer raising that on the adjournment, if that is satisfactory. I think this is a matter of urgency. I would like to get guidance from the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs whether this should be done in committee or what.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, would you please allow me to say what I was saying? You cut me off in my sentence. With all due respect, please allow me to complete my sentence.

The Speaker: With all due respect, as Speaker of this House I told you that I would give you permission under Standing Order 11(6) to raise the matter on the adjournment.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker I am not asking that, but stating that. I was coming to what the First Elected Member for West Bay was saying, if I am allowed to express my thoughts completely.

The Speaker: Please do it briefly, Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: It is my position that a break is not necessary for me to be briefed in regard to what is happening at Northward Prison since it is quite obvious to anyone who has watched the television for the last hour and a half what is happening at Northward Prison.

I would be interested in hearing what steps will be taken to create a permanent remedy to the situation at the Prison. I would be pleased if the Chief Secretary was able to re-establish communication with me, as a member of this House, in regard to that specific Portfolio which I think has broken down.

I do believe that I do have, and have had, a point of view to offer that would assist the Chief Secretary and others responsible for their jobs there. I must remind the House of the private member's motion I brought on Crime and Recidivism, which was not even debated by the government.

So, if I am going to take the time of the House to deal with this particular matter I need to know that my position will be treated very seriously. In other words, my call for specific answers in regard to what has caused the crisis at the Prison and what is being done to solve the problem.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official—

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker if I could before the Chief Secretary speaks—

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you sir.

Rising under Standing Order 12(1) when I asked that the Chief Secretary give an explanation, I would expect that he would inform us of the situation and then perhaps if he is already informed, to inform us of what their plans are. If he can do it here on the floor of the House, as I said, that's okay with me. I think it would be okay with all members. But if it has to be in camera, I have no problem with that.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

STATEMENT BY THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER

SITUATION AT HER MAJESTY'S PRISON, NORTHWARD

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Let me begin by stating what is already known to all members of this House and indeed to the general public in the Cayman Islands—those who have been watching CITN—and that is that a serious incident occurred at Northward Prison this morning.

It began with inmates in one of the prison blocks forcing their way out of that building and into the exercise yard. This was resolved during the course of the morning and then trouble began in one of the other cellblocks, and has escalated to three different areas, at least, within the Prison.

As you know, like other members I have been here today trying to keep abreast of what is going on. During the luncheon break, I instructed the Acting Commissioner of Police to take command of the prison situation. In fact, the Director [of Prisons] had already handed over, as would be the normal case, but I have instructed the Acting Commissioner of Police to take control.

We have all seen a fair bit of what is going on and during the course of the day a fire was started in the laundry area and this has spread to adjacent buildings. I am unable at this stage to say what the damage is. What I can say is that the Acting Commissioner of Police will remain in control pending the outcome of the incident and pending an independent investigation of the circumstances which caused today's incident.

At this stage, I am unable to give specific details. In the meantime, the Director of Prisons and one of the principal officers have been relieved of their duties in the sense that the Acting Commissioner of Police has taken over. The Acting Commissioner is confident that he and his officers, with the cooperation of Prison staff, will bring the incident under control.

I will shortly be leaving the Legislature to return to the Administration Building for continuing meetings. It is therefore difficult to give much more information than this, and I realise that what has been given is very sketchy. However, what I can say is that no inmate has escaped from the Prison. The Acting Commissioner does have the perimeter of the Prison surrounded and every effort is being made to bring the matter under control as quickly as possible.

To my knowledge, there have been no injuries to anyone and we trust that that situation will continue.

Mr Speaker, I am not sure how much more I can add at this time simply because the situation has been ongoing. Thank you.

DEBATE CONTINUES ON PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99 AS AMENDED

The Speaker: Continuing with debate on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended. Speaking on amendment number 2, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker it is not easy to be speaking while the Prison is burning. But since it is obviously a separation in terms of function by way of the Constitution, it is important that the people of the islands know that we are not the ones who are answerable for that particular department.

In regard to the amendment, to the amendment, to the amendment, the people have been asking what this debate is all about. What has caused the debate to prolong itself beyond a week? Why is it that members seem to be speaking two or three times in regard to the same debate?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning mentioned when he first got up to speak on this amendment brought by the First Elected Member for George Town that this amendment was in fact seeking to reverse the first resolve clause that had been passed earlier. I have been known to agree with the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning on many occasions. And I am going to agree with him when he says that perhaps this amendment we are debating at the moment should not really be on the floor of this House because according to Mays [page] 347, it says specifically that the amendment to the amendment is only possible if the first amendment was not voted on yet.

Anyway, you haven't ruled, Mr. Speaker. I will begin to look at the issue as we now have it in front of us—again.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning spoke for a very long time. I was of the opinion that he was being very tedious in terms of his repetition because I felt that he wanted to get one point across—not to the members here so much as to the general public. That is the point he has been making in this country for the last twenty years or so.

The point is that there are certain persons that mean no good for the society. There is a possibility that some of these people are politicians; that these people would want to change the Constitution of the Cayman Islands and the only way they could change the Constitution of the Cayman Islands would be without the people knowing because the people would never allow the Constitution of their islands to be changed in certain ways.

I happen to agree with part of his logic. I agree with the part that says that the people of the Cayman Islands will not allow their Constitution to be changed in certain ways.

I also understand the logic of the First Elected Member for George Town when he brings a motion calling for a referendum, or calling for the people to have the ability to initiate a referendum without having the referendum initiated by any Member of Parliament. In doing this it means that the Constitution of the country cannot be changed without being challenged by the public. The public is now being empowered with the right to challenge any issue that is of national importance that the elected members would like to carry through.

So, spending all of this time confusing people about people's intentions must have a greater purpose. In other words, it must have a political point. And it's the political point that I will deal with; what I think are the political motives behind the minister's taking so long to deal with this to create the fear and suspicion in the minds of the public in regard to the intentions of those of us who abstained or were absent when his amendment to the motion was voted on.

If we can agree that it is or was the intention of the First Elected Member for George Town and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town in bringing this referendum motion to give the people the instrument to hold their elected government accountable and in check, then it is not reasonable for anyone to assume that those persons would want to see the Constitution changed in any back-room or in any secret position.

So the "politicians" that the Minister of Education must be talking about are certainly not those two politicians. He must be talking about other politicians. Since he didn't mention me, I trust that he was not speaking about me. And I do believe that he is talking about politicians on the outside—future people who may be elected to the Legislative Assembly.

But I believe that the fear he has can be taken care of in regard to the motion giving the people the right to initiate a referendum if something is being passed by the Legislative Assembly that they do not agree with. I believe that that can be dealt with. Let's be reasonable. We are all on the same wavelength. The reason it is being portrayed to the public that we are not on the same wavelength is because of the fact that politics in the Cayman Islands for a very long time has relied on the ability of certain persons to see themselves as saviors, while portraying others as villains as regards the stability of the country.

As I said, as we speak in here, the Prison burns. And we wonder why.

Those persons who are responsible for the government of this country ought to be paying more attention to what is happening in the country, rather than trying to be Sophists in regard to debates, trying to construe as if the intentions of members of this House are not honourable intentions.

Why is it that we get 75 people going to the Glass House to meet the Governor to make complaints in regard to overcrowding at the Savannah School, when we are in here debating a referendum motion that we all agree to? Why are we debating it for so long? Why are we not trying to solve the problems in regard to the roads in this country and the education in this country and the prison situation in this country? We are sitting here debating a referendum motion and the country is burning!

We have heard members of the government say many times that they would prefer to be at the Glass House doing their work. Why, then, did the Minister of Education in coming back to discuss this referendum not discuss it in five or ten minutes? Why did he take a whole two days extra, basically, to go through this if all the work he has is so important?

Is it so important that he score a political point in regard to debate here that he plants seeds for his year 2000 political campaign by going back to the people to say to the people that he is the only one in this country who will not change the Constitution?

That minister has agreed and recommended constitutional changes in this country already. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town read that to us. We saw that in 1991 he was a member of that particular committee that looked at the recommendations which were to be made to the United Kingdom for constitutional changes—and he signed and agreed, and recommendations were sent to the United Kingdom and changes were made to the Constitution in 1993.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER (Misleading)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: If the honourable member is saying that I signed the majority report for those recommendations, those changes, that is misleading. The report will show my name, but "SGD," meaning signed, and that is not on it. I put in, as you well know sir, a minority report that did not agree with the majority report. If he is saying that, that's a very serious statement, sir.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for George Town, are you referring to the main report of the committee, or to the minority report? He did not sign the main report.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I am referring to the report. This is the report.

The Speaker: Dated what day?

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I am referring to the Select Committee's Minutes on the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1972. I am referring to the minutes, which were tabled on 28 October 1991 in the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: What particular page are you quoting that the signatures are on?

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, basically what I am saying here . . . it's a big report. But the gist of what I am saying is that it is in the report and the minister did say that he was the one who wanted to put the referendum law in the Constitution, that he was responsible for the fact that we now have a referendum law in the Constitution. Did he, or did he not say so?

The Speaker: That is not a question, that is a fact. What you said was that he signed the report. I was present at that particular time, so I know that he did not sign the report—he signed a minority report along with other members. Please withdraw that.

Dr. Frank McField: I withdraw that. I can only deal with one person at a time. I can only debate one person at a time.

The Speaker: I am not asking you to debate me. I am only stating facts.

Dr. Frank McField: My point is that the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning agreed to constitutional changes in 1991 and that he has admitted in this Legislative Assembly that he so did by saying the reason why we have had a change in the Constitution in regard to there being a referendum law in this country was because he pushed it.

The Speaker: That is fact, no question. But he did not sign the report.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: Facts must be real.

Dr. Frank McField: I am just trying to prove the point that the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning has been involved with the process of changing or recommending the change of the Constitution already. And that is important to portray because it goes to show that by being involved with a process to change the Constitution you are not necessarily an evil person. You don't necessarily have to have slimy terrible motives to change things in the backroom to take away the rights of the people. That's all I am trying to say.

So he has been involved in the process.

There is a possibility that other people will be involved in the same process in the future. But he is saying that if they are going to be involved in the same process that he was involved with in the past, without having a referendum to decide whether or not those Constitutional amendments should be sent to England, that were sent to England back in 1991 to get the constitutional changes we got in this country, that you should have a referendum.

I am asking why there is a need for change in procedure. I am not saying that there shouldn't be, I am just basically asking why, since he is the one who seems to be motivated to suggest that there should be this particular precaution taken because of these dangerous people who lurk on the outside waiting to change the Constitution and take the country towards independence. That is the kind of feeling that he wants to give the people. Why?

What I am saying is that the people know that in this country you can't do very much without them knowing. You would be surprised at the extent of the peoples' knowledge in regard to what goes on in here; what goes on in the Glass House; and what goes on elsewhere.
