Now, if the people find out that the elected members of the Legislative Assembly desire to recommend constitutional change today, the people could not do very much. Do you know why? Because Mr. Truman did not bring in a referendum bill that gives the people the same rights that he was giving the members of the Legislative Assembly. And that's important.

But now, the First Elected Member for George Town, and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town are doing exactly what Mr. Truman should have done back in 1989 or—

The Speaker: Can I ask you to refer to him as the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning?

Dr. Frank McField: I was basically referring to the minutes as it is in the minutes. I do realise that he is the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, and I do realise why it is necessary for me to refer to him in the debate by his position. But the point that I am making is that if you had the opportunity to do something, and you failed to do what you had the opportunity to do; and then you turn around and criticise the efforts of someone who is doing exactly what you should have done, then there is something wrong with that logic.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning had the time, the ability and the possibility to have given the people the right to initiate referenda if he thought it was such a good idea. He had that possibility back in 1991 and in 1993—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: He had the support too.

Dr. Frank McField: And he had the support too if he wanted it. But it was never done.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER
(Misleading)

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The honourable member is misleading the House. What I said in my debate was that I asked for the right for the people of the county to initiate an election and that the United Kingdom would not put it in.

But I definitely asked for that. Obviously I did not have the ability to put it in; it's an Order in Council of the United Kingdom. So he has to be careful going into this area if he does not know what went on at the time, and I would ask for some caution on that so that I do not have to keep taking points of order on saying something that is not true.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for George Town I realise that you were not present in the House at that time, but you are familiar with the process by which the Constitution was amended. But not everything that was said in that Committee was recorded in the Minutes. I can assure you of that. Let us be cautious how we place our words.

Dr. Frank McField: I guess I wouldn't want to use that expression. So let me stay away from other people's phrases.

Mr. Roy Bodden: No, no. That's not nice. You can't do that.

Dr. Frank McField: What I mean to say is that obviously what I am saying here is that it took the Minister of Education—and I think we can prove this by way of public records—this long to get excited about giving the people the right to initiate a referendum. Unless he can show me evidence to the contrary, I believe that my position is a credible one. That's all I am saying.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I think here, there is once again an attempt to mislead the House. I put a [private member's] motion in 1989. That is a fact. I also asked the Commissioners for it in 1991 and, therefore, it is incorrect for him to say that I am only now trying to bring this in. I have tried in the past, sir. And if he says things like that to the contrary, I would ask him to please not go into that because it's not true. I know he wasn't there, but those requests were made then.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for George Town, having been present, I know what went on in the Committee. I beg you to be factual. The amendment that is in our Constitution was made by Her Majesty in Council and that is what we have to live by.

Dr. Frank McField: With all due respect, I know that the amendments are made by Her Majesty. Thank you very much for letting me know this. But I think that I have exhibited already a sufficient knowledge of this process to be aware of that. But because I was not in a room—

The Speaker: Just sit down a minute and let me tell you what I was saying so that you will understand clearly.

What I was saying is that the request for a referendum to be put into our Constitution was made by Privy Council under Her Majesty who made the decision how it was to be worded and it was submitted back to us as a finished deal.

If you are saying that he had from that day forth . . . that is a different story. But, at that particular time, the request was made and the result of what is in the Constitution was what the United Kingdom Government granted.

Dr. Frank McField: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is what I was saying from then until now is that there is no evidence to show that this is the case. Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for assisting me in conceptualising this very awkward situation.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Come on, Tru-Tru. You can't find any more points of order now, or what?

Dr. Frank McField: Anyway, Mr. Speaker, what I am trying to demonstrate to the listening public—because that's what he did—is that we are no more of the desire that we should disobey the wishes of the people than he or anyone else for that matter.

We are politicians (and I will not say that I am not a politician). My goal is to see that people approve of me sufficiently for me to get a sufficient number of votes at the poll. If I don't do what they want me to do then they are not going to vote for me and I will lose my job. I don't believe there is anything that I want to do so badly that I will do it in spite of the fact the people don't want me to do it. I believe that the system works in that sense that we are dependent upon the people, we have to go before the people to get new instructions, new mandates, and that is best done if you give the people the indication that you are willing to serve them and not disobey them.

I believe that the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning knows that no one in this honourable House intends . . . or that the mover of this private member's motion (the First Elected Member for George Town) did not intend to bring this motion in order to give the people less power, but in order to give the people more power. I think that principle has to be established.

I think the fact that the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning got involved with the motion and accepted the motion in part—because all he did was bring amendments to the motion—also proves the good intention of the First Elected Member for George Town. It also proves that the motion was not brought without due thought, consideration and clarity. It was not something that was not thought out or worked out as the Minister of Education suggested, because otherwise he would not have accepted the major principles of the motion.

If you bring an amendment, you cannot change the principle of the motion. That has to remain. And what he did—according to what I understand—was try to strengthen the principle the First Elected Member for George Town was trying to have enshrined in the Constitution. Now, that's an important point.

The First Elected Member for George Town is interested in changing the Constitution, recommending that the Constitution be amended for the specific purpose of giving the people the power to watch over the whole system, rather than just allowing the elected members to watch over the system. So he is saying, 'Yes, in the case where I am giving you the people more power, I will make the assumption that you would agree to the amendment of the Constitution. So I won't have to put a referendum before you because you have already indicated to me that you would like to have the same right to initiate a referendum as we the people you have elected.' So he has made that assumption.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning came along and threw that out. He said you can't assume that the people would want that. But I am for it. The Minister of Education says he is for the referendum, but he will not assume that the people want to be for a referendum. Why does he see the wisdom of his being for a referendum, when he can't see the wisdom of the people supporting us in bringing this referendum?

He wants to then hold a referendum to determine whether or not the people want the referendum. Why is his wisdom superior to the wisdom of the people? If his wisdom is that a referendum is good for the country, which means that the principle of the people being able to initiate a referendum is good for the country . . . if his wisdom suggests that, then it would follow that the people's wisdom would not be contrary to that wisdom.

We also have to understand that if the people had the good sense to elect him, then the people might also have the good sense to realise the goodness in what he is suggesting here—which is that they have the right to initiate a referendum. So there is no need to go to ask the people whether or not they want that right. And the amendment which the First Elected Member for George Town brought back to this motion again goes back to dispute the need for a referendum to be held in order to give the people the right to hold a referendum. That's all the amendment tries to do, because the Minister of Education created a situation by way of his amendment that would require going through a process that would probably take more than a year—which is longer than the life of this parliament.

We won't be here. There will be new people. There will be new elections. We don't know where we are going to be.

Why, then, if we see the sense of something, do we create a process in order for that something to exist that might not make that something possible? I don't want to be rhetorical, but when the good minister went over his points—like a good lawyer, over and over again—the point is that this is a good principle but the process could destroy it. So we want to make sure that we don't handicap the good process of saying that people should have the right to initiate referendums by creating a process that will destroy the possibility of it happening.

There won't be anything too wrong with arguing that if the good Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning is saying that he believes referendums should be held if there is to be any kind of recommendation for constitutional change or amendment, that there should be a referendum. Why is he then making it so difficult to establish the referendum system by calling for a referendum to establish the referendum system? He is calling for a referendum in order to establish this referendum system, yet he is saying that if there is to be any change there should be a referendum. That means that the referendum would have to be called by the elected members, it could not be called by the people.

The good First Elected Member for George Town is saying 'Hey, give the people the possibility to call a referendum, regardless.'

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: You think you alone can do it? Watch this!

[laughter]

Mr. Roy Bodden: Spielmeister!

[laughter]

The Speaker: Perhaps this would this be a convenient time to take the afternoon break. We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.13 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as amended. Debate on amendment number 2. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, it is interesting that on page 1091 of 27 September 1999 Hansard the Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning said, and I quote: "Now, I support the referendum by the people. But I would like now (since this has been amended for the third time) to deal in depth with the problem of putting up a motion that does not have in it sufficient detail to create the clarity that the public requires from a House that makes the Laws of the country."

Knowing that this is a motion and not a law, therefore there is no need for the kind of clarity in the motion. The motion would actually activate the law. The clarity would come from the bureaucracy being set at work to do the necessary investigations to create the kind of legislation that would be understandable and consistent with other principles of law and government.

The motion does not have that ability and he knows that that was not the intention of the motion. The motion was intended to create the debate to get a resolution, a commitment to a particular course of action. So we see how his particular speech on Monday was used to go here and there with the type of argument.

He said, “Let us look at it in some detail because this first amendment is trying to shift the load away from this Legislature back to the Government to then produce a Law.” Well, the Legislative Assembly is actually part of the government. And the government part over there that we elected in 1996—we elected the members of Executive Council—they are responsible for policy. We are responsible for initiating legislation. And what we are doing here is to initiate it and they would then be the ones responsible since they have all the civil service and all the millions of dollars and legal draftsmen and all those people. They would put it together. No one expects that members of the backbench would have the same resources to work with in regard to forming legislation.

So it is again to give the public the indication that we are a little bit sloppy back here and not paying due attention to what it is that we should be paying attention to. In fact, the suggestion would be that we are bringing motions and that we are not bringing the details that should go along with those motions. When in fact, the details will come with the creation of the laws. And that is the job of the government once it has accepted the motion.

Now, I think from a historical point of view we want to mark this particular moment because I think that the Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning has represented a traditional logic which has been his logic—that logic is the idea that he knows best, that he is the good guy; that he is the one who’s logical, that he is the one who is educated, he has the degrees.

When we really look at the actual motion we are arguing about, we find that the entire discussion wanders away from what one might have considered important if there were to be disagreements. The disagreements could be, as the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town mentioned, whether or not the results of the referendum would be mandatory or advisory; what are some of the pros and cons of referendums we have observed historically in countries that have used them. How often have the people used them? What are the costs associated with this particular system? These are issues of finance and management that could have been taken into account in the debate here, but as we saw, the Minister of Education did not bring these types of relevant issues into his debate.

In fact, he is admitting in most of his recent debate that although he supports the concept of a referendum, he doesn’t really know that much about the system. He says on page 1091 of the same Hansard “The way this would now work Mr. Speaker, . . . and let me say that I have no problem with the referendum for the public to initiate it, going in some way other than an amendment to the Constitution, but if it is going in to an amendment to the Constitution, it has to be looked at in depth. And I submit that whenever there is a move, and we heard quite a bit of what I am going to suggest is a move ul- timately to review the Constitution of this country, then maybe at that stage is the time to get the details.

“And, let me say this Mr. Speaker, this type of referendum is one that is used in federal states, normally within the state area and not the federal area such as the States of the United States” . . . and so on and so forth. But here he is saying that he understands the whole question and use of the referendum, and that the particular types of constituted states it is used in all play a role in the particular function the referendum will have. In other words, we cannot just use the word “referendum” and say it’s good or bad by itself. It has to operate within a particular environment—a constitutional environment, a political environment, an economic environment—and therefore the outcome of what a referendum will produce from a point of view of the democratic system will be determined by factors other than by the principle of the fairness and democratic nature of the referendum.

I suggested that I had apprehension because I had not gone through all the details, and I still felt that my agreeing with it was based more on the fact that it had become obvious to me that this was what the people wanted, rather than my having been able to examine the system of referendum to make sure that it was perfect enough for me to recommend strongly at this particular point.

The point of saying this again is because the Minister of Education said that he supports this. But the amendment brought by the First Elected Member for George Town has deleted the requirement of a referendum in order to change the constitution, in order to give the people the right to initiate the referendum.

This is where the Minister of Education seems to be making his play. He is saying that if you are going to change the Constitution then you need to have a referendum to change the Constitution. I think it is also important why you are changing the Constitution, how you are changing the Constitution, what kind of change you are making; and these very abstract uses of the word “change” and things like that do not serve us well in the political arena. Just as he took the word “fundamental” and said that the First Elected Member for George Town used the word fundamental “an imprecise word” (as if any word is precise) . . . any word can be imprecise depending upon the person who is responding to the word. The Sophists are not dead. Words that you thought meant one thing could mean something completely different, depending upon the interpretation of the person using the word.

If he is saying that to change the Constitution you need to have a referendum, and his big disagreement with the First Elected Member for George Town is that he would agree to a change in the Constitution only after a referendum, . . . I believe that the First Elected Member for George Town is saying that it is so obvious that the people want a change in regard to their right to initiate the referendum, that the people would want a change in the Constitution to allow this to happen to entrench it and to make it permanent.

That gives the people more rights. That expresses a trust from the point of view of the First Elected Member for George Town of the people that is so immense and so complete that he is willing to have it entrenched in the Constitution. Just like his right as an elected member to initiate a referendum is entrenched in the Constitution, you are making the people and their elected officials equal in regard to their right to initiate a referendum, without holding a referendum.

That is all that has been debated in here over the days, and days, and days, and days, and people have cast aspersions and suggested things and created fear. But basically, that is the crux of the matter. That is the source of this dispute. One side is saying that they would like to have the referendum. But if we have it it has to be entrenched in the Constitution. But to entrench it in the Constitution we have to amend the Constitution and we will not do that until we ask the people whether or not we should do it, and this will have to be done by way of a referendum.

The other side is saying it is so obvious that the people want the right to initiate the referendum that we can change the Constitution to allow them to initiate the referendum without holding a referendum.

That side is saying, simply because of the length of time that process would take could destroy the possibility of us being able to entrench in the Constitution the right for the people to initiate the referendum, it could do it simply because this House only has 13 months left. It could do so because it would cost a lot of money to go through the whole mechanics of establishing the register of voters' names, and basically the referendum process would be in terms of people voting, in this particular case very similar to a general election.

The country would have to afford that at a time when the country needs to build a new prison, at a time when the country needs to spend money on education because the schools are overcrowded. The government has all kinds of expenses in regard to roads that need to be built, and people are talking about low-income housing. And the government is talking about spending money in a case where it is obvious that the people want something!

If it's so obvious that the people want something, why are you going to take the badly needed resources to spend to establish the fact that the people want something?

What would happen? Would people campaign against the people saying "yes" to the idea that they want the right to initiate a referendum? And in order for that to be a permanent right it would have to be enshrined in the Constitution, and in order for it to be enshrined in the Constitution the Constitution would have to be amended.

It is not as if the Constitution has not been amended before, and it is not as if the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning was not involved in a process that led to the Constitution being amended before. So to find that there is something suspicious about the amending of the Constitution is to really get fish out of flies.

I would like to refer to his minority report in this [Minutes of Meetings of the of the Select Committee. . . to Review the (Constitution) Order, 1972] report of the 1991 Session of the Legislative Assembly. He said that others signed this, but they said: "We remain committed to the recommendations made by the majority of Members of the Select Committee and presented to the Constitutional Commissioners on 10th January 1991, as 'Recommendations on Changes to the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1972, to the United Kingdom Constitutional Commissioners.'"

In this recommendation the members decided, "Ministerial Form of Government: The Committee wishes to see a 'gradual moving into a ministerial system of Government, and considers it prudent to make provisions in the Constitution.'"

"We feel that it is sufficient that the Members become Ministers with administrative responsibility for the departments under their portfolio. Section 9(1) of the Constitution should include the words 'including responsibility for the administration of any department of Government' similar to that provided in the Turks and Caicos Islands Constitution section 12(1), and British Virgin Islands Constitution section 18(1).'"

Now the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning cannot deny the fact that he is a signatory to this recommendation which talks about a constitutional change that would also mean ministerial responsibility—

Mr. Roy Bodden: To administrative responsibility.

Dr. Frank McField: To administrative responsibility.

Mr. Roy Bodden: It's not a fundamental change and he didn't need a referendum for that.

Dr. Frank McField: So there was no document in this suggesting that he was advocating any kind of referendum for that to happen at that particular time. So why is he advocating that there be a referendum to give the people the right to hold a referendum? Why didn't he advocate that there should be a referendum to give the members of the Legislative Assembly the right to initiate a referendum? Why is he only advocating that there be a referendum to give the people the right to initiate the referendum?

I think at the end we can see that we on this side are with the people and will take every opportunity to correct the misunderstanding that might be created by these lengthy debates which are primarily used for political one-upmanship.

Mr. Speaker, I think that you have come—

HOURLY OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 AM tomorrow.

The Speaker: Before putting the question, I indicated earlier that I had given permission to the Fourth Elected Member for George Town under Standing Order 11(6) which reads: “On a motion moved under paragraph (5), a Member who is not a Member of the Government and who has obtained the right to do so, may raise any public matter for which the Government has responsibility, in order to elicit a reply from a Member of the Government responsible for the matter. After not more than twenty minutes, the Member of the Government shall be called on to reply.”

I call to the member's attention that the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs is not in the Chamber and I don't know whether you would want to go ahead with this motion or not. But I gave you permission so you may proceed.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

RAISING OF PUBLIC MATTER Standing Order 11(6)

SITUATION AT NORTHWARD PRISON

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, when I spoke to you this morning, I had decided to, with your suggestion, not to mention what was happening at the prison today. Of course, at that time what was happening at the prison was mild compared to what has happened at the prison. The entire country knows and therefore my saying what is happening there doesn't give them any more information than what the television has been continuously giving them all day. I think that most members of our society are conscious of what is happening there.

But I am not going to talk about what is happening at the prison. I am going to talk more about what has to happen as the prison in that I believe that when I brought the private member's motion regarding crime and recidivism it was a good opportunity for us to sit down and begin to discuss how we are going to deal with the question of crime; how we were going to deal with the public outrage regarding crime.

What happens is that public outrage with a particular behaviour causes punishment to be initiated by the judiciary and causes persons to be sent to Northward to be incarcerated. The rate in which it is happening today, because of the good police detection we have in our society they are apprehending people much faster. So more people are coming before the courts. And if we look at the statistics we received from the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs, we see the number of persons aged 17 to 25 committing crimes involved in possession of ganja . . . numerous persons involved.

We know that certain people suggest that this is not just a crime that is loosely considered bad behaviour, but this is a crime that is also associated with a sub-cultural type of behaviour pattern. It is not as easy to get rid of as we think because we do not attack the culture which causes it to happen, we basically extract the person who has committed the crime, incarcerate the person at Northward where they find what they were smoking before and continue to do it. So the cycle continues.

We have not found a way to challenge the way in which the person is continuously returned to an environment that continues to fuel their desire and ability to break the law.

What should we change? Should we change the law? Should we change the person's behaviour? There are two fronts we can work on, Mr. Speaker. But it is important that the government of this country realises that regardless of what the prison can accomplish, unless our society accomplishes more than it has accomplished until now, we will have problems.

If the judicial system is not given the possibility to be flexible and imaginative in regard to its sentencing policies, we will have the entire system clogged up. What it appears to me has happened is that there seems to be a lack of foresight. If we are going to have the police organised as well as they are, and equipped as well as they are; and if we have these patterns in our society where people will commit these crimes and will be sent to court, and from court will be sent to Northward . . . after a while we will have overcrowding at Northward.

There are about 308 people at Northward today, and it was built to house 168. I would just like to read a brief thing about the negative social outcomes of overcrowding: “Overcrowding in general, and multiple bunking in particular, has negative impacts on the social relations and interaction within the prison environment. Perceptions about fear and consistent rule enforcement and intimate satisfaction are less favourable following double bunking. The tendency for higher levels of aggression and violence is increased in crowded surroundings. There is stiffer competition for resources in crowded institutions. Such resources include wash-room availability, library books, television lounge seating, and recreational materials. As a result, tension, boredom, conflict and violence all increase.

“Rule and disciplinary infractions increase as social density increases. [The number of inmates living in an area is considered to be the social density] Inmate assaults on inmates, and inmate assaults on staff increase as overcrowding increases in an institution.” There, in a nutshell is part, of the situation we are dealing with.

I have tried on some occasion on my Public Eye programme to register my concerns in regard to Northward Prison. I have tried, by bringing this private member's motion on crime and recidivism, to say that I wasn't trying to criticise or chastise anyone but I felt that unless we understood the dynamics involved in creating the criminal elements in our society, and perpetuating those particular elements in creating a subculture out of those elements that could challenge the authority of the society as a whole we were going to be in difficulties.

I am therefore asking that members of the Legislative Assembly, that members of the government, that those persons directly responsible for the administration of Northward Prison take into view the breakdown of social control which has led to the breach of order in this country, and that something be done to repair this, and that the persons who are punished for this should not just be the people who are punishing in Northward at the moment.

This member can say that he has tried to bring to the attention of the relevant authorities—on many occasions—the fact that this breach was going to occur.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you very much for giving me this opportunity to air my feelings.

The Speaker: In view of the absence of the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs, if he cares to reply I shall reserve his right.

Also, yesterday afternoon the Elected Member for North Side moved a motion on the adjournment. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning has advised me that he received it late and will make his reply at a later date.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99
AS AMENDED

REFERENDUM LAW

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I tried before the adjournment yesterday to assist in clarifying misunderstandings that may have developed with regard to the motives behind the bringing of Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 to the Legislative Assembly, and with regard to the present amendment to this motion, which calls for the people to be given the right to initiate referendums without there having to be a referendum to establish this right.

I had taken the position that on both sides of this honourable House there seemed to be agreement with the principle that the more the people can be involved with the democratic process the more fulfilling that process. The attempts by the Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning to suggest that there are some divisions with regards that particular principle by using the present amendment to the motion to suggest this—by implying, in fact, that those of us that would want to support this present amendment to allow for referendums to be called in cases when fundamental changes were being made to the Constitution only.

Mr. Speaker, the fact that the first part of the motion would give the people the right to initiate referendums means that they could initiate referendums in any case, including when the elected members of the Legislative Assembly were initiating changes to the Constitution, be they minor or major changes, which means fundamental changes or minor changes. So, by the first part of this resolution, the people would be enabled and empowered to make decisions by way of the referendums whether or not they were [minor] changes or fundamental changes. So, to say that it is the attempt of anyone here to suggest or cause it to come into being that the Constitution could be changed without the people being consulted takes away some of the sense of this entire exercise.

I think it is important that we realise that if the people want to initiate a referendum—once they are given the right to do so with regards minor changes to the Constitution—that they can do so. What is important here is that this does not tie the government down in cases where there might be minor changes to hold a referendum in order to make those minor changes. But it certainly does not mean that the people cannot hold a referendum with regards minor changes to the Constitution if that is what they wish.

This clarification is a necessary part of what we need to understand and look at, and forget about the political rhetoric and the attempt to create fear and suspicion. Let us look at what this motion really is saying as it is amended. The motion is saying, first of all, that it wants to give the people the right to initiate a referendum, but in order to achieve this it has to amend the Constitution to put that possibility in there.

The original motion when it was amended by the Minister of Education was saying that the people should have the right to initiate referendums but only after there was a referendum to decide if they wanted that right. He was basing his arguments on the premise that because this would go in the Constitution that in order to change the Constitution we should have a referendum, which deviates from his previous principles of recommending constitutional amendments as in the case of 1991 and 1993. So, he has a new position and he needed to have explained to the country why that position is been taken up this time.

It would appear that the reason why he is taking up this position is that he is suspicious that there might be forces in the dark background that [might] be lurking to change the Constitution without consulting the people.

The most important empowerment of the people, the most important consideration of the importance of the people is the suggestion by the First Elected Member for George Town that the people be given the right, and that right be enshrined in the Constitution, that they can call a referendum when they so desire to do so within the guidelines of the law that will be later developed. This is more important to the people because they are given the instrument by which to scrutinise and to curtail, if necessary, acts by elected members that are considered to be against the will of the people or against the good sense of their conservative tradition.

Now, let us therefore see that to use the word "fundamental" (as the Minister for Education says) . . . how would we be able to decide when the change to the Constitution is fundamental? In other words, he is saying that all changes to the Constitution are "fundamental" changes. Therefore, if all changes to the Constitution are fundamental changes, it doesn't make any sense to say that there should be a referendum when the change is fundamental. But what we are seeing is that there are two parts of the motion and when put together it creates the same language.

In other words, take the first resolution, "BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government takes the necessary steps to cause section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1993, to be amended to allow the electorate to initiate a referendum . . ." So, once that resolution is placed with the third resolution, "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgement on a single issue of immediate relevance and that any fundamental change to the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments" It doesn't say after a referendum initiated by the people, it says after a referendum. And since the Legislative Assembly is making this particular pledge, it would mean that they would be pledging to initiate a referendum to make any change to the Constitution that would be fundamental. But the first part of the resolution, which gives the people the right to initiate a referendum anyway, would allow the people to be able to initiate a referendum if the government did not initiate the referendum itself.

So, what we seem to be arguing is the easy part of the entire process. We should have been talking more about the substance of the referendum procedures and we have failed to do so. We have, therefore, taken away from the concrete and dynamic issues and we have taken certain principles, abstracted them and have begun to use these principles to beat up on one another to show that somehow some of us are less worthy than others.

Mr. Speaker, I think that I have made it clear that the amendment which has been brought by the First Elected Member from George Town is a cautious, conservative approach to solving the predicament which we are attempting to solve. We are attempting to give the people more power without tying the system down rigidly where it would have no ability to move on its own. Where the Legislative Assembly would give up its independence to be able to do certain things.

Democracy does not mean that one institution must give up its independence but that we realise the interdependency between the different institutions. There is interdependence between the people and their Parliament. Parliament could not exist without the people; the people could not exist without the Parliament. But we are not saying that in order to safeguard the rights of the people that we should take away the independence of the Parliament in order to do certain things that the Parliament should have the right to do and the Parliament has had the traditional right to do.

Traditionally, the Legislative Assembly has been allowed to make recommendations regarding amendments to the Constitution. For the Minister of Education to now say that this tradition should be changed, is a very radical and what I consider a very irresponsible suggestion.

The Speaker: I would ask you to withdraw "irresponsible."

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw that. I wasn't so sure about the word.

The Speaker: It is unparliamentary. Thank you. Please continue.

Dr. Frank McField: You are welcome, sir.

So, if the tradition has been to allow this, departing from a tradition without giving good reasons why that tradition (that has worked so well in the past) can now longer work. . . I would call on the members of government who feel that they would like to support this amendment, to support this amendment in good faith.

They are giving the people maximum rights, maximum sovereignty, maximum ability to police the parliamentary system. But at the same time they are not tying the parliamentary system down to go to the people and ask the people each time for the right to do what under the agreement, under the social contract with the people, should be acceptable in the first place.

I am saying that the social contract between the people and their elected members implies politically, morally, legally and otherwise, that the people who are elected should be able to make minor alterations in any aspect with regard to the institution that they are in charge of without consulting the people. This is already a mandate that is given to the people by the election process—and there can be no more democratic process than the election process—that the same referendum process must be using the democratic process, anyway.

All we are doing is duplicating repeating and wasting resources, especially at a time when we so badly need our resources to upgrade our social infrastructure. We should not become so paranoid and so fixated on these political points that have been delved into for so long by the Minister of Education with regards this whole concept of constitutional change.

I am asking, therefore, that people look at the argument in logical perspective. Remember their tradition and remember that there is a trust between the people and the elected representatives—that the elected representatives have for umpteen years in this country attempted no changes that were not approved by the people, and that there is no good reason to assume that this will be the case now. Therefore, to put in the motion, the way in which it was amended by the Minister of Education, would only create and institutionalise a division and distrust between the people and its elected representatives and will curtail the independence of the Parliament.

I am, therefore, asking that this point be given serious consideration and that we vote in favour of the amendment brought by the First Elected Member of George Town to his original motion because this amendment has given us the possibility to put this motion back where it belongs. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I don't intend to be long on this amendment. I think I put my case as best as I could have in speaking earlier. But the Minister of Education has thrown so much irrelevance into the debate that it behoves me to say a few things at least.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Education put forward an amendment that has said that even for any consequential amendment that may be needed, we must have a referendum. It's no question what he is trying to do. His motion is very precise but I believe it's impractical and unnecessary to get what is desired.

The Minister of Education went pretty far to set out his case about judicial interpretation of the words "fundamental" and "consequential." But everyone knows when we say consequential . . . when we talk about a consequential amendment what it means. A consequential amendment would mean, for instance, if we had to change the words from "British Dependent Territory" to "Overseas Territory," British Dependent Territory being the wording of the Constitution, and the United Kingdom Overseas Territory will be what the new wording is. That would be consequential, and those words are in the Constitution and will have to be changed.

But if the danger in doing what the Minister of Education is asking is that we would have to go to the referendum to formulate a referendum whether on the old voter's list or on a new voter's list (because you could not disenfranchise anybody), you would have to go through all of that to get a referendum to say whether these consequential amendments would be necessary and whether the people agreed for us to change the Constitution on those items—just the wording.

A fundamental change would be where the Leader of Government Business appoints his Ministers rather than they being elected. That would be fundamental to the working of the Constitution because when you use the word "fundamental," and you use the word "consequential," it is to the working of the Constitution that you are talking about—nothing else. But you see, the whole thing is that the United Kingdom would know that and it is they who would have to agree. It is they who would have to do the amendment.

The people in this House are not judges to interpret laws with precision, as he said. We make laws and the honourable court interprets those laws. But what is true is that you cannot compare the Courts and the Legislative Assembly in this instance. You cannot! I believe (and this is my opinion) that no court should encroach on the legitimate discharge of the constitutional function of any legislature. As much as any legislature must exercise responsibility and restrain in the exercise of its powers so as not to encroach also on the legitimate discharge of constitutional function by any court.

Mr. Speaker, the United Kingdom, the supreme power of these islands, is the authority that will say, "Aye" or "Nay" on whether something is consequential or fundamental—not a court. It is the United Kingdom that we would go to, not a court. They would have to agree to the changes and know full well if the changes that are being asked for are of something of a consequential or fundamental nature. When they are asked to make changes to the Constitution, they put everything together and they come up with the amendment. We don't formulate it; they formulate it. Nobody down here formulates the amendment; it is the United Kingdom that will formulate the amendment. Or, if you even submit something, they will certainly tell you whether it is right or wrong or whether they agree. They will put it together and they will come up with an amendment.

So, I stress, Mr. Speaker, they would know when something is fundamental or consequential. I had to listen to the Minister of Education as he went on and on about the judicial review. "The Representatives of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, the Commonwealth Magistrates' and Judges' Association, the Commonwealth Lawyers' Association and the Commonwealth Legal Education Association, meeting at Latimer House in the United Kingdom from the 15 to 19 June 1998, recalled the renewed commitment at the 1997 Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting at Edinburgh to the Harare Principles and the Millbrook Commonwealth Action Programme . . ."

This is what they said, "The legislative function is the primary responsibility of Parliament as the elected body representing the people. Judges may be constructive and purposive in the interpretation of legislation, but must not usurp Parliament's legislative function. Courts should have the power to declare legislation to be unconstitutional and of no legal effect. However, there may be circumstances where the appropriate remedy would be for the court to declare the incompatibility of a statute with the constitution, leaving it to the Legislature to take remedial legislative measures."

So, Mr. Speaker, in spite of the reading of the court cases that existed for fifty years, it tells you that the modern thinking in the Commonwealth is as I have said, no court would encroach on the legitimate discharge of the situational function of any legislature and we must not do the same.

So, Mr. Speaker, I don't believe that what he put forward as any legitimate concern about judicial review would hold water in this day and age, not the way that legal minds are thinking in the Commonwealth. I believe that the problem the Minister of Education is finding himself in is that with the reforms that are taking place, certain changes in the Constitution will have to take place as we have been told. Does he want that? I believe that he realises that. Not saying and giving him his due that he hasn't been against serious constitutional advancement because he has, but I believe that's the problem the Minister is facing.

We might as well come out and tell the public the truth. I listened to the Minister and I had to say that the Minister . . . you could see how much he was in trouble and he was at sea in putting forward his views because he back-pedalled several times on his different points in his contribution. He got so frightened when he started talking about serious changes in the Constitution, and politicians being afraid to ask the public, that when he was challenged, he said he was not talking about politicians in the House, he was talking about politicians outside and that's who we will have to be concerned about. That was one of the most hypocritical statements that he has ever made in his life because he knows that he was talking to this Honourable House and it was us—everybody in here—that he was throwing that at. But when he was challenged he could not stand up. If he could, he would have said, 'look I am talking to you or I am talking to the next man'.

I don't believe that anybody in his right mind is going to do anything that is of danger to this country when it comes to constitutional changes. But it is obvious, Mr. Speaker, from all that has taken place in this country—and it is obvious what has taken place right now that we are faced with that we need certain constitutional changes. If that makes me lose a vote, so be it. But I have a conscience to live with and I have always been honest to the public I serve and I have always tried to be a practical person because I do not have the university education that they like to boast of, so I have to practical.

[Inaudible comment]

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Yes, I don't have all those 30 something degrees.

But the truth is, and let's use an indication, whether the Minister likes it or not . . . what we are facing now is because we have been told so often that we have to be humane in our approach in dealing with the prison. We have to do this; we have to do that. And, why do we have to do so? Because the United Kingdom does it. But if we have the cahoonies that we are supposed to have, and should have stood up a long time ago and talked about, Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: I think that, that is an unparliamentary word. Please withdraw that.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Which one, sir?

The Speaker: Cahoonies!

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: All right, sir. If they had the gumption, we would have stood up long time ago and put our feet down as men and women, and said, 'look, this is our island and our home and we have to do what we feel is best for us'. If that takes constitutional advancement or if that takes a "consequential" amendment then it would have to be done.

Just suppose, Mr. Speaker, that the Constitution was framed so that we could not do anything about the uprising in the prison and his motion had gone through—do you know what we would have to do? You would have to go to the public via referendum and say, 'ladies and gentleman, do you want me to do something about this situation at the prison?' The public would have to come out in droves and say, yes or no. That is why I have always been concerned about his resolution.

I say again to the Minister, I understand what he is saying but I am not going to vote for it because it is impractical, costly and unnecessary. We don't need it. And, I am not going to be a hypocrite. I cannot support that and I am not going to vote for it, sir, and I hope that when we get to that point you will put those different resolve sections—if that is where we get to. I am not going to support that because it is not right for this country. The only people that are going to be hurt out of this shenanigan that the Minister of Education [proposed], is the people of this country.

Mr. Speaker, I said I would be brief and I believe I have covered the areas I needed to cover. The amendment as proposed by the First Elected Member for George Town is saying that for any fundamental change, we would have to go to the public. The amendment as moved by the Minister of Education has said for even any consequential amendment we must have a referendum—any change whatsoever. Whether the prison is burning down or not, we had to go referendum.

Now, Mr. Speaker, does this House want to bind itself? Each Member of this House has to ask himself that question. If there is something that is happening and you don't know what will ever crop-up in the life of a government—we all know that. We never expect certain things to happen. But if something was to come up that we needed to put right immediately but couldn't because of that amendment—is that what members would want? I don't believe that members want that.

Mr. Speaker, as I said, the people are asking to have more say in the affairs of the country. They want to be able to say yes or no on certain issues, and we want to give them that authority through a referendum. If the Minister of Education is supporting that (and that's what he said he is doing) then why not give it to them without cluttering up the process?

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) If no other member wishes to speak does the honourable mover of the amendment to the motion wish to wind-up?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have some points that I wish to address before I wind up meaning winding up on the two most recent amendments.

The Speaker: Amendment (No. 2).

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the first point that I want to make is this: Ten minutes ago, if this backbench were minded to do so, there was a quorum in this House and we could have wound these amendments up in very short order, where you would have had to because of procedure—

The Speaker: I would have.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: You would have had to because of procedure—

The Speaker: Not had to, but I would have.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, sir. Okay, sir. You would have called for the vote for these amendments and these amendments would have passed.

Now, I make the point simply to say this: It is not just about these amendments passing, sir. We are convinced that there is merit to the amendments. We are also convinced that it is important for the electorate of this country to have a full understanding of what is happening right now. While we are not totally convinced, we are hopeful that the government on their own volition will see the good sense that we are trying to put forward, sir.

So, it is not just to be able to walk from these hallowed halls and say, 'we won a victory' because we are taking the view that while the government has taken a position, we want for this to end in a manner that is satisfactory and in the best interest of the people of this country.

Let me explain so that we can try to get to where it is all at. The only real argument that we have about the motion and its amendments, and its further amendments to those amendments, is this argument: For whatever reason (and I have to have a long prayer while I am talking to decide how far to go and what I do and what I say but I will eventually decide) the Minister of Education has chosen this opportunity to try to arrive at a point in this legislature where certain fears that he, and perhaps other, have had with regard to constitutional advancement in this country can be allayed through the second amendment that he put forward, the last resolve in the amended motion.

Mr. Speaker (and he doesn't have to get nervous because I am going to be fair), given his experience he believes that there are individuals who, if given the opportunity of being part of a government, might wish to put forward amendments in the Constitution to London, which will call for certain advancement of the Constitution. That is the minister's fear. Now, if he was careful about talking about it and if I was at the beginning, I believe the time has come to lay it on the line. That is his fear. And, I want to give him his just due by saying that maybe by his experiences, his fears are not unfounded. No problem! I understand all of that.

Now, he played around a little bit, Mr. Speaker, as he cannot resist on most occasions. But as I just said, I firmly believe that it is for those reasons why this last resolution has been pitched into the fray here. So, the minister also knows that I respect his fear, and that he and I will never do battle based on the principle of his fear—the minister knows that. But, you see, the minister and whoever and whatever he has access to because of his legal background needs to sit in on the stand that even without a legal background there has to be room for us to talk.

Now, let us come down to compare what the minister is saying and what we are saying. We have brought into the last amendment of the minister's last resolve in the amended motion where instead of simply saying (and I won't even bother to look for it to find the right wording because I know what it means), 'Any amendment whatsoever that may be proposed to London with regard to any change to the Constitution, before any such thing is done, we must take whatever we wish to propose to London to the people'. The minister is saying, 'whatever that is, that's what we must do.'

Now, I am saying to the minister—and I am sure with all the papers in front of him that he is still listening, I am sure of that—right now, listen, I understand you. I do not have a problem with what you want to achieve but from where I sit . . . and, Mr. Speaker, this is nothing to do with legal jargon or referrals or whatever, but I want him to understand and hear what I am saying because we might be able to solve the problem.

The minister is basing his argument, as far as I can see through the wording of his amendment, on the principle that any amendment put forward to London to be made in the Constitution would be perfect at all times. Not only well thought out but also thought out perfectly at all times. For him to say that any amendment has to go to the people, he has to be basing his argument on the premise that whenever you propose an amendment, you wouldn't make a mistake. And if you even made a mistake between here and London, it is going to be cleared up. He has to be basing his argument on that because otherwise he would never want us to be in that kind of position.

Now, perhaps in his own experiences (and he has said so in his debate) whenever there has been any amendment to the Constitution, it has been well thought out, it has been properly done and there has been no problems with it. Perhaps, if you check back historically every one that has been done was done in that manner. But I am still saying that it is not impossible that a mistake can be made. That's all I am saying—a mistake can be made.

I cannot work on the premise because my God has told me from a long time ago that I am [not] perfect, neither is any other man. So, to roll it up, you see, it seems—

The Speaker: I am trying to understand.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Sorry?

The Speaker: I am trying to follow you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Okay, I am sure the minister does at this point in time.

You see, Mr. Speaker, there is an argument coming forth that because I have chosen the word "fundamental," instead of simply leaving it to any amendment whatsoever. . . . Now, let me explain after all that has been said about the word "fundamental," what I mean by "fundamental."

I am going to explain now and I am going to see whether the intention is genuine or not. I am going to put it to the test right now. Regardless of who looked up in the book and how many court decisions and how many references they drew to this thing and that thing, and all that the minister mentioned, I am going to tell him and rest of the world what I mean. I am going to use it by example.

In 1992, amendments to the Constitution that were proposed and accepted by London (under which we operate right now in this Honourable House) were two items done in February 1992. They came into effect in September 1992. The two amendments were (1) that the number of elected seats in this Honourable Legislative Assembly be increased from twelve to fifteen. That means in the 1992 elections, instead of having twelve seats available, we had fifteen seats available. Now that, sir, in my view, given all of our arguments, could be termed a "fundamental" change.

But as a result of that, automatically the second change that was proposed At that time, we had twelve elected and three official, meaning fifteen total in the House. With the new amendment proposed in 1992, it meant that we would have had fifteen elected and three officials bringing the total to eighteen. When we had our fifteen members in the House, our quorum was seven but the minute that we talked about eighteen, automatically we realised that we couldn't have a quorum of seven anymore because there would be a minority forming the quorum, so that changed to eight. Okay? Now, that was done.

I am speaking hypothetically now. What happens if in the future when we look at the workings of the government, Mr. Speaker, we see where the Ministry of Education has become so huge and the demands so great that no matter how good that person is, one minister cannot handle Education, Aviation and Planning? You also have your Ministry of Health, which has grown tremendously and you might find that circumstance also. You realise that five elected members are insufficient for the government to operate and work properly and you need to have six elected members so that you can create another ministry, so that you can have more staff and for administrative purposes you can be more efficient. Because you are operating in such an inefficient manner that the little bit of money that it would have cost you for more staff or whatever else, you are losing ten times as much as that because of inefficiencies.

So, the country decides that it needs to increase its membership in here. Again, I am speaking hypothetically. We move then from fifteen to eighteen members and we and we go through the whole process. We decide to go to the people and ask them, because we have explained our case and we sold the idea to public and we asked them, 'Does the public agree that we should increase the membership to eighteen because we need six elected members?' We went through all of that process.

The public agrees, and we go through a referendum and the public says, yes. We go to London, and London says, yes. So, we get a sixth ministry. We have eighteen elected people at that point in time and the next election we get eighteen people elected and we elect six ministers at that point in time. But for some ungodly reason unknown to any one of us, no one remembered that our quorum has to change. Unlikely, as I said, but not impossible, Mr. Speaker. I am just using that as an example.

Now, all I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is if that were to happen (as unlikely as it may seem) is anybody telling me then that just to be able to correct that measure (because our membership increased automatically our quorum will have to increase) we have to go back to have a referendum for the people to tell us, 'yes, you need to increase your quorum?' That's what I am trying to say. Unlikely but not impossible.

Perhaps, I am not good enough to think of ten other hypothetical situations like that, but I am sure given the time and if I really wanted to wait until next year and argue it through, I could do it. But I don't really see the need to have to go through all of that.

Now, with what I am saying, Mr. Speaker, if we accept that, as unlikely as it may seem, it is possible. All I am saying whether they want to argue "fundamental," or whether they want to do whatever they want to do, or say whatever they want to say, all I am saying is that I would like to see it. And others are arguing the same case. They would like to see it, as I would, done in such a way that you are not tied with those kinds of circumstances.

The minister must admit that the way his wording has it, that's what would have to be done because his thing says "any changes." There are no conditions whatsoever attached that would allow for any types of change that does not warrant a referendum to be done without having a referendum. That is my argument.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if what I just said is understood Well, I don't really need to tell you because I know you are going to be listening but if what I just said is understood, Mr. Speaker, then let's not fight over it. If the minister needs for me to stand up on the floor of the House and say to the rest of the world, 'Look, he can word a motion or an amendment better than Kurt,' I will do that. I don't have a problem with that. Because, you see, Mr. Speaker, I don't boast anything except a heart and I know even he cannot beat me for that!

All I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that if there is a way for us to accomplish that so that we are comfortable we would not be tied in that fashion then we can agree to do it. How it has to be worded I am not standing here and saying, because they can word it better than I can. If he wants to take the position that they know better, they can use all the legal terms in world they want, but we are going to be here a long time over this because I have one more time at it. That is not a threat. But I mean that from the bottom of my heart because I believe in what I am saying and nothing that has been said has told me that I am wrong. Nothing!

The first amendment (from listening to the minister) . . . and was a bit wise in asking you from the very beginning to deal with the two resolutions separately. But it appears to me like there is no fight with the very first one really, so mission accomplished. The government just didn't want this thing to fly because they needed a little bit of time to try to get this other thing in it. Cool. No problem!

After using the case to get it going now, the minister realises that while he will argue a principle and we could be back and forth for days over it, the logistics of it really don't make . . . not too much to fly with. The public understands that one quite easily. I know they do. I believe I may be wrong, and it can be proven, but I believe that at this point in time the first amendment could be satisfactorily voted on and go like it was at the beginning.

Now, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and others may have already mentioned about the word "government," where the minister has argued the case that it should not be left to the "government" to bring a bill outlining the terms and conditions under which the public can initiate a referendum. I will just quickly say to the minister and to the government, there was not a lack of thinking why the word "government" was used. There was no intention to put pressure on the government why the government was used. It was simply, sir, because the process (as we saw it would be) . . . no matter how much you talk about it, you send it through the Legal Department, the draftsmen word it and bring it back and we debate it. So, it was not for a minute trying to say that we would not have input into its genesis.

If the minister wants to come back and change that to "the Legislative Assembly," no problem. Just like he doesn't have a problem, it appears from his debate about empowering the people to initiate a referendum, we don't have a problem with changing "government" to "legislature" or "Legislative Assembly." The intention is the same.

But the very last one, Mr. Speaker, is simply something that I believe. They understand what we are saying. If they have a problem with how we have worded it and if the motives are genuine, and we understand what they want to achieve, then tell us how we can do that without leaving it as it is. But we cannot accept it as it is, Mr. Speaker. As far as we are concerned, while we understand what wants to be achieved, it is wrong and not responsible—I didn't say irresponsible—of us to vote in that fashion and there should be no need for it to come to a showdown.

Now, two things have been established, Mr. Speaker. Whatever happens with the vote, I now know (especially since I have one more time with it) that God will help me. I am confident that before it is over the public is going to understand fully what is going down. So, any thought about confusion will not work. From that point of view, we are even, if we are talking about the sides. If we really believe that we all want the same thing to happen, let us make it happen.

Now, I have taken this route with this first shot, knowing there is another shot. But whether there is another shot or not is not up to me anymore. I could stand and debate for much longer.

Mr. Speaker, this is not normal procedure, sir, and I am going to seek your guidance. Where we are at now, if the government by nod of their heads without stopping anything want to say to me, 'Listen, you do what you have to do because we are going to do what we have to do'—that's fine with me. But I know that I will have done what I had to do in the best way I know how. I need to know whether we are going to try for this thing to work because we all have the same intention, or whether we are not going to try for it to work.

Let it clearly be known that I am not asking for any favours. I just want an indication as to how we should proceed. Perhaps, sir, at this point in time I am willing to stay the afternoon to finish with it although we only came back at 3.00 p.m. If we want to take a quick five [minutes], I am fine with that.

Mr. Speaker, I sincerely want to be fair, really. Again, if I simply was dealing with the numbers . . . and I run a risk right here now, Mr. Speaker, because maybe they might carry me in one corner and fix me up for good. But I want to do this thing right. I really want to do it right.

The Speaker: Could I recommend that since we are so near to the adjournment that we adjourn and—

Some Honourable Members: No! No!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, we are getting somewhere, sir, and we won't be very long, I can assure you. We don't intend to stay here very late but I am winding up, and what I have just said (and I will quickly say it again) it seems like there is only problem and it is simply a matter of being able to accommodate what we are saying. If they have a way of doing that, I want to know.

Mr. Speaker, do you know what I am going to do, sir? They understand our position and I am going to say to you now that I am through with winding up this amendment that has been put forward—this amended motion. We are prepared, if they wish to quickly say what their wishes are, if you will allow it, sir, before you take the vote. But if there can be no decision on their part then we will simply take the vote and whatever has to happen, will happen, sir. I am finished.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, a motion like this is important. It is always best to try to get unanimity and agreement on it. It's too major a motion to fall on politics.

What the member, as I understand it, is basically that what they would wish to exclude from going to referendum would be consequential and similar amendments. In other words—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [Inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The word “fundamental” goes to where it can allow far more than the consequential. So, I think it would be worthwhile if we could have an early adjournment to give an opportunity to talk on this. Because if we are sticking to consequential, excluding consequential amendments, that’s different from saying the “fundamental” because the “consequential” would follow upon the recommended In other words, it would have to be—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just use the example that I used and that’s the kind of things [inaudible]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Okay, I think we need to talk a bit. Consequential has a specific meaning and—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I don’t care if you use the example that I gave.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand what you said and I think it is always worth talking because this is a motion. If it can be dealt with unanimously, it is really best for the country. So, whatever it takes to do that, sir, the government is prepared to do. If we could break now, sir—sorry, if we could just adjourn because I think it is nearly 4.30 p.m.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may, sir? I heard what the minister just said. But, for safety sake, I need to hear it a little bit better than that. There is another scenario, sir, and I want just to explain.

If time is needed to simply try to find the wording that will conquer what the minister wanted to achieve and what we have just explained, we don’t have a problem with that. But we need to hear that. Is that what the minister wanted to achieve with his amendment? having listened to what we have said and the example I just used, understanding why we don’t want the amendment to be so all encompassing. Is the minister saying that we are going to get together to find a wording that is acceptable—that what he wants to achieve and what we are saying can be accomplished? That’s all I want to here from him.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That is correct, sir. I think the aim here has to be a meeting of the minds to get unanimity on this. It is just too important not to do otherwise. So, it will be towards achieving somewhere in between what we both want, finding a wording that can deal with excluding “consequential” but ensuring that anything beyond that area—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [Inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, because if we go with the exclusion aspect rather than the inclusion it’s specifies what can’t and I think that is the better way to go. Okay?

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are just about there now.

Can we understand about the first part of the motion? Is that something we can put to bed fairly easily—the first amendment? I see other ministers shaking their head so just take the cue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, what is being done there is first to see whether there is a quicker and simpler way for the public achieving the right. If recommendations to change that section have to be made to the United Kingdom, we would not want that to come from government, nor would the United Kingdom. I think the full legislature would have to express its wishes.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [Inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We have had some quick talks on the second part, which is the more worrying. The first part is less worrying to us because it is less important than that general section. So, let’s talk about both of those sections.

But I just wanted to mention to you that the way the motion is worded, that motion is what would be going forward from the Legislative Assembly because we don’t have to bring a law to send it to the UK, they will take the motion. So, I think we need to talk about that. Okay?

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, you are very kind this afternoon and we are going to get somewhere, sir. Thank you very much.

We understand the technicalities of what you are saying and we understood it from the beginning. Since we are not arguing now, we can let you know that we understood all of that. However that has to be done, once we can achieve what we are looking for, we are happy with it. We are only seeking the commitment because, as you said, we totally agree. This is not one of those things that we should pitch the tents and go to the bitter end with.

Now, I think I need some signal so that we can close this off. Are we satisfied with going this route?

[Inaudible comment]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Okay, well— Mr. Speaker, obviously—

[Inaudible comment]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Well, Mr. Speaker, there is concern but I did what I did, the way I did it this evening for a good reason and I am going to accept the government's intentions now, forgetting about the numbers but knowing full well that tomorrow is another day and I don't believe at this point in time that there will be any deceit.

I don't think that and we will simply run that risk, knowing full well that if it happens, it is not going to be nice but I don't think that's going to happen, sir. I think, we can have a good weekend and come back here Monday morning, take a little bit of time and get the matter sorted and move on. Is that the plan?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I fully trust the member with this and the other members with the statement they made—that they are genuine about this. So, is the government. I would hope that we enter into the talks on that basis of truth.

The Speaker: I would also like to say that I am approving it in the same way. This has not been normal procedure and I will probably be criticised for going outside of the normal rules—

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: But I am doing this in the interest of the country. I think too this is a very important motion and unanimity will certainly achieve what we all want. So, I now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this honourable House until Monday at 10.00 a.m.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that this honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 a.m. on Monday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until 10.00 a.m. on Monday.

AT 4.40 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, 4 OCTOBER 1999.

EDITED
MONDAY
4 OCTOBER 1999
12.49 PM

[Prayers read by the Third Elected Member for George Town]

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: First of all, I would like to apologise for the late start this morning. It was unavoidable.

I have apologies for late arrival by the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works, and from the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 11/99, as amended, Referendum Law. Continuation of debate on amendment number 2. But before we go to that, I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I was just going to thank you for giving us time this morning to permit us to get together. I think we have been able to save the House a lot of time in achieving substantially an agreed motion.

What we will be asking is to withdraw the amendments, and then I will move to rescind the earlier amendment to go back to the original motion. You have approved the circulated amendment to the original motion, which would then be the only amendment on the floor.

The Speaker: Would you wish to move your rescinding motion before the First Elected Member for George Town? Or should he go first?

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 5/99

MOTION TO RESCIND AMENDMENT (NO. 1)
TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99
REFERENDUM LAW

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move, "BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House rescind Amendment (No. 1) to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 entitled Referendum Law." That, along with the withdrawal of the amending motions will remove all amendments to the motion, and permit the new one to come on.

The Speaker: I have waived the five day notice on that. I shall now put the question—

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: May I understand what has taken place? I understand that we are rescinding the first amendment.

The Speaker: That is correct. The amendment moved by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: But, Mr. Speaker, what we have to rescind is the resolve section of the motion.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: That is no longer an amendment, that is now part and parcel of that motion as a resolve section of the motion.

The Speaker: What we are attempting to do . . . the amendment which will follow is amending the substantive motion.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I understand that. What I am saying is that this motion as moved by the Minister for Education, is saying that we rescind the "amendment." But that amendment was passed. What we have to rescind is the resolve section of the motion. It is no longer an amendment, it is the nitty-gritty of it. I would submit that that is the proper way.

The motion as it stands was amended. So that amendment falls away. It is included, but the wording falls away and what it stands as, in our parlance, is the resolve section.

The Speaker: In my judgment you are both saying the exact same thing, only doing it in a different manner.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, what I would submit is that the motion should read: BE IT RESOLVED that this Honourable House rescind the resolve section that we are trying to rescind in Private Member's Motion so and so. But we are saying to rescind an amendment that was passed. You have to rescind the resolve section.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may. . .

The Speaker: First, what I would like to say is that I granted leave to rescind the motion under Standing Order 24(5), and that required five days. So instead of two days, I waived the five-day notice with the substantive motion. If that motion carries, that will remove what has been amended in the substantive motion and the original motion will stand.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, perhaps we are on different tracks in that last part. I agree with all the other parts you mentioned. But, as I understand it, this particular amendment that we are rescinding already amended the motion—it became part and parcel of the motion. Therefore, under the Standing Orders what we should be rescinding is the resolve section in the motion.

Maybe it's only the wording that I am not in agreement with, because I understand what we are trying to do. But the amendment was already passed. The amendment became the resolve section in the motion, and under the Standing Orders you have to deal with the resolve section and take the resolve section out.

It's just a change in the motion.

The Speaker: That is not my view. I have moved in what I think is the [correct] procedure.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I know that part of what we are trying to do is not just communicate with one another, but also to communicate with people outside of this House, and also to communicate with future generations of parliamentarians. If we bear this in mind, I think we will look at what the First Elected Member for West Bay is saying.

He is only saying that it is a question of wording. We know what the intention is. But he is saying that the specific wording should be to rescind the resolve section of the motion because once the amendment on a motion has been made and approved, the motion then exists as amended. In other words, the amendment does not exist as an independent part of the motion once it is passed. The amendment integrates itself into, and becomes part and parcel of the original motion.

The Speaker: I agree with what you are saying, if we had voted on the motion as amended. We are still in the amendment stage. For instance, if the motion that is now on the floor moved by the First Elected Member for George Town had passed, that would have automatically removed the motion moved by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning. So we are simply doing it by the leave of the House.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we are on all fours with what we are attempting to do, but I am at grievance with the procedure. Mr. Speaker, if you would guide me in this, the amendment that we are trying to rescind is which one.

The Speaker: The motion moved by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can you read that sir?

The Speaker: It says "In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning, seek to move:

"BE IT RESOLVED that Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 be amended as follows:- 'BE IT RESOLVED that the fourth recital (paragraph) be amended by the addition of the following words at the end thereof 'and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments.'

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the first operative part of the said resolution being the penultimate sentence be amended by the removal of the word 'Government' and the insertion of the following words: 'subject to and after a referendum under section 29(2) of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1993 whereby the electorate vote for a referendum to be initiated by the electorate, the Legislative Assembly.'

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the following be added at the end of the Motion: 'AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that only the referendum makes it possible for the electorate to give a clear judgment on a single issue of immediate relevance and that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands should only be recommended for amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments.'"

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: And the date, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: The date was 10 September, 1999.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: The same principle that applies to this applied to the motion that the First Elected Member for West Bay brought. The authority to rescind is found at page 368 of May's Parliamentary Practice, 22nd Edition. It says: "There is nothing in the practice of the House to prevent the rescission of a resolution or discharge of an order of a previous session, where such is held to be of continuing force and validity, or of a standing order."

You brought out a very good point. At this stage it is still a motion—it is not a resolution. Therefore, the amendment itself does not become a part of the resolution until the overall motion has been passed. So my position would be no different from that of the First Elected Member for George Town when he moved a rescission motion to parts of the same motion earlier.

I think it is in order, Mr. Speaker. I think you are correct on it and we should try to—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I think you need to read the entire paragraph. Can I read that entire paragraph?

The Speaker: Certainly, First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: “There is nothing in the practice of the House to prevent the rescission of a resolution or discharge of an order of a previous session, where such is held to be of continuing force and validity or of a standing order. Technically, indeed, the rescinding of a vote is a new question, the form being to read the resolution of the House and to move that it be rescinded and thus the question which has been agreed to is not again offered, although its effect is annulled.”

And on page 369, Notice necessary to rescind a resolution, “Notice is required of a motion to rescind a resolution, or to expunge or alter an entry in the Votes and Proceedings of the Journal, and in no circumstances may the House rescind a resolution during the sitting in which the resolution was agreed to. However, notice is not required of motions brought forward as matters of privilege.”

This is not a matter of privilege.

Mr. Speaker, you are the Presiding Officer. But we are on all fours with what we are attempting to do; it's a matter of how we get there. I believe that I am right in what I said.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member, can you help us at this stage?

Hon. David Ballantyne: Mr. Speaker, Members of the House, I am not sure that I can. I am looking at Standing Orders in relation to amendment to motions. Rather than treat it as a rescission of a motion of a resolution of the House, if it were treated as an amendment to the earlier amendment to the effect that it deletes that earlier amendment, there is a provision that could be used.

Standing Order 27(1) says, “An amendment to an amendment may be moved and seconded at any time after the question upon the original amendment has been proposed, and therefor it has been put . . .”

Sorry, that actually won't help us. But what we could do, that's before the question has been put. The question has been put in this case and we are trying to get back to where we were. I think, rather than view it as a resolution and rescission of a resolution—which I think will lead us into difficulties because there are provisions in Erskine May that suggest that we cannot rescind a resolution in the same session—it might be better to regard it as a motion to amend the earlier amendment by deleting the wording of that amendment, if that were acceptable to the House.

The difficulty is that we are trying to get back to a position now where there have been two sets of amendments proposed. And all that we are seeking to do is to get back to the original motion, and then amend it again.

The other way that we could go about it (which is more complicated) is to take all of the amendments that have been proposed to date, and amend them all in one go back to the final version of what we want.

I take the view that there has been no final resolution of the original motion. If the House shared that view, whether we use the word . . . I don't think it is helpful to use the word ‘resolution’ in relation to this amendment. If the word ‘rescind’ is causing a difficulty perhaps we could simply amend the original amendment number 1 so that it is either to no effect, or to the effect of the amendment number 3 that is now in front of us. That would be the alternative.

You could, in effect, substitute the present wording of amendment number 3 for the wording of amendment number 1 if it's a problem in rescinding what is seen as a resolution. That's an alternative practical suggestion that will get us to a position where we at least have a live issue in front of the House.

The problem is that amendment number 1 was voted on and has been dealt with. I think there has to be a procedure for getting back to the point before that if the House has changed its mind on that particular amendment. I would recommend that we take the view . . . although technically the vote on that amendment number 1 might be seen as a resolution, it's not a resolution in relation to the original motion. Therefore I feel that the House is master of its own procedure. If the House wants to get the result of effectively negating the original amendment, then perhaps that's the way in which it could be regarded.

I hope that may be of some help. All we are seeking to do is to negative the effect of the original amendment before the entire motion has been dealt with. I feel that if it is competent to amend an amendment before the question is put on the amendment, it should be competent to go back and alter an earlier part.

I can refer you to this: 25(7) says: “When the question upon the amendment to a motion has been proposed by the Presiding Officer, an earlier part of the motion may not be amended unless the amendment under discussion is withdrawn or negated.”

I know that's not directly in point here because I don't think we have a provision that's directly in point. But it does seem to say that what we are seeking to do now is to amend an earlier part of the motion, something that has become part of the motion. If that's right, I think it is competent to do that by means of an amendment now.

So the net effect is that we have an amended motion, because the vote was put on amendment number 1. Why don't we go back and amend the amended motion to delete the amendment that was made by virtue of amendment number 1? That's perhaps an easier way of looking at it rather than rescinding the resolution.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I would think that that could be a way out. And I think that May's would provide for that because it says, “The power of rescission has only been exercised in the case of a resolution resulting from a substantive motion, and even then sparingly.”

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I am going to indicate at this particular time that I have some difficulty with the proceedings. I would like to read on page 370 where it says that—

The Speaker: What book are you reading from please?

Dr. Frank McField: Erskine May.

The Speaker: The 21st or 22nd Edition?

Dr. Frank McField: The 22nd Edition.

The Speaker: What page again?

Dr. Frank McField: Page 370, the last paragraph under “Reversal of decision” says, “The reason why motions for open rescission are so rare and the rules of procedure carefully guarded against the indirect rescission of votes is that both Houses instinctively realise that parliamentary government requires the majority to abide by a decision regularly come to, however unexpected, and that it is unfair to resort to method whether direct or indirect to reverse such a decision.”

I am going to stand by this. In other words, the amendment that was brought by the Minister of Education was already approved. I think I understand what we are trying to do here, but I believe that we have to do it according to the precedent and we don't want to set any kind of precedent that would suggest that we can make a decision in one sense and then go back and make another decision because it seems to be convenient.

I think consistency has to prevail.

The Speaker: I fully understand all that we are discussing. But if the House, with the leave of the House, can rescind the amendment that is now before the House (which in essence does exactly what the Honourable Minister of Education has moved a motion to do—because the amendment moved by the First Elected Member for George Town in essence reverses the amendment to this motion made by the First Elected Member for George Town—if you all understand what I am saying), and with the leave of the House, if that motion should carry that would then reverse the substantive motion back to its original position.

But through an abundance of caution I am now going to suspend this House for lunch and I will further research it. When we come back I will make my decision.

We shall suspend until 2.30.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 25(6) a motion has been made to withdraw the amendment . . . do we have a seconder?

The Third Elected Member for Boddén Town.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker and honourable Members, I am lucky that I don't have to write the Editorial on this one, I second the motion for the withdrawal.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99

REFERENDUM LAW

AMENDMENT NO. 3

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I wish to move amendment number 3 to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99, The Referendum Law.

"In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning, seek to move that Private Member's Motion No. 11/99, as amended, be amended by deleting the amendment and substituting the following:

- "(i) by deleting 'Government' as it appears in the first resolve clause and by substituting 'Legislative Assembly';
- "(ii) by deleting the figures '1993' where they appear in the first resolve clause and substituting therefor the figures '1972';
- "(iii) by deleting the full stop at the end of the second resolve and substituting a semi-colon;
- "(iv) by inserting the following new two resolves at the end thereof:

'AND BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1972, shall only be recommended for further amendment by this Honourable House after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments other than minor consequential amendments necessitated by electorally approved amendments to the Constitution and the first resolve clause of this Motion for the electorate to initiate a referendum;

'AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, subject to the approval of the electorate in a referendum, the Constitution be amended to entrench the principle that the Constitution should only be amended after a referendum whereby the electorate vote for the specific amendments, other than minor consequential amendments necessitated by electorally approved amendments to the Constitution.'

The Speaker: The amendment has been duly moved. The question is that Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 be amended as in the amendment circulated to members. Does the mover wish to speak to it?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I will be very brief. Basically what this motion will do is remove the amendment that was made earlier to the motion by deleting all of those words in that amendment. And in the first resolve it will state that the word "Government" will be replaced by "Legislative Assembly." So the Legislative Assembly would take the steps to cause the Constitution Order to be amended, for the electorate to initiate a referendum.

All that has happened with that change from 1993 to 1972 was just a consequential type of amendment or a tidying up.

The original motion goes back to what it was except that "Government" is changed for "Legislative Assembly." And added to that are these two sections that I just read. What the first one does is state that members of this honourable House would not recommend a change to the Constitution until after a referendum, except they could recommend without a referendum minor consequential amendments and they can recommend the first part which relates to the electorates' right to initiate a referendum. So the first part of that really says that the House would not recommend changes to the Constitution without a referendum on the specific points unless it's a minor consequential amendment.

The last part that I read basically says that subject to the approval of the electorate in a referendum that there be an entrenchment of the principle that the Constitution should only be amended after a referendum.

So the first part establishes that members of this House would not recommend a change of the Constitution without a referendum. The second part would ask that that be put into the Constitution at whatever time it is next looked at, but after there has been a referendum.

Presently what the motion as amended now would say is that, firstly, the Legislative Assembly take the steps to amend the Constitution to allow the electorate to initiate a referendum. Okay? And there needs to be no referendum on that, I have withdrawn that part of it.

Then, once that has happened, the government take steps to bring a referendum bill to the House.

The third part (which is these two new sections) would then say that the House would not recommend a change to the Constitution until after there has been a referendum. And the last part says that at some time in the future the referendum should be entrenched in the Constitution by an amendment to it after the electorate gives its approval. That, in a nutshell, sums up what this is all about.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I am indeed happy to see that reason has prevailed. It took a while, but I must say that Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 seems in a much better state now than it was previously.

I would like to give the Minister of Education credit—actually post graduate credit—for his attempt to use the negotiation process as a means of putting himself back in check with the consensus of the day. It was quite obvious to me (and I said this on the many occasions that I debated this one motion) that the people of this country wanted the right to initiate the referendum, and that there was no need for us to hold a referendum to decide this; and that it would be quite in keeping with our conservative practice in regard to constitutional amendment to ask for this particular clause in the Constitution to be amended so as to give the people this superior power.

Although we heard arguments against this particular logic, we come to find that the logic of the arguments being brought by this particular side has prevailed in that particular sense.

The other point I would like to mention is in regard to the second resolve, where we have mention made to minor or consequential amendments necessitated by electorally approved amendments. In other words, where we have a situation talking about “fundamental,” it was said that “fundamental” was not a precise concept or precise word or term. But, as I said, whatever word or concept it is it can be changed. The point is that it be allowed to be changed when it is no longer useful as a means of communicating what is intended.

I believe that any word used in a reasonable, intelligent and conservative manner, will have the function of giving the real meaning of the word rather than what we might imply by way of our particular prejudice or attempt to deceive. It is important for me at this particular point, because in the last debate I made on the floor of this House in regard to this amendment (the last amendment, the second amendment brought by the First Elected Member for George Town—because this is now the third amendment) I was able to lay the scheme on its head. I was able to say that all the time we were speaking about the same thing and it didn't seem reasonable to me for us to continue with politically charged debate.

Although there is an opportunity, I am not going to take too much of the time of the House to rub salt in the wound I see has been inflicted in the intellectual discourse of a particular member of this House. I am going to move away from that because I was saying that the people would now realise that we all have the capacity here in this House to debate. And if we pay attention to one another's contribution, we will find that these types of compromises are very possible and it doesn't take two or three weeks to make these types of compromises.

I congratulate the First Elected Member for George Town for his attempt to get something reasonable out of this, something that would not be taxing on the peoples' purse. I feel that the fact that the ability to initiate the referendum can be made to the Constitution without a referendum has saved the country a tremendous amount of money and has created the opportunity for this to be worked into the Constitution at a much faster rate.

I think that we all agree that no major amendments should be made to the Constitution without consulting the people, and I do believe that the best way to consult the people—the most thorough and democratic way—is by way of a referendum.

I have no problems with this motion at the moment, Mr. Speaker, and I trust that the people will understand that a lot of criticism made in the original debate on this motion was not founded upon good reason, and that now we have the opportunity to see that all members of this Legislative Assembly are responsible, intelligent and are for what is good for this country.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I will be very brief.

I just want to say how much I appreciate being able to get together to get to this point. It is a pity that we have had to go to East End from George Town to get to West Bay. It only shows that there are those of us on this side who can be reasonable. We know our Standing Orders and we know what the country wants.

I think the Fourth Elected Member for George Town put it quite well. I am glad that reason—if that's what it is—has prevailed.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I want to use this opportunity to say that my respect for honourable members has been enhanced by this exercise. I wonder why it takes us creatures of politics such a long and tedious process before we realise that many of us err, and that it is human to err, and that we need to be a little more trusting and open-minded with other people.

I am happy to have been associated with this effort and I hope it can be a learning exercise. As I have said before, all honourable members are trustworthy; there is no one so irresponsible as to want to take the country down paths it should not be taken—especially when they do not inform their constituents and their electors.

I hope for our sake and for the sake of posterity that this will be the last such exercise of this nature, not only for this period in history, but also into the coming millennium. We don't need anymore exercises of this nature.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, bear with me sir, I simply need to ask a question to make sure. When we vote on this amendment as it is now, the motion as amended still has to be wound up?

The Speaker: That is correct.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Is that your debate on the amendment?

The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak on the amendment? If not, would the mover like to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir, very briefly to really endorse what members said, the time here has been very productive. It has produced what is the consensus of the House and it shows how progress can be made on very important matters such as this.

I would also like to mention that most of the time on very major issues it is rarely a difference in principle with members here when it is in the interest of the country. I would like to thank all members for their input and support on this amendment.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion stands amended accordingly.

AGREED: AMENDMENT NO. 3 TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: I think that this would be an appropriate time to adjourn, rather than go into the debate on the substantive motion.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, let's try to finish this business this afternoon and bury it once and for all.

The Speaker: I am game if everyone else is.
Is that the wish of the House? Okay.

Does the mover of the substantive motion, Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as Amended wish to exercise his right of reply? The First Elected Member for George Town.

There's no turning back!

DEBATE ON PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99 AS AMENDED (No. 3)

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you Mr. Speaker.
I am assuming your terminology of "no turning back" means stick to the game plan, and I won't say any more about that.

The Speaker: Go to the finish!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I will stick to the game plan. I won't allow temptation to even come by thought, much less by deed.

The Speaker: I thank you very much for that.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Having accepted these amendments—and being able to say now that these are the final amendments to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99—I am really happy to be able to be looking at us moving forward in this honourable Legislative Assembly to the other business of the House.

I want to say that this could have ended in a different way, never mind all of the things that have happened in between. But I am happy at this point in time to know that the original intent of Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 will have been served (once we vote on it), notwithstanding the fact that other thoughts will have been achieved by the vote also.

For the benefit of the listening public, and because I think it is my responsibility as mover to explain a little bit (I will do it as fast as I can, but I think it is necessary).

Once the motion has passed, we are going to be seeking the authority from London to be able to amend our Constitution by adding a section (whether it be section 29(2) or it becomes section 29(2)(a), I am not sure of those technical details) which will say that the electorate of the Cayman Islands will have the right to initiate a referendum.

Once that is completed then there will be a bill brought to the Legislative Assembly which will outline the terms and conditions under which—

The Speaker: Can I interrupt you just one moment?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, I understand what you are going to do, sir. I will pass it up.

The Speaker: I would ask the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order to continue beyond the hour of 4.30.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order to continue beyond the hour of 4.30.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, please continue.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

As I was saying, that bill will be brought which will outline the terms and conditions under which the electorate can initiate a referendum which is basically exactly what the original motion sought to achieve.

The other two resolve sections are basically addressing (in my view) a separate but nonetheless important matter. So that it can be clearly understood, when the initial amendment was brought where it was said that any amendment to the Constitution must be done via referendum, and I brought back the subsequent amendment where it used the words "any fundamental change could only be done via the referendum," what this new wording does is, instead of trying to say what changes can only be done by a referendum, the wording reverses itself to say what can be done without a referendum.

So what we have basically done, to use the Queen's English, is to go about it in a different fashion to accomplish the same thing. At this point in time we have dispelled any thoughts about how specific or clear the word "fundamental" is. As I explained what I was trying to achieve, it was finally clearly understood, and that is what we are backed to.

I don't have a problem with that. I want to say that the way the last two resolve sections read in the newly amended motion, my understanding is that any thought about that being entrenched in the Constitution will stand separately and apart from getting the first resolve taken care of via whatever the procedure is to get the Constitution amended. I think reading it altogether now it is clearly subject to that since the very last resolve is calling for a referendum to be able to ask for this to be entrenched in the Constitution. The other one is not. So the other one can move forward. This other one won't address the Constitution until a referendum is held.

While it has been rough sailing in between, what we have ended up with is something that I can not only live with but that I can support.

I too, Mr. Speaker, am going to totally resist the temptation to do any critique on what has transpired from the day the motion was moved until this time. Just before I close I will say to the government—especially to the Leader of Government Business—that notwithstanding our differences at times, if proper reasoning is put forward we can talk and end up with the right results. But let him not take this as a lesson that he can somehow or the other find ways to do as he pleases in the future because that will not happen.

Having said that, just to get a little quick one here without going very far, I am certainly happy that we could all come to this point. Without going into anymore talk about it I would hope that we could simply take the vote. I urge the government and the rest of members here that as the motion is passed—as it is obvious it will be—let us get on with following through with what else has to be done with regard to this so that it does not become just a shallow promise but that it becomes something real that the public can be happy with, so that they can retain some confidence in their elected representatives.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 as Amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed, and I thank you all very much.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Speaker: That concludes the business for this afternoon. I will now entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 AM Wednesday.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM Wednesday. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.41 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM WEDNESDAY, 6 OCTOBER 1999.

EDITED
WEDNESDAY
6 OCTOBER 1999
10.20 AM

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Environment, Communication and Natural Resources]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY SPEAKER OF

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable First Official Member who, due to unforeseen circumstances, will be absent from the Assembly today.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I rise to seek whether the House would be so disposed, sir, as to consider going beyond our normal hours so that we can dispatch the business left on the Business Paper. Certainly, it would strike me that the government must be preoccupied with important matters and we are running the risk of being here until the budget is about to be delivered. So, I am asking you, sir, to try to ascertain what is the disposition of the House so that, if possible, we can go beyond the normal adjournment hour this afternoon, tomorrow afternoon, and possibly Friday.

The Speaker: I thank the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town for that. I think it is a good idea and we can discuss that informally at the break. Thank you very much.

Moving on to item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question 136 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 136

No. 136: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources: (a) what is being done to control the number of persons visiting the Sandbar daily; and (b) what is being done to protect the stingrays.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The (a) portion of the question may be better addressed by the Ministry or Department of Tourism as the issue is more related to overcrowding at the site and the subsequent quality of the experience. While the number of visitors potentially may impact the environment, there is no inherent environmental degradation resulting from the number of visitors. The only environmental threats stem from the actions of the visitors while they are at the site and these problems are addressed in the second part of this question.

(b) The Department of Environment and the Marine Conservation Board developed a guideline document for protection of stingrays at the Sandbar and Stingray City. The guidelines were presented to both of the local watersports' operators associations and gained acceptance by both groups. These standards are currently voluntary and operators are asked to enforce the guidelines on their members. The option for legislation is available if the guidelines cannot be met voluntarily.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the Minister say whether or not the number of boats anchoring on the Sandbar is an inherent environmental problem?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I would say that there is a great concern that has been expressed by the department with regard to the number of boats and how they are anchored at the Sandbar. It is my understanding that buoys have been positioned in such a way as to try to assist with this, if need be I think we will do more.

Also, we have had some co-operation from the individuals that I mentioned in the answer with regard to policing how and where they anchor on the Sandbar.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say why he has said in the (a) part of his question that this question would be best directed to the Department of Tourism, when he, in fact, in the answer says that there is no inherent environmental degradation resulting from the visitors?

In other words, he is saying that there is no problem with the amount of people that are visiting at the moment. So, why would he then suggest that he has not answered this question sufficiently and took up a position in saying that there is no danger being created by the number of visitors there at the moment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: What I have said in the (a) part of the answer in no way is saying that I should not have answered the question. The fact remains that it is somewhat of an overlap between the two ministries. However, I would say to the House that I have cleared it with the Minister concerned and rather than the question not being answered, we agreed to handle it this way.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In the answer given, the Minister referred to the guidelines. I wonder if he can say what the guidelines entail with respect to the handling of the stingrays, which is a concern.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: One of the things that we have been trying to instil in the minds of the visitors to the Sandbar is the fact that while the stingrays are quite interesting and beautiful, at the same time they are not to really and truly handle the stingrays. I think that is where the problem comes and it is sort of hard for this to be policed because you would need a marine officer for each tourist there on a daily basis.

However, as I said, the boat operators there have been assisting with it and we have been trying our best to make sure that none of the animals are hurt.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I would suggest that maybe as a part of the guidelines—

The Speaker: You will turn this into a question, please.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Yes, sir. As a part of the guidelines can the operators be instructed to tell their passengers as they are going out that they are welcome to visit the Sandbars but we would appreciate if they wouldn't handle the stingrays physically?

I wonder if the Honourable Minister could give us an undertaking that that will be done, because I think that is one of the main concerns that we have in regard to the continued popularity of Stingray City and the Sandbar.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I am pleased to say that this has been done, and as I mentioned in the (b) section of the answer, the guidelines were presented to both the local watersports operators associations and gained acceptance, and they have been working along with us.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Question (a) stems from a resolution in the House, which the minister answered on behalf of government. While he says here that it's the Ministry of Tourism that should be addressing it, at the same time he is responsible for the environment. I would like some undertaking if he cannot say—and he obviously cannot—as to what is being done about the situation. If he could liaise, since it is a problem between the [Ministry] of Tourism and the [Ministry] of Environment, and come up with at least an answer as to if it's going to be addressed or not.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I have no problem in giving that undertaking. As a matter of fact, it is an ongoing discussion between the minister and myself, and of course, the department will have to be brought into it. So, definitely, I give that undertaking that I will continue.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, one of the concerns that I have heard being repeated by the operators in that area is the lack of a sufficient number of buoys or moorings at the Sandbar and also at the other popular dive sites. I wonder if the honourable minister can say if there are any plans to maybe add additional moorings.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think, I covered that a while ago, but yes, there are plans to continue to monitor the situation and if need be, we will put in more.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to Question 137 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 137

No. 137: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning to give an update on the implementation phases of the 1995-1999 Strategic Education Plan.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Education Development Plan was not arranged in distinctive phases in 1995, rather it was placed on a timeline and various activities were scheduled to commence each year. Copies of this timeline were distributed to all implementers.

The first annual update of this plan took place 18–19 April 1996. At this update, the Planning Team was satisfied with the progress being made in implementing the action plans. However, three strategies were sent back to action teams to be expanded. A follow up session was held on 30 September 1996.

The second annual update of the Education Development Plan was held on 15 October 1997. Progress was noted and recommendations made to write personal plans for students and plans that address the professional development of teachers.

The Planning Team did not meet in 1998 as it was decided that with the creation of the Vision 2008 plan it was necessary to merge the recommendations from that plan with the one for the Education Development Plan.

The next update of the Education Development Plan is scheduled for 25-26 October 1999 at the Community College. This update will be facilitated by Dr. William Cook.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementary, the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, sir. Can the minister state when this plan was completed (and was it called the Plan 1995 - 1999)? Was it envisaged or did the plan profess that the implementation would have been completed by 1999?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it is a rolling five-year plan, that is, the plan is updated annually. It missed one year's update due to the Vision matter. But it is a rolling plan that will continue its implementation over the continuing five-year period.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the minister state specifically, by whatever method he needs to use now, whether the implementation phases of this plan were envisaged to be completed by the year 1999 when it was originally created in 1995, or rather in 1994 to begin in 1995?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The phasing that came out with it, dealt with the first five years. I think that is what the member is referring to. In that the specific implementation plans, the action plans were phased to be done in certain years. But it doesn't mean that the whole plan was to have been completed in five years and then a new plan come in. Each year it would be reviewed. Sometimes action plans may be dropped, they may be amended; new ones may come in and as the Planning Team sent some plans back for further matters.

It is quite an extensive thing. If the member wants, I can sort of say when the different plans were scheduled to have come in but it is quite long.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Swimming along with the minister here . . . my understanding of what the minister has just said is that while it was not anticipated for the entire plan and its complete implementation to be done within the first five years, seeing as it was envisaged to be a roll-over plan, can the minister then state exactly where we are at now within what was projected to be implemented within the first five years?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the review as I mentioned is coming up October 25 -26. That will then review what has been done, what needs to be done, what needs to be verified, if anything needs to be stopped or any new areas perhaps should come under the plan. So, I would be happy to answer that once that review is done (actually, it will be done this month) in another three weeks time at which time I will be in a better position to give an update.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Is the minister then saying that in reality, the answer to my substantive question should simply have been that it cannot be answered until this review is completed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, because the review is done by the Planning Team, not by me or my ministry. So, once I have that . . . in fact, I am sure we will. With our good transparent attitudes these days this will go out and I will also be able to let the member have it, sir.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I wish to seek your guidance, sir. It is obvious from what the minister is saying that because of timing, he is not in a position to answer the question as it was put. It is my understanding also that if these questions are answered, it is a six-month period before they can be asked again as substantive questions.

Given the circumstance that it has been impossible for the minister to answer the question, is it possible for me to withdraw this question since it is not completed sir? I may be able to ask the question in the November sitting.

The Speaker: I would say that it is not possible to withdraw it because we have already had supplementaries on it. But the Honourable Minister can give you an undertaking that he will give you a report in writing, if that is satisfactory with you, after the Planning Team has met.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I understand exactly what you are saying. My only reasoning behind the whole thing was that, although we had five paragraphs of answers, there were no answers. Perhaps, if I have to accept the disadvantage of an answer in writing, I will do so. But I am only explaining to you why I asked what I asked of you because in truth and in fact, and with no disrespect and not wanting to cause any arguments, the question has not been answered—because it could not have been answered, obviously so.

The Speaker: That's all I can really say on it. That's the ruling I have to make.

Are there any further supplementaries? If not we will move on to Question 138 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 138

No. 138: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Third Official Member with responsibility for Finance and Economic Development what is government's policy regarding the granting of full autonomy to the Monetary Authority?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The government's policy regarding the granting of full autonomy to the Monetary Authority is that this is a necessary step to which the government is committed.

To this end, the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development in conjunction with the Authority is currently carrying out an operational and legislative review of the Authority to ensure that all the required features are in place to enable it to be successful as an independent entity and to be in compliance with international norms in this regard.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable member tell the House whether there is a timetable established for this procedure, and, if so, how far along is the arrangements on that timetable?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: We are hoping that the review will be completed at the end of the year. But as the member will appreciate at this time, he would have had sight of the White Paper that has been submitted by the United Kingdom. This is looking at various aspects including the operations of the financial industry. It is not that we are seeking necessarily to use the White Paper as a guide, but we are taking into account all of the legislative requirements, all of the components that are required to ensure that we have an effective regulatory administration established by way of our monetary authority.

This review is presently being carried out under the direction of the Managing Director of the Monetary Authority, together with the Assistant Financial Secretary and other members of the Board. What is happening at this stage is that the entire operation of the Monetary Authority is being looked at (examined from an operational point of view, looking also from a legislative reform point of view) and we are hoping that by at least the middle of the year 2000 that this review and the necessary legislative amendments and other reforms would have been established. More importantly, to ensure that accountability exists between the Monetary Authority and the government.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Third Official Member say—bearing in mind what the answer has been—when the Monetary Authority was first created what was the government's policy regarding any autonomy it should have had?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: When the Monetary Authority was established, the government's intention at that time was that an agency should be established with full autonomy. The actions of the government up to this time are very much consistent with that policy.

If the First Elected Member for George Town will recall that in 1992, we had separate regulatory regimes. We had the Inspector of Banks and Trust Companies, and we had the Superintendent of Insurance. That was subsequently rolled-up into the Financial Services Supervision Department.

The government, on its own accord and initiative, took the view that the Monetary Authority should be established, thus putting in place a stronger regulatory regime. Since that time, Mr. Speaker, that process has been very much in train. Based on the commitment by the government, it will be seen through to its satisfactory conclusion.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. The Honourable Third Official Member will appreciate that members like me do understand that the intention for autonomy to exist is there. But it just strikes me funny . . . and I am really sorry to be asking the Third Official Member the question but that's where it has to be directed. If the intention was for the Monetary Authority to retain autonomy, why then was it the thought that it be best for the Third Official Member to be the Chairman while at the same time being a Member of Executive Council—bound by collective responsibility? Was that not a conflict of interests?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, since I hold the position of Financial Secretary and the Third Official Member, it could be viewed that the response that I will be providing will be self-serving but this definitely is not the case.

Mr. Speaker, if it is not myself, it would have to be another Member of Executive Council. There has to be linkage between any regulatory regime that is set up in the Cayman Islands and the government. The government is responsible for the formulation of policy.

The Monetary Authority as an independent agency is responsible for the regulation of the financial industry. If the Monetary Authority is responsible for the regulation of the financial industry and complete independence is, for example, established on the basis that a person not connected with the government is to be put in the position of the Chair, this creates somewhat of a difficult situation from a technical point of view, the work will be done.

But from the point of view of ensuring that there is linkage and flow of understanding, for example, if there was someone independent of the Portfolio of Finance and Development that was in the Chair, Mr. Speaker, two things could be done. The question would be who exactly would the Authority be reporting to. And secondly, the knowledge base that needs to be there in terms of the policies that are flowing down or the desires of the government to be enshrined. It is very important for the government to be in touch with all independent and statutory bodies that are established, especially, where we have a significant section of our economy that is very much wrapped up in the process of the financial services activities.

The Speaker: Do you have a follow-up?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps, this is not one of these things that we need to go into in great length, but I cannot let this opportunity pass. I understand exactly what the Honourable Third Official Member has said, and I am confident that I have a grasp of the justification for someone from Executive Council being the chairman. But does not this in itself immediately say that autonomy cannot exist?

If there is a qualified autonomy that needs to remain at that level because of other reasoning, that is another matter. But, surely, if policies and linkages (as the Honourable Third Official Member has just stated) are very important in the whole operation, and these policies are coming from Executive Council, and the direct linkage has to be there that it does not pass down by a paper trail, then, certainly, one cannot say in the same breath that the intention is for full autonomy to exist, because it cannot happen.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I differ with the member on this, and I think he should understand why I will differ. I will explain the reason why.

It is quite possible and practical to have an independent Monetary Authority with the Financial Secretary (this time I am going to speak of myself in the third person) being in the Chair. When the Monetary Authority is established as an independent body, it will take decisions on licensing independently. It will have an Executive Committee that will be comprised of members of the board of the Monetary Authority. They will sit and they will review applications.

The linkage between the Monetary Authority and the Financial Secretary or Executive Council, is that the Financial Secretary (being a Member of Executive Council and being the Chairperson of the Monetary Authority) will be able to apprise the Monetary Authority of developments that are occurring within, let's say, the international forum—such as what is happening with the White Paper—and for such to inform the activities of the Board.

The Financial Secretary (or the Chairman) should be professional to recognise that the basis for separation of duties should be achieved, because at the end of the day it is not a conflict of interests, where we have somebody operating and exercising independent judgment in his capacity as a Chairman of the Board. At the end of the day, the Chairman of the Monetary Authority must recognise the importance of the Monetary Authority to the regulation of the financial industry.

This question was put on several occasions in the past, and it goes to another logical conclusion that I will not get into. If the Financial Secretary, or let's say for example, the linkage with the Monetary Authority is minimised, the question is, Who will the Monetary Authority be reporting to? The question is in terms of the flow of decisions from the Monetary Authority up to such linkage, exactly whether it will be the Cayman Islands being in control of what goes on within our financial services activities.

Mr. Speaker, we have very able and competent members of the Board. We have Sir Vassell, Mr. Michael Austin, Richard Chalmers from the Bank of England, the Managing Director, and I. When we look in terms of these individuals, the Financial Secretary as a member of Executive Council, cannot sit down and wield such authority in the board in order to override the decisions of the other board members. We sit and we look at issues objectively. But what is very important, Mr. Speaker . . . and I was looking for an article that I found some time ago that I wanted to bring for the benefit of this Honourable House. There is a question as to the newly regulated body or the regulatory authority, Financial Services Authority (FSA) in the United Kingdom.

The question has been raised about that in terms of challenging the wisdom—how independent should an independent body be. So, Mr. Speaker, if it is a question in terms of sitting down and believing that this cannot be achieved without arriving at a situation of a conflict of interests, I will defer on that issue. I think, it is very important . . . and in light of what is happening now, if it is not me [then] there should be a connection where there is a Member of Executive Council either sitting on the board or sitting in the position of Chair. But I do not believe that that linkage should be severed because at the end of the day if the people of the Cayman Islands can vest this level of trust in order to elect members to put them in this Honourable House, where decisions are taken governing national issues and the running of this country, if it comes down to a point where a member cannot be trusted to sit on a board without leading into a situation of conflict of interests, we will have to examine our ethics very carefully.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the member can say whether the licensing of financial institutions is still carried out by Executive Council? And, if so, whether those members in Executive Council who are directors or shareholders of other institutions have to extricate themselves from the proceedings or do they still hold sway over which bank is licensed and which one goes under (that means put into liquidation)?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the decision of licensing is taken by members of Executive Council. It was understood that this would be a transitional arrangement with the establishment of the Monetary Authority, and I outlined what took place from 1992 to the present, to where the Monetary Authority was established.

It will have to be borne in mind that was a very short timeframe. Up to that point in time, we will have to look in terms of the cumulative expertise that exists in Executive Council. I think that member is very much aware in terms of the intentions that were known when the Monetary Authority was established. As soon as the Monetary Authority had been through the learning curve situation, Mr. Speaker, it was understood that Executive Council would gradually relinquish responsibility in terms of the licensing of these entities. As soon as the operational structure becomes entrenched, this will be done.

At present, there are members of Executive Council who have interests in other financial institutions. But as that member is aware, they are required to declare their interests in Executive Council—and this has been done. I must say that sitting there and observing what is going on, these members have the capacity to be objective in the decisions that are made. Invariably the applications that are put forward for licences, these are normally the recommendations of the Monetary Authority and normally accepted unless there is a need to seek further clarification.

When it comes on to taking a decision in terms of, for example what institutions are put in liquidation (with the exception of the mutual funds section) the recommendation of the Monetary Authority is normally made and Executive Council acts upon these recommendations. So, it is not a question that Executive Council acts without any regard to the recommendations that are made by the Monetary Authority. The Monetary Authority normally initiates the action and it follows through whereby Executive Council is invited to take the decision.

The Speaker: Do you have a follow-up? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town was next.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Is that right?

The Speaker: If you don't have a follow-up. . . he gave way, so go ahead.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, it is a follow-up. I just want the member to clarify—and I would like to say that, yes, I was a Member [of Executive Council] from 1993 to 1997 and I do remember the intentions in the formation of the Monetary Authority and that has been some years hence.

I just want to understand clearly whether members in Executive Council who are directors and shareholders still hold sway over which banks are licensed or which licences are pulled?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I responded to that earlier by saying—

The Speaker: I think that is somewhat outside of the ambit of this question but if you care to answer it, you may.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes. But I am not going to respond to the question in terms of a sway or pull. Applications for the granting of licenses or the revocation of licences or any other variations, these are normally submitted to Executive Council. Members having an interest in other financial institutions are required to declare their interest—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: [Inaudible comment]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, they are required to do this, Mr. Speaker. On this basis, then once this is done, it is accepted and Executive Council collectively to review applications. If it gets to a point where it involves a financial institution in which a member has a direct interest, this member would not normally participate in discussions.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It seems somewhat strange that the (and I will turn this into a question) Third Official Member appears so defensive on this issue because I believe that the First Elected Member for George Town was really trying to obtain information regarding the need for the independence of the Monetary Authority as having full autonomy with the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member would give the undertaking that he would look at the policy of government with a view to reviewing this because it would appear that the logical extension of his argument is that all statutory authorities should have the chairmanship by a Member of Executive Council and this cannot be what he is trying to suggest. So, I am wondering whether he would give the undertaking that this whole matter would be looked into. Perhaps, government members or those listening to what I am saying would also consider this particular point.

Mr. Speaker, I am mentioning this on the basis that as far back as 1988 (to 1992) when I was a Member of Executive Council, the view was taken that Executive Council members should try hard not to Chair statutory authorities for the mere purpose of trying to leave the authorities as independent as possible. Since we are trying to grant full autonomy to the Monetary Authority, perhaps this policy should continue and be developed. I am wondering whether he would give this undertaking.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that the Third Elected Member for George Town has read my response as being defensive. It is not defensive. It is a clarification that I intended to give and I trust that this also would have been read into it.

On the question of full autonomy, I do not believe that it is necessary to have total disassociation of Executive Council with any statutory authority to achieve independence. Let us use the word “independence.” If it is a question where the view can be held that the member of Executive Council is put in a position to exercise undue influence over the affairs of an organisation, this will have to be looked at. But, this in itself has not been established to be the case.

If it was a question that the view . . . and I know that I am not the fountain of all knowledge and I will not pretend to be. But I do believe that where an organisation exists with specific regulations, rules and procedures establishing its independence, and you have a member of Executive Council, which will include me in this instance, sitting in the Chair of the Monetary Authority, I do not believe that the objective of this entity being regarded as independent would be absent. It can operate and it should operate, and at the end of the day, what is very important is to have an organisation with the required expertise on its Board—members with the requisite competence in order to discharge their responsibilities effectively.

As I said, Mr. Speaker, the review exercise is presently being carried out. It is not a question of trying to protect my position in terms of being in the Chair or protecting, let's say for example, future financial secretaries. But I do believe where we have a Board that is so important to the financial industry that there be a direct linkage [to] Executive Council—not to influence the decisions being taken in regard to the granting and revocation of licences; and not for this person to sit there and dominate the proceedings because obviously the other members who are professionals would strongly object to this, but to just ensure that whatever broad international conventions are impacting upon the government of the day, it is very important for this to be conveyed to the Board. And, also, for the concerns that would be fed through the Board from the wider community to be fed back to Executive Council as to what these concerns are. It is from that point of view, so it is a question of expediency.

The Speaker: Before taking the next supplementary, I would ask that motion be moved for the suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) that Question Time can continue beyond 11.00 a.m.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Orders 23 (7) and (8) so that Question Time may continue beyond the hour of 11.00 a.m.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I second that motion.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time continues beyond 11.00 a.m.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I have a last supplementary, sir. Can the Honourable Member say what would be the significant difference between the operation of the Monetary Authority, once it is granted full autonomy, and the Monetary Authority as it presently operates?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Monetary Authority, as an independent, body will take decisions on the granting of licences, the revocation of licences, the development of rules and [part of tape missing] . . . to Executive Council and to appraise Executive Council as to the issues which would have been dealt with by the Monetary Authority, to give an overview of the financial industry.

Essentially, Mr. Speaker, the weekly applications that are now being submitted to Executive Council for consideration would be dealt with by an executive committee of the board. The Executive Council would be informed periodically as to the activities of the Monetary Authority.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to Question 139 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

No. 139: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development what provisions are in place at the Monetary Authority to protect investors from fraudulent or suspicious practices in mutual fund management and administration?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Under the Mutual Funds Law (1996 Revision), prior to obtaining a mutual fund administration licence, it must be demonstrated to the Monetary Authority's satisfaction that the applicant has:

- sufficient expertise to administer regulated funds;
- a sound reputation;
- provided proof that the administration of the regulated mutual funds will be done in a proper manner;
- a net worth of at least CI $400,000.

For funds not administered locally, such as those in the "registered funds" category, to qualify for registration a fund either has to be listed on a recognised stock exchange, which ensures that all information investors would require is publicly available and that the fund itself is subject to the regulatory regime of an exchange, or a fund must be restricted to qualified investors only, defined as a minimum investor subscription of US $50,000.

SUPPLEMENTARY

The Speaker: Supplementary, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Honourable Member state whether there is any ongoing monitoring of these managers and administrators of mutual funds or whether once you are qualified then that is the only criteria to be met?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, monitoring takes place on an ongoing basis. This is normally done through scrutinising the half-yearly reports that are normally provided to the Monetary Authority. These are being looked at. And anything that comes to light can trigger an investigation. Based on the information that is filed, this will indicate to the Monetary Authority if the fund is operating in a satisfactory manner.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Member state if any application for a mutual fund administration licence has been refused thus far?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Several applications would have been refused up to this point in time because as I said, at the end of the day, probity will have to be demonstrated [on] all relevant information, or that the necessary wealth or asset backing is in place in order to ensure that the fund is viable, and that the necessary expertise exists to ensure that it operates to the highest standard, thus providing the necessary protection to investors who will be investing in such funds.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If any of these applicants are aggrieved at the decision not to grant their licences, is there any method by which they can make any type of appeal or any body they can address in order to try to rectify whatever the circumstances are which prevents from acquiring that licence.?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, if an application is made and refused by Executive Council, then the recourse would be to go to a judiciary review. But normally, dialogue takes place between the Monetary Authority and the applicant in order to remedy any outstanding issue. At the end of the day, if a licence is not to be granted, it would be hoped that once the requirements have been outlined—which will be ably done by the Monetary Authority—that decision will be a mutual decision that will not be taken solely by the Authority or by Executive Council but the applicant will be made to understand why the application would not have been allowed.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Could the member explain what role Executive Council plays in this process?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The role by Executive Council would be the initial consideration of the application as recommended by the Monetary Authority, and then, if it is a question where more information is required, this will be sought. It is very likely that Executive Council will follow the recommendation of the Monetary Authority because the Monetary Authority does not in all instances recommend that a licence be granted. They will consider all the facts. Often time, they will make the recommendations that the licence not be allowed.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just for purposes of clarity, can the Member then say who actually grants the licence?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The licence is granted by Executive Council upon the recommendation of the Monetary Authority.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Finally, Mr. Speaker, again for purposes of clarity. . . so at this point in time, the Monetary Authority is not empowered with the ability to grant such licences?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: No, Mr. Speaker. But what is very important is that Executive Council recognises that the expertise for the consideration of the applications and weighing all the facts rests with the Monetary Authority. It is on this basis that Executive Council is guided by the recommendation of the Monetary Authority.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I promise this will be the final one. If the Monetary Authority is not in a position to grant these licences, does this imply full autonomy on its existence?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I will use an analogy and I trust you will permit me. The good Lord could have made the world in one day. But He took six. This is to establish an object lesson to humanity that when an intention is expressed, it is much better for us to go along on a timely process to achieve the end result.

The government has established an objective to grant full autonomy to the Monetary Authority. This is not one in which the government was forced into; it is one that was initiated by the government. I outlined the steps that have been taken since 1992—the amalgamation of the Superintendent of Insurance Office, the Company Manager's Office and also the Inspector of Banks and Trust Companies into the Financial Services Supervision Department. That was subsequently rolled up in the Monetary Authority.

What the government is now doing is going through and satisfying itself that the necessary operational procedures backed up by legislative requirements will be fully satisfied to ensure proper accountability and for the Monetary Authority itself to go through the learning curve. Based on the progress up to this point in time and the intentions expressed by the government, there are all indications that the Monetary Authority is on its way to becoming a fully independent entity.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to Question 140 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

No. 140: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development what arrangements are in place at the Monetary Authority for investors or shareholders to seek recourse in the event of allegations of fraud, abuse of authority, mal-administration or misappropriation of funds.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Mutual Funds Law (1999 Revision) addresses these risks by empowering the Monetary Authority to take any or all of a broad range of enforcement actions, if the Authority is satisfied that a mutual fund:

- 1) is or is likely to become unable to meet its obligations as they fall due;
- 2) is carrying on or attempting to carry on business or is winding up its business voluntarily in a manner that is prejudicial to its investors or creditors; or
- 3) is carrying on or attempting to carry on business without complying with any condition of its Mutual Fund Licence.

If the Monetary Authority becomes aware of the existence of any of these conditions, it may take any of a broad range of enforcement actions in an attempt to preserve the rights of investors and creditors of the fund. These actions include:

- 4) revoking any mutual fund licence the mutual fund holds;
- 5) imposing conditions or further conditions on any mutual fund licence the mutual fund holds and to amend or revoke those conditions;
- 6) requiring the substitution of any promoter or operator of the mutual fund;
- 7) appointing a person to advise the fund on the proper conduct of its affairs; and
- 8) appointing a person to assume control of the affairs of the mutual fund.

The Monetary Authority may also apply to the Grand Court for an order to take any other action it considers necessary to protect the interests of investors and creditors.

Enforcement actions are initiated from the Monetary Authority's application of its normal supervisory procedures or from credible information provided by the investors, creditors, or other members of the public. In all circumstances, the Monetary Authority conducts a thorough preliminary investigation before commencing any enforcement actions.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Whenever the Monetary Authority takes any of these broad range of enforcement actions in an attempt to preserve the rights of investors and creditors of the fund, can the honourable Member state whether the Monetary Authority acts on its own volition? Or does it have to seek authority through the Board or take instructions from Executive Council?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Under the Mutual Funds Law, the Monetary Authority is empowered to take any of these actions without referring to Executive Council or to the Board.

The Monetary Authority (depending on the nature of the review that is underway) may find it necessary to consult the Board to apprise of its actions, and if it is one that could, let's say, have an impact upon the financial community. It is very good for the members of the Board to be apprised as to what is being done by the Monetary Authority in order to address a range of questions that may be raised by, let's say, members of the Legislative Assembly, members of the public or just to be satisfied that the Monetary Authority is on top of all of these issues and pursuing the right course of action.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Through you, Mr. Speaker. The Member just outlined what would normally take place depending on the exact circumstance. But he stopped short of addressing what role might be played by the Executive Council. Would the Member state if any role at all in this process is played by Executive Council?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: There is no role to be played by Executive Council in this process. The Monetary Authority independently pursues its investigation and, if need be, going even to the Courts. The Monetary Authority exercises its judgment in this regard.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Member tell the House whether the extreme sanction of revoking a mutual fund licence disqualifies the person from gaining any further licences from mutual funds in this jurisdiction?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, it would preclude the person from qualifying for a licence to administer a mutual fund because as the Monetary Authority, as just pointed out . . . and we have on hand, the Head of the Investment Section, Mr. Don Seymour, together with the Managing Director, Mr. Neville Grant. The Monetary Authority looks at the regulatory record, that is, the expertise of the individual in question. And where a licence has been, revoked such a person will not be authorised to administer a mutual fund in the future.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for today.

Moving on to item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Presentation of Papers and Reports. Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Auditor General's Report on the Audited Accounts of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the year 1997 was tabled at an earlier sitting and is now open for debate.

The Honourable Third Official Member, do you care to speak to the Minute before debate commences?

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

GOVERNMENT MINUTE ON THE REPORT OF THE STANDING PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE ON THE AUDITOR GENERAL'S REPORT ON THE AUDITED ACCOUNTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS FOR THE YEAR ENDED 1997

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I have been made to understand from the Deputy Financial Secretary (who was acting as the Third Official Member at that time) that the report has been tabled. So, it is now open for debate. At this point in time, Mr. Speaker, I don't think I would want to add anything in addition to the content of the report, which would have been already advised to this Honourable House.

The Speaker: The floor is now open for debate. Does any honourable Member wish to speak? (Pause) If not, maybe this would be a convenient time to take the morning break. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.30 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.05 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on the Government's Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Auditor General's Report on the Audited Accounts of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the Year Ending 1997. Does any member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: It has been so long since I tabled my report on behalf of the Standing Public Accounts Committee (PAC) on the Auditor General's Report for 1997, and there is so much water under the bridge since that time, that it's difficult to recall what was being discussed.

With the lapse of time, I am sure that a lot of those issues we were concerned about at the time of the report have been addressed by government. However, I would like to make some remarks on comments made in the Government Minute on both reports, that is, the Auditor General's Report and the Public Accounts Committee Report. I would like to follow the format of the report.

The first area that I would like to deal with is on the Audit Opinion—Accounting for Overseas Medical Expenditure. What it addresses here is the concern the Public Accounts Committee and the Auditor General had for indigent persons who had to be sent overseas for medical attention. Experience has shown that this expenditure amounts to about $2 million per year.

If that is the experience then it makes sense to recognise that expenditure and account for it by making a budgetary provision for that purpose. I am pleased to see that government recognises the value of this recommendation and has agreed that this will be done.

The other concern raised by our reports was the use of advance accounts for expenditure in the area of medical expense. I for one, support the position taken by the Auditor General in that it is important for government to account for expenditure in the year it is incurred. If government incurs $2 million in overseas expenses for 1999, every effort should be made that that expenditure is recognised in 1999. Otherwise you get a distorted position as far as government's financial position.

Government has finally recognised that this should be done and mentioned that this will be done in the 1999 accounts.

Also on the medical services is an ongoing concern regarding delinquent medical fees. This goes back some eight to ten years. The point raised by the Public Accounts Committee and the Auditor General is that the longer these accounts are allowed to remain outstanding, the greater the risk that they will become non-collectable.

I am very pleased to see that in August 1998 a Debt Collector was appointed at the Health Services Department with specific responsibility to follow up overseas medical accounts. I am also pleased to see that results are being realised in regard to collecting some of these outstanding fees. On page 2 of the Government Minute it says, "The repayment plans provide for the repayment to Government of CI$1,406,650 over the next five years."

It is important for our people to recognise that government needs money to operate, just like any business. But there is a certain feeling that if it's government, it has to be free. I think some time early this year we were finally in a position to open our new hospital in George Town. All I have received since it has opened is very, very positive feedback on the quality of the facility, the quality of the service. People must be prepared to pay for that quality of service. So, I am very pleased to see that efforts have been finally put in place to start collecting some of the outstanding fees owed.

It is my opinion that the health services can be put in a financial position to carry itself with a small subsidy from government. This would put us in a position where we'd have funds available for other needs.

The next area I would like to comment on is the Customs Department. We highlighted the deposits in our report, as did the Auditor General in his 1997 report. I am pleased to see that these accounts have finally been reconciled. I trust that the committee's recommendations that autonomy should be given to the Customs Department—which is probably the largest revenue collecting department—in regard to its bank accounts and the handling of its financial affairs.

I am also pleased that a qualified person has been appointed to address these areas. I trust that efforts will be made to ensure that it doesn't regress back to the situation we found it in, as mentioned in our report.

The next area I would like to comment on is the grant to private schools. I would first like to comment on the proposed scholarships mentioned on page 6 of the Government Minute. It was the committee's feeling that because government provides a substantial amount of money annually to the private schools of this country (which I totally support) that the private schools should have a scholarship programme in place to accommodate students in our society who are interested in attending a private school but who are not in a financial position to do so.

I believe that the ministry was a little confused as to what we were requesting. Our information was that some of the private schools hold a number of spaces open for children of persons on work permits rather than making space available for Caymanians who may not be in a financial position. I would like to read the response to our request, because I think they misinterpreted our request. It says: "The PAC's recommendation calls for Government to set up a system of scholarships to private schools, presumably at primary and high school level. This system is common in jurisdictions where private school education is superior to public school education, and is a way of encouraging and ensuring that very bright students reach their academic potential. In our system, such a scholarship scheme could be perceived as detrimental to the continuing development of the public school system."

Mr. Speaker, I agree with what is being said here, but that is not what we were requesting. All we were saying was that because government subsidises all private schools they should have a scholarship programme in place to cater to students who may have a desire to attend the school, but are financially unable to do so.

Our other recommendation was that on an annual basis the private schools should provide the ministry with accounts of the schools to reflect how the money given by way of a grant was spent. I think that is very fair. We did not insist, as I recall, that those accounts had to be audited. Mr. Speaker, you and I are both aware that audits can become very expensive indeed.

I think that if the private schools are required to provide some semblance of accounts that they would be more conscientious because they would have to account for whatever comes in. I don't see this being a problem, because even on a monthly basis private schools (at least the one I am associated with in West Bay) provide financial statements so they can see exactly what is happening in regard to the school. It would be very easy for them to provide a copy of the financial statement at the end of the year to government when requesting the release of the subsidy from government. I would not insist that these accounts be audited because of the expense involved.

The other issue raised by the committee and the Auditor General was in regard to the lease of the Prep School property of the old First Baptist Church that was bought by government some time ago. There was a contract or an agreement between government and the Prep School, and it called for a payment of $2,000 per month. We expected the Prep School to honour that commitment, or if they could not afford that to come back to government and ask that it be reduced or waived. If that had been done, we'd have no problem. I think it's important whenever government is part of an agreement, that government sees that the terms are complied with.

The committee also recommended that the lease payment charged should reflect the commercial value of similar property. Maybe in hindsight that would not have been a very popular recommendation, but the whole reason behind that was that if the lease reflects current positions as to rent, then we could see the real cost of the transaction.

I am pleased to see that government is working on changing the formula in regard to the grant to private schools, and basing it on the number of Caymanian students who may be attending that institution. I think that it would encourage private schools depending on government subsidies to give preference to Caymanians who may want to attend those facilities.

The next area I would like to look at is the comments in relation to Pedro St. James. This project has been talked about and debated for a very, very long time. It is a project that cost us a great deal of money. I think that there is still the possibility that this project will be able to pay for itself. And I am sure the ministry and the department are working toward that objective. It provides another tourist attraction. That is very important because here in the Cayman Islands we are very limited as far as activities.

One weekend my wife and I decided to go out and do a little touring. We went through the Botanic Gardens. I had not been there since Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II officially opened it. I was quite impressed by what I saw. I really was. Provided the management is in place, these projects will be able to pay for themselves.

The Auditor General and the Public Accounts Committee were concerned about how the project was financed and the tendering process. I realise this is a specialised area, but I firmly believe that more could have been done to give the impression that everyone who was interested had a fair opportunity to bid on providing the services for this project.

I am not talking about the restoration part of it. And even there, it was important to put a bid out and get tenders from establishments with experience in that area, and to secure not only the best professional service but the best available service at the best price.

From reading the Government Minute, it appears that one of the reasons these were not tendered is that there was one major project manager, the outfit out of Canada. It appears that all services ran through them. It might have been okay, but it didn't look good because on some of the services there were no competitive bids. The way to handle the different phases of the project would have been to do a bid for a major contractor and say 'okay you're in charge' and whatever the figure, government secures the best position or the best value for its money. That particular project manager or contractor then has the authority because the overall figure has already been covered through the tendering process. They would then be in a position to have secured those services needed through subcontractors.

Another area of concern was that proper financial controls were not in place at the time of the report. I am very pleased to have learned, subsequent to that, that the Pedro Castle project has employed a full time qualified accountant to provide the financial statements that will be required not only for government but for the Caribbean Development Bank. Those are the parties responsible for financing the project.

One potential I see for this project is securing some agreement with cruise ship lines in regard to tours (and I am not saying that the minister and the ministry are not working on this), maybe a combined tour that includes Pedro Castle and the Botanic Gardens. If we get the cruise ships involved, and they make money on it, believe you me, they will promote it. From experience, I have learned that if the cruise director says this is what you need to do, 90 percent of the passengers will do that. They take advantage of the cruise director's recommendations.

Those are the comments that I wanted to make in regard to the Government Minute. I am pleased that the majority of the areas of concern highlighted by the Public Accounts Committee and the Auditor General are being addressed or have been addressed. I trust that in the future some of the mistakes that we highlighted really do not have to be repeated. At the end of the day, it's public funds and we are the stewards of the people. It's important that we provide the confidence they need to ensure that public funds are well spent.

I thank you for your patience. Those are my comments. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The floor is open for debate. (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Last call, does any other member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was just giving the government opportunity to make any reply they might have wished to on the comments of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Speaker, it is going to be a little bit difficult at this point in time to sensibly make comments on all three documents that are before us. The truth of the matter is, we are now dealing with an Auditor General's report for the year ended 31st December 1997. By now—in October 1999—it is difficult for us to know if any of the problems which have been pointed out in the report and commented on by the Public Accounts Committee Report, and consequently commented on by the Government Minute, have been addressed. So, because there is no other method for me to employ that I can see, I have to work on the premise that this is the state of affairs and, of course, the government will have to reply and say what has been done. I am sorry that that might seem to be a procedure which may take a while for certain things but I have no other method of dealing with it.

Let me be very critical, regardless of excuses that may be made. I find it almost untenable to be debating the Government Minute on the Public Accounts Committee Report on the Auditor General's Report of December 31st 1997 of the accounts of the Cayman Islands exactly one year and ten months later. To be fair to the process as I understand it, the norm is that probably within six months of the accounts being prepared, the Auditor General's Report is prepared and then the Public Accounts Committee meets and, of course, then the Government Minute is laid after the Public Accounts Committee report is completed.

The norm is, as my experience has told me in the past, you would normally have found this debate taking place almost a year ago. I do not know truthfully why this is the case. I wish someone would tell me, truthfully, why this is the case. But surely, when our procedures were being crafted and when the way the government operates was being put together, and when the role of legislatures was being envisaged, there was purpose to all of the supposing madness why these procedures are the way they are.

I hold the view, until someone can prove different to me, that some persons somewhere in the chain of command have total disregard for accepted procedures and time lines under which this legislature operates. If anyone is going to start to tell me about all of the extraordinary circumstances that have befallen us in recent times, I don't want to hear that. Mr. Speaker, the government has to function and every agency within that government has to function.

I understand what pressure is. I too live with it. And I am not being unsympathetic towards that so-called pressure. I am simply saying that we need to be doing what we are doing in a better fashion.

Here we are now, going to spend hours, and hours, on this debate. And because of the timing that has fallen upon us, probably by the time members speak to the Report and the Government Minute, and replies are made to us, we will find that the greater portion of what we are debating has already been taken care of. But the difficulty we have, Mr. Speaker, is that we cannot presuppose what is taken care of from what is not. That clearly shows that there is some malfunction in the system.

I want to be careful because people might take offence. This is not being pointed at anyone in particular. What I would really like to know is why this is the case? That's what I would like to know. The Honourable Third Official Member is who will have to reply to all of that and I can only say that I know him to be a truthful person. I just wish that his collective responsibility didn't bind him so that he cannot tell us where the blame lies, if there is to blame to lie. I don't know.

Be that as it may, perhaps while we are here debating the Government Minute on the Public Accounts Committee Report of the 1997 Report of the Auditor General, we might have handed out to us the next Auditor General's Report for the accounts ending December 31st 1998, and we will see how long it will take for the process to allow that one to be debated. We will see.

But just to make the point very clear: Even though we will have new document in hand, which is confidential, I am saying that it is very likely that the next year's report will be handed out to us while we are debating it. That really doesn't make any sense, Mr. Speaker. It makes no sense whatsoever. The real problem with it is that the purpose of legislators in this regard, sir, is totally thrown through the window. Obviously, the reason for these documents being tabled and debated is so that legislators have an opportunity to give their input, and for the relevant persons in authority take on board whatever makes sense to them and put that into the works with whatever they are doing to remedy any circumstance or situation these reports may have pointed out in the system.

So, whether done by design or by accident, it certainly puts the representatives of the people of this country in circumstances that are not conducive for them to perform their duties properly.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it is also going to be difficult at this point in time to relate to issues that have been addressed in all three of the documents because what we will find—and this is not peculiar to this specific setting—is that there are issues addressed in the Auditor General's Report, which will either not have been addressed, or only partially addressed in the subsequent reports and the Government Minute. I am not really seeking your guidance here but I am saying to you that the way we have to debate (if we are going into any depth) is that we may well have to talk about the Auditor General's Report isolated to itself in some instances. We may have to talk about the report of the Public Accounts Committee in isolation, and we also might have to refer to the Government Minute in isolation because all three documents are not lined up in sequence with regard to what has been addressed. I just wanted to explain that, sir, because I am not suggesting there is anything wrong with that. I only want to make sure that the Chair understands the line of debate that may follow.

Mr. Speaker, there are many areas that I think need to be addressed. Had we at this point in time had knowledge of what has been done and what hasn't been done, we would have been able to do it. But to do our jobs properly, we have to raise the questions and get the answers and that is what this exercise is going to entail.

Mr. Speaker, at this point in time before I get going, perhaps, it might be convenient [to break] and then when we return, I will start on the various submissions I will make from these reports, sir.

The Speaker: If that pleases the House, we shall suspend proceedings for lunch until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.40 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate on the Government Minute continues. The First Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, thank you.

While I might not be taking the issues in sequence, as I mentioned earlier it is very difficult because each document has its own character and identity. I want to address in the Auditor General's Report on page 15, unallocated stores and fuel advance accounts. I am not going to dwell on that issue because I understand what the Auditor General is saying and I think those matters are being dealt with. But in [paragraph] 1.23 of page 15 the Auditor General says, "During the first ten months of operation the new refuelling facilities computer system has experienced many hours of down time forcing staff back to manual accounting system. Unfortunately, manual records have caused many disputes with client departments over their fuel costs. The department is working with Texaco to install a replacement automated fuel management and billing system which it hopes will be operational in 1999."

I do not know what has been done regarding this, sir. But I know that attached to the problem identified in this report are also some other problems. My understanding was that this fuel facility was created to solve all of the problems to ensure that there is proper record keeping, and to ensure proper billing so that at the end of the day everything could be accounted for. I don't know if this is the position as of now, I doubt it very much. And it is also my understanding that this refuelling facility has been placed under the direct supervision of the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services (DVES). I don't know where it stands now, but I think it is an issue that needs to be clarified. I would like to hear exactly what the situation is with this facility.

In speaking about DVES, there are some issues also not attached to the refuelling facility, but to the operation of that department itself. On page 35 of the Auditor General's Report, when addressing various issues regarding this department, I found something a bit strange. A few short days ago there was a question posed to the Minister of Tourism during Question Time. His ministry is in charge of this department and he is the minister responsible. It was regarding the vehicles and heavy equipment owned and operated by the various government departments.

The answer was that the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services was responsible for the entire fleet. There is a conflict here immediately because in the Auditor General's Report as at December 31 1997, on page 35 he says, "Government's fleet consists of approximately 400 vehicles plant and equipment and the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services is responsible for supporting approximately 370 of these."

If that department is responsible for all of these vehicles, how come in the very next line it says it is only responsible for some? It can't be responsible for all and only be responsible for some. That leads me to the main thrust of my argument, Mr. Speaker.

Before I begin to discuss this issue I want to make it very clear that the position I take in discussing any of these departments is not meant to look for faults, but to simply understand what we are not doing right, and for government to develop a policy to correct all of these things rather than having us battering them morning, noon and night for years on end.

What I am going to be talking about now is nothing new; it has been repeated over and over. If we go back to the Auditor General's Reports of three or four years ago, we will find him addressing the same issues. But we don't get anything done. In a nutshell, as of now (to the best of my knowledge) the way the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services operates is that it gets a subsidy and it goes through the whole year doing what it can do in regard to servicing and maintaining the government's fleet of vehicles and equipment. Whenever they need more they come and ask for it. On most occasions in the past it was given via a contingency warrant and then it comes to Finance Committee after the money has been received and spent. The Finance Committee simply has to rubberstamp such contingency warrants.

For the life of me—and now I address this to the government—I want somebody to tell me how a government can stand by and simply accept that a department that bills for its services and for whatever parts it has to buy . . . how can a government accept that this department must operate with a subsidy all the time? That makes no sense whatsoever! But it is typical of what has been happening in several areas.

To be fair to all concerned, it is something that so many people have grown into that it seems to me that the majority of the world just decided that 'Okay, that's how it is.' So, we just leave it like that.

I want to go into a little more detail. If the Department of, let us say Planning (just to use any department off the cuff), has six or eight vehicles and the Planning Department staff know that these vehicles need to be maintained and serviced regularly, they set up a schedule with Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services (DVES), and the work goes on. They take the vehicles in and if parts are need they are ordered.

Throughout all of this, DVES is supplying a service at a price. So I cannot understand how, when you know that your operating loss at points in time exceeds $.5 million when you are providing a service for a fee, this can be acceptable. The private sector would declare bankruptcy, unless they were rich and could just keep pumping money into it. Something has to be wrong!

Here is where manifestation of the wider ramifications frightens me. That place has staff who have worked there for many, many years. If you go through the Auditor General's Reports—not just this one, but previous reports—you will find that there are implications that of inefficiencies in the staff. I am going to tell you where it is frightening and why we need to look these things squarely in the eye and address them properly.

Some of those staff members have been there for 25 years and more. Now, who is going to tell them that they no longer have a job? It is not going to happen. But we preach about government efficiency and all of that. What we are doing is allowing situations to proliferate within the system and we are killing the potential of individuals. That's what we are doing.

If you talk to those staff members, you will find that because of the way it works many of them are simply saying 'I will do what I have to do to remain in my job to be secure.' There is no incentive whatsoever for them to perform within the system—none! But if you ask the powers that be, the answer will be, 'Well, our staff is so inefficient.' Mr. Speaker, that is hogwash! Don't just look to place blame, look to find solutions.

Now they are going to come back with a whole pile of fancy stuff about what they are doing, but they have plenty to do to convince me. Plenty!

Regardless of our system, and we say that government creates policy and the civil service implements the policy under the guidelines they can operate, and the legislators vote for the money, the truth of the matter is (and, Mr. Speaker, I am using this one example) that this country cannot—CANNOT!—afford to continue to operate the way it has been operating.

When any reply comes about this or any other issue that is raised in this specific debate, I know that ways and means will have been thought up to couch the whole circumstance. But the truth of the matter is that for too long the government has simply accepted things that have been inherited and the mindset has been 'This is how it is, so this is how it must remain' and we just simply work within whatever that is and do the best we can even if there is greater loss next year. That's how it has been. That has to go through the window!

I grant that the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development is spearheading financial reform in many areas. My arguments are not in any way coming forward to question the intention of those reforms. My arguments are meant to spur those reforms on, and to change the mindset of the people who have the authority to do something about it. The Financial Secretary and his staff cannot do it alone. This has to be a total buy-in from top to bottom, and from bottom to top with no gaps in between.

When we look at departments, . . . and I want to go back to that same question that was asked in the House. Mr. Speaker, I frankly don't care who takes it personally. I am not cynical, but for the seven years I have been in here the only way I can do my job is to forget about who's who. And I have decided that I am going to do that.

When we asked the question about certain departments taking their maintenance and repair services out into the private sector because they were dissatisfied with the functions of the government department responsible for maintenance and repairs, we got a whole pile of couched answers. Answers that didn't really answer which I am sure put the minister on the spot.

We talked about the police who probably have one of the largest fleets in the government. The minister has taken over responsibility for that department since January. This is November. And when I posed that question, it was the first time that the minister knew that DVES was not servicing the vast majority of the police vehicles.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Preach, preach, preach. Tell them all to go home.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This is not brought up to be funny, but the principle I am discussing here (and my debate may overlap into other areas, Mr. Speaker, but you will bear with me because it is relevant) . . . I am going to tell you what we face. Right now (without going into details), in almost every area that we can think of that affects every citizen in this country—the area of education, the area of even health, the area of national security . . . and I could go on, and on, and on—we are looking, not in the distant future but in the immediate future, at engaging in huge capital expenditure.

I used health, not meaning that we have created a new facility for health, I am talking about the other things that are going to be needed outside of that main facility which have not been addressed yet. We are looking at major capital expenditure. History will have proven (and the honourable Third Official Member can address this as he wishes) that at least for the past five years the gap between recurrent expenditure and recurrent revenue is on a continuously narrowing trend. What that means is that if it continues as it is expected to continue, and everything stays constant as it is, in a very short time our recurrent expenditure is going to exceed our recurrent revenue.

That may sound like a heavy statement. But any facts and figures will bear me out. The minute we get into that position—before we even talk about capital expenditure—we then operate in deficit.

Here's the scene: We have a recurrent expenditure increasing. Our recurrent revenue is not increasing proportionately because we can't be bringing these tax packages every year the way we have been in the recent past just to catch up without having some sort of sense to the whole affair. Are we, as a country, going to be brought so low that we have to borrow just to exist?

Government will say that I am an Opposition member so I have to preach that way because it suits my argument. That is not why I am saying what I am saying. Government can only look me squarely in the eye and say, 'If the formula stays how it is, you are perfectly right. That's what is going to happen.' Because every indicator says that. I say that they cannot, after doing all the shaving where they have shaved right down and blood has started coming that their recurrent revenue as it is, meet expenditure as projected. They cannot get together in three or four days and bring another tax package. It's not going to happen. Politically, it is unwise and unacceptable—and it will not happen. But the reality of the situation is that it's possible that that is what they will be faced with.

The point I am making is this: Regardless of the system under which we operate, regardless of where we say the buck stops, we have to understand and accept, and be willing to tell the public exactly as it is—that we cannot continue to do business the way it is. The government cannot leave the Financial Secretary to get up and talk at length and in detail about financial reform when in their various ministries the will from them . . . that's the challenge. Let them one by one come and defend themselves. The will from them does not exist. I say that because as of now I see no proof. I am talking about the elected ministers who find themselves responsible for the various ministries.

People like me with no college degree, who try to deal with issues like this, are probably looked at like not having any ability to put a case forward. That's all well and good. But even in seven short years, I can quote examples of what a little bit of common sense thinking can do. And the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning knows exactly what I am talking about.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning knows what I am talking about when he has 75 parents up at him about no space at the schools and not enough teachers. For five years I have been telling him that! Not only me, but every time I bring something like that up (because it comes from the wrong corner) it's either a ten page document or a lambasting about who doesn't know about education, who's defunct, and who's full of this, and who's full of that.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Preach, brother, preach!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yeah.

In fact, during the 1996 campaign, from the court steps I read out a list of things that needed to be done to the physical educational facilities in this country. I said then—in 1996—that at best, if we started immediately, we were looking at $45 million.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Preach brother! He's running. Preach some more!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In a short time after that he brought us a list of things—after a continuous bombardment of questions—that needed to be done that totaled $54 million. Now we see in the papers about this $50 million . . . Mr. Speaker I will be a French chicken if, after it's all over, it's not $65 million.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I'm glad you didn't say Chinese chicken because you'd get eaten in a hurry!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: But while these little things I am saying may be seen to be political, and may be seen to be straying away from these three reports, the point I am making is that the time for arguing about the preaching is over. It is late enough in the day as it is.

Do you know where the real problem is going to come in? I am going to tell you where the real problem is going to come in. When we talk about two primary schools that need to be built, another high school; we are talking about additions to the other primary schools that have to be done by September coming (otherwise the children are going to be standing up on top of one another again), what will happen to us because of no forward planning—none whatsoever on the part of the elected policymakers—is that it is all going to come upon us at one time. Then we poor members on the backbench are going to be faced with the tough decision of having six slices of pie to share between 36 people, and won't know which way to turn.

That is the perfect scenario for (I can't say it how I want to say it, but . . .) a mess up. Any time you are under crisis management you cannot perform to your ability. You have no control over what things cost because you need it done yesterday, and not tomorrow. And nothing happens right, and you cannot get value for money then. That's what we will be facing. But, without seeking absolution from the whole affair, what I am doing now is all I can do. And I am doing that to the best of my ability. Others do the same. That's all we can do.

Mr. Speaker, this business about "Father forgive them for they know not what they do" does not work in this scenario. The Father has to forgive them twice—for they will know what they do, and what they don't do!

Let me finish up with this DVES situation. When we look in the Auditor General's Report under "Financial Performance of the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services," here is how the Auditor General sums up the financial performance of this department. He says: "Although DVES is an internal service department, it budgets and accounts for cash revenues and expenses in the same manner as other government departments. The traditional emphasis is on remaining within budget. There is no operating requirement for the department to breakeven, and no performance standards or targets—financial or non-financial—are set. The audit office would expect that internal service department to recover all cash operating costs at a basic minimum. However, the department is operating well below a breakeven position. On average, it appears to be recovering only about two-thirds of its cash operating costs. Figure 2.2 shows that in four years (from 1994 to 1997) the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services recorded total operating losses of $2.12 million.”

How many classrooms could that build?

How many miles of road could that build?

If it seems like I am jumping all over this one department, that is not the case. This is but an example. I will even go so far as to say that no one person can be blamed. But we have to understand what is happening and do something about it. And this business . . . how is it the minister puts it again? You can't pick the apple until it's ripe or something to that effect. Mr. Speaker, there are no apples left on the tree. The tree is bare. That's what happened.

The Auditor General says, “It is not possible to provide a quantitative explanation of why DVES has consistently failed to break even. However, the following factors are all relevant: Labour inefficiency including excessive idle time; unbilled direct labour time; variable performance by direct labour; operating constraints caused by budget deficiencies; poor management information systems; high ratio of indirect staff to direct staff resulting in high overhead; in appropriate financial accounting and reporting base.”

Mr. Speaker, there are another three pages of relevant information. Don't worry, I am not going to bother to read that.

Let me tell you where leadership and motivation is important in these instances. The first thing the Auditor General mentions is “labour inefficiency including excessive idle time.” Let me tell you where I differ from some others in the thought process. When I see “labour inefficiency including excessive idle time” it doesn't come to me that the staff at DVES are idle and lazy. Do you know what comes to me? That management is poor, and/or the system is poor.

Never let anybody think that we are stupid enough to grab hold of the thought that everything that is wrong with DVES is because of the staff. The staff will only function as well as the system under which they function. And if there is idle time, it must mean that the system is idle. If there is labour inefficiency, then the system must be inefficient. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, we might hear some good news forthcoming in regard to the plans. Not just with this, but in other areas.

Mr. Speaker, we have a serious responsibility here. Our responsibility is not just to keep everybody happy and quiet; our responsibility is to get things done the right way—raise arguments, raise Cain. If they won't do anything about it, keep hammering at it. That's our job and we are going to keep doing it until something is done.

When we preach transparency, when we talk about real clarity, when we talk about accountability, we need to get it on, we need to make it happen. For lack of these my country suffers. My country is smothering. It is dying. We can preach all the good news we want to preach, but the facts do not lie, they betray the truth. And the truth is, with the best intention in the world, if the whole system is not addressed I am afraid we are going to fall by the wayside.

We have peaked with our financial performance as a country. I take the view that many areas at this point in time, have levelled off (at least for a period of time), and I don't see in the immediate future any great growth in leaps and bounds. That is not unnatural. And those things are not necessarily caused by internal problems. They can easily be caused by circumstances over which we have no control. But understanding that historically these things happen, we have to be prepared. And we are not prepared.

I am not going to talk about it for very long. I mentioned earlier six slices of pie to feed 36 people . . . when we know what has to happen with the schools—and look at what happened up at Northward recently. When we stop arguing about who was right or wrong and get about doing what has to be done to correct the situation; and having learned all of the lessons and understanding what has happened, where is the money going to come from?

Then the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs is going to find himself in another shooting match for the demands of the few little paltry dollars that are there to get what. Anyway

Perhaps on a Wednesday afternoon at 3.15 the thought is that I should not be preaching like that, that I should be preaching happiness. I am not happy! In fact, it goes beyond sadness, Mr. Speaker. Every time I think about it, it gets me riled up. When I think about the years I have tried to get points across, knowing that people understand me, and watching them do nothing about it . . . it eats my soul out.

This report as of December 1997 (and I am sure the government and the relevant agencies have had possession of this document now for quite some time, even though it is now just being debated) . . . I would like the minister responsible for this to get up during this debate and look in the Auditor General's Report and see where on pages 37 to 39 there is a slew of possible reforms for this department. I would like for him to go through that checklist of recommendations, which are probably not all of the possible recommendations, and let us know what is in train, what's being done, and how it's being done.

Do you know something else, Mr. Speaker? This one can't pass me at whatever risk it is, but I have sat in my little corner here that I like so very much, and I have listened to ministers reporting. I am not standing here to judge whether they are reporting on their own volition, or from information passed to them. But I have heard information that was such misinformation that it's not funny.

And I stand here with knowledge of that. Anyone who wishes to challenge me can do so at any time. And I can prove it!

Misinformation disseminated disrespectfully to the people of this country to either save themselves from an embarrassing circumstance or to protect others. I am not out to get everybody. But until we change our way of thinking and accountability becomes the order of the day, everybody is going to operate like that. It has to stop!

If we don't take the bull by the horns now there will be no hope for us. Those of us in here who haven't quite gotten to that point yet are going to fall right into that trap and become just like that and spend the rest of our days being the same way it has been forever—and to no avail.

Knowing full well the risks involved when I speak like this, I only pray to God that people can understand what I am trying to say. I don't want to hurt anybody. But we have to change the way we do it. The ministers find themselves in untenable circumstances sometimes. I know that. And sometimes it's vice versa, because I am not absolving them either.

If there is any light at all at the end of the tunnel, I make my points and I state my opinions with no intention to castigate or cast aspersions, but knowing full well—I know it, and the people who do it know that I know it! And they know that I know who they are. I don't want to say any more. I want to see it done different. That's all I am saying.

One of these fine days patience is going to die. And then there is going to be another war, and we don't want that to happen. I want to be as candid and as truthful as I can be. We understand that many people go into a system that exists, and to survive they find themselves having to operate the same way in order to fit into the system with no ability to change the system because they are afraid that they will not survive. We want everybody to understand that unless we all get together and do something about it right now . . . everybody will feel good and see the result. I don't think that's an unfair comment.

Moving on, I want to take a few minutes to deal with a topic that has brought controversy not only to the floor of this House but to the country. I think many opinions have been formed not based on fact, but on what people hear. I am talking about the Pedro Castle situation.

There was a private member's motion lodged here several months ago. But we don't have any control over the Business Committee, and it seems like the Business Committee has decided that that motion will not be dealt with until the Auditor General's Report on Pedro Castle is complete. My understanding of that is the Auditor General's Report on the Accounts of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the year ending 31 December 1998 is nearly completed.

The irony of that is that when we go to debate that report, it makes no sense to deal with the motion because all of that will be there. It is not to say that the motion won't come and not be debated, but it is because of this reasoning that I decided to address a few issues which were addressed in the Auditor General's Report today.

The Speaker: Would this be a convenient time to take the afternoon break?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.33 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.04 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Auditor General's Report on the Audited Accounts of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the Year Ending 1997. The First Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: When we took our break, I was just about to go into the Pedro Castle issue, which is reported on in the Auditor General's Report.

Before I debate the issue, out of an abundance of caution sir, I want to make sure before I do anything that I do it in the right manner. On a previous occasion, if memory serves me right, there was some issue about matters involving the courts on the Pedro Castle restoration project. My debate will not surround any individuals. I just want to ensure that you do not have any problem for me to continue.

The Speaker: You may comment on the Auditor General's Report. If you get out of line, I shall stop you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. And you know, once we have dialogue before you will not have a problem with me being out of line. I might be out of shape, but I won't go out of line sir.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: On page 45 of the Auditor General's Report he first addresses the start-up fee for Pedro Castle. He said, "A total of $307,261 was spent against this vote in 1997, but only $150,000 relates to the start-up expenses for Pedro St. James. Of the remaining $157,261, $114,000 relates to payments made to a contractor for the acquisition and installation of plants at Pedro St. James, that amount being $47,000; and the Queen Elizabeth II Botanic Park, $67,000."

He says that "these expenses have been misclassified and should have been charged to separate capital votes." Then he went on to say that there had been problems with Caribbean Development Bank making reimbursements to cost against the loan agreed on with Caribbean Development Bank because the bank's tendering procedures were not complied with.

He relates other areas also where certain expenses should also have been classified as capital and were not. But one of the important aspects here is the fact that payments, which dealt with two separate projects, were bunched into one.

Before I go any further with my debate on Pedro Castle, I want to draw attention to some information that is public knowledge and simply collated from the various budget documents over the years of the life of this project.

In a substantive question regarding the total costs of the Pedro St. James project, if memory serves me right, the total cost outlined to this honourable House was $8.71 million. Here is where we need to get certain facts established. When the representatives from the Caribbean Development Bank visited in 1996, a total cost of the project was established. After these representatives dealt with the various agencies and got enough facts together, they themselves produced what they thought was a valid projected cost of the project given the terrain under which it was to be developed. Again, if memory serves me right, that amount was established to be $8.67 million. And I am not getting right down to the one-dollar and cent, Mr. Speaker. So let no one get misguided and think I am going to get too technical here. Anyway, it has been said that the project was supposed to cost $8.67 million, and government answered a substantive question saying it has cost either $8.68 [million] or $8.71 [million]—very close to what the projected cost was supposed to be.

Now, the Auditor General has said in his report that his best estimate of the project was somewhere in the region of $9.5 million. On top of all of that, when we pull these figures that I just referred to from 1995 through 1998 (and I wasn't sure I had this document, but I do have it in my possession), the government's answer to that substantive question said that the total cost to government for research, planning, feasibility, restoration and construction, land acquisition, stamp duty, start-up cost, and pre-operating expenses was $8,677,071. For ease, we can refer to that as $8.6 million. The projected cost was $8.67 [million]. For all intents and purposes, those two figures show the project spot on.

But the Auditor General says while there are certain unclear amounts his best estimate is $9.5 [million].

When we take all of the various figures from the various budgets, what we have is that in 1995 there was $1 million in the budget that was supposed to be taken out of local revenue for the project. But when it comes under the actual expenditure (which would have been in the budget subsequent to that—because the 1996 Budget should have indicated what was actually spent from 1995) the note from the government agency says, “It appears that expenses from both Botanic Park and Pedro St. James Castle projects were charged to this vote. The total budget was $1.692 million and the total expenditure was $1.609 million.”

In 1996 there was nothing in the budget for it, but payments charged to local revenue appear to be for both Botanic Park and Pedro St. James Castle—even though the estimates show no budget for Pedro St. James Castle. There is a budget of $917,000, which obviously was under the Botanic Park. The actual expenditure was $740,415. There was also a section with an amount of $400,000 and the actual was $380,574.

So what we are seeing here is very clear, and this is where I really have a problem . . . we see that the government—in answer to a substantive question—outlined specific amounts dealing with the restoration: visitors' centre construction; furniture, fixtures and multimedia; external works; architecture and engineering; construction management; commitment fee; loan interest; land acquisition; start-up cost and pre-operating expenses to come up to $8.67 million.

Given the cost of the project by the government, I am assuming that the minister and/or his ministry had access to the information which would give them the entire cost. Yet, from the Budget documents that are available, there is no clarity in the amounts. Several amounts have been listed—$1.6 million; $740,000; $380,000—all mixed up between the Botanic Park and Pedro Castle, and no one can tell me how much of each amount was spent on the two projects. That's what is coming to me, information-wise.

When we get down to 1997, there was a budgeted amount of $1.5 million. The actual amount spent was $1.2 million. That would have been part and parcel of the draw down of the Caribbean Development Bank Loan. In 1997, under recurrent revenue, there is an amount of $295,000 budgeted. But the note says, “The estimates show this amount as government's contribution to Pedro St. James Castle project cost. However, this vote also includes payments made for Botanic Park as well as Pedro St. James Castle.” The total budget was $1.6 million; the total expenditure was $1.34 million.

For those who are listening, it is probably a boring exercise. But the point in the whole effort is simply to outline that the government's books cannot tell me exactly what was spent on Pedro St. James. I understand that there was work going on on both projects. I am not even questioning the sense in doing that because it is very possible that it was more economically viable with labour and expense to have both things going on. My argument is not based on money being wasted in doing it that way. My question is where are the records so that we can know exactly where the money was spent.

We have three instances where the Portfolio of Finance cannot give information outlining exactly how these funds were proportioned; they only have the total amounts. It is obvious that they were spent between both places. I would assume that if the ministry knew what it was, so should the department. I don't know, but it raises questions in my mind.

Also, if we add all of these amounts up, and take away the portions that are supposed to be part of the US$5.79 million loan (although these are CI figures), when we convert that US loan to CI dollars at .82, subtract the amounts that were drawn down from that amount, and add all of these put together, we come up with more than $8.68 million. In truth and in fact we come up with more than $9.5 million—bearing in mind that we don't know how much out of it was not spent for Pedro Castle. I am not trying to confuse the issue. I am just trying to lay it down as it is.

Also, the figures that were pulled from the 1995 Budget do not include any monies spent . . . or, rather, all the figures I have added up—which started from 1995—do not include any money spent prior to that. And the figure of $8.68 million includes buying the land and start-up costs. There had to be expenses before 1995 in purchasing the property and also when this person was hired to do the conceptual design. There had to be costs incurred there.

I don't have those exact costs. But when we talk about adding those figures plus those costs, there is certainly a marked difference between the answer given by the government as to the exact cost of the project and what all of these figures (which were supplied from documented budgets) add up to, along with the cost of the land and whatever other initial costs there were prior to 1995.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Tell us how much it comes to.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: All of that seems a bit confusing. But it is not my intention to confuse. What I want to establish here is that it is obvious that something is not correct information-wise somewhere.

When you want to deal with something fairly, you try to get accurate information. When you find yourself with a situation like this, it leaves you hanging in the air. I don't want to stand on the floor of this House without any knowledge whatsoever and say that the Pedro Castle Project cost $10 million or $12 million. If I wanted to incense the minds of some people, I could get up and yell, 'Yes! I bet you it cost $12 million!' I don't want to do that.

But with everything that I have before me, I can't decide how much it was. But I do know that it was more than $8.68 million—and not by one or two dollars either!

When we deal with reports like this, and we conscientiously try to gather all of this information, and we are left with what we have before us—which no matter how you try to put it together you can't come up with a figure you believe is accurate or that you can agree on—what is left to do?

In synopsis, just dealing with these costs, I am saying that it was established that in 1996 the Caribbean Development Bank worked out a projected cost for the entire project of $8.67 million. In answer to a question just weeks ago, the government said that was exactly what it cost. The difference between the Caribbean Development Bank projection and what government said it cost is only $7,071.

If this was so, and that is how my government was doing such a sterling job with its capital projects, I would be on the government's side today because I'd be a happy man. But I stand here this afternoon and say pointedly that this cannot be so! As to exactly what the difference is, I do not have the information to accurately say. But from the information that has been given to me, I can say that the exact cost of the Pedro Castle project cannot be $8,677,071. It physically cannot be!

If it is so, then every budget document from 1995 to 1998 is wrong.

To clear the air, I would like to have the answer to that Parliamentary Question to take the various amounts, not only from 1995 to 1998, but any other previous amounts that were budgeted and accounted for in the estimates and add them up. I would like to add all of those figures and if it comes back to the same figure the government is giving, I will be satisfied.

The four notes done by the Portfolio of Finance indicate that they cannot separate the total figure into how much was spent at Pedro Castle and how much was spent at Botanic Park. Unless every cent of those four different amounts, which total millions of dollars—not thousands of dollars, but a couple of million dollars . . . in fact, more than a couple of million dollars, but, anyway—unless every cent was spent at the Botanic Park, the figure we have cannot be accurate.

I am asking for that situation to be cleared up before this debate is over. I do not want to be part and parcel of any misinformation. I am being careful how I deal with this. I am not standing up here making any wild accusations as to how many more million dollars the Pedro Castle Project cost than what the government said it cost. I am saying to the government that with the information I have before me, their figure cannot be accurate. If I am wrong, let them do as I ask—prove me wrong. But I know that I will not be proven wrong.

We want to know! For months people have been saying that Pedro Castle cost much more than what they said. Let us finally have it proven.

For the benefit of the minister, and whoever else is interested in what I just said, I am going to look up the budget documents (because I have them) and see when the land was purchased, and whatever other monies were spent during 1991, 1992, 1993, and 1994 on this specific project.

The history of this project began in 1991. There are eight budget documents that would refer to some money being spent. I say eight not being 100% sure that in 1993 and 1994 any money was allocated and/or actually spent. But between the years 1991 and 1998 inclusive, there are eight budget documents. The total amounts which were not only budgeted for but actually spent need to be outlined and totalled. If, out of those amounts, any specific amounts were not actually spent for Pedro Castle, they need to be separated and then we can get a final figure. That's the way I see it.

I think the onus is not only on the ministry but on the government to do so, and for them to do so in a manner which satisfies all curiosity.

HOURLY OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, on the matter raised by the [Third Elected] Member for Bodden Town in regard to the work before us and our attempt to clear it up. Aren't we going to start that this afternoon?

The Speaker: I said that it would be discussed in an informal manner. I was advised that it would start on Monday of next week.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: It wasn't discussed with us.

The Speaker: I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this House.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, before I do that can I just mention that I spoke with as many members as I could. I agree that that honourable member may not have been in there, but the view was that we would probably be finished by Friday in any event. If not, we would extend to later hours on Monday.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we still have another debate which will probably be a very lengthy one. We yet have a Finance Committee meeting tomorrow morning. And as far as I am concerned, we made provision to be here for this evening.

The Speaker: I have a problem with that. I was told that I needed time to advise the Legislative Assembly department. They have not arranged for it. So, we will adjourn. If you want to go late tomorrow afternoon, I will stay here as late as any member will, or come as early as any member will. But I have not advised the department to make the necessary arrangements so we will adjourn at this time.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until after the completion of Finance Committee tomorrow morning.

May I just do a very short reply to a statement that the Elected Member for North Side made?

The Speaker: Before I put the question, I had given permission to the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning to reply to the Elected Member for North Side.

REPLY BY THE HON. MINISTER FOR EDUCATION, AVIATION, AND PLANNING TO THE PUBLIC MATTER RAISED BY THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR NORTH SIDE ON 29 SEPTEMBER 1999 REGARDING AMENDMENTS TO THE DEVELOPMENT PLAN

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Just to say that I thank the Elected Member for North Side for her statement. It is being carefully looked at by the government. We hope in the not-too-distant future to make a statement that will deal with her statement in relation to this.

I thank her very much for her interest in her district and the people of the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that this Honourable House do now adjourn until the completion of deliberations in Finance Committee tomorrow morning. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until the completion of deliberations in Finance Committee tomorrow morning.

AT 4.37 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL THE COMPLETION OF DELIBERATIONS IN FINANCE COMMITTEE.

EDITED
FRIDAY
8 OCTOBER 1999
10.21 AM

[Prayers read by the First Elected Member for George Town]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY SPEAKER OF

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture, who is off the island on urgent personal business. Also, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay is sick and will be absent.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Member's/Ministers. Question 141 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 141

No. 141: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources to provide an update on requests for amendment to the Marine Park Law to allow handline fishing in the Northwest Point Marine Park area, as called for by Private Member's Motion No. 16/98.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Government has asked the Marine Conservation Board to take the comprehensive list of recommendations to update the Marine Parks Law and Regulations to the public for feedback and comments. The Marine Conservation Board has also been requested by government to include the proposal referred to in Private Member's Motion No. 16/98 in their public presentation.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say how quickly the Conservation Board intends to bring this to the public?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The Marine Conservation Board is currently considering government's request. It is my hope that in a very short time they will be presenting it to the public.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: It was suggested some time ago that members of the Conservation Board sit with Members of the Legislative Assembly and other interested parties to thrash out some of these issues that we have brought to the attention of this honourable House. I wonder if this is the kind of forum that is anticipated.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Yes, I would think that it would be an ideal time for any MLA who would like to meet with them, and if I can be of assistance in putting it together I would be happy to do so. They could air whatever questions or problems they have. I would be happy to do that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: In regard to the last question and the answer given by the minister, in correspondence from the Marine Conservation Board to the minister dated 24 September, 1999, they are saying that "the Board will not consider holding any further public meetings, but would instead request a meeting with all members of the Legislative Assembly." Is that the meeting he just referred to?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Yes. As I said, if the MLA's would care I would be happy to put it together.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The answer given to the substantive question says that government has requested the Marine Conservation Board to take them to the public for feedback. These are all the requests that have been made in various private members' motions in recent times. As I said, their answer states that they will do that.

Is he going to organise such a meeting? The Marine Conservation Board's answer to the minister on Friday 24th September states they are not going public, but instead would come to members. Is that what he's talking about?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: As I said awhile ago, I will try to have that arranged to suit the times that the MLAs would be prepared to meet.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I would support that meeting because all of the requests we have brought here by way of private members' motions have been as a result of requests from constituents. I would urge the honourable minister to organise that meeting as quickly as possible and I would ask how quickly he thinks he can have that meeting organised.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I think somebody just answered it—as soon as we can get out of here and everybody is available. I will be more than happy to try to set it up.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, that concludes Question Time for today.

Moving on to item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Presentation of Papers and Reports. The continuation of the debate on the Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Auditor General's Report on the Audited Accounts of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the year 1997.

The First Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

GOVERNMENT MINUTE ON THE REPORT OF THE STANDING PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE ON THE AUDITOR GENERAL'S REPORT ON THE AU- DITED ACCOUNTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS FOR THE YEAR ENDED 1997

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When I was last speaking, I was going through some issues regarding the restoration project at Pedro St. James. To continue on, I wish to address some of the main areas of concern that were pointed out by the Auditor General in his report.

The first statement made by the Auditor General was: "Project financial records are inadequate and confusing. Many invoices and supporting information could not be located and there was no financial profile which would facilitate audit."

And this is very interesting, he went on to say: "It has not been possible to determine either the total cost of the restoration or individual contract elements. It appears that the final cost of the project may be in the region of $9.5 million."

This is the Auditor General, and we all know the job description of that post. There is supposed to be a certain amount of total autonomy. And his remit is to this Legislative Assembly through you sir. What the Auditor General is saying is that while he is supposed to have access to any and all records, using all of his resources he found it physically impossible to determine the cost of the project. At best, he is waging a guess.

The purpose of my addressing this issue is to simply try to address what we should not be doing. I want to make it very, very clear that I am not addressing this issue with any knowledge of anything underhanded occurring. That is not the direction my line of thought will be pointing in. It would point that way if I had information that made me believe that there was. I am not going on marl road talk, or rumours, or anything Mr. Speaker. I am going by the facts that I have. I believe there are some important issues that need to be addressed.

A fair amount of time has transpired between the Auditor General's investigation, this interim report, and the present. I am not suggesting that other matters may not have been discussed between the relevant parties and that they may not have gotten some of the things sorted out. But, when we deal with matters like this, my question is, has the lesson been learned. Did we discover that there was a lesson to be learned?

The other thing I am going to address is this funny way we have that where there is a chain of command and something goes wrong we look for the quickest scapegoat to try and pin the wrongdoing on. That doesn't work in my books. I am going to address that.

The Auditor General goes on about these funny things he found himself. He said: "Technical and financial oversight of the restoration element was vested with the Ministry of Tourism." That is the way he couches his statement, ". . . was vested with the Ministry of Tourism." I am sorry the minister is not here.

I am in the middle of my debate and I can't change what I am saying, sir. I only wish that someone would take notes for him because I want these things addressed. I don't have a problem if there is a reasonable answer, and a reasonable explanation. But as of now these answers have not been forthcoming and we want them.

I want to know whose decision it was to vest this technical and financial oversight of the restoration element with the ministry. This is a capital project. I know that it has been said about all of the technical aspects, all of the expertise and the reason why this was done. But somebody made a decision to vest that authority and responsibility directly in the ministry. The Auditor General goes on to say, "In hindsight it is evident that ministry personnel were untrained and ill-equipped to deal with such a complex project." Mr. Speaker, that is the crux of the matter.

As I go on, we will see that in 1997, when it all blew up in their faces, Public Works was finally called in to deal with the project. Now, I might have problems with the methodologies of Public Works sometimes, but it is not only safe and fair comment, but I think it is obvious that the Public Works Department would have been much better equipped than the ministry to deal with this project.

The ministry's staff members are not used to dealing with matters not only complex, . . . it's not about having the brains to do something, Mr. Speaker. It's not a question of whether or not they were intelligent enough to do it. But if you are a doctor and I am a lawyer . . . when I am sick, you come to you. And when you get sued for malpractice, you come to me. You, the doctor, don't come to me when you're sick. And this is what has happened. I have never been able to determine on whose authority it was decided that this project be handled directly through the ministry.

Procedures are normally followed. The procedures regarding such capital projects are also laid out. There are no unknowns where people have to argue five or six days as to who should do what. Nothing like that. It's only if you are looking to do something different that you get into those types of discussions. Obviously, someone wanted to do something different. I don't know who it was, but I want to know who it was.

The Minister [for Tourism] served as the Financial Secretary of the Cayman Islands for some ten years. The Auditor General goes on to say, "Many of the financial records, including tenders' bids and purchase commitments are held by the consultant in Canada and were not available to support the audit of payments charged to the ministry's votes." Perhaps that issue has been addressed by now.

He says: "The main consultant was appointed on a non-competitive basis. The proposal for professional fees for this phase of the work amounted to $1,022,000 including $367,000 for expenses. There appears to have been no independent technical assessment or input into the fee proposal."

As we go through the sequence of events here's where the real problem shows up. The Auditor General says: "Subsequently, the consultant was awarded six further non-competitive contracts worth about $1.7 million for various things (furnishings, landscaping, interpretation supervision, labour, stationary, and multimedia). It is the opinion of the audit office that the award of these contracts created a potential conflict of interest because the consultant was empow- ered to authorise invoices from his contracting work."

It's all about checks and balances. This is what the Auditor General is saying, and this is what I am saying. I am not saying that anyone did anything that was a criminal act; I am saying that the project was handled in such a way that the normal checks and balances that should have been in place, fell by the wayside and the government's money, the country's money—the people's money—was at risk and it should not have been. That's what I am saying.

The Auditor General goes on to say, "Certain payments made against these contracts are not consistent with either the contract sum or the defined scope of work. This is a highly complex area and the audit office has engaged specialist assistance to advise on the interpretation and execution of certain contracts."

I am going to refer now to the Government Minute, because I am not going to debate this lopsided. In the Government Minute, on page 10 (and this is referring to the Auditor General's Report about the Pedro St. James restoration project), it reads: "The policies detailed in the Auditor General's report regarding the awarding of contracts without competitive tender were not developed purely out of mismanagement and financial imprudence. Commonwealth was awarded six contracts, this was partly due to the specialised nature of these tasks coupled with the fact that they offered a full range of services related to the conservation, design, research, planning and interpretation of cultural and heritage resources. With this mind the Ministry felt that CHRМ with its full spectrum of services would provide the continuity that enables a vision to be carried through to a final product."

Here is where the problem is, or was, or maybe still is in my view: If you have an entity which has knowledge based expertise, and you need that expertise to see a project of this nature to completion, the safe way to deal with that is to retain that knowledge base at a level of consultancy. But the same thought about this knowledge base being there and nowhere else 'so we're going to let them handle the whole thing' is where the problem was created. In doing that, everything was put in one single kit-and-caboodle and there were no checks and balances to see if there was value for money, or if what was supposed to be done was really done. That is where the main problem arose.

When the minister went to Executive Council to convince them to waive the regular tendering procedures because of this . . . in my view, that was a mistake. I also take the view that it was a mistake for Executive Council to allow him to convince them. I mean that. In that ministry, an administrative officer who was trying to deal with the paperwork on the project . . . all that administrative officer was at the end of the day was a facilitator.

Invoices came through the Ministry; the Ministry passed them on to Treasury and the Treasury paid them. The only thing of substance done through the Ministry was to make sure that two plus two equalled four. There was no ability in the Ministry to look at what was before them to say 'Is this value for money? Is there a profile developing so that we can compare and see that we are getting it all right?' All that physically could have been done was to make sure that there were no invoices that did not add up correctly; but all of the other checks and balances—which are only natural for something of this magnitude—were not in place. That's the view I take because that's what I gather thus far. If it is different, someone must tell me different. But they can't just tell me; they will have to prove it to me!

God knows that I would like to believe that we all will find out. But in my view, there was too much exposure, too much risk regardless of the zeal to get this project done. There was too much risk in the manner in which it was set about.

The Auditor General goes on to say: “Audit examination subsequently revealed that contracts worth $2.8 million had been placed with a locally registered company that only had $100 worth of paid up share capital. The audit office considers that government's interests were not adequately protected through contracting with this small company. For example, in the event of a dispute, the ministry might have had difficulty in recovering any excess or inappropriate payments.”

The Auditor General goes on to say: “There has been no control over the various advance accounts opened to account for Pedro St. James project expenses pending reimbursement from CDB. The advance accounts have not been reconciled so that non-reimbursable elements are charged to expenditure. The government accounts for 1997 had to be held open until the end of September 1998 so that the ministry, with the help of the Public Works Department, could determine what should be charged to 1997 expenditure.”

I know that some of this has been sorted out after tedious procedure. But they talk about the cost of this project . . . no one, but no one, has the ability to calculate the amount of man hours the relevant departments have spent trying to make sense out of what was done with the project. If you are really going to get technical, that too was a part of the cost of the project. If it were done right from the beginning, all of that time wouldn't have to have been spent. But that's what happens when you don't do what should be done.

I am saying here this morning that I don't care who takes offence, but the powers that be at whatever level knew better—they had to know better!

This is what else was done, Mr. Speaker. Work was done at the Pedro St. James restoration project. Other work was done at the Botanic Park. And I really don't doubt that this was all done in good faith, but that is why you have managers, controlling officers, ministers and all of that, to make sure that things are done right. Money was voted in the budget on more than one occasion, and it all came under one heading. The money was spent between the two different projects and to this day it seems that no one can say how much was spent on one project and how much on the other.

How can you develop any kind of financial profile for each separate project if this is done in this manner? It just doesn't work that way.

One might say that this is picky, but if the country did business like that in every form and fashion . . . and let me tell you where the real problem is. Some people might think this is not worth addressing, but I consider it to be very important. In this day and age I predict that in another two or three years it is going to be of the utmost importance for government to know what each and every service it provides costs. We are going to have to maximise the efficiency within those services so that we at least recoup the cost of providing those services. If you mix it all up you will never be able to find what costs what because all you are doing is throwing all the revenue into one thing and you keep writing the cheques. But you will never know where you are losing or what you need to address.

There can be no thought that it didn't matter. It also matters because when the minister answers a question and tells us that the total cost to government for research, planning and feasibility, restoration and construction, land acquisition, stamp duty, start up cost and pre-operating expenses is $8,677,071 . . . that is telling me in black and white that that's what it cost. But they can't know how much it cost because on more than one occasion money was mixed up and there was one amount spent between the two projects and it doesn't seem that anyone can determine what was spent where. So how can they know how much it cost?

What else is there that we don't know anything about? If doubts are to fall away, the evidence must be produced.

I can go on more about the project, but I don't consider it necessary to go into more detail because I believe that I have raised enough questions about the project to establish the understanding that the ministry needs to accept that some methodologies employed were at least erroneous, and also we need to somehow establish the true cost of this project.

When you find examples like these . . . and I have to admit that I do the best I can. I don't think that my mind is evil. But when I find instances like these, something clicks in my mind about everything else that happens. 'I wonder if that's how this one was done?' Do you understand what I am saying? Perhaps the best thing is not to think—but I can't do that.

I would like to move on to speak a bit about contributions from statutory authorities. I know from the time I mentioned that topic that it raised eyebrows and all the defence mechanisms kicked in. But that's cool. I am going to state my opinion, and whoever wants to say something after that is free to do so.

It was probably three years ago when the same Minister for Tourism gave me a commitment that Executive Council was going to sit down to develop some type of firm policy with the relevant authorities, namely, the Water Authority, the Port Authority, and the Civil Aviation Authority, regarding their annual contributions to general revenue. The argument has been put forward . . . and I don't limit this principle to these three that I mentioned because I don't know if others fall into this category. Perhaps one of these days we might get the surprise of our lives and Pedro Castle might actually make a profit. I hope so.

Anyway, the argument that has been put forth on more than one occasion is that the government owns these authorities. So once these authorities turn a profit they should hand over the money to government. Let me point my difficulties with that theory.

Without quoting (at least not yet), it is safe comment to say that in the recent past government has commandeered these authorities at the very last going off in the year and told them about specific amounts, and demanded that these amounts be paid into the government's coffers to ensure that there is no deficit at the end of the year. No one can look me in the eye and tell me different. It was to balance the budget; to make sure that government did not have to come back and report to the country that there was a yearend deficit.

Let me make it very clear that I am not suggesting for one second that there should not be a policy which dictates that a certain level of operational profit from these authorities not be handed over to government. I am not saying that. I am arguing the way in which it has been done in the past. And to this day no one has been able to tell me what the policy is for each of these places. If it is not twenty times, then it must be forty times that we have gone over this and the best we have heard thus far—and keep hearing—is that 'we are meeting to decide', or that 'we are developing . . .' I am sick of developing! Develop it!

Here is what happens to these authorities when it is done in this fashion: These authorities are always, forever continuing to have to expand their services because the country is growing, the demands are growing and they have to meet these demands. The Civil Aviation Authority has several projects in the pipeline—a terminal or airport in Little Cayman, the Cayman Brac runway resurfacing . . . all of these things need to be done.

The Water Authority is expanding into the eastern districts on a continual basis. The Port Authority is just now selling the idea to this country about a major expansion of the port facilities (between $12 million and $14 million I understand). I don't see the sense if at the end of the day the government is responsible for these authorities. In other words, regardless of whether or not they engage in loans it is termed "self-financing loans," if they can't pay it the government has to pay it, no questions asked. So, as far as I am concerned, it is simply passing the buck.

If you are taking the money that these authorities earn to balance the budget of the country, and they in turn have to engage in much more borrowing than they would normally have to; you are still responsible for it. You're only passing the buck. If you left them alone and let them get on with the business, your contingent liabilities would be less and perhaps (to use the term of the honourable Third Official Member) we would be better equipped and we would be more willing to cut the cloth to suit than we are doing now.

The way we are doing it is that we are living in hope. And because we know these things exist, when it doesn't work out we say, 'All right, let's call them and tell them to send us $1 million. Let's call the other one and tell them to send us $1.5 million.' I don't care how many degrees they have, they cannot tell me that's right! If they do, I am not going to agree with what they say. I repeat, I am not suggesting that money should not be contributed to general revenue by these authorities, but not in the manner in which it is being done.

Mr. Speaker, do you know what nearly happened one time? I am going to tell you. Because of the sheer inability of Cayman Airways to pay the Civil Aviation Authority, it had built up a landing fee debt of nearly $3 million. I am going to tell you how the plan nearly went. They were going to put the $3 million in the budget for the next year for Cayman Airways to pay the Civil Aviation Authority, but at the same time Civil Aviation Authority must agree that their contribution to the revenue was going to be the $3 million. That's how everything was going to get smoothed out.

I don't know if I made that point, Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: I understand.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The simplicity of that is that they would have taken the $3 million out of their left pocket and put it into their right pocket, but it still would have been just $3 million. In my estimation, there is a risk in dealing with life like that, and it must not be done.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Single-entry bookkeeping!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: We keep hearing about these contingent liabilities ever rising, and we keep hearing about the Mother Country having great concerns about the contingent liabilities of her Dependent Territories (now called Overseas Territories). I am not suggesting that London has hammered our heads over our contingent liabilities. But our contingent liabilities have been rising continuously.

And, Mr. Speaker, when they keep borrowing more and more money and they keep talking about this "accepted norm" once your debt service does not exceed 10 percent of your recurrent revenue you're in good shape . . . do you know what's that like? That's like eating candy every day of your life. They keep telling you to stop that because otherwise you are going to lose your teeth. And because you haven't lost your teeth you keep eating them and by the time the day comes when you lose your teeth, you can't get them back—at least not the real ones.

That's the same principle employed, but until you lose them everything is fine. That's exactly how it is. It keeps rising, but because it hasn't passed that magic 10 percent everything is fine. So who's going to stop it when it reaches the 10 percent and goes over it if you don't try to do it before? I can drive good, tell me about it after I meet with an accident.

Mr. Speaker, I raise these points to say to government that while some may think that I should be more patient about things in the pipeline (various reforms that are ongoing), because I believe that I have gotten to know enough about how things really work, I consider it incumbent upon me not to stop applying the pressure until I see the results. Every time you talk about things and they say give it time, give it time, give it time, the time is still going and we're still giving and nothing has happened yet. So, when it happens, if I am still around I'll stop then. Until then, I am not stopping.

If it sounds like a broken record, I am sorry. It will have to keep breaking until they do something.

Mr. Speaker, the country is not in the gloomiest of circumstances. But I have long contended that when we hear about prudent fiscal policies, prudent financial management . . . and that's the favourite terminology of the Minister of Education. He gets up and talks about this $60 million recurrent profit and how prudent the government is with all that's its doing. He says that all that all the time.

Mr. Roy Bodden: You better bring it up now, because they need it!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I remember us having a big argument up in here about that misleading business. But I want you to know that I feel as strongly about that as anything else in this world.

The Speaker: Let's not revive that, please.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: No, I won't do that, sir. No problem. I am just saying that I feel stronger today than I felt then. So I guess I must get some little kudos because I am doing it the right way now. Okay?

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, yesterday (and I won't engage in this for a very long period, but it is going to send my message) we understood that the projected revenue for the first eight months of this year for this country was down in excess of $11 million. Now, some people might not want me to talk about it, some people might not want any people to know about it, and I am not suggesting that it's the end of the world, but let no man fool anyone else—especially me!—that that is not cause for serious concern, because it is.

If we examine our budgets for the last seven years that I have been here, every year—barring none, to the best of my memory—the recurrent expenditure has been creeping ever closer to the recurrent revenue.

When we do a budget and we have recurrent expenditure and recurrent revenue the recurrent revenue put into that budget is a projected figure based on the history of what has happened in the past. I have to admit that usually those figures are very accurate. But we all know that there are external circumstances, over which we have no control, which can affect that. They can also fix it however they want to fix it, but if we didn't continue borrowing we would have to admit to this country that we are operating in deficit.

They have the capital projects on one side, and they deal with the recurrent revenue and recurrent expenditure. Once the recurrent expenditure does not surpass the recurrent revenue you are not in deficit. But if you only have $6 million over your expenditure to put towards your capital projects and you have to borrow $25 million to do your capital projects, which I am not suggesting is not a sensible approach, Mr. Speaker, don't get me wrong . . . but I am saying that if you actually dealt with it without the borrowing you'd be operating in deficit.

Put aside the capital projects, put aside the borrowing. The Honourable Third Official Member especially in the last two budgets has gone to great pain to explain that the recurrent expenditure side of the budget has been back and forth, and slashed, and talked about, trimmed and cut . . . you know how when you're going to cook a salt beef pot you cut all the fat off of it? That's what has basically been done. So there is no room to cut any more. If you keep cutting now, you're going to cut the flesh. And I understand that.

What that means, Mr. Speaker, is that when you get a budget that tells you what your recurrent expenditure is going to be you can almost bet that it is not going to be any less than that. In fact, more than likely—and if you go by history you can almost say for sure—you are going to have supplementary requests during the course of the year which will make your recurrent expenditure more than you actually budgeted for. And if you put out your forecast for your recurrent revenue and the signal in the first eight months that you are in excess of $11 million short, . . . that doesn't worry you sir?

So, Mr. Speaker, I am going to give members a chance to deal with the other areas of these reports that they may wish to. I have said what I have said in an effort to ensure that eyes are open, ears are cocked, and we are doing everything we can to make sure that we keep sailing the right course.

I was going to bring up the Medium Term Financial Strategy and the Public Sector Investment Programme, but I am not going to do that. I know for a fact that the Honourable Third Official Member and his staff have been doing all that they can to deal with this. I just hope and pray that they won't be stifled any more and will be allowed to do what they do best so that we can get better results than we have.

I do trust that the questions I have asked about certain areas are not left unanswered, because I can assure all and sundry that if they are not answered in a reasonable time they will be raised again. We are a year late in discussing all of these things we are talking about now. The next one is just about ready to be put out and hopefully will not be a year late.

So it is very possible that we may be discussing the Auditor General's Report for two different years within a three month period. I hope that that doesn't extend itself. But that report will prove to us if anything has been done to address these problems that have been raised. For that we will have to wait and see.

I trust that my comments have been taken in the light they were intended, and I hope that we will hear the relevant individuals on the government bench address the questions that have been posed.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I think this would be an appropriate time to take the morning break. We shall suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.22 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.01 PM

The Speaker: This is the final call, the floor is open for debate. Does any other member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am not going to be that long, Mr. Speaker, but I do have something to say.

There seems to be some confusion on the part of government as to who is going to wind up. The person laying the Government Minute cannot be the person that winds up the debate because the debate on this was moved by the Third Elected Member for West Bay who is chairman of the Public Accounts Committee. He said there would be a debate when the Government Minute was laid on the Table. So I hope there will not be any more confusion.

I have been very disappointed and disturbed by the government's response to the probing carried out by the Auditor General on various departments and, in particular, Pedro Castle over which there has been a lot of controversy. Further, on the matters of Pedro Castle, I think it's a shame and a disgrace that that motion calling for clear answers to the situation, and for no confidence in the Minister's [for Tourism] handling of the project has not yet been debated after some months now. I believe it to be a serious contempt on the privileges of this legislature.

Nevertheless, I have been paying close attention to the mismanagement of the Pedro Castle matter. I have looked at the Auditor General's Report. I have looked at the report of the Public Accounts Committee. I have looked at Government's response. This response on Pedro Castle is nothing but an effort to deceive the people of the country into believing that the minister did everything right with Pedro Castle. He should have—bearing in mind his longstanding experience as Head of departments, Principal Secretary, deputy Financial Secretary, and former Financial Secretary, and now an Elected Minister of seven year's experience. And the mismanagement of this project is a disgrace, to say the least!

So there can be no mistake about the handling and subsequent mismanagement of the country's funds.

I wish that my colleague, the Third Elected Member for West Bay, had done a more in-depth review of this particular aspect in his motion because he had documents before him that could have been carefully reviewed to show the fallacious reasoning of the minister—who must take the blame for the fiasco at Pedro Castle. But blood is thicker than water. I would hope that that were not so, but it seems to be so.

To look at a few matters in connection with this project, in June (at least from May 25) there was a question on the Business Paper which has not been answered. It was a question that I put there. It asked the Minister for Tourism: (a) whether or not CHRM (Cayman) holds or has held a trade and business licence under Cayman Islands Laws; (b) who the shareholders and directors are, and what are their nationalities; and (c) was there any investigation into the background of those persons? That is also a contempt of this honourable House to know that the minister has not yet seen fit to answer those pertinent questions in connection with such a large expenditure as Pedro Castle.

From what I have seen in the document put before us by government (and in this instance put before us by the Minister for Tourism) is an attempt to say to us over-all: 'Look, I had permission from Executive Council to do this. I had permission from Executive Council to waive the requirements of the Central Tenders Committee.' It does not stop there, Mr. Speaker, but that seems to be the basis on which they have relied to defended their mismanagement.

I want to look at what took place in Public Accounts Committee. I will go right to the meat of the problem. The report that came to this House in defence of Pedro Castle carries Executive Council's document. (Pause)

Now this Executive Council document, put to this House, in their relying on the fact that the Central Tenders Committee had given them permission, first of all, to continue with Commonwealth Historic Resource Management (CHRM), and then to continue with him without going to Central Tender, and then to get another subcontractor (Steve Shaw Productions of Canada) without going to Central Tender. Those two are facts.

Based on information that the Minister put to Executive Council, which is carried here in this document, ExCo agreed that that could happen because the company had been here so long. But we were not told of the various problems. We were not told of a Caymanian company. Indeed, while the “Chairman of the Central Tenders Committee confirmed in writing his view that if the contract with the project manager (CHRM) provides for the appointment of subcontractors by that firm, that it would be acceptable for this matter to be handled under that company's contract.”

While it was agreeable for him to do that, nobody—not Executive Council or anyone else—gave the minister any permission to CHRM himself to be a subcontractor. This is the part I am saying should have been brought out here earlier.

Executive Council gave permission for CHRM, Canada, to carry on since they had started with the National Trust. They gave permission for Steve Shaw Productions for the history on Pedro Castle. These are the only two commissions that Executive Council gave. There was no permission given by Executive Council to do a subcontract. And one wonders why anyone—including the minister—would try to lay blame on Executive Council other than to cover up his own mismanagement.

Executive Council did not give approval for any of the overruns. We didn't know anything about the overruns. Most of all—and I repeat—Executive Council did not give permission to CHRM to do four subcontracts itself. The owner, shareholder, and director of CHRM gave himself four subcontracts! It's woefully wrong, misleading, and unfair to Executive Council to say that they gave permission, and to leave it as if they gave permission for everything. They did not! And no one should say otherwise.

There have been too many conflicting statements on this matter. There have been too many conflicting statements on the cost. We heard the minister say, in answer to a question here the other day, a total of $8.6 million. Look at 1993: First, they said the cost was $5 million. In the 1996 Estimates, Caribbean Development Bank was $8.7 [million]. On 4 March last year the minister himself said $6.9 million—including cost of land. This is all contained in the Hansards.

Then on 22 December 1998 the minister said it was $9.1 million—including cost of land. Yet in their report . . . I can't find the relevant section but it's conflicting again. Who is right? The Auditor General? CHRM Ltd.? Caribbean Development Bank? The Ministry? Who?

The Government Minute says, "Both the Ministry and CHRM prepared financial reports on a regular basis." If that is so, if the Ministry or CHRM prepared financial reports, then who did they give them to on a regular basis? Certainly, nobody had these reports on a steady basis, or else there would not have been these conflicting statements as to what the cost is.

There are all kinds of things on these overruns, Mr. Speaker. When they came to Executive Council they didn't tell Executive Council that government would be paying for certain work while the man himself had the contract to give out, while the owner of CHRM had four subcontracts and out of those subcontracts certain work would be paid for by government. We weren't told that. And it's not reflected in this Executive Council document before us.

I understand they said in the Minute, "The implementation phase was managed by the Ministry on the recommendation of the committee and approval by Executive Council." I would like to see the permission given to the Ministry by Executive Council for the Ministry to manage the project.

In the Government Minute, in regard to the differences in the cost, the Ministry says, "The significant difference is due to the rate of inflation on materials and labour." The various overruns, percentages of increases from 1993 to 1998 based on the statements made by the Minister here in Finance Committee, and in questions put to him . . . in 1993 they said $5 million; in 1996 the estimate given by Caribbean Development Bank was $8.7 million—that's a 74% increase in three years! On 4 March 1998, $6.9 million was the total given by the Minister. By 22 December 1998, the Minister came back and said it was $9.1 [million]—that's a 24% increase in nine months.

From 1993 the increase (as stated by Commonwealth) of $5 million, to, the Minister's 22 December statement of $9.1 [million], that's an 82% increase in three years. Did inflation go up that much in this country? I doubt it.

The inflation rate in 1993 (over 1992, that is) was 2.5%. In 1994 it was 3.1%. In 1995 2.3%. In 1996 it was 2.1%. In 1997 it was 2.7%. In 1998 it was 3%, for a total of 15.7%. How in the world can these increases be blamed on inflation? Yes, we had a total of 15%, but the increases total up—according to the minister himself—to 82% in three years alone! It cannot be blamed on inflation; it can only be blamed on the mishandling and the mismanagement of the Minister for Tourism.

Under "subcontracts," the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee said that the man owned the company, carried out the work himself; invoiced government for payment, certifying that what was done was carried out for payment. Who could tell what they were paying for? Although the minister says that he had day to day contact with the project, what has gone on with this is a shame and a disgrace. And it's a shame and a disgrace that we can't get a motion here to really go into it, Mr. Speaker, or to even hear what actually took place.

They come back here, after all was said and done, with some flimsy excuse that Executive Council gave them permission. Executive Council gave two permissions—one of those papers is here in front of us. But it was not for the subcontracts. One subcontract was to Steve Shaw productions, not to the other ones that the man did himself.

The truth is that this country will never know the depth to which this whole thing has gone. I am convinced that we are not going to get the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. I am convinced of that because there has been too much dodging, too much blaming, too much finger pointing, there have been too many contradicting stories and we will not, I am convinced, hear the truth. Who is going to tell us when everybody belongs to secret societies?

Since I can't get my answers as to who did the background work on CHRM, Cayman, the Auditor General says here that according to his files it was Mr. Stewart and his spouse. They had 50 shares each, 100 shares paid up capital (I guess you would call it in our parlance here under the Companies Law) to do a $9 million job. It's a shame and a disgrace.

They like to tout their management. They like to go around West Bay telling people that McKeeva don't have the management ability. Look at my projects! Yes, there were overruns, but you never had that kind of mismanagement and its providing a useful service to the country. I could do a lot more comparison, but that's not the purpose of this debate.

The Ministry and the Minister had day to day contact with the project, according to the Minister. The Auditor General says, "Many of the financial records, including tenders' bids and purchase commitments are held by the consultant in Canada and were not available to support the audit of payments charged to the ministry's votes." Simple question, Mr. Speaker, why didn't the ministry have its own set of records? Simple! Yet, they had day to day handling of the affairs of the project?

I am going to be brief and give others who want to get on with this debate a chance. There are things that should be explained, but there will be another day. I certainly have not fired all of my ammunition either. I would like those who are recording for the minister to note that.

To sum up, it is a position like this: The ministry embarked on a project that it seemed to not have a tremendous amount of information on. I opposed certain aspects of the project at times, and I still do today. That's not to say that the project could not have been done. I believe that once it gets the right management—and I don't believe the Minister for Tourism is going to provide that management—the project could be of some benefit. But we have paid tremendously for that.

As I said, we will never know what it cost because so many funds are and were hidden in different votes. There has to be management put there quickly. They might hide, run, and dodge from the private member's motion before the House, but the fact is that that project is ongoing and we are in a state of having a Head of a department and the PS managing the project. How long can this be sustained? How long should it be? If the PS is paying close attention (and I believe he would be) to the project, what happens to his other regular duties? Something has to be suffering.

In answer to a question I put to the minister he said that nothing was suffering, it was just more work. I don't think it's a good state of affairs when we have the Head of a department and the Permanent Secretary in the Ministry running a project. Not to say that they might not be capable and talking about the overall workings of government, given the inconsistencies and mismanagement at Pedro Castle.

For a long time there has been talk about marketing. If it's going to be successful, it needs to be properly marketed. But I asked a long time ago how feasible it was. How much in-depth work was done? When you consider that cruise ship [passengers] go to the Turtle Farm and they go shopping . . . how much time do they have to go to the other end of the country? Something is going to suffer. I hope not. But it seems rational that that would happen.

What has been done about marketing the project? This is nearly the end of the year. I would suspect that cruise ships have made their itineraries, their contracts. Have they gotten any contracts from the cruise ships for passengers to go to Pedro Castle? As I said, it's nearly the end of the year and you would imagine that cruise liners would have their contracts made and their itineraries done for the following year. Will we need to go through another year with large subsidies—larger than usual—because of the mismanagement and not getting the work done? I am still waiting to hear.

If it is marketed properly, probably some years hence (and we still don't know what was spent on the project), hopefully the project will be paying for itself. But it's not a good thing when a government has a manager of a project who it is alleged committed crimes and we pay him half-salary, and the project goes without proper management. That's not to say that it was getting any before, because from everything that has been put before us it has not had proper management since it began.

These are not good times, Mr. Speaker. I await the debate on the motion. I wait to hear the answers to my questions. And I have certainly been reasonable.

Although you might hear that I am a member of the Business Committee, I am a minority member. I wait to hear whether CHRM, Cayman, holds or has held a trade and business licence under Cayman Islands laws. But I understand why the question can't be answered. It is because it did not hold a trade and business licence under our laws. That's why there has been a ducking of the question. If they want to say something else about using a different language . . . that's why the question hasn't been answered. Who are the shareholders and directors, and what are their nationalities? And was there any kind of investigation into the background of those persons?

As I said, I have more ammunition. But I will hold that for the day it is more fitting.

I am totally dissatisfied with the management—the mismanagement—of the project, and with the covering up that has taken place. I am sick and tired of the covering up that is being done for certain people in this country while others can be exposed and all sorts of things said. I am tired of it. It all depends on who you are, who you belong to. It's a sad state of affairs, Mr. Speaker. But I will wait to hear the answer, to hear if any more lies are going to be told. I thank you.

The Speaker: I think this is an appropriate time to take the luncheon break. We shall suspend until 2.15 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.41 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on the Government Minute. The floor is open for debate.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I am going to take the opportunity to make a statement in regard to the Government Minute on the Auditor General's Report, the Public Accounts Committee Report.

What I want to say is how badly the system needs to be reformed. If we are discussing the government's response to the report after so much time, it goes to show that our discussion will be totally of no consequence. One wonders what the point of the discussion is, since the discussion is so out of date, and most of us are so out of touch with the subject matter, except from the point of view of the principles perhaps that might be involved in the report.

The principles involved in the report can be debated, therefore I will concentrate on one or two of them. I think that they are principles that should somehow be amended in the future if possible. The whole idea that government collects security deposits for immigration—especially when close to 60% of the labour force is made up of immigrants, and where we have people in the country thirty years on work permits—seems almost archaic and absurd.

The other point is that if the Immigration Department is right and if some 56% of the persons here on work permits are from a particular island state—namely Jamaica—and the fact that you can get a one way ticket there for about $100 goes to prove the point that if the logic of the system or the purpose of the deposit had been reviewed it would be seen to be out of touch with the general reality.

I think that in a day and age when cash is more readily available to people than before, when transportation is more accessible than before, the whole question of people moving up and down, crossing each other's borders in order to trade, whether that be labour or goods is a reality of the modern world. These deposits in 1997 were up to $6.5 million. I think that's basically an indication of how important immigrant labour remains in the Cayman Islands.

I think that the security the Cayman Islands gets from the immigrant labour should be sufficient security for those people working here. They should not be required from the employers, many of whom are Caymanian, this additional security because all this does is inflate the cost of labour and goods. From an economic point of view, the government is doing the economy no good by causing so large a figure to be set aside. This amount is coming in a lot of cases not from the individual immigrant but from the corporation he or she works for.

I would like government to give consideration to a change in this policy where the company would sign a bond with government. And as long as the company continues to do business in the Cayman Islands, and as long as the company is operated by persons we have access to by way of government collectors, we can collect the money from those persons. We find that when people use the hospital and they don't pay, government has a debt collector that can see to collecting these debts. We can do it with bonds that companies might have signed in relationship to their imported labour.

I don't know how many cases are recorded, or what the statistics would be in regard to serious cases where people worked in the Cayman Islands and never had enough money to return to their own homes. It is said that it's okay to be poor in your own country, but you don't go to someone else's country to be poor. It's almost an immigrant's mentality to save money. And if they are working they are going to be saving money. And if they are saving money, they have money to pay for their return ticket in cases where their employers are not going to do it.

If somebody is working on a weekly basis, we also have the Labour Law that compels the employer to give a certain amount of notice in case he is going to get rid of the employee. And if he gets rid of the employee without a certain amount of notice then he is compelled by law to pay that employee a certain amount of money. There again, the employee should be in possession of a certain amount of cash.

I don't see why it is necessary to consider this programme as a general type of programme. Even if government must make some exception to the rule, discretion should be allowed where certain companies are not obligated by law to pay these deposits when people who have been here for all of thirty years, when people who are going to be here for a long period of time simply because of the fact that they are filling a position that will not be easily filled in the future, and also because we realise that our economy is growing at a pace of between 7 and 9 percent per annum and that this growth means the growth of the population as a whole.

We would project that by the year 2004 we will have 60,000 people here in the Cayman Islands. Whether or not people want to hear those figures, if we continue to want the same pace and growth in our economy, that is what we are going to have. If the policy of the Immigration Department (by way of government) is to continue to collect the security deposits, then we will have . . . it basically doesn't make sense. Yet we have to think about the particular needs that our economy creates. And we are going to have the people in the island and I don't see why we should continue to collect these deposits.

Enough said about that particular principle. I would next go to the question of the environmental protection fund.

I note that there was (at least at 31 December 1997) an amount of $480,275 and there was no expenditure during 1997. Well, I am sure that money has been taken since then from the fund. But I would like to say that this fund should be used for environmentally sensitive issues. I think that in the beginning when we were creating the fund we had an idea that it would be for this particular purpose. I think it was used by government to rationalise their adding these taxes, but there were members of the community who realised that this was necessary for environmentally sensitive issues to be funded and were therefore willing to accept this higher increase as a result of this particular rationalisation.

Since then, I think we have lost sight of this purpose. I think that the situation in North Side, in Bodden Town, in regard to the Planning Department wanting to define land as environmentally protected and sensitive, and thereby deprive the landowners in those particular areas of what they say is the true potential commercial value of their land, could be rectified by using these environmental funds to purchase those lands if people wanted to sell those lands at a commercially fair market value.

If the persons do not care to sell the land, the lands are protected I would think, because those persons in most cases don't have the kind of immense capital needed to develop these lands. But they would not be deprived of their lands without compensation because the funds are there.

This is the reason why I also felt the National Trust was getting a little bit of the bullet when, in fact, the National Trust should not have been involved up front in this particular issue because I think that although the National Trust represents a particular kind of body that is interested in such issues of preservation, there are those of us who are not members of the National Trust who have an interest also in preserving what we might consider to be environmentally sensitive zones, to the degree that it would not interfere with the rights and privileges of our citizens, of course.

I think if we were to use this fund creatively, rather than using it to prop up the coffers of the general revenue, and we were to see this fund earmarked specifically for these particular purposes being in the sense to compensate citizens for land that we the people as a whole feel is useful to all of us as a whole, that this would be a good way of spending these funds. If this were done over a period of ten or twenty years we would collect millions and millions of dollars. And we would have millions and millions of dollars that could be used in that particular area, since one of the greatest concerns from an environmental point of view in the Cayman Islands is the preservation of the so-called wetlands or swamp mangroves.

The other point is the situation of the government dump. Something has to be done there. This is an environmentally sensitive issue and we can see how environmental funds could go towards resolving that specific problem.

I was happy that in the 1997 Report the funds were all in tact. But in the next report we will receive, we certainly know that that won't be the case. So it goes to show how out of date this discussion is. I should really be talking about the funds as they are now rather than the funds the way they were in 1997. So, there we are. We are an outdated system. We are definitely so outdated. It's sometimes unfortunate that we don't move quicker toward reform because it would save us a lot of unnecessary hardship at the end of the day.

The infrastructure fund was also worthwhile mentioning in that it is a new area of revenue that needs to be specifically used to assist with the creation of alternatives, let's say. And the cash that was taken into the system back in 1997 was less than it would have been had the correct mechanisms been in place. I am basically saying that with this infrastructural fund in place we can create a reserve of capital to give us the flexibility to deal with environmental issues when we are pressured.

This goes back again to the whole idea of the budget, the way in which government raises its funds, the way in which government spends its funds, and the way in which government is critiqued in the way it spends its funds. It is all very outmoded. If we are going to pick here and pick there, by picking this and that each time in a very ad hoc manner to see how we can put two and two together to get four, it's going to create a situation whereby we cannot plan for the future. Nothing is really guaranteed. Nothing is really stable because it's not being based upon any stable funding.

Anyone, who doesn't know what they are going to make in a week, knows that it's hard to organise a house. If you don't know how much income you are going to have, it's kind of hard to decide how much you are going to spend. Most of us decide to accept a fixed wage because it's more stable rather than working by piecework or by commission where we are not able to predict what the bottom line will be in regard to our earnings.

How a government going into the 21st Century is content with operating under this type of principle amazes me.

I don't know what the solution is, of course. But in looking at this report I am saying that the government has to have more rights to collect the revenue for the support of the country for the general good of the country. We know that there has to be all kinds of reforms in the way we use manpower. We have to become more sparing in this. Maybe it's possible to say that they would not have had to spend so much from the environmental impact funds and the infrastructure funds and have immigration collecting the security deposit. But when a government in a country that is supposed to be as rich as this one brags about being—the fifth financial centre in the world—goes around trying to get a few dollars by collecting security deposits from immigration workers, is going around taking $2 extra from tourists coming in on the cruise ships, saying they are going to put it into an environmental impact fund in order to put it in general revenue . . . when you have to go around that way begging and taking, it defeats your whole concept of yourself. Rich people don't behave like that.

How can a prosperous country not predict its income? Not predict its needs; not become more scientific in regard to its housekeeping?

I hope that in mentioning these facts that I bring to the attention of this honourable House the incredible need for reform in this country and reforms in the way in which we do business. We have a hard job to persuade our people that the system must change, but unless we can persuade our people that the system must change, we are going to lose control of the system. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate, does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I have listened to the views of three honourable members who have spoken so far on the Government Minute. I would like to address a few points that were raised.

Two members commented on the lack of timeliness in the tabling of the Government Minute. The First Elected Member for George Town suggested that it should have been tabled over a year ago. In an ideal situation we would have hoped that that would have been possible. We know that in the past we have found ourselves in situations where the Minute was not tabled on a timely basis. But for the Minute on the accounts of Government for 1997, I think we have to take a look at the timeliness of the sequence of events as they occurred.

The Report of the Auditor General on the Accounts of the Government for the year 1997 is dated 30 November 1998. This is quite timely, Mr. Speaker.

The Report of the Public Accounts Committee on the Auditor General's Report on the financial statements of the Government for the year ended 31 December 1997 was tabled on 23 April 1999. So, in effect, there has been . . . this is the second session since the tabling of that report. So the Government Minute has been tabled within a timeframe of six months following the tabling of the report of the Public Accounts Committee.

If we were to take the period May through September we will see what timeframe that shows. So it is not a question that there has been a lapse of a year as such.

We do recognise that there is a need for these reports to be submitted to this honourable House on a timely basis. And every effort will be made to ensure that that is done, starting with the Government Minute on the Auditor General's Report and on the Report of the Public Accounts Committee, and on the accounts of the Cayman Islands Government for the year ended 31 December 1997.

Secondly, the First Elected Member for George Town indicated that there has been a narrowing of the gap between recurrent revenue and expenditure. I will not refute this position. The government has been concerned about this. All members of the Legislative Assembly have expressed concern.

We recognise that as we continue to move forward, and as demands on government continue to increase, and as the demands of society continue to grow, we know that resources are not unlimited. We will have to manage more carefully every dollar that hands can be laid upon. But if we were to take what has occurred over the past five years we can see . . . just going back to 1993, the recurrent revenue was $135.3 million; recurrent and statutory expenditure was $124.1 [million] leaving a balance of $11.2 million to be used as contribution to capital, reserves and other transfers. This represented 8.2% of the general revenue for that year.

In 1994, the revenue was $152.11 million; recurrent and statutory expenditure was $138.2 million, leaving an excess of revenue over expenditure of $13.9 million, which represents 9.1% of general revenue for that year.

For the year 1995, we see where general revenue was $174.5 million; recurrent and statutory expenditure was $158.2 million, leaving an excess of recurrent revenue over recurrent and statutory expenditure of $16.3 million, representing 9.3% of general revenue.

For 1996, recurrent revenue was $195.2 million. Recurrent and statutory expenditure, $171.4 million. Excess of revenue over expenditure was $23.8 million representing 12.1% of general revenue.

In 1997, recurrent revenue was $219 million. Recurrent and statutory expenditure, $198.9 million, leaving a difference of $20.1 million. Excess of revenue over recurrent and statutory was 9.1%.

For the year 1998, the recurrent revenue was $253 million. Recurrent and statutory expenditure, $228.4 million. Leaving a difference of $24.6 million representing 9.7% of general revenue.

We recognise that we have to talk about what is envisioned under the reform initiative. We know what we cannot do, and government is fully committed to this. In fact, it is the path being taken. And we are at the stage now where legislation is being looked at. We will have to set out a formula in the legislation itself. It is not one that can be left up to discretion. We will have to look entirely at the package of general revenue. A decision will have to be taken in terms of what percentage of that will have to be allocated for recurrent and statutory expenditure.

A percentage amount will also have to be established for general reserves to take general reserves up to 25% of the annualised recurrent and statutory expenditure for a given year. For example, if that is 2%, 3%, or 4%, once that figure of 25% has been reached, let's say for example in the year 2005, then it can be adjusted on an annual basis whether by 1%, .5%, or 2% in order to maintain that figure in line with recurrent and statutory expenditure.

We know we will have to do this. But before we get to that stage, and this is what is underway at this time in terms of looking at making an assessment as to the state of affairs in terms of the government public finances management, we are getting back to a point where we can see that the objective in terms of attempting to match costs with revenue is underway at this time, and this is the focus. Every attempt is being made to ascertain the cost of running each unit within the government, each department, each ministry, each portfolio and the overall cost of governmental operations.

That will have to be established. Once that cost has been established, further examination will have to be made to determine the effectiveness and efficiency of the services. For instance, what utility is to be obtained by having this service provided? Can it be provided more cost effective within government or by outsourcing? All of this will have to be examined. All of these are being looked at in tandem. These activities are not necessarily taking place one beside the other. But in order to complete the reform initiative, this is what will have to be done.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town spoke about the need to know exactly what government's intake on the revenue side will be. Once cost is matched with revenue, and a determination made to index revenue measures . . . for example, we are talking about the year 2000. An indication has been given to departments that the budgets being put forward should not exceed 8% of what has been allocated for the year 1999.

Now, we are looking very closely at the growth rate. But we know that there is a tendency to have increases in budgets. Government recognises that this in itself is not the most efficient means. It's an interim measure until we can get back to the point where budgets are presented based on needs as can be determined on an annual basis. And once we have gone through and stripped out the excesses from which the Cayman Islands as a country does not derive a benefit, all of these things have to be taken down to levels of efficiency. That will be reflected in the cost of operating the government. Then we will have to look on the revenue side.

A decision will have to be taken, and this has been mooted, in terms of indexing the revenue items that are there. For example, each year we know that inflation has a way of eroding the value of a dollar or the purchasing power. At the same time, we find increases taking place on the expenditure side that are not necessarily matched up on the revenue side. In order to get additional revenue this translates into having to bring revenue measures. If the revenue measures were indexed to take into account the erosion, there would be an automatic adjustment on an annual basis. This will be reflected in the legislation that will be put forward to this honourable House for consideration.

What is being developed is a management process. We recognise that inefficiencies have occurred in the past. No one can doubt that. We have looked at all of the processes. But what is quite interesting is that while we will sometimes be very hard on ourselves, it's good because it keeps what we are doing in focus. But of all of the Overseas Territories, including Bermuda, the Cayman Islands is the most up-to-date in terms of its financial statements and the tabling of Government Minutes in the Legislative Assembly. This came out of an exercise that was conducted some time ago. So at least it's heartening to know that information is coming to this honourable House.

What I would deduce from what has been said today and previously is that everyone is talking about the need for refinement and efficiency to be achieved, value for money. Everyone (including me) subscribes to that. So it's not a question of sitting here and taking issue with the points that have been raised, but I will say, based on what has been achieved up to this time, and I am quite pleased at the way from lower management to upper management in the service more civil servants are coming together. They are very enthused about the reform initiative. They are very anxious to see changes effected that will allow them to use their reasoning abilities, their capabilities.

Where we are taking managers and paying them significant salaries and at the end of the day, for example, if a Head of Department travels to Miami and there is a need to rent a car . . . now I sit in Cayman as Financial Secretary, I cannot reasonably justify the need for that to be done. If we are paying somebody $70,000, $80,000 and $90,000 per annum and there is a need for a car to be rented because it will work out to be more cost effective than taking cabs to their various destinations, the only way that can be done is if that form is presented at my office to be signed by myself or the deputy Financial Secretary, or the Assistant Financial Secretary acting in my behalf.

What we are really doing when this is done is cur-tailing the judgment of those individuals. We are saying to them 'look, because of the fact that this form can be passed up the line there may not be the need for the car to be rented, but at the end of the day it can be justified by saying the Financial Secretary's initials are on it.' This is not the case. We are talking about employing people in order to conduct various spheres of management to ensure that the entire process is effectively managed and at the end of the day each and every one should be held accountable for their overall performance.

We are heading in that direction. There is enthusiasm and commitment in terms of striving towards that goal.

The question was also raised by the First Elected Member for George Town that government's contingent liability is increasing on an annual basis. In a parliamentary question that I responded to during this meeting of the House, I pointed out that the contingent liability . . . I showed the progression since 1995.

In 1995 the contingent liability was $101.8 million. In 1996 it went up to $171.6 million; in 1997 it showed a decline to a balance of $157.5 million. In 1998 it's down to $149.9 million.

I know that there are areas of this that can be looked at and we know that the biggest item in this has to do with the pension fund liability. This is an area that is being addressed. As members can see there is a significant contribution that will be going into that fund for the year 1999. I do not have the exact figures here with me, but we know that that fund is carrying a substantial balance. It shows there is a commitment to the reduction of that liability. Hopefully a programme can be put in place that will allow for the past service cost to be fully funded to get the pension plan on a current basis. But the funds that are there at the current time show that there is a commitment on the part of government and members of the Legislative Assembly supporting all of these initiatives.

The First Elected Member for George Town spoke about the government public debt situation, saying in effect that when we take into account the fact that borrowing has to occur to fund expenditure what it is really doing is impacting on the deficit situation. It's really delayed spending as such. I am going to leave it right there.

That honourable member has a point, Mr. Speaker. I will agree with him in the context that when we take into account the capital needs of government, and we attach that to recurrent and statutory, it definitely has a tendency to push the figures beyond the resources that are available in any given year. When I say the resources, or recurrent revenue.

One advantage that we will experience as we finalise the reform initiative, and I made this point previously, . . . from time to time the government acquires major assets—for example, the medical health facilities. This facility will serve this country over the next 20 to 30 years. But because of the present cash accounting system the expenditure on that major facility of some $28 million will be recognised within a three-year period. Moving to an accrual system will allow for the value of that asset to be taken on board, and the only thing that will be expensed in the current year is the value of the facilities that would have been used up. That would mean the plant, the building, by way of depreciation and depreciation of equipment. All of that will be reflected.

We will have accuracy. We will have transparency. What we are carrying on the public service pension fund is a direct liability. That is an obligation and that will be reflected as well. So it will be balanced out, and this is what the government is driving towards.

In any given year, requests by departments exceed available resources, revenue, by a significant margin. When a head of department comes in here and a question is put, "what was your request?" and they answer "$400,000."

"What were you allowed?"

"$200,000."

Often, Mr. Speaker (most of the times especially recently), to get to that point it's not that government sits and cuts the figures saying an unreasonable request has been made. It's a position that has been negotiated. Every department in government expects some paring down to take place in order to bring their requests in line with the available resources.

So even if $100,000 was spent last year, let us try with all of the efficiencies that are being brought to bear . . . and we know, for example, labour costs will always be increasing on an annual basis but there are other means by which cost savings can be effected. Let us see in terms of the resources that are available how we can contain expenditure for that year within the resources that have become available to that department.

I think that when Heads of departments attempt to portray a situation where the government is really impairing their capacity to operate, that will not be accurate in all instances. We are hoping that an understanding will emerge out of this and we trust that when we have the reform initiatives in place . . . and why I keep stressing the reform, Mr. Speaker, it's not a question of let's for example of shifting responsibility. We are saying to Heads of departments to take decisions.

I received a call last year around Christmas time as to what was happening. I was told that quite a number of people were going around to Hampsteads and Kirk Office Supply looking for items to buy in order to use up unexpended balances. When I call the names of these establishments, it's not to suggest anything untoward because they are carrying office products and so on.

When we look in terms of the computers arriving at the Glass House and the many truckloads that arrive . . . what we are saying to departments is, at the end of the day the money allocated to a Head of department or section is not the individual's money. The money that is allocated to the Portfolio of Finance and Development, that is not George McCarthy's money—that is the peoples' money.

We are saying that we should recognise this stewardship responsibility. There is a need for good stewardship. What we are saying to Heads of departments and controlling officers, what we are saying to junior officers and at all levels is that it should be inculcated in the minds of everyone having to spend one dollar of government money to justify the need. There should be justification as to the need.

When we bring our minds together in this process we are hoping we will be able to bring about refinement to the process as it now stands. On the revenue side, we have to look at that very, very carefully.

The Third Elected Member for George Town has put forward a parliamentary question as to the setting up of a think tank committee. I have thought about many ways of responding to that question, and I have not responded to it as yet. We held a meeting with representatives of the private sector. We took on board their views, and they put forth all types and some very good ideas.

But I thought to myself, had we gotten to a point where we have gone through and costed the operations of government and say to these individuals 'Look, this is what it is costing?' We should be able to sit down and demonstrate to them that in order to provide governance the minimum by which it can be done is by this amount, and go through and bring them along in terms of having a level of understanding. Then we could look at the revenue flow streams and say, 'All right, what ideas can you contribute in order to ensure that we have sustainability of these flows?' And not only on the revenue side, but let's say diversification of the economy.

As the labour pool continues to expand, as technology continues to improve reducing the need for manpower in certain areas, it means that there is a potential where six or seven people previously were needed in a given area, only four or five . . . so we will have to look for employment opportunities for all of these individuals.

So, when we talk about "diversification of the economy" we are talking about securing employment opportunities. We need to bring all of these things together.

It is my view, given the progress we are making to date . . . and there are two members from the backbench who are sitting in on the reform initiatives. They are making their contributions on the government side. If we continue at this rate, with the commitment of civil servants, we will have in place an acceptable system that will have been adequately reformed and for us to maintain by the year, let's say, 2002.

We have come a long way. When we look back at Colonial Regulations and what they were, it was quite interesting to see that we took the initiative to be innovative with the support of members of the Legislative Assembly of that day. We put in place the Public Finance and Audit Law. We put in place the Financial and Stores Regulations. And I was a part of that, but my predecessor spearheaded that. And that has served us well.

But it gets to a point where everything needs to be improved. Some of the concepts there are what we are building on. At the end of the day, I know that politics will have to be politics, and politics will have to be critical at times. I will not object even when criticism comes in my direction because I think it helps to maintain awareness and alertness.

So at the end of the day, given the fact that we are debating the Government Minute on the 1997 accounts, I appreciate what the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said, that we will have to look in terms of the relevance of the principles. This was emphasised by the First Elected Member for George Town. The Third Elected Member for West Bay also alluded to that.

Government is fully committed to all of the initiatives in order to bring about the efficiencies being sought. So when we look over all, it's not that there is a divergence of opinions, but at the end of the day it is going to take time.

I am very happy when I see the commitment of civil servants, when I see persons like Martha Archer, and the Deputy Financial Secretary who has been very active in this process. He had a lot to do with the previous reforms that shifted us from Colonial Regulations into the Public Finance and Audit Law.

When we look at the capacity of the Assistant Financial Secretary, the Accountant General, Mrs.

McLaughlin . . . and what is quite interesting is when I get figures from the Accountant General, I can sit and I know that I have accurate figures in front of me; figures that have been properly analysed. We can see the team approach.

It doesn't make me feel good when I go home at 8.00 or 9.00 and I see the lights of the Accountant General still burning in her office. I said to her two days ago, "Sonja, we are going to have Finance Committee, can you get out some figures?" And she said she would work that night. And she did.

Granted the way the figures came here yesterday we didn't have time to do the analysis in order to look at what would have been accountable for the trends we were seeing. That will have to be an after-the-fact event that we will have to do. But to see that there was that commitment in order to bring out the information that would have been beneficial to members of this House made me feel very good.

So, when we look in terms of what we have in front of us, all is not lost. But I would suggest, and I can see this as a commitment right across the board, there is a willingness to exercise collective judgment and for everyone to put their piece into the jigsaw puzzle. Hopefully, we will complete the picture and be able to maintain the picture.

There are things on the horizon that we don't know about. And there are things on the horizon that we have to pray about. God has been good to us and once we continue to use our minds, I do believe that our success in the future will be very much secure. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate, does any other member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I don't have very much to add. But I heard the Minister of Education say he was going to speak, and that he was going to have to take a long time. Mr. Speaker, I know that I am a sinner, but I don't deserve what he would visit upon us this afternoon!

[Laughter]

Mr. Roy Bodden: So I am going to have to take up some of the time that he would normally take!

I am not going to go into areas that other members have already discussed far better than I could, but I have a few comments based on what the honourable Third Official Member just said. I also want to draw reference to some of the report of the Auditor General and of the Standing Public Accounts Committee, and the Government Minute.

First I want to hit on a couple of pertinent points made by the honourable Third Official Member, because they are the most recent and I want to deal with it while it's still fresh in my mind.

I join with that honourable member in saying that government indeed does have a repertoire of able and willing officers who perform diligently and credibly in carrying out their duties, that is, the civil servants. I have always contended, however, that when the problems occur in this regard, they are as a result of intransigence and inflexibility on the part of the policymakers, namely, the government.

I am going to draw a very relevant example, one which the honourable Third Official Member used himself. He said that we are making progress and that we are doing well. And he focused and drew our attention to the financial and other reforms going forward. But I couldn't let that honourable member—and in particular the elected government—get away with saying that. Although we are making good progress, we would have been much farther advanced had the government adopted the Fiscal Responsibility Law when the motion came here in 1995. Instead, the Leader of Government Business, the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, derailed the process and misled them by saying that such a system was only for independent countries.

Now, years later—years later, Mr. Speaker—what do they have to do but backtrack and send off to New Zealand to get the experts, when all the information was on the Internet. We got the information off the Internet and through the office of the deputy clerk, we got the Law and the required legislation that we could have used as a model.

Let me tell you something, Mr. Speaker, we (myself included) are inclined to pat ourselves on the shoulder and blow our own horn, but the government doesn't have any space or reason to blow a horn about that because they are five years later than they should have been. I say that, and I will continue to say it; and I won't let them get away because when I meet them on Judgment Day, I am going to tell them the same thing! So, Mr. Speaker, as well as we are doing, we could continue to do better.

I have always contended that the reason why more progress is not made as far as efficiency in improving our infrastructure is concerned is because the government, particularly the elected government, believes that they have a monopoly on ideas. That is as far from reality as east is from the west. I am going to demonstrate that, Mr. Speaker.

One thing I like about people is that they can run when I turn up the stove. He can give, but he can't take. What a pity that is because I have some things to say that will help him out in his education! I am inviting him back, Mr. Speaker, because he needs to hear this.

Mr. Speaker, we have a problem with the way in which we disperse grants to schools. And it has been commented on for a very long time. I believe that it is true . . . and I would not advocate that we exclude the private schools from any generosity that we have to offer. But what is also true is that charity has to begin at home. The Auditor General's Report, the Report of the Public Accounts Committee, and the Government Minute all make reference to this important fact.

The Government Minute, in response to the Auditor General's Report and the Report of the Public Accounts Committee says on page 6 under the heading, "Grants to Private Schools": "The PAC's recommendation calls for Government to set up a system of scholarships to private schools, presumably at primary and high school level. This system is common in jurisdictions where private school education is superior to public school education, and is a way of encouraging and ensuring that very bright students reach their academic potential. In our system, such a scholarship scheme could be perceived as detrimental to the continuing development of the public school system. It is considered that the administration of such a scheme could be onerous, and the purpose behind it could be achieved in other ways."

I believe that there is merit to this observation. And, at the risk of giving away the strategies that we plan to use in the year 2000, I am going to suggest to the honourable Minister of Education, that the time has perhaps come for the consideration of some sort of voucher system. I believe this is the way to go; I believe it would be a fair and equitable system. I certainly have some ideas of how it could be developed, but I am not prepared to give them out at this stage because for too long ideas proposed by me and other persons on this side of the House have been castigated and criticised. But if he is smart—and the minister likes to boast that he has answers to many things—he can just pick up on that. But I think that what we should examine in regard to arriving at a satisfactory system for giving grants and financial assistance to private schools is a voucher system.

Such a system could be based on a number of things. And while I am not going into any details, it could be based on the ratio of Caymanian students to students of foreign nationality. It could be laid out along other lines or other bases could be used.

I share the observation that the current system is unsatisfactory because there is not enough information given to the construction of a reasonable formula. Also, evidence would suggest that as time goes by and as expenses rise, the private schools will become more dependent on such a grant from government. I would not, in my position of responsibility, encourage government to deprive the private schools of this assistance. But, at the same time, I have to say that the obligation of government must be to the public schools.

Now, if the minister is smart, he will exploit the ideas I have given and come up with something that is not only sensible but also satisfactory.

I want to mention the other subject that was deservedly flogged—Pedro Castle. There is no way that the Minister of Tourism can get away from the ultimate responsibility of that fiasco—especially as that minister was a former Financial Secretary of ten years' standing. I hope he comes here prepared to account to this honourable House for his stewardship. The buck stops on his desk!

Why in the world would someone of his experience and standing take full responsibility for such a project knowing, number one, that his ministry did not have the technical expertise needed; number two, that it did not have the manpower resources needed; and, number 3, knowing that the entity (namely CHRM) was not thoroughly investigated and assessed as to what it could and could not do.

I am not making any allegations. I am not trying to besmirch anyone's character. But I am saying that the minister's conduct in this regard was shoddy, or worse! How an entity that did not hold a business licence in this country could be allowed to operate to the extent it operates befuddles my mind. Certainly, for a company with paid up share values of less than $300, to be in a position to award itself a $1.8 million contract is a scathing indictment.

As much as any other member, I would like to see the project flourish and come to a successful level because it is in my constituency. I would like to be as proud of it as any Caymanian. But I have to say that even an old eternal optimist like me shares some pessimism and cynicism as to whether this project will be anything other than a white elephant.

I want to mention something else regarding this project that no other member has mentioned. We were told, in answer to a question in this honourable House earlier, that two senior members of government, namely, the Permanent Secretary in the Ministry of Tourism and the Chief Fire Officer, are currently on secondment managing this project. I have taken the opportunity to say as much to His Excellency (rather, not I, but a delegation of us) that we deemed such a practice unsatisfactory, especially as no indication was given as to how long these senior civil servants are going to be seconded to this project.

And, when you juxtapose that against the fact that the manager who was originally managing the project is now on suspension on half-pay and working at another job . . . that would never be accepted, not even in the creation of crabs!

So, all of that has to be added directly or indirectly to the cost of this project. For after spending about $9.5 million, the project still hasn't reached a point where it has successful management. Mr. Speaker, let's leave out successful. The project has not reached a level to where it has stable management.

Now, Mr. Speaker, you tell me, is that acceptable from the Minister of Tourism who was a former Financial Secretary of this country for ten years? And yet, when I brought the motion calling for this honourable House to adopt the Fiscal Responsibility Law, that honourable minister got up and said it wasn't his responsibility to know about the laws of New Zealand, it was his responsibility to know about the laws of the Cayman Islands. Well, Mr. Speaker, it's a pity he's not here this afternoon, because I wanted to tell him that his conduct has not convinced me that he knows about the laws of the Cayman Islands. At least he doesn't know how to manage some things successfully.

It is a scathing indictment on his performance. I am saying this without fear of successful contradiction. Going into the 21st Century, this is a sad indictment on the government. I wish that we could find some way of settling this matter successfully. But, do you know what? As time goes on, I know that we will not.

I want to offer a final comment. I find that this whole business of tardiness in discussing this report is unfortunate and regrettable. I took note of what the honourable Third Official Member said about why we were so late, but I draw reference to page 83 of the Report of the Auditor General on the Financial Statements of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the year ended 31 December 1997. In the final paragraph on that page, about midway, the Auditor General said: “The government’s accounts for 1997 had to be held open until the end of September 1998 so that the Ministry, with PWD’s help, could determine what should be charged to 1997 expenditure.”

That clearly states there was a breakdown on the government’s part. And I am not blaming the honourable Third Official Member, but the elected government has no excuse. They are not ready. They are not organised. They are not prepared. They are running around lost on the eve of the 21st Century. They are lost! They are rudderless, Mr. Speaker. Rudderless!

As time goes by, history is going to bear us out. While the government may have been a government with a sense of direction some years ago, it has lost all sense of direction. It has lost control of the fiscal management of this country. They are out of ideas and plans. The Auditor General’s Report, the Public Accounts Committee Report and the Government Minute show that it is time for change.

From the side of the House that I sit on, Mr. Speaker, we have plenty of people ready, willing, and able. We are just waiting until the House is prorogued and the time is called for the elections and we are going to come forward and lead this country into the 21st Century with good fiscal management, sound ideas, and progressive policies. Thank you.

The Speaker: I think this will be a convenient time to take the afternoon break. We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.15 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on the Government Minute. The floor is open for debate. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, what I would like to do before I speak, . . . the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee has requested that under Standing Order 14 (4), which says: “Subject to paragraphs (1) and (2), Members of the Government may place notices of motions and orders of the day on the Order Paper in any order they please.” What would be necessary to get the special Public Accounts Committee on Quarry Products on would really be the suspension of Standing Order 14(1) and (2) and then to exercise government’s right under Standing Order 14(4).

The Speaker: Maybe you should suspend Standing Order 14(1) and (2) first.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(1) AND (2)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir. I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(1) and (2), and under Standing Order 14(4) move that the honourable member be given the right . . . sorry, move that the Auditor General’s Special Report and the Public Accounts Committee Report be placed on the Order Paper at this time.

The Speaker: I shall put the question as put forth by . . .

[The First Elected Member for West Bay rose]

The Speaker: [Addressing the First Elected Member for West Bay] Do you have a comment?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, it’s a motion that the member is moving, but I rise on a matter of procedure. I have no objection to this thing being laid. I say that to my colleague, the Third Elected Member for West Bay, although I believe that the Orders of this House and the Privileges of this House have been finagled enough in the last couple of days.

I want to know how this matter can be put this way without the Business Committee receiving this item of business. I don’t know whether the Minister of Education, as Chairman of the Business Committee, can suspend that also.

The Speaker: All I can tell you is that I have an addendum to an Order Paper in front of me.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning, do you wish to speak to that?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I was really trying to help out the backbencher to put this on the paper. As I understand it, the Chairman of Public Accounts Committee is not going to be here Monday, and if he doesn’t do it now, then he won’t get the opportunity to do it.

I was really trying to help. I don’t intend to get into any protracted argument with the First Elected Member for West Bay. But maybe the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee might want to just say something in support of it, sir.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, my report has been completed for the last two weeks. I wrote to the Chairman of the Business Committee asking that it be placed on the Order Paper because we were ready.

As a matter of fact, the Public Accounts Committee met on the off days of the Legislative Assembly (on Tuesdays), and even after hours in order to try to complete the report to have it available for tabling in this sitting. Now, we started on the [8] of September. I had no idea we’d be here until the 7 or 8 October. I had made previous arrangements in regard to having to be off the island. But because of my sense of responsibility I would appreciate being in a position to table my report before I leave.

I don't have a problem with the request as far as accommodating this item of business at this stage. The Standing Orders plainly call for it. I would appreciate any consideration that can be given.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on the motion—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Business Committee I have to draw to the Chair's attention that this matter has not been put to the Business Committee. How can a piece of business come here without going through the Business Committee? As I said, unless the Chairman of the Business Committee, the Leader of Government Business, suspends the Order, then I think we are just going here . . . I am not against the member trying to get the business tabled. But at least the government who has accepted it should have the responsibility to do it right.

The Speaker: I think you have made it obvious many times how familiar you are with Standing Orders. The Business Papers have been referred to the Business Committee, and the Business Committee has prepared an addendum to the Order Paper—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: May I address you, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Please, the First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: That's what I have been saying, sir. The Business Committee has not met to put this on any Order Paper. And I know, because I am a member of the Business Committee.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, what I was seeking to do . . . it seems to me that the interpretation and intent of Standing Order 14(4) would be to use that in an instance such as this where the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee is going to be off the island. He is the person who will have to lay this report. The Legislature may finish this coming week (it probably will, I would think), and it may well finish before he gets back.

I think it's only right that we should try to assist the Public Accounts Committee to have something laid on the table, something that has been cleared by you, sir. And that's why I was really moving this.

Let me just say it seems as if . . . I am not certain really why the objection is being taken. If it is not laid now, it would have been able to be laid on Monday, but he won't be here. Like everyone else, members leave here and go outside, as I did a few minutes ago, to the bathroom and comments are made, or they go away or whatever. This happens at times to all of us. All I was trying to do was to vary the Order Paper because it seems to me that it is not a procedure that goes upon the motion to adjourn, it's a different procedure that was set out in 14(4).

But, if the House is not so minded, I am not pressing it. I was merely accommodating because the member can't move it because a government member needed to move it.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: As you recall, I was the seconder of a private member's motion that was originally accepted but could not come before the House before this particular procedure had taken place. I appreciate the Minister of Education, as the Leader of Government Business, being so kind as to allow the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee to lay this on the Table of the House because he won't be here. And I think that as a House we understand that the Business Committee is there to see that the business reaches the House in an orderly fashion, by way of the Order Paper.

But it does not mean that the Business Committee has total control over issues brought to the House. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning is quite correct. This could not be raised on the motion for the adjournment; it would have to be raised during the period in which the House is doing its business. And it's up to the members of the House as to whether or not they will accept this deviation in order to allow this to happen.

I am quite sure that the First Elected Member for West Bay understands specifically that this issue has been an outstanding issue, and that the government is getting a certain amount of flack because it has not been dealt with. I am quite willing to make the alteration in the business to allow it to come before the House at this time.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I only have one more observation. And I say again that I have no problem. The government finds itself in a difficulty, they had sufficient time to deal with this matter, it has not been dealt with, the member is going away.

The Leader of Government Business—who is being so kind—had sufficient time to organise a Business Committee [meeting], the members were here all day yesterday and today. The Standing Order that they are attempting to move this under, Standing Order 14 (4), which says, "Members of the Government may place notices of motions and orders of the day on the Order Paper in any order they please." In the order they please. That surely means after the Business Committee has met and dealt with it. And if they want to move me off the Business Committee, then so be it. But it is time that we be run by a Business Committee and not by one person alone!

As I said, I am only one person here. And as the House wills, so it will be. But this certainly is not the right place to do it. And, Mr. Speaker, if they want to do it, there's no reason why it can't be done at the end of the day. The Orders provide for that, in fact. And, in fact, when I first heard about this, that was when it was going to be done. I certainly didn't think they could have done it at this time.

The Speaker: We have been talking until seven minutes before the hour of interruption. Let me say this: I see nothing more democratic. I have an Order Paper in my hand. I am going to put the motion moved by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning to the House. If it fails, it fails, if it passes we will go ahead with it.

I shall now put the motion as moved by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: May I have a division please?

The Speaker: Certainly. Madam Clerk, please call a division.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

THE SPECIAL REPORT OF THE AUDITOR GENERAL ON THE QUARRYING OPERATIONS ON CROWN LAND

~AND~

THE REPORT OF THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE ON THE SPECIAL REPORT OF THE AUDITOR GENERAL ON THE QUARRYING OPERATIONS ON CROWN LAND

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I also want to thank the honourable members of this House who accommodated this request.

In accordance with Standing Order 77(5), I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House a copy of The Special Report of the Auditor General on the Quarrying Operations on Crown Land and a copy of the Report of the Public Accounts Committee on the Special Report of the Auditor General on the Quarrying Operations on Crown Land.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Do you wish to speak to your report?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Yes, sir.

This is an item that has—

The Speaker: You understand that this will be tabled and the debate will follow when the Government Minute is submitted?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I do, Mr. Speaker.

The Report of the Public Accounts Committee on the Special Report by the Auditor General on the Quarrying Operations on Crown Land.

[The Third Elected Member for West Bay read the Public Accounts Committee report in its entirety. Please see Appendix attached]

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: Can I interrupt you one moment?

I would appreciate a motion to suspend Standing Order 10(2) so that we can continue beyond 4.30 PM?

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) so that the member can finish his report.

The Speaker: The question is the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) so that the member can finish his report. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW THE THIRD ELECTED MEMBER FROM WEST BAY, CHAIRMAN OF THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE, TO COMPLETE THE READING OF THE REPORT.

The Speaker: Sorry for the interruption, please continue.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: [The Third Elected Member for West Bay continued reading the Public Accounts Committee Report (See Appendix)]

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I just have two observations. I think it's just a matter of—

The Speaker: Before recognising you, I see that there is a dissenting report. Do the movers of that wish to read that into the record? No?

Does the Elected Member for North Side wish to read it into the record? (Pause)

First Elected Member for George Town I recognise you in the meantime.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, sir. All I was really saying was that the report reads that it is being laid under Standing Order 74(5). I think that needs to be corrected to 77(5).

The Speaker: Yes, 77(5) is correct.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: And, Mr. Speaker, the point I wanted to make about Standing Order 77(5) says, "The Public Accounts Committee shall make their report upon the report of the Auditor General on the accounts of Government before the Auditor General's report is laid on the Table of the House and both the Committee's report and the Auditor General's report shall be laid at the same time."

Standing Order 77 (7) reads, "The Government Minute shall be laid on the Table of the House within three months of the laying of the report of the Committee and of the report of the Auditor General to which it relates." I would like to bring this to the Chair's attention, sir, bearing in mind that from past experience that the government is known to be tardy with its Minute.

I would like for the Chair to ensure that it instructs the government about that Standing Order. I would also seek interpretation where Standing Order 77(7) says "within three months" whether that means the first meeting within that three months, or the first meeting after that three months because my interpretation is within three months which means that the Minute for what was just read has to come in the next meeting in November. That's my understanding and I would like clarification, sir.

The Speaker: I would interpret that to mean ninety days from today.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I know that's very clear, Mr. Speaker. My question was if we are not in session then, where is it laid? That is why I asked whether it is laid within that time or the first meeting after that time. That's what I am asking you. And it is very possible that we won't have a meeting ninety days from today.

The Speaker: The Standing Order is very clear that it must be laid within ninety days. So I would suggest that it be laid within the ninety days. That would be my interpretation.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you very much sir. That's all I wanted to get clear, and I wanted to make sure that the government recognises that so that we can expect to get the Minute during the next meeting in November.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay, do you care to move the dissenting report? (Pause)

If there is no further business, I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 AM Monday.

The Speaker: Excuse me, one second.

Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, do you have something to say?

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to read the dissenting statement.

The Speaker: Please, go ahead.

DISSENTING STATEMENT TO THE REPORT OF THE STANDING
PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE ON THE SPECIAL REPORT BY THE AUDITOR GENERAL ON QUARRYING OPERATIONS ON CROWN LAND

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Thank you.

[The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town read the entire report. Please see Appendix]

And, Mr. Speaker, this is signed by the Elected Member for North Side, and by me, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. Thank you.

The Speaker: That concludes proceedings. I will now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move that that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM Monday.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM Monday. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 5.10 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, 11 OCTOBER 1999.

MONDAY
11 OCTOBER 1999
11.01 AM

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works]

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable Second and Third Official Members, they will be arriving later this morning. I have also received apologies for absence from the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay who is sick.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper—

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I have noticed that for the past couple of days now, there have been no questions appearing on the Order Paper. I know for a fact that members still have questions outstanding, some of which have been deferred. Can the House be told why there has been a letup in questions appearing on the Order Paper? I think members are concerned that the questions may fall away. I intimated that I did not wish any answers in writing. I would prefer to ask my questions when I can be afforded the opportunity to ask supplementary questions, as I place great emphasis in supplementary answers.

While I am on my feet, I would remind the honourable House that it had given a commitment to sit late for the duration of the week.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There are some questions left. Most of the ministers either have none, . . . I think the Minister of Health may have one; there may be two for the Minister of Works. I don't think there are any left for the honourable First Official Member. I will ask again for those questions that remain. I do not think that a large amount of them remain, but I will try to get them on for Wednesday morning.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I forgot that I was asked by the Third Elected Member for West Bay to convey to you his apologies for absence. I think he will be away for the rest of the week.

The Speaker: So noted.

In regard to sitting late this afternoon, I would recommend we meet informally to set the hours of your work.

Moving on to Item 3, Presentation of Papers and Reports. Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Auditor General's Report on the Audited Accounts of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the year ended 1997. Debate continues. Does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

GOVERNMENT MINUTE ON THE REPORT OF THE STANDING PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE ON THE AUDITOR GENERAL'S REPORT ON THE AU-DITED ACCOUNTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS FOR THE YEAR ENDED 1997

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I would first like to deal with the two matters raised in the report. The first relates to Cayman Airways, and the references are found at page 3 of the Government Minute, and also paragraphs 8 to 9 of the Public Accounts Committee Report, and page 57 of the Auditor General's Report.

This matter related to the subsidy to Cayman Airways and the reply to what was stated in those books was, if I may just read the Government Minute, "(a) The Ministry acknowledges that there is a discrepancy in the share capital between CIG's records and CAL's books. The Ministry undertakes to ascertain the reason for this and to rectify it."

This has to do with the issuing of a small amount of shares. I go on, "However, Government owns all shares and there will be no change in the 100% ownership." In other words, Government owns Cayman Airways, and the shares that will be issued will not change the ownership at all. It's basically a tidying up position that will have to be done. In fact, it has hopefully been issued. So, that was the first point. And that amount was $198,434. That will not change the ownership.

"(b) The Ministry agrees (and is committed to ensuring full compliance through closer monitoring of the government owned companies) to file the annual returns with the Registrar of Companies.” Unfortunately, it seems that they have not filed them. However, once again, the jets are in subsidiary companies of government, it’s 100% owned and nothing has changed on that annual return that is material.

I have given an undertaking to table the completed audit for Cayman Aviation Leasing Limited. I am still waiting on that. Again, that is 100% owned by government, the same as Cayman Airways. What I am stressing here is, despite the fact that there may be small discrepancies between these companies, at the end of the day they are all owned by government.

There reply to that was agreed, that they should lay the reports. “However, the Directors of Cayman Aviation Ltd. was the Deputy Financial Secretary and Deputy Chief Secretary, and the Accountant General was maintaining the bank accounts and financial records on behalf of Government.” So this was an in house aspect. But we will get the audited accounts on it. They are government owned companies.

The other one was where the Public Accounts Committee said, “Government should explore the possibility of reporting its interests in state-owned entities on a market value basis or some other means of reflecting a current value of Government’s interests in those entities rather than outdated historical cost measures.” And the Financial Secretary has actually stated that reforms are going through within government. However, “CAL lays its audited accounts on the Table of the Legislative Assembly each year.” So every year this House gets the audited accounts of Cayman Airways and the values are clearly set out in them.

However, I agree that it would be good when we finally get the new accounting system that we have a consolidated balance sheet of government with its subsidiaries showing the vast amount of assets that are held in these government owned statutory authorities.

The other area that was dealt with in the Public Accounts Committee Report related to the CAA and Cayman Airways, and Island Air. In reply, the Government Minute stated, “(a) The Ministry agrees that the business relationship between CAL and the CAA should be regularised as soon as possible. It appears that progress is being impeded because the two parties (CAL/CAA) have not agreed certain accounting procedures. CAL’s 1999 budget assumes payment of obligations as incurred going forward.”

The Public Accounts Committee specifically stated at page 11 that, “Government ensures that its fees due from all airlines operating in the Islands are collected on a timely basis.” The reply to that is, “Agreed that ‘government ensures that its fees due from all airlines operating in the Islands are collected on a timely basis.’ The CAA has written to Island Air Ltd. demanding $647,723.70 payment of outstanding fees.” The fees by CAL are being dealt with by an issue of shares in CAL. And the payment will be dealt with at the Finance Committee, but that will be a payment of fees, not a waiver.

“Government gives some thought as to whether the annual subsidy to Cayman Airways should include amounts sufficient to cover the airline’s annual fees to the Civil Aviation Authority or, alternatively, all parties could discuss the possibility of exempting Cayman Airways from CAA’s fees.”

The reply to that was, “Air services agreements (Bermuda II) prevents governments from charging lower fees for their national carriers than for foreign carriers in the area of airport services and facilities (Article 3, Bermuda II). Government agrees to consider subscribing to capital of CAL or to a subsidy to cover CAL’s fees to the CAA” as requested by the Public Accounts Committee.

Cayman Airways continues to have its ups and downs. But, as will be seen when I lay the audited accounts for 1998 in November, there has been a considerable improvement in the airline’s profitability—or I should say decrease in it’s deficit, or loss, by a considerable amount which shows that the airline is going in the right direction financially. When the third jet comes on line, I think that will also assist.

The other area of the report that related to me was the grant to private schools. The Public Accounts Committee made some recommendations at page 18, which I replied to in depth. They recommended, “Negotiations be entered into with schools to ensure that in cases where a child excels but is unable to pay the fees, a place is retained for that child either free or at a greatly reduced fee.”

We are, and have been, discussing the question of grants to schools, both with the association of principals at the private schools as well as looking at it in depth through the Education Department in relation to all schools. The normal system is called “Grant in Aid” which is made to schools, with normally a lot of strings attached.

By the way, I think a simple solution in relation to grants would be for grants to be based on the number of children at the school, because our law for the past 40 years or so has required compulsory education of every child on the island, not necessarily every Caymanian. If it is to be based on the number of Caymanians in each school, then that would be one that would assist the schools through the number of Caymanian children they have.

There was a request for private schools to have audited accounts by the Public Accounts Committee. This is going to be expensive and onerous. We keep accounts, but we don’t have audited accounts. If this is required by the Public Accounts Committee, we may have to pick up the bill on that. However, the schools are all church run, and I don’t believe their accounts would intentionally be inaccurate. By and large . . . well, they all are run by honest people. While it would be good to have audited accounts—and I don’t disagree with the Public Accounts Committee—the cost could be substantial.

One of the recommendations related to the standards in private schools. We do have a full school Inspectorate that is very transparent, very open, and we have been satisfied with the standards in the schools and as the Inspectorate completes more and more audits there will be confirmation of the high standards that are there.

There was also a matter about the leasing of the First Baptist property to Cayman Prep. I take the points that have been put in here, only to say it is like government going back to government because we will probably have to assist them with grants. In fact, all of the private schools need government's assistance. They are heavily subsidised by their churches and they are lifting a financial burden of about $12 million per annum off government's recurrent expenditure. So they do serve a very good purpose from a financial point of view.

I would like to go on to deal with some points that were raised in the debate. The financial position of the government was criticised by the First Elected Member for George Town. These were laid on the Table of this House in Finance Committee, and I believe it probably shocked the members of the backbench when they saw the good position that the government was in.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, let me just read what it says if you think it's not good.

The surplus as at 31 August was $18,841,000. I believe that's where the shock came to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, who likes commenting on these things.

In fact, all of the funds together that are being held by government, excluding the pensions fund, is $27,136,000 up to 31 August 1999. The public will realise quite clearly that with that amount of cash—$27 million—the country is in a good situation. One criticism that was made by the First Elected Member for George Town was that revenue was down $11 million over budget. That is correct. However, as the backbench likes to do at times, that is single entry bookkeeping.

If one had looked just four or five items down, one would have seen that the expenditure is down by nearly $10 million. So that is the reason why, when you apply double entry bookkeeping, rather than just picking figures out of the air, we came up with the cash of $27 million. So there can be no doubt that government is still in a very good position.

Also, very substantial amounts have been put into the pension fund. I think about $9 million to $10 million a year goes in there to make up past liability over the past twenty years or so that past governments had not funded. If I remember correctly, it is probably in the area of $60 million in the pension fund reserve. That's purely to pay pensions. But it relates to the contingent liability which also the First Elected Member for George Town criticised and said it was going up all the time.

However, the honourable Third Official Member showed that because of the heavy amounts paid for the pension fund, there had actually been a reduction in the contingent liabilities that exist.

There is also one other thing with the debt that is owed by government . . . and by the way, the contingent liabilities were addressed in a question that was put to this honourable House in this session in which it showed that in 1996, after the revaluation of the pensions liability, the contingent liabilities were $171.6 million. In 1997 that was reduced to $157.5 million; and in 1998 it has reduced to $149.9 million.

Now that there has been a kicking in of pensions that are contributed and that are the equivalent of the savings aspect, then this will cease to have increases in contingent liabilities when the new pension comes in which will take effect over quite a number of years because there still remain a lot of persons on the old pension scheme which creates a much heavier liability.

On the question of debt servicing, it is obviously very worrying if a country gets to a stage where its recurrent expenditure is exceeding its recurrent revenue. Except in 1991 and 1993, this country has never had a deficit on its recurrent revenue and its recurrent expenditure. Indeed, this year (up to 31 August) there is a recurrent surplus—a profit, of $12,102,000 before the balance brought forward from 1998 is added in, which, by the way, showed a profit of $9,115,000. So, with a profit this year, so far of $12 million, a profit and surplus last year of $9.1 million, and after taking out the capital acquisitions there is still a surplus on account of $18,841,000.

The loans that government has are medium term loans. And instead of these being paid over perhaps twenty or thirty years, they are being repaid over eight to twelve years. This is the reason why the payment of the debts is a very heavy part, but way under the 10% of recurrent revenue that is the low international monetary fund requirement for prudent borrowing. But the debt service ratio this year is 6.4%, so it's way under the 10%, although we are servicing loans that are short to medium term.

I know that it would be good ammunition for the opposition if government was not in a good financial position, but it is. I saw their faces when the account showing $27 million in cash came up, and it definitely was one of shock and surprise. So the country is in a good financial position. And despite the gloom and doom that has been painted, the country had a surplus last year of $9 million, has a surplus so far this year of $12 million, and, as I read, it also has a total cash position, excluding pensions, of over $27 million. So I think any levelling of criticism in this area is not justified by the facts. I think the public has to look at the facts as they are given.

What I have stated has been laid upon the Table of this House. They are correct facts, and this is what the public should go on. Accounts, as I have showed, can be misinterpreted or, worse yet, half interpreted, such as by saying that revenue is down. That's true. But if expenditure is also down, then on the double entry system the government's position doesn't really change materially.

The government has been applauded by the United Kingdom Government for laying on the Table its early Finance Committee reports and Government Minutes on government's financial position. In fact, we were stated as having the best record out of the Overseas Territories in this matter. There can be no doubt that the system works, and that things are dealt with in a timely way. But the process in itself takes time as three bodies are involved—the Auditor General, the Public Accounts Committee, and subsequently the Government Minute.

There has been some criticism of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority and the question of its being chaired by the Financial Secretary and of its autonomy. It is very interesting to look at what was recently said about the Financial Services Authority of England in which a similar type of financial services authority was forced to change to ensure that it did not, as the Treasury Chief Secretary . . . and I am reading from The Daily Telegraph, 23 December 1998. . . “Stephen Byers, Treasury Chief Secretary, said the government was keen to avoid the Financial Services Authority being seen as ‘prosecutor, judge and jury.’”

The Act that came out, and this is headed “Financial Services Authority Bill Altered to Allay City Fear”. . . just a bit earlier (one month) the headline in The Times was, “Fears Over FSAs Power Spurs Call to Delay Bill.” It was delayed, and it was amended. What is being done with the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority has to be looked at carefully because that autonomy has to be balanced in such a way that it is not seen to be (as it has been put by the City of London Financial Centre) where it is acting as “prosecutor, judge and jury.”

It’s not as simple as standing up and saying that it must be autonomous. Anyone can make that statement. But someone who understands the way a regulatory authority works has to ensure that the necessary checks and balances relating to the Monetary Authority are properly done. We should look carefully at the Financial Services Authority in the United Kingdom where obviously a mistake was made with the White Paper that was put out and ultimately this had to be changed.

I fully agree in the autonomy of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority. But I also believe that it has to be one that is on the right footing, not as was stated in The Daily Telegraph article: “City lawyers [meaning City of London lawyers] expressed disappointment however at the failure of the Authority to include the principle of fairness in the forthcoming legislation instead of leaving it to the good intentions of the regulator.”

Also they left out the right of the accused by the FSA to see the evidence against them. These are just some of the changes that were made. “Further, it was stated, a bar on the FSA announcing fines or other enforcement action until the process including tribunal procedure had been completed and dropping the power to make rules on when relevant evidence might be inadmissible before the tribunal.” We have a lesson to be learned from that.

I don’t intend to go too much further into the Government Minute, but I would just like to read one area. A lot was levelled at the Pedro Castle project as to what went to tender, and what did not go to tender. I would like to read from the Minute beginning at page 10. Under “Furniture Contract” it says, “The Furniture contract was tendered.” So that’s the first of the six contracts.

On the landscaping contract, still on page 10, “The landscaping contract was tendered with the exception of the labour. A portion of this contract was awarded to EMS Landscaping and a portion to Mr. Crawford Dilbert.” So there was tendering there again.

The Multimedia contract, page 11, first line, “The multimedia contract was tendered.”

The fifth, project management contract. It says, “Initial contract for services was awarded through an international competition under the guidance of the Historic Sites Committee. Fifty-one submissions were received and reviewed by the committee. Following the committee’s recommendations a contract was awarded to CHRM.” Once again, the contract was tendered.

While there was one extension of contract that good cause was shown on, that too is a justifiable position, one that has been done from time to time where you have a contract in place to extend the contract for extra work so that the initial contract had gone through the full process of a tender, and the extension itself was one that was made to a contract that had been tendered. So despite a lot of what has been said, when we look at the facts it will be clearly seen that the six contracts, as I mentioned here (one was split, I think) . . . the total amount of contracts other than the extensions were fully tendered. Therefore, there can be no criticism of those areas.

One thing I don’t think the Opposition can say is that the Pedro Castle project is not a good project. Anyone who has seen it knows that it is a good project for the country, one that is visited often by Caymanians and local people, and one that is also utilised for social functions by the tourism industry, people coming here on conferences. So it is a very good supplement to what is needed locally as well as for tourism. I think that anyone who has seen the audio and visual show that is at Pedro Castle can only say that it is first class.

Like everything else, if you are going to get something good you have to pay for it. If something had been done there that was of a low calibre the criticism would have been that it was messed up. So it’s better to pay a bit more and get something done right because you get what you pay for at the end of the day. This project has been good for the country. I know the people of the country are happy with it, and I really think the time has come where this has been beat to death over the years by the Opposition. It’s time for them to get off it and move on to the future and assist it. It has a good future. It is a good project.

A lot of times, time is wasted (and this is the democratic process) in areas where if that energy had been put into trying to promote something rather than wasting time criticising it, it may have been a much bigger success. Things take time. Businesses take time to get on their feet. But from what I can see in relation to this the project, its money’s worth is all there. It’s very high quality work, very good work, and something that is so important to the heritage of the Cayman Islands.

Going back now in summary, and winding this up, the attempt to criticise the economy of the country just doesn’t hold water. The recurrent surplus for eight months, to 31 August 1999, is $12,102,000. When adding to that the surplus of 1998 of $9,115,000, and taking out what we spent on capital acquisitions, there is a surplus to 31 August 1999 of $18,841,000. These are facts. I would ask the public to accept these instead of the criticism that varied from this.

Also, when we look at the different funds, the Environmental Protection Fund, Infrastructure Development Fund, Housing Reserve Fund, Student . . . well, that doesn't have anything it appears, just a small amount in it. When these are all added together, excluding the general reserve—and this is very important, excluding general reserve—there is a surplus of $27,136,000. So, excluding the general reserve, excluding the pension fund, there is $27,136,000 in cash. That's million, Mr. Speaker. Twenty-seven million is nothing to be sneezed at.

In fact, the pension fund is over $60 million in cash. That's a fund that is being built up by this government. I can safely say that we are the only government, other than the $4.5 million that we found seven years ago, who has—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am sorry. I am reminded by my colleague that it was only $3.5 million seven years ago. And now we have put in another fifty-odd million [dollars] making it well over $60 million in the pension fund which is reduced down the contingent liabilities I showed a bit earlier. An answer was given here showing that the contingent liability moved down in 1996 from $171.6 million to $149.9 in 1998. This was made clear by the honourable Financial Secretary.

Also, the loans that remain are short term. We are paying a lot more money for them, but this year the repayment of principle and interest, the total debt serviced by government is only 6.4% of our recurrent revenue. So we are 3.6% under the internationally accepted standard of 10% of our recurrent revenue.

With the transferring in of $3 million this year that will be put into the general reserve, we will be looking at $13.4 million in general reserve, which will make a total (of the funds and the general reserve) of approximately $40.5 million. That's quite a substantial amount of cash, so any allegation that the country is broke or otherwise is just an attempt to probably hurt the government, but definitely will hurt the country because the truth of it is set out in the figures that were laid on the Table of this House about one week ago (or less) in Finance Committee.

Despite what has been said, the government's position remains good. As usual, the opposition has put forward no solutions to anything. It's all well and good to criticise. But you don't run a country on criticism. You have to have solutions to problems. This government with $40 million in cash has obviously produced, despite the severe criticism at times on finances of the country, very good financial results. And, at the end of the day, the test is in the eating of the pudding; it's in what is there. The projections about deficits in recurrent revenue are not based at all on the facts that I have just given.

While I realise that it's getting near to the elections and there are going to continue to be allegations against government, I would ask honourable members in the course of making these to bear in mind that many times attempts to attack the government are really attacks on the country. It hurts the country at times. Therefore, it is important that members carefully weigh what they say and how they say it because at the end of the day their attacks may be hurting the country and the people who have put them in this honourable House to promote and work in unison with government. Make your fair criticism as opposition, which you are entitled to do, but avoid allegations that may be damaging, especially in areas such as the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority.

To be frank, I was somewhat surprised to hear that aired here because that is a matter that will ultimately have to come into talks abroad as it's one of the measures that the Financial Action Task Force has set out. Many times as well, a lot of time could be saved in this House if the facts were asked for informally, especially matters relating to finance. Well, in this case the accounts were laid. They were asked for, and they were laid. But, obviously, we are in conflict some of the times with the allegations made by looking at one part of the figures and not looking at another part that had affect on the overall position.

In ending sir, in an open and detailed Minute government has very clearly dealt with the matters set out in the Auditor General's Report. In clear accountability and transparency government has come forward and put these accounts out and dealt with them openly. If there is anything that has been perhaps put forward . . . and, by the way, a partial truth or a partial representation is one of the most dangerous things because it carries with it the ring—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, since that honourable member seems to be making some statements to me, I will wind this up with what in my view is a half representation.

When the accounts were laid on the table the First Elected Member for George Town mentioned that the recurrent revenue was down $11.889 [million]—which is correct. And just saying that by itself would obviously raise concern amongst members here. But just a few lines down, and very visible to everyone, is the fact that the recurrent expenditure is also down $9.9 million. And even more than that, what could have shown the government's accounts in the right light is that the actual surplus to date was $18.841 million cash, compared to the budget of $14.9 million.

And when everything is put together we find that the reduction in recurrent revenue is offset by a reduction in recurrent expenditure of substantially the same. But the projected budget of the surplus of 1998 was only $3.1 million and the country did so well that that was increased up to $9.1 million in 1998. So, when all the figures are looked at you get a clear picture. If one figure is taken by itself, it can distort the position, especially for people who don't have the other figures, which they could not have.

So, government, with $40 million in cash between the reserves, the funds, and the heavy surplus continues to be in a good position. But I know we must be prudent. We must be careful. We must look at every penny being spent. And I do not criticise members of the backbench for doing that. All I would say is that criticism should be constructive and full rather than partial. My only plea is that the Good Lord will continue to smile on this country and that we will go forward, as we have been doing, for the betterment of the country.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take the morning break. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.37 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.24 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on the Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Auditor General's Report on the Audited Accounts of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the year ended 1997. Debate continues.

Does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would just like to briefly speak on the Minute and the Public Accounts Committee Report, mainly in the area of what affects my Ministry and the Health Services Department.

As indicated in the Minute, "The Ministry of Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation and the Health Services Department support that annual provision be included in the Budget to cover overseas medical expenses for non entitled persons, as outlined in recommendation (a) of the PAC Report.

"The following steps the following steps have been taken to improve recovery of overseas medical advances: (a) In August 1998 a Debt Collector was appointed at the Health Services Department, with specific responsibility to follow up overseas medical accounts." Mr. Speaker, as I have indicated many times this has been a perennial problem within the Health Services Department.

"As at 1st July 1999, eighty-one (81) individuals who were not paying on overseas medical accounts, have signed repayment plans. Collections from these individuals for the month of June, 1999 were CI$18,195. The repayment plans provide for the repayment to Government of CI$1,406,650 over the next five years. It should be noted that this is all repayment of old, previously non-serviced debt and is incremental to the normal repayments that Health Services have been receiving.

"This process is ongoing and each month additional accounts, which were not being repaid, are being added to the list of payment plans. For this reason it is anticipated that the recoverable amount will increase on a month by month basis."

I would just like to say a few words about the collection of fees at the Health Services Department. For some time now we have been making a very real effort to improve our revenue capture. But we would be the first to admit that we still have a long way to go. We are strengthening our accounts department in order to better process insurance claims and we have appointed a health services debt collector to follow up on outstanding accounts.

We are confident that revenue capture will continue to improve but it is only fair to warn members of this honourable House and the general public that collection of outstanding fees can be an uncomfortable process for both sides.

Regrettably, too many of our people resent having to pay for their health care, citing in the process a variety of common excuses as to why they should not have to pay. Truthfully it pains me and disappoints me when I look at the list of names of the people owing sometimes considerable amounts of money to government for their health care. Many of these are living at a high standard and could well afford to make regular payments. Somewhere along the line our values have become confused in these islands. Of course, there are all sorts of reasons for this that I don't really want to get into at this time.

We need to get back to believing that each one of us has a responsibility to provide for such essentials as health care coverage and pension requirements before we spend money on high performance cars, luxury items and frequent vacations abroad. I repeat: many, many people who refuse to make regular payments on outstanding balances can well afford to do so.

We are gradually bringing such people to account, and will continue to do so in order for government to capture the revenue that rightly belongs to it.

The revenue situation is not helped by the fact that government's present level of fees for health care is absurdly out of tune with the real cost. As members know, I will be bringing regulations bringing increased fees to this House for approval. I intend to ask for members' advice prior to actually presenting these regulations for debate.

Government has tended to raise fees infrequently over the years, and then in very large incremental amounts. I think it would be more sensible to build in regular incremental increases into the health fees at levels that are acceptable and digestible, as it were, by the public at large. I know members of the backbench, in particular the First Elected Member for George Town, spoke in this vein. It is time that we adopted this process.

Notwithstanding what I said about people not paying their health bills, I want to make it very clear that government recognises that there are those vulnerable elements in our population who genuinely cannot pay and who either have no family members to assist, or whose family member are themselves in need of assistance. All society's contain such persons and, despite our affluence, we are no exception. For many years now in the Cayman Islands government has rightly, in my opinion, adopted a humane approach to the problems of its genuinely needy citizens and provided health care free of charge in such situations. I can assure everyone that this will continue.

Historically over the years the Health Services Department has collected a very small percentage of revenue, probably less than 30% of actual cost incurred. We all know that in the past, government took care of civil servants' fees. This means that one department, the Health Services Department, gets saddled with that amount of money showing as revenue not coming in. I very much welcome the new financial reforms that will eventually come to these islands where each department within the civil service will provide expense coverage that might be incurred. This will reduce the terrible equation that reflects on the Health Services Department as not carrying its weight.

As I said earlier on, we must now face the reality that we must put in realistic fees for services that we provide. As I have drawn to the attention of this House many times, a good example is when the tourist ships bring their ill passengers here and the few dollars we charge for sometimes significant procedures cannot recover our outlay.

With those few words, that is my contribution on this report. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate. Does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you.

The Government Minute speaks to a number of areas that were brought forward by the Auditor General and commented on by the Public Accounts Committee. One area is the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services (DVES) which in 1997 was under another ministry. Although the Auditor General's Report did raise a number of items, the Public Accounts Committee, to the best of my knowledge, did not raise any issue on it at all, nor was there a comment on the department.

I believe, quite honestly, that we all missed dealing with the points raised by the Auditor General. Neither did the Public Accounts Committee deal with it, unless I missed it somewhere in these pages, or the ministry responsible . . . and I would say at this particular time that the Ministry of Works, which is mine, would be the ministry to deal with this at this particular time as I understand that the Public Accounts Committee's work was done in the early part of the year and the respective report was tabled on 23rd April 1999.

The only way I can think of rectifying that matter is for my ministry to issue a statement on it at some future sitting and bring that to the attention of members of this House and the public.

I am aware that a number of items which came forward in the Auditor General's Report have been rectified.

Some are presently being worked on. The only position I take at this time is that we have a responsibility for the subject and we intend to answer these statements made by the Auditor General and to bring those to the attention of members of this honourable House, as well as the public.

It was not just today that we have dealt with Auditor General's Report. I have personally been dealing with them for 21 years. I understand the position of an Auditor General and the work that he carries out on behalf of government, be it that he reports to the Legislative Assembly. To put it in simplistic terms, his job is really to examine all systems and procedures in the respective departments of government, I also include ministries, as well as those statutory authorities, units and sections that he has been given responsibility for under the many different pieces of legislation and to report to this House his findings.

Obviously, the job of an auditor whether it is the Auditor General or a certified public accounting firm is to point out weaknesses to management in order for management of the respective department and/or statutory authority, unit or section, to address those particular weaknesses as commented on by the Auditor General.

He did raise a number of items on Pedro St. James as a project, and perhaps it's worthwhile, and I crave your indulgence, Mr. Speaker, because the Government Minute on the subject tends to list chronologically the sequence of what took place.

"In 1991 the Government purchased the Pedro property with the intent of restoring and developing the site as a heritage tourism attraction and as a historic pride to the Caymanian people. Under the guidance of the Historic Sites Committee, a three-phase process was established to achieve this objective.

- Phase 1 Historic research
- Phase 2 Planning and feasibility advice
- Phase 3 Implementation

"In 1992, Commonwealth Historic Resource Management Limited was retained through the process of international competitive bidding to research and provide technical services and advise to the committee. Following the acceptance of commonwealth's recommendation for the development concept the Ministry on the advice of the Historic Sites Committee made a request to Executive Council and was given approval to waive the Financial and Stores Regulations . . ."

Before I go there, Mr. Speaker, let me just step back for a moment and basically answer the question, what services does Commonwealth Historic Resource Management Limited provide?

"The corporate profile on Commonwealth: It is a registered company, federally incorporated in Canada in 1984. Commonwealth has corporate offices in Toronto, British Columbia, Miami and in the Cayman Islands. Commonwealth's two principal officers are Mr. John J. Stewart (Ontario/Miami/Cayman Islands) and Dr. Hal Kalman (Vancouver) who oversee all of the firm's operations.

"Much of Commonwealth's work focuses on cultural/heritage tourism. Commonwealth is one of Canada's largest and well-experienced specialists in these fields. The firm's experts include architects, landscape architects, urban and heritage planners, historians and researchers, as well as graphic and exhibits designers.

"Commonwealth offers five principal areas of expertise:

"PLANNING & RESEARCH

- ◆ Master plans for communities, historic sites, cultural attractions
- ◆ Research, inventories, and evaluations for cultural resources
- ◆ Heritage planning and policy

"ARCHITECTURE & URBAN DESIGN

- ◆ Building evaluation, conservation techniques and management plans
- ◆ Revitalisation and rehabilitation urban centres and historic properties
- ◆ Full architectural services, with a speciality in integrated services for historic sites and cultural resources

"LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE

- ◆ Concept development and design for parks, botanic gardens, streetscapes and heritage tourism sites.
- ◆ Environmental designs for Eco-tourism and cultural landscapes
- ◆ Extensive knowledge of historic plant materials.

"CREATIVE COMMUNICATIONS

- ◆ Exhibits design and interpretation for museums and tourism attractions.
- ◆ Concept development and design of promotional packages with a speciality in economic development and heritage tourism.
- ◆ Graphic design for all form of corporate identity including signage.

"PROJECT MANAGEMENT

- ◆ Liaison and facilitation.
- ◆ Scheduling and budget.
- ◆ Site and Construction supervision.

"In 1992, Commonwealth Historic Resource Management Limited was retained through the process of international competitive bidding to research and provide technical services and advice to the committee. Following the acceptance of commonwealth's recommendation for the development concept the Ministry on the advice of the Historic Sites Committee made a request to Executive Council and was given approval to waive the Financial and Stores Regulations allowing CHRM to be contracted as project manager for both Pedro St. James and the Queen Elizabeth Botanic Park projects during their implementation phase."

The ministry took the view that as far as the project management was concerned it seemed to be more cost effective to have one person carrying out project management on both sites rather than employing two different site property managers.

"This arrangement provided two major benefits to the projects: (a) Providing the required expertise [and I read what that was] for the restoration which was not available locally." It was the reason why Commonwealth was selected, because of the expertise it had during the international competitive bidding process in 1992.

Secondly, "Utilising the financial and labour resources between both projects resulted in savings of approximately CI$100,000.00 to the Government."

We now come to the involvement of the Caribbean Development Bank. "In 1995 a project proposal was submitted to the Caribbean Development Bank requesting assistance in financing the development of Pedro. Following this request a team of technical experts from the Bank visited the site. Based on information gathered along with the business plan and cost estimates provided by CHRM, CDB compiled a project cost and financing plan (see Appendix 2) which evaluated the total project cost as CI$8.68 million (US$10.41) compared to the 1995 cost estimates (CI$5 million) developed by CHRM."

The difference there is that CHRM estimates did not include the cost of the land, which is very common with government projects. When we look at what we have done in the past, maybe a year before, we bought a piece of land and then came back and put money in the budget to construct the project.

Additionally, CHRM's estimate did not deal with physical or price contingencies that said that the price of labour might go up before we finalised the construction of the particular project. Price contingencies also deal with the price of material and the possibility of those material prices increasing after the budget has been done.

When we add the cost of the land and stamp duty, which is approximately $900,000, and we add the physical and price contingencies of roughly $1.5 million, what do we get? We get a number that is very close to $8.7 million, the difference being the difference of CHRM's estimate for external works for the Pedro Castle itself and some other items that differ a bit from the CDB estimate.

I have tried to compare one estimate versus the other, and tried to say to the listening public—because they have heard so much information, and a lot of it misinformation that they may be at the point where they don't know what to believe.

The restoration of Pedro Castle, . . . and I must emphasise the word "Castle" Mr. Speaker. I wonder if any one of us today can visualise what that site looked like six years ago. When we get up and raise all kinds of issues, can we go back in our minds and actually visualise what it looked like? All I remember seeing was the core of a building with a different type of roof than it originally had. The core structure added to by Mr. Hubble [?], set up a restaurant which burned down after a while. They then added something more to it and that burned down as well. When you look at the 7.2 acres of land that was bought, it's all shrubbery. Trees all over the place. Shamrock bush, a big Tamarind Tree down in the corner. . . and we paid $900,000 for it.

Now I ask, can you visualise what it looks like now?

Let me make another point: Let us not confuse the public by talking about what's in the budget and trying to use what's in the budget to say what the total cost is. We all know the difference. That is not the correct way to deal with any project. I believe the 1999 budget has $7 million for the Lighthouse School. Is there any expenditure yet? And when you get to the end of the year will you have spent? Because we only have about two months left before Treasury cuts off. When you get to that period, will you have spent even half a million dollars? My answer would be, I doubt it.

The budget, for the benefit of the listening public, is brought to this House in order to gain Legislative Assembly permission as required by the Public Finance and Audit Law which gives the Financial Secretary the power to spend. It's broken down between recurrent expenditure, statutory expenditure, and capital expenditure for acquisitions and for project costs.

The only reason you have a Treasury is to track what got spent. And every year we lay on the Table of this honourable House the financial statements done by the Accountant General so that everybody understands what got spent in relation to what was budgeted. I repeat: When you are dealing with the cost of a project you forget about the budget. That's history. What you have to track is the accounts, what got spent in what year. And it's all here, from 1994.

In 1994 they spent (and I am going to round it off to thousands) approximately $77,000. In 1995, we spent $1.2 million. In 1996, we spent approximately $555,000. In 1996, again, because there are different accounts (some from loan and some from borrowing), $475,000. Another account in 1996, $361,000. In 1997, in one of the account centres, $216,000. In 1997 we had a $416.22 in one account. In 1997 again, in another account, $120,000. In 1997, a different account, $440,000. In 1997, another account again, $117,000. And $726,000, $318,000, and $39,000 all in 1997. So at the end of 1997, accumulating these figures from 1994 we come to a figure of $4,655,839.50.

Of this sum, we subtract funds spent on the Botanic Park, $325,000, and $64,000. We then add the actual 1998 expenditure which is basically dealing with the visitor's centre, $2,228,809.20. And the expenditure in 1999 of $277,657.71.

When you total all of that up, with all of these pluses and minuses, at the end of 1998 and including the amount I mentioned for 1999 ($277,657.71) we come to a total cost of $6,833,306.41.

We now add the cost of the land, $775,000, and the stamp duty, $77,500. And the Minute uses the same figures as in the CDB appraisal. It uses the same estimated figures for operating expenditure, $330,000; start-up cost $420,000; commitment fee, $41,000; interest during construction, $340,000. When you add the estimates rather than the actual, you get $8,817,806.41.

The information given to me by the Treasury, of the commitment fee and the interest on the loan during construction, actual figures coming from CDB was $260,683. Our start-up cost and pre-operating expenditure, the actual figure, is slightly different from the estimate used in the Minute, the $330 plus $420 which is $750 as estimated, the actual cost was $730,582. So we come to a total cost, because what I thought we were trying to do was compare apples for apples, we have an estimate done by CDB which is also given on page 12 of the documentation to the Government Minute. When we compare those items to the actual expenditure, although some of us don't want to believe it, $8,677,071.

Do you know how we arrived at these figures? Public Works. When we took over the project supervision . . . and I will explain the details of that in a minute.

The Speaker: If I may interrupt you for a minute, we have passed the time where we usually take the lunch break. When you reach a convenient part we will suspend for lunch.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I am in favour of taking it now.

The Speaker: We shall suspend until 2.30 PM.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.48 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on the Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Auditor General's Report on the Audited Accounts of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the year ended 1997.

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works, continuing.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you.

I come back to that central point of 1992 when Commonwealth Historic Resources Management Limited (CHRM) was retained through the process of international competitive bidding to research and provide technical services and advice to the committee which was appointed to manage the Pedro St. James project.

One waiver of the Financial and Stores Regulations which Executive Council agreed with, . . . and I remind the members as well as the listening public that I did read the expertise available within CHRM, that they do have the expertise of providing project management. Based on the fact that CHRM had won the contract by international competitive tendering process, and awarded by the Central Tenders Committee of the Cayman Islands government, the Executive Council waived the project management of this Pedro Castle project, to not need to go back out to tender but to move on with the project and allow CHRM to provide that project management service.

We know that a project such as this has never been done in the Cayman Islands before. And we know that Public Works has a variety of expertise, but in the area of restoration and heritage tourism, and the restoring of historical sites and cultural attractions, I don't believe the expertise rests within the Public Works Department. Therefore the Historic Sites Committee as well as the ministry were in agreement to allow the vision which was provided by CHRM for this project to continue to be within the scope of CHRM.

The restoration of Pedro Castle, that phase of the project between 1994 and 1997, is a framework for technical oversight including a technical committee with representation by my ministry. "The project manager reported and took direction from the committee regarding technical matters. The financial control was the responsibility of [my] Ministry, processing of payments were done through the Treasury payment system. Budgets for each aspect of the project were prepared and discussed by the committee prior to submission to the Ministry for approval. Both the Ministry and CHRM prepared financial reports on a regular basis. Each contract was supported by progress report summaries listing all invoices and addendum to contracts.

"The policies detailed in the Auditor General's report regarding the awarding of contracts without competitive tender were not developed . . . out of mismanagement and financial imprudence. Commonwealth was awarded six contracts, this was partly due to the specialised nature of these tasks coupled with the fact that they offered a full range of services related to the conservation, design, research, planning and interpretation of cultural and heritage resources. With this in mind the Ministry felt that CHRM with its full spectrum of services would provide the continuity that enables a vision to be carried through to the final product."

Now, when we deal with the furniture contract, the original contract sum was $184,600 and the final cost $226,775. The original contract with the following additions is what leads us to this $226,775 figure. The additions to the original contract sum of $184,600 were:

Duty	$ 1,920.46
Theatre Props	7,000.00
Castle Set	15,042.31
Theatre Fit up	15,742.79
Shipping	14,619.48
Storage	5,850.00
Total Additions	60,175.40

"The furniture contract was tendered. Claudette Shaw Designs was assigned as sub-contractor with CHRM acting as purchasing agents. The initial intent was to source some of the antiques locally. However, the National Museum would not allow the purchase of such items locally. The original cost of this contract was CI$184,600.00 with final payment of CI$226,775, caused by having to purchase all of the artefacts overseas."

The Landscaping Contract: The original contract sum was $357,702.07.

"The landscaping contract was tendered with the exception of the labour. A portion of this contract was awarded to EMS Landscaping and a portion to Mr. Crawford Dilbert. The sourcing, purchasing and planting to DDM Horticulture. The Ministry and Botanic Park steering committee wanted to ensure that trained gardeners were in place to carry on the maintenance upon completion of the project. The cost of labour was the responsibility of the Government. At this stage it was agreed that CHRM take on the supervision and responsibility for training staff in this area. From this arrangement Mr. Teddie Ebanks were given overseas appointments at CHRM (Canada). In reviewing the external components at Botanic Park, it suggested by CDB that a similar irrigation system be put in place at Pedro. The cost of this system and the labour was not included in the original contract cost of CI$357,702.07." The final cost of that project was $550,000.

The original contract for the Multi-media contract was $611,800. The final cost was $580,118. "The multimedia contract was tendered. On the recommendations of the Project Manager CHRM the contract was awarded to Steve Shaw Productions of Canada. The Ministry contacted the Chairman of the Central Tenders Committee and full details of the proposal was made available to him. As a result approval was received from Executive Council allowing the appointment of sub-contractors under the CHRM contract." That really is appendix 3.

The Chairman of the Central Tenders Committee made these notes. He says to the Permanent Secretary of Tourism, "I confirm that this procedure will be acceptable once Executive Council is consulted and agrees as you have proposed to do." So Executive Council was requested, and did approve allowing the appointment of the subcontract under Commonwealth's contract.

The original contract sum for the Interpretative contract was $239,580 and the difference was so small that I will not go into detail. The final cost was $241,971.

"Whilst the interpretative contract was not tendered as a full contract portions of the contract did go out to tender. Sub-contracts included - Production and Artwork (Mckenzie Krusberg Design Associates Ltd.) Software Programme (Innovative Logic) Hardware & Production of Audio (In-house Woodworking)."

Project Management Contract: Original cost was $1,075,210 and the final contract cost was

$1,091,937.11. “The initial contract for service was awarded through an international competition under the guidance of the Historic Sites Committee. [Fifty-one] submissions were received and reviewed by the committee. Following the committee’s recommendation the contract was awarded to CHRM. The first two phases of the project was managed by the National Trust. The implementation phase was managed by the Ministry on the recommendation of the committee and approval by Executive Council. At this stage the project management contract was signed.”

“The project has been financed partly through the Government recurrent budget and partly from a US$5.7 million loan from Caribbean Development Bank. However, as one might be aware the working arrangement for all CDB loans follow the same disbursement arrangement, whereby the client finances the initial payments and submits a claim following the Bank’s requirement for reimbursement. [In other words, government spends the money and reclaims from CDB] As of the 31st March the Cayman Islands Government has received reimbursements in the region of US$4,228,412.10. [Public Works] is finalising payments and preparing invoices for further submission to the CDB.” And that submission has been made some weeks ago totalling in the area of $1.85 million.

We know, of course, that that sum that was submitted is in excess of the amount available which will cause the loan to be fully drawn down. We left it for the CDB to decide on reimbursement.

I want to remind us again. This time it’s not do we remember what Pedro St. James site looked like six years ago; but I want to ask this question: Do we remember that old Caymanian building sitting at the Spotts Landing for what appears to be five to seven years, with nothing happening to it? It was the Pedro project, with the assistance of some labourers in the Bodden Town area that removed that building, given that it was an old building, and given that it would fit with the whole project of Pedro St. James, we moved that building to Pedro as an office from which we would carry out our initial work in the early days.

So some of the first money that got spent was on that building. And the money spent on that building was not a part of the CDB estimate on Pedro St. James. We now know it as the Steadman Bodden’s House. And we know that Mr. Charles Adams did a very able job in dealing with buildings and other artefacts in this country. This project gained his approval to move from where it was sitting at the Spotts Landing for many, many years to the Pedro St. James site, and we used the local contractor, Charles Russell, to do the renovation.

It was actually late in 1995 that we had an opening ceremony at Pedro St. James. We still had that stone structure standing all by itself with a funny kind of roof that was not the original roof. Work continued. We used Crawford Dilbert to stabilise the stone structure before moving on with any other work. It was actually in the summer of 1997 that we decided it was time for the ministry to have on site its own person to follow the supervision that was going on. And project management was going on at Pedro St. James.

We advertised for a general manager because we believed that it would be correct to employ a person who, in essence, would manage the facility as we go forward through the years. But he would have the opportunity to begin, first by rolling up his sleeves and getting his hands dirty, I am sure. There were six applicants. We interviewed, we selected a general manager. He took up his appointment in August 1997 by which time the majority of the restoration works on Pedro Castle as we know it had come 90% or more complete.

It was at that time as well that we decided the next phase of the project was the visitor centre stage, a straight construction project. We then decided that every bit of evidence and knowledge indicated to us that this falls within the experience and qualification and skill of Public Works. So we asked Public Works to take over the supervision of Pedro St. James at that point, particularly the visitors centre.

That happened at almost the same time, September 1997. The visitors centre went out to bid. It wasn’t anything close to the CDB estimate. The lowest estimate was $1.7 million. And we ended up with a figure in excess of $2 million, actually $2,259,306. We all know that the visitors centre has a number of buildings, including a specialised building called the Multi-media Theatre, the cafeteria, the gift shop, washrooms, resource centre and offices.

I know that the Auditor General made some comments in his report which was forwarded to the Legislative Assembly on 30 November 1998. At that stage all the figures were not in. So I will give him the benefit of the doubt there. He said that at that point it appeared that the final cost of the project may be in the region of $9.5 million, a figure which some people seem to want to hold on to. But I say until the figure is corrected, that the figure I quoted in an answer to this House is the correct figure.

We know that from September 1997 Public Works was on site. We know that the officer from Public Works who was the project manager on the site also went through all the details to allocate the various costs to the specific function, whether it be the external works, the project known as Pedro Castle itself (that is, the building), or the visitors centre, or the landscaping, or whatever it may be, that entire exercise was done in conjunction with the Auditor General. It was completed on 24 June 1999. And Public Works said to the Auditor General, “If you find a different figure, you let us know.” To date, we haven’t heard anything more.

That’s why I say the figure that I quoted in my view is the correct figure.

I don’t know where the Auditor General is getting this $9.5 million from. He will have to tell us. An estimate can be anything; the actual expenditure is a different matter altogether. It’s a fact that proves its worth.

We’re not through Mr. Speaker, but the Auditor General has been at Pedro St. James project site examination since the 25 March 1999. I wonder how he got there. We heard about it when he was already there. He called us to say he was there because he had been told there were some irregularities. I wonder who told him that. I wonder who told the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee to call the Auditor General to do so. There are a lot of questions to be answered Mr. Speaker.

We know . . . let me put it this way, I know where that information came from. But I am not going to be calling names in this House. I wonder what the motivation is. Elections must be getting close.

My favourite football team lost the game yesterday. Today I can tell you everything they should have done. But I wasn't playing the game yesterday. It's always easy to talk about what should have or should not have happened after the fact. When you are in the fray game and the linebacker is blitzing up the middle, or the defensive end is coming around the end and you have to take a decision whether to pass, handoff, or lay down and not get hit, in the heat of the battle, the decision has to be taken.

With great respect to everyone, Pedro Castle will end up being one of the best projects this country has ever known. Mark my words. Why? Because we are talking about our culture, our history and trying to relive that and bring it back to life.

I want to ask anyone who has seen that video if he does not understand the significance of the history of Pedro St. James, the Cayman Islands in that era in the Caribbean. A lot of us talk about writing history, reading is one thing; seeing it is something more. I believe that this particular project does . . . it's our project you know, Mr. Speaker. It's for our children and for us.

And the former Minister of Tourism (called Executive Council Member at that time) took the decision to purchase that land. I can tell you that he had plenty of support, including mine as Financial Secretary because I thought, and I still think it is the right decision. He was supported by his colleagues, including the Third Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: It was that Executive Council Member responsible for Tourism who caused Commonwealth to be here. I am not casting any blame. I am just putting things in perspective.

When I got to be the Minister for Tourism, and I looked at it personally, I said, "There's nothing wrong with it. Let's just build on what's already happened." And I still hold that view. Some people, just for the sake of change, take off and make changes. I don't believe that is in the best interests of the people of the Cayman Islands, neither is it cost effective.

Mr. Speaker, I could say a lot more, but I promised you that I wouldn't mention the real reason behind this Pedro Castle matter and all the accusations on the floor until the time is right. I saw a movie several weeks ago called The American President, with [Michael] Douglas. He has a little PR person who was running his operation. He was really trying him some of the time. When he got this attack by a Senator who said, "I'm running for President," the chap said to him, "Unless you answer all the allegations he is putting out, what is the public to believe? You're not saying anything." Let's be sure of one thing, Mr. Speaker, what I will be saying is based on fact.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

It appears that no other member wishes to speak, so that concludes debate on the Government Minute.

We will move on to item 4 on today's Order Paper. Private Member's Motion No. 24/99, Review of the measures imposed under the Finance Law 1998 to be moved by the First Elected Member for George Town.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 24/99

REVIEW OF THE MEASURES IMPOSED UNDER THE FINANCE LAW 1998

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I wish to move Private Member's Motion No. 24/99, Review of the measures imposed under the Finance Law 1998. The motion reads:

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT, due to the hardships being experienced by both consumer and trader in the Cayman Islands as a result of the recent revenue measures imposed under the Finance Law 1998 (Law 20 of 1998), Government review the measures with a view to easing the burden imposed upon the people of the Cayman Islands."

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 24/99, Review of the measures imposed under the Finance Law 1998 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

This motion is another one that has been hanging around for several months. Its genesis was a result of representation from the public, complaints from the public and also observations made by some of us on the backbench. Before I really get into the meat of my first delivery on this motion, I wish to comment on something the Minister of Education is always touting. And this won't be irrelevant.

When we members of the backbench bring constructive criticism, or informed criticism on the government, his most famous words are, "as usual the opposition is providing no alternatives so it is fruitless for them to point out any errors in our operation." Now, there are several ways one can look at that. But I would like to put forward the view that if the backbench were the provider of the solutions, we would be the government!

Mr. Roy Bodden: True enough!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am not suggesting for one minute that as representatives of the people we should not be constructive in our debates and not make attempts to provide alternatives whenever we find problem areas. But the point I wish to make immediately is that it is a flimsy excuse used to take away from the point at hand. I want to say that early in the game, because I suspect that in the middle of this debate the line of argument is going to be, 'Well, if the backbench knows all the answers, why don't they provide all these answers? Why are they wasting time finding fault with us?'

I only say that to put things in their proper perspective. If government intends to be constructive, then whenever they find criticism I have no problem with them building their defence. But they must build their defence on fact, not do the usual simi-nimi (I call it), and shift all the focus to another area so that we forget about the point at hand. I am hoping that won't be done in this debate.

I am going to tell you something else, Mr. Speaker. Because I know that I don't fall into the category of what the Minister of Tourism just talked about—because he doesn't have anything on me—the world can hear what I am telling them now. So I don't know whose name he doesn't want to call, but I know whose name he is not going to call, because sir, believe you me, I learned long before I got into this House what right and wrong was!

Anyway, that will deal with itself. I only wish to make that very clear here and now since I was one of those who had problems with some areas of the way the Pedro St. James project was handled. But if it so happens that I am one of them he has on his mind, I don't want him holding anything back. I want to deal with it now!

Anyway, Mr. Speaker, I just explained the genesis of this motion. I think what we have to do with this is understand and accept certain things that may be called conjecture at times, when we look at the facts as time moves on we see certain ramifications and certain repercussions. I want to come back to an issue that recently raised its head in Finance Committee about the government accounts. The Minister of Education mentioned it this morning, and I intend to use some of it in my debate. I will show its relevance.

Before I actually go into the information we have at hand, I want to read a letter dated 27 November 1998. It's not a letter, but rather a statement from the Council of Associations on the proposed revenue measures, which is exactly what this motion is all about. With your permission, I would like to read it.

The Speaker: Read it.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It reads: "The Council of Associations held an extraordinary meeting to review and discuss the impact of a list of more than 120 tax increases proposed in the Legislative Assembly last week. The revenue package is similar to the one proposed in early 1997 and strongly opposed by the Council during a public meeting at the Lions Centre. In fact, many of the proposed increases that were withdrawn by legislators in early 1997 have re-emerged in the proposed tax package.

"The Council understands that government is in desperate need to raise additional revenue to finance the escalating recurrent expenditure of the civil service, and to raise additional money to finance new infrastructural services and projects.

"The Council, however, feels strongly that legislators must address the larger issues. Those are:

- "1. cutting government expenditure;
- "2. establishing spending priorities;
- "3. delaying major projects until the cash crunch is relieved; and
- "4. identifying alternative sources of revenue.

"The Council encourages government to carry out a comprehensive assessment of its services to determine the exact cost to the taxpayer and whether these services can be performed more efficiently and at less cost. The simple truth is that radical reform of government is urgently needed, otherwise the business community can expect continual tax hikes which lead to higher prices to goods and services and ultimately an erosion of market share in our two main industries of tourism and offshore finance—industries that the Cayman Islands people have worked diligently to develop for more than thirty years.

"The Council strongly believes that the trend of increasing taxes is not the answer and this position has been repeatedly reinforced by New Zealand Government reformer, Mrs. Ruth Richardson, during her recent visit and meeting with government officials and the private sector. It is our understanding that recommendations for reform of the budgetary system and civil service have been accepted by government.

"We urge the government to release a timeline for the implementation of these recommendations and the expected result of the recommended reforms."

The Council pointed out that "$237.29 of the proposed $278.99 million budget is just to keep the government operating, that is recurrent expenditure. Government estimates that the revenue generated from the proposed tax measures will generate $11.8 million."

"The Council contends that the revenue forecast from the tax hikes could fall short of the projected amounts because fewer visitors and residents may be prepared to pay higher prices as has happened in other countries with tourism based economies.

"According to the 1996 airport exit survey, visitors identified the high cost of a Cayman vacation and high food and liquor prices among the leading reasons why they would not return to the Cayman Islands. The recent increases on liquor duty and other proposed tax measures will surely exacerbate this sentiment among our visitors, many of whom already regard Cayman as an expensive tourist destination.

“Some representatives contend that the tax hikes on liquor and cigarettes will also encourage a black market of smuggled goods into the country. Past history has shown that excessive tax hikes on cigarettes and liquor (the so-called “sin taxes”) backfire and actually reduce duty collected. The proposed increases in company fees will discourage investors from establishing exempt companies and this will benefit our competitors.

“The Council is surprised that government decided to propose an increase in exempt company fees which were lowered two years ago in order to remain competitive with other offshore jurisdictions. The Financial Secretary claimed in a Government Information Press Release that it is an accepted practice in other countries to raise revenue on tax and alcohol for health prevention measures. This comment concerned members of the Council who believe that this statement supports the argument that if tax increases on liquor and cigarettes were being used as health prevention measures then anticipated revenue from these two areas must be seriously reconsidered.

“The Council reiterates that there is an urgent need for political and budgetary reform. The country must begin to live within its means and establish affordable and realistic priorities. Until these challenges are met, government’s reliance on tax increases will be guaranteed in the future which will serve to increase the cost of living for residents and tourists alike.”

This statement was made on 27 November 1998. Lest anyone believe that I represent the business sector in this country, let me clear that up right away—I am a representative of the people of this country. That includes the business sector, the indigent, the aged . . . that includes everybody. It also includes those who can’t vote, that’s how I look at it, okay?

I read that statement because it seems to me that while I could probably find certain areas that I might not agree with because of the way it is worded, there is merit to many of the points raised. Regardless of what some people might say about the line of argument, that it is biased because these are the business people, I don’t want us to get off on any track about that. The principle here, regardless of who you tax directly, is that it all stops on the consumer. And every single person in this country is a consumer. If you charge me more and I offer goods and services to the consumer, I am going to pass on those charges to the consumer. No one can deny that fact. Regardless of how it’s couched, or where it’s pointed at, it ends with the consumer.

Having read that statement, the part that I really want to talk about right now is where it says, “The Council contends that the revenue forecast from the tax hikes could fall short of the projected amounts because fewer visitors and residents may be prepared to pay higher prices as has happened in other countries with tourism based economies.”

Earlier today, the good Minister of Education talked about my only mentioning the shortfall in recurrent revenue, and that I was only dealing with single-entry bookkeeping. I want him to know that the argument he put out today to the people of this country was not even single-entry bookkeeping because it had nothing to do with bookkeeping at all. It was his usual style—just like the $60 million recurrent “profit” . . . I am not going to say it, Mr. Speaker. It’s all right. I am not going to say it. I feel like it, but I am not going to say it.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning chimed on this $18.4 million of contribution to capital expenditure. He then went on to talk about the surplus carried forward as of 31 August 1999, $18.4 million. What he was saying was that while I spoke about the almost $12 million shortfall in the projected recurrent revenue to the end of August, what I didn’t say was about this surplus the country had of $18.4 million. Then he went on to add up a whole pile of other things, including what the general reserves were and the $3 million that is anticipated to be added to it this year, and he ended up with some $40 million. And he basically called that “excess cash” that the country had.

Mr. Speaker, I am no accountant. But I understand enough to hold my own. To give the impression to this country that we have $40 million that we can do with what we please—because that’s just saved up excess money—is misleading! I will go no further. But it is, because it is not so!

Without going into a pile of detail, I am going to deal with it just a little bit. When I made the point about the shortfall in projected revenue that was not sending any message of gloom and doom in this country. But I am contending that part and parcel of the reason why this motion is here now is the shortfall in revenue recorded through 31 August 1999. I am not saying that is the only reason, but I am saying that that has something to do with it. And the government must suspect something like that. Otherwise they wouldn’t have set up this task force to investigate the prices within the hospitality industry.

I am going to be as fair as I can be. I do believe that it is fair comment to say that when government brings revenue measures, wherever those revenue measures affect the merchants in the private sector, it is possible (and I am not saying in all instances) that many times the percentage of increase passed on to the consumer is more than what the government is actually increasing by way of taxes. I am not saying that. But the government does not engage in price control. That is a no-no because of what everyone keeps terming our laissez-faire system. But government must know, from history itself, that when they do this, that is what is going to happen. It is nothing new, and government must know this.

I am not saying that if one was to deal with culpability that government has to be held responsible and go to jail for doing this because it makes this happen. All I am saying is that government must recognise by now that as part and parcel of the chain reaction this is what is going to happen, because there is nothing in place to prevent it from happening.

Now, when I read that statement from the Council of Associations and they talked about the possibility of recurrent revenue falling, they were coming from that same line. One has to seriously look at this because history has proven in the past The difference with me is that I am going to tell it like it is. I smoke cigarettes, and I will drink a beer. That is not something I boast about, but if I told anybody different I would be lying. And I never lie! But I am not arguing with the principle applied because I am one of those few (hopefully) rather than more that engage in drinking a beer or smoking a cigarette. I am not arguing about that. It is a luxury as far as I am concerned, and if I cannot afford it, I am not going to do it. Or if the day it dawns on me (the Good Lord help me) that it is affecting my health, then I am going to do something about that, and that might be soon. I don't know.

But if the government checks this out carefully (and I remember seeing it on two occasions), every projection the government has made based on revenue from increased taxes in these two areas has fallen short. It's a fact. My point is that if you are going to look at the overall picture, and government needs revenue, we certainly have to visit the same in a different fashion than it has been visited and revisited over and again.

This statement from the Council of Associations . . . and it is obvious that these people are concerned. It's not just that they are looking out for their own personal agenda, but they have some concerns that bring about some wider ramifications because they also address the area where they say, "Past history has shown that excessive tax hikes on cigarettes and liquor (the so-called "sin taxes") backfire and actually reduce duty collected."

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for just a moment?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: We have reached the time where we normally take our afternoon break. I would like to ask the House if they would like to take the break, and I would also like to ask the House if it is your wish to continue on to 5.00 PM as mentioned on Friday, or shall we adjourn at 4.30?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Five o'clock. We'll take five minutes now and that's all.

The Speaker: I am very grateful to the First Elected Member for George Town for his suggestion of time. We shall suspend for five minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.14 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 24/99. The First Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

I was using this statement by the Council of Associations to simply bring about the point that if you continue to levy tax in certain areas you are going to find that the items that you continue to tax will draw less consumption because of their prices. So you are really cutting off your nose to spoil your face because the revenue at the end of the day will become less.

Getting back to the figures on the government accounts, I really believe that the latest round of revenue enhancement measures has some bearing on the fact that the recurrent revenue through 31 August 1999 for the Government of the Cayman Islands is down by nearly $12 million. We also notice that the tourism figures are down.

I willingly admit that I don't have enough information available to me right now to go into a long debate as to why this has happened, but the fact is that is the case. Perhaps there is also some relation with these tax measures and that fact. I have no doubt in my mind that if the facts were known a relationship could easily be established between the two facts.

Mr. Speaker, I get around a fair amount and I speak to people. I mean sensible people. I want everyone to understand that when things affect people directly, their train of thought, the logic they apply has its own so-called selfish motivation because the law of self-preservation is universal. And the same law applies for the person whose business isn't as good as it used to be as it does to the person who doesn't have the next meal to eat.

But the truth of the matter is that one should be able to take all of that and sift through it and see where there is some real logic. And there is some real logic in it because regardless of an individual's motivation—merchants, wholesalers, retailers, entrepreneurs, all of these—the fact is that the way our country works when it comes to commerce, nearly every single thing has an effect on the other thing. If our tourism is down, it naturally has an effect prevailing throughout the economy. It is for that same reason the argument is used about how important that pillar of our economy is because when they talk about the GDP and all of that, the spin-offs of the buoyant tourism industry really helps the economy on a whole. So it is obvious that if that industry is down, it will have a negative effect throughout the economy. I think that is a reasonable statement to make.

If we think of a local business person who sells furniture, if we have tourism on a downturn, the locals who work within that industry won't find themselves with the same income as before. The business of the condominium builders or owners who buy the furniture won't be as buoyant as usual. It's the same for the grocery store. So it must have an effect.

When these revenue measure were brought by government it was said that so many different items had not been raised for so long that they were not reflecting the realistic cost to government for providing the service. Point taken. My question is, Why wait so long? There was also the point that the demands for the services were increasing so government had to get the revenue from somewhere. I agree with that. But can we begin to please think it through? I contend that we haven't done that.

I do not know the facts about this, but I am going to put out a picture and somebody is going to have to come back and tell the truth. I hold the view that when it comes time to deal with revenue measures, first of all, it is not a process that is thought out at length by the government with a plan to have as minimal as possible an impact on the economy. Those are the factors you have to deal with to be effective. If you are going to deal with revenue measures after you have shaved a budget to its max and suddenly realise that there is a gap that you have to fill, and you deal with these things in a matter of days, it cannot be the ingredient for the best result. It cannot be.

I cannot say that this is exactly how it happened this time. I can say that I know from persons involved with it that it has happened like that in the past. But I hold the view that it is better for government to address revenue measures all the time in palatable amounts, than it is for political reasons to time these things the best way they can figure to have certain political advantages and then at the end of the day there's a negative effect on the country and the economy.

Let us look at our consumer price index (CPI). When we tabulate all of those figures every year we kind of know what the rate of inflation is. Until recently, we have been experiencing modest inflation, probably for five years straight. In almost one lick (to put it loosely) we have national insurance to deal with, we have national pension to deal with, and then we have revenue measures to deal with on top of that—none of which I condemn. The point I wish to make is that we have got to find a better way to do it.

For instance, when I brought up a question regarding school book rental fees, and I was showing via percentages how much the increase was, the Minister of Education said that there had not been an increase since 1983. So we are looking at 15 years because these measures supposedly became effective in September of 1998, which would have escaped the 1998 school year, but would have kicked in for the 1999 school year. So here we have a scenario which exactly portrays the point I wish to make: For 15 years there was no increase in school book rental fees, that means that during that time everybody and his brother has dealt with these amounts as fixed entities.

We also need to understand that between 50% to 60% of the working population of this country does not have the amount of disposal income to deal with a sudden $150 difference. It goes deeper, Mr. Speaker, and people have to be realistic about this thing.

When I said that some of the fees were raised up to 1100%, the Minister [of Education] first of all said that I blew it out of proportion and secondly said it worked out to about $2 or $3 per week. What the minister does not understand is that you are looking at an excess of half of your working population. They are not going to put aside the $2 or $3 per week until they have the $150 in September. That is not a phenomenon, we all know how it is. Whether or not that is a lack of discipline on their part, it is a fact. All that happens is that you have a large number of individuals who suddenly find themselves (depending on how many children they have) having to find $100, $200 or even $400.

I am going to stick with this one a little bit. Now, the minister will say—as he has—that no child will be put out of school because of this, and that arrangements can be made to pay it on a timely basis. I want to know who calculates the man-hours it takes when you are dealing with thousands of students. Who calculates the man-hours to set up this system whereby you are keeping records and issuing receipts for everybody as they pay, whether on a per term or per month basis? When they become delinquent in their payments, who chases after them? Does it wait until the next school term? That can't make sense.

If the thought was the cost was going up so you were going to put a situation in place where it was raised $10 every year until you caught up, that would be a much more palatable situation. But they look at something like that and say, 'Humph! That's not politically acceptable.' So they leave it for as long as they can avoid addressing it—just like our immigration problem today . . . and I know that's not in the debate, sir, I won't debate that. Just like that, they keep avoiding it for as long as they can and all of a sudden what they have to deal with is a slippery eel and a hot potato that they can't put their hands on. That's exactly what it's like.

When I was talking about the consumer price index, I was putting forward an argument that if government wanted to ensure that it stayed abreast with the population in regard to what it should be getting (and perhaps this is too easy a formula to follow and might need a certain amount of refining), if they were to say that every year whatever the inflation rate is then our fees in given areas will increase by that rate . . . it was the same thing years ago when they increased the cost of licensing a vehicle.

Hear me now. And I am going to make another prediction. For ten or twelve years they hadn't addressed that. And how much did it multiply by? It was hundreds of percents. We notice that we don't hear anything about it now. But in another five or six years from now when they increase it again, they will increase it four times the amount. Mr. Speaker, the point I am making is that we cannot deal with it in this fashion.

The Speaker: I agree.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: And we have been doing it for too long. Now the government finds itself in an almost untenable circumstance where it has to get this money.

So it just goes to the old dead horse it has already beaten to death.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to show you another example to show that it was not right to deal with the book fees in that fashion.

The Speaker: While you are looking through your papers, I ask that we move a motion to suspend Standing Order 10(2) in order to continue beyond the hour of 4.30.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I so move sir.

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 10(2) in order to continue beyond the hour of 4.30. It is my understanding that we will continue until 5.00 PM. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW THE HOUSE TO CONTINUE ITS BUSINESS UNTIL 5.00 PM.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town please continue. I apologise for the interruption.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It is never a problem with you, sir. Thank you.

The next example I want to talk about is the garbage fees. There is a specific scenario here. With the list of the increased duties on all the various items, it had the current rate and the new rate. For Condominiums and houses on Seven Mile Beach, the current rate was $50 per year, and the new rate went to $300 per year. That was cemetery to cemetery.

Before I talk about that, there really was a big joke when they simply did it cemetery to cemetery. My understanding was that all of a sudden garbage fees were being set out for people in what they call Dog City (Watler's Road) and up in Rock Hole, because of how the block and parcel numbers were going. Some of those people got the increase from $50 to $300. I bet you they corrected that quickly!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This is hearsay, and I can only give it as cheap as I heard it. But I heard that the biggest reason why the political directorate was prepared to take the risk of cemetery to cemetery was because the demographics of the area were such that the vast majority of people who lived in that area were not voters so they wouldn't get any flack. Can you believe that?

That's how I heard it. Only God would know whether or not it's true. That sounds like something some of them would do when you check their history of decision making.

I used that to say to you, Mr. Speaker, look at this entire country. If we look at that specific area and assume that they are right, and that the vast majority of those people cannot vote, that takes out any political skewing on my part because I am not going to get any votes for this, let's just use it for logic.

How can you out of the clear blue sky take the entire country and just look from cemetery to cemetery on the Seven Mile Beach and just straight across the board, condominiums and houses from $50 to—bam—$300? Listen to me now: If you want to talk about affluence, if you want to talk about strain on the infrastructure, if you want to talk about the ability of people to pay, . . . and I am not asking for it to be raised elsewhere, I am simply asking what happened to South Sound. Aren't there big and fancy houses, apartments and condominiums there, like there are on Seven Mile Beach? There might not be as many all tolled, but they are there.

What about the Cayman Kai area? I am not making any suggestions, I am just showing you how ill thought out it was. They can bend it all they want to, I am simply making a point. I am simply using an argument to make a point. If they want to say that the country is not collecting anything near what it should for what it costs to run the garbage collection, so we have to find ways and means for people to pay for it, I don't fault that principle. What I fault is the twisted logic of how they come up with this one, cemetery to cemetery—bam, finished, done.

If revenue was the objective (hear me carefully sir), which obviously any tax package must have revenue as its objective otherwise you don't have a tax package. If revenue was the objective, then why did they not sit down and address the country for collection of garbage fees? If you add the number of single residences from cemetery to cemetery along that strip, it is nowhere near what the entire country is like volume-wise. So there could not have been any logic to that.

It leads me to conclude that it was a rushed up business and they knew what they had to come up with and they just stuck it how they figured they could in a hurry-up fashion. The beauty about that, talking about these garbage fees, is that I have had either by conversation or telephone call at least 40 individuals ask me how could they do this. And their question was never that the collection of garbage was not worth $300 a year. They simply asked what happened to the rest of the people.

I talk about garbage, and it may well appear that I am hammering on a very small item. I talked about schoolbook rental fees, another small item. But it proves the principle I am talking about—you cannot deal with it like this. It is not right to deal with it like this.

Mr. Speaker, craving your indulgence, an individual went as far as to try to gather all the facts to try and assist with this because that person understood what government was supposedly trying to achieve. If you would permit me sir, I would just like to read this. It is addressed to me. It is dated December 4, 1998.

“The object of the exercise is to increase revenue under this Head by $1.4 million in 1999. [That’s the garbage business they are talking about.] Garbage fees are levied on offices, hotels, restaurants, condominiums and houses. I believe that other income is derived from a waste management system, but I have not had time to research this. It appears to me that the only areas where increases are being sought are houses and apartments, that is an increase of $50 per annum; and condominiums and houses on Seven Mile Beach, cemetery to cemetery, an increase of $250 per annum. Therefore, condos outside area 1 (area 1 being the cemetery to cemetery area) will see a reduction of $80 in their fees to bring them in line with the new regulations. The best statistic I have been able to find indicates that there are 900 residential units (this does not include individual condominiums, but does include each condominium development as one residential unit) in the Seven Mile Beach area, and 8,600 residential units in the rest of the island. There are about 1,825 condominiums in area 1 and my best estimate that there is an equivalent number in the rest of the island all tolled.

“At present condominiums are charged $180 per annum in garbage fees, and in area 1 the increase of $120 per annum in garbage fees would yield $219,000 in increased revenue. Conversely, there will be a loss in revenue for 1999 on the other 1,825 condominiums of $146,000. The increase of $50 per annum for houses and condominiums would yield $430,000 in increased revenues and the increase of $250 per annum for houses on the Seven Mile Beach would yield $225,000. Therefore, the total increase would result somewhere in the region of $728,000 for 1999.

“I cannot explain to you the difference of approximately $672,000, other than to surmise that it may represent collection of arrears, most of which, of course, would not be current. This seems like a big amount and it also could be that either my estimates or those of governments as to numbers of residential units is wrong.

“I would suggest that the most equitable way of charging for garbage collection for homes would be to do so based on the size of the house. In that case it would be appropriate for Environmental Health to do a survey, establish a proper fee structure which would result in government recovering the full cost of garbage collection which by and large is one of the better and more efficient services provided by the government. Alternatively, consideration could be given to outsourcing or privatising this service.

“In the meantime, until an equitable system is arrived at, I think perhaps the fairest way of allocating the increase in income mandated by the budget would be to spread it evenly across the board. On the basis of there being 13,150 residential units on the island, collection of the required increase of $1.4 million would result in an increase of $106.46 per unit. Consideration could be given to making the payment of garbage fees on a half yearly basis rounding the increase up to $110, the new payments would therefore be as follows: Houses $160; Condos $290.

“If, of course, the difference of $672,000 referred to is coming from some other source, then the new payment would result in an increase of $55.36, rounding it up to $60. The new annual fees would be: Houses $110; Condos $240.”

While that seemed to be a slightly lengthy exercise, this person had the thought to throw out some alternatives.

Here is what I am saying about these issues: I believe government is going to come back and tell us that there are different things being done to streamline certain things to establish the cost of providing certain services and such the like. And that as soon as they get all this information together they will have a better idea of how to deal with it and stuff like that. I don’t really have too much of a problem with that. But where I have a problem is that the interim seems to be an indefinite period. Always, but always, it does not fail that we are being told that they need some time to do this and that. I respect that. But how long is that time?

In the meantime, should people like me simply shut our eyes and say however they do it is fine? I can’t do that! As a responsible legislator, I cannot do that, regardless of what opposing views come out when I give my views.

I am saying that in terms of revenue measures there seems to be no methodology employed that stem from pure logic. It seems to be always under crisis when these decisions are made, and it seems to me that the decisions are never based on what is good for one, is good for all. If we are talking about differentiating between higher bracket people in certain things, then let’s come out and say that. Let us explain to the public the logic behind doing certain things.

I am a person who believes that you must make a decision. If you make a decision and it is the wrong decision it is still better than making no decision. By and large I believe that principle prevails. If you make a decision and it turns out to be the wrong decision, chances are that if you are known to have the ability to make decisions you will be allowed to correct that decision. But you cannot hide behind indecision or an inability to justify a decision and expect it to work. That does not work in any process—including the political process.

Of course, beyond all of this what I am really going to find funny is if whether on the floor of this House, outside in the common room or anywhere else, we hear the stories about who is responsible for doing what, and who caused what to happen. That’s going to be a joke. I shouldn’t have said that. Perhaps they won’t tell me now. Anyway. . . .

The motion is calling for government to have a re-think about these measures. I recognise the impact that this would have on their recurrent revenue for this year, and what their projections will be for next year. But I think the mere fact that their recurrent revenue is down gives reason for them to want to have a second look at certain areas. What I couldn't do is look at the long list of items where there are increases in fees and single out individual items and say 'Take this back. Don't take this one back', because I am not dealing with individual items, although I used individual items as examples. I am dealing with a principle.

I am not suggesting that some of these measures on this list which were voted on in February retroactive to November 1998, are not reasonable measures. Let us get that straight. But I am saying that in my view they did not apply reason and logic to the desire to increase revenue.

There is also the argument about widening the revenue base. And I don't think I have time this evening to go in depth into that area, but the fact of the matter is that these revenue measures have made life uncomfortable for too many of the residents of this country.

I know and I accept that any time there is any revenue measures, certain sectors of our society bawl. I know that. But we have to agree on one thing: Because our taxation system is an indirect taxation system is all the more reason why we have to be extra careful in the way in which we levy any increases in fees because as has been proven in the past, and has been proven with this one, the buck ends with one group of people who feel the impact the most because the taxation is not direct. Therein lies advantage one way and disadvantage the other way.

Because it does not tell the Hon. Speaker that out of his salary 10% is going to the country's coffers, whatever that salary is, whether it is $2 or $200 per month—that is there—bam—finished. What it does is levy increases in duties or fees or licenses whereby . . . and let me take a grocery store for instance. If they have garbage fees increased, their trade and business license increased, their retail license based on square footage increased, and then increased duties on certain items they sell, they have to absorb those costs.

Mr. Speaker, when they are incorporating their price structure with the condensed milk, the cereal and the bread, and the Campbell's Chicken Noodle Soup, when they add up their additional cost of doing business in this country, do you think they are going to eat it? Oh no! They can't! Good business principle doesn't allow that. So, they have to work out a formula to spread that additional cost to the prices they sell their prices for. The consumer buys those products. The same costs the government charges the supermarket, in truth and in fact, the supermarket is not paying for it—it is the consumer. Tell me if I am wrong. I am not wrong! That's where the whole problem lies.

It's not criminal. I am only trying to bring to light why we have to employ a different way of thinking with the whole affair.

When they increase the cost of diesel—and Caribbean Utilities is the largest consumer of diesel oil in this country . . . but Caribbean Utilities also provides the only source of electricity in this country. Do you think Caribbean Utilities is going to eat that? No! By the time it's over you and I are going to pay for it. So in truth and in fact Caribbean Utilities is not paying for that additional duty on the diesel. It is all of us!

That is why we need to look at it differently, Mr. Speaker.

When we take all of these items outside of what I would term the luxury items, and it is not that that is really separated, it's just that the only people who pay for the extra duty on those items is the one who buys them. But the majority of costs levied here are going to be spread among the entire population because there are certain things most of us have to consume to live. There are certain services we have to receive to live halfway decent. And all of the costs are put on those services and the consumer picks up the whole $11.8 million tab for these revenue enhancement measures.

While government wishes to retain the system and people like me agree to retaining the system, we have to have a serious look at the way in which revenue measures are employed because of where it ends, because of who actually picks up the tab. It continues to create . . . and perhaps before I say that this might be the time, and I will continue on Wednesday morning with that issue. I can continue if you wish.

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

COMMUNITY COLLEGE OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS
ANNUAL REPORT 1998

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, the financial statements of the Community College of the Cayman Islands, 31st December 1998 and 1997, and the Annual Report 1998-1999

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak to these items?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, Madam Speaker, thank you.

As required by the Community College of the Cayman Islands Law, I am pleased to table these financial statements and audit report. July 1999 mark the end of another very successful year for my Government in the provision of tertiary education in the Cayman Islands. As you are aware, the Community College is very comprehensive in its programme offerings. The programmes offered in the 1998-1999 academic year fall into three categories: Associate degrees, vocational programmes, and professional programmes.

Associate degrees are offered in thirteen areas of specialisation. Three types of associate degrees are offered at the college—Associate in Arts, Associate in Science and Associate in Applied Science.

Associate in Arts: Accounting, business administration, economics, hospitality management, literary studies and social science.

The Associate of Science degrees are computer science, mathematics, natural science and physical science.

The Associate of Applied Science degrees are in accounting, business administration and office administration.

In the vocational areas, five specialisation are offered: Accounting, computer application, construction technology, electrical technology and hospitality studies.

The college also offers professional programmes in banking, legal secretary and nursing. In addition to the above, the college offers a wide variety of academic, vocational and leisure courses through its adult and continuing education department in both Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac.

I am also very pleased that the number of persons who take advantage of the educational opportunities offered at the community college is increasing. I am equally pleased with the fact that the increases in the last academic year were not only in continuing education and associate degree programmes but also in the vocational and professional areas.

Madam Speaker, the college has been accepted for its credits at a wide range of colleges both in the Caribbean—at the University of the West Indies—and in British institutions such as the Nottingham University, the University of Birmingham, University of Bristol, University of Briton, University of London, University of North London, Warwick University and several others. Also, Madam Speaker, at American institutions which include the Stetson University which has a Barons 1997 rating of competitive plus, the University of Miami which is rated very competitive, and also Eckerd College that is once again rated very competitive, and De Paul University.

These are all very competitive universities that I am listing here. The Florida International University, the Florida State University, University of Central Florida and the University of Tennessee, all rated by Barons as very competitive. I am sorry, Loyola University as well, which is a very competitive university together with a whole range of colleges that are rated competitive.

To have the credits accepted by very competitive universities in the United States says a lot for the community colleges high standard in these subjects.

Madam Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to thank members of the Legislative Assembly for their support for the college and private sector organisations and companies for collaborating with the college by providing scholarships and other forms of support to Caymanians. I would especially like to thank our president of the college, Mr. Basdeo; our chairman, Mrs. Berna Murphy and the other members of the Community College Board of Governors and all of the staff at the Community College for the sterling job that they have done.

Finally, Madam Speaker, I have always believed that investment in the development of human resources is the best investment of any government. One learned writer once wrote, if you think education is expensive try ignorance.

Madam Speaker, the Community College of Cayman Islands continues to contribute to the development of our most important asset—our people. I thank all involved with the college for their effectiveness and efficiency in delivering this important service. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Item 4, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question 142 is standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

Before we proceed to Question Time, I would ask for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) to allow questions to be taken after the hour of 11.00 a.m. The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Works.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7)

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, I so move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) so that we make take the questions on the Order Paper for today.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(7) be suspended in order for Question Time to take place after the hour of 11.00 a.m. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) SUSPENDED.

The Deputy Speaker: Question number 142 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 142

No. 142: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources to provide a complete list of officers and departments who are given cellular telephones and handheld radios and indicate which of these officers have cellular telephones.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is not possible to give a complete list of officers and departments who have cellular telephones as each department is responsible for its own bills and my Ministry does not have access to this type of information. However, there are a number of officers who have the ability to utilise the government radio communications' system for the purpose of making and receiving official telephone calls. This listing is attached as Appendix I.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Could the Minister state, even though his ministry might not have access to all of the information that has been asked for, if there is any idea what cost these radios and telephones are on a monthly basis to government?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The cost for an officer to use the government system is dramatically less than the cost of using a cellular phone. This is because the rate is the same as if the officer was using a landline telephone. An example: a 5-minute cellular call within Grand Cayman is $1.37 but a radio telephone call is $0.12 and if the officer is receiving a call, there is no charge whatsoever. Whereas it would cost $1.25 for five minutes if the call was received by a cellular phone.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I am assuming that the attached list that has been provided with the substantive answer is a list not of cellular telephones but of the hand-held radios. Is that the case? If that is the case can the Minister state if there are any additional cost incurred by the government in the use of cellular phones?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, I would like to deal with the first part of the question with regard to the list that has been circulated, I think this covers both and it is my understanding that the cost is minimal.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If the Honourable Minister would jog his memory. About a year ago in Finance Committee, a motion was passed regarding this list and I think, if memory serves me right, the Communications Officer was present. A commitment was given regarding supplying certain information. To this date, we have heard nothing more about it. Can the Minister give any reason why this information has not been provided and can he give us some idea of when it might be?

Hon. John B. McLean: The information that the Member is speaking of . . . it was my understanding that this was circulated. Evidently, it was not. I will give the undertaking to the Member that I will have the Communication Officer gather this information and pass it on to him, this week.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Minister will understand that one of the reasons behind this substantive question is because there has been some concern raised with regard to the cost to government incurred by use of these two facilities. Can the Minister state if there is a specific policy emanating from government with regard to the usage of both the handheld radios and the cellular phones, or is it just a matter of a request being made, the equipment being supplied and everybody moving on?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

A request must be submitted to the Head of Department, who is the Permanent Secretary of Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources, who in consultation with the Telecommunications Officer will either approve or disapprove the request.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if there is a ceiling put on the numbers or if it is just dealt with as a come and be served basis.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The criteria for determining whether the request will be approved or not includes a number of factors and is not limited to the seniority of officers, whether the requesting officer is on call after normal working hours, whether the officer is involved with providing the emergency services and whether the officer is required to be contacted outside their home or office. These factors have to be taken into consideration.

It is not that everybody has a telephone or radio, it is out of necessity in most cases when a new radio is given to an individual in departments or ministries.

The Deputy Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we shall move on to question 143 standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 143

No. 143: Miss Heather D. Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works when will the launching ramp at the Spotts Tourist Landing be constructed.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: A date for the commencement of construction of the Spotts launching ramp has not yet been determined. The matter is currently being reviewed by the Public Works Department and the Ministry.

SUPPLEMENTARY

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state since money was allocated in the 1999 budget if there is any specific reason why it is this late in the day and nothing has been done thus far?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The only comment I could probably give to that is that the Public Works work load, I would assume being as significant as it is, they have not yet reached dealing with jetties. It is not just the Spotts jetty, there is the one at South Sound, there is the one at Colliers, there is the one in Spotts—the Spotts jetty not the launching ramp. Those are about to commence repairs.

There are some concerns with this launching ramp site and I would prefer to talk to the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town about those concerns before we decided to implement the construction or building of it.

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I would just like to get an undertaking from the Minister that he extend such discussions to the other members who are the representatives of the constituency involved. And, I would also like a further undertaking from the Minister that the matter be pursued so that the funds do not fall away at the end of the financial year.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, the reason for my comment being addressed to the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town is because she asked the question. That's what I was replying to. It's not to say that other members will not be invited to that discussion. Certainly, the members from George Town and the other members from Bodden Town will be invited.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, if I may?

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am sorry, the Minister has not quite answered the question. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town also asked for an undertaking to make sure that it was completed before year end so that the funds were allocated for this year doesn't fall away.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, the reason why I didn't comment on the undertaking is because I think the discussion will decide whether we move on or not.

The Deputy Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to question 144 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 144

No. 144: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development what legislation exists to prevent insider trading and other such insidious practices as these relate to the Cayman Islands' Stock Exchange.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Cayman Islands Stock Exchange's (CSX) internal regulatory regime, as reflected in its listing rules and broker members' rules, specifically prohibit insider dealing, market manipulation and similar abuses of the market. Its rules in this regard align fully with international standards. The Exchange's Surveillance Department is responsible for detecting market behaviour that may be indicative of market abuse and investigating it. Where necessary, the Exchange has powers to discipline its broker members in this regard.

The CSX recent admission to the London Stock Exchange list of approved organisations demonstrates that its regime for listings meets high standards. Honourable Members may also recall that, because at this time the Exchange's principal listing products (which are mutual funds and specialist list debt) do not typically trade on exchange, the trading-based risk for the CSX is correspondingly very low.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Deputy Speaker: Supplementaries, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Is the House then to understand that the regulatory procedures now in place, as mentioned by the Honourable Member replying, meet the scrutiny and expectation of recognised international authorities in addition to those of the London Stock Exchange and also meet with the expectations of those clients of the exchange?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The recognition by the London Stock Exchange is a good indication that the Cayman Islands rules and procedures satisfy international standards. There are areas that will continue to be looked at because we are looking to developing a similar legislation to what would exist by the SCCE in the United States.

But this is an area that we will have to work on over-time. I should point out that in addition to the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange legislation which sits on top of the rules and also the attorney to establish rules and to develop procedures, we have in place the Confidential (Relationship Preservation) Law. There is a section in that piece of legislation that is very relevant to the financial services activity. This is section 5(3) which reads, "Whoever, being in possession of confidential information, clandestinely, or without consent of the principal, makes use thereof for the benefit of himself or another, is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a penalty prescribed in subsection (2), and for that purpose any profit accruing to any person out of any relevant transaction shall be regarded as a reward."

This relates very much to insider trading. Therefore, anyone engaging in such a practice will run afoul of this piece of legislation. As I mentioned, the rules satisfy international standards, otherwise we would not have been recognised by the London Stock Exchange. But we are looking in terms of specific legislation to wrap around the rules as such that emerge from the existing Cayman Islands Stock Exchange legislation which governs those rules that are in place.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the substantive answer, the Honourable Third Official Member said that because at this time the [Stock] Exchange principal listing products, namely, mutual funds and specialist debts do not typically trade on the Exchange, the trading based risk is very low. Can the Member enlighten us as to how this trading might be done, if it is not typically done on the Exchange?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The specialist debt securities as referred to are often sold to a single investor who will hold the securities until they mature.

In the case of the mutual funds, the Fund Administrator will deal with subscription and redemption requests. Derivative warrants listed on the Exchange are generally traded over the counter. The closing price on volume of business done is reported to the Stock Exchange on a daily basis. So, this is how the risk is minimised.

The Chairman: If there are no further supplementaries that concludes Question Time. We will move on to item 5, Other Business, the continuation of the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 24/99.

The First Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 24/99

REVIEW OF THE MEASURES IMPOSED UNDER THE FINANCE LAW 1998

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. When we adjourned on Monday afternoon . . . before I go on, I noticed that our ranks are very depleted here. But if you are prepared to Madam Speaker, I will continue. I don't know— It is only four of us here but I guess it's your call, Madam.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member it is not if I am prepared to continue. If you are bringing to my attention that there is not a quorum in the Chamber, I have no choice but to call for a quorum and wait five minutes for a quorum in the Chamber and then adjourn the House if they are not here without a question being put.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, if I may. . . because I know several members are off-island and I don't know if you will accommodate the suggestion, but I think most of us are anxious to see exactly where that storm is and perhaps we could take a few minutes just to get that report. Perhaps, you might get a quorum. I am just making a suggestion.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, I thank you for that suggestion but it was not my intention to take a morning break seeing that Parliament did not resume this morning until 11.00 a.m. and I intended to continue until the lunch break at 1.30 p.m. I will suspend at this time for 15 minutes seeing that there is no quorum.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.12 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Continuation of the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 24/99, the First Elected Member for George Town continuing.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I was saying that when we took the adjournment on Monday afternoon, I was making illustrations to prove that the system we operate here in the Cayman Islands (the system of indirect taxation) is one which the government has to continually look at very, very carefully. It is obvious, as history has shown, that because the tax base is so narrow, most of the times, if not all of the times, when the government finds need to introduce tax measures, these measures at the end of the day always end up squarely on the backs of the consumer.

I brought up the example of the increase in duty on diesel and the fact that Caribbean Utilities—being the largest consumer of diesel in the island—simply (I mean not doing anything wrong) in the line of business pass the cost on to the consumer. Likewise any increase cost to the merchants, whether they be wholesale or retail, whatever those increased costs are by way of increased fees or duties certainly get passed directly on to the people who buy the merchandise, namely, the consumer.

Now, Madam Speaker, before I move on, I want to bring to the government's attention the motion itself and I want to make sure that the government fully understands the intent of the motion. It is not very long, I would crave your indulgence just to read it again. Thank you.

The motion reads, "BE IT RESOLVED THAT due to the hardships being experienced by both consumer and trader in the Cayman Islands as a result of the recent revenue measures imposed under the Finance Law, 1998 (Law 20 of 1998), Government review the measures [that's the key] with a view to easing the burden imposed upon the people of the Cayman Islands."

Now, the reason I wanted to read that again was to let it be clearly understood that the motion is not politically motivated, trying to put the government in a spot. Its intent is not to force government's hand to do something that is unrealistic, but, rather, the intent of the motion is to say to the government, 'Look, you had some time to think about this. We have all had some time to think about it. People understand what the ramifications are. Please look at some of these measures with a view to finding other avenues and other sources of income for the government in order that the people of the country can have a little ease because as of now, the pressure is too much for some of them.' That is basically what the motion is asking for them to do.

So, for them to accept the motion is not to say that they are going to withdraw the entire Finance Law 1998. That is not what the motion is asking for. I want to make it very clear to them so that's not the thought in their mind. The motion is asking for them to review these measures brought under the Finance Law 1998 with a view to easing the burden imposed upon the people of the Cayman Islands. That might mean looking at some specific issues that are having a direct impact on both the consumer and the trader with a view to finding other avenues and easing that burden. I just wanted to take a few minutes to make that very clear.

Now, if the government refuses to accept the motion, having explained it in that fashion, then the message is clear to me that the government has no intention of looking at that. That's what it means to me.

Madam Speaker, if we look at some of the specific areas—I mentioned the garbage fees, the school book rental fees . . . but there are other areas. One of them that strikes me as having an imbalance in it is under the Trade and Business Licence heading where they talk about utility services. In singling out the various utility services, bulk water distributors, as I understand it from the document, have gone from $150 to $2,500. When it was brought, I remember asking questions as to what the definition of bulk water distributor was. And to this date, I do not know what that definition is, so I cannot argue at length because I don't know exactly which companies or individuals fall under this category. I don't know the answer to that.

But that is just by the way. The point I make about it is when we come down to Local Companies (Control) Law, (that is, LCCL under utility services) . . . now, again, if I am reading this correctly, I stand to be corrected. I am reading from that that we are taking people like Caribbean Utilities Company and Cable & Wireless who would require an LCCL to operate in the Cayman Islands and they are utility services. Madam Speaker, I know that there is a franchise with Cable & Wireless. I, also, know that there is a franchise agreement with Caribbean Utilities Company. I know that the government earns a certain amount from Cable & Wireless under the franchise. I am not quite sure exactly if government has any direct earnings from Caribbean Utilities, but regardless of all of that (and I have nothing against the two companies) I cannot justify bulk water distributors having to pay $25,000 for a trade and business licence, and people like Caribbean Utilities Company and Cable & Wireless having to pay $5,000—a fifth of that—for a LCCL. I don't see the logic whatsoever, regardless of the other ramifications.

I used that one example to show that in my mind, this was a hurry-come-up job; it was an effort that was forced and it was not properly thought out. To use the terminology used by the Minister of Education when he refers to some of the things that I do, he says it is "ill thought out." Well, this is worse than that (if there is such a word). Perhaps I could say this is radically ill thought out, if that makes the point.

Madam Speaker, needless to say, with all of these examples I am drawing, at the end of the day every single one of them falls back on the consumer. They do! Whenever any one of them—whether it's a bulk water distributor working out the rates, whether there is a franchise which gives them a ceiling or not, whether its Caribbean Utilities Company working out their 15% franchise or matters like that . . . this all comes into play, it doesn't get thrown away.

Madam Speaker, if I sell fish at $3 per pound and the government suddenly charges me for putting my boat somewhere that I never used to pay anything for, when I have to find $500 to pay the government, I am going to raise the price of my fish. That's just the way life is.

Now, let the government understand that I am not taking a position with this motion or otherwise that the government must not have revenue to operate the services that it provides for the people of the country. I understand that very well. The whole point in all that I am debating here is the government needs to look seriously at the method by which it derives its income. I contend that it has not done so to this point serious enough.

Madam Speaker, I want to draw another small example. I want to make it very clear that because we have lawyers in here this has nothing to do with the fact that lawyers make up a part of the government. First of all, where it has under "legal practitioner's fees" . . . something that I was shocked to learn not very long ago (and this is nothing against the lawyers, believe me, we all need them) a law firm does not need a trade and business licence. A law firm does not pay for a trade and business licence. The fee that is paid is this legal practitioner's fee, which I think would compare with the individuals who practice in the medical field.

The practising fee for a lawyer was $500 and it has moved up to $800. Madam Speaker, I don't say this to say if the country needs money it must go at the lawyers or the accountants or whatever. I am not saying that. I am just showing you what I consider to be not just anomalies but inequities in the thought process. A law firm with no other business licence to pay, the individuals pay $800 a year to practice in the Cayman Islands. I don't want to get into how much they make and the fact that that is the profession that people seem to be able to retire from the earliest and all of that. That is not the point. If I wanted to go that route, I would consider that to be unfair because that is not where I am trying to rely on for the strengths of my argument.

I am just trying to say that in this entire list of revenue measures that the government has put forward and got approved, I believe strongly that they need to look at these revenue measures that they put and see if there are not other ways and means to get revenue and relieve some of the burden that is put on the consumer. I cannot emphasise enough, Madam Speaker, exactly the position it has put the consumer in.

Madam Speaker, I need to bring out another point here, something I have mentioned time and time again, and something people believe that I probably read in a book and just latched on to because it sounds good. But this is serious and it is to the point where it is frightening. It is the disparity in the wealth distribution in this country.

Madam Speaker, I want to bring out a serious point in this. Because our system is a system of indirect taxation, meaning that no individual's earning power is directly attached to a fee paid to the government, every revenue measure that affects the business world, the business world passes those extra costs that they have to pay out—whether it be to government or anywhere else—to the consumer who purchases either the goods or the services that they provide. Here is what that does: It allows a certain percentage of the population in the country to retain, if not improve, on their earnings; but because all of those additional costs do not remain with them and interfere with their earning power as they are passing it on to the majority of individuals who are the consumers, every dollar that that consumer earns is worth less because he has to pay more. That is not something that is done by design, Madam Speaker. Let everyone understand this. I know that it is not intentional for this to cause a problem but that is what happens.

So, basically if you are in a business and you can make the business successful (especially if it is one that people have to utilise your services or purchase the goods), you are okay. If you are a worker who has to depend on a salary to purchase the goods and services to survive in the community then you are a dead duck because you cannot do anything about it. Whatever it costs you have to buy it.

Now, in days gone by, Madam Speaker, one of the things that used to be touted was that supply and demand and competition would level the playing field. That is not the case anymore. When the population was smaller, when the demands were less on government and when the revenue it needed was not anywhere near as high as it is now, it did not have such a dramatic effect. But, Madam Speaker, it has gotten to the point now where it is a crisis.

Yesterday, in the rain there were three people who came to my office to look for me—three people that I know well; three people that work hard. Not anybody that is looking to bum you or anything like that. All three of those people had a problem with paying their rent and they are still working.

You see, I don't know what else to say. I am not asking the government to throw its hands up in the air and say, 'we don't know what to do'. I am not looking them in the eye and saying that all that you are doing is foolishness. I am saying, we are trying to solve one problem and we are creating thirty more problems and we cannot do it like that—that's what I am saying.

You see, Madam Speaker, this business about disparity of the wealth distribution is a perfect scenario for social ills. The arguments being put forward here today are not socialist; they are just the realities of the day. There is no sense in us simply saying if we do it like this we will balance the budget and have enough revenue if, at the end of the day, we are creating so many more in the prison. Do you think that was just because somebody got knocked over the head or something like that? No! I would venture to say that many of them, especially our local Caymanians in prison, don't even know why they are there. That is what life at certain levels has come to in this country. The answer is not wiping them out because we cannot do that. We cannot simply say that we are just going to sit down and live with them. We cannot do that either because they are multiplying faster than we are.

So, Madam Speaker, this business goes real deep and we can no longer look just in an insular fashion in one specific area to try to cure one problem because inevitably if you don't think it through, you are going to cause more problems than the one you are solving.

If we look in the various sectors of the economy, the hospitality industry and tourism, it is as safe a comment as ever to say that any problems we might have with the numbers being down has a direct relation to the cost of the product in today's tourism market. That is safe comment.

When it comes to the room tax, Madam Speaker, there is a 10% accommodation tax and there is 6% gratuity, that's standard when it comes to the room rates. You cannot increase that. You cannot even look at increasing that because you are walking on the edge right now with the prices. In fact, I hold the view that we have to find a way if we are going to retain market share (much less even attempt to increase it) to lower the cost of the product. But that is another story again.

Basically, when it comes to accommodations and the revenue that government derives from accommodations, you cannot touch it. You cannot do a thing. Perhaps, when it comes to some of the other related items, alcoholic beverages and that type of stuff, you might be able to look at that—that is about the only area that I see.

In the domestic construction industry Madam Speaker, when you talk about the fees that are in there now, we know we have fees, trade and business licences, all of those fees are up. We are fighting in here on a daily basis about the cost of construction with government with this capital works—we cannot charge any more in that area because by the time you are finished, it will go up to $500 per square foot.

Madam Speaker, if we had the records for planning approvals to date, we would know that the value of approvals is down from what it was this time last year. I think it is not unsafe comment to say that the end of year figures will show that that value is down. Someone might wish to attribute it to one specific project jacking it up last year, and because a project of that nature is not around this year that's why there is a difference. But if they look at it carefully, it is more than that. It is the cost of doing business.

Madam Speaker, there are but few areas at this point in time that we could really look at to try to earn more revenue. I understand that it is difficult, and believe me, I am trying to give a balance argument without looking to find things to just beat up on the government to say that they are not doing it right. That is not the purpose of this exercise. I know that it is difficult. I understand that. But we have to search deeper.

When you run in a race and you feel like just stopping and giving up, you say, 'God didn't build me like this' and you reach deep down and you find the strength to finish it, that's where we are at. And all of us have to find that strength. I don't care what anybody wants to say and I don't care what kind of prophet of doom and gloom they say I am, but if anybody tells me that all is well and we don't need to be looking hard at certain things, that person is either misguided or not telling the truth.

I am going to say something here and I know the risk I run in saying it, but I have spent hours and I have talked to people about this. I have talked to people in the business world. I have talked to individuals who came to me crying about not being able to make ends meet. I have spoken to people in the banking industry. I have spoken to people in the tourism industry. I believe, personally, that the only place that has any more room that will not affect the price of rice that has some latitude for government to get some revenue is the financial industry—that is my belief.

I don't believe that the government should just look blindly for some areas and just come with this budget in November and drop some stuff on. That, again, is the principle that I believe has been totally wrong when it comes to revenue measures. I understand that the government might not feel comfortable getting all of these players in the game and sitting down talking to them because they figure they are going to be protecting themselves—of course, they will. But it doesn't mean that people don't have good sense and people are not committed to the country, that they are not prepared to talk and be reasonable. I believe they are.

I believe we should take that opportunity, or rather create that opportunity. I believe that these people will be reasonable. Madam Speaker, what people do not like is these sudden bombshells. You do that when you are fighting war. You don't do that when you are trying to run a country.

The Financial Secretary, the Honourable Third Official Member, made a comment very recently which lifted my spirits a great deal. He pointedly recognised the need to diversify the economy because in diversifying the economy it gives greater avenues for government revenue. I also understand that may not be the easiest thing in the world to achieve. But as far as I am concerned, while our country is how it is and there is not a wide variety of natural resources that we can be innovative with, we certainly are no worse off than many other countries in this world. They have survived with fewer opportunities than we have, so there is no reason why we cannot excel if we put our minds to it properly. That is my view, Madam Speaker.

It might almost look like a contradiction to be telling the government to find ways and means to alleviate the tax that they put on the people, while at the same time trying to tell them to find more ways to raise money. But it is not a contradiction. It follows hand in hand. The government has to find ways and means to raise revenue that do not directly affect the earning power of the consumer in the country—that's what the government has to do. That is the crux of the matter. And to this point, it has not been done. And from the actions that I have seen it has not even been thought about.

Now, I don't doubt that there are those who have thought the thought. But, Madam Speaker, as the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town would say, until I see them walk the walk, I am going to keep talking like I am talking because I can never live with the assurance that anything is going to be done around this town until I see it done. So, whether it is on the threshold or not, once I have the opportunity, I am going to continue to preach my sermon until I see something done.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member would this be a convenient time to take the luncheon break?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam.

The Deputy Speaker: Before I suspend, the Honourable Deputy Chief Secretary has intimated to me that he would like to brief members during the lunch suspension on the weather conditions now existing around our islands.

We shall suspend until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.45 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.36 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 24/99. The First Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I have tried to present as balanced an argument as I could to justify not only the existence of this motion, but the support of members of this Legislative Assembly. I think it is just about time for me to await government's reply, and to hear contributions from other members.

There are just two things that I wish to address before I complete my introduction of the motion. I would like to go back to the Hansard of 10 February 1999 when the Honourable Third Official Member was moving the second reading of the Bill entitled, The Finance Bill of 1998.

In his opening remarks he said: "The discussion on this subject during the debate on the Budget Address highlighted two very important issues: One point is that our expenditure levels have risen fairly rapidly in recent years as Government has moved to provide a wide range of services and to expand the infrastructure. The second point is that although revenue growth has been healthy over the years, our revenue base is quite narrow.” [1998 Official Hansard Report, Vol. 3, page 1306] How true! We accept that statement, and it is for that reason we are going through this motion today.

I also wish to make the point that while we are looking to find other ways to raise revenue, and ways to alleviate the strain on the consumers in the country—who are literally paying for the vast majority of these increased fees—we also need to concentrate very seriously on maximising our levels of efficiency in the government service. I am privy to a certain amount of knowledge in regard to the financial reforms now underway. And I am happy to know that the mindset with these reforms is totally geared towards increasing efficiency.

I mention that to say that all of these things work hand in hand. There is no sense in our being inefficient in providing the services that arise from the demands of the population when those inefficiencies continue to exist. You have to extract from the same public you wish to provide the services for at a disproportionate rate because your costs are too high to provide the services. So the mindset has to be that these things work hand in hand. I am pleased to know that this is the way that these financial reforms are headed, and perhaps if there are not too many brick walls put in their way, we might see some very positive results.

The final thing I wish to address is the figures that were presented to us a few days ago, which set out the state of affairs of government. When I mentioned this in another debate the Minister of Education mentioned the fact that I had outlined that government's recurrent revenue experienced a shortfall in the first eight months of calendar year 1999. He said that because that was all I mentioned I was exercising the principles of single-entry bookkeeping.

He then proceeded to talk about the $18.8 million surplus. The way he crafted it—in his usual skewed fashion—and by the time he added it all, if he is left alone the country would believe that we have this $40 million right now today that we can literally do with whatever we want to do. That's the way he presented it!

I want him to know that while he may classify the fact that I only mentioned the shortfall in recurrent revenue as single-entry bookkeeping, the best that his can be called is no-entry bookkeeping! I would never try to create a situation where I led the public to believe one thing when I knew better.

I want to raise a few issues. In the summary that was presented to us, the projected revenue (when the budget was brought up to 31 August 1999) was $194.5 million. The actual revenue to 31 August 1999 is $182.6 million, which shows a shortfall of just under $12 million.

The recurrent and statutory expenditure, as projected through 31 August 1999, was $177.8 million, when in actual fact the recurrent and statutory expenditure through 31 August 1999 was only $167.8 million—approximately $10 million under.

He may wish to say at this point that recurrent expenditure is down by $10 million, but we all know that no one right now is probably in a position to say that (because recurrent expenditure is down by $10 million through the first eight months of the year) by the end of the year it will be down that much too. No one knows the positions of the various departments in regard to what they are committed to, even though the money might not be actually paid out yet. So no one can make that assessment yet. Because the expenditure is short $10 million is why we see this supposed surplus of $18.8 million—that and some other things.

Madam Speaker, it is also worthy to note in this summary that of the $42.5 million of capital expenditure budgeted for 1999, it was projected that just about half of that would have been spent by the end of August. It was projected that $21.4 million of that would be spent by the end of August. What has actually been spent up to the end of August is $11.8 million, just about half of what was projected to be spent.

But, again, we do not know if that won't be spent by the end of the year. And so that we can clearly understand the picture, . . . I remember the Minister of Tourism bringing up the fact that in our budget this year for capital expenditure there was some $7 million for the Lighthouse School. This is October, and no money has been spent. It is very possible that the year may go by and this $7 million may not be spent. If it is not spent, it might paint a pretty picture at the end of the year if some other capital expenditure has not come to fruition and the money is not spent.

But, what we must understand is that even if it looks good at the end of the year, because that money was not spent, we are still going to have to spend the money. So don't let anyone bring this twisted argument about the wonderful state of affairs—when it is not so!

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning even went so far as to add in the $3 million that is supposed to be transferred to the general reserves before year end (as was projected in the budget) into this $40 million that we have—and the money hasn't been added in yet. They're calling what I say single-entry bookkeeping? I'd rather be a single-enterer than a twisted one!

Madam Speaker, I want to repeat that again: When he was adding up this beautiful $40 million that we are supposed to have in our pockets to do with what we want, he included the $3 million that has to be transferred from our general revenue account into general reserves as money that we have and the money hasn't been transferred yet. The Hansards will prove that he said that!

But that's his style because he doesn't want to hear the truth. Instead of looking at what the true picture is and addressing the situation, all he can figure is that he doesn't want his government to look bad. Therefore, he must paint the picture like that. And because he thinks he's good at that . . . and, Madam Speaker, time will tell!

As I said before, if that is not misleading then I want to know what misleading is.

Madam Speaker, I commend this motion. I will not deliberate any further at this point in time. I wait to hear what the government and others have to say. I trust that everyone understands the intent of the motion. I hope that the people of this country can be taken into consideration with this motion, and that we can seek to find ways and means to alleviate the pressure they have been put under on a daily basis in order to make two ends meet in this country. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I want to speak before the honourable Third [Official] Member speaks because I want the honourable member to know that it is unfortunate that he finds himself in this predicament where he has to be the foremost responder. I consider this matter a political matter, it just happens that there is some greying of the area.

I would like to lay the parameters clearly so that the government, that is the elected executive, will understand that as far as I am concerned, this is a matter of political economy and a matter for which I hold them foremost and primarily responsible. And, Madam Speaker, I want to set something straight from the outset. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning—the Leader of Government Business—is fond of saying that we on this side are often critical, but we offer no solutions. I want to remind honourable members that the best solution to the dilemma we are in now was offered by us in Private Member's Motion No. 10/95, when we brought the Fiscal Responsibility Motion. But I will come back to that because I am going to weave the relevance of that into my argument.

I am not any Jeremiah, but I am a pragmatist. I say it would take all of the intelligence of Milton Friedman, Adam Smith, and John Maynard Keynes to make me believe that the Cayman Islands at this time is in the best financial position it could be in. What is clear is that the government does not have a formula for successful fiscal management and that we have been fortunate. It is true that we have a good Financial Secretary. It is true that we have a good team in the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development. But that notwithstanding, combined with good economic fortunes, the policies and the pragmatism that have come out of the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development has helped us thus far.

The question I am posing is how long can we rely on that to help us because we have some clear and ominous signs. Just like we are getting some signs of Tropical Storm Irene, we are getting some signs of an economic storm. I just hope it is a storm and not a hurricane.

I want to dwell a bit in history because it is in history that we find the greatest answers to some of our problems. I want to remind the House that on 27 November 1996—and for those who don't remember, that was the swearing in day—the Minister for Education, now the Leader of Government Business said, “Our mandate from the people of the Cayman Islands to this House is clear. We have clearly set out in our Manifesto de- tails of what policies we will bring in the next four years.”

I now want to refer to that Manifesto on pages 8 and 9. Under “Financial Management of Government—Our Accomplishments 1993-1996” the minister said, “Recorded a recurrent surplus (or profit) of about $60.3 million. Together with a small loan of $6.6 million, . . .”

Now, Madam Speaker, when something is recurrent that means it happens over, and over, and over. He didn't limit this recurrent business, so I wonder where that recurrent profit is now—or where it went to between 1993 and 1996!

Then he goes on to say in number 4, “Imposed no new duties or taxes to burden our Caymanian people.” All right? Now, this is the crux of it. “The Future—From 1997 to 2000.” The minister says, “As a prudent Government, we will continue our policy of only borrowing what is necessary and never exceeding the internationally accepted limitation for debt service of 10% of recurrent revenue (which now stands at 6%). We plan to continue: 1. To pursue prudent and stable financial management of Government, ensuring that recurrent revenue always exceeds recurrent and statutory expenditure, thereby enabling us to make further positive contributions toward . . .” and he talked about debt repayment and adding at least $2 million each year to our general reserves.

And number two, “To reduce spending without causing excessive damage to projects, and exercise fiscal constraint.”

This is at best a pristine promise because these are not achievable objectives up to this point. Every year for the past four years the government has borrowed to the tune of $20 million or more to balance their budgets. Reduce spending? Reduce what spending? What spending has been reduced?

The only time any spending has been reduced is where the government didn't have time or where there were other constraints and they couldn't carry out the proposed capital projects. That is through no management genius on the part of the government; it is just through a force of circumstances where Public Works was not in a position to carry out the capital projects.

More recently, they have been using that as a tactic to make their accounts look good. At the end of the year money not spent shows up in the surplus section, when we know that proposed capital works projects had not—and have not—been carried out.

Madam Speaker, I might only be a single-entry bookkeeper, but God blessed me with a lot of common sense. And I am an avid reader, so I can apply knowledge. And that is the greatest capacity anyone can have, for there is knowledge, and then there is applied knowledge. There is sense, and then there is applied sense. I am speaking about applied sense so that all and sundry can see.

I want to give a lesson in basic economics. The government has to decide what direction it is going to take. A few years ago there was a big hue and cry, a big hullaballoo about trimming the civil service and streamlining. And they went to great lengths to upset some people. They trimmed some departments, some portfolios, and some ministries. Today, five or six years later, what do we have? A civil service which is just as huge, just as inflated—indeed more, as I am reminded by my colleague. What was the sense of that exercise?

Of course I stand for security of tenure. Of course I stand for recognition of loyal civil servants. Of course I stand for them continuing in their jobs with the minimum of stress. But the government of the Cayman Islands has to decide whether or not it is going to be the father of everybody in the Cayman Islands, or a father of only those it can afford to accommodate without impinging taxes on the rest of us—taxes that we are no longer able to bear.

I have said this before. One of the things that we have to do in arriving at an acceptable and reasonable level of expenditure is, first of all, trim our recurrent expenditure. Now, if the Minister for Education, the Leader of Government Business, is listening, I will give him something other than theories (since he accused me of being a theorist). The first thing we have to consider is arriving at an arrangement where once the students we send away return to the Cayman Islands they can be free to work in whatever area, be that private or public, or their own entrepreneurial venture.

We have to shy away from this business of government contracting everyone who has a scholarship in the government service. Gone are the days when we can afford that. The Minister of Education said himself that we give more scholarships every year. It is impractical and well nigh impossible for us to expect government to accommodate all of them, when we have 500 and 600 people returning. So, we have to arrive at a situation where when these young graduates return we encourage some of them to take employment in the private sector even when they have been beneficiaries of government scholarships.

We also have to give cognisance to the fact that some of them might want to enter into business for themselves. I have said before, and I say again, that one of the things government has to do is examine what is called Micro Financed Initiatives (MFI). That might be one of the challenges for the next government that comes in—a government which I am anticipating playing a significant part in.

Then too we have to move away from the traditional means of raising revenue. Some time ago I heard my colleague, the Third Elected Member for George Town, calling for the establishment of a think tank. We have to start out with the intellectual thrust that we can examine ways of raising revenue other than the traditional means we have been milking all of these years.

It reminds me of an incident when I was growing up that my grandfather told me. He had a friend who had a heifer. Every year that farmer allowed his heifer to have a calf. My grandfather told him, "If you continue what you are doing, one of these days your cow is going to have a calf and there won't be any milk for that calf. You risk the consequence of losing both calf and cow."

So said, and so done. One year there was a terrible drought. The cow had a calf and there was no milk because there was no grass for the cow to feed on.

If we don't look at alternative means that is the situation we are going to find ourselves in one of these days. And I am not praying for it to happen—heaven knows I will be as detrimentally affected as anyone else. I am only saying that we have to seek alternate means. But in seeking these alternate means we cannot take an unidimensional approach. While we are looking at the alternate means of raising revenue, we have to look at means of curtailing recurrent expenditure. We have to look at that seriously.

The writing is on the wall, Madam Speaker. We depend more and more on tourism in a market where the competition is growing ever keener every year. And we have been forewarned. Cuba is beginning to open up. The day that we see the United States lift its embargo on Cuba is the day our tourism is going to take a serious dip.

If honourable members do not know it, in the 1950s—before the advent of Castro and Communism in Cuba—Cuba was described as "The Playground of the Americas." You could get on the ferry in Key West, and ninety minutes later you got off in Havana. They had music, they had gambling, and they had other attractions that tourists seek. And there was nothing in the other Caribbean islands but token tourism. In Puerto Rico and in Jamaica there was nothing to speak of because to the Americans, Cuba was their playground. It was their backyard.

Those were the days when we in the Cayman Islands had about ten tourists a year. If we are smart, we will prepare for that eventuality. I am reading the signs. The American Chamber of Commerce visited Cuba. They all had accolades. Representatives of the Farming Lobby in the United States visited Cuba. They all had accolades. The Democrats are warming up. And certainly, President Clinton would like nothing more than on the eve of his departure from office to normalise relations with Cuba. The pressures are beginning to come to bear.

The United States is a great manufacturing country, and Cuba is a fertile market. Of course, we will still have international finance and banking because people are not going to put their money in Cuba. But I would venture to say that until the novelty wears off, all of the American tourists are going to be visiting Cuba. And we are going to be affected, as will other countries in the Caribbean. But it's not my business to worry about the other countries in the Caribbean, it is my business to worry about what is going to happen in the Cayman Islands.

These are all pressures that we have to take into consideration. These are what we have to consider when we sit down to arrive at our budget. But instead of government and the Minister of Education taking cognisance of these things . . . he is too busy talking about people who are defunct, and about people who have no visible means of income who shouldn't be here. I don't know whom he is referring to, for every time I try to forget what he has said he comes up with something different.

He reminds me of what Winston Churchill said about a friend of his—he has all of the vices I detest and none of the virtues I admire. His statements have no place in this Parliament when we should be sticking to a constructive train of thought and argument so that we can prepare our country for successful entry into the 21st Century.

It doesn't matter to me; I might not be here. I have alternatives I can exercise. But as long as I am here, it is my responsibility to say what I sincerely believe in and to help the government. I can't force them to accept my ideas; I can only posit them. I will say this much: I am not embarrassed by any putdown, or fun that is poked at me. I was steeled in that from my earliest childhood. And I have a reputation for speaking my mind and I will continue to do so.

It is not only the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town who is saying that the government is in trouble, that it needs to take stock of what it is doing. For in the latest Cayman Update, published by Deloitte & Touche (and I will ask the Serjeant to lay one on the Table, and I have one for you, Madam Speaker) . . . and I would like to read some of the concerns they published in this update.

The second paragraph on the second page, entitled "The UK White Paper and the 1999 Budget." It reads: "The control of debt and contingent liabilities are 'hot' topics when discussing government budgets. The recent budget passed by the Cayman Islands Government is not an exception. Revenues and expenditures in all portfolios have been debated and challenged to ensure that Government is obtaining the highest level of value and service. Borrowing is only to be considered a last resort. The White Paper suggests that 'borrowing should only be considered for discreet capital investment projects that have calculable and reasonably certain financial and economic rates of return. Concessional sources of funding should be sought first . . . with social objectives and low financial returns financed from recurrent budget surpluses.' However, as budget surpluses have been relatively small during the past five years, Government has increasingly relied on borrowing to finance capital projects."

This government is led by an honourable gentleman who often likes to stand in this Parliament and tout his brand of economics which says it is better for one to build a house from savings than for one to borrow; and it is better for one to make purchases from savings than from borrowings. It is just as I have said about that honourable minister. He is like the Roman god Janus—he has two faces. He talks the talk, but he does not walk the walk. He says on the one hand that government should do some projects from the recurrent expenditure, but on the other hand, he is leading them on to ever more borrowing.

It goes on, "Large capital projects have left the government with a debt burden that is growing in excess of 20% per year."

This is not single-entry bookkeepers saying this, it is Deloitte & Touche—unquestionably one of the premier financial consulting firms in the world.

"According to government documents, the accumulated national debt at the end of 1998 was projected to be $92.1 million, and rising to $111 million after 1999. However, not included in these figures are the $85 million in contingent liabilities (in the form of guarantees, Water Authority debt, Port Authority debt and Civil Aviation debt) and a further $200 million in unfunded pension liability. Total government debt and contingent liabilities are therefore $396 million. Servicing the debt represents an increasing portion of the government budget. According to the 1999 Budget, public debt of $111 million will create a debt service of $17 million, or 6.3% of total budgeted expenditures."

Madam Speaker, facts speak for themselves. I am surprised that a government that came into power with pristine promises and such a glorious track record, has now degenerated to the point where it is floundering around and still cannot find reasonable and successful solutions. Worse than that! A government that still insists on going ahead with grandiose capital projects—like a runaway train, full speed down the track, not heeding the amber lights. What will it take for this government to recognise that it should exercise some constraint and conservatism before it is too late?

I have to say that I await the Budget they are going to produce for the year 2000 with eager anticipation. I am not an economic pundit, but I know the government is going to have some problems achieving a balance. It is going to have to pull several rabbits out of a hat. And I know that the Minister of Education has a hat full of rabbits! I hope he has more than two hands because he is going to need more.

Back to the principles. The principles lie in the fact that the solution is so simple it may have been escaping us for many years. We have to prioritise. Look at the predicament we are in. We have a budget where we taxed the people for two successive years. We have been borrowing for more years than that, and still we need $50 million for educational infrastructure. We have a project of no small proportions. There is talk of improvements to the airport runways in Little Cayman and Cayman Brac. We have the recent prison fiasco.

And, Madam Speaker, I do not need to remind you (because you drive on the roads) we have roads coming from your district of North Side, on through Bodden Town into George Town that are in a deplorable state. My heart goes out to expectant mothers driving on those roads—up and down, bump and go! It's a good thing we have a seatbelt law, otherwise we'd be looking for people all along the sides of the roads!

To think that we are going to raise the revenue by taxing people with garbage fees, on liquor, on cigarettes, on gasoline, and on diesel. Yes, Madam Speaker, diesel, because one of the promises the government made years ago was that it was going to remove the twenty-five cent surcharge. That was one of the sins that they most vividly held against the government they succeeded in 1992. What did they do? Instead of removing the twenty-five cents, the added twenty-five cents—or something close to that! It's closer to fifty [cents] than it is to forty [cents].

Which element in the population is most affected by all of this? The working people, the middle class; the young people who scream they cannot get affordable plots to build a house on. They cannot find affordable rent. They are screaming because they are pressured. School fees, book rental fees, car loans, utilities, payments, lunch money, nothing for vacation . . . it is a deterrent and a distraction. Its no wonder we have problems with our young people becoming disenchanted, alienated and dropping out of society. If one is working from sunup to sundown 365 days per year and does not have the means to have a little family vacation, then one has to question the purpose of work.

There is no use in anyone trying to convince me that everybody in the Cayman Islands is prospering, because it is not so. Everyone who wants a job in the Cayman Islands may be working, but it would be interesting to find out how many have to work two and sometimes three jobs just to keep up. You know yourself, Madam Speaker, we have the people coming and telling us their predicament. And sometimes they have to humble themselves to request support. Some of them do it on the verge of tears, but it is necessary. They need help. And I am talking about conscientious, responsible, law abiding, working people who can't keep up. They fall behind. Why? Government taxes, garbage fees, licenses . . .

Would you believe it? There is a Caymanian company, Savannah Springs, employing Caymanians. Their business license fee is $25,000. All of the competition that company has . . . a motion was brought here asking government to give some kind of consideration. Government accepted the motion, but nothing has been heard of the matter since. I would like the government to know—and I am putting them on notice—I have not forgotten. And if they have forgotten I hope that in their response to this review of the revenue measures that they are going to say what is going to be done to alleviate entities in that category.

Can you imagine bulk water suppliers, $25,000 per year for their business license? And yet CUC and Cable & Wireless (who do that business in one second) only have to pay $5,000 a year? It shows that the government is hodgepodge. They have no plan! They have no architect capable of giving them a sensible design as to what direction to take.

I want to conclude my reference to the Deloitte & Touche "Cayman Update" by reading this, "The largest source of income for the government is from consumption duties levied on the importation of goods, alcohol and tobacco, and land transfers. Most notably, the duty on alcohol and tobacco was raised by 25%." How in the world can we expect to be a premier tourist destination among the elite in attracting tourists if we have a duty levied on tobacco and alcohol raised by 25%? That is why I am saying that when Cuba opens up we are dead! We are D-E-A-D—dead—as a tourist destination!

Do you know what you can buy liquor and tobacco for in Cuba? We are not even going to be considered, not even by the most loyal of tourists. They are going to be forced to seek an alternate destination. It is no wonder why we have 300 restaurants complaining. All these things are impinging on the government's ability to collect revenue. Business is down!

I read in the newspaper today that the restaurants are hurting. How are they going to be able to pay their garbage fees and their business licence fees? Government has to do something to ease the burden off these people. And this motion is not asking them for a total roll-back because we know that government has to have money to function. We are asking them to review their plan because we are convinced there are areas that can be decreased.

One thing that I find frightening, and the Third Elected Member for George Town drew graphic reference to it in his debate on the budget, . . . when we get to the point where we are talking about increasing school fees and book rental fees we are playing Russian Roulette. And when we spin the chamber and pull the trigger . . . one of these days we might hear "POW!" What we are doing is hampering the ability for people to get the education which we know is necessary for them to compete in this society.

Can you imagine a family of five with the increase in school fees and book rental fees? And I notice that the Minister said that anyone who has problems can notify the Department, or go to the Social Services Department. Well, let me show you the fallacy of that. That is patently fallacious. Where do these departments get the money? You tell me where they get the money. It's money collected from the people! So that solution is patently fallacious.

It's a good thing that I am only a single-entry book-keeper. Heaven knows, if I could master the two entries, how much more brilliant I would be.

The solution to that is to find a way to do without imposing the fees. Find some other avenue. I don't know. It's not my duty. It's not my responsibility. So I am just telling the minister not to come with that. Trust me. When I am there—as I expect to be (God willing)—I will know what to do, where to tap, and who to check.

Madam Speaker, allow me to digress a moment. There was once a great Master who had perfected 360 tricks in Judo, 360 moves. And he had a star pupil. He taught this pupil 359 of those moves. One day the pupil became so arrogant that he went to the Emperor and said, "I am the best Judoka [?] in the Kingdom because I am young, I am smart, and I am brilliant. I can dispose of that old master any day the sun rises." The Emperor became quite concerned because he had no time for arrogance. So he summoned his subjects and called the old master and said, "We are going to settle this once and for all. You have to demonstrate that you are still worthy of being called the Master."

In the combat, the arrogant Judoka came charging at the Master. And with a little death movement and a flick, the Master quickly put him on the ground. The Emperor said, "Sir, tell me how you did that." The master said, "Ah, I anticipated such an occurrence and I held one move back."

So, Madam Speaker, I am telling the Minister of Education that I am holding back the strategy in anticipation that one day he will no longer be there, and it will be me! He can send all the distractions he wants. He sent some foolishness out here about some invitation to some trade union party. I will not be distracted!

Mr. Roy Bodden: I have some advice for him: Maybe he should go to this party to relieve himself of some stress! I am not a trade unionist. And since it is being held in his constituency by his colleague, maybe he would be best served by going. My business right now is the review of the budget measures. And believe you me, I cannot, and I will not, allow the Minister of Education to distract me.

Do you know why he wants to distract me? Because he knows that what I am saying makes sense. If it didn't he wouldn't be trying to distract me and throw me off track. I am too old a soldier in the army to be fooled by a young corporal!

The Deputy Speaker: Would this be a convenient time to take the break?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes. But I stress to honourable members, let us return to the Chamber in fifteen minutes because we haven't spent one hour in this Chamber today. Thank you.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.52 PM

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town continuing his debate on Private Member's Motion No. 24/99.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wish to remark that the First Elected Member for George Town, the mover, and I, the seconder, and other honourable members of the backbench with whom we held consultations prior to bringing this motion, were convinced that we need a review because these honourable members told us that they too have received representation from groups of persons from all sectors of the society who are concerned.

There is a restaurateur whom many of us are acquainted with. This person has been complaining to us ever since these measures were put in place. Indeed, on visiting the establishment once or twice, we ourselves saw that the complaints had legitimacy because business is down seriously.

Madam Speaker, it is easy for the government to dismiss these kinds of concerns, saying that they are by pessimists, or that they are by Jeremiahs, or that they are by people who only see the downside—prophets of doom, as the Minister of Tourism has so ably reminded me. Well, if all of these are prophets of doom or Jeremiahs or pessimists, then, clearly, the Minister of Tourism has his work cut out for him because the numbers of these persons are increasing. Perhaps if there were one or two people it may be reasonable and legitimate to take that position. But with the increasing number one can hardly dismiss them as being prophets of doom or being even alarmists.

I also want to assure the government that while I am saying it is their responsibility—it is their responsibility because the Constitution so outlines it as their responsibility—it is also my responsibility as the Member of the Legislative Assembly. As a conscientious citizen it is my responsibility also to bring it to the attention of the government. It is also my responsibility to be concerned that these things are happening because, of course, when the economy takes a serious dip, I am going to be affected just as much, even more so.

As a representative of the people, I have to be a buffer and a cushion between the people and the government. We who support this motion are exhibiting what Edmund Burke told the Sheriff of Nottingham in an address: We are being a buffer between the government and the people by bringing it to the attention of the government that the people need some relief.

Madam Speaker, I mentioned before (but it bears re-emphasis) that that element most affected by this is what I am most seriously concerned about, namely, the young, upwardly mobile middle class. Those people who, let us say are between the ages of 26 to about 40, who form the bulk of our workers in both the private and the public sector. Those persons, and particularly the families, who should be able to realise their aspirations are being pressured the most by these kinds of revenue measures.

Madam Speaker, I want to go on now to touch on a very sensitive area that needs addressing because we also got some complaints about this. It has to do with the area of company management and company registration fees. You will recall that some years ago we were concerned about the competition. The Cayman Islands reduced the fees to make our jurisdiction more attractive because we ran the risk of being overtaken by the British Virgin Islands (BVI) and other jurisdictions who are trying to mirror our success formula. We reduced the fees.

In the last budget the Finance Law of 1998, which was assented to on March 16th, introduced time period penalties for late payments on the annual company fees. But not only do these penalties apply for late payment of fees, but also late submission of annual returns. What is significant also is that Section 42 of the Companies Law (1998 Revision) covers resident companies, but sections 187 and 188 cover exempt companies. Now, I believe that this had not been done in the past where exempt companies came under these kinds of restrictions.

The Registrar of Companies already had the ability to impose penalties for late payment of annual fees and for late submission of annual returns at the rate of $10 per day under the sections mentioned above. However, section 218(2) of the Companies Law (1998 Revision) gave him discretion to waive these penalties. And until now, I believe he has done so.

However, section 2(j) of the Finance Law 1998, removes that discretion in his regard. We have gone full circle now from reducing the fees of a couple of years ago to make the Cayman Islands jurisdiction more attractive to company registration. We have come back to the point where we have imposed these onerous fees on the companies.

It seems to me, Madam Speaker, that we are at cross purposes, which is another indication that the government is in a position where they can offer no tangible solutions but crises management. They are putting a Band-Aid on open-heart surgery and it is not well thought out. And, it is time—if the government does not choose to heed the suggestion made by the Third Elected Member for George Town and establish a think tank—for them to do something else which is creative, intelligent and consistent with our intentions of easing the burden on the working class and finding some other means to raise these kinds of revenues.

I find it interesting to see that the government is now buddying up to the Third Elected Member for George Town, trying, as it were, to woo his expertise, swooning over him when in the years prior to his being here they had so much to say about his absence. Even in their Manifesto they could not leave him alone—listing him as one of those persons who had ideas about advancing the Constitution. I say that to say that we cannot afford to be hypocritical. I know that political advantage notwithstanding, we can no longer afford to speak out of the two sides of our mouths. If we talk the talk, we have to walk the walk.

I believe, Madam Speaker, that all honourable members in this House have a contribution to make. Each individual member has a contribution and collectively we all have contributions to make. If the government were smart, they would listen to what is being said on the backbench. Of course, one would not expect them to adopt every idea, but they would sift what was reasonable and practical, and adopt that. They would not even have to give credit to any honourable member or members if they did not wish to. But to arrive at the position where only the government makes sense and a few selected members on the backbench make sense is simply lubricious and it is a luxury that the Cayman Islands can no longer afford.

I believe there is merit in asking for a review of these measures, albeit we are on the eve of introducing a new budget, I noticed that there has been an announcement about some task force or committee to examine the increase in fees on liquor. I believe that the situation warrants that at this time, and I would hope that the findings could be such that there is a reduction (even although I am not a liquor drinker myself).

I believe that it is important to continue to attract tourists to our area, and one of the ways to do that is by having competitive prices on alcohol and cigarettes. So, I would hope, if these findings are such that there is a recommendation for a decrease in the revenues, that the government would be in a position to accept the recommendations and to implement them. It behoves all of us in here to ensure that the Cayman Islands have a continued high economic standard of living.

I believe also that the time has come for us to seriously examine this regrettable practice of imposing school fees and book rental fees. This is fraught with difficulties. Let us remember too that in the private schools there is great reliance on the government for grants and other subsidies. This practice is self-defeating if on the one hand we are expected to give grants and subsidies and on the other hand we are imposing fees—book rental and school fees—on the parents. It then becomes a fruitless exercise, a no win situation, a zero sum game if you wish, Madam Speaker.

I am against tampering with the ability of persons in the Cayman Islands to access education because that is flirting with disaster. It is the one thing that I am relying on (that is, education) to bring parity in order for young people to acquire the skills to cope in our society. If we remove that ability Madam Speaker, we might as well give up. And if we think we have problems at Northward Prison now, just give us a couple years if we continue that practice.

So, Madam Speaker, the government has a challenge before it. In all seriousness, I would implore it to accept this motion and let us knock heads together. This is not about one-upmanship. This is not about who is going to come out looking good or who is going to be made to look bad. This is about the very continued economic survival and social stability of our country. We cannot continue imposing revenue measures on the same old things year after year. The business sector is crying, the population at large is crying, we are hearing even louder cries from young upwardly mobile people who have families. They are not making progress. We ourselves, Madam Speaker, in this very Chamber are affected. We know the challenge to make ends meet. And I am not even talking about having any large surpluses.

I am calling on the government to exercise its conscience and good judgment the Minister of Education so often boasts the government has, and accept this motion. I am, also, telling them that if they come with any nonsense I am going to leave them to my colleague who moved the motion, the First Elected Member for George Town, who is quite capable of putting them in their place. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to offer some comments on Private Member's Motion No. 24/99, and to also comment on some of the observations made by the First Elected Member for George Town and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

In re-emphasising the content of the motion, the First Elected Member for George Town said earlier this morning that what the government is being invited to do, is to review the measures with a view of easing the burdens imposed upon the people of the Cayman Islands. I am quite happy to say that on this basis, the government is quite willing to see to this request and to accept the motion. Government recognises an obligation and a commitment to give attention to any revenue measures imposed that would have an unfavourable or likely adverse impact upon the community. However, there are some thoughts that I would like to offer. I am going to be picking up various points that have been made.

Around 18 September, preceding the Commonwealth Finance Ministers' Meeting, I was invited to open a workshop that was being held by the Macro-Economic and Financial Institute of Eastern and Southern Africa. The Chairman of the meeting was the Honourable Finance Minister, I think from Tanzania, but one of the ministers who spoke in Chairing introductory remarks described the Cayman Islands. [He said that] what he had seen up to that time in Grand Cayman . . . it was probably the most attractive he had seen in his life. He further went on to describe the Cayman Islands as a place between heaven and earth. He further said that this underscored an observation that he would like to make for himself and others of a country being so successful without having in place direct taxation.

Madam Speaker, when we look at the Cayman Islands today, it can be regarded as a metropolis. We have individuals that have been settled in the Cayman Islands from all over the world community. This is a home for many. When we look at the standard of living in the Cayman Islands, when we look at the quality of the infrastructure, when we take a look at the range of services that our communities are demanding of the government, all of this comes with cost.

When we look at the quality of the health care facility that was opened less than a year ago, when we look at the quality of the other health care facilities, such as district clinics that have been put in place; when we take a look at the roads, when we look at the ambience of the community and the three islands, all of these are viewed as breathtaking.

First of all, it makes a very big difference in the psyche of an individual coming to a place that appears to be attractive, that appears to be successful—a place that is successful, where stability in governmental functions exist, where there is relative contentment amongst the people in the society. Madam Speaker, all of these things come with a cost.

When we look at the method of taxation that we have in place in the Cayman Islands, we often refer to it as indirect taxation. We do recognise that it is one of the most inefficient means of raising revenue. But, when contrasted to direct taxation, which provides a certain guarantee as to revenue flows (because this normally is attached to income with a higher level of predictability), I think on a whole, we would have to consider very carefully the demerits of the indirect taxation system before opting to move to a direct taxation system.

The two members that spoke previously have not given any indication that this is the direction in which we should be heading. What has been suggested is that the existing system should be examined and streamlined to achieve a greater level of efficiency. Madam Speaker, this is the commitment of the government. This is the commitment that underlies the present reforms—the reforms that are now underway not only on the fiscal side but also in all aspects of government.

These reforms are activities where the entire membership of the Legislative Assembly can take credit because there is a commitment to preserving what is good and what we have come to accept as a way of life in the Cayman Islands. We would want for this to continue, not only for ourselves but also for our children.

Madam Speaker, when we look at recurrent expenditure, we recognise that recurrent expenditure is growing at what could be regarded as an unacceptable rate. The gap between recurrent revenue and recurrent expenditure is narrowing on an annual basis. We all recognise that we have a limited revenue base and this is the base that we have been going at whenever there is a need for us to raise additional revenue. But when we look in terms of the growth in recurrent expenditure that the two members and other members (including me) have indicated that will have to be restrained, we do recognise that recurrent revenue is not just driven by bringing personnel on board. I would say each year recurrent revenue is becoming more significant from the point of view in terms of the growth—more as a function of capital development and capital expenditure.

When we look at the new health services facilities that has been put in place, all we need to do is to see the change that has occurred in the year of operation against previous years in terms of the jump in recurrent expenditure. But no one would suggest that such facilities were not needed—they are absolutely necessary and very much needed because they underpin the entire structure of our economy and country. I always knew that health care facilities should be regarded as a premium facility in any given country and as a need. But as I found myself attending various meetings overseas and having to make presentations in selling the Cayman Islands and talking about the Cayman Islands, the question was always put especially about those persons who are middle-aged and upwards as to the quality of health care facilities. This is an age where most of the times medical attention is very much needed, and it is very good to know that a given level of tertiary services can be provided in the community.

We are now thinking in terms of putting in place new primary school facilities. In addition to the capital expenditure, this will also attract recurrent expenditure. Therefore, the statement made by the Finance Minister in terms of the attraction, we do recognise that this comes with a cost. And as the community continues to develop, the standard of living continues to increase and demands are also on the increase. It is going to mean that this can only be done at an additional cost. This additional cost will have to be borne by someone.

The First Elected Member for George Town made the statement this morning that he would like to see government find ways and means of raising revenue that will not affect the earning power of the citizens of a country.

We would all like to see that, Madam Speaker. This should be an objective or a target set. But any revenue measures that are put in place will have an impact on the earning power. It does not necessarily mean that will have to be an adverse impact or an unfavourable impact. It is going to be unfavourable because on the one hand, some will be taken but on the other hand, there will be benefits accruing as expenditure will have to take place in order to continue to keep the community attractive. More importantly, for the residents or citizens that are living in the community their peace of mind will first have to be secured before we can look in terms of, let us say the individuals that are transient. This is very important because the expectations have already been established.

Madam Speaker, going back to the indirect system versus the direct system, we know there are views being advanced at this time, for example within the European Community, that would suggest that reliance on import duties should be decreased and other alternative measures put in place. The only way to compensate our relying on our revenue from import duty in excess of 40% is through an element of direct taxation. This is the direction that I do not think we should take as an option or regard as a viable alternative. It's an area that we have to look at very, very carefully.

Now, the argument was also mooted, Madam Speaker, in terms of the inequities of the indirect system, in that it has an adverse impact on certain segments of the population. It will, because what it translates into, Madam Speaker, is consumption tax. It means that when we go to the supermarket and we pick up items, the majority of these items will have an import duty component into it. Whatever add-ons are brought about are normally passed on to the consumer and they will also be included in this as well. But this allows for certain flexibility because good choices can be made whereby the impact of such price transference can be minimised to a given extent.

When we look at the revenue measures that were introduced at the beginning of the year, we find that it was anticipated that $11.8 million would be collected. Out of this $11.8 million, we find that the direct impact, let us say on the financial services side by way of company fees, would have been in the region of approximately $5.3 million. So, if we regard that impacting upon the financial industry with a given external component, you would not have price transference within the local community. The differential to be absorbed would be approximately $6.5 million.

When we take this and we spread it over the estimated population base at the end of 1998 of $38,400, it works out to approximately $170 per person. We know that that in itself, is not a good indication to say that this would have been the direct effect. I am talking about averages here, but what I am showing is in terms of the overall impact. For example, what will be the cause of a decline within certain sectors or where you have a lower rate of growth in certain sectors of the community, it may not necessarily be attributable to revenue measures that have been introduced by the government. There are other variables that are at play.

Madam Speaker, the First Elected Member for George Town suggested that in terms of looking at sources of, let's say future revenue (and I may not be quoting him correctly in this regard but I am sure he will understand the point that I am making) one area that we should be looking at should be the financial services sector. I would suggest that we should not look to this sector at this time given the other dynamics that are taking place within the international forum that could impact on us, given the fact that what we are trying to achieve in order to keep our financial sector operating, let us say on an acceptable basis, where they find doing business in Cayman attractive is cost minimisation.

We do not have direct taxation in the Cayman Islands. But when we think in terms of doing business in the Cayman Islands, we know that it is a high cost jurisdiction. We know that there is a high component in terms of salaries and wages—all of these things have to be factored into place. Yet, we know that although these costs are high, it is more attractive for international financial activities to be carried out in the Cayman Islands than elsewhere. Where labour can be secured at a cheaper rate, there are onerous governmental fees and taxes that discourage outside investors from coming into such communities. So, this balance will have to be maintained.

Within the local community, we have been talking about the financial reforms, but we have to look in terms of the implications of what this means. Practically every sector of service, or every area in which government provides a service, is heavily subsidised. We have to look at those subsidies very, very carefully. A very good indication of that is refuse collection. If this is established to be $350 per annum per household, and the government collects $150, it means that there is a subsidy of $250.

Because we have an indirect taxation system in place and this is not linked to income, when we add garbage fees, motor cars annual licensing fees, and when we take the other fees that have been put in place by the government, a person at the lower end of the income scale will be absorbing a disproportionate amount of those fees in comparison to someone at the top of the income scale. So, when we look at it like that, Madam Speaker, it creates certain disadvantages. But, at the end of the day, what it allows the individual to do really is to shape to a given extent, his or her consumption of those goods and services within the community.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town mentioned that there are many people within our community who are working two or three jobs to make ends meet. It is quite true that there are quite a lot of people who find themselves in difficult situations where they are very much financially constrained. That may not necessarily be as a result of onerous fees that are put on by the government directly and indirectly passed on, let's say through suppliers. Often times when we look in terms of the habits of such persons, they will have to be examined very carefully.

For example, when we take the average expenditure, quite a number of persons in our community are into what is called a dis-saving mode, in that they are spending much more than they earn. A number of us have our credit cards up to the limit. When we look in terms of our consumption, when we look in terms of expenditure, often times where a mortgage of for example $100,000 would afford acceptable accommodation, we do find ourselves making choices that create greater strains, whereby we are buying mortgages for $150,000 or $250,000—mortgages that are difficult to afford. This creates a strain.

We know the social implications because a part from ends not being able to meet, we have parents out of their homes working two to three jobs as mentioned, and we have the television being the babysitter. We also have other forces at work, which we call the adverse social impacts that such behaviour brings along.

What we need to do is to try and encourage good habits within the citizenry of our community. What is very important is that we are in a God fearing community. And, the best of us will stray a bit in our spending from time to time, but I think we are quite willing to bring ourselves in line.

Madam Speaker, there are areas inside the revenue measures, and when we sit down and look at them in terms of the bulk water distributors, the licensing fees and so on, the government recognises that it is very important that these areas be looked at. The government would not want undue and harsh burdens to be imposed upon the community and the government is fully committed to examining these revenue measures particularly at this time when we are into the throes of the budget. One of the areas that the government is fully committed to—

HOUR OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member before you move on to another subject, we have now reached the hour of 4.30 p.m. Are you going to be concluding your debate shortly, or will you continue tomorrow?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Shortly, Madam Speaker.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

The Deputy Speaker: I will entertain a motion to suspend the relevant Standing Orders.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I so move.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that the [relevant] Standing Orders be suspended to go on beyond the hour of 4.30 p.m. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it. Please continue.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, continuing with my thoughts on recurrent expenditure. . . The government recognises that there is a need for recurrent expenditure to be contained. But a decision cannot be made for the year 2000 Budget to reduce recurrent expenditure by 5% or 10%. The exercise that is underway is where the budget is being developed on an output basis. This, hopefully within the next two years, will allow for all services within government to be costed.

When the services are costed, a determination will be made as to, let us say the utility services, what extent the community is benefiting by the provision of those services. Once a determination is made that those services will have to continue to be provided and can be provided more efficiently by the government, at that point in time an overall or aggregate costing will have to be developed.

When aggregate costing is developed, it will allow for the government to ascertain areas in which services are being provided at significant subsidised cost. The government of the day and members of the Legislative Assembly will be called upon at that point in time to take a conscious decision as to whether it is the will of the government to continue (once the figures become known) subsidising certain services to the tune of 50% - 75% or in what ways will those subsidies be compensated for. What areas will be compensating for those subsidies that will have to be provided, or that will be allowed?

For example, we know the field of education is one area that for an indefinite period into the future will have to be subsidised to the extent that it is known the unit cost of, let us say educating a child, and to the extent of what revenue streams exist by way of the minimal charges that are in place. Then a conscious decision will have to be made: Is this an area in which the government is willing to continue to provide a subsidy?

When we take the area of refuse collection, when we take the other areas, for example on the medical side, certain decisions will have to be made. It is quite likely that the government will take a view that those areas of subsidy should be reduced or varied. When that is done, Madam Speaker, it means that the government can sit down and engage in constructive dialogue with members of the Legislative Assembly and with members of the community to demonstrate, for example, what is the cost of providing governance within the country.

Now, at that point in time is where the think tank committee will be able to make its greatest contribution and will have its greatest relevance in terms of sitting down and working with figures on a basis that is very clear and comprehensive. First of all, alternatives can be examined as to whether there are other ways in terms of providing these services.

We are going through a period now, Madam Speaker . . . and I believe as one honourable member said, that this is a house of politics. And, we do understand that politicians will have a go at each other—the government will be going at the backbenchers and the backbenchers will be going at the government—but there is a singular commitment in preserving the structure of our society. And, each side is saying, ‘Look, we do realise that all of these things are necessary for our community’ but they will always have their differences in how these things should be done and also their views in terms of who can provide a better service.

Madam Speaker, the private sector will have to be very careful when it attempts to impart information on the Cayman Islands. I do look very carefully at this “Cayman Update” provided by Deloitte & Touche. It is very good when an accounting firm is providing information that is useful within the local community and within the international community. When we read in terms of . . . and I will just quote if you will permit me do to do so. “Among other things, the United Kingdom Government is encouraging overseas territories to adopt good government measures while conducting day to day business.”

This underscores the principles on which the Cayman Islands operates as a country. Wherever the government may fall short in a given area, we have members of the backbench who will make suggestions, but collectively this is done and we have evidence of this throughout the community. We are living in a community that is well managed.

Another quote I would like to make is where the statement is made, “The dilemma faced by the United Kingdom Government is that they are ultimately responsible for debt but receive no compensation from the overseas territories for this risk” This is where the government took a decision some time ago that a certain benchmark should be developed, in that no more than 10% of recurrent revenue should be used to fund borrowings.

What is quite interesting is that at the recent Commonwealth Finance Ministers’ Meeting, it was not surprising when we heard some of the statements made and also in papers shared that suggested that some countries are spending as much as 40 cents out of every dollar collected for debt service. When we are in the region of less than 7% of recurrent revenue to service indebtedness that is quite an accomplishment.

Madam Speaker, some time ago when the Cayman Islands used to benefit from concessionary funding from Caribbean Development Bank, honourable members of this House would be very much surprised to know which of the directors or governors of the bank was advocating that the Cayman Islands should not benefit from concessionary financing. This is why we have to be paying today at the hard rate because it was felt that given our standard of living we should not benefit from concessionary financing. That is on record at Caribbean Development Bank today. I was very much surprised by it but God has been with us and with all of the difficulties that we have encountered, we will continue to enjoy our success.

Madam Speaker, we know that there are other means by which we could secure long-term financing that are less burdensome. We know that most of our borrowings at this time are short term. For example, if there is nothing at all added other than the $26.5 million that has been approved by this honourable House for the year 1999, by the year 2012, there would only be $1 million outstanding. Madam Speaker, collectively that shows good judgment.

We know that we cannot say that loans will not be raised between now and then. But the tools by which we manage our indebtedness and the means by which we secure financing can be refined during the intervening period and we will work at this as a part of the financial reform initiative.

In my contribution to the Government Minute (and this was said previously) the government will emerge a policy that, first of all, once the expenditure levels have been established (and that is for recurrent and statutory) and also looking in terms of what the contribution will be to the capital development fund, that the revenue be allocated on an annual basis. First of all, a certain percentage to cover recurrent and statutory expenditure, a certain percentage to build up our general reserves, a recurrent and statutory that will cover the contribution into the Government Pension Scheme at this point in time.

At the end of September, the balance in that fund was $47 million, and by the end of the year it will be in excess of $50 million. When we take that and compare it to the past service debt cost, Madam Speaker, that is more than one-third of the funding required to cover the past service liabilities. So, progress is being made. What we have to do is to continue to refine the tools.

When we are looking at containing recurrent expenditure, we have to look very carefully at the capital projects because at the end of the day if a facility is developed, it will have to be staffed and maintained. All of these things will have to be looked at because we cannot put up these buildings and then close them.

In addition, we know that we have our community and I am talking about the three islands, where we have settlements that are occurring in various sectors. This will attract infrastructural development cost—school facilities will have to be put up, roads will have to be put in. Other amenities will have to be put in place such as water and sewage. All of these things attract a cost.

Madam Speaker, as we continue to develop as a country and as we continue to maintain the cosmopolitan look, this is going to come at a cost. In addition to that, employment opportunities . . . to say to the international community that the Cayman Islands is a safe place in which inward investment should occur, what we are saying to the international community is put confidence in the Cayman Islands—the Cayman Islands is a safe place that will guarantee a timely and acceptable rate of return.

When those individuals come amongst us, that carries with it a certain cost because it means that we will have to expand the carrying capacity of our infrastructure. We will have to expand our school facilities and medical facilities because these are individuals that are coming in to live amongst us. At the same time, Madam

Speaker, it is going to cost more because we are talking about having to secure employment opportunities.

So, at the end of the day, if we were to do an analysis in terms of how income is apportioned other than for the disparity that comes about because of the type of tax system that we have in place, I would say that the disparities can be regarded as minimal in comparison to the alternative system—a direct taxation system or a regime that functions on that basis. That is one of the quickest way to run into what you call runaway government when there is a certainty in terms of governmental revenue and flow of funds. I am certainly glad and heartened that there is no one here advocating that principle.

Madam Speaker, we will have to continue to hone the tools that we are using. We will have to continue to effect refinements. We have to consider very carefully in terms of the implications of capital projects in terms of looking at the economic rate of return that is workable in the private sector. But it is not in all instances a necessary indicator in government. We can talk about the cost benefit analysis, and I think that would be more relevant because how do you place a value in terms of the output from education and medical services? There are certain services, which would not be cost effective, as such, for the private sector to engage in. At the same time, government will have try and minimise monopolies.

So, when we look overall, there is a delicate balancing act that will have to be maintained. It is on this basis that I am very glad that the government is willing to sit . . . and (as the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town said in his concluding remarks) knock heads together. Implicit in this is, let us bring our collective judgment and will together in order to chart the course for the future. He further went on to say that this was no one-upmanship principle that was being advocated.

So, Madam Speaker, on this basis, I think collectively when we look in terms of the government's financial position, it is quite heartening to see the position at the end of the August. We are hoping that we will wind-up the year with a surplus. As was pointed out during the meeting of Finance Committee, there is an area which is now factored into the surplus balance and this allows for a margin of uncertainty that we will have work on. The government is committed to working on that because that factor will have to be taken out. That is, overseas medical fees.

We know that quite a substantial balance has been built up. We know that there are quite a number of persons there who do not have the ability to pay and that could compromise a significant part of that value, which is into the brought-forward surplus balance. We are attempting to rectify this by going through and doing an analysis to take that out. But, Madam Speaker, where a person has the ability to pay . . .

I am certainly encouraged by the motion that has been put by the Honourable Minister for Health to try and offer the incentive as an inducement for people to come in and settle their bills. When we take what is owing on the overseas medical bills plus what is owed on the local bills, it is quite substantial. And, in addition to that, what becomes distressing at times is that the government is providing that service at a significantly subsidised cost. So, this is almost adding insult to injury when both factors are combined—non-payment, plus the fact that it is heavily subsidised.

It is good that we have medical health facilities as a part of our community, and it is good that those services are available within our community. But every member of the community that goes to the hospital for medical treatment should recognise that there is a cost incurred by the government in making those services and facilities available. That in itself should suggest or prey upon their conscience that payment is valid and due.

So, Madam Speaker, I will re-emphasise this once more: The government accepts the motion and will be quite willing to knock heads together with members of the Legislative Assembly to see if the abnormalities that are there can be rectified and as we progress through the budget for the year 2000, obvious disparities that will come to light will be addressed. We will never achieve the ideal system, but I do believe that with refinements that are underway and which are being contemplated at this time, overall we will continue to go from success to success.

There won't be onerous burdens placed upon any given segment of the community that can be regarded as attributable to, let's say governmental costs by way of direct fees that are being imposed and also in terms of what is being transferable. At the end of the day, diversification of the economy . . . first of all, even in that area when we get to look at it given the structure for economy in terms of the emergence of revenue this may not be in the short term. Government may probably have to offer subsidies in certain areas but what is important is that, first of all, as our population continues to grow and since we have negligible unemployment rate, we have to venture into those areas.

Diversification is important, Madam Speaker, for securing employment opportunities because at the end of the day, the welfare of the citizens and the wellbeing of the citizens are very important factors.

One of the things that will have to be borne in mind under the system, and this is a drawback, is that safety nets that are normally put in place, let us say where governmental revenue becomes predictable on a direct taxation basis, will have to be looked at very carefully. Because all of these safety nets that should normally be in place would not normally be in place or, let us say, to a reduce extent under the present system. But on a whole refinement to our system, we can make it work for an indefinite period into the future.

Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 145

No. 145: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works which entity is paying for the second phase of the Harquail bypass.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The second phase of the Harquail Bypass is being constructed from funds approved in the 1999 Capital Budget. Two of the major property owners along the phase II alignment have agreed to make land and monetary contributions toward the construction of the road. An agreement to complete these transactions has been drafted by the Legal Department and is currently under review.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Deputy Speaker: Supplementaries, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House the identities of these two landowners and also the extent of the contributions both in land and in monetary amounts?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The two property owners are Cayman Shores and Limestone Investments. Each will be contributing to land on which the road is being built, as well as assisting with the construction cost. Cayman Shores will also be carrying out construction of the concrete curve, gutter and median as well as landscaping the median.

Their financial contribution in addition to these works is in the region of C1$2 million. Limestone Investment financial contribution is in the region of C1$400,000. Public Works estimated cost for the project, excluding additional works being carried out by Cayman Shores, is approximately $2.8 million.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Minister state if either or both of the two entities named in his answer have planning permission at this point in time for any development on the two parcels of property?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, Limestone Investments, we believe has planning approval. Cayman Shores, we do not believe has any planning approval as yet for their particular project.

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, can the Honourable Minister tell the House whether before accepting the contributions from this entity, particularly the latter one whose plans have not been approved yet, if any consideration was given to the fact that the government may have compromised its position with regard to the approval of planning permission by the Planning Department?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I do not believe that the government has compromised itself by receiving from Cayman Shores the length of that road that passes through the Cayman Shores property, nor the work that they wish to do on it. In essence, I believe that whenever they get their approval, that's a separate item altogether.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. In the substantive answer, the Minister stated that an agreement to complete these transactions has been drafted by the Legal Department and is currently under review. Can the Minister state if in these agreements, there are any concessions or commitments, or anything of that nature on the part of government in return for the contributions and/or the works being offered by these entities?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, there are no commitments in this particular piece of drafted document that would tie the government to any further activity. There may be some concessions, in that we have agreed that they should enter onto the road at certain intervals. But apart from that, I don't think there is any other kind of commitment than that sort of entrance on to Harquail Bypass, something that we are doing for other landowners in the area.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the case of Cayman Shores, can the Minister state if there are existing applications for planning permission for any type of development on that property at this point in time?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am unsure about any application being before Planning. Quite frankly and honestly, I am not responsible for planning so they don't report to me and there could be an application or there may not be one there. I am uncertain.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just for purposes of clarity then, can the Minister state if what I am about to put together is correct. I understand from the various answers given to the supplementary questions that because these two entities own property through which the Bypass is crossing, in order to enhance their property they are quite prepared to assist with the construction of the Bypass and also to allow access from the Bypass itself at certain intervals on to their property with no strings attached, nothing more, end of story. Is that the clear understanding of the proposed arrangements?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: That is the proposal as I understand it.

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House what factors prompted the government to enter into this kind of agreement in road construction since it is rather unusual for the government to take this kind of partnership in road construction?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I could give a short answer and say Cayman Islands dollars but that would be inappropriate. What brought the government to this decision is that we know that as you pass through private property with a road, if we are not successful in getting the developer to agree to donate the road, government will have to compensate for it.

In addition to the cost of the road, you will also have to pay compensation to landowners. It is the one reason why we have put together a committee which has been assisting a sub-committee of the Business Consultative Committee to assist us in gaining support from landowners through which the Harquail Bypass as planned will pass, in order to get those landowners to donate the land so that the government does not have to pay compensation for it, and thus lesson the burden on the government of constructing these roads in terms of dollars and cents.

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, it is a pity that the Honourable Minister did not say Cayman Dollars and leave it at that because I was going to ask then if that was an admission that the government was broke.

Anyway, my question now is: Is this going to be the model for the construction of such roads in the future? that is, this kind of partnership.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I think the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town knows well within his soul that the government is not broke, so I won't bother to speak anymore about that one. But the partnership in terms of construction of roads, yes, wherever we can possibly gain the assistance of the landowner to donate the land to the government, we will do so.

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, this will be the last supplementary on this question.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Is the Minister in a position to tell the House whether this particular section of road was part and parcel of the road corridors which the Master Ground Transportation Plan (MGTP) sought to reserve, which was jettisoned and as a result of that jettisoning then the prohibitive cost came into play?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I believe that . . . excuse my attempt to laugh at some of this but as we look at the possible second corridor from George Town going to West Bay, there are not too many options that we have. So, whatever the layout of the master ground transportation was years ago, it is very possible that this is very close to it. I cannot say with conviction because I don't have it in front of me that this is exactly the same. I think that is what the member wants me to say and I am unable to say that this morning.

The Deputy Speaker: Move on to Question 146 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town and addressed to the Honourable Minister responsible for Health. The First Elected Member for George Town.

No. 146: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to state if there is presently a full-time gynaecologist/obstetrician at the Faith Hospital in Cayman Brac.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: A full-time locum Obstetrician/Gynaecologist commenced duties at the Faith Hospital in Cayman Brac.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Simply for purposes of clarity, could the Minister explain exactly what is meant by a full-time locum?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: They are employed on a full-time basis but not on a permanent [basis]. It is someone until we can recruit through the process and that post has now been advertised. So it would be on a temporary basis until someone takes up the full-time post.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So, what the Minister is referring to is a full-time, part-time employee?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The person is there full time and eventually if that person feels that they would like to apply for this post, they would have the opportunity to do so, but they would be performing a full-time job.

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, just to say that the confusion might be in the answer in that it states . . . and I will ask the Honourable Minister if he would agree on this at the end. It states "full-time locum." I believe locum by definition means just for a period of time. So, I think it's wrong to say a full-time locum, perhaps, just a locum would have been a more appropriate answer. Would the Minister not agree that this is the correct position?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, my understanding is that full-time refers to a full-time job meaning that he would have done whatever the previous post-holder did. Locum refers to the period of time that he will be there—not for a permanent period of time. The full-time is referring to his job and responsibilities. Does that make sense?

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So, simply for purposes of clarity, what the Minister is saying is that there is a person working in the post now and that person or another person will remain in the post until it is filled on a permanent basis.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The Honourable Member is correct.

The Deputy Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to Question 147 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 147

No. 147: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to state whether any administrative differences exist between the Head of Public Health Services and his department staff.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I gather from copies of correspondence from a senior Public Health Nurse to the Medical Officer of Health (who is the Head of the Public Health Services) and his reply to her, that differences of opinion exist on the direction and management of Public Health.

I am pleased to say that discussions are taking place involving the Medical Officer of Health, the senior Public Health Nurse, the Director of Health Services, the Chief Medical Officer and the Chief Nursing Officer and various areas of concern are being addressed.

I have found that in situations such as this, there is right and wrong on both sides. However, I am confident that the differences will be resolved in the appropriate manner by the parties concerned through the discussions, which I mentioned earlier.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Deputy Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I am not going to prejudice these discussions which according to the Honourable Minister are ongoing at this time, but I am going to ask the Minister for an undertaking that he use his good offices to see that this situation is resolved amicably in the best interest of public health as I am of the information that it has to do with the philosophy and some of the staff are concerned that enough aggressive efforts are not taken in some public health education awareness campaigns.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, I give that full commitment. And just to indicate to the honourable House, some of the desired outputs that we are looking for is one provision that is relevant and easy to understand, and targeted information to the public on the prevention of illness and promotion of good health as mentioned by my colleague, the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town, out-patient treatment of routine medical conditions by general practitioners at all district health centres and provision of physical assessment and immunisation to all school-age children and these are what we feel that we need to have as outputs.

The Deputy Speaker: There are no further supplementaries, we will move to Question 148 standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

No. 148: Miss Heather D. Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation if Government would give consideration to establishing an organ donor programme.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Transplants are now used in many situations. In order of decreasing frequency and increasing complexity, the most common ones are cornea, kidney, heart, lung, and liver. Most others are still in the development stage.

Of those patients referred through the government service, I am advised that over the last year, three people (one each for cornea, liver, heart) have undergone transplant surgery in Miami. Currently, there are two patients waiting to be called to the Jackson Memorial Hospital for renal transplants.

In April, three patients received corneal grafts in the Cayman Islands Hospital using material supplied through the Florida Lions Eye Bank. As soon as a further supply of grafts are received, the remaining eight patients on the waiting list will undergo surgery in Cayman. Currently, two new patients per year are added to the list for corneal grafting.

1) What are the ethical and legal issues to be addressed in harvesting organs for transplant? Examples include the acceptability of donating organs in the Cayman culture and would it be acceptable to turn off a ventilator in a brain-dead patient and then remove organs from the loved one for transplanting.

2) What is the amount of expertise and support services required in order to perform the transplant surgery?

The question asked by the Honourable Member is a good one, but it raises a number of complex issues of an ethical, legal, financial, and technical nature, which would have to be addressed before an Organ Donor Programme could be established. Constraints on our time mean that we cannot address these issues at present, but I am confident that in the years ahead, this will happen and it may be that an Organ Donor Programme is established.

Just for information of the House, I have had the legal drafting people look at this and my understanding is that we would need to provide legislation for this to take place. I have requested that certain legislation now be looked at.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Deputy Speaker: If there are no supplementaries, we will move to Question 149 standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and addressed to the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

No. 149: Miss Heather D. Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to provide an update on the Juvenile Secure, Remand and Rehabilitation facility.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: This is once again a timely question. As most members will recall, a short time ago we did a presentation to the House. The design stage of this project has now been completed and an application for planning approval has recently been made. We are beginning to look at procurement of specialised building materials, equipment and furniture. A team of specialist consultants from the United Kingdom has been appointed with the approval of the Central Tenders Committee.

This team came to Cayman on 17 June to conduct a two-day workshop to aid the Design Team in producing the final drawings. This was accomplished by inviting input from representatives from all other departments and agencies that will be involved in the operation of the programmes to be implemented within this facility. The input from all these stakeholders has been incorporated, as far as possible, into the final drawings.

A Steering Committee, consisting of the Permanent Secretary of Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, the Director of Social Services and representatives from the Fire, Education, Sports, Environmental Health and Planning Departments, Department of Substance Abuse Services, Government Information Services and Computer Services as well as the architect and project officer has been formed. This Steering Committee has been meeting every two weeks since May 1999.

A Project Management Team consisting of the Public Works Department Architect, Senior Superintendent for Building Construction and the Project Officer has been appointed to manage the project.

I am particularly pleased that the project has reached this point in its development, as it is a facility that is sorely needed. The project will provide rehabilitation programmes for juvenile substance abusers as well as provide secure accommodation for juveniles needing such care. This facility is the final component of a continuum of care, which will be available to juveniles who require such a service in our society.

One wing of this facility will be dedicated to those young persons who are abusing drugs and who require non-medical detoxification. This wing will hold ten juveniles. The second wing, which will hold ten youth, will be the Remand wing. This wing will cater to young people accused of an offence or offences and who will be at risk if they remain in the community, or who will pose a risk either to witnesses or possibly interfere in Police investigation. The third wing of the facility will be the Secure Wing where juveniles may be directed, depending upon the given level of seriousness of their offence. In this wing there will be accommodation for six boys and six girls, with the configuration of the structure being sufficiently flexible to cope with a variation in these numbers.

The Secure wing will cater to three different categories of youth as follows:

- 1) Youth who are remanded and awaiting trial or sentencing and for whom bail is inappropriate;
- 2) Youth convicted of an offence by the Court and are then serving a sentence;
- 3) Youth whose behaviour is such that they put themselves or other people at risk or cannot be treated sufficiently in an open setting.

In any of these three circumstances, the youth will be attending this facility only by way of a Court Order.

Madam Speaker, just for the information for this House, there was an impassionate letter in the paper this morning by a parent saying that it is timely that we try to provide this for her troubled youth at this time, those that may need it. There are not a lot but I know how we all feel about this and we have cut off that funnel to Northward Prison.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Deputy Speaker: Supplementaries, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Could the Honourable Minister say where these youth are now being kept?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: They are now being kept at the West Bay lock-up.

The Deputy Speaker: If there are no further supplementary, we will move to deferred Question 126 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

(Deferred 22 September)

No. 126: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works has the Public Works Department developed any policy regarding negotiating of reduced prices for bulk purchases.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In accordance with Financial and Stores regulations, tenders must be invited and submitted to the Departmental Tenders Committee for the procurement of goods and services between $10,000 to $100,000. For goods and services in excess of $100,000, the tenders are submitted to the Central Tenders Committee. By procuring goods and services in this manner, the lowest is normally accepted to provide the goods or services.

Public Works will only negotiate for reduced prices in the case of sole suppliers of a particular good or service. In this case, permission is normally sought from the relevant Tenders Committee to negotiate with the sole supplier.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Deputy Speaker: Supplementaries, the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Understanding the answer that the Minister has just read, and thinking, perhaps, of the circumstances which might surround the supply of aggregate or fill, which at no one point in time might exceed $100,000 but on an on-going basis when all of those amounts are added up will exceed $100,000, can the Minister explain if there is any different treatment with the process in such instances?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, if I understand correctly the question from the First Elected Member from George Town, I would only say that over a period of time small amounts add up to over $100,000. I think that is basically his question as regards to aggregate.

My understanding is that Public Works does talk to suppliers of aggregate sometimes not knowing what the total quantum will be for the year but in terms of 1999, certainly we know about Harquail construction, the roundabout and the Crewe Road Bypass construction.

So, what they have done in this particular case is to talk to individual suppliers of this material trying to get the best possible price they can.

The Deputy Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, that concludes Question Time. We will move to Other Business, Private Member's Motion No. 24/99, continuation of the debate thereon.

Does any other Member wish to speak on Private Member's Motion No. 24/99? The floor is open for debate. (Pause)

Does the mover of the motion wish to exercise his right of reply?

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTION

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 24/99

REVIEW OF THE MEASURES IMPOSED UNDER THE FINANCE LAW 1998

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I must say that while the only response forthcoming from the government was from the Honourable Third Official Member, I was pleased to hear that the government was prepared to support the motion.

Of course, I understood from what the Honourable Third Official Member said that while there was support from the government bench for the motion, it was some type of qualified support bearing in mind my explanation yesterday morning of what the motion was calling for. I will explain that, Madam Speaker, and I will explain why I am explaining it.

When the Honourable Third Official Member spoke on behalf of government, he said, "In re-emphasising the content of the motion, the First Elected Member for George Town said earlier this morning that what the government is being invited to do, is to review the measures with a view of easing the burdens imposed upon the people of the Cayman Islands. I am quite happy to say that on this basis, the government is quite willing to see to this request and to accept the motion. Government recognises an obligation and a commitment to give attention to any revenue measures imposed that would have an unfavourable or likely adverse impact upon the community."

So, Madam Speaker, when I mentioned qualified support, I think perhaps originally it may have been taken in the light that we were seeking for them to withdraw the so-called tax package, and perhaps the motion was cleared up. So, basically what the government has accepted is the fact that they are going to review these measures. My understanding is to see what possibility there is with regard to any changes in any of the fees that have been put into these tax measures via the Public Finance Law, 1998.

I was hoping that other members of the government may have found it timely to speak to the motion. I was hoping that we would get some type of commitment otherwise to the tune of how long they might take to have a look at this and what might be their course of action by way of informing us. And, not having heard that, I simply raised that in winding-up so that the government will understand that while we appreciate the fact that they are in support of the motion, we certainly would not like for this to be another motion that is simply left hanging and nothing is done.

When I say nothing is done, I mean without putting too great an expectation on the table before any more talk has come about regarding the motion. I think, it is only fair to expect that there would be some timeline involved and the commitment would seem to be a real one. I am not chastising the government, I am just stating an opinion.

What I would like to see (and I think in discussions with my colleagues they all agree) is a firm commitment from the government to establish a course of action to see this thing through to the end. I don't know how they are going to do that. At this point in time, I do not want for us to simply vote on the motion—everyone say yes, we did the right thing but nothing happens. You know, it's funny how on many of these motions . . . three to four years later, we remind each other about them and that's all we do. This I hope is not what happens with this one because the government has to understand that having accepted, the onus now rests (in the words of the Minister of Education) squarely on their shoulders.

So, I hope we do have some results.

Madam Speaker, when we talked about this motion and, perhaps the fact that the government has accepted it one might take the view that there is no need to try and convince anybody anymore because they have already said so. But I think there are a few points that are valid and that need to be brought to the forefront in looking at revenue measures to try and balance the situation so that we have a clear understanding of where we are going and what we really want to achieve.

I want to just draw an example to show all of us the kinds of problems that not only the government faces but that the entire country faces. It is something that we have to look at. Every one of us who are involved whether directly or indirectly have to have a very serious look because I think that all of us need to re-think the whole scene because we are heading on a path that none of us is going to get out of.

I am going to just draw the example quickly, Madam Speaker, to show you. It is so funny how on occasion information can come to people like me anonymously with the best of intentions, because this was left at my office, neatly folded in a brown craft envelope and I have no idea from whence it came. But there is nothing wrong with it. Whoever that person was, he was listening, or reading, or watching something and it suddenly dawned on that person (to my mind what happened) that he should make sure that I understood what was going on.

We talked in here recently about the Savannah Primary School extension, where we wanted to try and speed it up to make ensure that it gets done. And, then we had a little bit of altercation, which did not last too long, but there was this question about the price and all like that. I want to throw light on something: The facts are—and if I am remembering correctly, yes, the last extension to the Savannah Primary School was done in 1997, two years ago, Madam Speaker—the original contract sum was $736,092.55. The variations to the contract and the additional work that was consequential to the actual classroom construction came up to a total of $75,319.34.

The total final cost of that extension in 1997 was $811,411.89. The details also tell us the exact square footage—the classrooms and toilets were 4,084 square feet. The covered walkways were 1,304 and the mechanical room was 307 square feet giving a total of 5,695 square feet.

When you take that entire batch of information for the total cost compared to the total square footage, the turnkey cost for that extension was $142.48 per square foot. Madam Speaker, two years later, the Minister for Education reports to us that the preliminary costings for a similar extension is $1.318 million and the square footage that they need to build is 4,635 square feet.

First of all, the way I understand this thing is that these four rooms are going to be an exact replica of what was done in 1997. Even I (who don't know too much about it) understand right away that all that has to be done when it comes to preliminary drawings is a new site plan because the location is going to be different on the piece of property. If the building is a replica (your plumbing and your electrical and the other plans), you simply pull them from the shelves—that's my understanding.

But, Madam Speaker, when we take the information the Minister has given to us, which is the projected cost and how many square feet, that comes out to $284.36 per square foot compared to $142.48 starting from scratch in 1997. My understanding is that it is not starting from scratch because you already have plans and such like. But let us even forget about that—let us say that one is starting from scratch: It is exactly twice the cost in two years. Where are we going?

The Deputy Speaker: Would this be a convenient time to take the morning break or—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker, because this one is a shocker. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.15 AM

PROCEEDING RESUMED AT 11.40 PM

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member of George Town, continuing his winding-up.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. When we took the short break, I was simply using this little example to show where in the space of exactly two years the construction cost of classrooms doubled. While this may seem to be a separate issue, I take the opportunity in this debate to bring this example up because it certainly indicates to us what we are up against.

I want to say that I cannot stand here today and explain the reasons why this is the case because I don't know why. I would sure like to know, but I have no idea why. Certainly, somebody has to find out the answers to this. The relation to what I just said with what is happening is because this is the position that government finds itself in with its capital projects. That is exactly why the government has to battle forever and to find out where the revenue is coming from.

Now, they can come at me in whatever fashion they wish to, but I cannot believe that a very small sector of this society is going to hold this country to ransom like that. It is not acceptable. I am not going to accept it. I don't have any authority to do anything directly about it, but I am going to lay notice from here on in—every dollar that this country is going to spend is going to be scrutinised as tediously as possible until we find out what is wrong and be in a position to correct it because something has to be wrong. As big as I am I don't double my weight in two years.

So, Madam Speaker, the relevance, as far as I can determine, is that the government finds itself in a position where on the one hand expenditure . . . And, to be fair to the debate, the Honourable Third Official Member made reference to the expenditure. The expenditure is (for lack of better term) out of hand. It has to be with examples such as these.

The problem with that as I have tried to say before—and I am just going to speak it as bluntly as I can without being rude—if you have 60% of your working population earning the lowest income within the population, and you find that because of your system you have to extract the majority of the money to keep the country running from that 60%, you are not only putting them at a disadvantage but you are putting the country at risk. The way I understand it and the way I have witnessed it in my life is that I too have spent some time elsewhere and I watch things happen.

The way I understand it, Madam Speaker, if a few find themselves in a position to hold on to the vast majority of the wealth in any country, the masses are going to start to grumble. It is going to lead to other things and soon that great wealth that you have will be worth nothing because your country will be worth nothing. What is it that makes us not able to understand that? It doesn't look like we will not stop doing it. What do we do to change the minds of our people to make them understand that?

I don't know what else to say. It is frightening. But do you know what? Pray to God that we don't retain our usual style and wait until something big and drastic happens before we try to do anything about it because then it will simply be too late.

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Third Official replying on government's behalf made mention—and I will give a short quote with your permission from the Han- sard—about the system of taxation. There was nothing wrong with what was said. I simply wish to emphasise a point regarding that. The Honourable Third Official Member said, and I quote, “When we look at the method of taxation that we have in place in the Cayman Islands, we often refer to it as indirect taxation. We do recognise that this is one of the most inefficient means of raising revenue, but when contrasted to direct taxation, which provides a certain guarantee as to revenue flows because this normally is attached to income with a higher level of predictability, I think on a whole we would have to consider very carefully the demerits of the indirect taxation system before opting to move to a direct taxation system.”

The Honourable Third Official Member also went on to say (and I cannot remember verbatim but words to the effect) that he was grateful that no one in here was trying to say that we should change our system from indirect taxation to direct taxation. I want to make it very clear that examples I have used to prove the difficulties which arise because of our system were not used to make any attempt to suggest that the system itself is one that needs to be changed and it would be improved if we changed it. That was not what I was saying. I was only saying that we have to recognise its disadvantages and work around it in such a way that we don't fall into that trap of allowing the disadvantages to occur continually—that's the point that I wish to make.

You see, Madam Speaker, it is for that reason we have been trying to say widen the revenue base. I also wish to make quick mention of a theory that has been put forward and it was referred to by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and, also, by the Third Official Member about this think-tank—an idea that the Third Elected Member from George Town has been a strong proponent of. I just want to say that my idea of that think-tank is not creating a body that necessarily sits and deliberates on a bunch of information provided to it. Perhaps, on occasion that too, but I think we need to be looking at people who are placed in certain positions with the right amount of exposure, knowledge, and expertise and start the ball rolling from scratch, from the thinking process even, without a bunch of information at hand.

All I am saying is that we have to make a combination of that for that think-tank to really be effective. We don't have to have a jump start at all times with a lot of stuff because many ideas that work right are ideas that were dreams once. They were not always loaded with information. That is what you get to afterwards, but you have to create the idea, you have to have the vision (for want of a better word). That is how I see that working, also. That is just a view I wish to put forward.

Madam Speaker, there is also a point that I wish to make, but because of the way we find ourselves presently in the debate I am not going to spend a very long time because I don't think that I have to prove anything to get the government's support. But I still believe that we need to make mention of it.

If we look at the annual averages of our consumer price index historically (and I am going to quote a few figures from the 1997 Cayman Islands Compendium of Statistics), if we look from 1989 to 1991, we find that the consumer price index during those three years went up 6% in 1989, 7.7% in 1990, 8% in 1991. We will notice that there were noticeable tax measures put in place in 1990 and 1991.

I have not had a chance to get the information all put together for the years 1979 to 1981 but we see another sudden trend in 1979 jumping to 10.3%, in 1980 jumping to 12.6% and then in 1981 jumping to 13.8%.

When we look in 1998, the consumer price index showed an increase of 2.7%, we don't have the exact figures thus far. I just haven't had the time because I thought someone else was going to speak but suffice it to say, the information that I have on hand tells me that the second quarter of 1999 has jumped 5.6%. I don't know what the year-end statistics will show, but I think that it is worth mentioning as I think there is a direct relation because of the system that we have, to government finding itself having to increase its recurrent revenue via tax measures. Whenever government finds itself doing that in any proportions that are not single items, you always find inflation rates going up.

Madam Speaker, if we allow ourselves to get in that position again, and we find that it is a fact that our recurrent revenue starts to drop and there is any slight downturn in our economy, we are going to be in deep trouble. This is not said in any other fashion but simply lying a case out that we have to be careful. It is easy for me to stand here and talk about it because I am a backbencher. If I was selfish, I would say, 'make them go ahead and do what they are doing—election is coming—let it happen.' That would give us good ammunition for why the country should remove the government. But that is not going to help the country, so I am not taking that position. I don't think that is responsible representation for the people of this country.

I believe that we have to be extremely careful because with all of the things around us, Madam Speaker, if we allow this train to runaway with us, God forbid. But the truth of the matter is that there are signals telling us we have to be careful. I don't have to go into any more detail, but there are signals that are telling us that we have to be extremely careful. We have to concentrate on maximising our efficiency and getting value for our dollar spent so that we simply don't relax and not pay attention to that because the money is coming freely.

That happens to us, you know. The economy is good, it's buoyant. Nobody has any problems. Money starts to flow freely, nobody pays attention to it, and that is when it gets away. All of a sudden when the money isn't coming, you start looking and you realise that so much money is being thrown away that you don't know where it is going. We have to be extremely careful of that.

The direct recipients of those bad results are the consumers in the country—the ordinary people who just earn enough to make a living, to be able to send their two or three children to school and who do not have any degree of disposable income. Many of them hang on to a second job to ensure that the child has a decent pair of shoes to go to school. If we don't want to admit that many in our country are like that, we can take a different view. I know better. I live with it.

I want for the government to understand that in my view this motion has served more than its purpose. It was not motivated to do anything but allow us all to stop and think. I am not questioning at this point in time (because that will come in another forum) the government's stewardship. I am saying to the government, let us not argue about whose responsibility what is. Those days are gone. The country that we have has great potential but we must manage it properly. The Honourable Third Official Member cannot do it by himself. He cannot! It is just too big. It is going to take all of us.

I would hope, Madam Speaker, that the government in accepting this motion will be able to come back at budget time and whatever the results of this review are, be able to say to us, we have reviewed this, we have reviewed that. I have pointed out some of what I term to be anomalies in the fees that are charged whether it be trade and business licence fees or other fees. But I believe that there are several areas where amounts that are charged are too much compared to what they are charged in other areas.

The government has to take a very serious look at it. The government has to also realise and accept that many of the increased fees as I explained (and I think I made my point) will only be paid directly by the consumer and we have to be careful that their burden is not too high. I know that people have a tendency to scream and bawl and holler all the time because it is the nature of the beast. They figure that if they do that, it won't be so bad. But this is not one of those times where anybody is crying wolf, it is serious.

Regardless of where the man comes from who says how pretty this place is, which I am grateful for, there are tremendous pressures being put on many of the people of this country and they are finding it difficult to make ends meet. We cannot allow it to get to the point where we have social unrest because that is the formula and we all know it. I don't say these things to preach how bad off the country is, I say these things to ask us not to make it happen. That's all I am saying.

So, I would hope that the government would find itself in a position to make some noticeable and reasonable changes to some of the fees. I would like to see the situation with the garbage fees rectified because God knows it is not a situation that is fair across the board. Because of the small volume of actual money that is involved, I believe that the government should simply withdraw the increase in fees for schoolbook rentals and go about it in a fashion letting the world know that it is going to increase every year by X amount and it becomes a palatable situation. Expected revenue from this was only a tad over $200,000 compared to the entire $11.8 million, which the revenue package was going to earn extra for government this year.

I don't think that that is an unreasonable request. The answer to all of our problems is education, education, and education. That is the only answer to any problems within our society—education, education, and education.

Madam Speaker, I think I have spent ample time in making my points. We on the backbench will wait to see what the government's response is going to be. The government knows that we are vigilant so I am not making any threats. But we will now wait to see how they go about it, and we certainly will respond in kind at the appropriate time. Thank you very much. I do commend the motion.

The Deputy Speaker: That concludes the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 24/99. The question is: "BE IT RESOLVED THAT, due to the hardships being experienced by both consumer and trader in the Cayman Islands as a result of the recent revenue measures imposed under the Finance Law 1998 (Law 20 of 1998), Government review the measures with a view to easing the burden imposed upon the people of the Cayman Islands." I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 24/99 APPROVED.

The Deputy Speaker: That concludes the business before the House at this, the third meeting of the 1999 Session. But before I take the motion for the adjournment, I would like on behalf of all members to thank the Clerk and her staff for their assistance and their dedication to the members during this sitting. I would also like to thank Miss Anita, and I am sure members will bear me out on this, for the delicious meals that she has prepared for us during this time.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I am sorry to interrupt you, but I had to catch your eye before you ask for the adjournment. I just wish to ask if we might have some sense of direction with the outstanding motions and questions, whether it will simply be agreed on that they will be moved over to when next we meet or whether they are in limbo.

I don't know exactly how it works. I am seeking direction to ensure, because these other motions have not been dealt with, that they don't fall away.

The Deputy Speaker: I understand your position and I will ask the Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning, Chairman of the Business Committee, if he can give a reply.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Madam Speaker, I think we are very happy to put the questions on the next time. There are also three motions I think that still remain.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, there were three motions but there is also a report which was tabled by the Public Accounts Committee on a Special Report of the Auditor General on Quarry Products Limited. Before Mr. Speaker left, if I remember correctly, he ruled that the Government Minute on that Report had to be tabled in November. I just want to make sure that everyone is aware of that, and that we don't end up with World War III over that, and we get a commitment from the government that this will be done.

The Deputy Speaker: I think when the Honourable Speaker said that there were 90 days under the Standing Orders, the Government Minute must be laid within three months. If it is not laid within that time, this House will have to suspend Standing Orders for it not to be. But I think if the Honourable Speaker said within 90 days, I am sure the government will commit to 90 days for the laying of the Government Minute.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Financial Secretary, would you like to comment?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, every effort will be made to comply with the time period as outlined by the Honourable Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you. I will entertain a motion for the adjournment. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 19 November 1999 at 10.00 am.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until Friday, 19 November at 10.00 a.m. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it. This Honourable House stands adjourned until Friday, 19 November 1999.

AT 12.13 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM FRIDAY, 19 NOVEMBER 1999.

FRIDAY
19 NOVEMBER 1999
10.25 AM

[Prayers read by the Honourable Second Official Member]

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Legislative Assembly is in Session. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, who is not well.

Moving on to item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Presentation of Papers and Reports. The Honourable Third Official Member.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, thank you. I would like to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until next Friday. The reason is that the Budget will not be ready until then. If Honourable Members would like some further details as to some of the problems we are now encountering and what we hope to be resolved by then, if you will permit I will elaborate.

The Speaker: Certainly, you may continue Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I am aware that when a date has been set for this honourable House to convene, it is something to be taken very seriously. Coming here this morning to seek your indulgence and that of honourable members is not one that has been taken lightly by myself or the government.

Mr. Speaker, we are now into a situation with the budget where all hands are on deck trying to get the budget into balance. The government has been meeting but in light of developments that have occurred in recent years—where in the past, we could take the view that we had X amount of dollars and all departments had to conform and whether they were willing or unwilling, we would try and force their hands—we have found out, Mr. Speaker, that this doesn't work and this is not the attitude of the government.

The approach that is now being taken, Mr. Speaker, is one of full participation. Just to give a bit of background information in terms of what the government is now encountering in balancing the budget, I will just give a few preliminary figures.

Based on the revenue projections for the year 2000 from existing revenue measures, the best indication would suggest that approximately $300 million would be realised from revenue sources—exactly $299.29 million.

Mr. Speaker, let me apologise to you. When I said $299.29 million and $300 million . . . I am going to give the correct figure. In taking a careful look at the position, the revenue that is likely to be realised in the year 2000 is $291.3 million. It is quite likely (based on the projections by the Treasury Department) that there will be a balance brought forward into the year 2000 of approximately $8 million. This will give total financing available during 1999 of $299.29 million. This is how that figure has been arrived at.

Mr. Speaker, after cuts have been offered by departments, the recurrent expenditure now stands at approximately $265.8 million and this is what is being proposed. We have statutory expenditure projections at $39.94 million and we hardly have any flexibility because this recognises statutory obligations of government such as pensions, loan payments, and so on, whatever has been provided for in law.

We are looking at capital acquisitions of $5.55 million. Capital development is now standing at approximately $81.9 million or $82 million, but government is working on this. Honourable Ministers recognise that this is an unrealistic figure and they have been spending their time trying to whittle down this figure and they are going to bring it down in line with [figures] for 1999. So, I am not going to give a precise figure in terms of what they are targeting but they recognise that this figure is unrealistic.

New Services has been whittled down (up to this point in time) to $4.61 million. The total of that amounts to $397.87 million. When that is taken away from the $299.29, that leaves a significant gap in excess of $80 million - $90 million.

Mr. Speaker, the government recognises that it is very important for us to keep expenditure in line with the likely sources of revenue. This is what the government has been emphasising to ministries, portfolios and departments in government. The proposal has been made that recurrent expenditure for ministries, portfolios, and departments should not exceed 5% of what has been approved for 1999. So, if we were to take the approved figure of $239.79 million approved in 1999 and add 5%, it comes up to approximately $251.8 million.

The government recognises that the capital acquisition figure of $2.55 million is too high and what is being proposed is that this figure should be less than $3 million because most departments by now have been provided with new computing equipment to make them millennium compliant. So, it is only a question where there is a need to purchase, for example motor vehicles and heavy equipment, where such purchases cannot be deferred without impairing the efficiency of the departments that such purchases are allowed.

The government also recognises that the New Services, which was initially in excess of $8 million, should not exceed approximately $2 million or even less. This will take into account, for example, the additional teachers that will have to be put into the expanding school programme, and also the additional prison officers and so on.

So, when we take all of this and try to keep within a limit of 5%—and it is not suggesting that each department has a target. That should be the maximum. What we do recognise is that salary component comprises a significant part of the budget of each department. We have to make provisions, let's say, for increments. And when those are made, this 5% should cover it.

So, what we are saying to departments is to come to a standstill position as they were in 1999 and just look in terms of the add-ons that are necessary to cover those costs that cannot be deferred. We are also saying as well that we recognise that there are certain aspects of recurrent expenditure that will be brought on stream that really cannot be deferred, for example where there is a need to recruit additional teachers and so on. We are saying, let us treat those items as somewhat extraordinary outside of the 5%. Let us isolate them, and then the government will do an examination to determine whether we should go ahead with these expenditures.

This will include, for example, the provision that was made in 1999 for the health insurance. Three point five million dollars was provided in that year hoping that midway through the year a decision would be taken to enter into a contract to insure civil servants and all entitled cases—indigents, seamen and others. Mr. Speaker, that is going to run in the region of approximately $8 million for the year 2000.

So, these are items that will have to be looked at because when we look at all entitled cases we know that based on the information provided by the hospital, the value of services being provided to entitled cases significantly exceeds that amount. So, it is a question of looking at this very carefully.

The government has also taken the view that having introduced revenue measures as recently as early 1999, it would not be advisable to consider the introduction of further revenue measures. So, every attempt is being made to avoid that. This is to take on board the concerns that have been expressed, and also the position of the government as a whole. But what is being driven at is a balanced budget. So, what is being sought is that when the budget finally arrives next Friday . . . I must say some departments and ministries have really gone through and have gutted their budgets—keeping their requests to the bare minimum. Others seem not to have given much attention.

One of the things that was pointed out earlier is that the government doesn't want to just go through and say 'All right, just reduce the allocation or the request by departments by X amount of dollars to bring it in line.' We are hoping that we will have full participation of everyone, even at the departmental level where it is obvious that the budget of a department will have to exceed 5%. What we are saying, set the 5% at the ministry and the portfolio level so while some will go up to probably 6% or 7%, others can come in at 2% or 3% in order to create a balancing position so that overall it doesn't exceed 5%.

So, this is what we are striving for, Mr. Speaker, and this is what the government is committed to. In fact, after the adjournment, we will be going back to the Glass House to continue discussions on the budget. Every effort is being made to bring the budget into balance.

When the budget is brought here next Friday, we are going to have departments, when they come to Finance Committee, saying that they requested X million dollars but this is what they are being given. Mr. Speaker, we know that that is going to be the case—

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, it is pre-empting, Mr. Speaker. If we take all of the original requests as submitted by departments, we will be looking at a variance in excess of $100 million. If we try to provide for all of the needs, Mr. Speaker, this is the position we are going to be into. And, once that is committed to by way of the expenditure side, it will have to be dealt with on the revenue side.

Mr. Speaker, the reform initiatives are underway and we are seeing all of this as being factored into the process. We are seeing the heightened level of awareness filtering through by some departments of government. It will take us some time to get to that point where we can say, 'Well, at the end of the day, rather than waiting until November to bring the budget here, we will be engaging in pre-budget discussions and so on.' We are not far from that time, Mr. Speaker.

But while we are getting to that point, we are saying to departments of government, co-operate with the government, go through individually. We are saying to controlling officers, do not invite a Higher Executive Officer (although we have some very competent Higher Executive Officers), they are not the ones that are being charged with the responsibility or appointed controlling officers. They themselves should become involved. Heads of Departments should look very carefully at the figures that are being presented, look very carefully at the request that was made for 1999 and, if possible, see if the budget for the year 2000 can remain exactly in line with that.

If they identify any areas in terms of where excess provision has been made, let's see if that can be reduced even below the 1999 level and if that seems to be a difficult position to obtain, the recurrent and statutory position overall approval for 1999 is $247.3 million. The revised figure is suggesting that expenditures will be in the region of $228 million, which means that there is a likely reduction of approximately $19 million.

First of all, we know included in this on the revenue side, the recurrent revenue forecast for the year 1999 was $283.1 million. The forecast for the year is $274.2

million—a difference of approximately of $9 million. But we know included in that $9 million is the $3.5 million that was put into the budget to cover the health insurance for entitled cases. So, when we subtract $274.2 million from $283.1 million, it leaves approximately $9 million. This is the revised position up to yesterday.

The Deputy Financial Secretary, the Accountant General, the Director of Internal Audit, Mr. Michael Nixon, and I, visited several large revenue earning departments of government. We looked at their collections up to this point in time and the best forecast that they could give through the end of the year. So, when we take this approximately $9 million, and we take out the $3.5 million, which has been put under the expenditure we are anticipating (that equal recovery would take place on the revenue side to compensate in terms of claims that would be settled by insurance), the net shortfall that is likely to occur is $5.5 million in terms of below the projections for 1999.

When we compare this, in terms of that combined with the savings on the expenditure side, we can see that departments are making every attempt, first of all, to optimise the collection of revenue. But some can do better than others. Every attempt is being made to curtail expenditure. When everything is done, this is likely to result in a balance carried forward of $8 million. This $8 million is after having made the transfer of $2.7 million that was budgeted in 1999 to be transferred out of recurrent revenue into the Capital Development Fund. It is also making provision for the transfer of $3 million into general reserves, and $1 million of that formed a part of the budget.

When we look at the surplus balance that was brought forward in excess of $7 million (or at that time, it subsequently turned out to be $9 million), the government took the view that a further $2 million should be transferred into general reserve. So, that $1 million was increased to $3 million.

Also, a reserve provision is being made for the write off of overseas medical of $2.5 million. Out of that surplus balance, the decision was taken that $2.5 million should be set aside for the writing-off of those accounts that were deemed to be uncollectable. The exercise has not been finalised as yet because we know that the Auditor General, for quite some time has been qualifying the financials because of this item being included as an asset item and what he has been doing is quite right. So, what we are trying to do is to correct this because we know that quite a significant proportion of this balance is uncollectable. The government recognises this and this has been pointed out to honourable members of the Legislative Assembly.

Also, Mr. Speaker, that $8 million is achieved after provision is made for the transfer of $230,000 into the Housing Reserve Fund, $400,000 into the National Disaster Fund, and transfer of a future $100,000 into the Student Loan Reserve Fund. This is a guaranteed arrangement that has been put into place. A reserve account has been set up against those accounts if by chance they were to become delinquent, for those student loans that have been guaranteed by the government.

So, Mr. Speaker, what I have just outlined here is the position that we are looking at as at 31st December 1999, and also what we are trying our best to achieve for the year 2000. We know that there is a full commitment by honourable members of the Legislative Assembly in ensuring that we achieve proper macro-economic management. We have started and there is evidence of the articulation of a physical policy, everything emerging.

We are asking departments, portfolios, ministries and sections of government to co-operate in the budget process to make sure that we produce a budget for the year 2000 that is a balanced budget and one that is in line with the resources that are available. We are saying to them, revisit all expenditure requests that have been put forward so far, and it will require some belt-tightening, see exactly what can be postponed without impairing the efficiency of departments.

Mr. Speaker, I know I have gone on and on but I felt it was necessary to explain to honourable members the situation as it now stands and what will have to be done between now and next Friday. As mentioned in our telephone conversation, what is being sought is that this exercise will be completed by Tuesday afternoon so that the government will have a chance to sit down with honourable members of this Legislative Assembly to just look at the position on Wednesday and Thursday prior to the Budget presentation.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Third Official Member would you move a motion to defer the tabling of this report, please?

DEFERRAL OF THE DRAFT ESTIMATES OF REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS' GOVERNMENT FOR THE YEAR 2000

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I move a motion for the tabling of this report to be deferred until 10.00 a.m. next Friday.

The Speaker: Are you certain about the date or do you want a date to be determined?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: If you will just allow for me to—

The Speaker: It is only a question.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, next Friday.

The Speaker: The motion has been moved that the tabling of the Draft Estimates be deferred and they will be tabled next Friday. Those in favour, please say Aye—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, is anyone allowed to speak before you put it to the vote, sir?

The Speaker: It is not customary but—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, it is not customary for what just occurred here to happen either.

The Speaker: I will grant a brief debate, but please let us not project this to any length of time. The First Elected Member for George Town, do you wish to speak first?

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the First Elected Member of George Town for rising because I intended to speak. I think that it is interesting that at this particular time, we have the government coming to the Legislative Assembly without the Draft Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure for the year 2000. I think, it is significant. As we have seen very significant things happening, we tend to ignore them and treat them as if—-if we didn't ignore them, we would be cruel to people. But we find out that by ignoring them, those significant issues have a terrible impact upon our system.

Next year is election and the government does not want to raise any revenue by way of new taxes. But the government has been eating up a lot of money nevertheless over a period of time. The question is: Can they reasonably be in a position to create estimates for this system? Are they going to be able to accomplish this within a week or two weeks? I feel that is not going to happen.

I feel it is unfortunate that they do not feel more compelled to come here at this particular time . . . if the Financial Secretary had been an elected member, I do believe that it would have been a different thing. The way it is now, the government can make it seem as if it is his budget and it is his job to bring this here. But the people know that it is the government's business to bring these draft estimates here today and they have not done it and they are not going to be able to do it with a week or two weeks, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I certainly will not be long because I respect what you are saying. I don't think anyone came here this morning expecting any long debate. But I think with what has just occurred it is only fair for some of us to make some short comments.

First of all, I would like to address one of the last things that was said by the Honourable Third Official Member with regard to the budget process and the fact that he said that the government would be wishing to meet with the rest of the elected members on Wednesday and Thursday of next week to go over the budget before the tabling of the estimates on Friday.

Let me make it very clear so that it is understood: At least, five of us on the backbench have no intention of participating in this process. I suspect the government probably knew that from the very beginning. But I wish clearly to explain why because this is an issue that the public needs to understand.

The process that we face now is one whereby the elected arm of government along with the civil service arm is responsible for various areas of policy and also for bringing the budget. The five members that I referred to, including me, were not a part of the process from the very beginning. We had no input during the process and there is no way in the world that we are going to become involved when the process is completed. As far as I am concerned, that is simply at the end of the day to say this is what we have done, come and share the load with us. And I am not into that. So, I just want to make it very clear.

There is nothing about us not wishing to participate but the government must understand and accept the system that we deal with. That system puts us on the backbench as a check and balance for the policy-makers—that is simple and clear.

So, let it not be said that we act irresponsibly by not being willing at the end of the day to talk about it, because there is nothing that we can do at the end of the day. As far as I am concerned, I wish to say that to me that process appears to be one which would put us at a disadvantage during the debate and in Finance Committee, in that we would not be able to perform our duties the way we are supposed to. So, I just wish to explain that. There are a few more reasons that are, in my view, salient, but I won't go into that this morning.

The other thing I wish to say, Mr. Speaker, regarding the budget is that while I have great respect for the Third Official Member, his ability and his staff's ability in the preparation process, this country and the government must take full note that this is not something that has crept up on us all of a sudden. This position that the government finds itself in, is a position that they have been warned about over and over for years. Personally, while I have a fervent love for my country, and while I wish for my country to be as successful as all of us wish it to be, certainly we have to now accept the shortcomings of the actions of this government and hope in the future to do better.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I am not going to make a speech. I am just going to make a suggestion to the Honourable Third Official Member. Instead of moving that the presentation of the Draft Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure be deferred to a specific date, I would suggest that he move that it be deferred, and the adjournment question be put that we adjourn to a date to be announced. Having listened to that honourable gentleman, with what has to be achieved between now and next Friday, I think he is cutting it very close to coming back here next Friday with the same situation that exists today.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? If not, I will put the question that the Draft Estimates be deferred to be tabled next Friday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, can we have a division, please sir?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk would you call a division, please?

The Deputy Clerk:

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly
Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks
Mr. Linford A. Pierson

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on the basis that the Financial Secretary is not sure that they are going to be able to complete the process, we would not want to find ourselves back in the same position next week, Friday, so therefore I have to vote no.*

The Speaker: The result of the division is seven Ayes, four Noes. The Ayes have it.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE DRAFT ESTIMATES OF REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS' GOVERNMENT FOR THE YEAR 2000 DEFERRED FOR TABBING UNTIL 10 AM FRIDAY 26 NOVEMBER 1999.

The Speaker: That's all the business on the Order Paper for today. I will now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until next Friday at 10.00 a.m.

The Speaker: Before I put the question, I have been asked by the First Elected Member for West Bay under Standing Order 11(6), "On a motion under paragraph (5), a Member who is not a Member of Government and who has obtained the right to do so, may raise any public matter for which the Government has responsibility, in order to elicit a reply from a Member of Government responsible for the matter. After not more than twenty minutes, the Member of the Government shall be called on to reply."

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

RAISING OF MATTERS FOR WHICH THE GOVERNMENT HAS RESPONSIBILITY

(Standing Order 11(6))

SETTING UP OF EMERGENCY FUNDS TO ASSIST IN REPAIRING HOMES DAMAGED IN RECENT RAINS

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I rise to request of the government (and I do so through and to the Honourable Financial Secretary) to give serious and immediate consideration to setting up an amount of funds, say emergency funds of $250,000 to $300,000, to assist those persons whose houses have been damaged in the recent flood rains, paying particular attention to their roofs.

There have been many people who have been contacting me about their plight and I know other colleagues have been contacted, bearing in mind that a good number of our handicapped and elderly live in the older stock of houses in the islands which have deteriorated roofs.

I realise, Mr. Speaker, that the government is in the throes of budget, and by all talk, things are not good. What I am requesting is that these funds be set up immediately—and, if you want to, call it a disaster fund—through the channels open to the Financial Secretary so that these people can be assisted now and quickly. This is urgent. Many of us have been contacted. I don't need to repeat that. I would hope that they could say something quickly about it. But it is urgent.

(Pause)

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, indeed, this is something that is welcomed. We had some assessment on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and in relation to there, $100,000 had already been earmarked. Well, it has to come back here unless it is going to go through a contingency warrant, which may be the better way. So, I would like to thank the member for raising this.

Also, Mr. Speaker, one of the hardest hit areas has been the Randyke Gardens. I have not only been through there personally, but we have done an official tour there and also through the Windsor Park area. Other members will speak on other areas that are within their districts, sir, but I will just deal with those two to say that while perhaps by this morning there should be one if not two excavators in to deal with clearing some of the areas that we hope would speed up drainage, I personally think that (and this is purely my view but I think it is also the view held by Public Works) that in Randyke Gardens because the developer built the houses so low and did not comply with the four foot level, which was clearly set out in the planning approval—and there is no doubt about that, I have evidence of that—that there is nowhere as it appears that you can actually drain that area. Therefore, it seems to me what the government and this House has to do is to look at applying these funds to assist with raising the level of the houses that Mr. Kent Rankine, as developer, built too low.

And I feel (and this is my personal views) that since that is the solution (it is going to be a bit of an expensive solution) but the people in there are no means well off. Many of them cannot afford to raise the houses. One person has. Quite frankly, it is really a disgrace what was done in that area and what is happening to the people. Unless Public Works can come up with some other solution, then I think it is going to take more than the $250,000 to help the people there and also the people in the Park area to deal with the problem.

But there is no doubt, Mr. Speaker, despite a Caymanian Compass report of 9 December 1996, which stated that the developer was never informed of the height requirements. I need to say that this was dealt with back between 1984 to . . . the last we have is 1986. So, it was not this government that dealt with it. But a very clear condition was that the Planning approval said that the houses and the road should be built four feet . . . the minimum height should be four feet or the MRCU level. This was found out sometime through levels were taken. The fact is that the houses have been built too low.

While government, I think, can stand a part of this, I think it is only fair that some part of that should be shared by the developer who carries responsibility—and I am not saying he carries it now necessarily in law because this has been a long time ago—but carries responsibility for this.

The other thing I wanted to say, sir, is that as soon as the water gets down to where the roads can be repaired, they will be repaired. Public Works is also in Randyke Gardens and across in the Park also putting in extra wells. They are using a much wider bore, a 10-inch bore that will take a lot. But in some areas, sir, it is so low that in heavy rains it cannot cope with it.

We are just lucky that the South Sound drains are now open because the area is a disaster as it is. Really, what I would ask here today, following on what the honourable member has moved, is that we have an assessment of all the areas including other districts that have had problems. While I know this House does not like contingency warrants, I think this is an emergency and we should at this stage . . . if ever one time contingent warrants could be used it is perhaps at this time.

Failing that, if there is strong opposition to the use of the contingency warrant to deal with this money—and it may be more than $250,000, I think it is going to be more than $250,000—then I would suggest that we will be sitting and we come back here for a very quick Finance Committee to get on with it. But some money has to be spent very quickly to remedy the situations there.

My sympathy goes out to people there. I know the flooding was heavy. I was called by someone in Randyke Gardens to come and take him and his wife across. Unfortunately, at the time, my car couldn't get across my road either. I had to wait to try to get a pick-up truck to get out. But he did get moved. So, it carries our sympathy and I thank the member for moving this. The choice is really going to be either contingent warrants or back here for approval once the schemes are checked out.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town. I don't anticipate a long projected debate.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I thought I said that earlier on, but, nevertheless, I will just go on rather than address that.

Mr. Speaker, just to say that I totally agree with the move that is afoot now. I think, perhaps in retrospect, maybe we should not necessarily set a definite figure because assessments probably don't allow us to know what amounts are going to be needed. I think the First Elected Member for West Bay plucked that figure just to make sure that it was palatable when he was addressing the Chair at the time.

Mr. Speaker, there are other areas, as the Minister of Education has just said, which have not been mentioned. There are areas in central George Town that have been affected. The truth of the matter is, we have a tendency that after a crisis we forget about it until the next time it is at hand. Perhaps now is the time to deal with the matter.

I know that the Public Works Department went up in an aeroplane also and got aerial views of exactly where the flooding is worse on the island. I am sure they will have a handle on some of the areas that need to be addressed, if not all. I take on board and welcome the suggestion for them to move fast.

The idea of a contingency warrant, as the minister has said, is not one that we welcome. But we also respect the fact that there are exceptions to every rule. So, in this instance I think it is safe comment to say that the vast majority if not all of the members of the House would not have a problem with going that route as a matter of expedience. But nevertheless that has to include the entire island.

I just have to say before I sit down—

[Inaudible comment]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Well, I thought a figure was mentioned for Cayman Brac already. The Minister of Education must know that I, Kurt Tibbetts, will never forget Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Nevertheless, notwithstanding that, I am just playing his game there.

I just want to say that I found it a little bit strange and I make the comment to say that there are fifteen representatives in this House who represent the various dis-districts. Notwithstanding the fact that Executive Council directs the policies, the members of Executive Council have no greater concern than the rest of us when it comes to the people who receive damage and who are in stressful circumstances. I thought it would have been courteous of them when they were doing their tour, if they had advised other members of the Legislative Assembly so that we could also have participated in such a tour.

But I understand that election is coming around the corner [Laughter] and I also understand the Minister's [of Education] actions. Nevertheless, we too have done our own tours and we have been in contact with Public Works understanding that we are only on a begging mission. Now, we will have to go the official route in order to get things done. Thank you.

The Speaker: Before I invite anyone else to speak, I am in a quandary here because under the Standing Order which we moved, there is supposed to be absolutely no debate. The government member is supposed to reply and that is supposed to end it.

But if we will look at Standing Order 30(2), it says, no debate may arise if the government member makes the statement, assuming that the Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning did elaborate a statement. It says, "No debate may arise on such a statement but the Presiding Officer may, in his discretion, allow short questions to be put to the Member making the statement for the purpose of clarification." So, assuming that, I will give members an opportunity to make short statements. I really caught the eye of the Minister of Tourism first.

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker and I certainly will be brief. I just wanted to say that I do support the move this morning. Yes, Public Works did go up and take aerial photography of a number of areas in Grand Cayman and do know where the difficulties are.

We also know the roads that we have been talking about for many years and we have seen the results of heavy rains and the disaster that happens when the huge pot holes pop up all over the island. I would go on to say that it actually brings foremost in our minds the need to resurface all of our main roads in this country and I think we need to start to address that now and in the future as well.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am just soliciting a clarification. It was brought to my attention just recently during the heavy rains that government opened one of its shelters for those people who were affected by the flooding.

Volunteers showed up in order to man the shelters but none of the residents in those areas that were affected showed up at the shelter. The reason why they didn't was because they were told that government was insisting that the developers from those areas make some contribution toward the cost of manning the shelters, I don't know what.

In this country, we are always priding ourselves on disaster preparedness. If you insist that before someone who is in need of assistance can show up at a shelter for protection and safety that it is contingent on the developer contributing financially from those areas where they reside, I think that is very wrong. I just want government to clarify whether or not that is the position because if it is, Mr. Speaker, I want to say it is totally unacceptable as far as I am concerned.

The Speaker: Does the government wish to reply to that before the next speaker? (Pause) If not, then the Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just like to support the move made by the First Elected Member for West Bay concerning persons who have received damage during the flooding that we just recently had.

I was very glad that in the end the Honourable Leader of Government Business did include all districts, because at the beginning I thought he was dealing with just one district.

When I was called out in my district in North Side during the heavy rains, I stood knee deep in water that was going from the front door to the back door of people's houses. People were using boats to get to their properties. I would appreciate that we do an assessment of every district in the Cayman Islands to come to a realistic figure of the help that is needed for all of our people, not just a chosen few because of political year.

With those few words, Mr. Speaker, I look forward to meeting the government in the district of North Side when they are prepared to do the tour of the flooded areas as they are right now.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I lend my support to any efforts to relieve affected persons. But I want to say that I think a more far reaching and realistic solution, as far as the future is concerned, is that the government embark on a topographic survey of the three islands with the objective of establishing a national drainage plan.

Mr. Speaker, I say this in light of the fact that global warming is causing the tides and the oceans to rise and to create more havoc. When we combine that with regular natural disaster like hurricanes, we are bound more frequently to come into contact with these kinds of drainage challenges.

When we consider that the Cayman Islands already are for the most part wetlands or swamp lands it is a challenge. And by embarking on such a topographical and drainage survey and having a plan in motion, we will ultimately arrive at a more cost effective and understandable solution to these problems.

Mr. Speaker, I say this realising that we are not the only country that faces this. Holland, I understand, is constructed largely of a series of dams and drainage systems on land much like the Cayman Islands. They have mastered the flooding problem. So, while it is necessary for us in the immediate future to take the steps articulated by the First Elected Member for West Bay and all other members speaking, in the long term we also need to embark on a topographic survey with a view to establishing a national drainage pattern to establish how we are going to deal with this in the future in light of the changing trends in climate, global warming, rising tides and oceans, et cetera.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too wish to support the move made by the First Elected Member for West Bay to relieve the problems caused by the recent flooding.

Mr. Speaker, I believe we need to go a little further than that, and in this respect I wish to support the view that has just been expressed by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. We need to have a proper survey done of the three islands and decide what areas will require some kind of drainage.

We realise that drainage, perhaps by gravity feed, will not work in certain areas because the sea level is higher than those areas. It might be necessary to put pumping stations in those very low-lying areas. But, Mr. Speaker, we realise that this is going to cost money. I trust that each honourable member of this House, including members of the backbench, will support the cost of putting these facilities in place when this appears either in the estimates or in some supplementary appropriation.

Mr. Speaker, I was very much involved in the situation on Friday night, the night of the flooding. At 9.00 p.m., a family called me from a neighbourhood behind the Funky Tangs Ltd. It took us until after 1.00 a.m. before we were able to evacuate some twelve people. I noticed that the Caymanian Compass made a report on this but for whatever reason it was not mentioned that the Third Elected Member for George Town was very much involved in this evacuation.

I also want to thank the Community Development Officer who was very much on top of the situation. When I heard of it, I picked her up and took her up to the scene and with the assistance of the Chief Fire Officer and his crew, we were able to evacuate those individuals. They were able to overnight at the Fire Station and the next day they were taken to the Eldemire's Residence.

I thought I would mention that just to make the point that there were certain members of the Legislative Assembly that were very much involved during this unfortunate flooding.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that we should also look at the security aspects of any disaster of this kind because had [Hurricane] Lenny made a direct hit on the Cayman Islands, I believe we would have seen a far worse situation than we had with the flooding. What would happen to our backup materials and our microfiche and other areas where we backup tapes and information for government and other institutions on the island? Perhaps, the time has come when we should be looking at putting a facility on Cayman Brac that could be used to backup our very sensitive documents and other information here in Grand Cayman.

Mr. Speaker, I know that the move is afoot right now to set up such a facility, the Brac Informatics Centre. Whilst I am not going to be speaking at length on that at this point, I intend to do that at a different occasion. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that it is only appropriate that we should consider whether sensitive documents and information should not have a backup facility, say on the Bluff, in a purpose built customised facility.

So, Mr. Speaker, I totally support the move that is being made by the First Elected Member for West Bay. I trust that when the time comes, funds will have to be made available to have the various facilities put in place. We will definitely give support from this side of the House. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I live in central George Town and I know the power of the rains. I have known this since I was a boy. In many of these areas we floated on drums during the rainy season because the water level had risen so high. Nothing has been done since my childhood to improve drainage in these areas. What has compounded the problem is that the Planning Department has allowed developers to develop all around some of the lower income areas in George Town. This is part of the problem for the flooding.

We are not critical of those persons that so selfishly build their land up knowing that it is going to cause flooding in these areas. Right behind where the Third Elected Member for George Town mentioned he evacuated people from, the area has been destroyed by development. Very, very selfishly done. No control from the Planning Department.

Also, in the area where I live in Windsor Park, the Government came in there recently and repaired the roads and put in a few drains. They spent thousands of dollars. Developers came in on Anthony Drive and put buildings down, put sidewalks down, which does not allow any drainage and destroys the roads again. They will not put one single drain down.

We are living in a society that is very selfish and, perhaps the act that is going on is also part of that selfishness because perhaps we will live to get some kind of credit for people's misfortunes. But the point is that when the government wants to make promises, the government also has to take taxes. And this is what nobody really wants to do. Everybody wants to promise the people this and that but nobody wants to tax them.

Where are we going to get the money from? I say that the developers that are surrounding these areas, that are causing the flood in these areas . . . The rain, yes, was heavy. We have had heavy rains before. But in a lot of these areas, we have the flooding because selfish developers are carrying out a policy to discourage those people from living there so that they can get their land for nothing. This is what the government needs to look into.

I support any kind of assistance that these people can get, but I do not believe that those people themselves should pay for that assistance. Believe it or not, when the government has to pay for it, they are going to take it back from these very same people later on in taxes.

I believe that the developers that are making profits on the office buildings . . . and the government is also a part of it because the Government Racket Club property, they have filled also— The government is also part of what has happened off the Myles Road area in drowning those poor people. No consideration. We need to pay attention to this. We need to help those people solve the problem by putting in the proper drainage system that will be lasting because we saw a similar situation in November 1996.

I took some photographs of that area. I am telling you sir, the government itself is responsible for part of the flooding.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you Mr. Speaker. I would also like to offer my support to the excellent idea put forward by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

I would like to support what the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town said, and also what followed on by the Third Elected Member for George Town in regard to the topographic survey. But I feel that we don't need to wait at this time (with the dry weather coming up) on that survey. There are areas that we know are perennial problems.

Public Works shared with us recently that the new drain wells that they are putting in, 10-inch drains, have been quite successful in the Industrial Park area. Let us start as soon as possible with these areas that we know. We don't need a topographical survey to know that Randyke Gardens, certain areas of Savannah/Newlands, Belford Estates and so on. We know. Let us stop talking and let's get some action going on these areas.

It's like the situation in Randyke Gardens, we keep talking about the drainage there—lo and behold, another situation has developed, and it has not been addressed. I now understand that the Department of Environment and Public Works are going to start shortly. But how long must these poor people suffer?

We went in there yesterday and it was heartrending what has happened there. But what really bugs me, Mr. Speaker, is when I went to some other subdivisions in my district where I saw evidently that permission has been given—the road was about two or three feet under water. Where in the world are the people who are supposed to be responsible allowing this to take place?

We must tighten down and address this problem or all we are going to continue to create is the cancer that is going on in this area. And government then has to come back and build these subdivision roads to a standard.

Something is wrong and it needs to be dealt with. We have to take the bull by the horns or whatever else we need to grab him by and get action out of it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I believe that after all of that, I must have some right to say something too.

The Speaker: Briefly.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I will be brief. I certainly would not want this request because of all that has been said about the developers—the development being too low and the sharing of responsibility. What I don't want is a long protracted process while people are hurting. While people are hurting is not the time to worry or to go hunting for someone to blame.

I am aware that this House approved assistance for roofs for people from the disaster floods of 1996 and they have not gotten it. I would ask that the bureaucracy look at the different things that members have pointed out and be not stalled while roofs and houses need urgent attention.

Mr. Speaker, I can point out that on the West Bay road since hotels have gone down and because of developments on both sides of the road, the roads have simply flooded more—the way they have built their sidewalks without proper drainage. It seems like that is continuing all the time. So, perhaps, the Minister of Planning needs to pay some urgent attention to whatever is approved to make sure that proper drainage is put down on the West Bay Road. I have seen areas flooded there that I have never seen in my forty-four years on this earth.

So, Mr. Speaker, while all of that is true. While the developers need to pay attention, and government needs to pay more attention because Randyke Gardens or Windsor Park is not new. I recall in 1996, a picture on the front page of the Caymanian Compass with the Minister of Planning with his pant legs rolled up to his neck standing in the water. So, I don't understand why four to five years later that we are still in that problem.

We need to do something. We are not trying to get any credit on anybody's hurt—be that far as the Elected Member for George Town talked about. I don't think that is so with any member of this House. We are simply pointing out that problems exist and we need to do something about it, as he has also pointed out.

So, Mr. Speaker, I would ask that a contingency warrant of whatever funds needed be set up immediately but that we start with those things that we know can be fixed now—the roofs and the different roads. Aerial photographs and the drainage of Randyke Gardens . . . and if the Minister of Planning wants to quarrel with the developer, all that takes place afterwards. But those people that are hurting and we should immediately go to their rescue and assistance now.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I really appreciate your indulgence this morning. This morning, you were a real good Speaker.

[Laughter]

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that this House do adjourn until Friday, 26 November 1999 at 10.00 a.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until Friday, 26 November 1999 at 10.00 a.m.

THE BUDGET ADDRESS

Delivered by

The Hon. George A. McCarthy, OBE, JP, Financial Secretary

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, as we stand here today on the eve of a new millennium—amidst rapid global changes and numerous challenges before us, I am proud to say that the Cayman Islands is well-prepared for the new century.

This past year has been a very busy one for us, perhaps the busiest that many of us have known in recent times. It seems that in 1999, the last year in this decade, everything was upon us at the same time. What has been truly amazing, Mr. Speaker, is how every segment of this society bonded together like one huge family, to plan for our future and meet the challenges headlong as they emerged.

I would like to publicly acknowledge and thank all those persons who have worked tirelessly over the past year to ensure that the Cayman Islands is well equipped to meet the challenges in 2000 and beyond. Among these persons are:

- the Government and dedicated staff of the Public Service;
- Members of the Legislative Assembly;
- numerous private sector associations and individuals;
- non-governmental bodies; and
- the community at large.

Our greatest asset is our people, and only through our combined efforts can we move forward successfully into the future. In this regard, mention should be made of two significant projects undertaken in 1999 that have benefited from widespread participation. These are Vision 2008 and the Financial Management Reform Initiative.

MAJOR INITIATIVES UNDERTAKEN FOR THE 21ST CENTURY

Vision 2008

Starting with Vision 2008: Mr. Speaker, in July the Ten-Year National Strategic Plan, Vision 2008, was passed unopposed by this Honourable House. This illustrated the overwhelming support at the highest level of decision making for long-term planning of these islands.

Planning is important for any country, but it is particularly significant for small islands such as ours, heavily dependent on a narrow range of industries, constrained by limited natural and human resources, and vulnerable to adverse weather conditions.

There are 15 Vision Statements in the National Strategic Plan. These vision statements, or "outcomes," are important because they reflect the long-term goals of the Cayman Islands. Included are outcomes relating to the economy, environment, human resource development, family and community, as well as education, youth, health, culture, crime, drugs and governance.

The National Strategic Plan recognises the constraints posed by our small size and limited "carrying capacities." It therefore emphasises the importance of maintaining balance development according to growth management principles. The overall aim is to maintain prosperity while at the same time protecting the social and natural environment.

We are very fortunate to have a well thought out Strategic Plan to guide our future. There are 16 strategies and 230 action plans in a range of areas. These will be extremely valuable to both the private and public sectors as they look towards development of these islands into the 21st century.

Financial Management Reform

In the last Budget Address, Mr. Speaker, it was announced that government had embarked upon a major programme of financial and budgetary reform.

This initiative will enhance medium term planning and budgeting. It will also strengthen the linkages between government's priorities and resource allocation decisions. A new phase of the budget process will be introduced, that is "the strategic phase," at which a Pre-Budget Strategic policy Statement will be presented. This statement will set out the government's high level policy and fiscal outcomes—linking the national outcomes established through the Vision 2008 and the Medium Term Fiscal Strategy processes and the specific outcomes that the government intends to give effect to through its forthcoming budget.

Greater transparency is a basic tenet of the new financial management system. An accrual-based accounting system will provide a more accurate picture of the use of financial resources and is better for accountability and management decision making. Our current accounting and budgeting systems provide us with limited information. The new system, with a three-year focus, will enable us to consider the longer-term impact of today's decisions with greater knowledge of the financial implications for tomorrow.

There are several other aspects to the new financial management system. These are greater role clarity, performance based on results, and greater accountability. The role of Executive Council will be to set policy direction, decide on specific outcomes and advise on the mix of outputs. Government agencies will implement policies and deliver outputs. Under the new system, managers will have greater control of their resources and will be given more responsibility for managing their agencies and delivering services. In return, they will be asked to account for the manner in which resources are used.

Having explained the underlying rationale on which the whole initiative is based, I would like to briefly provide you and honourable members with some details of this reform and our overall plan for implementation. The initiative has been developed into three interrelated phases:

Phase 1: Deals with the introduction of output-based budgeting. This is broken down into three steps: Two "dry runs" in the years 2000 and 2001 with full introduction in the year 2002;

Phase 2: Deals with the implementation of accrual accounting in 2002; and Phase 3: Deals with progressive decentralisation of resource input controls from 2003 onwards.

The goal of the reform exercise is to produce a system of financial management and budgeting that is capable of meeting the modern demands on government and is in line with up-to-date management practices. The updated system will differ from the present one in two fundamental ways.

Firstly, it will focus on the goods and services or outputs we produce rather than on the inputs that are needed to produce the outputs. This means, for example, that the "budget book" would no longer provide lengthy details on the cost of inputs such as computers or furniture. Instead, it will show all the services provided, together with details of the quantity, quality and cost of each service.

The benefits to the public of an output-based system are tremendous. Not only will we see clearly what services the government provides and the cost of each, but also we will be able to determine whether we are receiving value for money. The public will benefit from a different kind of debate on the Annual Budget. Discussions will shift from what inputs government should purchase to what mix of outputs are most appropriate.

The second main difference between the present and updated system is a move away from a cash-based to an accrual-based accounting system. What this means is that financial transactions will be recognised when the resource is consumed, and not when the cash flow happens.

For example, revenue from motor vehicle licensing fees will be recorded on the date due, and not on the date these fees are paid to the government as presently done. The overall revenue picture of the government will therefore be clearer, reflecting not just the actual revenue collected, but also the total potential revenue and any revenue shortfall. Similarly, expenditure on equipment will now be recorded on the date payment is due for this item and not on the date that the government actually processes the cheque. The true expenditure of government and amounts outstanding will then become apparent.

The financial management reform project is a large and complex one that will involve many changes. The government is well aware that it takes time for people to adjust to changes and for them to become comfortable with new practices. As a result, this project is being implemented over a period of time and in three phases mentioned previously.

Over the past few months, a great deal of time was spent on conceptualising and planning the project. While we drew upon the key concepts provided by the New Zealand model (that is, output-based budgeting and accrual accounting), our objective was to design a new Caymanian model of financial management system that was appropriate to our own circumstances and conditions. At this design stage, there was full public service involvement.

The implementation stage involved setting up project teams, conducting a comprehensive programme of training and undertaking other preparatory work on budget planning and legislative changes. To date, the majority of government agencies have specified their outputs and completed detailed costing. More importantly, the process of changing the way we think about our work and our roles has begun.

In 2000 and 2001, the intention is to further develop and refine Phase 1 and prepare for the transition to accrual accounting and reporting.

Mr. Speaker, I plan to lay a sample Annual Plan and Estimates which represents the primary output from the first "dry run" of Phase 1. This will be done during the course of this meeting. Honourable members should note that this will be circulated for purely illustrative purposes and should be considered within that context. It should be noted that no figures will be included at this point, but these will be inputted over the next month or so in order to produce a more complete document ready for circulation in January along with the 2000 Budget.

Financial Management Reform and Vision 2008 complement each other. Vision 2008 sets out the outcomes or long term goals of the society. Financial Management Reform will help us to specify and measure the outputs that contribute to those outcomes. In other words, Financial Management Reform will help us to operationalise better the ideas contained in Vision 2008.

FINANCIAL INDUSTRY HIGHLIGHTS

Mr. Speaker, turning now to some highlights pertaining to the financial industry. The past year has been a very busy and challenging one for the financial industry. The government, cognisant of the numerous changes taking place internationally, has worked diligently on a number of fronts to ensure that the Cayman Islands retains its position as a world-class financial centre. During the year, the government:

- engaged in constructive dialogue with the OECD and EU on the issue of "harmful" tax competition;
- maintained a high profile in regional and international fora and participated actively in global discussions on reform of the international financial system;
- took steps to ensure that the financial institutions and the main regulatory body, the Monetary Authority, conform to international standards and;
- improved the image of the Cayman Islands financial services industry.

The "harmful" tax competition issue occupied a considerable amount of government's time this past year. Working through the Secretariat in the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development, we have monitored very closely developments in this area. The government provided a detailed response to the OECD Study Group Report on the Cayman Islands, correcting many misconceptions about our tax system, economy and financial industry.

In August, a Cayman Islands delegation, headed by the Honourable Truman Bodden, attended a consultation with the OECD Forum on harmful Tax Competition and made a comprehensive submission, outlining why the Cayman Islands should not be regarded as engaging in "harmful" tax competition. We have also made submissions through the UK on various aspects of the EC initiatives.

In addition, the government is preparing to engage in bilateral discussions with our major economic partners, these are the USA and the UK, on how to resolve these issues in a mutually accepted way.

Recent indications from the OECD suggest that rather than simply producing a list of tax havens the OECD will be differentiating between cooperating and non-cooperating jurisdictions. A report on this exercise will be presented to the OECD Council of Ministers meeting in June 2000. We are optimistic that based on continued co-operative dialogue with the OECD we will not, or should not, be subject to any counteracting measures.

Mr. Speaker, since publication of the OECD "Harmful Tax Competition Report," discussions on the changes brought about by globalisation have advanced. Several factors have come into view. As a result, new developments are taking place globally and the international community is pursuing other kinds of initiatives.

First of all, it is now recognised that given the sheer size and complexity of the problems involved, no piecemeal solution is possible. The present focus of the global financial community is on reform of the entire international financial system. Taxation is only one factor among the myriad of other macro-economic variables that have to be considered.

The International Monetary Fund's (IMF) Financial Stability Forum, created under the auspices of the G7 countries, has appointed a special working group on offshore financial centres. This group will be examining the significance of offshore financial centres in relation to financial stability in all its aspects.

Secondly, since policymakers are aware that there is no adequate understanding of the effects of globalisation, they are careful about pursuing radical approaches that could damage world economy. As Alan Greenspan recently stated in relation to changes in the banking industry, the physician's admonition of "first do no harm" is a desirable starting point.

Thirdly, the approach being taken to offshore financial centres by the international community suggests that these centres will continue to have an important role in a reformed world financial system. Action currently being undertaken by the United Nations is based on the premise that there are legitimate reasons for the existence of offshore financial centres and many jurisdictions operate effectively within national laws and internationally accepted standards. The UN approach is on devising acceptable regulatory standards for offshore financial centres via a process of consensus building. This consensus building approach is a favoured one and it is in line with fundamental principles of fairness and equity. Similarly, a major aspect of the Financial Stability Forum's Working Group on Offshore Financial Centres is on assessing compliance with international regulatory standards.

Turning to other developments, as you and other honourable members are aware, the Cayman Islands hosted two major regional and international financial meetings in 1999 and is expected to host a third one in March of next year. There are many advantages to hosting and participating actively in these regional and international events. At a time when discussions are taking place on reform of the international financial system, we have an opportunity to directly influence and shape future policy. More importantly, we can ensure that any prospective developments do not disadvantage the Cayman Islands. In a period of rapid global change, it is important to have a voice at the highest levels of decision making; one that can be heard and is well respected by all.

Mr. Speaker, at this point I think it would be useful for me to interject that the second informal meeting will be taking place from December 2 through 5 in Vienna. The UN has been extended an invitation to the Cayman Islands and I will be seeking the leave of Executive Council, this Honourable House, and you, to be in attendance at that meeting.

Mr. Speaker, it is very important in light of developments that are now taking place. And, since the Cayman Islands has been established as an international financial centre within the world community and a leader in the region, I think our participation in that initiative keeps our standing at the level that it should be. So, Mr. Speaker, I will be absent from this Honourable House. I have written to you concerning that, and the Deputy Financial Secretary will be acting in my absence.

In July, the Cayman Islands hosted a Caribbean Financial Action Task Force (CFATF) plenary meeting where five mutual evaluations were discussed. The hosting of this meeting here, and the fact that the Cayman Islands had assumed the chairmanship for the year, reinforced the Cayman Islands' prominent role as a leader in the fight against money laundering. During our tenure, a total of seven mutual evaluations were completed—the highest number undertaken in any one year since the establishment of the organisation.

On the international front, some two months ago the Cayman Islands hosted the prestigious Commonwealth Finance Ministers' Meeting. This meeting, which was attended by delegates from over 50 countries, was a huge success. The special theme, "Reforming the Global Financial Architecture," attracted worldwide attention and the Cayman Islands' government obtained an excellent opportunity to contribute to this important topic.

The Cayman Islands is recognised as one of the world's largest, well-regulated financial centres. This is the main reason why increasingly we are being approached to host major financial meetings. Next March, as I said earlier, the Cayman Islands will occupy centre stage once more when it hosts the First United Nations Offshore Forum Plenary. That meeting will be from 27 - 29 March, next year.

This meeting will be held under the auspices of the United Nations Office of Drug Control and Crime Prevention (ODCCP). It will bring together delegates from some 40 offshore financial centres and over 100 representatives from other non-offshore jurisdictions. Delegates from key international organisations such as the IMF, World Bank, and the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) will also be in attendance. The meeting is expected to discuss the setting of minimum performance standards for offshore centres. These standards will incorporate core principles and standards set by the United Nations, the FATF, the Basle Committee on Banking Supervision, and other international bodies.

It is clear that the focus in 2000 and beyond will be on effective regulation of the financial industry. I am pleased to report, therefore, that the Cayman Islands recently took further steps to strengthen the regulatory aspects of its financial industry.

This past year the government fully endorsed the idea of granting greater regulatory autonomy to the Monetary Authority. This was a goal established for the Monetary Authority by the government when it was initially set up. A task force is presently carrying out a comprehensive operational and legislative review of the Authority to ensure that it is fully equipped to operate successfully as an independent entity. Full autonomy to the Monetary Authority will bring us in line with international standards and enhance our reputation as a world-class financial centre. This task force is being headed by the Assistant Financial Secretary, Miss Drummond, together with directors of the Monetary Authority and senior staff members within that organisation.

Another major development this year was the drawing up of a Draft Code of Practice to give practical guidance to financial service providers in the prevention and detection of money laundering offences. This code, which focuses on "Know Your Customer" principles, suspicious activity, and money laundering, resulted from comprehensive discussions between the government and the private sector Anti-Money Laundering Guidelines Committee. When finalised and introduced into the Cayman Islands, the code will put into effect the recommendations of the FATF and the Memorandum of Understanding of the CFATF amongst member countries.

The United Kingdom recently published a White Paper setting out its proposed policies in relation to Overseas Territories' (OTs) financial regulation. In the first six months of next year, the UK and the OTs will be overseeing a review of financial regulation to ensure that OTs meet the goals set out.

The White Paper Review is consistent with the Cayman Islands reform initiative for the financial industry and will therefore not pose any new challenges for us. It will examine measures to prevent money laundering such as adoption of the "Know Your Customer" principle; regulatory legislation which meets international standards; co-operation with overseas counterparts on investigations and enforcement; and independent regulatory authorities. These are areas where we have already made great strides, or are in the process of improving.

I should mention that there is a joint committee that has been set up between the UK and the OTs in drawing up the terms of reference for this review. Representing the Cayman Islands and the British Virgin Islands is our Deputy Financial Secretary, Mr. Joel Walton. He will be going to the UK in the early part of December for a meeting in order to decide on the award of the contract for the conduct of this review.

The Cayman Islands welcomes the White Paper Review and will be working with the UK and the OTs in this regard. The benefits of the Review are tremendous and will be seen fully in the medium to long term in view of anticipated international expectations.

The Cayman Islands is committed to subscribing to the highest regulatory standards and continues to co-operate with overseas counterparts. Recognition of this was reflected in the 1998 US State Department's Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs Report. This report stated that the Cayman Islands "remains diligent in its anti-money laundering efforts . . ." and that the government had, "in general, been extremely co-operative with United States law enforcement in connection with criminal investigations, including financial investigations."

The Cayman Islands has had many successes over the years and there is no doubt that these will continue into 2000 and beyond. One of the most significant achievements this year was the admission of the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange (CSX) to the London Stock Exchange list of approved organisations. This was the first time that an offshore stock exchange was added to this list. The CSX now joins institutions such as the New York Stock Exchange, the NASDAQ, and all official stock exchanges in Europe and Japan. The key benefit for the CSX is that its listed securities are now eligible for trading in the London Stock Exchange international equity market and for a quotation on the Stock Exchange Automated Quotation System (SEAQ).

Before concluding highlights on the financial industry, mention should be made of the government's effort to improve the image of our financial industry. This is one area that required urgent attention since there has been so much misinformation about the Cayman Islands internationally.

In August, the government contracted the services of an excellent international public relations firm to assist with improving the image of the Cayman Islands financial services industry. This firm will seek to provide the general media and the public with accurate information about the role of the Cayman Islands as an international financial centre. The government intends to work along closely with the private sector in this venture in order to reap the maximum benefits from its public relations campaign.

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that the world is undergoing numerous changes. In every process of change, however, there are challenges and there are opportunities for growth. Over the past twenty years we have encountered many challenges which we have met successfully time and time again, and we have become stronger, Mr. Speaker, for these challenges. It is our intention to exploit all available opportunities in the future, including those in new areas such as the informatics industry and those associated with electronic commerce. A proactive approach will contribute towards the continued viability and prosperity of the Cayman Islands well into the 21st century.

Y2K ISSUE

We are now one month, four days and a few hours away from 2000 AD. Over the past year, computer experts both in the private and public sectors have been working furiously to ensure that all businesses, organisations and government institutions will be millennium compliant by December 31, 1999.

The question that everyone has been asking is: Will we be Y2K ready? I am pleased to say that the Millenniun Advisory and Compliance Committee (MACC) recently reported that considerable progress has been made in all key phases towards Year 2000 compliance. In the coming weeks, work will intensify in order to ensure that all critical applications are millennium compliant before January 1, 2000.

THE WORLD ECONOMY

The global growth outlook for 1999 now appears much better than earlier predictions suggested. Financial market confidence has been returning in most of the emerging market economies; the Japanese economy now appears to be stabilising; and the economic downturns in Brazil and Russia are shallower than expected earlier. As a result, growth projections for 1999 in all the crisis economies and in most of the major industrial countries have been revised upwards.

World economic growth in 1999 is expected to be 3 percent, compared to 2.5 percent in 1998. The Asian region is expected to grow by 5.3 percent in 1999, compared to 3.1 percent in 1998; and the major industrial countries by 2.8 percent, compared to 2.2 percent.

The US economy seems to present some difficult case for analysts and forecasters. Despite numerous projections of a slowdown, US performance has strengthened over the past year. Third quarter GDP grew by 4.8 percent year-on-year, up from 1.9 percent in the three months to June. This means that the 3.7 percent growth projected for 1999 will have to be revised upwards to around 4.0 percent to reflect this stronger performance.

Global growth for 2000 is projected at 3.5 percent. This projection assumes a further improvement in financial market conditions in emerging market economies; resilient growth in the Euro area in the face of unfavourable external circumstances; and a bottoming out of the Japanese recession in 1999.

US expansion has played an important part in moderating the global slowdown in 1999. But this pattern of accelerated growth in the US is unlikely to continue into 2000. With unemployment at a 29 year low of 4.3 percent, future economic expansion will be constrained by underlying productivity growth and increases in the labour market. A slowdown in aggregate demand is therefore expected.

There is a general feeling that the US economy is overheating and that the rapid growth cannot continue. In fact, since June the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank has taken steps to slow the economy. The Federal Fund Rate, which now stands at 5.5 percent, was increased by a further quarter percentage point increase in June and August of this year. A further quarter percentage point increase was announced ten days ago. If inflationary pressures persist into next year (as they most probably will, given the prospects of higher oil and non-fuel prices) this upward pressure on interest rates is likely to continue.

THE DOMESTIC ECONOMY

In recent years, the Cayman Islands has experienced quite high levels of economic growth—averaging 5.1 percent over the past five years. This high level, however, now appears to be levelling off and economic growth in 1999 will be slightly lower than the 5.0 percent estimated for 1998.

Financial and Business Services

Performance of the financial and business services sector remained strong in the first three quarters of 1999, and good growth is expected for the remainder of the year.

The Cayman Islands Stock Exchange continues to be one of the world's fastest-growing stock exchanges. At the end of September 1999, it had a total of 183 listed issuers with a combined market capitalisation of roughly $17 billion. This reflects an increase of 40.1 percent in new business since January and an increase of 55.1 percent over the third quarter last year. The composition of listings is as follows: Mutual Funds-110, International Debt-69, and Domestic and International Equity-4.

In March, the Exchange issued listing rules for derivative warrants, and has subsequently attracted 10 warrant listings on the Exchange. There are also now seven broker members, compared to three last year. In order to ensure that broker members are compliant with forthcoming new membership rules, the Exchange recently announced an onsite inspection programme of its broker members.

In terms of the banking sector, the Monetary Authority has stepped up its efforts this past year in the field of banking supervision. In February, the Cayman Islands signed a Memorandum of Understanding with Brazil, demonstrating its commitment to the sharing of supervisory information for cross-border cooperation. In addition, in May we hosted the Offshore Group of Insurance Supervisors' Conference and the Caribbean Group of Banking Supervisors' Conference. The Monetary Authority also broke new grounds this year when an onsite inspection team visited several Central American countries to conduct an onsite inspection of a Cayman Islands incorporated financial conglomerate.

As at 30 September 1999, there were 572 banks and trust companies licensed to operate in the Cayman Islands. This was eight less than at the same time in 1998. This decline was mainly due to institutions merging or restructuring their operations. There was a significant increase, however, in the total local currency assets of category "A" banks and trust companies. An estimated $876 million was recorded at the end of the third quarter in 1999, compared to an estimated $694 million at the same time in 1998. This reflects a 26 percent increase over the period.

Regarding the mutual funds and insurance industries, growth was strong in these subsectors. In the first nine months of the year, 310 additional mutual funds were registered, bringing the total number of registered mutual funds to 2,184. This represents a 13.3 percent increase over third quarter statistics for last year.

As at 30 September, the total number of registered insurance companies was 496, an increase of 23 since September 1998. The total assets of these companies are approximately US$12 billion.

In terms of company registration, the number of new companies registered in the first nine months of the year was 6,763. This brings the total number of companies registered to 51,011, an estimated 6 percent increase over the previous year.

Shipping

Turning to shipping, the Merchant Shipping Law, which was drafted in 1997, came into effect in July this year. Several amendments were made to this law to suit the local environment and increase its regulatory standards.

The total gross tonnage on the shipping register was 1.4 million tons as at 30 September 1999. This reflects an 18.5 percent increase over the same period last year. Some ten ships were added to the commercial fleet and 86 more pleasure vessels were registered. This large increase in pleasure vessels was mainly due to a significant rise in the registration of mega yachts.

Tourism

Performance of the tourism sector in the first nine months of the year has been somewhat mixed, for whereas there was a large increase in cruise ship arrivals, growth in air arrivals declined over the period.

As at 30 September 1999, a total of 737,363 cruise ship passengers had visited the Cayman Islands. This is a 19.9 percent increase over the 615,119 cruise ship passengers who came to our shores last year. Two main factors have contributed to our success in cruise tourism: the advantage of visiting multiple destinations and an increasing number of larger cruise ships on the market.

By contrast, air arrivals decreased this year by 2.2 percent from 308,577 to 301,686. This slower growth is not specific to the Caribbean, since the Caribbean as a whole appears to be having a slow tourism year.

Growth in stay-over arrivals has suffered from factors operating both on the demand and on the supply sides. The closing of the Holiday In and Grand Pavilion hotels in 1998 have reduced the availability of hotel rooms on the island. At the same time, competition in the tourism industry has become fiercer worldwide as countries have sought to attract increasing numbers of tourists. Destinations are offering 30-35 percent discounts over last year's hotel rates and all-inclusive competition from US West Coast to the Pacific rim is becoming more intense. Airfare competition has also been increasing dramatically.

In addition, there is now increasing competition from cruise ship companies that are targeting the mainstay of our traditional US stay-over visitor market. Since the vast majority of cruise ship visitors are from the United States, US air arrivals to the Cayman Islands have suffered the most from this development. Whereas the decrease in stay-over arrivals from all destinations was 2.2 percent, the decrease from the USA was 5.35 percent.

In light of the increased competition, the Department of Tourism has stepped up its monitoring of competing destinations, demographics, and trends in the market place. It recently designed and produced a number of marketing and public relations projects to build additional recognition to and awareness of the Cayman Islands.

The "Chillin' n' Cayman" programme is already in position and another value-added plan, the new "Kids Free" programme, was recently launched. This latter programme encouraged family travel from June 15 to September 15. There is also the "Visiting Journalist" programme (VJ) which is active from May 1 through December 15. The programme is designed for writers and journalists from around the world who are invited to visit and "take a little piece of the Cayman Islands" back home and share their experiences with their readers.

The Ministry of Tourism has supported the construction of new accommodations, which cater to visitors. Some of these include the Comfort Suites, Sunshine Suites, the Grand Cayman Hotel and Holiday Inn. The first three of this accommodation category are expected to provide almost 300 rooms for this winter season.

Tourism is also being further developed on Cayman Brac. The Sister Islands Tourism Association and the Department of Tourism are promoting a Nature Tourism project, which consists of informative signs and site developments. This project, which is expected for completion in January 2000, will contribute to greater diversification of the Sister Islands tourism product.

Agriculture

The estimated value of domestic agricultural production as at 30 September 1999 was $1.2 million. By year-end, this should exceed the $1.7 million recorded in 1998. The various policy initiatives undertaken by the Department of Agriculture during the year have contributed in large measure to the success of the agricultural sector.

The Tree Crop Husbandry service provided pruning, chemical spraying for pests and diseases and recommendations for fertiliser usage for 45 farmers. The result was significant increases (up 20 percent) in yields of avocados, plantain, bananas, and citrus fruit. There was also 150 percent increase in goat meat production in the first nine months of the year, subsequent to the introduction of a new breed of goat into the Cayman Islands.

Overall, the outlook for agricultural production in 2000 and beyond is very good. Higher production yields are expected in the light of the intended application of new technologies and continuation of government policies aimed at sustainable development of this sector.

Real Estate

The value of land transfers as at 30 September 1999 stood at $211.9 million. This is 16 percent lower than the $253.3 million recorded at the end of September 1998. The fourth quarter of the year is expected to show a significant increase, however, with an expected closing of sales on one major large-scale condominium complex and several other high-value land transactions.

In contrast to land transfers, activity on lease transfers this year was quite buoyant. At 30 September 1999, the value of lease transfers recorded was $3.6 million. This was 89 percent higher than the figure recorded at the end of September 1998.

Since revenues from stamp duty on land transfers are considerably more than on lease transfers, total stamp duty revenues as at 30 September 1999 declined by 16 percent over the previous year, that is, $19.5 million compared to $24.5 million.

Construction

Mr. Speaker, activity in the construction sector remained at a high level in 1999. The overall value of approved projects in the first three quarters of 1999 was approximately $208 million, a slight increase over the $206 million recorded for the same period in 1998. The 1998 figure quoted here is lower than the one provided in the last Budget Address, since the Planning Department has re-defined its classification of projects.

Included among the 1999 approved projects are a number of high-end luxury condominiums and apartments, hotels and private homes. Two of the largest hotels approved this year are the new Holiday Inn and the Morritt's Grand Hotel in East End.

On the Sister Islands, construction activity remains high as the duty concessions are still in place. One of the largest projects underway is construction of a commercial complex on Cayman Brac. This complex, which is due for completion by January 2000, will house a supermarket and accommodation for retail establishment and offices. A gas station will also occupy part of the complex grounds.

Mr. Speaker, I should also mention that the government has under review whatever needs to be done to assist the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman with the announced closure of Barclays Bank in Cayman Brac. We are thankful for the measures that Cayman National Bank have under review at this time and also their commitment to extend their facilities and activities, hopefully, to deal with any problems that would normally arise.

Economic Outlook

As stated earlier, the prospects for 1999 are better than previous predictions suggested. Given these encouraging signs, the government expects these favourable trends to continue into the year 2000 and beyond.

THE STATE OF PUBLIC FINANCES

1999 Forecasted Position

Mr. Speaker, our forecast for 1999 shows total recurrent and statutory expenditure, and contributions at $263.9 million, which is 3.7 percent less than the budgeted figure of $274.1 million.

Total recurrent revenue is forecasted at $273.3 million, which is 3.5 percent below the budgeted figure of $283.2 million. This shortfall, however, will be offset in the main by the favourable accumulated surplus balance brought forward from 1998 of $9.1 million.

After taking into consideration this favourable brought forward balance and the positive recurrent and statutory expenditure and contributions performance, the 'surplus of recurrent revenue available to capital acquisitions, contribution to reserve funds and capital development' is expected to be $18.5 million.

Mr. Speaker, I now move on to capital acquisition expenditure, which is forecasted at $6.3 million. The 'surplus of recurrent revenue available to contribution of reserve funds and to capital development expenditure' is therefore $12.2 million, which is $18.5 million mentioned previously, less the $6.3 million for capital acquisitions.

Total capital development expenditure is forecasted at $27.5 million which is 35.3 percent below the $42.5 million budgeted. If achieved as forecasted, this would result in capital development fund balance of $100,000 as at year-end 1999 and an undrawn amount of $11.3 million against the capital loans approved for 1999. These funds would then become available to assist in financing the continuing projects under the year 2000 capital development programme.

RESERVE FUNDS

General Reserve Fund

Mr. Speaker, as at the beginning of 1999, the General Reserve Fund balance stood at $10.6 million. This balance is expected to rise to approximately $14 million by year-end 1999 as a result of interest earnings and a budgeted inflow of $3 million from the general revenue fund. Honourable Members should also note that the 2000 Budget also includes a $1 million appropriation to this Fund under Head 2500, which is the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development. Any further surplus in excess of projection that may be realised through the end of 1999 will be credited to the General Reserve Fund.

Public Service Pension Fund

Mr. Speaker, the Public Service Pension Fund was established in 1990 to support the long-term pension liability of government under the then existing "defined benefits scheme. Honourable members will, however, be aware that on-going pension payments will continue to be made from general revenue until this Fund has been certified as self-sustaining based on an independent actuarial valuation.

Honourable members should note that the Fund balance was $40.5 million at year-end 1998 and is expected to reach $55.2 million by year-end 1999, which represents a 36.3 percent increase over the year.

Housing Reserve Fund

Honourable members will recall that the Housing Reserve Fund was established in 1997 to support any calls that might arise from guarantees issued by the Government under the Guaranteed Home Mortgage Scheme. It is worth noting that so far there have been no calls on guarantees issued under this Scheme.

Mr. Speaker, the balance on this Fund is expected to be $700,000 by year-end 1999, up from $400,000 at the beginning of the year.

Student Loan Reserve Fund

Mr. Speaker, it is worth noting that the 2000 Budget also includes $100,000 towards the Student Loan Reserve Fund. This Fund works along similar line as the Housing Reserve Fund and will be used to support any calls that might be made on the government under the Guaranteed Student Loan Scheme.

OTHER FUNDS

Capital Development Fund

Mr. Speaker, the total forecasted inflows into this Fund during 1999 is $23.5 million. This amount is broken down as follows: $2.5 million from general revenue; $13.7 from loan receipts; and $7.1 million in transfers from the Infrastructure Development Fund. In addition, there was a brought forward balance of $4.1 million from 1998.

Total expenditure against the Capital Development Fund for 1999 is forecasted at $27.5 million as compared to the estimated $42.5 million. If achieved, this would result in an accumulated balance of $100,000 on the Fund at year-end 1999.

Mr. Speaker, it should be mentioned, as I said earlier, the balance that remains undrawn against the loan that was approved during the course of the year will be made available to finance capital projects into the year 2000.

Infrastructure Development Fund

Mr. Speaker, the balance brought forward from 1998 on the Infrastructure Development Fund was $3.9 million. Forecasted income for 1999 from infrastructure development fees is $3.3 million. After taking into consideration the budgeted transfer from the Fund to the Capital Development fund of $7.1 million, this would leave a balance of $100,000 at year-end 1999.

Expected income on the Fund for 2000 is $3.2 million which when combined with the forecasted balance at year-end 1999 of $100,000, would make a total of $3.3 million available to fund capital projects expenditure during the year 2000.

Environmental Protection Fund

Mr. Speaker, the balance brought forward from 1998 on the Environmental Protection fund was $200,000. Forecasted income for 1999 from the environmental protection fees is $3 million. As there are no transfers out of this Fund during 1999, the year-end balance of $3.2 million will be carried forward into the year 2000.

Expected income on the Fund for 2000 is $3 million which, when combined with the forecasted balance at 1999 year-end of $3.2 million, will make available a total of $6.2 million during the year 2000. Of this total, $1.9 million will be used to fund recurrent expenditure of an environmental protection nature and $4 million for capital development projects which are to be identified by the government and presented to Finance Committee for its consideration.

Roads Development Fund

The 2000 Budget includes $2.3 million in estimated collections under the new Roads Development Fund. These monies are to be collected under a cost contribution scheme whereby private developers contribute towards road development that significantly enhance the value of their own property and facilitates its development. Honourable members should note, however, that whilst the initial collections under this fund are on this basis, future inflows will not be restricted to this category.

PUBLIC DEBT

Mr. Speaker, total public debt was $93.7 million as at January 1, 1999. This amount included central government public debt of $76.2 million and $17.5 million for self-financing public debt owed by statutory authorities but guaranteed by central government. After taking into consideration loan repayments of $11.7 million and loan receipts of $13.7 million during 1999, total public debt is expected to rise to $95.7 million by year-end 1999.

Mr. Speaker, even though the total value of outstanding loans has risen over the year by $2 million, total public debt service (that is, principal and interest) remains at 6.2 percent of 1999 forecasted recurrent revenue. This is well below the generally accepted 10 percent upper limit established by the government.

CIVIL SERVICE

Mr. Speaker, during 1999 the results of the job evaluation exercise were implemented for salaried employees with the understanding that a similar exercise would be undertaken and implemented in the year 2000 for waged employees. I am pleased to announce that the 2000 Budget includes a provision of $500,000 to offset an increase for waged employees that will result from this exercise. As with the salaried employees, any increases resulting from this review will be implemented with the effective date of January 1, 2000.

REMOVAL AND REDUCTION OF SELECTED REVENUE ITEMS

Mr. Speaker, to assist the public to purchase necessities, the government has taken the decision to remove duties on various food items and to substantially reduce the licensing of bulk water distributors. Accordingly, the government is pleased to announce the removal and reduction of selected revenue measures as set out in Appendix A. (Attached to the Draft Budget Address)

Mr. Speaker, for the benefit of Honourable members of this Legislative Assembly, if you will allow, I will just read the details of the reduction.

Duties on Alcoholic Beverages

Under the Customs Law, subsection 22.22, Ciders and meads will be reduced. The current rate is $1.88 per litre. This will be reduced to $1.50.

Under section 22.33, Wine coolers not exceeding 7 percent alcoholic content, presently $1.88 per litre, will be reduced to $1.50 per litre.

Under section 22.31, Table wines (red, white, rose) which is currently $3.75 per litre, this will be reduced to $3 per litre.

Under section 22.35, Other sparkling wines, which are presently $4.69 per litre, will be reduced to $3.75 per litre.

Under section 22.32, Desert wines as shown in the Appendix, $5.63 per litre, will be reduced to $4.50 per litre.

Under section 22.41, Spirits (unsweetened, containing less than 5- percent alcoholic content) $13.13 per litre, will be reduced to $10.50 per litre.

Under section 22.42, Spirits (unsweetened, containing more than 50 percent alcoholic content) currently $17.81 per litre, will be reduced to $14.25 per litre.

Under section 22.43, Spirits (sweetened and flavoured, including liquors) currently $15 per litre, will be reduced to $12 per litre.

Duties on Food & Food Products

Under section 04.11, Butter, natural, fresh or salted, currently 20 percent, duty will be removed. This item will now become duty free.

Under section 04.31, Birds' eggs and egg yolks, fresh, dried or otherwise preserved, currently 15 percent, this will now be made duty free.

Under section 08.01, Fruit, fresh, chilled or frozen but not further prepared, currently 15 percent, this will now be duty free.

Under section 17.11, Beet and cane sugar, refined - currently 7.5 percent, will now be duty free.

Under section 19.21, Bakery products including biscuits, currently 20 percent, will now be made duty free.

Trade & Business Licence

Under the Trade and Business Licensing Law, utility services, bulk water distributors - currently $25,000, this will now be reduced to $5,000 per annum.

That is the listing, Mr. Speaker.

In addition, the government, being mindful of any potential harmful effects of the revenue measures introduced in 1999 on the Tourism and other sectors of the local economy, the government established a task force to take input from the public and make recommendations in regards to these measures. This study has now been completed and the consensus that emerged recommended the removal of increases on alcoholic beverages with the exception of champagne. (I have just read the details.)

The task force will make recommendations as to the methodology of ensuring that these reductions are passed on to the public. In the spirit of cooperation between local business and the government, cooperation as this time will be in the best interest of the country now and in the future.

2000 BUDGET

THE APPROPRIATION BILL, 2000 (1999)

Mr. Speaker, the year 2000 Budget total recurrent revenue is estimate at $305.8 million, up 11.9 percent over the 1999 forecast of $273.3 million. The recurrent revenue figure, however, does not include the proposed transfer of $1.9 million from the Environmental Protection Fund. Of this total, $1.3 million will be used to offset the operating expenditure of the Department of Environment, with the remaining $600,000 being earmarked to defray the cost of conducting a marl mining study.

The total recurrent expenditure is estimated at $260 million, up 15.2 percent over the 1999 forecast of $225.6 million. In addition, new recurrent services totalling $3.7 million are budgeted. These new recurrent services are spread over several departments but with an emphasis on Education, Health Services and Prison Departments.

The total on-going statutory expenditure is $25.1 million and represents debt repayment, pension and gratuity payments. In addition, total employer and employee contribution to the Public Service Pensions Fund is $9.9 million.

Other contributions from Recurrent Revenue (except the Pension Fund mentioned above) include: $1 million to the General Reserve Fund; $400,000 to the National Disaster Fund; $200,000 to the Housing Reserve Fund and $100,000 to the Student Loan Reserve Fund.

Mr. Speaker, total expenditure against the Capital Development Fund is budgeted at $45.1 million and is financed as follows: $100,000 Capital Development Fund balance brought forward from 1999; $9.4 million contribution from the general revenue fund; $3.2 million from the Infrastructure Development Fund; $2.2 million from the Roads Development Fund; $4 million from the Environmental Protection Fund; $11.3 million unspent balance approved under the 1999 Capital Loans Law (that will be brought forward into 2000); and, $15 million in proposed new borrowings as set out in the 1999 Loans Bill.

Mr. Speaker, the Environmental Protection Fund, the Infrastructure Development Fund and the Roads Development Fund are all expected to have positive balances of $300,000, $100,000 and $100,000 respectively, at year-end 2000.

I now offer sincere appreciation to those persons who assisted in the preparation of this Budget Address, the 2000 Budget Document and the various associated bills. In addition, I wish to express deep gratitude to the public service on whose support we all continue to rely.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to mention especially, the Deputy Financial Secretary, Mr. Joel Walton; the Director of Budget and Management Services, Mr. Peter Gough; and various staff members in the department; Deputy Director of Economics and Statistics, Dr. Parsons. These persons have laboured, Mr. Speaker, but especially the Deputy Financial Secretary and the Director of Budget and Management Services. They have not had any sleep since yesterday—they have worked all night. I really want to express, on behalf of the government, thanks to them.

Mr. Speaker, I recommend the Appropriation Bill, 2000 (1999) which proposes total expenditure of $314.9 million. This amount is broken down as follows: Recurrent Expenditure ($259.9 million); New Services ($3.7 million); Capital Acquisitions ($4.5 million); Capital Development Expenditure ($45.1 million); and, contribution to General Reserve, National Disaster, Housing Reserve and Student Loan Reserve funds of $1 million, $400,000, $200,000 and $100,000, respectively.

Mr. Speaker, when I was expressing gratitude earlier, I failed to mention the honourable ministers and members of Executive Council who have toiled on the budget as well even before coming here this morning. They have certainly gone through and looked at every item in detail. Also, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank those permanent secretaries who participated in the process and also those heads of departments—we have had full participation right across the entire service.

At this time, I would like to apologise to those members of the Legislative Assembly who came out for the meeting yesterday and also the meeting this morning.

As is normal, Mr. Speaker, this total expenditure figure does not include Statutory expenditure of $35 million which is broken down as follows: $25.1 million in on-going public debt service, pension and gratuity payments and $9.9 million in employer and employee contributions to the Public Service Pension Fund.

Mr. Speaker, in concluding I thank all honourable members for this opportunity to present (and I will underscore) this balanced Budget and the Budget Address and look forward to congenial and fruitful deliberations under the guidance of our Almighty God who has protected, preserved . . . and we will continue to pray for His protection of our beloved islands.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and let me say thanks to honourable members.

The Speaker: The question before this Honourable House is that the Appropriation Bill (2000) 1999 be given a second reading. It is my understanding that you will be proposing to defer the debate.

The Honourable Third Official Member.

MOTION FOR DEFERRAL OF DEBATE ON THE BUDGET ADDRESS

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I move that the debate on the second reading of the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999 and the Budget Address be deferred until Wednesday, 1 December, which is next week. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question before this Honourable House is that the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading and that the debate thereon be deferred until 1 December 1999. I shall now put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: DEBATE ON THE APPROPRIATION (2000) BILL, 1999 DEFERRED UNTIL WEDNESDAY, 1 DE- CEMBER 1999.

The Speaker: That concludes business on the Order Paper for today. I would now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday morning at 10.00.

The Speaker: Before putting the question on the adjournment motion, I have been requested by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, under Standing Order 11 (5), (6), and (7) to move an item of importance to the country. I now call on the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

RAISING OF PUBLIC MATTER STANDING ORDER 11(6)

IMPENDING CLOSURE OF BARCLAYS BANK PLC IN CAYMAN BRAC

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The people of the Cayman Islands are surprised, disappointed, and confused by the announcement of Barclays Bank PLC management concerning the impending closure of its branch in Cayman Brac.

It is not usual that the actions of a private entity would attract the close attention of the Legislative Assembly, but in this case the concern now raised in this Parliament is, in my opinion, merited. This is so because of the following facts:

1. Barclays' Bank PLC is the oldest established bank in the Cayman Islands having first opened for business in these islands in 1950.
2. Currently, Barclays Bank PLC is the principal bank used by the Cayman Islands Government on which it draws its cheques for civil servants' salaries, etc.
3. The Government of the Cayman Islands operates a large overdraft facility with this bank from time to time and it seems accurate to remark that Government depends on this cordial and longstanding relationship.

In light of these facts, it seems only sound, reasonable and appropriate that the Legislative Assembly records its concern over the suddenness with which Barclays Bank PLC announced the closure of its operations on Cayman Brac. Further, it seems appropriate to remark that the entire matter was handled amateurishly and with little or no regard for the financial plight of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

It seems reasonable to conclude that the population of the Cayman Islands—and particularly Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—has a right to feel that they have been short shrifted by Barclays Bank PLC, and expect at the very least to have been given some reasonable notice that Barclays Bank PLC was contemplating the closure of the Bank.

It also seems fair, therefore, that in trying to seek a satisfactory explanation for this major inconvenience to the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and the Cayman Islands on the whole, that the following questions be posed:

- Did Barclays Bank PLC consult the Cayman Islands Government prior to announcing the closure of its operations on Cayman Brac?

- Has the Executive Council or the Monetary Authority taken notice of the impending effects this closure will have on the struggling economy of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

- How can the general populace of these islands be assured that the Barclays Bank PLC operations on Grand Cayman will continue to operate responsibly? In other words, has the Cayman Islands Government received any credible assurance from Barclays Bank PLC as to its operations on Grand Cayman?

I have taken this rather unusual step to raise these matters in our Legislature because, in my opinion, Barclays Bank PLC had ample time to have allayed public fear and apprehension by making some realistic public explanation. And, Mr. Speaker, I stand by this comment notwithstanding the fact that I have seen in today's paper some feeble attempt by Barclays to explain to the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and Grand Cayman.

The reticence on the Bank's part appears both discourteous and suspicious. I conclude by remarking that nowhere else in the world would the patronage and loyalty of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman be treated with such callous disregard. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member, would the Government care to reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I should mention like the Honourable Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, the news of the closure of Barclays Bank on Cayman Brac came as a surprise to the Government. Mr. Speaker, I will say to you that I cannot remember the exact date but the Monday on which that announcement was made the Governor took the decision to hold Executive Council on that day instead of the normal Tuesday meeting. Shortly before going into the meeting, I received a call from the Manager of Barclays Bank apprising me of the decision which was taken and to say that it was the intent of Barclays that the Branch be closed on 9 December.

I went to Executive Council and I reported the matter. Obviously, all members of the Government became very alarmed. In fact, before reporting to Executive Council, I received a message from the Honourable Julianna O'Connor-Connolly who was then in Cayman Brac to get in touch with her urgently. She had other urgent matters she was dealing with, because as honourable members are aware, her father passed away quite recently.

Mr. Speaker, after the meeting of Executive Council, the Honourable Thomas Jefferson, the Honourable John McLean, the Honourable Anthony Eden and I met with the Manager of Barclays Bank. We discussed the likely ramifications of that decision with him to see if it would be possible even to postpone the date of the closure. He responded by saying that it was possible that the date could be postponed by a week or so. But at that time, he indicated that the decision had already been taken.

The Government is very mindful that Barclays is a longstanding financial institution in these islands and has been in Cayman Brac for over three decades. We have two banks there that are serving the needs of the community: Barclays Bank and Cayman National Bank.

Shortly after meeting with the Manager of Barclays, we had a meeting, with the president of Cayman National Bank, Mr. McConney, and also another gentleman, Mr. Stuart Dack. We met with these two officers, Mr. Speaker, because we knew that this would pose a problem in itself for Cayman Brac. They pointed out to the government that while they were in the process of expanding their facilities and also getting ready to put into place an ATM machine, it would take them some time to gear up in order to meet the needs of the local community.

I have been made to understand that discussions are ongoing between Barclays and Cayman National Bank, in regard to how the customers that are presently with Barclays can be facilitated by the cashing of cheques through Cayman National. Mr. Speaker, we know that an option has been put forward by Barclays that would allow for telephone banking. But at the end of the day, when someone is given a cheque on a weekend it becomes difficult to think as to how this person will deal with the cashing of a cheque over the telephone.

His Excellency the Governor is very much aware and has taken a decision that he is going to write at the request of Executive Council to the Chairman of Barclays in the United Kingdom. I have been made to understand that he should have met recently with the Regional Director. He has also spoken with the Manager of Barclays, Mr. Peter Hinson.

Mr Speaker, we are hoping that all of these efforts will result in some positive results because, firstly, having Barclays in the community reinforces the belief in the economic growth and development of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The pulling out of a major financial institution could send the wrong message—although we know that significant growth is taking place in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. It could become difficult for Cayman National Bank to handle all of the transactions, but we applaud the efforts of Cayman National Bank.

Mr. Speaker, the Government will continue to follow-up the discussions that are taking place and to look to see what measures and actions can be pursued in order to assist the citizens of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman in light of this decision.

Mr. Speaker, the point was put to the Manager of Barclays when we met, if the decision to close the branch in Cayman Brac, that it could be delayed beyond the Christmas Season. At that time, a definite answer could not be given and I am not aware at this point in time and I don't think the Government is aware as to whether this would be feasible. But we would not want to create a difficult situation for the citizens of Cayman Brac or to have a difficult situation created by the closure of Barclays Bank.

We know in terms of the location of these facilities, we have Cayman National Bank at one point and Barclays Bank at another point. There will be a need to have, at least, two facilities in the region, an alternative facility located at that site in order to deal with the banking transactions of the community or persons in that area of the community that will be affected.

Mr. Speaker, this is a matter that is being followed-up by the Government and the concern that has been expressed by the Honourable Third Elected Member from Bodden Town is one that has been expressed by the Government and it is not one that is being taken lightly. Every effort will continue to be made in an attempt to ameliorate the situation. These are not merely words, Mr. Speaker, but to ensure that banking facilities are in place to assist the people in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Speaker: Thank you. I shall now put the question that this Honourable House do now adjourn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House do stand adjourned until 10.00 a.m. Monday, 29 November 1999.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 150

No. 150: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation if any clinical assessment of the Health Services Department has been undertaken within the past four years.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, clinical Laboratory Concepts (CLC) carried out a Quality Assurance Review of the medical laboratory in December 19997.

The Review entailed an operational audit of all aspects of quality assurance and quality control in the laboratory, including test methodologies, reagents, equipment, specimen handling, procedure manuals, test reporting, internal proficiency testing, external proficiency testing, personal safety and management practices. In addition, it addressed information systems, the physical facility, human resources and organisational functions.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, can the Minister tell the House what strategies were improved, or what weakness the assessment highlighted, if any, that needed to be improved?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the consultations identified some deficiencies in the lab quality assurance programme, information systems, human resources and organisational functions, policy and procedures.

Many of their recommendations to address these deficiencies have been implemented. However, some recommendations on procedure manuals, information systems, and proficiency testing are still in the process of implementation.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House whether patient care and patient/staff relationship was a subject which was assessed and reported on. And, if so, what were some of the comments?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, that was not focused on in the report.

The Speaker: Do you have a follow-up question because the Fourth Elected Member—

Mr. Roy Bodden: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House whether there is any intention to review this aspect of the medical health services since it seems there is some on-going dissatisfaction from some patients with the level of care received to date?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, there is an on-going revision and wherever concerns are brought to our attention, as it surfaced in the last sitting, we are looking at this.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister say if he will be in a position any time soon to report these matters to the Honourable House?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I am willing to give that undertaking possibly in the upcoming year.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Minister would be willing to just clarify some of this for me. I am really trying to find out whether or not the Government's laboratory was part of this audit—in his answer, that particular section that mentions the laboratory is included.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, this was the main focus of the laboratory.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I was under the impression that this was so. I am going to ask the Minister if he would be willing to state whether or not this was a positive or a negative assessment for the laboratory and the people there?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to say that overall the audit was positive and we hope to do another one this coming year to see the improvements. It really focused on how we could improve things, but, overall, it was positive.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I noticed that the assessment as carried out seems to have been satisfied with the human resources and organisational functions. Could the Minister say what is meant by human resources and organisational functions?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, this area focused on the training and the qualification of the staff and the manner in which the functions were carried out.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries. If not, we will move on to question 151 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 151

No. 151: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to state why the government's pathologist has not been granted the contract extension he requested.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The government pathologist's contract expired on 20 August 1999. The outcome of his annual performance appraisal was that he was offered a two-year contract. The pathologist chose not to accept his offer.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementary, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the Minister say if it was brought to his attention why the pathologist did not accept the two-year contract extension?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, he was not comfortable with the two-year contract; he felt aggrieved and wanted a longer time.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I believe that the Minister has answered that he was aggrieved by the two-year contract. Could the Minister say whether or not it is the department's policy to grant only two-year contracts or whether in this particular case they had the option of granting a four-year contract?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, two years is the normal contract period and no contracted officer has the right to demand renewal whether it be for two, three or four year periods. Other medical officers have been provided with two, three and four-year contracts. The final decision is made by His Excellency the Governor acting on the advice of the Public Service Commission, which in turn acts on the advice of the Health Services Head of Department.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say if within this advice and selection system, any other medical personnel were given four-year contracts at a similar time period?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, that is correct.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say how many were given? I think I asked him this before in a previous question and I am still waiting for the information, how many and what were the areas of speciality? If he has that information it would be very helpful at this particular time.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I am still awaiting the final on that and I will guarantee the Honourable Member that this will be provided to him and the House in writing.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I am really trying to suggest somehow here that this officer was not fairly treated. I don't know how to go about this but to say at this particular point. Could the Minister say if there were any circumstances within the department other than the performance of the pathologist that might have instructed those persons responsible for the contract renewal to only renew the contract for two years rather than four years? Were there any other circumstances that are relevant?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, it is to be noted that the Director of Health Services did have some concerns.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say what those concerns were?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I would prefer to sit with the Member and share this information with him since the good doctor is not here anymore.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to question 152, standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 152

No. 152: Dr. Frank McField asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation if the Hospital had to suffer additional costs as the result of the resignation of the former pathologist, and, if so, give details of such costs.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, there were additional costs resulting from the former pathologist choosing not to renew his contract total approximately CI$16,549.33 up to the end of September 1999. Additional costs amounting to approximately CI$4,280.00 are expected to be incurred making a total of CI$20,829.33.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: When the Minister talks of additional cost, would he say what the nature of these costs was?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, these were tests that have been sent overseas. But the fees have not yet been set back to us. I am pleased to say that there is now a locum pathologist in place since 1 November and we no longer have to pay these fees.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say if this local pathologist is also a forensic scientist?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the gentleman has a PhD and is qualified to run the forensic lab.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: If he is qualified to run the forensic lab, Mr. Speaker, could the Minister say if he is doing forensic work?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, as far as I am aware, as of 1 November he took over all of that responsibility.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to find out from the Minister if there is an additional person with similar qualifications that is also connected to that laboratory?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, two forensic scientists deal with drug testing but the pathologist would be the head of the section.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, maybe we need to start from the beginning again. We are dealing with two forensic scientists in addition to a pathologist? So, we are dealing with three people then who have replaced—

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, for information, those two gentlemen have been there for probably over a year, even before the previous post holder left. They were put in place to operate the functions provided by United Nations in regard to upgrading the drug testing in the laboratory and they deal specifically with that.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I believe that the Minister is saying (and I would ask him if he has said) that there is no additional personnel except for one person, and that the function of that person is to act as pathologist rather than as forensic scientist?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, he is the gentleman in charge of the forensic and pathology, as head of department. But as I said when the other doctor was there, these gentlemen specifically dealt with drug testing and, also, to the best of my knowledge go before the courts to testify.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much for your patience. Could the Minister say the age of this person who is now in charge of the laboratory?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I give the undertaking to give that to the House and the Honourable Member. I don't have that here with me.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Would the person be in retirement age?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I am informed that he has ten years' experience but I would not make a commitment, I would prefer to give him the information accurately.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If there are no further supplementaries that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Moving on to item number 5 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions, Private Member's Motion No. 27/99, Introduction of an Electronic Transactions Law to be moved by the Third Elected Member for George Town.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 27/99

INTRODUCTION OF AN ELECTRONIC TRANSACTIONS LAW

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to move Private Member's Motion No. 27/99 entitled Introduction of an Electronic Transactions Law.

The Speaker: Do you wish to read it?

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: "WHEREAS the Cayman Islands has in the past 25 years emerged as a premiere financial and tourism centre;

"AND WHEREAS electronic transactions ("E-Commerce") is gaining in popularity with a number of our competitors to enhance the reputation of their international business;

"AND WHEREAS E-Commerce represents a vast commercial opportunity for the Cayman Islands;

"AND WHEREAS E-Commerce maximizes the fiscal benefits for foreign corporations to incorporate and have a "digital presence" in these Islands;

"AND WHEREAS E-Commerce promotes public confidence in the validity, integrity and reliability of conducting transactions electronically;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government, together with the private sector, develops a policy which actively encourages E-Commerce within the Cayman Islands;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government enacts an Electronic Transactions Law suitable to the needs of these Islands and which embodies an appropriate set of internationally accepted regulatory standards;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government ensures that the technical infrastructure required to establish this facility be provided in the most efficient and cost-effective manner possible."

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I beg to second that motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 27/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it? The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: In Vision 2008, which was the 10-Year National Strategic Plan of the Cayman Islands, our people had expressed their desire for a country with a vibrant diversified economy that makes optimal use of modern technology. Strategy 12 of the Vision 2008, which contains some eleven action plans, was dedicated to three major areas: information technology, telecommunications and e-commerce.

Over the past few years, we have seen the rapid convergence of information technology and telecommunications to form what is now known as the information communication technology. This has, in turn, led to the exponential growth of the Internet and electronic commerce known as e-commerce.

Mr. Speaker, before continuing, I think it is appropriate that I should give a brief indication of what we are talking about when we say e-commerce. What in fact is e-commerce?

Broadly speaking, e-commerce may be defined as those commercial activities that are based on the processing and transmission of digitised data including text, sound and visual images. The essence of e-commerce being the sale of goods, services or technology using electronic communications.

We have also heard the term "e-commerce" and "e-business" used concurrently as being one and the same. There is, however, a subtle difference. E-business covers every kind of commercial task including the carrying out of research, advertising, marketing, and business to business sales, et cetera, whilst e-commerce is more involved with online shopping and purchasing both wholesale and retail business to customers, business to business and individual to both is really the essence of e-commerce.

Further, Mr. Speaker, a question frequently asked is how much business is being done on the Internet and why seek to attract e-commerce to the Cayman Islands? Estimates of the amount of business being carried out globally on the Internet vary greatly. The latest reports from Forrester Research (which is one of the foremost companies working in this area) puts the figure at approximately US$140 billion in 1999, rising to US$1.5 trillion by the year 2003. There is, therefore, no question that e-commerce represents a vast commercial opportunity for the Cayman Islands.

It offers a means of diversifying our economy and could very well emerge as a significant third leg of our economy. There are many good reasons why e-commerce would be a good candidate for diversifying our economy, including good synergy with the existing financial sector, and good infrastructure or stable government is one advantage. Offshore advantages including excellent professional and technical infrastructure and, of course, our geographical location. It is a low capital intensive business, low manpower requirements and has a minimum effect on our environment.

Mr. Speaker, on the question of competition, it is to be noted that all the major and many of the minor jurisdictions around the world are gearing themselves to cope with the changes electronic commerce will bring. Chief among the offshore jurisdictions that have assumed a leadership role are Bermuda, Australia, Singapore, Ireland, Hong Kong, the UK and her Crown dependencies. The Bermuda Government, through its Minister for Telecommunications and E-commerce, Reué Webb, has declared its intention of riding the wave of e-commerce to the fullest. Adding, and I quote, "we either get on board or forfeit the right to be taken seriously in the global financial community."

Mr. Speaker, the following statistics further highlight the importance of the Cayman Islands getting involved in e-commerce, otherwise we stand to lose business to our competitors. It is estimated that only 6% of the global electronic commerce is truly new business; the other 94% represent transactions that have been taken away from existing traditional business. The disastrous consequence of this type of competition for our existing economy is clear to see.

Although we tend to think of electronic commerce as individuals purchasing books, music, computers, and household goods over the Internet, retail transactions such as these represent only 20% of e-commerce. The other 80% consist of business to business transactions and, of course, this deals beyond the scope of just customer to business. The bottom line, by raising the economic efficiency, is that e-commerce will increase the overall wealth and thus the standard of living of the people of the Cayman Islands. The Internet removes barriers of time, distance, and customer base. The sad reality, if we do nothing, is that existing and new competitors who embrace the new technology will overtake us in the marketplace and without a doubt our economy will suffer.

On the other hand, through diversification of our economy, government will find additional sources of revenue. Such benefits will not apply just to Grand Cayman but also to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Mr. Speaker, a valid question is, What are the benefits of developing e-commerce in the Cayman Islands?

Before I touch on what needs to be done to encourage the development of e-commerce in the Cayman Islands, I would like to briefly touch on the benefits of developing e-commerce in these islands. The development of the Cayman Islands as a jurisdiction of choice for e-commerce would have many benefits. Firstly, it would enhance our reputation as a premiere financial centre for international business and would be of great benefit to our existing offshore financial industry. It is my understanding that many of our existing clientele have already expressed a wish to move into e-business. Providing such facilities in the Cayman Islands would complete the portfolio of services we offer. Further it would attract many new clients.

Secondly, as intimated earlier, our local businesses will face increasing competition from overseas. The development of e-commerce in Cayman would not only help those businesses to face the challenge but would give them the opportunity to compete on a level playing field.

Thirdly, jurisdictions like Bermuda, Ireland, the Channel Islands, Singapore, just to name a few, are already encouraging both existing companies and new ventures to base their e-commerce activities in those jurisdictions. It is believed that we may have already lost business to some degree to some of our competitors. There is no reason why we cannot attract a significant share of this lucrative market.

Another valid question, Mr. Speaker, is how will this new industry impact on the economy and on the average citizen. Mr. Speaker, this phenomenal though latent industry will provide better and more efficient services, will improve the technical infrastructure, and should drive communication costs down. The education and social opportunities are also unlimited. Resources can be made available to our schools, and in this connection, school authorities should now give serious consideration to including e-commerce within the curriculum of the schools.

Also, the availability of the virtual, global campus means that our people can stay at home and access the Internet which will provide the added benefit of mothers and fathers spending more time with their young children and, of course, reducing the need to have to commute.

Other positive impacts to consider are that companies engaging in e-commerce require a wide range of support services. These range from the professional services provided by accountants, attorneys, banks etcetera, technical services such as software development, website construction and hosting, hardware maintenance cryptography, back office services such as data entry, transaction processing and data back-up and recovery. Mr. Speaker, the provision of these services will most certainly impact positively on the whole community.

Mr. Speaker, of particular interest to you sir, to the Minister of Commerce, and indeed the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, will be the establishment of the proposed Informatics Centre in Cayman Brac. In this connection, permit me to make a brief though important reference to the informatics proposal for Cayman Brac since it is so closely interwoven within the broad definition of information technology and thus relevant to the motion now before the House.

What is informatics? Mr. Speaker, the accepted meaning of informatics is as follows: The provision of services by a business utilising computers exclusively to process information as the core activity in creating value. That is quite a mouthful. Basically, informatics services include software development and associated services, data processing, transaction processing, order fulfilment operations, sales via telephone and direct mail, computer-aided design, geographical information systems, electronic publishing, customer service centres, remote secretarial services, remote customer and technical support services, indexing and abstracting services, research and technical writing services.

Why are we looking at Cayman Brac as perhaps the most suitable area within the Cayman Islands for such a service? Unlike Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac has an abundance of easily accessible solid land at elevations and topography far out of the reach of the threat of flooding due to hurricanes, storm surges, etcetera. The bluff is accessible to vehicular traffic and is a short distance from the airport, seaport, commercial and residential centres and, of course, other amenities.

Mr. Speaker, there is already a submarine fibre optic cable linking Cayman Brac with Grand Cayman and the rest of the world. The introduction of the Maya 1 cable will further serve to enhance the already impressive telecommunications infrastructure on the Brac. Further, Brackers are typically industrious people, as you well know, adept at learning technical skills with a high standard of literacy. Many of them are already proficient with computers and application systems. Importantly, also is our national policy objective of making Cayman Brac and Little Cayman financially self-sufficient. This can be made possible through the establishment of informatics and the e-commerce business generally.

Mr. Speaker, of further importance is the express undertaking of Cable & Wireless to have a meaningful participation in the development of the informatics industry in Cayman Brac. To make informatics a success in the Brac, private sector participation as well as government support will be essential. In this connection, the private sector of the Brac has already made significant strides in making the new industry a success. The Brac Informatics Centre has already been established under the Presidency of Mr. Moses Kirkconnell, and the Deputy President, Mr. Dan Tibbetts, and other well-known Cayman Brackers.

Mr. Speaker, knowing these two gentlemen (that is, Mr. Moses Kirkconnell and Mr. Dan Tibbetts) as I do, I truly believe that they have the business acumen and the desire and push to make this new industry a success. This will not be possible without the joint support of government and Cable & Wireless.

Just to show the importance of informatics within the Caribbean, I would just like to briefly refer to some of the statistics within the Caribbean. It is estimated that approximately 6,000 to 8,000 staff are already employed within the informatics industry within the Caribbean. Of this number, 41% are in Barbados; 36% in Jamaica and 23% covers the rest of the Caribbean.

The financial contribution of this young industry is estimated between $200 million to $300 million. Mr. Speaker, it is clear to see that even a small segment of this already well established industry within the Caribbean could have a major impact on the economy of Cayman Brac especially when one considers all the possible side benefits and the by-products that could accrue to that island.

Mr. Speaker, I took some time out of my presentation to briefly speak on the informatics industry, as I felt it timely and appropriate to make this brief but important reference to this important subject. I truly believe that it can make the difference in enhancing and developing the economy of Cayman Brac and indeed Little Cayman in particular, but generally the Cayman Islands.

I now wish to turn my attention back to the development of e-commerce in the Cayman Islands. I will now examine what needs to be done to encourage the development of e-commerce in the Cayman Islands. New and/or existing business considering a move into offshore e-commerce will carry out detailed resource before deciding upon a particular jurisdiction. They will access, for example, the following six basic but important factors:

1. Telecommunications quality and cost.
2. Government's express commitment.
3. The legislative environment.
4. The commercial environment.
5. The human resources within the jurisdiction.
6. The location and communications available.

On the question of telecommunications quality and cost, companies will require state-of-the-art telecommunications and Internet service providers equal in terms of facility, service, supporting cost with those available in North America, or at least as good or better than those of our competitors.

Government's express commitment: A stable government, such as we have, clearly committed to the development of e-commerce is essential. A national policy statement will now need to be made as soon as possible that demonstrates our government's support for offshore e-commerce with this policy information being disseminated as widely and as globally as possible.

Mr. Speaker, policy statements will also need to be made on ancillary matters such as the commitment to provide a well-trained local workforce. It should be very carefully noted that an offshore centre that is not clear in its policy statements or that has no policy statement will not be clear how it will embrace e-business. More importantly, it will most certainly be left behind by other centres that do address these very important issues.

Mr. Speaker, on the question of the legislative environment, I am pleased to advise that the private sector has already demonstrated its support and commitment to e-commerce in the preparation of a draft Electronics Bill that is now being requested under this motion. In a way, Mr. Speaker, effectively (and I am pleased to say this) that action by the private sector almost (but not quite) renders this motion redundant. But I must say that I was also a part of the reviewing of the draft of that Electronics Bill.

Mr. Speaker, the initial preparation of this draft bill was undertaken through the firm of Maples and Calder by Messrs. Olivaire Watler and Graham Lockington, under the supervision of Mr. Andrew Moon, a partner of Maples and Calder. And for those individuals that might regard this a presumptuous act on their part, let me remind them that this is really just another of the many pieces of pro bono legal work that is being carried out by that firm on behalf of government.

This draft will next be submitted for review to the Consultative Committee being appointed by government prior to its submission to the Legal Department where it will get the final review before being submitted to Executive Council and then to this Honourable House.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to congratulate the government for the support and commitment it has already given to this motion. I really feel that when this motion is put to the vote it will receive government's full support, as well as the full support of other honourable members of this House. I would certainly be very disappointed if it did not.

Mr. Speaker, now to briefly comment on the commercial environment. If we are to gain a competitive advantage our legislation cannot simply be as good as our competitors—it must be better. We must prepare cutting edge legislation as watertight as possible, which offers protection against fraud and [protects] privacy. Such legislation must also offer protection for intellectual property rights, for example, it must provide protection under primary or secondary legislation on technical issues such as electronic signatures, encryption, certification authorities, data protection, and of course, misuse of computer legislation is also required.

Questions will also be asked regarding the quantity and the quality of available staff within the Cayman Islands. Questions such as: Is technically qualified staff available? How easily will it be to obtain work permits for essential technical staff, etcetera?

On the question of location and communications, questions will be also asked on these major issues and whether these are available within this jurisdiction. Questions that will be asked are: What time zone is our jurisdiction in with respect to advisors and customers? How easy is it to travel to the Cayman Islands? Is there available private and business accommodation in the Cayman Islands? What is the standard of living in our jurisdiction? What is the cost of living, and are hotels and conference facilities readily available?

It is crucial, Mr. Speaker, that government together with the private sector address these issues, to ensure that the Cayman Islands scores highly in every area. Whilst we already have many advantages, including many of those just mentioned, and also including an outstanding professional services sector with vast international experience and of course a first class reputation as a premier financial centre, it is important to note that we do not fare so well in some other areas. For example, Mr. Speaker, our communications costs are much too high. The current work permit delays would be unacceptable in the fast moving e-commerce industry.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to move on to the question of the draft Electronics Transaction Bill. I believe that it is important for me to clarify a few points before concluding my presentation.

The draft Bill draws upon a variety of sources including the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law, model law (or UNCITRAL, as it is commonly known). It is also hoped that the honourable minister when replying to this motion will give an undertaking to appoint a consultative committee to review the draft Bill as well as to ensure that the proper regulatory regime is put in place to efficiently service the new industry.

Mr. Speaker, if the proper leadership supported by professional advice is not in place, the e-commerce industry will be doomed to failure. In this connection, if I am not considered somewhat presumptuous, perhaps the Governor could consider the wisdom or otherwise of in due course assigning the responsibilities of information technology, telecommunications and e-commerce under one minister, since these three subjects are so closely interrelated. This, of course, is not being asked for under this motion, but is merely an observation I think is worthy of serious consideration.

Further, in relation to the regulatory regime it will be important for the Electronics Law to make provision for the establishment of an advisory board or commission and in time this could well evolve into a department of government or statutory authority. Such a body should be established with the terms of reference to:

1. Advise the minister or member on policy and technical matters.
2. Oversee the implementation of policies.
3. Market the Cayman Islands at home and overseas as a centre for e-business.

4. Act as a single point of contact in government for e-business.
5. Ensure compliance with statutory regulations.
6. Identify new revenue sources such as the Internet domain name, registration fees, licences and also a collect licences and make payments back to government for these licensed fees.
7. Manage the Cayman Internet Domain (or ky Domain as it is commonly called). We see a lot of the addresses being [name]@.ky. The management of that domain should also be under the regulatory authority.
8. Accept and process suggestions, inquiries and complaints from the public and generally advise on all information technology issues.

Mr. Speaker, let me reiterate in closing that as this motion states, the purpose of the Electronic Transactions Law is to promote corporate and public confidence in the validity and reliability of conducting transactions electronically. It should therefore ensure that with the limited number of exceptions that electronic records have the same standing in law as paper records. It should also allow for requirements under the law to give information in writing, provide a signature to produce a document to record information, or to retain a document to be met in an electronic form.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the proposed law should also address the role of licensing and regulation of certification authorities who validate electronic signatures, e-commerce intermediaries who handle electronic records on behalf of third parties and e-commerce service providers who provide goods, services, and information electronically. Wherever possible this legislation should follow international standards and because the industry is changing so rapidly, it should be technology neutral, that is, any reference to specific technology systems should be contained in regulations and not in the primary legislation.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I believe that e-commerce or e-business has the potential to provide these islands with the balance and sustainable growth envisaged in Vision 2008. It could well become the crown jewel in Cayman's economy. Thank you Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take the morning break. We shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.35 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12 NOON

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 27/99. Does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. May I begin by congratulating the Third Elected Member for George Town for bringing forward this motion? And, also the seconder, the First Elected Member for George Town.

We all know that electronic commerce—or e-commerce as it is dubbed—is, in essence, the sale of goods, services, and technology using electronic communication. May I begin also by saying that the government of the Cayman Islands is cognisant of the benefit that can accrue from a well-established e-commerce industry. We only need to take a little time, Mr. Speaker, to think about what is the value of business being conducted in the Cayman Islands.

On Friday, when we were listening to the Financial Secretary's Budget Address, his indication was that the assets on the books of the banks registered and licensed in the Cayman Islands at the end of the third quarter in 1999 amounted to CI$876 million. We know that the figure I just quoted is the figure that deals with the activity locally. The figure that deals with the offshore side of operations of the financial industry is in the billions.

We know too that the contribution of tourism in this country is around that same $800 million. Then we try to get a handle on what is the value of the business in this country other than those two particular sections of the business, finance and tourism. What is the value of commerce excluding those two? I believe, Mr. Speaker, that when we allow our minds to fall over that road of thinking we understand the value that we have in this country and the need to ensure that the Cayman Islands maintains what it has in the first instance and opens its door to the world through electronic communications to allow all sectors to develop and to expand.

I am standing here in the House, Mr. Speaker, to say that the Government of the Cayman Islands is committed to enhancing the sustainable development of commerce in these islands.

The Third Elected Member for George Town mentioned a number of countries, and it almost seems that everyone wants to implement e-commerce because they see the substantial value accruing to their respective countries as a result of doing so.

We know also that on 18 November the Electronic Communications Bill was introduced in the House of Commons. So, we are marching to electronic business.

But we cannot accomplish this by just an attempt in the public sector and a separate attempt in the private sector. This area is so technical, so complex, that we all need to join hands—private and public sector—in order to ensure that what is established in the Cayman Islands is that cutting edge that was referred to earlier. Cutting edge, Mr. Speaker, is not just quality, it must also include the cost of doing that business.

In recent times, we have focused our attention on e-commerce. We have received a number of briefings on this subject. We have visited with the respective office of Cable & Wireless and we know that just last week they laid this cable called Maya 1, which links the Cayman Islands by fibre optics to United States and Central America, among other places. My understanding is that that operation begins effectively in June of next year. Not to say, Mr. Speaker, that at the moment e-commerce activities are not going on, but this cable will allow, if I understand it correctly, easier, faster and cheaper avenues for carrying out this sort of business.

We know that in the government (and I think the Third Elected Member for George Town referred to it) there are several portfolios or ministries that this whole subject of e-commerce cuts across. There is the legal administration for drafting and responsibility for drafting legislation for the government; there is the Ministry of Communications; the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs, which is responsible for information technology. We also have the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development responsible for the regulatory side of the financial arena as well as the collection of government fees, and of course my ministry being responsible for commerce.

So, Mr. Speaker, in any movement forward dealing with this subject, some representation from these areas has to be a part of it. It is our present thinking that one of the best ways forward in marrying this public/private sector, walking hand in hand as we develop e-commerce, is for government to establish an E-commerce Advisory Board. It is appropriate too to say that the government will be in a position to accomplish that particular aspect (the establishment of an e-commerce advisory committee or board) within the next fortnight.

I make this point to show the commitment of the government and the urgency in dealing with the government receiving technical information/advice on this subject from a variety of persons who possess that knowledge.

We can envisage that even the smaller businesses in this country, the smaller retail stores with a website and with the means of e-commerce, their sale of goods is not restricted to the residents of the Cayman Islands but open to the entire world. Just to bring home the vast area this e-commerce and the effect it can have on this country.

We know that there are a number of matters that government has to provide. We have to create the right environment; we have to create the right legislation that provides for certainty and for predictability. We believe that private sector is the business side of Cayman. We believe that it should take the lead. But we also believe that government must be as supportive as possible to allow that lead to move forward as quickly as possible.

I might repeat myself here, but government should provide a secure and safe environment. Government should pursue innovative, liberal and transparent policies proactively. There needs to be consistency with international regimes. International cooperation and interoperability are necessary for e-commerce to thrive.

We know that the school children in this country will be the community and business leaders of tomorrow and will also be the moral leaders of tomorrow. We need to ensure that they are well endowed with knowledge of this industry.

You know, just about four years from now, Mr. Speaker, the value of e-commerce is estimated to be US $1.25 trillion and the Cayman Islands wants its equal share of it—as big a market share as we can possibly get.

So, our commitment is genuine. Our willingness to work with the private sector is also genuine. We know too that without the facilities of Cable & Wireless, not only the electronic platforms that they often talk about, but the price of the services of those who are providing e-commerce services . . . I know that they have been searching and researching—what is going to be that price? We know that in all of the business dealings, the question is what is the bottom line. What is that value? What cost do I have to pay?

I am realising that many businesses are already established in different jurisdictions around the world. If we are going to attract business, we have to be competitive price wise. And, I know that Cable & Wireless within a few months (and I have their permission to say this) is going to reduce its charges for the Internet and e-commerce business by over 80%. As I understand it, it puts us on an equal footing with Bermuda, in some cases a little bit better than Bermuda. But in the overall package just about equal. If we have the technology, if we are expanding that technology by Maya 1—which is the fibre optic cable connecting the United States and Central America and other areas—which would allow you rather than trying to download something which takes 35 minutes, you take 3 minutes, that's basically the effect of it. But somebody who does it on a daily basis probably has a better example of it.

If we have the technology, the human resource skills in this country, the government's willingness to create this environment for e-commerce, then I say there is nothing really that can stop us. The Cayman Islands have been competitive for many years. This is the reason why it has reached the esteemed level of being the fifth largest banking offshore financial centre in the world. It's the reason why in tourism we have been doing extremely well. So, we create that environment. Forget about the if's now. We create that environment because all the tools are here and available, we just need to get on with the job.

I believe the formation of an E-commerce Advisory Board is the answer, where you put the technical skills, be they computer skills or market skills in the e-commerce business, or drafting skills in terms of legislation, or skills within the government representing the various ministries and portfolios I talked about earlier. That may not be all. There may be a need to set up subcommittees to deal with specific areas. So, let's leave the door right open because as we move forward, we don't want to create any hurdles to jump over. Let's keep a level playing field as we move forward locally and move with care but knowing the need to get on with it.

In dealing with e-commerce, there will also be a need for the government of the Cayman Islands to decide to promote this industry that we want to be a part of. There has to be a marketing of it and these are some the areas that the advisory committee could provide advice on. In general, we know what we have to do, let us join hands and get the job done.

We also know that Cable & Wireless has put a proposal to establish informatics in Cayman Brac—the use of computers, development of software, data processing, sales, ordering, etcetera, and also to have back-up services in this country as well, to be able to do back office work. Certainly, Cayman Brac does seem like an ideal location given the tie-in with the telecommunications cables that tie them into Grand Cayman and the rest of the world.

One thing we need to bear in mind, Mr. Speaker, when we say yes to e-commerce; we have to say yes to that possibility (I think a very likely possibility) that there will need to be specialist personnel recruited into the Cayman Islands to carry out the various functions.

We also want to marry that with the opportunities for young people and others in this country to participate as fully as they possibly can within their own skills, but also to allow further development of those skills so that the social harmony that we have enjoyed and cherished in the Cayman Islands remains what it is today. It gets better if we can do it. So, the work permit issue must certainly not be an issue, it must be thought out, it must be active and it must be professional in all its aspects.

We all know that the volume of work permits at the moment—and it has been this way for the last ten to fifteen years—being requested is such that the system that we have been using since 1972 needs also to be revised. If you can get into e-commerce with all of its technology, we should be able to resolve this work permit matter and it is the government's intention to do so.

We have no difficulty giving undertakings that assist development of e-commerce. As I said earlier, the Advisory Board probably will be agreed by next week so we are off on that one. I don't see any hesitation in developing it because all members of the government are in agreement that it should be developed. We have to ensure that the regulatory regime, obviously with all that is going on in the world today—be it OECD or anybody else—is in place to cater efficiently to this new way of doing business.

You know, Mr. Speaker, sometimes when I think about OECD and all that it wants to do, I have to almost chuckle. When I think of the ramifications, as much as each one of us can see, it is going to be a monster of a task just to regulate it. Now, if you cannot regulate it how are you going to collect the tax? It seems to me that some governments will have a mixed focus. Some will go straight for, 'We have to get control and regulate this industry because that one that we have gotten used to is disappearing'.

Here I am buying goods from Japan, or from Argentina, or from Canada by use of a computer in his house. If I am buying stocks in Chicago or New York or any other part of the United States, think of the population of the world that has access to computers and the task that is going to be to any regulatory regime. And you throw that on top of the OECD wish to collect taxation and you will almost chuckle because you can see how difficult it is going to be. But we are not making those remarks to be casting any negative view on OECD at all. We are just pointing out the volume and the complexity of the task in dealing with all of these issues.

You know, when we watched in persons going into space in 1969, man walking on the moon, we accepted that. And we accepted every possible thing that happened thereafter. We thought it almost to be normal. Now, we are on the ground on this earth basically doing something very similar. The launching of a sale or an order by using telecommunications whether it is going up to the satellite and then bouncing back to United States, or whether it is travelling by submarine cable, it is indeed a world that has been and continues to be revolutionised by technology.

We are going to have new challenges and we must ensure through effective legislation an establishment of other creditable infrastructure that we are prepared to meet these challenges.

When we think of all that we hear on the television and otherwise about the computer hackers getting access into the Pentagon files or in some other area or a business file, we have to ensure that in our dealings with e-commerce we make that service safe. When you think about credit card activities and banking activities, the safety of that data must be assured in order to attract the business to this country and to maintain what we have.

I think it is noteworthy that e-commerce is coming to the Legislative Assembly on the eve of the 21st Century—a century that all of us will be challenged to meet all of the requirements of life and business. We pray to Almighty God to give us the wisdom, the health, the strength, and the courage to do what is right in His eyes.

Thank you Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I had not planned to speak on this, as this is not my area of expertise, at least not from a technical perspective. But since the minister did venture into certain areas that I believe will impact our social and political systems, I thought, perhaps, it might be good to give this debate another dimension.

It is quite good that we can see how the commerce of our community can be advanced. But it is also important, going into the 21st Century, that we understand that to advance commerce really means to advance the human elements in our society. In other words, commerce has no usefulness unless it is in the service of people, in particular the people of a specific jurisdiction.

Now, the Cayman Islands have developed basically as a result of globalisation, and we understand the role technology will play in furthering this globalisation process. The minister alluded to the OECD and the great difficulties they will encounter in trying to regulate trade to the point in order to make sure that specifics of benefits maintain within specific types of jurisdictions. Of course, if the western countries are to develop, the western people would like to be the beneficiaries of this development to a large extent. Therefore, it is not as if it is an exercise that these persons are going about doing without the possibility of some type of reward. They will find ways to hold their citizens accountable, they will find ways to hold territories like ours accountable. They have over the last few hundred years found very good ways to hold us accountable to their particular social and economic wishes.

I just want to say that at a point in our history when we have at least some 50% of the persons residing in the Cayman Islands having no status, having no permanency, and the same government that is going to admit and accept this particular advance in the commercial system of our country is now willing to accept the same evolution of the social system that must go along with the evolution of the commercial system if the country is not to fall apart. This is only going to bring additional stress on the social system. We need to see the willingness of the government to understand the relationship or interdependency between commercial growth and social growth, which means also the growth in the numbers of people residing in the country and the need for people to get some kind of feeling of being stakeholders, not just from an economic point of view but also from a social, political and cultural perspective as well.

We are so capable of always going out and saying that we accept technology. How do we act in terms of accepting the cultures that go along with the technology? because the technology cannot be purchased independently of the persons that create, operate, and own that technology. The technology will not belong to the people of the Cayman Islands. The expertise in the first instance will not be Caymanians' expertise. How will the government propose to deal with this? How will it set up committees or subcommittees to look into these particular aspects with regard to the integration?

We have been able to advance in our society with regard to tourism and banking, but Caymanians have come to the point where they now realise that although the banks have been of great service to our community, the banks have also brought us incredible social costs. Rapid development means that there is not sufficient time given for society to meet the ideological and value transitions necessary for people to be wholesome individuals. Therefore, we have experienced crises in our society which are basically moral crises within the value norm system of the society. When we talk about another venture on a technological basis, how do we not see the need also to pay specific attention to the warning signs that we are getting constantly in our society with regard to the disintegration with the systems of norms and values in our society? Northward Prison is, of course, a case in point of the breakdown and the inability for us to get together and to really provide this country with a more permanent value, which has to be reflected, of course, in our leadership system.

I still don't know how many people will be brought in as a result of e-commerce. I am told of the monies that will be made but not of the numbers that will have to go along with this industry. What type of industry is it? I would like to know a little bit more about that, perhaps when the Third Elected Member for George Town winds-up. What numbers are we dealing with in one, five or ten years? Is that predictable? What types of people will there be? What type of culture and values might they bring with them? All of that is important if we are going to decide whether or not we can absorb this new trend.

Of course, there are those that will say that the most important thing is for us to remain competitive. We have to remember what the Minister of Tourism said. We have to remember what the Financial Secretary said in his Budget Address, the people are our greatest asset.

If the people are our greatest asset, we are saying that technology is not; it is something that complements that asset. We must make sure, therefore, when we introduce a new technology, a new way, that it will complement not contradict. That is all I am asking the government to do in terms of this personally. I can see, Mr. Speaker, how I will benefit from e-commerce because I have been investigating that on a personal business level for some time. But I would like also not to allow my personal enthusiasm for this particular new trend to override my social conscience and my sociological understanding of some of the consequences that also result from change.

If we look at the industrial revolution period in England or in Europe and we look at the great economic growth, but yet the incredible social problems that they had and how it took time to adjust. They went through World Wars I and II, and then they have gone through a period again of this technology. We have seen symptoms of how when we go through rapid changes in our society from one phase to a next that it has also had social consequences. We must be planning also to deal with these.

The way the Immigration Board is making decisions might very well be out of date, but the Immigration Board is also a reflection of the type of governmental systems that we have in this country. If we are going to be incapable or if we are going to be slow in terms of moulding the immigration laws in this country so that the Immigration Board can function on a different level than it has to function on today, we are going to find that regardless of what promises we make, those persons who are interested in developing the e-commerce industry in this country are going to have problems because we are going to have a backlash from the people who have come to believe that the Immigration Board is a "protection board" protecting against other persons coming in and receiving benefits that they believe they should benefit from as a result of being Caymanian—whether or not they have the expertise and the Caymanians don't. That is the system that we are dealing with and we must pay attention to this.

So, I would say to the government in supporting e-commerce and in supporting their desire to bring in new expertise that they must show by example, by dealing, for instance, with the Select Committee on Immigration and getting to a conclusion in developing or evolving a philosophy of growth that doesn't only have to do with technological growth but has to do with people's growth. In dealing with these changes and being able to deal with the cultural changes as well as dealing with the technological change, all these things the government needs to bring to the people. All these things, the government needs to make the people aware of.

I am therefore going to sit down and be satisfied by the fact that the Third Elected Member for George Town has done a brilliant presentation of this particular industry, the needs to benefit. I am also going to sit down knowing that the Minister of Commerce has elaborated and showed the economic benefits. All I want is to hope that we as a Legislative Assembly can understand the kind of immigration social impact that such a development might have on our society and that we do all we can do to begin to eliminate some of these unnecessary contradictions which we have in our social systems.

The Speaker: We shall now suspend proceedings until 2.15 for lunch.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.46 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.48 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 27/99. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I don't presume to be long because it is not a matter that I know a lot about. But I want to add my small bit and congratulate the mover and seconder of this motion.

E-commerce means business done on the Internet. Mr. Speaker, we live in a fast moving technological age. You can do banking, buy airline tickets, I read recently where in Japan you can order a pizza through e-commerce. You can buy most household goods, if not all, through the Internet, e-commerce.

Mr. Speaker, it is a plus for the country. For local retailers, it could be a negative, because you can stay home and do your purchasing from overseas. But it doesn't have to be a negative because local retailers can join together and make it possible to order in bulk. In spite of that the Cayman Islands must move forward. That is why this is a progressive motion. We must move forward or else we would lose quite a bit in business.

The biggest area that we would need to watch out for is the fraudulent use of e-commerce, for instance. This is not new, but it is more prevalent today, the illegal use of credit cards by unauthorised persons. I heard recently that that is a major multibillion-dollar problem. It is positive nevertheless, in that more business that is international will plan to have registered offices in an international business centre such as we are.

The biggest negative from which government will have to protect itself (and I believe that the legislation which the mover spoke about will do this) is the use of shell companies to conduct illegal business. That could be just as bad as money laundering. But generally, e-commerce, from what I have read and talked to people about can be very good for the islands—it must be very good for the islands.

I will give you another instance, Mr. Speaker, in the education field. In the United States, for instance, homes are hooked up to universities and degree programmes are being pursued through e-commerce. So, Mr. Speaker, with the coming into effect of the new law this could open up a whole (and I would hope that government would pursue this) new level of educational possibilities for young and not so young Caymanians and others.

Mr. Speaker, I know that there is a plan in Cayman Brac to establish an informatics regime by Mr. Moses Kirkconnell and others, which I believe the mover talked about this morning as well. From what I understand about that is that the plan, in the traditional Brac style, will be a public company with shares being sold to local Brackers. Shares would be at reasonable rates so that the man on the street can participate as the people of Cayman Brac have done with the power and light company, which has been successful. So, this is one way that the local people will be able to participate. I don't know how much the law will protect the local business as such, but perhaps Grand Cayman could look at something similar.

Mr. Speaker, I know that Cable & Wireless is going to have to play a major part when the law is put into effect. I would trust that the government is going to see to it that the law will affect them as much as it will affect everybody else. As I said in opening, it is a subject that we read a lot about, but not a lot of people understand everything about it. But I hope these few points will be looked at, thank you. I congratulate the mover and the seconder on this very progressive move.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe that this motion, namely, Private Member's Motion No. 27/99 with respect to the introduction of Electronic Transaction Law, is a very important modernistic and timely one.

Mr. Speaker, if I may be permitted first to start from a very general introductory perspective, I would now so do. I believe that we are all cognisant that electronic commerce (or e-mail as it is commonly referred to) is the conducting of any business activity by the means of electronics. This is not restricted to the mere purchasing of goods and services online. It can range from the more simplistic form of sending an e-mail to the more sophisticated use, which would involve providing information, for example, on the website together with electronic payment systems.

Mr. Speaker, there is really nothing that is daunting about e-commerce. It is obvious that there cannot be because there are many, many obvious ordinary businesses around the world that are even as we speak plugging into the website or the Internet. And today almost all aspects of our lives are surrounded with the utilisation of computers. I believe, sir, that this will only increase as we move into the millennium and indeed into the years that follow that because the world as we know continues to emerge as a global village.

I believe the Internet is revolutionising businesses around the entire world. The Internet also gives an opportunity for any business to have a very competitive edge. It opens a window of opportunities on many, many different fronts. That is, sir, the Internet places one on the very cutting edge of technology and it's technology that we need not be afraid of, but indeed we can all feel quite comfortable with.

I believe that the relevant question would be: Who would leave e-commerce out of their business? No one. And in particular not the Cayman Islands if we are to succeed as we move into the 21st Century. Here in the Cayman Islands, sir, I am fully persuaded that we cannot afford to take the risk of being left behind by modern technology. The Internet business has the ability to either renovate or vegetate any commercial business or company. The development of the Internet, sir, with its open platform is comparatively low to medium in terms of cost, changing the way that businesses conducts its affairs throughout the entire world. The Internet is a wonderful tool that has allowed many companies of all sizes and financial means to interact on an electronic forum, which has greatly reduced the transaction cost while at the same time has the positive effect of increasing productivity.

Another advantage of e-commerce is that it also provides the possibilities to penetrate into many new divergent markets and can also increase efficiency of businesses around the entire world.

Mr. Speaker, it is also my understanding that since the early 1960s many businesses conducted their affairs online through the provision of closed private networks known as electronic data exchanges. But since the past three years or so, somewhere in mid-1996, the Internet came on the scene and it emerged as what I believe has now become a very viable alternative.

In researching this area, according to the OECD figures, I was able to find that the Business to Business, or what is known as the BE2s, were estimated to reach just over US$40 billion. So, we are not just talking about peanuts here but indeed we are seeking to go into a market that has great economic possibilities.

Mr. Speaker, the shared infrastructure of the Internet is one of the reasons why cost can be greatly reduced. Further, the Internet business or the e-commerce market is likely to continue to grow significantly in the next five years or so as Internet reliability and security improves. Right now, one of the biggest risks we find with the Internet is lack of satisfactory security. But as the technology evolves as rapidly as it has in the past three years, I have no doubt that there will be sufficient secrecy on line to enable it to work as one would want it to.

The more traditional methods of conducting business, Mr. Speaker, for example, through the phone, fax, or mail, will have to move along and catch up with the Internet movement if they are to survive in a global village setting. Mr. Speaker, there are several other advantages I believe in going online, commercially speaking, and one, I would say, would be the lower procurement cost. Another would be the better inventory management, and a third is short product cycles. Fourth, improved customer service productivity. Fifth, lower marketing and sales costs. And sixth, new sales opportunities.

In respect to the new sales opportunities, I believe this is one area that would be of particular significance to us here in Cayman, being a very successful offshore financial centre. I say this, sir, because the Internet will enable the various businesses here in Cayman to join the e-commerce market and it can enable them to broaden the distribution network of many businesses.

I believe that e-commerce will continue to be centred in two general product areas. Firstly, for information products, and secondly, there are tangibles with broad consumer awareness.

The industries I see appearing to be particularly ripe to move on line are those with high information contacts and large intermediary cost relative to the total cost of the said product. For example, the entertainment world, travel, news, information, and in particular the financial services—those are the ones that come immediately to mind.

According to the various sources, the OECD, the US Department of Commerce and the Morgan Stanley Dean Witter, the key benefits to e-commerce that I found are as follows: According to their vast research from across not just in the US but in Europe as well, they found that there would be about 10% to 15% cost savings overall through higher employee productivity, shorter lead times and scale material purchases. It was also found that there would be an estimated 20% to 25% reduction in total inventories and this would result in a higher profitability from lower inventory cost. I know that there are several businesses, in particular the airline business, where because of the nature of the beast you have to keep a very large and indeed extensive inventory. But if one had the possibilities that the Internet offers one could easily see what was available and the time frames. It would, therefore, not be necessary to keep such a large inventory for obvious purposes.

This research that was carried out by the OECD, and the US Commerce Division also found that there would be about 20% to 50% shorter lead times, which I believe would help improve the margins and increase competitiveness. In an island where there are monopolies, I believe that whatever we can do within the concept of practicability to improve competitiveness would be in the best interest of the people. The economic concept of supply and demand would I believe lead to better service and more value for money.

Another key advantage of the e-commerce is that companies usually can save on customer service calls delivered to the web especially for complicated services. Again, by way of example, I know with the Ford motor vehicles, one can easily get online and go into the headquarters in the USA, state what the particular problem is and very quickly find out more information which puts the consumer in a better informed position to make a decision rather than just going from one garage to the next wasting a lot of time and sometimes spending unnecessary funds.

They found that there would be about a 20% increase in employee sales productivity and this would lead to a very significant decline in order errors. Human beings being what they are will make errors and for a company often times the bottom line is what the profit and loss statements are. If we can especially get our financial services up to par on the Internet where they can log onto the website or go online then I believe the possibility of decreasing human errors will assist us to gain that competitive edge in the financial market.

Another key advantage of e-commerce would be that many online customers or clients are first time and it can expand the target markets as well as breakdown the many geographical barriers that now hinder the traditional business here today.

Mr. Speaker, e-commerce to some extent occurs now here in the Cayman Islands almost everyday. I know in my own household, because the children seem to be much more advanced or much more computer literate, my son is able to get on the Internet and search for a particular product whether it is in California, or Boston, or Miami without having to leave the ambit of the library. That also involves a safety element in that it's a minor, yes, and, of course, there are contractual legal issues to be ascertained at that stage. But you don't have to worry about that same minor having to walk about in Miami or some other jurisdiction where there is a criminal element. They can stay within the safety and comfort of their home and conduct a transaction online. I believe that is also a consideration we must take in mind seeing the rise of crime throughout this global village.

I believe also, sir, that the government has a very awesome duty and responsibility to create an environment here in Cayman that would maximise the potential benefits that can be derived from the augmentation of e-commerce here in our jurisdiction. I also believe, sir, that these skills must be further augmented in our education system. I know that the Education Department and indeed the Ministry and Government have gone a long way to ensure that the information technology skills are being taught to our children. But I believe that until we reach the stage where there is a one-on-one relationship with child and computer, we would not have reached the area where our children can fully maximise on the computer.

I further believe that accessibility and affordability to the Internet by as many of our people as possible is of paramount consideration. I was, therefore, happy to learn that Cable & Wireless is going to be implementing lower fees for the Internet, which I believe is a must if e-commerce is going to be as successful as it can be here in the Cayman Islands, and especially if we move from the embryonic concept of informatics on the Brac to that of an implementation stage.

I further believe that as a government, we should go a step further and look at whatever import duties are presently in place as far as it relates to computers and the various computer components, if we are going to take this whole concept seriously, and wherever possible, feasible and/or practicable review it to see whether we could perhaps follow what they did in the Bahamas a year or two ago, where they were either completely waived or reduced.

I believe reductions in this regard, sir, have huge dividends because not only will it allow or extend the whole customer-client basic users with the Internet, which will in return give government a payback under the arrangement with Cable & Wireless as I understand, but it will also educate our people to equip them with the necessary and requisite skills to be (if I could use the online pun) when e-commerce really takes off here in the Cayman Islands.

I believe that the motion was well thought out and timely. It is an important motion. I wish to congratulate both the Third Elected and the First Elected members from George Town for their vision and foresight in this regard. On the first sight it is a motion that could be somewhat intimidating if you are not in the IT world as it were. But I believe that they have shown much courage in bringing to the forefront such a motion, and I also believe that my colleagues in Council are committed to seeing this motion come to life in the very near future.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the rules for the traditional business success really have not changed. They have suddenly sped up, and the Cayman Islands must not be left behind. I believe that e-commerce promises much more gain than loss, and economic growth, productivity, consumption, and lower inflation as well. However, to minimise any potential risk be it security or otherwise, I believe that policies and legislation must be put in place in a timely fashion.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that although there will be some labour repercussions in that whenever there is information technology there is always a risk that some middle man (for the what of a better terminology) will be affected. But I believe it is also true to say that we cannot afford to miss the ship with this information technology in that there will be not only the middle man that loses out but all of the Cayman Islands will lose out if we do not take up this opportunity at this time.

So, I again congratulate the two members that saw fit to bring this motion. I trust that all other honourable members would see the advantages of bringing this into reality at this time. Finally, if I may just touch briefly on the concept of informatics as is presently being proposed on Cayman Brac, I normally herald the needs and requirements of Cayman Brac, but I believe this time that job won't be as cumbersome. One of the essential requirements for informatics to be successful here within the geographical resources that we have, is that it needs to be of built-in safety element and the bluff of the three islands has, I believe, the necessary elevation to accommodate such a concept.

For it also to be successful, we would need the full cooperation of Cable & Wireless and with the announcement that was given by my colleague this morning, the Honourable Minister of Tourism, conveying the commitment of Cable & Wireless to the reduction of these fees, I believe we have the two basic components together with the will of all parties or all vested stakeholders to see this become a reality.

The importance of this is numerous but I will just merely touch on one: that being the ability of the concept of informatics to further diversify the economy on Cayman Brac, which has been a dire concern for many years. It is good, even at this stage, to await with great anticipation that that will become a reality in the very near future.

The reason for this, sir, is not just to say, well, we have another industry. But I believe e-commerce and in particular the informatics concept will put the Brac (and Little Cayman to a lesser extent) within the grasp of sustainable economic development. I believe as the Japanese said, we on the Brac also concur that we would much rather be taught how to fish than always have to be given a fish. I believe, if the informatics is developed and fully carried out, that indeed the government and honourable members here and other vested parties can say that the Brac was given an economic fish. I am sure being the persons that we are it won't take us long to learn to fish, be it on an electronic means. I thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, the wealthiest man in the world owns no oil fields, no gold mines, no uranium mines, no diamond mines or even any extensive farm lands but rather owns the means to produce a knowledge base that is in demand by the whole world.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, Bill Gates is so wealthy that when he donates to charity, he and wife donate in the order of millions. As recently as a few weeks ago, they gave away $26 million to a scholarship fund. Many of the people who work for Bill Gates have become millionaires and multi-millionaires, and the main retirement age for these people is 32 years old as a result of his controlling the knowledge based economy.

Mr. Speaker, I am reminded that in 1990 in this very Assembly, there was a motion that called for the diversification of the economy. Some people at that time spoke about being able to evolve an economy that had anticipated the trends that global business was taking. While there was no specific mention of e-commerce at that time, those people who were sufficiently versed with Marshall McLuhan's phrase (that the world was becoming a global village) realised that business trends were changing. And even though the Cayman Islands were on the cutting edge of international finances, it was necessary for us to continue to keep under review developments in the wider world so that we could adjust our own positions.

To this extent, Mr. Speaker, the motion being debated here now is a timely motion, and it is an important motion. I won't deal a lot on the technical aspects of the motion, although I am going to be dealing a little bit with the technical aspects of the motion. I want to guard against the expectations that the challenges of what this motion called for are going to be (1) easily obtainable; and (2) available to all immediately.

Mr. Speaker, it is no exaggeration to say that the Information Revolution is very much akin to the Industrial Revolution. Indeed, I would go on to say what Peter F. Drucker said in an article that was published in the October 1999 issue of Atlantic Monthly Magazine, that computers are to the Information Revolution what the steam engine and the cotton gin were to the first Industrial Revolution.

Anyone who is a social historian, or any kind of sociologist or social anthropologist, would know that the steam engine and the cotton gin, while they brought tremendous advancements and opportunity for many entrepreneurial people to make millions, they also had a downside with the slums of London and the gin-sodden taverns and streets. Indeed, there was one President of the United States, Alexander Hamilton, who said that the railroad brought its own form of slavery.

While I am saying that e-commerce holds great promise, we also have to be aware that there is a downside and that there is a social balance that has to be maintained. I think this was well articulated by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. I think, in all candour and all fairness, that it is a matter of which the mover and seconder are quite capable of being aware. Indeed, I know that they are aware.

I am saying that we are not likely to see in the immediate every young entrepreneur in the Cayman Islands becoming a millionaire as a result of the advent of e-commerce. These things take a long time. And the trickle down effect may be a little slow and a little painful. But it does hold great scope for those organisations on the cutting edge and those organisations available in the immediate to take advantage of what it has to offer.

Indeed, we would not be able to survive for very long were we not equipped . . . and I am thinking about the large financial houses, the stock exchanges, those people who sell mutual funds and, of course, the legal establishments and the accounting firms. We would soon be cut off if we were not in a position to use the World Wide Web to conduct business and to communicate. Mr. Speaker, even in the business that I manage, it would be surprising how much business we conduct over the Internet now. Soon the telephones will be obsolete, which would be a blessing because I think our phone bills are too large anyhow.

It is possible, Mr. Speaker, believe it or not, to even test-drive a vehicle, to see how a vehicle performs just by going on the Internet. You can see how it corners; you can see how it accesses bumps and steep climbs, and how it rises on the decline. Soon we will be able to sit in the comfort of our livingroom and buy the automobile that we choose to buy just with the click of a button. Indeed, you can complete the transaction right there if you are like some people who have a Platinum American Express Card. This is no exaggeration to say that this is going to be a revolution and it is going to affect us in the Cayman Islands because we have always prided ourselves on being able to access a certain standard of living.

Also, Mr. Speaker, it is going to bring jobs, particularly for those people who are at that stage in their lives now, where they can access the kinds of skills which would be necessary to tap into the e-commerce, to tap into the Information Revolution. It is somewhat surprising, Mr. Speaker, if you had told someone . . . and Peter Drucker in his article said that it would have been shocking that the first and very significantly large order for his book, Management Principles of the 21st Century, came from Argentina via the Internet. Drucker comments that it would have been shocking and absurd to tell someone ten years ago that that would be the kind of business that would be transacted—somebody in Argentina buying a book from an academic in California via the Internet.

What we are going to be seeing in the Cayman Islands (and we are immanently poised to take advantage of it if we are so disposed) is financial transactions taking place in Malaysia, Japan and the Far East, probably with the monies coming out of the Cayman Islands. As a significant financial centre, we have to be prepared to poise ourselves to take advantage of this.

In the interim, however, growing pains are always inconvenient and we are going to have to be able to explain to people that they are going to have to adjust. It may affect some business that are not quick to take advantage and we have to retool in the sense that we have to buy new equipment because we are moving from manual to electronics. So, Cable & Wireless plays an important role as the provider of these services.

While I, like many other honourable members inside here, take note of their intention to lower the rates, I say they have to lower them still lower than what they proposed because if you compare our rates here with international rates, we are still very high. I think that Cable & Wireless can afford to do this because they have the sole monopoly on these kinds of services and it suits them to adopt the old Chinese philosophy in the grocery business—small profit, large volume. They can still make up.

If they make it attractive enough so that there is a computer in every home in the Cayman Islands, Cable & Wireless will not be losing any money. If they keep the rates artificially high, they are going to prohibit all but the wealthiest and the most determined from accessing the service.

So, Mr. Speaker, the Information Revolution and the possibility of e-commerce should be welcomed in the Cayman Islands. I think it is timely that on the eve of the 21st Century this motion is coming to this honourable Assembly and that the government has indicated its support. The challenge for us now is to find out how we can best utilise this revolution so that its beneficial effects reach as wide a cross section as possible. Perhaps the first and most obvious way we can begin is by ensuring that our young people are encouraged to go into the fields where they have mastery of the skills necessary to tap into this revolution.

Mr. Speaker, the government also has to concern itself with setting up mechanisms to ensure that the strictest codes are adhered to. I was watching a television programme a few evenings ago, where the United States Government was setting in motion some legislation that guaranteed that the privacy of citizens who accessed the Internet would be strictly controlled; that there would be a certain amount of freedom from fraudulent practices, and also that they could not be forced by strong-arm salesmen and traders to buy goods that they did not desire.

Also, Mr. Speaker, when you get online trading and you do a lot of business, one has to be concerned about the warranty terms, refunds, exchange of goods and so on. But as serious as these problems are, we in the Cayman Islands have to be more concerned about other things. I was recently surprised at work. I got a call from somebody in Trinidad trying to sell some mutual funds and stocks. It turned out that when I made inquiries at the office, my secretary had received such a call and my assistant had received such a call but not from the same person. As a result of that, we had a little office chat and I told them that there is an old saying, 'you don't buy a pig in a poke,'—you don't buy goods you cannot see.

The gentleman on the other end of the line (because he was a gentleman when it came to me) introduced himself and told me what he was doing.

I said, "Excuse me, sir. You are trying to sell me these kinds of transactions but I live in one of the largest financial centres in the world. And so, if I were even interested in buying it, I certainly wouldn't buy it from someone over the telephone when I can just jump in my car and in two minutes, I can be sitting across from somebody and see what I am buying. Maybe what you should do is sell it to someone in Trinidad who probably does not have access to the myriad of choices that I have being here in the Cayman Islands—one of the largest international financial centres in the world."

I say that to say that one of the problems we are going to have with this kind of thing is that we are going to have to educate people to be aware of "snake oil" salesmen. Because all of these transactions are electronic and they go by credit card. You tell the guy that you want to buy $3,000 worth of stock, and you give him your credit card number and he gets an approval—bam! That transaction is gone with one click. How do you know such a person exists? At the very least, someone is done out of $3,000—maybe more.

One of the things that the government has to do is ensure that the users are educated to these kinds of possibilities. Electronic crime is very serious business, so we have to make sure that we have encryption codes and all these kinds of things.

I think that this motion holds great promise, and I am happy to support it. The government has indicated that they are behind it and indeed the minister speaking on behalf of government said that they were ready to set up a committee. In all fairness, I believe the government should not stack that committee with persons whom they like, but they should stack it with people who are experienced. They should maybe do so in consultation with the two members who brought the motion, who obviously would have sounded out and come from a knowledge base as to how such a committee could be constructed. This business concerns all of us and the very future of this country.

I believe that e-commerce holds great promise. I think the First Elected Member for West Bay said it is going to impact also on small entrepreneurs and small retailers. Maybe it is time for these people who do purchases abroad to think of pooling their resources, including their financial resources, also the resources from which they access their markets because this is going to be very important.

Mr. Speaker, one of the largest companies on the Internet, Amazon.com is still losing a lot of money. I mean they are losing billions! It is frightening. But these people have taken a calculated risk. They lose about $300 million every year. They have been losing that for the last two to three years, and they are going to lose $300 million again this year.

But when they hit, Mr. Speaker, they are going to hit big because now they have opened up from selling goods and have gone into an auction house. So, you are going to be able to do everything, get everything from Amazon.com. The famous department store, Walgreen's, is going into this big time, there's Barnes&Noble.com. Soon all the traditional stores that we know, the bookstores . . . I mean, I can sit down in my house in the jungle and I can deal with the world's largest bookstore in Toronto. In two minutes I am online, and with one click . . . the next day I get my stuff by FedEx or UPS and the only thing that is holding me from ordering more frequently is Cable & Wireless. Do you know why? They are killing me with the rates, sir!

[Laughter]

Mr. Roy Borden: I would hope that between the government, the mover, and the seconder, they will find some way to influence Cable & Wireless to put the rates so that they can be attractive—not only to commercial users but also to the individual homeowners and the small entrepreneurs, because this is important.

Mr. Speaker, the last thing I want to say is that the government also has to make the people aware that the financial result of this to everybody is not going to be seen overnight.

Some months ago I was watching a programme about what they are doing in Barbados. An American relocated to Barbados because of the preferential tax rates. These people brought in 1,600 people into Barbados. Do you know what these people do, Mr. Speaker? These people do business for Deloitte & Touche, Arthur Andersen and all of that—out of Barbados. They take all this international business and they just sit down, input data, and do transactions for all of these large multi-national corporations. In return, the Barbadian Government guarantees them certain tax breaks.

Now, these are 1,600 people and their families. They get relatively little or no hassle from the immigration. Which brings me to the second point: We have to understand that progress has its inconveniences. I won't say its downside, but its inconveniences. And so there are some tradeoffs. If we wish to continue to grow in the Cayman Islands, we have to be prepared to adjust, we have to be prepared to be flexible. One of the things we have to realise is that these things are tradeoffs. It may mean that when we take this route we will have a few more cars on the road, we have more people in our schools, but, Mr. Speaker, one can argue that such is the price of progress. If we want to continue to remain on the cutting edge, we have to be flexible, we have to be tolerant, and we have to be aware.

So, when e-commerce comes we are going to have some changes in society. We are going to have some changes in the way we do business. We may have some changes in the numbers of people here. We are certainly going to have some changes in the way that we do business, so we have to be prepared. The key is tolerance and understanding, and the promotion of awareness. I think that it is incumbent upon all of us to let our constituents and the wider community know that in order to continue to be prosperous and to remain progressive, we have to make certain changes and adjustments—all of which may not be without the short-term consequences and inconveniences but the long-term effects should be more beneficial.

Mr. Speaker, I need say no more, sir. Many people have congratulated the mover and the seconder. I think, I have always been one who tries to remain open-eyed, looking for opportunities to be competitive. I think that this is the route that the Cayman Islands should go. I could only hope that the bureaucrats when they get this legislation and when the opportunity presents itself for them to set the mechanisms in place, do not take too long. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

Maybe this would be a convenient time to take the afternoon break, we shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.37 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.00 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 27/99. Does any other member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, sir. Mr. Speaker, as the seconder of this motion, I only feel an obligation to get up to reinforce some of the points that have been made as the various speakers have just about covered it all, at least vast majority of the points anyhow. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, the government in supporting this motion would not expect somebody like me to congratulate them and thank them and not have my own usual style of telling them about some things that aren't quite right. So, they can expect a little bit of that this afternoon. Not too much of it, however, because I must say with this one it seems like they are on board and ready to move—actually starting to move, in certain areas anyway.

Mr. Speaker, in making my contribution, I am going to be referring to a few documents and rather than each time ask you, I can assure you that I will read some very short relevant excerpts. At the very beginning, I just ask for your indulgence in allowing me to do so.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town referred to an article entitled, Beyond the Information Revolution, by Mr. Peter F. Drucker. Now, Mr. Speaker, this article has Mr. Drucker's definition of e-commerce. While it is something that a lot of us have heard about for a couple of years now, many of us (including me) really did not pay much attention until recent times. There is no excuse for that, but that is usually the case I have to admit.

In this article, Mr. Drucker, defines e-commerce as “the explosive emergence of the Internet as a major, perhaps eventually the major, worldwide distribution channel for goods, for services, and, surprisingly, for managerial and professional jobs.”

He goes on to say, “This is profoundly changing economies, markets, and industry structures; products and services and their flow; consumer segmentation, consumer values, and consumer behavior; jobs and labor markets. But the impact may be even greater on societies and politics and, above all, on the way we see the world and ourselves in it.”

I think that statement by Mr. Drucker is as on target as any other one that I have ever read with regard to this business of e-commerce.

When the mover approached me regarding the motion, he was obviously studying this very carefully and thought it very important to bring it to the forefront. Mr. Speaker, I have to say that I am glad that the government has taken the route that it has with the motion.

Now, Mr. Speaker, so that I don't really take up a lot of time and repeat some of the things that have been said, let me go into a few areas that I consider to be very, very important. The first one that I would like to discuss is the business of the cost of this online service. I am going to make a few comparisons. Perhaps, when I am through and certain ones hear what I have said, I might even get a few calls, but I am prepared to discuss anything with anybody at anytime. So, I am not worried about that.

A couple of the previous speakers mentioned Cable & Wireless. I want to specifically deal with this area.

Mr. Speaker, Cable & Wireless (USA) has a monthly rate of US$19.95 for personal accounts. For easy comparison let me bring that to Cayman Islands dollars so that I can make my point. That works out to approximately CI$15.96. But that rate is a monthly rate, which allows you 150 hours of usage. That works out at a rate per minute of 18/100 of a cent. To work it out at an hourly rate, it works out to $0.11 per hour.

How personal accounts are charged by Cable & Wireless in the Cayman Islands is that there is a monthly fee of $36, which gives you 15 hours of usage time. So, after you pay that rate (and you have 15 hours of time), to make the comparison worthwhile you have to then add up what it costs for another 135 hours to bring you to the 150 hours they talked about that is being charged on a monthly basis for Cable & Wireless (USA). The rate for that is $2.40 per hour. So, what you end up with if you are using the same 150 hours a month here—instead of paying $15.96 cents, you end up paying $292.50. That kind of sounds like shock treatment, but those are the figures I have been given.

Mr. Speaker, because I got into an altercation with the Minister of Education with the increase in his book rental fees a few months ago, I won't even try to work out how many thousand percentage points the difference is between what the rates are locally by the same firm and what the rates are in the States. I don't want to try to say they should be the same, but what we are talking about here is probably eighteen times the cost when comparing the US and the Cayman Islands.

Let me give two more comparisons: America Online, USA, has a monthly charge of the same $15.96. But in language you would use at one of the fast food outlets, that price gives you all you can eat. It means, you use it at will. In Barbados, the monthly rate is $32, when we bring it to Cayman Islands dollars. So, when you look at the rate structure for the Cayman Islands, you are looking at a price that even if Cable & Wireless were to say that they were going to reduce their rate by 90%, they would still be many times over what is charged elsewhere.

Mr. Speaker, I bring that point out to simply say that all of the things we are talking about here, all of the benefits in the short, medium and long term that can be derived by the Cayman Islands through e-commerce will only be very, very hypothetical if the cost to the user stays anywhere like what the rates are today.

Mr. Speaker, this is not an attempt on my part to go at Cable & Wireless. This is simply stating the facts. If we just simply want to talk brass tacks, Cable & Wireless has been, as far as I am concerned, very instrumental in the progress of this country, in more ways than one. Cable & Wireless has trained a lot of Caymanians. Cable & Wireless has hired and continues to hire a lot of Caymanians who now hold key positions locally. We appreciate what has gone on thus far. But they have a franchise agreement with the government, which at present allows them a monopoly.

I want to say something else that people need to get a clear grip on. If the information that I have is anywhere near correct, my understanding is that Cable & Wireless has a capital investment in the Cayman Islands to the tune of some $150 million. Mr. Speaker, if we look in the estimates of the budget, we will see that the franchise fee payable to the government which (if I remember correctly) the terms and conditions of the franchise are that Cable & Wireless on an annual basis either pays 6% of their gross earnings or 20% of their net earnings, whichever is the higher. So, if Cable & Wireless is going to pay government $11 million this year, that means that their net earnings for the year is five times $11 million—which is $55 million, at least.

That means, Mr. Speaker, with a $150 million investment it takes them three years to recoup that total investment. That may sound like not a big deal, but I cannot think of any other business in the Cayman Islands that is enjoying that kind of return. If what I just said is not factual then they can come and answer me at any time.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I noticed when the government was answering the motion they simply asked the question about cost. Perhaps the government being the government did not want to go as far as I am going now. So, I will do the job for them right now and they can decide on what the remuneration should be for me doing their job for them! But I am making the point because alongside of every effort that will go into this business of e-commerce and the Cayman Islands coming of age, to not only compete with other jurisdictions but to be able to possibly surpass the volume of business done in other jurisdictions, Cable & Wireless is probably going to play the most important role. If the rates for the users are not competitive, they are not going to use the service. It is as simple as that.

We have to sort of segregate the users. Let us separate just the homeowners now and go more into the business sector, the financial community. The people who utilise these services are multi-national. For the Cayman Islands to attract that type of business, the whole picture must be one that is conducive for them to either stay where they are here in the Cayman Islands or leave somewhere else and come to the Cayman Islands to do that type of business. I am no genius, but that is simple to me. If the cost of doing the business in the Cayman Islands is not competitive compared to what it cost elsewhere—or better for that matter—then nobody is going to look at us.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that first we must come to a clear understanding of this, regardless of who it is. And I speak without fear. In fact, I don't want to say I don't care because I do care. It is because I do care why I am saying what I am saying. But, Mr. Speaker, perhaps no one has said it as bluntly as I have said it now. But I am going to say this: If Cable & Wireless is not prepared to cooperate to the point where it makes sense for this country to go for this type of business, then perhaps it is time for Cable & Wireless to understand that there are other providers who are quite prepared to talk to who they have to talk to in this country to be able to offer competitive rates.

You know, I was told by someone (who I am sure knows) that in other larger jurisdictions Cable & Wireless is actually farming out this type of service to other providers. My understanding (without getting into all the technical jargon) is basically that Cable & Wireless are wholesalers and other providers become the retailers. Now, Cable & Wireless is a wholesaler, retailer, and everything in the Cayman Islands.

I really don't care what is thought of what I am saying but I know that I just made a point. And somebody better do something about it. That's not to be threatening. I take, for instance, the people whom we have to deal with locally even the manager for Cable & Wireless, everybody understands he has his job to do. He is forthright, and he does the best that he can. But I also know that he is employed by someone. We understand all of that. And not going about it in the way that it is going to be crass or create acrimony, discord, or anything like that, we have to make them understand that we understand. This is our country, and if we are going at business on the one hand, we cannot just sit and hope that they fall in line. It does not make any sense.

Now, I used some figures that were approximate, but I think that they are quite close enough to work with in what I just explained. There is no reason on the face of this earth why we cannot see dramatic changes in those rates. There is more I could say, but I don't think I need to go into that because I simply wanted to make the point on this specific issue.

The government needs to understand that there are expectations now, since they are quite happy and seem very eager to move on with this business of e-commerce. Those expectations from the backbench and from the public at large and from the business sector is that the government has to initiate dealings with Cable & Wireless and get the situation regularised to where Cable & Wireless is providing a service. And I am sure they will provide an efficient service and they make a fair return. But this is not one of those cases where you turn a blind eye and if the society can absorb it, you leave it alone. This is all about competition.

You cannot just say to them, 'Well, if nobody says anything about it we can leave it like it is'. It doesn't work like that. The fact of the matter is that the people who will utilise the service will not do so unless the cost is competitive compared to other places where they have access to do the same thing.

Mr. Speaker, it would behove the government not to just pay attention to what was just said, but to do something about it. And once something is done, I don't care whether Cable & Wireless or the government makes the announcement, or they hold hands and make the announcement jointly—but do something and lets hear about it.

You know, Mr. Speaker, its funny. We talk about monopolies . . . and I am not just jumping up and down because it sounds good. I have been around. I have a pretty good understanding of how it is. I don't have a problem with a monopoly once there is some type of regulation which ensures that there is an efficient service being provided to the consumers, that there is a reasonable rate of return, but that there is not a circumstance by which you simply have to sit and take whatever is dished out. It doesn't work like that.

You know what else, Mr. Speaker? If Cable & Wireless continues to make the same type of return that I referred to compared to their investment, I don't have a problem with that either. All I want to ensure is that I don't look at that and see that return being of the nature that it is and then when I look at the cost of the service, it is prohibitive compared to everywhere else. It cannot work like that.

I remember on, at least one occasion, there was a call via a private member's motion for a utilities commission. I am sure the Hansards will bear me out. The government thought at the time that it was just a crazy idea that had popped up in somebody's head. They didn't say it in so many words, but they might as well have said it like that. When people were bringing private members' motions of that nature, even though they were not able to see into the looking glass and see all of what we are talking about right now, the principles that they were dealing with are still the same as they are today. Perhaps there may be a lesson in the learning.

I have a copy of a document dated November 8, Washington DC Business Wire. I won't read the entire thing but the headline of it is simply this: "Cable & Wireless CEO of global operations says MCI Worldcom Sprint merger would inhibit competition, urges stricter enforcement of government sanction merger agreements." So, Cable & Wireless operates a monopoly in the Cayman Islands but in the United States, they are begging the government to protect them from others. I am not going to say any more about it. I just wish to make a short point, I will save the contents for another time.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of 4.30 p.m. is it the wish that we continue beyond 4.30 p.m.?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the government can say what it has to say. I thought that perhaps I would have finished in a few minutes. Unfortunately, the mover is not going to be able to remain here until I am finished this afternoon and wind-up. So, it doesn't make any sense for us to continue because even if I stayed on, I probably will have at least forty-five minutes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: We will entertain a motion of the adjournment of this Honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 a.m. Wednesday morning.

The Speaker: Before I put the question, the First Elected Member for West Bay has asked to move a statement under Standing Order 11(5), (6) and (7).

RAISING OF PUBLIC MATTER (STANDING ORDER 11(5) (6) & (7))

ASSISTANCE OF THOSE IN NEED BECAUSE OF RECENT FLOOD RAINS

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much, sir. I rise to enquire from the government what is happening about the assistance of those who happen to be in need because of recent flood rains. Members will recall, because they agreed, that I asked for $300,000 or whatever is needed to assist with roofs and other needs.

Mr. Speaker, there are people on the list approved by this House from 1996 and I hope that those persons will get the assistance.

I trust the Minister of Health to see that no political chicanery is being put to use. What I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that I am not a supporter of the government, but I am a representative of the people. So, I would hope that what is not happening is that the country's funds are being spent so that other representatives closer to the government or to certain ministers get the credit by being told where to go and who is to get first.

I had enough interest in, and cared enough about the plight of the poor people to ask for these funds . . . and other members certainly supported it as their people were asking them about assistance also.

I want to be advised as to what is happening and I want to be assured that something is happening and that the people who need will get, and not just who is supporting the government.

Mr. Speaker, I did speak to the Minister of Health, who is responsible for Social Services, concerning this matter. There are some matters that it seems neither he nor I can find out about what is happening. I am being told one thing and I believe he is being told another thing. I hope he can get it cleared up.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, just to briefly respond on this. I did speak to the First Elected Member for West Bay about certain concerns that he had. I have been in touch with the Director of Social Services, who was in a meeting. I have asked her to look at this.

What is actually on-going at this time is that the Community Development workers are into the districts making their assessment. Once this is put together, working along with Public Works, we hope to address these problems. If there are certain ones that are still outstanding, as it is my understanding for some time, it would be helpful if you give them to me, I will pass it through the Ministry to make sure it gets there and on to Social Services so that we can act on this. Anyone who knows me knows that I certainly would not use this as political one-upmanship. It has to be [done] for those that really need the help.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I ask you that you be very brief, please, First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I don't intend to be long. I don't want to leave any impression that I am blaming the minister, because I am not. But it is no use in us as representatives seeing the problem and then we cannot hear what's happening. It is no use for us to go out on the road, take a whole day to go, or an afternoon to go on a road-visit, to find only that the roads that you planned are not getting done and somebody else's is getting done, and that it depends on who contacts whom.

These are the country's funds! And while I am certainly not against anybody getting anything, they have a duty to inform us as to what is happening concerning expenditure. As one member rightly just said, they have a duty to involve us—whether they like us or whether we support them or not.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that this House do now adjourn until 10.00 a.m. on Wednesday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until 10.00 a.m. on Wednesday.

AT 4.37 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM WEDNESDAY, 1 DECEMBER 1999.

EDITED
WEDNESDAY
1 DECEMBER 1999
10.19 AM

[Prayers read by the Third Elected Member for George Town]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers. Question 153 is standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE

QUESTION 153

No. 153: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning to give a progress report on the new canteen facilities at the George Hicks High School.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Construction of the new canteen facilities at the George Hicks High School commenced on 3 May. It is scheduled to be completed by the end of December 1999. The kitchen equipment is now being installed. Part of the furniture for the hall has already arrived and the remainder is expected to be on the Island by the end of this month.

The project was delayed due to problems experienced by the contractors and subcontractors, late arrival of some building materials, and variations to the services to meet Planning requirements.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister give us some detail regarding the problems experienced by the contractors and subcontractors?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am instructed that it was normal construction problems, without being anything unusual.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Notwithstanding that the project experienced delays, can the honourable minister state what that has done to the cost?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The engineer instructs me that the project is still within cost, and within the contingencies that were put in for the overruns, or for whatever alterations.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Getting back to the problems being experienced by the contractors and subcontractors, if walls were constructed and had to be knocked down in order to allow equipment or other things to be put in place, can the honourable minister explain where the responsibility for such things lies?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Public Works has said that they would have to investigate that and come back. The representative here does not know of this; but he is really not the person who has been on the site from day to day. I can undertake to ask Public Works to find out, and come back.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister say then if Public Works as the project manager (as I understand it) has had any requests from contractors or subcontractors for any additional costs which they have either justified or not justified?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Public Works says that as with all contracts there would be variations. If there are alterations that are the result of government's directions, then government pays. If they are as a result of mistakes by the contractor there would be a ruling on it and the contractor would pay.

However, I cannot give the member a more specific answer because that is the most that Public Works is giving to me at this stage.

The Speaker: Three additional supplementaries on this question. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Vague, at best, but nevertheless . . . Yes Mr. Speaker, I understand.

The minister is obviously taking information from the project managers to answer these questions. Perhaps we can get an answer to this: If Public Works is the project manager, can the honourable minister state what type of checks and balances occur during the construction of this specific project in regard to ensuring that it is being built according to specs and in the manner in which it is expected to be completed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Apparently, both the architect and the senior supervisor would visit the site quite often to ensure that the building complies with the specifications set out in the contract.

The Speaker: Before calling on the First Elected Member for George Town, does any other member have a supplementary question? (pause)

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I always look out to see if anyone else has a question to give them an opportunity. Anyway, can the honourable minister state who that senior supervisor is for this specific project?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Mr. Tony Rowlands is the senior supervisor.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I know this is my final supplementary. Perhaps next time the minister would deem it fit to have that person here to answer the questions being asked. Can the honourable minister then give an undertaking to provide in writing all of the answers he has not been able to answer this morning in regard to this project within a specified period of time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Public Works has said that they will provide the answer within ten days. The other thing that I could maybe just say Mr. Speaker, is that when the question is general, the way this one is, to give a progress report, if there are specific areas that members wish to have, for example details of specific areas, that they could assist and let me know. I am happy to then get the information that is needed.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 154, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Obviously the honourable minister wishes to put a whole new twist to questions . . . Anyway. . .

QUESTION 154

No. 154: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning to give a detailed list of the unfilled positions established for teachers in all government schools.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: The only unfilled position is for a Head of Department for Information Technology at the George Hicks High School which occurred after the post holder returned to the United Kingdom. The post of an Emotional Behaviour Disorder Specialist remained unfilled in September.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: For purposes of clarity, can the honourable minister state whether this question has been answered based on established posts, or has it been answered based on requests for posts from the heads of the various schools?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Established posts.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister explain the process used to decide whether to grant or deny the requests for additional staff from the various heads of the schools?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: The last question was largely a Public Works one, now I think we are getting into a Personnel aspect. This is an area that my ministry does not deal with. The procedures for matters relating to the Public Service Commission and employing . . . really, I am not competent to answer. I don't want to do what happened in the last answer—give information that is really not under my ministry.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps this one will end very shortly, but I have to ask the minister a question, and I want him to repeat himself. Is the minister saying to this honourable House that the Ministry of Education has no dealings with personnel in education, or any knowledge of such?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, that is not what I am saying. What I am saying is that personnel is under the Personnel Department, the Chief Secretary, and the Governor. If the honourable member is asking me questions on the procedure relating to the Personnel Department, I don't want to try to answer questions which are not under me and for which I am not competent to deal with.

Obviously, the Department of Education deals with personnel, but not through me. It is a Personnel matter. It is not an Education matter where we are taking decisions on who fills these posts.

However, I should say that out of 350-odd posts, to only have these two posts unfilled, maybe a compliment would have been good. I compliment the Personnel Department for filling all of those posts along with the Department of Education. It is quite a feat to get that many teachers and posts filled when we know that this recruiting has to be done very early, normally March, April, May, because of teachers' contracts and the summer period.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Obviously the minister is either not capable of understanding the question, or he chooses in his usual style to understand it in the fashion he wishes to answer it in. I want to repeat the question, Mr. Speaker, because I am sure that while I do not have the greatest command of the Queen's English, everybody else understood my question.

My question to the minister was, What is the process that decides to deny or agree to a request from a head of one of the public schools for additional staff? That question has to be dealt with long before Personnel deals with the actual recruitment process. Before Personnel can deal with it the department has to give the request to Personnel, which means they have to agree to the request from elsewhere. That is what I am talking about.

He cannot tell me, Mr. Speaker, that the ministry doesn't deal with anything like that. If that—

The Speaker: Please turn—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What, sir?

The Speaker: Please turn it into a question.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, sir, Mr. Speaker. I am asking the minister again to answer the question that I asked him.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Personnel Department has a committee called the New Services Committee. All new services go to the New Services Committee. That committee, once again, is under Personnel. It is not under my ministry. The new posts that are submitted are sent up to this committee. So, it is a Personnel matter.

If the member wishes to know anything further, I can maybe ask the Chief Secretary for details relating to the New Services Committee. But I have to be careful getting into areas which are not under me, but that are under Personnel.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am sure that some other people have supplementaries on that, so I will ask a final supplementary. The minister's new name should be "The Ducker!"

Can the honourable minister say then, giving the answer he just gave, if all requests which come from the heads of the schools for additional staff are simply collated by the department and passed on to this New Services Committee? Is there no decision-making process whether the department itself agrees with the requests or not? If so, at that point in time what function does the department serve if anything else but just a collator of the process?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I was just going to mention that at least I am a slim ducker, not a fluffed-up ducker!

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What I understand is that the new posts go to the Chief Education Officer where there has to be some justification. He then sends them on to the New Services Committee and the decision is made at that stage. It is up to Personnel then, through this committee, on whether they move them on or not.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Once the need has been identified, and the recommendations from the Personnel Department made, what role or function does the Education Department or Ministry play, if any?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that once that happens, the posts are established and they follow the Personnel procedure. They go through the advertising and the filing of the posts through Personnel.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: In cases where interviews have to be conducted and where candidates may have to be short-listed, can the honourable minister tell the House which department bears responsibility?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Personnel Department.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House what the role and function of the Education Department is? Is it purely consultative, seeing that Education, in particular the choosing of teachers, is a rather specialist field? Does the Personnel Department make these decisions exclusive of cooperation by the staff of the Education Department? Or is there consultation and dialogue between Personnel and Department of Education or Ministry staff?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am once again straying a bit into the Personnel area, but what I understand happens is that the Education Department does a short-list. Normally a panel of three, one of which is from Education, will do the interviewing. But the Public Service Commission makes the decision on who is employed. Once they employ them, then they are obviously under the Personnel Department and they teach.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Can the Honourable Minister of Education say if all the primary schools have all the teachers they need?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that they do.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say, in terms of describing the hiring of teachers, if the Education Department is in a better position to decide on who should be hired than, say, the Personnel Department? Who has the expertise to decide on who should be hired?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: My reply to that is only that I can repeat what the procedure is. Normally one senior education staff from the department would be on the committee of three that does the interviewing. As to who is more competent, I can just say there is a combination between Personnel and the Education Department. But, obviously, the education representative is qualified in that profession. The other two may or may not carry similar qualification. I know that the PSC does have one teacher on it.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town, two additional supplementaries and we will move on.

Dr. Frank McField: The reason I asked that was because it would appear from his description of the procedure that basically the Education Department has absolutely no say or no influence on the hiring process. I think that would be very unfortunate.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: They have some influence, but they are really not the people who make the full decision. They short-list . . . I would think, for example, that if they found an applicant who was not qualified that would be raised, and presumably those people would be removed from the list that are going to be interviewed.

One member is there . . . and they are active. But, as the member knows, under the new system that was proposed sometime back, more of the Personnel side will then come under the influence of the specific departments and that obviously would allow a higher specialisation, if I may use that word, in the recruiting.

So, I guess my answer is that I think there are ways in which the department could do more without crossing the line between Personnel and politics.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Can the honourable minister say who travels abroad to interview applicants?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that if there are a lot of posts in one school, normally they will add the principal from that school to the panel, along with the Chief Chief Education Officer and then there would be two instead of three. If not, the Chief Education Officer and two from Personnel go.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 155, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

No. 155: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources to say whether anyone was found taking lobster illegally in Little Cayman, and if so, were they prosecuted.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: On 18 October 1999, at approximately 8.00 PM at a property on Little Cayman, the Department of Environment research staff warned four individuals of prosecution for violating the Marine Conservation Law with respect to the number of lobsters taken. A Department Marine Enforcement Officer has subsequently taken over the case. At this time, I am not at liberty to discuss the details of the case as the matter is currently pending prosecution.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say what the procedure is when someone is found taking lobster or conch illegally?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The procedure, as I understand it, is that if somebody is caught within the Marine Park area taking lobster where it is not permitted, it would be confiscated and they would be arrested. However, if lobsters are taken outside the timeframe laid down by the law, someone could also be arrested.

On the other hand, if the numbers specified in the law are violated you could also be arrested.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say whether this person was arrested or not?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Where it says in the answer that the case is pending prosecution, I take it that the person must have been arrested.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The answer also says that the staff warned four individuals. So, does the minister know or does he not know whether they were arrested?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The answer goes on further than that sir. It says that four individuals were warned for being prosecuted. I cannot say if they were arrested. I pointed out . . . I take for granted that they were, seeing that the case is pending.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I wonder if the minister could determine by further investigation whether these persons have been warned, whether or not they were arrested at the time, or what is the situation. If they were not arrested—which is the usual procedure—then, why not. If he can find out may I have it in writing?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I will repeat what I said a while ago: It is a case to be prosecuted. This was the action seen fit by the department. In other words, the matter will definitely be going to trial. I don't think, in a case like this, that somebody would go to trial if they were not arrested.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I don't want to prolong this, but I know what happens in West Bay. Now, whether Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are getting different treatment, I don't know. I would like to determine whether or not they were arrested at the time or not. And if he can find that out, if he doesn't know now, I would appreciate it.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 156, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 156

No. 156: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning how will the implementation of the National Curriculum enhance the effectiveness of the School's Inspectorate.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The National Curriculum will identify the precise standards expected of pupils at key stages in their education. This will enable the Inspectorate to judge the performance and progress of schools with much greater precision than is currently the case.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: How does this absence of the national curriculum enable the school's Inspectorate to get a precise measurement of the performance of these schools for comparative purposes?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The school's Inspectorate uses criteria published in their handbook for school inspections. There was wide consultation throughout all the schools on that handbook before it was completed. Judgments are based on what the pupils know, understand and can do, the extent to which pupils' achievements match agreed standards or expectations and the extent to which standards show improvements over time.

When assessing standards, the Inspectorate at present refers to requirements of the Education Law, the Cayman Islands Subject Guidelines, the external test results, and international standards, mainly from the United Kingdom when greater precision is needed. However, as mentioned in this, the curriculum will enhance the level of judging the performance and the progress of schools.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: In light of the fact that there is no national curriculum, can the honourable minister tell the House how we can guarantee that the standards and criterion for evaluation remains consistent, relevant and valid?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There is a national curriculum at present. All of the key stages have been completed, and the team is now moving into the middle school, or junior high school at this stage. I think I mentioned earlier that the basic subjects had been, to a large extent, completed.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, when the minister says that there is a national curriculum at present, can he tell the House whether or not all the subjects for that curriculum are in place? Or are there still some subjects that remain to be completed? If there are, can he tell the House what those subjects are and at what level they remain to be completed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I would just like to point out that there has always been a curriculum in place. There still is a curriculum in place. That's what teachers teach by. But the Five-year National Education Plan did emphasise that the national curriculum should be produced. It is, in some respects, a revision of the present curriculum that is in place. Math, English, and Social Studies have been completed.

Presently, the Science curriculum is being developed and there are other subjects that they will then go on to. But the core subjects have now been completed.

I should point out that it is quite a task to deal with a national curriculum at the level and consultation that is being done at this time through the Five-year National Education Plan.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House what has taken so long for the national curriculum to be developed and implemented? According to the Hansard I have here for 18 November 1993, he gave the House the undertaking that the curriculum would be completed within a few years. He said possibly two years at the most.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning. Before answering the question, I would I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I so move, sir.

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I really don't know why in the eight years before education came under me as minister nothing at all was done on the curriculum. The honourable member would really have to direct that question to earlier ministers. Obviously, nothing was done.

The timing that I gave, and I did bring in a five-year national strategic plan—the first strategic plan this country saw. It has laid the basis for future strategic plans here, and it has put education on a strong footing. I may have given an estimate at that time, and it may well be that that estimate of time may have overrun. But it's very important, and I stress this, it is very important that the revision of the curriculum is done right. And if it takes a bit longer to get it done right, I think that is far more important.

I would like to stress again, sir, that there is a curriculum in place. Basically, the national curriculum now is one that will draw on that old curriculum and will obviously introduce new and more up-to-date standards, increased standards, and develop the curriculum further. That's the whole aim, to basically develop and enrich the curriculum for the betterment of students.

But a lot of work has been done. And to deal with the three core subjects and to complete them in that time has taken a lot of effort, and I would really like to thank all who have been involved in it because I know the amount of time they have spent. I would also like to thank them for the wide consultation that was carried out amongst teachers, both private and government, and staff, and to say that I am happy that this is moving on and that the balance of the subjects will be completed. I am sure at that stage it may well be that the time to begin reviewing begins again, and the cycle goes on.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, two additional supplementaries.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Maybe when the Minister for Education leaves here he can get a job at the Vatican because I have never heard so much pontificating in all of my life!

I would like to ask—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The ducking Pope!

[Members' laughter]

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would now like to ask the honourable minister if he can tell the House whether the schools Inspectorate and the national curriculum are also gearing up for a move he expressed at the national conference on education which was recently held, that is a move utilising technological methods in the promotion of learning and education. How will this make the work of the Inspectorate easier and how will it enhance the role of the Inspectorate and the classroom teachers and students?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am really only a humble servant of the people, and by no means would I profess to be a pontiff. But the Inspectorate is going to carefully monitor the increased use of information technology (IT) in the classroom and in the schools to ensure that the children are fully equipped and that they are being given the necessary teaching that will equip them to ultimately move into the work force that is becoming more and more IT based.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Since the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town gave me his last supplementary, maybe I will get a couple, I don't know.

Can the honourable minister state if there is any relationship with the process of site-based planning and the development of the new national curriculum?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, my specialist advised me that they cannot see the link.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Okay, then I am finished.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 157, standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTION 157

No. 157: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works if any parts have been replaced on the crane at the Port Authority and, if so, why, what were they and at what cost.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The Port Authority has been operating the crane for about two and one half years and it is not surprising that some parts would require changing due to wear and tear. Additionally, the crane for the past year has been loading two containers at one time with the assistance of special twist locks that were purchased. The decision to reconfigure the crane boom from the lofting jib to a straight boom was the result of a suggestion from the operators regarding maximising the off-loading process by changing the lofting jib.

The cost of the reconfiguration of the crane boom was CI$52,538.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I agree with the first sentence of the minister's reply. But I wonder if the honourable minister could say if there was a spreader attached to the original boom on the crane? If that and other parts have been replaced in the reconfiguration, where are those parts now, and what was the cost of those parts when the crane was purchased?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer is that the spreader, which was purchased with the crane, is electrical, and is useable. We purchased a second one, which is hydraulic in its operation, for the specific purpose of ensuring the ability to offload goods as and when necessary.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: If I understand the honourable minister correctly, the original spreader was electrical. Where is that spreader now, without my producing photographs?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My understanding, Mr. Speaker, is that that spreader is with us. Just recently it was—

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In Grand Cayman, at the dock, is my understanding.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I wonder if the honourable minister could say that a problem existed with that particular spreader whereby if containers were not properly balanced it could cause damage to it, and did on certain occasions, having to replace certain parts.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My understanding is that the original spreader, which is electrical, is chain driven. And there were problems from time to time with the chain, and the chain did have to be replaced.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: If the crane boom, or the lofting jib were changed or reconfigured to maximise the offloading process, how many containers were being offloaded before, and how many containers are being offloaded afterward?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The change from the lofting jibs to the straight boom actually gained the Port Authority the movement of an additional four to five containers per hour, moving up to the total moved per hour to 32 at times.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: But they are still only offloading one or two containers per time, question (a); and question (b), what is the total cost of this crane now?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The member is correct, we can only offload one at a time. But when I referred to loading two at a time, it's empty containers going back on the ship to depart either to Tampa, or to Miami. The cost of the crane does not change. It remains the same.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: According to the minister there is an additional cost here, plus the first cost for purchase. There has to be an additional cost, unless I am wrong. Maybe he can point that out to me.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The cost that I already gave dealt with the reconfiguration of the crane. The member was asking whether the cost of the crane had changed. I was then referring to the cost of the crane at the time of purchase and its operation.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: No, no, no.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Obviously, if we change the boom, and that boom cost $52,000, there is a change. But there is also the lofting jib which the sales representative through which we purchased the crane in the first place, has indicated an interest in purchasing at a value of US$115,000.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: So, what then is the total cost of the crane?

The Speaker: I think that's outside the ambit of the original question.

If you wish to answer that, you may.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, if I may, sir, this arises out of his answer. It is a supplementary question so I think it has much relevance.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, the answer really is that the original cost of the crane, plus the $52,000, less the sale (which will eventually happen) of the jib of US$115,000 . . . may I go on to point out that the operation of the crane is profitable and we are happy to be able to say that to members of the House as well as to the listening public.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side caught my eye, do you have a follow up?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I thank the Member for North Side for giving way. I don't think my question was answered. I am asking what the total cost of the crane is. Either he knows it, or he doesn't. The total cost of the crane—very plain, sir.

The Speaker: Again, I say that is outside the ambit of the original question. If you want the answer, put down a substantive question for that amount.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: I will not entertain any argument, please sit down.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am not asking for an argument, sir. I am asking you to listen for a minute. Are you going to listen, or do I have to sit down?

The Speaker: I am waiting on the next supplementary.
The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say if prior to purchasing the crane in its original configuration if the Port Authority was aware that there were accidents occurring in Trinidad with the same type of crane with the same configuration of the boom for the lofting jib and other things that have been changed on ours?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: What I should say here is that the crane being referred to by the member is a crane in Trinidad that was purchased after we purchased ours.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I thank the honourable minister for that reply, but I would like him to give me the dates that both cranes were purchased, if he is aware of those dates.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am aware of the date that we purchased the crane. I don't have that detail here with me. I can supply it to the member and I can undertake to provide the date the crane was purchased in Trinidad as well. There is no difficulty with that at all, Mr. Speaker. We have an open government.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Given the line of supplementaries that have come forward, the minister might be able to give an answer to this: It is obvious from the answer that afterthought was what led to the change in the configuration. So, when the crane was being purchased, and as I understand it had to be built to specifications, what went wrong with the whole process in the beginning that the correct configuration was not dealt with at that time rather than realising after using it for a while what had to be done.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In addition to the answer I gave, which was a suggestion from the operators that we should change from the lofting jib to the straight boom, I also was approached by a local crane owner who expressed some concern about the backwards stability of the crane with the lofting jib configuration in the unlikely event of a sudden loss of a heavy load while lifting. When we talk about a lofting jib, it's almost like my arm and my elbow—it has this movement. It can either go straight, or be over in that position. The concern was also directed to the manufacturer (Manitowoc) and they justified it to the satisfaction of the Authority.

However, we know that things do happen, even though there is justification. So, out of an abundance of caution we took the view that we should utilise all of our faculties to ensure the maximum safety of offloading ships. And that's the bottom line as to why we changed it. Whenever there is any doubt in anyone's mind operating at Port Authority or any other facility that operates cranes, safety is the key issue.

So, we decided to change the boom from a lofting jib to a straight boom. The additional cost was CI$52,538. We are going to sell the lofting jib. And the value of that is US$115,000.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: The minister just said they were going to sell the lofting jib. Did I understand you correctly? The parts that were taken off? Can the honourable minister tell the House how long it has been since the reconfiguration of the crane took place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: About two months.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town. Two additional supplementaries and we will move on.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, sir.

I heard the minister's answer to the question I asked before the Member for North Side asked hers. I wish to subscribe to the belief that he has not answered my question. He related what has happened, but he did not answer the question, which simply was, During the process of deciding on what type of crane to be bought and however it was supposed to work, what went wrong? Why was it not figured out that what was the second shot should have been the first shot?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I gave an answer to the Elected Member for North Side to say we reconfigured this approximately two months ago. The answer begins by saying that we have been operating this crane for two and one half years. So, the safety of it, and the usefulness of it is evident. What we were concerned about was any degree of a lack of safety, meaning that if you have a 40 ton container (as I understand it) in this lofting jib and for some reason ten to fifteen feet you suddenly lost that particular tonnage, the lofting jib would actually flip backwards and may have some instability about the crane itself. Those are possibilities. It never happened in the two and one half years, but we were concerned. Since it was brought to our attention, we wanted to deal with it as effectively as we could. That's basically the answer to the member.

QUESTIONS 158 AND 159 DEFERRED

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 158. I note that the Third Elected Member for West Bay, in whose name questions 158 and 159 stand, is not in the Chamber. I understand that he is off the island. Therefore, I ask that the questions stand deferred to a later Sitting of the House.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTIONS 158 AND 159 STAND DEFERRED TO A LATER SITTING.

No. 158: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to provide a list of roads with related cost which are scheduled to be done in West Bay during 1999.

No. 159: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to provide an update with respect to the construction of the 'Dalmain Ebanks Civic Centre' in West Bay.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 160, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

No. 160: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works (and cranes!) to give an update on the Gun Bay Community Hall.

[Members' laughter]

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Let me say that I am happy to be the minister responsible for cranes, if it's profitable!

The answer to the question is that the Gun Bay Community Hall building works were completed in May 1999. However, access could not be provided in accordance with the Planning requirements, as the existing access to the site is only approximately 15 feet wide. The Planning requirement is for a 28-foot access to provide for two-way vehicular access and a sidewalk. The Lands and Survey Office is in the process of acquiring the additional strip of land required to allow the access to be constructed and advised that the purchase is expected to be completed this year.

The Lands and Survey office estimates the cost of the strip of land required to be less than $2,000. The land required is a strip with a maximum width of 14.5 feet at Block 75A, Parcels 91 and 92.

The problem with the access was not identified earlier because at the design stage an existing old barbed wire fence in the vicinity of the boundary led the project designers to believe that the access was adequate. It transpired that this barbed wire fence was not the boundary and, in fact, was in the order of 13 feet from the actual boundary, which was not marked on the ground. Consequently, the access shown on the drawings and approved by Planning could not be constructed.

Expenditure to date on Gun Bay Community Hall is $685,632.06. Final total expenditure is estimated at $750,000 which includes the access roadwork, once the land purchase is finalised. It will take in the order of a month to complete the access works once the land purchase is finalised.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This answer is so good that I am almost persuaded not to ask any supplementaries! But there are a couple of concerns.

Can the honourable minister state if the additional property required from Block 75A Parcels 91 and 92, will leave either one of those two parcels in a state where it might not be sensible to build on after this is taken off?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Make sure you get the right answer.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We would only take . . . to provide the member with an accurate answer, because we are not absolutely sure, we think there is a house on one parcel. We believe that the additional parcel, either 91 or 92, could be built on, but we would like to check that and answer this in writing if we can.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I want to advise the minister (and I will ask a question, Mr. Speaker), because he may not know more than what he has said, that it is possible that for this to work the entire parcel may have to be acquired. It is possible, which leads me to my other supplementary . . .

When government is going to purchase property, in this case to engage in one of its capital projects . . . because my understanding is that government acquired this property and it was not Crown property before the Gun Bay Civic Centre was built. In the process of acquiring this property the relevant agencies involved in the purchase simply approximated an area and the value and once the owner was satisfied they simply paid the money out and acquired the property. Is it in fact the case that no boundary surveys are done when government engages in the purchase of property?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Be like Tru-Tru now, and say it's not your responsibility.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, this is sort of cutting across two different ministries.

[Members' laughter]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Oh yeah!

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I would prefer in this case that we get an accurate answer from the respective departments and convey that in writing to the member.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I greatly respect the minister's playing it very safe. I don't have any problems with that. Let us move on to the other question.

When government is going to draw plans (in this case it would have been the Public Works Department) that include site plans is there no thought at that point in time to precise boundary surveys to ensure the accuracy of the plans?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: We're going to get that one in writing too.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As I understand it, a boundary survey was done for the project, but the boundary survey was not done on the access. It did not include the access in the boundary survey. That's my understanding.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I heard exactly what the minister just said. But if a boundary survey was done, and on a drawing . . . I am not an architect, but I can understand halfway. If a boundary survey was done on the property, and on a drawing an access is placed, then what could have caused inaccuracies with the boundaries? I don't want to hear about this barbed-wire fence, because that doesn't have anything to do with the drawing. What exactly went wrong?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As I understand it the survey was done, but the error in the survey is that the survey did not include the access. I would prefer to go back to the respective department, get the accurate answer and convey that to the member in writing. I would be more comfortable with that. I will go back to the respective department that carried out the survey, get the answer and convey it to the member in writing.

The Speaker: This is the final supplementary. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Good timing, Mr. Speaker.

I understand what the minister just said. But what I do not understand is if a precise boundary survey is done, how can it exclude the access unless the access is another piece of property? Surely, a precise boundary survey must include the entire area of the property. And if the access is part of the property, it must be included in that survey.

I understand that the minister cannot answer the question, but I only have to raise that question so that in an answer at least that can be explained and hopefully explained away.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The First Elected Member for George Town and I are not disagreeing. What I am saying is that it would be more accurate to go to the department that did the surveying and to find out from them what went wrong and convey that to the member in writing. That's my preference.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 161, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 161

No. 161: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works what road work remains to be done in Bodden Town.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In addition to routine maintenance activities, the only remaining capital project in the Bodden Town district programme is the preliminary works to the Bodden Town relief road corridor. In the main road resurfacing programme, approximately three miles of the worst sections of road between Savannah and Breakers will be resurfaced.

The following is a list of projects completed in 1999: Yellowstone Avenue; Faith Avenue; Eldon Street; Lemon Road; Shirley Towbis Lane; Dairy Road; Old Yard Lane; Locust Lane; St. Kitts Lane; Pennsylvania Avenue. And may I add that we are working through an allocation, so each year we are doing additional roads. But as far as the allocation for this year is concerned, this is what was accomplished.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am going to crave the minister's indulgence because my supplementary is extending the question beyond the ambit of the substantive question.

While he has recognised what has been done and what will be done in the district of Bodden Town, what, on the list we received for the George Town area, will be completed out of the allocation for 1999?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: On the George Town roads, let me say that the allocation is $250,000. Public Works expects to spend about $140,000 of it and will be moving on to purchase materials so that at the early part of the year they can finish off a lot of the work that they perhaps do not get finished. They expect to deal with the Old Prospect Road, and some areas of Randyke Gardens and also Washington Road. But in some cases, it may be patchwork followed early in the year by proper . . . and I should add Windsor Park.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say when the remaining work on the relief road corridor in Bodden Town is likely to be completed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As I understand it . . . and I am sure the member will understand when I say that the road was set back by weather conditions. We lost four to six weeks. We will be stockpiling some materials to deal with this relief road very early in the New Year.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Due to the recent heavy rains, can the minister say if improvement repairs will be done to roads in subdivisions, for example Savannah Meadows, Belford Estates, and roads on Kipling Street, which is in Pease Bay Subdivision, and also North Sound Estates, better known as Rackley's Canal?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think we are basically caught up on the close-off of the year in expenditure by the Treasury. So, our decision is to do as much patchwork as we possibly can which will assist the travelling public. Early in the year, with the assistance of members of the Legislative Assembly, we can move on early to deal with the restoration work.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The minister just said that out of the $250,000, $140,000 is expected to be spent in George Town. Is that $110,000 that will not be used up going to be re-voted next year, or does it die a natural death like a lot of other things?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Much to our regret, it doesn't carry forward unless we revoke it. The difference between the $250,000 and $140,000 I think is what the member is speaking about.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps the Minister of Transport and Works could advise his colleague, the Second Elected Member for George Town—the Minister for Education and Leader of Government Business—to pay more attention to his district so that we are not last all the time. And to make it a question, . . . will he give an undertaking to do so?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, we did some work in George Town, and I think for the benefit of the public (because some people may not have travelled over it), when you get to the Red Bay Primary School the resurfacing of the road from there straight up to the Spotts landing is in the district of George Town.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I don't want to have any differences with the members. I am just quoting a fact. To put it more positively, what we will try to do is ensure that as the work begins, districts are rotated so that one district is not always first, or not always last, or not always in the middle. We will take that in view when dealing with 2000.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say how he intends to address the Bodden Town Bypass in the New Year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The relief road, or bypass road, is presently in the planning stages. We have the assistance of two major property owners in that area who have reserved a corridor through it. Public Works intends to rough out the road in the coming year, as well as they expect to receive assistance from Caribbean Utilities who is also wishing to get into that area. At the moment, that is all I can say to the First Elected Member for West Bay. Funds will be requested in the 2000 Budget for it.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning. We shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12 NOON

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Before proceeding with the normal procedure, we will have Administration of Oaths or Affirmations. The Oath of Allegiance will be taken by Mr. Samuel Bulgin to be the Honourable Temporary Acting Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration.

Mr. Bulgin, will you come forward to the Clerk's table please?

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

Oath of Allegiance
(By Mr. Samuel Bulgin)

Mr. Samuel Bulgin: I, Samuel Bulgin, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors, according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: Mr. Bulgin, on behalf of all honourable members, I welcome you to the Legislative Assembly for the time of your service. Please take your seat as the Honourable Temporary Acting Second Official Member. Please be seated.

Item 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business. First I would ask for the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) which reads as follows: "On all days other than Thursdays Government Business shall have precedence over Private Members' Business."

The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources, would you move the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) in order that we can take Private Members' Motions before Government Business?

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

Hon. John B. McLean: I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) to allow Other Business to precede debate on the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The motion has been moved that we suspend Standing Order 14(2). Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW OTHER BUSINESS TO PRECEDE DEBATE ON THE APPROPRIATION (2000) BILL, 1999.

The Speaker: Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 27/99, Introduction of an Electronic Transactions Law, debate continuing thereon.

The First Elected Member for George Town continuing.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 27/99

INTRODUCTION OF AN ELECTRONIC TRANSACTIONS LAW

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When we adjourned on Monday, I had spent a little while talking about Cable & Wireless and their rates. Just to sum up before I go on to another area, I just wish to re-emphasise that from information we have available to us, when it comes to the rates for personal accounts for usage of the Internet service, the rates locally compared to the Cable & Wireless USA accounts are in actual fact 1,832 percent higher. That's astounding, but it's a fact—1832 percent higher in the Cayman Islands than in the United States!

Now, I didn't have the exact information on the business accounts and corporate accounts available to me. I am sure there is a difference there. If this is indicative then that certainly needs to be addressed.

When the Minister of Tourism and Commerce replied on behalf of government, he gave notice that they were going to accept the motion. He said that he knew that within a few months Cable & Wireless was going to reduce its prices for the Internet and e-commerce business by over 80 percent. And he went on to say, and I quote, "As I understand it, it puts us on an equal footing with Bermuda, . . ." I hold the view that, monopoly or not, whatever they charge in Bermuda should not be the rule of thumb which decides what is charged in Cayman.

This almost seems like an arbitrary situation that they can pull any figure once that satisfies you. I still don't believe that's the way it should work. Even if they reduce the rates . . . and using the personal charges as an example, if they reduce that by 80 percent, they are still three times as expensive as other jurisdictions I have compared it with.

Another thing that is important too is the way they have structured their rates; it's like they get you any time. No matter how you do it, they get you. They don't have a situation at present where a flat rate gives you a fixed number of hours, which is usually a number of hours that the ordinary user would not exceed within a month, for instance. In other jurisdictions, the monthly rate gives you, like, 150 hours for the month. The way Cable & Wireless does it in the Cayman Islands is by giving you a rate for 15 hours. And then there is an hourly charge for however many you use.

Now, one would want to say that on the one hand, that gives the user the advantage. If he doesn't use that many hours, it costs that much less. But it does not work like that, and Cable & Wireless needs to understand that we understand exactly how they are doing it. And that's the reason why I am taking the time to go through this now. We understand what they are doing, and they need to do better, because they can do better.

As I said on Monday, with an estimated capital investment of $150 million in the Cayman Islands, and having an annual return of approximately one third of that investment, surely they can deal with us a little better than that. They also need to understand that they have a franchise, and there is a monopoly. But it does not mean that this country must not be satisfied with their performance. That is not to sound threatening, that is simply laying the facts on the line.

While we can show all types of appreciation for any training, investment and enhancement of our business sector because of their existence here, the truth of the matter is that there are other people out there who would be happy to do better. So, that does not mean anything except that we would like to have a good working relationship.

I am trying to say that there is a lot of onus on them in this area to do what they need to do to make it as viable as possible and let the private sector get on with what they have to do to enhance that business. I think that is perhaps enough on dealing with Cable & Wireless. Again, I would urge government, as soon as this committee is set up, to let this committee deal with that. I want to see government enter into discussions with Cable & Wireless and get the required results.

Whatever the minister has said that Cable & Wireless has promised, I am saying that that is not good enough. Even if they fulfill what they said, they can do better.

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The minister just said, "At least that's a start." In this day and age, we have no time just to start. If we are going to do it, let's get it done the right way. He's the one who preaches about doing it the right way from the beginning, so let's get it right this time from the beginning.

Moving on into a few other areas, . . . perhaps you will question the relevance of what I am going to say now. But I ask you to bear with me because I believe I will prove relevance if I am allowed to deal with this area in the way I wish to.

When the minister was accepting the motion on behalf of government, he dealt with several areas. One of those areas was in regard to Immigration and work permits, in regard to the need for technical expertise if we are really going to get this thing going and it be any semblance of a third leg to our economy. He mentioned, and I will quote him, "We also want to marry that with the opportunities for young people and others in this country to participate as fully as they possibly can within their own skills, but also to allow further development of those skills so that the social harmony that we have enjoyed and cherished in the Cayman Islands remains what it is today." [1999 Official Hansard Report, page 1292]

On the surface, that statement is laudable. But I want say where I differ with the statement. I do not agree that the "social harmony that we have enjoyed and cherished in the Cayman Islands remains what it is today." The truth of the matter is, if we are satisfied with the social harmony that exists in this country today then we are in plenty of trouble! If his statement referred to ten years ago, I could accept that. But that is not what it is today, and it is not acceptable today. And it is for the same reason—indecision—why it is happening the way it is today.

This is another prime example of government latching onto something which, if you want to limit your thought process, has many merits for discussion, debate and action—this business of e-commerce. But he scratches the surface to talk about the younger people being able to enjoy the rewards. Do you know what? Lip service does not do the trick anymore. This is not a personal attack on the minister; I need him to understand that clearly. I am dealing with what the minister said. That is exactly why the country is moving forward today with two steps on the left foot, and the right foot is stretching back four steps and it will soon pop wide open, not having moved an inch.

The Third Elected Member for George Town brought a very good private member's motion, which I have seconded. But government has to understand that we can't just simply deal at the top end all the time and think that the whole thing is going to work out nice and proper. For as long as I have been here, not knowing all the fancy words but knowing what I feel, see, and live with, I have been saying that there is a sector in this society which remains at the very bottom end of the ladder that is multiplying more and more by the minute—and a lot faster than at any other level going up to the very top. When that bottom end explodes in this country, there will be no redemption.

When I mention something like that, I believe people think I am just looking for something to latch onto to run my mouth. That is not the case. We can get Cable & Wireless to do this for free. We can get all kinds of clients to remain within the jurisdiction, or new clientele coming in, and have another pillar in our economy and it will not serve the country any purpose if we are not prepared to look long and hard at that sector of the society I am talking about at the bottom end.

When people have no hope, Mr. Speaker, they will do no good.

I started to talk about this question of relevance maybe being raised. But the point I wish to make is that if a government or if all of us are going to be worth our salt, we cannot limit our thought process to all of these niceties that we can clap our hands about and disregard the more important issue—which is the social issue we face in this country today.

The minister talked about the work permit situation. He said, “We all know that the volume of work permits at the moment—and it has been this way for the last ten to fifteen years—being requested is such that the system that we have been using since 1972 needs also to be revised. If you can get into e-commerce with all of its technology, we should be able to resolve this work permit matter and it is the government's intention to do so.” [Ibid.] Look at when they are saying it's government's intention to do so.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town alluded to this Select Committee on Immigration. What has happened to it? I am going to tell you what has happened to it: Because it's a touchy situation, the government (whether that is singly or all together, because a couple of them attended some of the meetings) . . . in my view, they want to wait and sit it out until they see what people like us are going to come up with in regard to changes in policy or amendments to the law, to see whether it suits them politically to jump on board or to try and kill it.

Mr. Speaker, this is our country. And we are playing with it like it's a football game. And every single action that is taken is geared towards ‘Where am I going to end up?’ What is wrong with the responsibility we are supposed to have?

The motion is on e-commerce. I know that what I am saying stretches it a little bit. But this is so important that we should be talking about this and doing something about this with everything that we do. We have a population in excess of 40,000 people—and half of them don't know whether they are coming or going. And nobody, but nobody is prepared to decide to tell them whether they must go, or if they can stay, or how long they can stay. And look at what we are doing.

I am going to show you what we are doing, and I am going to show you the relevance.

We are talking about another industry that is supposed to enhance the economy. We get the warnings, which are quite fair, and I understand what the minister is saying, that we can't be arguing now because we are going to need to import technical expertise. Yes, I know that. But what good is it to do that every day of the week, trying to look this, trying to look that; trying to ensure about our position in the world of finance; trying to remain the powerful force that we are in the financial industry; trying to retain a certain volume with the tourism industry . . . what good is all of that if we don't have any society? And we are not going to have one in short order if we don't deal with what we have to deal with also.

It is frightening, believe me.

Mr. Speaker, this country cannot survive the way we are doing what we are doing. The people who have the authority and the responsibility to deliver policy . . . those of us on the backbench who crave the right to be the check and balance of the government have a higher responsibility to this country cannot continue to sit by and watch it go to Hell! It doesn't matter how well the economy seems to be doing, or how pretty a picture we paint if this society is disintegrating, and that it is.

Some of us talk about it. But nothing is done. And do you see this business about Immigration? If we don't deal with this thing and do what we have to do that is right, it is going to bring about a situation in this country that none of us are going to even want to attempt to solve because of the magnitude. And it has continued to multiply because successive governments and this one—because this is the one I have been here with, not a part of, but one of the representatives—has been totally unprepared to take any action because it's not easy to decide on what is going to satisfy the most people.

I know that's a problem. I don't cherish the thought of having to be part and parcel of making that decision, but we have to do it. And we cannot make those decisions because of a certain little faction we are afraid to offend. Our responsibility is to this entire country, all of the people—whether or not they have status!

Look at how many people have been here who are part and parcel of this community, and to this day—twenty-odd years, some longer . . . Do you know what Mr. Speaker? If we don't want them to be part of us, let's tell them to please go. But if we know that we have the responsibility to do what's right, then let's do what is right. A bad decision is still 40 times better than indecision, because if you make a bad decision—like with the crane, for instance—you can correct it. I don't have a problem with that. But if you make no decision, you don't know what to do, and it is indecision that is causing the majority of the problems in this country today.

There are those who will say, 'If I want to remain unscathed, I had better just wiggle back and relax. I can watch it all play out, and then, when I see who's getting the licks, I will know which way I must go.' If that is the attitude of any member in this House, he or she should not be here!

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Hear, hear!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: He (or she) should take it on his (or her) own to walk out by default because that is not what this country needs today, and that is not what is going to help this country today, or tomorrow for that matter.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Hear, hear!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Getting back to e-commerce—

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for a moment? We are getting close to the time for the lunch break. You won't be finishing shortly. Would this be an appropriate time?

We shall suspend proceedings until 2.30 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.51 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.40 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 27/99. The First Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It seems like every time we have a break it's in order to start with Cable & Wireless, and since this will be the last time I speak on this issue, I may as well continue.

While I was on break, someone mentioned that they were not sure they had a clear understanding what this 80 percent reduced rate being proposed really means. I too am not very sure. So let me say that while the Minister of Commerce made the announcement in his debate on the motion that Cable & Wireless is going to reduce its rate on the Internet and e-commerce business by 80 percent, no one seems to be sure exactly what that means.

We wish to make it very clear that our expectation is not just in the commercial area, but there are a lot of people who surf (as the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town talks about) the net at home and the comparative rates that I quoted between Cable & Wireless in the US and here is directly related to people who use the Internet at home here being 18 times that of the US rate.

Certainly, we expect that any reduction in rates will be across the board and will include all users of this service. And I hope that it is not just a pacifier and only going to be levelled at the commercial users. We will wait and see what it means. But we believe that government should ensure that whatever is done satisfies both ends of that spectrum.

It may seem repetitious to be talking about these rates. Surely, Cable & Wireless must be able to deal with this in a fashion that is satisfactory to all.

Before we took the luncheon break, I was speaking about some of the social aspects and the ramifications. I think I have made my point with that. A lot more can be said, but perhaps in another forum and with another topic I can expound more on that.

Getting back to the Internet and e-commerce . . . Some of us have received letters from young Caymanian entrepreneurs seeking to have amending legislation for the relevant laws whereby any licensing for e-commerce should be reserved for Caymanians. In trying to be fair to all concerned, talking about it a little bit would be what I would call the ideal situation. There is merit to the thought that it would allow Caymanians opportunities in certain areas that they might not have had before or otherwise if this were not the case. But the fact of the matter is that e-commerce is a global business.

Even if we were to take the view that we would leave that to be done only by Caymanians, the fact of the matter is that it would be doing the country a disservice because it is going to go on whether we allow it to or not. All that would happen is that other jurisdictions would capitalise on the fact that we took that route. So, while we would be satisfying a certain element, from the global point of view we would not be doing the country a service.

I am hopeful that people will understand the reasoning behind our proposing that this be done. It will allow certain opportunities, but unlike some other things which may well have been better dealt with if they were done in that fashion, I think this is one of those industries where it is almost impossible to entertain the thought for any length of time because truly we will be serving one master, but not the majority of the country at large.

I hope that that position is clearly understood. I wanted to articulate it because some people might take the view that we don't care, or that we are anti-Caymanian. But this is certainly not the case in this instance. I believe that once one is able to be objective about the situation, one will clearly understand exactly why we have to take the position we are taking.

The Third Elected Member for George Town, who moved the motion, certainly has dealt with many points that I don't have to go over. There were also contributions from other people regarding this business of e-commerce. But in closing I think it would be proper for me to quote a few statements made by different territories regarding policy in this area.

I would first like to mention a policy statement made by the Government of Bermuda two years ago. They said, "The government understands that whether we seek it or not, whether we like it or not, the digital revolution is underway. Our challenge and our responsibility is to recognise the changes that are taking place, understand their implications and make them work to Bermuda's advantage. How we manage this new revolution and the social, political, and economic changes it brings will determine Bermuda's success as we enter the twenty-first Century."

Certainly, that statement could well apply to us if we simply changed the name from Bermuda to the Cayman Islands, and it would make all the sense in the world.

At the same time, we are talking about the OECD. But the Secretary General of the OECD said in his introduction to a major report on e-commerce, and I quote, “Our generation stands on the very cusp of the greatest technological revolution that mankind has every faced. Some compare this age of electronic communication with the arrival of the Gutenberg Press, or with the industrial revolution. Yet this revolution, when it has run its course may have a greater impact on the planet than anything that has proceeded. The applications of electronic transmissions are just beginning to be felt... and the breadth and depth of what lies ahead is only beginning to be fathomed. How and where we are educated, where and how we work and live, our health care systems, our shops, our commerce, our reading, our leisure... no part of human enterprise will be spared. Even our notions of sovereignty and governance could be profoundly affected.”

“This report underlines the responsibilities of governments in providing appropriate regulatory frameworks while adapting their own administrative procedures and processes to remain tuned to the new developments.”

Mr. Speaker, this motion calls for exactly that.

Also, in 1998, the government of New Zealand said: “The global emergence of electronic commerce will have a major impact on the New Zealand economy. It is imperative that New Zealand meets the challenges and takes advantage of opportunities presented by this new mode of business.”

And finally, Mr. Speaker, in a study of electronic commerce completed in 1998, the US Department of Commerce was of the opinion that: “IT [information technology] and electronic commerce can be expected to drive economic growth for many years to come. To realise this potential, however, the private sector and governments must work together to create a predictable market-driven legal framework to facilitate electronic commerce; to create non-bureaucratic means that ensure that the Internet is a safe environment; and to create human resource policies that endow students and workers with the skills necessary for jobs in the new digital economy.”

In my mind, the important sentence for us is “ . . . to create non-bureaucratic means that ensure that the Internet is a safe environment, and to create human resource policies that endow students and workers with the skills necessary for jobs in the new digital economy.” We have talked about it, but God knows that I hope we will do it.

We are saying it up front: This is not one of those things where we should allow ourselves to simply import the technology without bracing ourselves in the immediate term with the ability to create the human resources from within in the short-term, to be able to allow our young people the opportunities that should arise. Needless to say, the benefits to the country will be better realised if human resource capital from within is used to enhance this industry. I sincerely hope that it is not just lip service and five years from now when we look at it all we have done is create another demagogue.

Perhaps we will accept the responsibility of ensuring that the benefits that can really be passed on to our people are done so. There are some fears from the smaller merchants, and those fears are going to have to be addressed by all of us. The fact is that we all need to understand that there is nothing we can do to stop this thing. If we segregate ourselves from it, it will still go on. Our only option is to embrace the fact that it is happening and use it to our advantage. There is no other way to think about it, as far as I can discern at this time.

This is urgent, but we must do it right. This is something that we have to act on, but we cannot be insular in our thinking, simply talking about jumping on the bandwagon and being able to boast when we are abroad, or entertaining clients, or when we are looking for new clients, of the manner in which we have created this industry within our territory to be user friendly, efficient, safe, respecting privacy and all those things, unless we see the benefits to the people of this country. The greatest benefits that can be derived is investing in our human resources, taking advantage of the jobs this type of thing will create; being able to prepare our people to fill the shoes of those who will probably have to come in the short-term to get this thing going the right way.

Our motion calls for government, together with the private sector, to develop a policy—a business plan—to actively encourage E-Commerce. This means that government must supply leadership, identify goals, promote our strengths, and seek to correct our weaknesses including the cost of the service. It must address the issues such as the cost of communication, the provision of incentives where these are appropriate, the introduction of the proper degree of regulation, and they must also have the private sector to gain competitive advantage by the careful crafting of our legislation.

This needs planning, coordination, and none of us have any doubt that it will need the allocation of proper resources. In other words, we cannot afford to get this wrong. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would like to commend the mover of this motion, the Third Elected Member for George Town, and also the seconder, the First Elected Member for George Town, for bringing forward—

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I always give credit where credit is due, sir.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: And to say that I support this motion.

We have to face up to reality. We are moving into an information technology and electronic transaction world. It is very important that along with the introduction of the necessary equipment and means for electronic commerce comes the proper regulation to go with it. Indeed, in some ways the protection of the information is critical to certain areas that will use the electronic commerce.

While I realise that this does straddle several ministries, I think that we are lucky to have the Minister of Commerce, I should nearly say jointly with the Third Elected Member for George Town (the mover of the motion) really very interested, moving forward on a sound footing. This is the way that things get done, when the House can meet across the floor here and really say 'This is something good for the country, let's jointly move forward with it.'

The importance of this regulation is also important in relation to ensuring the integrity of information of the electronic transactions and to ensuring that encryption and the modes by which there is technical protection, that there is also reciprocal legal protection with it. I know that there has already been a draft of an Electronic Transactions Bill by the private sector that will be coming to the honourable Attorney General in due course.

Important with this also is to ensure that the laws and the regulations do protect the private sector that the smaller merchants have a feeling of comfort with the protection that is out there. But as one speaker did mention, this is an area that is going to come in this day and age, regardless of what anyone may do. So, we have to really move forward with it, embrace the opportunity, and ensure that we make the best of it.

From a social aspect, I think it is very important. Not only will the reduction in cost by Cable & Wireless, the bandwidth that will come with the new fibre optic, the Maya 1 that Cable & Wireless is putting a tremendous amount of money into, some 20 million pounds, or dollars (pounds maybe), and the fact that that is now underway. . . I am sorry, US $20 million. I thank my colleague to my right here for that.

This will bring in the technology, the speed, the bandwidth that we need to move this forward. It is the duty of this House—not just the government, but this full House—to ensure that the laws and the regulations provide the necessary protection.

It is important that this is taught in the schools and that local persons also have access at reasonable prices, which we understand will come in a few months' time, so that everyone can have the advantage in this technology information age of the use of electronic transactions, e-commerce as it's commonly called.

Mr. Speaker, in summary, with it goes several things: One is that Cable & Wireless has to play its part in getting the cost down, getting the bandwidth in. That seems to be well underway. Secondly, we have to ensure that the private sector gets as much of an economic advantage as possible from this, while balancing the protection of smaller merchants and the fears they have. Also important is that the legislation protects the integrity of the transactions, the data. And most importantly, something that rests more squarely on my shoulders, is to ensure that the schools and local persons generally will also receive the benefit and that there will also be a good beneficial improvement within these areas.

Once again, I am happy to commend the Third Elected Member for George Town, as mover, and the First Elected Member for George Town, as seconder of this motion, and to say that it has my full support. I will do whatever I can to make this a success and to make the Cayman Islands competitive in this third foundation area of our economy. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

If not, would the mover like to exercise his right of reply? The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

My reply will be brief, as I did spend quite a bit of time in a detailed presentation of the motion. Indeed, those members who spoke on the motion made some very valuable contributions. I would like to take this opportunity to thank all honourable members who made a contribution to this motion, and to those who through their tacit support have given their agreement to it.

There were a number of important issues raised which I have no doubt have been taken note of by our Information Technology Unit strategist, Mr. Archbold, who was very instrumental in assisting me, the honourable minister and others in bringing this subject of e-commerce thus far. These matters that have been raised will be dealt with in detail in the consultative committee. It is also my understanding that the honourable Minister of Commerce has already put in place that committee.

I particularly wish to thank the government for accepting the motion, and for their commitment to have the necessary legislation put in place as early as possible. It was interesting to note that most honourable members who spoke on this motion expressed a central concern—making the cost of e-commerce a viable proposition in the Cayman Islands. This is very much dependant on the negotiations we are able to resolve with Cable & Wireless.

The question of the initial reduction suggested by Cable & Wireless has also been raised. And so that this is not misunderstood, the 80 percent reduction suggested by the Honourable Minister of Commerce, in my understanding was referring strictly to matters dealing with e-commerce and not to rates generally. I would hope that in the process of looking at reductions in the rates for e-commerce that Cable & Wireless would find it possible to reduce their rates across the board.

I want to thank honourable members for their support thus far on this motion, and I trust that when it is put to the vote that it will get the 100 percent support of this honourable House. Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 27/99. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 27/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: Item 5 on today's Order Paper. Government Business, Bills. The Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999.

Commencement of the debate on the Budget Address delivered on Friday, 26 November, 1999, by the Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development.

The floor is open for debate. (Pause). The floor is open for debate, does any member wish to speak (Pause).

Mr. Roy Boddén: [Interjecting across the floor] Are you waiting for me to get up and say something? I guarantee you, if I get up there won't be any hesitancy for other members to get up, because what I have to say to you is not going to be nice!

The Speaker: [Addressing the Third Elected Member for Boddén Town] Well, move ahead.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Is someone else going to go on?

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate. Does any member wish to speak?

[Members' laughter and inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate. Does any member wish to speak? I cannot wait much longer.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Boddén Town.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, it is a crying shame. I wonder what they are going to do when I am not here.

[Members' laughter]

The Speaker: I have recognised you, Mr. Third Elected Member for Boddén Town.

Mr. Roy Boddén: I could have stayed put. But, do you know what? My conscience would not allow me to do that. I have things to say, and I was encouraged, in the home I came from, that when I had something to say to say it!

SECOND READING

COMMENCEMENT OF DEBATE ON THE BUDGET ADDRESS DELIVERED BY THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER ON FRIDAY, 26 NOVEMBER, 1999

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I want to say first of all that I consider it less than becoming of honourable members when an important matter such as the Budget [Address] has been delivered that this whole House has to wait for (and I am flattered) the Third Elected Member for Boddén Town—whom the Minister of Education has so often called “defunct,” “theoretical,” “outdated,” and heaven knows what else . . . were it not for this member, the government would certainly not have anything to say. And those who support the government might not have anything to say.

I am going to start with this caveat: I guarantee that when I am finished jettisoning the load I have to jettison everybody on the government side will be clamouring and tearing at one another to speak. I am going to charge them with many things they are going to have to reply to. It is so serious they might even cancel that trip they are planning to go on!

The budget reminds me of one of the fables told by Aesop: A mountain was in labour. And all the world waited agog; and at long last it brought forth a mouse. I suppose that there are those who say we should be proud of the Budget; that the Budget has been balanced. We have cut $100 million off it in a week, and it is fit to be digested by Parliament and the country. Well, as is not unusual I take great issue with that.

I want to take as my starting point the decision I took on the 27th day November in the year of our Lord, One thousand, Nine hundred and Ninety-six, when I was bold enough to say that at the end of the four years the country would come to realise that the National Team Government was not the government it wanted, nor was it the government the country deserved. I wholeheartedly and boldly stand by that statement this afternoon, this 1st day of December in the year of our Lord, One thousand, Nine hundred and Ninety-nine.

Do you know what happens now? Nobody is talking about the “National Team,” because its record is disgraceful. Even the remnants of the National Team would like people to pretend that the entity no longer exists. Why? Because they have done everything they said they would not do. They have done everything that they blamed the previous government for—they have borrowed, they have taxed and they have mismanaged. And the document they laid here called the “Budget” is living proof, the Draft Budget and Estimates is living proof of that. And I will go on to show why that is so.

But I am not going to that until I prick the conscience of certain members who, when I got up that afternoon and made that statement out of sheer boldness and bravado, took me on saying that I had been declaring war when the National Team had won the election and they were the most fit entity to govern the country because they had the plan. I wonder what those people are saying now? I know who they are, Mr. Speaker, but I am not saying. Let them check the Hansards. I take pride in being the foremost researcher in here. I know exactly who they are, exactly what was said, and when it was said.

The only person who came to my defence that afternoon was the Third Elected Member for George Town. And I am not saying that I needed any defence; I was prepared to soldier on myself. But it was good to have some moral support. Time has proven me correct!

I am going to say some other things because I read in this Budget . . . and it's a pity that the Financial Secretary is not here this afternoon to hear these things firsthand because I don't like to say things about people when they are not there, particularly when I am speaking the truth.

I am reminded too, Mr. Speaker, that when I got up in 1995 and said it was time we re-examined our system and the way we were doing business and handling the public accounts. I said that we should enter into some financial sector reforms that would lead to public sector reforms, and I brought a model of what was happening in New Zealand. I vividly remember the charge . . . led by whom? It was led by the Leader of Government Business, the Honourable Minister of Education. He said that I had brought the laws of an independent country and that I was seeking independence.

I remember his colleague, the Minister of Tourism, getting up and saying that it wasn't his business to know anything about the laws of New Zealand, it was his business to know about the laws of Cayman. And then the Financial Secretary, of course, taking a cut from their cloth, got up and said it wasn't necessary.

Mr. Speaker, do you know what the up-shot of all of that is, sir? They had to go to New Zealand—to great expense—to bring in the expertise! And what are they doing now? The same things I suggested they should have done—only four years later! It tells me that I am wiser than they are—as if I needed any confirmation!

I also suggested that we establish a national disaster fund. What did they do? They told me that it was covered in the general reserves. What have we now, two years later? The same national disaster fund that I suggested we set up. Mr. Speaker, I say all of this to say that I just heard the Minister of Education talking nonsense that the efforts must come from two sides of the House. He is preaching to the converted. That is why I have named him Janus—the Roman god with two faces!

[Members' laughter]

Mr. Roy Bodden: I am going to assure them again that I have a little here in my bag for each of them. So they don't have to quarrel and worry about one getting it all. I have enough to spare in the computer upstairs.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: How do you say that? Preach, brother, preach!

Mr. Roy Bodden: With that introduction, I shall now proceed to make my comments on this document.

We are poised on the brink of a new century, the 21st Century, and the whole world is awaiting the dawning of that century with pregnant anticipation. The pundits say that this century is an extension of what has been happening and events will be but an extension of the Industrial Revolution. Indeed, economic historians are calling it the "third" Industrial Revolution. There was a first Industrial Revolution, a second Industrial Revolution, and they are now calling this the third Industrial Revolution. We just had some evidence of that in the motion debated immediately before this.

Globalisation and this whole business of information technology will necessitate that success is going to be dependent on those entities, be they individuals, corporations, or be they countries that can best harness, package and manage information technology and all its accompanying nuances. Indeed, Lester Thurow, in a book called, Building Wealth—The New Rules for Individuals, Companies and Nations in a Knowledge Based Economy, had this to say: "The old foundations of success [I quote from the prologue on page 15] are gone. For all of human history, the source of success has been the control of natural resources—land, gold, oil. Suddenly, the answer is knowledge."

He goes on to say, "knowledge is the new basis for wealth. This has never before been true. In the past capitalists talked about their wealth, meaning ownership of plant and equipment and natural resources. In the future, when capitalists talk about their wealth they will be talking about their control of knowledge. Even the language of wealth generates changes. One can talk about owning capital equipment or natural resources. The concept of owning is clear, but one cannot talk in the same ways about owning knowledge. Owning knowledge is a slippery concept. The human beings who possess knowledge cannot be made into slaves. Exactly how one controls or owns knowledge is, in fact, a central issue in a knowledge based economy."

I said a few days ago in my debate on e-commerce, that perhaps the most outstanding example of this ownership of knowledge is Bill Gates. The wealthiest man in the world—a man who counts his wealth in billions, if not trillions—owns no land, no oil fields, no gold mines, he just owns knowledge and the capacity to produce that knowledge almost exponentially. So much so, that the United States government is concerned that he has such a great monopoly that he is a threat, not only to all of his competitors in the knowledge information business, but could be a virtual threat to the State and the existence of the State by virtue of the fact that the State needs to have access to the knowledge that he possesses.

We in the Cayman Islands are bound to be affected by these developments. If we wish to continue on the cutting edge of international finance, we have to find ways to stay abreast of this, and we have to find ways to benefit from this revolution. And it is no understatement to describe it as a revolution.

But I would like to caution from the very outset that these developments will not mean that the proverbial little man will see immediate beneficial effects. These developments will not necessarily mean that there will be a "chicken in every pot" in the Cayman Islands. So, I would caution from an over extension of enthusiasm because with all revolutions there are periods of growing pains. Perhaps a significant amount of time will have to elapse before the effects become so widespread that it is seen and, more importantly felt, by all and sundry. But that does not preclude the country from being prepared and participating in this revolution.

I would also be quick to remark that as with all of these kinds of developments it will have its downside. I am particularly interested because unless our people get access to education and training, they will not be able to benefit from this revolution. This information technology is a revolution that is going to call for skills and expertise that will have to be learned and cultivated and will have to be inculcated in our people.

I am surprised to see that the Budget does not contain any explicit plans whereby people can take advantage of education in this development, this revolution. I believe it is these kinds of shortcomings and omissions that have plagued us in the past by not setting us in a position to be able to capitalise on these new modern developments. Even as I speak, many countries of the world are expressing concern at what is happening in Seattle at the World Trade Organisation conference, not only because there were demonstrations and mass disorder on the streets, and looting, but because some nations justifiably feel that they will be disenfranchised. They feel that they will be disadvantaged by the more industrialised countries who control not only the means of production, but who have a virtual monopoly on information technology and all of the tools necessary to launch forth productively into the 21st Century.

I believe that we in the Cayman Islands can be eminently equipped to take advantage of our position. Certainly, if we don't move forward we can maintain our current position. But it is going to take a marriage between the public and private sectors. And unless we get that right from the beginning, we will have a population that will be left behind by these new developments.

I believe the government can best poise itself to do this by continuing on the path of the public sector reforms it has embarked upon. I believe that government can best do this by continuing to encourage legislation that will enhance these kinds of modern trends—freedom of information comes immediately to mind. What we are talking about is a knowledge-based economy in that information will have to be readily available. The old methodologies and the old techniques of doing business will have to be shelved. Confidence will have to be shown and trust will have to be promoted. Interdependency will be a key factor, or key tenant, because this trade is not going to necessarily be in boatloads of goods, although it will be sometimes. Rather, it is going to be in transactions completed by click of a mouse.

It's not only an e-commerce law that we have to develop, although that is a quintessential element. We are also going to have to develop other peripheral legislation significantly related to electronic commerce and information technology, namely, freedom of information and ability to access certain information.

With all of this comes an almost ominous foreboding because already criminals, and those with criminal minds, have begun to take advantage of loopholes. So we shall have to be careful (and I heard the Minister of Education mention this a short while ago) to ensure that the proper encryption techniques are in place. We have to have complementary legislation to ensure that certain information and techniques do not fall into the hands of those who would go to extralegal activities to exploit the situation. I have no doubt that the Cayman Islands can continue to be a beneficiary of these developments. But it will necessitate us, in Parliament, working in tandem with the government and in tandem with the private sector to see that the fullest advantage is gained when we embark on this.

The economics of the Cayman Islands are intricately interwoven with the economics of the world, particularly the economics of the United States. I was reading in a journal today about the rise in interest rates. I would not consider myself a financier, but it is necessary if one is to offer intelligent contributions, to relate and be interested in these elements as they occur in the world. I have been following the methods of Mr. Greenspan ever since he took over the Federal Reserve. I noticed that the prime rate in the Cayman Islands has been increased by a quarter of a percentage point.

Many people will not see the significance of it because to the man in the street what is a quarter of a percentage point? However, when you are talking in terms of multimillion dollars, this is indeed significant. I worry about a problem that has been prominent among many Caymanians, particularly the aspiring Caymanians. I wonder when we will be in a position to guarantee that Caymanians who occupy the middle order on the economic scale will be able to realise their dreams by having access to affordable finance to build houses and to acquire mortgages for apartments and houses.

If you listen to the popular talk show "Talk Today," on Radio Cayman, you will learn that invariably this is a concern expressed to some degree or another each day the show is on. It is also a fact that those societies which afford people access to this kind of financing are most stable. I am also concerned that since there seems such an obvious absence of this that the middle classes has begun to shrink, thereby creating the potential for social problems and upheaval.

I am concerned too that in the Budget document the government does not seem to pay significant attention to the human side of enterprise, to the human side of this prosperity, and there is mention of financial industry highlights. There is significant mention of tourism and its continuing contribution. There is the Y2K issue, the world economy, the domestic economy, financial and business services, agriculture, real estate. But there is no section that deals to any degree with the human element in the Caymanian society.

I suppose there are those people who would say that this is not important. But if one listens to the Budget debate in the United States, for example, the President goes to great lengths to say how the prosperity is going to benefit the people of the country, particularly the working class people, the people who are most vulnerable to economic fluctuations and significant financial changes.

Some years ago, it was popular to talk about the development of human capital. Well, more recently it seems that concept, that cliché, has been forgotten or worn out. I hope that does not mean that we have forgotten, or that we are taking those elements in the Caymanian society that do not inhabit the higher echelon of the income earning positions, or who do not frequent the cocktail circuit, for granted

I believe it is an injustice to present a document when you are talking about $300 million and there is no mention made of how we are going to maintain the social balance and harmony in this society. You don't have to be Karl Marx to understand that the human element and the ability to satisfy the people who are least able to fend for themselves will, to a great extent, determine what kind of social order we have in this society.

So, Mr. Speaker, I lament the obvious absence of any comment having to do with the development of human enterprise, the concern for continued social harmony and the ability to continue to motivate and hold out some hope and encouragement for those people who find themselves in that area of the economic spectrum which is inhabited largely by the working class.

The Speaker: Would this be a convenient time to take the afternoon break?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Yes sir.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.46 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.14 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continued on the Second Reading of the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, continuing.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Before I depart from globalisation and what I see as some of its consequences and impact on the Cayman Islands, I wish to make a few more comments that I hope will be relevant in the context of the Budget.

I cannot say that I am enthusiastic about globalisation myself, because while it has its positive side, I realise that it also bears many negative consequences for the developing world, particularly microstates such as the Cayman Islands. It is my understanding that globalisation really emerged and evolved at the end of the Cold War with the demise of the rivalries between the ideologies of the East and West. Globalisation emerged to fill that vacuum.

It is the brainchild of what were Western Capitalist States, but has grown to take in some countries of the old Soviet Empire, to the exclusion of developing countries in Africa and other areas of the Middle East and even some countries in the Pacific Rim. I believe that we in the Cayman Islands cannot expect much direct benefit, except the usual spin-off that comes our way, unless we are poised to continue to operate on the cutting edge as we have been. And then we are going to have to deal with the challenges to our autonomy and our ability to earn a livelihood and strike an economy, as can be witnessed by the OECD and their harmful tax initiatives, and G-7 and all these other countries which believe that they have a God-given right to launch attacks on jurisdictions such as the Cayman Islands.

I also want to quote from Rule 7 of what Lester Thurow has in his book, "Creating Knowledge." He says, "Any society that values order above all else will not be creative. But without the right degree of order, creativity disappears as if into a black hole." He goes on to talk about the level of tension between tradition and the new constructive forces.

My model of economic development for the Cayman Islands has always been similar to what has been accomplished in Singapore. While it is true that we in the Cayman Islands cannot adopt full scale the methodologies used in Singapore, because we are two different societies, Singapore is largely developed. Their attitudes are based on the Confucian ethic, which is a little different from the ethic we have here in Cayman. But there are many similarities in that we are fairly small societies with small population, but a rather high economic standard of living.

The advantage that I think Singapore has over us is that from very early it launched out into the development of a kind of education system which made it eminently equipped to capitalise on its surrounding geographical areas. Nevertheless, I believe that it is not too late for us in the Cayman Islands to adopt some of these principles. I would hope that the next government can see fit to embark on a venture that would lead us down this path.

Singapore is a society that places great emphasis on human development, to the point where the whole society is adequately dealt with in terms of housing and other social requirements. The education system is completely compliant with information technology moves, with the latest in the computer world. The population is known and respected for its earning power. Even the prison system in Singapore—from which we could learn many lessons—is an ideal system that many countries covet and admire. But it does not come without a price.

We have to decide what we wish to accomplish. But I believe that if we don't take certain considerations at this time, we are going to find that the gap between the "haves" and the "have-nots" is going to widen, and we are going to take increasingly more of our budget to spend on social services, prison systems and also on the alternative education system. So we need to pause and take stock of the path we are on, and realise that if we don't factor in more of the human element we are going to have to pay a greater price down the line for our progress and our prosperity.

It goes without saying that we cannot stop funding elements like tourism, and so on. But at this point, we have to strike a happy medium because our people are complaining. It would be interesting to learn what the results of the census will tell us about what kind of society we are living in, in terms of housing, leisure time, in terms of the numbers in the various socio-economic categories. Every year I see it to the point where it is becoming obvious that more and more of our dollars are going to be spent on corrective measures. One wonders where this is going to lead in the long term.

There was great fanfare when the Vision 2008 Plan was tabled in the Legislative Assembly. I think that is a good thing. As I recall it got unanimous support from the Legislative Assembly. But the Budget document did little other than to mention that this document was tabled and has received unanimity. I would be more satisfied if the Budget document contained some provision for the implementation for some of these plans because to be successful and to take it to the next stage we must now begin to talk about implementing some of these things that the populous wishes to see put in place. I am disappointed to see that no attempt has been made to arrive at some kind of figure, even if it were a preliminary figure, which would lead us to some realisation of what it might take for us to implement a part of this plan.

Mr. Speaker, that is a significant observation, especially in light of the fact that the plan is designed to be a rolling one where it is frequently updated. I have always contended that the problem with these kinds of exercises is not that we don't arrive at good and acceptable plans, sometimes even ideal plans. The problem lies in accessing the wherewithal to put the plans into implementation. I would say that that has been the failure of every plan embarked upon in recent times, recent times being within the last eight years.

There was great fanfare and effort to garner the plans, and people go to great lengths to volunteer. And I commend and appreciate all the volunteers' efforts. Many people gave up their time, made sacrifices. But the let-down is that there has been no attempt on the part of the government to quantify any amount that would be necessary to realise these plans.

That brings me to say that it has been a characteristic weakness in public administration of the recent past to prioritise. Certainly, the political directorate now in power, whether it still feels comfortable calling itself the "National Team"—since it has lost some of its most sensible members—or not, is particularly susceptible to this failure. I believe that that failure is singularly responsible for the quandary that we find ourselves in at this budget time, and, certainly, it was singularly responsible for the quandary we found ourselves in at the last budget time when we had to cut and paste, break and patch, bind and rebind. There is an absolute breakdown in communication and a breakdown in the ability to prioritise.

A good case in point is the fact that there is a big row (I have been made to understand) going on even as I speak because the announcement was made that the government was going to take duty off some fruit. But no one seems to have consulted the Minister of Agriculture. And now the farmers are up in arms because the local farmers have been told that since the duty is coming off imported fruit, they will have to drop the prices on the fruit they supply to the supermarkets and local outlets by 15 percent. The farmers say that they cannot afford it, particularly the larger ones. They are already losing ground in trying to be competitive with the imported fruit.

So, there seems to be a breakdown in communication, and a lack of understanding in and between the various ministries and the government in arriving at these things. That being the case, I cannot be satisfied that this Budget, this document, is as rosy as it was made out to be. I will have to taste much more of the cake before I decide that it is a good cake! I am anxiously waiting to see how the government is going to deal with that problem, bearing in mind that this is an election year.

It is a lesson that all of us should learn. We cannot afford to manage by crisis any longer. A couple of years ago the Chamber of Commerce held a meeting at the Lions Centre, where 3,000 people came out and government had to backtrack. This may not be of the same significance, but it carries with it a certain risk. I would have thought that for all of the experience the ministers so ably and quickly remind persons like me they have, that they would have avoided such a conflict and contradiction at this time.

Planning is an essential part of the progress of any society. And any entity that exists without proper planning and prioritisation is bound to experience failure—failure that will bring serious economic setbacks.

We, on this side of the House, have been as responsible as we could be, bearing in mind the position we took last year when the budget was presented and the position we took in Finance Committee. The government should have had the presence of mind to be more focused. I know there are some elements who will find it advantageous to blame the reform process, trying to say, 'Well, if we weren't in the middle of implementing some of these reforms this wouldn't happen.' Mr. Speaker, nothing could be further from the truth!

The quandary the government finds itself in now, as it relates to the problem I just outlined, has nothing to do with the reform process. Rather, it has to do with government's inability to arrive at proper prioritisation, and it's inability to communicate among the various ministries properly. I know what the problem is: This being an election year, government is doing its best to try to appear to be pleasing and appeasing all entities in this society. It is an impossible task; it cannot be done. It was not done by entities before, and it will not be done by these.

The final thing I wish to say on that is that persons like me who find themselves on the backbench would be ill advised, given these opportunities, not to take advantage of them. So government cannot expect that it is going to get any help from me in solving problems. It is their problem, they have to solve it. That is the reason why I reneged when the invitation was extended to sit down and meet with them. I was not in on the party at the begining and I do not wish to come to the party at the end. It is not my budget; it is government's budget. If it is broken, they should fix it. If one were to believe them, they have enough capable people on that side to fix it. Let us see how efficient the fix will be—whether it's a quick fix or a long lasting fix.

Mr. Speaker, we have reached the hour of adjournment . . . do you wish me to go on?

The Speaker: No, I am satisfied.

We have reached the hour of 4.30. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Anthony Eden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 AM tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM THURSDAY, 2 DECEMBER 1999.

EDITED

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister of Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture]

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.
Item number 2 on the Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: There are no announcements this morning. Item number 3, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question number 162 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 162

No. 162: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation what percentage of the medical insurance claims submitted by the Health Services Department to the insurance providers during the past year have been honoured.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Of the total amount of medical insurance claims submitted by the Health Services Department to the insurance providers in the 12 months ending 31 August 1999, approximately 79 percent have been settled.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementary, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Honourable Minister tell the House if the Health Services Department has experience problems in having claims submitted to the insurance company serviced?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Initially, in the preparation to the gearing-up, it was found out that the Health Services Department and some of the insurance companies were not quite ready. I know at the present time, things are start-starting to flow much better now.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister say whether he is aware of any problems experienced by the private practitioners with regard to accepting or accessing claims when submitted to the insurance companies?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr Speaker, nothing official has come to me at the Ministry, but I am aware of certain complaints. What I have done now is, I have spoken to the gentleman at the Monetary Authority who deals with this to check this out to make sure it gets sorted out.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I appreciate the comment from the Minister and I would ask that he undertakes to follow this matter up with his usual diligence because almost weekly I am approached by my constituents and members of the wider public who have problems accessing claims. There seems to be some serious misunderstandings to the point where some of these people are significantly put out of funds which they have to go to great expense to expend privately when it should have been coverage by insurance.

I am asking the Minister to give the undertaking to follow this up with the usual diligence of his office because these comments . . . I was listening some time ago to the public radio show, Talk Today, and that particular programme was filled with people calling in, experiencing breakdowns in accessing claims when submitted.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I appreciate the Third Elected Member bringing this point up again. What I will also undertake is to share the Hansard from this meeting. They will understand how important it is to this country that they stand up to their undertaking when we have literally provided a situation to benefit our people, and I am sure there is significant monetary gain, for some of them never had this before, that it is dealt with in the proper light and that our people don't suffer because of it.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to Question number 163 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 163

No. 163: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to give a breakdown of the projected operating cost of all Government health facilities for the year 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I would like to apologise to the Honourable Member and the House for the delay of getting this question on. It has been on for some time. I finally got all the figures. The projected operating cost of all Government health facilities for 1999 is as follows:

HEALTH FACILITIES	OPERATING COST
Faith Hospital	$2,725,426
West Bay Health Centre	169,157
Bodden Town Health Centre	151,855
East End Health Centre	89,721
North Side Health Centre	78,859
Prison Clinic	45,141
Schools Clinic	161,479
George Town Hospital: including Lion Eye Clinic, Dental Clinic, Public Health Services, Forensic Services	35,532,524
Total Projected Operational Cost	$38,954,162

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This being the projected cost to year-end 1999, can the Minister state then if funds have been allocated to cover all of these costs for 1999?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if in comparing this with what has been projected for the year 2000 there are any areas which may not be adequately served because of a lack of funding?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I am proud to say that when the Honourable Financial Secretary indicated to ministries, portfolios, and departments what he expected over last year's budget (which was 8% at first and then 5%) we indicated this to the Health Services Department. They very, very diligently . . . and I was most grateful to them were able to get within that position. They feel that what they got there is realistic. We have decided that it is belt-tightening time within there. There is a time of consolidation. As this House and the country know, significant amounts of money have been spent on our new facilities. We have put in a realistic figure. I would not say that we would not come back, but the senior managers who spent tremendous amounts of hours and time on this budget feel that they can work within this limit.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable Minister could give the House the revenue for each health facility that has been collected to-date.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the total collections, we don't have with us. But I would undertake to give that to the Honourable Member and this House.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I noticed in the breakdown of these operational costs, the Bodden Town Health Centre and the West Bay Health Centre are nearly on par with over $150,000 as their operational cost. East End and North Side are nearly on par with one approximately $80,000 and with the other one approximately $90,000 being the operational cost.

Is the answer to this simply because of the amount of clients that are involved or are there any other differences in the operational cost?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Before asking the Honourable Member to give the answer, would you move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) in order that Question Time can continue beyond 11.00 a.m.?

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of the relevant standing order so that Question Time may continue after 11.00 a.m.

The Speaker: I put the question, Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time continues.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND THE HOUR OF 11.00 A.M.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, the First Elected Member for George Town [was right], it was the significant increase in utilisation of these two facilities.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister say what periods of time on a daily basis are these clinics being manned?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I would prefer to give a written answer as the clinics in East End and North Side are not as busy as the ones in West Bay and Bodden Town. But to give you the accurate time schedule, I will provide that for you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps, asking the question another way might make life a little easier. Can the Minister state if there are any plans to man any of these four clinics 24 hours a day?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, at this time because of the demand, I don't think it would be cost effective to put personnel there. I think it is about three evenings, and in West Bay, I think it is probably up to five evenings a week now, where the doctor is there until 8.30 p.m. or 9.00 p.m. At Bodden Town, I think it is 3.00 p.m. But at this time, we don't plan to go twenty-four hours.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Getting back to the question of insurance, in the estimates . . . and if possible, I would like to take it year by year for 1999 and 2000, one being actual or as close as can be projected and the other one being a totally projected figure. Can the Minister say compared to what the expectations were for 1999, with regard to monies being received by the entire Health Services Department, whether this figure is on par with what has been projected? Is it lower? Or is it possibly better? In doing so, can that be an indication as to what is expected for the year 2000?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, in reference to what was projected for 1999, we will not collect what we expected at that time because as indicated earlier, the preparation by Health Services and the insurance companies, with us not being quite ready—this is one of the focuses we have put in place for 2000, that we have the personnel in place to deal with this. My hope and aspiration for 2000 is that it will be significantly more, first of all, with the implementation with the assistance of the Portfolio of Finance and Development. The provision of health insurance care of civil servants in entitled cases and also the fund we have for the indigents, once this is in place, the majority of revenue would come from civil servants. I expect that in the year 2000, revenue should improve significantly.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: For purposes of clarity and just to ensure that we all understand exactly how it works. Is it the case that whatever funds are allocated in the estimates for the cost of operating the hospital, they are allocated whether or not the amount received as income falls short, and that only has a bearing on what Government's recurrent revenue becomes at the end of the year? I just wanted to make sure that it doesn't matter one way or the other with regard to the ability of the Health Services Department to function the way it should.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, sadly, that is a very good observation made by the First Elected Member from George Town. As we know, the trend . . . and hopefully as Government goes forward this will be taken care of through the health insurance.

At the present time, the Health Services Department absorbs the entire cost across all government departments for care provided to all departments. This is why when you look at the revenue side for the Health Services Department it is so incredibly lopsided. I know that some of the departments indicated in the past that ministries and departments should provide for the care—I think it specifically talks about Lands and Surveys, where whatever the cost, departments should include that in. But as I said, the health insurance will go a long way to alleviate that.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not that concludes Question Time for this morning. Moving on to item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Member's Motion. Today being Thursday, Private Member's Motion appears on the Order Paper, but I would ask the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, if it is the wish of the House, to suspend Standing Order 14(3) in order that we can continue with the debate on the Appropriation Bill.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(3)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(3) so that debate on the budget speech can continue.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Order 14(3) has been suspended.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(3) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Moving on to item number 5 on today's Order Paper, Government Business, Bills, Second Reading debate on the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999. Continuation of the debate on the Budget Address delivered on Friday, 26 November 1999 by the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town continuing.

SECOND READING

THE APPROPRIATION (2000) BILL, 1999

DEBATE ON THE BUDGET ADDRESS DELIVERED BY THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER ON FRIDAY, 26 NOVEMBER, 1999

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to begin this morning by sharing some observations on the domestic economy as covered by the Honourable Financial Secretary on page 8 of his speech.

Mr. Speaker, for some years now the economy of the Cayman Islands has been growing at a considerable rate. Indeed the Honourable Financial Secretary comments that in recent years, the Cayman Islands has experienced quite high levels of economic growth averaging 5.1% over the past five years.

Mr. Speaker, internationally accepted growth levels are put ideally around 3%. Indeed, some countries think the growth rate of 2½% is something to be proud of if it can be consistently achieved. So, what we find is that for the past five years, we have been doubling what is the internationally accepted economic growth rate.

Now, there are several implications for that. One is, of course, that the economy is doing so well that we have to be concerned that such a growth rate does not fuel inflation. The second thing is that we have also to be concerned that that growth rate is not merely confined to one sector of the society, but that it is achieved in such a way that all sectors of the society benefit.

Therein, Mr. Speaker, lies the challenge as I see it. Because the Cayman Islands economy based as it is with such a large part being dependent upon the international financial business, it stands to reason that if we are not careful, significant elements of the Caymanian population will not derive any direct feasible benefits from such growth. I believe that this is a situation of which the government will always have to be cognisant of because if we are privy to some of the concerns of the people in the wider Caymanian society, these kinds of complaints are beginning to be echoed.

There is dissatisfaction and a disappointment among some elements of our population because it seems to them that they are being left behind—that the process is not taking them along at the rate at which they would like to be taken along. Mr. Speaker, I believe that there is some justification for them to feel this way, particularly those elements that find themselves in the blue-collar worker section.

For many years I have wondered why it has not been possible for us in the Cayman Islands to develop some kind of macro-finance initiative that would allow those of our people who are entrepreneurial and business-minded to derive more benefits from the position in which these islands find themselves. Right now, there is an element of people who have hospitality related businesses, who are labouring under tremendous pressure to make those businesses work.

Many of them—established Caymanians, people who pioneered, for example, the North Sound diving, fishing and boat trip industries—are suffering a withering fire from competition by organisations much larger than theirs and much better financed and organised than theirs. I am sure other members particularly those Honourable members who come from those constituencies where the majority of these people come from, would seize the opportunity to comment upon this.

One of the reasons I believe that our people, our local entrepreneurs, have not been able to do better is because the business has evolved in such a way where it presupposes access to certain capital in order to develop it. For example, there is now the whole question of liability and responsibility in the event of accidents. Years ago when the industry just started, when there were pioneers like Captain Ertis [Ebanks] and all these other people there was no concern about that. You hopped on a boat, you took a North Sound tour.

Now, things are much different. It started out with the old catboats and the sails. Now, we have motorised vehicles. Traffic is much heavier, the risks are much greater because people are in the water snorkelling, diving and swimming. So, we have to take certain contingencies into account.

Yet, Mr. Speaker, the fact that some of our people are in positions where they cannot easily afford insurance coverage, liability coverage, coverage for the patrons who ride their boats is used against them by the larger organisations to wean away business even though long time visitors prefer to deal with the small Caymanian family enterprises—because the people are personable, because of the fact that they are reliable. These are the real genuine Caymanians.

They can hear anecdotes, they understand the nuances of the language and they just feel at home. But there are also practical considerations when people come with young children, they also have certain responsibility to ensure that in the event (heaven forbid) of an accident that there is clear cut responsibility as to the liability.

I am aware that the First Elected Member for West Bay is working towards addressing some of these concerns of his constituents. But, Mr. Speaker, the fact is that when you have to access these kinds of funds at the commercial rates, when you are paying back at 15% or 16%, or even 10% or 12%, it is difficult for these people to service those kinds of loans even if there are small loans and at the same time maintain their equipment, pay themselves and support their households and remain competitive. We are under pressure and there is a segment of the domestic economy which is really under pressure and which is really beginning to question its benefit as regards the booming economy that we have been experiencing for all these years.

I don't propose to dwell too much on the larger finance houses, the banks, and these multi-national corporations. They play an important role in fuelling the domestic economy too. But they are not under threat. The only thing I would ask of them is that they be a little more sympathetic and a little more willing to dispense and make available some resources at rates which could be avoided by our people.

The callous disregard displayed by the attitude of Barclays Bank closing its branch in Cayman Brac . . . these kinds of situations and occurrences, you know, are kept to a minimum. One would have to question the loyalty but if the motive—and I understand the business principle is purely profit, then clearly we are being used if all of the responsibility and the relationship you have with me for 30 or 35 years is purely based on the profit motive. You have no consideration for the fact that I may be inconvenienced, I may be off put; my business may have to shut down, my family may be out of house and home just because your profit margin or the returns on your investment was not enough.

It doesn't reassure the Caymanian people that they are benefiting to extent that they should benefit. If you can just up and arbitrarily close your operations by just giving two weeks' notice. Mr. Speaker, you come from an established century old business house and you know the repercussions and ramifications of that kind of dealing. I want to say just like we the legislators and the people of the country have an obligation and a responsibility to keep the climate orderly, sociable, stable, so that these business houses can operate effectively, they in return have an obligation to consider our position and our plight.

I have to comment again that at a time when Cayman Brac is struggling, that was a callous and untimely act, which is bound to set back the good people of Cayman Brac who have been so loyal.

Mr. Speaker, I can only say that it smacks of unprofessionalism. I was even more stunned to learn on the news that it is a final decision. There is no thought and no more comment to even rethink. Mr. Speaker, I find it ludicrous to suggest telephone banking. Our people are not accustomed . . . that shows me that for all of the years these people have been operating in Cayman Brac, they don't know the people that they were dealing with—they never tried to understand them! To tell me that you are going to remove the service, remove the personableness and suggest that I should do telephone banking . . . Mr. Speaker, when I am at West End, or Spot Bay, or the Creek on a Friday afternoon with my paycheque, you tell me how telephoning someone is going to get my cheque cashed, pay my bills and get me to take home a basket of groceries to my families.

This is completely out of reality. And even given the greatest regards, stretching the imagination to its fullest that we are on the eve of the 21st century, this still cannot work.

Mr. Speaker, you know something, sir, I would venture a wager that they could not do that even in the smallest hamlet in the United Kingdom and get away with it. They could not do that in any other island in the Caribbean and get away with it. So, this kind of callous disregard does nothing to show us that we are anything but a convenience. I am sorry, but it also puts the government in a position where the government has to realise that its responsibility and its obligation to the people of the country is even greater. Not even the government could persuade them to stay a day or a week later.

I would venture to say from the little information I have that the government is probably one of the major clients of that bank. But it also puts the government in a position where the government must realise that its responsibility and obligation to the people in this kind of circumstance is greatly increased.

Mr. Speaker, I am saying all that to say that one of the challenges I would like to see the government rise to, is to explore the avenue where we could develop some micro-finance initiatives so that we could help these people that I am talking about—the little North Sound day trippers and all of the people who might want to get into the cottage industry—so that they may derive some small benefit from the tourism industry. Or maybe develop some product or service that they could derive benefit from the regular Caymanian population—from those of us who are here all the time. It is not far fetched to say that something like that can be achieved.

Mr. Speaker, I am aware that the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board went into some ventures like that. But that is not my ideal model because every venture that they have funded . . . well, I wouldn't say every. Let me take that back because I wouldn't want to be promoting inaccuracy or untruth. But many of the ventures that they have been involved in, in terms of financing local people, have not gone well. Indeed, two that they financed in the hospitality industry failed, and I would venture to say that it ruined the owners.

Now, from my position I believe that there were a number of reasons for that. Two of which were the interest rates were really not affordable; and the second thing is that I believe that enough support was not forthcoming after the project had been established. I understand that the funds came from Caribbean Development Bank (CDB). I believe that they were not equipped to lend the kind of services and support that was necessary. Mr. Speaker, I want to propose a model that I believe is worthwhile pursuing. I mentioned this before to the previous Governor, and I was surprised because he said that he knew of this organisation.

Mr. Speaker, to go back to the ventures that I just mentioned, these ventures as I understand it were funded directly by the CDB. I believe that the CDB is not the best equipped organisation to provide these kinds of financial services. Because the situation which exists in the Cayman Islands is a little different from that which exists in other Caribbean countries serviced by the CDB.

The second thing is that these ventures did not receive any support beyond the financing and the setting up of the business. When you get into micro-finance initiatives, it is a handholding business. You have to hold the hand of the venture until they can step properly. It is just like learning to walk: you have to go from the crawling stage, to standing, taking one or two steps and then taking more steps. The hand has to be held until the entity can move on and stand on its own volition.

Now, there is an organisation out of Boston, Massachusetts called Accion International, which lends money to countries in Latin America to off lend to qualified individuals or entities to set up small business ventures. Even as small as to buy one or two sewing machines to make school uniforms out of somebody's house. Mr. Speaker, the greatest model of micro-financing initiatives in the world is a model out of Bangladesh called the Grameen Bank.

The bank was founded by a former university professor, Mohamed Yunis with US$2,000. Today, Mr. Speaker, about 15 years since its inception the Grameen Bank is a multi-million dollar lending institution. Mr. Speaker, here is the startling fact: the Grameen Bank has over a 98% repayment rate. It has the best repayment record of any bank in the world. It is even more interesting to think that the Grameen Bank was founded principally to loan money to people who could not qualify for loans from the commercial bank.

Mohamed Yunis had an idea that he believed would work. That is especially striking in that Bangladesh is a Moslem country where women could not borrow money from commercial banks. The principal clients were women, and still are women. Today, the bank is international and its model has been studied by the United States and by the United Nations. Mohamed Yunis frequently travels the world, not only the developing world but the developed world, selling the model because the United States has decided to use that model to see if he can service some of the needs of the inner cities.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that it is worthwhile for the government to explore micro finance initiatives so that it can lessen the obligations and the dependants upon the government to be all things to all people by setting up a system where those persons who are entrepreneurial can help themselves.

I certainly am suggesting now that if we had such an initiative in place it could help those persons who operate out of the North Sound, particularly those persons who operate out of small family businesses that they have been operating for decades. Mr. Speaker, my heart moves when I see these people because I know some of them have been in that business for years—far more years perhaps that I have even although mine is not insignificant at this stage.

I wonder what are they going to do when they cannot do that anymore, if they don't pass that on to their sons and daughters, who will be able to slip them a couple dollars on the side. It is not morally right for these people to have made such valuable contributions to the development of our tourism industry, and have to leave like they came in—at the same level—when we say we are doing so well and tourism is doing so well.

I think it is incumbent on the Minister of Tourism and all the other ministers and this government to pool their efforts together to see if they can acquire some kind of finance initiatives that could help these people not only to be competitive but to realise a livelihood that they can be proud of. Right now, Mr. Speaker, I know they are about to wilt in the face of withering fire from the competition from big organisations like Red Sails Sports.

You know something, sir, I am going to talk about this when I talk about tourism but I am going to just mention here now. These people, our local entrepreneurs who really pioneered these kinds of industries, don't get any help. They tell me when they put their brochures in the hotels, the hotels tell the concierge, 'if you put these out front, we are going to deal with you' so they get put at the back. Even when people come up asking specifically to go on some of these tours, they get discouraged and dissuaded.

So, Mr. Speaker, it is these kinds of efforts that I am saying it is incumbent upon the government to find a way to provide for these people. They can best do that by trying to realise what these kinds of persons can have access to. It makes no sense to stand up and do lip service and say that we have the most bustling economy in the Caribbean and the highest in the western world, if we have people who have been working for 40 - 50 years and are still at the same level and going out at the same level they came in at.

I am not preaching any ism. What I am preaching is a moral obligation and a sense of responsibility because until we realise this it is no wonder that the Caymanian people are now beginning to ask for whom are we developing the country. For whom are we developing the tourism industry? For whom are we developing all of the other industries? For whom are we developing e-commerce? If our people do not derive benefits from these kinds of things, it makes absolutely little or no sense.

If the government does not step forward and stand in the gap and bat for these people, it means that the government is going to have to take more and more of their money to give to the Social Services and to give to the other organisations that help them. So, we won't be progressing. On the one hand, we will have to take in more and more, and on the other hand, we will have to give out more and more.

I like the old oriental proverb 'give a man a fish and you feed him for a day; but you teach him to fish (as my friend, the First Elected Member for George Town well knows) and you feed him for a lifetime.' The government can set this up, they can be free. You know how we benefit, Mr. Speaker? Each year we can vote less and less money for the Social Services because we will have more of our own people living in dignity, living with pride in that they are helping themselves. We will be able then to concentrate on the infrastructure which we need more and more of each year. The people who really need help will get all the help they need because they will be almost a wholly and captive clientele.

Mr. Speaker, I want to move now to the tourism section of the Budget Speech. If you can oblige me, sir, it would be a good time for the break—the throat is getting rather dry.

The Speaker: I had not planned to take a break this morning. It is my understanding that we are covering the funeral this afternoon and we are going until noon, if that is the wish of the House.

Mr. Roy Boddén: All right, sir, I will have a sip of water, and move on.

I have many considerations about the development of tourism, and I might as well begin with the greatest concern. I notice that a significant amount of millions of dollars are every year allotted to the Tourism Ministry. I am left to wonder, based on performance Mr. Speaker, if we are getting the best value for money spent. That question is so significant that I want to pose it again. I am beginning to harbour serious doubts in my mind as to whether or not we are getting the best value for the monies that we are spending on tourism.

Mr. Speaker, I want to begin with Pedro Castle. Pedro Castle, as everyone knows, is in the constituency of which I am one of the representatives. I want to say unequivocally that I supported the venture without reservation, because I believed that it had merits. I believe it still has some merit. However, being human I am now beginning to harbour some doubts and suspicions because we have failed to be convinced that the money spent derived the optimum benefit and indeed there are many queries.

It is still not clear, Mr. Speaker, for how long we will have to subsidise this venture. Of course, right now the management is in a state of flux. Mr. Speaker, these contingencies do not bode well for the successful operation of a multi-million dollar venture.

I can only speak for myself, but the Minister of Tourism has not convinced me that he has the situation at hand. Indeed, I would say that sometimes his response to the whole seriousness seems rather cavalier. You know, Mr. Speaker, the concern goes beyond me because recently there was an economic advisor from the FCO down here. I made an appointment to speak with the man. We were talking about several areas of concern, particularly the contingent liabilities, and the matter of Pedro Castle came up—not by me, but by him, Mr. Mark Courtney.

He said that the FCO is concerned about this project, Mr. Speaker. I told him that we on this side of the House are very concerned because we have had a motion for some months on the Business Paper to debate the events of Pedro Castle and it seems to be stuck in some morass. Every time I pass the Meagre Bay Pond I look for it, but it is not up there so it must be further west!

Mr. Speaker, that is one of the greatest hurdles that we have to get over. And there is no sense in us talking about the financial reforms, transparency, and accountability, if we are going to play geitje and when it affects me I dodge it and say, 'Well, you must be transparent; but I don't have to be transparent.' No Mr. Speaker.

I really have to record and express my disappointment because I have been around long enough to know how the game is played. When it comes to other ministers . . . well, I don't want to say because they are all colleagues and I don't want to sow any strife but sometimes it would seem like the Minister of Tourism encourages other ministers to look bad.

Then, Mr. Speaker, and I want to say this with all soberness and seriousness because this might shock some people. I am of the opinion that sales in the tourism industry . . . let me qualify what I am saying by sales in the tourism industry. The same business that I was just mentioning about the small boat operators booking tours to the North Sound from the various hotels, it seems to me that these kinds of sales in the tourism industry in Cayman today are driven by kickbacks.

Many of the Caymanians, particularly the old time Caymanians whom, Mr. Speaker, you know have nothing but honour, dignity, honesty, pride and these kinds of qualities, would never find themselves able to participate. I am saying this, Mr. Speaker, without fear of successful contradiction. If you want to get business from certain quarters, you have got to lay something off in order for the people to send the business your way.

Mr. Speaker, Caymanians who have been established in that business have come to me with the complaints. I don't want to be ethnocentric, but this is not a Caymanian style of doing business. This is, rather, a North American style of doing business. We have never operated like that in these islands.

I remember the days of my grandfather and his contemporaries. We talk about the gentleman's agreement, sealed with a handshake. A man gave you his daughter based on that. He gave you land based on that kind of deal. He gave you other property based on that. So, these kinds of insidious qualities that are coming in now are further precluding our people from certain advantages because we have never been accustomed to dealing like that. We have never been accustomed to dealing with quid pro quo.

Even those of us, like yourself, who were merchants we were straight across the deal—everything was up front on the table—this is the product, this is the price. Similarly, if it was a service, Mr. Speaker, you well know if a man came to you and said, 'a day's work' you negotiated the price, that was it, and you got your eight hours and he got his money. So, Mr. Speaker, we have to watch this and the Minister of Tourism especially has to keep sharp eyes open.

Mr. Speaker, there is another significant matter happening. Last Friday evening (to be precise) I happened to be at the television station watching the newscast of a situation. The Cayman Islands Hotel and Condominium Association . . . all of the big foreign companies have pulled out of that. Why? Because the Hotel and Condominium Association is at a stage now where for the first time in its history it was getting a Caymanian head. Now, Mr. Speaker, there is politics in everything and we will be naïve to believe that these kinds of situations are not fraught with politics.

What happened? All the big hotels decide to pull out of the Hotel and Condominium Association. Mr. Speaker, I would like the Minister, when he gets up, to address this. What is his position? Is he going to allow this to happen? That is outright blatant prejudice against the Caymanian elements in the Association. And the Minister and the Government should not encourage and condone that, particularly as public funds are being used to pay for some of this advertising. Can't these people see what they are doing? They are creating an 'us against them,' they are dividing the ship; they are dividing the effort.

Mr. Speaker, the investment cannot work if there are those kinds of division. If there is friction between capital and labour, it cannot work. If the elements are going to identify themselves and claim exclusivity, it cannot work, the system is bound to break down. I would like the Minister to say what is the Government's position on this when he speaks. If that is encouraged, then I take exception to Government's monies—public funds—being voted to help with the advertising and promoting of these properties for people who do not wish to be associated with Caymanians in their effort to promote and bolster tourism in this country.

I listened intently to what Mr. Jerris Miller had to say. He was articulate, convincing, calm, and intelligent. I have to grudgingly admit that he was far calmer than I would have been under the circumstances. Mr. Speaker, it is simply not right for these people to use us for convenience like that. It is not right!

Mr. Speaker, I hear the complaints too from the transportation business, the taxis. Just recently someone came to me just and told me that one of the fleet operators (as I call them, people who operate tour business) asked, "Now, what in the world is Red Sails Sports doing, transporting people from the airport?" Mr. Speaker, that kind of greed ruins countries.

A young Caymanian entrepreneur, I know the gentleman . . . I have a pretty good idea of how much money he has invested in his fleet of busses. He came to me to say that the latest thing now is that this company, Red Sails Sports, was killing him because they joined up with a Caymanian company who was operating independently before and is now moving tours from the airport.

Mr. Speaker, do you know what, sir? They should not have been given a licence to do that. They take people on boat trips. They have a watersports industry booming and thriving. Now, they are killing the Caymanians who are holding their own in the tour bus business. No, Mr. Speaker! No sir! Enough is enough.

As my mother used to say, too much is as good as a feast. We cannot take this, and it makes no sense for us to continue to fund a ministry and an industry where the monies are going to be used against our own people.

Before it gets to the stage where there is total chaos and total breakdown, we should try to discuss it to see if we can come to some kind of understanding. They don't need to take all of the cake. Leave us a couple slices.

Mr. Speaker, I am convinced that some people never learned from history. History will have to repeat itself. As much as I would hope otherwise, it seems sometimes that the hopes are futile.

Mr. Speaker, I want to touch on another matter on this tourism business. I am reliably informed that two full scholarships were offered to qualified Caymanians to study at two of the finest institutions with records and faculties in the hospitality industry—Cornell University in Ithaca, New York, and the University of Michigan. I am reliably informed that the Minister of Tourism knows about these scholarships, yet nothing has been done for some years now to ensure that the posts be advertised and filled by Caymanians. They were reserved exclusively for Caymanians—no competition.

I am further informed that lack of Caymanians taking the positions up, the lack of interest, has put at least one person in a predicament, in a position that the Japanese people call 'loss of face.' Because it was this person's familiarity with the Cayman Islands that has led the scholarships to be reserved. I would hope that the Minister of Tourism sees fit to act upon this offer before it is too late—if it is not too late already. I am surprised, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman has not had the time to ensure that this offer was taken up.

Mr. Speaker, I believe too that as far as tourism and its continued growth is concerned we have to be vigilant and flexible. We have to be prepared to learn from the errors of other people. It is my understanding that a few weeks ago, one of the major cruise lines gave notice that they would be pulling out of one of the islands in the Eastern Caribbean. When they were approached by the tourism officials in this island and asked if they would reconsider, they were met with a cold and unequivocal no.

It is also my understanding that another island plans to up the rates. As a matter of fact, they doubled them. They are now $10 per person. They went to $25 per person. They also received notice that they would be dropped from the scheduled ports of call. I am talking about the person when they come to shore. When they went to speak with the cruise ship line representative, my informant told me that they were most humble because they offered, first, 'Well, if we take $5 off, will you reconsider?' The gentleman said, 'no' and they kept on bargaining until it dropped down to the original $10 per person. The retort from the cruise ship representative was, 'Listen, you are hardly in a position to bargain with us when you need tourist arrivals.'

I say that, sir, to say that we have to be very careful that we don't price ourselves out of existence in the face of stiff competition from all around—not the least of which is Cuba, which is gradually opening.

Mr. Speaker, I am not finished but we have reached the appointed noontime, sir.

The Speaker: I would like to advise Honourable Members that Dr. Marilyn Volker will be coming to address us informally at 12.30 p.m. here in the Chamber. It is in conjunction with the World AIDS Day.

At this time, I will recognise the Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I would like to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until next week, Wednesday, 8 December 1999. The reason for this is that the Honourable Attorney General, the Honourable Financial Secretary, the Honourable Minister of Tourism, the Third Elected Member for George Town, and I will be travelling to the UK tomorrow for official talks with the UK. We will be back on Tuesday night. We are asking the House for this courtesy.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We know about the visit to the UK, and I don't know about other members, and notwithstanding that two or three members from Executive Council have to go, they have temporary members to serve in their place, and the government will be left with the backbench support. They will be left with the Minister of Health, the Minister of Agriculture, the Minister of Community Affairs and all their temporary members.

Mr. Speaker, we are in the month of December. I am just wondering whether we cannot continue debating the budget while these members are away, instead of losing two days. Certainly, the House will have more than a quorum. I cannot see why we cannot continue our work while they are on official business.

As I said, we all know that they have plans and this was a meeting that was planned. But we are late with the budget. We have a load of other business, a load of questions that need to be answered and the budget process is a long one. We don't want to get to the point where we were last year where we didn't finish the budget until January or February whenever it was. So, I really cannot see that the House should adjourn, I would like to continue and try to get through with some of our business.

The Speaker: I shall put the question and the will of the House will prevail. I shall put the question that this House do now adjourn until 8 December at 10.00 a.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can I have a division?

REPORT ON NORTHWARD PRISON
BY SIR STEPHEN TUMIN

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, the report on Northward Prison by His Honour Sir Stephen Tumin, and this is dated October 1999.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr. Speaker, in the interest of time, I am not going to read the report. I will simply say that the report was very clearly written and I therefore decided that I would not read the report. I thank you.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

RAISING OF MATTER OF PRIVILEGE

ABSENCE OF QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: If I may, sir, I rise to what I believe is an important aspect of this Legislative Assembly's work, that is, the absence of questions on the Order Paper.

Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Business Committee I am concerned that questions laying over from May have not yet been answered. It is now 8 December. Notwithstanding members/ministers being busy, it is time that important questions be replied to in this House. I am really tired of seeing questions on the Order Paper that we know are just planted questions, and questions that should be answered are not being answered.

The Speaker: Moving on to item number 6 on today's Order Paper, Government Business, Bills. Second Reading debate on the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999. Continuation of the debate on the Budget Address delivered on Friday, 26 November 1999 by the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town continuing.

SECOND READING

THE APPROPRIATION (2000) BILL, 1999

DEBATE ON THE BUDGET ADDRESS DELIVERED BY THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER ON FRIDAY, 26 NOVEMBER, 1999

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I contend that it is somewhat disadvantageous to have to speak in a disjointed fashion. Really, I don't believe that it lends itself to absolute coherence. Nevertheless, they were circumstances beyond my control so I shall determine to be as sensible as I can be under the circumstances.

I would like to begin by addressing that section of the Budget Address dealing with the aspects of Agriculture. I wish to begin with the comment that agriculture is one of those areas in which we in the Caymanian society are most challenged. There is a sector of the community, albeit small, that has earned our respect by continuing to strive in agriculture even under the most adverse circumstances, many, if not all of which are beyond their capacity to control. What we have emanating out of our position now, Mr. Speaker, is a contention in which the government has proposed to make a move that the agricultural sector claims (with some justification as far as I am concerned) is counter-productive to their efforts.

I noticed that on the Business Paper of the House some honourable members are expressing their concern for the plight of the people who practice agriculture by asking the government in a private member's motion to do something to help them. It seems that agricultural success in the Cayman Islands is plagued by a number of factors; the first of which is that there is no significant amount of arable land that can be mechanically farmed. While I pay the greatest tribute to those commercial farmers who insist on continuing their chosen vocation, I have to remark that one of the principal obstacles they come up against is the fact that the large supermarkets import much of the fresh fruit from North America. These supermarkets have affiliation with food chains in the United States, which puts the Caymanian farmer at a definite disadvantage.

Many years ago it was suggested that we should put some kind of levy on fruits produced in the Cayman Islands in sufficient quantities but which at the same time are imported by the supermarkets so as to give our farmers some kind of advantage. I believe that this is a reasonable solution. It is done in other jurisdictions, but there is great resistance from the supermarket chains to the disadvantage of the Caymanian farmers. I believe that something needs to be worked out whereby the people who farm in the Cayman Islands can have access to the market and realise a reasonable return on their produce. It would strike me that the least the supermarket chains can do is be a little more accommodating than they are now.

According to the Financial Secretary's Address, the domestic agricultural production as of 30 September was $1.2 million, and the projections are that by year-end this would exceed the $1.7 million recorded for 1998. The Minister of Agriculture has invested great effort in promoting agriculture both in the form of crop and animal husbandry. It is my understanding now that as far as the animal husbandry is concerned, right now (and I recently heard this from the farmers themselves) there is a glut of beef on the market. So, Mr. Speaker, it shows that in some areas we have achieved success.

According to the Financial Secretary's Address, there have been significant increases in the yields of avocados, plantains, bananas, and citrus fruit. But this area of local production cannot expand because of the unwillingness of supermarket chains and large hotels to buy locally.

Now, an interesting point was made by a group of farmers at a meeting some of my colleagues and I attended recently, when we were talking about their inability to penetrate the large hotels. I have travelled to a few countries in the Caribbean and Latin America, and in every country that I have travelled to I noticed that on the Bill of Fare offered to these hotels there is a dearth of local fruits—in Mexico, Panama, Costa Rica, and Guatemala that I visited in Latin America; Trinidad, Jamaica and Barbados in the Caribbean. Yet in the Cayman Islands I don't see, when we have local mangoes in season, any of the hotels buying. Certainly, Furtherland Farms in East End is quite capable of producing all the citrus we need.

So, the government needs to dialogue with the large hotels and the supermarkets to ensure that the produce grown by local farmers is accepted and bought when available by these entities. Otherwise, Mr. Speaker, there is going to be a greater strain upon the government to subsidise these farmers and to make up for any loss the farmers may experience as a result of not being able to sell their produce.

The Farmer's Market has an outlet and does fine with the individual buyer, but it seems to me that where the support is lacking is from the large entities, supermarkets and the hotels. In all fairness, I understand that at least one of the supermarkets is willing to entertain the local farmers, but there is some reluctance on others and certainly no response from the hotels.

Mr. Speaker, I don't know how we are going to deal with this. It seems to me that the hotels just want to operate here at their convenience and believe that they have absolutely no obligation moral or otherwise to the people of the country. That is not my business as a backbencher, but, rather, the challenge of the government to see if some kind of understanding can be arrived at whereby there is a more mutually beneficial relationship. We have a situation where people complain about the labour conditions and the treatment at the hotels. Then, on the other hand, we have a situation where the hotels do not buy the produce from the farmers. So, it seems to me that as far as the hotels are concerned, it is strictly a one way street. I would that beginning in the year 2000 we could arrive at a more satisfactory relationship so those farmers could realise some returns by having access to these kinds of markets.

I believe too that there will be situations where the government, to one extent or the other, will always have to render assistance to farmers. But I would like to see this assistance limited to technical support rather than any kind of monetary subsidies. I would rather see the government arrive at a situation where it offers technical support, training, and this kind of advice to the farmers rather than giving them any kind of direct monetary support. I am not saying that that happens now, I am saying that I hope that the government can be sufficiently sensitive to understand the plight of the farmers and strive to meet them.

I have always lamented the fact that we in the Cayman Islands have not been sufficiently conscious so as to arrive at a point where we can have some form of sufficiency in at least some of the products rather than having to depend on every food item being imported. What we don't realise is that it is a tremendous drain on the foreign exchange. Money that goes to pay for this merchandise in Miami leaves these shores never to return in quantities that could be beneficial to these islands. So, agriculture too is one of those areas where the government has a challenge. And now that the production levels in both the crop and animal areas are rising, the challenge for the government now is to promote and develop the interest from the large entities, where the farmers can have ease of access to sell their produce without being put out by having to wait long periods of time before they get paid.

The best way this can be done is for the government to set up some kind of programme, to hire someone who is responsible for developing some strategy to interest the hotels and the supermarkets. In other countries this is done and perhaps what the government can do to help the agricultural society or the Farmers Association is to help them set up some kind of liaison whereby they can deal with these entities. The government can then extricate itself from any direct dealings and will not be accused of being in a position where it is applying pressure or a conflicting position, but, rather, where it, the government, is a facilitator. So, maybe the Minister of Agriculture can tell the House his disposition towards that suggestion so that agriculture can yield some more palpable returns from the investment government places in it year after year.

Mr. Speaker, I want now to move to make some comments on what I see is a concern in the Health Services sector. I want to begin by drawing reference to an answer that was given a short while ago, where the total projected operational cost for the Health Services is $38,954,164. This is a sobering if not formidable cost, and one would have to wonder how we are going to recoup this given the problems that have begun to manifest themselves now.

Of this $38 million plus, $35.5 million is spent on the new Health Services complex. Mr. Speaker, one would have thought that the provision of the new health insurance would have put the government in a more favourable position. But I noticed that only $5 million out of the $11 million expected to be realised was earned as a result of this. In the budget of the year 2000, we have earmarked to earn $15 million.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have a question—if we have problems earning $11 million, how realistic is it to think that we are going to earn $15 million even given that the Health Insurance Scheme will be more mature and coming more into its own so to speak? I say this, Mr. Speaker, with the caution that if one were to listen to the comments of constituents and the wider public there is still a great problem with the health insurance scheme.

Mr. Speaker, it is not yet working as it should work. Indeed there are companies which seem to be very reluctant to honour claims. I have even heard of cases of Caymanian patients being referred abroad, getting treated, presenting their card and when the insurance company calls for a reference everything seems to be all right but later down problems develop and claims are dishonoured. And, the Caymanian patients are left sometimes embarrassed, sometimes with threatened lawsuits, and most times out-of-pocket, for some of them have to go to the banks to borrow and to negotiate loans to pay.

Mr. Speaker, many of our local doctors experience grave difficulties in getting their money from the insurance companies after they have treated patients. Mr. Speaker, what is worse, some people do not accept the cards outright and it is not an exaggeration to say that it is an Aegean mess that cries out for Hercules. If we don't get on it sooner rather than later, the whole system is going to break down and it is going to detrimentally affect the government.

I believe that the system as set up by the ministry, by the government, was done so in great faith and with the primary objective that of benefiting the people and of putting the government in a situation where it did not have to realise the heavy financial burden of this health care, particularly of overseas medical. But it needs further examination and scrutiny because the insurance companies, some of them, seem to be abnegating their responsibility or, at the very least, they seem to be reluctant to honour the claims even when policy holders have been conscientious and diligent in paying their premiums.

It is, Mr. Speaker, a situation that the government must address at the earliest rather than leaving it until it is too late. I have numerous complaints from my constituents. I get complaints even from people outside of my constituency and all of these that I have followed up are legitimate complaints. People are embarrassed, they are made to look like they are dishonest when it is no fault of theirs—their premiums have been paid up. I believe, Mr. Speaker (and I am going to be very charitable in this and I am going to give the insurance companies the benefit of the doubt), that part of the problem may be a lack of communication or breakdown in communication.

I believe that some of the problems lie in the fact that people, clients, do not understand what they are paying for, what they are entitled to, and do not fully understand the waivers that they have and the deductibles. But, Mr. Speaker, I would not be so lenient, so generous, or so liberal as to suggest that all of the problems stem from that.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that there is great reluctance on the insurance companies to part with some of the claims made against them because somehow they grudgingly did not expect that they would be called upon to make these kinds of claims. Mr. Speaker, the challenge is for the government to ensure that the clients, the policyholders, are protected. But above all, the government and the ministry must ensure that ultimately they are not responsible when the insurance companies are collecting policyholders' money. So, the government must force them to live up to their obligations. Otherwise, Mr. Speaker, this amount will increase year by year and we will have to vote more monies for this.

The Speaker: If I could interrupt the speaker for a moment . . . there is a private member's motion pending on health insurance. I know you are at liberty to some extent, but you could be pre-empting this motion which will come before the House.

Mr. Roy Bodden: There is also one area in the Health Services that I think the government would be well advised to look more closely into. I recall, Mr. Speaker, the previous government (during the period 1988 - 1992) attempted to do something in this area and met with some objections. It is an examination into how realistic the cost of those services are, and facilities used and accessed by private physicians and surgeons offered through the Government Health Services complex.

I cannot recall, Mr. Speaker, when last there was a review for these services using the operating theatre and ancillary services. Some years ago it was found that the private practitioners were really the great beneficiaries of the government services, because the government rates were not realistic in comparison to what accessing of similar services by private physicians would be in other jurisdictions, like Miami. And yet, Mr. Speaker, these persons using these facilities did not pass these beneficial rates on to the patients.

If the patients were benefiting then the government could be well advised to take the approach that they were taking because at least some of the citizens would be benefiting. So, I think, Mr. Speaker, in an assessment, the minister may well have to visit these to see that the services which are utilised by private physicians and surgeons from the Health Services complex have realistic rates attached to them. This too would be a means of the government earning revenue to offset the expenses of their health services.

So, I am going to ask the minister, if he has not already set this assessment in motion, if he would do so because it would ease up his burden and it would provide a source of revenue and he would not have to depend on the Parliament voting all of this money. And, it all bodes well for a more efficient running of the health services complex.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that we have a good physical facility and I am not off-put by the large amount of monies voted or needed to have the facility operating. I am prepared to continue its support and hope that the government may see fit always to keep an eye on it so that we have the best management and that we offer the best service to the users of this facility.

Mr. Speaker, I want to turn now to the business of education. This is a most important area, if not the most important area of our budget. I want to remark that I am somewhat disappointed that in the budget speech there was no specific reference to education, save for a reference to monies voted for the scholarship.

The reason I express this disappointment is because on the eve of the new millennium, and with all of this talk about globalisation and e-commerce and the further development of technology and conducting business through electronic media, I would have hoped that we in the Cayman Islands would have placed ourselves in a position to take full advantage of these developments by virtue of the fact that we would lay down in our educational system the necessary foundations to promote this so that we could equip our people with the marketable skills needed to cope in the 21st century.

Mr. Speaker, we have a strategic plan which was developed with great fanfare, great enthusiasm and which was presented in this House as a rolling plan. I believe that the plan is workable. Certainly, I appreciate the manpower that went into putting it together, all of the polling, conferencing and dialoguing. However, it is my considered opinion that the plan could be somewhat strengthened by arriving at what I would call budgetary expenditures on education. Mr. Speaker, we cannot just produce the plans without arriving at some quantification of what it would cost to put these plans into effect.

A long time ago, one of the foremost economists, as far as education is concerned, Mark Blaug, posited that there are five major questions we should ask. These five questions are especially relevant in the Cayman Islands where education has to compete among other ministries with high profiles (for example, tourism) for scarce budgetary allotments. I believe we could improve our educational product by arriving at a system where we know exactly, calculate scientifically, what fraction of our budget should be spent on education and even what areas of education should be addressed.

I want to quote what Mark Blaug said about educational planning involving a hierarchy of these decisions. The first question that he said should be addressed is, How much of the total resources of an economy should we devote to education? How much of the total budget should we devote to education? How much should we spend on education out of the government's budget? and whether or not we should rely on private finance to fill out the rest.

How should we divide public expenditures on education between what is called formal education, provided by educational institutions, and informal education, provided by industry and various government agencies?

He goes on to elaborate what informal education is by saying it covers on-the-job training, adult education, literacy campaigns, agricultural extension, community development and certain forms of technical and vocational education outside of the parameters of regular schooling.

And then, fourthly, How should we divide public expenditures on formal education between the different levels of the educational system—between, for example, the primary system, the secondary system, and the higher educational system?

How should we divide public expenditures on formal education at a particular level comprising of the institutions, which function at that level?

So, Mr. Speaker, what we are talking about is arriving at a position where we know exactly what percentage of the budget should be spent on education and whether education should derive more monies, for example, than tourism, or agriculture, than health and than all the other areas that we have in our budget.

Mr. Speaker, what is interesting is that those five questions that Mark Blaug recommended do not have to be taken in the strict order in which I read them. They could be reversed or taken in any order. But what is important is that they form the basis, according to educational economists, for deriving the right amounts. If we were to go by recent trends, particularly the provision of educational facilities, . . . sometime ago, the Minister of Education handed us a sheet with Capital Works priorities for 1998, 1999 and 2000, where for educational facilities both building, maintaining, and refurbishing the total amount came to $55,631,510.

Now, that is a very significant, if not formidable, figure when we think that we have allotted a total budget of about $300 million. So, if we do not arrive at a specific percentage of the budget to spend on education and then further break that down into what we are going to spend on maintenance, refurbishing, as against what we are going to spend on developing new physical facilities, we will never be in a position to catch up to the objectives we have set. We will never be in a position to realise all the facilities needed in order to have an efficient functioning educational system.

It is even more foreboding when we at the same time we have to take care of and build new facilities, we also have to keep an eye on staffing, training, on providing the educational tools. Mr. Speaker, the time has come for a more scientific management of the educational plant, a more scientific management of the way we handle education in the country. We need to be able to more accurately detail what portion is going to be spent on the development of physical facilities, that is, the provision of classrooms, maintenance as against what is going to be spent on staff development and the acquiring of new learning tools.

Mr. Speaker, I lament the fact that in my opinion we are not making enough use of the electronic media and the possibilities these hold for teaching in our schools and for developing and challenging our student's intellect. I have always contended that being computer literate, being able to handle the computer, being able to access the World Wide Web is in and of itself a marketable skill. So what I am saying is, if our students learn nothing else other than to be able to use the computer to access certain information on the World Wide Web, that in itself is a marketable skill that could earn them entry level employment in many organisations. To go beyond that, Mr. Speaker, is to put them in a bonus position.

I contended a long time ago in this Honourable House that we should have set up a pilot project in at least one school where computer-assisted instruction was gone in on a whole scale so that we could make an assessment as to whether it would be effective as to warrant us developing it further. This, by the way, is not to mean that the traditional classroom teacher as we know would be obsolete or defunct. Rather, these persons would be trained to be more effective. Mr. Speaker, what is true is that it would lessen the weariness and burnout factor among these people.

This is definitely the way to go. The technological revolution holds great promise for education, and it should hold great promise for education in the Cayman Islands. The standard to which we have aspired and attained places us in an eminent position to be able to afford much of the technological tools that our pupils can use. I would like to see computers introduced from the very primary level. But I suppose that these things will be poked fun at, and I will be told (when the Minister of Education gets up to speak) that I don't know anything because I left the classroom from the time Noah parked the Ark on Mount Ararat; and that I am defunct and all that.

Mr. Speaker, believe you me, these things are not for me. I have only the interest of my country and the interest of the government. I am saying it, Mr. Speaker, hoping that it would be accepted in a constructive way and I am prepared to do anything in my power, whatever that is sitting on the backbench, to facilitate this. The country, the children at school are greater and far more important than I am, now entering my fifth decade. I will soon be worthless as far as work and production is concerned. But it is for them, the generation which is up and coming.

So, I hope that we can get at this. Mr. Speaker, that is why I have to go back to Singapore because these are the things that Singapore seized and capitalised on. I well understand that it is a different society. It is a society where they operate under the Confucius ethic, which is different from the western work ethic and from western aspirations and expectations. But I contend that there are many positive things that we can pick up from that society. The significant common element is that both societies are reasonably economically prosperous. So, I think the minister should embark on this venture now.

There are organisations dedicated to this assessment, dedicated to this change, who indeed are on the cutting edge of this technological revolution in education. The international consulting firm, Arthur Andersen comes to mind. Mr. Speaker, this firm has an organisation called the 'School of the Future.' They have in Oakland-Alameda, California, a special school with state-of-the-art technology.

The First Elected Member for George Town and I saw first hand how this technology is utilised. We stayed in an auditorium in Chicago and by a videoconference with this school in Oakland-Alameda, California, on a big screen we spoke with the students, questioned them. They spoke with us and we had an exchange where we saw each other, we dialogued.

Mr. Speaker, it is possible for Caymanian children to stay in their classrooms in the Cayman Islands and video-conference with students in London, New York, Miami, or anywhere else. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister knows about that because certainly I saw from time to time visits made from the University of the West Indies to the Community College, where they have some kind of distance learning project, they call it "distance learning." Mr Speaker, this is the way to go because at Arthur Andersen—and they are the experts—they say that traditional teaching methods as we know them are giving way to these latest technological trends.

There are companies that provide the latest in educational technology at various levels. There is a company I know of called Creative Learning Systems Inc, in California that travels the world setting up these systems—systems which begin anywhere from $300,000 and go up to $1 million. You can get partial traditional classrooms, partial computer assisted instruction, or you can get wholly automated electronic technology.

I got a call some months ago from some representatives of this company who told me that they were going down to Antigua and then to Bermuda to give some exhibitions and wondered if it would make sense to come to the Cayman Islands because they were negotiating some contracts to set up such systems in one of the schools in Antigua, and in one of the schools in Bermuda. Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, I could not invite them to the Cayman Islands because I had no authority or was in no position to. Certainly, I didn't want to risk embarrassment by calling a minister who would remind me that I was defunct.

So, once again, an opportunity was passed. It is not my business to make those kinds of arrangements. I am saying if the minister is interested, I am certain he can access it. I found this out by surfing the web. I am sure the government has more opportunity to surf the web than I do so they can find it out too.

But I would certainly recommend that this is the route to go because the world is moving in that direction. It gives us great value for money and puts our students and young people in positions where they can really capitalise on what is happening in the world of work.

Mr. Speaker, I am still on education but I was wondering if you could oblige me by taking the morning break now because my throat is getting a little dry, sir.

The Speaker: Certainly! We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.15 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.49 AM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on the Budget Address. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have taken the high road because I believe that these matters we are talking about are exactly like Georges Clemenceau said, when he was President of France, that war was too important a matter to be left to the generals. I believe that education is too important a matter to be left entirely to the politicians!

I want to draw the distinction that I am not speaking only from the point of view of a representative of the people, but also from the point of view of one whom has trained and practised in the profession and who will always have education at heart. Many years ago (long before I really realise the importance of education), my grandfather used to say to me, in the cool of the afternoon when we were assembled on the veranda, that education was the best tool that one could equip himself with because it was . . . he called it the great equaliser.

I didn't realise until many years after, Mr. Speaker, the profoundness of that statement and the profound and wisdom in his encouragement. But I certainly do so now. And, I will pass that on to honourable members, many of whom are very familiar with that truism even though it may not have been expressed to them in that way.

But we also have to be concerned that we get the greatest yields, the greatest returns on money we have spent on education because our system right now seems to be in a crisis. We seem to be in a position where we are just treading water. We are overwhelmed by a number of factors, we are overwhelmed by the necessity to provide physical facilities, which seem very expensive, and at the same time, we have growing enrolments, some of which we are not exactly certain about the numbers. At a time where educational expenditure is growing, it is entirely necessary for us to be able to realise the best value for money spent.

I have here an answer to a question that the Minister provided in 1998 when he was asked to provide the total recurrent cost for operating government schools during the 1998 school year. The total recurrent cost for operating the schools in 1998 was $16,183,357. And he drew the distinction that that included administration costs, which were $6,634,996. The figure for 1997 was $15,341,000. So, Mr. Speaker, we can see from 1997 and 1998, the cost of operating the government schools in the Cayman Islands cost is increasing.

It was further broken down for 1997, the average cost per student was $3,942. In 1998, it was $4,112 per student for the year. The number of students in 1997 was 3,892; the number of students in 1998 was 3,936. So, enrolment is increasing and so is the cost per student per year.

Now, the government system is wholly and solely responsible for the provision of the cost of educating the students. This is a significant amount of money expended on educating the students. That makes it critically important that the government place itself in a position where it can ascertain whether or not it is getting the best value for money spent. Mr. Speaker, I contend that we have not yet arrived at this position because for this $4,112 . . . and it would be interesting to see by how this has risen for 1999. For this $4,112 per student, we have to begin to ask ourselves, what are we getting? Are we just getting the basics? Is this providing only basic traditional instruction? Or are we utilising the latest in technological trends to equip our students.

I saw recently as a result of the educational conference that was held—a conference to which, I find unfortunate to have to remark, no member of this Honourable House (to the best of my knowledge) was invited . . . I made that observation known to the minister—

[Inaudible comment]

Mr. Roy Boddén: Nobody, that is, except the Minister who gave a keynote address. He proceeded to tell me that it was the fault of some people in the department—a breakdown in communication. That is the excuse used for the most (how should I put it?) unacceptable atrocities all over the world. People blame breakdown in communications for any number of things. I think it is a poor excuse when a national conference for education was being held and no one was invited except the minister when every honourable member of the Parliament has expressed an interest in education. I can guarantee you, Mr. Speaker, that when the government changes (as I am praying it will) and when the new minister comes in, every honourable member of the Legislative Assembly will receive an invitation to such conferences.

Anyway, I saw on that report in the newspaper that the Minister of Education was saying that one of the concerns is now, and the centre of focus will be, to teach children to think. Mr. Speaker, there is no better avenue to accomplish this than to introduce these children to the latest technological trends, allowing the children to work at their own pace, and freeing up the classroom teacher to move around giving assistance to those students who need help and support. What is important about this is that these kinds of ventures will yield returns because often students are able to practice because an increasing number of them will be coming from homes where they have access to personal computers.

Mr. Speaker, most importantly in circumstances where the only exposure to these instruments and technological trends are the schools, it is guaranteed that even students who come from the lowest socio-economic strata will gain some experience in working with these computers and in technological trends through their exposure in the classroom. So, Mr. Speaker, it becomes increasingly important that the government examine this per student cost to ensure that some of the cost is affording these students experience working with computers and the teaching of computers at the schools.

Mr. Speaker, at long last we see that the government embarking on the Lighthouse School Project. There was great and acrimonious debate on that project when it came before the Finance Committee. I have to remark that I still believe that government made a mistake in trying to refurbish or rebuild that Old Cayman Foods Building—a building which is well past twenty years—rather than building something specifically designed.

I recall very vividly when the government valuation was delivered, the Minister of Education decided that he would reject the government's valuation because according to him it was unrealistic—being that it was too low. He sought the support of his colleagues to increase that amount. Mr. Speaker, that was a very unorthodox procedure, particularly, at a time when the government valuator had placed a value on that. I still have to question the logic in the minister doing that. I remain to be convinced that the excuse he tried to proffer was a convincing excuse.

I remain to be convinced because I have heard that minister too often in this House talk about the ability to save money and the ability to realise savings and how good government is depending on these kinds of ventures. Well, it is a contradiction, Mr. Speaker, but then that doesn't surprise me because I have labelled that minister Janus, the Roman God who has two faces. On the one hand, he talks about the necessity to save money, and on the other hand, he takes it upon himself with the support, of course, of his colleagues—but he was the instigator—to reject this valuation, saying it was too conservative.

I believe that the weakness of the Minister of Education is that he needs to spend more time in developing the avenues of communication, and ensuring that the significant amount we spend on education is yielding the optimum results it can yield. We need to find a way to catch up with the physical structures that we need, the classroom space, and when we have that, find out how we can furnish them and provide teaching facilities and technology that will enhance the interest of the students and will make the efforts of the teacher, if not easier, a little more challenging and more (how should I put it?) easy to manage.

Mr. Speaker, I want to mention a couple of things now about another area of responsibility for that honourable minister and, that is Cayman Airways. I notice that there was nothing specific in the budget again about Cayman Airways. I was a little surprised coming at a time when Cayman Airways has just embarked upon outfitting a third aircraft.

The first comment I want to make is that I find it difficult if not impossible to rationalise that this aircraft has to be refitted at great expense and will not be back in service until some time in the New Year. What is more striking Mr. Speaker, is that this type of aircraft, namely, the 737-200 will soon be obsolete. Indeed, aircraft publications suggest . . . and I want to crave the Chair's indulgence to just read from a couple journals I have here.

These types of aircraft are increasingly being mothballed by airline companies. I want to read from a journal called Airways, December 1999. I want to read a brief excerpt from page 39. It says, "During the past two years, the Memphis Group [and the Memphis Group is a group of companies which specialises in buying obsolete aircraft, scrapping them and reselling the parts. Sometimes they resell the whole airframe to companies that want to put up unusual restaurants or whatever they want to use the bodies of these aircraft for] acquired 23 airplanes to dismantle. Fourteen ex-United Boeing 737-200s and three ex-Air Canada DC-9 Series 30s . . ." Then it goes on to say that one of the problems with these aircraft is that they have to be hushkitted sometimes at great expense.

The same magazine in November of 1999, the same Airways magazine talking about some aircraft that are old said, "The last SABENA 747 flight is scheduled to operate on October 28 this year, and the 737s are all being phased out as the Airbuses arrive. 'The Boeings 737s are showing their age,' Captain Drapier admits. 'The 737-200s have doubled the maintenance cost of the -300, it is time for them to go.'" Doubled the maintenance cost of the 300s! This is what SABENA, which is the Belgian airline, is saying: that the cost of the 737-200s are doubled those on the 300s and that they are phasing them out of their fleet.

Interestingly too, Mr. Speaker, a magazine called Aircraft Economics, for March and April of this year, says, "The European Union is freezing further registration of Stage III, hushkitted aircraft from April 1, this is significantly more restrictive than the agreed International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) ruling which sets April 1, 2002 as the date by which all Stage II aircraft must be phased out." So, what I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that our equipment is bound (737 200s) sooner or later to come under pressure even when they are hush kitted. So that, we will soon have to think, if we are smart, of retiring them and replacing them with new equipment. Well, we need to begin to think from now what our alternatives in this area are. What kind of services are we going to be offering? We need to look around for replacement equipment.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that it is wise to embark on these kinds of contingencies well before we are faced with the decision. It is not always the best management practice to have to be placed in a position where you have to make decisions of exigency when it comes to these kinds of things. I say that, in the hope that my comments may be accepted in a constructive light. I could have expressed it in a different way, but I realise the delicacy of the situation. I want to be purely constructive, because I want to make it clear that I have absolutely no ego to stroke.

I am on a mission to derive what is best for the country. My personal ambition, Mr. Speaker, is limited to being a conscientious representative and an honest and diligent Member of the Legislative Assembly. So, I have no ego to stroke, and I have tried to avoid putting down people. I have expressed what I have had to say in a delicate, diplomatic, and acceptable fashion. And, by the same token, Mr. Speaker, I expect when the government gets up they will accord me the same respect and dignity that I have accorded them.

I am not begging for any mercy or any consideration because everyone inside here knows that there is no more articulate member of this Honourable House than the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. I can take the high road, and I am equally comfortable on the low road. But I think it is necessary to go to great lengths to make the distinction that as the first person speaking I have deliberately set out to keep the debate to a constructively high standard. As we are entering an election year, this is not necessarily the time to play politics.

We are talking about the money, and I contend that the government mismanaged the economy. I am saying that from the deepest recesses in my heart believing the same to be true based on the conduct of the government not only in the last year but, in the last couple of years—especially from 1996 when they were swept into power with such great promise. Anyway, enough on that line, Mr. Speaker. I would expect that when the minister gets up, he would provide some constructive redress to the concerns I have raised.

Mr. Speaker, I want to wind my way towards the conclusion of my debate. I want to make some comments on the public debt. I find it curious that the government's figures for the public debt are rather conservative. The way they have expressed it is far less alarming than what is expressed by other commentators on our position as far as the public debt is concerned. I want to say that I am disappointed that the government is not paying greater attention to the contingent liabilities we have because this is a significant amount.

If we recall there was some concern expressed about contingent liabilities in the report by the Comptroller and Auditor General, in May 1997, of the UK Parliament.

Mr. Speaker, the contingent liability of the Cayman Islands Government has grown to an alarming proportion and I believe that while the government is making some effort in one significant area, namely, the area of the Public Pensions Liability, I believe that we have to be very careful. The government's excuse about the public debt is that it is well below the magical 10 percent upper limit government established for itself. Indeed, the government says that it remains at 6.2 per cent, that is the 1999 forecasted recurrent revenue.

However, what the government is not saying is that while it may remain at this 6.2 percent, what it is doing is removing the option in the eventuality that greater loans have to be negotiated. What the government is doing is not leaving successive governments in a position where they may have greater options.

So, Mr. Speaker, what I am saying is that the government cannot afford to be smug and self-congratulatory in that they have not reached the 10 per cent upper limit they have established for themselves.

One of my concerns, Mr. Speaker, is the fact that just recently we established a National Disaster Fund. I want to say something because I mentioned this before and I want the Government to take stock of this. It is my studied belief that we have arrived at the position now that not only should we set up a National Disaster Fund but that we should begin to think about an Economic Recovery Disaster Fund, in the event that we have a major failure of the tourism industry, in the event that we have a major financial collapse, in the event (heaven forbid) that some criminal element takes a significant toll through electronic trading or otherwise in our establishment. I think we should seek to set up some kind of Economic Recovery Fund.

I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that the government explore the ramifications and the possibility of this, ideally in partnership with the private sector, with the tourism entities, with the entities involved in the development of offshore financial institutions and certainly with the corporation of the monetary fund. I believe that on the eve of the 21st Century this is a sound and practical avenue for us to explore, if we are to remain on the cutting edge of the path we have chosen for ourselves. We have to be proactive, we have to be forward thinking. It is not far fetched.

Mr. Speaker, just this morning I was listening to the Caribbean on 5 on Radio Cayman. I chuckled to myself when I learned that a few days ago in Miami there was a gathering of representatives from various Caribbean governments. Antigua and Bermuda proposed that the Caribbean governments get together to set up a National Disaster Fund. My mind went back to the [private member's] motion that was brought in 1995 by myself, when I said that was one of the ways we could explore setting up a joint fund. The motion at that time was rejected because the government, I suppose as usual, never saw the wisdom in accepting a motion that I brought.

Later, however, the government set up a National Disaster Fund. So, although we were late, I am happy to say that as far as that is concerned we are not too late.

But here we are now, other countries realise the efficacy and the importance of setting up such a fund and they are talking about it. We in the Cayman Islands must be prepared to be proactive if we are to remain, retain our position of leadership in this region, leadership among these countries. That is why I am saying now we should seek to go a step further and explore the ramifications of setting up and developing some kind of economic disaster recovery plan.

I want to say something I was told in a forum comprised of many persons from the armed forces. The greatest leaders, the greatest strategists, the greatest field marshals are those who are able to anticipate the events of the battle before they take place and set up the contingencies and organise their forces. When the battle is upon them, they are already in place and have their strategy crafted, including (should the necessity arise) a retreat. Failure to do so leaves one in a disadvantageous position and, certainly, one cannot bear the name or the title of a strategist if you have to wait until you are overtaken by events to decide how you should react.

If you check military history, the greatest generals and admirals were those people who went through the battle plans in their minds and had everything laid out, including the eventually of retreat. It is a wise general who wins the battle with the least loss of life. It is the wise public administrator who takes account of the eventualities before they happen, particularly when we deal in monetary costs involving millions and hundreds of millions of dollars.

Mr. Speaker, the civil service plays a very important and vital role in our budget. The recurrent expenditure for salaries is significant indeed. The time has come for us to try to arrive at a sensible position where the increase in personnel is kept to an absolutely essential level in tandem with the reforms. I have said before (and will repeat again) that perhaps we can begin by examining the requirements we place on students whom we send abroad for tertiary education and begin to free them from the absolute bond of having to come back and work in the public service. Rather than making that an obligation, we should make that an option so that we do not overburden and over-tax the civil service to the point where recurrent expenditure is so high that we cannot cope.

One again the government finds itself in a position where it has to remove the duties of certain selected items. I mentioned the problem with the farmers, and I won't repeat that. One of the things government has waived duties on has to do with bakery products—biscuits, cakes, pies, custards, and the like. That is hasty, ill thought out, and counterproductive. What is going to happen to the local establishments? What will now happen to the poor people?

By removing the duty from these products, the government has enabled importers to now offer more attractive prices than the people who produce these goods locally, and the kicker is this: I contend that the poor people and the local consumers are not going to benefit from any lower prices.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: True!

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I have estimated that government is losing between $6 million to $8 million on this venture.

Remember now, this list includes biscuits and all the types of biscuits—everything that Nabisco and every other . . . pies, cakes, bread—

[A Member] Oh yeah!

Mr. Roy Boddén: . . . flour, Mr. Speaker, the finished products.

We cannot continue this break and patch business. We cannot continue to put Band-Aids over open-heart surgery. It is not going to work. And I am surprised because the government shows symptoms of a government in crisis! And you can't continue to play to the gallery.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Right!

Mr. Roy Bodden: If you play to the gallery, you are going to wind up in trouble. You have to play the game, if you want to win . . . because nobody plays to lose, Mr. Speaker. The government is playing to the gallery and the government is being buffeted.

This special interest group says they don't want this on them; this one says they want it off of them. And the government is tossed like a schooner in a terrible storm.

[Inaudible comments]

Mr. Roy Bodden: And, Mr. Speaker, how can people who like to tout their experience—like the Minister of Education—be in a position where they change their minds (depending upon what they have heard) four times in a short space of time? Before you take the position you [should] study the position, study the terrain. Then, when you take a stand it is an educated and informed stand; it can be defended.

Do you think the public does not know that this is an election year? And that if they don't put a certain amount of pressure the government will have to cave in? Believe you me, I have no interest in saving them. Heaven knows I have no interest in saving them. But I have an interest in seeing that the country is run right.

The government will be wishy-washy and continue to waffle. Why am I concerned about that? Here is why: The political directorate that succeeds them will be in a significantly weakened and disadvantageous position—and worse, if this government is planning to succeed itself. Heaven help us if they do!

What I am saying is that they should be concerned too, because if, by any stretch of the imagination, they succeed themselves, they cannot dig themselves out of the hole they have put themselves into at this time. They cannot!

But you know, I hear some members on the back-bench talking about how the government needs them. So, the government better listen to what they are saying. Otherwise, they might not get their budget through. And it seems to me that these members have formed themselves into a special interest group too!

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: That's true, that's true! Nothing but self-interest!

Mr. Roy Bodden: There will be plenty of talk, Mr. Speaker. Every honourable member inside here represents the people's interests. And there is no one with any more legitimate claim than the other's to say that he or she is the exclusive representative of the people's interest. I speak without fear of successful contradiction. I say that these moves are not going to benefit the people!

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: True!

Mr. Roy Bodden: And I say that the government is visionless! They are reactionary! They are unprepared! There is an absence of planning, but a dearth of confusion.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: They only save Wendy's and pizza—self-interest. Yes, and shellfish and lobster. Who's selling it?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, my position is clear. It has been clear because thank heaven I have always tried to speak my truth boldly. History will be the proof. But I end with the position I began with. I got up on the 27th day of November 1996 to say that the government had no vision, to say that it would fail; to say that its policies lacked coherence. And I was castigated! 'How dare you set yourself up to be the watchdog.' I was taken apart!

But, do you know what? Time and the performance of what is left of the National Team Government have proven that I was right. I want to say that I have never been afraid of taking positions, even when I am alone, if I believe that I am correct and if my judgment and thought were made upon sound basis. Neither am I afraid of making mistakes and being wrong, because there will always be a part of me that will admit that I was wrong; that seeks forgiveness and apologises.

As I said, I do not have any ego to stroke. I have a job to do and I believe I have been fortunate, if not blessed. I think that the National Team for the most part made a mess of the mandate it was handed. I wouldn't be so unfair as to say that they didn't have some successes, but I want to make the distinction because I know it is easy for detractors to talk about criticism and objections. I supported them when I thought they deserved support; but in instances where I had to come out loud in the exercise of responsibility saying that I disassociated myself from their actions, I have done so.

I cannot see where this Budget is balanced, and I am not convinced that it is a budget designed to achieve the objectives that need to be achieved in the country at this time. I guess one could say that my most basic question is, If you can cut $100 million from a document in one week, what does that say about how the document was constructed in the first place? I am not a mathematician.

A long time ago, the Third Elected Member for George Town reminded me that I was only a single entry bookkeeper, but I have good common sense. And I have a little association with the running of a successful business. I know that if I came to my managing director with a budget and he told me that I had to take it back because it was over by $100 million, and I took it back to him in one week and cut $100 million off it, he would ask 'What kind of budget did you bring me in the first place, that you could cut $100 million off in one week? How can I be assured that all of the objectives you have set will be achieved? How can I be assured that you are going to adequately service all of the areas that need service?

It would be a situation I would not want to find myself in because it would have the potential of embarrassing me to the point where I would be discredited as a manager. That is the position the government finds itself in. I will not be any fly in their ointment, but I am going to be watching with all the eyes I have to see where the breakdowns occur, and where they are going to try to practice the ad hoc and patch as the situations arise.

Mr. Speaker, we need roads. We need school buildings. We need maintenance on many of our facilities. We need a mental health facility. We need to do something about our juveniles. At the same time, we have Cayman Airways to keep up among all the other needs. Then, the recurrent expenditure is significant.

I wish the government well. My job is to help them by offering constructive criticism, which I have done. In the upcoming months, time will tell. And we are living in times where there is going to be plenty of talk, plenty of chest thumping, plenty horn blowing. But let us remember that Solomon said in Ecclesiastes, "the race is not always to the swift, nor is the battle always to the strong." While the government's position may allow them to be arrogant, fortunately (for some of us on this side) it does not guarantee them safety. So they cannot afford to be smug and apathetic, because the proof of the pudding will be in the tasting.

I challenge those coming behind me to keep on the high road because the progress of the country is too important to be dragged down by gutter politicians. Now is the time to lay a clear vision, to lay clear plans. Now is not the time for put-downs. Now is the time to build up. When the game is called the people will be the final arbiters, as they deserve to be. Let us hope that the country continues to derive the best from the representatives.

In this history of the Westminster system, it has never been the responsibility of the backbench, particular those who see themselves as (how shall I put this?) . . . particularly it has never been the responsibility of those who do not see themselves as appendages or extension cords of the government under the Westminster system to make the government look good. It has been their responsibility to make the government function; but it has never been their responsibility to make the government look good. Only government can make the government look good. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate, does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The floor is open for debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

There is a lot of business on this Order Paper, and we cannot wait too long on any individual item. This is my last call: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

If no other honourable member wishes to speak, does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr Speaker, as you can appreciate, after being absent from this honourable House, I have missed quite a number of the points that have been raised. I managed to hear this morning some of the thoughts that have been shared by the honourable Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. I have taken cognisance of those points, and I have taken cognisance of those points on behalf of the government. As I did not have the opportunity to review the Hansards, I will not be able to comment on the points that were raised earlier. I was expecting to do that exercise later on today.

One of the points I have picked up on is the question as to whether the fees that have been set out for the hospital for the year 2000, fixed in the area of $15 million, are realistic when compared to the position for 1999. Although $11 million was budgeted in 1999, and the revised figure of $5 million is what is targeted to be collected, honourable members will recall that included in this $11 million is a sum of $3.5 million that was put in to cover the insurance premium of those entitled cases, civil servants, and other persons who benefit from free medical. It was expected that that policy would have been taken out by the government toward the latter part of the year, and at a minimum, revenue flows into government would equate the sum of the premium that would have been paid out.

So, at least $3.5 million was included as a part of the $11 million. So when the $3.5 [million] is taken together with the $5 million that has been budgeted for the year (based on the revised figures), this comes up to approximately $8.5 million. This leaves a gap of $2.5 million, which I will admit was an over projection, if we look at it that way. But, bearing in mind as the honourable Third Elected Member for Bodden Town has pointed out (and this was the view of the government), having in place the national health insurance scheme, the general view was that we would have seen a significant improvement in the revenue flow for medical services.

That incremental increase initially anticipated is taking place over a period of time and at a gradual rate. So when we look at the position for the year 2000, inclusive in the $15 million is $8 million (honourable members will note under the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development is the sum of $8,564,540), which is the sum to cover the insurance premium for the year 2000. It is expected that that policy will be taken out, or the contract for that will be signed in the early part of the New Year. Taking into account the $5 million budgeted for the year 2000, adding that onto the $8,500,000 brings it up to $13.5 million.

We know that quite a number of the insurance providers are getting their systems up and running. There are quite a substantial amount of claims generated in 1999 that will remain uncleared at the end of the year and will be added onto the revenue that will be generated in the year 2000. This, in consultation with the hospital department, brought about the need to do a further project (to make an add-on, as such) to the $5 million that has been revised for the year 1999 and to take it up by a further $1.4 million.

When we spoke to the hospital department, they said that on an average they were receiving 48% settlement of the claims that are being submitted to the insurance companies. This is a matter that needs to be addressed quite urgently. It is one that needs to be looked at because when one weighs the operational costs of the hospital, which the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town pointed out was in excess of $30 million—quite a substantial sum—and we look at the revenue flow on the other side, we know that if the hospital was recovering the cost of all of the services provided, while it would probably not get into a break-even position at this immediate point in time, there would be substantial recoveries to justify the expenditure now taking place.

There are other aspects of the Budget that were commented on in the Budget Address. We spoke briefly on the OECD Initiative. The Honourable Ministers of Tourism and Education, the Third Elected Member for George Town and I returned from the United Kingdom recently. There will be a report made to honourable members as to the discussion that took place with the Inland Revenue Department.

I should point out that I left here much earlier than the ministers and the member to attend a meeting of the United Nations Offshore Forum in Vienna. That was quite successful. It was initially felt that the meeting could be spread over a period of three days. After we looked very carefully at the agenda, it was agreed that the meeting could be compressed into a two-day period. It was pointed out (as I pointed out earlier) that we were expecting in excess of 100 delegates coming into the Cayman Islands for this meeting. Previously, where reference to the offshore financial services was based on the location of centres such as the Overseas Territories (which will include Bermuda, the Cayman Islands, British Virgin Islands, Turks and Caicos, Anguilla, Montserrat, the Channel Islands, Isle of Man, Jersey, Guernsey and others, Dublin and so on) this will now have an activity focus whereby quite a number of those countries that were previously referred to as “onshore,” because of the fact that the activities are very much similar as activities taking place in the Cayman Islands and elsewhere, the general view is that everyone should be brought around the table to sit down and have a general discussion as to the acceptability of minimum standards and the implementation of those standards where necessary in order to ensure uniformity in conduct and practices right across the board.

This will be quite an important conference for the Cayman Islands. Various senior level ministers from various jurisdictions will be coming to these islands to have a discussion on these standards in order for us to chart the way forward as the United Nations, an “apolitical organisation.” So, the reasonable assumption is not driving a specific agenda such as what can be attributed to other organisations that may be pushing certain agendas. At the end of the day, and given the role that the Cayman Islands has been playing in the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force, and also as a leading international financial centre, it is quite appropriate that this conference is being held here in the Cayman Islands.

As we get closer to the time, we will work very hard on the agenda. There is a small committee refining the agenda at this time, and this will be made available to honourable members.

The question was also raised as to how the Budget could be reduced by $100 million in the space of one week. That is a very good question. Some of the programmes that have been targeted by departments will be affected by the reduction of this $100 million. But, at the end of the day, a value judgment will have to be made as to what the essential programmes are. We have many wants. Ideally, it would have been useful if the Budget could have accommodated all of the requests from various departments.

When some departments were invited to meet with the Budget Review Committee and sit around the table to see if they could examine their budgets, we had one response I found very interesting. There was one controlling officer who chuckled quite a bit and said, “We are now being invited to reduce our budgets, and when we get down there [meaning the Legislative Assembly] what has been taken out will be put back in.” At the end of the day, that was quite interesting.

Some of the programmes will be affected. But because of the fact that government did not go through and make the cuts, controlling officers were invited to make the reductions themselves. So, where we will find that there may be certain variances at this time between the departmental plans . . . because as one can appreciate it wasn't a week, it was a period of four or five days because time had to be allowed for the budget document to be produced. Some of them may not have had time to go back and correct or bring their departmental plans in line with their revised budgets, as such. But we do trust that given the fact that we have a Budget of over $300 million—which is a significant increase over 1999—that departments will realise that while they will not have received every bit they have asked for, every attempt will be made to manage the resources that have been allocated to them as carefully as possible.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town made a very important point in the area of salaries. This is an area that needs to be looked at very carefully. We know that we are a service-based economy. But at the end of the day we have to look at how much of the recurrent budget, or revenue, is being consumed by way of salaries. We have to look at it very carefully because as a financial reform gets underway we have to get to a point that when we sit around the table with a budget it must be based on a formula.

As was said, so much of a percentage should be allocated for recurrent and statutory revenue; so much to go into the general reserves; so much to support the capital development fund and other funds that have been set up. These are the targets we are putting in place.

We have to look very carefully at what goes on with the statutory authorities. We saw, for example with the heavy rains quite recently, . . . I am not sure whether this was the statutory authorities or other agencies out there, the main road leading up to the airport and into the industrial park area was being cut, meaning that water was seeping under the road surface interfering with the integrity of the road structure. Even though I am not an engineer, I knew that didn't make too much sense. So these are areas that we have to look at.

At the end of the day, all arms of the government will have to be integrated and linked in such a way that what is done at this point in time is supported by other agencies. If work is done by the Water Authority that interferes with the integrity of the road structure, the government's capital development road works will have to be taken into account. I know that the honourable minister with responsibility for roads is now working on that. It is getting to the point where it is generally felt that legislation could be put in place. I know that the honourable minister has that under active consideration, but I am just pointing out that synergy needs to exist.

When capital works are carried out by the statutory authorities a determination of how that is impacting upon the budget of central government for capital works will have to be made.

I will not go into detail on the subject of education, but the question was whether there was a need to have all of the students being sent overseas bonded to work with government. I know this has been talked about in the past. I think what has been said is a very good idea because on a whole what is important is to secure the skills of those persons within the Cayman Islands community. They do not necessarily have to be with central government once they are in the community as a whole.

At the end of the day, we are talking about the viability of the economic engine. We know this has to be supported by skilled labour, so it is important to have those persons in the community. There should be no difficulty in supporting this concept.

Overall, on the technology side we know that work is presently underway. I heard that the honourable Third Elected Member for George Town did a very good job on the motion for E-commerce. I heard that government's response was equally appropriate and that there was unanimous agreement in the Legislative Assembly on this. That was quite heartening to hear, because we have to turn our attention to the potential technology offers. While E-commerce offers quite a lot of opportunities, and we want to be in the forefront of this, we have to look at the implications. So, in talking to the Third Elected Member for George Town, and the committee under the chairmanship of the minister with responsibility for commerce, we will be looking at the regulatory side because we want that to run in tandem with exploring the economic viability. We do not want to have in place any structure that opens the way for abuse or manipulation. That has been agreed. It is good to know that everyone is on board.

As we move forward, we will have to look very much at the implications. We know that it will impact upon our education system and it will have to inform the academic area in terms of the skills needed to be acquired by the students coming into the workforce. One of the things I am quite impressed with is the high level of computer literacy that exists within the Cayman Islands, especially within the workforce. We see this especially with those students presently coming back from overseas.

For example, one of the persons whom I worked with very closely on this budget exercise was Mr. Michael Nixon. This young gentleman has a lot of potential in the civil service. From what I have seen in terms of his capacity for work and not watching the clock and waiting around until 5:00 comes to pack up and go home, and others like him . . . I must say it was very interesting to work with an individual with that level of commitment.

When I delivered the Budget Address, I did not extend my appreciation to the Accountant General, who put in many, many hours of work. We worked very carefully, the Deputy Financial Secretary, the Accountant General, the Director of Internal Audit, Richard Roberts, and I. We looked very carefully at those revenue figures. We went over and above some by a percentage point or two of what the trend would suggest for 1999, but it was generally felt that where departments are getting sizeable expenditure budgets and controlling officers have a responsibility for the collection of revenue, that those controlling officers should not sit and wait on directives to come from the Portfolio of Finance and Development because every area of revenue is supported by legislation.

It is quite clear. We have in place the Public Finance and Audit Law. We have to operate as a team in order to ensure that monies due government are collected. Controlling officers are being paid substantial salaries today. And when we look in terms of ensuring that monies are collected, we have to work together and take a team approach in order to achieve this.

I am quite heartened when I look at the quality of the work reflected in the Budget document. When we look at the sample exercise in terms of the output budget that will be tabled during this meeting of the Legislative Assembly, to see the quality of work where functions are now being costed, rather than saying a computer is needed, or one motor vehicle is needed. When we look at the range of services that will be provided and see that attempts are being made, or costed, so that at the end of the day it will be known what it will cost to deliver the services by each department of government, each agency. That is very heartening because it will give the government a good sense in terms of why resources are being sought by controlling officers, what outcome can be expected by allocating a given sum of money to a department or statutory body of government.

Collectively, the entire governmental programme will be under scrutiny so that it will be known why resources are being allocated. This is very, very important.

The Speaker: Can I interrupt you for just one moment? We have actually reached the time that we normally take the break for lunch. Would it be convenient to take the luncheon break, and at that time discuss the meetings for Finance Committee and you complete after lunch?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, my remarks will be brought to an end in another minute or so.

The Speaker: But I would prefer you to wait and finish after we have discussed the Finance Committee. I would rather take the luncheon break first, if that is okay with you.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I will not be discussing the Finance Committee any further. I am just concluding my comments on the Budget Address.

The Speaker: But I would like you to do that after lunch, please. I have asked that we could take the luncheon break now, and you can conclude your speech after the luncheon break.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Mr. Speaker, we can do that, but I have just come to the end of my remarks. I just want to thank . . . anyway, just to let you know that I am through with my remarks on the Budget and to thank you.

The Speaker: That's not really what I asked. I want you to complete after we have completed the luncheon break. At this time we shall suspend until 2.30 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1.03 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.55 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development, continuing.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When the break for lunch was taken, I had mentioned the number of persons involved with the Budget activity, those who were to be thanked, those who I had omitted, such as Mr. Michael Nixon, who spent quite a number of hours during the days and nights leading up to the presentation of the Budget in the Legislative Assembly, the Accountant General.

The honourable Third Elected Member for Bodden Town also made reference to the need to carefully watch the public debt position. I don't think that anyone will disagree with that. As pointed out during the Budget Address, the total public debt as at 1st January was $93.7 million. However, after taking into consideration loan repayments of $11 million, and receipts of $13.7 million during the course of the year, the public debt is expected to rise by approximately $2 million through the end of the year.

This suggests that, while it poses quite a significant burden on the government in terms of its public debt repayment, and it is quite good, that that upper limit of 10 percent is used as a gauge over which the amount of revenue being used for the funding of public debt should not exceed. And that the position as it stood meant that only approximately 6.2 percent of revenue would be used up in order to service public debt. What this is in effect showing is that the short-term repayment, while quite onerous, provides certain protection in that substantial amounts of these loans are being paid off in any one one given year.

A schedule was presented during the debate on the Budget for the year 1999 which showed that the public debt position, with the exception of $1 million (if everything remained constant and no further borrowings took place), would be approximately $1 million by the end of year 2012.

We know that there is a proposal for further borrowings during the course of 2000 of approximately $15 million. When this is factored into the debt rescheduling over this period of time, it will mean that at the end of year 2012 the balance remaining to be paid will be relatively small. But this is an area we have to watch very carefully because it is unlikely that governments between the year 2000 and 2012 will not enter into further borrowing.

It is very good that the financial management review is presently underway. That will embrace certain arrangements that should be put in place in order to streamline the management of government finances.

On the question of the general reserve fund, members are very much aware that the desired target is to have a sum approximating one quarter of one year's recurrent and statutory expenditure. Where we see the balance at the end of the year 2000 is expected to be in the region of $14 million, we know as a part of the financial reform initiative an arrangement will have to be set out quite likely in legislation dealing with that so that a given percentage of revenue is earmarked to be put into this fund in order to ensure that this target is reached. Then, when that target is reached, a decision can be made in terms of how the level will be maintained on a year to year basis.

We also took note that at the end of 1999 the public service pension fund will have a balance of $55.2 million. We have seen where approximately $11 million is scheduled to be put into that fund during the year 2000. This will bring it up to $66 million. This does not take into account investment earnings on the fund which, at the rate of return this fund has benefited from over the past years, is quite likely to be in the region of $70 million by the end of the year 2000.

So attempts are being made to build up these various funds in order to minimise or reduce the contingent liability. And during the course of the year there was a parliamentary question I responded to which showed that there is a marginal decline taking place. We know that when we get on to accrual accounting what is now regarded as a contingent liability by way of past service costs for the pension fund will become a direct liability. But that will be offset by assets on the other side. In effect what will be shown is the true position of the government's financial position.

We have also seen the Housing Reserve Fund, which is likely to be in the region of $700,000 at the end of the year. This will be increased by a further $230,000 by the end of 2000, bringing it up to approximately $1 million.

As I mentioned earlier concerning the OECD, G-7 and EU initiatives, Members of this Legislative Assembly are aware that there are two other initiatives coming upon the heels of these. One by the Financial Stability Forum, this is an organisation that has been established by the International Monetary Fund to look into the operations of offshore financial centres, and whether they have any likely adverse impact upon the international financial community. Their initial conclusion was that such was not the case. And, Mr. Speaker, it would surprise me if the conclusion were otherwise.

Regardless of what is being said we know that international financial centres such as the Cayman Islands play a very significant role within the world economic community. So far, when we consider the base that has been built up in Cayman in terms of assets that are here, the expertise available within our community, and all of these components that we have to our credit, it is everyone's view that optimism should prevail. I have every reason to believe, as does every Member of this Legislative Assembly, that with proper due diligence being exercised over our financial industry, the Cayman Islands will continue to be a major international financial centre.

We are also aware of the fact that the Financial Action Task Force had a meeting about a fortnight ago, where they are thinking of developing a list of countries deemed to uncooperative in terms of allowing for their regulators to speak to regulators in other jurisdictions, those who have not been attending meetings of organisations such as the Financial Action Task Force, the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force, and those who have not been paying their dues. As far as the Cayman Islands is concerned, the Caribbean community and world community are very much aware of the active role these islands have played.

We all know that these demands are taxing human and other resources within this country, yet we always felt that we should take the approach of being our brother's keeper. It is very good that the Cayman Islands was the first country in the Caribbean region to submit itself to a mutual evaluation by our peers in the region. Legal, financial and law enforcement experts came in to look at the systems we had in place. And the mutual evaluation report of the Cayman Islands was the first to be made available to the membership of the Financial Action Task force. They could see those areas we had working in our favour, those that needed to be improved upon, and they could use these as yardsticks to determine what they should be doing within their systems.

We have never been hesitant to make our legislation available so that the Caribbean and the world community could benefit. We know that even agencies in the US have drawn on our insurance legislation, the one put up to allow for the special sell arrangements under the captive insurance programme. That one was mentioned at one of the RIMS Conferences. That was drawn upon by one of the bodies in the United States and the response was why reinvent the wheel when such a good piece of legislation existed.

I am very much aware that next year will be a year for general elections. It is normally a year where Members of the Legislative Assembly will have a go at one another. But I am quite heartened in that all of the comments that I have heard from honourable members of this House are that they remain unified on what is in the interest of the Cayman Islands. I see evidence of this when we meet in committee meetings that are not aired whereby the public will hear what is being said. I am saying that while differences will be expressed, there is always this camaraderie and collective commitment among members in order to do whatever is necessary to continue to protect, promote and reinforce the continuing growth and development of our financial industry.

We have seen this by many private sector organisations. There are many individuals who could be named. Our Stock Exchange has experienced phenomenal growth, notwithstanding the unfavourable incident that occurred during the earlier part of the year where certain unacceptable developments took place. The financial community, the government and Members of the Legislative Assembly rallied together. It is very good that honourable members of this House have never sought to have the Stock Exchange established for the purpose of generating revenue immediately to at least offset the cost. Everyone recognised that this was a long-term commitment for the benefit of our country and we have seen good growth taking place.

We are hoping in the not-too-distant future to get into a breakeven position and that it will begin to contribute excess revenue into the general revenue of government, for it to become a capital formation entity whereby local businesses seeking to gain capital, or individuals seeking to invest in some lucrative opportunity who would not want to undertake a specific venture will be able to buy into these going concerns through the Stock Exchange.

Overall, the future of the Cayman Islands looks very bright. But we are mindful that we will have to put our hearts and minds together. We must also never forget to get on our knees and give the Good Lord thanks. I have travelled the Caribbean and several countries in the world community. It is always good to get home. Last night I returned from the United Kingdom after being in Vienna. And I have not found anywhere that I would trade these islands for. This is home. I know I am not the only one who feels this way.

As the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town said he is getting up in age, and we have to prepare the way for the younger Caymanians coming along. I am getting up in age myself. And I know that I will not be here forever. That is life. But the time I would have spent here, God has given me a very good life in these islands. Not only me, but a good life for our people. It is very good when we can come together and enjoy this.

But when we pass on, I would like our children and their children to be able to read about "Once upon a time. . ." they should be able to continue to enjoy a part of the stable structure of the Cayman Islands. There should be a legacy left in place for them. That is why we are here doing our part. None of us knows it all. But when we put our collective wisdom and judgment together under the guidance of God, we will succeed. It is in that hope that I live and move from day to day knowing there is a good God who has protected these islands. As long as we continue to look to Him and seek His guidance, we will ance, we will continue to be protected.

We will be going into Finance Committee, and controlling officers will be coming here. Some of them will be saying that they asked for X, but they will be receiving Y. They would have been a part of this process. We do know that even the Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development had to look at every department within the Portfolio and every section. Cuts have been made. Some of the programmes that were scheduled for the year 2000 have had to be scaled back.

Although we know that this is a principle that all members of this honourable House subscribe to, because we always believe in cutting our coats to fit our cloth, at the end of the day it is very important that we do this. And, as we continue to look very carefully at streamlining our revenue measures, at curtailing or streamlining the expenditure programmes we have in place, and seeking ways to effect improvements, and also to achieve greater levels of efficiency, we always have to be mindful that resources are limited.

The government worked very hard at putting together the Budget that has been presented to honourable members of this House. Civil servants have worked very hard. On behalf of the government, I would like to thank those controlling officers who really made the sacrifice, not only in time to streamline their proposals for the year 2000, but also to make the sacrifices they know should be made, while at the same time trying to optimise the services they will be providing through their various departments.

We are saying to departments that notwithstanding the fact that sums of money will be allocated for the year 2000, if there are ways and means by which programmes can be further streamlined to effect savings, that should be pursued. At the end of the day, what we want is to optimise the benefit we are receiving for each dollar.

I heard the First Elected Member for George Town say that in his judgment the government is benefiting from about 70 cents out of each dollar spent. While that may seem to be strange, and all efforts are made to try to effect improvement, it could be the case. It has not been confirmed. But the government, which includes me, is very heartened in seeing the efforts that have been made by controlling officers. To have wound up the year with an under-spending of close to $20 million in itself is a statement of commitment where all civil servants working together, Members of the Legislative Assembly, being very astute in their scrutiny of the budget . . . we are talking about a collective management process that is working.

Controlling officers are now benefiting from greater transparency because in the review process a lot of them had the opportunity to exhaustively review their budgets and programmes. They are themselves initiating improvements. I am very heartened to know that I am a part of this process. And I am seeing it.

When I look at the sample document that has been prepared, which I mentioned during my delivery of the Budget Address the government will be tabling, Members of this Legislative Assembly will be impressed with this this document, in terms of the output side. In addition, I would just like to thank the Deputy Financial Secretary because he has been spearheading that part of the financial management reform at a point where the OECD, EU, G-7 Initiatives became very intense for Executive Council, which includes all of the ministers and me. The Deputy Financial Secretary and the First Elected Member for George Town are also on the committee that has been set up, along with the Honourable Minister for Tourism. The Deputy Financial Secretary did not hesitate to come in and take over the chairmanship of that committee from me, and to continue working with the team. So good work is being done. Progress is being made.

As we continue to move into the future, if we continue to keep our hearts in the right place and our minds focused where they should be, we know that the opportunities for these islands will continue to abound. Whenever I get up to speak I give God thanks. I know no other way. And I am just asking honourable members to bear with me. But I have to get on my knees everyday before I can stand. And I will invite every member of this Legislative Assembly, and every person within our community to look to the Divine Master, especially in the times we are in.

As we go into Finance Committee, I know it is going to be quite an exercise. But honourable members will understand that departments could not get everything they asked for. But, importantly, in those departments where reductions were necessary, they were the ones who participated in the process.

I have to thank the ministers very much because they sat down and looked very much at the capital budget. They have done a very good job bringing it into line. Again, there are areas where sacrifices will have to be made. But it's on a priority basis.

So, we have a Budget in front of us that reflects what resources are available that can best be projected for the year 1999 and programmes that can best be attained. At this time, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank you and honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly and my fellow civil servants who have worked very hard to present the budget for the year 2000 to this honourable House.

The Speaker: The question before this House is that the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. THE APPROPRIATION (2000) BILL, 1999 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999, together with the Estimates now stand referred to the Finance Committee. At this time I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until the finalisation of Finance Committee and its reporting back to the House.

The Speaker: The question is that this honourable House do now adjourn until Finance Committee has completed its sittings and reports back to this honourable House. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 3.20 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL FINANCE COMMITTEE COMPLETES ITS DELIBERATIONS AND REPORTS BACK TO THE HOUSE.

EDITED
THURSDAY
3 FEBRUARY 2000
10.20 AM

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture, who is off the island to the National Prayer Breakfast in Washington, DC; also the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, and the Third Elected Member for West Bay are off the Island.

Item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to the Honourable Members/Ministers. Question 164, is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure if the member might be late. Perhaps we could do the other questions and then revert back to that.

The Speaker: We can do that. Since the mover of that question is not present, we will move on to question 165, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 165

No. 165: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works what is the present working relationship with the Tourism Association of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the Department of Tourism.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The relationship between the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Tourism Association and the Department of Tourism is very strong. The Department supports numerous initiatives through training programmes, co-op programmes for the diving sector, visiting journalists and familiarisation trips for travel agents. Additionally, the Department maintains a sub-office on Cayman Brac which is open daily and which provides brochures and information to visitors on the Island as well as other types of assistance.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say what sort of arrangement, if any, CETA has with Cayman Airways?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am unable to answer the arrangements between CETA and Cayman Airways. I don't have that kind of information.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, what kind of arrangement does DOT have with CETA? Like marketing.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I can give some examples of the programmes and co-op advertising which related to cost in 1999 if that is helpful to the member. Specific examples of support to CETA in 1999, we did dive co-op advertising that amounts to roughly US $28,000; Travel Agent Magazine co-op advertising, an amount in excess of $18,000; visiting journalist programmes which amounted to more than $10,000; travel agent familiarisation trips which amounted to more than $15,000.

What is much larger than all of this is the strong brand advertising. Our updated logo now carries the three islands named as part of it in all material. Printed broadcast commercials as well as all efforts on our website. This means that with every mention of Grand Cayman, the Sister Islands are there twice. The logo was simply Cayman Islands before. We have a marketing rep dedicated to the Sister Islands who attends their meetings regularly.

Additionally, we produced dedicated Sister Island posters and I am right now in production of a video, Wall-to-Wall Diving, which will feature the Sister Islands strongly.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 166, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 166

No. 166: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works what is the Ministry's budget for the Miss Cayman Islands' Pageant.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The 1999 Budget for the Miss Cayman Islands' Pageant was approved at CI$75,000.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say if the Miss Cayman Islands Pageant is staying within the budgeted amount government approves each year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Perhaps I should elaborate a little in that the Miss Cayman Pageant receives a grant from the government of $75,000. In addition, the pageant committee does a number of fundraising events which also raise funds for the expenditure required to fund the pageant. They are living within that framework, but it's more than the $75,000. That's why I was elaborating.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 167, standing in the name of The First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 167

No. 167: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works what is the policy on materials taken from roads that are being re-constructed.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The Public Works Department has no formal written policy on materials taken from road works. Materials removed from areas where roads are being constructed or reconstructed is referred to as "unsuitable materials," mainly because it is unsuitable for road construction. The materials are usually peat, soft marl or a combination of both. What it is unsuitable as road base materials, the Public Works Department makes use of the materials for other purposes on government projects such as fill for playfields and shoulder works on minor roads. Where the material is mainly peat, it can be sieved and used as topsoil.

The Public Works Department has been approached by several churches, private schools, charitable and non-profit organisations, as well as members of the public, regarding donation and/or purchase of the materials. As the material is of considerable use to the Public Works Department, it refuses such requests.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if this policy has been in force for quite some time, or has this developed after having given some of the fill away to some of the people mentioned in the answer?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As I understand it, it is a longstanding arrangement. I think the First Elected Member for George Town brought out that on occasion the government takes the decision to do some donating of material at some time. So it's not a foolproof system, but Public Works itself does not give it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Is the minister then saying that Public Works holds fast to this policy, but on occasion the government intervenes and takes decisions which are actually varying from the policy?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think it is true to say that on occasion the government has taken a decision, and because of extenuating circumstances has decided to give the material for a non-charitable organisation or some event that in the view of government is important to assist.

While there is a policy, I am saying that there is always government looking at the overall picture, trying to assist the overall good of the country.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state what government's policy is, or what criteria is used to make such decisions?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think that if I try to give some examples of when government steps in and decides to provide material it might be helpful to everyone.

In the case where a school is under construction, or there is need to develop a playfield for a school, sometimes government decides to assist by giving it material. It may be persons who are indigent, who need some material in order to make their property a little bit more above the water, so to speak . . . in other words, there are some areas that we know flood in heavy rain. Government assists in giving away material for that purpose to assist the less fortunate.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 168, standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

(withdrawn)

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I have no choice this morning but to withdraw this question, seeing that the announcement has already been made even though this question was on the Business Paper. It was sent for a reply on 9 November, and today is 3 February. So, I beg to withdraw this question standing in my name.

No. 168: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs if the Government has named a replacement for the United Kingdom Representative.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 23(5), I put the question that this question be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION 168 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 169, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 169

No. 169: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works if any representative of the Department of Tourism in North America receives remuneration on a regular basis from Cayman Airways Ltd.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: All staff who hold a Cayman Airways Ltd identification card receive remuneration on a regular basis.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This answer is straightforward, but I guess it requires a few supplementary questions. Can the honourable minister state the number of staff of the Department of Tourism in North America who hold Cayman Airways ID cards?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am unable to provide a definitive number, but I can say that the remuneration for the Department of Tourism staff in North America ranges from US $300 to $728 per month. It is generally dealing with sales staff doing promotions in different parts of the US. It is not only promoting the Cayman Islands it is also promoting Cayman Airways at that same meeting.

If the member wants to have a definitive number, I can certainly provide it. I know that the number of employees in the United States is somewhere in the range of 55, something of that order.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say if the staff members of the Department of Tourism who receive this remuneration on a regular basis from Cayman Airways are considered to be employees of the national airline being able to hold these ID cards internationally?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As these employees are receiving salaries from the airline, we would consider them to be employees of Cayman Airways. This arrangement (to put it into perspective) was made probably 20 years ago when the then Minister of Aviation and Tourism put this arrangement together which means that the person's overall salary would be split between the Department of Tourism and Cayman Airways since they are promoting the Cayman Islands and Cayman Airways in particular.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I would like to ask the minister why they are getting this salary, what do they do for Cayman Airways, and is this in addition to their salary from DOT?

The Speaker: I think he answered that in two previous questions. If the honourable minister wishes to repeat, he may. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Just to add some clarity to what I said before, the arrangement that was put in place caused the employee to earn a particular salary. Let's say it's $20,000. Cayman Airways pays $3,600 of that $20,000, the Department of Tourism pays the remaining portion, $16,400. It has always been a mix, and it was arranged probably 20 years ago (but I hope the members don't hold me to 20, it might have been 18). I think that when we look at it, we all know that employees of an airline do get some benefit of travel within the US from other airlines. As a result the bill (the amount of money spent) is significantly reduced. Otherwise, the DOT would have to pay pretty substantial amounts of money in addition to what they are already paying to do promotions throughout the US and the UK.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say if since this strange practice was instituted there has been any review or intention to review it to ascertain its effectiveness?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer to the member's question is, yes. We have reviewed it. Even in recent times we have reviewed it. But we find that the arrangement is beneficial to the employees. And the other point is that since these individuals who have been working for us, in some cases for 20 years, some for ten or 15, that that arrangement is beneficial to them in more ways than one not only for their particular official duties, but obviously in other ways as well. Then it becomes a remuneration package.

So, if we take something away from them, we would then have to replace it with something else. Those who come on stream in the future would have to be strictly sales people who would qualify those who would go out and actually conduct promotions in the field.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am not sure if the minister said what these people do for Cayman Airways. If he did, he doesn't need to repeat it. But if he didn't, I would like to hear. Is this normal in the industry? Are DOT and Cayman Airways having any problems with the situation via the authorities in the US or other companies?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer to the first part is that these US staff are representing the Department of Tourism as well as Cayman Airways when they do promotions, be it in Florida, or New York, or Houston, or Los Angeles, or any other state or city in any one of those states. Thus, the benefit to Cayman Airways is that their brochures, the queries about how to get here and the promotion is really trying to create an awareness of the Cayman Islands and what it offers. In addition, the promotion also deals with how to get here and the recommendation is Cayman Airways in that process.

Just about everything we do from time to time has hiccoughs among the departments, the private sector and ourselves. So I am not saying that we don't have problems from time to time, but generally the matters seem to have worked well so far. In all that we do, with the best intentions by everyone, there are differing views on some of these issues. So there will be some information that differs with what I am saying. Maybe somebody thinks totally different from what I am saying, or partially different. But I think when we look at it overall the arrangement is beneficial to the Cayman Islands, beneficial to the Department of Tourism, and also to Cayman Airways.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the minister still has not answered the question. Can the honourable minister say what problems are being experienced, if any, via authorities in the United States, or with other airlines? And is it the norm in the industry? And while he is at it, shouldn't what they do as their substantive post at DOT entail these things he has named out for Cayman Airways?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am not aware of any real difficulty in this regard. I heard on one occasion where someone tried to use his privilege for some travel that the airline did not allow. But apart from that, I don't know of any specific problem. I do know that from time to time the whole package is reviewed. There is legal advice taken from time to time. But beyond that, I don't know of any specific problem at all.

I believe there are some views that the whole thing should be cancelled. I believe that is out there. But I don't see that personally as a resolution of the whole matter. I believe that the system we have in place needs to be revisited, reviewed, and refined so that we are sure it is the best way to conduct the business of this country.

I don't believe we are the only ones involved in this process. I have heard of other organisations that do something similar. So, I believe in all honesty that the system we have in place . . . yes, we set it up 18 or 20 years ago, and we have reviewed it, and refined it, and we will continue to do that. Nothing is perfect.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 170—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, if I may, sir.

The Speaker: No. We are moving on to question 170, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I note that you are cutting our supplementary questions short. But if you are going to cut them short, I think you need to pay attention to what the ministers are answering.

The Speaker: I am paying very close attention. That's why I am cutting this off. I am going on to question 170.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Can I ask you a question, or can I address you on a matter sir?

The Speaker: We will do that after the session please. Let's go on to question 170, the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 170
(Withdrawn)

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, when I asked question 169, I did not realise that the answer would tie into question 170 because I had planned to seek leave of the House to withdraw question 170. Bearing in mind what has transpired with question 169, I would like to seek permission to withdraw question 170.

No. 170: If the Department of Tourism's staff in North America and the United Kingdom have Cayman Airways Ltd. identification cards.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 23(5), I put the question that this question be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION 170 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 171, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 171
(withdrawn)

No. 171: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works To state the terms of the contract with the advertising firm of O'Leary-Clarke & Partners.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The terms of the contract between the firm of O'Leary-Clarke & Partners and the Cayman Islands Government is Minimum Guaranteed Compensation. The minimum guaranteed compensation shall be agreed between both parties from time to time.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Is the minister saying that a contract which might exist between the Cayman Islands Government and O'Leary-Clarke and Partners simply has just what this answer is, and that's it? Is that what he is saying?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: What I am saying is that this is the terms under which the contract is agreed. Now, it goes on to talk about the specifics later on, of 15% for advertising, or 17.5% of the item if it's a collateral piece being produced.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I did not ask the minister what are the terms under which the contract is agreed. I asked the minister what are the terms of the contract. In my view, there is a difference and the minister has not answered my question. I would like the minister, if he would, to comment on that.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As regards the terms, the contract continues until six months' notice has been given.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I might as well ask you to withdraw this question too, because the minister evades my question. I didn't ask him about term, I asked him about terms. If the minister wishes to pursue the matter the way he is, sir, I would ask you again can I withdraw this question before he and I hook into something this morning.

The Speaker: Are you asking that it be withdrawn?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Exactly so sir, if procedure allows that to happen.

The Speaker: The question is that this question be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION 171 WITHDRAWN.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: This is a joke you know.

The Speaker: Returning to question 164, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

(withdrawn)

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, this question has become redundant because in an earlier sitting it was answered. So I would ask that this also be withdrawn.

But I would like to call to the attention of the honourable House that on the Business Papers before us now, Business Papers 3 and 4, there are three questions set down for me that have already been asked and answered. Perhaps there are others for other members. I would ask that you direct the Business Committee to have another look at this paper, and try to delete those questions that have received answers. I would ask that this question be withdrawn.

No. 164: To provide: (a) a list of all Government departments, sections, statutory authorities which are Y2K compliant; and (b) a list of those Government departments, sections, statutory authorities which are not Y2K compliant, together with an estimated date for completion.

The Speaker: The question is that question 164 be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION 164 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning.

The Elected Member for North Side.

STATEMENT

UNDERTAKINGS GIVEN DURING FINANCE COMMITTEE

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, during the eighteen sittings in which the Standing Finance Committee considered the Appropriation Bill, together with the Draft Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure for the Government of the Cayman Islands, various undertakings were given by Honourable Ministers in respect of the following items:

1. Cayman Airways Limited;
2. contracted Officers' Supplement;
3. handheld radios and cellular telephones in the civil service; and
4. training of Caymanians to pilot MRCU aircraft.

Mr. Speaker, on Cayman Airways, the Honourable Minister of Education gave the Committee the undertaking—which is recorded in the minutes—that he would entertain questions and answers on Cayman Airways during Capital Development. This did not occur to my knowledge.

Contracted Officers' Supplement was not dealt with as agreed by the Finance Committee to give me an answer on this situation.

Mr. Speaker, during a presentation by the Deputy Chief Secretary and the Deputy Financial Secretary on the new salary scale, when being asked a question by myself as to whether or not the Contracted Officers' Supplement would fall away, the Honourable Chief Secretary informed the Committee that new Officers being recruited would not receive a Contracted Officers' Supplement but would join the defined contributions scheme under the Public Service Pension Law 1999.

Mr. Speaker, in regard to the Contracted Officers' Supplement, the Committee voted monies—even though I was given an undertaking to clear up the situation—for an increase in this supplement in the sum of some $776,000 for the year 2000. Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, this is contrary to the Honourable Chief Secretary's explanation to the Finance Committee in 1998 when the new salary scale was being discussed and came into effect.

If this is not the case, in 1998 the Finance Committee was misled in our opinion when voting for the new salary scales. The situation in our opinion smirks of discrimination against our own Caymanians in the civil service—the largest body employing Caymanians in the Cayman Islands—who are only receiving 12% in the contribution to the Pensions Fund.

We believe that it would be totally wrong for the Standing Finance Committee to report to this Honourable House on the Appropriation Bill until the Committee is assured that the Contracted Officers' Supplement for new officers does fall away.

Mr. Speaker, as new funds were voted for handheld radios and cellular telephones and training of Caymanians to pilot MRCU aircraft, I will not go into these in-depth. Mr. Speaker, if I had more time I would do exactly as I just said I wouldn't do, I would go into more depth on these items which the Government undertook to address. Be that as it may, it is my humble opinion (and that of other backbenchers) that not having these undertakings addressed during Finance Committee constitutes a breach of procedure, and we beseech a ruling from the Chair in regard to this.

Mr. Speaker, my colleagues, the First Elected Member for George Town, the Third Elected Member for George Town, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, the First Elected Member for West Bay and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, join me in this request. Thank you.

The Speaker: The only thing I will say at this moment is that I have to receive that in writing.

The next item on the Order Paper is Government Business. I ask for the suspension of Standing Order 14(3) in order to take Government Business, in lieu of it being Thursday, which is set aside for Private Members' Motions.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(3)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(3).

The Speaker: I put the question that Standing Order 14(3) be suspended in order to take Government Business. Those in favour please say Aye—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: At this time, I would like to suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDING SUSPENDED AT 11.05 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.57 AM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

SPEAKER'S RULING

(On Statement made by the Elected Member for North Side)

The Speaker: Prior to taking the break I was asked by the Elected Member for North Side, "Mr. Speaker, . . . not having these undertakings addressed during Finance Committee constitutes a breach of procedure and I beseech a ruling from the Chair in regard to this."

Having done an in-depth search during the prolonged adjournment I call the attention of honourable members to Standing Order 4 (4), which states, "The person presiding in the House and the chairman of a Committee shall exercise all the powers conferred by these Standing Orders."

I interpret that, since the Finance Committee is constituted under a provision of our Constitution, it clearly states that Finance Committee shall consist of the Financial Secretary as Chairman, and the fifteen elected members as members. The Financial Secretary, as Chairman, has no original vote but in case of an equality of votes has a casting vote. Therefore, not being a Committee of the whole House in which the Speaker has responsibility, the full responsibility for procedure in that Committee is a responsibility of the Chairman.

Having researched further the financial procedures under our Standing Orders 65 right through 67 . . . Standing Order 67(4) says, "When the motion 'That the Finance Committee approves the proposal/proposals set out in the paper' or that motion as amended, has been agreed upon in Finance Committee, and the report of the Finance Committee is laid on the Table the Member of the Government who moved the mo- tion shall report the motion or the motion as amended in the Finance Committee, and the House shall thereupon be deemed to have agreed to the motion, or to the motion as amended, as the case may be."

It is my interpretation that whatever deliberations we had to make in Finance Committee should have been made prior to the Honourable Chairman asking the question that the report be now made. That was passed by a majority in Finance Committee.

Therefore, it is my ruling that there is no breach of procedure. It has been followed in accordance with our Standing Orders and the provisions of the Constitution, which appoints the Financial Secretary as the Chairman of a Committee, it not being a Committee of the whole House.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I bow to your ruling sir, Standing Order 4 gives the Chairman of the Finance Committee the same power as the Speaker. I totally agree. But the Finance Committee agreed that these undertakings would have been done before Finance Committee concluded its business. So it is a breach of procedure, maybe not of the House.

The Speaker: I hear what you are saying and maybe it is something that could be discussed informally. I have nothing further to say. I have made my ruling.

We shall move on to item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Bills, Reports, the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999, the Honourable Third Official Member.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

APPROPRIATION (2000) BILL, 1999

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House the Report of the Standing Finance Committee on the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999, together with the Draft Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the year ended 2000.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 67(4) the House shall thereupon be deemed to have accepted the motion as amended. The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.

Bills, Third Reading.

Do you wish to speak to the Bill?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, before the honourable Financial Secretary rises, can the Chairman (which is the Financial Secretary) say whether the report he is going to give is a total document, or are things left out of the report? If the Member for North Side, the Deputy Speaker, is correct, and there have been things left out of the report or not dealt with, can he be giving a complete report of Finance Committee?

The Speaker: I don't think we are going to rehash this. I made my ruling. I said that—

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, it's not your ruling that I am quarrelling with. But it's the report that is now going to be laid that I am questioning.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I am ready to report. But do you want me to respond to the First Elected Member for West Bay?

The Speaker: I do not feel that this is the appropriate arena. But if you so wish, you may. I am not directing you.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I should mention that it was understood that the information which the honourable member for North Side had requested would be provided. Various ministers of Executive Council have responsibility for the various items that have been raised. The honourable First Official Member deals with the issue of contracted officers' supplement. But I am sure that information can be provided to the honourable member for North Side.

I have to report that a Bill entitled, A Bill for a Law to Appropriate certain expenditure to various government services for the financial year 2000, was considered by the Standing Finance Committee and passed with the following amendments.

Under Head 7005—Ministry of Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources, $2,927,177 appropriated for this Head was increased by $1 million in respect of subhead 57-250, Loans, item 57-254, Affordable Housing Loan, bringing the amended increase for Head 7005 to $3,927,177.

Head 7300—Environmental Health: The sum of $6,049,299 appropriated for this Head was reduced by $325,000 in respect of subhead 57-065, Vehicle & Equipment Maintenance for the purchase of various vehicles, bringing the amended reduced total for Head 7300 to $5,724,299.

Head 8600—Ministry of Education, Aviation, and Planning: Head 8800, Education. The sum of $27,326,087 appropriated for this Head was increased by $470,590 in respect of subhead 54-700, Grants, Contributions and Subsidies. The specific item is site-based program, $203,512.

- ◆ Subhead 50-010, Personal Emoluments: Temporary Relief, $63,840.
- ◆ Subhead 54-700, Grants, Contributions and Subsidies, Extracurricular Activities, $39,514; Summer School Programs, $27,300.
- ◆ Subhead 50-010, Personal Emoluments: Temporary Relief, $64,524.

- ◆ Subhead 50-200, Travel and Subsistence, Official Travel, $35,000.
- ◆ Subhead 56-150, Reference Materials and others, School Libraries, $13,000.
- ◆ Subhead 54-700, Grants, Contributions and Subsidies, Training of Teachers, $23,900.

This brings the amended increase total for Head 8800 to $27,796,677.

Capital Acquisitions: The sum of $4,529,701 appropriated for Capital Acquisitions was twice amended by (1) Increasing subhead 60-010 by $108,180 in respect of item 66-014, Information Technology, Furniture and Equipment for site-based planning; and increasing subhead 60-010 under Head 7300, Environmental Health by $325,000 in respect of item 60-011, transportation. This was for the purchase of one crane truck, one recycling truck, one collection vehicle, one rear-loading compactor, and 30 garbage containers, bringing the amended increase total for Capital Acquisitions to $4,962,881.

Capital Development: The sum of $45,100,382 appropriated for Capital Development was amended by reducing Head 8800, Education, by $578,770 in respect of subhead 88-015, Capital Development, project #4009, Primary School for George Town, bringing the amended reduced total for Capital Development to $44,521,612.

The Committee also agreed to (1) reduce item 78, Education, Primary School #1 for George Town, item 60-201, Public Buildings, by $200,000 and to place that amount against item 66, Postal, New Development Projects, for West Bay Post Office, Cayman Brac; and (2) reduce item 78, Education, Primary School #1 for George Town, item 60-201, Public Buildings, by a further $100,000 and placed that amount against item 118 Sunrise Centre. These two changes did not affect the amount appropriated for Capital Development.

The Committee also agreed to an early release of $1,950,000 for district road programmes, new projects for Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Authority was also given to have funds released pertaining to continuing capital projects and for one quarter of recurrent expenditure for the year 2000.

In regard to the Environmental Protection Fund, the following motion was agreed to: "Motion to Defray Expenditure from the Environmental Protection Fund." Government Motion 14/97 resolved that "(1) an environmental protection fund be established in accordance with the powers contained in section 30 of the Public Finance and Audit Law (1997 Revision); (2) that all environmental protection fees collected under section 7 of the Miscellaneous Provisions (Fees and Duties) (Temporary) Law, 1997 shall be credited to the fund . . ."

Section 4 requires that a resolution by Finance Committee defray the expenditure incurred in protection and preserving the environment of the Islands. Accordingly, the government is of the view that the expenditure items set out below are in compliance with section 4 of [Government Motion] 14/97 and accordingly seeks approval of Finance Committee for these items to be funded from the Environmental Protection Fund:

1. $1,344,772 to cover the total cost of recurrent and statutory expenditure of the Department of Environment.
2. $560,000 to cover the recurrent cost of environmental studies, marl mining study and liquid petroleum gas study under the Ministry of Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.
3. $4 million to cover a part of the recurrent and statutory expenditure of the Department of Environmental Health.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that this Finance Committee, in accordance with section 4 of [Government Motion] 14/97 grant approval of $5,904,772 to be transferred from the Environmental Protection Fund to General Revenue to cover expenditure relating to the operational cost of the Department of the Environment, Department of Environmental Health, and the carrying out of the environmental studies to be undertaken by the Ministry of Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources.

With the aforementioned amendments to the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999, the Committee approved a total appropriation for the year 2000 of CI$315,940,510.

The Speaker: The Bill has accordingly been set down for Third Reading.

Bills, Third Reading.

THIRD READING

THE APPROPRIATION (2000) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The question is that the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999, be given a third reading and do pass.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on the question being put, I have listened to the tape of Finance Committee. I am wondering whether the proper procedure in Finance Committee on the Bill was conducted at the end, and whether [Standing Order] 64(1) was adhered to where the Bill was voted on. I know the Schedule was agreed upon.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think it was, and I was wondering sir, before you take this vote, if you would listen to the tape yourself so that you yourself can hear the procedure. If not, I submit that we are out of procedure and I don't think it is right to take the vote on the national budget without that being done.

The Speaker: I have put the question. If it fails, it fails.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, you have put the question, isn't that the time people can say something?

The Speaker: You said 64(1).

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, please, sir. Why don't you go in, out of an abundance of caution, and listen to that tape yourself.

The Speaker: You said 64(1): "On the consideration of an appropriation Bill in the Finance Committee the clauses of the Bill shall stand postponed until after consideration of the schedule or schedules." That is what you are speaking to?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes.

The Speaker: I thought the object was for us to get out of here. But this is not the way to do it.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Right.

The Speaker: I will now suspend for lunch. We will come back at 2.00. I beg members, please let us be back here so that we can reconvene at 2.00 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.18 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.15 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development,

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I have listened very carefully to the comments by honourable members as to what is considered to be the breach of procedure in Finance Committee. There are many individuals who can claim infallibility, but I would not be bold enough to say I am one of them. In my daily walk through life, there are times when I do some things better than others. I will not deny that omissions were made in dealing with the Appropriation Schedule by the Chair. But I think the substance of these omissions should be judged by what they represent.

When the motion was made under Standing Order 64(7), seeking the approval of the Committee to report to this honourable House, it would seem to me that that would have been the appropriate time to point out to the Chair any breach in procedure. If members will recall, it had gotten to around 7:00 PM, there was a motion, an amending motion to that motion, followed shortly thereafter by the closure motion.

I can recall that I mentioned, under Standing Order 64(4), that I would like to move that the Schedule as amended stand part of the Bill. I can also further recall that I mentioned that in accordance with Standing Order 64(7) I would put the question that I do report the Bill as amended to the honourable House. I will not say that at that point the vote was unanimous, but I can recall that the majority were in favour of voting on that motion.

The question I now invite honourable members to contemplate is the clauses in the Schedule in accordance with Standing Order 64(1), called before the motion to report to this honourable House, would they have been voted against, or disallowed? These are two questions I am putting together. It would seem that the answer to these questions should determine the substance of the breach of procedure, which I admit.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: If you would allow, the matter is not whether this omission is one that we can just easily let go. It is a requirement of the Standing Orders that needed to have been done at the time. What I think can be done is the Chairman can summon Finance Committee back and we just go through those Heads in the Bill and vote on them as they are called. In other words, go through the Bill as the Standing Order requires.

I would say that nobody is criticising the Financial Secretary, and I listened to his submission. No one is criticising him, saying he is not human or anything else. What confused him confused me! And I was the only Opposition member on the backbench that evening.

They took a closure motion, a vote on that motion. I think it confused him. It certainly confused me at that point. Certainly, there were no ulterior motives in not bringing it to his attention because I only looked at it today and realised it. And I did vote against the closure motion. I would just like to make that absolutely clear.

The Speaker: The position of the Chair is that we are no longer dealing with the report of the Finance Committee. What is before this honourable House is the Third Reading of the Appropriation Bill. I hold in my hand a green copy of the Appropriation Bill duly collected by the Clerk, which shows what the appropriations are. That is what we are taking the third reading on.

As it was said by the honourable Third Official Member, he did put that “I do report the Bill [he asked for permission] as amended to the honourable House. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.” The Hansard records that the Ayes had it. Therefore, all that went before that was approved.

I again repeat that what is now before this honourable House is the Third Reading of the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, may I?

The Speaker: You may, but I intend to put the question to this Bill.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Well, be that as it may sir, you are god in the House.

Mr. Speaker, it is true what you are saying. I completely agree. All I am saying is that the Bill cannot be put before the House if each item was not committed to a vote in Finance Committee. And that's exactly what happened. I just can't see how the Bill can be before the House. The Committee stage of the Bill, as you know, requires that those be voted on.

I am saying that I don't see how we can make the report without accepting the clauses of the Bill. That is the purpose of Finance Committee, and that is what the Standing Orders say. Albeit that we might say it is not important because we are past that stage, the fact is that we didn't do it properly, that the Bill cannot come to the House because it was not voted upon. We said we would report it. That was a . . . mistake!

The Speaker: I would ask that you withdraw that it cannot come. Maybe you say it should not come, but it is not that it cannot come.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Well, that's my opinion sir. I have made my thoughts known on it. I think the House is doing itself a great disservice and laying a bad record for posterity when we come to a Bill of this magnitude—the national budget of the country, which has a certain financial procedure in the Standing Orders—and we just mess up on it. And that's exactly what happened.

I think we should recommit it, go through the clauses and come back.

THIRD READING

THE APPROPRIATION (2000) BILL, 1999

(Question put)

The Speaker: We have already laid the report. We are now in the Third Reading. We moved the Third Reading of the Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999. The Clerk read the Third Reading. Am I not correct, Madam Clerk?

So, I shall now put the question on the Third Reading of the Appropriation Bill. The question is that a Bill entitled The Appropriation (2000) Bill, 1999 be given a third reading and do pass. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: In my opinion the Ayes have it. The Bill has been given a third reading and passed.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, can we have a division?

The Speaker: Certainly.

The Clerk:

The Speaker: Moving on to Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 29/99, Government Action Needed in Taxis Watersports and Tour Operators, to be moved by The First Elected Member for West Bay.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 29/99

GOVERNMENT ACTION NEEDED IN TAXIS WATERSPORTS AND TOUR OPERATORS

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I beg to move Private Member's Motion . . . well, it's been so long now, I don't know if it's 29 or 1, Government Action Needed in Taxis Watersports and Tour Operators, which states:

"WHEREAS there have been a vast number of complaints from local operators in taxi, tours and the watersports industry about monopolies, unfair treatment and lack of business therefrom;

"AND WHEREAS some of these watersports businesses operate from the North Sound in West Bay;

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government immediately take whatever action may be needed to ensure that all taxis, watersports operators and tour buses operating from the Port get a fair share of the business emanating from the cruise ships operating in these Islands;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government investigate the feasibility of extending the North Sound Jetty in West Bay and, if necessary, the building of boat slips to accommodate the number of boats now operating in the North Sound."

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?
 The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 29/99 has been duly moved and seconded, does the mover wish to speak to it? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I certainly would like to speak to it, but these days speaking in the House doesn't mean it's going to get you anywhere.

This matter is one that is very important. It is one where there have been a vast number of complaints, as the resolution states, from the various people involved in the business. It is a matter that is causing quite a bit of concern, and rightly so.

We are all aware that tourism is one of the biggest, if not the biggest sector of our economy, yet these concerns have been ongoing for many, many, many years with various governments. That concern is that local Caymanians are not getting the benefits they should reasonably expect from what is usually a strong and vibrant sector. I say usually because there is some debate as to how strong the economy has been in the past two or three years.

Over 700,000 visitors come to our islands each year from the cruise ships. Yet, far too many hardworking people who labour in those fields spend whole days on the docks or at the airport and go home with barely enough to pay their mortgage at the end of the month. What is causing this? Is it because our people are not able to look after the clients? I don't think so.

Is it because they don't know what the tourists want or expect? Is it because the tourists don't want to deal with them? The answer is No! It is because our tourism industry has been allowed to grow and there are artificial barriers created to stop the success of the people operating their businesses—tours, watersports, taxi operators.

Is it easy to fix? I don't think so. But there must be a solution found. First of all, there needs to be a level playing field. But all too often in this country today the playing fields are not level so that our people can take advantage. Instead, it's the other way around. It is made unlevelled so that our people are taken advantage of. Various problems are involved in this matter. And problems stem from a lack of leadership in government, those in authority, and also some leadership needs to come out of the people involved. It's not that they don't work hard, I think they just need to change the strategy. They are up against big companies and big influence.

It's not that success is a bad thing. We should applaud those who lift themselves up and do well. But big companies have created and instituted programmes that prevent our people, the smaller operators, from competing. Influence creates artificial barriers that keep the small operators down.

When we look at the groups, and there are a few that get the vast majority of the business from these visitors to our islands, you can see a common thread. They are all primarily groups with special connections, both in business and probably somewhere in government that allow them to take all the cream and leave only the crumbs for the smaller operators.

In the taxi, tour, and watersports industries we are told that the client, that is the tourist, wants a quality product delivered in a safe environment at a good price. Are our people unable to deliver a good product? A safe product at a competitive price? Of course, Mr. Speaker. The answer is yes that they are able to. They need the opportunity to do so, a level playing field.

As I said earlier, they need to do some things themselves. They are doing that. I can tell you without a shadow of a doubt that any tourist who made the effort to come to our islands would far prefer to have the islands shown to him by a native who knows about the island. People come to our islands to experience what we are, and if we can give that to them not only will they enjoy it more, they will come back and tell their friends to come also. That is the positive cycle of tourism that we want and need.

There have been complaints from all around. Various people, both handlers who don't know very much about boats . . . you go to the North Sound and you see 300 to 400 people on a boat. And suddenly, our people are being pushed against the wall. There is over $25 million that government will spend on promoting our islands. These funds should be focused on providing good wages and income to the people who are operating those businesses.

I have moved motions in this House before. Other people have moved them. People talk about it all the time. The cruise ships seem to dominate and manipulate the business, they monopolise. The way I understand what is happening is that the cruise lines book the local tours both on land and on sea. They negotiate with the big tour operators here in the Cayman Islands to create their packages and the cruise ships get their commission from selling these packages. As a result, they limit their business to the big operators, leaving the small operators with little or nothing.

Sometimes they have a man at the dock that comes ashore and tells the people what to do—Selling, right there on the dock! Not on the ship, on the dock! They badmouth the local stores. They tell them which ones to go into because these people are operating in a fashion . . . as I understand it they pay a commission to the cruise ship for sending the business their way.

The hotels are also operating with businesses in a way to create a monopoly. Hyatt, Westin, and Marriott ensure that one company gets their business and maybe there's a little bit for another company. But that leaves the smaller operators with nothing. The new Holiday Inn, which will be completed this year, has already given a monopoly to one of the large companies, I understand. Nothing is being left for the smaller operators.

And I know a little bit about this business because my stepfather has been in that business from the late 1950s. Of course in those days, you never had to worry about the big monopolies. They could go and negotiate with the tourists for their North Sound trips, their taxi tours, and people made money. But the day they gave the monopolies to the big businesses in the hotels is the day the small local Caymanian operator was practically put out of business.

As I said, the success of those big companies is not a bad thing. We applaud those who can do it. But I believe that more can be done from a governmental point of of view to ensure that a certain amount of business stays within the reach of the small local operator.

I think that most members received a letter some time in November from various North Sound operators and taxi and bus drivers. It reads, and I want to read it into the record. It went to His Excellency the Governor and all Members. I quote:

[The First Elected Member for West Bay read the letter, in its entirety, into the Official Record. Please see copy of letter immediately following page 1375]

This letter is signed by several people representing local business. And, as far as I am concerned, it is well written, well thought out, it outlines the problems that these people are experiencing. So, we need to address the matter.

I am going to wait to hear what government's reply is going to be. However, before I sit down, the motion also talks about the North Sound jetty and government will note that the motion asks government to investigate the feasibility of extending the North Sound jetty in West Bay. I said investigate the feasibility because I don't know about those things. I believe that something needs to be done because there are a number of local boats that are left in a bind.

I wait to hear what the Minister of Tourism is going to say.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any member wish to speak?

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I wish to speak on this motion also because I would like to create a framework for a better understanding of the problem we have in regard to this situation which concerns the watersports operators and the North Sound operators and tour operators and taxi drivers.

I believe that part of what has happened in this country over a long period of time is this piece solution to problems, where people fail to realise the interconnection between things, and the necessity to look at issues as a whole rather than part of the issue. The problem that the persons who wrote to us is dealing with is a problem that other Caymanians are experiencing as well, the workers in the hotels are obviously experiencing similar problems. Persons are complaining of not getting a sufficient piece of the pie.

The question from the government's point of view is, How to you regard the importance and urgencies of a professional group? We have seen how the lawyers in the Cayman Islands have been able to create quite a stir simply because one person badmouthed a member of that fraternity. As a result, many of them took their pens and very skilfully defended their position as lawyers and Caymanians.

The fact that other groups cannot do that as well in Cayman does not necessarily mean that they should not be represented. And this is the reason why we formed the National Alliance of Cayman Islands Employees, NACE, to give a voice to Caymanians who feel the same way that Caymanian lawyers felt when they said that people were trying to devalue their education, usefulness and professionalism, and their ability to serve the Cayman Islands as well as any imported professional.

I think that the problem of how to maintain a value for the Caymanian contribution to the Caymanian economy and society is a problem that government must become concerned with. It would be easy for us to advance the non-protectionist philosophy to not interfere in the market and allow the market factors to determine the outcome, who's going to win and who's going to have the pie at the end of the day.

The disadvantage that Caymanians have been placed in because of people coming in here with more organisational skills, more willingness to organise, and the capital to organise around, we will find that if we allow the so-called market factors to determine who shares in the economic rewards we will have a situation of have's and have not's—with Caymanians being the have not's, and foreign persons being those who have. That creates a specific social and political problem that would not be the same in a country that was homogeneous, where people assimilated and merged into the same nationality, where there were no recognised social differences between people that could be used to agitate jealousy, hatred, resentment, and at the end violence.

As a government we have a core function to be responsible for the social control in this society. And government relinquishes this obligation when it begins to pull away from the economic institutions to the point where it only sees that it has to regulate when it has to do with crime interfering with the financial industry, and when it doesn't see unfair competition or advantage as similar, and therefore demanding some kind of intervention in this area.

That particular philosophy of let it alone it will solve itself; let everybody work and see who is going to win at the end of the day, this kind of playing of monopoly doesn't work. It will not be beneficial to Caymanian humanity, Caymanian philosophy, Caymanian values and consciousness at the end of the day simply because it is depriving and impoverishing the Caymanians who have some degree of entrepreneurial spirit.

The little guy who goes and gets a loan to buy a bus or taxi, or to get a boat (and I know several of them who have taken up that risk), has to pay. So, he has even more to lose than the worker who has paid for his tools to work. If he is not able to employ his tools and his labour he is losing twice, whereas the worker who is denied the possibility to employ his skill does not really take the same risk. There is a heightened degree of concern that should be shown towards these small entrepreneurs who are a cross between employers and employees. They have a unique predicament in that they both provide themselves with the tools for their own employment.

Let us look at the areas they are complaining about, and let us look at the growth. Let us look at the tendency worldwide. The reality worldwide is that companies become larger. We are dealing with monopoly capitalism. We are dealing with a system that does not necessarily value the small entrepreneur anymore because he is considered to be outdated, outmoded, archaic. So he is pushed aside because he is not considered to be efficient and rational. He does not run his business based upon profit, growth, and annual return. He does not want to abandon the friendliness and the time he gives to individual passengers, clients, or visitors.

In fact, it is a kind of asset stripping. The industry is asset stripping by depriving the small Caymanian entrepreneur of his position as an ambassador of Caymanian humanity and hospitality. It is saying that he has to become one of the pack, organised in this very regimented way where he has to become their worker completely, rather than somebody who is bringing the tools to the job, who has invested his capital. I think we need to understand overall some of the dynamics involved here, and therefore, once we understand this, we understand some of the difficulties in resolving the problems.

The fact is that the interest group on the side of bringing forward this rationalisation of capital and the use of capital and the use of labour is in some way in conflict with the old traditional way of Caymanian independence and we are going to run our own little business ourselves. So, we need to give a certain amount of protection to this particular unique kind of Caymanian entrepreneurship, just like we gave protection to the merchant Caymanian entrepreneurship in the early stage of our development, some 30 years ago, when we decided that 60% of a company would have to be owned by a Caymanian, and that a foreign owner could only own 40% unless that person then applied to the Protection Board to get a Local (Company Control) License.

From the very beginning government, in terms of the creation of laws, had certain concepts about protecting at least certain types of economic activities because it understood that in protecting those economic institutions it would be protecting the social and political fabric of the society as a whole.

There are those who argue that if the Caymanian merchant families were exposed to international competition overnight that that could destroy the homogeneity of the society, it could destroy a lot of the social fabric in the society. There are those who have advanced that particular argument.

If that particular argument has been advanced for a particular group of entrepreneurs, what argument can be advanced for the small group of entrepreneurs? That group that comes about as a result of the growth in the tourist industry, as a result of the stay-over tourist and those coming by cruise ship. The entrepreneurs have been able to work for a while, free themselves from their jobs by becoming independent taxi, tour, and North Sound operators, people who are independent of these companies. But they still need these companies cooperation in order to make their venture profitable, in order to exist.

Therefore, if they are not seen as important enough to be supported by government in some way—the same government that has traditionally given subsidies to the hoteliers by way of reduction in duties and by promoting the tourism product to the extent where the people's investments are sure of a definite return . . . the type of special consideration I think these persons are asking could be made—should be made—for their particular industry.

Their industry is not just an economic industry, but a social and cultural industry as well. We see this more so in the district of West Bay than we do in any other district, this particular tourism-oriented independent provider. There is a very important culture that has developed around this over the years, and I have known some of the people who have been involved in this in the early stages. They are people with a special kind of spirit, people who will work for people for a while, but at the end of the day they are going to make themselves independent if they can do so.

These people have a very valuable function from a social, political standpoint to the island. One would not just support them because they would be people who would participate in elections, but because once you gain their understanding, once the state has their understanding and once they believe that the state is conducting its affairs in a just manner, the state can rely on that particular group for support of the norms and values of the society. And this is, of course, very important because those of us who are sociologists understand the role of economic reward in creating the motivation for people to become involved in maintaining the norms.

I want to just bring this perspective to the House to support and to give more theoretical meat to what the First Elected Member for West Bay has been saying in order to make the types of connections I feel in terms of trying to gain government's understanding and the public's understanding, as to the possible ramifications if this group of people were not able to exist.

We are not just looking at how people will react; we are looking at what society as a whole would lose. So we have to go beyond their interest as a limited interest group and see how this support of their interest as a limited interest group supports the society as a whole. That is the exercise I have attempted to do here. We are giving them credit for playing more of a role because their role is a social role, an economic role with ramifications to this extent.

In regard to the way the hotels are set up . . . and I have a little experience with the stubbornness of some of the managers in the hotels. I now have some experience with their unwillingness to see us as anything other than a place, like a factory where you come to make money, but not to live. We have obligations that go beyond the economic obligations. So when a manager who is not from this territory tells the concierge that she should not give jobs to certain Caymanians . . . and I know of one or two cases where a person was actually fired from a hotel because the person insisted on trying to recruit Caymanians where there was a jog around the hotel in regard to the North Sound trips.

The structure as it is organised in the hotel means that the independent operators are operating outside the structure or the organisation of the hotel. The hotels are organised in such a way as to not complement their existence, but to compete with and eliminate their existence.

That is the dynamics. If you have a hotel that is going to set up the same type of services that the independent persons are setting up, the hotel managers will prefer those services inside whether or not they are inferior to those outside. Basic laws of economics say that they are going to be unfair. There will not be fair competition.

If this is the same with the cruise ships, if it is set up to provide the same basic goods and services as we have here locally, the same phenomena will occur. What has to be remembered is that it is the Caymanian who is providing the marketplace for business to be done, and therefore the Caymanian should be benefiting the way he feels he should. It is not unreasonable for these persons to get together and make demands to government.

I am not necessarily advocating that government jump in and make legislation to change things. But I do believe that government has to have its ear to the ground, and has to be reading the writing on the wall. I think it's quite clear that people are saying 'We need to get a little more piece of the action.'

I went to look at some shops yesterday, because somebody invited me to look at some real estate. I was surprised at the number of shops that are now supposed to be duty free shops that are going down in this island. I wonder where they are going to get the people to pay the rent, to come up with the capital to be able to go in there. Okay, at the end of the day, what the Caymanians are saying is that they have something now that they can afford. They can afford the little taxi, they can afford the little bus, they can afford the little boat, let them make a living from their investment.

The reason why a lot of people quit and go on and do their own business is because the diving industry and the snorkelling industry pay them so little. They pay them so little because they can bring the kids in from Australia, New Zealand, Canada and other places like that and pay them so little. So, if the Caymanian does not toe the line, he is shown the door because they have the open door policy—that is, if you don't like it, you go—and the Caymanian says 'I don't like it, so I am going to go because there are other jobs I can do and I might be able to get my grandmother or my mother to give the little piece of land we have as security so I can get a little business started.' And they get involved in starting these things.

There is a legitimate reason why government should become concerned and pay attention to these demands. I have said on many occasions that I believe that lawyers have accomplished what they have because they see themselves as a fraternity. Rotary and Rotarians have accomplished what they have in this society because they see themselves as a fraternity. Parliamentarians have accomplished what they have because they see themselves as a fraternity. Any group that cannot develop fraternity among its members is an inferior group. When we hold the right to organise against people, then we are holding their right to develop this fraternity among themselves. We are preventing something that is essential and natural.

Therefore, when we heard about the formation of the Sea and Land Cooperative, I was saying myself that it was not necessarily how I might have done this, but I was happy that at least the organistaion was taking place. It was only after people became sufficiently organised to see their interest in common, and to present their interest in common, there could be any respect for their interest and any type of consideration of their interest, and ultimately a resolution in regard to the demand.

So, as Parliamentarians we all received a letter from these concerned persons before we saw the motion brought by the First Elected Member for West Bay. I returned a telephone call to at least one of those, Eldon Ebanks in West Bay, before the First Elected Member for West Bay had the meeting. I was hoping that those persons would be interested in joining the National Alliance of Cayman Islands Employees. As of now, they have not come forward to do so. But I understand they are making arrangements to create some organisation that will assist in creating a voice to speak to government to find some kind of workable solution to their complaints.

Their complaint is that there exists unfair competition. There are those of us who say unfair competition is not because you have $2 million and I only have $2. That that's not unfair, that's only competition. It means that because I have $2, I have to come work for you. But a lot of these people are saying 'No. We want to be able to use our $2 to buy the tools to make ourselves independent workers.' And that is what these people have done.

We see the situation on the docks. Those of us who have gone around there to see how it is going see how the cruise ships continue to take a big portion from their organisation. As time goes on, they will take more, and more, and more. These people will be more and more upset with government because they are saying that government is not doing enough.

We understand there is private enterprise. But government can work something out to improve what those persons can make as a result of their investment and involvement. The question would also be, if those persons had not taken the risk to get these buses, boats and taxis to provide the island with this service, and all the ships are coming in and people coming in by airplane, then we would not have transportation because government did not get involved with creating a transportation system and subsidising it. Obviously, you cannot have commerce without transport. So these people have also served this country well.

Why is it, now that we have other people coming in with the $2 million, that they should just jump out of their position and give up their independence and their love of working for themselves in order to accommodate these persons? I believe that there has to be greater accommodation of the demands of Caymanians whether or not they be those persons who are in housekeeping in the hotels, or those people who are running the taxis that are taking people to and from the hotels. There has to be a greater recognition of the role they play in providing the Caymanian economy with the success it has been experiencing.

Too often we only stress the foreign investor's part, the foreigner's contribution, and we forget that the Caymanians contributed long and hard and tireless to the growth, success and prosperity of the Cayman Islands.

If government must do something in order to ensure that Caymanians get a fair share of the pie, I suggest it is better that government does it, then it be done by persons who no longer care if there is a government, or a society, because they become too desperate, too jealous, too hateful of the fact that they believe that other persons have become more successful in their society than they have simply because their government has not paid attention to their needs and their demands.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I want to add my contribution before the minister gets up to speak because I want to put the minister in a position where he has to take the contributions made by the mover, by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, and me as serious; and where he, in his response, has to come out and say what his government is prepared to do.

This matter has not just sprung up in our faces. It has been going on for quite some time. I find it lamentable that the government has not yet realised that prosperity in this country is based on the formula that the Caymanian people, with their willingness to work, and their ability to be entrepreneurs must be factored in. We can't just look at one side, the side of the people who produce capital—big capital, big money. We also have to look at those who have nothing to contribute to the equation but their labour, meaning their diligence, conscientiousness and honesty, and those who find themselves in a position to make a contribution to capital, albeit on a smaller scale.

I want to take us back a few years, Mr. Speaker, because in this very House on two occasions I brought a private member's motion calling for the establishment of a fair competition act, and fair trading legislation. It was brought twice. On the second occasion it passed. As is not unusual, it has been left to languish in the doldrums. In that period of the 1992 to 1996 Parliament, if memory serves me correctly, it was in either 1994 or 1995. It had to come on two occasions. The same government that's in power now accepted it. They have done nothing!

Had we had that instrument, the government could have saved itself from major embarrassment on two recent occasions. But that is not unusual, and I have come to the conclusion that the difference between great leaders and ordinary leaders is that great leaders have the ability to perceive the problems before they confront us; ordinary leaders react. They are reactionary crisis managers. So they are constantly outing fires. Great leaders cut the swathes in the jungle and make sure the forest is so that there are no fires, and even when there are they can be controlled.

If we don't take these cues we have been getting, soon the country will reach a state where its development will benefit no one. There will be so many disparate forces, so many rivalries, so much tension, so much social unease and venom, anger, disgust and animosity, that we will be spending all of our times soothing society rather than making progress.

I am not going to repeat . . . and I don't have the ability to capture it like the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, but anyone with sense (and you don't have to be a reader in sociology or economics or anything else) will understand that these things are usually a partnership. The pie has to be shared. We are not asking for all of the pie. We are not asking for a majority share, we are just asking for parity. We are saying that our people must have the ability to earn a livelihood in dignity and to be allowed to compete on a level playing field.

I hear horror stories—and they are true!—about advantage being taken, about regulations being flaunted, about some persons in this society who appear to be untouchable, who buy more boats than they are supposed to have, who operate without licenses in blatant contravention of what is supposed to be the norm. And they seem to be untouchable.

Mr. Speaker, I didn't know that we were living in a Hindu society, because that's the only place where they have "untouchables." I thought we lived in a democracy.

And now, quite rightly, the people have begun to organise themselves. That is their democratic right. I encourage them to do that because if the government they depended upon to be the regulator is blind to all of their struggles and the pains they suffer, then ultimately the people have to organise themselves so that they can protect and defend their democratic rights.

Now, there are many ways we can address these problems. I made some comments during my debate on the Budget Address and I received a letter from one of these large operators. The letter could be interpreted as chastisement. But, you know I have a way with words, and I read and re-read the letter before I answered it. And I decided that I would be a diplomat. I told the gentleman that I had nothing against big business, his ability to operate a large company to make money. He's in business and I know because one of my other hats is that I work for a business and I know the profit motive. But my primary responsibility as a legislator and representative of the people is to protect my people from being crushed by steamrollers.

I reassured the gentleman that I had nothing against his ability to turn a profit. But I will not let him railroad and ride the Caymanian entrepreneurs who have carried out this calling for years, and were indeed the pioneers in the North Sound boat tour and dive business. I will not let them become extinct. We have to share the turf. And, if the turf is not shared voluntarily then we will have to create some rules where we get our share.

Government has a responsibility to heed the calls of these people. I understand that some of the ammunition used against these people is 'If you patronise them you do so at great risk because they have no liability insurance; their craft is not up to standard,' this thing and the next thing. I think government should give serious heed to this. The best way to help these people, to ensure they can compete in all facets according to the limited resources they have, is for government to explore the possibilities of establishing some kind of micro finance initiative whereby these people can access money to buy boats, to refurbish them, to buy equipment so they can be competitive at the scale and level they have been accustomed to. They don't have access to financial resources where they can go and buy a $.5 million craft, or afford to effect repairs and adjustments that will cost them $200,000. They cannot access commercial loans because they don't earn the money to service those loans.

In circumstances like that in other jurisdictions the initiative is taken by government to establish some kind of micro finance initiative where these people can access money at a rate they can afford to pay back. They may be given soft loans, preferential rates where they don't have to pay any interest for three or five years. I don't think these operators are looking for any charity. I think they are willing to carry their share of responsibilities, but they need some help. To me, that is one way government can look towards offering them some kind of help.

Clearly, the situation cannot continue as it has. These people are being forced out gradually. And in a few years' time, if it continues they will become extinct. This is not good. The wider society is watching and already under pressure. The forces are converging on us so that we are daily under pressure. People are beginning to wonder for whom we are developing.

I think that the motion brought is a timely motion. I think that government needs to pay attention to the cries emanating from these people. We need to come up with practical and realistic solutions that are going to enable the people to maintain their dignity, their independence, their diligence and respect; while at the same time helping them to earn a decent livelihood and allowing for those operators, large as they may be, who operate in the field to also continue to operate.

I am left to wonder because I walk along the waterfront often. Quite frankly, I take certain umbrage to seeing my people out with signs that say "To the Beach" like they are beggars. I have to wonder why, in the dawn of the 21st Century, we cannot have a better organisation than that. I see people who have invested their money going around like they have no status, like they are fending for crumbs. I mean, why do our people who operate these vehicles have to go with signs? Why? I don't see that anywhere else.

Can we not have better organisation than that? Is that evidence of what we are being reduced to? Is that symptomatic of the kind of times we are going to live in? If it is, the prognosis is not good. We are going to have trouble. I hear stories about everything being organised from the ship, how if you are not certified, the purser says you shouldn't take that tour or shop in that store. Is this free enterprise?

Is that what the government is allowing? Is government impotent to deal with that? Is government satisfied that that is what our people should be reduced to? I mean, this is not Haiti! This is not Port-o-Prince, or Port Said, Egypt, or Bangkok, Thailand.

Mr. Speaker, if we don't heed the signal, if we don't listen to the signs and pick up the vibes . . . and I am not giving any lesson in sociology this afternoon. Now is not the time for sophistry. This is the time for action! I expect that when these kinds of motions come to the House the government is going to respond with a plan that is satisfactory to this side of the House, a plan that has the confidence of the people affected. I am reminded by my colleague, the First Elected Member for George Town, that the motion has been here long enough for government—if it is serious—to have assiduously come up with some plan or proposition we can use to address this.

These things are warnings of times to come. If we don't heed these warnings, or if we flaunt them or dismiss them and say, 'Well, that is nothing, look at who's moving it. We don't have to pay that any mind, or we can play games like we are sometimes accustomed to playing. . . ,' we will be losing valuable time. Our people will be losing ground and be further pressed. The economic development of the Cayman Islands must be done in such a way that the Caymanians—particularly those people who were pioneers who worked long and hard when there were few people to patronise them, few tourists, and few rewards—have their place carved right until the bitter end.

It is patently fallacious and grossly unfair for the islands to develop in such a way that those people will be forced out and become extinct. I will share their bitterness and concern. I will be unforgiving at any entity that runs them out. And I say this without fear of successful contradiction: The environment in the Cayman Islands is open and big enough for everyone. But I was not elected to have any outside entity drive my people out of the businesses they were practising for generations.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Mr. Roy Bodden: If the present situation needs improvement it is our job, and I give the undertaking that we on this side will be cooperative with government. We will search for the solutions to help them improve the situation. But we cannot be expected to sit idly by while Caymanian entrepreneurs and businesspeople that have been operating for generations are run out by big business, some of which come from yonder.

I want to reiterate that it is my conviction that there is enough to share with everyone. I hold prejudice against anyone from the outside. Like Churchill said when there was discussion of devolution of the empire, he wasn't elected to preside over the demise of the British Empire, so too, I have not been elected to preside over the demise of the Caymanian in whatever form, shape, or fashion that be.

Believe you me, if nothing is done to address this problem, my voice is going to grow louder, and louder, and one day it won't be a voice, it will be the feet. I will vote with my feet. I will march with my people because they cannot be put down in this way.

I am sure that the Minister of Tourism has the ability, and he knows that it is the inherent responsibility of his government and more closely his ministry to deal with this shortcoming. We have been crying for too many years on seemingly deaf ears. I have every confidence that when the minister gets up it won't be a callous response in any way derogatory, but will be serious and something we can have confidence in. It will be something we can associate with, and not generic. We want a definite stamp. We want to see something positive.

The word is out. There are plenty of cries on the street. There are plenty of advantages being taken of the Caymanian people, and these were the pioneers. This is the last frontier and they should not be obliterated in this way. I think it behoves the government to get together and see that something is done to address this crying need—sooner rather than later.

Thank you for your indulgence.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.45 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.10 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 29/99. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you.

It is fair to say that the subject of taxis, tour buses, and watersports has been one of the areas that has caused a series of governments to really get down to the details as to how to solve the many issues that arise from time to time.

I want to say that rather than talking on all of these items at one time, perhaps the best approach is to try to single out item by item, and to record to some extent what has been done by this government while it has been in power since 1992.

It was about five years ago that we got representation one morning in this Parliament from a number of persons operating at the Port who were concerned about the same issue that members across the floor are talking about—the big operator bringing in three big buses at one time. It was this government that passed the legislation and took the action to ensure that the local people at the Port were protected. I don't want to go into great detail, Mr. Speaker, because I think we all remember that particular situation.

It was also this government that at that same time moved an amendment to the Customs Law, which required importation of boats for commercial purposes to be approved by government—boats and buses, particularly those Omni buses that are beyond nine seats. You need permission to import that vehicle into the island and to also register it at the Vehicle Licensing unit. It was this government that set up that system. We set it up with one main objective in mind, and that was to protect the local person, the same persons members across the floor are talking about.

It is also true that when I assumed responsibility for the Port that I heard about the number of people operating from the Port driving taxis or buses who, the word was, were not Caymanians. But when we checked, although some were born in another country, they possessed Caymanian status.

It is this same government that only last year removed the moratorium, or cap, on the number of vehicles that could be licensed as taxis. And we moved the addition (initially the approval was for 25) because we thought until that day that there was sufficient to really carry out the service required by visitors as well as residents. When we advertised for persons to apply for taxi licenses, we thought we would get 20 or 25. We actually got 70-odd applications. And the majority—if not, 90%—were from Caymanians. We took the decision then that as we were always interested in ensuring that Caymanians supply this kind of service to the visitor and resident, provided they could pass the test we would license everyone.

As a result of that, we now have 243 taxi drivers spread between Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac. Only a quarter of them are dedicated to the Port. About 9% are operating from the airport, less than 5% are in the Brac, and about 10% of them operate both at the airport and also at the dock. And about 53% are operating at other areas including around the hotels.

I think that as we search our memories and think about the taxi drivers operating in Grand Cayman, and even if we go back to the early days, we will find that the majority of them were Caymanian. Today, it's good to say that they are all Caymanian. Although some are not indigenous, they possess Caymanian status.

Another accomplishment we did (and we are still working on this exercise) was to set up category of licenses, meaning taxi driver, Omni bus driver, tour bus driver, as well as limousine driver. I believe this categorisation is going well. It's only about one year ago that we took this particular responsibility on. And I believe that what we have accomplished so far is worthy of note.

We know too that when we talk about tour bus operators, and when we think about all the tour bus seats in this country, there are about 1100 seats. Forty-nine percent of them are at the dock, and 32% is shared between the dock and the airport on top of the 49%. We also have about 15% of those seats dedicated to the airport and about 5% elsewhere. What is clear is that the owners of these particular operations, as documented at the Vehicle Licensing Unit, are Caymanian.

Now, we hear about some participation by this one or the other with some of these operators, but I don't believe we have a lot of evidence in that particular area.

We know that the best way to get the flavour of Cayman is through the first people tourists come in contact with. And some of these people, after you get by Immigration and Customs, would be those operating vehicles at the airport or the dock. And they are . . . all taxi drivers are Caymanians.

About a year ago we also established the Omni bus system in this island which never before was in existence, where you could get on a bus in West Bay, come to George Town, take another bus and go to North Side or East End, and get back to West Bay using that same process. And we heard the loud cry about the number of foreigners providing this service. Isn't that true? That's not true? Eighty-five percent of the Omni bus permits issued are issued to Caymanians.

When we look at the seats allocated to the various districts, 179 are allocated to West Bay route 1; 235 seats are allocated to West Bay route 2; and we could go on and on about the seats. What is important is that the number of persons driving those Omni buses (with the exception of some who are not Caymanian, but married to Caymanians) . . . we took the view that since they have already been there earning their livelihood and their spouse is Caymanian that it would be morally wrong, if not legally wrong, to discontinue their applications. We have given them until June of this year to sort out their Caymanian status and get within the law. That's the reason why the letter was issued sometime ago saying to them the law actually requires that all these drivers be Caymanian. So we want to be within the law.

But we felt that if we got challenged and taken to court (and we felt this as lay people, we didn't take any legal advice) that the court was likely to come down in favour of that driver simply because he's been out there providing that service for five or six years. And the system in those days did not challenge his being there. So we agreed to allow them to have a license, temporary though it may be, until June which gives them (and we said this in November or December last year) six months to sort out their status.

We hear all sorts of remarks from people who operate at the Port that 'You know, last month I only made $48 operating down there.' But the next question should be, How many days did you work? And the answer would have to be 'I worked two days.'

And how many hours were you there each day? is another question. We know that having taken up the responsibility for it eight years ago, when tours by these particular bus drivers, namely the 30- and 40-seater drivers and bus owners providing that service, we know that going on tour was almost a rarity. The service they were providing was taking people from the Port down to the beach, and back to the Port. Normally they collected $3 each way.

But we find that there are over 100 drivers operating from the Port. And we find that just their time at the Port, which is not their entire operation, some of these same people are earning $1200 to $1400 a month, which means they can only accomplish that if they are in the tour business. So there has been some improvement and persons operating at the Port have been getting more business as time goes on.

Now, how much is enough, or how much is the right figure is a question mark. But we do know that when you have 1200 seats, and all of these applications have come during these months in particular, the peak season for cruise ships is October to mid April, unless Good Friday falls late in April. During that period of time, most people are making a reasonable sum of money providing tours and taxi service from the Port. The problem really comes in May to September when these 1200 seats are more than you actually need because you approved that sum to cope with the winter traffic. Therefore, during May to September, we know there are a reduced number of boats that come to Cayman, and as a result, less money is spent, fewer people are here to transport. That's normally when you hear the largest amount of complaint.

But this government has always been committed to trying to assist persons operating at the port or any other part of the Cayman Islands, and we hold fast to that commitment.

NATIONAL TRUST FOR THE CAYMAN ISLANDS
ANNUAL REPORT 1998
(Year Ending 31 August 1998)

Hon. John B. McLean: I beg to lay upon the Table of this honourable House, The National Trust for the Cayman Islands Annual Report 1998, year ending 31 August 1998.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it?

Moving on to item 4, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question 172 is standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 172

No. 172: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning if there are any plans to place the required number of teacher's aides in the George Town and the Red Bay Primary Schools.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Presently, Savannah Primary has been allocated five extra support assistants, in addition to two previously assigned to this school, plus one teacher's aide was assigned in September. George Town Primary presently has one support assistant plus two teacher's aides, and two additional support assistants were added in October. Red Bay Primary has five support assistants and one teacher's aide.

The distinction should be made between teacher's aides and support assistants. Teacher's aides are school leavers who plan to undertake teacher training in one year's time. Support assistants are more mature adults generally with some classroom experience who are recruited for an indefinite period.

Additional support assistants were requested in the new staff allocation for 2000, and were only approved last week. No one has been interviewed to date, but this will get underway when the budget is approved.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I do appreciate his explanation of the difference between teachers' aides and support assistants. Taking the schools one by one, can the honourable minister say if the number of these requested by each of the schools equates to the number approved in the new services of the estimates?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that 15 were in the new budget. These were put in on the basis of the criteria of classes over 25 that the assistant or the aide would be put into. As to whether they are more or less, I think that it may be more than was requested in some schools. But what we did was take the criteria of 25 children to a class, and anything over that, we added one.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Based on the numbers in the classes at the Savannah Primary School, which obviously call for seven support assistants and one teacher's aide, can we look at the George Town Primary School first and then the Red Bay Primary School, and can we understand what the numbers would equate to compared to the seven support assistants and one teacher's aide at Savannah Primary?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: The criteria is where the class is more than 25, and Savannah actually has the highest number of classes in that category. George Town has one assistant, two aides, and two further assistants were added in October, so that is five. That, together with what is in the new budget, I understand will cover any class that has more than 25.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I know that we are limited with supplementaries, and I am going to ask you please sir, if these supplementaries are not answered don't count that as a supplementary.

The Speaker: We are running against the clock.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: But I am just letting you know, sir. And I think it's only fair for you to consider that, regardless of how fast the clock is running.

I heard what the minister just said, but my specific question . . . basically, what I need to know is how many classes in George Town Primary School have over 25? How many classes in Red Bay have over 25? And what numbers should they have based on what is done in Savannah?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I don't have that information readily available. I will undertake to provide it in writing to the member. I have the Chief Education Officer here, but I don't have the information.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Although this question does not refer to the Savannah Primary School, the honourable minister used it as an example. Are the two assigned support assistants at Savannah Primary not specifically there for the special needs children of Savannah Primary, rather than as the other five who have just been put there?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: That's correct. Those two assistants were for the two children who needed them. And the five new ones are generally assigned. The other was generally assigned.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side. Two additional supplementaries.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: The minister agreed that these two support assistants are specifically at the school for the special needs children. Am I to assume that that school is still lacking support staff, and if every class with over 25 students at Savannah has a support assistant?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I am told that every class with over 25 has an aide or an assistant.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, the last supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I have looked on the Order Paper, and I was hoping the minister had too. There is a question that has all the answers for the things he says he doesn't have the answers here for.

We don't have to get anything in writing, Mr Speaker, but since this is the final supplementary you are going to allow, and rather than get mixed up between the two questions, since the minister now knows this, can the honourable minister clearly state how many classes in the Red Bay Primary School have over 25 students? How many classes in the George Town Primary School have over 25, and how does that equate to the number of support staff both of those schools will have for this school year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: The answer to Savannah (and I will read the numbers) class 1A has 26; 1W, 25; 2M, 25, 2B, 21; 3B, 30; 3W, 29; 4E, 24; 4W, 23; 5L, 27; 5P, 27; GM, 18; GW, 20. So that's five that are over 25, and two that are 25.

George Town . . . let me not call the numbers of the classes because this has a lot. But the numbers in there are 16, 25, 13, 24, 23, 27, that's one; 19, 24, 24, 27, that's two; 24, 24, 23, 23, 25, 25, 19, 25, 18, 24, 14, so it seems they have three.

There are two points I would like to make on this: When the enrolment was done, it would have been as at enrolment last year. Whether some of these classes may have changed in this year is possible. The other matter I would like to point out is that not all principals have requested, or need aides in each class. George Town needs three, as I mentioned. Two were assigned in October. There are two in George Town and then two additional are out of the 15 new ones, which will give one extra aide there.

Red Bay is 27, 28, 27, 30, 31, 26, 27, 27, 29, 26, 26, 22, 22, 24, 27, 29. So that seems to be 13. With the new budget, they will get 13 out of 15.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 173, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 173

No. 173: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning if the ministry is aware of any incidents involving physical violence reported at the George Hicks and John Gray High Schools since the beginning of this school term.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: There have been 16 incidents of physical violence at George Hicks High School since the beginning of September. While most were fights between two individuals, suspensions were administered, but police action was not taken.

In one incident, a student was seriously injured and required medical attention. This matter was dealt with by the police. Reports were given to the Chief Education Officer who extended the suspension by the Principal under the Education Law.

There have been three major incidents of physical violence at John Gray High School since the start of this term. The three incidents resulted in extended suspension from the Chief Education Officer under the Education Law. Parents were required to meet with the Chief Education Officer and the Principal prior to the students' return to school. In each of the incidents, medical treatment was administered to at least one student. The police were involved in one of the incidents. Students were placed on contracts prior to returning to school in two of these incidents.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Before I ask the supplementary question, I wonder if the minister can tell me when this answer was prepared so that we can have an idea of how many actual incidents this answer encapsulates.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: The original question was prepared last year. But this is updated up to yesterday. This is up to date.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if these figures caused any great alarm within the Ministry and/or the Education Department, and what course of action is planned to address what seems to be an escalating situation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: There is always concern, even if there was only one incident. It is good that at John Gray High School the number of incidents are down. However, I would like to point out that out of these 17 incidents, there are 1700 good children in those schools. I guess most of the time we concentrate on these incidents—the bad side—but we have a far higher number of good children in our schools. These, compared to the number of good children . . . I think we should thank them and try to set a good example for them.

The question was what are we doing. Sometime ago some of these things were put forward, and I am going to put them forward again.

The issue of gangs in the school system is a fairly new one. Therefore, a number of strategies both preventive and curative in nature have been introduced to deal with violence. Furthermore, there is ongoing assessment/evaluation to ensure that the strategies are having the desired effects:

1) Group Therapy: Weekly group therapy meetings are held at the John Gray High School to help adolescents who are at risk of becoming gang members or violent. The focus at these meetings is on pair relationship, self-concept, conflict and time management, and other related topics. The approach is preventative and includes discussions, video, and case presentations. Meetings are conducted by the two counsellors at the school and the educational psychologist from the department.

2) Placement: Students identified as potential gang leaders and who are also not coping in the school system are usually transferred to the Cayman Islands Marine Institute where they receive more intensive behaviour therapy. Full time and part time placement decisions are made depending upon the severity of the case. Generally, part time placements are made for students who do not have adequate supervision at home after school.

3) Parent meetings: Parents of students who are referred for behavioural matters usually attend parents' meetings to discuss strategies for helping their child to cope with the home environment. These meetings are conducted by the educational psychologist.

4) Interagency contact: Schools liaise with social services and the police department on students' behaviour. This is done within a multidisciplinary context and strategies for change are identified.

5) Staff development for school psychologist and counsellors: In order to help specialist staff to address the problems in the school system, staff development meetings are held. One such meeting was conducted by a member of the police force who showed information and distributed handouts from a gang awareness seminar he attended in the United States. At another meeting, the prison chaplain was invited to give information on the prison population and conditions. Information will be used to help students understand some serious consequences of their behaviour.

6) Staff meeting John Gray High School: A staff meeting was conducted to show the principals, heads of years and counsellors confidential information on students who could be at risk for gang-like violence behaviour. The Chief Education Officer, educational psychologists, the assistant educational psychologist, shared the information with members present. The information was provided by the police department. At the previous meeting educational and assistant educational psychologist identified strategies for change.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I notice that in all of the strategies the minister just outlined, there was no attempt to involve the parents or guardians of students who may be at risk or involved. Can the honourable minister say why this has been omitted? And can he tell the House if there are any strategies that involve these parents or guardians of at risk students?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Let me just read this part again: “(3) Parent meetings: Parents of students who are referred for behavioural matters usually attend parents’ meetings to discuss strategies for helping their child to cope with the home environment. These meetings are conducted by the educational psychologist.” I can add to that that parents are met with, not all the time obviously do they come. It is discussed on a one-to-one basis in order to assist and produce strategies for dealing with the children within the home.

No matter how much can be done in the schools, children spend a considerable amount of time out of school. The home environment and their relationship with their parents are very important. To that effect, our educational psychologist, as well as the teachers, do whatever can be done to discuss the child’s conduct and strategies for improvement when the child is not in school.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I understood what the minister said, and I understood that from the very beginning. What I want to find out is if there are any joint sessions with children who are at risk who demonstrate this antisocial behaviour and their parents and guardians at the same time with the educational psychologist or authorities?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: On the actual group meetings the Chief Education Officer tells me that he doesn’t think children were in the group meetings with the other parents. But I would assume that as normally happens where they are meeting with the parent, that the child is also brought into part of that meeting. I would have to get more details on this if the member wishes a further explanation.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The minister must understand that the majority of children he calls the “good children” are part and parcel of the concern. That is why the questions arise. No one is concentrating on the “bad students.” It is not just because of the bad students why the questions are being asked; it is out of concern for that majority of students not involved in such activity.

With all that he has said, can the honourable minister say if any consideration is being given to the wider picture? The wider picture being that of students being expelled. What happens then?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Expulsion is something that is done by the Education Council. It is fairly rare. I think that what the member is really getting at is that it is a much bigger picture than just the school. A child has to be looked at as a whole. It’s the home environment. The behaviour in this House obviously has influence on children who hear this on the radio, the behaviour of persons in the public sector. The after school programmes are very important and, obviously, it is a much wider picture.

What we do within the school is at least try to reach the parent in relation to the school aspect. As the member knows, different ministries deal with different areas. But we do have coordination between the schools and the social services and that liaison is there. I know it is also there with the courts.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am wondering whether the authorities, that is the Department of Education and the Ministry, have found any trends of gangs in those two schools yet?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There have been some traces of this within the schools. For example, children may try to come to school with specific bandannas or some type of identification. This has been stopped. That has been come down on fairly quickly. Obviously, the gang-like behaviour outside of the schools is a matter that concerns the community. We are very aware of this, and any signs within the schools, I am told it is dealt with firmly and rapidly.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: In his reply, the honourable minister said, “The three incidents resulted in extended suspensions.” Is there any supervision of these students once they are suspended? During that period of suspension, what rules are put in place for those students to adhere to? Or do they just walk the streets and get themselves into trouble?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Suspended children go into the suspension unit where they are taught, supervised, disciplined and monitored. It would not be right for them to be on the street as the member said. This is a suspension unit. The more serious suspension would be at the suspension unit at the Alternative Education Centre.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I am glad the honourable minister cleared that up because the public is of the impression that these students are suspended from the school and sent home with no supervision.

Has any study been carried out to see if anything is being achieved by suspending these students? Are we getting fewer suspensions?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: We haven't done a study specifically on suspension at the school. However, we have quite a range of specialists that are full time. They would make up a case study group that would make decisions, on what is best for the student on more serious matters.

As to whether there are more or less suspensions, I don't have that information. But I could get that. I think what's important is the difference between the short-term and the long-term suspension. There is a difference in gravity between the two. I would try to distinguish between those for the member.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: In the minister's reply to one of the supplementaries, he stated that the bad behaviour of some of the youngsters could possibly be caused by the behaviour in this House. I just wanted to find out to what extent the minister is serious about that, because it's a big problem that we are dealing with. And if he has some scientific evidence to prove that this has some effect on the behaviour of the children, I am sure that all members would be interested in knowing.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The member is putting some words into what I said. What I said was that children look at what adults do and at what their peers do. We are talking about behaviour here. They look at the behaviour in this House and outside; the behaviour of public officials (I think I said), and if the member wishes to call the behaviour here bad behaviour, that's his prerogative. I didn't refer to it as that, all I said was . . . and he, as a psychologist will know that children look at the example set by their peers.

When it comes to behaviour, then those who listen to the radio would listen to the behaviour in this House, which if I may say Mr. Speaker with all due respect, and I know you have done a very good job in keeping this House as a good House, not just here but other Parliaments . . . look at what goes on in Canada and in the UK. But that is behaviour that these children see. And it's behaviour that will not be tolerated in schools.

It would not be tolerated in schools. I point that out. Therefore, it's difficult at times to say to children that they should listen when being spoken to, or they should try to talk in a normal manner when examples that go against that are seen in places as powerful as this House.

So, what I am really saying, Mr. Speaker, is there is a different type of behaviour here than in the classroom. It's no different than what is found in other Parliaments. I am not criticising that aspect. I know you do a good job of keeping behaviour here. But we have to accept . . . and while I am not a psychologist or a psychiatrist, I know that children look at adults, at their peers, and their behaviour has to be affected by the behaviour of their peers.

The Speaker: This is the final supplementary. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I was just going to comment because . . . and I will formulate this into a question. What we are trying to ascertain is very important.

The Speaker: I call to your attention that this is Question Time, so please bring it into a question.

Dr. Frank McField: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: But before we do that, we have reached the hour of 11.00, and I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8), in order to continue Question Time beyond 11.00.

The Elected Member for North Side.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11.00.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I second that motion.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock.

Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: The question to the minister, if he agrees that it is important for young people to be able to distinguish between different kinds of behaviour and different kinds of circumstances, would he now consider introducing in the schools civic education that would teach people the difference between political behaviour, criminal behaviour, deviant behaviour, and all those different types of behaviours?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There is no excuse, whether it's in this House or any other forum, for bad behaviour. I don't intend to try to introduce into the schools rules that say when you become a politician you can act the way politicians act. Good behaviour is good behaviour, and that is a standard that is set in the society. There is no reason to deviate from that. Regardless of who one is, or what one is, or where one is, there is no way of condoning bad behaviour. That's what this whole question is about. Let's face it.

How can we go out now and say to the children 'You must behave yourself in school; you must answer politely, you must obey your teacher; you must be a role model for your class,' and then say to them, 'But when you become a politician you can break all of that?' There has to be one standard for society regardless of who one is. And we are not exempt in this House from good behaviour.

Mr. Speaker, your life would be so much simpler if we followed the rules in the school and tried to obey your rulings, as they obey their teacher; try not to talk when other members are speaking; try to be relevant when there is a debate going on.

My view is that many children look at members in this House as role models. The behaviour here should be the same type of behaviour that is tolerated in the class, which is good behaviour. And I am not getting into what is bad behaviour here or otherwise. I am not saying that, sir. I am just saying that good behaviour should prevail throughout.

I know you do an extremely good job when you persist sir in those high standards, which is really the highest House in the land, it's the seat of power.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 174, standing in the name of the—

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, if I may, sir.

In my opinion, the honourable minister has put every member in this House in the same category—that of not behaving. I would like to make it very clear that this member knows how to behave because I remember what my parents taught me way back.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 174, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 174

No. 174: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning if the Education Council and the Cayman Islands Government recognise certification from the College of Preceptors as acceptable teacher certification for purposes of teaching in the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The College of Preceptors was founded in 1846 by a group of private schoolmasters from Brighton concerned about standards within their profession. It pioneered a system for the formal examination and qualification of secondary school teachers and many teachers have acquired the qualifications of the College: ACP (Associate), LCP (Licentiate) an FCP (Fellow).

The certification is acceptable for purposes of teaching in the Cayman Islands provided overseas candidates meet all other criteria including at least five years of teaching experience, which is a general qualification laid down by personnel regulations.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say if at the secondary level a person having either the Associate, Licentiate or Fellowship would need a degree in addition to that, for example, a degree in the discipline in which he or she was expected to teach?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that we have only had one application from an Associate of the College of Preceptors, and that is acceptable as an assistant teacher. It would appear from other institutions that the hierarchy is Licentiate, Associate, Fellow, in that order.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: This question is somewhat unrelated to the substantive one, but I am going to ask it anyway. In view of the fact that we have been talking about developing some kind of teacher education programme, can the honourable minister say if the Community College might be interested in pursuing the College of Preceptors, perhaps as an initial foundation to Caymanians being able to acquire some kind of teaching qualification?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: In September the Community College will be introducing the Associate in teaching of two years being done here and two with colleges and universities abroad. Whether they have considered the College of Preceptors, I am not sure. I can find out. But I do know that there is liaison and accreditation process going on with other colleges.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 175, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 175

No. 175: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning to state what strategies have been effected within the last three years to improve the communication between the government schools, the various Parent Teacher Associations or Home School Associations, the Education Department and the Ministry.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Over the last three years the adoption of the Strategic Plan for Education has given much impetus to the relationship between government, schools, and their Parent Teacher Associations, or Home School Associations. Parents have sought greater involvement in assisting schools with their various projects, as well as taking a greater interest in the areas of learning such as participation in reading days and other community projects.

This involvement has resulted in better communication between homes and schools. Other strategies that have improved communication are the growth of newsletters, the weekly-computerised reports, reporting evenings and the use of community bulletin boards. This improvement in communication between home and school has also impacted the links between home school, the Education Department, and the Ministry.

The formation of a National Parent Teacher Association/Home School Association will continue to improve these already well established links. The Chief Education Officer met with the steering committee for one year to create guidelines for the National Home School Association. The Education Department staff frequently visits the schools as well as communicates with principals and teachers on a daily basis. The visits have developed a much stronger relationship between schools and the department.

Various staff at the Education Department have also met with PTAs to discuss issues or to respond to questions. The Ministry meets, when necessary, with PTAs, HSAs, the Education Department and, on quarterly visits, meets with all staff.

Fax machines have been placed in all schools and the student information system (Starbase) has been implemented to communicate between schools and the department. Other important means of improving communication include monthly principal meetings, and special meetings to address specific issues such as testing and curriculum revision.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: It has been stated in the past that the weakness of the Parent Teacher Association/Home School Associations, has been the fact that parents whose children are at greatest risk in terms of not keeping up with what they are expected to learn as well as behaviour problems, are likely to be the parents in least attendance at these meetings when they are called.

Is the minister in a position to say what strategies, incentives, or techniques will be used to ensure that the attendance is more representative of this type of parent and guardian? And is this problem still experienced?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The school makes phone calls to parents. There is also a hotline for information. I know that one of the PTAs in the school involved, had a special day when fathers would come out to the school. They also have days when there are reporting sessions. They also have open days at the schools. But it is a problem getting some parents to come out. I would be happy for any suggestions the honourable member may have to deal with this real problem.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I am happy to hear that the minister has changed his mind about any suggestions I am able to give, since I have the Hansard where he said he had no time to accept any suggestions from me, as far as education was concerned.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am glad to hear he is too!

Mr. Roy Bodden: That was a form of bad behaviour!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That's right!

Mr. Roy Bodden: Anyway, I have grown up, and I will continue to grow and mature.

I would like to share with the minister that one of the school districts in St. Louis, Missouri, had effected some strategies to deal with this. I would certainly be glad to share those with the minister if he is so disposed.

I want to ask now about the communication between the ministry and the parents. I saw a statement some time ago by some of the parents at the Savannah school complaining about lack of communication between the ministry and parents in regard to a little demonstration they had at the Government Administration Building. I would ask the minister to state what has been done to ensure that these kinds of misunderstandings are not frequent occurrences in the future.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I have met with PTAs every time they have asked me to. One of the problems I do have is that when members of this House, Ministers and Official Members especially, have to spend three continuous months in here, I cannot have meetings as quickly as I would like to. I would have liked to gone into the schools last year, but by the time the House let out the children were on vacation.

Over Christmas, one PTA asked for a meeting. I did that as soon as I could. I believe it was either right after Christmas or early in the year. But I had to meet with them down here in the Committee Room, and the speaker was on and spurts of behaviour disrupted even the meeting in there.

When we are in here continuously every day, week after week, and month after month, it is a real burden to do what ministers would do in a normal environment where the legislature sits for a week or two at a time. Then one gets out to do one's work. I am behind now with visiting the schools. I guess that will be the next question, and the answer is I am in here answering questions, or doing whatever work is before the House. And the ministers are only people. It has really hurt during the last year and one half, two years, with us getting this work done.

Yes, I had to meet with that PTA in here and I am sorry I couldn't get to meet before. But I am only one person. Hopefully, in the good spirit that has gone on today, these meetings will speed up and get to where they are only, say a month at a time, rather than three months at a time. In fact, this one won't really stop, it will just go into the next meeting give or take four or five days that we have to go abroad on government business.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 176, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Perhaps out of sympathy for the minister, we can consider sitting at night.

No. 176: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning to state what support and advice from other countries has been received by the Education Department in the Planning and Development of the National Curriculum.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Just to say that I am happy to sit at night if this would speed this up. I think most of us are that way. When we sat on Friday night, that honourable member left just after five. Anyhow, I am not going to get into that.

The Education Department has received support and advice from many countries in the planning and development of the National Curriculum. This support and advice has included printed materials as well as direct consultation. Information gathered has included the methods of developing a national curriculum, the provision of curriculum guides, and other resource materials as well as expert advice on test development techniques.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I think I made it plain that I had to go because I had an appointment with one of my constituents. Mr. Speaker, this is an election year; I had to ensure that I got the vote!

Can the honourable minister say if this advice has enabled the speeding up of the development of the National Curriculum seeing that we are some years behind from the time the minister promised to deliver it? And if it has, can he state in what ways?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The answer is yes, we have had assistance from these. But, for example in the United Kingdom, the national curriculum took ten years to develop. We are just about to the end of finishing ours in four years.

To the remark about a vote, I stayed in here and did the country's business on Friday night rather than going out and looking for a vote. It would . . . anyhow, let me not go any further into that.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I guess you can see how easily some people can fall into pettiness, and into my trap.

Can the honourable minister state, in terms of the development of the National Curriculum, if the subjects as they are being developed are being validated or is the validition going to come at the end when the total curriculum is completed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The schools are now doing the piloting of the curriculum. This will mean that there will be testing and that will basically (if that is what the member is referring to) decide on whether that curriculum goes into full use within the schools or not.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 177, standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTION 177

No. 177: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning to give the following breakdown for each government primary school in these Islands: (a) the number of students per class; and (b) the number of teachers per class.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The number of students and teachers are as follows: (Please see appendix)

SUPPLEMENTARY

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if the policy is for classes of 25 and over to have a support assistant, or is it classes over 25?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It is where there are more than 25 in each class. It is not embodied in a formal policy, if that is the question.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am not questioning why the difficulties have arisen at this point, so we don't have to debate that part of it. Bearing in mind that it is obvious come September of this year there will not be another new primary school on stream, and looking at the Red Bay Primary School where there are two Year 6 classes that will be leaving, and there are three Year 5 classes at present, and come September there will have to be three Year 6 classes; appreciating the fact that there will obviously be three new Year 1 classes coming in, Red Bay Primary School will obviously be one classroom short. Can the honourable minister say how that is going to be handled?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Despite as much as I did strive to get that, and this House has as well . . . I would like to make that clear, this House has cooperated fully, has put the money there, we have it available to build the ten classrooms that we should have had on line this coming September. But, as members know, we still can't get Planning approval. And the harsh reality is what the member has stated. It is a fact that we can't get ten classrooms by September. I have asked the department to give us the alternatives on this.

We are lucky that we have just finished the administration block at Red Bay, which has eased up pressure in the schools themselves. Somewhere within the special rooms we have there we will have to accommodate the extra class. That's the only thing that I see we can do at this stage.

But I believe that this House needs to look carefully . . . and I know it is my duty to bring that back at the legislation to try to ensure that matters which are a public necessity, while following the democratic principle, if it reaches a crunch where hundreds of children are going to suffer as a result of not being able to get Planning permission or permission in some other area that it can be looked at on a one for one case so that we can move on with what is reasonable and in the best interest of a majority. Now, how that is done, I don't know. I know I have a dilemma on my hands, and I say again that this legislature has put the money there. They have also rode me, as they are doing now, with questions to ensure that we get this.

Believe me, sir, I have done everything I can to try to get this school on line. I have been personally involved. I basically have a task force made up of quite a few people from the ministry, from public works, and I just don't know . . . we will have to get a plan in place. But I just don't think we are going to get those classrooms then. I am fairly certain we are not.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If the minister examines the situation with the John A. Cumber Primary School, he will find a similar circumstance. If the minister examines the situation even with the George Town Primary School, he will find a similar circumstance.

While the minister answered my initial question the way he did, understanding the situation that obtains, not every one of those schools has an extra room that you can convert. At least I don't think they do. I ask the minister again, and I understand they are talking about formulating a plan, is there anything specific in mind at this point in time? Understanding that it is not easy, September is not far away.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I don't have a comprehensive answer to that question. But I can assure the member that it is uppermost in my mind. I have had a lot of meetings here, as he knows, with the building group and also the department. We will have to go back and come up with a solution to the problem. I mean, I believe there is always a solution. It mightn't be the best, but we will have to find a solution to it and I give the member an undertaking that that will be done.

But he is right, in many of those schools there is not the flexibility. It may well be that in the course of this we may have to see what schools can take additional.

Hindsight is always 20/20. For example, the West Bay . . . if I had in my wildest dreams thought I couldn't get Planning permission for a school—I mean a school. It's not . . . it's a school, do you know what I mean? West Bay has their approval. Maybe I could have deflected to there. It may have been a bit of bussing but at least we would have had some rooms. However, that's hindsight at this stage.

I will have to come up with a plan. I will let members know. They will not have to ask me on that. Once I have a plan, I will meet with members because this is a grave concern to everyone.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say if with the provisions for the new services in 2000 for an additional teacher for the primary school in the district of North Side there will no longer be a necessity to combine classes?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The answer is yes. We will have enough teachers so that they won't be split.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I also notice in the answer to the question that at John A. Cumber there is one class with 25 students, in Savannah there are two classes with 25, and in George Town there are four with 25 students. Perhaps this can only be a thought for the future, and perhaps if and when enough classrooms are available the problem may not persist. But obviously that is not in the immediate future and the problem will persist for a while. While there is no definitive policy as the minister has said regarding the numbers where it is over 25, when you are on the borderline of 25 you have to draw the line somewhere, but you basically have the same problem with 25 as you have with 27.

I would like to ask the minister for a commitment in regard to these growing classes at this level to ensure that the children are not paying the price because of a lack of support staff in these areas.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: All I can say is that I take the professional advice of the department who also takes and listens to the advice of the principals and teachers. Within that, there has been tremendous increase, as the honourable member mentioned 15 new aides and support assistants are coming in with this budget. But it's something that is always under review and we naturally try to get the classes down to as few as possible.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, the final supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You usually say two more, but I accept what you have said.

In regard to Red Bay Primary, and the report in the newspaper not so very long ago regarding the lack of facilities, can the honourable minister state what, if anything, can be done until whatever construction may be underway is completed regarding the lunch facilities specifically at that primary school? It is my understanding that they are working under some circumstances that are not only difficult, but also deplorable, and that it has persisted for quite some time.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The hall will be ready for the new term. It will not be ready for this September.

What I will do is ask the Chief Education Officer to liaise with the principal to see what alternatives there are. I accept that the facility there for lunch is not good. I will ask them to look at what alternatives there may be.

The Speaker: We move on to question 178, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I had two questions put on the Order Paper in as many days, but this one is also somewhat redundant in that Y2K is the acronym for the year 2000 and that transition from 31st December to 1st January. But nonetheless, with your permission Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask this question, as there might still be certain outstanding matters.

QUESTION 178

No. 178: Mr. Linford A. Pierson asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning to state if the Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands (CAA) is Y2K compliant; if Cayman Airways Limited and Island Air are Y2K compliant; and, if the answers are in the affirmative, would the Honourable Minister give an undertaking to advise the United States' Department of Transportation, the Federal Aviation Authority (FAA), IATA, ICAO and/or other relevant international authorities accordingly, as soon as possible, if this has not yet been done. If the answer is in the negative, when will this be done?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: (a) A comprehensive and thorough programme to identify and correct potential Y2K problems has been undertaken and the CAA is satisfied that the systems will not be affected by the Y2K millennium bug. (b) Cayman Airways Ltd and Island Air have reported to the CAA that Y2K preparations are complete. (c) All relevant authorities have been advised.

I may just say, sir, that I realise the member's keen interest. This was asked last year and this answer is in relation to that. But subsequently, it has proved that all of them are compliant.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

SECOND READINGS

THE NATIONAL DRUG COUNCIL (AMENDMENT)
(FUND RAISING POWERS) BILL, 2000

The Clerk: The National Drug Council (Amendment) (Fund Raising Powers) Bill, 2000.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: I brought this amendment which will allow the National Drug Council to be able to receive grants, technical assistant funds or other gifts in kind made or given, or bequeathed to the Council.

Some time last year, there were concerns about the power of . . . it was suggested that we do it through Executive Council. But in discussions with many people, we felt it was better to enshrine it into the law. As we know, government gives an annual subsidy of a little bit over $400,000 to the National Drug Council for its implementation of the National Strategic Plan. This will not at all times be sufficient to fund it. So, what we wanted to do was give them the power to solicit. I would ask the honourable House to give support to this amending legislation.

In regard to the borrowing, it would have to have the authority of Executive Council before it does any borrowing.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The National Drug Council (Amendment) (Fund Raising Powers) Bill, 2000, be given a second reading. Does any member wish to speak? (pause) The floor is open for debate. (pause) The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: While the Bill is mostly self-explanatory, and even when we try to put together how section 3(2) will read with the proposed amendment, I think that some examples could be given as to when and why the Drug Council, after receiving subsidy, would wish to engage in any borrowing. While I understand it would have to seek authority from Executive Council, I think some of us wish to have a very clear understanding as to what this borrowing might entail and for what purposes.

I don't think anyone is suggesting that it shouldn't happen. But, because laws are laws, and they are as concise as possible with the Queen's English, many times some of us on the backbench are not quite clear. So, perhaps if we can get some explanation of that before the Bill is put to the vote, we might be more comfortable in dealing the vote one way or the other.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I have a similar concern. Perhaps when the minister sums up he will be able to say. I realise that a lot of companies or organisations have included in their constitutions the right to borrow. But in this particular case, I would assume that the right to borrow would be not an independent liability. So, would the minister could say whether or not government would ultimately be responsible as in the case with government's statutory organisations, like the Water Authority and the Port Authority, Aviation Authority, and so forth?

I am conscious of the fact that an organisation such as the Drug Council in exercising its independence should have the right to do the borrowing and to solicit support. But I am not that familiar with the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons to know to what extent they are able to dispose of property and what kind of control they have over property.

I assume this Bill is to create an independent entity. If this Bill is to recognise their right to borrow, the question I would like to ask the minister is whether or not government would have liability for it. If so, my position on it would be formed based upon that.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I too have concern, particularly on the borrowing of money. When I read part 3 of Finance of the National Drug Council Law, it says: "16. The funds of the Council shall consist of (a) grants from the Government . . . ; (b) any money accruing to the Council . . . ; (c) any money lawfully borrowed by the Council . . ."

I really don't understand, if that provision really already exists in section 16 of the Law, unless I am not interpreting it correctly, that we need to move this amendment to allow it to borrow money once again.

I totally agree with the contribution by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. It would be interesting if, when the honourable minister replies, just for the benefit of the House, because we are now studying the White Paper, Progress in Partnership. If I am not mistaken there is reference in that White Paper to the borrowing of funds for projects or departments, that it should be confined to those who can repay those monies. So, if he can explain those two points for me, I would be most appreciative.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony Eden: I would like to thank those who have made contributions, and asked some questions.

The setting up of the National Drug Council was under the 1997 Law. The feeling was that we wanted something like this to have an arms-length reach from government without any political interference. Thank goodness that up to this stage I have been able to do this under sometimes difficult circumstances. That is the reasoning, as an independent entity.

In regard to the funding, I think we all know of the massive undertaking in dealing with drugs in this country. I think that if we put one-third of the national budget into drugs it would be insufficient to put in programmes that need to deal with rehabilitation. I personally feel that demand reduction is the way to go, which is through education at its earliest levels.

Two years ago, we did a survey in the schools. We plan to redo that this year. We plan to do a community needs assessment survey. We need more programmes in regard to education, working along with the Lions Club and their Quest Programme. I am most grateful for the time and efforts they have given in working with this. I also appreciate the Minister of Education through his Department and the schools assisting us with this.

When the First Elected Member for West Bay was there, he developed the community development programmes. We need to join them in getting the young people involved. All of this takes money. The $400,000 that we put there will go a long way. I don't really anticipate that as we go forward with implementation of the Drug National Strategic Plan we know it cannot all be done at one time. But because of the seriousness of drugs and crime in this island, we must now put that emphasis there.

In regard to government's liability if the National Drug Council should borrow, yes it would have to come to Executive Council. I would perceive that there would be a liability. But at this time, I don't anticipate any massive borrowings. We have been able to get to this stage without doing that. I think the main emphasis is on allowing the community and private sector to assist us in this situation of dealing with such a massive undertaking.

There has been some funding coming forward, but this really attempts to protect the National Drug Council in its going forward. I thank all members for the support they have given me on this.

I think 16(c) would be hinged on 19, where it says, "The Council shall not borrow without the prior written consent of the Governor in Council." I mentioned earlier in the debate that we are trying to put many programmes in place for the National Drug Council. There are about four new staff members who were not there prior to this, and to bring everything together, working with the NGOs, CASA and other agencies that deal with the drug problem, we are trying to coordinate and bring everything together in this programme.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The National Drug Council (Amendment) (Fund Raising Powers) Bill, 2000 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

THE LOANS (CAPITAL PROJECTS 2000) BILL, 1999 Deferred

The Deputy Clerk: The Loans (Capital Projects 2000) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Before I do the second reading of the Loans (Capital Projects 2000) Bill 1999, I sought your indulgence to defer the second reading of the Stamp Duty (Amendment) (Insurance Policies) Bill, 1999, and you kindly allowed it.

The matters that had to be examined have now been dealt with, and I am wondering if you would allow for the second reading to take place under the relevant Standing Order before I do the second reading of the Loans (Capital Projects 2000) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: I have no objection if that is the wish of the House. I was going to put that after the Loans (Capital Projects 2000) Bill, 1999, but if that is the wish of the House, we shall proceed accordingly.

THE STAMP DUTY (AMENDMENT) (INSURANCE POLICIES) BILL, 1999

The Deputy Clerk: The Stamp Duty (Amendment) (Insurance Policies) Bill, 1999

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I thank you and honourable members for allowing that change to take place.

I beg to move the second reading of a Bill entitled, The Stamp Duty (Amendment) (Insurance Policies) Bill, 1999. Before I get into the Bill, I should mention that there are two amendments that will be made during the committee stage. I think it would be useful to point these out to honourable members at this point because the amendments will be factored into my comments on the Bill.

The Speaker: I may add that I have waived the two days' notice.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you. While the amendments are being circulated, I will just point out what they are. Clause 2(b) of the Bill where it makes reference to .05%, it will read ".001% up to a maximum of $200." And clause 3, $100 will be substituted for $200 where it appears.

Against the backdrop of these amendments, what is very significant is that persons now buying insurance policies there will be a cap of $200 for policies in excess of $200,000. For example, a life policy of $50,000 will attract stamp duty of $50; $100,000 will be $100; $200,000 will be $200. For those who wish to buy policies for $1 million, the cap will be $200. For those who are affluent enough to afford a $10 million policy, the stamp duty will be $200.

What this is doing is regularising the arrangements in terms of the stamp duty payable under the various categories of life insurance or products issued within the Cayman Islands.

The Bill also makes reference or provision for policies issued upon the life of a person to ensure for occurrence of death other than by natural causes as we can see in clause 2 of the Bill. There will be a standard charge of $5 per policy. For policies that will be issued under the captive insurance industry, I would seek your indulgence Mr. Speaker, because we have quite a number of captive insurance companies being formed in the Cayman Islands. I think it would be useful for members to get the information that was passed to me some time ago by the then head of insurance supervision, Mr. Bill McCullough, who set up the background as to why there is a proposal for a stamp duty charge of $100, and why this will be advantageous to the Cayman Islands.

I will read the memorandum. It reads: "To: The Financial Secretary; From: The Head of Insurance Supervision Department: 26 August 1997. The stamp duty proposed revision.

"The Monetary Authority has an interest in the provision of the Stamp Duty Law inasmuch as it applies to insurance policies, and as there are some anomalies as shown hereunder we believe that some consideration should be given to revision.

"In addition the changes and innovations that have taken place in our offshore business market have overtaken the simple reference to life insurance at the time the Stamp Duty Law was originally enacted and now place Cayman at a potentially serious competitive disadvantage compared with other jurisdictions in attracting special offshore life and annuity companies.

"The principle anomalies appear to be:

1. Policies of insurance for accidental death or personal accident seems to be exempt from Stamp Duty. [This is where there is a proposal that this type of insurance policy attract a charge of $5 per policy.]
2. "Although certain instruments are required to be stamped, there appears to be no direction as to who is required to apply the stamp or from whom any discrepancy is recoverable." Whether it is the insurance company or the policyholder. This is what I am interpreting this to mean in terms of who should be responsible for payment of the stamp duty.
3. "The law states that in respect of immovable property outside the Cayman Islands there is an exemption from duty; there is, however, no exemption for policies of insurance issued on life resident outside of the Cayman Islands.

4. "Deferred variable annual annuities are not specifically referred to in the Law.

"It is our opinion [that is, the Insurance Department] that if we, in Cayman, are to be competitive with our potential domiciles, then a cap should be placed on the amount of duty payable on variable annuity and variable life assurance contracts issued for overseas residents." These are those insurance policies that are issued under the captive insurance arrangement.

"Previous discussions on this subject have addressed the situation relating to life insurance companies operating in what might be termed "the traditional market" in particular your decision on . . ." and he names a particular insurance company, and I would have to look back to see what the specific decision was but he used that as an example.

"However, I am referring in this instance to captive insurance companies that have been set up specifically to provide Deferred Variable Annuities, Deferred Variable Life Assurance Policies are very often a combination of both. These policies should probably be more properly viewed as investment vehicles and are primarily utilised in tax planning by high net worth overseas residents.

"We as a domicile are in competition [and he names two countries in the Caribbean] for this type of business, and would mention that in one of these two countries life insurance policies attract a stamp duty of US$25 per policy except that in respect of those policies issued to the non-residents of that country the stamp duty is nil.

"I understand that the Financial Secretary has discretion to allow the removal or reduction of stamp duty under the 1990 amendment to the Stamp Duty Law, such discretion being introduced to improve the attractiveness of Cayman as an offshore domicile.

"Taken in isolation there would appear to be a case for allowing the removal of, or the reduction in duty, as there is no similar requirement of duty for such proportions for property/casualty insurance.

"We are not proposing removal but a cap of, say, $100 [this is where the $100 comes in] per policy specifically relative to the captive insurance companies established for the purpose of writing Deferred Variable Annuities, Deferred Variable Life Assurance Policies, and associated or related products on lives of overseas residents."

So, for those policies issued by insurance companies that are formed in the Cayman Islands as captive insurance companies, there will be a flat stamp duty rate of $100 per policy. Although it has been mentioned that in two of our competitive jurisdictions such policies would attract nil stamp duty, it was felt that the $100 here would still make the Cayman Islands attractive.

For local life insurance policies that are issued, there will be a minimum charge of $25 per policy rising to a maximum of $200. This should be quite acceptable within our local industry because it will then be specific in terms of the rate of stamp duty applicable to policies.

Finally, for those life insurance policies that are specifically taken out for incidents other than death by natural occurrence, there will be a standard charge of $5 per policy.

I submit this Bill for consideration by honourable members.

The Speaker: The question is that the Stamp Duty (Amendment) (Insurance Policies) Bill, 1999, be given a second reading. The motion is open for debate.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: What I have to say in regard to the Stamp Duty (Amendment) (Insurance Policies) Bill, 1999 is related to trying to create some framework within which to understand government's policy of trying to raise revenue by attaching a duty to consumer services or goods. Government is usually very considerate when it comes to how it will affect the so-called financial industry. But it seems to bring no input as to how it would affect local consumers.

This can be attributed to the one-sided perspective that we have where government has access to very qualified very competent professionals looking after their interest, whereas the consumer in the majority represented by working people has no institution to be able to provide government with his perspective. Therefore, we find always that there is no consideration, if any, from an empirical perspective in any case, of the consumer.

Now, if we were working with the idea that insurance companies would be willing to accept a reduction in profit in order to accommodate this government's stamp duty, then we would have no concern. But if we are to work with the knowledge that every time government puts on a duty or surcharge that is passed on to the consumer, and the consumer in the majority of cases is the working person in this country who has to experience very high prices, we know this will be just one additional cost. Of course, some persons might not see it as being significant, but when it all adds up together in all the different areas this comes we find it is in fact significant.

I am not going to say that I have any alternative to give to government in regard what to do if not this, but I am in the position to suggest to government that the consumer the person trying to get life insurance, the person trying to get other kinds of insurance will have to pay additional monies out of their pockets, whether it's $5 or five cents, it's an additional burden. What are they getting in return for this additional payment to government? Can government concretely say what it is going to provide the consumer with? Or is this just a form of taxation?

If the purpose is taxation, I believe that government is continuing on the path of taxing the very poor in order to subsidise the very rich. It's a destructive course that cannot lead to any good. Therefore, when the Financial Secretary reads a letter from people in the industry talking about how it will impact the insurance industry in the Cayman Islands, and make the Cayman Islands less competitive as a place for captive insurance companies, what he is saying is that the concern is a business concern. He could in his summation give us an idea of how this business concern would have such a trickle down effect at this particular moment in the Cayman Islands that the consumer would be compensated by this addition tax.

I would not offer any alternative, but I hope that the critique I made can be useful to the Financial Secretary in seeing where I am coming from, mainly that we need to be more careful about even small additional burdens that we place on the consumers in the Cayman Islands.

Maybe the honourable Third Official Member can also say how much revenue government calculates it will raise as a result of this additional tax.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate, does any other member wish to speak? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: My contribution won't be very long, but I would also like to express the basic concern just expressed by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. I have a bit of difficulty, and perhaps it can be overcome without creating any difficulty with the passage of the Bill, but if we look at our competition overseas, and where we say a policy of life insurance is certified as being issued by an exempted company that only undertakes business of a class which requires a company to hold an unrestricted class B insurance license granted under the Insurance Law (1995 Revision) and issued by a company the maximum duty payable on that policy shall be $200, that amendment put forward will put it to $100, if I am correct.

Perhaps I am being petty. If we are looking at competition overseas, and we are going to say that the maximum anybody will pay if a policy is issued through an exempted company, because of our competition overseas, is $100, then how can we have a situation where our local people are paying more?

I don't have a huge beef with that, but I have a problem I must admit. I know that we are caught on the one hand talking about raising revenue. But the point that the Fourth Elected Member for George Town made is a very valid point. It is not today that the point has been made. I believe that every opportunity to make the point should be taken. It makes no sense whatsoever, regardless of how one puts the whole theory together. To me it makes no sense to look for areas of revenue for government to provide the services, roads and all of that, if everything we do to raise revenue . . . the people who are paying the initial fee have the ability to immediately pass that increased expenditure on to the consumer, you may as well tax the consumer directly. It makes no sense.

I keep talking about the disparity of the wealth distribution in this country. People might not like to talk about it, but we have to talk about it. It is a real serious issue, and it is part and parcel of the root of our social problems. If you have money, you don't want to do anything wrong; and if you don't have it, sometimes you do things wrong to get it. It's simple!

This might seem like an extended argument, when all we are talking about is insurance, but there is hardly anything anymore that doesn't relate to something else. This may not bring about any solution, but it is not that my intention for people to interpret my line of argument to say that we should have direct taxation in the country. I am not suggesting that. And I understand the benefits of not having that when we look at the global picture.

But if the benefits that are derived from our tax regime do not accrue to the mass of the population, then what good is it? I don't see it making much sense. I am saying that we have to devise the ways and means to accommodate both. When the population was a lot smaller, it was not a big problem. Nobody thought of it then. But while we would not want to stray and be irrelevant in the line of debate, I think it is important to make the point. And I believe that whatever methods of raising revenue come forward in the future, it must require that revenue to be raised without the additional cost being directly to the consumer.

It is a difficult situation, and I respect the difficulty. But what continues to happen . . . Mr. Speaker, you know, years ago I would have been afraid to say this because they would have called me a socialist. But we have to be real about the situation now. If there is a family with four cars, let's be brutally frank about the situation. Chances are the family that can afford four cars has an earning power that is above average. Chances are they also have that earning power from some type of business. Now, you have another family that has no car. But then government needs revenue so government is going to tax certain areas that might affect the earning power of that family with four cars.

Once that family with four cars finds there is an additional cost to have four cars, they are going to pass on that additional cost. It is not a question of right and wrong, that's the way business works. If you charge CUC more duty on their diesel, CUC is going to charge the people who use electricity.

While the point may seem to be straying, it is something that I believe is relevant and it is something we must get a grip on. The question is not about a family of that nature being wrong by passing it on to the consumer. That's the nature of life. I am part of the whole cycle. Everyone in here is part of the whole cycle in one form or fashion. But we have to come to grips with the situation.

If you are going to extract a fee of $25 for the government by way of a specific action on the part of government by way of duty or tax, and by the time it multiplies itself and the consumer is paying $125 it makes no sense. Government only gets $25 and it costs the consumer $125 more to live. That makes no sense whatsoever. That's not the fancy way to put it, but I know that what I am saying is right.

Perhaps that is enough said, because this Bill is actually about stamp duty. But whatever the government is going to be thinking about when it comes to increased revenue, the Third Elected Member for George Town has continuously chimed about increasing the revenue base. I am certain that while his thoughts are right on line as far as I am concerned about increasing the revenue base; there is also the concern I just raised. You cannot address one and not the other because you are only magnifying the problem.

I hope that the point I tried to make is received in the right manner, and I also hope that the people who are in charge of policy in this point in time and who are responsible for deciding on any areas to raise revenue will bear that in mind whenever decisions are being made.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Like my two Honourable colleagues that spoke previously, my comments will be rather brief.

I could not let this opportunity pass without voicing my views on this amendment and what it proposes to do. Mr. Speaker, unfortunately we did not get the details from the honourable mover as to how much income is expected to be produced through this amendment. It is unfortunate that we have to be going at life insurance policies, an area where our people depend on some protection. As was said by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town and the First Elected Member for George Town, my concern also is that it is going to have the effect of increasing the cost of living. This increase is going to be filtered down to those who can least afford these costs.

As was alluded to by the First Elected Member for George Town, I have on a number of occasions expressed my concern about the widening base of our consumption tax system and the negative effect it is having not only on the economy but also on our people. I have heard a number of people saying that we are pricing ourselves out of the market. But what is not recognised is that the revenue base that we have now that is creating this increased cost of living is insufficient to carry an economy as sophisticated as the Cayman Islands.

I think it was the Fourth Elected Member for George Town who mentioned in a previous contribution during Finance Committee that we are trying to run a First World country on a Third World revenue base, or budget. Mr. Speaker, I am not here suggesting that we should look at a direct form of taxation, but I am saying that the time has come when we must stop increasing little bits and pieces on gasoline and diesel duty, alcohol beverages, tobacco products, motor vehicle charges, insurance fees and so on and so forth. These have existed for the past 30 years and it is time now that we should be looking at a more sophisticated system that can carry our economy.

I was speaking to an investor a few days ago and he was complaining about the high cost of living and I had to remind him that the high cost of living is really caused because the government is trying to provide the necessary and appropriate infrastructure from an inadequate revenue base from consumption taxes. The investor is coming in here asking for the very best communication system, he is asking for the very best road system, water supply and everything that you will find in a First World country, like where he is coming from. But, Mr. Speaker, he is not recognising that the revenue to generate that type of infrastructure is being taken from the backs of the poor people in this country. When we add it to import duties, when we add it onto their insurance policies, licensing their cars and other fees, we are indirectly placing it on the backs of the people in this country.

Mr. Speaker, when the merchant is charged high duties at the port, he has got to pass it on to the consumer, the person that it is going to hurt most. Mr. Speaker, this cannot continue. It does not matter which government sits on that side of the House, they are going to have the same problem and it needs to be a situation where both sides of the House come together and decide on how best we can deal with this problem.

It is ridiculous when in the Cayman Islands I understand that at some places now you are paying $10 for a beer. I don't drink it, but I know a lot of the tourists do and our economy is 50% tourism—we are pricing ourselves out. We cannot stand still, we have to continue to move. And in order to do that, Mr. Speaker, we must keep up with developments but there must be an adequate revenue base to cope with that development. Consumption taxes are not the answer and increasing a little bit here and there on things like life insurance policies is not the answer, Mr. Speaker.

I would again say (even though I have said it a number of times in this House) that it is high time that the government gets together with the private sector and sit down and look at this problem. It is not just a government problem; it is a country problem that must be looked at by the private sector as well as the government.

Mr. Speaker, I am not throwing any blame here because, as I said earlier, it does not matter who is sitting on the government side of this House, they have to deal with the same revenue base. Of course, we (as the opposition) are very critical of some of the things we saw in the budget but when I look at that (and I am not bringing up that subject again, Mr. Speaker, it is a reference to it), and I look at the demands that are made, I have to wonder where is the money coming from and how else could it have been handled.

Mr. Speaker, the reason also why I supported the Appropriation Bill is that I felt it was my responsibility to ensure that education and other services in this country proceeded uninterrupted. Not voting for it in my opinion would not have been the right way to go and that is why I voted for it. Not that I am happy with the system. I have expressed in this House on a number of occasions that I am not happy with the revenue system in this country and something has to be done. It is high time that we stop.

Each year the Finance Department is worried about where the money is coming from. One week before the last budget there was $100 million over the budget and I would wager a bet that a large proportion of that $100 million that had to be chopped was services that were needed for this country.

Mr. Speaker, it is time that we stop pointing fingers. It is time that we sit down and have a serious look at our revenue base. It is time that we stop adding little bits and pieces here and there. It is time that we look at the high cost of living in this country because we are gradually pricing ourselves out of the market. We are getting a lot of competition, Mr. Speaker. We just look to the north of us and we see the interest in places like Cuba, and we see other islands in the Caribbean getting a lot of attention. Many of us sometimes fool ourselves that the Cayman Islands is the only place that tourists can come, but that is a big mistake.

Mr. Speaker, I have broadened this to include what I see as the major problem. The major problem is not amending the Stamp Duty Law, that is just one of the problems that we have facing us. The major problem right now is getting sufficient revenue to run this sophisticated centre—the fifth largest financial centre in the world operating as a First World country, but still operating on a Third World revenue base.

Mr. Speaker, I trust that these few words will be heard. If there is anything I can do as a Member of this Legislative Assembly to sit with the members of government and try to deal with this problem, I will be more than happy to do it. I am not one that gets up in the House and criticises for the sake of criticising. I am willing to do whatever I can to help. I think that I have demonstrated this by my co-operation in assisting the government in anyway that I can, even though I know that on occasion my motives have been misconstrued.

I have even heard that people out there are deciding for me already who I am running with—I have heard that, Mr. Speaker. But I think that the important thing is that we must work as a government and we must work together with the government in the interest of the country. And when we work in the interest of the country, we are working in the direct interest of our people. It is the people that put us in this House, and we have a responsibility to represent them to the best of our ability.

If it means that I have to get on the plane and go to England or Washington with the government to discuss things to do with OECD or any other matter to do with this country, Mr. Speaker, that is my duty. I am sure that people of this country understand it regardless of who out there wants to play politics with it. The people of the country understand it and when the time comes, I will remind them in the proper forum.

Mr. Speaker, as I said, I am concerned as a matter of policy about the way we are moving towards even broadening an already wide consumption base revenue.

Mr. Speaker, I am very concerned about this. I make one promise: if I am ever given the opportunity to be on that other side of the House I will agitate and agitate until this thing is changed because it is going to destroy these beautiful islands. We cannot continue the way we are going. We cannot continue doing it, Mr. Speaker.

I hope that with these few words the honourable mover will see it in his heart to heed some of the things that I have said and that very soon we will see the Think Tank in motion and that some ideas will be coming to this House that will indeed be beneficial not only to the country but the people that lives here. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I too was concerned when the Bill was given to us. On looking at the law when it was found out the kind of expenditure or payments people would have had to pay on their insurance policy, I was glad that the Financial Secretary has changed it. However, what we are doing now is increasing the cost of insurance. If the insurance company pays, the client is going to pay more.

When you borrow $100,000 or $125,000 to buy a house, for a $100,000 mortgage you would have to pay $100 on your insurance policy, stamp duty. It is a one time payment, but it is a payment nevertheless, an increase. I have always said that we continue to hit hardest those that can least afford it. And I am glad that I am hearing in this House members talk about the have's and have-not's, because I remember in the 1980s when I was raising that in the House I was called a Communist, a Socialist. I will never forget it.

So, I am indeed glad that others much more eloquent than I can talk about it in the way they are doing to enlighten the public. That is what has been perpetrated in this country for far too long—a widening of the have's from the have-not's. We do it in every shape and form in this country. If you take this Bill from that point of view, you can't support it.

We have been hearing for many, many years that the increases government puts on to various fees have gotten out of line. And various governments have said they were going to try to do something about it, 'We are going to create an economic council.' And we moved a motion (I believe I moved it, and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town seconded it between 1988 and 1992). And again it was promised in 1992 by the present administration, and nothing has happened. They continue to put on the same fees here and there. Even if they are clearing up anomalies in the Bills, it is still an increase on those least able to pay.

They say they are clearing up anomalies. But perhaps it's an effort to balance a budget that is so lopsided, or out of whack, whichever you want to term it. Perhaps they need the extra money from this transfer or stamp duty throughout the country.

We keep asking what are we going to do to get revenue. We don't have oil. The tourism base is not producing as much to government at the end of the day as it should; the financial sector is producing but we can't put up much more on fees. What then are we going to do? Who is going to say that you must have some sort of tax on property? Who is going to say that it will be on income? Who is going to say it's going to be debt dues or whatever? Who is going to say that? Nobody!

But everybody talks about the need to get more revenue and of course, the demands are there for you, Mr. Speaker as a representative, and me, and everybody here. The demands are made for more and more.

Perhaps it's high time that we looked at the amount of money going out of the country. We have various money-gram . . . I am not using any company name, I am trying to find the right language . . . those agencies who send money out of the country. Money transfers. I don't know if they are paying anything to government. But certainly there is a tremendous amount of money going out of this country via that avenue.

Then you have the amount of money that the Cayman Islands is losing on the illegal lottery. Why has government not looked at that and done something about it? Those are various issues that people need to look at.

I am not a finance person in any way. I am just a backyard sociologist.

[Members' laughter]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I thought that would awaken the sleeping lions!

[Members' laughter]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: We talk about the amount of Euro dollars, and the amount of money that goes through this country, $350 million or whatever.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Billion!

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Billions of dollars in this little Cayman Islands! And here we are struggling for peanuts to pay our way, to educate our children, to give proper health care.

When you stop and think of a small country like Singapore, and they have various taxes and I am not saying that that's what we should do, but when we look at how well organised they are and we are bigger than they are—they have many more people of course. We need to be up and above this kind of management, the systems of yesterday. I can look at the problem and be the first to admit that I don't know very much about fixing it, but I do know that something needs to be done.

If we had a fraction of a cent that passes through this country, this Billion dollars that passes through here each year, we wouldn't have to worry about whether or not we are going to get proper roads. We wouldn't have to worry about where we are going to get proper educational facilities, or the George Town Hospital. It is time that one and all stood up and said that and looked at it. It is time that Executive Council or whatever committee they make up sit down and look in that direction because we are not an oil producing country. We are not a manufacturing country, we are not an agricultural based country, so where then is the money coming from? It is going to come from the financial sector and they must—they must—they have to do it.

For that reason I cannot support whether it is $60 or $100 per year because they have to mean business now. Whether it's an election year and everybody wants to say I am electioneering, let them say that. Mr. Speaker, that's what I am put here to do, and if I didn't do it then they would have something else to talk about. But it is time they looked at that. And those who say they are financiers, and those who say they are the academics, and those who say they have the management strengths and the skills, those are the people who must sit down and see where we can get money from via the financial sector, the billions of dollars that pass through this country every year. Take a fraction of a cent from that and we would have much more than a $350 million budget. That's what we need to do.

Until they start to do that, and until any administration or any politician . . . we are not going to be able to do it.

I know what has happened to the government. The Third Elected Member for George Town has sat on Executive Council. I have sat on Executive Council. We know what they go through when they try to balance the budget, when you are trying to meet the needs of your people. And we know what it is when they play politics too! We know that.

Sit down, be sensible, and say we are going to do something about it. Let's get the money from where the money is. Let's not take the money from where it does not exist. The money does not exist with the people you are trying to raise garbage fees on. It does not exist with the people who are trying to get a home and cannot get the mortgage.

That's enough of my hollering, Mr. Speaker. But I mean that as a firm recommendation. Get the money from where the money is! Get it from the financial sector. Get a fraction of a cent out of the money that goes out of this country or that passes through the country. Thank you.

The Speaker: Do honourable members want to take a break at this time? We shall suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.50 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.21 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Thank you.

There has been an obvious misunderstanding of what this amendment proposes to do. We listened to several impassioned speeches about putting taxes on the people. I want to first explain and show where that is totally wrong and to really say that if the Opposition is expecting to run this country one day, they have to do a lot better than this.

Mr. Speaker, while I haven't had a lot of time on this, I got the amendments. The section in the Schedule at present states on a policy of life insurance where the assured does not exceed $1000 and where the sum assured exceeds $1000, 0.05 percent upon the principle calculated without bonus. We are really talking about this and as I understand it, the members in here were really talking about the 0.05 percent upon the policy.

At present, Mr. Speaker, the amendment before the House repeats what is presently in the Law other than where there is an insurance policy under $1000 and that wasn't an issue because there would not be a lot of them issued under that. But it is really dealing with where the policy exceeds $1000.

At present, Mr. Speaker, the policy of say $200,000 would produce under the present Law, stamp duty of $1000. A policy that is for $1 million, the stamp duty would be $5,000 and that is the law as it now stands.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment that the Honourable Financial Secretary is making reduces this to 0.01 percent, which is four times less than it now is. On top of that, it reduces the amount that has to be paid on any policy that goes over (if my calculations are right) $40,000 to $200. So, what the Law is in effect doing is totally different from what the Opposition says it is doing.

We are taking the stamp duty off and relieving the public to encourage them to take out life insurance and on top of that the maximum under the amendment—

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, sir.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order, please.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the Minister has just said that what the Law (and I am presuming that he is talking about the Bill that is in front of us with the amendment) is proposing is the opposite of what the Opposition is saying.

I have spoken already on that Bill, sir, and I have suggested at no time during what I said that what the proposed Bill is doing is not making it less than what the Law calls for now. The Minister has just said . . . and we are saying the opposite of that and that is not true. That is misleading.

The Speaker: Are we talking about the Bill or the Law?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the Minister used the word "Law" and we know what the Law says now. When he talks about the Law that is changing, it cannot be "Law" because it is a Bill now. I presume that he means the Bill, but I am saying that he has said that it is doing the opposite of what the Opposition has said that it is doing, and the Opposition, whether he calls them singly or together is not saying that, sir. None of us have said that and the statement is misleading.

Any arguments that were put forward were extending the argument outside of the realm of stamp duty for life insurance policies and his statement is misleading, sir.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, I take the point the First Elected Member for George Town has said. He had an argument on one point and other members had on others. I do not think that you can take it under a blanket so I will ask you to withdraw that please.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Mr. Speaker, I bend to your ruling and I withdraw what I said. And I would not make it apply to the First Elected Member for George Town, but let me understand clearly . . . I understood the other members to be saying that we were putting a tax on the people and we shouldn't be doing that. We should be looking at other ways to put it on.

I mean, was this your understanding of what the First Elected Member for West Bay for example, said? I am really saying that the government should not be taxing the poor persons.

The Speaker: I understand clearly what the Honourable Minister of Education is saying. There have been different arguments put forth, but what is being said is that there is a percentage being put on insurance policies and I think it was from that angle that they took their argument. That's the way I understood it.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Education is correct from his line of argument that from 1.05 percent to 0.001% would have been a reduction, but our line of argument was really that there should really no duty at all on insurance. The whole thing needs to be looked at, that was the line of argument from this side of the House but 0.001 percent I think it was, was changing it. But the whole question was that there should be no duty on insurance because it was going to pass on to the poor people that could least afford it.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: Honourable members, we have reached the hour of 4.30 p.m. and if it satisfies the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning who is speaking, I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Yes sir, and I would ask that I have a transcript of what the members said to ensure that what I am saying is accurate, sir.

The Speaker: That will be prepared.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday morning at 10.00 a.m.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 a.m. on Monday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until 10.00 a.m. Monday.

AT 4.32 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, 7 FEBRUARY 2000.

EDITED

[Prayers read by the Honourable Second Official Member]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning; the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works; the Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation; the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources; the Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture. They are attending a very important meeting and they will be arriving as soon as the meeting has concluded.

Moving on to item number 3 on today's Order Paper, [Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers], Question No. 179 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 179

No. 179: Mr. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development what is government's policy on making official travel arrangements?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: All official travel must be approved and an "official travel advance" is normally obtained.

Cayman Airways Ltd (CAL) should be used when making travel arrangements, regardless of the airline. The exception to this policy is on "long-haul" travel where the price quoted by CAL seems unreasonably high. In these cases a quote is also obtained from a local travel agency and, if it is considerably lower, then the Head of Department may write to the Financial Secretary requesting an exemption from using CAL on the particular trip.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable First Official Member state if any type of (for lack of a better word) study has been done with regard to making any comparison on an overall basis with the cost of government doing business in this manner compared with doing it in another manner? And if type of study has been done, what is the relationship between the two costs?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I am aware of a study being done sometime ago, but I cannot state at this time how precise that study would have been. But I know, for example, where arrangements allow for direct costs to be defrayed, such as costs of hotels and other incidental charges necessary when travelling, that a set per day be granted. At this point in time, I would have to go back and to do some research to respond very accurately to the Honourable First Elected Member for George Town.

I am aware of that, but up to this point in time, this is the practice we have observed. It was generally felt that it would have probably been more efficient to have a direct per day, in that this sum would then cover necessary travelling arrangements and it would avoid having to account for the costs upon a person's return to the island such as having to provide receipts and other details that are currently provided to the Treasury Department to justify the expenditure which has been incurred.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Minister say if there have been any incidents of official travel reported where advances were collected but the person actually had not been travelling?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any such incident.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am going to ask a question but just to inform the Honourable Third Official Member if I even had that information I would not be allowed to pass it on for fear of the government calling it a 'leak'.

My next supplementary is, Can the Honourable Third Official Member say with regard to official travel advances, whether at this point in time the number of unsettled accounts have been brought down to a most acceptable level, as we all know there were some problems in the past getting these matters accounted for?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: There has been a significant reduction in the travel advances that are outstanding but in order to provide the precise details I would have to do so in writing I do not have that information with me at this point in time.

I should also mention, Mr. Speaker, that a variation to the travel advances, and I can talk about this from personal experience and it is quite likely that other senior officers in government have travelled and would have experienced the incident(s) that I am about to relate. For example, when I was invited by the United Nations to attend two of their offshore plenaries held in Vienna, upon arrival the United Nations would normally give a stipend to cover costs. But what I did, in order to remain consistent with the practice in government, whenever such amounts were given to me it was brought back and deposited with the Treasury Department.

This has happened to me on two occasions and, I think it may have happened on another occasion when I visited Tokyo with the CFATF. I would imagine other persons have done that, but what I normally do is to deposit such money through the Budget Unit with the Treasury Department and obtain a receipt for the record so that verification can take place.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, would the Honourable Minister say if the Public Accounts recommendation of some two years ago that the government issue corporate credit cards to senior management of the government has been put in place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, it has only been done in two areas but not across the board. For the benefit of the Elected Member for North Side, I know that this was brought up some time ago, but there was a question in terms of the accountability aspect of it. It was felt that the procedures needed to be clearly set out, and there were certain views that there would be certain disadvantages in terms of going that route.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to Question 180 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 180

No. 180: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development to give a breakdown of any amounts owed by the government which are not included in current accounts payable and government's public debt.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: A breakdown of the amounts owed by the government which are not included in the current accounts payable and government's public debt are as follows:

A purchase agreement was entered into on 8 April 1998 for the acquisition of the Racquet Club, block parcel 14CJ. The face value of the agreement was $1,111,500. There is an interest rate of 5 percent per annum being charged on the unpaid balance. The term over which the sum will have to be paid in full is three years and the balance currently outstanding is $796,575.

The second amount relates to the acquisition of Cayman Foods Building, block parcel 23C. The agreement to purchase that property was entered into on the 8 July 1998. The sum set out in the agreement was $1 million. The interest on the unpaid balance is at 10 percent per annum. The payment period is three years and the balance outstanding is $636,690.

Mr. Speaker, the block and parcel reference numbers have been given to the left-hand section of the question.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Member say if at the time when this question was originally asked there were any other outstanding amounts not recorded that have consequently been taken care of?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, at the end of 1998 there were two amounts which have since been settled. There was a sum of $33,500 owing on a piece of land that was acquired to extend the Cayman Brac Administration. Also, there was a sum of $199,635 owing on a piece of land that was acquired in Spotts, reference number 25B 495-6. These are the sums of money that were outstanding and have since been settled.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8)

The Speaker: This would be an opportune time to suspend Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) in order that we continue beyond 11.00 a.m.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I so move, sir.

The Speaker: The seconder, the Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I second that motion.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that we suspend Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) in order that Question Time can continue beyond the hour of 11.00 a.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time continues.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8) SUSPENDED IN ORDER THAT QUESTION TIME CAN CONTINUE BEYOND THE HOUR OF 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. With the second of the two items listed in the answer, I must say that I was of the opinion that the sale of the Cayman Foods Building to government was completed before 8 July 1998, but I am not necessarily questioning the veracity of the statement.

Can the Honourable Member state at present and even going back for two or three years, what type of interest rates the government has been receiving from institutions when it is engaging in borrowing.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, it varies it is normally LIBOR (London Inter-Bank Offer Rate) plus 1% to 1½%.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps, then the Honourable Member could reply to this supplementary. If we go back to 1998 that would have left interest rates to the government somewhere between 7% and 8%. To be safe, let us say 8½%. If that is the case, why then would the government make private negotiations for purchase of property and be quite willing to pay a fixed interest rate of 10%?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: It is definitely correct that the interest rate in terms of the rate that is normally made available to government (which is normally LIBOR) could have been lower than 10%. But I am not sure whether we would have been able to acquire a loan for let's say $1 million at LIBOR. But rather than sit here and speculate I always try to be as accurate and precise as possible when I am giving information. This is a matter that I would require some time to look into, to go back and talk with the Lands and Survey Department as to what were the conditions, in terms of what was covered in the negotiations and I could provide an answer to the Honourable Member.

I agree that wherever possible every attempt should be made to secure financing at the least. I would not dispute that position, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: For clarity, this amount of $1 million for the Cayman Foods Building was not necessarily the purchase price, as I am sure there would have been a deposit and this may well have been the balance that was left. Can the Honourable Third Official Member clarify that please?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, as far as I am aware the sum quite likely would have been higher, but I do not have the precise amount with me at this time.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Third Official Member simply explain to us what transpires to cause matters like this to occur whereby we don't have these figures reported in the public debt? I am sure there is a reasonable explanation but I am not so sure that I or perhaps other members quite understand why this would happen.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, it comes down to a deficiency which exists at this point in time in the system in terms of reporting financial information. For example, accounts receivables are not shown as a part of the government's financial position at the end of the year. We are trusting, Mr. Speaker, that all relevant information showing obligations of the government and amounts that are due to the government will be available once we have the accrual system in place. But, very simply, it is a deficiency in the existing system that accounts for this.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I will beat you to the draw, this will be my final supplementary.

What the Honourable Third Official Member just answered was in relation to receivables. I just want to confirm with him that it is the same position that may relate to the payables as this would be under the payable section.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: All accounts payable, all accounts receivable, contingent liability, everything for which there is an obligation on the part of the government should be regarded as relevant information. Since reporting will be done in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles or international accounting standards, both standards require that such information be provided as a part of the financial reporting.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Third Official Member explain to the House the difference in the interest rate charged between Block 14CJ, Parcel 120, and Block 23C, Parcel 167? The first is 5%, the second is 10%, and one would reasonably expect that the repayment rates would be the same percentage.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, ideally what the Honourable Third Elected Member for Bodden Town has said is correct. We should have consistency right across the Board. But as we can see, there is a variation here. I can offer no other explanation other than the terms under which the payment over time would have been negotiated in respect of these two transactions. Ideally, it should be consistent right across the board.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to question 181 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 181

No. 181: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development how much money has been collected since October 1997 from real estate companies for signs placed along the roadsides.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: According to the Planning Department's records the amount of $750 has been collected from eight real estate companies. The breakdown of this sum is given in the schedule attached to the question. This amount represents application fees paid for signs by real estate companies since October 1997.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I wish to bring to the Honourable Third Official Member's attention that there is no schedule attached.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I apologise to honourable members and I will make available my schedule to be photocopied.

If you will permit while I make available the list to be copied, I can just read off the amount that has been collected comprising $750. The schedule reads:

Rene Hislop	$50
Tropical Real Estate	$50
HAB Developers	$150
Coldwell Bankers	$50
Century 21	$150
Crighton Properties	$50
Remax	$200
ERA	$50

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Third Official Member tell the House what is the schedule of fees and is the fees structure set in relation to size of signs?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: There is a set fee of $50 for the erection of a sign.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Third Official Member tell the House why the amount collected since 1997 is so small as this only represents 15 signs and certainly on any single stretch of road about a mile or more there are approximately 15 signs?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In accordance with Section 10(2)(h) of the Development and Planning Regulations (1998 Revision), the Central Planning Authority may specify signs for which planning permission is not required. To that extent on 30 March 1999, the Authority adopted a policy whereby real estate signs up to 6 feet in size would not require planning permission. I have been made to understand from the Director of Planning that this is the position that was arrived at after extensive negotiations with the real estate developers.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Third Official Member state if there are any other types of signs besides real estate signs which attract this $50 fee?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, all other signs they would attract an application fee of $50. The only category in which this exemption is allowed would be the real estate area.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So, the Member is saying then if other categories of people are mindful, what they need to do is to get together and come to Central Planning Authority and negotiate, and perhaps they might be waived too?

The Speaker: That is a question?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, sir, that is a question. I am asking him if that is what he is saying, sir.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the interpretation that has been given by the Honourable First Elected Member of George Town to what I have said . . . I don't think that is quite a representation. I have been made to understand that in the real estate industry, because the signs are of a temporary nature, this is why this concession is normally allowed. But under normal circumstances, payment would have to be made.

So, in effect, from what I have been made to understand from the Planning Department, for all other categories there will have to be payment made in order for the erection of signs to be allowed.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just to say to you, sir, contrary to what the Honourable Third Official Member has said, I gave no interpretation, I simply asked the question.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, at this time will suspend proceedings until—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Are we going to suspend proceedings to wait until the government comes down?

The Speaker: That is correct as the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning was debating the Bill when we adjourned on Friday afternoon.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the House is in session and if the minister is not in his seat, notwithstanding whatever else he is doing, then the House goes on to another speaker.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for fifteen minutes and when the fifteen minutes is up we will make our decision.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.22 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.11 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. We had intended to return to Question number 158 but the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works is not in the Chamber so that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Moving on to item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Government Business, Bills—

Honourable Minister for Agriculture do you think he would want those set down for a later date?

Hon. John. B. McLean: I would agree to that, just set them down for a later date, sir.

DEFERENTIAL OF QUESTIONS 158 & 159

The Speaker: Those in favour of setting questions 158 and 159 down for a later sitting, please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTIONS 158 AND 159 DEFERRED TO A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: Government Business, Bills, Second Reading, The Stamp Duty (Amendment) (Insurance Policies) Bill, 1999 continuation of debate thereon.

When we took the adjournment on Friday afternoon, the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning was debating, continuation of debate thereon.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READING

THE STAMP DUTY (AMENDMENT) (INSURANCE POLICIES) BILL, 1999

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Mr. Speaker, when we broke on Friday, I think transcripts were going to be provided to ascertain exactly the position put forward by the previous speakers. They are not here on my desk. I don't know if they have been.

The Speaker: They were prepared so we will hold for a few moments and then they will be brought to you.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: They have been? If they are long I may not be able to obviously speak and read them.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, unless my memory fails me, sir, I raised a point of order and you accepted and made a ruling on that as a point of order. Therefore, whatever else the minister wishes to discuss is totally on his own volition, and if he needs time to research the Hansard, certainly that is again for him to do on his own volition. I don't think anything will have any bearing on your ruling because you have already made that sir.

The Speaker: That is correct, I think, he is dealing with another point.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I never said anything about your ruling at all sir. I don't know where that came in. I accept your ruling as I always have done and always will do sir.

The Speaker: I have been advised by the Clerk that those transcripts are still being worked on. I don't know whether you need them before you can continue your debate.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I was hoping to have them because I had . . . but if I cannot have them so be it, I will move on. I don't want to hold the House up any further.

Mr. Speaker, the Stamp Duty Amendment, the Green Paper that came out, repeated what was in the previous Law. In other words, it did not change the percentage that was calculated over and above the $1,000 policy. So any policy over $1,000, the amount under it was 0.05% or ½ of 1% of the amount.

POINT OF ORDER
(Point of Elucidation)

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, sir.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps, it might just be a point of elucidation because I don't want the minister to misunderstand. If it is 0.05% of 1%, it is not ½ of 1%. Perhaps he just needs to clear that up.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister would you clear what the First Elected Member for George Town as said?

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Sure, I will just state exactly what the Law says and there can be no misinterpretation, sir.

What the Law says is that where the sum insured on the policy of life insurance exceeds $1000 "there shall be charged duty on the policy of whichever is the greater of $25 or 0.05% upon the amount insured calculated without bonus." That, Mr. Speaker, is the same as is set out in the present Law. So, the Green Paper that came out, the amendment to the Stamp Duty Law, did not change that percentage at all, it was the same in the old Law, it was merely repeated. I guess it just goes to show you, sometimes it is better to be left alone, and perhaps it can never be an issue.

So, Mr. Speaker, under the Law as it now stands (and which was repeated in this amendment) there was no cap at all on a local policy. That is all I intend to deal with in any depth here. If we were dealing, for example, with $1 million, then the premium would have been $500 that was actually put into the policy itself and would then have been spread over the life of the policy. So, this was without any limit at all on the policy.

Now, what we have before us is an amendment. And if I may just say then, an amendment to the original Law that was passed probably 15 or 20 years ago. In fact, the first Stamp Duty Law came in 1977. Whether that had this specific part in it or not, I don't know. But all local policies of insurance were subject to 0.05% of the amount insured. There was no cap, no limit on it.

The present amendment is seeking to reduce the amount for local policies under the Law. It is not imposing any extra stamp duty on local people. It has reduced it from 0.05% to 0.01%. In order words, it has reduced it by 400%. So, that is a benefit to the local person—local policies have now been reduced under this amendment from 0.05% of the sum insured to 0.01%.

Anything that may have been said about the government trying to impose or increase stamp duty on the local person is not correct—in fact the government is giving the local person a break and we are reducing by 400% the stamp duty on local policies. So, a lot of the passionate submissions that may have been made about not helping the local person, we see that in effect the government is helping. The government is reducing the amount paid by a very large sum.

But even more important, Mr. Speaker, the government is now capping the local insurance policy stamp duty at $200. Remember, before this it was unlimited; the sky was a limit. It was 400% more, and it had no cap on it. So, I submit that this is a good Bill, and I don't see any room for anybody to try to say that this is not what is good and in the interest of the country.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there was some comment about the Class B exempted companies and the policies that are done overseas and whether the $200 cap that is on locally, which didn't exist before, should not be reduced to $100. The position is that in our competitor countries there is no stamp duty imposed on offshore policies, the same as now there is no tax or duty of any sort imposed on most external transactions in this country. The reason was that it was better to put a lesser amount on those policies and get some revenue than to go to a higher amount and not get any.

There was some reference to taxing money that flows through the country. History will show that the Cayman Islands got its beginnings in a time some twenty-odd years ago when the Bahamas attempted to do the very same thing and the business just simply moved.

So, what is being sought by Honourable Financial Secretary in relation to insurance policies which is a flat fee . . . remember, with the local policy it is a percentage. In fact, many of the local policies, I would think the vast majority, will not reach the maximum now that we have reduced the stamp duty by 400%. But it is an attempt to get a small amount of policies that are issued abroad by exempted companies, or at least are issued for business abroad. These can be a very large amount of policies. I am sure we are looking at hundreds of thousands, maybe millions of policies that may be issued abroad, and $100 in each of those could be a substantial amount.

So, we are talking on the one hand about creating new ways to raise money. Subsection (3) deals with policies for exempted or overseas companies. That will in fact be a new head of revenue. Remember before this, as I understand it, there was no stamp duty on those. So, that has to be good. It is another innovative way that the government has looked at to raise funds for the country, and I think that members here should support that.

It is one way that we can begin spreading the base of our revenue. Mr. Speaker, it is better not to get too greedy and try getting too much too quickly because as we saw with the Bahamas, where they tried to tap the X billion dollars that was going through there, and the percentage was extremely small, it did cause them to lose substantial business then. I think those of us with experience have learned to look carefully before one touches what is working good and bringing in good revenue into this country.

Mr. Speaker, I would hope that members would support that. I do point out, it defers from the local policies in that it is a flat sum. In other words, it is not 0.01% or 0.05% as it was before, it's just simply a flat sum and that in itself will bring in I think substantial revenue over the years. We do have some very good insurance business in the country.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I realise that this is a year where we are going to get speeches that try to produce votes for the elections. But, on the other hand, I think, we have to look at this in a calm way at one that is what is good for the people of the Cayman Islands and for the country. Therefore, I don't believe that the public knowing that we are reducing the stamp duty on life insurance policies . . . and I would encourage everyone especially young people who have homes to take out insurance because it is one way of providing for one's future. I am speaking about insurance generally now, not necessarily in relation to this amendment. Take out insurance as a way of guaranteeing your future.

Therefore, in summary, while there is a new stamp duty on exempted companies, and it is really on restricted class B exempted companies. On the local policy that affects Caymanians and residents, we find that there is a 400% decrease. And, more importantly sir, it is now being capped at $200. I would think, sir, that the vast majority of policies (and I am not too sure what the calculation is but say it is $100) would be $25, which is a minimum. So, the chances of really even reaching $200 on a policy would have to be a fairly substantial amount.

Mr. Speaker (subject to a calculator), to reach the maximum amount of $200 at 0.01%, the policy would have to be $2 million so there is no worry to the local person of reaching even the $200 range, therefore, $1 million is only $100. So, to worry about the $200 maximum, I think since we have reduced this by 400% to 0.01% will really never come into effect. But the cap is still there in case it is needed.

So, the amount is very small. It will lose some revenue on local policies to the government but the government is always prepared, as it has just done with the reduction and import duty, to make concessions that are in the interest of the public to assist them in every way that we possibly can. And this is a clear example of that. So, we are not—and I repeat, we are not—imposing any new stamp duty on local people. We are taking it off. We are reducing it by 400% and we are also capping it at $200 maximum for each insurance policy.

But what we are doing is imposing $100 on all life policies that are done abroad from a class B insurer in the Cayman Islands. That is a new head of revenue, something that's continuously called for by the opposition. In fact (I am referring to the vocal opposition, so to distinguish), they have never really come up with any new heads of revenue that we could pursue in the last 3½ years.

So, it is good to see that the Honourable Financial Secretary and the government are putting in a new head that does not affect the public at all. So, I support this Bill, sir, it is giving a break to local people and it is one that is important because it is dealing with inducing people to take out life insurance which is so important for their future and their children. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, sir.

Mr. Speaker, the last honourable minister that spoke must be a joker if he believes that if the opposition has any strategies or any sources that they would be sufficiently disinterested in their own political future as to give it to the government that's in power to implement, to keep the opposition perpetual opposition. Mr. Speaker, nowhere in the Westminster system does it work like that!

Of course, the opposition has alternatives. They better have alternatives! And certainly, the persons with whom I am associated have alternatives, but it would be foolhardy of us if we told the government our alternatives for the government to implement in this election year and take our cannon and our ammunition and keep us perpetually on the backbench. Mr. Speaker, when the players' positions have changed, that honourable minister and others who are zealots like him will see what the opposition is going to do to make the system less onerous on the people.

As for his comments about in this election year, there will be famous proponents of speeches to propel votes. Mr. Speaker, the person who echoed those comments originally is the greatest culprit of playing that kind of position. I have never decried anyone for doing that because this is the house of politics. I heard him say the other day that he doesn't need to go out to look votes, Mr. Speaker, I hope his results at the polls show that he was right!

Fortunately, or unfortunately, I do not find myself in such a generous position, and I have to work very hard all of the time to ensure that I have an advantage and an ability to get elected—especially if he is going to come at me like he came in 1996. I was lucky to have escaped. So, he cannot lure me into any false sense of security now by telling me that I shouldn't go out to look votes.

Now, Mr. Speaker, no one on the opposition has stated that they are not supporting this Bill. Indeed, we are happy to find that the government has reduced the percentage down from 0.05% to 0.01%. But even in that reduction there is a disparity, an anomaly, and a paradox because the honourable minister last speaking says that our competitors do not have this tax imposed on persons in their jurisdiction, yet we have it.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order?

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What I said, sir, was that the competitive jurisdictions do not have this tax imposed on policies of insurance that are offshore, not on the local side.

The Speaker: That is really what I understood.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. So, the honourable gentleman doesn't have any point of order.
[Laughter]

Mr. Speaker, it was clear to me from the honourable minister's contribution that he didn't understand the position taken by honourable members on this side. Particularly as the Financial Secretary (when he brought the Bill) clearly explained it in such a way that it could have been understood by all of us on this side. We have, Mr. Speaker, no less able people on this side than the government has on its side. What was obvious to me was that the minister was unable to understand it. For much of the time that the Financial Secretary was presenting the Bill, the minister was not in the Chamber, therefore he could not have understood the position outlined by my colleagues when they got up to speak.

One of the significant observations that must be made with the bringing of this Bill is that it appears to have been an afterthought on the part of the government. I would describe it, Mr. Speaker, as an amendment to an amendment. I have to wonder whether the position taken by the government in amending the original amendment was not indeed taken as a result of positions and points outlined by my honourable colleagues who spoke from this side of the House previously.

The government cannot pretend that all of the credit should be given to them. And in this regard, I have to echo the sentiments that I have heard frequently, that no one can dispute were originally echoed by the Third Elected Member for George Town: The time has come for us to implement a Think Tank because we have to begin to realise new areas of revenue. We cannot continue, in spite of what we are saying . . . and the reduction is commendable. The fact remains, however, that we are tapping into the same old source.

So, the calls from this side are accurate and legitimate. The Honourable Leader of Government Business cannot exonerate himself and cannot try to lead listeners into believing that we on this side are not supporting the Bill. Of course, we are supporting it. But in that support, we have said that the government should wisely set mechanisms in place to look for new areas of revenue. We are convinced that they exist if the government looks hard enough.

Mr. Speaker, anyone following the sequence of events would certainly be alarmed and concerned with government continuously making a lot of what I called petty ante amendments, little amendments. We believe that is the greatest manifestation of electioneering that there is currently, and any government that sets itself up to be a superior government should not have to resort to what my colleague, the Third Elected Member for George Town, described as petty ante amendments at this stage but should have been able to come up with original sources from which we could draw significant amounts of revenue. So, the passionate submissions that we made (according to the Honourable Leader of Government Business) have nothing to do with us not supporting this Bill. Rather, it has to do with our expressing alarm at the continued tapping into this structure of a tax system that we have set up. And, I echo that again that we cannot continue to go along the route that we are going; we must find ways of easing the burden off our people.

So, Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Leader of Government Business has to be commended for taking his zealous stand. But I would like to reiterate that there was no one on this side who expressed any opposition or who said that he was not supporting the Bill at this time. What we have said to the government is that if they are as conscientious and diligent as they said they are that they must come to us with new and original sources of raising money. They are flogging the same horse year after year and one of these years the horse is going to drop down.

Mr. Speaker, the comment about our competitors is a valid and sensible comment because we have to be sure that we position ourselves in such a way that we do not lose the advantage we now have. I am happy that the minister recalls what happened in the Bahamas years ago, because competitors are quick to point out to prospective investors and businessmen the weaknesses in our system. We are supporting the Bill, but we said the onus is upon the government now to come up with different ways—original, less onerous ways—of raising money in these kinds of cases.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wishes to speak? If no other member wishes to speak, does the Honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I would like to commence by thanking honourable members for their comments on this Bill. I must say that quite a lot of useful information has been given.

Mr. Speaker, quite a few members initially suggested that the acquisition of local insurance by persons within the community could be put at a disadvantage having to pay a higher rate of stamp duty. It is good to see that right across the Board there is support of the Bill. I am certainly glad to point out that all honourable members in supporting the Bill have given recognition to the fact that first of all where the sum paid locally would exceed what would normally be paid by persons taking out insurance under section 3 of the Law, dealing with the offshore market, the policies to be taken out would have to be exceedingly substantial. So overall, our local community would benefit tremendously from this reduction in the rate of stamp duty on local policies.

Mr. Speaker, the reference to 0.05% as mentioned in section 2B of the Bill is not new as pointed out by the Honourable Minister for Education. But absent this amendment which is now being proposed by the government, this would have preserved the status quo as set out in Law. The only difference between the new Bill and the existing provision (absent the amendment) would have been the statutory minimum of $25 now being proposed in the new Bill.

Mr. Speaker, under existing provision in the Stamp Duty Law, the stamp duty payable on policies of life insurance amounts to 0.05% of the principal sum calculated without bonus. This 0.05% as pointed out by the Honourable Minister for Education and recognised by other honourable members translates into one-twentieth of 1% according to everyone's calculation. Based on this calculation, if a person acquired a life insurance policy of say $50,000, the stamp duty payable would be $25. If we were to take a policy of $100,000 (this is under the existing legislation absent the amendment) the stamp duty payable would be $50. On a policy of $400,000 at 5%, the stamp duty payable would be $200. On a policy of $1,000,000, the stamp duty payable would be $500.

Following the passage of this amending Bill, if allowed, the rate of stamp duty payable will be one-one hundredth of 1% in comparison to the one-twentieth of 1%. In addition to the statutory minimum of $25, there will be a statutory maximum of $200. This will, in effect, prove very favourable for our local community because although the difference between $200 and $500 doesn't seem to be much, at the end of the day we know that most persons that are acquiring life insurance policies . . . often times when a person buys a policy for $100,000, this is not necessarily the amount that is needed, but often times this is what their income level can afford. Any help that can be given in that direction is very much welcomed. When I say the local community that includes all of us.

If we were to take a policy of $50,000, there is a statutory minimum of $25 because often at 0.01% this would translate into $10. But it is generally felt that by having a statutory minimum it is very useful because we know at the regulatory level, there are administrative charges.

At this point in time, we know that the Monetary Authority has introduced the concept of on-site inspection. When these inspections are carried out, usually one of the things that is looked at is to ensure that all requirements of the Law are complied with. This would mean having to examine the records in respect of the policies issued to ensure that the local stamp duty would have paid.

Let's say a policy of $100,000 at 0.01%, again, the statutory minimum is $25. Under the existing legislation, the sum payable would be $50. On $400,000 at 0.01%, the charge is $40 as against what currently obtains in Law, the stamp duty is $200. On $1 million, as said earlier, the stamp duty payable is $100 as against at 0.05% at $500. On a policy of $5 million at 0.01%, the statutory maximum will come into play which will put it at $200 as against what is now the provision in Law, which allows for stamp duty of $2,500 to be paid.

The existing provision in Law, as is recognised, Mr. Speaker, is not only more costly if a person is acquiring large policies locally but it has also restricted the development of products within the offshore market. Hopefully, Mr. Speaker, this amendment will now address both aspects making it more affordable for persons acquiring insurance locally and also allowing for us to tap into that aspect of the captive market as pointed out by our previous Head of Insurance Division.

We have been advised that there is one local company in particular, that is currently in negotiations with a large insurance company outside of the Cayman Islands. It is anticipated that it will be seeking to offer such life insurance products within the Cayman Islands to overseas residents. If this materialises, this will generate a considerable amount of revenue to offset the amount of stamp duty that would currently be given up in terms of those policies that are being purchased locally.

So, there is an offsetting effect and hopefully everyone will be better off for this. Therefore, at this time I would like to say thanks to honourable members for supporting the passage of this legislation. As I said earlier, the natural question to be raised is what will be the impact on government revenue. As I said, it is quite likely that the government will be losing some revenue on local policies, but it is anticipated that such loss will be more than offset by the increase in revenue that will flow from the captive market. This view, honourable members should note, is very consistent with views expressed, as I said earlier, by the past Head of the Insurance Department.

We would anticipate, Mr. Speaker, that the local insurance providers (as soon as this amending legislation is assented to) will take note of the change and this will be factored into the insurance premium. The reduction should be shown, because as a part of the on-site examination the Monetary Authority will continue to look at this aspect and whenever examinations are carried out, files will be examined to ensure that the reduction as a result of moving from 0.05% or one-twentieth of 1% to 0.01% (which is one-one hundredth of 1%) will be reflected in the premiums and this will be looked at to ensure that the benefits are passed on within the local community.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment that was circulated to honourable members indicated that the amendment 2B should have been 0.001%. Mr. Speaker, that was an error, and I will take responsibility for this. It should be 0.01%, this is what it should show. This 0.01% translates into one-one hundredth of 1%. I have since spoken to the Clerk's office and this amendment will be circulated. Therefore, it can be correctly addressed in the committee stage on this Bill.

I would like to thank honourable members for their support.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(1)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under Standing Order 83, I wish to move the suspension of Standing 14(1) to allow a Member of Government to read a statement under Standing Order 31.

The reason for this, Mr. Speaker, is that we believe it is in the best interest of the public that we clarify the headline in today's Caymanian Compass, which is entitled, "Civil Service Call for Parity." It talks about the Government. My statement will seek to clarify that particular point.

The Speaker: The question is the suspension of Standing Order 14(1) and 4 and under Standing Order 30(1) and (2) that the government make a statement. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW THE HONOURABLE MINISTER OF TOURISM COMMERCE, TRANSPORT AND WORKS TO MAKE A STATEMENT UNDER STANDING ORDER 30(1).

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

STATEMENT BY HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS OF GOVERNMENT

CAYMANIAN COMPASS HEADLINE "CIVIL SERVANTS CALL FOR PARITY"

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, the statement reads as follows: "Headline in Caymanian Compass of 7 February 2000 entitled, 'Civil Servants Call For Parity' 7 February 2000." We refer to the headline article in the Compass of Monday, 7 February 2000 referring to the Government.

The fact is that under the Caymanian Islands Constitution, section 7, the civil service is the sole responsibility of His Excellence the Governor with delegated responsibility to the Honourable Chief Secretary.

Section 7(1)(c)(v) of the Constitution reads as follows: "The Governor shall, subject to the following provisions of this section, consult with the Executive Council in the formulation of policy and in the exercise of all powers conferred upon him by this Constitution or by any other law for the time being in force in the Islands, except in the exercise of— (c) any power that in his opinion relates to—(v) the appointment (including the appointment on promotion or transfer, appointment on contract and appointment to act in an office) of any person to any public office, the suspension, termination of employment, dismissal, or retirement of any public officer or taking of disciplinary action in respect of such an officer, the application to any public officer of the terms or conditions of employment of the public service (including salary scales, allowances, leave, passages or pensions) for which financial provision has been made, or the organisation of the public service to the extent that it does not involve new financial provision"

Mr. Speaker, the development of the Cayman Islands over the past 30 years has been accomplished significantly by a strong civil service contribution as it provides stability in the decision process of all governments.

This government appreciates the contribution of the civil service, and has and will continue to be supportive of decisions that are in the best interest of the country and the civil service.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Government Business, Bills, Second Reading.

The Clerk: The Loan (Capital Projects 2000) Bill, 1999.

THE LOAN (CAPITAL PROJECTS 2000) BILL, 1999

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the second reading of a Bill entitled, The Loan (Capital Projects 2000) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: You may continue.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, as Honourable members will recall, the Bill that was circulated at the time the Appropriation Bill was presented to this Honourable House indicated that the government would be seeking to raise new financing by way of borrowings in the amount of $15 million for the year 2000.

This would be required as part of the funding necessary to finance the capital development programme which (as amended for the year 2000) now stands at $44,521,612. Mr. Speaker, honourable members will recall with the decision being taken to transfer $1 million to provide financing for low income housing, this reduced the initial amount of $9.35 million intended to be transferred from general revenue in order to be part of that financing package. As a consequence, a decision was taken to increase the borrowings by $1 million to compensate for that $1 million reduction from general revenue.

Honourable members will recall that an exhaustive review has been done of the Capital Development Programme, which as set out in section 3 of the budget document shows this area has been broken down into different segments. We have, for example with public buildings, the amount to be expended in the year 2000 amounts to $22,673,512.

If we were to take programmes in excess of, let's say, $200,000, we can see that the very first item appearing would be the extension of the male cellblock at the Prison Department. Programmable expenditure for the year 2000 amounts to $555,346 and we can see, Mr. Speaker, that this is the part of an expenditure package commencing in 1989 which at the completion the overall cost will be in the region of approximately $1 million or $978,000.

We see at the Prison Department again, there will be expenditure in the amount of $240,580 for electrical main upgrade. We see that this is a part of an overall cost that will amount to $379,912 on completion.

Continuing further, Mr. Speaker (and I trust that Honourable members and you will bear with me because we have gone into these items significantly already but I think it is very important that we repeat them), we see for the Customs Department that there is programmable expenditure of $1,796,847. Mr. Speaker, we know that the Customs Department is one of government's significant revenue earning departments, but at this point in time because of shortage of office space the Collector of Customs and [some] of his administration staff are presently housed in the Tower Building. It would lead to greater efficiency, not only for the Collector and all of the Customs Officers to be in the same location in terms of having a centralised administration block, but it will also be beneficial to the community at large because when everyone is working together there will be synergy.

Although the telephone is quite useful and there is not much of a distance as would be perceived in terms of travelling from the offices at the airport to the Tower Building, when everything is taken into account even the travelling time on the road and even the time when the Collector of Customs takes the decision that it is necessary to visit the airport offices, all of this travelling time will be obviated. Thus, there will be a greater amount of time available to the Collector and his administration staff to attend to the duties and responsibilities of the Customs Department, and his senior staff members will have him available to consult with them and he will also have his senior staff members to consult with. So, overall it should lead to greater efficiency.

Mr. Speaker, when we look again, we see that there is a sum provided of $700,000. This is to cover expenditure for the year on the secured children's home facility. We see that there is a sum of $10.8 million, which suggests that the overall completion cost of this facility will be in that region. But as we know, these figures are continuously being refined. Any savings that can be realised by taking a very close look at these capital projects will be very helpful and we trust that the Public Works Department and all the persons involved in the costing will look very carefully in order to try and minimise the expenditure to government.

We see for the Drug Rehabilitation Centre Phase I, at Breakers, there is programmable expenditure of $910,000 and there is an estimated cost of completion of approximately $1.3 million. We see that Phase II of that facility will involve a costing of $300,000. And again in Phase II there is an estimated cost to completion of $580,000.

So, when we look at the capital schedule, first, I should point out that the government will have to express gratitude to honourable members of this House and also to all who have shown an interest. What we have by way of a budget document now, setting out the capital projects starts out by providing information as to estimated cost of completion, expenditure in the immediate preceding year, what will be expended in the current year and future programmable expenditures. So, for example we take the civic centre/hurricane shelter in George Town, we see that there is $1,250,000 that has been provided in the year 2000 against an estimated cost to completion of $2,378,000.

Just going down the line, we see that for the Lighthouse School or the primary school number one for George Town, there is a sum of $1,901,230. Mr.

Speaker, this is part of an overall financing cost of approximately $9.2 million.

Therefore, as we continue down the line, for example, we see that we have the George Hicks High School: Administration Building—extension and alterations, provision in the year of $450,000 against the cost to completion of $1,118,000.

We see for the Savannah Primary School: Development Projects: Four classroom block, there is programmable expenditure of $900,000 against cost to completion of $1,116,000.

Continuing with educational facilities, we see that the new Lighthouse School Facility, the amount provided for the year 2000 is in the region of $6.5 million. The estimated cost to completion is $7.6 million so therefore the bulk of expenditure that will be incurred on this facility will be spent in the year 2000.

Mr. Speaker, it is to be noted that for the Education Department, the sum provided for the year 2000 is in the region of approximately $14 million and of this, approximately 50% of it has been allocated for the new Lighthouse School. So, this is approximately 31% of the total capital budget for the year 2000.

Again, when we look at roads throughout Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the overall programmable expenditure for the year 2000 amounts to approximately $12.4 million and this represents approximately 28% of the capital budget for the year 2000.

Quite a lot of statements have been made by the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Roads and we can see the works that are presently being done in Grand Cayman. I cannot state exactly what level of improvements are being done in our Sister Islands, but we know that at the time the discussion was taken to release funds for continuing projects in Grand Cayman, the same was agreed for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. So, there should be continuation of road works thus providing continuing employment to those persons especially in Cayman Brac who would be engaged by the government in this programme.

We see for Recreational and Cultural Facilities that the programmable expenditure . . . it has just been confirmed to me by the First and Second Elected Members for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that road works are well on the way and continuing.

Mr. Speaker, as honourable members will recall, the government welcomes the support of all honourable members of this House to try and get as much of the road works carried out within the dry months because we know that although monies have been allocated in the budget in previous years that quite a significant part of the road works have always been hampered because of the rainy season. So, we can see the results here in Grand Cayman and it is also evident in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman what is being done.

So, capital works in the area of roads are currently under way, everyone is very satisfied in terms of the results now, and we will be optimistic that the road works as programmed for the year 2000 will be substantially accomplished.

First of all, we heard the undertaking given by the government that supports the continuing construction and development of the West Bay Civic Centre/Hurricane Shelter. We see that $523,000 has been provided in the budget for the year 2000 against estimated cost to completion of approximately $4 million.

We see, again, $325,000 provided for community parks in Grand Cayman and $50,000 for the development of community parks in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. In Grand Cayman, the estimated cost to completion is $1,198,838 and in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, $182,000.

So, we can see that all significant areas are currently being addressed by the government. We see under this same section dealing with recreational and cultural facilities that the government will be spending $200,000 in the year 2000 against estimated cost to completion of $469,000 or approximately $470,000 for the continuing development of the cricket oval pavilion facility. Also, $250,000 against estimated cost to completion of $675,000 for the Cayman Brac Football Field.

Mr. Speaker, we can see that the government in terms of its commitment to maintain existing projects that have been developed will be spending approximately $140,000 in the year 2000 to provide for upgrading and irrigation works at the Truman Bodden Sports Complex.

We can continue to look down this area and we can see where sufficient provisions have been made to not only commence the development of new projects but also a commitment to the maintenance of existing facilities.

We see for cemeteries that the government has programmable expenditure of $171,000 in the year 2000 against estimated cost to completion of $975,074 and this is within all of our islands.

We see for harbours and docks, $149,000 has been provided against estimated cost to completion of $1,254,000.

We see for purchase of lands, the government has also provided $2 million and we know, Mr. Speaker, this is an on-going expenditure because as the government continues to develop especially road facilities that it is necessary to acquire land in order to facilitate such development.

We see for the landfill development that $360,100 has been provided against estimated cost to completion of projects in the amount of $5,305,634. This is broken down between Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac.

We see for health care facilities that the government will be spending $3,250,500 and the bulk of this will be for continuing works at the George Town Hospital, completion of the existing new facilities plus allowing for the commencement of construction on a mental health and geriatric unit.

As we continue, we see for agricultural development that there is a sum provided of $450,000 against estimated cost to completion of projects that have been programmed in the region of approximately $3 million. We see for project development, design and costing, $505,000 has been provided against estimated cost in terms of the proper evaluation of these projects of $1,091,000.

It should be noted that until the items in this section of the budget are transferred into their proper section within the capital budget that these in themselves will not constitute approval to go ahead with these projects. I think this was pointed out when the budget address was being presented for the year 2000.

Mr. Speaker, I am hoping that by Wednesday of this week, I will be able to provide a schedule stating the end of year financial position on the public debt. According to the Treasury Department, the amount owing as at 31 December 1999 is in the region of $82,424,663, and for self-financing loans, $15,904,138. We know that in the budget itself a significant amount of this . . . When I say significant amount because of the fact that the government has been borrowing short over the years, this aspect is currently being examined and every attempt will be made to continue to explore long-term financing.

But that long-term financing, Mr. Speaker, hinges on a very significant factor. We know that because of our GDP, our per capita income, there is a presumption that the Cayman Islands is exceedingly wealthy. Therefore, financial institutions that normally would lend on a long-term basis are somewhat hesitant to provide any form of substantial financing to the Cayman Islands at subsidised rates.

We are anticipating that we will at a given point in time (and I am hoping in the not-too-distant future, as was pointed out in response to questions that were raised and discussions taking place in Finance Committee) we will be able to break down the GDP and come up with what is referred to as an "indigenous factor," rather than taking it right across the board as it now stands. When it is said that we have a per capita income in excess of the figures that are now being given, we know that this is not reflective of an accurate position right across our community. This is when the Cayman Islands is embarking on the development of a needed infrastructure and every assistance that can be given to us at this point in time in achieving that goal should be given.

I recall that the Honourable First Elected Member for West Bay and I approximately two years ago met with representatives of Caribbean Development Bank (CDB) and we thought at that time it was a useful meeting because shortly thereafter they sent a delegation to the Cayman Islands to meet with us.

We know that the CDB is always willing to lend us money, but it is not at a subsidised or reduced interest rate. It is normally from what we call ordinary resources pool, and it is very difficult (according to them) to justify any portion of those borrowings coming out of their special development funds.

But when we have this indigenous per capital income, when this has been done (and we are hoping that it will be accepted) this will be probably a new methodology in terms of developing that type of statistical data to show the different tiers that exists within the economic strata within a country that will be accepted as valid by CDB and other financial institutions that we will be approaching, and will not be taken to mean that these figures have been specially developed in order to reflect a position that is not representative of the Cayman Islands. This is really what we are hoping, Mr. Speaker.

We have spoken to CDB along those lines and we have asked for assistance in developing this information in the past, but we have not come to a precise position where this is an indication that help will be provided. So, we are going to go at it ourselves. I cannot say exactly how it will be done, but we are hoping that the community, when we start to gather information for this exercise, will be willing to assist the government and not to misconstrue the reason why this data is being collected. But it is very useful for us to get this data, Mr. Speaker, in order to reflect truly the indigenous per capita income of the Cayman Islands really is.

We know that we have quite a significant sector of our economy that is represented by the offshore sector. We know that we have quite a large number of persons that could be regarded as transient and are working in that area, and that not all of the monies that are earned remain within the community. This is not a criticism, as such, but we have to come to a realistic understanding as to what is our current position. This again will have to be complemented.

The Honourable Third Elected Member for George Town has been talking about the Think Tank Committee and I am fully in agreement with him. The government is in agreement with him on this. As I pointed out during Finance Committee, as soon as the costing information is done whereby we can have a group of people sit and look at that information . . . because that information will be relevant in terms of looking at the costing of services that are now being provided by the Government sector and that is all areas.

Another very important aspect of this, is to have in place a cost recovery programme in that we will look in terms of the cost of providing all of the services right across the board and a decision can be taken by members of this honourable House as to what areas of services should the government continue to subsidise as against what the government will seek to recover at 100% of the cost of providing those services.

Under the Financial Reform Initiative, we are looking in terms of indexing the revenue measures that are there. So, on an annual basis, rather than having to wait three to six years to come to this honourable House to introduce what appears to be new revenue measures because on one hand what costs $1 today—inflation factors will come into it for the 2001 budget—next year it is likely to cost $1.10. What is unlikely to happen is that there will be a complementary shift on the revenue side to raise that additional 10 cents in order to equate revenue with expenditure or expenditure with revenue. That additional 10 cents will be treated as new revenue measures. So, the way to address all of this is to have everything moving in tandem.

What will also be provided to this honourable House by Wednesday of this week, will be the details in terms of the impact that the borrowings will have upon the position of government at this point in time showing the position reflected through the end of December 2000. It will show the beginning balance in terms of the public debt balance as at 1 January 1999. It will show programmable drawdowns, as best can be estimated, during the course of the year. These drawdowns will increase that balance but there will be a reduction to reflect the payments that will be made during the course of the year 2000. So, every effort will be made to minimise drawdowns in the year 2000 thus trying to keep the public debt position to a minimum.

In keeping with the policy instituted by the government, the first expenditure to take place against capital projects in the year 2000 will be the $8.35 million that will be transferred from general revenue in the first instance. The second source of funding will be monies that will be coming in from the various funds from which monies will be transferred. Thirdly, will be the drawdowns against the unexpended loan that was approved in 1999, and, lastly, in terms of the loan for 2000. So, all of the monies that will be available from central government, general revenue and funds will be used up in the first instance before any attempt is made to draw down against loan balances for 1999 that has already been approved and for the year 2000 that will be approved.

So, Mr. Speaker, every effort will be made in order to try and keep the cost of borrowings to a minimum. As I said, Mr. Speaker, ideally when look at our position, we know it is likely that we are going to be slightly over the $100 million mark. But rather than giving this as a precise figure, as soon as the information is received as it is presently being worked on by the Economics and Statistics Unit . . . honourable members will recall that there was a schedule that was presented to them during the course of last year when that loan package was being presented. This information will be available by the government to honourable members of this House to show what the position was at the beginning of the year plus what is likely to take place by way of add-ons to that balance by way of drawdowns and reduction by way of payments during the course of the year.

Mr. Speaker, as I pointed out the capital programme for the year 2000 is in the region of approximately $44.5 million. Every attempt will be made among the Public Works Department, the Treasury Department, and all departments of government concerned, to ensure that the best management processes are employed in dealing with capital projects for the year 2000. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Loan (Capital Projects 2000) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. The floor is now open to debate. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, we are borrowing to assist with running the country when supposedly the economy is doing well? That tells us that we are still on the wrong road. We borrow, and we raise small fees here and there affecting everybody in this, the new millennium.

We have talked about reform seriously now for the last couple of years. By now I would have thought we would have been well on the way so as to alleviate the need to go through the hell we have gone through in the last budget process of the government.

The result, Mr. Speaker, of our system, our wants and our needs, has put us at what I feel is a serious crossroad because of the gaps that have shown up in the last budget. The only way out for the government is going to be to request for supplementary expenditure during this year, allocations which will not be matched by an increase in revenue, and consequently, may give rise to a cash flow crisis later on in the year. I have seen this happen before, Mr. Speaker. The gap in the budget is the unfunded past pension liability that has come about and there are undertakings by the government that were not budgeted for. So, there could be a problem later on.

Mr. Speaker, we have an economy that is growing by about 5% per annum. That is the last figures I heard. And yet we have this problem. Some people are saying we are going too fast, but I have to wonder what we would be like if we stopped. I wonder what kind of problems we would raise by stopping. We would be a country of poorer people—much poorer than we are now.

Mr. Speaker, I am one that says we don't need to stop. We need to manage better. We must sustain what we have, but change the way we are doing things. I said on Friday that we couldn't keep hitting the same areas, raising garbage fees and so on and borrowing. The poor people of this country cannot take any more. The middle income [earners] are at their limit also, and I will give you an example. At the top of the range, a young upper-middle income Caymanian couple with two children, the husband makes $3,000 per month and the wife makes $2,500 per month, a total of $5,500 per month. First of all, they take about 8% - 8½% for pension and health. They are left with about $5,000. They have a mortgage of $1,700, car loans of $700. They are then left with $2,600. They have various other costs including house insurance in the region of $500 and they are then left with $2,100. They must buy food, they have telephone, gas and electricity bills and this adds up to $1,200 plus $300 for life insurance, that is $1,500. They are left with $600 not including car maintenance, house maintenance and household help.

We can see, Mr. Speaker, what is happening to our people. If this is the monthly position of what you call the upper middle income, where do we expect to further burden them.

Now, we have not gotten to the average Caymanian who is making much less but has the same burdens. This is the position our people are in. It is as plain as the nose on our face that we must change the way we are doing business and in so doing allow our people to be able to do better. We cannot hit them any more. Borrowing too much will only ruin us in the long run. I have said often enough that we need to find money from elsewhere to run the country. That is what others and I said on Friday. I said that a lot of funds are going out of this country to build up other countries through the illegal lottery.

Mr. Speaker, I said that government should seek to get money to run the country from where money exists in the financial industry. I believe that we can do that successfully if it is done right. I don't know whether the government believes that everything they do is done right, but certainly, the end result doesn't say so. When we say that reform is necessary and government needs to get more revenue, we believe that we are on solid ground. In mutual funds, lawyers get $25,000 or in that region I understand—this is information that was given to me—for setting it up. An auditor gets $15,000 for auditing. We get $500. We pay regulators, set up money authorities and so on and we have to do that for the country to be properly a regulated, stable country. We have to bear these costs in setting up these institutions.

But this is what I am talking about when we talk about we need to change. We need to see how government has to run its business too. Lawyers get $25,000. Auditors, I understand gets something like $15,000, and we get $500. I understand that an investor gets about $3 million out of a mutual fund of some $20 million or $30 million. Of course, the investor must be paid properly. He must make money from his business, that is what we are all about. We would never want to change that.

So, Mr. Speaker, I believe that we can do some things to change, but there has to be a change in the mindset on Executive Council when it comes to certain areas that affect certain people. I am not suggesting that government be like a thief in the night, I have never promoted that. Government would have to be forthright with the public in examining the ideas put forward on Friday evening. It cannot be done arbitrarily and unexpected by government intervention. It would have to be well planned so that everyone is on an even keel.

The financial section would have to be brought into dialogue. Sit down, talk and discuss what needs to be done to keep us on the right track where we don't get in trouble at the end of the day. The financial sector would have to be brought into dialogue to discuss where they see their role in contributing equitably into the orderly and sustainable development of the Caymanian economy more than is being done now.

We talk a lot about public and private sector dialogue. Well sir, this is what I am saying, develop where we can come to a more equitable arrangement in these islands. In 1986, we changed from a tax haven to a financial centre, an international business centre, and now we have more credible, upstanding business in our country. In the old days, suitcases of dollars came into the industry and now all that has changed.

As I said, we changed from a tax haven to a well-regulated financial centre. Now, the global situation has demanded that business conducted here is more above board and it is wire driven.

Mr. Speaker, in saying that about the old days suitcases of dollars we heard passed through, is not to say that we never had regulations. We did. But I am saying that today we are better regulated. In any event, Mr. Speaker, the changing global situation has demanded that business conducted here is more above board and it is wire driven. I believe as I said on Friday, we could be better off if we examined ways and means of putting in place (after the discussions I talked about) a fee on this wire driven business.

As I said, Mr. Speaker, a fraction of a cent . . . and we would have sufficient funds to budget for good roads, better educational facilities, budget enough to fund tertiary health care and pay our civil servants better, including paying our teachers, our policeman, doctors and nurses, salaries that are equal to their professions.

Mr. Speaker, someone talked about the Bahamas running away business in the early 1970s. But it is not what you do so much, as how it is done. I am not here to denigrate any foreign country. What I am saying is that we can learn from others, we can do better if it is done right but I believe that we can do that. If that could be done, this country could afford to remove duty from all foodstuffs where it doesn't bother our local businesses, where it doesn't hurt our farmers and our entrepreneurs who have bakeries. There is no reason for this country to be in the pitiful position of presenting deformed budgets.

This Loan Bill is to shore up the pitiful budget. It became clearer as we went through the process just how pitiful a position we are in. All those that say otherwise let them say it. I have gone through the process and I have seen it. Someone said this is opinion, but facts are there to back-up opinions.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this year I thought the government after hearing so much about reforms and priority would have tried to do capital work that is absolutely necessary and work that can be done this year.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 87

Deferred Question – 8 September, 1999

No. 87: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development for the total public debt to date.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The total public debt as at 31 December 1999 was C$82,424,663. This does not include self-financing loans which stood at $15,904,138 as at 31 December 1999.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable Third Official Member state if there are any available figures for what is termed "contingent liabilities"?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I have the contingent liabilities up until 31 December 1998. I can make that information as at 31 December 1999, but the Treasury would need a few days in order to refine that information and make it available. But as at 31 December 1998, the contingent liability was $149.9 million; as at 31 December 1997, $157.5 million; as at 31 December 1996, $171.6 million.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable Third Official Member state if that figure as at 31 December 1998 includes the public service pension liability?

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, it was showing the public service pensions liability as at 31 December . . . Mr. Speaker, the amount shown as at 31 December 1998 was $117,181,436. But I should mention that this was the figure based on the actuarial valuation as at 1 January 1996. That has been extrapolated to achieve this balance because this figure as at 31 December 1997, again, based on the actuarial valuation carried out as at 1 January 1996, was $127,626,146.

So, as the assets in the fund continue to build up, this is being offset against the deficiency in terms of the public service pensions liability, hence we have a declining balance.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Will the honourable Third Official Member agree that while the 1996 figure was the only figure to go by, it doesn't necessarily mean it is an accurate figure? It is possible that the liability might rise rather than fall.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: It would have been an accurate figure as at 1 January 1996, but we know that changes would have been brought about subsequent to that because the band of persons to be included in the pension scheme has since widened. All of that will have to be taken into account. That is why we are now awaiting the actuarial valuation that is currently being conducted. As members were advised in Finance Committee, that will be available by 1 April 2000.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable Third Official Member explain what timeline for completion of payments we have facing us on this total public debt figure mentioned in the answer?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: What has been done takes into account the Loan Bill that is presently before the House. As I mentioned on Monday when the Bill was presented, there would be a schedule developed in order to show projections in terms of when the indebtedness of government would be liquidated based on the current balance taking into account drawdowns that will be made in the year 2000. This would be on the basis that drawdowns are made in full. But we know that oftentimes that is not the case.

Taking into account the drawdowns against the loan that was approved in 1999, and is also under review at this time, this will take the indebtedness projected through the end of 2000 to $103.9 million. Against that, it is expected that 13 loans for a value of $6.4 million, or representing 6.1% of the total, will be paid off within a period of zero to five years. That's between the years 2000 to 2004. Running between five and ten years, that's between the year 2000 and 2009 there will be a total of 19 loans for a value of $67 million, comprising 64.4% of the projected loan balance as at 31 December.

Between ten to 15 years, again taking into account up to the year ending 2014, there will be seven loans for a value of $29 million, or 27.9% of the loans portfolio. And beyond 15 years, there will be a balance of $1.6 million representing 1.5%.

So, what we are looking at between now and the end of 2014, if no further loans were taken out, based on the programme of repayments set out in the schedule and taking into account what is anticipated against the new loan of $16 million, that the balance owing at the end of 2014 (31 December) will be $1.6 million.

The assumption is that by the end of year 2015, from now through 2015, all loans on the government's books will be liquidated.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable member say if this included the loans from the authorities as well?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: No, Mr. Speaker, I am dealing with government's public debt position.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Is there any way the member could say what the contingent liabilities are now? That would be the loans from the authorities.

The Speaker: That was in the answer to the substantive question, "self-financing loans."

The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The contingent liabilities would represent those loans that have been guaranteed by Finance Committee. But, in terms of obligations where the authorities themselves have negotiated loans without guarantees issued by the government, those would be separate and not factored into the contingent liabilities of government.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable Third Official Member state if these include the guarantees given by Finance Committee for Cayman Airways?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, these would include the guarantees issued in respect of Cayman Airways.

The Speaker: I am going to have to limit supplementaries, so we will say three more. I am being reasonable this morning.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: You're a very kind man, Mr. Speaker.

The member mentioned some $29 million in loans, which would be repaid within ten to 15 years. Can the honourable member state the nature of these loans? I have heard on more than one occasion that the borrowings by government are, by and large, short-term borrowing and not medium to long term.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: It would take some time to go through the schedule to identify the specific seven loans in question.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, perhaps he could supply us with a copy of the schedule. That would be fine with us.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, a copy of that schedule can be made available. The schedule would be set out in the 1998 accounts of government and will also be included in the 1999 accounts. But I will provide a copy of the schedule I have in front of me.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to deferred question 158, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 158

Deferred Question – 1 December, 1999

No. 158: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to provide a list of roads with related costs which are scheduled to be done in West Bay during 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In addition to routine maintenance activities, the following roadworks have been completed in West Bay during 1999:

- | | |
|-------------------------|---------------------|
| ◆ Finch Drive | ◆ Weir Close |
| ◆ Logwood Drive | ◆ Dill Lane |
| ◆ Cemetery Road | ◆ Mar Close |
| ◆ Agua Lane | ◆ Foremast Close |
| ◆ Florence Lane | ◆ Capt Cadian Drive |
| ◆ Billy Manderson Drive | ◆ Schooner Lane |

The total expenditure as of 31 December 1999 is C$273,858.00.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say whether or not this is a complete list of roads scheduled to be done in West Bay for the year 1999? If not what are the additional roads that were not done?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In conducting a road visit we had made an agreement on some other roads that we unfortunately did not get done in West Bay. I think one in particular was off Powell Smith Drive. Although there was an indication on the map that there was a right-of-way to it, or an easement, we needed to get the information from the individual who latter brought it along. I think at that stage it was probably late November, and we never got finished with that exercise. It was an easement over private land that would take it to his house, which is some distance away from Powell Smith Drive.

There were a couple of other roads that we never got an opportunity to do as well. Some of the roads mentioned were not really finalised. For example, we did some work on Aqua Lane, but it certainly needs a second application.

So, I would say to the Third Elected Member for West Bay that there are probably a couple of roads we never got to. I did not bring that list this morning. But I am happy to provide that, if he so wishes, in writing.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to deferred question 159, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 159

Deferred Question – 1 December, 1999

No. 159: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to provide an update with respect to the construction of the Dalmain Ebanks Civic Centre in West Bay.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Design drawings and costing have been completed for the Dalmain Ebanks Civic Centre/Hurricane Shelter at the approved funding of C$3,997,000 in the 2000 Budget. It is anticipated that construction of the facility will commence in the third quarter of 2000 with an expected completion date of mid 2001.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: In Finance Committee we passed a motion moved by me for government to consider moving ahead more quickly with the civic centre/hurricane shelter. Can the honourable minister say what is being done in regard to that motion?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: There was general agreement all around that if it were possible to move this project on faster than has been indicated in the answer (which we've had for some weeks), that we would certainly do so. This project has not been put before the Central Planning Board yet for their approval. Following that, we will have to go out to tender, and then the tender would have to be selected or agreed by the Central Tenders Committee. Then we would be in a position to award a contract and that person or firm would then mobilise. That process takes a significant amount of time.

I think we will have to see how we get on with that exercise if we can start earlier than what has been said in this answer (the third quarter of 2000), I am certainly pleased to do so.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say when it is anticipated that we will have planning approval for that project?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I asked the Permanent Secretary responsible for the area of sports to meet with a number of sporting organisations to have them review these design drawings and for their comments on the facility. It is our intention that a number of games, such as basketball, volleyball, and badminton among others, could be played when we have inclement weather. We wanted their views, and we have their views. There may be some minor modifications made.

Following that we go for outline approval for the Central Planning Authority (CPA). In order to get final approval we need final drawings, which will take about two months to get, and be able to put it before the CPA.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The minister has the project document. I understand from the Third Elected Member for West Bay that he has seen this document since last year. I asked for a copy of the document while in Finance Committee. I would like the minister to have a copy made available to all of us sometime this week. Other members from the district have seen it, but I have not. I would like a copy.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I gave an indication of my willingness to provide a copy to the member some time ago. I believe that the Third Elected Member for West Bay saw the plans this year if not last year. One of the reasons why I didn't submit it already is because we had the sporting representatives commenting on the present design. I wanted to have those features embodied into the design of the facility so that I could give members what we call the final draft version of the building. But if they want what we have at the moment, there is no problem. I have actually asked for it to be given to them already.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you. At least other members from the district have had the advantage of seeing something. This member has not. I would like to point that out, and I would like the first draft of the document.

The Speaker: Turn that into a question please.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, that's what I just said: Can he give me the first draft?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We have been after this draft now for the last four years. There was a point when the First Elected Member for West Bay was dealing with it. When he was dealing with it I didn't see it either. So—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the draft—

The Speaker: One at a time, please.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, I would like to explain something since the minister said that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I had no draft. The plan that he has is what I had. And he certainly did see it in the early stages. What happened after that everybody already knows. But I am a representative from West Bay!

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Can the honourable minister say how much money is in the 2000 budget for the Dalmain Ebanks Civic Centre?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: It's a question we've gone over before, but for the member's information it's $523,000. As a result of the agreement we made in Finance Committee, if funds can be made available (some other project not moving forward, if revenue increases and expenditure is held in line) it may be possible to move this project on faster. That's what we intend to do.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say how the present draft plans differ from the original plan that we all had access to some three or four years ago?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My understanding of this original draft being talked about—because I don't ever recall seeing it—I think it started out around $3.5 million and later, I would assume because of modifications, the figure moved to $6 million. It could be that the modification was caused by the fact that we wanted to also use it as a hurricane shelter. I just don't know.

As a result of that, when we came to the Legislative Assembly, members of the Legislative Assembly said they were not prepared to support $6 million plus for a civic centre in West Bay. As a result we asked what figure you would support. The number of $4 million came forward. So we went back to the Public Works Department saying we had general agreement for a $4 million facility, and asked them to modify the plan to bring it in line with that, which means that the building has been reduced from over 33,000 square feet to 18,500. That's really the big change.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: The minister mentioned that the original plan was to also use it as a hurricane shelter. Can the honourable minister confirm if the present facility being proposed lives up to that standard? Can we use it as a hurricane shelter?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The building is the Dalmain Ebanks Civic Centre/Hurricane Shelter. Those words are not used loosely. It is the intention for this building to serve both purposes. Therefore, the facility would be in a position to be used as a hurricane shelter and built to that specification.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay. I will allow two more supplementaries.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: This is my last one, Mr. Speaker. The only reason I raised that is because he mentioned that the original plans called for a hurricane shelter. Can the honourable minister say what the present capacity is compared to the original plan?

I recall that we thought we needed a facility in West Bay for at least 1,000 to 1,200 people, as far as a hurricane shelter. Can he say how that compares with what is now being proposed in regard to the number of people?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Maybe I should elaborate. The building when used as a civic centre for graduations or functions of that nature where chairs are lined up side-by-side would sit 1,300 people. When we use it as a hurricane shelter we need more space per person. That figure would probably drop to half of that number, to 650.

The Speaker: I would appreciate a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) in order for Question Time to continue beyond 11.00.

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue.

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 23(7) & (8) to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 o'clock. Those in favour please say Aye, those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time will continue.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 AM.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The honourable minister said in the substantive answer, "Design drawings and costing have been completed for the Dalmain Ebanks Civic Centre/Hurricane Shelter at the approved funding of C$3,997,000 in the 2000 Budget." Can the honourable minister say where that is in the budget?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The reference there, when we look at the schedule provided by Public Works, the project cost is $3,997,000. The amount . . . so, in essence we are approving the project at that value. While the provision in the budget is $523,000, we are saying to Finance Committee and the Legislative Assembly that the total project cost is $3,997,000 so we are not misleading anyone that by committing ourselves to $523,000 you are also committing yourself to the remaining portion in 2000. Or, if we can get to a position where we can start the project earlier, perhaps more than $523,000 will be spent in 2000.

The Speaker: moving on to question 182, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 182 Deferred

No. 182: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development what monetary contributions were made to the government for the year 1998 by the Civil Aviation Authority, the Water Authority and the Port Authority.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

DEFERMENT OF QUESTION 182 Standing Order 23 (5)

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In accordance with Standing Order 23(5), I would like to move that this House allow for the question to be answered on Friday instead of this morning.

The Speaker: Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 182 DEFERRED FOR ANSWER UNTIL FRIDAY 11 FEBRUARY 2000.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 183, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 183

No. 183: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs to state the staff complement of the Computer Services Department by post and nationality.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The total staff complement of the Computer Services Department is 53 comprised of 28 Caymanians, 9 British citizens, 4 Canadians, and 1 Bahamian. There are 11 vacancies at the moment. The staff complement by post and nationality is as follows:

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable member say whether these 11 vacancies are as a result of people leaving the department? If so, how many? Or, does it represent growth in the department?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The vacancies are the result of a combination of reasons. Some have resulted from internal promotions within the department. Some have come about by persons who have left the department.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable member say how many have left the department?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I believe approximately three, but I don't have that information accurately. From memory that's what it is, but I am not absolute on that.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I am curious to hear if all of these 11 vacancies were filled, would the present physical space be able to accommodate these?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes. We do have sufficient space if the 11 vacancies were filled. I can't say the same for all areas of the Glass House, but, yes, in this particular department there is space for the 11.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 184, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 184

No. 184: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning to state whether the Education Department or Ministry has held any meetings with their Education Committee since 27 November 1996.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, the Ministry has recently held a series of meetings with the Chamber of Commerce, both its Manager and the Chairman of its E-commerce subcommittee on education and training. It is my understanding that this subcommittee has largely replaced the general education subcommittee. The Ministry and Department of Education are looking forward to working with the Chamber and this subcommittee on a major new initiative called Cayman P3E, Public/Private Partnership in Education.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say whether the Education Committee of the Chamber of Commerce was one of those sources through which he got information and support for the development of the national curriculum?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand, while this is a bit off the beaten track, that Mr. Wil Pineau, who basically runs the Chamber of Commerce, is on the national curriculum committee.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Is the minister in a position to give the House any information on this new initiative called Cayman P3E?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This is a DVID initiative. It is going to be held in Jamaica. I actually gave the dates and the particulars of this maybe three or four days ago in a question or something. It's somewhere in the middle of March.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister explain how it is that a new initiative that is going to involve Cayman is going to be held in Jamaica? And what is the term DVID? And what is Cayman's connection to it if it is going to be held in Jamaica?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It is a Department of the United Kingdom, and the initiative is pulling Commonwealth countries together, specifically the Overseas Territories. It is one in which countries will participate, as they do in other Commonwealth fora.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Is this initiative limited to the forum that will take place in Jamaica, or does it include other things?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This is the first time they are holding this. I was just trying to see if I could find the little booklet I had on it, but it obviously is at the ministry. But I can get a copy for the member.

As far as I know it's really the UK and the Commonwealth that are involved. It would obviously have input from related private sector arms.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In his answer the minister stated, "The Ministry and Department of Education are looking forward to working with the Chamber and this subcommittee on a major new initiative called Cayman P3E, Public/Private Partnership in Education." I am trying to determine if this initiative P3E is limited to this connection with this UK forum, or are there other things involved in this initiative not only specific to Cayman, but involving the ministry, the department and the Chamber?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am reasonably certain that the Chamber would send a person to it, together with some other private persons. I was trying as well to see whether I might have had a list of who may be going. I should say that this is fairly new and that's the reason why I don't have . . . My Permanent Secretary has been dealing with this, but we did look at a list that was maybe six or seven people in total.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps I am not conveying the question correctly. What I am trying to determine . . . I understand if the initiative involves the UK, and some connection with some forum being held in Jamaica. The way the answer is worded, it speaks about this initiative called Public/Private Partnership in Education. Are we talking about a forum, or are we talking about an ongoing affair. That's what I am trying to determine.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It is an ongoing committee that is basically being kicked off by this forum. But they have now been put together and attending that. They will be dealing with different areas, some of which will come out of the forum. For example, the conference seems to be . . . if I may just read a bit of this: "Within the Caribbean changes are occurring and education is responsible for a variety of issues. Computers are being deployed in ways that are demanding changes in curriculum and school organisations." And I know there's an IT arm in this.

"Second, education is being expanded with its associated demands for change in the curriculum. There is concern about untrained teachers, poor delivery, failing standards in education." Well, we have no untrained teachers.

"Management is characterised as being inefficient and cumbersome."

They have an advisory group that will deal with ownership and stocktaking, audit, and school/student mentoring. These seem to be areas that they will be going into. What I have isn't very much, but I am happy to let the member have this. It's largely a UK driven Caribbean Commonwealth initiative.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: We certainly would appreciate the honourable minister making any information he has available to members of the House. We appreciate his congeniality and look forward to receiving the information. Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we move on to question 185, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 185

No. 185: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning if, in light of recent research which shows that children's critical age of learning is 0-3 years, any consideration is being given by the government to changing its policy for the granting of financial assistance to parents with children below the age of three years, nine months.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: While research does show that significant learning occurs before the age of four, the pre-school assistance was introduced to compensate for the fact that the Reception Class was taken out of government schools in 1991. The pre-school assistance to parents of four-year-olds who might not otherwise be able to send their children for this important year of readiness for formal school is intended to support parents in providing this important opportunity for students.

The Department of Education supports pre-schools in other ways such as training for staff and curriculum guidance and support.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say if the recent research showing the critical age of 0-3 years differs from what was believed to be the situation with learning prior to now?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that this research that brought this out is more recent. In other words, it has been within recent times that this discovery has come about.

I would also like to say that we do have our early intervention programme. I know this is a bit off the beaten track, where children from birth to school age who have any recognised developmental delays, or who are identified as being at risk, there is a programme that deals with them. Now, that's different from what the member is raising. But we do have that from birth all the way up.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: It kind of baffles me as to why education does not follow the latest trends in technology. In light of the fact that recent research shows that the critical years are from 0-3, I would have thought that education would be geared towards funding that age group. The problem we have is that the emphasis is on high school. If we don't get the foundation right, it's too late to spend it on them when they reach high school age. So I am kind of baffled as to why education has not taken advantage of this new research.

The Speaker: Turn it into a question.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the honourable minister could say why.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The member is right when he says that from birth to four years are very critical. His suggestion that we reduce the time that we . . . I mean, what perhaps could be done is to start maybe one year earlier, provided funds are released so that we may be able to catch children a bit earlier, those who cannot afford to get into the pre-schools.

The real early age, birth up to one year, is perhaps not quite as important if we could come down one year into the three-year-olds, which I think is what the member is saying. This is something that I know has been discussed. It does have merit. I could get an assessment on what those funds are and would be happy, subject to the funds, to discuss it with the member, and if the House is happy, introduce it.

I personally think it would be good. I know the department thinks it would be good. It would cost some money, but what better way can the money of this country be spent than on our youth?

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I am concerned that learning opportunities be made available to all children. You and I may be in a position where we can fund our children, but there are many parents who have a genuine interest in regard to their children's education but are not in a financial position to do so. That's the parent I am concerned about. I appreciate what the minister said. Even a year earlier would make a tremendous difference. I assure him that he has my support and I am quite sure the support of my colleagues in regard to funding.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation, and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: I have asked the Deputy CEO to deal with getting this done fairly quickly. I will come back to the House with an amount and also how it would be implemented and what we regard as the outcome and outputs from it.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning. We shall suspend proceedings for 15 minutes.

Government Business, Bills. Continuation of the Second Reading debate on the Loan (Capital Projects 2000) Bill, 1999. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READINGS

THE LOAN (CAPITAL PROJECTS 2000) BILL, 1999

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you.

When I was last speaking on the Bill, I talked about the need for serious reform of our system. I talked about the gaps that showed up in the budget and the request for supplementary expenditure during the course of this year that might come about because of those gaps. He said that we have an economy that is growing by about 5% per annum, yet we still have this problem.

People are saying that we are growing too fast. But what would we be like if we stopped? What kinds of problems would be raised by stopping? I said that we don't need to stop, but we need to manage better. I said that we must sustain what we have, but change the way we are doing things. I said that we couldn't keep hitting the same areas, raising garbage fees and so on, and borrowing because the poor people of this country can't take any more burdens.

I said that we need to find funds from elsewhere to run the country. I said that the financial sector should be brought in to discuss where they see their role in contributing equitably into the orderly and sustained development of the Caymanian economy. I said there had to be a more equitable arrangement in these islands. I said if we had sufficient funds and certainly need to pay our teachers, policemen, our doctors, and our nurses salaries that are equal to their profession.

Certainly, this Loan Bill is to shore up the pitiful budget we have. We are at a crossroads. That in dialogue with the financial industry and government, government has to be forthright with the public in examining any such idea, and it couldn't be done arbitrarily expecting government intervention. It would have to be well planned, and well discussed, so that the public and private sectors are on an even keel.

I thought government after hearing so much about reform and priority would have tried to do capital work that is only absolutely necessary and that can be completed this year. We see the government removing duty and my position has always been that it does not help our people because there is no mechanism in place to ensure that the benefits of removing the duty are passed on to our people.

At the same time, they lose the revenue, they have to go out and borrow and pay a lot of interest, and the country loses that much more. And the cost of living keeps going up, and the poor get poorer. There are no mechanisms to ensure that the fruit or the bakery items will result in cheaper prices for the people of this country. But it seems that some members like this arrangement because it affords them the support of a certain sector.

While I am elected to look out for the interests of everyone, I always consider the plight of the poorer people. It is no longer of any use to anybody in this House to believe that there are not poor people in this country. Everywhere you go they are complaining about the fees that government hit them with every time they turn around. This year, in particular, I have seen and heard more of that because of the fee on education.

While people can say it is not a high fee to pay for educating your child, it is a fact that this is a serious burden for families that have three or four children attending school. They not only have to pay for books they have to buy uniforms. And people are finding it difficult. All the more reason why government needs to find the alternatives I have been talking about, or some kind of alternative. But certainly, they need to do something about the high cost of living and government contributes to the increasing cost of living. The evidence is very clear that the old way of doing things has stopped working. If it had not stopped, government could be in a better position and the country the better for it.

There are several places in the budget that, if treated in a different manner, would have resulted in a better Loan Bill. If they took off the $16 million they are borrowing, the $27 million might be all that they could do this year. I found quite a bit of capital expenditure that, had some members of Executive Council been more considerate with the capital development for this year, need not be in the budget at this time. I said in Finance Committee that it cannot be fair for the Cayman Brac minister to ask for another civic centre/hurricane shelter when there exists a large one there now, and the good veterans of Cayman Brac are going to build one.

It cannot be prudent when there is such a shortage of funds, nor fair, when West Bay and George Town have no civic centre/hurricane shelter as such.

In 1988, the representatives for West Bay said that we would put our civic centre on hold while we built a badly needed school hall for the John A. Cumber Primary School. This has been done. However, only some $500,000 has been put in the budget for this year for West Bay. Nevertheless, the government agreed to my motion in Finance Committee to get on with the building of the civic centre/hurricane shelter in a more meaningful way this year. Now that they have agreed with me, I hope they are going to keep with the spirit and the intent of that motion. But I have my doubts after listening to the Minister of Works.

I know what I heard in Finance Committee, and the manoeuvring that took place so as not to pass that motion. But they are coming behind me, and perhaps they can say otherwise. We all know that I can ask a question, but I am limited and they have full sway in the answer and can say anything they want to.

The fact is that Executive Council is allowing another civic centre in Cayman Brac and we are not well underway with ours. We put it sensibly back to build the school hall, but now that that has been done I would have thought that this year's estimates would have contained a far bigger share to get going with the civic centre/hurricane shelter. And it would seem to me that in a district with a population as big as West Bay that priority should have been given to that district and the district the size of George Town, to get our civic centres/hurricane shelters built.

I said to the minister that if the Aston Ruddy Centre roof needs to be strengthened—well do that. Money could have been voted to do that. But to embark on a project that would make Cayman Brac have three civic centre/hurricane shelters—when others have none—cannot be fair to the country and cannot be prudent. I would say that if we cannot get any more done than begin the civic centre some time around June this year, that hopefully it would be built.

We hear a lot about the amount of money in the budget for COS. It seems to me, in spite of all the uproar now from the civil service about it, and statements made by Executive Council through the Minister of Tourism, that Executive Council meant it to be continued or else some explanation should have been made to the civil service and the country about its inclusion in the budget, and its continuance. But no, nothing has been or was said at that time.

I contend that that if they were genuine, it was a good time for them to have made it known to the public, the civil service, and it would only have been fair to say 'We are including this thing in the budget and this is what we are doing about it.' No, they didn't do that, and this situation is the same as removing the funds for the past pension liabilities—nothing said until we found it and it blew up.

The loan position was given this morning, and we stand now at $82.4 million, plus $15 million, which is said to be self-financing. That was at 31 December last year. But this year's borrowing will put us to the $100 million mark. As I understand it, this does not include the contingent liabilities that are for the various authorities. But we do know that those authorities pay their way, plus the public service pension funds. All of it! No matter whether they have a legal obligation or not, the fact is that they have an obligation.

So, if they had moved in the direction to put those funds in place it makes much sense cut down on the capital expenditure that cannot be done this year instead of all the funds that were left after recurrent and other expenditure. Instead of sending the eight point something million to capital expenditure, some of that should have been put into the civil service.

Now, I know they will be quick to jump up to say they are putting in the civil service. They are taking copious notes over there. But I hope they are listening and will get it right, because they certainly didn't get it right in the budget process. They made a mess of the situation!

This amount of $100 million in borrowing, while they say we can pay it back . . . thank God we are in a position to do so. But it does not mean that because we are in a position to do so that we should borrow when we could do something else. I don't think that the government is being prudent in this matter. Can they get all $44 million of capital development done this year? Can they? That is the question. That is why we are borrowing so much.

This is an election year. And we know what that is all about. Everybody wants to look good. We want roads, we want buildings; we want all those things. But, as I said, wants and the reality of what can be done are different. I know they will tell me that this is what has always been done, and that's probably true. But it is time that we moved to a different level using a different road.

I don't think that I can support this Loan Bill because there is no evidence that all the work can be done. I don't think they are being prudent. They are certainly not prioritising. Therefore, I don't see why I should support the government in rushing ahead with this expenditure.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take the luncheon suspension. We shall suspend until 2.15 PM.

The Deputy Clerk: Clause 2. Amendment of section 3—Establishment of Council.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2 do stand part of the Bill.

The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I would like an explanation so that I am not accused of passing laws that I don't understand. Where we are giving the National Drug Council the right to borrow money, I would like section 16 (c) of the National Drug Council Law explained to me, where it says, "(c) any money lawfully borrowed by the Council;" Can someone explain to me the necessity of what "lawfully borrowed" means now in the law?

Hon. Anthony Eden: Mr. Chairman, the representative from North Side spoke to me about this and I asked the Attorney General to kindly comment on this. My understanding is that this section does not give the power to borrow. I don't know if he could just expand on this for the benefit of the committee.

The Chairman: The honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Thank you.

That represents my view of that section. Although it does talk about "lawfully borrowed," the section in itself doesn't in my opinion confer upon the National Drugs Council a power to borrow. It simply says "any money lawfully borrowed." It doesn't empower it to borrow. Whereas the section that is supposed to be amended is the section that contains the powers of the National Drugs Council. So, in my opinion, there is no contradiction between the two, it simply is a case of adding an express power to borrow as well as to solicit funds.

The Chairman: Any further debate? If not, I shall put the question that Clause 2 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 29/99

GOVERNMENT ACTION NEEDED IN TAXI, WATERSPORTS AND TOUR OPERATORS

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you.

When we last offered our contribution to Private Member's Motion 29/99 Government Action needed in Taxi, Watersports and Tour Operators, I had made a number of observations and comments on the way this government has taken action to assist the watersports, taxi and tour bus operators.

I mentioned that in either 1994 or 1995 (I never had the time to check which year it was) this government took the decision to amend legislation, both the Customs Law and the Traffic Law, requiring government permission be obtained before any boats for commercial purposes could be imported into this country; and secondly that vehicles with a seating capacity above nine seats would also be required to seek governments permission to import and register that vehicle. That decision was the government's move to ensure that the small operator was allowed to operate his business and not be overrun by the bigger operations.

The tour bus operators are mainly local people, and those who are not indigenous Caymanians are actually persons who possess Caymanian status. We wanted to ensure that the small operator did not get overrun by the importation of boats to add to a fleet of boats already in place, thus carving out a bigger part of the market share reducing the share going to the individual watersport operator or taxi or tour bus operation, namely the 14-seats, eight or nine seats.

We know that government has also assisted the watersports operators, that is the local operators who operate out of the North Sound and who deal with snorkelling and bonefishing and other services. The Ministry of Tourism through the Department of Tourism has been paying for advertisement of their services in Horizon magazine and What's Hot? for the last three years or more to ensure they have exposure. We know that Destination Cayman is put in the back of the seat on the airline so the tourists have access to it and can glean services available and provided in the country.

We also have these same operators on our website where the world can find out who they are, and how to reach them. So, government has been assisting those operators for quite some time and will continue to do so.

We know that the Select Committee on the Immigration Law and the Trade and Business Licensing Law has met twice. And although the arrow is pointed in the direction of the Ministry of Tourism, nothing has ever been recommended in this Select Committee for those same persons we say need help. But I could go on to say that government is considering a number of matters that it hopes to be able to bring in consultation with the watersports operators—mainly those involved with snorkelling in the North Sound and Bonefishing—and we hope that when we bring those proposals to the Legislative Assembly that we will gain the support to put it all through.

I have always taken the approach (and I think the people of this country understand this approach) that it's easier to promise than to deliver. When I promise to do something, I have a good sense that I can do it and get it done. Otherwise, I will tell you that it may be possible, but I will have to work on it.

I am not a person who makes statements just for the sake of making a statement, creating some hope by someone that Tom Jefferson is going to do something for them when in reality I know that it cannot be done. And that is what happens sometimes in this country whether it's an election year or not. A lot of times people are telling people what those people want to hear and sometimes those people find out that he or she promised but it did not happen. And I am wondering whether the approach that I use is not the best approach in the end.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: You notice he never said "the government"? He said "I"!

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: One of the members is basically suggesting that I am saying "I." I must say that I am saying "I" because I am speaking for Thomas Jefferson, I am not speaking for the government at this particular time. Every one of us has the ability to speak for himself, so I leave that to each respective person on this side of the House, whom I respect.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbets: Make Truman say that for himself.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I want to say . . . and I am going to be a bit repetitive, so I hope you will bear with me. I have heard so many promises in this House, and sometimes so much noise about a particular issue, and yet when it comes to a time when some action could be recommended, nothing happens. I am saying that because I know that the Select Committee dealing with the Immigration Law and the Local Companies Law and the Trade and Business Law . . . this is the second occasion since I have been here as Minister of Tourism that we have talked about a number of things, but nothing really got put forward to the public as issues as we see them in order to take public opinion on it.

I don't believe that on this occasion (and I don't want to leak any information, and if I am out of order, Mr. Speaker, I will bend to your ruling), but I would like to say that I hope to see in the next release of information to the public that there are some recommendations about these people to help them, meaning the taxi drivers, the watersports and tour operators among others.

I would venture to say (and this is the one time I am going to go on "I") that my record in assisting those people is as good as any—and better than most! But I can tell you that talk is indeed cheap. If anyone believes it is a simple matter to resolve this problem as they perceive it and as they say it is, I hope that in the not too distant future they will have responsibility for the subject. Let me sit back and see how long they take to make any forward movement.

We have taken over the responsibility for the registration and licensing of vehicles. For the first time in the history of this government, we have seen a sub-office for it. We did that about two years ago in West Bay. And at the moment, we have agreement with an owner of property in the Bodden Town area to establish a second sub-office for vehicle licensing purposes, which we promised the people last year we were going to do. We have to apologise because we didn't get it done, but there are always extenuating circumstances why it didn't happen. Believe me, they were there at this particular time too.

When we went to drawings and costing we realised that we were talking about $300,000 for this facility. And the location we were looking at at the time was near the police station in Bodden Town, which is also near the health clinic, which is also near the civic centre, which we recently created a field next door and we said as this facility in Bodden Town will also deal with inspections of large vehicles we felt it was not the correct location for this facility. So we have moved to a different site. But it remains within the Bodden town area, and I believe the location of it, having visited it accompanied by members of the Bodden Town district. Others from other districts were invited. Unfortunately, they were unable to be present at that time. I agree it was short notice, but we couldn't avoid that.

For the first time in the history of the Cayman Islands, we established a bus depot. And never before were bus routes coordinated where a bus can take you from one end of the island to the other.

It is easy to say 'Well, you had enough time to do it, so we hope you come with a proposal today.' Why was there no proposal put forward in Select Committee, since they know what to do? For all the time I have been in the House, I have never spent so much time in this House in my life as we have in the last two years in particular! So much so that when members make remarks saying 'We raised this in November, and you had time to do it, so we hope you have a proposal.' We've been in here since November! Granted, we took a little break for Christmas, but we've been in here since November.

So where is all this time going to come from when in fact we are running ministries with more responsibilities than just one item? But I am going to let my voice be heard on this issue, and when I am finished, I am going to let the people of this country decide whether or not Tom Jefferson has been helpful to that industry or not.

There was a time when they were asking that racks to hold brochures be installed in hotels. And we came with the legislation requiring it to be done. Yes, there are hiccoughs with it. And there will be with most things in life, especially when you are blazing trails and making changes. But we have to keep working at it to hopefully put it into a frame we can all agree is working to our satisfaction.

In my view, what is required is a global view of these services. We need to look at the number of seats in a taxi or tour bus, or in an omnibus. We need to look at the number of seats available to visitors coming in by cruise ship. We have 1100 seats available at the port. Just about every week there is some request to add another person or bus to that operation. I believe that in the best interests of the people already there we have to look at it in depth because we know that at peak season (October to April) there's 1100 seats. The people who own them are able to make a decent living. The problem comes when the summer season comes (May to September) where there are too many seats for the number of visitors coming.

I am saying that there is a need for the Public Transport Board to look at this in depth. And I have asked them to. But there needs to be some time to carefully sort out the way forward, otherwise all the people in that business could be receiving less income because there are too many seats and too many providers.

I believe that I have held discussions with members operating from the dock providing watersports activities. We have talked about the signs down there; we have talked about having a desk to book these people, and we have gone round and round in circles on this trying to ensure that we are providing the service these operators wish to have.

There is also an agreement between those watersports operators at the dock and me that no further persons will be allowed into the dock without consultation with them because that will also cause their share to be less. And I have requested a listing of their passenger capacity if they all come together. I believe there is a serious need for us to pursue it along those lines.

But we are working on a number of issues and I think the public has come to its conclusion so I am only summarising. We are working on a number of issues that affect watersports operators in the North Sound. We are working on a number of issues that affect taxi drivers, tour bus and omnibus operators. We now have our public transport inspectors who are carrying out a variety of inspections both on the routes, to make sure that persons assigned to a particular route are adhering to that route and not pinching business from some other person's route. We are also looking at the facilities of those vehicles. We will also be looking at the persons driving tour buses among other things.

So, we have a number of issues we are working on. I will be coming back to the House in the not too distant future to seek members' approval on some proposals. Not to say they cannot be amended. We have no problem with this particular motion because we are working on it already in any case.

The Speaker: The floor is open for debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you.

This matter dealing with taxi drivers and watersports operators seems to be like what Jesus said about the poor.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Always with us!

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: It's been with us for some time.

This is an area that I feel very passionate about because for a period of a year and one half I depended on the transport industry for an honest livelihood. Many attempts have been made to address issues that affect these respective areas, that is, Caymanians involved in the watersports industry in the tour bus and taxi industry.

I have personally brought a number of motions dealing with these issues. I recall back in 1994 or 1995 I brought a motion dealing with the control of local businesses in the hands of Caymanians. That motion dealt specifically with watersports and taxi operators and the like.

The Minister of Tourism mentioned that quite a bit had been done in addressing these issues. I, for one, am not prepared to say that nothing has been done. But there is still much work to be done in order to create an environment where all Caymanians who depend on these areas for their livelihood have a chance to operate. What I see happening . . . and this is nothing new, it has existed since I was in the industry back in 1985. The industry is basically controlled by a few very large special interest groups. That hasn't changed over the years.

I must say that there is some organisation from the dock in that there is now a system in place that requires operators to line up and wait their respective turns for business. But one observation I made is that I recall when I was in the business we had two lines at the dock, the small taxi operator, and one for the 14 and 30-seaters.

In order to get the best position in the queue it was necessary to be at the dock from 5.30 in the morning when they drew numbers. The number you drew determined the position you took in the queue. It was very difficult, after being up at that hour of the morning, to not move until 9.00 or 10.00 in the morning because the first batch went to the snorkelling area off the dock, and tours. But you could sit there as an independent operator until 9.00 or 10.00 in the morning before you had an opportunity to move.

When your turn came, if you saw an individual or a couple who needed transportation to the airport, it was very difficult, after being in line for four or five hours, to have to pull out of line to meet that demand for maybe $9, because when you got back you had to queue up at the end of the line. I understand there has been a change in the system. With that system the small taxi operators could accommodate that request and come right back and get in the little queue (because there were five or six of them). So, they moved quite quickly and frequently.

Some time ago, it was agreed that the independent taxi and tour bus operators could have a brochure rack in the hotels where they could display their brochures. I am not saying it hasn't improved the potential business to some extent. But the staff at hotels are still being told that under no circumstance should they refer business to independent operators because there are concessions that have been granted by these hotels.

If we had one big operator controlling one hotel, we could say we have four or five other hotels so somebody else would be in the position to get the other hotels. But that's not the case. One major watersports operator basically controls 75% of the business coming out of a majority of the hotels.

It appears that we are fighting a losing battle in getting assistance for our people. Things are tough in this country for the average Caymanian interested in making an honest living. I think the time has come where hotels have to be told that the concessions or franchises they have in place in regard to their watersports services have to be not renewed, or they have to be mutually terminated.

When you are out there as a watersports operator holding up your little sign trying to solicit business, and you see passengers by the hundreds being organised through the cruise directors for special interest groups in that business . . . it all boils down to money. The cruise ship directors are going to push for any entity that gives them the highest return. It's simple as that.

The Cayman Islands is a very important destination for these cruise ships. It helps them to sell their cruise. I personally think that the time has come to negotiate in good faith. More has to be done to influence the cruise ships to book only a certain amount of passengers for tours, be it island tours or watersports. I also believe it can be done. And if they were told that they have to do it, they would probably cooperate. We have a large percentage of independent tour operators, taxi operators and watersports operators here in the Cayman Islands—the majority of which are Caymanian—who run reputable, reliable services. We want them to make their passengers aware that it is not necessary for them to book their tours from the ship, but they can come ashore and negotiate with these independent operators for their tour.

I also believe that there should be someplace on the dock where a booth could be set up that makes cruise ship passengers aware of the services being offered locally. Many of us sit in here in comfort, suggesting things, and if it takes six months to a year to do, fine. But it's a totally different situation when you are there being affected on a daily basis.

I feel very passionate about this issue. We have the local transportation system organised. But I believe that it really has not achieved what the main objective was. The main objective was that you limit the number of licenses so there will be a fair chance to make an honest, decent living. Basically what has happened is that we have issued—not we, government! Government has issued a licence to basically anybody who was there operating at the time the new system was put in place.

I don't think we can please everybody. I personally believe that our first obligation is to look out for Caymanians. I have been preaching that for the past 12 years that I have been a member of this House. And I am preaching it for two reasons: (1) I have a genuine interest in the welfare of Caymanians; and (2) I am aware that the way of life we enjoy today depends on Caymanians continuing to feel they are getting their fair share of whatever business exists in this country.

Being a taxi, tour bus, or watersports operator is not a very glorified position. The attitudes that I have seen displayed over the years is that they are more of a nuisance and they had to do something in order to appease them, rather than looking out for those individuals.

Mr. Speaker, I don't know how often you go out to eat. I do at least one a week. The feedback that I get is that the visitor to this country is looking for the experience of meeting the local people. Now, even government, the civil service in particular, is the greatest culprit in regard to this issue. When you call most offices nowadays, the person answering has an accent. Right? Well, Mr. Speaker, in my mind there is no necessity for that. Every year we have three or four hundred students graduating from the high school. Does it take somebody with a degree to answer the telephone?

There is a little passage in the Bible that says a prophet is not accepted in his own country. Believe you me, we suffer from that in this country. I am telling you, we suffer seriously from that in this country. Do you know what is bad? People in authority continue to promote the philosophy that you have to be somebody from the outside in order to be any good.

I graduated from university back in 1973. I went to a black school. And the day I finished my qualifications for graduation, I was walking across the campus reflecting my three and one half years spent at university, and I wondered what was the greatest lesson learned from the experience. I thought of accounting, economics and all the other subjects that I was exposed to. Do you know what conclusion I came to? The greatest thing I learned was that I was prepared to accept my identity. I was proud to be a Caymanian, proud to be a minority in terms of definition in the US. I was black. And I was proud of that fact.

Until we have a change in our thinking at the top, we will continue to suffer in this country. I am not a politician; I am a businessman in politics. There is a slight difference. In my opinion, the whole objective of politicians is re-election every four years. My attitude is that I do things that I think are right and that can benefit the majority of people in this country regardless if people hold it against me at the polls.

I am frustrated. I am really frustrated with what I see going on in this country. Crime is rampant. Every day you pick up the newspaper there's another prison break. I mean, what is going on? And in the meantime our people go to Hell trying to make a living.

I mentioned that I had brought a motion dealing basically with this same issue. I recall that one of the excuses I got back was that it was necessary to establish the Trade and Business Licensing Board in order to ensure that those objectives being promoted could work. The Board is in place. I personally haven't seen any tremendous improvement. As a matter of fact, I think it's gotten worse.

I think that our main responsibility as elected representatives is to look out for our Caymanian people. You might say that I am being prejudice. You can call me anything you want, that's the way I feel. If you go to someone else's country, like I did, you are told that Americans have a certain position. There are certain positions that you as a resident have no access to. That's understood. It's expected and accepted. That's the end of it. But here in this country, . . . you know, it's getting so bad that if we do not address this situation soon—and I am not just talking about the taxi, bus and watersports operators, that's just one area of problems we have. People are going to start taking matters into their own hands and we'll all lose.

It appears that nobody is prepared to deal with these issues until there is a crisis. I better shut up and sit down. Like I said, I am very passionate about this issue and frustrated that more hasn't been done in this area because a large percentage of my Caymanian people depend on these areas for an honest, decent livelihood. Much more has to be done, and much more can be done if there is a genuine interest in seeing that it is done.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take a fifteen minute break.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 4.05 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.22 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion 29/99. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: This motion before the House is a very important one resolving to do two things, that is that government immediately take whatever action may be needed to ensure that all taxis, watersports operators and tour buses operating from the Port get a fair share of the business emanating from the cruise ships operating in these Islands; and that government look at the North Sound jetty situation. It deals with the watersports industry in general.

I listened to the minister responsible for these matters, the Minister of Tourism, and he trotted out a not too long list of what accomplishments he thinks are helping these people. I can tell him—and I don't need to tell him because he knows—that this is not helping the vast majority of people in the business.

He said that government hopes to bring some proposals to the Legislative Assembly to assist the operators in the North Sound. Then he went on with a spiel about how it is easier to promise than it is to deliver, and that when he promised he had the good sense to deliver. Well, that's according to his bible! But the proof of the pudding is in the tasting, and the vast majority of what has been done has not helped the people operating taxis nor the watersports operators.

I would like to say that the minister has promised far too much for far too long and he has not delivered. The people suffer!

If these people were getting the benefits he was talking about, we would not have a letter signed by some 30 people, and other letters indicating their problems. So there is no use in his getting up in here saying what he has done to help these people and how much they are getting out of it because the sad fact is that very few are getting something out of the business.

He went on to mention something about the election year. Sure, this is an election year. He came back this election year as he did in the last election year making promises about proposals to help these people. As I said, he has not done it since 1996 and I [have no] doubt that very little will be done in the next few months of the year 2000. He said there was a lot promised in the House for far too long. That is true! But the biggest culprit is the Minister of Tourism!

A motion was brought here which recommended several things. A committee was set up and the Minister of Tourism did nothing. The committee made several recommendations, (1) that a Trade and Business Licence Board be established and that its members include the Chief Immigration Officer or his designate. Well, that has been done, but what good has come out of it for these people we are talking about?

The next recommendation was that government undertake a study to collect data to determine the numbers involved in all retail trade and industries and thereafter a decision made as to how best to resolve the expressed unsatisfactory circumstances—the same unsatisfactory circumstances we talk about year in and year out. We are now into the year 2000 and nothing has been done to satisfy the unsatisfactory circumstances. The minister did [little or nothing] to assist our people in those industries.

The committee noted that His Excellency the Governor appointed an assessor to inquire into and make a full report and recommendations concerning all tourism related transportation in the Cayman Islands including North Sound watersports operations as they are affected by tourism related transport. The concerns expressed to the committee by the watersports and transport operation would be a topic of that inquiry.

Where are the results from that inquiry? What has he done to effect better business but to stand in this House and trot out a long list of who got taxi licenses and who got this and who got that and hasn't done anything about the amount of business derived from the business coming to these islands via cruise ships and the hotel industry.

There is no use in talking to the minister about this. This report was tabled on 25 November 1996. The minister can't say that members of this House and others have not talked to him concerning this business. And what we got then is what we got today—he is going to do this, and he has the sense and the experience to do that. But when the time comes to deliver very little is done.

If you have the sense and the experience to do all the things you say are necessary, then for God's sake do them! Our people are being affected—not today, for far too long now.

He had the audacity to say that he hoped he heard something about doing something for the taxi and watersports operators in the next report of the Immigration [Select] Committee. Would you believe that after reading what I read here (the decisions made by the committee in 1996) that four years later he comes here saying that he hoped the Immigration [Select] Committee would do something about this? The Immigration [Select] Committee is just about ready to make a report and we are not discussing those things because those things came to a conclusion back in 1996, but the minister did nothing about it. Nothing!

Of course, he went on the usual trend of asking why the opposition hasn't done something, and why our proposal wasn't put forward if we can do something. We have some things to do, and I will talk about that before I finish.

He went on talking about racks for brochures. These racks are not worth one common nail driven into them because they are of hardly any use to the people. Do you know how many trips I have had in the night with the people who operate in the local watersports industry to the hotels to see the operation? The racks are down in the back of the building when the law specifically says that they should be put in a prominent place. And the only prominent place is where the rest have theirs and that is in the lobby of the hotel. No, they hide them somewhere back in the halls. Those racks aren't doing much good. It is not working.

If you ask what I have done, I have tried to do something. That's why his friends in the hotel industry don't like me. He went on to say that he has held discussions with people about putting a desk to book tours at the dock, about some agreement that no taxis be let in to the dock; working on a number of issues carrying out inspections. What he needs to inspect is the problems with the cruise ships. What he needs to inspect are the special interest groups that have the concession, the power, the wherewithal who are getting the business. That's what he needs to inspect. But there's too much vested interest.

How can the minister say that he cares or that he is doing something when they just permitted another hotel by the Youngs to give a monopoly to a foreign company to supply watersports services at the new Holiday Inn? How can they say they care when this is one of the biggest problems? And don't ask me about it because I know my father was in it from the 1950s. And when they used to operate in those days they could go to the old hotels themselves, Capt. Gleason, Capt. Marvin, Solomon Ebanks and my father, Capt. Ertis and the rest of them. They could go and get all the business they wanted. They can't put a foot in a hotel today because of the concessions that the Minister of Tourism has allowed. Not only him, but other governments allowed them as well.

The fact is that our people are not deriving the amount of business that they should from the hotels. Concessions/monopolies all same dog/puppy.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: Can I interrupt you? We have reached the hour of interruption. Will you be finished shortly?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I could be finished in another 15 minutes.

The Speaker: Is it the wish of the House that we suspend Standing Order 10(2) so that we can continue until he completes?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think we should allow the member to finish his winding up.

The Speaker: I shall put the question Those in favour of Suspending Standing Order 10(2) to allow the First Elected Member for West Bay to conclude please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I thank the House for its indulgence.

The minister went on a long spiel about politics, election year, and who has the sense to do what, and who needs to do what, and who's not doing for these people.

I would just like to read from the Hansard what he said about the same sad situation—the one he claims is so difficult to deal with. This is what he said back in 1995, and I quote: “It was not that many years ago that those operators in the North Sound who by their daily visits to a particular area of the North Sound where they had been feeding the stingrays for many, many years, developed what is now one of the most popular dive sites in the Cayman Islands. I think what is important is that they who developed it have an opportunity to reap the benefits from it.” How prophetic!

He went on to say, “We have seen the significant traffic to that area over a period of time, so much so that it is almost difficult on some days to pull up another boat. Sometimes people who are heavy on the commercial side of watersports tend to forget who actually created it.” Then why give more concessions at the hotel for the rich and the powerful few?

He went on to say, “The control of local business is not anything new. I believe that one of the reasons why the Caymanian Protection Law was put in place was with that objective in mind. If we now find that the law is not working as effectively as it was intended to, then there is need to take another step. Rather than reacting to a crises situation, I believe it is in our best interest to head off any possible crisis and to resolve it as best we can, hopefully being fair to all parties concerned. In my view, this control of local business does not affect the financial industry, it is basically dealing with people who provide local business such as in the watersports area.”

Now, he knows all of that because he's not new to Cayman. He grew up here and has been in government long enough to understand the problems our people face. Then why not do something meaningful?

This was in 1995 on the debate on a private member's motion moved then by the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

He went on to say, “I believe that the local people in the watersports industry who were there from almost as far back as I can remember are going through very difficult times. If we are, as we have been, successful in promoting tourism to our shores, whether they arrive on airlines or cruise ships, I believe that they too should get a little bit of what everybody talks about, trickle down economics, by tourism traffic.”

But that is the bad part of it. It always has to be a trickle down—the crumbs. Why not put our people in and stop the concessions in those hotels? Why not allow, when 6,000 people come off the cruise ships, our people to get a little bit more than they have gotten?

I heard him say sometime back last week that the problem with the people who operate from the dock is that they leave too early. That's a pile of nonsense! I will deal with that in a short time.

He went on to say, "Certainly, if you have a group of people who are not earning as much money from it as they believe they should, and I believe the should, then we need to take some steps to ensure that it happens. The free market system is not a solution to every problem. It does not take a genius to figure out that people with significant amounts of money can capture just about any industry in these islands. My question is, if government allows that to happen, is that fair? I say it is not."

Yet, Mr. Speaker, the very words he has said, he is allowing to happen day, after day, after day. Our people are suffering and the minister seems not to recognise it. Why?

Our people line up on that dock from 4.30 in the morning until late in the afternoon, and they still do not get any business. One of the things that hurts me most is to see people who are in their 70s, who went to sea when Cayman had nothing, and they sent home their money to help build up this country, now have to go on the waterfront of this country to stand up and hold up a little sign begging for business. It's an indictment against the management style of the Minister of Tourism who is supposed to be representing those people. It's a serious indictment.

He talked about people not spending time on the dock. I don't know where he gets his information, but that's a pile of nonsense. Our people go on that dock sometimes between 4.30 and 5.00 in the morning until the people stop coming off the cruise ships. That's the taxis and the minibuses. The people doing the North Sound trips go there from early morning also and stay as long as it makes sense. However, it makes no sense for the North Sound operators if the ship is leaving at 5.30 or 6.00 in the afternoon to stay beyond 2.30 or 3.00 in the afternoon because if they managed to get a Sting-ray City trip they need at a minimum three hours.

So, Mr. Minister of Tourism, don't talk nonsense about people not staying long enough on the docks. The fact is that they are staying there too long. What needs to be done is a regime put in place where the cruise ships adhere to the business. Now, I know that those people have something to do to help themselves. And I will come to that before I close. But it is unfair—to say the least—for the Minister of Tourism to stand in the House and talk about the people not being there long enough. You want to tell me from 4.30 in the morning until 3.00 in the afternoon with 6,000 people coming off and they go home with $50 in their pocket, or less than $100, that that's good for the country? No, it is not good because people cannot pay their mortgage, they cannot live, and the quality of life is affected.

I know because I have people in the business.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, on a point of elucidation.

The Speaker: Will you give way?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The Minister spoke for quite a long, long time, but I will hear his elucidation.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

POINT OF ELUCIDATION

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My recollection is that when I was referring to the number of people at the dock, I was talking about the earnings of taxi drivers at the dock. I asked members to query whether a person who comes to you and says that he only earned $48.00 for the month, how many days they actually worked there. I don't recall making any comment that suggested that the watersports people did not put in full time.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: What I understood from the minister when he made some reference to people making $48.00 was that if they had stayed at the dock longer (and I think those were the words he used) then . . . well, let's say the taxis. But whether they are taxis, omnibuses or whatever, the fact is that they stay there from early in the morning—from 4.30 am, 70-year-old people go there.

And the minister needs to do better. It's late in the day and he can still do something. And I hope that he dips in the River Jordan and comes on board and does something. He needs to repent of his sins!

There is no use saying that he, as Minister of Tourism, is called upon to restrict the number of vehicles operating at the dock when there are 6,000 people coming off the cruise ships and the people operating the taxis and watersports can't make $100 per day. This is absolutely ridiculous.

The minister needs to pull up his socks, or if he can't then somebody else can do better, because he said he hoped that whoever came on board could do better. I say anybody who can't do better than this shouldn't be in this House! He needs to pull up his socks and fly right!

He asked what the opposition was doing to assist them. Well, I am trying, among others. And we recognise the need for those people to be able to assist themselves. It's not that they don't want to help themselves, but I think that we can help them a little bit more. We recognise the need for them to be better organised, better able to help themselves, and provide among other things marketing, insurance, and safety standards for all to operate by. This will come through the Land and Sea Cooperative that we have formed. I trust that when we go to the minister, since he wanted us to help, that he will assist the Land and Sea Cooperative with certain things. If they can help the Cayman Brac tourism with marketing, then they can help a body like that also. And I have no problem with them helping CETA, because I appreciate the assistance.

There is no use for government to talk but not act. It seems that government can spend loads of money—over $100,000 I hear—for a PR firm to promote a Diving Hall of Fame, but refuse Land and Sea Cooperative assistance. I would hope that the minister is prepared to sit down when we get to that point to assist us. I am calling on him through this avenue to assist the Cooperative when it comes to him, but assist in a meaningful way. We need to sit down with the cruise ships.

He needs to stop the issuance of concessions. The taxi and watersports operators need to do some things themselves. Those boats that are not insured will need to get insurance. And I have approached a company about group marine insurance for them. These things will assist. I know those are some of the things keeping them back. But the fact is that the arrangements the minister made down at the dock, and especially with the concessions, have done nothing for the welfare of the people in this business.

I am appreciative for their assistance, saying they are going to vote for the motion. But there's no use to vote the motion and then take a mortar pestle and lick us in the head. If they are going to vote the motion to look good up front, assist us genuinely. Thirty people signed this petition and sent it to the minister. This is not the first time.

This thing has been going on for far too long. Why, at one point the Third Elected Member for George Town and I moved motions in the House together about the same sad situation. Other members have moved them. When can we stop moving motions and see our people with a better quality of life because government does the right thing? Assist those people in those industries. Thank you. And I thank the House for their indulgence.

The Speaker: I shall put the question on Private Member's Motion 29/99. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 29/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: I will now entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10.00 AM tomorrow.

The Speaker: Before I put the question, I have given permission to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town to raise a public matter, a matter he considers to be of an urgent nature. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Before I raise the matter, I would ask your permission to make a remark or two to the Chair, if I may sir.

The Speaker: Certainly.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you.

Out of deference to the Chair, I circulated the statement to the honourable Leader of Government Business and the honourable First Official Member prior to this. I had some trepidation doing that, and being someone who is outspoken I want to say why.

I don't consider it my business to make anyone look good in this House. So I gave in to you out of respect for you; but I have a heavy heart, and I gave it with a heavy heart. And I want to say that. I hope that in doing so (to coin an old phrase of my mother's) I didn't buy a whip for my own hide. I hope that it is understood that I consider the matter serious and a matter to be raised. That is one of the reasons I acceded to your request, because you are such an honourable gentleman.

When you called me yesterday afternoon I knew immediately what the call was about. I have nothing but the best interests of the country at heart. I hope that both the official and elected arms of government will take it in that light. I want them to consider that I have extended a courtesy. I expect that their reply is going to be in like fashion and serious.

I hope that there is nothing I can interpret as personal, because, believe you me, I will show them the teeth of Frankenstein if there is.

The Speaker: If you will give me a moment, I would like to address you on that.

I would like to say to honourable members that what the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town has stated is correct. After reading the statement I felt it was of such an important nature to the country that the person answering needed pre-knowledge in order to give a proper answer. I took the initiative to call him and request his cooperation. He gave it, and I immediately drafted a letter thanking him for returning my call and also for acceding to my request. I sincerely feel that this is in the best interest of the Cayman Islands. My decision was simply made in that vein.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

RAISING OF PUBLIC MATTER

Standing Order 11

JUVENILE GANG ACTIVITY UNREST AT NORTHWARD PRISON ESCAPES FROM THE CENTRAL POLICE STATION LOCK-UP FACILITY

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 11 to raise matters that I consider to be of national interest. These matters concern the apparent recent rise in juvenile gang activity, the continued state of unrest at Northward Prison and the recent spate of escapes from the Central Police Station lock-up facility.

Mr Speaker, in the Editorial of Tuesday 8 February 2000, the Caymanian Compass newspaper, in the opening paragraph, stated: "Cayman seems to work itself up to a point where we finally have to admit openly that we have a problem with juvenile violence."

Having raised the question of gang activity in the schools some years ago, I am alarmed that the government, including the elected ministers, has treated the matter with such nonchalance so as to allow it to reach almost pandemic proportions at this time.

In the second instance, there seems to be no good reason for the wider public to be content with the state of affairs at Northward Prison. Just yesterday, there was a report from one of the major merchant establishments of one of its employees being assaulted by a prisoner while delivering stores at the prison. Then, too, there are continuing reports of unrest and gang activity inside the Prison. In the recent past, one of the news media carried a story of one prisoner being wounded as a result of a fracas among prisoners.

Added to this litany is the most recent escape from the Central Police lock-up facility of a group of prisoners, which the authorities describe as "dangerous."

Mr Speaker, I call on both the official members and elected ministers of the government to inform this honourable House as to what the government has done or is doing so that the citizens of this country can feel some semblance of safety; and also feel that the social control agencies are operating with such effectiveness that the national security in our country is not at risk by disruptive elements.

In conclusion, let me record my concern, disappointment and alarm at both the official and elected arm of government, but more so with the elected arm since in its 1996 Manifesto, the National Team Government promised continued stability, peace and good order in the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise on behalf of the government to speak to the three issues which have been raised by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. These issues are (1) the apparent recent rise in juvenile gang activity; (2) the continued unrest at Northward Prison; and (3) the recent escapes from the Central Police Station Lockup facility. I will deal with each of these.

As a former principal of a high school in the Cayman Islands which had students come in from different districts, I am well aware of geographical groupings within a school. I believe that this holds true of the John Gray High School and the George Hicks High School with these groups from the different districts.

There were three crimes reported to the police which can be attributed to juvenile gangs between late 1999 and the early part of this year. They were (1) a security guard attacked on Walker's Road; (2) a passer-by was assaulted on Walker's Road; and (3) a student leaving school was terrorised by a juvenile gang. There were a further two suggested gang related incidents at schools. Of the three incidents I mentioned, all were investigated and detected by the police. The offenders are charged and before the courts.

The government has not been sitting idly by on this issue. There have been meetings and briefings with Executive Council by the Commissioner of Police. He has established a special team of police officers to work on gang related matters. Four Royal Cayman Islands Police Officers are currently in the United States attending a course on policing juvenile gang activity. There was a recent programme on CITN Issues 27, and I requested the Commissioner of Police to make himself available to be on the panel that spoke and he fielded questions on that occasion. I believe much useful discussion and information came out of that programme.

The second point I want to deal with is what the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town called the continued state of unrest at Northward Prison. Following the riots at Northward Prison on 30 September and 1 October, immediate efforts were made to recruit a temporary director for that facility. This was accomplished in November and since that time he has systematically gone about restoring security, good order, and discipline at Northward.

However, it is not easy to bring a facility such as Northward under complete good order and discipline following the incidents that took place. Since mid November 1999, we have been able to restore most of the buildings that housed inmates and we have re-instituted many normal daily routines which ensure that inmates can be locked up when required.

A search was carried out of the Northward Prison compound before the prison authorities went back to a lockdown position, and the number of items that could be used as weapons were found. A further quantity of weapons and tools were either surrendered or discovered by staff in January. Then, on Tuesday, 8 February (yesterday), a metal detector search of the compound was carried out and a few other items were recovered. The temporary director has instituted a programme of cell and area searches which will be part of normal operations.

It is to be expected that where there are significant numbers of inmates of different nationalities housed on the same compound that there will be occasional problems. Within the last two weeks, the temporary director has been able to significantly increase the employment for inmates at Northward, but there is the need to rebuild the workshops that were destroyed by fire in the riots to ensure that more inmates are employed. To echo the temporary director's words at Finance Committee, the devil finds work for idle hands.

Next week it is planned to reopen the educational classrooms and operate a full timetable of classes thereby providing purposeful activities for further groups of inmates.

The perimeter fence is still a cause of concern, but the matter is being dealt with on an urgent basis and the new perimeter fence will be erected as soon as the materials arrive on the island. I want to again thank the Finance Committee for authorising funds for that.

Additionally, 20 prison staff from the UK were recruited last month and the first of these will arrive in Cayman on 27 February. The 24 cells which are under construction at Northward are slated to be completed the 1st week of March. Once completed the male inmates now housed at Tent City will be relocated to Northward. This new accommodation will enable prison authorities to locate inmates in living units appropriate to their security category and behaviour, and should also help to break up any groupings that have been formed.

The escape of prisoners held at Central Police Station is indeed a tragedy. A combination of factors including the apparent substandard construction of the building, coupled with poor prisoner management by individuals is attributed to their escape. An investigation into the escapes has been ordered.

Security at Central Police Station was immediately upgraded as PWD strengthened the physical structure, while stricter procedures for prisoner movement have been implemented by the Commissioner of Police. A sizeable task force led by a chief inspector is dedicated to the recapture of these prisoners.

At a meeting earlier this week, between Executive Council and the Commissioner of Police Government agreed, subject to the approval of Finance Committee, for the recruitment of 24 trained and experienced police officers from the UK to assist the stretched resources of the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service. In the meantime, overtime payments will be made to off-duty police officers, again subject to approval of Finance Committee, to offer better cover for this country.

I would like to point out that the government has devoted a considerable amount of its time and efforts to law enforcement matters and has taken positive action to deal with these problems.

In closing, I should like to point out that reported crime in the Cayman Islands for the year ending 31 December 1999 was 12% less than it was in 1998. While I would not wish to minimise the serious incidents that have taken place, I would like to assure this honourable House and the listening public that all efforts are being taken to ensure that this country is as safe and secure as we possibly can make it. Thank you.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay. I really don't want to get into a debate, so please remember that.

STATEMENT BY MEMBER

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, no, but this is an important matter and not too long ago, in fact in 1998, I asked on the same Standing Order at the end of the day that a task force be set up. But I will say this: We have to realise that we have a problem before we can deal with the problem. The fact is that our community feels it. I started a series of meetings to form district forums. The one thing we need is statistics and information. I had the Director of Social Services come. At the last minute she had to withdraw because of the flack she was receiving. That is not good. We have to have information, and the public needs to have information. I take a dim view of any pressure put on any civil servant when they should be giving the information and assisting representatives with information.

That was in 1998 after a young man was killed. We were in denial then. I hope that that denial is not going to continue. There is no use saying that we have a decrease in crime. The fact is that we are contending with some very serious crime. I certainly thank the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town for raising this issue today.

The Speaker: I will now put the question that this honourable House do adjourn until tomorrow. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

PRESENTATIONS OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

THIRD INTERIM REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE HOUSE DEALING WITH THE IMMIGRATION LAW, THE LOCAL COMPANIES (CONTROL) LAW AND THE TRADE AND BUSINESS LICENSING LAW

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to lay on the Table of the House the Third Interim Report of the Select Committee of the whole House dealing with The Immigration Law, The Local Companies (Control) Law and The Trade and Business Licensing Law.

The Speaker: So ordered. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: If I may.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, the Select Committee to review The Immigration Law, The Local Companies (Control) Law and The Trade and Business Licensing Law was established by this Honourable House on 21st April 1997 with the passing of Government Motion 1/97 moved by the First Official Member. Government Motion No. 1/97, which established the Committee, set out its terms of reference as follows:

“WHEREAS there is considerable inter-relationship between the Immigration Law, 1992, the Local Companies (Control) Law (1995 Revision) and the Trade and Business (Licensing) Law (1996 Revision);

“AND WHEREAS there has been considerable passage of time since these Laws were enacted or substantially amended;

“AND WHEREAS a Select Committee entitled ‘Select Committee (of Elected Members) Control of Local Businesses’ made certain recommendations in its final Report to this Honourable House;

“BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Immigration Law, 1992, the Local Companies (Control) Law (1995 Revision) and the Trade and Business (Licensing) Law (1996 Revision) be referred to a Select Committee of the whole House, without prejudice to the final Report of the Select Committee (of Elected Members) Control of Local Businesses, for review to formulate principles in accordance with which specific amendments to these and any other relevant laws may be drafted and brought to this Honourable House by the Honourable First Official Member;

“AND BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT, in considering the matter, the Select Committee seek input from the public.”

Mr. Chairman, the Committee has thus far held 16 meetings, on five days of which the Committee met members of the public.

The Committee has tabled in this Honourable House two interim Reports, the first of which was laid on the 17th day of December 1997, and the second on the 19th day of November 1998.

In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 74(1) the Committee wishes to report that although it has not as yet concluded the work referred to it, it wishes at this time to make various issues for consideration by the public concerning immigration issues. These are set out as follows (and I would propose to give an outline of these issues as contained in the report for the benefit of the listening public). Issues for consideration by the public: The Committee has thus far addressed five main immigration issues, which are: Caymanian status, permanent residence, British Dependent Territories Citizenship, work permits, and procedure for appeals, and puts forward, for consideration by the public, the following issues for possible changes:

(a) Caymanian status: That the Law should remain unchanged in regard to the provisions for acquisition of Caymanian status by birth and descent (section 15 (1) and (2) refer), but that in regard to the acquisition or loss of status by grant that the following criteria should be met:

- (i) Acquisition of Caymanian status by grant:
 - ◆ A person wishing to apply for the grant of status should have resided within the Islands for a period of 25 years and shall have at least five years' residence immediately preceding submission of an application.

- ◆ The person should be an existing permanent resident.
- ◆ All evidence of qualification should be submitted to the Immigration Department for processing and determination by that Department and that such determination should be made on the basis of the application and supporting documentation and not in a discretionary manner.

(ii) Loss of Caymanian status by grant: That it is not necessary to make any changes to the current Law in regard to the loss of Caymanian status by grant, but that the loss of status upon reaching the age of 18 years should be examined,

That –

- ◆ the Governor-in-Council should have no part in the granting of Caymanian status,
- ◆ the power under the current Law, which gives the Governor-in-Council the power to make directions, should be repealed,
- ◆ there should be legislative participation in the issuing of Directives.

(b) Permanent Residence: That applications for Permanent Residence should be considered under three categories:

1. Retirees;
2. Existing residents with Caymanian connections; and
3. Existing residents without Caymanian connections.

In respect of:

- (i) Retirees: That a person must be of independent means, be required to have a minimum annual income and have investments of not less than CI$250,000. This form of residence would not allow a person the right to work.
- (ii) Existing Residents with Caymanian connections: That such persons must have the capacity to be self-supporting, should not require a qualifying period of residence and have the right to work without restrictions.
- (iii) Existing Residents without Caymanian connections: That a qualifying period of at least 15 years' residence should apply prior to submission of an application by a person who must have the capacity to be self-supporting and that such persons should have the right to work without restrictions.

In relation to all categories, all applicants should have a clear criminal record, all assets used in qualifying for residence should be retained and that persons retain Permanent Residence if they become destitute, provided that such destitution is not a result of their own acts and they are not a charge on the country.

Loss of Permanent Residence: That no changes are necessary to the present Law.

(c) British Dependent Territories Citizenship (BDTC):

- ◆ That an amendment to the British Nationality Act 1981 should be sought to provide that BDTC shall not be granted to any person who does not have Caymanian status, but shall be granted, upon application, to any person who has status.
- ◆ That the Government of the Cayman Islands should discuss with other overseas' territories their willingness to adopt the same position on this issue, prior to a submission to the Government of the United Kingdom.

(d) Work Permits:

- ◆ That, if changes are made as set out in paragraphs which I have just said regarding status, residence and BDTC, that thereafter work permits should be issued only for five years in aggregate and such policy should apply across-the-board, irrespective of nationality or category of occupation.
- ◆ That applications for non-controversial work permit renewals should be dealt with administratively by the Immigration Department, but by the Board in cases where controversy exists.

(e) Appeals Procedure:

That the present Law should be varied so as to provide that:

- ◆ Appeals in respect of decisions relating to Caymanian status and Permanent Residence should be dealt with by a magistrate appointed for that purpose by the Chief Justice and shall be based as a matter of law.
- ◆ Appeals on decisions relating to work permits (both renewals and grants) should be heard by a tribunal comprised of three persons with the chairman being a person with legal qualifications and appointed by the Governor, one member representing employers and one member representing employees. Members of the Legislative Assembly should not qualify to represent either employers or employees or be a chairman.

Generally, that the Immigration Law should contain minimum discretionary powers so as to eliminate arbitrary decisions and to remove all elements of discretion by the Immigration Board and that the Immigration Department, except where there exist controversial cases, should administer all renewals.

Taking this slightly out of order, Mr. Speaker, Private Member's Motions 5/99 and 12/99 that some of the concerns relating to those persons mentioned in those private member's motions will be the subject of separate deliberations when the Committee resumes its work.

Lastly, Public Input: I said earlier that these issues have been put forward for consideration by the public and it is now proposed that the public be invited to give feedback on the issues contained in the report either through their elected representatives or in writing to the Select Committee through the Clerk of the Committee, PO 890, Grand Cayman within 30 days of the tabling of this Third Interim Report.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say as Chairman of the Select Committee, in my ordinary capacity as Attorney General, I have found this to be a privilege to serve in this way on a very important topic. And I would like to simply acknowledge that I have tried to act as a facilitator in this process since I am clearly not from the islands.

However, I would like to pay tribute to the work of all the Members of this Legislative Assembly in the work of the Select Committee and congratulate them on having reached a degree of consensus on this issue and look forward to working further with them on the topic.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Moving on to item number 4, Other Business, Private Member's Motion No. 30/99, Government Assistance for Local Farming Community, to be moved by the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTION

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 30/99

GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE FOR LOCAL FARMING COMMUNITY

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to move Private Member's Motion No. 30/99, Government Assistance for Local Farming Community, which reads:

"WHEREAS much money and effort has been made by both Government and the local farming community to promote local agriculture and farming;

"AND WHEREAS as a result of these efforts the Island is now self-sufficient in certain fruits and vegetables and much progress has also been made with respect to improving the supply of local beef, pork and poultry;

"AND WHEREAS the local farming community is experiencing difficulty finding a sufficient market for its products and, as a result, many of the local farmers are concerned with their financial survival;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government take immediate steps to meet with representatives of the local farming community to discuss ways that Government can assist the local farming community to ensure its financial survival."

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 30/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, the reason why this motion is being moved is that late last year (I cannot remember exactly what month it was) I had representation from the local farming community who met with me to express their concerns with respect to the difficulties they were having as local farmers with regard to the sale of their products.

After listening to them, I said I would do whatever I could in order to assist and the best way I could do it was probably through a private member's motion, and that is why I agreed to move this motion.

Mr. Speaker, with regard to agriculture, much has been done by Government in order to provide the idea of agriculture in this country. I am always very pleased when I visit the Agricultural Pavilion especially the Agricultural day on Ash Wednesday. It really pleases me to see the quality of the products and animals that are reared here in the Cayman Islands by our local farmers.

Mr. Speaker, there are certain individuals in this country . . . and the first one that comes to mind is Mr. Ebanks in North Side who has devoted his entire life to farming. I have been there quite a few times and I am also impressed with regard to the entire operations. He is into products like cassava, potato, plantains, and he is also into farming of pigs.

Mr. Speaker, I recall as a boy being involved in feeding pigs that my Dad used to raise. I can guarantee you that our operation looked nothing like his (Mr. Ebanks'). His is a very clean operation, very well organised, very modern and it is a delight to see the devotion and commitment that has gone into farming by this particular gentleman.

You know, what also surprises me, because I have done it on a number of occasions where I had to call him and say, 'Mr. Ebanks, I need 50 pounds of pork and I need some plantains, cassava' and all the other things that go along with cooking that particular meat, his prices and the quality of his products are excellent.

We have a number of other farmers. I know the Minister in his district has some. The other name that comes to mind is Mr. Otto Watler, who has been involved in this industry a very long time. So, these individuals and Government have spent a considerable amount of time and effort in order to promote local farming.

What has also been very positive is that through the Ministry of Agriculture, the Agricultural Department, there is also expertise available for the local farmers to draw on. If they need advice with regard to any particular plant or animal, normally that advice is available free of cost.

Mr. Speaker, I recall when the Third Elected Member for George Town was the Minister of Agriculture. We did a number of farm visits and I was very impressed, like I said, as we visited different farms, with the quality of the products and fruits that we being grown and also the high quality of the animals that were also being raised.

Mr. Speaker, the other thing that is significant about an industry of that nature is that the Cayman Islands is so heavily dependent on outside sources for basically everything that we use and consume in this country. The more that we can do locally in order to reduce that dependency, the better off we are all going to be. I recall on a number of occasions when we had a Nor'wester, or a cold front, coming in and the ships could not get to the dock, it doesn't take very long before the shelves in the supermarkets are depleted.

The other thing is that our local farmers and residents alike can be proud is when they walk into a supermarket or walk into the Farmer's Market and see things that are locally grown and produced. You walk into a T-shirt shop in this country and it says "Cayman Islands" on the T-shirt but when you look on the label it says "made in Hong Kong" or "China" or someplace else, there is very little that is done locally. Mr. Speaker, we must do all that we can to encourage that type of local industry.

Like I mentioned, a number of farmers have been in this business for some time now. They have done very well with the quality of the products that they produce. As far as I can see, they are also very competitive with regard to the price most of them are requesting for the sale of their products. As a result of their efforts, I am told that there are certain products that we are self-sufficient in, things like green bananas and, to a certain extent, mangoes especially during the main season. There has been a substantial improvement in the production of pork, mutton, and beef also by our local farmers.

I was talking to the group and one of the individuals said that he now raises a certain pig that is very lean as far as the meat is concerned, which makes it much more attractive as far as consumption. Today people in general are very conscious with regard to cholesterol and all the other health related problems. So, if you can get meat that is much leaner, it makes it much more attractive to the consumer.

Like I mentioned in my opening remarks, the farmers at the present time are expressing some difficulties. After the motion was filed (and I don't know who was responsible for it, maybe it was the Agricultural Society) there were a number of local articles and advertising in the papers reminding people that the local farmer was available and was producing good quality crops and animals like beef and pork and all that, and just urging people in general to support the local farmer. It was very positive Mr. Speaker!

In an effort to assist, the Government also assisted with the establishment of a Farmer's Market to serve as a main outlet for the products that were being produced by the local farmers. A number of the officers of the local farming community that came to see me did mention that many of them were involved personally with guaranteeing loans that were necessary for the establishment of that facility. I am also aware that Government gave them quite a bit of money also with regard to improving that facility there.

The main problem that the local Farmer's Market experiences is cash flow. They are not properly capitalized, and when a farmer brings in his products, I am told by some of the local farmers that quite a bit of money is still owed to them. But because it is their facility they do exercise a little patience in order to wait for their payment.

The local Farmer's Market should not be the only outlet for these locally grown and raised products. We have the Foster Brothers and the Kirkconnell Brothers who are big merchants in this country and they sell tons of food every week to the local community. Mr. Speaker, the experience I have had is that when you walk into a supermarket and you see something that says "locally grown," people buy it because in most cases it is of a higher quality and the price is probably just as good as what they have imported from Canada, the United States or wherever else they are bringing products from. I believe that the local merchant community has to have some consciousness and commitment with regards to seeing to it that they provide an outlet for locally produced farming products. I don't think you would have a problem with the sale of these products.

One of the difficulties that they have (that is, the local merchants) is that they want a consistent supply and that is the excuse that a lot of them will use 'well, if you cannot guarantee that every month you can provide me with 10,000 pounds of beef, 5,000 pounds of pork' most of them really don't want to talk to you. Mr. Speaker, I think the way that they should do it, whenever these farm products are in season, lets say, mangoes, avocados, green bananas or whatever it is, at least during the peak season their commitment should be, 'I will take whatever you can give me locally and then when you have an off season I will go back to increasing my imports'. I believe if the local merchants took that approach, it would greatly assist the local farmer and at the same time also produce an outlet for our locally farmed products.

Mr. Speaker, one of the areas that I think the local farmers . . . and I am proposing or recommending that some type of council or committee or whatever you want to call it is established that has representation from the local farming community and maybe a representative from the large merchants here, who get together and say, 'ok, here is what we can do to assist'. One of the main weaknesses that I see in the whole system is the lack of sufficient marketing of local products. You and I both know that you can be in business and you can be in a position where you can produce the very best products, but unless the local public or market is available for what you have for sale it really doesn't make a whole lot of sense. So, I believe that the local farming community needs to set aside a little money for advertising.

Mr. Speaker, you and I are both in business. With one of the franchises that I own I am obligated to spend at least 4% of my projected sales in advertising. Even with that there is great competition. Your competition is doing the same but it is very difficult to really survive unless you are producing a very good product and people are made aware of what you have for sale.

Mr. Speaker, as a result of the lack of a proper outlet for the products that farmers produce locally, many of the individuals who were involved in farming on a very large scale have cut back their operations. Some of them have basically said that 'it doesn't make sense, let me get out of the business and find something else to do.' Now, Mr. Speaker, that is sad because not everybody loves to do farming. It is not a very easy thing to do in most cases. I recall as a boy being involved in it and I tell you the truth I really didn't look forward to Mondays when I had to go into my father's farm to pull bush or plant seeds or whatever it was. It is not a very easy thing, but it is very enjoyable and if you are inclined in that area then you should be encouraged to continue to be involved.

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for a moment?

Is it the wish of the House that we continue straight until 1.00 p.m. rather than taking the morning break?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I think so.

[Members in the background: Yes, sir]

The Speaker: Thank you, please continue, Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Like I said Mr. Speaker, the farmers right now are desperate and they are crying out for assistance. I believe that we owe them an obligation to do whatever we can do in order to assist. Now, I know that this is a subject that is very near to the heart of the Minister of Agriculture. He is also a local farmer who has been involved, and continues to be involved, in this very, should I say, stressful undertaking.

Mr. Speaker, what I am proposing by way of assistance is that (like I said before) I think we need to establish some type of working council with a membership consisting of the Chief Agricultural and Veterinary Officers or a member of his staff, representatives from the large local merchants, and also representatives from the local farming community. I don't have a problem if a member of staff from the ministry is interested in being a part of that committee or council. I think it will be very positive. You know how it works, the more support we have for any particular effort—especially with highly visible individuals involved—the chances are it will help to move it forward.

This council would basically be responsible for discussing ways of mutual benefit. Since I filed a motion I did take the time to look in the supermarket that I shop at to see what is available locally. I was very pleased to see that there were some local products, especially meat, being displayed. If I am not wrong, there was also a label that said 'local beef' which is very positive. But I think if this council is to get together to discuss ways of mutual assistance and benefit, it would be very positive.

Mr. Speaker, if the large merchants don't want to buy the products outright, there is no reason why they cannot (and I quite sure they do a lot of this) take the products on consignment, sell the products and get their little commission or whatever for the sale; or designate certain areas that the local farmers would be responsible for maintaining as far as supplying the fruit and meat side of the business. Whichever way makes them comfortable, the main objective is that they have additional outlets for their products.

Mr. Speaker, today people are very health conscious. I think one of the major marketing points for local products is we could advertise them as being organically produced, that is, lack of pesticides and excessive fertilizers and that type of thing that are used in their production. Mr. Speaker, you and I both know that imports in order to get the crop quick and for them to look attractive a lot of artificial products are used in order to enhance their image. For example, an apple that's imported looks waxed. That is not natural. That is enhanced through chemical or whatever in order to improve the attractiveness. But people today are very health conscious and there are some people who will not purchase anything that they believe is grown or produced under those types of conditions.

Mr. Speaker, health food stores and those types of thing have become a very huge success and people don't mind paying a little more for products that are organically grown because they feel that they are healthier and statistics prove that they are much healthier.

Even though Government has done quite a bit by way of supporting the local farming community I believe that the Government has to really look . . . and I think that we even dealt with this issue in one of our recent Public Accounts Committee Report dealing with the Farmer's Market. The Government needs to go in there or get somebody who can go into the local Farmer's Market and look at the whole operation objectively and say what the needs are. Maybe they need $150,000 more per annum in order to make sure that the market has sufficient cash flow to take care of its daily operation and daily purchases and that type of thing. There should be a commitment from Government saying this is our additional commitment in good faith in order to assist. I don't think the present Minister would have a problem with supporting that type of commitment.

Mr. Speaker, I am told, and I am aware, that the Farmer's Market is a facility that is owned basically by the local farming community. But these gentlemen that I spoke to should not be in a position where they are obligated on a personal basis to finance that operation. I don't know how much money we are talking about, but maybe this is another area that Government could assist by saying, 'let's assume those commitments to relieve the personal individuals of this obligation.'

Mr. Speaker, I could say much more on this subject but I think I have said enough. I suggest, in summary, that we join hands, that is, the Government, the local farming community and the local merchants, to see what we can do in order to address this very important issue. The investment that Government has made, the investment that the local farmers have made in the industry should not be wasted through a lack of assistance, through a lack of effort and through lack of co-operation from all those parties that I mentioned in my presentation.

So, Mr. Speaker, I would just like to leave these thoughts with the local farmer. Like I said, I have found their prices competitive, at least the ones I have dealt with. Now, I cannot say that's the case for all of them, but I think what they have to is appreciate that the local consumer and the local merchant are looking for the best price and they must be competitive price-wise also. I know they have competed very well quality-wise with any foreign imports, but it is also very important for them to be conscious price-wise for the sale of their products. We have a tendency in this country to want to get rich overnight—we want to get as much as we can as quickly as we can. That is not necessarily the best way to continue to be in business.

So, I do recommend that Government support this very important motion, and I look forward to hearing what their plans are for assistance. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The floor is open to debate?

The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and National Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Government offers its support to the motion moved by the Third Elected Member for West Bay with regard to assistance for the local farming community.

In the final resolve section, it states, “. . . THAT the Government take immediate steps to meet with representatives of the local farming community to discuss ways that Government can assist the local farming community to ensure its financial survival.”

It is a fact that over the years Government has invested much into farming in the Cayman Islands. It is also a fact that with all of the interest shown by this Government and previous Governments, there still exist some problems in the farming sector. I need not go into the history of farming in the island, and I will stick with what we have come upon as problems experienced by the farming community.

Mr. Speaker, as the motion states, meetings with representatives of the farming community have been held by the Executive Council of Government not so long ago. We sat and discussed matters such as those raised here a while ago by the mover of the motion. We believe that working together on this very important sector we can come to grips with the problems experienced today. I would like to say that the large importers in this country today are co-operating to a certain degree with the farming community, I am pleased to say this. However, it could be even greater support offered in that area.

But I would like to say that there is an ongoing dialogue between the Farmer's Market, the Department of Agriculture and the importers in the country. The three main importers, Foster's, Hurley's, and Kirkconnell's, are all at present given some help and relief with regard to taking some of the crops and meats that pass through the Farmer's Market. As I said, it is an ongoing dialogue between the manager of the Farmer's Market, the department and managers in the respective businesses.

There is a problem, Mr. Speaker, with regard to payment to farmers when goods are passed through the Farmer's Market. It is a fact that the Farmer's Market has always been under capitalised. I think this is the main problem. We, through the department and Government, have ordered that a proper business plan (which I mentioned here a few weeks ago) be put in place so that this can be attended to. It is my understanding that the plan should be in place by the 16th of the month. We are hoping that through this plan, we will be able to sensibly say to Government that these are the needs of the market in order for it to operate as a business should operate.

At that time, I will take to Executive Council the report and make the recommendations for whatever capital is necessary to put the market on a proper footing, and at the same time ensure that the farmers will not have to wait the length of time that they have been waiting in the past. Mr. Speaker, I can say that I include myself in that because I, too, happen to be a farmer.

I agree with all that mover of the motion said with regard to the quality of crops and meats that we have here in the Cayman Islands today. We must congratulate all those who have worked so hard to bring this to where it is today and I can think of people like Mr. John Bothwell in West Bay, Mr. Willy Penny, Mr. Chantilope in Cayman Brac, and the list goes on and on—persons who are now well up in age but have actually dedicated most of their lives in promoting agriculture in the Cayman Islands.

I believe that we are all saying the same thing, that is, we are in full support of the farmers, the farming community, and agriculture as a whole in the Cayman Islands. It is for Government, once the plan is put forward and the needs and the amounts that are necessary to make this work can be seen, the proper staffing to manage the market and all that goes with it, for us to take the necessary steps to make the funds available so that we can move forward to assist the farmers in these islands.

Mr. Speaker, the Department of Agriculture will continue to give the assistance that is needed as far as going to the field and offering their help and support with each and every farmer that calls upon the Department.

The matter of pricing is something else, and the cost to the farmer here in Cayman can hardly be compared to what it costs a farmer abroad. But the one selling point that we have here is the fact that we base what is produced on quality. While we do not have quantity, we do have quality. I am pleased to know that, again, as has been said, there are several areas that we can almost boast of being self-sufficient.

The quality of animals, the quality of crops speaks for itself and it is always pleasing especially on show days to hear foreign people visiting these shores speak so highly of the quality which our farmers produce in these islands.

Mr. Speaker, speaking of on-going dialogue between the farming community and Government, I can say that until this morning, meetings took place between my Ministry and the Agricultural Society in making sure that whatever assistance can be given through Government be given to the Society making sure that we have another successful show.

We will continue to do whatever is possible to encourage the support of importers such as those mentioned, the larger importers, to co-operate with the farming community, to co-operate with the Farmer's Market and to offer their full support to the efforts of our local farmers.

I believe in all honesty that we are presently moving in the right direction, and I think like any other business, once we have a proper business plan in place and we have sufficient capital to allow us to pay bills to farmers on a timely basis, this will alleviate a lot of problems especially for the poor farmer who has to work so hard to earn a living. They, in turn, will be able to have their funds more regularly than in the past.

As I mentioned a while ago, not only here in Grand Cayman has the assistance been given, but we have also been working closely with farmers in Cayman Brac. And I need not say how important it is to have water in farming. The most recent thing that has been done by the Government is to offer some assistance in the area of good water for the farmers in Cayman Brac.

Again, I would like to thank the mover and seconder of this motion. It is a very good motion and I give the House the undertaking that I will continue to monitor the situation. I will continue to work with the farming community, and as soon as we do have this business plan in hand, I will report back to the House on the matter. So, once again, I would like to thank the mover of the motion.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I support the motion. The motion came about after local farmers discussed with various members, including the mover, their concerns. Mr. Speaker, at that time they were unhappy about the state of affairs in farming and right now the industry is unhappy.

Mr. Speaker, I am glad to hear what the Minister said about meetings. I don't know if he is meeting with the farming community, as such, but we understood in the discussions with members from the farming community that they had refused to meet with them. That's one of the things we were told. Mr. Speaker, we do need to support local farming and local industry, whatever it is.

The Minister who has responsibility for the subject certainly kicked off farming in a meaningful way some years ago. And I congratulate him for that. But, Mr. Speaker, the fact is that I believe that much more needs to be done presently for that community. Having got it off the ground you cannot leave it to die and we are spending a lot of money on agriculture. We have built a fabulous building, a wonderful facility and we have fairground facilities where we can host regular and well-organised shows. But if the farmer, as the old people say, "cannot put pot on fire," then what use would the buildings or even the shows be?

Mr. Speaker, it beholds any country to have a sound agricultural sector. We know that we are not totally an agricultural sector and our arable lands are few and far apart. But that is the reason why we have to utilise what we have in a more meaningful manner. In view of the world-wide concern now of genetically modified food products it beholds this Government to ensure that the farmers have much more and better support than what they now have. We produce good quality farm products here. The Minister often can tell us about the big bunches of bananas and plantains that he himself grows, and I see them in other farm locations.

I think of Mr. Franklin Smith who has struggled and makes a living, but under serious circumstances. I think of Mr. Otto Watler, who has been struggling ever since with his farm. We have to ensure that these people continue if they want to. We are putting good money into farming but that money must pay off to the country.

Mr. Speaker, I was against the reduction on import duty on products because they are affecting the local farming industry—and in this instance bakeries. I don't support it because I keep saying that the people are not getting the benefit. We know that the farmers were told that either they bring down their produce by 15% or 18% in one instance or else they will not be able to sell.

No one can say that local bananas are expensive and the quality of . . . I just grow a few plantains and bananas myself and I refuse to eat anything than what I grow or what I can buy locally because mine have no chemicals whatsoever. You buy those foreign plantains and you might as well buy a piece of cork and try to fry that. You might as well buy a piece of bamboo and stew it—I don't eat it. We are not a producing country of any kind. Like I said, we have no large manufacturers. But I am one who believes we have to pay attention to what we have here as far as production.

We must be able to offer some protection . . . and don't tell me it cannot be done because you watch what you are doing and do it sensibly—you talk to everyone concerned and make sure that the prices are not out of whack. We have no mechanisms to control prices or to ensure that the public of the country get a benefit from the reduction on those items—one group is now talking about a watch on consumer affairs, and that is good. I wish them luck, once it is done right.

Somebody has to pay attention to these matters because we all know . . . and, again, it my argument that the bottom line is that the cost of living is escalating all the time, it is not going down. So, if anyone can do anything to help bring it down, I say more power to them once it is done right.

We have good quality produce here. Mr. Speaker, we have some of the best yams anywhere that I have been where they grow it. As I said, I don't think that we should be doing things that hamper them, we should do more to assist them.

The mover made some points that were given to us by the members of the farming community that came to us. But, as I said, they came to quite a few people on the Backbench. So, I would not go through those items but to say that I support the farming community. If you want a healthier nation, you must pay attention to what is being imported into the country. I repeat that there is world-wide concern about genetically modified food products or genetically engineered food products. So, we have to pay attention to these things.

We have no meaningful arm of Government that can look at the various products. We don't want to be a dumping ground and become a Third World. They might want to class us in that instance, but we don't really want that, and we have to be careful that we are not a dumping ground with any kind of products, and we know that we don't produce much here. I repeat that too. You get all brands of products coming in. I don't know if anybody is checking them to see how safe they are, and I would not take away from the integrity of the business people who sell products here—no, I would not do that. What I am saying is that the more we can do locally, the better off we are and the less we have to import.

So, Mr. Speaker, I give this motion my full support. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to briefly make a few remarks on this motion because there was a letter some-time ago in the Caymanian Compass written by a farmer, I think, Mr. John Bothwell, who gave us an indication of his contribution to farming in the Cayman Islands. I would like to take this opportunity, of course, to congratulate him in his achievements. I should hope that he realises that other people have made achievements in other areas. Because people work in air-conditioned buildings does not mean that they are contributing less to the society.

Now, if we look at the history of the development of commerce . . . and let us be general since I don't want to get into any other play, but the play of creating a framework for better understanding of some of the questions with regards commerce we have in our society. In other words, how should commerce be supported? How should commerce be regulated by Government? The basis of society as we know it, modern civilisation, people staying in one fixed position for a long period of time rather than migrating and following food, is that gatherers and herders became essential for the foundation of the society.

So, if we look at society, we find that the farmers and growers are the basic foundation of the society. But they are not just that from a point of view of providing food, they provide the basis for the beginning of commerce for the basis of exchange.

If everyone were a farmer, it would mean that there would be no way of one person exchanging his products for other goods. In other words, everybody cannot be a farmer. Otherwise commerce would have stagnated and would not have progressed. So, I think that I might not look at this from the point of view of a farmer, but I have to look at this particular motion and this particular question about assistance and protection of farmers from the point of view of somebody who understands the creation of society and what is necessary for the maintenance of society and the progress of society.

Now, if certain persons become farmers and remain farmers while other people become candlestick makers, and we have as a result a diversified and differentiated society, we all become interdependent: The farmer is dependent upon the dentist, the dentist is dependent upon the farmer; the farmer is dependent upon the carpenter, the carpenter is dependent on the farmer; the shoemaker is dependent on the shoemaker, but the farmer is also dependent upon them. So, the farmer does not exist in isolation on his own, therefore the farmer's interest cannot be that interest which regulates the society. We must put all the interests together in order to decide how the society should be regulated. That is basically what I am saying.

It is easy for us when we get spurred on by interest groups to bring the interest of that particular group and not see how that group's interest relates to the general interest of the society—and a lot of time it does. If we are all interdependent it means that each interest group really has some connection with other interest groups, and our job is to explain it, to rationalise why we are saying that Government should take certain actions or not take certain actions. People accept it much better in a democracy when it is explained to them.

Now, I believe that we have a sufficient amount of people in this society that are interested in farming, but the mere fact that our society at one particular time was not dependent upon the local production of foodstuff is a relevant point. Our society like other societies was able to get over that hump and to be able to bring food from the outside rather than to raise food from the inside.

Now, this could mean that our society is very much like New York City. That does not produce food, but it has buildings that are involved in finance and other things. So, the mere fact that New York City might be dependent upon upstate New York, or Iowa, or Texas for beef or whatever, is a phenomena that has to do with the growth and the diversification of society.

Now, the fact that we are near to other food producing territories, the fact that we did not have the abundance of cheap labour, the fact that we might not have the kind of land that could be easily transformed from manual farms to what we consider to be commercial farming where machinery could be used, could mean that there are certain factors that the people who are involved in agriculture in this country have to begin to take into account. Why is it that even with the assistance from Government over the years that the farming community has not been able to transform itself from a self-sufficient industry that is producing a sufficient surplus in order to commercialise the entire venture?

If we look at America, we see that fewer people are farming and the farms go bigger. If we look at Russia, we see that fewer people are involved in the actual production of foodstuffs. Those people are pushed out and they are pushed into other useful productivity centres in the society and farming becomes more and more commercial.

Now, there might very well be a change in this trend because of the fact that a lot of people are interested today in getting quality food, and people are interested in paying even more, if they have to pay more, because the quality is better. If I can get a local avocado, I am going to get that. If I can get a local mango, I am going to get that. If I can get local beef and I know that there are no steroids, I am going to buy the local beef because as a conscious consumer I also become conscious of health things.

So, in terms of getting people to buy local products you also have to market it properly, which means you have to get the consumer to make the kinds of choices that are based upon more factors than just price—freshness, for instance, could be one thing; the fact that you know where it comes from and the fact that you know it wasn't sprayed. All of those things could be important.

So, we know that Government could be doing more. Not to say that Government has not done, but there are aspects of marketing whatever the product is that will improve the possibility for the product to survive even if the product was more expensive. We have a typical example with water—people are willing today to accept bottled water and pay more than for water that is not bottled. People in Cayman are drinking water from France and other parts of the world—water! Water, of all things, has become an export commodity. Why? Because there are certain people who are conscious for certain health reasons, even if it is not real, even if somebody has just created it in their head, that bottled water is better than cistern water or brackish water and so.

They are paying, so prices are not the only point with regard to the marketing of any product. It has to do with the way that the consumer chooses and, therefore, if we are going to have an effective Farmer's Market, we have to have an effective marketing strategy that will cause the consumer to make choices—free choices based upon the gathering of information.

Now, most Governments think that the best way to get people to make choices is to force them to make choices, so legislation is always what is considered. Taxation, in other words, with regard to import duties. You put a high import duty on it and it is going to make that product more expensive and this one cheaper, and the one that is cheaper will be more successful—the furthest thing from the mind. All market factors and all market information will prove to you that is not the price of the product only that causes the product to survive on a market.

So, I am just saying this to suggest that because I might have been calling for the reduction of duties with regard to foodstuff does not mean that I do not appreciate the historical contribution of the farming community in this country and in Western Civilisations. I know that farming as a result of the commercialisation of industries has gone through a tremendous transformation. If the farmer is going to serve the community, the farmer—just like the candlestick maker—has to become modernised. His approach to growing has to become modernised. Equally important is that his approach to marketing must become modernised. So, the mere fact that I might make certain statements does not mean that I intend to misunderstand because my Grandfather Lemmie was a farmer. My father farmed and we all farmed because we were all self-sufficient growers and we fished to subsidise what we grew and we lived from that.

But at very little stages were we able to work long enough hours or to apply ourselves sufficiently in this in order to create a surplus, because other people were growing yams and tomatoes just like we were growing yams and tomatoes. Therefore, our surplus was created at the same time their surplus was created and there was, therefore, no basis for the exchange of this. But as we go along and get involved in working in an air conditioned building, it creates a market for Mr. Bothwell because now that I am in an air-conditioned building I cannot be out there growing the bananas and tending to the coffers and, therefore, it creates a market for him. He has to persuade me. He doesn't get my money freely because it is my money. And Government does not have the right to compel me to spend that money with anyone. I am living in a free society and we say that we should have laissez-faire and Capitalism, in other words, I am supposed to be able to freely decide what it is that I abide by.

So, it is no hostility to the farming community that I am saying this, because the usual arguments that people use in order to support farming is that the country has become self-sufficient. Now, in a globalised context, this is even beginning to sound more ridiculous when any country in the world would talk about self-sufficiency. One thing happens in one country and the other country is perished regardless. We cannot deny the fact that we must be our brother's keeper in this global village, in this global world.

So, if you are going to take food from me and you are not going to supply me with food, the mere fact that I have food myself in my community . . . the situation in Cayman is no different than the situation would be in Kingston, New York, or Atlanta because those cities themselves have no food producing abilities. They still have to fall back on the villages. We are falling back on those villages to that same extent, but if we didn't have the money to buy the food from the farmers in the first place, the farmers would have to throw away their food.

We saw this in the 1930s in the United States where a lot of food was being produced in America but, because of a collapse of the monetary system, there was a collapse in the farming system. So, the farming system is not an independent system, you do not get food simply because your community grows food. You get food because you have the ability to buy food. That is an important understanding. Therefore, when we begin to interfere with our commerce system to the point to protect farming, labour, or anything, we have to understand that we begin to influence the money system. So, we have to be careful.

We have to be considerate about any kind of additional regulations because if we start saying that we are going to protect farmers, of course, we will be protecting cabinet makers and that is desirable to them, and you are going to protect another group and another group. You come back to this very nationalistic kind of early capitalistic development that has smothered the Caribbean.

Part of the reason why I see problems in other Caribbean countries is because of this protectionist mentality that existed in those countries. They have producing groups that are large enough to influence government and government's regulation to the point where they start to impose import duties in order to curbe imports rather than to facilitate the growth of the society and the accumulation of capital and expertise within the society.

We have to understand some of these economic dynamics here, Mr. Speaker. And I am not going to talk all day about this because I am quite sure that the world is not ready to hear this type of mediation. But I will say one thing: If we look at the Jamaican economy, the fact that you have the agricultural producers and the small manufacturers, those people prevented Jamaica and other Caribbean islands from going to the finance stage of capitalism. We have jumped to the finance stage already, which means we have the ability (because we are in the money system) to be able to pay for a lot of things. If we begin to create protection here and there, and regulations here and there with regard to the agricultural and the small manufacturing systems, what we will find is that those regulations will begin to impact the finance system and the finance system will then be pulled down. We have typical examples of this when people are arguing about "knowledgeable workers" being able to come to Cayman and work within the Caymanian society. So, protectionism is not always good. We have to be careful.

Sometimes it is better for Government to rather than regulate to subsidise. In cases like these it might be better for Government to be thinking about more subsidy to the actual farmers rather than to invest in large agricultural department staff and large agricultural buildings, where the Agricultural Department is looking like an incredible type of building but when you go and look at the way in which people are farming and the way in which people are supported to farm you don't have it.

If our country wants to have a farming community base, if there are people that are willing to give up other jobs to make farming their sole occupation, we have to give them protection. We have to assist them in some ways. But, we must assist them in a way that will not impact negatively on the other commerce and transactions that are going on.

Farming in the modern world is a part of the commerce system. The commerce system has to do with the exchange of goods and services. In most cases, it is better that the community be left alone to regulate that as free producers and as free labourers that they come to their conclusion, if it can be done without Government intervention. Sometimes, of course, it cannot be done. But anytime we can help to get people organised to the point where they can achieve a lot of these things on their own it is better. If we can get the farmers to be properly organised, if we can get them to be properly connected to the Farmer's Market, if we can get them to deliver the produce to the market, the tourists, Caymanians and residents that are working here will buy these things because ultimately at the end of the day people are concerned about their health, getting fresh fruit and meat, getting things that don't have a lot of chemicals, and they are concerned about knowing where their food comes from.

I do believe that farming in the Cayman Islands can become profitable. But if that is to be done, the farmer must become a businessman just like any other businessman. Thank you.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take the luncheon break. We shall suspend until 2.30 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.55 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 30/99. Does any other Member wish to speak? The floor is open to debate.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

It is heartening to hear that the Government is minded to support this motion. There are perhaps a few issues that have already been discussed, but maybe thoughts can be extended just a tad further.

The Government has said that they have always been in dialogue with the farmers, and they will continue to have dialogue with the farmers with a view to bringing about certain remedies and also to perhaps enhance the farming community within these islands. A few examples were brought to bear, but the first area that I wish to concentrate on is the Farmer's Co-op that we know as the Farmer's Market.

Now, if memory serves me right, the Minister has said there is a business plan which is being worked on, and that once that business plan is produced he intends to take a paper to Executive Council with some plan to deal with the problems within the Farmers Co-op. One of the problems that I have, Mr. Speaker (and I said this in Finance Committee recently), is that I don't believe the Farmer's Market and its operations have the latitude to continue to exist in the same manner that it exists now for much longer.

There are some inherent problems, one of which the Minister talked about in his reply to the motion, and that is the fact that the entity has been under-capitalised from day one. So, I would take it to be obvious that one of the intentions with this business plan is to address that deficiency which exists. I don't know the legal ramifications, and I won't get into them because I do understand that there are some individuals within the community who make up the Co-op and they basically help take on certain financial responsibilities. Nevertheless, when we look at the Agricultural Society, when we look at the entire farming community, we have some problems that arise because of this.

The Minister also mentioned that some farmers have difficulty getting paid for their produce. While the tying-in was not obvious, I think that once one looks at the bigger picture one can easily see that the fact that the place has been under-capitalised helps to create a cash flow problem. In effect, what is happening to them on a daily basis is that they have to be robbing Peter to pay Paul.

Having said that, while I am strongly not only recommending but actually at this point in time making a plea to the Government to act hastily on the matter, I still believe that it has to be thought out carefully. I don't believe anyone including the farming community would want to create a situation where Government is dealing with a continuous subsidy at the level where responsibilities . . . well, let me leave it at responsibilities that should be left with the farming community should fall away. It has to be a two-sided affair for it to work.

Let me show for example why there are difficulties existing at present: Typically, some of the farmers have a problem with taking their produce to the Co-op because of the Co-op not having the cash flow that it would desire—not just cash flow by way of volume but because it has never been able to bring all of its payables up-to-date so that its current receivables can take care of all of those payables. The farmers have this problem about collecting money and have to wait for considerable periods of time on occasion, what the farmers have resorted to in many instances is they go directly to the outlets with their produce.

Now, in talking about it, it is not a question of blaming them because perhaps it is safe comment to say that some of them have to do that in order to be able to survive. The problem that creates is that they end up selling their produce to the same people who would perhaps buy the produce from the Farmer's Market. Naturally, the first person the farmers sell to they are going to sell the best products to—that is an obvious statement also. So, what you find on occasion is the produce that the farmers cannot readily dispose of directly to purchasers is the produce that they then bring to the Farmer's Market. The Farmer's Market then has to take those products and in turn sell them to the same people that have been sold the better products. Also, on many occasions what the Farmer's Market ends up with when it all comes together is a load of produce in a saturated market.

So you see, there are difficulties on both sides of the fence. I believe if the idea of the Co-op is to be successful, two things have to happen: the farmers have to be assured that once they produce quality products that the market is willing to take these products from them and they can be paid on a reasonably timely basis. That will give the Co-op the strength that it needs to market the products with a collated effort rather than from a myriad of outlets, so to speak. When I say outlets, I don't mean outlets selling the products back to the consumer, but outlets meaning from the farmers on an individual basis. If the Co-op then has the ability to do that, I think the situation can be streamlined and the financial risk to the Co-op will be much less.

So, the Co-op has to be in a financial position basically to start over afresh and be able to deal with the farmers directly on a satisfactory basis.

I think also that the farmers must realise that the Farmer's Market is not a catchment area for anything and everything that they produce, whether it be beef, mutton, pork, cassava, yams, green bananas, mangoes, avocados, whatever. The Farmer's Market cannot be expected to accept and pay for the inferior products, and still be able to market them because it is not going to happen.

So, there are things that have to be accepted on both sides of the coin, and I believe that once everything is put on the table then a reasonable arrangement can be made. Now, for whatever reason this has extended itself into the time period that it has I won't get into, simply because I don't know all of the facts. So, it is perhaps best to look at the way forward.

Mr. Speaker, the other area that I think we should be looking at with this specific circumstance is if Government is going to be proactive. I am just a part-time backyard farmer myself. I am not really a farmer, but I do grow some stuff. But there are a lot of crops that are seasonal in these islands and we have what we call feast or famine. Yet, from areas that have close proximity to us and have similar climatic conditions, we see certain types of fruits imported during the time that we don't produce the same type of fruits. I hold firmly to the belief that with a little bit of innovation and research there are some types of fruits we could grow in what we call "out of season," which would also assist in the effort. Certainly, tree-bearing crops like mangoes and avocados don't cost any more in one season than any other time. So crops where you get varieties at certain times of the year and another variety at another time of the year, I don't see that as one that is going to cost a farmer any more to be able to produce. I think we need to look at that seriously in order to maximise the efficiency of that same farmer from the same area of land that he produces the seasonal crops, having a lot of time waiting on the next season of crops.

Again, I don't know all of those details. But from a logical point of view, I see no reason why some serious research cannot be done in those areas. I am sure if the farmers are given the right information, perhaps the right initial stock to deal with, that this can happen.

There are times when the Agricultural Society and its membership have been known to be at odds with the Government, with various philosophies differing in the process. I believe that logic needs to prevail because there are arguments on both sides of the coin. One of the things that I really believe is important is the education of the farming community with regard to maximising their efficiency in producing these crops, bearing in mind that you cannot produce these crops and simply demand a price whatever that price may be. I understand that because of volume and technology in other territories, bulk shipping, lower labour costs and all of that, the vast majority of items can be imported at a cheaper rate than the the farmers locally can actually produce and be able to sell.

So, there has to be a certain amount of leeway there to allow the farming community to survive. At the same time, every effort must be made to maximise the efficiency of their efforts so that they can make a fair living from their produce, yet be able to sell that produce at a price with some semblance of competition to the imported products. That is important.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town mentioned marketing strategies from the point of view that if you have, for instance local beef . . . and I have tested this myself and I will use it as an example. If I go into Foster's and I see a certain cut of beef that is USDA Choice at $2.65 per pound and I see the label, Local Lite Beef and that same cut is $2.95 per pound, I make a conscious decision as to which one I want. Naturally, I am going to say that I am going to buy the local beef whether it is true or not—but it so happens to be true because I like local beef! And for the volume that I will purchase it is not going to make a lot of difference in my shopping bill.

The point in all of that is that if we understand and the outlets understand that if they have the different products and there is a slight difference in the cost, then they can test the products themselves by the way of the volume sold to ensure that they are not putting themselves at a disadvantage by putting local produce on the shelf. I believe that we should not go so far as to say stop importing certain things. I don't think we should do that. But I think we should try to level the playing field as best as we can and work on the areas where the discerning consumer has a choice. I believe if we can get to that level based on that premise, then we will find that the consumer can make the choice and both the imported and the local stuff will sell.

The vast majority of the local produce is not to the level where, as the Minister would term it, the country is "self-sufficient" in that area. Hence, for all logical reasoning you wish to have the ability to purchase one or the other.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we need some innovation in what we are doing. And since we are not arguing this one I am not going to take the line trying to tell the Minister and or/the Government what they haven't done that they should be doing because perhaps that is not going to get the best results. So, we are not going to deal with it at that level. But I sincerely believe that more emphasis needs to be put into the area of effectiveness of personnel and I will explain that.

A situation has existed for several years where a gentleman who was an employee in the Department of Agriculture had to be seconded to the Farmer's Market to try to keep the thing together. He is now working countless hours trying to keep it together, but he is not doing what he has been trained to do. The whole farming community is now without the benefit of his expertise in the area that he would benefit that community the best, so it causes a problem.

I am not suggesting that what transpired might not have been probably the only solution at that time. All I am saying is that if we are going to be effective and be positive and pro-active, we need to be looking at it and putting the entire picture in place. There are certain responsibilities the farmers must be prepared to accept and deal with at whatever level, whether they are the big produces like Furtherland Farms and a few others, or whether they are the smaller ones. It doesn't really matter. They have to understand the market forces.

There has to be an effective marketing strategy. I believe that like most other things in life presentation is the key if you want to sell. If I want to buy a new car, I look at the lock, and it has a dent on it, I don't care what they tell me about a discount, I don't want the car if my intention is to buy a new car. It is as simple as that. So, we have to ensure the quality of the products. We have to ensure that there is a marketing strategy to help to level the playing field.

This is my one bone of contention, which can be agreed with or can be argued (and I am sure that the Government would argue against my point): I do believe that the efforts of the Government at this point in time have been in a fashion that is too disjointed. You cannot try to solve the problem by isolating a particular situation and once you get that under control think that everything is all right. That is not what is happening. Everything that has gone wrong has a spill-over effect and it is causing things to go wrong elsewhere.

I believe that this business plan for the Farmer's Market must ensure that we are not just looking at one area of its operation, we need to take into consideration from the day the farmer starts to grow the product until the day the consumer gets it. We have to look at that entire spectrum to make sure that efficiencies are created in the best way possible throughout that period of time regardless of where the players in the game find themselves, whether they are producers or sellers or whether it is the Co-op.

What I am really trying to say is that you cannot isolate that plan to the Co-op itself. You could set up the greatest of business plans, but if you don't have your other area working efficiently and in tandem with this business plan, you are not going to make it work. The best of business plans cannot work unless you are selling the right products.

The Farmer's Market does not produce the goods that that it sells; it simply collects and pays from a wholesale point of view, and then moves on again. Therefore, consideration has to be made to the farming community.

Now, some of them will be easier to deal with than others. Some create higher volume than others do and some have more latitude than others do in the dealings. But it simply has to be done. I understand the difficulties, and I am not suggesting that you can call everybody overnight and by the next morning everything is smooth. But it has to be worked at. One of the things I think they will be most receptive to (and I am not suggesting that this hasn't been done in the past but I think more meaningful efforts have to be done) . . . you have to try to maximise their ability to produce. I believe that with a little bit of innovation and knowledge many of the farmers could produce more efficiently—more volume at less cost. That is going to be the key to it to be able to assist with creating this level playing field.

You see, Mr. Speaker, throughout all of this, the last thing you want to happen is to have to decide between the consumer and the producer. If everything you were talking about was an imported item, then it becomes a whole different ballgame. But what you have now are producers locally who rub shoulders with the consumers locally and you have to find a way for both to co-exist. I am not persuaded at any point in time that you have to choose one from the other. What is happening now is because of deficiencies in certain areas—especially at the political level, you find where you have to be paying attention to a certain group of people. Then you are almost forced to make a decision about which side you are taking. I think that focus should be on not having to get to that point because when you get to that point somebody has to lose and I think this is a situation where everybody can win.

There are naturally thousands of percentage points more consumers than producers, so you don't want to have to look at the producers as a lesser amount of people and have to say well we are going on the side of the consumer. You have to find a way to ensure that the consumer is happy to allow the producer to co-exist in that world. And it can happen.

Mr. Speaker, I contend that once the Government uses a bit of innovation and takes into consideration all of the factors that are involved it is going to take some money. Let no one think that is it not going to take some money. But I am not suggesting it means a whole pile of money. What I do suggest right now is that if it is done properly from the beginning, then in the long run it is going to cost less than every minute of the day having to drop little piddles. When you add it all up its ten times the amount than if you did it right from the first time.

I mentioned this quite a while back. It is not from a political standpoint to be looked at as a supporter of a certain faction—nothing like that. The truth of the matter is that it is not going away. Just by its very existence, Mr. Speaker, you don't want to say that because you can import certain items cheaper than you can produce it locally that you simply go the way of importing it. That is not the way the world was made.

If we look at the North American continent which we are most familiar with, and if we remember that thing, I think they called it 'Farm Aid,' an annual event where musicians came together to assist the farming community because the farming community was floundering . . . it is almost at that point in time considered to be a charity. But it was worth it because they didn't want the farms to close down. And there is reason for that because you don't know what is going to befall this world to where the day might come when you might not have access as you readily do now to certain types of imported products. There are weather conditions that can temporarily affect us, all kinds of little things. You want to encourage as much local produce as possible. You just have to find the way that the cost of that production and the quality of the produce is as competitive as it can be to what you can import it for.

At that point in time, you take care of the supermarkets justifying purchasing the goods from the farmers, you take care of the fear that the disparity in the prices will cause local consumers to not buy local produce and I think that is the way to go. I don't have the knowledge, Mr. Speaker, to impart all the technical details to tell them what they have to do is something that the professionals are going to have to look at. But I do believe that the focus should be on the way that I have presented my arguments.

Mr. Speaker, there are other things that can be discussed, but it is perhaps best to leave well enough alone now. Before I close I would simply say this: I do trust that . . . and the other thing is that I have been hearing about this business plan now for a while so it is high time it be finished. We seemingly have a date for that, that's fine. What I don't want to see happen, Mr. Speaker—and I bring this to the attention of the Government because I know it is possible. The Government has to function in all areas, I am not going to accept from where I sit anyone telling me this business about the farmers is not important because so many other things came up and that has to wait—the Government has to function. There are certain areas where you might find things cropping up that you didn't bargain for and it takes away your attention, I accept that. But the point I wish to make is that if I am around I don't want to see another budget time come and we hear about 'this report was done; this business plan was produced and it is still with Executive Council.' The Minister knows that I am not fingering him, but he has had more than one occasion to report to this House and in his own words, he would say, 'I can say no more than the fact that it is with Executive Council.' That is not acceptable, Mr. Speaker.

That was not to chide the Government. That was simply stating a fact. And I am saying that, like all the rest, this one is as important in its own right so it must be dealt with. I would implore on the Minister to act expeditiously and perhaps he might wish to consider informing the Legislative Assembly as soon as this plan is produced, costings are done as to the way forward. While I am not about to try to change the system, I sincerely hope that we don't hear for months on end that this thing is still being battered back and forth between his ministry and Executive Council. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I do not purport to be long in my contribution, but I have listened to what honourable members, said and I have especially paid a keen interest in what my good friend and colleague, the First Elected Member for George Town just said. I wish to associate myself with his observations. In addition to that, I wish to add a couple of my own.

I have always contended that one of the problems we have with being able to farm successfully in the Cayman Islands—one of the problems beside the most obvious, the lack of large tracks of land where we can mechanise agriculture—is that the farmers have problems accessing affordable capital. That is one problem.

There always seems to be a perpetual problem when the farmers have produced their crops the problem of marketing in such a way where the farmers can immediately take their crops to the market and realise payment so that they can be able to return to continue the farming.

One of the things that I would really love for the Government to explore in the future (and it has been a challenge now for some years) is access available capital for people in farming, particularly persons who do so on a commercial scale. And there are a few of them in the Cayman Islands that could find some ready source of capital (which would be affordable) outside of the commercial entities, which is prohibitively expensive as far as interest rates are concerned. Mr. Speaker, it is recognised universally that farmers have to contend with the forces of nature as well as the rise and fall of markets depending on what products and commodities they market. So, one of the things we have going against us in the Cayman Islands is a source of affordable cash.

Mr. Speaker, in all candour, I believe that much has been done, and I would like to give credit to the efforts of those persons who have tried to do something—including the Minister who holds responsibility for the subject of agriculture now. I am not saying that his efforts could not be improved, and sometimes I am impatient and I don't understand the tardiness but it will probably happen again. In all candour, I believe that he has done well and he is sincere. From my conversations with him, I am led to believe that for all of his shortcomings, he is sincere. And he has realised some positive efforts from his exercises. Let us not forget that he himself by his own admission is a practising farmer albeit not on a commercial scale. So, if it comes down to it, it is to his interest to see that the vocation carries with it some attraction and some semblance of success. So, I have to give credit where credit is due—in spite of the fact that this is an election year and I don't want him to look too good!

Nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, we have some challenges. I believe, from speaking with the Honourable gentleman, that he is aware of the whole establishment—the Farmer's Market and the Agricultural Society—and he is doing his best along, of course with his colleagues, some in the Government and those outside including the farmers, to surmount.

I want to say a couple of things that have not been said before. One of the big arguments and debate now concerns genetically modified and genetically engineered crops. I was reading (because I am very interested, Mr. Speaker, as you will know in many of these things which are current events) that one of the advantages that genetically modified or genetically engineered crops hold is that they are resistant to certain pests and the yields can be increased almost by geometric proportions. You can even now engineer crops that are even resistant to drugs. I brought this up because it would strike me that countries like the Cayman Islands would be ideal places to look into and investigate these kinds because for the because for the limited agricultural lands that we have if we can get the increased yield it might make farming commercially viable.

I want also to say that there are countries and people who believe that these genetically modified and genetically engineered crops also have a down side. Mr. Speaker, there is a big argument now (not a debate) between the countries of the European Union and the United States, whereby the countries of the European Union absolutely refuse American crops and farm produce that has been genetically modified and engineered. They claim that not enough is known of the long-term effects this might have on human beings that consume this and they refuse to take the beef and the crops.

There are those people who argue that there is nothing wrong with it as long as it is labelled so the consumer can be informed and can be knowledgeable and in so doing can make a conscious choice of whether they want stuff which is naturally grown or genetically modified or engineered.

But I revert to the original point: I believe, Mr. Speaker, and I am following it with interest, not that I am conscious of the Minister of Agriculture's position, but because I believe that if it pans out in the final analysis, this may be a thing that pushes agriculture in the Cayman Islands and makes agriculture commercially viable to the persons who currently practice it. So, it holds some promise if in no other area than the fact that it would make agriculture commercially feasible. I don't want to introduce the debate here of whether or not the products should be labelled that they are genetically engineered or genetically modified. I am saying that it has an economic attraction to us; a commercial attraction we should follow.

The second thing is that it will allow farmers that use it to have access to seeds, which by their own manufacture or creation removes the necessity for any pesticides of this nature. That is one of the problems that we have now, because using pesticides and herbicides and all that, has a downside because this stuff, particularly where it seeps into the streams and into the water lens, creates problems of its own.

I am attracted to the notion of genetically modified and genetically engineered produce and seeds because it could do two things: It would offer a commercial advantage, and it would also reduce the necessity to use herbicides and pesticides which in themselves are expensive—expensive to purchase and expensive and technical to apply.

So, there is, I believe, some hope. I also think that the Government is well aware, certainly the Minister for Agriculture is well aware, of what needs to be done, for example, to make the Farmer's Market more attractive and commercially viable. I am happy to say, from the comments and sentiments that I have heard expressed by the Minister both formally and informally, that the merchant houses, the supermarkets, are now looking more favourably on local produce. I believe that local produce holds several advantages. It holds the advantage of immediately knowing the freshness of the produce; and it holds the advantage that you can buy in the quantities that you can manage when the crops are on the market. Also, of course, it keeps the money in circulation right here in the Cayman Islands. It stands to reason that if someone goes to the supermarket with a truckload of pumpkins and they get their cash, nine out of ten chances are when they get their cash for the pumpkins they are going to buy something that supermarket has. So, the cash stays in a small and tight circle.

I am happy to learn that the proprietors and the managers of the local supermarkets are now realising that there are advantages to supporting the local farmers. I would be happy (and here is the challenge) if we could carve a niche in the hotels in the same way that we are making progress with the supermarkets. I would be happy to learn that the hotels are supporting us in the same way.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that events of the recent past should serve to encourage us. I certainly give my support to the farmers, to the society, and to the Minister. I am happy to know that there are persons in this Honourable House who deem it important enough to bring these matters to the forefront for debate. It is certainly comforting to realise and know that we can debate these things without the level of acrimony and accusation that sometimes happens here—not that I am decrying that as being unnecessary, but I think it shows a sign of maturity and the concern of us all for the farmers and with the problems of agriculture that we can air these problems in the mature way that we have aired them.

I certainly look forward to the Minister and the Government continuing to encourage the persons who go into agriculture at a commercial level and even to encourage the hobby farmer. I hope that one day we can achieve an even greater self-sufficiency in both agricultural produce and in beef than we have at present. If that means that we are attracted to genetically engineered or genetically modified produce, if that is the will of the majority then so be it because I think the goal of the Cayman Islands should be to become as self-sufficient as we can possibly can. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Would this be a convenient time to take the afternoon break or you would rather forego it?

We shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.45 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.13 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No 30/99. The floor is open for debate. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer my contribution to Private Member's Motion No. 30/99, Government Assistance for Local Farming Community.

The resolve section is as follows: “BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government takes immediate steps to meet with representatives of the local farming community to discuss ways that Government can assist the local farming community to ensure its financial survival.”

Mr. Speaker, this motion has my full support wherein it concerns our local farming industry. I, for one, must agree that any assistance to farmers should be given. And I am truly encouraged with the remarks from the Honourable Minister for Agriculture that meetings between him and various local farmers are continuing. This communication is so essential because for farming to be successful in the Cayman Islands it has to be a partnership between Government and the farmers, as well as the private sector.

Mr. Speaker, I can certainly speak for the kind of produce that is grown locally. Having an Agricultural Pavilion and Nursery pretty much in my backyard, I have firsthand knowledge of what is available. Last year during the Savannah/Newlands Heritage Day, I took the opportunity to involve the Agricultural Department. Mr. Speaker, what the staff of that department brought out that day to be displayed was of such high quality, it was indeed some of the most beautiful and healthy produce one could ever wish to see. Mr. Speaker, I felt so proud of the amount of work that went into what was displayed and even more so that it was locally grown.

We know it is so hard at times for local farmers to survive because of so many constraints, but it is encouraging that Government is now committed to providing assistance after consultations as to the best way forward.

Mr. Speaker, just in my district alone, the district of Bodden Town, just to name a few of these hardworking farmers that come to my mind: Mr. Otto Watler, Mr. Harvey Stephenson, Mr. Hamlin Stephenson, Mr. Franklin Smith, Mr. Kent Rankin, and even my colleague, the Third Elected Member [for Bodden Town] is involved in farming on a small scale. Mr. Speaker, I see how hard these farmers have to struggle to make farming worthwhile day in and day out. They certainly do work very hard and at the end of the day, they are totally exhausted.

Mr. Speaker, I would at this time like to take the opportunity to thank the mover and the seconder of this motion and once again I give this motion my full support. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The floor is open for debate.

The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I know it's late in the afternoon, but I feel I have to make my contribution to this very important motion. I must give a great deal of credit to the mover and the seconder for bringing this motion. The mover, in expressing an opening on this motion, was quite comprehensive and very detailed and did not leave much else for us to talk about.

What I found quite interesting, Mr. Speaker, was the aspect that the Fourth Elected Member for George Town gave. And it made some good sense. I think it pointed out some of the areas that we have been unable to address in the past, and that is to get some of these farmers better organised to actually be able to market their produce. This has been one of the difficulties that we have been faced with over a period of time.

We all know of the top quality of produce that comes not only in the line of fruit and vegetables, but we have sampled here some of the meat that comes from the meat market. I know that my good friend, the First Elected Member for George Town, has gone a long way in making it very savoury and tasty, but I think the basic quality is that he had something good to work with. We all know from experience what the quality is in Cayman, and it is a matter of us going forward and assisting where we can.

The Honourable Minister has given the commitment, and I, along with him and others, have met with members of the Agricultural Society. The commitment is there.

We also need to assist in Cayman Brac where I understand there was a big problem with water. Not only in Cayman Brac, but here in Grand Cayman, we know that from approximately the middle of November until May or June, there is very little rainfall. Until we can address the problem of good water for farming no matter what the farmers do there is a difficult time period there for them to deal with this problem. Maybe in making the water somehow more affordable, with better access to it, it would go a long way in going forward and improving their plight.

As my colleague (the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town) said, there are many farmers in the district of Bodden Town. And I think among Bodden Town, North Side, and East End, there is probably a great concentration of these farmers. I must also take my hat off to Mr. John Bothwell, who has laboured for many years and has kept the standard up, and my good friend in North Side, Mr. William Ebanks (Willy), Mr. Otto Watler and his brother, Halsey, in Savannah; Mr. Melbourne . . . and I could go on and on. But I think that the seed is now sown there and it is incumbent on us to act on this and to stick with it as we go forward to make Cayman as productive, in whatever area, as we can.

We all know that the farmers in the United States are heavily subsidised. Just a few weeks ago, maybe a month or so ago when the price of milk started to drop, the Government had to pay the farmers to bring the cost back up. So, what is happening here in Cayman it is not unusual. I think it is incumbent on us to now join hands. As I said earlier (with what the Fourth Elected Member from George Town pointed out), maybe we can sit with these people and put forward these ideas and work with them.

The other farmers in district of Bodden Town are Mr. Hamlin Stephenson and Mr. Harvey Stephenson. These people have invested significant amounts of money, and I feel great progress can be made with us as a concentrating group working to make things better for them.

Once again, I want to thank the mover and the seconder and the across the board support in this Honourable House from both sides. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The floor is open to debate. (Pause) If no other Member wishes to speak, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am going to be very brief. Let me say thanks to Government for accepting the motion, and thanks to the respective members who spoke in support of the motion and all those who didn't speak but I know we have their silent support as well.

Like the Minister for Health said, the seed has now been sown. Let's continue to water it and move forward with this very important problem to ensure the survival of our local farmers and the local farming community. So, Mr. Speaker, thank you and all Honourable members for the support.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 30/99. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO 30/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: It is rather late in the afternoon. Is it the wish of the House that we should now adjourn, or should we try to go ahead on another motion? I am in your hands. Can I get an indication?

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

DEFERRED QUESTION 182
(Deferred on 9 February 2000)

No. 182: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development what monetary contributions were made to the Government for the year 1998 by the Civil Aviation Authority, the Water Authority and the Port Authority.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The following contributions were made by the following authorities to the Government for the year 1998:

Civil Aviation Authority	$1.5 million
Port Authority	$321,011
Water Authority	Nil

The Speaker: Supplementaries? The First Elected Member of George Town.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Third Official Member state what reasoning or logic was used to collect the sums listed in the answer, and at the same time what constituted the decision why there was no contribution from the Water Authority?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In the first instance, each year the annual budget provides for contributions to be made by the various Authorities. On the basis of funding available to the Authorities during the course of the year, those expected contributions might quite likely be revised downwards.

From the Water Authority, as honourable members will recall, the government collected a sum in previous years over and above the sum that was budgeted. This caused a bit of disagreement in terms of the views of the Authority concerning exactly what their contributions should be to the government. Since that time, Mr. Speaker, quite a number of questions have been raised in this honourable House concerning the policy of government in regard to dealing with contributions from the various Authorities.

On 29 December last year, the Deputy Financial Secretary, the Auditor General, and I met and we have started discussions with a view to developing a policy which will be put to Executive Council for consideration and also a policy that will be discussed with the Authorities. Hopefully, on this basis we will establish a very good framework that will remove all doubts as to the basis of the expected contributions from the Authorities each year.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, I am heartened to hear that there is some move towards developing a fixed and understood policy.

Can the Honourable Third Official Member state why it was that in 1997 monies were collected from the Water Authority which exceeded the budgeted amount?

The Speaker: The Honourable Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the government requested a contribution of a fixed sum from the Water Authority in 1997. But I should point out that while at that time it would have appeared to have been an anomalous situation in terms of requesting a sum over and above what was budgeted, the research that we started revealed that the contributions from the Authorities in terms of the expected contribution, and even where it exceeds the sum that was budgeted, is not an unusual situation given the expectation of contributions from Authorities in other countries.

But, as I pointed out Mr. Speaker, that was a situation that gave rise to the policy being questioned and that policy is now under review. We trust that it will bring about a very clear understanding between the government and the Statutory Authorities. When I say "the government," that will include the entire Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With the greatest of respect, and not wishing to be rude at any time, I contend that the honourable member has not answered my question. I asked the Honourable Third Official Member why the government made this decision. He did not tell me why sir, and I am asking the question again.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the government made a decision to request the Authority to make a fixed contribution in the year 1997.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: With the greatest of respect, I know that the government made that decision. I am asking why.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The decision of the government to request the Authority to make a fixed contribution in 1997 was a decision taken in Executive Council. There are procedures in terms of giving details of discussions that would have taken place in Executive Council. What I can say is that the culmination of that decision or the results were that the government took the decision in order to request a fixed sum to be contributed. There were reasons for it, Mr. Speaker, but those reasons would be a part of the deliberations that took place in Executive Council.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What I can glean from the Honourable Third Official Member's answer is that there was a fixed amount in the 1997 budget. He has since gone on, in answering supplementary questions, to say that the government made a decision regarding a fixed amount. If there are two fixed amounts involved, and the second decision after the amount that was decided in the budget was changed from the original fixed amount . . . understanding procedures in Council, I am not asking the member to disclose what he should not disclose. Certainly, there had to be some logical reasoning behind it which, if that came forward, would not necessarily constitute any breach of information coming out of the deliberations of Executive Council.

Now, Mr. Speaker, while I know I have to turn this into a question, what I am really trying to say is, I see no reason why my question cannot be answered. If the Honourable Third Official Member from where he sits thinks that he shouldn't answer the question, so be it. But I wish to state that from where I sit I don't see any reason why the question cannot be answered. I know what he said about fixed and set procedures to get these answers. If that is the route he wishes to take, then we will see what happens from here.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: When the government requested the Authority to make a contribution in December of 1997 (I am not sure of the budgeted sum but I can confirm that), the contribution that the Authority was asked to make was $1.5 million. This was needed by the government in order to improve its cash position at the end of the year.

After that contribution was made, the Statutory Authority was left with cash at the bank, $380,754; and cash on fixed deposit, $2,811,109. The Authority went on to make the statement that when it paid over the sum of $1.5 million it created an overdraft of $774,568. When we take this overdraft balance against a balance of approximately $3.2 million—a favourable balance—this showed that the Authority would have $2.4 million as a favourable balance as at 31 December.

So, this was a request that was made by the government.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I wish not to test any ruling from you this morning, sir. And I know that this is Question Time and I will have to turn it into a question, but, surely, the Honourable Third Official Member with his knowledge, expertise, and qualifications would agree that notwithstanding any cash balances on hand, just to allude to cash balances and not take into account what obligations may be forthcoming from any Authority is not necessarily painting the picture fully. Obviously the reasoning why this was the situation was because there were obligations and they were going through plans with regard to future development.

Perhaps, then, the Honourable Third Official Member, having alluded to a policy, would indicate to members whether this policy will bear in mind the medium- and long-term planning of these Authorities so that the criterion used doesn't limit itself to simply cash balances on hand being passed on to the government at will.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The government recognises the importance, as said by the First Elected Member for George Town, to look beyond the immediate cash position—to look to the medium- and the long-term operations of the Authorities. But what is very important is that on the principle of transparency the details as to the plans of the Authorities for the immediate, medium- and long-term should be made available and examined in this honourable House and by the government.

This is what is coming out of the results, and these are the findings of the Auditor General. He has suggested that we do not use what we have come up with as a basis to arrive at any decisions immediately because further research needs to be carried out.

We have for example, taking the financial year 1997, the Water Authority's net profit (I am taking it to be the net profit) was $371.8 million. The tax by the British Government was £13.8 million or C$51.4 million and the equity dividends paid to the government were $132 million or 35.5%.

When we combine the contributions of this Authority to government in the United Kingdom, it amounts to 49.3%. We take what is called the Severn Trent Water Authority—and I am going to ask your indulgence on this just to demonstrate to this honourable House . . . and I do appreciate the question that has been put by the Honourable First Elected Member for George Town as I realise the policy is very important. I am certainly glad that those questions have led us really to arrive at a point where we have recognised the importance of developing this policy, so I am very grateful for that.

I think it is very useful to just share this information: For the year 1994, the profit of that operation was $294.1 million, taxation was $5.3 million, equity dividends were $135 million or approximately 48% of profits.

The Speaker: Honourable Third Official Member, I think, you said $294 million?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: $294.1 million.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [Inaudible comment]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: No, this is not the Water Authority of the Cayman Islands—I am talking about the Severn Trent Water Ltd.

The taxation by the Government in the United Kingdom was $5.3 million, equity dividends, $135 million, so in effect $140.3 million or 48% was paid to the Government of United Kingdom.

For the year 1995, the profit was $275.3 million. Taxation was $6.3 million, equity dividends $140 million or a total pay out to government of $53 million.

This is where it becomes very interesting. I have two other comments and then I will just conclude my remarks on this. The profit for 1996 was $359.6 million, taxation was $29.9 million, equity dividend $129 million or 42%. In addition to that, the Government requested the Authority to pay an extraordinary dividend of $386 million. As you will note, this exceeded the profit of that operation for the year, so this would have had to come from retained earnings.

We see, again that same operation in 1997, the profits were $351.1 million, taxation was $34.8 million and equity dividends were $275 million. When you combine the two of these, it is 88%.

Finally, for the year 1998, $361.5 million was made by way of profits; taxation was $115.3 million, equity dividend was $130 million, a total of 68% paid out to the Government. But in addition, the Government further requested a sum of $309.6 million and the bulk of this would have had to come out of their retained earnings.

Also reference was made in terms of the type of investment schemes the Authorities were allowed to get into, in that they did not enter into non-productive projects which were considered to be generating rates of low return. So, this is where the policy is very important, and when it is finalised, it will allow for the Government to prescribe the contributions by the Authorities on an on-going basis.

The Speaker: Honourable Member before asking for a suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) to continue Question Time, on a procedural matter we are returning to item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Presentations of Papers and Reports.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

GOVERNMENT MINUTE ON THE REPORT OF THE STANDING PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE ON THE SPECIAL REPORT OF THE AUDITOR GENERAL ON QUARRYING OPERATIONS ON CROWN LAND (Recommitted)

The Speaker: The motion to suspend the debate to the next sitting was duly moved by the Third Elected Member for West Bay. I did not get a seconder. At this time and I will now ask for a seconder.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I rise to second that motion.

The Speaker: The motion has been duly moved and seconded and I shall again put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: DEBATE ON THE GOVERNMENT MINUTE ON THE REPORT OF THE STANDING PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE ON THE SPECIAL REPORT OF THE AUDITOR GENERAL ON QUARRYING OPERATIONS ON CROWN LAND TOGETHER WITH PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 25/99 ENTITLED "SPECIAL REPORT BY THE AUDITOR GENERAL - QUARRYING OPERATIONS ON CROWN LAND" DEFERRED UNTIL THE FIRST MEETING OF THE 2000 SESSION OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) & (8)

The Speaker: Now, the question on Standing Order 23(7) and (8) that Question Time continue beyond 11.00 a.m. I will ask for a motion to suspend Standing Order 23(7) and (8). The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I so move.

The Speaker: The motion has been made that Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) be suspended in order that Question Time can continue beyond 11.00 a.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time continues the First Elected Member for George Town.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, I will certainly try to conclude my supplementaries on this before I get the signal.

Having understood exactly what the Honourable Third Official Member has said, and while I understood all the figures he read, in my opinion that parallel (because of many unknowns with these other Authorities) doesn't necessarily ring any bells in the direction that it might have intended.

I would ask the Honourable Third Official Member if he can state, of the three Authorities listed in the substantive answer, which of these Authorities at present is in (in my language) the worst financial position compared with equity and loans?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Rather than attempting to just give a response I would rather wait until the review that is underway has been carried out, as this is going to form a part of the consideration that will be given in terms of the development of the policy. We know that all of the Authorities have loans—some of them have larger loan balances than others. But I think we will have to look at everything together. I am not trying to evade the question or to put it off, but I think it is reasonable under the circumstances. I trust the First Elected Member for George Town will understand.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, moving on to Question 186, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 186

No. 186: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation what arrangements are in place for Caymanians who have completed their studies in medicine or related fields to do internship or residency within the Health Services Department of the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The Health Services Department has not obtained formal recognition to do internships or residency for post graduate training in any medical or related field, despite approaches and discussions with various training institutions. On occasion, some training institutions have allowed students to make arrangements to obtain work experience or carry out part of their internship with the Health Services Department.

To obtain formal recognition for postgraduate training in any medical or related field, the Health Services Department would have to demonstrate that there is sufficient volume of caseload work to provide the student with an adequate learning experience in the particular field of study. In addition, the department would have to ensure that there is an adequate level of staff who have the time, experience, and qualification to operationalise the training programme.

With the opening of the new Cayman Islands Hospital, Grand Cayman—which has increased the bed capacity, enhanced staffing levels and provides full diagnostic services—new efforts have recently been made to request that another review be carried out by the University of the West Indies Faculty of Medical Sciences to consider the hospital for postgraduate training for some areas of medicine.

Returning Caymanian nursing graduates are placed in positions which enable them to consolidate their theoretical knowledge and clinical skills. Once they have obtained the State Board licensure from the country or state in which they were trained, the officer is moved into a Registered Nurse's post.

Returning Caymanian medical graduates are also placed in positions which enable them to obtain experience while working along with experienced consultants or specialists. Most medical graduates then pursue further training at overseas institutions to obtain their specialist qualifications and registration.

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House then, if it is to be understood that where Caymanians have obtained postgraduate training in fields such as psychology and psychiatry and have to do internship, that they will not be able to do such internships here even if this is the jurisdiction in which they will be ultimately practising?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, there are two returning persons and they would work along for a period of time with the local psychologist, Dr. Von Kirchenheim.

But they could not just come here and start practising without a certain degree of supervision initially.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the minister also tell the House if in attention to the academic qualifications these psychologists are going to require being licensed by the authorities in the Cayman Islands and that as a prerequisite for that licence they would have to satisfy a certain internship or a certain mastery of clinical practices here in the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, they would have to be registered by the Health Practitioners Board. As a matter of fact, for one of the ladies a programme has been agreed where she would come in and gradually take on her own caseload.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to Question 187, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 187

No. 187: Mr. Linford A. Pierson asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to state what plans, if any, are being made to provide adequate public health facilities at the George Town Hospital.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I appreciate the Third Elected Member for George Town asking this question. There have been a number of queries about this since all of the other districts have their own health centre. We have discussed this in some areas in Finance Committee, but just to respond here officially, the Ministry and Health Services Department have focused attention in recent years on the design, development and construction of the Cayman Islands Hospital and on new health centres for the districts of West Bay, Bodden Town, East End and North Side. It is recognised that in the years ahead, attention will have to be given to the development of a new health centre for George Town which would be the headquarters for the Public Health Services and would provide General Practice and Public Health Clinics.

Presently, General Practice clinics are held in the former temporary casualty area and this will be renovated this year to provide better facilities. The former nursing administration area was renovated last year, providing accommodation for three staff from Public Health and the Public Health clinic area will have minor repairs carried out this year.

A sum of $15,000 has been placed in the 2000 Budget to provide funds to commence the design phase for a new George Town Health Centre which will address the need for adequate Public Health facilities at the Cayman Islands Hospital. I trust that whenever the new government comes on line later on this year that they will follow up on this.

The Speaker: Supplementaries? The Third Elected Member for George Town.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: The honourable minister said that presently general practice clinics are held in the former temporary casualty area and that this will be renovated this year to provide better facilities. I wonder if he could state exactly what the old hospital building will be used for, whether any of that will be also used for public health facilities?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the decision has pretty well been made that the whole general ward area will be demolished for part of the continuing new hospital programme where mental health, geriatrics and a partial hospice will go in there for probably less than a 10% increase instead of renovating.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Perhaps, the honourable minister could then state where it is proposed to locate this new facility that he mentioned in the answer.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the final decision has not been made, but we are considering the present location to just bulldoze that or remove that old building and build there. There is a sufficient space to do this—a purpose built building.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I am very pleased to hear the honourable minister say that consideration is being given for a mental health facility. I wonder if he is in a position to say whether any sort of work is being done in cooperation with Social Services to deal with the number of mental health people on the road publicly today?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, there are present and on-going discussions as part of our overall programme for improvement, especially in the area of mental health, which we all know we must now address.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just to follow up on the supplementary that the Third Elected Member for George Town just asked. Can the minister state if there is anything being done with regard to housing the several individuals who basically at this point in time find themselves homeless and are prime candidates for such a mental health facility?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, at this time the only place designated is for them is Northward, and it depends on their condition as sentenced by the court. But right now, this is what the new facility will deal with.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Understanding the minister's difficulty and understanding the difficulty of the situation itself, I was actually leaning my question more towards those who are not at Northward Prison, and perhaps have not found themselves afoul of the law.

But since the minister answered in that vein, I am certain that it is not a satisfactory circumstance with these individuals being housed at Northward. There are others now who are not in Northward. So, we have two groups basically. Understanding that there is going to be a certain amount of time before there is a permanent facility to accommodate these people, is there anything physically being done at present with the ones who are not at Northward?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, that is a very good observation the honourable member has pointed out. Through the Social Services, we are trying to address this problem. We know this is a very vulnerable group of people. To be specific, there is no provision at this time, but I am hoping that as we go forward this year we can find somewhere to assist these people.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the minister state whether the problem at present is simply a lack of funding with regard to any further movement forward having been accomplished? We have recognised the situation and we have talked about it for several years now, but is the problem simply a lack of funding or are there other reasons why the plans are no further ahead with regard to providing this facility?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the funding could be one of the difficulties. Through Social Services moving into the districts we are trying to develop a comprehensive programme involving not only Social Services but including the Health Services to try and help these people.

The Speaker: Two final supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: The honourable minister stated that a sum of $15,000 has been placed in the 2000 budget. In view of the obvious need for this facility, I wonder if he is a position to say whether any sort of design has been done for such a facility with the costing; and when can we expect that he would be back to the House to seek further financing?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the in-house people within the Public Health have a general idea how this could be functioned. They have put together preliminary stuff that would then go to the architectural people at Public Works. Once this is more firmed up, I will then share with the House those plans as we go forward.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the minister state whether or not priority will be placed on this, and if the attempt is going to be to ensure that, at least by next year, such a facility can be created and be put in place?

Truthfully, I cast no aspirations. The minister knows that we have been talking about this forever, and it just seems . . . I am now talking about the facility for mental health. But it just seems like it has been dragging on forever, and it is way down on the priority list. I wish to bring to the attention of not only the minister but the government that this is a priority. If we are not prepared to do something about it, then we should all take up the responsibility and each of us house some of them.

The Speaker: Your question is?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I asked him about the priority before that sir, but I just sneaked the rest of it in.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I didn't get the last part of the question, but it is the number one priority of the Ministry and the Health Services Department to have this functional by next year.

The Speaker: Moving to question number 188 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 188

No. 188: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning how many government scholarships were awarded by the Education Council this year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thirty-four scholarships were awarded for students to do the bachelors degree abroad. Nine scholarships were awarded for students to do post-graduate studies abroad. Thirty scholarships were awarded for students to attend the Community College. Two scholarships were awarded for students to attend the Cayman Islands Law School.

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the First Elected Member for George Town.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state what might be the breakdown between these scholarships coming from individuals who were not within the Civil Service at that time and what would be the number for people who are already employed by government but were given opportunity for further training?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That is not really dealt with by my ministry but by the Honourable Chief Secretary's and I don't have it. It is different funding.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Going back to the original question to the minister, can he state if the Education Council is trying to deal with any type of incentive programmes for specific areas in tertiary education that the country finds itself lacking with Caymanians? For instance, teaching and the medical field, nursing and perhaps other areas could be added to that. But just looking at those two, outside of the normal possibilities for individuals are there any specific incentives which are being looked at which might attract young Caymanians to enter into professional areas such as these?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: What the Education Council does if it cannot give out all scholarships . . . and in recent years there was never a time when we have not had sufficient money to give out all scholarships to all Caymanians who qualify. But the high priority areas such as teaching, nursing and areas where there is a need are what are looked at.

Now, there is a list of these (which I don't have with me here), but in the application some of the information given out are the courses that are accepted. We now have 21 on scholarships, mainly teaching, but in education. Some of those may be doing a master's speciality or something. There are at present two in medical technology; one doing medicine; four doing nursing; two doing pharmacology; one doing physical therapy, one doing psychology and one doing radiography. I believe that covers basically all that would be on the medical side.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: While there may be a downside to the question I am going to ask, I am still going to ask it. Can the minister state if he would be prepared to put forward a suggestion whereby the incentive for these specific areas might allow for the terms of a scholarship to be more attractive for individuals namely what the entire costs are for such scholarships to be dealt with outside of the norm that is given when applicants apply for scholarships?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, at present . . . in fact, when I came into the Ministry I don't remember what it was but the maximum was quite low. At present, we can go up to CI$17,000 per annum (which I guess is US$22,000), which by and large we have found has been able to cover the vast majority.

What the Education Council does, sir, is look at the means of the parents and not all the time it will award $17,000 but it will balance and by and large it always awards an excess of one-half.

Now, if there is a student who says to us (and it wouldn't be often that this arises), 'Look US$23,000 cannot get me through, I have no means and I have to spend and save US$30,000. I doubt if there are too many colleges that go beyond that.' Then what we do, sir, is to take that student into the Student's Loan Scheme so that the child is not deprived of going away. And when he comes back, only a small amount would be there for repayment.

I believe I need to just say it is always good to have either the student or the parents do some sort of small commitment in there because that lets them have a feeling of ownership and accomplishment, even if it is a small amount that is in there. But by and large what I can say, sir (and you know this because you are on the Council as well), is that students who come to the Council once they have the qualifications for entry they are given a scholarship and they are treated fairly. If they come back, the Council will look at each individual's case and give more, up to the maximum of 17.

We have now moved into the area of dealing with post-graduate degrees. One of the things we may well have to do is to lift the ceiling in relation to some of those, which sometimes can be far more costly because they are far more intense. So far, we haven't had a problem with that. But it is always good if we can go about the $17,000 where it is justified. But I believe it is a comfortable amount at this stage. I can ask the Council to review this then it can be looked at for an increase if that becomes necessary.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I have two questions. I wonder if the honourable minister can say whether or not there has been any consideration to review the age requirements. Recently what I have experienced is that there are older individuals who are interested in going off to school, but they require the same thing, a scholarship. I am not sure what the maximum age limit is, but has any consideration been given to maybe being a little flexible with the age so that Caymanians who are a little older would qualify for consideration?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, that is a good question because maybe the perception that the public has is that it is only for students. As far as I know (correct me if I am wrong), there is no age limit. If somebody is 30 or 40 years old and they have the qualifications, they can apply for a scholarship. I don't think somebody should be barred by age because many of us have done our degrees after we got out of school especially if you are going to do a second or third degree.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I want to thank the minister for clearing that up because I was under the impression that there was a specific age limit.

The other question I have, Mr. Speaker, is whether or not any consideration is being given by the Council with regard to the bonding requirements. I know if a student has a government scholarship, we require him to come back and work in the civil service. I think one of the problems we are running into, Mr. Speaker, there are so many young Caymanians who are qualifying for degrees that we might run out of space to find meaningful positions for them once they return to the civil service. Maybe the consideration should be that they be required to come back to work in the Cayman Islands for a period of time.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the member has really asked a very important question because the scholarship has been so good in the last three or four years, especially where every child who qualifies gets a scholarship. We are now facing a problem where the government doesn't have (as the member said) meaningful positions. What happens then, sir, is that we normally make recommendations to the Financial Secretary to vary the bond so that they work in the private sector. We do try, for example if they are going to an institution that can afford it, to get them to pay a part of the bond because they now get the benefit of what could well be $50,000 - $60,000 of education by the government. We have found that there has been cooperation in that area.

I think one thing that should never be done is to put a qualified student into a position that is not appropriate. It will just frustrate them and it will burn them out. It is better to take a sensible approach and for them to go into the private sector.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay—two supplementaries.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, sir, I only need one. I would like to thank the minister for what he has said. My question is: Are we granting government scholarships to qualify Caymanians to come back specifically to work with government, or are we granting government scholarships for Caymanians to qualify to come back to work in the Cayman Islands? There is a slight difference. I think once we clarify what the real objective or requirement is then I think it makes it easy for the Council to decide whether or not they will be just bonded to come back to work in the Cayman Islands for three or four years.

In light of the huge demand that we have for work permits in this country for foreign people coming in, I would urge the Council to be a little lenient with regard to the bonding requirement.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the student on returning would owe a first duty to government, if there is an appropriate position, because after all if government doesn't function well, the private sector won't.

For example, we have 21 students in accounting, government obviously cannot absorb them, whereas we have 21 in teaching that we can absorb. So, the Council has, as the member quite rightly said, the flexibility to know that if they can contribute to the islands as a whole then by all means that is very important and we then have to somehow release them to the private sector getting where possible contributions from the employers towards what is really quite expensive training.

The Speaker: No further supplementaries? Moving on to question number 189 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 189

No. 189: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Aviation and Planning to provide an update on the new Primary School which is scheduled to be constructed in West Bay.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The architectural design drawings have been completed by the architect engaged for this project, OBM Ltd. They were recently submitted to and approved by the Planning Department. The architect and the quantity surveyor (BCQS) are now proceeding with completion of the detailed engineering drawings, specifications, bills of quantities and construction tender documents. This work is anticipated to be finished by the first quarter of 2000 at which time construction tenders will be called. Occupancy for the new school is planned for September 2002.

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the honourable minister can state the anticipated cost of the new primary school?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it's $9.2 million to 350 students. It will be three classes.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to Question 190 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 190 (Withdrawn)

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, when this question was filed it was relevant, but I think at the present time it is not. We have, thankfully, just recently opened the new hall for the John A. Cumber Primary School. I kindly ask that this question be withdrawn.

The Speaker: The question is that question number 190 be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question 190 has been withdrawn.

AGREED: QUESTION 190 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. At this time, we will take the morning break. We shall suspend proceeding for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.48 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.20 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 5 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 31/99, The Removal of Import Duties from Imported Foods, to be moved by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 31/99

THE REMOVAL OF IMPORT DUTIES FROM IMPORTED FOODS

Dr. Frank McField: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to move Private Member's Motion No. 31/99, The Removal of Import Duties from Imported Food Stuff, and it reads:

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly record its concerns with the impact of Government duty on the price of food items imported into these Islands;

AND BE IT ALSO FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly make meaningful suggestions with regard to removing this tax which greatly burdens the people of these Islands."

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 31/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: When I decided to campaign in 1996 to become a Member of the Legislative Assembly, I decided to suggest to potential voters that it would be a meaningful exercise to remove duties from imported foodstuff, at least some. In my campaign manifesto it says "some imported foodstuff."

Since that time, we have had several meaningful debates and members have registered their concern with regard to the way in which the government goes about raising revenue. I think it is quite obvious at this point in our economic and social development that the method of raising revenue burdens the poor in this country much more so than it does the rich. If we have a family of four (being a mother and three children), we will find that single family with one income will have to contribute to the government's revenue more than if we had a very wealthy family of two.

The job of raising a family is important for the society, because without the continual production and socialisation of people the society would cease to exist. Therefore, parenting is an important aspect of the growth and survival of any society. It could be said that the society is not acting in its own best interests if it supports a revenue system that would impact more adversely on that family of four that is poor and earns below $1,500 a month, than it would if it taxed the family of two that was earning perhaps over $100,000 per year.

Now, Mr. Speaker, most people feel that as soon as you begin to debate something, it means that you have an idea of what the resolution should be. For this reason I think we have tried to make it quite clear (both myself and the seconder of this motion) that we are asking that the Legislative Assembly make meaningful suggestions with regard to removing this tax. We are asking this because we are concerned with the way in which government revenue enhancement measures cause the cost of living to rise steadily and to come to a point to almost make it prohibitive for families to exist as an economic and social institution.

I have on my desk, Mr. Speaker, a letter from the President of Wholesome Bakery, Mr. Norberg Thompson. It is addressing this question of removal of import duties from bread. It is interesting that I would have gotten a copy of this today, and we also have had representation from farmers with regard to the removal of import duties from certain foodstuffs that they also produce. In this particular case, we are talking about fruits.

Now, I have said before that society really is a collection of different individuals with similar and sometimes very diverse interests. Sometimes the interests of individuals in the society are in fact antagonistic to each other. Part of the role of government as an institution which fosters harmony and which insists upon a social course of behaviour that would maintain order is to be able to create the forum within which to resolve these differences in a peaceful manner. This is, of course, why we are here in the Legislative Assembly—to debate the different interests and to debate why one interest should be seen as more important at a particular phase in our development over another interest.

If everything can coexist and if nothing is antagonistic towards the other thing then we are living in a very blessed and harmonious environment. But, Mr. Speaker, the rapid development of commerce in the Cayman Islands has caused our interests as Caymanians to be sometimes antagonistic. Sometimes you hear people say, 'Well, we are all Caymanians' forgetting, of course, that sometimes one Caymanian's interests could be antagonistic to another Caymanian's interests, or they could conflict.

The interest of those persons who have been producing food for a very long time can also be compared to the interest of those persons that have been supplying the society with certain skills and labour for a particular time. Should the interest of working people in this society be protected by some type of tax just like the producers' interest is protected by some tax?

What is the reason for government's duties? Is the reason because government is interested in raising revenue or is it that government is interested in protecting local production, local industry, and local companies?

If we were to look at what we call the tariff system, traditionally it was created in order to protect local industries especially during the period of mercantilist development in the Americas and in Europe. If we even were to go back and refer to the very peculiar policies of Great Britain during the period of mercantilism, we know that the imposition of tariff had specific useful functions. But after awhile, in the 1830's and 1860's, they then began to talk about free trade because it was important that countries were not so rigid with regard to the imposition of tariff in order to discourage the trade between countries.

The trade between countries came to complement the trade between cities and, in particular, geographical states. The trade between these countries, as we can see today with the unification of Europe into the United States of Europe, means that the tariff which would have prevented trade between themselves as nations is now being replaced—as was the case in the United States when it was developing as a physical and economic entity.

So, if the purpose of the tariff today on foodstuffs is to protect local producers of foodstuffs then it is necessary that those persons that are responsible for industry, that are responsible for raising revenue, make this clear to the general population. Of course, the general population will understand if you are saying that you are depending upon these import duties in order to raise revenue. The general population might say to you, 'Why is it that you are just raising revenue by taxing us? Why is it that you are raising revenue by taxing the tea and sugar that we must use? Why aren't you taxing the luxury items that other persons are selling and using?'

The general population might have that particular perspective, and that's the reason why I am raising this as a representative who is interested in a deeper meaning and understanding of what is just, what is judicious, and what is fair.

Mr. Speaker, I really do believe that when we are talking about globalisation, when we are talking about capital being mobile, and the fact that the capital in this country from the point of view of cash or cash-worth is not necessarily uniquely Caymanian, not necessarily uniquely Caribbean, not necessarily uniquely North American, but that capital has an international composition. Having an international composition, it is owned by more persons and more nationalities. Therefore, we ourselves, although we got involved in capitalistic development at a late stage and were able to do so, we got involved at a stage when tariff was not considered to be significant.

Therefore, when we hear the Financial Secretary or someone else saying, 'Let us not put a stamp duty that is high on the transfer of property or the transfer of an insurance policy or the making of an insurance policy because it will make us less competitive with other countries' what you are saying in other words, is that you do not want to create any prohibition or any situation that will prohibit the accumulation of capital within this particular jurisdiction with regard to this particular type of liberal taxation and the so-called financial industry; yet, the continuation of a more stringent, rigid taxation with regard to the actual material things.

So, the concentration of the government is in fact on those things that are tangible, that are moveable; but it is not with regard to monies or wealth that is mobile. It taxes mobile goods that are being brought into the country for this specific reason, first of all, that we remain conscious of raising revenue for the country. In most countries where people say keep the import duties on, keep the tariff on, those businesses turn around and pay taxes to the government in order that the government has a source of revenue.

So, the industry that says it wants the duties to remain on there has to have somewhere also of contributing to the general upkeep of the society. It is not good enough that these people are saying that they are Caymanians and they have been in business for 30 years . . . because there have been Caymanians that have been working for 30 years, and their labour is not being protected, their labour is not being collectively viewed as a monopoly or should it have monopoly status.

I am making the point that the only reason why certain considerations are made is not because of the usefulness of certain measures, not because of the usefulness of certain systems, but because there are interest groups with the consciousness and the ability to keep certain things in place. The government has continued to have to answer to these particular interest groups, be it the people who own the restaurants or the hotels who might want cheaper import duties on alcohol, cheaper import duties on building their hotels by getting the materials in at a reduced rate under auspices that it is good for the society because it will provide jobs for the people and therefore, as a result of that, there should be concession and government has shown a certain amount of flexibility.

The point that I am labouring is that it is okay for Mr. Thomas, in particular, to say that his production of bread is being affected by bread being able to be sold on the shelves cheaper because he knows his business better than I do. But when you have Members of the Legislative Assembly getting up and saying that there is no point in reducing the tariff on imported foods because the consumer will not benefit, and saying this in a disagreeable manner in certain cases, yet a person who is responsible for the production and sale of bread is saying that his sales are affected, it goes to show that the Members of the Legislative Assembly that are saying this don't know what they are talking about. They have not done their jobs!

Here is the imperial evidence to suggest that they are expressing an opinion when I was expressing facts. I said that the price of the goods can be lowered by the government revenue not composing a part of the price.

If you have 15% or 20% duty on something, when it goes in the store it is not a 15% hike it is more like a 30% hike—the merchants want to make a profit on the money that he puts out to pay duties. If you get $200,000 worth of stuff and you have to pay government 20% on that, that money has to factor in as money as part of the cost of the goods. So, when you retail the goods that particular thing is in there as a cost and, therefore, it has to make a profit.

So, when the Financial Secretary says that what people might be paying as a result of consumer taxes is something like 11% Mr. Speaker, it is something like 25% we are paying—which is very high for poor people. We see this by their inability to function economically, by the social disruption caused by the economic hardships, pressures, insecurities, and uncertainties. Whether you are building homes, feeding people or dispensing medicine, it all has to be imported. Therefore, government's attitude toward the importation of goods is one of the first considerations with regard to the price of the goods. If there were no tariffs on these goods, they would be sold cheaper.

And for people to say it would not happen, it is just for them to make an excuse. It is the simplest excuse to convince the consumer that the consumer would not get things cheaper. It is not true that the consumer would not get things cheaper, we see examples where the consumer in fact is getting these things cheaper.

If Caymanian producers are at a disadvantage, then we have to take this into account. But we have to be honest about what we are taking into account, and we have to measure this. We have to ask which is more important at this particular point. Is it more important to make sure that the bread production in this country is safeguarded by a tariff than [it is to make sure] that the child gets the bread without us standing in the way of that? There are ways that we have suggested that government could subsidise certain foodstuffs to poorer people. But government cannot ignore the fact that whether or not it is a great burden that it is a burden.

If you go to a supermarket and you are short 2 cents for bread, you cannot buy the bread because that is the way we do business. So, for government to believe somehow that their taxes on foodstuff do not get in the way of people providing for their children and providing for the elderly is nonsense. When the government takes and gives support to people over 62 who cannot support themselves, who do not have people to assist them, how far can this money go in the supermarkets?

Rents are impacted by the duty that government has by the cost. And we are not dealing with that, we are dealing with the foodstuff, but I just wanted to make the point that it is nonsense for government to act as if somehow it is not responsible for the prices in this country. The government is very much responsible for the prices in this country.

The fact that the cost of living rises in this country faster than it does in any country has partly to do with this, partly to do with the interest system, partly to do with the speculation on land. All of these things go together to make it impossible for the normal average Caymanian to live. But the normal average Caymanian has not written a letter to say how good it is that they have had a break with regard to foodstuffs. I know that a lot of these Caymanians are happy that they have had a break with regard to these things.

Now, government can go back to their original way of acting and take away these concessions from these people in order to give protection back to the local producers of bread and other foodstuff. Government has a right to make these considerations. Government has a right to openly debate these things without being accused of giving preferential treatment to any particular group, or being biased simply because we work in air-conditioned buildings.

I am here to look at the rights of everyone, and to try to fathom a way of looking at and preserving the rights of the majority. The majority is consumers. And the majority of our consumers work in order to consume. The only way to have access to consumer goods is by way of exchanging their labour for cash that they then exchange for these consumer goods and for foodstuff.

What is being done by the government to assure that these persons who are labouring in the Cayman Islands in order to get cash to buy food are making the amount of necessary to participate in the consumer system? Government hasn't brought in any legislation to force any kind of price control or to make sure that there is any kind of minimum wage that would prevent people from sinking below some poverty level. So, why is government then obsessed with bringing in or preserving legislation that would preserve any particular kind of production? If it is not interested in safeguarding labour and maintaining the rights of labour, why is it so interested in maintaining the rights of producers? It is again because labour has never had truly any kind of voice.

The consumer has never really, truly, had any kind of voice. So, it is the consumer that has paid for the physical development of this country. The consumer has paid for the roads; the consumer has paid for bettering the airport, improving the hospitals the schools and all the infrastructure that people are now coming here to take advantage of. The consumer has been made poorer as a people. They have been made so poor by this burden of this peculiar kind of taxation that the consumer today in the Cayman Islands—whether he is in the swamp, or in Central George Town, or Walker's Road, or down Pond Side—feels it when he goes to the supermarket. He comes out and says "How expensive!" And the merchants have said . . . because I have worked with merchants.

I worked at Foster's Food Fair in the warehouse. I know what kind of duties they have to pay. For those who say that it wouldn't give them a benefit if they had to pay less duty, that is nonsense. One of the first things that Mr. David Foster did when he reduced the duties on the fruits was that he made a sign to show people that he was reducing his prices. He wanted everybody to do so and has always been excited about being able to give the consumer better prices.

But when it comes to the poor, the government goes there and says, 'You owe us this and that, and we want our money!' This particular kind of taxation means that if I bring in $100,000 worth of stuff (not foodstuff perhaps, but lumber or anything) and put it up on the shelves . . . there goes my taxes that I have already paid the government sitting on the shelf for one to two years. That is accumulating interest. I had to pay interest on that. Therefore, it makes the goods more expensive. So, we can see how our commerce is impacted by the peculiar form of taxation we have.

I feel that we have to answer the question of how to make it possible for Wholesome Bakery (if we use it as an example) to continue to exist. But one way that he might be able to continue to exist is by making less profits. Everybody wants the other group to give up something. But what are they willing to give up? He might be able to become more competitive like I was talking about with the farming community in terms of how they market their stuff and how they make people aware of the positive health qualities their local products have. You can also develop your product by asking the consumer to patronise you as a local producer rather than being forced by government tariffs to patronise you.

In a lot of cases in the free enterprise system, we say that the consumer should have the freeness to choose and that government should not intervene. Those same people that are talking about government not intervening in this and that, and government not subsidising this and that . . . there is a subsidy to this bakery when government puts a tariff on stuff that would come in to go to the consumer at a cheaper point. I think we need to have these types of discussions with regard to how fair it is to the consumer.

What is the position of the consumer? How does the position of the consumer compare to the position of the person that is producing, for instance in this specific case, bread? I would not want to destroy anybody's business especially if somebody has laboured long. But I said my father worked all his life therefore he laboured long—what was he entitled to? What was he entitled to have protected? My mother laboured long. I am in my fifties—what can be protected about the skills that I have? What kind of particular compensation can I get from government to make sure that some company, some labour, or some skilful person from abroad cannot come and compete against me?

I believe that the same kind of protection by way of tariff that this gentleman is asking for will be perhaps the same that we will be asking for from the point of labour in particular. I have warned about that: If they continue to have tariff to protect them, we will want to have tariff or something else to protect labour to make sure that we see the Caymanian that has been labouring in this country for the last five to fifteen years as an investment; that we see the growth of these people's children as an investment by these people that are supposed to be protected just like any other economic investment.

This would mean at the end of the day, Mr. Speaker, that companies that want to have special compensation, like Wholesome Bakery for instance, should say that at least 65% of the people employed by them are Caymanians. When they can come and show us on their rosters, Mr. Speaker, that the majority of the people they have are Caymanians and no foolishness about Caymanians don't want to work and Caymanians this and that, when you can prove that it is more than your pocketbook that you are trying to protect, then government has a right to come in there and act to protect the majority.

But when you are talking about yourself—your pocketbook—it is a slightly different argument. Whenever you make an argument to government, it cannot just be based upon one man, it has to be based upon the others.

Mr. Speaker, I know that it is getting to that particular time so I will give you the opportunity to—

The Speaker: You can go ahead for a couple more minutes. I was hoping that you were going to conclude.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I am quite sure you are always hoping that I will conclude, but I am not going to conclude. [Laughter] What I have to say, Mr. Speaker, might not change things, but it will certainly set the stage for things to be changed. I believe that we have to have an overview of this, and when I come to the Throne Speech, I will even make that a bit more apparent.

But what we are saying is that the government has already made a move to remove the duties from foodstuff. In doing so it has shown that the government is willing to take a decrease in income being derived from this particular tax and to give the benefit to the consumer, and the consumer could very well deal with this or use this particular concession at this point.

The merchants, the persons who control the supermarkets, have shown good faith in that they have passed on these benefits to the consumer and that as a result of their doing so rather than keeping these benefits for themselves in the form of profit other producers have now become concerned about this. This has caused government to now want to take back again from the consumer what they gave to the consumer.

I am saying, Mr. Speaker, if government is supposed to do this, we can educate the consumer—who is the majority—to say that if they take back from the consumer what they have given to the consumer without reasonably justifying why they have done that, without showing that they are not being unfair to the consumer and showing interest to some other group, then the consumer will take back what they have given the government—which is the power to represent them—and they will change the government.

This is a very important point that I brought here because I brought it up in 1996. Rather than continue to bore you with my overview I will just sum it up this way I think, because as you know I do have other forums to get my points across but I will say this: The reason why I think it is unfair for taxes in this modern time to be placed on food when we have poor people, poor children and poor old people, when we are talking about living in the most prosperous country in the world, we must be talking about the most selfish place on earth if those people with so much wealth who have been able to accumulate it without any kind of threat to it continue to not see some kind of connection between crime and poverty. If they cannot see that the greatest crime in the world is the creation of poverty, then they have lost sight of what I believe is important.

We are able in this country to speculate with regard to land value to the point now where our people find it more difficult to own land than anything else. So, if there are no concessions that can be given to the poor, why is there so much concentration on the rich? I would like to hear an answer to that, and I will have the possibility to wind-up. Thank you.

The Speaker: At this time, we shall suspend proceedings until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.55 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.48 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 31/99. Does any other member wish to speak? The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I rise to comment on behalf of the government on Private Member's Motion No. 31/99 which deals with the removal of import duties from imported foods.

The motion, Mr. Speaker, reads: "BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly records its concerns with the impact of Government duty on the prices of food items imported into these Islands;

"AND BE IT ALSO FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly makes meaningful suggestions with regard to removing this tax which greatly burdens the people of these Islands."

Mr. Speaker, the government does not have a difficulty in accepting this motion because in effect what this motion is doing is inviting the participation of all honourable members to consider this very important issue.

Mr. Speaker, the government has always been mindful of the fact that any tariff imposed, be it by way of customs import duty or any other tariff, will have some unfavourable effect in terms of having to take money out of the consumer's pocket. The government has always been very careful in terms of managing the expenditures of government in such a way in order to minimise this burden.

We know that governance in any society is necessary, and governance carries with it a cost. When we look in terms of the historical perspective or we look at what has been happening over the years in these communities, the government has made every conceivable attempt in order to try to minimise the cost to the people within the community. In the area of customs import duty, every effort has been made to minimise these costs or tariffs where possible.

When we consider, Mr. Speaker, that most food items in the Cayman Islands are either not taxed at all or carry low taxes in the form of import duties, this in itself underscores the position of this government and previous governments. I know that this is a commitment of not only the government but of all honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, unlike most other countries, however, the Cayman Islands do not have value added tax, sales tax, or any other kind of taxes on food items other than what is imposed through import tariffs.

In formulating our customs duty structure, the government took into account the need to ensure that food items are affordable to all persons within our community, especially to those at the lower end of the income scale. As a result, Mr. Speaker, most food items have a zero percent duty. Of the 37 main categories of food items in the customs tariff, roughly 65% or 24 categories are duty free. These include basic food items such as bread, milk, rice, fish, macaroni, chicken, sugar, butter, eggs, cheese, cocoa, tea and coffee.

Since 1997, the government has taken steps to remove duties on a number of food items. This is in line with its expressed intention to keep food items, as I mentioned earlier, as low as possible and to ensure that low income families are not disadvantaged. The areas where there has been removal of duties since 1997 are:

Particulars	Previous duty charged	Current duty charged
Flavoured milk, yoghurt and ice cream	20%	0%
Cocoa and drinking chocolate	10%	0%
Tea	20%	0%
Cereal and cereal preparations	20%	0%

In 1999, the following measures were introduced:

Particulars	Previous duty charged	Current duty charged
Bird eggs and egg yolks	15%	0%
Bakery products including biscuits	20%	0%
Butter	20%	0%
Beet and sugarcane refined	7.5%	0%
Fruit with some exceptions	15%	0%

With regard to imported fruits, Mr. Speaker, the government acted swiftly in response to concerns expressed by local farmers that the removal of duties would hurt their sales. Government is therefore now proposing a two-tier duty structure for imported foods and the Bill is currently being drafted. These fruits are produced locally by our farmers, and if imported would carry a 15% duty. These include: avocado pears, bananas, plantains, citrus fruits, mangoes, papayas, breadfruit, June-plums, golden apples, Barbados cherries, tomatoes, okra, peppers, pumpkins, sweet-sops, melons, star-fruit and cucumbers. There is one here that I will spell it rather than attempt to pronounce it, it is pommescythere. Apparently it is the description of a fruit that is given. I am not going to run the risk and mispronounce it! All of the fruits are duty free.

Mr. Speaker, government is continuously monitoring its duty structure. It is expected that duties on non-essential items or on those that may not present the healthiest options will have to be retained, for example: fried potato chips, chocolates, and confectioners. However, government is committed over time to removing duties on all essential food items. This exercise will require proper research and analysis.

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Fourth Elected Member for George Town raised quite a number of issues. As I said earlier, these proposals in terms of this motion that are under review are very much consistent with the policy of government. As honourable Members of this House are aware we have the financial reform initiatives, those initiatives are currently in train. They present a very good opportunity when everything is being considered to look very closely in terms of the revenue measures and the revenue structures.

Mr. Speaker, it is very important, and this is where, as I said earlier, honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly will have to come together in order to consider all of these matters. It would be very useful. I think this is very much consistent with the motion that has been proposed by the honourable Fourth Elected Member for George Town. He touched on certain areas such as land and who is allowed to purchase. I will not comment on that issue, but to keep the cost to the consumer in our society at a minimum through the imposition of duties or tariffs. This is a commitment of the government to do so when and where possible.

The member recently made the comment that we are living in a First World society with Third World revenue measures. I would endorse those comments fully. It is high time that we sat down and looked very carefully at all of these issues. But it is very important that the facts and figures be presented.

I mentioned in this honourable House that the Economics Unit will be separated from the Statistics Department so that unit can conduct the necessary research whereby recommendations that are being made to the government and to honourable members of this House can be done on the basis of proper research being carried out to show not only the economic impact but also the social consequences of decisions to be taken. It is very good when we are in a position, rather than believing that something is good and just having this intuitive feeling, when we can back this up with concrete evidence in terms of what is available and what can be gleaned from scientific findings. This is the direction in which we are heading and that is very much consistent with the financial reform initiatives. What is being proposed, as I said, is very much consistent with the government's policy at this time.

As I mentioned, approximately 65% of all food items that are brought into Cayman Islands are presently duty free. But, given our revenue structure, it is important to maintain the tariff at this time, or so it is felt. I think really that it would not be advisable to suggest any immediate reduction on those items until proper research can be carried out to endorse the government's position.

In the meantime, the government is quite agreeable to support the motion as proposed because it is always felt that when we have more than one person sitting down to consider an issue often times a more informed judgment and opinion can be obtained.

Mr. Speaker, with this I would like to record the government's support for this motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other member wishes to speak? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you Mr. Speaker. I certainly will not be long. I am one who was very heartened to hear what the Honourable Financial Secretary answered on behalf of the government. But I could not resist the opportunity to say that it is a pity that the Honourable Third Official Member finds himself in the position he finds himself in, having to reply on behalf of the policymakers.

Following the statement that I am going to make it is a real pity that we couldn't have elections every year, because if every year was an election year we might get some results—because the positions that are being taken today by the government of the day are positions that we have been crying out for for years! But they are suddenly very happy to accept certain thoughts and ideas, and welcome everybody on board to share in the load.

Mr. Speaker, as I said, I won't be long. I just hope . . . and it has no reflection on the Honourable Third Official Member because as I said it is such a pity that he finds himself having to answer. But I just hope that those words—which I know he means—are not words to placate everyone coming from somewhere else, when in truth and in fact if life were different and times were different and this was not February of the year 2000, you would have found every excuse in the world not to support the motion because the Member bringing it was a radical with some foolhardy ideas.

Mr. Speaker, if the Minister of Education wishes to answer he can answer right after I speak. It doesn't matter to me, I say how I feel.

Now, my only thoughts are with a Select Committee that, understanding the position, perhaps it is the best way forward. Perhaps, it is the only method by which we could truly get the ideas that the Honourable Third Official Member has been talking about pooled together in order to try to come up with a sense of direction. Not wishing to repeat myself too much, I know that the Third Official Member is mindful of a lot of areas that needs to be dealt with. I know because I have had conversations with him. I have travelled with him. I understand.

But, you know, Mr. Speaker, being annoyed is not the right word. What really gets to me is if this government had the will to deal with these matters in the way that they are professing to now—why have we wasted so much time? And we have! Life is not going to get any easier. And with just about everything that we faced in this Legislative Assembly we have had to make decisions. Every one of us has to be thinking about how will it affect this group of people, how will it affect that group of people; what is politically expedient, what's the best way to come out smelling like a rose out of the whole situation.

Mr. Speaker, I contend that is not what it is all about. It is because of the way that government has operated that we find ourselves in these positions having to make such difficult decisions. On most occasions, the policy-makers make no decisions if they can avoid making the decisions. Perhaps this may be seen as an opportune time for me to put a little bit of a tongue-lashing on them. Perhaps they are going to come back and say what they want to say about me. That's fine. There is nothing that I am telling them on the floor of this House today that they have not heard me say to them before.

Mr. Speaker, with regard to the issue of relaxation of duty on food products, the Honourable Third Official Member said during his reply on behalf of government that the government is mindful (I cannot say it verbatim but I think I understood the gist of it) of relieving any burden on the consumer wherever it is possible. Now, I firmly believe that the Third Official Member meant that from the bottom of his heart when he said it. But if we examine the track record of this government, the statement cannot apply.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Preach brother, preach!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It cannot apply! And I am not going to go into that this evening, but this has not been the style of this government.

This government has fallen into the trap and they keep preaching about how good the economy is and how everybody has money in their pocket. But, all of a sudden, they are realising that people are hurting. Those same people have to vote! So now, they are trying to make sure that they nullify that argument. And it is a real pity because had they been thinking like this from the day they were elected, life would not have to be like this and we would not have so many angry people in this country.

Unfortunately, I find myself having to say that they have had their turn, and it is time for others who are prepared to do what has to be done in this country to move forward and be given an opportunity to do that. I pray to God that the people of this country give us that opportunity when that time comes. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, to the best of my knowledge, the only government who has ever taken import duty off foodstuff was the government that the Minister of Agriculture and I were in from 1976 to 1984, and now this government which has been for the last seven years. So, to try and say that we as a government have not taken duty off to assist the people of the Cayman Islands is not correct. We are the only government that has ever reduced import duty and it started many years ago.

I know the Financial Secretary didn't go that far, but it started in the early governments from 1976 - 1984. As can be seen, 24 categories out of 37 main categories of foodstuffs—which is roughly 65% of all the foodstuffs—that are duty free. The people of this country know the difference between talk and action.

Mr. Speaker, I have heard every opposition in the last sixteen years that I have been in government stand here and talk, and talk, and talk, but there are no solutions, they are not producing any solutions. There was no solution put forward today by the First Elected Member for George Town. Talk is cheap! If there is one thing that we can say about this opposition in the last four years—because we have been in here every day of our life nearly—it is that they have talked. But I ask the public of this country to show me any action that those who talked the most have really done. The answer is none!

I would have expected on a motion like this . . . and I commend the Fourth Elected Member for George Town for bringing it. But rather than trying to say that the Financial Secretary should not reply on matters that relate to his ministry . . . that too, as you know, is patently wrong to try to say otherwise. This is the responsibility of the Financial Secretary, he deals with import duty, he deals with taxes, and he—

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, sir. Obviously, the minister is referring to my statements of a few minutes ago. I did not imply that the Financial Secretary should not be answering on this motion. I was simply saying that it was a pity that he found himself in a position where he had to say the things that he said, because in my view it did not reflect the actions of the government in the past. I did not say that he was not supposed to answer it.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, if that is the case then I withdraw it. But I understood that what was being implied was that an elected member, rather than the Financial Secretary, should have been replying on this motion. Let me move on, sir.

The Speaker: I would have to look on the Hansard before I could make a ruling on that. If you want to adjourn and let me get the Hansard, I would be prepared to rule on it. But without that, I cannot.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I have withdrawn it, sir, so I don't really want to waste anymore time. I have been talking about words and wasting time and I would rather just withdraw it and move on, sir.

The Speaker: I thank you, please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the question of the removal of products is not something, as may attempt to be implied, that is just being done now because there is an election this year. This was done 2½ to 3 years ago when there was no election around. I am proud that I have been part of the only government that has seen fit to remove and reduce import duty.

Now, Mr. Speaker, what is the solution to having import duties and to having revenue items domestically? The answer has to come with an alternative to raising government funds from import duty. If anyone in the last 20-odd years had come up with any better ideas, then where are those ideas? I would have expected that we would deal with this motion in a constructive way—if people were going to criticise the government they should say what the alternative is. What is the solution to the problem? The answer is simple: revenue must be raised from different heads rather than on import duties. But we are a consumption-based revenue earning country and we have no income tax. There is no direct taxation. If anyone in here believes that income tax is an alternative to import duty then they are sealing the death of this country.

So, where are the solutions? Suppose $10 million is taken off import duties, the money must come from somewhere else. I mean, anyone can say that government should be removing this, or, as we saw in the budget, that they should be spending this and that. But when it came to the crunch with the $1 million for housing, were there any bright suggestions as to how to raise revenue, other than on local persons? The simple solution was just taking the easy road out—$1 million in loans. Who is going to pay for it? It is going to be paid for out of import duty and the other items that government gets its revenue from.

Mr. Speaker, I would welcome the alternatives. And when we get into a select committee if the Fourth Elected Member for George Town sees fit to put it there then let us see what the alternatives are to this. I think it is good that the Fourth Elected Member [for George Town] has brought this motion because all of the talk that we have been hearing for so long, the time will come when that select committee will have to come up with alternatives.

One good alternative was put forward, Mr. Speaker, by the Third Elected Member for George Town with the e-commerce, which is a new area of technology. That is an alternative. Suggestions like that are constructive, they will help the country. But that has to be done on a widespread basis because the import duty is the largest single revenue item in this country . . . well on foodstuff. Well, there is very little left on foodstuff because we have taken it all off. In fact, we had a hard time trying to find foodstuff when we were going through that still had duty on it so there isn't very much left.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, a government that I was a part of (I think it was 1980 to 1984) was referred to as the "Chicken and Potato Government" because we took [duty] off about 16 or 18 items including chicken and potatoes.

So, I support the Fourth Elected Member for George Town in what he has brought but what I am saying, Mr. Speaker, to criticise this government . . . in fact, show me a government over the past 30 years that has come up with any more new heads than government that I have been in have done. We brought in the Insurance Law, we diversified, we brought in the mutual funds, and we have recently in relation to exempted companies added a small amount to policies that are dealt with offshore. We have amended the Companies Law. We have set up the infrastructure that has produced vast amounts of income, such as the Monetary Authority, the Stock Exchange and, in fact, governments that we have been in—especially this government—has done more to diversify and increase the revenue of the country than anyone else.

If members of the opposition—especially the First Elected Member for George Town—have alternatives to diversify the country then let's hear them, because this government has been one of the most tolerate and one that has listened to ideas. In this case, we are always eager to know what good alternatives exist. But it is not as simple as standing up in here and talking. When decisions have to be made on the alternatives of how to raise revenue without touching the local population there are not that many ways of doing it because if we go to direct taxation then that goes on the people of the country.

If direct taxation is put on offshore industries then they are not going to be here anymore. So, it has to be a balancing act to ensure that there are alternatives to reducing the tax because money has to come from somewhere. Mr. Speaker, if it is not going to affect people locally it has to be put on the offshore industry, and that can only take so much and no more. I believe e-commerce will give us some very good revenue. And I think that is the type of constructive move that is needed.

This motion says: "AND BE IT ALSO FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly makes meaningful suggestions with regard to removing this tax which greatly burdens the people of these Islands."

It is a very good motion. But where are the meaningful suggestions to cover the revenue that the honourable member's motion is taking off? I guess what I am saying is that anybody can get up and bash government. That's simple to do. But can they come up with meaningful suggestions so that we can take off the balance of the import duty?

If you look at the record of the governments that we have been in, including this one, it is a very clear history of reducing import duty and taking it off foodstuffs. I don't want to go back into these because the honourable Financial Secretary has named them out. But we have systematically every few years removed import duty from foodstuff. In fact, all of the basic foodstuff has had duty removed. There is no good in saying (not referring to the mover of the motion because I commended him for bringing it but if I refer to the opposition—the other members) 'I have an answer, I have a solution but I am not going to tell the Government, put me in the Executive Council first and I will give you the solution.'

Mr. Speaker, anyone who has a solution and doesn't care enough for his country to bring that solution forward and help the country is dealing purely with politics.

By the way, Mr. Speaker, there have been many times when suggestions have come forward from the opposition. And when they are good suggestions we have accepted them. This government has been far more tolerant—I know it has been more tolerant in that respect than any other government. So, what really needs to happen here is that the Legislative Assembly has to come up with meaningful suggestions that will allow for an increase in revenue from areas that do not affect local persons. It is no good taking it off one area and putting it on another if it still going back on the same people locally.

There can be no doubt that in consumer based countries such as the Cayman Islands . . . in fact all other islands in the Caribbean just about or most of them have import duty and they have income tax. We are blessed in this country that at least we do not have direct taxation. What remains with import duty still on would also have to be looked at as to what out of those are the most basic to reduce it. But what I can say, sir, is that most or just about all of the basic necessities (given a few that are still here) have had the import duty removed by this government and its previous governments.

So, we are happy to support the motion and it is something that this government and all four of the governments that I have been in have always done. Like I said, sir, in 1997 this government removed duties from a number of food items, and all of the rest that has been removed, the governments that I have been in have done so.

I commend the Fourth Elected Member for bringing forward this motion. I believe it will take time and in-depth study to try to come up with alternative ways to be able to remove the import duty because it is not a matter of just simply taking it off now. If we take it off now, Mr. Speaker, before we have looked at the alternative ways of raising the revenue, then it obviously is going to cause the budget to be way out of whack as far as the revenue side goes.

Time spent would be constructive in looking at ways in which we can bring in new heads of revenue. There are areas that still allow us some flexibility. The e-commerce is a wide area, it is not just related to—

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, sir.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Repetition with the honourable speaker has become . . . there has been so much repetition now it is beginning to become tedious.

The Speaker: I have to agree with that. Unfortunately, that has been going on for quite some time.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, very few things in this House that are bad I have invented. If I have any of those traits, I have inherited them from other politicians! Having said that, I am about at the end of my time anyhow sir. I won't be very long because I think my points have really been put.

If there are members in this House who have meaningful suggestions to raise revenue that do not affect the people of the country then, Mr. Speaker, this motion is asking just that. Show us ways—meaningful ways. The Fourth Elected Member [for George Town] obviously chose his words well because it said “meaningful,” in other words, not a lot of talk with nothing constructive.

One of the areas that I think needs to be looked at in more depth is the area that relates to structured transactions of aircraft. We now do a considerable amount of business in this area, but I believe that a look at the possible ways that this could be further developed is one that would bring some more revenue.

I also feel that a further revision (and I know this has been considered and I am now into the “meaningful suggestions,” sir) that could be considered is the extension of the “cell principle” beyond insurance companies and into mutual funds. I would like to explain what I mean there, sir.

This has to be looked at carefully because there is a downside to this. What has been done is to permit a company to structure cells within it which in effect, and to a certain extent with clear limitations sir, have the way of limiting the liability of the cells within the company. In other words, there could be one company that is dealing with say four (I think we put a limitation of about ten in the amendment for the insurance) . . . but it allows the equivalent of what was once referred to (and probably still is referred to) as the “rent a captive insurance company.”

So, a person who has their captive business (and in this case a fund business) within a company would have the safety of ensuring to a large extent, not absolutely, sir, that their part of the business is separated through limited liability from the other pieces of business. In the event of a liquidation, there would not be a vast pooling of all of the assets within the company itself. And, what it does, Mr. Speaker, is this: It permits business that otherwise could not afford to have its own insurance company (because the setting up, the managing and the licensing of any of the companies that are regulated can be very expensive) . . . but business we would not otherwise get, that smaller business, could be pooled together and dealt with within the ambit of a vehicle that would provide the limited liability and the security to the smaller investor. When I say smaller investor, they are not necessarily small, but in terms of the general size of that business it is not sufficiently large enough to produce the revenue to have its own, let's say, insurance company.

The down side, Mr. Speaker (and this is why everything has to be looked at carefully) is firstly, it is a very complex structure within the law because it goes against the traditional bankruptcy and voluntary winding-up provisions that say that funds are pooled. And in the event of liquidation, they are prioritised in a certain way. The legislation in some countries (especially in the traditional area of insurance) is to ensure that a sufficient cap is put on the number of cells within that company. Because, if the business that is going into those regulated companies would otherwise have required a normal company, an exempted company, then we may be losing the equivalent of four or six exempted companies. So, a balance has to be weighed, because if that legislation permits too many interests within one company it may reduce revenue that we get in another area.

We are now one of the largest mutual fund countries in the world. There is obviously a lot of business here that can be looked at. There are areas of the Companies Law, and beyond that, that would improve and increase revenue in areas that we now have. A lot of this is being worked on. I would like to point that out. But you cannot produce complex legislation in novel fields and get it right over night. It takes some time to do so.

The Companies Law can be improved in several areas. One of the areas that has been in the drafting stage for some time . . . and I need to just point out that a lot of this has been prior to the time of the Honourable Attorney General here, especially what I am now going to say. It relates to the liquidation procedures and legislation, as well as an updating of a very old Bankruptcy Law that we have.

I know sometimes that members may be asking, 'How will it help to do that because that is liquidation and that's bankruptcy.' But if our laws in the financial area do not stay on the cutting edge of new legislation and remain competitive, then we will find business going to other areas. The transferring of companies from jurisdiction to jurisdiction has been a worry over the years. In the last few years, it was introduced. But it was one of the alternatives that gave the investor flexibility and showed that the jurisdiction was one that would retain the investor because it did what was necessary to keep the investor and gave him the freedom of transferring his company to certain jurisdictions if that became necessary for whatever reason.

There are other areas within the Companies Law that I think could increase the amount of business if it is looked at, strengthened, and developed.

Now, the question may be asked, Why have I spent this time dealing with very complex matters that have very little relation to the local person? The answer is because the revenue that comes in from those areas is not coming out of the pockets of the people locally. Those companies that have a presence here, such as the insurance companies, the mutual fund administrators, the banks, the trust companies, the management companies, bring some employment to the island. The people who run them purchase goods in the country on which the import duty is imposed and they all contribute to the country's betterment and the government's revenue which eases the burden on the local person.

There are areas that can also be looked at. And a recent revision came out in that area, it's the area of merchant shipping. Once again, we have developed a niche in the market for the registration of private yachts, small yachts, and a lot of very large yachts. In fact, we are probably one of the countries that are best known for the registration of private yachts. With that comes a company as well as fees that relate to the cost of registering the ship, and also putting on the mortgages or the financing on it as well as the importance of the fact that they fly a British flag.

Mr. Speaker, in recent times a move has been made to establish a presence in London, which is a large market for shipping. I believe if it is developed, if we keep up the revisions to the Merchant Shipping Law, which is by any means the longest law that exists on the books of this country, if we ensure that we develop the standards that are necessary for growing that business then I think in that area too we will have extra revenue that can be generated.

Mr. Speaker, the strengthening of the regulatory aspect in this country, the introduction of the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty together with the Monetary Authority and the Stock Exchange has gone a long way towards showing that this country is a stable and well-regulated country. Mr. Speaker, good business goes to countries who have good regulations. That in itself, when looked at from a philosophical point of view, may seem not to be logical. But it is a known fact that if we are going to attract and keep the large banks (because we have attracted many of those), we are going to attract the large insurance companies, the mutual funds to broaden the base of the economy of this country so that we can remove import duty that hurts people locally. It must come from a concerted and forthright development of the regulatory aspect.

A balance has to be kept between what is over-regulation and what can be regarded as internationally acceptable standards of regulation in relation to the business that we presently do.

Mr. Speaker, if you wish, I think I have a natural break there. My throat is going a little bit.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.47 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.12 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion number 31/99. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, continuing.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, another important matter that has to be borne in mind when introducing legislation, especially new areas that raise revenue, is to ensure that the principles put forward by the European Union, and to a lesser extent adopted by the OECD, of standstill and rollback are in no way affected.

The principle of standstill is one in which the legislation I have mentioned, which I believe is outside that principle, should not do anything to introduce new areas that could be deemed to be harmful tax competition to the European Union countries and, by implication, the 29 OECD countries. So, whatever I have said there, sir, falls within that principle.

One of the areas that is still being completed, and drafted I should say, is the revision to the Monetary Authority Law which follows along one of the principles relating to regulatory authorities that was crystallised in the United Kingdom White Paper. The advancement of legislation in that area, I believe is going to be extremely important to the continuation of development of the banking business in the Cayman Islands.

The principle of cross-border banking supervision in which a supervisory country carries the ultimate responsibility for any branches or subsidiaries abroad, has now been extended globally to a stage where there is more of a global supervision rather than what happened in the past of having country by country supervision. That, I know sir, will assist the Cayman Islands with countries where we otherwise would not get business from and who would not allow their banks to establish branches or subsidiaries abroad without the necessary regulation between the regulatory authorities and that's all I need to point out within our law.

Any information there that is necessary for the regulatory aspect of a bank has to fall within our own legislation. But if it is not done right, could either lose us some business with some countries . . . and already we know that one country (lucky for us not a significant country to the Cayman Islands in the area of banking) has started to take steps toward deterring its bank from establishing branches abroad.

Ultimately, if it becomes necessary, then they would ensure the effective persuasion (if I may call it that) of business that would come to a well-regulated country like the Cayman Islands to remain and continue the flow while causing business from countries that are less regulated to either be subject to some type of transaction bar or in some other way to hurt business going to a country that is not well regulated. Mr. Speaker, good regulation brings good business and the Honourable Financial Secretary has assisted in building this country on that principle.

Our legislative framework must be such that we are not enticing business other than good business. In fact, Mr. Speaker, the damage that one gets from a lower regulatory supervision framework within a country sometimes only needs one bad case to hurt the country internationally. While business that is here may not necessarily go, it will hurt new business coming here. And it is the new business that must provide the meaningful way and meaningful revenue to ensure that we can lessen the burden of the duties and other revenue measures that have been put on over the last twenty years.

It is very easy to say that we must broaden the base that revenue comes from—that's easy. It is easy to say that we should not be adding onto any more of the traditional areas. But that can only come about with meaningful suggestions that lead to an alternative. There has to be an alternative to the present tax base, which is not a direct taxation base to fill the void that is left from a reduction of import duty.

I am only going to mention two other areas, Mr. Speaker, that I think can be done to ensure that we do have an alternative in relation to the removal of further tax. I assume that in the second resolve part of this motion . . . it is more general and really goes beyond or maybe it doesn't go beyond food items. It looks like it doesn't, but there are also other areas where if sufficient revenue can be raised or attracted then we may be able also to ease back the tax. I was thinking just recently of the reduction in tax, stamp duty, by nearly 400% in relation to insurance policies issued locally.

Now, if I may just mention, not only has tax been removed on imported food items, but in the past we have reduced tax on motor vehicles and land at one stage and brought in the concessions for local Caymanians who are buying homes. All of these ways do help people locally. I was also reminded that we removed tax on bicycles and on dogs. [Laughter]

Mr. Speaker, while that may seem to be very little, it all adds up. But we have been a reducing tax government not an increasing tax government.

Anyhow, on to the more serious side, there is one piece of legislation that I think is very important, provided we get this right. It has actually passed through this House but not been assented to, and that is the Management Companies Bill. Because it will in my opinion bring the necessary stability (if I may use that word) to the business that is coming in through the management companies and which is an important part of the business in the Cayman Islands to ensure that business remains of a very high quality.

One high quality piece of business many times can be equal to ten normal quality pieces of offshore business and creates a lot less problems. It reduces risk if we remain with high quality business. Related to that is the Code of Practice for Banking under the Procedures of Criminal Conduct Law, and ultimately will be a general code as it now is and then specifics for the industry that is related to this legislation. It will cause a better acceptance because all of the large regulated banks, insurance companies—I should say all of the reputable companies have no fear of that type of regulation. I think the finalisation of it is going to be important for us keeping our niche in a market that more and more is producing a larger and larger area of revenue.

While I don't have the time today, one important area of diversification is naturally to increase the return that the country gets from its largest single revenue and income producing because it does affect the country and that is in tourism. But I am not an expert in that, the Honourable Minister for Tourism is. I believe that innovative ways there that raise the level of . . . maybe I shouldn't get into that. In fact, I will just finish off right now, sir. I know 4.30 p.m. is here.

So, in summary, Mr. Speaker, we support this motion and we think the motion is good. We have done what this motion says—at least Mr. John McLean and I have for the last twenty years—by reducing the burden especially on imported foods, which we did quite recently. Sorry, the Honourable Minister for Tourism, as well, was part of that government, in fact he was a very integral integral part, he was the Financial Secretary who did it. We also had the Chief Secretary, the Third Elected Member for West Bay, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, the Third Elected Member for George and you, Mr. Speaker.

I guess, Mr. Speaker, we have all been moving this for some considerable time. Naturally, we fully support this. So, the answer sir, is “meaningful suggestions” to which I have given about six to broaden the tax base to reduce the tax on import duties on the few items that remain. In fact, we have already taken off 70%. So, it’s only about 30% of foodstuff that has it remaining. Thank you.

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption, I would entertain a motion of the adjournment of this Honourable House.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House sine die.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, if I may . . . May I read Standing Order 38 concerning a closure motion, where it speaks, “. . . that the Question be now put” and unless it appears to the Presiding Officer that the motion is an abuse of the rules of the House or an infringement of the rights of the minority . . .” Certainly if we are going to conclude this motion, it should be concluded sir, since Parliament will not resume until the State Opening.

The Speaker: Would you please repeat?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may, sir.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just so that we can be very clear sir, the Minister of Education moved the adjournment of the House. Might we understand if that adjournment is just for this afternoon?

The Speaker: For a date to be announced, in other words, until the Throne Speech.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Fair enough sir. I hear what you are saying. Now I understand clearly that’s what they are saying. Certainly, the motion should be allowed to take its full passage this afternoon and not left how it is.

The Speaker: I am prepared to put it to a vote, and the majority will rule.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: As the person who brought this motion here, obviously I brought the motion because it was important. Obviously I have a right to bring the motion and I would have believed that the Honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly would have had enough respect for the efforts made in order to give it passage. That the Leader of Government Business used up all the time and then at this time moved the adjournment is not only an abuse of power, its an abuse of my rights as a representative from the same district that he is!

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I take exception to that member referring to following the Standing Order of this House as an abuse of the House.

Mr. Speaker, there is a lot of business that has not been finished. But there is a lot of business in this session that wasn’t finished in the session before. We have reached the stage where the new legislature will begin next week Friday and we have mentioned to members for some time that substantial numbers of us from the House will be going abroad to United States for talks and coming back on Thursday.

In any event, Mr. Speaker, there has to be sufficient time after prorogation for there to be a proclamation and at this stage there is a lot of other business that isn’t finished. There are other motions and there are a lot of questions that have not been dealt with and there will be a way of getting this, I am sure, over to the next session but this is not the first session where business has been left.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, may I sir?

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town had caught my eye.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Oh, I am sorry.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I believe that the procedure that has been followed, whilst it may be parliamentary to do so, the point raised by the Elected Member for North Side is a valid point. I believe that in the harmony and good running of the House it would not hurt for the government bench to consider extending the time a bit so that at least the mover of the motion could complete his summing up, since we are not going to be meeting here again until the opening of the House on 18 February.

I know the procedure that was followed was good parliamentary procedure—it was filibustering to take the time to the limit. But I believe it is, in accordance with Standing Order 38, an abuse of the rights of the minority. So, if the members of the government bench would be mindful, I feel that at least the mover of the motion should have the right to sum up his motion.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Would honourable members care for a short suspension in order that we can work it out?

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

There is a motion before the House and I take cognisance of that.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I had recognised the Minister for Education before.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I suppose then that we do a half an hour for the member to wind-up.

[Inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well then, Mr. Speaker, we follow the Standing Order. We have made an offer, if they don't wish it, I will ask you to put the vote, sir.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker!

The Speaker: One at a time, please.
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I pose the question, sir: Is this a House of democracy, or is it not? How can we now decide . . . and I am all in favour of giving the honourable mover time to wind up, but what of other members who may wish to speak?

Mr. Speaker, I take the dimmest view of the irresponsibility of the Leader of Government Business, the Minister of Education, who filibustered knowing that was his plan and now proposes that honourable members be deprived of their democratic right to reply—even if their reply is nonsense as I just heard not a short while ago.

The Speaker: Honourable members, let me say this: I have repeatedly over the time that I have sat here as Speaker asked all honourable members if it was the intention to go late to give at least 24 hours' notice in order that the Legislative Department be given notice. I sit in my office from before 9.00 in the morning, and I am here until after 5.00 p.m. I have not been notified that there was any intention of going beyond the hour. I have not notified the Clerk to make any necessary arrangements.

The parliamentary procedure is that a motion is on the floor. I want to give everybody an equal opportunity—but right is right and wrong is wrong.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, thank you sir. And I hear what you are saying. Nevertheless, there are two questions here. The Elected Member for North Side has pointed out to you Standing Order 38, and it is only fair for you to make a ruling regarding Standing Order 38 before we entertain a vote on the motion from the Leader of Government Business.

Now, I won't tarry, but while I appreciate exactly what you are saying about no notification of going on late, I sit here as one of the elected representatives and I have had no notification about the House closing down. No one has told me the House is closing down. As far as I am concerned, we resume Monday morning at 10.00 a.m.

Now, if they are going to come with that kind of stuff then let's resume Monday morning at 10.00 a.m. and finish the business of the House. If the Throne Speech has to wait for four days, make it wait if that's the way it is going to go.

The Speaker: As I said before, if there is going to be any additional discussion I will suspend proceedings and we will go into the Committee Room and make the necessary decision.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, being a man of peace, just the other day we went on a little late without any notice to anyone in order to finish Finance Committee. I don't think it looks right, Mr. Speaker, for us to close the House in the middle of a debate on a private member's motion or on any business. I don't see why we cannot extend the time an hour or so, if that's necessary in order to complete this piece of business.

On the other hand, even though there is a scheduled visit to Washington DC, it doesn't include the whole House so we will still have majority left here to carry on the business, if that is the wish of the majority of the people. So, Mr. Speaker, I would really appreciate if you would rule that we continue until this piece of business is completed.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, obviously a lot more than the mover wish to speak. What we would be prepared to do is allow this to be brought over to the next session by waiving the Standing Order that states that you cannot bring a similar motion within a six month period, which, as I see it, will bar it and let it be brought then. I mean, we have been here since November 18th continuously! And if a week is necessary on it so be it. But we just don't see it finishing this afternoon.

The other point I would like to mention is a motion being moved under Standing Order 38. That is a closure motion in which case there will be a vote and the motion would be voted on right away. Is that what the Elected Member for North Side wishes to do? because that will not allow the mover to reply.

We would be happy, sir (subject to further consultation here), to support having it carried forward so everyone would have time because I see another day to two days on this.

The Speaker: Procedures says that I cannot or shall not have two motions on the floor at one time, I have to dispose of one or one has to be withdrawn. I cannot have two two motions on the floor at one time.

Time is flying by. I think the only thing that I can do . . . the will of the House will prevail. I will put the motion for the adjournment, and, if it fails, then we will continue.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Is there no other authority that I can call on beside the conscience of the obvious majority that obviously has an interest and is denying me the possibility to put my case to them with regards the very important issue of import duties on foodstuff?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, under the concession that we have put forward, there is no denial to that member. What we are saying is that in a week's time this motion can carry on. What more can we really do? To extend for half an hour or an hour this evening . . . from what I understand, it is not going to finish. There are other members here who would like to speak.

So, there is no denial of the right to speak if we then allow this to be carried forward into the next session. We will find a mechanism for bringing it in and letting it continue.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, the question that I was asking the Clerk was if the House was going to be prorogued and then a proclamation to call it back in. That was the question I asked. Am I correct? And, that is the procedure.

Well, I would like to read from Erskine May's, Parliamentary Procedure, page 57, "Effect of a prorogation." "The effect of a prorogation is at once to terminate all the current business of Parliament. Not only are the sittings of Parliament at an end, but all proceedings pending at the time are quashed . . ."

The Speaker: That is actually correct.

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, that is correct, I know that and we all know that.

What I am saying is that a similar motion—the same motion, in fact—can be brought if the Standing Order that bars the bringing of it with six months is waived. And that is correct, sir. So, if members really wish to carry this on then in a week's time it can continue.

The Speaker: Honourable members I have a motion before the House that has to be disposed of. The motion is that the House do now adjourn sine die.

I shall put the question that this Honourable House do now adjourn sine die. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, can we have a division, sir?

The Speaker: Certainly, Madam Clerk, would you call a division?

The Clerk:

DIVISION NO. 13/99

AYES: 7

The Clerk: The result: seven Ayes, six Noes, one Abstention.

The Speaker: The result of the division is seven Ayes, six Noes, and one Abstention. The Ayes have it.

Before we leave, I would like to extend my thanks to honourable members for their courtesy and tolerance to the Chair. I would like to thank Madam Clerk and her Deputy, the office staff, the Hansard Officers, the Sergeant-at-Arms for their efficient service during the entire year, and to Miss Anita for her kind service to us.

[I would like] to say that this is a very significant adjournment because this is not only the adjournment for the end of 1999, it is the beginning of a new century and let us hope for the best for the year 2000.

This Honourable House do now stand adjourned sine die.

AT 4.55 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED SINE DIE.
