Report Deferred Thursday 4 December 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Honourable Leader of Government Business, do you have any information on the Minister for Planning; whether she will be here?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I think the Minister will arrive later on.

The Speaker: All right, we will have this deferred until a later time during this sitting of the House.

Agreed. Paper deferred until later during the sitting.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF CABINET

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, would you move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of the relevant Standing Orders to ask questions after 11 am.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow for Question Time to continue after the hour of 11 am.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow for Question Time to continue after the hour of 11 am.

Question No. 97

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

No. 97: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics for the total expenditure of Government on official travel from 1 November, 2001 to present, giving a detailed breakdown of expenditure by Ministries and Departments.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the total expenditure of Government on official travel from 1 November, 2001 to 30 November, 2003 is as follows:-

Period	Amount of Expenditure
1 November, 2001 – 31 December, 2001	$308,346
1 January, 2002 – 31 December, 2002	$1,807,826
1 January, 2003 – 30 June, 2003	$1,131,005
1 July, 2003 – 30 November, 2003	$644,059
Total expenditure	$3,891,236

Attached is a detailed breakdown by Ministries and Departments for the above periods. Please note that in January 2002 and October 2003 there was a ministerial reshuffle and change in Cabinet responsibilities.

Therefore, it is quite likely that certain expenditures that were previously under departments that were assigned to some Ministries have been moved across based on the newly roll-up position taking into account the changes in responsibilities.

[See tables last page: Total Expenditure of Official Travel by Department; and Total Expenditure of Official travel by Ministry and Portfolio]

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member can say whether or not these expenditures are in line with the previous expenditures of governments in the past. I know he has been Financial Secretary for some 10 years. The numbers look alarmingly high to me, Mr. Speaker, but perhaps I am somewhat uninitiated. I wonder if the Honourable Second Official Member can give us some insight into these levels of expenditures as to whether they are in the normal range, historically.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, it is quite likely that the level of overseas travels being reported on, would be consistent with expenditure in previous years. This would be with exception during the more recent three years (since the advent of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) and other international initiatives as there would have been an increase in expenditure especially in the Portfolio of Finance and Economics).

I should imagine that within the Ministry of Tourism and other related departments there will be increases (quite likely more recently), but I do not think that the level of expenditure that we have in front of us being reported today is inconsistent with expenditure of previous years.

The Speaker: Are there any other supplementaries? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member can tell us if these expenditures are related to travel expenses only, or are other incidentals included. Is it just for transportation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, what is being reported today would cover travel, plus accommodation and all travel-related expenditure, plus allowances for officers who are travelling.

The Speaker: The Honourable Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Honourable Third Official Member then tell us how this relates to the budgeted amount for the years in question, that is, is it underspent or overspent in accordance with the budget?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I would not be able to give a definitive yes because, as the Honourable Member will note, this is a roll-up of reporting being done through the Portfolio of Finance and Economics by way of response to this Parliamentary question today. Therefore, it is a question of checking all of the Ministries and Portfolios, and Departments falling under those Ministries and Portfolios, to ascertain that what is being reported today by way of annualised expenditure would be in line with their respective budgets. Nevertheless, looking at the revised expenditures as reported to this Honourable House for the years in question, I do not think I can recall specifically any unusual request being made for supplementary expenditure in respect of overseas related travel.

The Speaker: I will allow two more supplementary questions. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My quick calculations here indicate that over the course of the last year the Tourism Ministry and the Department of Tourism cumulatively incurred $553,719 in travel-related costs; from 1 January to 30 June this year, a further $323,050 and for the balance of this year until 30 November a further $194,671. Therefore, it seems, Mr. Speaker, that this Ministry alone is spending in excess of half a million dollars a year on travel-related expenses. I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member can offer some explanation as to why such a significant portion of Government's travel expenses is being incurred by this Ministry.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I would think that the opposite of this would be of great concern, given the fact that the Tourism industry is one of the key economic pillars that supports the Cayman Islands economy. Given the fact that not only the Cayman Islands Government but other countries, especially in the region, are investing significant resources in terms of promoting their tourism industries, it would be necessary for this level of expenditure to be incurred by the Cayman Islands in terms of promoting the tourism industry and going to various destinations.

I happen to know, Mr. Speaker, that often-times this will not necessarily be in terms of the Director or the Minister travelling, but also other personnel travelling in or from the Cayman Islands. Given the fact that this is a travel-related sector of the industry, in terms of tourism and being a department that is associated with travel and selling the Cayman Islands, it is necessary for (what seems unusually large) expenditures to be incurred. We must bear in mind that a significant sum of money is always included in the budget on an annual basis in order to promote the development of tourism in the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: One last supplementary. The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Hon. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am wondering if the Honourable Third Official Member can give us some explanation as to the breakdown, because I note that the Member for George Town made a point a little while ago of combining both the Ministry and the Tourism Department and I wonder if he can explain the difference between the two.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the figures that are set out for the Tourism Ministry would be related to travel by personnel and the Ministers within the Ministry; however, the Tourism Department figures would be related to travel by tourism-related personnel. Thank you.

Question No. 98

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

No. 98: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics what is the total amount of Stamp Duty waived by Government in relation to land transfers from 1 November 2001, to present, giving details by calendar year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The total amount of Stamp Duty waived by the Government in relation to land transfers from 1 November 2001 to 31 October 2003 by calendar year are as follows:-

Period	Amount of Expenditure
1 November 2001 – 31 December 2001	$950
1 January 2002 – 31 December 2002	$18,066.98
1 January 2002 – 31 October 2003	$40,701.49
Total	$59,718.47

However, Mr. Speaker, I think it is necessary to say that associated with this are certain exemptions that, quite likely, may be regarded as waivers. The relief granted under the heading of "Conveyance or transfer" in the Schedule to the Stamp Duty Law is not classified as waivers. They are exemptions; therefore, transfers for natural love and affection, no change in beneficial ownership and first time home owners, et cetera, are all treated as exemptions. The only waiver of duty on the instrument of transfer, which can be granted by the Stamp Duty Commissioner, falls under section 20(6), paragraph A of the Stamp Duty Law.

The following is a list of amounts of exemptions granted to first-time home owners detailed by calendar year. These are:

Period	Amount of Expenditure
1 November 2001 – 31 December 2001	$89,915
1 January 2002 – 31 December 2002	$301,910.91
1 January 2003 – 31 October 2003	$325,929
Total	$713,754.91

I included this information with the answer in order that this could be circulated to Honourable Members as an addition.

The Speaker: Honourable Third Official Member, would you pass copies in order that the information can be circulated?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I will do so.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I will give a little time in order that the additional information can be read before I call for the supplementaries.

[Pause]

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In relation to the substantive response, I note in the period 1 January 2002 - 31 December 2002 the amount waived was $18,066.98. That amount has more than doubled during the first ten months of this year. The sum waived thus far is $40,701.49. I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member can explain the marked increase in waivers this year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, what accounts for the sharp increase is the stamp duty assessment on lands that were erroneously vested in the Crown that were subsequently returned to the rightful owners of these properties under the arrangements in place where such claims can be processed by the Lands and Survey Department and then through Cabinet.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member can tell us how many of those properties have been dealt with and have resulted in the need for waivers.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, there are three such properties. I can make the information available to the Honourable Member but I would rather not disclose the names of the persons over the air.

The Speaker: So ordered. Please continue — that is, if the Second Elected Member for George Town wishes that answer — please continue, Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I would ask for the normal procedure for it to be tabled but if you will allow, Sir, I will just for ask for the Serjeant-at-Arms to pass it directly to the Member.

The Speaker: So ordered. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, just for clarity, could the Honourable Third Official Member state exactly what he meant when he said “lands erroneously held by government”?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, there is a process emanating from the cadastral survey exercise. There are certain properties that were vested in the Crown where the titles of those properties were not perfected. Subsequently, those titles were perfected and, where it can be demonstrated that these lands were owned by certain individuals, once the claims have been processed, the lands were then returned to these individuals. This has been an ongoing exercise since the advent of the cadastral survey. Therefore, using the word “erroneous” would have been erroneous on my part; a better description would probably be that the land was held by the government in a fiduciary capacity pending the return once the claims could be satisfied.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End. Last supplementary.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to ask the Honourable Third Official Member if the transfer of properties out of government to private individuals, as is the case of one on the Order Paper now, does not all come to the Legislative Assembly to be approved by the full legislature. Why keep these so secretive? Did these not all come to the Legislative Assembly?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: There is nothing secret about this process, Mr. Speaker; they would all have been brought by the Minister having responsibility. I would rather not call the names of these individuals.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

SECOND READINGS

The Immigration Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, continuing. Honourable Member, you have one hour and two minutes remaining.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we took the adjournment last evening, I had been talking about the importance, to the continued prosperity and harmony of this society, that we have immigration legislation which is fair, equitable and which creates the kind of certainty that is so important to everyone in ordering their lives.

One of the main complaints about the application of the current legislation, over the course of the last few years, has been the uncertainty that prevailed, both in relation to persons with distinct Caymanian ties and, probably to a larger extent, persons who had put their roots down here in this society for extended periods of time. That latter category of persons has lived for a long time in fear that their next work permit would not be renewed, or that somehow they would offend someone on the Board, or someone close to somebody on the Board, and that would be the end of their tenure in these Islands.

As a maturing society; a country that prides itself in having one of the most sophisticated financial industries, becoming an important and sophisticated small country, not just in the region but in the world, it is important for us to have progressive, fair, equitable and certain regulations of our immigration system. It is important that people who come here regard the system as being transparent; they can look at it and determine where they stand right from the very beginning. That has been one of the guiding posts of the Immigration Review Team in trying to create and to rationalise our immigration system and legislation.

To make it certain, Mr. Speaker, does not mean that it is going to accord with everyone's view about what sort of system we should have. As I alluded to last evening, there have been, and will continue to be, many complaints about the imposition of a fixed term policy in relation to the terms of work permits. Whatever the criticisms of that system may be, it does confer the degree of certainty which we believe is so important to the creation of an equitable immigration scheme.

Persons who do come here on work permits will come with the full knowledge that unless they can fit into one of the exceptional circumstances provided for in the Law, they should not look to remain in these Islands permanently, and can expect to have a run of seven years. Therefore, we will get away from the expectation that currently exists, where people come and stay on and on and on – most of whom, as I said last evening, Mr. Speaker, never had the original intention of staying in the Cayman Islands for extended periods of time, but the country grew on them and over time it became home.

However, if one is well aware from the outset that one's tenure is going to be limited, then of course that expectation is not created, and the criticisms of unfairness, arguments and concerns which abound under the current system, "... because I have been able to stay here and you have led me to believe that my next work permit would be renewed indefinitely" simply will not exist under this new system.

The Immigration Review Team sought to establish a comprehensive system which would do away with many of the anomalies that are currently the case under the present legislation, and to have an integrated system whereby we would not have people out there somewhere in left field not certain where they were going to end up, living in hope – and in some cases sadly dying in desperation – that they might ultimately get the big prize and obtain Caymanian status, as is the case under the present legislation.

Therefore, what the Immigration Review Team recommended was a system where work permits, and the term limits on work permits, are linked to the broader picture whereby, if an individual successfully passes the seven-year filter, he ultimately goes on to apply for permanent residence. Once he has satisfied the residency requirement under the British Nationality Act of being free of immigration control for 12 months, he is then in the position to apply for British Overseas Territory citizenship by virtue of his connection to the Cayman Islands. That, Mr. Speaker, under the new system, becomes a precursor and a necessary precondition to being granted the right to be Caymanian.

If this system works the way it is hoped, ultimately there will be no one in these Islands for extended periods of time who will not have the right to be Caymanian, except those specific categories of persons who are permanent residents and whose intention is not ever to become Caymanians as of right. Mr. Speaker, I am speaking about people who obtain permanent residence on the basis that they are wealthy retirees, and those who are granted the right to be entrepreneurs and investors – that category of persons. However, if the ordinary (if I can call them) run-of-the-mill persons who hold work permits, get beyond the seven years and make it, they will qualify under the points system and will ultimately move through the stream all the way up to being granted the right to be Caymanian.

While it is proposed that a point system be established by which persons qualify for permanent residence, I believe in reality that once we get through the transitional stages of this Bill (and I will come to that in a moment because there are going to be significant ramifications in relation to persons who are here for relatively short periods of time – thus far up to five years – as a result of the passage of this legislation), once a person gets beyond the seven years, and the Board is satisfied that he is one of those exceptional cases and should be an exempted person, while a lot can happen in seven years, I think it is more likely than not that those persons would ultimately qualify for permanent residence.

Thus we will get to a point over the course of the next two years, if this legislation is passed and if it works as it is proposed that it should work, where we will not have people floating about indefinitely in the community not quite sure where they stand in immigration terms in these Islands. That is the best that any society can hope for and plan for and seek.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am going to spend a little time talking about the attempt of the Immigration Review Team, which is, by and large, reflected in the Bill, to rationalise the whole question of the right to be Caymanian.

There has raged in this country, at least from the time that I can remember, this whole question about who is Caymanian, and there was a real distinction between those persons who were granted Caymanian status on the basis of long-term residence here and those persons who would claim to be indigenous Caymanians, or persons with close Caymanian connections having had forebears who were born here.

I do not hear it so often any more, but for a long time the derogatory term was applied to persons who were granted Caymanian status on the basis of residence, as “paper Caymanian”. Many of us indigenous Caymanians were very quick to trot that out whenever a person who was not born here did something that we disliked, or did something to offend us, or something that we believed made our lives a little more difficult.

That sort of distinction and that sort of terminology has no place, in my view, in nation-building. I have argued that case strongly for as long as I have been aware of this distinction – that once you confer on persons the closest thing to citizenship that this country can do, we need to stop making the distinction for all intents and purposes, because we cannot build a nation and Cayman, as the Minister of Education often talks about, is very much a frontier society in many respects.

We cannot build a society, we cannot build the kind of country and community that we need to build to continue this run of prosperity if we have a divided camp into which are segregated those who were born here of Caymanian stock and those who were born somewhere else of other stock. Once we have taken the decision that these persons are suitable to be integrated into this society and to be granted Caymanian status, as it is under the current Law, or the right to be Caymanian under the proposed Law, then we have to accept those people as part of our society; we have to accept that they are entitled to participate in all things that are generally available to people in this community.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we on this side have no difficulty with saying that as far as the political process is concerned, and participation in that process at the highest level, having the ability to stand as a candidate to become an elected member of this Legislative Assembly, a person should have, in addition to the right to be Caymanian and British Overseas Territories Citizenship (BOTC), an additional qualification which should be a sufficiently long tenure in these Islands to ensure that they have not only the commitment but that they have the experiences of this community to be able to make the sort of value judgments that are necessary when one is elected to this Honourable House.

That is why we, the parliamentary Opposition, proposed, and the Government had originally agreed, that under the terms of our proposed new Constitution, the qualifications for elected membership should include, and should not be limited necessarily to persons who were born here of Caymanian forebears, “new Caymanians”.

However, as far as they were concerned, they should have not only the right to be Caymanian and BOTC but they should have had the right to be Caymanian for 20 years before they would qualify to be able to stand for election to this Honourable House. Unfortunately, that is still up in the air and we do not know which way Her Majesty’s Government is going to decide; however, the Government has resiled from the original position in relation to that and has reverted to the provision in the current Constitution which effectively will exclude from participation in the electoral process at the highest level, persons who do not have a direct Caymanian forebear.

Now, we say, Mr. Speaker, that if we are going to seek to be inclusive, if we are going to treat these persons to whom the right to be Caymanian is to be conferred, the same way as all Caymanians, then we cannot create a system which prevents and prohibits them from participation in the electoral process at the highest level. Unfortunately, that is what is proposed now by the Government.

However, I digress a little there, Mr. Speaker, just to talk about the importance of this whole question of the right to be Caymanian. That is why we have been aghast at the alacrity with which the Government seemed to be prepared to dispense Caymanian status indiscriminately over the course of the past few months. This is an important fundamental right that needs to be treated carefully and judiciously.

The Bill that is before this House, based on the report of the Immigration Review Team, I believe, goes a long way to remove some of the inequities and unnecessary complexities attached to this whole question of what is, under the current law, Caymanian status, or the right to be Caymanian under the new Law. One of the important things that it does, that the present legislation does not, is it creates a category of persons who are Caymanian as of right.

While the current legislation recognised and deemed certain persons to possess Caymanian status if at least one of their parents at the time of their birth possessed Caymanian status, and one of their parents at the time of their birth was domiciled in the Cayman Islands, the Law actually did not create a category of persons who were described as being Caymanian as of right.

I think that is an important recognition and acknowledgement, for historically, many persons who are Caymanian in every sense of the word were simply born somewhere else because of medical reasons, because Caymanians have always been a nomadic people. For any number of reasons they simply were not born in these Islands and it irks many, many people that they actually, under the current legislation, have to apply to the Board to get an acknowledgment of their Caymanianness – if I may use that word, which is not a word. (I know a number of them). Under what is being proposed now, in my view, that would become unnecessary and a person will be recognised as Caymanian as of right in the following circumstances.

Under section 21 of the Bill “Caymanian as of right” means a child –

- (a) born after the commencement of this Law whether in or outside the Islands, at the date of whose birth at least one of his parents was settled in the Islands and was Caymanian;
- (b) born outside the Islands, after the commencement of this Law, at the date of whose birth at least one of his parents was Caymanian otherwise than by descent; or
- (c) acquiring the status of Caymanian under section 21 of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) or under any earlier law conferring the same or similar rights.”

Therefore, what this does is to recognise immediately as a person who is “Caymanian as of right” as one who was born outside the Islands and at least one of his parents was Caymanian otherwise than by descent, which effectively means that his parent would have had to be born in these Islands or at least his grandparents would have had to be domiciled in the Islands at the time of his birth.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we have now reached the hour of 4.30 pm and I understand that we intend to go on until a time later. Honourable Leader of Government Business would you move the suspension, please.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I move the suspension of the Standing Orders to be able to work after 4.30 pm and, Mr Speaker, we intend to complete the business on the Order Paper.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended in order for us to complete the proceedings as stated on the Order Paper.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue beyond 4.30 pm until the conclusion of business.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I think you have 39 minutes remaining.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Sir. Mr. Speaker, the effect of that is we wind up in a situation where persons born outside the Islands, otherwise than by descent, whose parents are Caymanian, are entitled or have the right to be Caymanian, but it does not extend beyond grandparents. The reason for that is there needs to be a real Cayman connection for persons to have the right to be Caymanian. People should not be able to pass the right to be Caymanian down the line indefinitely and there is nothing novel about that provision; there is a similar one, I understand, in relation to British citizenship under the British Nationality Act.

Another important improvement, in my view, is that it removes the complex question of domicile from the legislation because domicile has always been a matter that has troubled the courts in determining where one's domicile was. There are all sorts of wonderful cases about the loss of domicile of choice and the resumption of domicile of origin and all of those nice legal questions which make good issues for examination papers, but dealing with the reality of life creates such uncertainty and problems that I believe they are better left out of the law. Instead, the Immigration Bill has adopted the concept of “settled in the Islands” which is a much easier matter to determine and, I believe it creates an improved provision in the Law and brings to it a degree of certainty which would otherwise be missing from the legislation.

Another improvement in the legislation (and one which I think is in keeping with this move to a more humane, humanitarian and fairer approach to these matters) is the whole question about the rights of the spouse of a person who has the right to be Caymanian. Under previous legislation, while a spouse could apply for status after five years of marriage, I believe, if that spouse commenced to live apart from the Caymanian spouse within 10 years of the date on which they were granted status – not the date of the marriage: the date they were granted status, which extends the period even further – they would lose their status. It did not even require a decree of dissolution, just living apart, which I have always felt was unfair in the extreme, because I do not believe that one should try to keep people together, keep marriages together by holding the threat of the loss of their status over their heads indefinitely.

While we need to be careful and cautious and to insure that marriages of convenience are not entered into simply to obtain the right to be Caymanian, that is a separate matter in my view which the Board needs to examine carefully at the time when the application for a grant of a right to be Caymanian is being considered. However, to then turn around, as the current legislation does, and say that if you commence living apart from your spouse within 10 years after the date that you got that status - which could be as long as 15 years after the date of that marriage - that your status is lost, I think is inhumane.

I have some personal experience in relation to this: I do not mean that I personally experienced this but I have acted in years gone by for a number of individuals who were very close to the 10-year mark at the time that the divorce petition was presented – and not presented by them but by their spouses. I could tell you that the process and the only means that really works, is to do what one can as a lawyer to delay the pronouncement of the decree. In one case I do recall very well, we put together a defence to the divorce petition and had a long battle about it, not because we thought we would really win, but because we thought that would slow the process down enough in order that the 10 years would elapse before the decree was pronounced.

Any legislation which causes you to have to go through those sorts of machinations to preserve a right of citizenship – or at least the closest thing to citizenship that we can confer in this country – must have something fundamentally wrong with it.

Therefore, I have always been of the view that once the right is conferred, that is it. It must not then be contingent on people staying together and loving each other for ever and ever, Amen. We, of course, would wish that all marriages were like that, but in the harshness of this cruel world that is simply not possible. It is not in touch with reality to expect that this is going to be the case in every instance. Sadly, more marriages end in divorce than continue for the lives of the parties thereto and so this provision in the Bill which says, [in section 22(4)], “Any person-

- (a) who has been married to a Caymanian –
  - (i) for at least five years, where the marriage took place prior to the commencement of this Law; or

- (ii) for at least seven years, where the marriage took place on or after the commencement of this Law;
  - (b) whose marriage is not a marriage of convenience;
  - (c) who is not living apart from his spouse under a decree of a competent court or under a deed of separation;
  - (e) who is legally and ordinarily resident in the Islands immediately preceding his application;
- ... may apply to the Board for the grant of the right to be Caymanian.”

That is it. Once they get it, they have got it and they can then only lose it in similar circumstances to anyone else who has been granted status; if they commit some serious criminal offence or the like. That is as it should be. Whatever questions we have about the validity of the marriage we ought to ask before we grant the person status and what transpires thereafter is none of our business, quite frankly, Mr. Speaker. That is my view, Sir.

Another important improvement, I believe, in relation to this right-to-be Caymanian issue, is the situation in relation to persons who have status, but who would lose it on reaching the age of majority. Under the present legislation, Section 22 (2) of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) provides that: “(2) Any person possessing Caymanian status who has adopted a child in any place outside the Islands, may, if such child-

- (a) is under the age of eighteen years;
  - . . . apply to the Board for the grant of Caymanian status to such child to take effect immediately upon such loss occurring.”

Subsection 22 (3) provides: “Any person who has attained the age of eighteen years, one of whose parents was born in the Islands, and who has been ordinarily resident in the Islands for the period of three years immediately preceding his application may apply to the Board for the grant of Caymanian status.”

This Law therefore confers the right to apply for status but the improvement which I believe section 22(8) of the Bill brings is that it provides that: “A person who-

- (a) has attained the age of seventeen years;
- (b) has Caymanian status which-
  - (i) will expire when he attains the age of eighteen years; or
  - (ii) has expired upon his having attained the age of eighteen years; and
- (c) has been legally and ordinarily resident in the Islands for at least five out of the seven years immediately preceding the date of the application, may apply to the Board for the grant of the right to be Caymanian ...” and this is the important date

“... and such application shall be granted, unless the Board has compelling reasons for refusing it; and such grant shall take effect when he attains the age of eighteen years or, where he is already eighteen years, from the date of the grant.”

Hence, that will deal, I believe, effectively with children of persons who have come here and who have gotten Caymanian status or who will get the right to be Caymanian. It creates a presumption that this status will be continued beyond the age of 18 unless there is a very good reason for the Board not to do so. Therefore, rather than the situation which we have now where people live in hope that if they have spent the last six or seven years here, they came here when they were 11 years old, say, which effectively means they would have spent their high school years here and those are the critically formative years on how people think, I believe, will no longer be living in hope that they may not get status or have their status continued when they pass the age of 18.

This has important implications for many young people because it affects their ability to apply for scholarships. We all know of instances where there are persons who were not born here but who effectively grew up here but who lost their status when they reached age 18 and therefore lost their qualification to be able to apply for a scholarship because virtually every scholarship system that operates in these Islands requires that the person must be a person of Caymanian status.

I have spent a fair bit of time on how important it is to the building of this nation that we do not discard those who have grown up in the society who understand and appreciate our culture and our values. Many of them are bright and promising stars but, as I said yesterday, often their parents simply do not have the economic means to send them on to university. If we continue to perpetuate a system which precludes them from being able to avail themselves of the benefits of a scholarship, whether it is a government scholarship or otherwise, then I think that we are being foolhardy because these are the young people who can help contribute to the continued prosperity and growth and improvement of this society, this community, this nation. Mr. Speaker, I really think that is a section that significantly improves the position in relation to persons under the age of 18 who have Caymanian status but who stand otherwise to lose it when they reach the age of majority.

I am sure I am running a bit short on time if I can crave your indulgence, Sir, to have one moment just to review a few . . .

The Speaker: You have 24 minutes remaining.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: . . . points in order that I make sure I have covered all of them. This is a small point and one which I will make for the benefit of the drafts persons. I have already spoken to one of them, I think, but I believe this Bill was drafted before we actually passed the status of Children Law which removed the distinction between legitimate and illegitimate children for all intents and purposes. Mr. Speaker, because of that I think that section 20(2)(c) will need to be amended because that section still refers to a child being subsequently legitimated for reason of the operation of the Legitimation Law (1997 Revision) and one of the effects of the Status of Children Law, which was recently passed, was to repeal the Legitimation Law. However, I think the sub-section will still work very well with the removal of that provision. I do not think any further amendment to it would be required other than the deletion of the reference to legitimation and the Legitimation Law. That is on page 38 of the Bill, section 20(2)(c).

One of the major disappointments with this Bill, which I have and which Members of the Opposition share and I believe even some Members of the Government Back Bench perhaps even some of the Front Bench who were on the Immigration Review Team with me, is the fact that the Law excludes its application to persons employed by the Government of the Islands.

Quite frankly, I think that is a disastrous proposal. I keep referring to the Minister of Education and I know where he sits and how difficult life must be out there for him sometimes, but he is absolutely right. I keep saying we cannot have one country and two systems and I know he must try hard to preach that to his colleagues on the other side. Thus far he does not seem to be doing very well.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: That is true — to you all on the other side.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [Inaudible comment]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin: I spent a significant amount of time yesterday talking about how important it is to the continued harmony and reputation of these Islands that we have a system which continues to promote tolerance, civic mindedness, and fairness among our people and how critically important the right sort of immigration scheme is to that equation. I spoke about the attitudes of Caymanians and the attitudes of those who visit here and how those attitudes have undergone significant change (and not change for the better) over the course of the past few years as pressures have built with Caymanians feeling more and more threatened and overwhelmed by the sheer number of persons who come here and set up residence permanently.

I also spoke about the attitudes of foreigners, both to us and to the Immigration Legislation which currently exists and how the whole objective of this Bill and the whole mission and vision of the Immigration Review Team was to create a system of immigration and provide immigration reform which addresses those two concerns: hence the reason for the recommendation for term limits in relation to work permits. We had to dispel this impression: this expectation that all who come here to live and work would be allowed to stay indefinitely. By creating this filter to which I have referred a number of times in my debate, we would reduce the number of persons who would reach the seven-year mark and thereby qualify to apply for permanent residence and then move on through British Overseas Territories citizenship and ultimately to Caymanian status.

Now, if we are going to impose a system of term limits to have that desired effect on the private sector, how, how can we exclude the largest employer in the country, the Cayman Islands Government, from that scheme? The records which I have been able to obtain, indicate (exclusive of statutory authorities and Government companies – I do not have the numbers for those) the number of persons employed by the Cayman Islands Government which includes civil servants and group employees as at 7 November 2003, stood at 3,283, of whom 67.5 per cent were Caymanian and 32.5 per cent non-Caymanian. Therefore, as I said, excluding the statutory authorities and the Government companies, approximately 1,000 persons are employed by Government, who, if they were working in the private sector, would require a work permit.

We are saying, that by excluding the application of this legislation to the Government of the Islands, those 1,000 persons are entitled to continue in this country, on the basis, and with the expectation that in due course they will be able to obtain Caymanian status. They will not be subject to any term limits on their tenure here and they can come and work indefinitely – the same situation that exists across the Board now. This is plainly wrong. Here we are telling the private sector that whatever discomfort will be experienced it is for the greater good that term limits be imposed because this is what is necessary to ensure that we continue to have the kind of society which has attracted business and people here and which make these Islands a delight in which to live.

However, we, the Government, who are imposing it, are not going to be subject to its provisions because the private sector must make sacrifices while we continue our merry ways free to do as we wish. It is wrong, Mr. Speaker, it has always been wrong that Government employees are not subject to the provisions of the Immigration Law, of having to meet the requirements of the Immigration Board as do employees, and employers as well, in the private sector. It is wrong: it is plain and simple, wrong.

The employment prospects of Caymanians in the private sector are no more important than the employment prospects of persons in the civil service and the degree of disgruntlement in the civil service, as far as upward mobility is concerned, is no less than that heard in the private sector. What possible justification can there be for excluding the provisions of this law, particularly those in relation to work permits, from applying to the civil service?

It is not sufficient in my view, to say that we have a public service law or bill coming and that we have to consider the ramifications of the whole reform of the public sector. There is no reason if we have now created a policy document, moved it to the stage of a Bill whose passage is eminent, that that same policy, those same regulations, should not be made to apply to the public sector whether it is encompassed in a public sector bill or whether it simply with this law applies to the public sector.

How can we really stand up and defend the position of term limits to those in the private sector who say, "Oh, you're going to deter good quality, good calibre candidates from coming and taking up the jobs in the laws firms, accounting firms, the businesses and the banks and trust companies, because anyone who is going to give up the prospect of a partnership of a law firm in the UK wants to be at least reasonably certain that if they apply themselves in the Cayman Islands they will wind up with a partnership."

That is what the private sector has been saying from the time this issue was mooted many years ago. However we, I believe, collectively, have the political will and the determination to ensure that what we believe, after careful thought, consideration and consultation, is in the long-term best interests of these Islands should be made to happen. I urge the Government to reconsider this matter. We are ad idem on just about everything in this Bill. Let us do the right thing and make these provisions in relation to term limits applicable to the civil service as well.

There are also going to be concerns expressed about the fact that a promotion from associate to partner is considered to be a change of employment and therefore subject to the scrutiny of the Immigration or the work permit board as it is going to be termed under the new legislation. Again, I believe this is a critically important change necessary to ensure that the prospects of Caymanians are at the forefront of the minds of those in charge of the big and small law firms, accounting firms, banks, trust companies and the other important businesses in this community.

If these matters are not within the province of the work permit board, I fear that often deserving Caymanians would be overlooked because you see, Mr. Speaker, notwithstanding our tremendous success and prosperity, the reality is that the upper echelons of the financial industry in these Islands continue to be governed by non-Caymanians and quite frankly it is not perceived by many of them, to be in their best interests to add Caymanian partners to their number. To do so means to give up a certain degree of control over the operations of that enterprise and that is something that many of them are reluctant to concede. That again I believe is an important improvement in this proposed new legislation.

The last matter that I will seek to address in these short minutes that I have remaining is this whole question of what is now termed "exempted employees" in the Bill. These are not the provisions, which permit certain employees to be exempted from the term limit provisions of the law, that the Immigration Review Team recommended. The concept the Immigration Review Team developed was the concept of the key employee and it is something that we borrowed from the Bermuda legislation. However, it was felt by many in the business community, in particular those who made representations to me that the provisions as proposed by the Immigration Review Team were too restrictive and would mean that not many persons would qualify to be designated as key employees and therefore be exempted from the term limit policy and, for the reasons which I articulated a little earlier, the need to get the right calibre persons to come and work here; it was felt that additional flexibility was required.

I do not take a great deal of issue with what has now been proposed in the Bill, except to say that although it does increase the flexibility, it also permits in my view the possibility of a lot more abuse.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have four minutes remaining.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It also permits abuse of the provisions, I believe, unless the Board is extremely vigilant and very careful in how it applies to sections, because it says in section 47(3) of the Bill: "Before the Board can designate a worker or prospective worker as an exempted employer it shall satisfy itself that he fulfils one or more of the following requirements:

(a) he is recognised as having particular expertise in his field of practice, trade or employment;"

Unless one takes quite a rigid view of that section virtually everybody who comes to work here could be let in. Everybody will claim that they have a particular expertise in their field, or practise, trade or employment. As I read the section though, Mr. Speaker, it does not mean that the Board is bound to exempt every employee who does have a particular expertise. It says that before the Board can designate a worker they must be satisfied that he has one or more of the following requirements and that is my concern.

I do not have the time to go through all of the other requirements in the few minutes that I have left. However, that is my general concern about these new provisions which have been substituted for those which have been proposed by the Immigration Review Team. Yes, they do permit a lot more flexibility than we had envisaged, but we were deliberately stringent in the provisions that we recommended because we did not want the whole system to fall apart.

If, in fact, this filter does not work and virtually everybody who comes here manages to be exempted, then we are going to be right where we are now. Except this time, we no longer have the quota system, therefore we have created a vehicle whereby virtually everybody who comes here will ultimately move on to get Caymanian status and that would be an even greater disaster than the one that we now contend with.

I have not come to the end of all that I could say, but I have come to the end of the time I am permitted and I would just like to close by saying that I am very proud and privileged to have had the opportunity to play a part in developing the policy that has resulted in this particular piece of legislation. I wish to pay credit to, and to commend the other Members of the Immigration Review Team who took part in this important exercise.

This, Mr. Speaker, was truly a bipartisan work even when the roles were reversed because the Immigration Review Team was appointed by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, my colleague the First Elected Member for George Town, when he was there. Its work then was bipartisan and its work after he demitted office in November of 2001, was bipartisan. I believe that in time to come, the reports will be viewed as important historical documents.

It is not often I laud the Government, but I believe that its vision, foresight and courage to pursue what was started by the Leader of the Opposition to bring this Bill to this House at this controversial point; and both sides joining ranks even though there are one or two issues with which we disagree on this important matter, is again something that we can all be proud of. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that this will be judged by history and by the historians to be a signal time in the critically important evolution of these Islands.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for your patience in listening to me over the course of these two hours. Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to make my contribution to a Bill for a Law to Repeal the Immigration Law (2003 Revision); The Immigration (Amendment) Law No. 11 of 2003; The Immigration Regulations (2003 Revision); The Immigration Directions (2001 Revision); The Immigration (Business Staffing Plan) Regulations (2000 Revision); to Make Alternative Provisions for Matters Pertaining to Immigration; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

There is an old Jewish wish that goes something like this: "May you live in interesting times." These are indeed interesting times for those of us who are present as Members in this Chamber now, have come to witness perhaps one of the most momentous developments in the history of an evolving society, and certainly in the history of political affairs and matters pertaining to the Legislative Assembly since the 1980s.

Much credit has to go to the Immigration Review Team members and the last Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town, who cast it accurately when he said that it was a bipartisan effort. Mr. Speaker, I am not going to dwell so much in the merits of the clauses of the legislation because that was done by persons far more eminent and able than I am, although I am, from time to time, going to make some reference to some of the clauses.

What I would like to do is to cast this whole business of Immigration Review and Reform and the products of those efforts, namely this Bill, The Immigration Bill 2003, in a light and to say why it was necessary for us to come to this conclusion at this time and why I think that this is of significant historic import in the development of the Caymanian society.

It is interesting that two of the most able and prescient colonial administrators that the Cayman Islands have ever seen, namely Allen Cardinal in the 1930s, and in the 1950s a man by the name of Andrew Morris Gerrard, warned Caymanians about letting in large numbers of outsiders. The archives hold interesting records of the addresses these colonial administrators gave to the Caymanian people and it is worthy of note that the advice they gave at that time was both appropriate and relevant. However, we are living in different times now; the geopolitics and the economics of our existence have significantly changed. Indeed, not only of the Cayman Islands but of the region and of the wider world and consequently it is necessary for us to take a broader and more cosmopolitan view.

I want to mention, and return time and time again throughout my debate to one of the things that we have never been able to come to a mature grip with. It is the fact that Caymanians have always felt that they are vulnerable to being out-numbered and out-manoeuvred and this is so for two reasons. The first is, that if you check it out, the early history of the Cayman Islands was a history in which the Islanders were very much left to themselves and so they developed rather insular and peculiar attitudes towards outsiders with whom they only came in contact when they were merchant mariners roving the seas, namely the western Caribbean, and much later when they went abroad in greater numbers seeking an economic livelihood.

Therefore, it was natural for Caymanians to be reticent and reluctant to merge and mingle and to encourage outsiders. Many Caymanians express the belief even now, that they are going to be out-numbered and that they are going to be disadvantaged.

There was also a genre of politicians who did not understand that the world was changing and they encouraged Caymanians to feel this way by not helping them to understand that the Cayman Islands were no longer the Islands that time forgot but were, indeed, part of the wider world. Therefore, when we made our first attempt at some form of immigration regulation, it was mistakenly called the Caymanian Protection Law. It is largely out of that, that Caymanians arrived at the conclusion that they were somehow a special breed of people, delicate and on the brink of extinction that had to be protected.

While I give credit to the well-meaning legislators, I contend that it was a misguided and a mistaken notion. What should have been done was to have inculcated in Caymanians that the world was changing and they had to prepare themselves for competition. Not only for competition among fellow Caymanians but competition from outsiders. Thus, we move from that point in the '60s up until the '80s.

When I first became a member of this House in 1988, in 1989 we had the first review of the Immigration Law and we went through subsequent reviews until we came to this most recent one and a most peculiar phenomenon occurred throughout all of these reviews that I had the privilege of being a part of. The political directorate at the time went to great pains in the Select Committee and we had persons come in. We heard the most heart-rending stories, people broke down and cried, there were tales that would melt even the hardest iceberg of a heart and yet at the end of the day, nothing tangible was achieved.

Therefore, it seemed to me that the exercise was only meant to be a spasmodic exercise which was full of perhaps not so honourable intentions. It was just a way of easing oneself out of a dilemma because every time we came to the conclusion... There was one time when there was great hope, however the political directorate administering the review got swept out of power and I think a great mistake was made by the electorate when they did that. Nevertheless, the people exercised their democratic rights. The succeeding political directorate then put a moratorium on grants of Cayman status.

Prior to that, grants had been made of 12 per year. When the moratorium was put on the grants by the succeeding political directorate in 1992, no corollary moratorium was placed on applications. Subsequently, what transpired was that while no grants were being made, applications kept piling up until they numbered in the thousands. That shows us how short-sighted even the most brilliant of legal minds can be, when our intentions are not honourable, because someone should have seen that to balance the equation, if there were no grants of citizenship, there should have been a corresponding moratorium on grants of application.

Thus matters grew worse and there were those of us who said it is against natural justice, it is against human rights, to have persons living in the community for all these years, hard-working, law-abiding citizens. Indeed, there were persons here, three and four generations, in this society who, if challenged, held no legal rights according to our law. There were also all kinds of quirks in the system; some people were here long enough and they could vote, some people were here for a long time but they could not vote and we had all kinds of variations on the theme.

I join too in commending the vision of the persons who took over the political directorate in 2000. Regarding the comment made by the last speaker about the similarity, I have always believed that in this Legislative Assembly there is more than a symbiotic relationship with the Government and the Opposition. If the truth be known, what really happened after 2000 was that there virtually was a one-party state because the old order was swept away by the persons who currently inhabit this House.

Therefore, I am really not surprised, as was the last speaker, by the similarity of philosophy between Government and Opposition when it comes to these things because I believe we share the same philosophy, as far as some natural and human rights are concerned. Often I believe the only difference is between the two Leaders, and maybe that is a matter that they should settle personally.

We had come to the point where the situation was unbearable and it was realised, quite rightly, that something had to be done, therefore, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition established this Immigration Review Team which happily was continued, after roles in the Assembly changed, and we have come to this.

Why is it necessary, Mr. Speaker, to have a modern Immigration Law at this time? Well, the most fundamental reason is that it is necessary because Caymanian society cannot continue to labour under the confusing situation where there are thousands of people in the country who are not sure of their tenure, of their status in the country, of their ability to ever become completely entrenched in the Caymanian society.

I want to say as one, if not the only Member of this House, who has voluntarily immigrated to another country, that I am in a good position to view the coin from both sides. On the one hand we have to be fair to those persons who are from outside, who have laboured and contributed. On the other hand, we have to do things in such a way that 'established' Caymanians, as I call them – as against what I hear people describing as 'indigenous' Caymanians. Mr. Speaker, there is no such thing as an indigenous Caymanian; all of the people here believe you me, are expatriated. I make the distinction between Caymanians of generations like myself and the other Honourable Members in here as established Caymanians vis-à-vis the newer Caymanians. So, we have to at the same time let Caymanians feel that they are not going to be significantly disadvantaged by this incorporation of all these new citizens. I contend that there is an economic advantage to be gained by incorporating these persons into our society. Therefore it is necessary to craft a new law: one which is clear and unambiguous; one which spells out the rights and responsibilities; and one which brings the Cayman Islands as a developing society in line with internationally required and respected obligations in terms of human rights and natural justice.

I believe, too, as a Caymanian, that many Caymanians hold certain views which may not necessarily be without prejudice with regards to certain elements in the society. Therefore this law is good again, in that, while it may not eliminate completely the possibility of those prejudices surfacing, it certainly curtails significantly any possibility of those prejudices rising to the point where it would be inimical to the interest of the majority of people in the society.

Any prosperous society has to set out clearly how people can attain membership in that society. It was fashionable sometime ago to be exclusive; indeed there were few countries in the world that did not employ restrictive immigration policies, and I say now, as I have always said, that my model for fair immigration is the Canadian system. It is a system which I know and it is a system which is recorded to be the fairest, the most progressive, and the most prosperous system in terms of setting out clearly an immigration bill which is understandable and fair and which encourages people to immigrate there. Canada can well do that, because it is a large country with few people.

The Cayman Islands, however, cannot take in everyone who wishes to come here, therefore it is necessary for us to set in place some legislation which distinguishes and differentiates and sets out clearly and unequivocally those persons and the criteria that we set for accepting them into our society.

There are, however, things that I would like to see done differently and I would hope that when a new law comes around, it eliminates this business of payment for citizenship for I believe that citizenship is a privilege and when it is bestowed, those persons receiving it should be made to understand that it is a privilege. It is a priceless commodity thus I hope that the next law, whenever it comes, will remove any necessity to pay any monies. I like the way it is done in other jurisdictions where when you acquire a citizenship, you are called as a successful candidate. Some places demand an examination; you have to know about the history of the country, the politics, and even some aspects of the culture. You have to swear an oath of allegiance before a Magistrate or a Judge and you are given a packet with the national flag, national anthem, national symbols and you get your photograph taken with your family: a source of pride. In addition to the Certificate of Citizenship, many people have a photo which they can keep for posterity, as a source of pride.

That is the next step and I hope we can get to that before I transpire, Mr. Speaker. This effort is commendable; this Bill is a far cry from what we laboured under, robbed people and deluded ourselves for so long. "For when the chickens come home to roost" — and the signs are that they are coming home now — we shall have to ask ourselves whether we have not, in the long run, cheated posterity and future generations of Caymanians, as well as committing an immorality, by making it difficult for all those persons who came here with honest intentions to labour and contribute to wait for so long before we recognised their efforts.

I believe that when it is explained, the majority of established Caymanian people will understand this new Immigration Bill and the Law; they will understand the necessity for it and they will understand how it is going to improve the Caymanian society in a number of ways.

Before I go into the individual clauses, Mr Speaker, I want to crave your indulgence to speak about this whole notion of citizenship and what it means. One of the things that this Bill purports to do is to remove the distinction between established Caymanians and those who some people contemptuously refer to as "paper Caymanians" and then there will only be one basis of citizenship. Mr. Speaker, I want to read a little from a book called Citizenship in a Global Age: Society, Culture And Politics by author Gerard Delanty.

"Citizenship and the struggle for equality.

"The concept of citizenship as a legal status based on rights was the Roman development, but with its roots in Greek thought and practice. For the Greeks there was no clear distinction between morality and legality, citizenship and democracy. A citizen was an essentially political being, by which was meant both a moral and a legal entity. Citizenship was an inherited privilege and clearly marked the boundary between non-citizens and citizens, for the polis was based on a restricted principle of equality as well as on a clearly defined territory."

It goes on to say, "Equality was not central to the Greek conception of citizenship, which was ultimately a privilege. For the Greeks, the citizen achieved equality in the public domain, the world of 'speech' where he was free to engage in political discourse freed from the burden of household or the world of 'things', the confine of women, children and slaves. No account of citizenship can evade the fact that it was originally constructed in order to exclude and subordinate people."

All of that leads me conveniently to make the point that it is necessary for the law to clearly set out the criteria for becoming citizens. For it would be most unwise and impolitic of us to believe that we can be liberal enough to accept everyone who would seek to become citizens. This brings me to the point that it is necessary, once and for all, to clear up the back-log of outstanding applications we have and to operate off a clean slate with clearly constructed rules, and parameters in order that all those who come in the future can understand and can make informed decisions based on the laws that are in place.

I make passing reference to the recent grants of Caymanian status. While it is a contentious issue, let me say that it was a bold and wise move on the part of the Government. We may argue about the methodology but certainly there is no argument about the results which were sought to be achieved, for those results meant that those persons who had laboured here for all those years were recognised for their diligence and their conscientiousness. I contend that it places us now in a more favourable position to implement the clauses in this Law and to move on to the next stage. When history is written the historian shall surely conclude that the United Democratic Party took a wise and bold move in making those efforts.

I am happy that I played a small part in that after all the time wasted on select committees on immigration; after all the pristine promises made by past political directorates; after all of the disappointments people who were deserving had to experience year after year, election after election, and at last a Daniel came to judgement and decided that it was time to take the bull by the horns.

With regard to this Bill, that even the Opposition is quick to associate with, the differences they have by their own admission are small and insignificant. This Bill allows the Cayman Islands the long-awaited opportunity to get on with the business of building the society through a sensible immigration policy, which is not to say that it is without challenges because we have heard some queries raised; however, those have to be taken against the fact that we could not, in the first instance, come with a wide sweeping and omnibus bill.

I have heard questions raised about the difference between the government and the rest of civil society. Of course I subscribe to the notion that there should be no "one country, two systems" but one has to realise that you cannot handcuff the government either in some cases. The government operates under some exigencies that civil society may not have to contend with; this whole business of the state, national interest, national security issues, issues of the greatest delicacy. Therefore while it is, I suppose, democratic to question why the state should not be subject to work permit restrictions it is understandable that the state has to have certain flexibilities in order to offer the guarantees which the state is called upon to offer. Hopefully, the time will emerge when the Public Service Law will reflect much of what is contained in the Immigration Law and the gaps can be narrowed. For now though, I would say it is quite logical and acceptable in this early phase to expect that the state is going to retain for itself certain flexibilities.

From information I have, many people seem to take some umbrage to the clause concerning exempted persons. Wisdom born of experience would suggest that this is an area which could be exploited and should be kept under the strictest of observation. Particularly from the perch which I inhabit, trained and educated Caymanians often complain that they are sometimes passed over and when they are seeking jobs if they have qualifications they are told they need experience. However, they cannot get the experience readily because other persons currently occupy the positions which they are seeking to fill. Mr. Speaker, I think that it would be interesting to see if this is not one of those clauses which would permit certain people, whose interests may not be genuine, to manipulate the situation in order to give themselves permanent advantages.

However, I believe again that in jurisdictions such as the Cayman Islands, businesses must be given the opportunity to access staff which can help them maintain a competitive edge and continue to experience success. In the long run, Mr. Speaker, the best insurance we can give our people is to ensure that they have opportunities for education and training. No law will be without its flaws; however, I am satisfied that this Bill goes further than any law we have had in the past to the creation of a fair and equitable system.

I believe that it is right for us to reserve these privileges until we are certain that the persons who earn them are completely ready for them. In many countries, even when you are bestowed citizenship, there are certain offices which are restricted. In the United States, only born Americans can contest the presidency. In Canada, for example, one can only work for the Federal Government once one is bilingual, that means, fluent in both French and English. Therefore, it is not uncommon, even when citizenship is bestowed, for states to place restrictions until they are certain that the persons who claim these privileges have met the entire criterion.

From a cultural perspective, one of the things that we need to evolve – now that we are on the way to an Immigration Bill – is a philosophy of what Caymanian society will become, culturally speaking. Whether we are going to be so robust in what we consider Caymanianness and the Caymanian tradition as to prescribe that it be adopted by all who come here, or whether we are going to have a mosaic where persons maintain elements of their own identity while at the same time being blanketed by a loose form of Caymanianness. It is important in the sense that Caymanian people are not large procreators and if we are not careful what can happen is that cultural aspects for which we have been known will be completely obliterated.

Therefore, it is for us to consider how we are going to promote and protect the cultural aspects of what we consider the Caymanian society to be and promote them in such a way that new-comers will find them attractive and will be quick to adopt.

People often say to me that Caymanian society is one of a few unique societies in that you come into the jurisdiction and there seems to be an ease in relationships between all elements in the society. It is most noticeable in the schools where we have a rainbow of children and there is no tension, no hostility, and no segregation.

Mr. Speaker, believe you me, that is an important quality even in our region. I had the privilege of visiting a jurisdiction in this region, the identity of which is not important to reveal at this time. However, I was flabbergasted by the tension that existed between the elements in the society, particularly the peoples of Afro-West Indian origin and the peoples of East-Indian origin. I stayed in that jurisdiction for a week and it was beyond anything I could have imagined, even although I had heard about the tension which existed. I said to my colleague, who was the Minister of Education, "How in the world can this society continue to thrive if this is the situation which exists between these two largest elements in the society?"

Mr. Speaker, we are fortunate in the Cayman Islands to have such a harmonious situation, which is not to say that there are not prejudices and manifestations of prejudices, but, happily, as we have seen recently with the Oath of Allegiance taken by those people who were bestowed Caymanian status, there is willingness among all elements in Caymanian society to co-exist. I wish to say that this Immigration Bill will enhance that willingness.

This Immigration Bill will remove the distinction between the different Caymanians. This Bill will make it possible for those persons who are awarded Caymanian citizenship to be able to live in this society and to feel that they are genuinely equal and welcome.

I commend the Bill. I am privileged to have been a witness and a participant to this historic occasion and I look forward and will forever labour to make the Caymanian society the most democratic, the most fair, and the most cosmopolitan society, not only in the region, Mr. Speaker, but in the world.

I commend my colleagues on both sides of the House and look forward to the passage of this Bill, to Caymanian society moving even to greater heights. I am not as ambitious as some of my colleagues who class the Cayman Islands as a nation. I do not believe we have reached that step quite yet. What I will say is that the Cayman Islands are prosperous and as a society they have the potential to become a great nation, although it is a jurisdiction of about 40,000 people.

I am happy that this Bill will allow many to say what I borrowed from Sir Walter Scott on Heroes Day, 27 January 2003:

" ... Breathes there the man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land!"

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I propose to take the afternoon break at this time, but would ask all Members to be back promptly in 15 minutes. Thank you.

Proceedings suspended at 5:51 pm

Proceedings resumed at 6:16 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I know we are all anxious and hope that we all curtail our time here this evening; that I will do.

I rise to make my contribution to the Bill to repeal The Immigration Law (2003 Revision); The Immigration (Amendment) Law, 2003; The Immigration Regulations (2003 Revision); The Immigration Directions (2001 Revision); The Immigration (Business Staffing Plan) Regulations (2000 Revision); and The Immigration Appeal (Asylum) Rules, 2003; to make Alternative Provision for Matters Pertaining to Immigration; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

When this Bill was circulated some 10 weeks ago, or thereabouts, the parliamentary Opposition spent many long hours going through it. The Leader of the Opposition was assigned the responsibility of dealing with the different sections of the Bill; and then the Second Elected Member for George Town did some as well, therefore I do not propose to repeat any of those areas but I consider it absolutely necessary that I make my contribution to it.

Much has been said about the bipartisan agreement on this Bill, and what it represents to this Honourable House and the people of this country; to know that across the political divide we have recognised the need to reform our immigration policies in this country. I might add that that should be the case in all issues relating to the future of the people of this country. I have always supported, and will always support, whatever is in the best interests of this country. However, the Bill as presented, no matter what we do, is going to have some opposition to it. I can say that the Bill in its current form is much more appealing than the one that was proposed 10 weeks ago.

One previous speaker spoke of the Bill promoting the removal of the distinction between indigenous and paper Caymanians. While that is what we would like, I certainly do not believe, no matter what happens, that in our lifetime we will see any significant ease in that direction. Unfortunately, that is the situation we currently have. I certainly would like to hope that it happens but we would be asking a little bit too much. Too much water has passed under the bridge and many Caymanians have complained of being disadvantaged in their own country and certainly they believe it comes directly as a result of expatriates being able to move into their territory.

In any country there is a need to grow. Mr. Speaker, cultures evolve. Unfortunately, we, in this country, and successive governments, have ignored the need to ensure that the culture of this country evolves in a timely manner. Too much time has been wasted on lip-service to the people of this country.

While, as the Second Elected Member for George Town said, the Government does not give us many times to applaud them, I do when it is necessary, and I applaud them for their boldness to continue the work started in 2001. I recall in the previous administration, that is before 2000 and other administrations prior to that also, much talk about how we needed to reform immigration policies in our country. Perhaps if those other administrations had been bold enough we would not be where we are today.

Too many people have immigrated to this country under the work permit system. At the end of the day this country does not necessarily owe these people anything. I too took up the time-proven profession of Caymanians which was seamanship and worked for an American company for many years. I was reminding someone recently that for us to get recognition for the times we put in at sea with that company; it had to take Mrs. Consuelo Ebanks to promote the Southwell years. Nobody owes anybody anything.

However, we cannot really expect to allow these people to stay here for 20 to 30 years and at the end of the day have no security of tenure. The only security of tenure this country has ever had was either having a work permit or becoming a Caymanian. This new Bill promotes a timely phasing in of all rights and privileges of a Caymanian such as permanent residency and the like. Mr. Speaker, I believe that is the right thing to do.

There is one side of the coin in this country which says we do not want the expat in our country. On the other side of the coin, there is not one indigenous family in this country that has not been touched in recent times by an expat. We are quick to get on the street and on the front porches, and talk about how the foreigner takes away our jobs, but at the same time we are sitting on our front porch with a foreigner who is married to our cousin or brother or sister or someone within our family. Certainly, we do not want to encroach on that person's ability to maintain his marriage and children and the right to raise a family in this country that we call ours. Sometimes it appears like we are a little sympathetic with murder if it does not happen on our own doorstep. I understand that, and I hear the people of this country crying as a result of that. There are times when they are justified in their cries against the foreigner who comes to this country and refuses to assimilate with us. They are justified. I have witnessed that, Mr. Speaker.

I have had experiences in my life, right here in this country, where a foreigner has said to me that I have a chip on my shoulder. Of course, with my youthful exuberance, I said to him, "It is not a chip – it is a Georgia pine." I have a right to have a chip on my shoulder in my own country, and likewise anyone else. Conversely, I have also had good experiences with expats therefore I would not promote the painting with a wide brush of them all. I must admit that I have matured to that position. My appeal to Caymanians, my own people, is that we all need to reach that point. However, I hasten to appeal to the person who comes to this country to understand that there is a uniqueness about us that they must respect also. There are many who do not do that. This Bill, hopefully, will weed those out.

Many years ago, prior to the broadcast of this Honourable House, I will never forget hearing Mr. Warren Conolly, during his political heyday say at a public meeting, "Cayman is not for everyone." I keep reminding myself of that. No matter what this Bill does, we have to ensure that we know who we are getting on the shores of this country and in the population expansion of this country.

Much has been said about the recent grants by Cabinet. I too have opposed that. Some try to justify it by saying we had to do something. If this Bill is so fair in doing something, then I see no need for them doing something so early and then not utilising this Bill that we are all promoting. In other words, why could we not have waited until now? We would have known that those under 15 years in this Law would have had the additional process to go through and those over seven years under this Law would have received permanent residency. Mr. Speaker, I believe that there are many Caymanians who respect the fact that we need expatriates. They have become an integral part of the lives of Caymanians.

Talking about expats, Mr. Speaker, one may say that this Bill has very little to do with me as a Caymanian except if I marry a foreigner. That is the only thing in this Bill that is going to affect me. It is about immigration. Immigration means someone coming here; this is the reference point that I have to use. The foreigner has to understand that when he comes here. Those who do not know that by now, have to understand that while I might have been able to trace back many generations, it is not totally my responsibility to integrate with them. They have a responsibility to integrate with me. That is their responsibility. When I went to America and I lived in America, I had to integrate with the Americans, or I could not live.

We have always been a tolerant society, and I have said this before, and I believe in this Honourable House as well. Absolutely no country in this world would put up with having 50 per cent, or thereabouts, of its population being of a different nationality. If we were to drop 50 per cent of the population of America, England, Jamaica or any country for that matter right into it, in such a short time, it would cause unrest. We are a tolerant society. This Bill, while one may say that the roll-over policy of seven years is harsh; this promotes our tolerance to allow people into our country. Those who say otherwise should look at how tolerant this Bill is, and look at the 18 Honourable Members of this Chamber who are promoting this and handing this to our people and saying, "This is what we believe is fair," and asking our people to extend that tolerance even more so.

Mr. Speaker, we have to be fair: everyone talks about being fair to the expat – the immigrant – the word expat sounds vulgar. We talk about being fair to the immigrant. We also have to remember that we have to be fair to our own people. I agree with the Minister of Education that if we are at that point in our development where we have to do something, and we are asking our people to tolerate these immigrants, and allow them to continue their lives and share the Caymanian way of life with them, then the best thing we can do as a government, as a people and in particular as legislators, is to prepare our people for what is to come by ensuring that the educational standards in this country are second to none in the Caribbean.

We can do that; it is a matter of political will. If we have the political will, we can provide the educational standards for our children in order that they can compete with anyone. I am not just chatting to hear myself chat. There are many of us who have families; who are fathers; who grew up in a time in this country when there was no schooling; where the only opportunity was to leave and to go to sea. Many became captains and engineers not having finished high school.

I am saying that Caymanians can do anything they want to do if given the opportunity. We, as a people, must provide those opportunities in order that it will allay some of the fears of integrating and allowing the immigrants to integrate in this country.

I understand the economic advantage that we say this brings. Yes, I agree that in many instances those who come to our shores will save all that they make and we have an economic drain. Giving those people the opportunity to live in our country, we would certainly assume that the economic gains would be that they would go out, build homes, spend the money here, and the likes, and Caymanian businesses would benefit as a result.

That advantage pales in comparison with the need for harmony in this country. That is what we have to promote; the assimilation of these people and the promotion of harmony. I do not believe that our people have been educated sufficiently on what that economic advantage is. I applaud the Government for their media blitz on trying to get the people to understand what this Immigration Bill is all about. I think that is a perfect example of what can be done to educate the people of this country on new legislation, and the effects it will have on their lives.

I think I should pause here and applaud, congratulate and thank the Immigration Review Team (IRT) and all its members and, in particular, the Chairperson, Mrs. Cowan. If there was ever a time that I saw someone dedicated to their resolve and their goal, it was during the promotion of this Bill. I have not had an opportunity to read through most of the reports, nevertheless I think they did a splendid job. I think this country owes them a debt of gratitude for being so diligent and so resourceful in bringing a Bill of this nature to this Honourable House.

I will now speak briefly on the section about the Government being exempt from work permit requirements Mr. Speaker. I understand that Government operates under a little different situation than the private sector and that Government needs to be given some kind of flexibility to get the job done. I also hear the Minister of Education saying that the Public Service Employee Relation Law terms of employment will hopefully narrow that margin. However, I am still concerned that there are many Caymanians in the civil service and public service —young, enthusiast, intelligent, extremely educated—who need the opportunity to be a part of the decision-making process in their country. I believe one of the handicaps they have is that the Government employs many immigrants with experience thus preventing the young Caymanian from the succession ladder, or stagnating them on that succession ladder.

Perhaps we can reflect on the past and think of how the Government was run in recent memory, not immediate recent memory, but certainly in the last 50 years. In my memory there were people like Mr. Desmond Watler, they were all Caymanians at the top level. I am not saying that there are not Caymanians now, Mr. Speaker, but certainly somewhere between the newly-educated Caymanian and those at the top, we have to ensure that we do not put the immigrant worker in those slots to the detriment of those who are just coming in to the service or who have been there for short periods of time.

I believe the Government needs to rethink that one. This is only one of the areas that we have some differences with. Certainly, there are ways to arrest that situation and it may be that Government will come at a later stage and arrest that by doing the Public Service Law and Succession Planning and the likes.

The other area that has come under contention again is section 20 which dictates the categories of Caymanians. Section 20(1)(e) of the Bill states, “... the Governor, in his opinion finding special reason for so doing, grants such right to him, ...”

This is one of the categories of how one can become a Caymanian. Again, the Opposition has not changed or waived its position that there should be limited amounts, unlike what transpired recently in our Motion to this House where we said six. Of course, that was twisted to try and let the country believe that we only wanted six per year, period. Mr. Speaker, there was nothing further from the truth. I believe that it needs to be looked at.

While I support this Bill and I call on all Caymanians and non-Caymanians to give this Bill a chance to work, and to understand that we will all have difficulties in our future, we at some stage have to live with these people. My appeal to Caymanians is to get out and do what is necessary in order that you do not feel disadvantaged in your own country.

My appeal to the immigrants is to respect our culture: respect that we have our own unique culture. Many of us can tell the difference in the manner we speak; we can walk the streets or go anywhere in this country and identify a Caymanian by his accent; and we can even go as far as knowing the district they come from. I would venture to say that we are capable of doing that with 90 per cent of Caymanians. Certainly, for a long time to come, immigrants in this country, while they might not be accepted as Caymanians, they should be tolerated as a part of the country.

I appeal to both sides to learn to live in harmony and I appeal to the Government to look objectively at Government being exempted from the Law. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be very brief in my remarks as my voice is a bit under the weather and so I certainly will not, even if I wanted to, go on for long.

It is the Christmas season and a few of my colleagues are in the jovial mode, and while in that mood I would first like to thank the Government for bringing this important Bill. I would like to congratulate the Leader of Government Business for bringing a Bill of most important significance to the history of Cayman. We have heard a lot of talk about immigration for a long time and nothing substantial was done, at least certainly not substantial enough to have averted the current “crisis” in immigration, but I will get to that in a minute.

I would like to thank my colleagues who were on the Immigration Review Team. I would like to congratulate all of them for working so diligently to get the work of the review completed in a timely manner because we have also had the penchant in the Cayman Islands to have many reviews of immigration legislation without being able to come to a position where we could come to Legislative Assembly and be able to put forward a comprehensive immigration regime that would serve the country.

I would like to thank Ms. Suzette Ebanks, who served as the Executive Assistant to the Immigration Review Team; Mrs. Sheena Frederick-Westerborg; Mr. Orrett Connor, who was Chief Immigration Officer during his period on the Review Team; the Deputy Chairperson, Mr. Patrick Schmidt; my elected colleague the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, Mr. Lyndon Martin; the Honourable Minister of Health, Mr. Gilbert McLean, who served on the Review Team for the initial period until he assumed his position in the Cabinet; the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Last, but by no means least, I would like to thank Mrs. Sherri-Ann Bodden-Cowan who, as has been said before (but it is worth repeating), really took this task to heart, sometimes too much, perhaps. She certainly lived it with a passion. Mr. Speaker, with everyone being busy, living such a fast life in Cayman these days, without that sort of passion and drive and commitment, we probably would not have reached this point in time if it were not for her grabbing the bulls by the horns in saying, "Ok, team we have a section to do. I am going to draft the section, distribute it, everyone review it and give me your input."

There were certain times when we were in the Legislative Assembly and it was difficult for the Members who served on the Review Team to get to meetings. There were also times when Members travelled. When you look at the background of each of these people, all of whom are successful young Caymanians, therefore, by default, they live extremely busy lives. Again I would like to thank Mrs. Sherri-Ann Bodden-Cowan for the type of stalwart effort and dedication that she put in to this process. I will always remember, as she continues to say, she is interested in this for one reason and it is for her children.

At the end of the day, when we look at the current crisis in immigration in the Cayman Islands, there could be no greater reason for us to have reached this stage and be able to propose now an Immigration Bill that is going to allow us to not repeat the errors of the past.

This country is still in excess of 5,000 people who have been here over ten years. That is a significant number, given the fact that we have a population of only 40,000 people. Twelve and a half per cent of our population have been here for over ten years and have no legal security within the country. If tomorrow the Immigration Board decided they were not going to issue a work permit to that person; if tomorrow an employer said he is going to revoke the work permit, more than likely those people would have to leave this country, irrespective of their contribution and dedication to the Cayman Islands.

I would like to cover four very brief points: Firstly, to look at the general philosophy of what this Bill is trying to achieve from the point of view of the Immigration Review Team and our deliberations. I would like to touch on this whole issue of the civil service and whether or not they should be covered by this Law at this particular point in time. I would also like to look very closely at two sections in the Law; term limits and the transitional provisions.

The Review Team had much to look back on by way of recent work that was done regarding review of immigration. We had the Vision 2008 immigration Review Round Table Report, we had two select committees of this entire House reports, all of which included public input. The public was invited to make their views known. We had all those materials available to us. We also had the immigration regimes in numerous countries to look at in order to try and craft something that would suit Cayman, to draw on ideas that seem to work elsewhere once we felt it could work in the Cayman context.

Given all of that, we felt very comfortable as a legislature that we did not need to have the type of select committee process that seemed to always bog down the immigration process, to stall and effectively kill it. Therefore, no change came and with each passing day more and more people were here for longer and longer periods of time and the cry grew louder and louder for security of tenure.

I think there are many people in the Cayman Islands who do feel as though, when it comes to security of tenure, that we do not owe anyone anything because they have come here on a work permit and they understand that. While legally and technically that is true, I think the vast majority of Caymanians do appreciate and recognise and feel within themselves that the right thing to do is to grant security of tenure to long-term and/or deserving citizens. We must always remember that persons could be here for 30 years and their impact could be a whole lot less than those who have only been here a year or two. It is based on how much those persons decide they want to integrate and to be a part of and assist in nation-building with us in the Cayman Islands; hence, that distinction is critical. You are not just talking about long-term residents – although that is the issue that is most vexing – but you are talking about security and a clear and progressive system of rights for persons who arrive on the shores of the Cayman Islands. This Bill achieves that monumental and critically important goal. Gone are the days, once we pass this law, where people simply come to Cayman, hang about, wind up being here for 30 or 40 years with no idea in the world whether or not they are going to have their next permit revoked, turned down. We now have a clear system that people can look at and say "these are our duties and obligations once we come to the Cayman Islands: this is how immigration works within the Cayman Islands."

We, on the Immigration Review Team believe that given the numbers we currently have, and given the integration process we have outlined and suggested in our transitional provisions (which are contained in section 50 of the Bill), that if combined with the sheer numbers we currently have we could introduce term limits at this important point in our history; we believe that it was wise and critically important for us to do so.

There are people out there who say term limits are going to destroy their business or their sector within the economy. We hear lawyers and law firms, in particular, talking about the fact that they are no longer going to be able to recruit and retain the brightest minds from outside the Cayman Islands to come and work within their businesses.

What seems to always evade people who hold that opinion, and what always seems, therefore, to be their direct opinion, is that there is not the type of talent within the Cayman Islands from our indigenous stock, that can adequately service their businesses, rise to the rank of partners and be great leaders within that industry. I refuse to accept that. The largest and most successful accounting firm in this Island is run by a Caymanian. The managing partner is a Caymanian. This is an international firm that boasts of having over a hundred thousand employees globally, yet in the Cayman Islands they could find a Caymanian – in fact four of their five partners are Caymanians – who could be their managing partner and yet there are others in other industries who say they cannot do the same.

Legislative action, in my humble submission, should always be the last resort because people should make it through life; people should be successful based on their individual merits, based on their effort. However, there comes a point in time where the legislators have to look at their economy and their business sectors and decide if there is the type of prejudice within certain industries that should cause concern.

I believe this entire country, not just this legislature, does feel that there are certain industries in the Cayman Islands that do not give Caymanians across the board the type of opportunity to succeed; the type of structured approach that allows success.

When I say structured support, it means that when a person comes into the office he is given the staff handbook that shows where he is at the associate level; the core competencies; and the skills he has to develop to become a senior associate or to be a partner.

I can remember before getting my scholarship in 1990 from Price Waterhouse: in my interview the first thing that I was given was my career handbook which showed a general timeline and all the skills and prerequisite experience and qualifications that were needed to be promoted to the various ranks within that firm. Mr. Speaker, that is the type of support system and infrastructure that I am talking about. We have certain firms in this Island in other professions who do not give this type of structure to the Caymanians; they shift the goal posts continually and create rules and levels and bars to suit a particular situation in order that a particular person might not achieve a certain level of seniority.

That is the type of behaviour that should cause concern for all of us Mr. Speaker, because then you start to get the festering of this feeling of who are we developing for? Who are we having all this growth for? In any country if the indigenous population does not reasonably feel as though they have a fair opportunity through – again, Mr. Speaker, I say through their hard work; through their study; and through their effort to make it. They should not be given anything simply because they are Caymanian, but because they are willing to work hard; because they are talented and they deserve it.

When we look at section 49 of the Bill we see a provision and with your permission may I read it, Sir?

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Section 49 reads: “During the currency of a work permit, the holder of that work permit may not be promoted or re-designated without having applied for and re- ceived the approval of the Board, and the Board in considering the application –

- (a) shall satisfy itself that the employer has complied with the requirements of the Business Staffing Plan, if any; and
- (b) shall have regard to the effect that such promotion or re-designation would have on the opportunity for advancement to that level, of qualified Caymanians already engaged in the same profession or capacity within that business enterprise.”

In the current law there is a similar practice. Section 49 is serving to try and tighten up and ensure that Caymanians are not unfairly overlooked for promotion opportunities.

I agree with some of the things said by the Elected Member for East End, but this is one area that I do not agree with him on. I do believe that there is much in this Bill that is about Caymanians and for Caymanians. Section 49 is of critical importance to Caymanians. Section 49 is there for Caymanians. It is not there for non-Caymanians. When you read section 49(b) it clearly says that the Board will consider Caymanians and the impact the promotion of a non-Caymanian would have on the opportunity of a Caymanian to rise and progress within that business enterprise.

Term limits; why term limits and why now? As I outlined earlier, because we have not had any natural roll-over within the work permit sector in the Cayman Islands, we have had this huge build-up. When the Review Team was doing our work, there were some 6,700 work permit holders who had been here over 10 years. I draw reference to the fact that we only have 25,000 workers in the Cayman Islands. This is a very material number when you compare that to the workforce, which is in excess of 25 percent, in excess of 1 in every 4. Therefore, because we understood that if you left the system alone all that would happen was that you would eventually integrate all those people, but everyone else who is coming through the ranks would wind up in the same situation 10 years from now.

Who comes to the Cayman Islands and wants to leave? There are some, but they are few and far apart. Once people come to the Cayman Islands they love it and they want to stay. Given the fact that we have accumulated quite a big base that offers us the type of base to increase our population to a reasonable level, to integrate a reasonable number of people, there could be no better time for term limits. Term limits now allow persons to know what their rights are when they come to the Cayman Islands. This is about fairness not only to Caymanians but fairness to the non-Caymanians who come here. This is about fairness for all when it comes to immigration in the Cayman Islands.

There are also those who, either without reading and understanding the entire Bill or just being downright mischievous, have drawn reference to the fact and compared our Bill to Bermuda where Bermuda instituted term limits and they have had difficulties with them. However, as I said, the Immigration Review Team had the Bermuda Law and knew the situation, and we were certainly not going to be silly enough to bring to this country a system that seemed to have difficulties in another jurisdiction that is somewhat similar to Cayman. Our term-limit system is flexible in that it involves a key person provision which allows certain types of people to be able to make it through and be exempted from the term limit.

Hence, this argument, that if a person is so significant and could be such a great contributor to the Cayman Islands, that a business would not have the opportunity to hire or retain that person, is false. The term-limit system that we have gives the opportunity for a person to qualify. On the one hand, persons – often non-Caymanians – have said that term limits were going to be detrimental. On the other hand, from Caymanian quarters, the argument was made that this window being left open could run into the whole area of abuse.

No piece of legislation is going to be perfect. Given the nature of our economy and our society and what it is that we try to achieve in the Cayman Islands with our service-based economy, no system is going to be perfect. A perfect piece of legislation is not necessarily going to be crafted. We, present and future legislatures, have to ensure that we put the types of people on our Immigration Board who are going to carry out this Law effectively, and who are not going to allow the Law to be abused.

This is our country and this is something that we simply have to do, therefore I will not even go any further into that point, because I am confident as a Caymanian that we know how to run our country how to make it successful. Just look at what we have achieved with the base population in this country thus far. This Immigration Bill is going to allow us and help us to achieve greater things in the future.

With regard to the transitional provisions, we again see that we have a clear and fair system to deal with people who are currently in the Cayman Islands. For anyone who has been here over 15 years and who is not successful in acquiring Caymanian status under the last quota under the current Law, we see that under section 50(2)(e) of the Bill those persons are going to be given the opportunity to apply for permanent residency. I know that this has been a major concern within the community.

There are many Caymanians who have friends, work colleagues, there are many non-Caymanians themselves who are in this situation who have come to me (and I am sure that they have come to other members of the Legislative Assembly) and said, "Well, if I do not make it under the next quota which is only 600, then what is going to happen to me?" If you look at that subsection it recognises the tenure of those persons who will be given the opportunity to apply for permanent residency with the right to work. However, the qualifying provisions state that this application be determined by the Board and in so doing, the Board will consider if the person is of good character, has made a positive economic contribution to the community and has shown a willingness to be assimilated into the community. Unless there are exceptional circumstances he/she shall be granted permanent residency.

That section is worded that way because we have to go along the lines of logic. The logic has to be, if persons have been in the Cayman Islands for 15 years or more, that they have not caused major problems within the country, but again this section does give the Board the opportunity to refuse that application if the person, for some strange reason, had been one of those who had slipped through the cracks, who caused problems and yet continued to get work permits given or approved in their name. Between 10-15 years (which also falls into the eight years and over group), those persons will also be able to apply for a grant of Caymanian status under this final quota, and for those who are not successful in that, they are under the new Law, and within three years of the commencement of the new Law, will have the opportunity to apply for permanent residency but under a point system. This goes along the lines of what I outlined earlier – a progressive immigration bill. We are going to craft the types of categories that we feel are important considerations before a person should be allowed to permanent reside in the Cayman Islands. That person will be graded based on their application on those specific criteria, and they either pass or they fail.

The one fear out there, especially among persons who are in the non-professional category of non-Caymanian workers, is that if they do not have a home or property that they would not be able to pass the point system. That, too, is not true because the point system is going to look at all major contributions, not just money, and the ability to buy land; not just the ability to build a house, but it is also going to look at the contribution made to the community. It is also going to look at how much a person has assimilated in the community and been involved and what their connections are within the community. This Bill provides the type of immigration reform that this country has been thirsty for for all too long.

Persons who have been here seven to eight years would be able to apply for another final work permit, and if it is granted, they too would reach year eight and be allowed to apply for a grant of permanent residence under the point system. There are the persons who are between five to six years who may make another grant for the renewal of a further work permit which again would be at the discretion of the Board of course, for a period that would not exceed three years, and enable that person to then get up to year eight. Therefore, the persons who are caught under section 50(2)(a) would be subjected to the term limit.

At the end of the day the Immigration Review Team felt as though we needed to allow integration but we had to ensure that there was not just a free-for-all wide-open system. I do not believe, in a community of this size, that was a sustainable or a sensible approach. I believe that these transition provisions are extremely fair and clear. People know where they stand.

I turn lastly to this whole issue of the civil service, Mr. Speaker. While I agree that we should have one country with one immigration system that applies to all persons within the country, we have to be careful that the thought process be somehow skewed to lead people to believe at this point in time that subjecting civil service to work permits is going to cure that problem. I say civil service and not government because people use that word "government" loosely, sometimes wisely, because when you say "government" a lot of times people think of the elected government, but the elected government has no constitutional responsibility administratively for the civil service — that falls under the Governor. It is not our responsibility; it is not the politicians who will decide or who will cause (as has been said by other speakers) certain Caymanians in the civil service to be purportedly treated unfairly.

Subjecting the civil service to work permits is not going to cure that problem. We hear the same cries from Caymanians in banks, in accounting firms, in law firms, in restaurants, in every facet of our community we hear Caymanians say, "We are not being treated fairly; we are not having the opportunity to progress; we are not having the opportunity of training that we should have to be able to make the most that we can out of our lives."

Why is it that we, all of a sudden, believe that if we subject the civil service to work permits that everything is going to be all rosy, all hunky-dory, all Caymanians are going to rise to the top, all Caymanians' lives are going to be peachy-creamy and we will live happily ever after?

That is simply not true, Mr. Speaker. I believe that the speakers who spoke earlier were very unfair in terms of painting one side of the picture. My wife worked in the civil service and I know the experience that she had, and I know the decision she made as a very young person to leave the civil service, and have to pay back a government bond of over $20,000, which if she had stayed for 18 more months she would not have had to do. However, her life was so miserable that she just could not take it any longer. Therefore, I understand these things and I have seen these things up close.

Again, having the civil service subjected to work permits is not going to cure that. As I said earlier, the previous speakers did not also paint the picture that when you look across the civil service, we do have many Caymanians in various senior posts. Look at our permanent secretaries, Collective Customs, the former Chief Immigration Officer and the designate

Chief Immigration Officer, the head of the Company Registry, head of the Education Department, the Statutory Authorities are all headed up by young Caymanians. Mr. Speaker, human resource issues in the Civil Service need to be addressed and dealt with under the Public Service reform that is currently on the way.

I am of the view that it would not be wise to now subject the Civil Service to yet another level of bureaucracy without the benefit of that review. A question was asked, "After a review has taken place how are you going to force the civil service to do it?" The last time I checked, drafting laws is not rocket science and unless the Honourable Attorney General would correct me, I believe that provisions within the new Public Service Bill could simply say "persons who are applying for jobs to be awarded to non-Caymanians would be subject to the provisions of the Immigration Law." Perhaps I am an accountant and look at the Law too simply but that would seem to be able to cover us. Therefore, I do not think there needs to be any huge alarm that the current Bill does not cover civil servants.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, I might add that in the First Interim Report of the Immigration Review Team, which was signed off by all members of the Review Team which included government members, elected members, and elected members from the Opposition, we said on page 15 it is recommended that Government continue under the new Law to be exempted from the requirement to apply for work permits in respect of its employees.

However, the IRT is of the view that Government employees whether contracted or not, should be subject to term limits. To exclude Government employees from the term-limit provisions would create anomalies in the system that would include discrimination between the private and public sector and perpetuate existing immigration difficulties that the new term limit provisions seek to address.

Clearly, the one area that the Review Team did feel should be included or applicable to the civil service was the whole issue of term limits. Again, I believe the personnel reform that is on the way, hopefully, will be concluded in the not too distant future and will allow us to be able to look at this situation and deal with it. I do not believe that there needs to be any strong alarm.

When we look at this Bill and at immigration, I think it is important for all members in the country to realise that this, yet again, is another difficult and nationally important issue which the United Democratic Party Government has addressed. It has grabbed the bull by the horns, twisted them around and said "Come here, you are under control because we provide this country with decisive and strong visionary leadership." Popularity cannot be won, as far as I am concerned, with immigration.

Throughout the world, every time governments touch immigration in any country, we see that controversy clearly ensues because the incumbent people always feel threatened any time the status quo is changed. Look at the United States, a country that is as large as that country is; whenever immigration is touched, it causes alarm.

We did not go into this believing somehow that we were going to come with an immigration law that was going to be a big political winner. We came to this Immigration Law because it was the right thing to do for ourselves, for our children, for our grandchildren. This Immigration Bill deserves the support of not only all Members in this House, it deserves the support of the entire Caymanian community. Those people on the outside who continue to be detractors against this Immigration Law I believe, in my humble submission, are either just missing the point or are not acting in the best interests of the Cayman Islands. This Immigration Law is needed. I am going to be extremely proud someday to look back and to have been a part of a government who brought about this milestone change in immigration.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I too, like my colleague from the district of West Bay, the Second Elected Member, am very proud to be a part of this process to bring about a change, a new Immigration Law. Like previous speakers I would like to thank the Immigration Review Team, that I was a part of, and its leader Mrs. Cowan for her guidance, expertise, enthusiasm and knowledge; and all members of that time. I think the end result is one that we can all be proud of. I have a very short contribution to make to this very important Bill.

It is a new day in the Cayman Islands and a bright day. I have spoken on many occasions in this parliament on the economic model of the Cayman Islands and the importance of immigration, education and labour management towards our continuation and our evolution as a nation. I will not bore this parliament by repeating this model but would simply say that today we are about to pass a very important ingredient into what makes the Cayman Islands economic model work.

It is a bright day for the Cayman Islands because we have seen evidence of a very co-ordinated, managed, strategic attempt to bring the Cayman Islands into the next millennium, onto the next plateau. We have not simply come with just the Immigration Law – this is only one part of the great big puzzle. Simultaneously, the Government is bringing about Employment Reform legislation in the Cayman Islands. The Minister of Education has announced to this parliament and this nation his introduction of a university in the Cayman Islands in the very near future, the upgrade of the community college to ensure that we are educating our “well-established” (as he referred to them) Caymanians, or, as we know them, the “indigenous” Caymanians to equip them, to gear them, to compete in this market. He is also looking at larger education reform, investing greatly into education infrastructure, the introduction of the Italic System to ensure that we are properly educating our people to be able to compete in this market head-to-head with any nationality.

As a young Caymanian, and one who is part of this Honourable Legislative Assembly, I am proud to see the transition that we have made, even in this parliament, where we have young qualified Caymanians representing the people of this country. It shows me that we have evolved to a point, as a nation, where we are now ready to take on the immigration issue, to simply say we are putting term limits, requirements in place, to ensure that our Caymanians are given a balance between being protected under the legislation and that they are given opportunities because it would become financially and strategically prudent for the employers in this country to look at the Caymanian employees for their long-term development.

The Government has also looked at the development of vocational training in this country. Recently, the United Democratic Party Government, under the leadership of the Minister of Education, held a vocational training convention (the VOTECH programme), again looking at gearing our Caymanians to be able to compete in this market place. We have tabled in this Legislative Assembly very aggressive Employment Reform Legislation that will seek to provide protection for the employees of this country. All of these things move together and for the first time in the modern history of the Cayman Islands the country can see that the country is being moved in one direction with all parts of Government coming together to ensure that the Caymanian people are protected and that our nation remains competitive.

I would like to congratulate previous administrations, including that headed by the now Leader of the Opposition, for starting many reviews. Yes, they all started, but it took the United Democratic Party under the leadership of the Leader of Government Business to bring this issue to finality. Therefore, when the Opposition attempt to draw and to partner themselves with this effort, I thank them because they should. It is a good effort, but it is the United Democratic Party who brought this issue to finality, to the point where a Bill is before this House which will soon be passed into Law in the Cayman Islands.

I recently attended the review sessions with teachers at the two schools my children attend. As a parent, I felt proud that my children performed well. I also look to their future to ensure that when they come to an age that they want to enter into employment in this country, that they are given a fair opportunity. Therefore, like the Chairman of the Immigration Review Team, my motivation as a member of the Review Team in supporting this Bill before the House is not me; it is not other members of this parliament; it is not politics; it is our children.

Like my colleague from West Bay stated, I was a bit dismayed at the Member for East End's assertion that this Bill has nothing to do with him; that this Bill does not affect him; that it does not affect Caymanians. Mr. Speaker, nothing could be further from the truth. This Bill governs how our labour market works because it controls and gives guidance to a very large component of the labour market. Accordingly, I urge the Opposition in this House not to be guided by such insular thinking, and I hope that that thought is isolated to one fifth of their parliamentary representation. He also asserted that it was not Caymanians' responsibility to go out and integrate. Integration, by its definition, has to be a two-sided action and I urge all Caymanians —

Point of Order

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Elected Member for East End, would you state your Point of Order.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I know it may not be intentional, however, the Member is misleading the House because I did not say that it is not my intention, it is not my responsibility to go out and integrate. I said while I have certain responsibilities, the immigrant has a greater responsibility.

The Speaker: I am not quite sure that that is a legitimate Point of Order. I think it is more elucidating the point that you had made. Honourable Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, I would ask that you move on to another point in your debate.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Immigration Bill before us has many components that I am extremely excited about as a Caymanian. I am a Caymanian that truly loves Cayman and everything Caymanian. I like and always like to be associated with Caymanians. There are certain components that I have chosen for the sake of brevity of my presentation to elaborate on and I will go towards those points at this moment.

Previously, student visas were not covered under our legislation, and there was nothing in our past Immigration Law that guided student visas. This particular Bill adds student visas under section 78 and I think together with the recent introduction of St. Mathews University, the intention of converting the community college to a full four-year university, the continued development of the International College of the Cayman Islands, and the introduction of other learning institutions, it is very important that this aspect be added. It adds to our marketability as a country for people to come and study. I take this opportunity to elaborate on that point on its inclusion into this Bill.

As a British Overseas Territory we must always be cognisant of the British Nationality Act 1981 and its impact on the Cayman Islands. One of the future development issues that faces the constituency of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that I represent, is our ability to attract individuals to reside and retire on our islands, and to add foreign investments into our islands. Hopefully, these are individuals who will come and add to, but not necessarily compete for, the few jobs that we have available. However, we must always be careful to create that balance, because individuals who come to the country and become settled under the British Nationality Act have various entitlements; "settled" is defined as living without immigration control and restrictions. Hence, this Law introduces the Residents Certificate which has an expiry date of 25 years, and creates immigration control and restriction, and prohibits individuals from classifying as settled in the jurisdiction. Therefore, for my constituency, which hopes to attract these wealthy retirees, these entrepreneurs to make investments into the country, this particular section is very important to us.

I first would like to applaud the section for the introduction of Residential Certificates for retirees, and Residential Certificates for entrepreneurs creating the 25-year certificate; it allows us to go out and promote Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as a location that individuals of substantial means can come to and retire in. The section gives quite stringent guidelines that these individuals should have attained the age of 55, have no dependents under the age of 16, and be able to satisfy the requirements of this section, which include having substantial means of income to support themselves without employment.

The reports from the Immigration Review Team, which this Bill is based on, also recommended, and I am informed will be coming in the regulation section, that these enabling components of this legislation will be modified under the regulations to make special provision for Cayman Brac by giving lower thresholds that individuals could qualify for permanent residence certificates of 25 years. Under the enabling section 33(3) it says,

- “(a) he has a continuous source of annual income in the prescribed amount without the need to engage in employment in the Islands;
- (b) he has invested the prescribed sum in developed residential real estate in the Islands; and
- (c) he has made other local investments in the prescribed amount.”

These prescribed amounts under the regulations will be different for Grand Cayman versus Cayman Brac. The amounts will be lower for Cayman Brac to give greater incentive for individuals to take up permanent residence in Cayman Brac.

Cayman Brac needs individuals who are not competing for the jobs, but spending in our grocery stores, buying at our gas stations, spending money in our community, and have taken up residence. It is my position, and the position of the Government, that Cayman Brac is ideally suited to market itself for such retired individuals because we have the infrastructure sitting there waiting for such development. It is a development that will blend nicely with the long-term aims and objectives for Cayman Brac, as stated under the Vision 2008 document that was well prescribed to by the Cayman Brac community.

Therefore, this particular section and the second section 35(1) that deals with Residential Certificates for entrepreneurs and investors make me very excited for the people that I represent, because such certificates allow these individuals to come, — not on visitors' visas as they currently come; they come and they stay and they get three months stamped in their passports and must go to Miami for a day to turn around to come back for another three months or four months without any security — stay at their homes they have built and developed, to garden their yards without the worry of immigration. It will allow them to stay; to spend a longer period of time; to invest more money in the Island; to contribute, through their involvement in the non-profit organisations and the service clubs allowing them to become a greater part of our community. This particular section of the legislation is one that I am quite pleased with.

I would like to mention at this point, that as part of the review process, the Immigration Review Team went over to Cayman Brac, and met with members of the Immigration Board of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and canvassed them for their input and suggestions. This is one of the outcomes from that discussion. I mention that point to simply elaborate that it included input from the island of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that I represent.

The Bill before us is one that can add greatly to our continued development and our evolution as a nation. It is one that I am proud to have been a part of. It is one that I would like to congratulate the Government on bringing about. I would like to once more state that it is simply one component of a full array of efforts being made by the Government that will ultimately result in a better Cayman for our children and for their children. Mr. Speaker, I strongly recommend this Bill to this country and to this Parliament. I thank you for your time.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other any Member wish to speak? If not, I would invite the Honourable Leader of Government Business to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to thank all Members who participated in the debate and all others who did not speak. The Opposition did not have any substantial changes to offer to the Bill although there are a number of areas they raised to which I will reply. I would like to begin my response by addressing the technical points made by the Leader of the Opposition prior to addressing the general, and often misleading, comments made by the Opposition.

Turning to the Bill, I will quote from each clause of the Bill without referring to the Bill after each clause. The Leader of the Opposition made some minor technical points which he felt should be clarified in the Bill. We, too, agree that where there are areas of uncertainty they should be clarified in committee. However, the changes are minor and do not change the substance of the Bill or Government's intentions.

In the definition clause, particularly that dealing with "professional employee" as can be seen from the list of professions a professional employee is someone who has a profession as a result of a post-graduate qualification or tertiary education.

For clarity we could exclude the discretion of the Board to add "professions" and state that if there are other categories of professions they need to be prescribed by regulation.

I see that most of the Opposition are absent and I guess when we go the committee they are going to expect me to repeat all that I will say now. I am giving notice that that will not happen because the Opposition do this too often. They speak and then they do not want to hear what anyone else has to say and they leave the room and the poor Member from Bodden Town all by himself. When it comes to committee stage we will simply put our amendments without any repetition.

In the definition clause and the aspect dealing with keepers, referring to keepers of accommodation, the definition could be limited to keepers of accommodation licensed under the Tourism Law. This ensures that whereas hotel keepers, condominium managers, guest houses, and the like, will have to keep records, not everyone who rents a room will be legally obliged to keep a list. It is important to note that clause 71(2) which talks about keepers has a marginal note as follows: "Register to be kept and particulars furnished by hotel keepers and others."

This clearly indicates to whom it is intended this requirement should apply; the legal and ordinary resident. The Opposition said, Mr. Speaker, that ordinary residence was not defined but it has been defined. It was recommended by various qualified lawyers through their association that the definition used throughout the law should be "legally and ordinarily resident". This Bill uses this uniform term throughout all clauses. It is defined in the definition clause as, "Legal and ordinary residence" means the voluntary, physical presence in the Islands for a period of time without legal impediment of a person

(other than a tourist visitor or transit passenger) during which period he regards the Islands as his normal place of abode for the time being, save that absences abroad for purposes of education, health or business during such period shall count as residents in the Islands;”.

I think that makes it very clear and I do not understand why the Opposition would say otherwise.

On the matter of a step-child, it has already been pointed out that the legislation passed last week in this Honourable House, The Status of Children Law, subsequent to the Immigration Bill being approved and published makes it necessary to delete the following words from the definition of step-child; “... born in wedlock to a previous marriage of such party;”

It also means that section 20(2)(c) will have to be changed from the Legitimation Law (1997 Revision) to The Status of Children Law 2003.

In clause 8(4)(c), of course, it was intended that the quorum at a meeting of the Boards will be made up voting members. I know that the Member went on quite a bit about that, however, we will add the word “voting” between the words “five” and “members”.

In clause 18(3) we agree that there should be reasonable time within which a person should expect a response from the Board giving reasons for the rejection of their application. We are suggesting the following words be added to this clause: “within thirty days of making a decision”.

I do not think I have a quorum; perhaps the Serjeant could call those Members who like to sit outside while they are being responded to.

Standing Order 13 (2) Objection to Quorum not present

The Speaker: Serjeant, would you please ask the Members in the Common Room to come in to form a quorum?

[Pause]

The Speaker: Honourable Member, please continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: As I was saying, regarding clause 8(4)(c), the Opposition had raised a question on a matter of quorum. Of course, it was intended that the quorum at the meeting of the Board would be made up of voting members. We will add the word “voting” between the words “five” and “members”.

In clause 18(3) we agreed that there should be reasonable time within which a person should expect a response from the Board giving reasons for the rejection of their application. We are suggesting the following words be added to this clause: “within thirty days of making a decision”

I should say that these minor amendments should be circulated by now for committee stage amendments. I am hoping that they would soon have them in your hands.

Clause 20(1)(e); we are confident that with the combination of the clean-up exercise undertaken by the Government earlier this year in the grants of status, and the introduction of this new legislation, this will mean that grants through the Governor in Cabinet would not need to be done in the numbers seen earlier this year. Of course, the Opposition could not refrain from getting into that earlier debate. I should say that none of us can know the future. We do not know when or in what circumstances special reasons for making a grant of status through the Cabinet may arise. We are the duly elected Government. Any Cabinet making such decisions would also be the duly elected Government of the Islands. This right has existed in the immigration laws for decades and we do not believe that it would be in the best interest of the country to limit such right going forward from here.

No matter what the Opposition might say, the impression they gave to the public of this country was that they were only going to do six. They knew what they were doing because they knew it was an emotive issue and they wanted to stir up people. They did that and they succeeded in doing it but what good did it do to the country; what good did it do them; what good will it do the future? They have now come and talked from both sides of their mouth in regard to status and rights for people and what people should and should not get. They should be ashamed of themselves. I will deal with that before I am finished.

Clause 21(a) and (b). The Leader of the Opposition stated that he is concerned with the words: “(a) born after the commencement of this Law ...”

He claims this will result in previous rights of children under the Repeal Law being lost. I cannot understand why in the world he would make that assumption. It is nothing like fact; I would suggest that he reads clause 21(c), the definition of “Caymanian” clause 20(1)(a) and clause 103(4).

All of these clauses repeatedly save the rights of all persons, children or adults, acquired under the 2003 Law or any earlier law. Therefore, how can the Opposition expect a new section with new provisions to make apply to children born before this definition existed? It makes no sense whatsoever.

Clause 22(7) says, “... but such right to reside shall be lost upon the applicant’s remarriage.”

I know they went to town on that one. It was always been the case that such a right would be lost upon remarriage. It is contained in the old regulations. It would be dangerous for someone to marry a Caymanian and after, even one day, if that Caymanian died they could obtain permanent residence and then re-marry a non-Caymanian right away. The residency was intended to assist widowers who were on their own following the death of a Caymanian spouse, but in view of Human Rights issues we will remove these words from the end of the subclause.

In clauses 23(e)(ii) we accept that the word “respectable” should be removed when referring to Caymanians. Clearly, the intention of the Bill and the previous law was to ensure that Caymanian referees were persons of good character. Since Caymanians are respectable, we propose simply to remove the words so that subsection would now read;

Clause 28(2)(b) and clause 35 state that whereas we share the Opposition’s concerns regarding the danger of permitting wealthy investors and entrepreneurs to settle in the Island and compete against Caymanian business, the grant of a 25-year certificate by the Chief Immigration Officer would not give such people the right to start up and own their own business in competition with Caymanians. I do not know how, again, the Opposition can make that kind of assumption. That is just the Opposition misleading and they know better. I hear the Member across the floor talking about people understanding. He does not have a prerogative on all the brains in this House you know.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, if prerogative is not the right word then he does have the brains in the House. Is that clear enough?

The Local Companies Control Law would not permit such persons to become the majority owners of a business. The only business these people could invest in would be a Caymanian business to the benefit of the Caymanian who owns that business. They could only become up to a 40 per cent owner of a business unless they were granted a local companies control law licence. Hence, it is not going to be where they just up and get a certificate and means that they can run around and do any business. That is nonsense for anyone to even have suggested that.

However, I am glad that the Leader of the Opposition raised this matter because it is one that we are looking at. It is not something that we need to fix in this new Immigration Law; we need to ensure that our Trade and Business Licencing Law and the Local Companies Control Law are amended to ensure that all businesses and in particular, certain businesses, are protected for Caymanians. That is what we intend to do. If the entrepreneurs wish to help Caymanians by settling here as residents and investing in our businesses so much the better for us and these Islands.

However, Mr. Speaker, we want the Law to be clear; we therefore, propose to add at committee stage a provision that the grant of permanent residency shall not, of itself, concur any right to a licence for that business under the Local Companies Control Law or the Trade and Business Licensing Law. As I said, any person getting such a certificate does not mean that he has the right to go out and do any business; he will simply get it to have a right to do business but he will have to get a licence to do whatever particular business he wants to do.

Clause 29(1) was mentioned wherein only dependants listed on an application for permanent residence would be considered in an application for a grant of permanent residency.

That is what the clause says; we would not want dependents from overseas who have not resided on the Islands to be included in the application. However, for clarity we proposed at committee stage to do the following:-

1. add the words “resident in the Islands” after the word “dependants” in subclause (1); and
2. in subclause (2), add (e), which would read “the number of dependants listed on the application who would become entitled to reside in the Islands permanently should such application be granted.”

This would clarify the fact that the Board should consider the number of dependants when dealing with any application for permanent residence. It is our view, that in considering an applicant’s ability to support himself, dependants would have to be considered by any Board. This amendment, Mr. Speaker, puts it beyond a reasonable doubt.

In clause 29 (6), where it has been accepted that when a Board revokes a spouse’s right to remain and within three months that spouse applies for a grant in his or her own right, the applicant’s right to reside should continue until application was determined by the Board.

It states the same thing in subclauses 33(6) and 35(5). The same wording will be added at the committee stage as a new subclause (7) to this clause.

Clauses 30(3)(e) was also mentioned. Of course, the Caymanian spouse’s income would be taken into consideration. He or she could write a letter to the Board assuming financial responsibility for his or her spouse. This is what happens now. This would be part of the evidence of the applicant’s financial resources. It does not say his or her salary. Applicants financial resources may come from various sources including their spouse. However, we propose to add the words “and his spouse” in committee to put it beyond a reasonable doubt.

In clause 37(1)(g). the words “his entry into” have been changed to “continued residence” as it is accepted that such persons would already be resident here.

Clauses 32(1)(e) and 32 (3) were also brought into question. It is only right that a person married to a Caymanian should lose a right to a residency and employment right certificate if they divorce, are separated or their marriage has irretrievably broken down. These certificates give persons in genuine marriages to Caymanians serious rights in our country. Remember, they can work wherever they like, for whoever they like without immigration restriction or control. Why would we want to continue that right if the persons are no longer together? I just believe that the Opposition picked up on those points that they figure people would get upset about, and to draw attention to those things, minor though they be,

It is ridiculous to suggest that we should leave it to a Board to decide whose fault it was that the marriage failed. Even the Courts of our Islands have a hard time figuring that out. How could a Board decide such things? I do not think that is the work of the Board. The Leader of the Opposition says he has no answer to his own question. That is just the problem with the People's Progressive Movement; they come up with all these things, and question and nit-pick; they fling out questions having no idea what they want and he admitted that, he says he had no answer to his own question.

We have an answer. It is in Clause 32(2) which says this is provided that if the non-Caymanian spouse loses his or her certificate but has a Caymanian child, he or she can apply for that Certificate to be continued until that child reaches the age of majority.

Otherwise, the answer is if you are in an unhappy marriage and you have no child or children for that person, it is up to you to decide whether to stay and put up with it or leave. These are adults we are talking about who can exercise their own free will. What we cannot do is get rid of the Caymanian spouse, worthless or not, he or she belongs to these Islands. We cannot get rid of them but we must make provisions for any other situation.

It was not the recommendation in clause 38(1)(a)(i), Mr. Speaker. I wish that the Member for George Town, who has so much clack and carries on so much in this House making everybody believe that he has more sense than anybody else, was right in this Chamber at his desk. However, I hope he is in ear-shot because it was not the recommendation of the Immigration Reform Team (IRT) that Government employees be included in this Bill and I do not know how that Member could say that. I will read what they said. This is the recommendation of the First Interim Report of the Immigration Review Team and proposed changes to the Immigration Law 2001 Revision and I quote from page 15. I only have this copy but I can give it to you afterwards. I quote here, in dealing with the adoption of term limits on work permits, says, "It is recommended by the Immigration Review Team that Government continue under the new law to be exempted from the requirement to apply for work permits in respect of its employees".

That is what they said. However, the IRT is of the view that Government employees, whether contracted or not, should also be subject to term limits. As I said, it was not the recommendation of the IRT that Government employees be included in the Bill and we have said that the new Public Service Bill will mirror the requirements of this Bill in its requirements to train and recruit Caymanians. I do not think that he is right at all.

In section 44 the definition at the beginning of the Law states, "appropriate authority" means a body or other entity charged with the responsibility for regulating the particular profession; and the appropriate authority in the case of an application for a work permit-

(a) for an attorney at law, is the Attorney General; and

(b) for a health practitioner, is the Chairman of the Health Practitioner's Board."

There is no intention to consult with any private sector body prior to granting a work permit to a professional. That would not be appropriate for the Board. The only body that would be consulted would be the persons responsible for the regulation of that profession. As I said, the Attorney General (AG) in the case of a lawyer and in the case of some health practitioners someone from the Chairman of the Health Practitioner's Board.

Since not all professions are currently regulated only the Attorney General and the Health Practitioner's Board are currently referred to. In the future, should other regulatory bodies be created for other professionals, then the definition is wide enough to cover those new regulatory bodies.

In clause 46(2)(c) persons authorised by the Business Staffing Plans, applicants whose positions are included in a Business Staffing Plan, we have added the words "whose position" to clarify this. In other words for a person whose work permit position has already been established by the Business Staffing Plan Board there is no reason not to grant them a permit for the same length of the plan which will usually be five years.

In clause 46(4) it is the normal practice of the Board to only grant self-employed work permits to persons who are married to Caymanians and, in exceptional circumstances, only such as for music teachers, musicians, private tutors and nurses. It would be impossible in the law to provide for every possible circumstance which would give rise to the grant of a self-employed work permit. We have however, proposed a committee stage amendment to add a new subclause which provides that only in exceptional circumstances should a self-employed work permit be granted by the Board unless it is to a spouse of a Caymanian who, now that they will be able to apply for a certificate of residency, will probably not need to apply for a work permit.

The second Elected Member for George Town ended his contribution by challenging the wording of Clause 47(3) pointing out that it was not the same as the wording recommended by the Immigration Review Team. As I said in my address in opening this debate, the first draft of this Bill has gone through an intense period of public consultation. What quickly became evident as he admitted, is that across the Board the private sector rejected the definition, recommended by the Immigration Review Team, for a key person as being too stringent. It gave employers very little, if any hope for ever having an employee appointed as a key employee.

In addition, the private sector could point to the fact, as someone mentioned already, that the IRT definition was taken directly almost word for word from the Bermuda legislation where that particular definition has proved unhelpful and has been deemed by many in their industries in that country, and in the international press also, to be a failure. We understood that the wording used by the IRT was the only wording that could be found to exist in any other jurisdictions and so it was agreed that the advice of the private sector in redrafting these provisions should be sought. Recommendations were made by many organisations and associations including the one that the Second Elected Member for George Town is a Member of. At least the legal one, maybe he is in another association. It is ridiculous for him to say that every work permit holder has a particular expertise in their field. The word particular means "special". How could every member of the work force who is unskilled, that is, 35 per cent of the persons working in the hotels, the dive shops, the hairdressers, even all accountants, lawyers, teachers, or doctors, show that they have special or particular expertise in their field?

I agree that the interpretation will depend on the Board. That is true of the original definition also. Under the old definition, a Board could have identified everyone as a key employee or exempted, that would defeat the purpose of the Law. That is not, however, something that can be dealt with in the legislation. The important thing is; that we now have a provision which the private sector and the Government feel will achieve our intention and is one which we can work with.

However, where the section refers to, or will be in quotes, we propose to add the words "at the time of his employment in the Islands". This will make it abundantly clear that it will not be enough for an employer to show that an existing employee may at some point in the future develop these skills, but that if they are here they already possess those skills or that at the time they arrive in the Island they will have those skills. While we have made it clear in this Bill that Caymanians must be trained and promoted, it is of paramount importance that this country continues to attract high calibre and specialist skills to the Islands if our industries are to continue to succeed.

I do not want it left where that particular Member from George Town made it sound like we were leaving out young Caymanians and not giving them ample opportunity or protection because the criteria for the consideration and grant of work permits ensures protection of Caymanians and as I said in opening it is fundamental that the new law sets this criteria which ensures that no Caymanian who is able, willing and qualified, is deprived either directly or indirectly of gainful occupation. There must be a requirement that employers provide Caymanians with proper training and the opportunity to be promoted to the highest level possible according to their ability. There needs to be greater clarity of what is an important consideration in the new law and comprehensive provisions made requiring that prior to the grant or renewal of a work permit it shall be the duty of the Board to satisfy itself of certain stringent criteria both in relation to the employer and the worker. This Bill gives us that kind of protection for our people.

We did say that Caymanians will be protected through the Business Staffing Plans. As I said, I do not want it left in the air from that Member's debate which sounded like the Government was not offering that protection to young Caymanians. A new and improved Business Staffing Plan system will ensure that employers are training Caymanians and putting in place proper succession planning for the medium to long-term future.

Any company, partnership or firm of over 15 work permits, must submit a plan to the Board containing certain information listed in the Regulations within 12 months of the new law coming into effect. Upon receipt of this business plan the new Business Staffing Plan Board will consider each plan with any agreed amendments and issue of business staffing plan certificate. This will ensure that work permit holders filling key positions are designated as exempted employees, meaning, as I said earlier, that they will be exempted from the fixed term policy of seven years. This is a better system of dealing with work permits for large to medium-sized businesses, thus our people will be protected.

No professional in any company, firm or partnership operating within the Islands would be made a shareholder or partner whether an equity partner or not until an application for a change of occupation has been made to the Board and the Board has approved such change to become a partner. It is not going to be as easy as it was before to deny people and just move certain people up. They will now have to apply to the Board and in considering such an application all employers must be able to satisfy the Board that they have established an adequate training and sponsorship program to ensure that Caymanians are being trained in that particular profession. The Board must also have regard to the effect that such change of occupation would have on the opportunity for advancement to partner level of qualified Caymanians already engaged in the same profession within that company, firm or partnership.

We would not want it left in the air to sound the way it did from the debate of the Member for George Town who likes to do that, to leave things unclear, to make it look like the Government is not protecting Caymanians and be that as far from the truth as east is from west. This Law will guarantee that our young professional Caymanians do not get left behind or lost in those firms. They will have to be considered as a matter of priority for partnerships. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I would like the Second Member for George Town to go out and spread that word.

The Second Member for George Town went on at length, and as I listened to him I realised he was trying to put salve on the many areas they had debated in the past several weeks on immigration, in particular the grant of status. However, they were trying to put salve on the many hard words the Opposition had spoken about people and their children who had received Caymanian status. I recognised he was pandering to the gallery, but their hard words and accusations and downright falsehoods will not be easily forgotten by all the good people whom we had the courage, as a Government, to ensure their security of tenure in this country. This Government only had the courage to clean up a mess that we inherited. It was the right thing to do.

I just want to read one letter from a priest who received Caymanian status.

“May I take this opportunity to thank you and all others involved in the decision to grant to me Caymanian Status. It is an exceptional honour which in effect has made me the first “Caymanian” priest of the Catholic Church in history. I assure you, I will always be true to the Cayman Islands.

“Upon reflection, that which The Government in Cabinet has undertaken is quite remarkable. It is, I believe, part of an historical process, which began with the liberating works of Wilberforce and others, one hundred and seventy years ago. The abolition of slavery, and the attempts to establish a universal franchise, initialled a period of debate, anger, consternation and even disbelief. Despite these things, the actions of the government, and others, were a truthful recognition of human dignity and right. It was a protection of those with no possibility of being heard. It was the responsible and just thing to do. It was for the common good.

“As I, a priest, think upon these things in twenty first century Cayman, it is as the though the “Anawim” of today, “the little ones, the poor, those without a voice,” have been similarly protected. Fortunately, your decision does not demand the intervention of the Royal Navy, but there will, I am sure, be a great deal of debate and discussion for some time to come. You have nevertheless secured a place in history, and Caymanians will learn of these things five hundred years from now.”

I would like to table that letter, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Opposition can carry on as much as they like. We believe that we have done the right thing in granting those statuses. Their problem is they do not know what to do when they get in a problem like that. They want the support from those people, and they want to kick the Government for doing it, therefore they have, at all times, got themselves in a confused state and say things that they have to come to this Honourable House and try to put salve on or try to correct – like the aspect of the six people, the impression they left when they made that statement, in the first instance, was that was what they were going to do.

Therefore, the Second Member for George Town, while trying to be kind at times, could not resist his bad habit of criticising for the sake of criticism. He had the audacity to criticise or chastise the Government for bringing this Bill this late. You know, Mr. Speaker, I had to listen to that Member and the audacity and hypocrisy of him.

We have been in office since November 2001. I want to add here, for those of us who were in Cabinet will recall, I hear him exalting and talking about his (the Leader of the Opposition) starting this process. He went on quite a bit about that. What I recall was that what was first proposed by the Leader of the Opposition when he was the Leader of Government Business was another select committee of the House, and we all said “No, no more select committees, take all the reports of the House: the Vision 2008 and other material, and set up a committee to make proposals for reform”. We chose the Chairman, there and then, not him. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, do not leave it with any cloud, or any act of valour, what the First Member for George Town did as Leader of Government Business, because that is not what he started. That was not the first proposal.

We have been in office since November 2001. In fact, I would like the Members to listen to this. The Immigration Review Team, of which he was a part, did not finish the work until late this year. He, who yaps so much, did not sign the last report until about two or three weeks ago. So, Mr. Speaker, how could the Government have brought this Bill earlier, I ask that Member? Why does he not be true to himself, and if he cannot be true to himself, be true to this Honourable House?

I recognise that this Member will do anything, anywhere, to try to make me and the Government look bad, even when he is grinning the place down with some Members of the Government. However, that will not help him because people have seen that Member coming from the time he stepped off the dock.

I listened to that Member chastising Government for the provisions in the Bill and the proposals for the Constitution in regard to the giving or granting of Caymanian status and membership of the Assembly. How can that Member talk so much about Government giving people status yet say it takes away privileges for Caymanians and disadvantages Caymanians and further to say that we should change the present provisions of who can and cannot run in the current Constitution?

If that Member – I will include the whole People’s Progressive Movement – if they are talking about protecting Caymanians, do you want to really open the door for all and sundry to gain entrance to a seat in this Honourable House? They must stop talking out of both sides of their mouths. They must stop being hypocritical. They are not protecting Caymanians in that way. Really, they are fooling no one. Everyone, by now, sees the Second Member for George Town coming.

The last point, Mr. Speaker: the amount of goodwill that radiates throughout these Islands today, because of the grants of Caymanian status that we as a Government took upon ourselves to do, is self-evident and you can feel it. It goes down to everyone; people are giving more. Day by day we see it; people are investing more. This can only benefit Caymanians, that is all it can do. However, they cannot have their cake and eat it too; to come in here and tell us who we should be giving Caymanian status to, and then say that the grants that we have made have disadvantaged Caymanians.

I hear them exhorting both sides to work in harmony – that is, Caymanians and people who have come to live amongst us. This is what we also ask. All of us need to be mindful of that when we get on a public platform with a microphone. You need to be mindful of that harmony, as I heard the statements coming from them on the Courthouse steps, how people were denigrated at that meeting. Therefore, they must stop talking out of both corners of their mouths.

I believe that this piece of legislation bodes well for the future. Mistakes were made in the past, we cannot help that, but we must look now to the future. I believe that this is going to build a Cayman Islands for the future that we will all be proud of and can live in, in peace and in harmony. What a better way to end this Old Year and look forward to the New Year.

I do want to thank everyone who made a contribution, including, as I said, the members of the Immigration Review Team, all the members and persons of the Immigration Department, and the Chief Secretary who we forgot to mention but who played a big role in getting this thing to this point, and the Attorney General and his department (and we can see members of his department still here working) and I would like to thank that gentleman on behalf of Government for his input in helping us reach thus far.

Down the years yet, this may have to change because we living in a changing world and we do not know what tomorrow is going to bring. However, one thing we do know is now. We know that there had to be changes, and therefore we move towards the future, better prepared, I believe, for the legislation that will work for the interests of all concerned.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Monetary Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Monetary Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003.

The Speaker: Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This Amendment that is before Honourable Members tonight seeks to revise the Monetary Authority's power of disclosure; to provide for the indemnification of the Monetary Authority's directors; and to make provision for incidental and connected matters.

In looking at the rationale for the Bill, Mr. Speaker, following the amendments to The Monetary Authority Law in December 2002 to give effect to the operational independence of the Monetary Authority, it has become apparent that there is a need to fine-tune some of the provisions of the Law in order to give full effect to the proper implementation of the Law, and to further enhance the operation of the Monetary Authority.

The Bill seeks to make important changes with respect to the ability of the Authority to disclose information for law enforcement purposes; to provide an indemnity for directors; and to provide for the Authority to enter into memoranda of understanding for purposes other than consolidated supervision. This provision would relate to such as an arrangement to provide assistance to the Security and Exchange Commission in the United States (SEC).

The amendments outlined in the Bill are described in the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons for the Bill. Dealing with the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons of the Bill, this Bill seeks to amend the Monetary Authority Law (2003 Revision) and the changes are to be found in the following clauses:

Clause 2 of the Bill amends section 2 of the Monetary Authority Law (2003 Revision) by redefining the term "regulatory functions" to make it clear that the reference to regulatory functions, as it relates to an overseas regulatory authority, means, functions corresponding to the functions of the Monetary Authority, as is specified in section 6(1)(b) of the Law. This will not result in any change in the existing functions of the Monetary Authority as set out in section 6(1)(b).

Clause 3 of the Bill amends section 19(1) of the Monetary Authority Law (2003 Revision) to set out the circumstances in which members of the committees appointed by the Board of Directors will be regarded as having a pecuniary interest in any matter for the purpose of determining when a conflict of interest exists. This change will create consistency with section 18 of the existing Law which sets out the general rules relating to conflict of interest affecting directors, members of the Management Committee or other committees appointed by the Board of Directors.

Clause 4 amends section 43 of the principal Law to extend, to a director, immunity in respect of his functions when discharged under the regulatory authority laws, as well as under the principal Law.

Clause 5 inserts into the principal Law a new section 43A. to "... indemnify a director against all claims, damages, costs, charges or expenses incurred by that director in the discharge or purported discharge of his functions under this Law and the regularity laws, except claims, damages, costs, charges or expenses caused by the bad faith of that director."

Clause 6 amends section 49 of the existing Monetary Authority Law to make clear that the Authority can make disclosure of information to the Attorney General or local law enforcement agencies for the purpose of criminal investigations and proceedings.

The existing provision in section 49(2) only makes reference to disclosures made to a person pursuant to the money laundering regulations. The amendment will also set out the circumstances in which a Monetary Authority can consent to onward disclosure of information by an overseas regulatory authority to which it has already provided information for regulatory purposes for limited use in related criminal investigations.

The Monetary Authority will only be able to consent to onward disclosure of information for these purposes where it has received advice from the Attorney General that the conditions in the Law have been met. In addition, where the request involves a jurisdiction that has a Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT) with the Cayman Islands, the permission of the Cayman Authority (in the case of the United States, Cayman MLAT means the Chief Justice) must be obtained.

Clause 7 amends section 50(1) of the existing Monetary Authority Law to allow the Cabinet to give approval for the Monetary Authority to enter into memoranda of understanding (MOU) with overseas regulatory authorities for purposes other than consolidated supervision. The existing Law restricts the purpose for which the Monetary Authority can enter into an MOU to provide assistance for consolidated supervision purposes only. Consolidated supervision typically involves supervision of entities with a presence in both the requesting and requested jurisdiction. The amendment will allow for the Monetary Authority to enter into MOU for purposes of assisting in the carrying out of regulatory functions which may not involve consolidated supervision, for example, where a regulated entity exists in one jurisdiction in only one of the jurisdictions involved.

This would be the case, for example, where Mutual Funds which are registered in the United States may establish a transaction here in the Cayman Islands. That Mutual Fund, while it may not be registered here as such it may, through its activities, establish an account here in the Cayman Islands, and it could be that something emerges whereby assistance is sought through the Authorities here in the Cayman Islands by way of information being provided. Although it is not a registered entity here in the Cayman Islands this would not preclude such information being provided, and this is what this amendment is seeking.

This is the extent of the amendments and I commend this Bill to Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Third Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, just to thank Honourable Members for their tacit support.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Monetary Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003 be given a second reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Monetary Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003 given a second reading.

The Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risks) (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move The Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risks) (Amendment) Bill 2003.

The Speaker: Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risks) (Amendment) Bill 2003 is necessary as the international reinsurance companies have made the decision to cease providing unlimited liability protection to insurers at the end of 2004. It is deemed more important presently, Mr. Speaker, because the local insurance industry has already started preparing for this by no longer offering the unlimited liability coverage. This decision was made for a number of reasons they claim.

- 1) there is an obvious impracticality of a company with limited liability purporting to offer unlimited liability cover;
- 2) shareholders of insurance companies are now applying greater demands on managers to better manage their company's liabilities; and
- 3) the provisions of unlimited liability go beyond realistic demands.

Historically, unlimited liability was not established to create an unknown, unquantifiable limit, but rather to establish a known limit allowing the legal system to determine quantum based on judicial precedent, adjusted for inflation as well as other factors that could influence quantum without having to amend a legal limit every couple of years. While this system worked well for many years there is now a need to provide for a limit in the law. The Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risks) (Amendment) Bill does just that, Mr. Speaker.

Sections 1 and 2(a) and (b) of the Amendment Bill are for the most part consequential amendments. Section 2 (c) provides the policy of insurance, "insures such person, persons or classes of persons, as may be specified in the policy ... in respect of any damage to any property caused by, or arising out of, the use of the motor vehicle on a road; and"

- (c) covers liability –
- (i) of not less than one million dollars in respect of the death of, or bodily injury to, any person; and
  - (ii) of not less than five million dollars in the aggregate in any one event."

What this does is to mandate that insurance companies provide coverage of not less than what is prescribed in the Law – minimum coverage if you will, rather than the unsustainable unlimited liability coverage that they have now discontinued.

Customers will now have the ability to purchase coverage which they have been denied in recent times, and will have the additional option of purchasing coverage beyond the minimum amount, if they require it and can afford it.

Section 2(d) of The Motor Vehicle (Third Party Risks) (Amendment) Bill, 2003 amends the proviso in section 41(1) of the principal Law: "... by repealing the words "one hundred thousand dollars" and substituting the words "two hundred and fifty thousand dollars"."

The amended paragraph will in effect read: "... that provided that such a policy shall not be required to cover liability exceeding in the aggregate two hundred and fifty thousand dollars in respect of the damage to any property arising out of any claim or claims in respect of any one event."

Finally, I can advise Honourable Members that the Cayman Islands Insurance Association was consulted throughout the drafting process and proposed amendments which are now before this Honourable House. I trust that Members will give the Bill due regard.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Mr. Speaker, I think everyone is in agreement. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risks) (Amendment) Bill 2003 be given a second reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risks) (Amendment) Bill 2003 given a second reading.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider the Bills.

House in Committee at 9.12 pm

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: The House is now in Committee.

Honourable Members while there is a policy that Bills are not broadcast, it has always been a policy of the House not to remove the press from the premises therefore they will remain in the Honourable House and in Committee.

Honourable Members, the first two Bills to be dealt with in Committee are the Terrorism Bill 2003 and The Information and Communication Technology Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003.

As Honourable Members are aware, the Terrorism Bill 2003 was passed with amendment by this Honourable House on 24 July 2003 and the Information Technology Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003 was passed with amendment by this Honourable House on 3 October 2003.

Both of these Bills were amended in order to provide for a Judge of the Court to authorise an interception order rather than the Governor in his discretion. These amendments received the unanimous approval of all Members present on those two occasions. I have subsequently been advised by the Attorney General that his Excellency has refused his assent to the Bills as amended and has requested pursuant to section 40 of the Constitution, which gives him the power to refuse his assent and to return this Bill back to the Assembly, that the Assembly reverse the amendments to the original status whereby such interception orders of telephone et cetera would be made by the Governor in his discretion.

Specifically, His Excellency has recommended that section 55 of The Terrorism Bill 2003 be amended so as to provide for an interception of communications order to be made by the Governor, in his discretion, rather than by a judge of the Grand Court.

Similarly, that clauses 24 and 25 of The Information and Communications Technology (Amendment) Bill 2003 be deleted, so as to provide for an interception order which would be authorised in obedience to a warrant or order issued by the Governor rather than by a judge of the Grand Court.

The two Bills, as directed by His Excellency, have therefore been returned and are accordingly now being re-submitted for consideration of those specific amendments by all Honourable Members in accordance with Standing Order 57(1).

At the conclusion of the proceedings in Committee on these two Bills, the Honourable Leader of Government Business will move that the Bills with or without amendments on re-committal be reported to the House.

Honourable Members, these two Bills, or Bill 5; The Terrorism Bill 2003, and Bill 6; The Information and Communications Technology Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003 have been recommitted for your consideration. The consideration being that His Excellency the Governor wishes to have the provision for "a judge of the Grand Court" to make an interception order, deleted and that "the Governor in his discretion" be reinserted. This is now open for debate.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, from what we understand, Members prefer not to make any changes to the Bill as was passed.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. These two provisions, section 25 of The Information and Communications Technology Authority (Amendment) Law 2003 and section 55 of The Terrorism Bill 2003 are provisions that have been placed in those Bills as a result of concerns, as I understand it, of all Honourable Members of the House, relating to the invasion of privacy of persons in this country. While we recognise that, in the interest of the prevention of terrorism and for other legitimate purposes, it may well be necessary for telecommunications to be intercepted, particularly in light of what has transpired in recent times, having had the experience of the Euro Bank trial fiasco, we are duty-bound to ensure that if such interception is necessary that it has the benefit of judicial scrutiny. We do not repose any trust in the judiciousness of that exercise by Her Majesty's Government, of whom His Excellency the Governor is our representative, and therefore, Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the Opposition, we are not prepared to amend these Bills, as is urged upon us by His Excellency the Governor, and we wish that position to be duly recorded and reported to His Excellency in due course.

We mean Him no disrespect, but we are charged with the responsibility for representing the interests of the people of this country, not the people of any other country. If Her Majesty's Government is insistent that these provisions should go, then they will have to do what they have to do in that respect. I must say that from our perspective their insistence on the removal is ominous, or appears to us to be ominous. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Does any other Member wish to speak? I now call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move the Motion.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, I move that the two Bills be reported to the House without change; The Terrorism Bill 2003 and the Information and Communications Technology Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003.

The Chairman: The question is that the Terrorism Bill 2003 and the Information and Communications Technology Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003 be reported back to the House without any changes made.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Terrorism Bill 2003 and The Information and Communications Technology Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003 reported to the House without amendment.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, since we are waiting on certain amendments to be made to the Immigration Bill 2003, I propose to move that further down and to deal at this time with The Monetary Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003 and The Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risk) (Amendment) Bill 2003 and to then revert to the Immigration Bill 2003.

The Clerk: The Monetary Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003.

Clauses 1 to 7

Clause 1	Short title.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, this has been a long Meeting: one that we have had to sit late at times to conduct and complete business ensuring that everything was handled according to the requests from various departments. It speaks to how busy we all are. We apologise to all staff and to you, Mr. Speaker, for having to sit late with us, but this could not be helped.

It is the Advent season and on behalf of Government and indeed all Members of the House, we want to wish you, Mr. Speaker, and your family a very healthy, happy Christmas, and a healthy New Year. We want to wish the staff (who have had to put up with us during this past year) blessings from Almighty God. It is Christmas time: it is a time of good feelings; a time of giving; a time of loving and forgiving; and a time of colours.

We want to wish for all of our constituents the very best. This has not been an easy year. We have had some changes in government; however, it has all been for the good. The country has gone through some changes. These are challenging times and we look forward to the New Year with, as one Christmas carol puts it, "Hope". That is what we look forward to in 2004. We pray for world peace and we consider all those around us who have it much worse than we do. We should examine our own surroundings and environment to see how well we are faring in comparison to a world that is torn with strife: people cannot travel; people are starving; children are left lonely with no home or parents. These Islands have fared well in this past year amid a world that is topsy-turvy. Nevertheless, we look to Almighty God for guidance and we pray that 2004 will find us at least as blessed as we have had it for 2003. We pray for our people and we thank them for their assistance and we ask God's blessings on everyone.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the unavoidable absence of the Leader of the Opposition, it is my privilege and duty to, on behalf of the Opposition, also join the Leader of Government Business in wishing all within the sound of my voice, a blessed Christmas season and a happy and prosperous New Year.

We are particularly grateful, as the Leader of Government Business has said, to the long-suffering members of the staff of the Legislative Assembly, for the long and tedious hours they have to put in on more and more regular occasions now, to assist us with dealing with the important business of this country and of this Honourable House. We are indebted to them and we thank them. We are also conscious of the fact that they are spending a lot of time away from their families, particularly at an important time like this in preparation for the Christmas season.

This has been, as the Leader of Government Business has said, a challenging year. Indeed, I believe, this entire term, for those of us who have been elected here, has been perhaps the most challenging that Members of this Honourable House have faced in the history of this country. Debate in this Honourable House has been always robust, sometimes tumultuous, sometimes, even acrimonious. However, I believe that we have sensed a growing maturity on the part of all Honourable Members of this House.

We are becoming more conscious and more accepting of the respective roles of the Government and of the Opposition. We can take very divergent positions in relation to matters and even though some of us may shout and some of us may use language which is perhaps intemperate at times within these Chambers, outside these Chambers I think the relationships between us have been forged. Even though some of us might prefer not having others of us here, or indeed not where they are in the political scene, we recognise that all of us are contributing Caymanians who all seek to benefit this country and to promote the interests of the people of these Islands. We may disagree, and we often do, at how that should best be done; I believe that everyone within these hallowed Chambers earnestly believes that what he is doing is in the overall best interests of these Islands. I think it is important for all of us that we have now come to a point where we recognise that and while we may, to use the language in this House, "beat up each other" in here and take different political positions, we respect each other as contributing members of this Honourable House, and we respect the roles that we each have to play.

I take this opportunity to wish each and every Member of this Honourable House, on behalf of the Opposition, and indeed all of our respective constituents, the very best for this Christmas Season. May the Cayman Islands long be blessed with peace, prosperity, goodwill and good government.

Thank you Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, before replying, on behalf of the staff and myself, I would just like to let you know that a member of our staff today is having a birthday; one of our hardworking staff, Ms. Nana Bothwell; I am sure you would wish for me, on your behalf, to wish her a very happy, though belated, happy birthday.

On behalf of the staff, I wish to thank you all most kindly for your kind words. I can vouch for the fact that they are very hard-working individuals. It has been my pleasure to work with each one of them. My work would have been much harder without their efficiency and their assistance. So I want to also share with you in thanking them most sincerely for their support of my position as Speaker.

On my own behalf I want to thank you all very much for the kind manner in which you have accepted me as Speaker of the House. Having assumed my position some months ago, I feel like I have been here for quite some time. From the love I feel from each one, the respect, and I am sure you know that this is reciprocated, I feel very happy to be in this position. I want you to know that I am proud to be the Speaker of the House with such fine representatives, such fine Members of the House.

I know that at times things get a little hot, but remember I was also on both sides of the House, so I understand when those things happen. I also know that this is a pre-election year. We are almost in an election year and I know that tempers will sometimes flare. I believe that all-in-all, having visited other Houses of Parliament, in particular the House of Commons, that we are well behaved compared with the House of Commons. Therefore, I want to thank each one of you.

I know I share in the views, that there has been a noted maturity in the House. I have seen it in debates. It is a pleasure to sit here and listen to the level of debates I have heard coming from Members. I am able to now appreciate it more that I can listen better. When I was a Member, a Minister of Government, I was too anxious to have a rebuttal, therefore I did not listen enough. However, now I am able to listen and hear the quality of the debates. I know that this will grow from strength to strength and will get better.

I would ask that as we go into the Christmas that we never forget what Christmas symbolises. It symbolises love – the love of God to human beings in sending his Son, Jesus, as a baby, and later to die for the sins of each one of us. Let us remember that Christmas is symbolic of love, and it commemorates this love that God exhibited towards each one of us. Let us also have in our heart forgiveness for each one.

As the Second Elected Member for George Town said, he recognises that each one of us is really doing our best to represent our people. That is who we are here representing. We are not here to insult each other; we are here to give the very best representation that we can to our people. Nevertheless, above all, let us do it with respect because remember, respect begets respect. As we move into this Christmas and into the New Year, let us come back to this House with a heart full of love for each other, and let our actions show that this love also reflects the respect that we should have for each other.

I know that I will be shortly calling on the Leader of Government Business to move the motion of adjournment and to tell us when we are returning. However, before doing so, I want to remind everyone that the staff has prepared a fête for Honourable Members on Monday, 22nd December 2003 and I am looking forward to seeing each one of you present for a 2 pm luncheon that is being prepared for the staff. We have Members, even the Sergeant-at-Arms, who is preparing a cake, so we cannot miss out on this. We will have the Leader of Government Business doing a rendition, and other people, so we have to be here for that. We will be very disappointed – I know the staff will be very disappointed – if you are not here to join in this, our Christmas luncheon, for the parliamentarians. Honourable Members, I ask that you all turn out. I would like to correct that I said 2 pm. I understand that most people will be starved by 2 pm; it is really 1 pm on Monday, 22nd December and we expect to see each one of you here.

Honourable Members, again I wish you all the very best for the Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year to you and your families.

Honourable Leader of Government Business would you move the adjournment?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, before I move the adjournment, we want to extend our expressions of thanks to the members of the press who have been here with us day after day, for giving us the opportunity for our people to be able to hear something from us via the written press.

We would also like, of course, to extend our thanks to all of our departments, ministry staff, for all that they do to keep the country going. Many of them work early morning hours and late evening hours to get the country's business completed, and we want to thank them.

I want to place on record our thanks for the work done by Mrs. Sherri Bodden-Cowan for, as we have already recorded, the work she did on the committee for immigration, and to thank her for staying this late with us to see the Bill through all its stages.

Thanks and good Christmas wishes are also extended to the legal draftsmen for being here with us and assisting us in this process time and time again.

Hopefully we will see each other during the nocturnal activities this Christmas season, and again on Monday at 1 pm. Having said that, we ask everybody to drive carefully at this time of the year.

Finally, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House sine die.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House now adjourn sine die.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 10.35 pm the House stood adjourned sine die.

Suspension of Standing Order 24(5)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move for the suspension of Standing Order 24(5) in order to take Government Motion No. 7/03 entitled, the UK Position on European Union Savings Directive (EUSD).

The Speaker: The suspension of Standing Order 24(5) has been moved. I would like to read that Standing Order for clarity, so that all Members are aware of exactly what it states:

“(5) Subject to the exceptions specified in paragraph (9), no Member shall make a motion unless he has given notice in writing of that motion either at some previous sitting of the House, or to the Clerk, not less than five clear days prior to the commencement of the meeting of the House at which such motion is to be made.”

The Honourable Leader of Government Business has moved the suspension of the Standing Order.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 24(5) suspended.

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 7/03

UK Position on European Union Savings Directive (EUSD)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the following Government Motion No. 7/03, standing in my name, which reads as follows-

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT in accordance with the negotiated agreement with the United Kingdom (UK) Government, the terms of which are contained in the letter dated 12 February 2004, from the Paymaster General of the UK to the Hon W McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP, Leader of Government Business, the Government recommends to this Honourable House that appropriate legislation be enacted on or before 30 June 2004 for the implementation of the European Union Savings Directive (EUSD), subject to the condition that the relevant measures of the EUSD come into effect at the same time in European Union Member States and named third countries and dependent and overseas territories.”

The Speaker: The question is: “BE IT RESOLVED THAT in accordance with the negotiated agreement with the United Kingdom (UK) Government, the terms of which are contained in the letter dated 12 February 2004, from the Paymaster General of the UK to the Hon W McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP, Leader of Government Business, the Government recommends to this Honourable House that appropriate legislation be enacted on or before 30 June 2004 for the implementation of the European Union Savings Directive (EUSD), subject to the condition that the relevant measures of the EUSD come into effect at the same time in European Union Member States and named third countries and dependent and overseas territories.”

The Motion is open for debate. Does the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Honourable Members, and by way of the broadcast, the good people of these beloved Cayman Islands, I take this opportunity to inform this Honourable House of developments in relation to the European Union's Directive on the Taxation of Savings.

All Honourable Members are aware that the Savings Tax Directive is something that appeared on the horizon more than five years ago. Over the past two years, I have provided to this Honourable House, and indeed, to the country, numerous updates dealing with the progress of discussions.

It is no secret that Government has consistently taken a firm stance on this matter. We did this based on extensive consultation with the private sector, and with the endorsement of this Honourable House at all times. As I have indicated in previous statements, our objective has consistently been to secure the best interests of these Islands.

Following those discussions, Mr. Speaker, and following various negotiations and letters, I sat down with the Paymaster General of the United Kingdom shortly before Christmas and explained our determination to protect the interests of the Cayman Islands. That was the second time that I had had an opportunity to speak directly with the Paymaster General. The first time was in May of 2002; some Members will know about it. As usual, we reported on that matter. Other Ministers — including you, as the Minister of Planning and the Deputy Leader of Government Business at the time, and part of the negotiating team — went to the United Kingdom to meet for the first time with the Paymaster General.

We recognise and remember that that meeting did not end in the usual fashion in which a negotiating meeting would end, because the Cayman Islands refused, at that time, to sign or agree to anything. We also recall that when the Paymaster General came to that room, she said that in accordance with what had taken place in the British Virgin Islands (BVI) the year before, she expected us to agree and to sign the document at that time. Mr. Speaker, that was not on the books for the Cayman Islands; you remember how the meeting was conducted and how it ended.

That was the first time. The second time I had a chance to sit down for a personal, face-to-face talk with the Financial Secretary and the Cabinet Secretary, who was in attendance also, was in December. Those discussions, which were politician to politician, achieved a breakthrough in our long-running negotiations with the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom finally agreed to discuss our long-standing concerns.

There followed from those talks a series of technical level negotiations aimed at setting out measures which the United Kingdom would be willing to put on the table in our discussions of the Savings Tax Directive. Those talks carried on until 23 January this year.

As I indicated in a public statement earlier this week, following those technical level discussions, there were a number of issues that we felt required written clarification and conformation prior to bringing anything to this Honourable House.

Yesterday, 12 February 2003, we received from the Paymaster General a very detailed letter setting out the position of the Government of the United Kingdom.

With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I will read that letter into the record of this Honourable House in a few moments, and I will ask permission to lay it upon the Table of this Honourable House.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: First I would like to highlight a few of the main points set out in the Paymaster's General letter.

The Paymaster General's letter confirms in writing the undertakings provided by the United Kingdom, but makes the implementation of those undertakings conditional on the Cayman Islands introducing legislation to implement the measures required of us in the Savings Tax Directive.

I want to reiterate this most important condition, for emphasis. The Paymaster's letter confirms that the United Kingdom accepts the position of Government that the Cayman Islands will not implement any legislation unless all of European Union (EU) Member States, the third countries, and the other Territories specified in the Directive do so as well. That covers the level playing field, to an extent. If even one of these countries does not implement the Directive, neither will the Cayman Islands.

The Paymaster's General letter also makes it very clear that if the Government does not commit to the enactment of legislation to implement the Savings Tax Directive by the end of June 2004, then the Government of the United Kingdom will legislate for the Cayman Islands, with the result that the Cayman Islands would then likely be in a protracted confrontation with the United Kingdom, from which no one would benefit.

At that point, we, in this Honourable House, would not have any say or input into the United Kingdom's legislation. They would legislate solely on their own, as they are threatening to do through the House of Commons. Neither would we have the opportunity to negotiate any bilateral agreements with any country in the European Union. Mr. Speaker and Honourable Members, that means that we would continue to remain on the lists of those countries that have put our Islands on their black lists, while still having to cooperate with them in the provision of tax information.

The Government's position has always been pragmatic. We have held out for every possible benefit we could obtain. The Government of the United Kingdom is now offering undertakings covering a variety of subjects. These include:

1. obtaining a wider access to the United Kingdom and European markets for Cayman Islands financial services products;
2. recognition of the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange to help Eurobond and debt products listing and 'designated investment exchange' status for the Stock Exchange;
3. the negotiation of a comprehensive treaty relating to access to the treaty networks;
4. the United Kingdom Government actively promoting what we all know to be true: our high standards of regulation and financial rolls that meet international standards (this will help our global reputation);

5. having the United Kingdom Government use its influence with other countries to remove Cayman from their blacklists, thereby providing access to markets from which we are presently excluded;
6. a greater role in international meetings that affect our interests (who better to tell the world about these Islands than ourselves?); and
7. the United Kingdom's promotion of our tourism industry in Europe.

Having provided that background, I would now turn to the Paymaster General's letter, and read that letter into the record of this Honourable House.

This is addressed to me, and dated 12 February 2004. I quote:

"Dear McKeeva,

"Thank you for your letters of 30 January and 4 February. I have also seen George McCarthy's e-mail of 6 February to David Richardson, and your news release of 5 February.

"I am pleased that your Government has decided to recommend to the Legislative Assembly that it approve legislation to apply the same measures as in the Savings Directive, and that you are confident that this legislation can be enacted by June 2004.

"As we both recognise, an important condition in relation to the Savings Directive is that the relevant measures come into effect at the same time in EU Member States, and the named dependent and overseas territories. No one should be expected or required to go to first.

"To ensure this level playing field, the Savings Directive sets a strict timetable for agreeing the start date. The Directive will come into effect on 1 January 2005 provided that the necessary agreements with the third countries and territories are in place with the same start date. And to provide business and Governments with certainty in advance, the Directive requires ECOFIN to decide by the end of June 2004 whether this condition will be met. [ECOFIN is the European Council of Finance Ministers. I continue to quote, Mr. Speaker:]

"The UK Government is determined to ensure that the necessary legislation and agreements for a 1 January 2005 start date are in place in the named UK territories by the end of June 2004. This will ensure that the Directive will go ahead on 1 January 2005 provided that the necessary agreements for a 1 January 2005 start date are also in place with the third countries and the Netherlands Antilles and Aruba; and the Commission and the Netherlands are working to ensure that.

"For the Cayman Islands this means that by the end of June 2004 either the Cayman Government must introduce the necessary legislation, and enter into the necessary agreements with EU Member States, or the UK must do so directly. I said in my letter of 31 October 2003 that I hoped it would not be necessary for the UK to legislate, and that very much remains my hope. But I explained when we met in December that time constraints meant I needed a clear and unambiguous statement of the Cayman position by the end of January, so that the UK had time to act before the June deadline if necessary.

“The draft framework of undertakings that we agreed in December, and which our officials subsequently fleshed out in a series of meetings in Grand Cayman and London in January, envisaged that the Government of the Cayman Islands would: recommend to the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly before 31 January 2004 that appropriate legislation be enacted to apply the same measures as EU Member States; affirm that the legislation would be enacted by 30 June 2004; and enter into negotiations with EU Member States with a view to concluding bilateral agreements implementing the domestic legislation by 30 June 2004.

“I was therefore disappointed to learn from your letter of 30 January that your Government would not be recommending legislation to the Legislative Assembly by 31 January. Indeed your letter did not refer to making a recommendation at all. Instead, you referred to “ongoing” discussions and “continuing fleshing out” with the UK. You will appreciate that because of the strict timetable to which we are working, the absence of the commitment envisaged in the 23 January 2004 text has meant that I have had to ask my officials to take forward contingency work for direct legislation.

“However, I note from your subsequent letter and news release that you do intend to recommend the relevant legislation to the Legislative Assembly at its next sitting, which begins on 13 February 2004. And George McCarthy’s e-mail refers to you doing this at the earliest opportunity.

“As I have said, I continue to want to take this issue forward in a cooperative way, if that is possible within the timeframe that we must operate. Recognising that that is your preference as well, and in the light of the subsequent papers you have sent me, I can confirm that the UK would be prepared to take forward the UK undertakings in the fleshed out agreement finalised by our officials on 23 January, if:

- Within one week of the Cayman Island Legislative Assembly session starting on 13 February 2004, the Cayman Island Government unequivocally recommends to the Assembly that appropriate legislation be enacted by 30 June 2004 to apply the same measures as in the Savings Directive. (I realise of course that you will not be able to present the legislation itself by 20 February 2004. And you will of course no doubt want to make clear that the legislation would only come into effect when the relevant provisions also come into effect in Member States and the named third countries and dependent and overseas territories.)

- You confirm by 20 February 2004 that your Government will make every effort to ensure that the legislation is enacted by the 30 June 2004.

- You confirm by 20 February 2004 that your Government will make every effort to conclude by 30 June 2004 the necessary agreements with EU Member States to implement the domestic legislation.

If all of those conditions are met by 20 February 2004, the UK would then take forward, in good faith, the undertakings we have proposed. So, for instance, the Inland Revenue would move immediately to expedite the Cayman Island Stock Exchange’s application for recognition. And my officials would agree a date with your officials to begin discussions in 2003/04 on a bilateral double taxation agreement.”

That, I think, is proposing their financial year. That gives us approximately six weeks. To continue, Mr. Speaker:

“I should however make clear that I could not proceed on this basis if your undertakings were in any way qualified as being subject to the outcome or progress of discussions in respect of a double taxation agreement (or indeed any of the other items). I say this not because I have any reason to think that it will not be possible to agree a double tax treaty acceptable to both sides. I can assure you that we would conduct the negotiations in absolute good faith. But our considerable experience of negotiating double taxation treaties clearly indicates that it would take more time than we have until 30 June to conclude the discussions. And we have to bear in mind as well that concluding a treaty with a territory without a direct tax system would be without the benefit of precedent.

“The proposed UK undertakings would of course fall away if the Cayman Government did not follow through on the Cayman undertakings set out in the bullets above, or if the necessary legislation was not passed and the necessary agreements with EU Member States were not entered into.

“I apologise for writing at such length. But I thought it right that I set out in detail the UK’s position, so that there is no ambiguity or misunderstanding between us over the assurances I need for the UK to proceed on the co-operative basis that we would both like.

“I look forward to hearing from you.

“Yours ever,

“Dawn Primarolo, MP.”

That is the end of the letter, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table the letter at this point.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I would also like to table the EU Directive on the Taxation of Savings, and a copy of the agreement that the European Union community has published, showing what their own agreements with Switzerland are. That Savings Directive is the Council Directive/2003/48EC of 30 June 2003 on Taxation of Savings Income in the Form of Interest Payments. This is: “The Council of the European Union, Having regard to the Treaty establishing the European community and in particular, article 94 thereof”.

It says in part: “This Directive builds on the consensus reached at the Santa Maria da Feira European Council of 19 and 20 June 2000 and the subsequent Ecofin Council meetings of 26 and 27 November 2000, 13 December 2001 and 21 January 2003.”

Those are the council meetings which build from the consensus on the Feira Accord. I would like to table that document, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: So ordered.

I would ask the Serjeant if he would get copies of that and make them available to Members, although I recognise that it has been in circulation since the middle of last year. I would nonetheless ask that it be circulated to refresh the memories of Members.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The other document is the Commission of the European Union’s Council Decision on the conclusion of the Agreement between the European Community and the Swiss Confederation providing for measures equivalent to those laid down in Council Directive 2003/48/EC of 3 June 2003 on taxation of savings income in the form of interest payments and the accompanying Memorandum of Understanding.

The Speaker: Similarly, I would ask that the Serjeant-at-Arms make copies of that document for Members. Please continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much for your understanding and agreement, Mr. Speaker.

Last evening, I called a meeting with private sector representatives from the financial industry, to ask for their input in relation to the two choices we have before us. This was the most recent of many such meetings over the past two years. In fact, I think we met last on Monday this week.

The majority in attendance at last evening’s meeting confirmed the Government’s view that we should accept what is currently an offer from the United Kingdom. There were some there who opposed. Government is aware of the need to consider the broader public and economic interests. Although we are sensitive to the commercial interests of individual businesses and sectors, and have fought hard over these past two years in their interests and in the wider interests of these Islands, we have concluded, after taking advice from many sources— including last evening’s meeting—that taken as a whole, this package is the better of the two available options for our people and our economy.

My tough stance on this subject, over the past two years, has been in the interests of the people and of the business community of the Cayman Islands. The Cabinet and I are rightly concerned about the potential impact of the Directive, but we believe that the offsetting measures our team has negotiated put us in the best available position moving forward. We have only one constitutionally available option, and that is to go on our own. However, we have no mandate to do this, and it seems that the majority of our people have refused that option. Even if that were possible, it would have no effect on this present ultimatum, as there would not be enough time before implementation.

The Government, therefore, recommends to this Honourable House that appropriate legislation be enacted, applying the same measures as set out in the Savings Tax Directive, and subject to the requirement that all of the European Union Member Countries, as well as the named countries and Territories specified in the Directive, must pass and implement the same or equivalent measures to be approved by this Honourable House no later than the end of June 2004. I repeat: This legislation would only come into effect when the relevant provisions also come into effect in the European Member States, the named third countries and the relevant Dependent and Overseas Territories—not before.

Furthermore, Government will also make every effort possible to conclude, by 30 June 2004, the necessary bilateral agreements with the European Union Member States, which will give effect to the legislation. On this basis, the United Kingdom and the Cayman Islands will take forward the undertakings we have agreed. We expect, for example, that the British Inland Revenue will move immediately to expedite the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange’s application for recognition. It is important that people understand that what we are working toward is the best possible outcome for the Cayman Islands.

I would hope that our people continue to support these efforts. I believe that the financial community continues to support Government, and I hope I can count on the active support of Honourable Members.

The Government is putting forward what we believe is the best available deal for the people of the Cayman Islands. I would like to say that last night, those in attendance who did not agree gave qualified support.

I have never allowed myself to be pushed around. I believe that you can only push so much, and I am here today, as our old people say, with a heavy heart. However, such are the times in which we live. Such are the conditions in which we live, constitutionally.

Perhaps this will give a wake-up call not only to Members of this House, but to all our citizens, for we here can stand up and be counted. I am prepared to do that on any stage, locally or globally. However, there is a point at which we can only do so much. We can either reject it, or allow the United Kingdom to put it in place themselves. Perhaps it may never reach completion, or, we could agree that we would do something, take what is offered, and say, "I lived to fight another day".

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Having listened to the Honourable Leader of Government Business—as is the role of the Opposition—we certainly are going to contribute to the debate on this matter. We will be offering our own perspective on things as we see them, on all of the events leading up to this time. Suffice it to say that we have not had what we consider to be a reasonable time to digest the possible ramifications of the letter from the Paymaster General, as we only received it late yesterday evening.

Last month, the country discovered that we have a very serious crisis on our hands in regard to the EU Directive on the Taxation of Savings. In our view, this has come as a shock. Since 2002, the Leader of Government Business, in all of his public utterances, has been assuring everyone that he would not sign up to the EU Directive on the Taxation of Savings. We also heard that he would be taking Her Majesty's Government to court if it tried direct legislation. From what we have just heard, it seems that the Government has no case, that Her Majesty's Government can and will impose the Directive on us, and that what he has achieved is a list of possible stated concessions, several of which, notwithstanding how nicely put they may be, will have what we would call indeterminable value. Like the Directive itself, this will depend entirely on the goodwill of Her Majesty's Government.

We ask the question: How is it that we have reached this position?

I can only speak with clarity and tell everyone about 2001—about the time up until very early 2001. Mr. Speaker, let me clarify something. I can certainly speak of the time until early November 2001, because as I said, and as many have said about that time (and many things have been said): That was called my watch. I have to say that the true story about what happened in 2001 regarding this same matter differs markedly from the sustained campaign of misinformation that the Leader of Government and others have persisted in spreading over the course of this past year—and perhaps a little before that.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition, you did mention that there was a sustained campaign. Could you be seated for a second, please? You did mention that there was a sustained campaign of misinformation. Would you please clarify exactly what you mean by that?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, those are the exact documents I am coming to, with your permission.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, in July 2003, the Leader of Government Business made a statement in the Legislative Assembly. He spoke on several issues and went on to speak, during his delivery, on this matter of the EU Directive on the Taxation of Savings. He gave a chronological history of what had transpired since November 1997. With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I will quote from the unedited Hansard of 16 July 2003.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. His statement reads: "In September 1998, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and UK Treasury held its first tax seminar, which presented information on the European Union Tax Package, and was attended by representatives of the Cayman Islands. At about this time, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office also forwarded to the European Union a summary of the constitutional arrangements that it had with its dependent territories, as they were then referred to, indicating that, in the case of the constitutional arrangements with Bermuda, the United Kingdom did not have the power to disallow legislation passed by the Bermuda legislature, and further did not have the power to force legislation on Bermuda, since Bermuda's Constitution did not allow the United Kingdom to use the peace order and good governance order in council process that was available in the case of the Caribbean Territories, including the Cayman Islands."

That is some background to clearly indicate, as we move on into a sequence of events, the reason why Bermuda was exempt from this Directive from the outset. Immediately, we understand clearly that Bermuda is in a different category and a different position from the rest of the Caribbean Overseas Territories.

His chronological history goes on to indicate that:

“On 19 June 2000 the Heads of Government of the European Member States meeting in Santa Maria de Feira, adopted the proposal of the European Finance Ministers for a revised form of the draft Directive on the Taxation of Savings Income, which has now become known as the Feira Accord, an agreement to adopt the automatic exchange of tax information as a basis for enforcing the extra-territorial tax regimes of the European Union Member States. The document specified the requirement that the Netherland Antilles as well as the United Kingdom dependencies of the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man, and the United Kingdom’s Caribbean Territories – including the Cayman Islands – adopt the same measures as the European Union States in regard to the taxation of savings income. This document also did not include Bermuda.”

“On November 2000, meetings were held, at which the Government of the Cayman Islands was not represented, but at which representatives of the Caribbean Overseas Territories and Department of the European Union Member States began discussions of the revised Overseas Countries and Territories (OCT) decision, which was to come into effect in November 2001 for a period of ten years.”

Therefore, up until November 2000 we have the Feira Accord of 1999, and then we have it being ratified in 2000. He goes on to say: “On 21 March 2001, the Baroness Scotland, QC, wrote to the Overseas Territories, including the Cayman Islands, in relation to the European Savings Directive indicating that the United Kingdom expected the Cayman Islands to comply with the Directive on the Taxation of Savings income and requesting a response by the end of April 2001.”

His very next statement, Mr. Speaker, reads: “The Leader of Government Business of the day, the current Leader of the Opposition, was given a draft letter that could have gotten us out of that particular mess. That letter was not sent.”

The Honourable Leader of Government Business, made a public statement two or three days ago. There were other times when he said it, but I am not going to quote all of those times. I referred to the statement in July of last year, and now we come to the most recent statement.

With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I would like to quote.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In his latest statement, which the Caymanian Compass carried yesterday, he says: “In the summer of 2000, the Feira Accord was adopted. In November 2000, the framework for the Overseas Countries and Territories was agreed . . .”

That is consistent with his previous statement, which included tax matters, and ensured that the Cayman Islands were caught up in them, because we had not negotiated our way out of the Feira Accord. We will pause there for a while, Mr. Speaker, to clarify and to accept, factually, that by November of 2000, not only had the Feira Accord been adopted, but the framework for the Overseas Territories had been agreed on, which means it was ratified.

That was when the 1996 – 2000 Government was in place. We want to get our times right. Therefore, the Feira Accord was already agreed upon and the Cayman Islands were included as one of the territories the United Kingdom expected to sign the initiative.

In early 2001, that document was sent out, informing me, the then Leader of Government Business, now the Leader of the Opposition.

I am continuing to read from the statement: “... that final agreement would be made in the summer. It was obvious the Cayman Islands then had a chance to register its objections at this point. It was at that time that Executive Council gave Mr. Kurt Tibbetts, then the Leader of Government, a letter to send to the United Kingdom Treasury. He did not send out that letter. In the summer of 2001, the final wording to the Feira Accord and the formal document was agreed upon, without Executive Council’s knowledge because we thought Mr. Tibbetts had sent in our strong objections.”

“In September of 2001 the Feira document went to print and we lost our last opportunity.”

According to those two documents, sometime early after this, we received a letter from the Baroness advising us that the UK was expecting us to sign up to the Directive. There was a letter that was supposed to be sent voicing our strong objections, and I did not send this letter. That is what he said: The Feira Accord document went to print and we lost our last opportunity.

On several occasions I have heard that this letter outlining our strong objections, supposedly, was not sent. I wrote to the Baroness in April 2001, after we received the invitation to attend the informal meetings in Miami. That invitation was for 30 April and 1 May. I wrote back advising her that we had received the invitation, and that the response to her letter of 31 March was one that we would prefer to deal with after the meetings in Miami. We believed we would be in a much more informed position, because that would have been the first exchange and dialogue that we would have had since we got the letter from the Baroness in March.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, that meeting took place and the Leader of Government Business chose to say on the Talk show that I was trying to shift blame to other people. My understanding of his statement was that he was referring to when I called your name, Sir. I simply called your name on the Talk show because you were the one who represented Government at the meetings in Miami. That was not about shifting blame to anyone. We all know that the reason for that was simply that the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) was in Cayman at that same time. We were doing the best we could to be de-listed, because they were going to have their June meeting to decide whether we were going to be de-listed or not. Thank God, we were de-listed then. That was the reason we decided I would stay for the FATF and you would go for the Miami meetings.

We move on after that. For a long time, when I kept hearing about this letter, I could not put together the sequence of events to try to get a clear understanding of exactly what was being talked about. I remembered many things, but I did not have any documentation, so I was at a huge disadvantage. You know, Sir, what a careful self I am, so I was not going to say things that I was not sure related correctly to events. Perhaps I would be in the same position today, had not my good and loyal friend, the Elected Member for North Side, remembered that at the consultative meeting she attended in London on 24 September, there were several copies of letters that were part of the bundle she took—some copies of letters from the Baroness to other members, Overseas Territories Chief Ministers and a record of the meetings that were held from 24–26 September. We are coming to that now. Several of the individuals who were part of the discussions during that time are still in this Honourable House; some of them are visiting the House, but they were part of it because they were part of the technical team that was advising us.

My recollection is that in our discussions after the Miami meetings, when we talked about how we were going to handle the matter, and how we were going to deal with it in the way forward, we decided conscientiously that rather than maintain the approach that had obtained prior to the new Government taking over in November 2000, we were going to contact the other Overseas Territories to speak to them, with a view to trying to get all of us on board together to deal with this matter. We thought that the strength of numbers might carry more weight when dealing with the United Kingdom down the line on the matter. The Honourable Third Official Member will remember this.

We placed several calls to the Chief Ministers of these Overseas Territories, establishing contacts and talking about the letter of 21 March from the Baroness. We decided that with their agreement, we were going to get the technical people together with a view to establishing one common response to the letter. All Territories would sign their own letters when they were all completed: all the letters would say the same thing.

Our view, at that time, was that that would send the message that we were not going to be out by ourselves, each one of us readily picked off. Those meetings continued. I do not have dates, but I know they occurred, because I remember the technical people coming from some of the Overseas Territories and meeting with our people. One of those meetings took place at the Westin Hotel, where they spent several hours during a day trying to develop this common response. All along, the Government knew and were aware of the approach that we were taking with all the other things that were going on at the time. That was the approach upon which the Executive Council had agreed.

We are now past May. Before I go past May, I want to say that I made a conscious decision during the early stages of coming down to the Legislative Assembly. I cannot remember exactly which meeting we were in; it could have been during the Budget Meeting, as that went on into May 2001. I called all the Members of the Legislative Assembly together. At that time, we had the letter from the Baroness photocopied and handed out to all the Members to advise them of London's position. I even remember asking them to return the copies as it was a confidential document, but I gave them copies to read in the meeting. I also advised them of the approach we were taking, and asked them their opinion as to what they thought of that approach so that we could get some perspective of what Members thought.

We must remember that this is after the 2000 elections. Everyone who is here now was there then. At that time, the now Leader of Government Business was the Deputy Leader of Government Business, while I was there.

My recollection of that meeting is that there was no one who disagreed with that approach. In fact, there were individuals who voiced their opinions that they were glad that the approach of getting in contact with the other Territories and trying to work together with them was being adopted. They were of the view that the stance taken by the previous Government, of staying out on a limb by itself, was one that was totally counter-productive, not only to this process, but to the other processes with the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) and the FATF, and all of the other international initiatives.

Therefore, we moved on with that process while all of the other things were happening in this folder. On 21 September, the Honourable Edna Moyle, Minister for Community Development, Women's Affairs, Youth and Sports at the time, took to London, for a meeting on 24 September. There are copies of several pieces of correspondence. There is a sequence of events, and I would ask to quote from some of these letters.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. The first one is a copy of a letter dated 4 May 2001 to Honourable Ralph O'Neal from Mr. Alan Huckle, the Head of the Overseas Territories Department.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, since some time has elapsed since those letters were circulated, perhaps you would care to lay a copy of that letter upon the Table for the interests of other Members.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: There are several of them. I have no problem with what you are saying, but I would first like to complete what I am saying.

The Speaker: Certainly. Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. The first one that I saw—

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, please state the point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I would like to find out whether those letters are going to be tabled. I did not understand what—

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition did agree to table those letters. Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The whole point of my taking the time to go through this is simply to show the sequence of events leading up to the approach that we took, at the time with regards to the EU Savings Tax Directive.

The letter to which I was referring of 4 May 2001 was to the Honourable Ralph T. O'Neal, Chief Minister and Minister of Finance of the British Virgin Islands, from Mr. Alan Huckle, who at the time was the Head of the Overseas Territories Department. I am not going to quote everything in all of the letters. I am going to take excerpts, and will explain each one as I go along.

Mr. Huckle says: “At the UK/OT meeting in Miami on 30 April [the same meeting to which I referred] to discuss the EU Tax Package and the OECD harmful tax competition initiative, it is addressed to Ralph O'Neal—you sought clarification on the legal and constitutional position with respect to taxation matters in the Overseas Territories. I thought it would be helpful if I set out in writing the position as it currently stands.”

He goes on to say: “The UK accordingly respects the rights of the OT Governments to discharge their own devolved constitutional powers.”

“Those assemblies may enact tax laws for their Territory.” He goes on to say, “The United Kingdom has consistently made clear in the context of both EU and OECD agreements on tax that it will work within the constitutional arrangements with its Overseas Territories, and it would be unprecedented for HMG to legislate for the Overseas Territories on taxation. However, we firmly believe that it is in the Overseas Territories' long term economic interests to cooperate with the international tax agenda and to introduce measures which promote transparency and exchange of information on taxation.”

He says: “In particular, the UK Government is committed to promoting the principles and objectives of the EU tax package and the OECD initiative in the Overseas Territories.”

My purpose for reading that, Mr. Speaker, was to say that this letter addressed to the Honourable Ralph T. O'Neal was copied because he did say: “We will continue to engage in dialogue and consultation with you and your colleagues in other Overseas Territories to ensure that you are able to respond positively to these initiatives on a timely basis.”

It is carbon-copied to the Chief Ministers of the Turks and Caicos and Montserrat; the Leader of Government Business of the Cayman Islands; the Chief Minister of Anguilla; and the Premier of Bermuda.

When Mr. Huckle wrote the Honourable Mr. Ralph O'Neal at the time, we all got copies of the letter. That was 4 May. That follows up on our meeting in Miami, and it is obvious that London then realises that the Overseas Territories are working in tandem. They wrote one letter, then had it copied to all.

As time goes on, there is a meeting with the Caribbean Overseas Territories' Chief Ministers. That meeting took place in Tortola, British Virgin Islands from 3 – 4 September of 2001. It was attended by the then Deputy Leader of Government Business, who is now the Leader of Government Business; the Deputy Financial Secretary; and I also believe, the Executive Director of the Secretariat that had been set up earlier in the year.

As all the technocrats had been backing-and-forthing with developing this single common response, one of the purposes of that meeting was to agree on the final form of the letter.

After returning from Tortola, on 11 September 2001, the then Deputy Leader, who was also the Minister for Tourism, Environment and Transport, prepared a paper, which coincidentally, was the very same day as 9/11. (You will remember it vividly; I remember the Honourable First Official Member especially, because he was the one with the television in the Glass House. I think he had moved his television down to the Executive Council room, so that we could have a look at it, and we were witnessing all of the horror of that morning).

That paper was part of this bundle. You will see in the follow-up why all of this was in this folder. It says:

“1. Honourable Members will be aware that the Deputy Leader of Government, the Deputy

Financial Secretary and the Executive Secretary of the Secretariat attended the Caribbean Overseas Territories Chief Ministers' Meeting (COTCMM) on Tortola, September 3 – 4, 2001. Chief Ministers from Anguilla, British Virgin Islands, Turks and Caicos, and Montserrat attended, along with a number of other advisors, including several Members of the BVI Legislature. The main matters arising from the discussion are given in attachment 3.

"2. The COTCMM also agreed the final form of the letter to Baroness Amos to be sent on the afternoon of September 11, 2001 by all five Caribbean jurisdictions. (Bermuda has also been provided with a copy). The letter is given in attachment 1. It should be noted that the earlier draft of this letter was approved by Executive Council. It should be noted that the earlier draft of this letter was approved by Executive Council."

I am assuming that the purpose of that approval could only have been that Executive Council here had to approve it for the delegation to take to the Caribbean Overseas Territories Chief Ministers' meeting—to say, "This is what we agree on with the Cayman Islands. Our Executive Council has agreed on this, so let us look to see how we can put it together so that everyone will agree on it".

The Meeting further agreed that each Chief Minister, or leader, would sign the letter and copy it to their respective Governors. It has some other matters in it, which do not relate to that issue, Mr. Speaker. What is of importance—and it was on the third or fourth look that I realised it—was that the Leader of Government Business, who was then the Deputy Leader, led the delegation to Tortola for the meetings on 3–4 September and then returned with agreement from the other Territories and prepared a paper about this final letter that should have been sent. Therefore, it would have been his paper to Council, which would also have meant his action file—if it was, then, because I notice that it did have some small corrections. As my memory does not give me the exact details, and I do not have access to anything else, I do not know whether it would have been his Ministry, the Portfolio of Finance, or the Legal Department that would have seen this process through to the end.

We also know that the Baroness received these letters. Along with the bundle was a copy of a letter dated 21 September 2001, to the Honourable John Osborne, MLC, Chief Minister of Montserrat. The letter says:

"Dear Chief Minister

"Thank you for your letter of 11 September.

"I welcome your commitment to work with the UK Government and EU member states ..."

I do not have to read the whole of this letter, which is simply an acknowledgment of his letter of 11 September. The process went on. What is of importance here is that this letter of which we speak was not a letter giving any strong objections to the Directive. Let me read a few sections of the Baroness' letter in response. It says: "I welcome your commitment to work with the UK Government and EU member states to tackle cross-border tax evasion on savings income. I hope that you have now had an opportunity to read the draft Directive on taxation ..."

The actual letter itself, Mr. Speaker, has a few paragraphs in it that are perhaps important enough to warrant my reading them. I will quote, with your permission.

"The Government of the Cayman Islands has clearly indicated its willingness to cooperate with the Member States of the EU in the deterrence and prosecution of criminal tax evasion. This position was reiterated at the recent Miami meetings."

This letter of 11 September, speaks to the 30 April and 1 May meetings in Miami.

It is obvious that from the time the Miami meetings took place, ending 1 May, up until 11 September, there was a direct connection in the sequence of events—developing this final product, which is this letter. Otherwise, the letter would not refer to the Miami meetings. It also says: "It is recognized that the Draft EU Directive on the Taxation of Savings is a "work in progress" and that until the final text of the Directive is produced and until the extent of implementation is determined, no position can be taken on the merits of such a directive for EU or non-EU jurisdictions. It is the view of the Government of the Cayman Islands that the development of effective international standards and mechanisms of implementation in regard to cross-border cooperation in tax matters requires a truly global process of consultation and consensus building."

I am going to spend a few minutes to talk about the platform of the position taken at the time regarding the real level playing field. The letter goes on to state: "It would be most helpful if Her Majesty's Government would keep the Cayman Islands informed in respect of the adoption of automatic exchange of tax information outside of the EU."

"It would also be most helpful if Her Majesty's Government would be prepared to share any research"—and this is important, too, Mr. Speaker, because from those days, the concerns were being flagged up—"that has been done on:

- the potential or projected effect of the Directive on the Taxation of Savings for causing EU residents to merely shift investments out of savings instruments which are the subject to the Savings Directive,
- the potential or projected effect of the Directive on the Taxation of Savings for causing EU residents merely to shift investments from jurisdiction to jurisdiction in the absence of global implementation".

There is the level playing field, again. Another bullet point says:

- the potential costs and advantages for the Government of the Cayman Islands and businesses within the Cayman Islands of establishing and implementing the automatic exchange of information in the absence of any global adoption of such a regime.”

This speaks clearly, Mr. Speaker, of the difficulties we could see if we had to effect such a measure while other competitive jurisdictions, not having had to do so, drove up the costs of business. Also, potential clients would not be able to have the same advantages with us as with other jurisdictions, which would lead them to go and do business with those other jurisdictions. It is simple.

This was the letter sent on 11 September 2001 by all the Overseas Territories. It is the same letter that they received.

I have two more items on this matter. We lead off after the meetings in Tortola on 3 and 4 September, when the leaders of the Overseas Territories agreed on the final letter. We come now to the letter going off. Also in September, but on a later date—24 and 26 September—there was the Overseas Territories Consultative Council (OTCC) meeting in London, which my colleague, Mrs. Moyle, who was then the Minister of Community Development, attended. Along with Mrs. Moyle, the Deputy Leader of Government Business, at the time, who is now the Leader of Government Business, led the delegation. The Deputy Financial Secretary also attended.

The paper with the letter of 11 September also speaks to the fact that: “Cayman is to contact the Crown Dependencies and Bermuda to investigate the feasibility of their attending a pre-meeting on September 23 in London, in view of the likelihood of similar concerns on the EU tax issue”.

I have correspondence that was expecting me to attend, Mr. Speaker. However, I did not attend that meeting after September 11th happened. That was a terrible day for all of us, although it was not us, directly. I still choke when I think about it. It did not take long for everything to be up in arms and topsy-turvy. I am sure you remember that well, Mr. Speaker. The Cayman Islands itself was in flux, like a lot of other places. The then Deputy Leader of Government Business called me at home, before we went, to say that he wanted me to know that he would prefer it if I stayed behind to deal with all of these matters to do with the economy, and the business owners, and all the fallout and natural myriad of meetings that we were going to have to have. You also remember them well, Mr. Speaker. We had to go through all of that with the private sector and businesses, to try to develop some type of plan of action to survive during that period. If I would stay to deal with those matters, then he would attend the meeting in London.

Co-incidentally, I think we had two or three appointments in the ExCo room, and by the time I got to the office that morning, somewhere around 11.00 am, there were 37 messages sitting on the desk. That convinced me. I said, “All right, fine.”

Therefore, we move on the 24 – 26 September 2001, to which he referred on 11 September 2001, and this: “pre-meeting on 23 September in London, in view of the likelihood of similar concerns on the EU tax issue”.

Throughout this whole sequence of events, it is obvious that we all knew the position we had taken, and that we were moving in the direction upon which we had agreed—all of us, acting in concert. I am informed by the Elected Member for North Side that that pre-meeting did take place, and that the delegation from Cayman attended. There were discussions, at which point in time, positions were laid forward, which were synchronised with what we had done thus far.

This morning, I hear the Leader of Government Business speak of a meeting with Dawn Primarolo. I cannot remember the exact date of that meeting, but it was sometime not so long ago. There he said—and I will paraphrase him, not quote him verbatim—that Ms. Primarolo said at that meeting that she was surprised that the Government of the Cayman Islands had not come to that meeting to sign, on based on the meeting in Tortola. This is another meeting, Mr. Speaker; this is the last one I am going to talk about.

That meeting, of which the Leader of Government Business speaks, and to which Ms. Primarolo supposedly referred, was a meeting of the Caribbean Overseas Territories, which London called, and which the Paymaster General was going to attend. It was also in Tortola, in October. That was about the same EU Directive on the Taxation of Savings. The Overseas Territories were in continual contact with one another, preparing for that meeting. By then we suspected that Ms. Primarolo was coming with the heavy stick, because we were supposedly dilly-dallying. I attended that meeting and led the delegation. There were two technical advisors from the Cayman Islands who also attended that delegation. They are still involved in the process at present, so they know all about the process.

After going to Tortola, we met prior to meeting with Ms. Primarolo, and agreed on our positions there. I distinctly remember, very early in the meeting in Tortola, that I personally asked Ms. Primarolo if she could explain to us why it was that Bermuda was exempt from this Directive, while we were all facing down its barrel. Her crisp and prompt reply to me was, “Mr. Tibbetts, I am afraid that is not on the agenda.” That was the end of the story; there was no more talk. I see someone smiling, so I am sure he remembers it.

We went on with that meeting after long talks about it, and we ended up with simply this: We knew the positions we had taken with the letters in September. At the time, we did not believe for a second that there was a way to simply get out of it. We were gathering information throughout it all, and letting them know we wanted to cooperate, but questioning them at the same time. I say “questioning them” because we ended that meeting with our technical people having developed a questionnaire of some forty-odd questions specifically related to the EU Directive on the Taxation of Savings. I am going by memory, because I do not have copies of all of that. We asked the Paymaster General to take these questions and give us clear, unambiguous responses to them. The idea was that once we got the answers to those questions—all of us, because we were all in agreement with taking that position—we would continue the talks in good faith. That is what we did.

Having done that at the meeting in October, our position, at that time, was that we had this slew of questions that related directly to the well-being of the Overseas Territories. If we had to sign up to this Directive, what were the ramifications going to be in various areas? When we left the meeting there, the expectation was that when we got those questions answered, we would regroup again to see where we would go from there. That was in October. We all know that very shortly after that, I was no longer in Executive Council, so my involvement with this matter ended there.

Having said all of that, I want to make it absolutely clear that I do not profess that I remember every thing that happened between 21 March and October. However, I am confident that I have used the documentation that I have had available to me to prove a sequence of events that tells of the positions of the Government at that time, while I was Leader of Government Business. It was not a position that we held close to our chest; it was a position that was developed in consultation with external people and, internally, with technical people. The Members of the Legislative Assembly were aware of the position. The matters were dealt with in the sequence of events I related, so I have no idea where this strong objection was supposed to go. The letter that I supposedly did not send—

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, if you have reached a convenient spot I propose to take the luncheon break at this time and return at 2.30 pm and to remind you that you have 55 minutes remaining.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, before we move from the Chamber, I wonder when the Leader of the Opposition is going to table those letters that he read from.

The Speaker: I will enquire on that, Honourable Leader of Government Business.

I will ask the Serjeant to collect the letters from the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and have copies made and circulated, ready for the Meeting when we return from lunch. They will be laid upon the Table of the House.

Honourable Leader of the Opposition, if you have those letters available, would you make them available to the Serjeant, so that they can be laid upon the Table at this time? Thank you.

The Honourable House is now being suspended until 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.15 pm

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Reference to an Executive Council Paper, No. 751/01 of 2001

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

Before calling on the Leader of the Opposition, I wish to make a few comments on a matter that occurred earlier this morning. This was during the debate of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, when he made reference to an Executive Council Paper, No. 751/01 of 2001. I have discussed this matter with him, so he is aware that I will be speaking to Honourable Members about this.

As Honourable Members are aware, Executive Council (now Cabinet) papers are confidential, and the contents of these papers should not be publicised in any way. I have before me a restricted copy of the Government of the Cayman Islands' Guide to the Operations of Executive Council. One section, Chapter 4, deals with Secrecy. It states: “On taking up the office for the first time after a General Election, each Member of Executive Council is required to take, in addition to the Oath of Allegiance and the Oath for due execution of office, the Oath of an Executive Councillor, which includes the undertaking not to reveal directly or indirectly such matters as shall be debated in Council and committed to the Councillors' care. Such oath shall also be taken by the Clerk and by an acting member at the first meeting of Executive Council after he has been appointed to act after a general election. An Oath of secrecy, couched in similar terms to that of a Councillor, shall be taken by all other persons in attendance at Executive Council on the first occasion in each calendar year on which they so attend.”

Section 19 of this document goes on to say: “The obligation to protect the secrecy of proceedings in the Executive Council continues to be binding after resignation of a Member of the Council or even after the dissolution of the Government.”

Although I am satisfied that the reference to this Executive Council Paper was no doubt inadvertent, it would remiss of me not to bring this matter to the attention of all Honourable Members. It is a breach of the procedure and the secrecy of Council. I would not wish to see a recurrence. It is not a serious matter, and it has been referred to, so I have had no choice but let other Members have copies of this. I would ask them to make as few references to it as possible and necessary. I would ask that we do not have a repetition of this in future, where an Executive Council (now Cabinet) Paper is brought to this Honourable House and material taken from it to aid in debates in this House.

As I said, this matter of Executive Council Paper, No. 751/01 is not a very serious matter, but it is the principle with which I am dealing, and not the contents of this particular Paper.

Therefore, Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I would ask you to continue with your debate. You may wish to make a comment on this when you get up.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Having spoken to you, I would accept that it was erroneous, on my part, but needless to say, Sir, it is a matter that has continued on. I was at a total disadvantage in not being able to address it. I simply wanted to try to clear the matter up. If you will allow me, I will continue now, Sir.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: As I said before, in March of 2001, Her Majesty's Government (HMG) advised the Overseas Territories that it had committed them to what was termed the Feira Accord, the precursor to the EU Directive on the Taxation of Savings. Of course, we sought advice and information, and we quickly learned that this was essentially a plan to reduce tax fraud in Europe. In the wake of the OECD Commitment letter, which had been signed by the previous government, there was no question of simply refusing. From our perspective, the redeeming feature of the plan was that it seemed to recognise the need for a level playing field. That is, the same rules should be put in place by all the significant countries, particularly the United States.

If the European Union and the United States agreed that there should be a new system of automatic reporting, there was not much doubt in anyone's mind that other countries would have to step in line. We were concerned about this because it was a matter of such key importance, but at that time, we had reason for optimism. The draft Directive itself acknowledged the need for a level playing field. With your permission, Sir, I would like to quote one section of the draft Directive, the proposal for a Council Directive in Brussels, 18 July 2001; it is certainly not from Executive Council.

It reads: “In order to preserve the competitiveness of the EU financial markets, it was agreed that as soon as the Council had reached agreement on the substantial content of the Directive and before its adoption, the Presidency and the Commission would immediately enter into discussions with the US and key third countries: Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Monaco, Andorra and San Marino, to promote the adoption of equivalent measures in those countries.”

Moving through the timing of this, we see that what was adopted in July 2001 clearly points out that the level playing field we expected was going to be promoted by the EU. Most importantly, it includes the United States of America.

In terms of tactics, at that time I recognised that our concerns would carry more weight if we joined forces with the other Caribbean Territories. As I have said before, during the course of the year, we had a series of meetings with those Territories and with Her Majesty's Government. In September of 2001, some two months after the draft Directive had been issued, we and the other Caribbean Territories each sent an agreed letter to Her Majesty's Government, putting our position in writing and expressing our concerns about the need for a level playing field.

You will see from what I have said so far, that the approach we were taking with Her Majesty's Government in those days was not to say, “No, we will not do it,” but rather, “We want to be involved in the discussions and we must be sure that the playing field stays level.”

The contents of this letter were finalised in Tortola at a meeting with the other Overseas Territories. I have also mentioned that in that meeting of 3 – 4 September, the current Leader of Government Business led the Cayman delegation. I have explained all of these things in detail, partly to show what our approach was in 2001, but also because the letter to which I referred must be the letter that the present Leader of Government Business has persistently sought to persuade the country I did not send. That letter, as I quoted from him earlier, was supposedly a letter of strong objection. He also says that, had it been sent, it would have made all the difference in the world.

It is obvious from the reply of Baroness Amos to the Chief Minister of Montserrat on 21 September 2001 that there is no doubt that Her Majesty's Government fully understood what all of the Overseas Territories were saying. That letter was copied to all of the Overseas Territories' Chief Ministers and Leaders. The strategy that we adopted would have worked out reasonably well if the EU had met and stuck by what they had said about the level playing field in the draft Directive of 18 July 2001, from which I just quoted a couple of minutes ago.

Unfortunately, what eventually transpired was that the Americans did not budge in any significant way. We know that now. However, the EU decided, in 2002, to go ahead anyway. I think it is safe to say that it was at that moment that the Directive became so dangerous and problematic for the Cayman Islands. It was at that point that the government of the day rightly decided that it was necessary to adopt all available measures to avoid being committed to the Directive. It was going to tilt the playing field against us, and leave us at a disadvantage, driving business towards our competitors.

It was reassuring to hear that as the last resort, if all negotiations failed, the new Government had expert advice that we had a good legal case for saying that Her Majesty's Government could not impose this kind of measure against our will. At that point in time, we all thought that Her Majesty's Government would not try to do that. However, we still do not know what plan of action was devised by the Government to meet this stated objective. This is one of the many questions for which no answer has been given.

It now looks very much as though the answer might have been that no plan was devised, or, if a plan was devised, none was implemented. It appears that the Government simply did nothing, except to say that we would not sign up until the end of last year. Our understanding is that at the eleventh hour they ran off to London begging for concessions. Finally, as the minute hand approaches midnight, they come to the financial community for advice and support.

Now, for the first time, the Opposition (which I dare say has always expressed its support for the Government's objective) is invited to share responsibility for an effort that has failed. We are expected to join in the decision to commit the Cayman Islands to the Directives. Therefore, there are more questions: What went wrong? What are the consequences? It is not easy to answer either question, because the Government has been so tight-lipped: no information has been forthcoming. It has not explained what it did to try to avoid the Directive. It has not explained the return that it has made in the stance that it has taken. Certainly, it has not provided any assessment of the possible consequences.

The Government is saying that the financial community is happy with the results. What is being said is that if the Government's assessment of HMG's determination and our legal position are correct, we do not seem to have much of a choice. We will have to make the best of a very bad situation. That is all I can call it.

This is not an endorsement of what the Government has been doing, or perhaps not doing, since 2002. It is equally wrong, in my view, for the Leader of Government Business to claim that he is insisting on a level playing field, and to pretend that he has achieved this by his tough negotiations. What he has not explained is that he is talking about the wrong playing field—that is, Europe, not the United States. If the United States is not on board, there is no question that the rest of the world is going to follow Europe, as the Leader of Government Business well knows. It is not to say that the level playing field with Europe was achieved by our negotiations. Mr. Speaker, that is written into the Directive itself. It is in Article 17. With your permission, I will quote quickly from that.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, Article 17 reads: “Before 1st January 2004 Member States shall adopt and publish the laws, regulations and administrative provisions necessary to comply with this Directive. They shall forthwith inform the Commission thereof.”

It goes on to speak of the provisions under which the Member states of the EU shall apply these provisions. Of course, each EU country that is implementing the Directive wanted to be sure that the other EU countries and the territories they control would be doing the same thing at the same time. We have said repeatedly that this is an issue that should transcend partisan politics and that we agreed that the Directive should be resisted and offered the Government our support and assistance, notwithstanding the fact that they might think that that is worth nothing. The consistent response of Leader Government Business has been to dismiss our support. He accuses us of playing politics and certainly he has tried to shift the blame for whatever has gone wrong in the manner in which he has handled it. I believe that what has gone wrong is that the Leader of Government Business completely abandoned the earlier approach taken by the Government of which I was Leader of Government Business, and of which he was Deputy Leader, of seeking our objectives through negotiation and by establishing a responsible policy on the subject of tax cooperation.

Instead, wholeheartedly he adopted a course that was entirely contingent on the success of the legal argument as a deterrent to Her Majesty's Government imposing the Directive on us. As it has transpired, it seems that the legal argument that was so loudly touted, and so much congratulated, was nothing but a broken reed.

We are amazed that there are so many questions that, inexplicably, remain unanswered. We take the view that the country deserves answers. Certainly, the Government must account for its conduct on this critically important matter. What is the true story in relation to the legal advice the Government supposedly received last year, or the year before: that if the UK attempted to impose the Directive in the way that is now threatened, the Government could and would take them to court? Has that advice changed?

I think all of us would like to know that. Is it a fact that there is not now, and never has been, any legal basis to resist the imposition of the Directive? If this is true, why then has it taken this long for the Government to obtain this advice? More questions: what efforts have been made to achieve the original objective of avoiding the Directive and what have been the results? Did the Government seek external advice? If so, what was the nature of that advice? Were there ever any real negotiations between the Government and HMG in relation to the Directive? If so, what were they and what were the results? Was there a PR campaign to ensure that the London press understood that we have entered into the OECD commitment to cooperate with the OECD's plan for on-request—I repeat: on-request, not automatic information exchange, that we are not a country of tax dodgers, but have a responsible policy of adhering to international standards? Mr. Speaker, if we did have a PR campaign, it has certainly not been effective.

With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I would like to quote from the publication, The Times. It is article—

The Speaker: It is an article in The Times. What is the date?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: 11 February 2004.

The Speaker: Since that is a magazine that is freely available publicly, I would not ask that it be tabled.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do not mind tabling it. I do not read from this article to gloat, because this thing affects the entire country, all of us included. However, I need to prove the point that whatever PR campaign may have been mounted thus far has not been effective.

February 11 was only two days ago. The headline of the article is, "Pirates of the Caribbean refuse to play ball on tax havens." Mr. Speaker, it starts off by quoting the Chancellor of the Exchequer. This is to prove the tactics that are being used on us.

"Gordon Brown promised yesterday to clamp down on Caribbean pirates. They will be caught, the Chancellor told a meeting of European Finance Ministers, but the question is, when?"

"The pirates are an unprepossessing gang of bankers and lawyers lounging on the strips of sand that are the Cayman Islands, which claim a kind of allegiance to the Crown. Brown has promised to make them comply with the EU Savings Tax Directive, a law aimed at catching tax cheats that requires banks automatically to disclose to EU tax authorities details of interest paid to EU residents."

"The directive comes into force next year and member states must have the legislation in place by June to make it happen."

"But the Cayman pirates are dithering, playing a game of chicken with the Chancellor daring him to legislate and making cheeky demands for quid pro quos."

"We are not part of the EU, Cayman says. We might obey your laws if you let us into your ports for a bit of financial raiding."

"Sensing weakness, the Swiss are retreating fast from their reluctant acquiescence last year. As a condition of remaining in the project, they are asking that an entirely unconnected treaty, the Schengen Agreement, be changed to exempt Switzerland from its provisions on the exchange of data in criminal matters, the excuse being the Swiss concern that it will impinge on bank secrecy."

"Jersey, Guernsey and the Isle of Man, meanwhile, are keeping one foot poised over the brake. Surrounded by the EU, the Crown Dependencies know that they have no choice but to appear to co-operative. But any sign of a concession to the Swiss or to Cayman, and the game is over, say the Channel Islanders."

"It is a bit like herding cats, and the Chancellor's threat of neocolonial rule by Westminster diktat is an indication of his frustration. The sensible thing would be to scrap this EU directive and refer the whole matter back to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development [the OECD, as it is commonly called]. Its sensible attempt to improve disclosure by tax havens was undermined by the EU's earlier messy compromise deal with the Swiss on the directive that enables them to avoid exchange of information by agreeing to a withholding tax."

"This is a deal that was unnecessary, because the directive contains a loophole so large that the entire island of Jersey could sail through undetected. The proposed EU law applies to the individuals, not companies, and tax experts believe that trusts will also be unaffected. Any tax advisor who was not arranging his clients' affairs to avoid being caught by the directive would be derelict in his duty, I am told."

"So what is the directive's true purpose? This is likely to be found only within the bowels of the EU tax authorities."

That kind of exposure makes it very easy for Her Majesty's Government to justify rough measures against us. The point is not for it to be heard for the sake of hearing it, but to show that, with them developing that attitude, and us not being able to counteract it, they are only building their own case to do as they wish.

What about the consequences? Here are some cold, hard questions with which we all have to deal. Is it true that we will have to establish a large new department of Government to supervise and enforce this Directive, and to make sure that all of our businesses are complying? Is it true that there will have to be new rules requiring all businesses to keep full financial records, and make them available to this new supervisory authority? Is it true that this will apply to all businesses, including local businesses and tradesmen, not only the offshore companies? What will be the cost of all of this? If any of this becomes reality, how will Government raise the additional revenue required function? What is Government's estimate of the cost to the private sector? What are its thoughts of the amount of offshore business we might lose? Has any assessment been done?

Here we are, very much in the dark on an issue I am sure we all consider to be of the gravest importance to the country. The Government expects us to take a position on the Motion it has brought, although they have treated us and the country, for that matter, like mushrooms throughout this process and even now.

What about the decision that now, shockingly, confronts this country? Should the Government say, "No" to HMG? Should it make the commitment that HMG demands? Should it make the commitment with conditions to protect our interests?

Notwithstanding the seven concessions that were read out earlier by the Leader of Government Business, there are many more that could be discussed, which would be needed for us to feel any comfort that our interests were really being protected. Although I know that at this point in time we do not hold any advantages or leverage whatsoever, there have been changes in the stride of Her Majesty's Government as this work-in-progress has developed, especially on the most critical area of the level playing field. They have changed their minds from what the document of 18 July 2001 stated about the level playing field, which included having immediate talks with the United States, before implementation, with a view to getting them on board. That was everyone's comfort zone at the time, including EU Member States.

Obviously, Mr. Speaker, the third approach would be the best one, if, at this very late stage, there is any more room for persuasion or discussions with Her Majesty's Government. From the Motion, there does not seem to be that latitude.

There is not much doubt what the Cayman Islands need in this regard. First and foremost, we should not have to put this Directive into effect until the United States is truly on board. Then, we could realistically expect that there would be a level playing field in a very short time. Also, for example, we should reserve our option to impose a withholding tax instead of reporting, as is the case for the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man. We should reserve the right, in consultation with HMG, to introduce measures enabling the exemption of local and other businesses if the Caymanian authorities are satisfied that they will not be making interest payments to Europeans.

Very importantly, Mr. Speaker, one of the conditions that would make us all a bit more comfortable would be to preserve the country's position on fiscal sovereignty.

We know that there is a risk that after all that has gone on, and at this late stage, HMG may simply say, "No", and simply legislate directly, as they say they will. To be truthful, Mr. Speaker, that might indeed be worse than having our own legislation. However, we take the view that the key factors in weighing up these risks are: (1) our legal position, and (2) HMG's flexibility. Unfortunately, only the Government can make the call on those two issues. Those of us on this side have no direct knowledge. We have only what Government chooses to tell us. Because we have not been put properly in the picture, we are not in a position, at this point in time, to make that decision for the country. Whatever the Government does decide, I want to say here and now that the Opposition will, in the national interests, do whatever we can to make the best of what is truly a very bad situation.

As I said, we find ourselves without full knowledge of all of the ramifications. We know that there are a host of unanswered questions, which I have alluded to. I do not know whether the Government has the answers to those questions. Perhaps we might hear the answers before the debate is closed, but suffice it to say that we are not crying foul because we were not in the loop of things; we believe that there was a critical juncture. As I outlined with the methodology that was employed during 2001, when I was the Leader of Government Business, we took our stance and positions during several discussions, not only with the other Overseas Territories, but with HMG itself. That position was changed.

I really have some difficulty understanding. If this legal advice that took us to the European Court of First Instance was something that would carry us through with a legal leg to stand on, then why are we ending up as we are? Obviously, that could go no further than it did. Somewhere along the line, that legal advice did not carry the thought-process through to the end.

I understand that we, meaning the Cayman Islands' Government, have three independent opinions from legal luminaries overseas, which tell us that there is no basis to hold out and no legal grounds on which to stand with the stance that had been taken. I wish that we had had the advantage of that advice prior to going that route; perhaps the minds could have been able to think through a different strategy. Nevertheless, we are where we are.

The Government has taken its positions and has adopted its style of dealing with the matter. It has now come to this point. We have not been kept in the loop. We have had but a few hours to digest the letter from Dawn Primarolo, and it leaves so many unanswered questions that our position is simply this: The Government is dealing with it, and they have not included us in any part of the process, so they will have to see it through to the end. We shall not participate in the vote on the Motion; we will simply abstain, and the Government will continue on the road that it has taken. Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, before we continue the debate, I want to let you know that it has been brought to my attention that it is the intention of Government to complete the Motion today.

The Speaker: All right. I have been informed that we will be going beyond 4.30 pm, but perhaps we will not be able to complete this today. We will probably have to come back on Monday. I do intend to take a 10 minute break at this time. I would ask you all to be back here by 4.10 pm. Thank you.

Proceedings suspended at 4.02 pm

Proceedings are resumed at 4.20 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of Government Business winding up.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: We have come here today on a matter that all of us have deemed one of the most important to face this country in a long time. It is so, Mr. Speaker. I have come here today with a heavy heart.

At all times I thought that the Opposition was with the Government on this matter. At every opportunity I have updated this House extensively; frank and full, open, accountable statements have been made to this Honourable House to inform Members and carry them each step of the way. After every meeting I have updated this House; after every meeting abroad; and after every piece of official correspondence that came our way. I have listened to the Opposition, in particular, the Leader of the Opposition, on national television expound matters on the European Union and United Kingdom and the Cayman Islands position and the European Union Savings Directive. The Leader of the Opposition has spent a tremendous amount of time in his speech to the country and to his party gathering or launch, whatever they called it at the time, last year.

There was a document put in the paper, which was abbreviated at points, but it carried a fair amount of coverage of the speech by the Leader of the Opposition on the European Union Savings Directive. I listened to them last week on Radio Cayman, this time not just him, but the general secretary of the party, the Second Elected Member for George Town, and the party chairman, Mr. Duckworth, talking about the pros and the cons. They were criticising the Government; criticising the Leader of Government Business; talking about the European Union's position; and talking about the UK's position—and yet that Member, the Leader of the Opposition, has the audacity, even the temerity, to come here and say that he was not informed of the situation and further, to offer a vote of abstention.

I am being told by the secretary general (the Second Elected Member for George Town) that if I made my bed, I should lie in it. That is the Opposition. Those over there are the Members of the People's Progressive Movement, who said that they want to protect the people of this country. I do not need to reiterate, at this late hour of the day, the Government's stance, or the Government's history of long negotiations with the United Kingdom. I said all of that this morning already; it is now in Hansard.

There are a few points that I would like to cover, but before I do that I would like to speak to the claim made by the Leader of the Opposition: the claim of not knowing. His usual cry is that his side has not been informed. The usual cry is that it is someone else's fault. When are they going to take responsibility for their actions? When? That is a prime example, a mirror, of why the Member is not able to lead. In the face of tremendous challenge, in the face of a hurt to the country, they play politics. They try to crawl out of situations that they knew they were in, rather than face the facts; rather than stand up and be counted at times. They walk out on budgets.

The Member cannot and should not complain about the lack of information. That could not be so, because as we received that letter from the Paymaster General yesterday, we called a business committee meeting. We informed their member on the Committee, the Second Elected Member for George Town, and the General Secretary of the People's Progressive Movement that we could not give him the letter yet, as we had to prepare for this meeting. However, we would come to the Cabinet, and as soon as we could get to the party, we would give them the same correspondence. We gave that to them late yesterday afternoon, at about 6 pm.

Hour of Interruption—4.30 pm

The Speaker: Honourable Member, we have reached the hour of 4.30 pm. It is my understanding that you would wish to complete your winding up this afternoon. If so, may I call on you for the suspension of Standing Orders 10(2) so that we can continue?

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for your indulgence. We propose to complete the business this afternoon and we therefore ask for the suspension of Standing Order 10(2).

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 10(2) to continue the meeting so that the Honourable Leader of Government Business may complete his winding up.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow the business to be completed.

The Speaker: Please continue, Honourable Member.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we received the letter yesterday and we told them that we would give it to them yesterday and last night the letter was put in their hands just hours after we received it. They had as much time as we had to take our position.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, you should not be in the party then.

Mr. Speaker, if they are not keeping her up to date then she should not be there. You should be on this side.

To top it all off in dealing with this claim of not being informed, their chairman came to a meeting yesterday afternoon and took part in the discussions. I had no doubt that he informed them because the same questions he asked, the Leader of the Opposition asked here this afternoon. They cannot come now and say that they did not know and that they were not informed: verbatim. I do not know then, Mr. Speaker, why they are complaining that we have not answered the questions. I do not know if it is any use answering the questions. We have told them over and over again. However, when people want to ignore something and say that no one has said anything to them, no matter what you tell them they are not going to listen. It is obvious that the Opposition is not listening to us.

I want to deal with a few points about which the Leader of the Opposition spoke. He said that it came as a shock to him that we were here today, because we had said that if the UK tried direct legislation we would take them to court. He said that we have no case now. No one should really doubt the resolve of this Government of the United Democratic Party to deal with hard issues or to face adversity, trials and challenges. No one should doubt our resolve to go to court either, because we took them to court in the Court of First Instance in the European Union.

We have always said that we would continue legal challenges if they try to go through the Privy Council—after a while of course, because we were still getting legal information and rulings as to whether we could challenge it through Parliament. However, the legal advice is that we cannot challenge through Parliament. Parliament is supreme. Yes, if they had gone through the Privy Council that was our intention. We also said that the United Kingdom must come closer to our demand for a level playing field. We also said that we must receive some benefits. Mr. Speaker, you cannot cut off your nose to spite your face.

They should remember that we use two senior Members of the Bar here, Mr. David Ritch and Mr. Ramon Alberga, to advise us. We cannot “cut off our nose to spite our face.” No one need doubt our resolve, because we have gotten some benefits. I am not saying that these are the best, but we are closer to what we have been asking for. Am I satisfied? Of course I am not. I do not think any of us are satisfied, because who knows the future? From what is put in front of us, we have no other alternative. They know that, and that is the reason why they are abstaining. If there is anyone without a case, it is that side over there, the Opposition. They did not, and they do not, even have an argument against this.

He claims that it is wrong that we achieve a level playing field when we are only dealing with Europe, but what the United Kingdom has said is that the others will have to fall in line before we do anything. That is the level playing field. I do not think that I need to read the letter again, because I have already read where the Paymaster General gives that commitment. We will not sign anything if the others do not fall in line. That is the level playing field about which we have been talking. If somebody else can tell me anything else, then I will sit down and shut up.

They have asked quite a number of questions here today and we are going to give them some answers in an appropriate forum. I am not going to do that at this point, but I can tell them this: we were given legal advice.

The Member went on to talk about the Public Relations Campaign and I thought that when he was going to refer to that dirty article in the foreign newspaper, that he would have realised—why even repeat those words? Why should I even read them in the hallowed halls of this legislature, and into Hansard, for posterity to see? If it were me, I would not have done that. Then he had the audacity to say that he was not doing it to gloat. That is what he was doing. By every appearance of what I saw and heard over there, that is what it was.

The Member, the Leader of the Opposition went to great lengths to talk about the mention we have made of him not sending a letter. I listened to him grappling with what he knew was wrong. He knew that he should not have tabled that Executive Council document. I want to say something to you, Mr. Speaker, this afternoon. If I am challenged again by the Second Elected Member for George Town about this document being incriminating evidence, I will have to read that short EXCO paper into this record, because we have to defend ourselves. We cannot leave things hanging. People do take statements, pieces or words out of documents, as he did, to try to make people believe that there was something wrong with the paper I put forward.

The Deputy Financial Secretary, the Executive Director of the Secretariat and I went to the British Virgin Islands on 3-4 September, as he said. The EXCO document is my report to the Executive Council. It is a normal thing for anybody who travels on Government business to come back and make a report and that is what the EXCO paper is. They did not get this from McKeever Bush; that is the part that is wrong! It is not what the paper says. All we have done in this paper was to come back and report the meeting in the British Virgin Islands. We invited the Governor to authorise the Leader of the Opposition, then Leader of Government Business, to sign the letter to Baroness Amos for transmittal to her on 11 September 2001, the same day. He did all of this to try and crawl out of his not having sent that letter. This is not the letter: this is 6 months later. I do not know whether he said that he forgot—I think he said that this was what he was supposed to send, and that he did not, or that it did not pertain to what I had said or accused him of. Do not challenge me.

They might believe that because they have this Executive Council paper, there was not a letter, but they had better stop challenging people. Just as I am here reading extracts from the paper, I will probably have to do the same thing again. This particular letter that he had was not the letter. The letter had to do with our advising them in April.

Let me give you some background on how that happened. The Executive Director sent the briefing up to us and at that time, on 4 April, we dealt with it. That gave strong views as to why we would not be helped by what the UK was proposing. What arose out of the Feira Accord was the Overseas Caribbean Territories (OCT) decision. The Feira Accord gave rise to the tax directive, and a short draft letter was given to them on the taxation of savings, making them aware that we knew what damage it would do to us and asking them to leave us out of it.

We did give him a letter and that letter was not sent to the Baroness Scotland. He tried to give some dates to make it look like his timing and our timing was off and so therefore it had to be according to him, the letter that he read.

He quoted from a statement I made 16 July 2003. It will take a few minutes, but I think I should read what I said so that this House and this country are informed.

It reads as follows: "In connection with the European Savings Tax Directive it is important to outline their sins of commission and omission. On 5 November the European Commission published its proposal called a package to tackle harmful tax competition in the European Union, which included a provision on the taxation savings income. This has come to be known as the European Tax Package.

"In May 1998 the European Commission published its draft Council Directive on the Taxation of Savings Income. This draft Directive was something that the government of the day was aware of. In May 1998 discussions on the drafting of the revised European Union Overseas Countries and Territories (OCT) decision also commenced.

These discussions continued into summer 2001. Bermuda indicated it wished to continue being excluded from the OCT decision.

"In September 1998, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the United Kingdom Government's treasury held its first tax seminar, which presented information on the European Union Tax Package and was attended by representatives of the Cayman Islands. At about this time the Foreign and Commonwealth Office also forwarded to the European Union a summary of the constitutional arrangements that it had with its dependent territories as were then referred to. Indicating that, in the case of the constitutional arrangements with Bermuda, the United Kingdom did not have the power to disallow legislation passed by the Bermuda legislature, and further did not have the power to force legislation on Bermuda as Bermuda's constitution did not allow the United Kingdom to use the peace order and good governance order in council process that was available in the case of the Caribbean territories, including the Cayman Islands.

"In April 1999, the European Commission held a meeting on the subject of the revised OCT decision which was attended by representatives of the Cayman Islands and other United Kingdom Caribbean Overseas Territories.

"In June 1999 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the United Kingdom treasury held a second tax seminar, which presented information on the European Union's Tax Package and was attended by representatives of the Cayman Islands. In addition, during 1999, extensive discussion occurred within the European Union regarding the structuring of the draft Directive on the Taxation of Savings Income. The United Kingdom lobbied extensively to ensure an exchange of information model was used rather than a withholding tax model so as to preserve the London Eurobond market. They were protecting themselves.

"On 20 February 2000, the United Kingdom released a discussion paper on the then current form of the draft Directive on the Taxation of Savings Income.

"On 19 June 2000, the heads of government of the European member states, meeting in Santa Maria da Feira, adopted the proposal of the European finance Ministers for a revised form of the draft Directive on the Taxation of Savings Income, which has now become known as the Feira Accord; an agreement to adopt the automatic exchange of tax information as the basis for enforcing extra-territorial tax regimes of the European Union member states. The document specified the requirement for the Netherland Antilles, as well as the United Kingdom dependencies of the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man and the UK's Caribbean territories, including the Cayman Islands, to adopt the same measures as the European Union states in regard to the Taxation of Savings Income. This is also the document that did not include Bermuda.

“In November 2000, meetings were held where the Government of the Cayman Islands was not represented but at which representatives of the Caribbean overseas territories and department of the European Union member states began discussions of the revised OCT decision which was to come into effect in November 2001 for a period of ten years. This meeting reviewed a commission prepared draft revised OCT decision containing specific reference to the taxation of savings. The wording is as follows in [Article 55]: ‘Taxation of Savings Income. Member states which have dependent or associated territories or which have special responsibilities or taxation prerogatives in respect of other territories shall take appropriate measures within the context of their constitutional arrangements, to ensure that provisions concerning interest payments to community residents which are comparable to those laid down in any community directive which may be adopted are introduced in the OCTs.’

“All these events took place under the leadership of Mr. Truman Bodden and Mr. Tom Jefferson who did nothing.

“On 21 March 2001, the Baroness Scotland, QC, wrote to the Overseas Territories, including the Cayman Islands, in relation to the European Savings Directive indicating that the United Kingdom expected the Cayman Islands to comply with the Directive on the Taxation of Savings income and requesting a response by the end of April 2001. The Leader of Government Business of the day, the now Leader of the Opposition, was given a draft letter that could have gotten us out of that particular mess. That letter was not sent.”

That is the Hansard of 16 July 2003 [2003 Official Hansard Report, page 461]. I can table it if you so desire.

The Speaker: I think that information is available to all Members.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, the following statement I have consistently said and I quote if I may. I will lay that upon the Table also.

“In the summer of 2000, the Feira Accord was adopted. In November 2000, the framework for the Overseas Countries and Territories was put forward that included tax matters. This ensured that the Cayman Islands was caught up in it because we had not negotiated our way out of the Feira Accord.

“Mr. Truman Bodden or Mr. Thomas Jefferson who were the leaders of the Government at the time did anything to negotiate the Islands out of this mess.

“In early 2001, that document was sent out informing the Government Leader that final agreement would be made in the summer. It was obvious the Cayman Islands then had a chance to register its objections at that point. It was at that time that Executive Council gave Mr. Kurt Tibbetts, then the Leader of Government Business a letter to send to the UK Treasury. He did not send out that letter. In the summer of 2001 the final wording to the OCT decision was made, and the formal document agreed upon, without Executive Council’s knowledge because we thought Mr. Tibbetts had sent in our strong objections.

In November 2000, as we now see in the document 2001, the document was agreed upon and came into force. It had several stages before that could happen – adoption and actually coming into force.

I can lay this upon the Table if it is so required. It is the same information as contained in the other document.

If this Government, or this country can be blamed—I say country—then perhaps it is because of the business that we have conducted over the years that we need to be where we are today. If there is anything this Government can be blamed for, it is for being too nice: we cannot say that we shirked our duty in trying to protect the people and the business community of this country. I have fought, and so have the Financial Secretary and the Members of Cabinet. We have all done the same thing. Those of us on the front line are truly tired to the bone. I am prepared to give up any fight, but we have to do what is best, now.

I do not need to go through the letter again, but what does that letter say to us? It says that the Directive will come into effect on 1 January 2005, provided that the necessary agreements with the third countries and territories are in place, with the same start date. That is the level playing field, Mr. Speaker. That is a key element.

The United Kingdom Government said, in this letter, that they will help us make every effort to conclude by 30 June 2004 the necessary agreements with the European Member States for tax exchange. Mr. Speaker, even before that, they agree in the letter to begin discussion in the 2003/2004 current financial year on a bilateral double taxation agreement. This is going to help us.

We know that we will not see these things happening immediately; we know that the benefits will not come smashing down on us immediately. However, nothing will happen if they do not do their part. That is what we have been saying all along, so the Leader of the Opposition cannot say anything different.

What does the Motion say and what is being asked of Members? It says: “BE IT RESOLVED THAT in accordance with the negotiated agreement with the United Kingdom (UK) Government. . . the Government recommends to this Honourable House that appropriate legislation be enacted on or before 30 June 2004 for the implementation of the European Union Savings Directive (EUSD), subject to the condition that relevant measures of the EUSD, come into effect at the same time in the European Union Member States and named third countries and dependent and overseas territories.”

I do not believe that anybody on the Opposition Bench could do better. Judging from their input here, it is evident that they cannot.

We have come to the end of this very important discussion. I am a sinner, but I have always depended on God to guide and help us. I believe that He has always done that in my life. He has taken me out of some rough spots. He has helped these Cayman Islands in the past, and He is going to help us in the future. I believe in God, the Supreme Being, who is mightier than any of us in here, mightier than the United Kingdom, and mightier than the European Union. As for us, we are going to do our part; we are not going to “cut off our noses to spite our faces.” In the times of challenge, in the times of adversity and in the times of trial, we are going to stand up and be counted.

I ask the Opposition, “What will ye do?”

The Speaker: The question is: “BE IT RESOLVED THAT in accordance with the negotiated agreement with the United Kingdom (UK) Government, the terms of which are contained in the letter dated 12 February 2004, from the Paymaster General of the UK to the Hon. W. McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP, Leader of Government Business, the Government recommends to this Honourable House that appropriate legislation be enacted on or before 30 June 2004 for the implementation of the European Union Savings Directive (EUSD), subject to the condition that the relevant measures of the EUSD come into effect at the same time in European Union Member States and named third countries and dependent and overseas territories.”

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Can I have a Division, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, a division please.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am sure that Members have been made aware by now of the position with the Throne Speech. We did intimate in the Business Committee meeting yesterday that the decision is because of the change of the financial year. The Throne Speech will not be in February. It will be later in the year when the Budget comes and the new financial year begins.

The new financial year is in June or first of July but we have to have a budget as we know under the law by the 30 June so the Throne Speech will be around that time.

In accordance then, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House sine die.

The Speaker: Honourable Members before putting the question on the adjournment I would just like to brief you on the progress of our Legislative Assembly building now under renovations.

The latest date I have received from the project manager for the completion of the building, is around the first part of June. This was in a meeting with senior officials: the Chief Secretary, the Honourable First Official Member; the Leader of Government Business; the Deputy Leader of Government Business; the Clerk, the Project Manager, the Deputy Chief Secretary and I. We are behind them and we have impressed upon them the importance of getting this building ready as soon as possible. We will keep you updated on this as the progress reports come in. Thank you so much.

The question is that this House do now adjourn sine die.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 5.11 pm the House adjourned sine die.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
8 MARCH 2004
11.13 AM
Second Sitting

The Speaker: I will ask the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to lead us in prayer.

PRAYERS

Hon. James M. Ryan: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.16 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received an apology for absence from the Elected Member for East End who is attending the 53rd Parliamentary Seminar in the United Kingdom.

I have also received from the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (CPA) in London the following message from Her Majesty the Queen to be read today, Commonwealth Day.

Commonwealth Day Message 2004 by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II—Building a Commonwealth of Freedom

“The lives of many of my generation were profoundly changed by a world war fought in the name of freedom. I have often reflected with pride on the huge contribution made by the peoples of the Commonwealth to that cause of liberty in which millions perished.

“In the years following the war, a succession of countries emerging into independence chose to join the Commonwealth as free and equal members. As a result, the Commonwealth became rooted in all parts of the world and developed into the modern organisation we know today.

“Democracy, national self-determination, individual liberty and human rights — all these are fundamental to that which binds the Commonwealth together.

“The importance of these principles was clearly in the minds of Commonwealth leaders during their discussions at last December's summit in Abuja, Nigeria. Living up to principles is never easy. It can involve difficult and painful decisions. But the affirmation of those values provides common ground for the Commonwealth as a whole to grow stronger.

“The Abuja meeting also made the crucial link between democracy and development. Democracy is important to sustained development — and underdevelopment can be democracy's greatest threat.

“Nowhere is freedom perfectly realised — and its enemies are not only those who terrorise and torture. They are also hunger, poverty, disease and ignorance. That is why it is important for the Commonwealth to do all it can to tackle these challenges directly, whether in alleviating poverty or in promoting education and health. It is also essential to strengthen the rule of law, protect democratic freedoms and build strong civil societies.

“I firmly believe that if the Commonwealth is to increase its role as a force for good in the world, strengthening democratic freedoms must remain at the heart of its purposes.

Elizabeth R.”

Update on progress of renovation works on the Legislative Assembly Building and relocation of Offices

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I indicated at the adjournment of this Honourable House on 13 February 2004, that I would update Members on the progress of the renovation works on the Legislative Assembly Building.

I have been advised by the Deputy Chief Secretary, Mr. Donovan Ebanks, who is the Controlling Officer for the Legislative Department that the Legislative Assembly Building should be fully completed by 21 June, 2004 and that the front area of the building should be completed by 5 June, 2004, to allow the annual Queen's Birthday Awards ceremony to take place on the front steps of the building.

In the meantime, however, it is necessary for the administrative offices of the Legislative Department to be relocated by 30 March, 2004 as a result of Court 5 (these premises) being required for a very important criminal trial beginning 5 April, 2004. New temporary accommodation has not yet been confirmed, but is being pursued as a matter of urgency. The Sale of Laws section of the Department will, of course, also be moved to the new temporary accommodation and the public will be advised of the new location as soon as possible. In the event of another meeting of the Legislative Assembly being called before the Legislative Assembly Building is available for occupancy, it may be necessary to utilise the George Town, Town Hall, or other suitable venue.

I wish to publicly thank the Honourable Chief Justice and the Courts Administrator for their patience and support in allowing the Legislative Assembly the use of these premises since February, 2003.

The refurbishment of the Legislative Assembly was, initially, not expected to take as long as it has. However, serious defects were discovered, necessitating major repairs and renovations. This, whilst unexpected, was not surprising, considering that the building is over 30 years old and had not before undergone any major repairs.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

Annual Report of the National Drug Council and Audited Financial Statements
1 July 2001 – 30 June 2002
(Deferred)

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I apologise. I am in a situation where I do not have the actual speaking notes with me. I would prefer if the House would be generous enough to give me some time to get those together at another sitting.

The Speaker: The question is that this matter be deferred until another sitting of the House.

All those in favour please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Paper deferred to another sitting.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS
OF THE CABINET

Question No. 99

No. 99: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture if the North Side Primary School has a Counsellor and, if so, how many hours per week is the Counsellor at the school?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: The North Side Primary School has the services of a Counsellor whose schedule is shared with East End Primary School and George Town Primary School.

The schedule allows for one full day at North Side Primary School. However, due to space constraints, the Counsellor presently spends only the afternoon session at the school.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: In the answer the Honourable Minister has said, "However, due to space constraints the Counsellor presently spends only the afternoon session at the school." Is the Minister in the position to say what the plans are to change the situation of the Counsellor spending only the afternoon at the North Side Primary School?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: It is my understanding that the space constraints are brought about by the fact that there is no special room for the Counsellor. Currently, the Counsellor utilises a part of the Library and as such it is inconvenient and difficult to utilise this space for the full time the counsellor is there.

It is also my understanding that the apparent under-utilisation of the counselling service has no significant inconvenience or deprivation to the students at the school.

The accessibility of a room which will allow the Counsellor to spend full time at the school is being reviewed.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I thank the Honourable Member for his reply. Is the Minister in the position to say how many counsellors the Education Department now employs for all of the primary schools?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I would imagine that information is available. Regrettably, I did not seek to apprise myself of that in the preparation for this answer because I did not see that as a supplementary. However, I give the Member an undertaking that I will provide her with that answer at the earliest convenience.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Minister.
The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Could the Minister say if any thought has been given to looking at the old North Side Clinic to renovate that whereby it could serve as a special room for counselling or a special education room for the North Side Primary School?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, that supplementary is coming comfortably close to the next substantive question and I think that there is some edification that I am going to offer in answering that question if the Member would give me a chance.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for North Side would you like to move on to your next question?

Question No. 100

No. 100: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture if there are any plans to provide additional classrooms at the North Side Primary School.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: As I intimated a short while ago, let me give you the substantive answer. There are no plans to provide additional classrooms at the North Side Primary School in next year's Budget. This is due to cost constraints as well as the need to further evaluate the possible need for one classroom in the academic year of 2005.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say how will the North Side Primary School in the coming school year be able to continue to occupy the library as a classroom, and a special education room for counselling and other matters for the school, and thereby provide proper teaching to our students without a proper classroom?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on my most recent visit to the North Side Primary School a few weeks ago, I was apprised of the plans for the development of the school. At that time I was satisfied that the conditions that currently exist do so in such a way that brings no great inconvenience to the learning abilities of the students.

We also discussed the idea of converting the old North Side Clinic into a classroom, thereby making available additional classroom space. It was my understanding then that there was some contention as the Public Works Department had earmarked the building to be condemned. I think there is some question as to the suitability of the roof of the building and we were going to try to ascertain whether we could salvage the building by re-roofing it.

I am convinced, Mr. Speaker, that while the existing situation looks like it is detrimental to the abilities of the children to access proper learning, it really is not as bad as it seems. We could go on for another year until we ascertain whether the growth of the school will necessitate an additional classroom, and then decide how and what kind of classroom we will build.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister is in a position to say if any double classes now exist at the North Side Primary School.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I think that from my recollection there is a situation in which there is one double class. However, the complement is sufficiently small to allow the staff to adequately deal with the numbers and, from my observation, no great inconvenience is caused to the learners in the class.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, this may be outside the ambit of the question, however, I wonder if the Honourable Minister is in a position to say that this double class has resulted, once again, from the lack of an additional teacher. If so, will this position be provided in the upcoming Budget?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education. If you have that information available; it is somewhat slightly outside the question, however if you would wish to answer it.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, any intelligent Minister would plead "the Fifth" on something he is not quite prepared for. Therefore, I so do.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Will you provide me with it?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Certainly, I will give the Member for North Side an undertaking to investigate this and provide her with a written answer in due course.

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I realise that we started Question Time beyond 11 o'clock; I wonder if we should have moved the Suspension of Standing Order or do we continue?

The Speaker: I think it proper to move the suspension. I will call on the Leader of Government Business to move the Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) so that Question Time can continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move for the Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) in order to take questions after 11 am.

The Speaker: All those in favour please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

The Speaker: Please continue, Elected Member for North Side.

Question No.101

No.101: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports to give the number of prisoners who have escaped from Northward Prison over the past two years.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, one prisoner has escaped from Northward over the past two years.

On 16 April, 2002, a life-sentence prisoner escaped from the High-Risk Unit. He was unlawfully at large for 12 days. He was not charged with any offences during this period. Additional cameras and pegging clocks were installed to improve security. The need for these had already been identified and they were on order at the time of the escape.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any more supplementaries? If there are no more supplementaries we will move on.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I seek your indulgence to bring to the attention of this Honourable House the fact that the new Director of the Prison Services, Mr. Dwight Scott, is in the Legislative Assembly at this time.

Question No. 102

(Deferred)

No. 102: Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce if the Government has adopted the CH2M Hill Report.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, and Leader of Government of Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker. I am asking that this Question be deferred to a further date. I hope to have it ready for Wednesday, Sir.

The Speaker: The question is that Question No. 102 be deferred to a further date.

All those in favour please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Question No. 102 deferred until a further sitting.

Question No. 103

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

No. 103: Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology to give an update on the ongoing discussions with Caribbean Utilities Company Ltd.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: On 30 August 2003, Caribbean Utilities Company Ltd. (CUC) introduced a 3 per cent rate increase. The then Honourable Minister responsible for Communications, Minister Pierson, formally requested that CUC refrain from increasing the basic electricity rate. CUC refused this request.

On 3 November 2003, the Government and CUC commenced negotiations at the Marriott Hotel. As a result of those negotiations, CUC rolled back the 3 per cent increase and basic billing rate in November, 2003.

In February, 2004, the Governor in Cabinet approved the engagement of expert consultants in the field of electrical utilities to assist the Cayman Islands Government with its negotiations with CUC. The Government and CUC have scheduled a meeting for 4 pm tomorrow afternoon. Currently, the CUC licence is an exclusive one which expires at midnight 16 January, 2011.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The First Elected Member for George Town, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Could the Honourable Minister state what the Government's objectives are with regard to the ongoing negotiations with CUC?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would wish to draw your attention to Standing Order 23(4) and ask that you make a ruling that I decline to answer that question in light of the fact that negotiations are ongoing and it would prejudice the future prospects of an expedited and early resolution thereto.

Standing Order 23(4)

The Speaker: Standing Order 23(4) states: "a Member of Government" meaning a minister also "may decline to answer a question if an answer would, in the opinion of the Government, be contrary to the public interest." Accordingly, I so order that the question not be pursued until the Honourable Minister is in a position to offer an answer without having a problem with it.

Are there any further supplementaries? The First Elected Member for George Town, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am trying to word something differently so that the Minister might be able to answer. I might run into a stone wall; however, I will try. Understanding the Minister's position with the Government and understanding your ruling, can the Minister state if the ongoing negotiations are geared towards a new agreement prior to the expiration of the existing licence? Or, whether they are geared towards a new rate structure, or whether they are geared towards both?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Suffice it to say that a specific response would also be an infringement of that section. However, I would say to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition that the general approach of the Government, without compromising the negotiations which we hope to engage in tomorrow at 4 pm, is to ensure that the consumer, being the public on the whole, has the lowest price for the electrical unit within the Cayman Islands whatever process that takes.

The Speaker: Any further supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are grateful to the Honourable Minister for this response. However, we do recall that in September of last year, the Honourable Leader of Government Business publicly announced that an agreement had been reached with CUC and a new contract would be signed by the end of December. I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say what has transpired in relation to the negotiations which now appear to have jettisoned that earlier agreement.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The preliminary dateline was 15 December. Both parties, that is, the Government and CUC, thought that it was in the best interests, not only of CUC but the Cayman Islands public, that consultants be brought on board. Hence, the reason CUC and the Government have now retained consultancy services and hence the reason we are going to resume at 4 pm tomorrow.

The Speaker: I will allow one more supplementary. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. May I then ask the Honourable Minister if she would confirm that contrary to what the Honourable Leader of Government Business had said in September, no agreement has yet been reached with CUC?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, various understandings have been reached between both parties and it would not be in the interests at this time, once again for the fear of repeating myself in the public forum, which can be heard by the other side of the negotiating team, that is CUC, to know beforehand what our cards are. CUC have ample opportunity at 4 pm tomorrow to bring up any other issues. I am a transparent Minister and I give the undertaking to this Honourable House that as soon as it will not prejudice the negotiations of the Government, which is in the interests of the general public, I will bring it in a statement, as I will be dealing with another matter this morning, to the attention of all Honourable colleagues and Members of this House.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, would you call the next question please?

Question No. 104

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

No. 104: Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture to give a progress report on the Prospect Primary school now under construction.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, progress of the school construction is in week 24 of a 51-week construction period, that is, around 50 per cent complete.

The roof is due to be completed within the next two weeks, when the internal work and finishes will commence.

Government's consultant Architects for the Prospect Primary School (OBM Ltd) report that in their opinion the school will be completed by the contract delivery date (27 August 2004).

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Could the Honourable Minister state when he gives in the substantive answer, that the Government's consultant architects are of the opinion that the school will be completed on 27 August this year, whether that is a turnkey completion or whether that finishes the structure only? If it is only the structure that this completes, could he give the Members of the House some idea as to what else has to be done to allow the school to be ready to be occupied by students?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am happy that the Honourable Leader asked that question because I recall the Opposition saying the school would not be ready by that time. That is the turnkey time and the school will be ready to receive students at the beginning of the September school year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, can the Minister state if, at this point in time, the opinion of all concerned is that the school will be within budget.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I would have it no other way.

The Speaker: Any further supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister can tell us how the construction of the school is being funded presently.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to say that the Government has raised a loan from one of the myriad of banks that were lining up to lend us the $10 million.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? This is the last supplementary. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, would the Honourable Minister say whether or not, with the Prospect Primary School projected to come on line in September of this year, there will be adequate school space for all primary school students in this country who require primary school education through the government system?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the records will show that when this Minister came to the Ministry, education was in a state of chaos.

We needed three schools, which had not been built in decades, and within three years of this Government taking over the reins we will have completed one school and well on the way to starting the long needed secondary school, in that we will have probably acquired the land by the end of this year.

Mr. Speaker, there is no evidence to my knowledge at this point (and we have begun to make initial assessments), that would indicate that there will be any shortage of school spaces for those children of primary school age wishing to access places in the public school system.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Response to Criticisms by Leader of the Opposition and the PPM on Government's Position on the European Union's Savings Tax Directive

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker and Honourable Members, I wish to respond to some criticisms that have been made by the Leader of the Opposition and the People's Progressive Movement since we announced the Government's position on the European Union Savings Tax Directive last month.

The Opposition, People's Progressive Movement (PPM), has said that the United Democratic Party's (UDP) policy on the European Union Savings Tax Directive made "no sense".

Of course, the UDP is the Government and we must lead. We do not have the luxury of criticising others without having a policy ourselves. I will leave such posturing to the People's Progressive Movement.

Our means of delivering this objective has always been robust but constructive engagement. The threat to our economy originally posed by the Directive was significant. This issue transcends party politics and I am appalled that the Opposition has tried to make political capital out of this issue. Our critics recognised that from the outset we have taken a robust negotiating position on the Directive.

I have been accused, as Leader of the Government, of being too tough. However, we have been fighting for the interests of the people of the Cayman Islands and, in my opinion, we cannot be too tough when fighting for them.

I cannot afford to sit on the fence when it comes to issues of such importance to the Cayman Islands. Others may have that luxury. Others said we should do nothing; however I have the responsibility to protect our interests. I believe we have done so thus far. I believe that the agreement we have reached with the British Government is the best possible result for these Islands in our present constitutional condition.

We have been offered undertakings which will help safeguard the interests of the Cayman Islands, of our economy, of our people and of our businesses.

Our position has been to get real benefits; a tough challenge that required tough negotiation. Now we have them. Well, what are these benefits?

1. Wider access to United Kingdom (UK) and European Union (EU) markets for Cayman Islands financial services products.
2. Recognition of the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange to help Eurobond and debt products listing and "designated investment exchange" status for the Stock Exchange.
3. A comprehensive agreement which will give us access to the UK's tax treaty network — which offers great potential advantages — and will help to attract business to Cayman.
4. The British Government actively promoting — what we all know to be true — our high standards of regulation and financial rules that meet international standards. This will help our global reputation.
5. Having the UK use its influence with other countries to remove Cayman from their blacklists, thereby providing access to markets from which we are presently excluded.
6. A greater role in international meetings that affect our interests. Who better to tell the world about these islands than ourselves?
7. UK promotion of our tourism industry in Europe.

Our efforts, Mr. Speaker, are moving in the direction of translating these into real and tangible benefits. We have now instructed leading financial services lawyers in London to turn these undertakings into real opportunities for our businesses.

I am sensitive to the commercial interests of individual businesses and sectors, but the feeling is that this package, taken as a whole, will benefit the economy and our people. Working together in tandem with the business community we can deliver:

- More jobs in Cayman;
- More business coming here;
- The growth of our financial services and tourism sectors; and
- A further strengthening of our position as a world leading financial centre.

We have never been bellicose or belligerent in our dealings with the British. Nor have we ever been antagonistic.

We have been tough, but we have been respectful and we have engaged. This position has now been vindicated by the agreement we have been able to reach with the British Government.

We have emerged from these negotiations with our interests protected and our international reputation, as a well-regulated financial centre, enhanced.

Before we met with Dawn Primarolo, the Paymaster General, in December last year, the message from the British Government was "take it or leave it". "Either accept it as read or we will impose it directly upon you". There was no scope for any mitigation for possible damages done to our economy.

We robustly, but constructively, argued our position and our very real concerns about the Directive and its impact on our economy. We did not threaten and we did not bluster. We did not shout. We spoke clearly and we spoke reasonably. They heard us and they understood us. We worked tirelessly at home and abroad to secure the interests of these Islands.

The idea that we have not been taking advice from lawyers and economic experts is complete nonsense. We have been advised throughout this process and that advice has helped us structure our negotiating position. To claim otherwise, suggests a total lack of understanding about how modern government operates.

Our political opponents, the PPM, say that we have damaged relations with London. They seem to suggest that it would have been better to capitulate to the British Government — to agree to their original demands — rather than to stand up for Cayman's interests and obtain the undertakings we now have.

In this, Mr. Speaker, there is clear blue water between the UDP and the PPM. We stand to defend the interests of the Cayman Islands. The PPM seem to believe that the British have our best interests at heart and that they will respect us more if we kowtow to their every demand.

I have sat in numerous meetings with British Ministers, and I know that the PPM and the Leader of the Opposition and his colleagues here in the Assembly are wrong to suggest that we have damaged relations — far from it. As a consequence of an extensive process of negotiation, I think the UK government respects and understands our position — and these Islands — much better.

As a result of my meetings with the Paymaster General, Dawn Primarolo, she has understood our position and the need to ensure that the economic interests of the Cayman Islands and its people are safeguarded.

By negotiating long and hard with the UK Government, I believe they respect our position more. And they understand that, in taking a stand and defending the interests of our country, we have demonstrated our competence and commitment. That is something the British respect — in case the PPM does not understand that.

As a consequence of our tough negotiating stance, we are now moving ahead in a spirit of co-operation with the British Government. And one which both governments recognise is mutually beneficial.

The PPM has also accused us of failing to consult on the Directive. The Opposition, as usual, has been less than economical with the truth, concerning the Government's actions regarding this exercise.

Unlike my predecessor, yes, I have given strong leadership. My opponents seem to have equated this with a lack of consultation. On the contrary, I have given direction based on the support of the private sector through the Financial Secretary.

Although the PPM Chairman has recently stated that I have not kept the Public informed and involved, that is blatantly untrue. Since November 2001, I have had more than fourteen meetings with the private sector on matters concerning the Country's financial stability, including the EU Savings Directive. Mr. Speaker, I would like to read these dates into the records. Meetings were held on: 18 July 2002; 8 September 2002; 20 September 2002; 12 November 2002; 28 November 2002; 29 January 2003; 4 February 2003; 26 February 2003; 31 March 2003; 28 May 2003; 9 June 2003; 9 February 2004; February 2004; and 2 March 2004.

Mr. Speaker, you would very well remember some of those meetings as you were a former Minister and part of the consultative committee.

There is an old adage amongst teachers: it says that if you can find a way to address a topic three or more times, then the student will not only learn the material, but will retain it. Mr. Speaker, to further clarify the Governments ability to be inclusive of the Opposition's need to understand what was taking place, Hansard has recorded at least fifteen statements on the subject that took place in this Honourable House.

The Opposition has said that they were not informed, yet they are on record saying that they supported the Government's position. How is that possible, Mr. Speaker, how can they support a position or policy that they have not been informed about. Can they be so daft?

There is another adage that says you can drag a horse to water, but you cannot force it to drink.

Mr. Speaker we have tried to enlighten the Opposition on this matter, but our efforts may have been in vain.

We in Government have been heartened by the support that the business community has expressed for the position we have taken. The business community here agrees with our approach of moving forward in a spirit of co-operation.

At all stages of the process we have consulted with the financial industry which is such an important part of our economy. And they have endorsed our approach. As leading practitioners from the private sector told me last month:

- "It is very easy to pick holes, but I am totally supportive of the government and its strategy."
- "I give credit to the Government for standing firm and getting us to the position we are in today."
- "The Government should be congratulated for the remarkable list of undertakings, representing a sea change in Britain's attitude."

Mr. Speaker, it is sad that those who may oppose me politically have been unable to rise above political differences and recognise the gains we have secured for these Islands on this issue, and that our present Constitution does not allow us to object to legislation that is passed by the House of Commons, in the United Kingdom.

Rab Butler, the former British Chancellor and consummate politician, has been cited by me. He titled his memoirs "The art of the possible". I endorse this political maxim.

This Government knew what it wanted to achieve in its dealings on the Savings Tax Directive. It wanted to safeguard the economic interests of these islands. Mr. Speaker at this time I would ask your permission in allowing me to read a letter that I just received from the Paymaster General. Dawn Primarolo. I will lay the letter and its attachment on the Table of this Honourable House.

The letter is addressed to me, the Leader of Government Business, on 5 March 2004.

"Dear McKeeva,

"Thank you for your letter of 24 February confirming that the Legislative Assembly passed motion 7/03 on 13 February and that the Cayman Government will make every effort to conclude the necessary agreements with EU Member States by 30 June. I am very pleased that your Government has decided to make these commitments.

"I can confirm that as set out in my letter of 13 February the UK Government will now take forward the undertakings in the fleshed out agreement finalised by our officials on 23 January.

"As a first step, I am pleased to be able to confirm that the Inland Revenue have now recognised the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange under Section 841 ICTA [Information and Communications Technology Authority] 1988. I attach a copy for you of the Inland Revenue's announcement. I am also pleased that our relevant officials have arranged to meet on 9 March to begin discussions on a bilateral double tax agreement.

"Of course the 23 January agreement included a number of other undertakings as well, and I can confirm that we shall take those forward too.

"Dawn Primarolo MP"

"INLAND REVENUE INTERNET ANNOUNCEMENT

"Designation of Cayman Islands Stock Exchange as a recognised stock exchange for tax purposes

"With effect from 4 March 2004 the Board of Inland Revenue has designated the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange as a "recognised stock exchange" under section 841(1)(b) ICTA1988.

"A list of overseas recognised stock exchanges can be found at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/fid.rse.htm

"Notes:

"The term "recognised stock exchange" occurs throughout the Taxes Acts and in various tax regulations. For example it is used in the definition of a close company in section 415 ICTA 1988, and in the definition of investments which may be held in PEPs [Personal Equity Plans] and ISAs [Individual Savings Accounts]. The term is often used in the phrase "listed on a recognised stock exchange" or in similar or related expressions.

"The definition of a recognised stock exchange is given in section 841 ICTA 1988. It includes the London Stock Exchange and any such stock exchange outside the UK as is designated in an Order of the Board of Inland Revenue.

"Section 841 ICTA is exclusively concerned with recognition for tax purposes. Its scope does not cover recognition or approval for regulatory or other purposes, nor approval or recommendation of any investments listed or traded on an exchange."

I ask that this be laid on the Table of this Honourable House.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, you can only get results if you try to do something that is my position. I believe that if this country has a problem and one of this nature of the Directive, then I must deal with it promptly forthrightly, upfront and in the strongest terms possible. These Islands are not going to be protected by a "do nothing" attitude, which the People's Progressive Movement (PPM) seems to adhere to.

We argued and negotiated in a calm and reasoned manner, and stuck to our position. We have already begun to see the benefits and we will continue to work towards the best deal that is possible.

We diagnosed the threat and applied the appropriate remedy. We achieved the best deal that it was possible to get - better than that achieved by any other jurisdiction. The whole issue is now based on a level playing field, and if the others do not sign, then we will do nothing further.

I would ask the Opposition to stop their ranting and the spreading of wrong and misleading information.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for your kind indulgence.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning, Communication, District Administration and Information Technology, your statement.

Announced Mobile Price Reductions by Cable & Wireless (CI) Ltd.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Cayman Islands witnessed an historic event last Wednesday, 3 March 2004, with the commercial launch of mobile telephone services by both Digicel and Wireless Ventures. This was another significant step on the road to full liberalisation of the Information and Communications Technology (ICT) marketplace and much credit to you, Mr. Speaker, for the valuable role that you played in the said matter.

This Government is committed to the introduction of competition as a means of providing consumers with the very best in terms of services and prices which are equal to, or better, than those available in any other industrialised nation of the world.

The Government is equally committed to a healthy and sustainable ICT marketplace where the new Licensees will have the opportunity to compete fairly with the incumbent Cable and Wireless.

Over the past few days, we have witnessed the introduction of competitive prices by both Digicel and Wireless Ventures. In response Cable and Wireless has also announced new prices for mobile services. Clearly, price reductions are a welcome outcome of competition and the consumer stands to benefit from competitive pricing.

While Government welcomes such price reductions, those made by the incumbent must not take unfair advantage of its dominant position in the marketplace. For example, the funding of reductions by cross-subsidies from other services, or reductions below the cost of providing the services, could breach the anti-competitive provisions of its licence. In this context, Government is well aware of the concerns expressed by other licensees about the mobile rates most recently proposed by Cable and Wireless. It is their view that these rates have the potential to seriously injure long term, sustainable competition.

As I have already noted, Mr. Speaker, Cable and Wireless has strict prohibitions in its Licence against engaging in anti-competitive conduct. Its Licence prohibits conduct which amounts to an abuse of a dominant position if it affects unfairly trading conditions. The Information and Communications Technology Authority has jurisdiction to review whether the recent prices to be introduced by Cable and Wireless amount to anti-competitive conduct. In the event the Authority concludes that there is a breach of license conditions, the Licensee must immediately rectify the situation or its Licence could be placed in jeopardy.

This Honourable House recently passed amendments to the Information and Communications Technology Authority Law, 2002, which were designed to address anti-competitive practices in the ICT marketplace as well as providing for substantial administrative fines for breach of Licence conditions, laws or regulations. These are important and necessary amendments to the Law which would strengthen the Authority's ability to ensure a level playing field for all licensees. Because of another amendment introduced by the Legislative Assembly after the draft Bill was approved by Cabinet, these amendments are still awaiting the assent of His Excellency, the Governor.

One of the principal functions of the Information and Communications Technology Authority is to promote competition. Accordingly, I wish to advise Honourable Members that the Authority has already initiated the steps necessary to determine whether or not the new mobile rates announced by Cable and Wireless will meet all regulatory requirements, or if they breach any other provisions of its licence. The Authority has also strongly recommended to Cable and Wireless that it defers the implementation of these new rates until the Authority's investigations have been completed. These views were communicated to Cable and Wireless in the following letter that was sent to them early this morning and it reads as follows:

"Mr. Rudy Ebanks, Vice President, Regulatory and Carrier Relations Cable & Wireless (CI) Ltd.

"Dear Mr. Ebanks,

"Re: C&W Planned New Mobile Rates filed 3 March 2004

"In the evening of Wednesday, 3rd March 2004, Cable & Wireless ("C&W") notified the Authority that, with effect from Tuesday, 9 March 2004, it planned to introduce new post-paid, pre-paid and international direct dial (IDD) rates for its mobile services.

"The Authority wishes to draw your attention to Condition 15 of your Licence, which prohibits anti-competitive conduct. In particular, Condition 15.1 states:

"Any conduct on the part of one or more licensees which amounts to the abuse of a dominant position in a market for ICT networks or ICT services is prohibited if it may affect trade within the Cayman Islands."

"Further, Condition 15.2 in part provides that:

"Conduct may, in particular, constitute such an abuse if it consists in: ...(e) using revenues attributed to a particular ICT service to cross subsidise unfairly or affect competition for another ICT service, unless otherwise approved or directed by the Authority."

"The Authority notes that subparagraphs (a) to (e) of Condition 15.2 are not an exhaustive list of infringing conduct and that other conduct such as the introduction, by an incumbent, of rates below cost may constitute abuse of a dominant position.

"The precise nature of the new service rates, terms and conditions, in the Authority's view, requires clarification. However, based on its understanding of the information currently available, the Authority believes that certain aspects of the new rates, if introduced, may place C&W in breach of these licensing conditions.

"For example, the new effective per minute rates for the postpaid plans range from 10¢ (for b350) to 3¢ (for b20000). When compared to just one component of the cost of providing mobile services as estimated by C&W itself (i.e. the interconnection rates for terminating mobile calls), these rates are below that cost. An ICT service that is provided below cost, unless otherwise approved or directed by the Authority, is a contravention of Condition 15 of the company's Licence.

"The Authority also notes that C&W plans to reduce IDD rates by 20% and to offer a further 20% reduction on IDD calls to five telephone numbers under its Talkaway mobile service feature. The Liberalisation Agreement of 10 July 2003 requires that other mobile Licensees obtain IDD services from C&W until 1st April 2004. As C&W is reselling its IDD services to other licensees at a maximum discount of 20%, the Authority has concerns that the Talkaway feature may represent an anti-competitive price squeeze.

"The Authority has similar concerns with the prepaid mobile plans and the levels of some of the planned new rates, such as those for off-peak periods which are below the interconnection rate.

"The Authority therefore requires C&W to file, by no later than 10th March 2004, imputation test calculations (including all the underlying assumptions and detailed calculations) for each of the mobile service filings submitted on 3rd March 2004.

"The imputation test examination and the analysis of whether Condition 15 of the Licence has been breached are two separate exercises which will be undertaken in parallel. If the Authority thereafter determines that certain of the mobile rates do not satisfy the imputation test requirements, or that C&W is in any other way in breach of Condition 15 of its Licence, the company will be required to immediately rectify the situation. Some measures may have to be applied retroactively. Because of the adverse impact that any such corrective action may have on C&W, consumers and other stakeholders, it is the Authority's strong recommendation that C&W defer the implementation of their planned new mobile rates until the Authority has made a determination. The Authority undertakes to complete its assessment as rapidly as possible.

"The issuance of this recommendation to Cable & Wireless should not be viewed in any way as compromising the Authority's ability to pursue and implement, at any time, any and all other courses of action or remedies which may be available at law or pursuant to the Cable & Wireless Licence.

"Yours sincerely,

"David A. Archbold, Managing Director"

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Honourable Minister for Community Services wishes to also make a statement.

International Women's Day Message

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, thank you for allowing me to make this statement as today, March 8, is International Women's Day. Today is recognized by the United Nations and designated as a national holiday in some countries. It represents many decades of women's struggle for equality, justice, peace and development.

Some people may ask, "Why is there a day dedicated towards the celebration of the world's women?" The United Nations General Assembly, which comprises delegates from all member countries, identifies two reasons: firstly, to recognise the fact that peace and social progress require the active participation and equality of women; and secondly, to acknowledge the contribution of women to international peace and security.

Here in the Cayman Islands, we too join other individuals, communities, governments and nations around the world on this special day, to celebrate acts of courage and the determination of ordinary women who have played extraordinary roles in women's history. Since 1999, Cayman has extended this celebration to embrace the entire month of March, designated as Honouring Women Month.

In recognition of International Women's Day, His Excellency, the Governor and Mrs. Emma Dinwiddie, the Women's Resource Centre (WRC) Patron, are hosting a reception at which time the Women's Resource Centre will launch a poster proclaiming the five women who last year received the Quincentennial Distinguished Woman Award.

These women — Annie Huldah Bodden, OBE; Frances Louise Bodden, MBE, JP; Clara Editha Scott Leitch; Olive Hilda Miller, MBE, Cert. Hon. JP; and Mary Evelyn Wood, Cert. Hon. — are prime examples of women who contributed to the development of our country even as their efforts challenged social assumptions and stereotypes concerning female roles and expected accomplishments.

With this year's theme for Honouring Women Month as Challenges, Solutions, and The Way Forward, the WRC has coordinated a variety of programmes, events, panel discussions and displays, all in an effort to raise the level of public awareness of the issues that confront women in the Cayman Islands.

As a society, we must acknowledge that many women in our country face the challenges of domestic abuse, acquiring affordable housing, maintaining their children, and organising day care. Injustices against women and children, including sexual abuse, incest and rape, remain crucially sensitive matters that require a multi-faceted approach from law enforcement, judiciary, health care, children and family services, education and increased community awareness and support.

We must also openly communicate about issues such as teen pregnancy, dating violence and female gang involvement in order to proactively address the adversities that can affect our girl children.

In closing, I leave you with this thought as I quote from a document taken from the Fourth World Conference on Women held in Beijing in 1995:

“The advancement of women and the achievement of equality between women and men are a matter of human rights and a condition for social justice and should not be seen in isolation as a women's issue. Until the rights and full potential of women are achieved, lasting solutions to the world's most serious social, economic and political problems are unlikely to be found.”

Thus, on this International Women's Day and throughout Honouring Women Month, while I do extend my best wishes to every woman, I also challenge you to become inspired so that you too can help pioneer new possibilities for the generations to come.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

FIRST READING

The Public Accountants Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READING

The Public Accountants Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, thank you.

I beg to move the second reading of a Bill entitled The Public Accountants Bill, 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Mr. Speaker. In most jurisdictions there is an industry body responsible for policing of professional accounting sector. While the Cayman Islands Society of Professional Accountants (CISPA) has been in existence since 1970, it does not have the statutory backing to enable it to perform the functions of a self-regulatory organisation (SRO). The Public Accountants Bill, 2003 seeks to give statutory backing to CISPA to enable the Society to exercise oversight within a statutory framework of the provision of the public accounting services.

“Public accounting services” is a defined term in the Bill and encompasses audit and reporting attestation services performed to profit or reward. The definition excludes bookkeeping, bare preparation of financial statements, installation of accounting related systems and acting as an insolvency practitioner. The latter (insolvency practitioner) is a specialist activity often involving court supervision and will be covered separately. The Bill was developed in close consultation with the Cayman Islands Society of Professional Accountants and is based on similar legislation in other jurisdictions.

The core sections of the Bill are Parts III and IV, however, I think it would be useful to make reference to Parts I and II and the introductory clause of the Bill.

As I mentioned earlier, Mr. Speaker, the Bill is entitled The Public Accountants Bill, 2003 and the Memorandum of Objects and Reason states that the Bill seeks to regulate the practice of public accountancy.

“Part I of the Bill contains clauses 1 and 2 which are preliminary provisions. Clause 1 provides for the short title and makes provision in respect of the commencement of the legislation. Clause 2 is the interpretation clause.

“Part II of the Bill deals with the Cayman Islands Society of Professional Accountants and contains clauses 3 through 7. Clause 3 makes provisions for the establishment of the Cayman

Islands Society of Professional Accountants as a body cooperate.

“Clause 4 provides that the common seal of the Society shall be judicially noticed.

- a) Clause 5 makes provision for the establishment of a Council of the Society which shall be responsible for the management of the affairs of the Society. The objects of the Society (which are set out in Schedule 1) are to—
- b) govern the discipline, and regulate the professional conduct of members and students;
- c) promote and protect the welfare and interest of the Society and the accounting profession;
- d) promote and increase the knowledge, skill and proficiency of the members and students in all things relating to the business or profession of accountants;
- e) promote, foster and maintain the highest standards of accounting in public practice and commercial and private sector spheres;
- f) safeguard and enhance the professional standing, interest and reputation of accountants who are members thereof;
- g) maintain the highest standards of professional etiquette and ethics among its members and encourage the observance of such standards among non-members;
- h) provide opportunities for discussion and exchange of views among its members, and students, whether or not they are engaged in actual practice;
- i) encourage and assist in providing increased facilities for the study of accountancy and related subjects and cooperate with the bodies that are in pursuit of those objects;
- j) assist members, past members, and students and the dependents of such persons who are in need;
- k) associate with any regional or international body having objects similar to those of the Society to further the interest of the profession; and
- l) do anything that is necessary or incidental to the carrying out of the objects in paragraphs (a) through (j)” as was just read.

“Clause 6 empowers the Council” (CISPA) “to manage the Society’s funds. (That is the governing council of CIPSA.)

“Clause 7 requires an annual audit of the Society’s accounts.”

Part III of the Bill, as I mentioned earlier, is one of the two core sections of the Bill. Part III provides for CISPA to operate a registration and licensing regime for public accountants on an individual basis and a registration regime for students. Practising without a licence is an offence. Regulations to be made by the Governor in Cabinet in consultation with CISPA counsel will prescribe application requirements and fees. Existing members of CISPA are automatically registered persons under the Bill but must seek licensing. Part III does not derogate from the provision of the Trade and Business Licensing Law 2003 Revision and does not apply to public officers acting in their capacity as such.

Part IV of the Bill establishes the disciplinary function required to enable CISPA to effectively act as a self-regulatory organisation for the accounting profession. It establishes an investigation committee which reviews complaints to decide whether there is a disciplinary case to be heard and if so it refers the matter onward to a disciplinary tribunal to deal with.

Clause 18 of the Bill sets out the headings under which disciplinary proceedings can be instituted, including inter alia, misconduct, dishonesty or incompetence in the performance of professional duties. There is a provision for matters to be also referred to a public accountant approved institute for action.

The Governor in Cabinet, in consultation with CISPA Council, may make regulations governing the hearing and determination of disciplinary matters.

Part V of the Bill deals with miscellaneous matters and contains clauses 28 through 33.

“Clause 28 provides that Part III of the legislation (which deals with the registration and licensing) does not derogate from the provision of the Trade and Business Licensing Law (2003 Revision). As I mentioned earlier.

“Clause 29 requires public accountants to certify to the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority that there has been compliance with the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision).

“Clause 30 enables the making of regulations.

“Clause 31 sets out various offences in relation to the licenses and registration.

“Clause 32 contains provisions for the protection of the Council, the Disciplinary Tribunal, the Investigation Committee and other committees of the Society in the discharge of their functions.”

Mr. Speaker, this is a long awaited piece of legislation. It may not be as complete as it should be in recognising everything that should be dealt with, however it is a start. Once we have commenced with this Bill, shortly to become a Law, it provides a way forward to deal with necessary amendments, as they arise, in order to cope with various issues such as those that are presently being alluded to in the European Union as making certain requirements for audits of entities that are doing business in international financial centres.

I think this puts us in a position of being proactive and I commend this Bill to Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak.
The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Opposition wishes to support the Government bringing the Bill forward.

As the mover of the Bill has intimated, with all the requirements, not only fiduciary, being levied, perhaps not just for our own sake, but within the global village environment that we live in, and the global financial markets that exist. Legislation of this nature is certainly warranted.

I want to make note before I go into any specifics that I think it is also timely, perhaps for at least one of the other professions to come in line with legislation of a similar nature, because if we speak of the global village, and we speak of accountants walking stride for stride with the legal profession. Certainly I wish to make the point and encourage the Government to work with the various societies that exist in the legal profession to ensure that they are following suit.

I have spoken to some of them and I believe that it is not only the intention but I think that something like this is in the works. In speaking with some of the members of CISPA, I am happy to hear that they were integral in the preparation of the Bill itself and they are with full knowledge of what it contains, and those who will have to work it or live it are in agreement with what is being proposed.

There are not many of the specific issues I would address in the short contribution.

It is important to note, as the mover has stated, that the main principles behind the Bill itself are stated in clause 5 which: “makes provision for the establishment of the Council of the Society which shall be responsible for the management of the affairs of the Society.”

It then speaks to the objects of the Society. Those objects are listed (a) through (k) — 11 in all. I will not repeat what the mover of the motion has already quoted. I think (a) to (f) explain, in broad terms, the objective of this piece of legislation because it speaks to:

- a) Governing the discipline, and regulating the professional conduct of the members of the society;
- b) promoting and protecting the welfare and interest of the Society and the profession on the whole;
- c) promoting and increasing the knowledge, skill and proficiency of the profession;
- d) promoting, fostering and maintaining the highest standards of accounting in public practice and commercial and private sector spheres;
- e) safeguarding and enhancing the professional standing, interest and reputation of accountants who are members; and

- f) maintaining the highest standards of professional standards and ethics among its members and encouraging the observance of such standards among non-members.

In going over (a) through (f), in the objects of the Society, we see very clearly that the Bill, which I am confident will become Law, seeks to incorporate and recognise this Society and give the Society the ability to oversee the profession from the point of view of ethical standards and level of professionalism employed by its members. It also has, as mentioned by the mover, a section which refers to discipline.

I think that the general thought process of the legislation is fairly all-encompassing. As a result, I noticed just before the mover finished his introduction of the Bill he readily accepted that it is not a perfect piece of legislation. We can ask the question “Which one ever is the perfect piece of legislation when it is first brought?”

We accept that there may well be occasion, after it becomes legislation for amendments, and certainly there is no better time than when those who are living it have to work under it.

Once we see amendments coming that are justified there will not be a problem. That is not strange because all of us who are here will realise and accept that is the nature of legislation itself. It is an evolving process that moves with the times. There is no real beef to say that it should not be brought until it is all airtight, we do not have a problem with that.

Mr. Speaker, there is one point that I went over several times and I have to raise it because I think although it is not the most important section of the legislation, I believe it is something that we need to be looking at.

If we look at the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons on page 4, clause 10 says; “Clause 10 enables a person who possesses Caymanian status or is a permanent resident and who wishes to pursue courses of instruction and systems of training in accounting, to apply for registration as a student.”

When we look at Clause 10 which refers to being registered as a student, and then look at Part III of Registration and Licensing where we see all the possible categories of who can be licensed and registered, the basic common denominator is, once a person has a valid work permit and has the proper authority to practice in these Islands, that person can be registered as a member of the Society.

There are other categories, which I do not have to mention: if you are a Caymanian, if you are a founding member of the Society prior to this and all of the other factors involved. I mentioned the fact that a person with a valid work permit, and whatever criteria are required, can become licensed and registered. That point is, moving into section 10, for someone to be licensed and registered the spouse of a Caymanian, once that person has a valid work permit, he can be licensed and registered. However, when you move to section 10, it reads – if I may.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: “10. A person who possesses Caymanian status or is a permanent resident and who wishes to pursue courses of instruction and systems of training in accounting that may be prescribed shall -

- a) apply to the Council for registration as a student in such manner as may be prescribed; and
- b) furnish to the Council such evidence as the Council may require that he -
  - (i) is of good character; and
  - (ii) has attained the prescribed standard of education.”

Unless there is something that I do not see, I see no provision where the spouse of a Caymanian can be allowed to pursue courses of instruction and system of training in accounting that may be prescribed. We have to decide whether we want that to happen or not. However, I wish to make the point that the spouse of a Caymanian, for a period of time, will either not be a Caymanian, or permanent resident, and if that person is working in the profession, for instance, it would only be with the employment rights certificate, but that is not permanent residence. There is a period of time when we speak to both the process of permanent residence and the spouse of the Caymanian requiring status.

As I read that section, what it tells me is that, at some point, a spouse of a Caymanian can possibly be excluded from being registered as a student. I do not believe that was the spirit in which the Bill was drafted. I see no reason why the spouse of a Caymanian, who has that level of attachment, should be excluded either intentionally or inadvertently.

If a person with permanent residence can qualify, then certainly the spouse of a Caymanian should. We do not want for that to be a major issue in the Bill itself and certainly the Opposition has every intention of supporting the Bill. However, I believe this is a valid point and I would ask the Government, through the mover, to address the issue before we take the vote.

I do not want to be repetitive but to sum up that specific point. Section 10 allows for: “A person who possesses Caymanian status or is a permanent resident to be registered as a student to pursue courses of instruction and systems of training in accounting...”

I do not see where it allows a spouse of a Caymanian, who is not a permanent resident or does not have Caymanian status, to register as a student and I believe that a person in that category should be able to.

When we refer to being licensed and registered it goes right down to a work permit holder having the ability to be licensed and registered. I am speaking about one’s immigration status within society and it is certainly not to segregate any section or to make one seem any less than the other, but obviously the spouse of a Caymanian has to be somewhere up top. I wanted to make sure that the point was made. With regard to regulations and the legal profession, Mr. Speaker, let me tell you what brought it to my attention very recently. I got a letter in the mail where the spouse of a Caymanian, who has been in a stable marriage for perhaps three years, had to apply to Cabinet to seek permission to be articled at a law firm, having gone through the Law School and getting the LLB with honours. Therefore, that spouse of a Caymanian has had to apply to Cabinet to be articled. At least there is a provision which allows that and Cabinet can give that permission once everything is in order.

I do not see in this piece of legislation anything which allows the spouse of a Caymanian — not to be registered or licensed because the fact that they hold a work permit would allow that — to be a student; I do not think they should be deprived.

The Opposition, in general, supports the Bill and perhaps other Members may draw attention to other sections. Perhaps when the mover is winding up, he may show me where in the Law takes care of it because in going through the entire law I have not seen it. I just wish to make sure that point is taken into consideration prior to voting on the Bill itself.

Thus, the Opposition will support the Bill and we look forward to the profession being enhanced by the passage of this legislation. I am certain that the membership of the Society will welcome the new legislation and give it the standing that it deserves.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I do recognise that it is the time that we would usually take the luncheon break. However, because we are now in the middle of the last item on the Order Paper, I propose that we continue and complete the order before we take the adjournment. In doing so, we would not have to return to the House this afternoon.

Does any one wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, it would be remiss of me if I did not offer contribution to a Bill for a Law to Regulate the Practice of Public Accountancy; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

I left the largest professional services firm in the world to seek election to this Honourable House and this profession has been the only one that I have known in my short career which started in 1990 upon receiving a scholarship from Price Waterhouse.

I know as a professional accountant, Mr. Speaker, you came from a similar background. If I remember correctly, you were the first Caymanian qualified accountant. Therefore, by way of background, the profession has looked to get a piece of legislation enacted that would serve to foster its self-regulation.

For many valid reasons this legislation has taken us to a point, before getting to a stage that it could reach this Honourable House, to be dealt with in this manner. In a world that has been shaken and rocked by one corporate scandal after another and, indeed, where the profession has come under great and intense scrutiny it is timely that we have this piece of legislation before us.

I venture to say that none of us in the accounting profession could in our wildest dreams imagine that we would have seen the collapse of one of the biggest professional services in the world – that is Arthur Anderson. As we have seen the unthinkable happen in the profession, it is to all Members of this House support that we would now have this Bill come to the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, when all is said and done it comes down to the integrity and unwillingness of persons who engage in public accounting practice; it takes them to walk on the right line with regard to upholding their professional duties and obligations, and the professional duties and standards of the profession as a whole. Although we have not had any legislation to monitor or guide the profession we have been blessed to have the presence of all the major accounting firms in the world here. That has allowed professionals here to be guided by certain international best practices and standards from the firms in which they are member firms.

I think it is fair to say that given Cayman's status, as a reputable place to do business and a large and significant offshore centre for business including financial services, it is desirable to have legislation on the statute books that covers the profession because many people who do business in Cayman rely upon the profession to uphold an extremely high standard. They rely on the audit reports produced by the professionals in the accounting field.

One thing that needs to be re-emphasised is the fact that this Bill deals with public accounting. For those who are not engaged in the profession and may not readily discern any thing special about that term, it means this Bill covers those persons who are engaged in what is called 'attest services', more specifically audits and auditing of entities. Those persons provide audit opinions and reports upon the financial statements of the entity in which they audit. This could be an investment vehicle such as a hedge fund or an actual business such as the Bank of Butterfield, for example, or, any other business whose board of directors wishes to have an audit conducted or, indeed, an entity which, by registration under a specific law in the Cayman Islands, is required to have an audit.

In speaking to the Honourable Third Official Member from the crafting of the legislation and in speaking to Members on the current Council of the current Cayman Islands Society of Professional Accountants, I have made known my desire to also have, in the future, further-reaching legislation that deals with the provision of services that is not anticipated to be dealt with under this legislation. My position is very simple. This piece of legislation will primarily seek to protect and enhance the regulation for persons who are engaged in what is considered non-local business.

This legislation will deal mainly with financial services entities. More than 99 per cent of all audits that are conducted in the Cayman Islands are indeed of financial services products and entities. Since this legislation would not cover the standards for non-attest services, it would not cover persons who engage professional accountants for services that are beyond the scope of this legislation.

However, that does not mean that anyone who is a registrant under this legislation and provides those services would still not be held to high levels of the professional standards by the Council of the new Cayman Islands Society of Professional Accountants, which will be created by the passage of this legislation. However, Mr. Speaker, there are persons who provide accounting services to business entities, especially small business entities in the Cayman Islands, who will not be registered under this Law because they would not meet the professional requirements for registration under this Law. They are persons who are more experienced who are known as bookkeepers.

As has been said before, that does not stop us from going forward with a very important piece of legislation because we will never get to the stage where any piece of legislation known to man is perfect since circumstances change and therefore amendments to legislation will continue forever.

The current piece of legislation before us, and in regard to the creation of a new CISPA, is an important development in the Cayman Islands. It is very important that we have a society in the Cayman Islands that is a society that has teeth and can indeed regulate the profession. It is imperative that we have a new CISPA, a new Society of Professional Accountants in the Cayman Islands, that will be one and the view of the CISPA Council is that they will be registered as the next step under an international standard and regulatory body which will be more than likely the International Federation of Accountants.

What that will do, is greatly enhance the standing of the profession in the Cayman Islands. I will give you a simple example. Right now anyone who practices public accounting in the Cayman Islands who wishes to be registered as a member or an international member of the American Institute for Certified Public Accountants, even as an international associate member, must currently be a member of a body that is internationally recognised. Now because the Cayman Islands does not have any accounting body that is internationally recognised, persons find they need to maintain their registration with their home country or with a state within the United States. Therefore, for us to now be able to be in a position in the Cayman Islands where our professionals can be registered and members of a society that is internationally recognised, speaks volumes for our professionals and the profession.

Mr. Speaker, the issue of regulation is one that has taken centre stage in the United States in recent times because of the major corporate scandals that have rocked corporate America.

So we see that in the United States there has been passage of legislation that has led to the formation of a public company accounting oversight board that was created by the well known Sarbanes-Oxley Bill and that Board is going to implement firm registration systems and a firm inspection programme for auditors of Securities Exchange Commission (SEC) registrants. All that means is that before the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, accountants were left to be totally self regulated and primarily their regulation was driven by each state's accounting board.

The Federal Government of the United States has now taken the view that two important pieces of regulation will fall to this public company accounting oversight board: firm registration, and firm inspections or pay reviews as they are called in the profession.

I think it is imperative upon the new CISPA, when it is formed, to continue to have the type of robust system that is currently in play at the big four accounting firms to ensure that is in place within all of the firms that will be engaging to practice in public accounting.

I think it is fair comment to say that most who are knowledgeable of the industry would agree that the systems within the big four accounting firms are so robust that there would be very little cause for concern in regard to their internal quality review process and the independence of those quality reviews. I can remember my days in the profession that whenever a pay review was coming up was when everyone was on their absolute p's and q's. People knew that those pay reviews were very serious and took them very seriously. It was not that a team, who were members of our firm internationally, was coming in to simply take a glance at what you were doing, but a team was coming in with a view to really put you through the wringer to ensure that your standards met with the firm's international standards.

Thus, from that perspective the big four are well placed to be able to continue their standard of self regulation. However, there are now, present within the Cayman Islands, some seventeen or eighteen firms that will actually fall under the definition of providing the services that this Bill anticipates covering.

Now the majority of those firms are member firms of very credible and large international affiliations; Moores Rowland International would be one, Nexia is another international affiliation. Those affiliations act very much like the big four firms from the regulatory and quality control perspective in that they do have high levels of professional competence and quality assurance within the member firms that every member firm must meet. They themselves have very stringent internal pay and quality review systems established that would facilitate the member firms, present in the Cayman Islands, being open to stringent quality reviews.

However, Mr. Speaker, it behoves the new CISPA to ensure that they do come up with a system of firm registration and firm membership, because one of the things that the legislation speaks to in its present form is registration of individuals as members.

A logical and necessary next step, in my submission, is to ensure that firm membership is also something that is allowed and that firm quality reviews within the local profession are kept to an extremely high standard. Mr. Speaker, when those standards are not maintained we then have situations that have, as is the case in other jurisdictions, but more prominently in our minds the United States, where the Government has to step in and set up regulators and regulatory commissions to actually oversee the profession itself.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, the profession has had a proud legacy for many years of self-regulation and so far it has worked well. However, notable exceptions in recent times have caused certain persons to be concerned, and rightly so. However, I think that when one looks at the merits of the individual cases one will see that there are very specific cases of specific persons within the profession who have not acted in a proper manner. When one looks at the hundreds of thousands of persons who practice public accounting throughout the world we see it is a handful that has given rise to cause for concern. One thing that should also be noted, for the general public and for the Honourable Members of this House, is that in the specific cases that have surfaced recently and created corporate scandals, in all cases except one, it has actually been members of management of those companies who have been the perpetrators of the actions that have caused the scandal. It has not been the auditors or any collusion with the auditors that have caused any of these scandals, except one.

What is also noteworthy is that, currently in the United States and elsewhere, there is a move towards chief financial officers not necessarily being qualified accountants. In a recent survey it has found, that (if memory serves me correctly) over the last 36 months, of all new chief financial officers hired by corporate America, in terms of major Securities Exchange Commission (SEC) registrants, half of them were not certified or qualified accountants but persons who held Masters of Business Administration (MBA) from very reputable universities such as Harvard and the like.

I know that some persons could argue that if it is the Chief Financial Officer (CFO) and if it is management that has perpetrated some of the acts that have caused these scandals, then they naturally would think that the person is a qualified accountant and should be a person that was trained by big four firms and should have been keeping to certain standards they were trained to keep. However, that is not the case, in fact of the six major scandals that have surfaced over the last 36 months or so, in half of those cases the CFO was not a certified public accountant—

The Speaker: I would just like to say, if the Member has reached a convenient spot perhaps we could take a 10 minute break. We will be back to complete the other stages of the Bill.

Proceedings suspended at 1.29 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.01 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When we took the short break I had just about rapped up what is a focal point to the accounting profession these days; this whole issue of quality control within firms ensuring that the system of pay reviews, which are conducted, is robust. Indeed, the system to ensure independence and having robust independence rules by which member firms and individual employees of that firm must adhere to, is another central focal point to the profession. So, this Bill does provide for the making of regulations and, as has been pointed out earlier, it is going to be wise in the future to ensure that the regulations that fall from this legislation are adopted with consultation with the new CISPA.

I think it is only fair to mention the hard work of the many members of CISPA over the years in trying to make it a reality that this legislation would be introduced to the House and passed. CISPA has had many presidents who saw this as an important development for the profession and by extension an added benefit for the financial services industry and the community as a whole.

Adding to the complexity to quality review, and ensuring that the profession is maintained at a very high standard, is now of course like everything else: an internationally accepted challenge. With so many trans-national corporations doing businesses in so many parts of the world these days, and as been pointed out in many of the recent financial scandals, with large onshore companies setting up numerous types of entities and structures in other jurisdictions (primarily the offshore financial centres), that too has led to the need for a more robust system of quality control across borders, so international.

It is going to be very important that CISPA, once it becomes a member of the International Federation of Accountants, will keep abreast of international developments and ensure that Cayman is kept in line with what is the ever-evolving international best practice in this area.

One point that is not currently covered by the Law which is in place in many other regulatory and registering bodies, is the concept of associate membership. I think that is one thing that the new CISPA will have to turn its mind to and offer suggestions for future amendments. It is not here now and it is something that we would have to have dialogue with them about to ensure that if it is something as desirable as I think it would be, it is crafted in a way that meets the desires of the profession and serves to enhance the profession.

Mr. Speaker, the job in the future for the new CISPA is a large one, because as it currently stands, when the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority (CIMA) instituted the local audit sign-off rule in regards to hedge funds/mutual funds, which fall to the responsibility of CIMA to regulate, many issues were unearthed as it stands with auditors.

Many of the firms that provide audit services in this growing area of the financial services sector are located in many different states within the United States and indeed other countries. It suddenly came into focus that not everyone's system of doing business and managing risks are the same.

One issue that was of great contention was professional indemnity insurance; for the 'big four' it is a non issue. For many of these entities it was a significant issue because a lot of those firms are significantly smaller than the big four but of equal importance. Many of those firms operated in different states within the United States which have different rules and regulations in regard to that very important issue. "How much public indemnity insurance; what level should a professional firm provide?" That is the type of issue that is a stickler point for many people because, again getting back to the self-regulatory regime, people like to believe that they can manage their business and should be able to manage their risks as they see appropriate.

However, I think the lessons that have been taught over the years is that certain bench marks and certain types of guidance in areas like this, which are important to the practitioners and to the public, should be something given a long look to ensure that the standards in the Cayman Islands are indeed of a level that can withstand outside scrutiny. As we know we continue to be scrutinized with everything that we do.

I think it is fair comment to say that all the firms that I have practiced with in the Cayman Islands do have excellent human resource systems in place to ensure that the professionals who practice within the firms do receive adequate levels of continuing education. This ensures that members are currently with international developments. Indeed, most of the firms have internal alert databases or update databases and newsletters that keep them and all their professional affiliate offices over the world updated and current on recent developments and trends within the profession. I think that is an area that the new CISPA is going to find some relative ease in regard to the profession regulating itself to a high standard.

Just to touch on the point that was raised by the Leader of the Opposition in regard to student registering; it is a point that I think needs a closer look. I agree with him when he spoke about the issue of Caymanian spouses. However, there will also be people in the Cayman Islands who are here, and have been here for a long period of time, who may not have, to date, been afforded any form of security of tenure and have simply been here because their parents work here, who will be going off to university to possibly take up accounting as a profession, and who, on how the legislation is currently crafted, would not be able to be a student member. It is very important that from the very outset we capture the audience with the various provisions in the law.

One thing that the old CISPA always prided itself on was that students, for example, were always invited to CISPA functions, luncheons and were made to feel a part of the profession. That is a very valid point that certainly the Honourable Third Official Member will speak about in his winding up and it is one that we would want to accommodate.

I would like to leave a large thank you for the Honourable Third Official Member because he had to put up with me being a bit of a pest from the time I got elected. I always wanted to find out about the status of this legislation and where we were going to get with it. I think it is fair comment to say that his portfolio was not necessarily at fault in terms of us not getting the legislation until now. I think that over time, while the profession saw the need for this piece of legislation, often-times there was disagreement philosophically as to how the new CISPA, for example, was going to be structured and formed. I am glad that the profession has been able to overcome those challenges and those differing views and are able to be in a position where the Government can bring a Bill that has incorporated their views and has been a creature of wide and deep consultation with them for many years.

I am thrilled that my profession is now at a stage that we can say that we will have a piece of legislation that serves to guide the activities within it. I think, over the years within the Cayman Islands, we have proven beyond a reasonable doubt that locally we do have people with the type of integrity and principles that allow for a very robust self-regulatory regime. I have full confidence that the new CISPA will provide the type of leadership that the country will be proud of in regard to the accounting profession.

However, I would like to close by saying that in a great majority; in fact there have been very few exceptions to this, that corporate scandals are perpetrated by management within companies and not the auditors. Unless an auditor was there full-time auditing every transaction and movement of every person of management it would be impossible to be able to give absolute assurance. That is why audit reports and audit opinions do not give absolute assurance about anything.

However, I think our profession locally has done a wonderful job by incorporating and enhancing the principles that are passed down within the profession and within the individual firms. I do believe that the new CISPA is going to have the opportunity now to be a leader in the region and a leader internationally within the profession.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not would the Honourable Third Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to say thanks to Honourable Members for their support in respect of this legislation. I would like to, particularly, say thanks to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition for his comments and observations that he made. I would also like to say thanks to the Honourable Second Elected Member for West Bay.

The Leader of the Opposition made a very useful and welcome observation, in that, the Bill as now developed would have excluded spouses of Caymanians.

In talking to the Second Elected Member for West Bay it was agreed that unless section 10 in particular was amended to include those persons on work permits, we could have a category of persons who have grown up in the Cayman Islands but who would not necessarily be allowed to register as students, as the offspring of persons who have Caymanians status since these persons are over the age of 18. As a consequence, they would not be able to claim status from their parents. They, of necessity, would have to be work permit holders. These are persons who have also been excluded.

There is an amendment that has been circulated and I think this addresses the concerns of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and also makes allowance for spouses of Caymanians and work permit holders.

I think in terms of all of the other points of relevance, these have all been commented upon by the Second Elected Member for West Bay and at this point I would like to say thanks to Honourable Members for their support.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Chairman in accordance with Standing Order 52(8) I beg to move that a new clause 12A be included in the Bill that is before this Committee for consideration.

By inserting after clause 12, the following clause— "12A. The provisions of sections 9, 10, 11 and 12 as they apply to a person who—

- a) possesses Caymanian status;
- b) Is a permanent resident or;
- c) Is a holder of a work permit shall, with the necessary changes being made, apply to the spouse of any such person."

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Chairman, this is self-explanatory and I think it addresses a point that has been raised earlier in the debate during the second reading by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

This clause makes it possible for spouses of Caymanians to be registered as students in the accounting profession. It also deals with those persons who will be here for quite a protracted period of time, while remaining as work permit holders.

The Chairman: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The question is that this new clause be added to the Bill as Clause 12A.

Therefore, I would ask all Honourable Members to make every attempt to be here at 9.30 am on Wednesday. I ask that you let any of your Member friends know who are not present at this time.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

The Stamp Duty Regulations, 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, the Stamp Duty Regulations, 2004.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In accordance with section 27(2) of the Stamp Duty Law (2003 Revision), these regulations are subject to a negative resolution of this Honourable House. The Regulations have the effect of continuing the present 5 per cent stamp duty rate until such date as may be appointed by order of His Excellency the Governor.

These Regulations have been approved by the Cabinet of the Cayman Islands, however they are subject to a negative resolution of the Legislative Assembly, as I mentioned earlier.

The origin and purpose of the 5 per cent stamp duty rate is well known to all Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly. The Government introduced the 5 per cent rate in November, 2001 as a stimulus measure for the local economy following the devastating September 11 terrorist attack in the United States of America.

Government decided to continue the 5 per cent rate because there is evidence to suggest that it continues to have a positive effect on the real estate industry.

When the stamp duty rate was 7.5 per cent and 9 per cent in 2002 land transfers had a total value of $257 million and the duty received by the Government in that year was $18.6 million. For the first 11 months of 2001 the 7.5 per cent and 9 per cent stamp duty rates were in existence. The 5 per cent was introduced in November 2001. The value of land transfers in that year declined to $173 million and the duty received by the Government in the year to December, 2001 fell to $14.3 million.

Because the 5 per cent rate was not introduced until November it probably did not have significant impact on land transfers in the 2001 calendar year. In 2002 when the 5 per cent rate was in existence for the entire year the value of land transfers increased to $270 million which was more than the $257 million activity level experienced in 2000.

For the calendar year to December 2003, stamp duty revenue on land transfers was $17.2 million equivalent to the dutiable transfers of $344 Million which surpasses the $257 million of land transfer activity experienced in 2000 and the $270 million in 2002. Therefore, the use of the 5 per cent stamp duty rate, the Government has more than returned the Islands to the pre-September, 2001 level in real estate activity.

I urge all Honourable Members to support the Stamp Duty Regulations.

Thank you.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Deferred Monday 8 March 2004

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town and Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

No. 102: Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports if the Government has adopted the CH2M Hill Report.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce and Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: On 26 November 2002 the Executive Council approved the CH2M Hill study on the provision of construction, aggregate and fill material for the Cayman Islands and the tabling of this Report in the Legislative Assembly. Honourable Members will recall that the study was tabled in accordance with Executive Council approval in December 2002.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?
The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Could the Honourable Minister state, if, since the approval and tabling of this Report in the Legislative Assembly, the various Government agencies (who have to make decisions relying on the recommendations of this Report), have been instructed to make those decisions based on the recommendations of the Report?

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the CH2M Hill Report informs Government's policy-making in various aspects for example, where relevant, the Department of Environment incorporates the findings of the CH2M Hill Report into its assessment reports on recommendations and other departments are asked to do likewise.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state specifically if the Central Planning Authority has been making its decisions based on the recommendations specified in the CH2M Hill Report?

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, to the best of my knowledge they should be. I would undertake to find out exactly what is happening. As I said, the Department of Environment incorporates, where necessary, the assessment reports and recommendations. All other Departments and sections should be doing the same thing.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Minister has just given an undertaking and for purposes of clarity I would like to understand whether the Minister means that agencies such as the Central Planning Authority and the Planning Department, but not limited to those departments or agencies, will be instructed to base their decisions on the recommendations in the Report, or is the case otherwise?

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, as I said, I will undertake to find out whether they are adhering to the findings of the CH2M Hill.

The Speaker: I will allow one more question.
The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Among the many recommendations contained in the Report is a recommendation that further North Sound dredging be prohibited. I wonder if the Honourable Minister is able to tell us whether or not that recommendation has been adopted by Cabinet. I ask that question in light of his recent announcement that he was going to recommend to Cabinet the major dredging of the North Sound including a channel along the perimeter of the North Sound.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the two Members could have saved some time if they had asked that question first, which I suspect they were really after.

There was no announcement by me that there would be major dredging of the North Sound. The Member just said major dredging of the North Sound and a channel. I did make mention at the economic forum hosted by Fidelity Bank of a channel.

What I said was that the Island has the biggest registry of mega yachts however, those yachts cannot come here because there is no safe harbour. As those are the kinds of clients we are seeking to attract for tourism we should investigate the possibility of a channel in the North Sound so that the vessels could get inside, and also, more importantly, the North Sound, now being such a heavily traffic area, with boats every day of the week, the bottom is being stirred and the clarity of the water is not there simply because of long drafts of various vessels.

I also said that I would ask to set up a committee to investigate that possibility. Actually, that has been done and there is a newly appointed North Sound Advisory Committee which has its terms of reference that its members review the CH2M Hill Report.

The Report has been given to all members of the North Sound Channel Advisory Committee.

This channel, Mr. Speaker, as I said then, from what I envisioned (and I am not a member of the Committee), would enter the North Sound in the area known as Big Channel which would be cleared to a width of 150 feet and to a depth of 15 or 16 feet. The channel would extend from that point in the direction across the head of Barkers, turn south and continue along the entire western periphery of the North Sound, turning east and ending in the vicinity of the Grand Harbour development. The channel would be able then to connect with several existing channels which partially extend into the North Sound from various developments on the western and southern sides of the North Sound.

As I said, Mr. Speaker, a North Sound Channel Advisory Committee has been formed and the terms of reference for this committee are as follows:

- examine the economic environmental and social implications of dredging a channel as described above in the North Sound
- examine and advise on a maintenance programme for such a channel including but not limited to markings and clearings.
- review the CH2M Hill Report on the provision of construction aggregate and fill for the Cayman Islands and advise reconciliation and/or mitigation options with respect to any conflicts that might exist between that Report and the proposal for such a channel in the North Sound.
- examine and advise on the options for the disposal of the material produced from dredging such a channel in the North Sound and submit a report with recommendations to the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce on the concept of dredging a channel as proposed in the North Sound.

The members of that advisory committee are—

Mr. Cardinal DaCosta, (Chairman),
 Mr. J. Bodden,
 Captain “Chucky” Ebanks,
 Mr. James “Jimmy” Powell,
 Mr. Brian Butler,
 Mr. Robert “Bobby” Soto,
 Mr. Atlee Bodden,
 Mr. Rene Hislop,
 Mr. Ron Zimmer,
 Mr. Mike Bell,
 Mr. Guy Harvey,
 Mr. Davis Borden,
 Mrs. Gina Petrie, (Director of the Environment),
 Mr. George Hunter,
 Mr. Anthony Scott.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, because of the significance of the supplementary and the comprehensive answer received I will allow one final supplementary.

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I just wish to get it absolutely clear. My question was if the Government has adopted the CH2M Hill Report.

The answers speaks to Executive Council approving the study on the provision of construction aggregate and fill material for the Cayman Islands which is the same report that I am speaking about and the fact that it was tabled in this Honourable Legislative Assembly. The fact that the Report was approved and tabled does that mean that the recommendations have been adopted as a matter of policy by the Government.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I really think the Member is playing with words. I said that the Executive Council has accepted it and if that means accepting it as policy, what else would they be accepting? Throughout the governance of the Islands this is the document that we are supposed to follow.

Thank you very much Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Suspension of Standing Orders 23(7) and (8)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Before you go on, Mr. Speaker, I think it is just about 11 am. Could we move the Standing Order to allow questions to be answered after 11 am?

The Speaker: Please continue, Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the relevant Standing Orders in order to have questions taken after 11 am.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11am.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

Questions Nos. 105 and 106

(Deferred)

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

No. 105: Ms. Edna M. Moyle to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports what is the total number of juveniles and young offenders now being held, giving the number at each facility.

Ms Edna M. Moyle: The House has been made to understand that the Honourable Minister would be late. I, therefore, request that this question be deferred to another sitting.

The Speaker: Question No. 106 is addressed to the same Honourable Minister. It asks what is Government's plan regarding the implementation of the National Youth Policy.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker. Since the Minister indicated that he would not be here on time, I would suggest that questions Nos. 105 and 106, be set down for another day.

The Speaker: The question is that questions Nos. 105 and 106 in the name of the Honourable Minister of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports, who is unavoidably absent, be set down for a later sitting of the House.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Questions Nos. 105 and 106 deferred to a later sitting.

Question No. 107

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

No. 107: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture what is the projected increase in student population for the Cayman Islands for the September term, 2004?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the total projected student population for all government schools in the Cayman Islands for the 2004 school year is as follows:

Reception 50 (classes only at the East End primary school, North Side primary school, West End primary school, Creek primary school)

Year 1	350
Year 2	355
Year 3	400
Year 4	395
Year 5	370
Year 6	400
TOTAL	2,320

Alternative Education Programme -13

Year 7	380
Year 8	370
Year 9	400
Year 10	360
Year 11	295
Year 12	325
TOTAL	2,143

Overall total 4,463 compared to 4,207 for the school year 2003; a difference of 256.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am grateful to the Minister for that response and I do have some specific supplementaries, with your permission, in relation to that.

I wonder if he has the information which the question sought, which was the total projected increase for student population for the Cayman Islands.

His response is limited to government schools. If he does not have that additional information available could he provide an undertaking that he would provide it, then I can move on to supplementaries in relation to government schools?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I suppose that the information, with regard to the private schools, could be had and indeed the Education Department should have that current information. However, under normal circumstances the Ministry of Education does not assume responsibility for the provision of school spaces for these schools therefore it is not something that I would have at my finger tips at this time. I would have to give an undertaking to get that information and provide it in writing for the Honourable Member.

[Pause]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, are you going to ask if there are any supplementaries, Sir?

The Speaker: I was going to, however, I thought I heard someone from the Opposition saying that was all.

The Speaker: Sorry. Are there any further supplementaries?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Sorry about that misunderstanding Mr. Speaker.

In the substantive answer we noticed that in various years there are some larger numbers than others. The one that I want to specifically look at is in year 9, which I assume would be the last year at George Hicks High School and where 400 students are projected for the term of September.

Perhaps the answer to this specific question will show the trend and I might not have to ask about the others. Can the Minister state, what type of increase does this number that is projected for year 9, as compared to the present year 8, show which might give an indication as to new students coming in mid-year rather than at the very beginning.

To clarify, year 9 with its projected answer of 400 would be the present year 8 of students plus any other students who might be coming from other institutions or elsewhere.

Would the Minister have the information to give that comparison so that we can see how many students we are talking about compared to who are presently in year 8?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that the difference is made up of transfer students from, primarily, the private schools who usually make the change for a number of reasons amongst the most important of which are whenever there is a raise in fees.

It is not an uncommon occurrence to have the year 9 students at the George Hicks High School to be of a sizeable number. That is the case, even as we speak; it is a trend which causes concern for the Education establishment and it impresses upon us the necessity to have the third high school and indeed, to ensure that we have provisions in the future to accommodate an increasing number of students in our high school system.

The Speaker: Are there any other supplementaries?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The answer has indicated an overall increase in the student population of 256 in the Government schools. That is cumulative of both primary and high schools. In actuality, the high schools are broken down in to junior high and high school.

The Honourable Minister said in a response to another question in this Honourable House during this meeting that he was confident that there would be sufficient accommodation for all students attending the Government primary schools in September, 2004. Last year there was some difficulty with accommodating students at George Hicks, the junior high school, and temporary classrooms had to be utilised.

I wonder whether or not the Minister can enlighten us as to whether or not there will be sufficient provision at both of the Government high schools this year, given what transpired last year and this projected increase in students.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker. It would be excellent if I could give such a precise undertaking, however, I cannot because the Honourable Member asking the question well knows that for some time now we have needed a third high school to effectively accommodate the growing cohorts of students reaching high school age.

What I can say with confidence is that we, the Ministry, are endeavouring to make provisions so that the increasing number of students will not be inconvenienced or will not have to experience any less efficient educational standards and settings as students in other schools.

The Speaker: I will allow two further supplementaries.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That was rather a convoluted response. May I ask the question more directly? Will the Honourable Minister say whether or not additional temporary classrooms will have to be utilised again this year to accommodate the burgeoning high school population?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, and if that Honourable Member has a more effective solution I am willing to listen.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, this is the last supplementary.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you for the warning, Mr. Speaker. In the substantive answer the Minister speaks to the projected population for government schools.

Can the Minister inform this House whether this projected student population is based on the present available information with regard to present numbers who would naturally be moving up from a year including those who have already been registered with the Education Department as new students? If that is the case, when would the close-off be for applications for new students within the Government system, and given the trends of previous years can he give any indication of how any more might be added to what is projected, at present, by the time this September year comes around?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker. If I can count, that was three questions in one. Let me attempt to give an intelligent answer.

The projections are based primarily upon the existing enrolled numbers, plus what will come naturally from projected registrations. The Education Law clearly outlines the registration period and it is closed after two weeks. There is no anticipation of any large cohort of students coming from either natural progression or outside of the realms of natural progression which cannot be accommodated.

I am not saying that we have it precisely down to the last student because regrettably this is not that precise a science yet. However, I am assured that the projected numbers given are reasonable and realistic.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Cayman Islands Economic Development Plan

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, almost a year ago today, I stood before this Assembly and raised the need for drawing up an economic development plan that will allow us to make informed choices in securing our future, and the future of our children. We took on this assignment against the backdrop of growing challenges over the past four years. Our financial services industry has undergone unprecedented scrutiny through a number of international regulatory and tax initiatives and the tourism sector is faced with a challenge to ensure that our product continues to be internationally competitive and fully serves our target market. Meanwhile, we have to prepare our children for a fast-changing global economy.

Today, I am pleased to present the draft Cayman Islands Economic Development Plan (CEDP), our country's first medium-term economic plan. This was formulated in a widely consultative manner involving representatives from the Government and the private sector. At the outset, I would like to thank these people for contributing their expertise and time to the planning exercise. Their support and assistance are properly acknowledged in the Plan document.

The CEDP and Vision 2008

The Cayman Islands Economic Development Plan is a five year strategic plan towards fulfilling the long-term vision for the country's economy which was first presented in the historic Cayman Islands National Strategic Plan (NSP) 1999-2008, known also as Vision 2008.

Thus, the vision of the CEDP is consistent with Vision 2008:

"Over the next five years, the people of the Cayman Islands shall have secured a high quality of life for themselves through increasingly productive employment and business opportunities arising from internationally competitive business sectors that are developed in an economically, socially and environmentally sustainable manner."

However, we intended the CEDP to improve on the economic aspects of Vision 2008 in several ways.

First, the CEDP "is focused on the directions of the Cayman Islands economy, in terms of economic outcomes or targets, priority objectives and key strategies." Overall, the economic outcomes are aimed at recovery and sustainability. What this means is that, the CEDP seeks modest but sustainable economic and employment growth rather than a high growth for few years that will set up our economy for over-heating and bust in the succeeding years.

"In the next five years, the CEDP aims for sustained economic recovery from the slow growth of less than 2 per cent in 2001 and 2002. An average real GDP growth rate of 3 per cent per annum is targeted over the period 2004-2009." A small rise in inflation to an annual rate of "3.2% is targeted over the next 4 years with an inflation rate of 3 per cent by 2009; slightly lower than the average for 1992-2002." The CEDP targets "a gradual decline in the Caymanian unemployment rate which will lead to an average of 4.0 per cent over the medium term."

These numbers are modest, but I must emphasise that we are aiming for sustainability considering the growing challenges and tight opportunities of the private sector which remains the main driver of growth in the Cayman Islands, and what the Government can do in supporting the private sector as recommended in the draft CEDP.

In drawing up these desired overall outcomes, the draft CEDP recognises the dependence of the Cayman Islands economy on the global economy, particularly on the United States (US) economy, and the basic structure of our economy:

- "The Cayman Islands is a small open economy
- The economy is predominantly services based

- The economy is fuelled by a largely transient labour force
- There are no direct personal income, corporate or property taxes (which therefore puts limits to government resources.)
- There is a fixed exchange rate regime pegged to the US dollar, operating under a currency board system” (which therefore puts the burden of policy-making to fiscal policy).

Second, the CEDP relates the key structural features of the Cayman Islands economy to challenges and opportunities for the next five years. These are all logically related in drawing up a broad policy framework and in recommending strategies for the main economic sectors, being: tourism, financial services, small businesses and e-business as well as in recommending a specific set of strategies for the Sister Islands and the overall inward investment framework of the Cayman Islands. These sectoral strategies are the primary focus of the CEDP.

Third, the CEDP addresses the challenges in the business and employment environment presented by the quality of our human and physical infrastructure. Action steps in further raising the quality and sustainability of our education and health, and social services, physical infrastructure and the natural environment are thus recommended in the CEDP.

Fourth, the CEDP develops a comprehensive governance framework and where possible incorporating the costs of the key economic strategies into a projected five year fiscal plan for the Government. In addition, strategies in the CEDP are cast within an indicative timetable of implementation, depending on their importance to economic growth and likely resource requirements. As such, the Plan is a guide for prioritizing the use of government resources across fiscal planning periods, with adequate flexibility should conditions warrant. Moreover, specific strategies are assigned to lead and support agencies. This is intended to serve as the basis for monitoring and evaluating performance over the planning period.

The CEDP and Sustainable Economic Development

Before I present the key strategies that comprise the main body of the CEDP, it is important for us to spell out clearly the key principles that were observed in ensuring that the CEDP is indeed a coherent plan and framework for sustainable economic development.

Sustainable development means that the recommended strategies in the CEDP whether they are in the form of Government policies or projects or programs were set in a manner that recognises limits to economic development. These limits are:

1. Physical balance.

This refers to the carrying capacity of the country's major physical constraint - the small land mass and fragile marine environment and resources of the Islands. This defines a fixed limit to the extent of physical development in the country, and at the same time a challenge to the diversification (of tourism and related) industries.

Consistent with this framework, sustainable use of land is supported in the CEDP through the economic development of the Sister Islands (Cayman Brac and Little Cayman). Public-private partnerships will be vital in pursuing this policy objective.

2. Social stability.

The CEDP recognizes that economic productivity can be constrained by social stability – an unstable society is not productive. Thus, the CEDP recommendations also seek to “enhance education, health and other social services that raise the level of human development and productivity, thereby contributing to social stability. At the same time,” we ensured that strategies in the CEDP do not compromise the culture and security of the country,” or our families and private individuals in the Islands.

3. Good governance and macroeconomic stability.

The CEDP espouses that interventions of the central government and the entire public sector are within the limits of effective, responsible and transparent governance. Fiscal policy is disciplined and deliberately controlled to avoid creating unnecessary activities in the economy that crowd out the private sector, and in accordance with principles of responsible financial management.

4. International competitiveness

The CEDP views the global economy as the country's potential market. As such, it benchmarks the (desired) productivity of the people, the quality of its regulatory, human and physical infrastructure and ultimately its services against the world's most competitive in tourism and finance, and eventually in e-business and other emerging sectors.

Key Sectoral Strategies

I am inviting Honourable Members and the Public to please read through the recommendations of the CEDP. These recommendations have been drawn up from thorough analysis of our available historical and recent government and national income accounts and other statistics; and from several consultations with the private sectors on the strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats or issues in each sector. Research which has been done into best practices across many countries has also been considered as they apply to the economic conditions in the Cayman Islands.

I would like to emphasize that the CEDP also took off from existing strategic plans such the Government's three-year “Strategic Policy Statement,” the five-year “Focus for the Future : A Tourism Policy Framework for the Cayman Islands,” and “Education for the 21st Century Cayman Islands.” These distinct sectoral plans are important but it is vital to bring together these strategies in a coherent manner from the perspective of an economic plan – the CEDP - in order to ensure that resources are used optimally for a common vision benefiting present and future generations in the Cayman Islands. This is what the Government has set out to achieve in developing the CEDP.

Tourism

The CEDP relies on the National Tourism Management Policy (NTMP) for the strategies for the tourism sector. To that extent, the five year strategy laid out in that document remains the main guidance over the next five years. It is however worth repeating the key strategies of the NTMP which are as follows:

1. Improve the marketing of the Cayman Islands to the high spending visitor
2. Improve existing airport and maritime ports to better manage visitors and facilitate tourism.
3. To enhance protection of the environment
4. Enhance the quality of the tourism product including providing a distinct Caymanian experience and better entertainment.

Financial Services

The financial services industry has been subject to a number of regulatory and tax initiatives over the past four years. While some sectors have continued to experience growth, the industry overall faces a risk that the jurisdiction may become less attractive due to increasing competition onshore as well as among offshore jurisdictions, and due to the regulatory changes, some of which are perceived as onerous. The main recommendations address the following threats:

- The negative image of the regulatory regime despite significant enhancements and regulatory requirements that exceed those in many countries in the area of 'know your customer' rules and best practices.
- The need for the Cayman Islands to become more business friendly and efficient from both an internal and external perspective.
- The lack of properly trained and motivated young professionals.
- The need for a more coordinated and strategic response to the ever increasing competition among offshore jurisdictions and to the regulatory challenges which may affect some of the services currently offered in the Cayman Islands.

The following five key strategies are outlined for the financial services sector:

1. Establish an aggressive marketing programme for the Cayman Islands financial services industry.
2. Organize a more strategic response mechanism to deal with competitive and regulatory challenges.
3. Regain the private client base
4. Improve efficiency and service of relevant public sector bodies and departments when dealing with license applications and queries for all sectors.

5. Develop educational and training framework to meet challenges of evolving workplace and the fast paced development of the financial services sector in the Cayman Islands.

e-business

The Cayman Islands has not sufficiently taken the opportunity to use e-business as a tool for improving the productivity of existing businesses or to develop niche e-business products. The main issues identified in the CEDP are:

- The physical infrastructure required to develop e-business is not in place.
- There is a shortage of properly trained, motivated information and communication technology (ICT) professionals
- Local awareness of the nature and benefits of the new technology by individuals and businesses appears to be very low.
- There is a need for the Government to take a leadership role in e-business. The launch of an e-government initiative is strongly recommended as a part of the cost savings strategies for the public sector.

The key strategies for the e-business sector are therefore to increase the number of ICT professionals over the next five years, to establish the necessary legislation and IT infrastructure and to increase public awareness of the technology and its benefits and develop niche e-business products that contribute to the economy. Marketing is also an important aspect of the e-business strategies and it is recommended that this effort is combined with the Brand Cayman initiative.

Small businesses

The CEDP's strategy for this sector is to ensure adequate and effective support to the growth of small businesses in the Cayman Islands and to encourage innovation and entrepreneurship in the economy.

The main issues are:

- There exists a degree of overlap in responsibility of, and lack of coordination among, existing organisations that provide support services to small businesses.
- Access to both financial and human capital is among the largest challenges facing small business entrepreneurs.
- The importation of goods for resale by individuals without a trade and business license and under-invoicing by some importers, represents a significant challenge for small businesses.
- There is a need to encourage small business entrepreneurship.

The main strategies aimed at improving support for small businesses are:

1. Significantly improve coordination of all supporting organisations of small businesses
2. Actively encourage and promote small business
3. Assist small businesses in sourcing out cost saving or unique technology
4. Facilitate financing for start up or growth of small business
5. Enforce laws relating to the importation of goods

Sister Islands

The economies of the Sister Islands are relatively underdeveloped compared to Grand Cayman and their economic structure reflects this difference in their stage of development. The CEDP focuses largely on Cayman Brac for strategies of economic growth while ensuring that Little Cayman receives improved infrastructure and necessary services to sustain a small community with the highest standard of living and quality of life.

Some of the main issues identified are:

- It is estimated that the per capita income of the Sister Islands is approximately half of the overall Cayman Islands per capita GDP.
- The Cayman Brac economy is not benefiting sufficiently from the development occurring in Grand Cayman.
- The Cayman Brac economy faces the risk of shrinking to an unsustainable level in the long run if the resident population remains at the current low levels.
- The current governance framework inclusive of policies and legislation requires enhancement to address the special needs of the Sister Islands for economic growth and well planned development.

In addition, it is estimated that the Government contributes approximately 50 percent of the GDP of the Sister Islands. This is due to the fact that in order to provide basic services such as healthcare, education, safety and infrastructure needs, the Government must necessarily incur a fixed cost to provide such services regardless of the size of the population. This emphasises the acute diseconomies of scale that are in place in both the public and private sector as a result of the small population.

The three strategic aims to secure a successful economy in the Sister Islands are:

- To develop a balanced nature/dive tourism industry by capitalising on the unique environmental features of the Sister Islands.
- To provide urgent stimulus to Cayman Brac to stabilise the economy and encourage a larger resident population.
- To establish a governance framework that recognizes the unique needs of the Sister Islands given their stage of economic development and natural resources.

Inward Investment

Increasing globalisation and competition has meant that countries are vying for foreign investment through aggressive marketing programmes, offering valuable incentives and ease of establishment. We recently established the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau to meet the country's strategic goals of economic growth, diversification through industry development, and job creation.

The CEDP recommends the establishment of a framework, guidelines and Bureau structure that will better facilitate inward investment as well as to ensure that investment activity is consistent with the CEDP. To this end, the CEDP also outlines a draft high level inward investment policy. Once finalized, the broad policy will serve as the guiding framework for a set of detailed investment incentives and procedures for the Investment Bureau which will be the lead agency in this area.

Economic Infrastructure

The economic plan defines economic infrastructure to include physical capital such as roads, and the air and maritime ports as well as human capital such as education, health and social stability aspects. The research shows that the Cayman Islands spend significantly less than the Caribbean and internationally in a number of areas relating to economic infrastructure. For example, expenditure on education as a percentage of GDP is significantly lower than most countries in the region, including comparable high income economies such as Barbados and Trinidad among others. Expenditure on the roads system is also relatively low when compared to other countries in the region or internationally. In fact, capital expenditures as a percentage of total Government expenditures have been on the decline over the past few years. Adequate infrastructure is a key input to economic growth and the CEDP therefore sets out a number of infrastructure improvements that are of high priority over the next five years.

Environmental Sustainability

The CEDP is supportive of the key strategies in the National Environmental Policy Framework, recognizing that the natural environment continues to create and sustain the current high standard of living in the Cayman Islands. Moreover, the Cayman Islands' is a signatory to a number of commitments under several international conventions.

Fiscal policy

The low expenditure on infrastructure is related to the Government's fiscal challenges. The Government has a narrow revenue base, with the majority of revenues relating to very few areas. In addition, the civil service has been growing rapidly and staff related expenses as a percentage of total expenses are very high compared to other countries.

The CEDP therefore makes a number of recommendations aimed at improving the Government's fiscal position which enables investment in both human and physical infrastructure as well as to generate a higher fiscal surplus.

The economic plan recommends a number of policies aimed at enhancing the Government's implementation of the Public and Financial Management Law (PMFL). However, it is also noted that the current PMFL requirement to maintain a ratio of debt service to total revenues of 10 percent is potentially restrictive when compared to most countries. Although several comparable countries in the region have similar debt service ratios, all of these countries have a significantly higher ratio of total Government revenues to GDP than the Cayman Islands. This emphasises the fact that such countries have a relatively broader revenue base from which to finance their infrastructure requirements.

Effective Governance

Mr. Speaker and Honourable Members, a World Bank study on Governance Indicators in 2003 indicates that the Cayman Islands rank among the top five per cent in the world in the area of government effectiveness. The World Bank report is based on a perception based survey which covers over 200 countries and was carried out in 1996, 1998, 2000 and 2002 with the Cayman Islands included in the most recent study. In this study the government effectiveness index includes the independence of the civil service from political pressures and the Government's commitment to policies among other indicators. The other individual countries listed in the top seven in the world in the area of government effectiveness, including the Cayman Islands, are Singapore, the United States, Switzerland, Finland, Germany and the UK. It is worth repeating that this is an independent World Bank study that is publicly available on the World Bank's website at worldbank.org.

However, we cannot rest on this perceived ranking however well it sounds today. The CEDP recommends a number of policies to further improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the Government, particularly those that are directly needed to further raise the quality of Government services, our human and physical infrastructure, and the policy environment in the Cayman Islands.

Concluding Remarks

In concluding, the Draft Economic Plan addresses all of the above issues with a number of strategies and detailed action steps. I am urging my colleagues in the Legislature and the Public to take a close look at these action steps. Discussions of these recommended action steps in the various levels of decision-making in the Government will be vital in coming up with a broadly-owned final version of the Cayman Islands Economic Development Plan. In closing, I would like to summarise what the CEDP sets out to do:

- It sets out the key structural features of the Cayman Islands economy and relates these to challenges and opportunities for the future.

- It communicates the broad policy framework over the medium-term, outlining how the CEDP relates to existing strategic documents within the Cayman Islands Government.

- It develops the key strategies for the key economic sectors being tourism, financial services, other domestic businesses, e-business as well as a specific set of strategies for the Sister Islands. This represents the primary focus of the plan.

- It broadly outlines the key economic infrastructure requirements such as human capital and physical infrastructure, relating these areas to the economy and through discussions with the various stakeholders, identifies a number of action steps for infrastructure improvement.

- It sets out action steps for progressing the implementation of the country's National Environmental Policy.

- It develops a comprehensive governance framework and where possible incorporates the costs of the key economic strategies into a projected five year fiscal plan for the Government.

- It provides the implementation framework for the plan.

I pray that this Assembly will share the Vision set out in the CEDP for the people of the Cayman Islands. We have a plan that serves as a road-map to that vision. It is up to us to use this road-map and I urge my colleagues in this Assembly to do so in the spirit of unity.

I thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the House for their indulgence. Mr. Speaker, I beg your permission to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Cayman Islands draft Economic Development Plan, 2004 – 2009.

The Evidence (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I beg to move for the Second Reading of a Bill entitled A Bill for a Law to Amend the Evidence Law (2003 Revision); and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved, does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to present to this Honourable House a Bill for a Law to Amend the Evidence Law (2003 Revision); and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

As part of our ongoing effort and the Government's ongoing commitment to modernise laws relating to crimes and criminal procedure in these Islands, we seek to amend the Evidence Law to introduce certain measures and provisions consistent with the objectives that were just outlined.

The Bill contains three principle areas. Firstly, clause 3 of the Bill provides for the admissibility of computer records in criminal proceedings. The question as to whether computer records are admissible in criminal proceedings in these Islands has been the subject of debate in recent cases in the Grand Court.

This Bill seeks to express and provide for the admissibility of such records in evidence. In doing so what we will, in effect, be bringing that provision in line with what already exists in respect of civil proceedings.

Clause 3 of the Bill inserts a new section. Sections 28A and B and these sections are similar to sections 44 and 45 contained in Part V of the principal Law. It should be noted that the proposed section 28A does not contain some of the provisions presently contained in section 44(1)(c), which provides that evidence from computer records are inadmissible unless conditions relating to the proper use and operation of the computer are shown to be satisfied. Such a provision is similar to section 69 of the United Kingdom Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE), which was repealed by section 60 of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999.

It is our belief that the requirement set out in section 69 of PACE was an unnecessary evidential burden and the United Kingdom was of that view as well and they abolished that requirement. It is not in dispute that our society makes even greater use of computers and increasing disputes before the courts turn on evidence which has at some stage passed through or has been processed by a computer. In order to keep in step with this practice, it is vital that the courts have the ability to take account of such evidence.

It was acknowledged in other countries, besides the United Kingdom, that the rule similar to that set out in section 44(1) (c) is totally unnecessary. If there are no such conditions for the admissibility of computer generated evidence then litigants and the court could rely on the presumption of regularity whereby it would be presumed that the machine was working properly, unless there was some evidence to the contrary, Mr. Speaker.

I made mention of recent cases. With your permission, may I mention that as recently as March 2003 there was a matter before the Grand Court where a man was charged for murder. Among the evidence the prosecution was attempting to adduce that of the computer printout relating to telephone and cellular calls. It was an uphill struggle to get those records admitted in evidence and in the end the Judge had to rely on Common Law principles.

Clause 4 seeks to amend section 31 of the Evidence Law to provide other conditions for the admissibility of a written statement as well as to provide that in criminal proceedings a written statement by any person is admissible as evidence to the like extent as oral evidence, if the court thinks that it is in the interests of justice to admit such written statements.

The amendment set out in clause 4 is similar to those contained in section 23 of the Criminal Justice Act UK 1988. It is necessary because, among other things, given the very transient nature of our population it is not uncommon that persons who witness the commission of a crime are no longer around by the time the matter comes to trial.

It is also important in light of what has been happening in recent times. The year before last, there was one case in which a witness was assassinated. It is the Government's position that in instances where people think they can either assassinate or intimidate witnesses – prevent them from coming forward to give evidence – once amended, the Law will make it quite clear that there is really no incentive to do so. If the person is eliminated or frightened away from the jurisdiction, the statement will be admissible in evidence.

Clause 5 seeks to insert a new section 37A which abolishes certain rules as they relate to the concept of corroboration.

The Common Law has long provided that a judge is under the obligation to give a warning of the danger of convicting on un-corroborated evidence or unsupported evidence. This is where an accomplice, or co-accused, attempts to testify against his co-defendant or, in a sexual offence, the victim (young lady, woman or child). In all of those cases the trial judge is under an obligation to instruct the jury that it is desirable to have supporting evidence; if it is not present, it is dangerous. He has to tell the jury that in no uncertain terms, or warn himself that it is dangerous to act on the unsupported evidence of a child, woman or accomplice.

This rule has long been abolished in the UK and in other parts of the Caribbean, and a number of reasons have been advanced. One of the main reasons put forward is that it is a very complicated issue on which to direct a jury and invariably judges get it wrong for any number of reasons. Most importantly, as well, it has been accepted that there is really no scientific or empirical hard evidence to suggest that a person is less credible because she is a woman or a child or an accomplice where the evidence is clear.

All that a tribunal needs to do is consider the merits of the testimony after it has been tested by cross-examination and if it is capable of being believed then it is required that the court reminds itself, or directs a jury, that if you believe the witness then it is open for you to act on the testimony of such a witness. The purpose of the amendment would abolish the rule as it relates to trial both in the grand court and also in the summary court.

In effect those are the three main provisions in the Bill that we commend to this House. I am preaching to the converted in this Honourable House when I say that recent events have caused us to reflect. While the Government is certainly not acting on impulse or seem to be in a crisis mood it is always important that the state is proactive and remains at least one step ahead of those who are responsible for committing crimes in our society. The state must have the necessary crime-fighting ability to deal with such persons. The suggested amendments to the Evidence Law will not only bring the Cayman Islands in line with other countries but will also enhance the crime-fighting capabilities of these jurisdictions. Therefore, I commend the Bill to this Honourable House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to offer a few brief comments on this Bill on behalf of the Opposition. I might say at the start that while we appreciate what the Honourable Second Official Member has said about the effect of the Bill in that it will enhance crime-fighting efforts on the part of the police, we do not quite approach it in that manner even though crime fighting is very important.

From our perspective the Evidence Law is there to assist with the orderly presentation of relevant facts and matters to the court in a way which permits the tribunal to reach the right determination. Many of the common law rules, in particular, which have grown up over the course of the centuries, have done so in order to ensure that principally the accused person is not treated unfairly, that evidence which is more prejudicial than probative is generally prevented from going before the tribunal and taken into consideration in the determination of the matter. That, I believe, is a premise that ought to continue. Thus, when looking at whether or not proposals to amend the Evidence Law ought to be accepted we bear that in mind.

The proposals which are contained in this Bill, Mr. Speaker, are generally of a nature which we believe will enhance proceedings; will remove somewhat artificial rules and presumptions which I think are no longer the case, certainly in respect of the abilities of women and children, and the reliability or otherwise of evidence they might give. I think those are presumptions which ought not to be made. In most other Commonwealth jurisdictions they have long since fallen by the wayside.

The provisions in relation to the admission of evidence generated via the computer are really provisions which ought to have been incorporated in our legislation some time ago and I commend the Attorney General for taking the initiative in the relatively short time that he has held that office to bring those forward.

With those brief comments I believe I can sit down and say that the Members of the Opposition are in favour of what is being proposed. We believe this modernisation of the Evidence Law will enhance the process. It will not, in our view, operate unfairly in relation to an accused person and it will give the tribunal a greater ability to fairly determine a criminal matter which is before it. Mr. Speaker, I say that on behalf of the Opposition on this side of this Honourable House. I do not believe that I am yet entitled to speak for the Opposition on the Government side of this Honourable House.

With those brief remarks I will, as the Honourable Second Official Member did, commend this Bill to all Honourable Members and give it our support. Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Second Official Member exercise his right in winding up?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to express my thanks to the Second Elected Member for George Town, speaking on behalf of the Opposition, for his insightful and constructive observations on the Bill. I thank all other Members of the House for their support in its passage. I thank you, Sir.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

Cayman Islands Development Bank - Report for the Ten-Month period ended 31st December, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce and Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, the Report for the Ten-Month period ended 31st December 2002 of the Cayman Islands Development Bank.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The establishment of the Cayman Islands Development Bank (CIDB) on 1 March, 2002, signalled a new era in the economic development of these Islands as the institution became the first National Development Bank with the primary function of enhancing the indigenous business and housing sectors in the Islands.

The bank has developed strategic objectives that will enable it to fulfil its vision of becoming an efficient, successful and profitable lending institution, optimising the use of scarce resources while impacting the community through the implementation of meaningful developmental programmes and projects for the benefit of all of its stakeholders.

During its first ten months of operations, the Cayman Islands Development Bank continued to build on the foundations of two former statutory institutions, the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board (AIDB) and the Housing Development Corporation (HDC) and began to carve out a niche for itself in the highly sophisticated local financial environment.

With the transfer of the assets and liabilities as well as the functions of AIDB and the HDC the Development Bank is now well positioned to fulfil its mandate to become a dynamic institution that would impact significantly on the Government's developmental thrust in key sectors of the economy such as housing, human resource and small business development.

During the ten month period under review a total of 60 loans were approved totalling $2.3 million, of which 35 loans amounted to $740,000 for human resource development, 12 amounting to $300,000 for small businesses and 13 amounting to $.9 million for mortgages.

Projects ranged from small ruminants and laundromats to charter vessels and tour buses. This modest achievement of the bank during this initial period of its operations served as a springboard in the enlarging of the bank's loan portfolio which is one of the Development Bank's primary strategic objectives.

As at 30th November, 2003 the Bank approved 172 loans with a total value of $7,384,549 as follows: human and resource development $1.5 million, an increase in value over 2002 of 106%; small business $1.2 million, an increase over 2002 of 351%; and mortgages $4.3 million, an increase over 2002 of 386%; other loans $308,000, an increase over 2002 of 132%, for a total of 60 loans totalling $7.3 million, with an increase in value over 2002 of 263%.

At the end of December, 2002 the total equity subscribed for in the Bank by the Cayman Islands Government was $1.5 million or 3.7% of the Bank's authorised capital of $50 million which fulfils the minimum requirement of 3% as stipulated under section 14(3) of the Development Bank Law.

Income from operations for the period totalled $203,419, of which over $138,000 represented income from loans and over $60,000 income from deposits. Key financial ratios for the fiscal period ended 31st December, 2002, as measured by both the return and average total assets and return on equity of 1.5% and 1.8% respectively, are positive indicators of the Development Bank's progress to date.

The gains made during the first ten month period of its operations in 2002 and over the past 11 months in 2003 served well for the Bank's continued growth and development as a country's premier national development institution.

Thank you.

Cayman Turtle Farm (1983) Limited Financial Statements at 31st March, 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce and Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I beg to table the financial statements of the Cayman Turtle Farm (1983) Limited as of 31st March, 2002.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: These financial statements represents the operations of the Cayman Turtle Farm (1983) Limited, for the year ended 31st March, 2002. In November, 2001, Hurricane Michelle caused severe damage to the main operating site of the company resulting in an overall decrease in the income of the Farm. In 2002 the Farm's total income was $2.9 million while in 2001 the Farm's total income was $3.2 million representing a decrease of CI$238,245.

In 2002 the farm reported a net loss of $143,536 while in 2001 the Farm reported a net income of $151,000 representing a decrease of $294,997.

The decrease of income for the Farm was a direct result of Hurricane Michelle and was recovered in the Farm's insurance settlement.

After Hurricane Michelle, the Board of Directors of the Cayman Turtle Farm (1983) Limited made the undertaking to relocate the most vital parts of the Farm's operations to a safer location. I am happy to report that we have successfully accomplished this by opening the Farm's breeding pond on the land side of the operation. This will give us the assurance that this type of destruction will be greatly reduced should a hurricane affect us in the future.

The Farm has continued to move forward on a positive footing with the number of visitors arriving at the farm in 2003 increasing by 11% to 453,000 and with the draft audited accounts for 2003 reflecting a net profit of $68,557. This again confirms our opinion that the Farm is rebounding from the devastation of Hurricane Michelle and will continue to go from strength to strength and rise above even the greatest challenge as we bring it into the forefront and the mainstream of tourism attractions in the coming years.

Thank you.

Annual Report of the National Drug Council and Audited Financial Statements 1 July 2001 – 30 June 2002

(Deferred Monday 8 March 2004)

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I would first of all like to thank this Honourable House for allowing the deferment of the tabling of this Report and to say that the Annual Report of the National Drug Council and the Audited Financial Statements 1 July 2001 – 30 June 2002 is now being tabled.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the National Drug Council; the Members that continue to view this very important issue in our community as one that they should give time to attempt to resolve. I would like to name, in particular, Mrs. Annie Multon, the Chairman of the National Drug Council, for her valuable service to the Council and I would also like to state that, at this time, the Ministry is reviewing the National Drug Council Law and reviewing the services, or the outputs, which the National Drug Council is providing to the community and the Ministry will make a statement to this effect in due course.

Thank you.

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

The Speaker: I call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to ask for the suspension of Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) so that we can take the questions.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: We move for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) in order to take questions after 11am.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow question time to continue beyond 11am.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Question No. 105

(Deferred Wednesday 10 March 2004)

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

No. 105: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports what is the total number of juveniles and young offenders now being held, giving the number, at each facility.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: On 19th February 2004 there were a total of 19 young offenders and juveniles held by the Prison Service.

In Northward	3 remanded juveniles
there were:	4 remanded young offenders
	11 sentenced young offenders.
	A total of 18.

In Fairbanks 1 remanded young prisoner.
there was:

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Can the Honourable Minister say if these juveniles and young offenders that are in the Northward Prison being held with the adult prisoners?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: The juveniles and young offenders are held in Northward Prison however not with the adult prisoners; they are in separate facilities with the prison.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town and Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Understanding that there is a separation within the facility could the Minister state if the juveniles are allowed outside of their specific facility at any time? Is there any mingling at all with any of the other prisoners or are they totally segregated?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: I would like to have had additional information with regard to the young offenders' juvenile facilities that are being established by the Government. Unfortunately, that additional information is not with me today. The completely separate, young offenders' juvenile facility will be officially opened on 7th April.

However, we are still working our way through what was and what still is, the non-segregation of young offenders and juveniles from the adult population, physically.

I will not try to make any excuses; the young offenders and the juveniles are housed within the physical confines of Northward Prison and although their segregation is achieved by supervision, they are in the same physical facilities and we will only remedy this situation after 7th April, 2004.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

Question No. 106

(Deferred Wednesday 10 March 2004)

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town and Leader of the Opposition.

No. 106: Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports what is Government's plan regarding the implementation of the National Youth Policy.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: The plan is for Government to fully implement the National Youth Policy in a timely manner. The Policy was first approved in September 2000 and since that time there has been developed a Committee of Enquiry into Youth Violence, a restructuring of the Youth agencies which now fall under the Children and Youth Services Foundation (CAYS), and a restructuring of the Social Services Department now called the Department of Children and Family Services. The Ministry has hired a consultant to review the area of community based youth initiatives and more changes will be implemented. The Ministry felt that these changes were necessary to provide for a more holistic development of our youth and to further empower them, thereby reducing the development of anti-social influences.

Under the mechanisms of the National Youth Policy, the National Youth Commission was launched; the Department of Youth and Sports was established; an outline of how the Youth Assembly will function has been drafted and every youth service provider on the Islands have been requested to submit names of their representatives, an outline of how the Youth Passport will function and a prototype of the Passport has been drafted, Membership is being solicited for the Inter-Ministerial/Inter-Departmental Committee on Youth, and draft plans of the Youth Development Centres have been designed. The Ministry is continuing with its drive to implement the National Youth Policy and anticipates that it will be implemented by December, 2004. The Ministry is also aware that policy making is a dynamic on-going process and will entail reviews, re-evaluation and re-formulation in addition to implementation.

In the written answer I have provided an exposition of the particular areas and that is available for Members.

Exposition:

Department of Youth and Sports

As a response to the National Youth Policy's recommendations for youth development, the Sports Office was restructured and the Youth & Sports Department was established in 2000. The Department is comprised of a Director, Deputy Director, Sports & Recreation Coordinator, Youth Service Coordinator, Women & Girls Coordinator, four Coaches, a Senior Swimming Instructor, eight Sports Instructors, four Community Coaches, five Youth Development Workers, Maintenance and Security Supervisor, five Groundsmen, five Janitors, two Assistant Coaches and two administrative staff.

The role of the Department is to implement government policy on Youth & Sports. The Department's mission is to empower the Islands' youth. Presently, 180 men, women and youth athletes are coached as national athletes and over 4,000 receive coaching on an educational basis. Six hundred youths attend programmes offered by the Department or financially assisted by the Ministry.

Presently, the Department offers a number of youth sport programmes in the six focus sports: cricket, basketball, track and field, netball, swimming and football. These programmes are presented either in the schools or general community. The Department assists with three community youth programmes and monitors, in particular, those that receive financial assistance from the Government.

In addition to after school sports and youth programmes, the Department holds monthly youth meetings, hosts a weekly radio show "Youth Flex", moderates a weekly youth club, sponsors and supports young people who are invited abroad to represent the Islands in a number of summits, workshops, cultural exchanges, et cetera.

The Department is in the process of adding other suitable Youth Development Officers to its staff.

Cayman Islands National Youth Commission

The role of the National Youth Commission is to monitor the implementation of the Youth Policy and to advocate for youth issues to be addressed in all relevant policies.

The Commission has its own office and Office Manager. Its official opening was Friday, 27th February, 2004. It is comprised of 17 members from a cross-section of the community and disciplines. There are also "Friends of the Commission" who are co-opted from time-to-time. To date the Commission has investigated and reported on the causes of social breakdown and youth violence in the community, questioned the granting of liquor licenses to establishments that a significant number of youths visit, called for the magistrates to use a consultative approach (with social workers and educators and others who work with youths) when deciding on the sentencing of youths.

The Commission has also consulted and formulated its Plan of Action. One of its main thrusts is improving literacy among the youth – themed "Literacy for Life". In addition, it will register volunteers who wish to assist youths through youth service providers as well as monitor and evaluate youth organisations and challenge them to be positive "change agents for youths" of the Cayman Islands.

Cayman Islands Youth Assembly

It is envisaged that this implementation mechanism will be comprised of a representative from each youth service provider on the three Cayman Islands. The Youth Assembly's role is to be the voice of young people regarding the National Agenda. Representatives from the Assembly will also be members of the National Youth Commission.

To date, an outline of how the Assembly will function has been drafted and every youth service provider on the Islands has been contacted to submit the particulars of their representative to the Assembly. This information is still being received.

Youth Passport

This mechanism was thought of to:

- motivate young people to take advantage of existing educational, training, employment and recreational opportunities;
- facilitate their accomplishments publicly;
- recognise their accomplishments in a number of areas such as: education, sports, volunteerism, (positive) leadership abilities, enterprise development, cultural appreciation and participation, religious observation, social and life skills proficiency, vocational acquisition, healthy lifestyles, employment and recreational pursuits; and
- cultivate role models in various areas of endeavour.

To date, an outline of how the Youth Passport will function and a prototype of the Passport have been drafted. Discussions are underway to use the Passport with a pilot group of youths.

Inter-Ministerial or Inter-Departmental Committee on Youth

A formal committee will be formed. However, the Ministry and Department of Youth has achieved an improved working relationship with the other Ministries and Departments while actively seeking to involve the relevant departments/units in activities, which we plan. The Youth Department also offers its support and expertise to planned events by other departments/units and members of the community, when requested. The Ministry and the Department of Youth have initiated a pilot programme for children at the George Town Primary using the Departments of Youth & Sports, Health, Children & Family Services, Police, George Town Primary School, Substance Abuse, and the Churches. From this, a van has been donated to the school and the implementations of the other parts of the programme are to be continued. The Ministry sponsors pro-social agents who promote education, pro-social behaviours, anti-drug use, the Cayman Islands and healthy lifestyles. In this programme, the relevant agencies are requested to use the pro-social agents in their programmes.

Youth Development Centres

Draft plans of these centres have been designed. Three are proposed; one each for the districts of West Bay, George Town and Bodden Town. The one in Bodden Town will service the eastern districts. Ideally, these centres would be two storeys with an open first floor to accommodate a multi-purpose court that could double as a dining area, meeting rooms, youth officers' offices and a kitchen, for example. The second floor would have a dormitory with full bathroom facilities, for example, to accommodate visiting youth groups/teams. There would also be a lounge on the second floor.

Where possible, the Ministry has been trying to use or renovate existing buildings in the districts for these centres. We have requested the Ministry of Planning for the use of the Civic Centres. We will also be pursuing the use of other buildings in the districts that can be used.

That ends the exposition on the progress with regard to the National Youth Policy.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Under the section dealing with the Department of Youth and Sports, is the Honourable Minister in a position to say if the after-school sports and youth programmes are offered in the eastern districts, and how many times per week if so?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, my understanding from the Permanent Secretary is that the community coaches work in all of the districts.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I have a supplementary, however before I ask that supplementary, if you will allow me, I would ask the Honourable Minister if he could research, and let me know in writing, how many times these programmes are offered particularly in the district of North Side?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: I will take that as an undertaking with pleasure.

The Speaker: I will allow two more questions.
The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplementary is under the Cayman Islands National Youth Commission where the Honourable Minister refers to: “To date the Commission has investigated and reported on the causes of social breakdown and youth violence in the community,”

My supplementary is, is this a different report than the Report of the Committee of Inquiry into youth violence, commissioned in 2001, and if so, is the Minister in a position to say if the Youth Commission’s findings were different from that of the Committee of Inquiry in 2001?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: The Commission of Inquiry in to social breakdown and youth violence is the Committee I am referring to and that is the same Committee that the Member for North Side commissioned when she was Minister responsible for this Portfolio.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: To clarify my question—

The Speaker: Is this a supplementary?

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: No. The answer the Honourable Minister gave me was not the question I was asking therefore I think he misunderstood what I was asking.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I am asking if, in this paragraph, under the Cayman Islands National Youth Commission where it is said: “To date the Commission has investigated and reported on the causes of social breakdown and youth violence,”

I am asking if that was a different investigation to the Committee of Enquiry on youth violence and, if so, were the findings the same or different?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: I am saying that the Cayman Islands National Youth Commission is the same Commission that would have been responsible for commissioning the enquiry. That is a little bit of semantics there, because I remember the Member saying at that time the National Youth Commission was the Commission that would then commissioned the enquiry. Therefore we have relayed this as part of the Commission’s activities and accomplishments.

The Speaker: No further supplementaries.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

The Tourism Authority of the Cayman Islands

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr .Speaker I wish to advise this Honourable House that the Governor in Cabinet of the Cayman Islands decided at its meeting on 9th March, 2004, not to proceed with transitioning the Department of Tourism to a Tourism Authority.

The Cabinet has asked the Ministry and Department of Tourism to temporarily suspend the work being done on this project by Ernst & Young and instead use the Ernst & Young draft working document to explore alternative funding options.

However, the Cabinet acknowledged and supported the need for the Department of Tourism to operate with increased autonomy, thereby providing the department with the ability to capitalize on opportunities as they arise in the marketplace.

While this consultation on alternate funding options takes place, the Government has asked the Ministry of Tourism to examine the feasibility of initiating internal changes which could expedite moving the Department closer to the framework recommended for the Tourism Authority.

Cabinet fully appreciates the needs for the Department of Tourism to operate more like a business and supports the move in that general direction by exploring other funding and organisational options.

As Honourable Members are aware, the current Director of Tourism will be leaving that post shortly. Following this statement the Permanent Secretary of Tourism will make an announcement concerning the appointment of an Acting Director of Tourism and the procedure that will be followed to fill the substantive post.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Offshore Alert Defamatory Innuendoes concerning the Leader of Government Business

The Speaker: Please continue Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Over the past week the issue of Offshore Alert, an internet publication, has again published defamatory innuendoes concerning me. I do not normally respond to these types of spurious allegations made by publications which lack objectivity, any real journalistic integrity or content and whose purpose is to make every possible attempt to bring into disrepute all financial centres in the Caribbean.

Mr. David Marchant, the founder and publisher of Offshore Alert was forced to leave Bermuda many years ago and mysteriously showed up in the United States with the necessary funding to start the necessary internet publication known as Offshore Alert. It is well known that the funding of this particular publication has often been the subject of intense speculation.

The Leader of the Opposition, the First Elected Member for George Town, after the publication of these spurious, defamatory innuendos sought fit to make political mileage of the same. This, Mr. Speaker, is regrettable particularly as the Leader of the Opposition, as a long standing Member of the Legislative Assembly, is well aware of the history and intent of Offshore Alert.

The Background

I have been reliably informed, Mr. Speaker, that some time ago legal proceedings between the developer of Ritz-Carlton and a Mr. Friend were initiated in the United States of America. Mr. Friend represented himself to be a practicing attorney in the United States to the developer of the Ritz-Carlton project and when the developer found out otherwise Mr. Friend was disengaged. This resulted in the law suit in the United States in which Mr. Friend made allegations concerning payments which had been legitimately made and sought to imply otherwise.

I should hasten to say, Mr. Speaker, that in that case and in the publication, to give it some credit, it was said that in that case those allegations were not relevant and he later lost that part of the case.

The Florida Bar suspended Mr. Friend in 1997 because he stole money from a retailer by fraudulently creating home-made pricing bar codes and then using bar codes created by Mr. Friend to return purchases made at a retailer. Mr. Friend did or intended to replace the retailer's bar codes on certain merchandise with bar codes reflecting a lower price. Mr. Friend then proceeded to purchase merchandise for less than the retailer was charging.

As a result, Mr. Friend violated section 812.014 of the Florida statutes entitled "Theft". Mr. Friend's act of stealing money from this retailer by replacing the retailer's bar codes with Mr. Friend's created bar codes was not an isolated occurrence; rather, it was the culmination of an on-going scheme to defraud. As a result, Mr. Friend was found guilty of various rules regulating the Florida Bar including: Rule 3-4.3 of the Rules of Discipline, (the commission of an act which is unlawful and contrary to honesty and justice); Rule 3-4.4 of the Rules of Discipline, (Criminal Misconduct); Rule 4-8.4(b) of the Rules of Professional Conduct, A lawyer shall not engage in conduct that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects); and Rule 4-8.4(c) of the Rules of Professional Conduct (A lawyer shall not engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentations).

Mr. Friend was never reinstated into the Florida Bar following his March 1997 suspension and Friend has not been licensed to practice law in the State of Florida since March 1997.

Mr. Friend is the person who the Leader of the Opposition, the First Elected Member for George Town, relies upon to make spurious and nefarious allegations concerning my integrity. The First Elected Member for George Town should question his judgement in placing reliance upon persons with a sordid history, which is publicly known, before seeking to make political mileage from allegations contained in a lawsuit – irrelevant allegations.

More recently Mr. Friend, apparently a former employee of the developer of the Ritz-Carlton and a person who has been disbarred as an attorney-at-law, and fired by the Ritz-Carlton developer because of it, in those particular proceedings, made allegations concerning payments which had been legitimately made and sought to imply otherwise.

More recently Mr. David Marchant apparently published defamatory material relating to the developer of the Ritz-Carlton project in Grand Cayman and legal proceedings were issued by the developer in the Cayman Islands against Mr. Marchant. He has refused to accept service of those proceedings in order to defend the accuracy of his publication. Instead of so doing, he has sought to attack the developer of the Ritz-Carlton.

As everyone in the Cayman Islands is well aware, the Ritz-Carlton project was approved and licensed in 1997 and 1998 under a former regime. I was not the Leader of Government Business or the Minister of Tourism when that project received licensing. I was an ordinary Member of the Legislative Assembly. As part and parcel of the licensing arrangements the Ritz-Carlton project was obliged to engage local companies for services that could be provided through those companies and in so doing a number of real estate companies were offered listings. Many companies and businesses in the Cayman Islands have benefited from business arrangements with the Ritz-Carlton project and will continue so to do for many years in the future. The project will inject some $1 billion into our economy; a very significant sum in an Island of this size. On completion of the project there will be continuing benefits to many people and many businesses on the Island.

It is no secret that I have been engaged in real estate sales for many years and my interest in those real estate businesses have been declared in the Legislative Assembly in a full and proper manner. In addition to declaring those interests in the Legislative Assembly I declared the same to previous Governors and the present Governor and the Leader of the Opposition was fully informed as far back as 1998. Out of an abundance of caution, again in 2001 (on the formation of that Throne Speech), I brought full attention to the now Leader of the Opposition (who was then the Leader of Government Business) of my continuing interest in businesses which had dealings with the Ritz-Carlton project, namely real estate sales.

I have been indeed pleased that my companies have been able to be part of the sales success of the Residences at the Ritz-Carlton, Grand Cayman along with other local real estate projects. In addition to companies with which I am associated, other real estate companies also have had listings associated with the Ritz-Carlton project including Coldwell Banker, Remax, Heritage & Hinton and ERA Kirkconnell Realty Cayman Islands Limited (ERA). All real estate agents are entitled and encouraged to sell the Ritz-Carlton project. They are all paid for their services and continue to be paid for their ongoing services on any sales.

The business arrangements, which the companies, which I am associated with, have with the Ritz-Carlton project, are not exclusive contracts and all business conducted with the Ritz-Carlton project and any other real estate developments in the Island, has been conducted in the normal course of business arrangements. To seek to insinuate otherwise in this manner is nothing short of disgraceful, and is only a dirty tactic of the Leader of the Opposition to smear me, which has been started by their political operatives.

There are many issues facing the Cayman Islands, which are being addressed by the United Democratic Party (UDP) Government. Issues like zero tolerance on crime, security matters, education, tourism, the economy, the European Union/United Kingdom (EU/UK) Cayman issues, which are extremely complex and time consuming, and matters of an important nature concerning other countries with which Cayman conducts or wishes to conduct business.

I do not have all the answers to our problems but I continue to work tirelessly for the general good of our country.

The Leader of the Opposition would better serve the people of these Islands if he gave serious consideration to addressing matters of great importance to the people of these Islands instead of seeking to gain a political advantage by relying upon scandalous publications. Perhaps the Leader of the Opposition should remind himself that he himself had private business interests, which have been directly related to the Government of the Cayman Islands.

In his statement enthusiastically alluding to ethics of Members of the Government, he failed to mention he, himself, for many years, at a time when he was a Member of Government, has had numerous contracts with the Cayman Islands Government and received payments directly from the Government for that business.

The public is fully aware that one of the companies with which he was associated had printed the official Government Gazette at substantial costs to the Government for many years and that this contract have not been publicly tendered; there were others connected to Government. For the year he was Leader of Government, he himself brought boxes of printed material to the Glass House even though the contract had not been publicly tendered.

Point of Order

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, there is a point of order. May I hear your point of order Honourable Leader of the Opposition?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I have no problem informing this whole world about any business that I have been involved with however the Leader of Government Business has just said that I was involved with a contract with the Government that was not publicly tendered. The Leader of Government Business either proves that to be a fact, which I know is not a fact, or he withdraws it because he is misleading, not only this House, but any one who hears what he says.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Honourable Leader of Government Business, would you comment please.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition was the owner of Prestige Printers and other companies. That company had been printing the official Gazette and other business, I guess, connected to it, for many years and was not tendered until 1990. That was the information I received yesterday and I will get that, since I am challenged, and bring it to this House. After that it was never tendered.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: Would you please... The answer to that seems pretty factual, however if the Honourable Leader of the Opposition would I would like to have further information on that I can call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to provide further information.

Please be seated for a minute.

I would also remind Honourable Members that they have a right under Standing Order 32 to ask short questions after the Honourable Leader has completed his statement if they so wish.

Perhaps they may prefer to formulate proper short questions to ask after rather than continue in this vein with what is supposed to be point of order. I do not think that it is going to be very profitable or productive to continue since the Honourable Leader of Government Business has stated that he will provide this information. I would ask him to let me have this information as soon as this is available today.

Honourable Leader of the Opposition, are you continuing on a point of order?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, if I am allowed.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the Leader of Government Business made a statement that I had ownership in a company which provided services to the Government that was not publicly tendered. That was what he said first. I am saying that that is not the case, it is not a fact and the fact that he has said it and it is not a fact he must withdraw it. He has since said Sir—

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, if you would just sit for a minute. I think I made the point, and I am not going to repeat this, that the Honourable Leader of Government Business stated that he had, as a fact, information back in 1990 and that he would provide me with information showing where he can substantiate the allegation that he has made.

Until such time I will ask him to continue. I am not going to continue on this particular point because he does not have that information available at this time however I will ask him to get me that information as quickly as possible after this statement is completed. I would ask all Honourable Members to comply accordingly.

Please continue Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would be generous enough—I know you have ruled—to stop here and go and get that information and come back.

The Speaker: No, you may continue and please let me have it as soon as you are finished.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much Mr. Speaker.

No one sought to make political mileage of these contracts or these jobs, which were directly related to businesses associated with Mr. Tibbetts although the business of the First Elected Member for George Town and the Leader of the Opposition received funds directly from the Treasury Department, from contracts not publicly tendered.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: They say it is not true. Well, they can prove whether it is true or not.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: My life has always been an open book and I have always made all the necessary important declarations, in one form or another, to ensure the highest ethics in Government's good governance policy and to ensure that whatever I do is open and accountable and maintains the integrity of the Government Members and the Cayman Islands. To try and insinuate that there is something sinister and illegal, or that the payments were not for legitimate business purposes, is typical of the way the Leader of the Opposition and his People's Progressive Movement (PPM) party seeks to gain political mileage. They should try, instead of interrupting, and rely upon the worthwhile achievements of the Leader of the Opposition, the First Elected Member for George Town, while he was Leader of Government Business.

I am well aware that the people of the Islands—

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: If you want to lay any claim, lay it.

The Speaker: Order!

Please continue, Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Lay it. I challenge you. Mr. Speaker, I am tired of the interruptions by the Second Elected Member and the general secretary of the PPM. You have an opportunity to prove that too. Mr. Speaker, I am going to challenge the Member sooner or later if he does not stop.

The Speaker: Just give me a minute, Honourable Minister. I have called on Honourable Members to show due constraint and to behave properly in the Chambers in the past and I would remind you of that again.

If you have any information that can be substantiated I will gladly allow you to make a statement or to ask questions on it.

However, the cross-talk and insinuating certain things is not helping the smooth and proper operation of the Legislative Assembly. Therefore, I would ask all Members to desist from this cross-talk that tends to interrupt whichever speaker whether on the Opposition or on the Government side. Let us show some respect for each other in this Honourable Parliament. Please continue Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, thank you.

I am well aware that the people of the Islands are fully cognisant of the very hard work which the UDP Government, of which I am proud to be apart, has done over the past two and a half years and that there, will be an election on 17 November, 2004.

I am extremely disappointed that the Leader of the Opposition finds it is necessary to give credence to the publications like Offshore Alert when he himself is well aware of the numerous declarations, which I have personally made in this Honourable House. He is also well aware that this is the third time, to the best of my knowledge that the payments to my companies received from the Ritz-Carlton project have been alluded to by Offshore Alert's David Marchant.

Hopefully, in the future, his time will be better spent in making constructive recommendations for addressing the many issues which our country and our people face instead of masquerading in the belief that spurious innuendoes of a defamatory nature will assist him in his future endeavours to become the Leader of Government Business.

As Minister of Tourism and Leader of Government Business I will continue to pay very strict attention to the Ritz-Carlton development. It is in the interests of everyone in the country that this project is successfully completed. I have a duty to do my best to continue to meet with the bank that financed the same, those promoting the project and those developing the same.

There is nothing sinister or illegal about my activities. Many of our peoples' welfare now and in the future will be affected either positively or negatively, depending on the outcome of the project. I will do my best to ensure that our people will be positively advantaged today, tomorrow and beyond.

I have, in endeavouring to carry out my responsibilities, met with the Royal Bank of Scotland, the lead finance organisation, and other important participants. The Royal Bank of Scotland has written to me relative to this project and the letter was read in my radio address this week. A copy is attached to this document and will be tabled along with this statement.

If the Leader of the Opposition, when he was the Leader of Government Business, had sought to make decisions in the interests of the people there would have been no need to remove him from that position.

The Leader of the Opposition should question his own judgment, particularly in this instance and perhaps, present an apology to this House as it is he as it is he who has done damage to the reputation of the country and its people in again exercising poor judgment without any proper underlying examination of the circumstances and the persons on whose information he relies.

Let me say to the Leader of the Opposition and others like him who see this next General Election as one that they must win, it will not be won by scandalous lies and innuendos. If that is what they believe then their life will have to be as open as mine, their business activities will have to be as scrutinised as mine are. I say to them again, if they have anything on me then I beg them to make it public, I beg them to produce it!

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Pursuant to Standing Order 30(2) which reads, "No debate may arise on such a statement but the Presiding Officer may, in his discretion, allow short questions to be put to the Member making the statement for the purpose of clarification."

May I ask, Sir, for you to exercise that discretion and permit me to ask the Honourable Leader of Government Business a few questions?

The Speaker: It is in accordance with the Standing Order for the Speaker in his discretion, to allow short questions and I will accordingly allow that at this time.

Short questions. There will not be any debates on this matter however I would remind Members that, as I said earlier, the Honourable Leader of Government Business has been asked to provide proof of certain statements made by him earlier by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Following these short statements I propose to take the luncheon break to return at 2.30pm so that the Honourable Leader of Government Business will have sufficient time to research the information that I have requested.

Please proceed with your short questions, Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town. I will limit the short questions to three at this time since it is proposed to have this information after which it might also be necessary to have short questions.

Please proceed.

Short Questions (Standing Order 30(2))

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In his statement, the Honourable Leader of Government Business acknowledged the receipt of certain payments which he indicated were by way of commission and expenses for Cambridge and or other companies which he has an interest.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister will confirm that the payments referred to were made to Cambridge Realty or Windsor Developments or one of his other companies and not directly to him or in his name.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am the owner and major shareholder (my wife and I) of Cambridge Real Estate Corporation and my wife is the owner of Windsor Development Corporation and there have been payments made to both companies.

At one point my wife authorised payments be made to me that I could get them for reasons that she wanted. So yes, those payments were made to me for real estate commissions. I have nothing to hide.

The Speaker: Second short question.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable leader can then tell this Honourable House which of the 11 payments, which have been made, have been made to him personally and which have been made to the respective companies.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Several payments were made to me by agreement of my wife. I do not have the number with me however there were payments paid to me.

The Speaker: I stated that there would be three short questions. I will give the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman the third question.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, can the Honourable Leader of Government Business state if all payments received by him or his companies were real estate related and for commission?

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Real estate commission and expenses.

The Speaker: Thank you.

At this time I propose to take the luncheon break and I will ask all Members to reassemble at 2.30pm.

I think this will give the Honourable Leader of Government Business sufficient time to get the information that is required to support the statement he recently made.

Proceedings suspended at 12.38 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.34 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Honourable Members, during the presentation of a statement by the Honourable Leader of Government Business earlier today, in response to an article which appeared in a recent publication of the Offshore

Alert, and a further statement made by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition in this matter which appeared in the news media, certain charges were made by the Honourable Leader of Government Business on which a Point of Order was raised by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

I stated prior to the suspension for lunch that I would give a ruling when proceedings were resumed this afternoon. I will, therefore, deal on the specifics of this Point of Order and nothing more. I would also not allow any further questions on this matter once I have made my ruling.

From the unedited verbatim transcript of the Hansard, the specific Point of Order raised by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition was, and I quote: “Mr. Speaker, I have no problem informing this whole world about any business that I have been involved with, but the Leader of Government Business has just said that I was involved with a contract with the Government that was not publicly tendered. The Leader of Government business, either proves that to be a fact, which I know is not a fact, or he withdraws it because he is misleading not only the House, but anyone who hears what he says.”

This Point of Order was raised in respect of a statement made by the Honourable Leader of Government Business in respect of the First Elected Member for George Town and the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, and I quote: “The public is fully aware that one of the companies with which he was associated had printed the official Government Gazette at substantial costs to the Government for many years and that this contract has not been publicly tendered . . . ”

I have received a signed statement from the Senior Information Officer, who has responsibility for the printing of the Gazette, in answer to the following question, I quote: [Pause]

Just a second, Honourable Members. Please let me read that paragraph again.

I have received a signed statement from the Senior Information Officer, who has responsibility for the printing of the Gazette, in answer to the following question: “Assuming there is a contractual relationship between Government and Prestige Printers for the printing of the Cayman Islands Government Gazette, when was the present contract awarded?”

Answer: “The present contract was awarded in November 1990.”

A further question was: “Was the contract awarded by the Departmental Tenders Committee or the Central Tenders Committee?”

Answer: “The tender was handled by what was then called the Assistant Controller of Office Services, whose office (Personnel) was then responsible for handling payments, contracts, et cetera, for the Gazette (correspondence dated 1 November 1990). Responsibility for handling ten- ders, contracts and payments, et cetera, for the Gazette was devolved to GIS in around 1997.”

Note: “We have not put out the Gazette to tender since 1990 based on the fact that we continue to pay $22 per page as prices were not raised by the printer who came in below the nearest competitor, et cetera.”

From the information available to me, I am satisfied that the Gazette was not put out to tender since 1990, however for good reasons and that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition was not responsible for this decision. Further, I am satisfied that the statement made by the Honourable Leader of Government Business was factual when he stated that the contract had not been publicly tendered for many years. This, notwithstanding, I am also satisfied that this non-tendering of the Gazette was the sole responsibility of Government and not the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Madam Clerk, could you call the next item on the Order Paper?

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTION

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/03

National Song Beloved Isle Cayman

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to move Motion No. 9/03 entitled National Song Beloved Isle Cayman.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?
Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The question is be it therefore resolved that Government prevails on the copyright owners to assign the rights to the original version of the National Archives and seek the new owners of the copyright permission to substitute the word “isle” to “isles” to represent the three Islands.

The Motion is now open for debate as the Mover wish to speak thereto.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.
Mr. Speaker, the Motion that I am pleased to bring to this Honourable House is one in which the content has been discussed on numerous occasions in this Parliament as well as in other forums among the Members of this Honourable Legislative Assembly.

I take the opportunity to read through the Motion, Mr. Speaker.

“WHEREAS the National Song of the Cayman Islands, both in its title and its content, refers to Beloved Isle Cayman in its singular rather than plural form to represent the three Islands;

“AND WHEREAS the rights of the song are held by the estate of the song writer’s granddaughter Mrs. Marcia Bodden-Bush;

“AND WHEREAS the Coat of Arms, Flag and National Song Law which was enacted in 1993 does not give Government the right to make any changes to the words or the music of this piece of work;

“BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government prevails on the copyright owners to assign the rights to the National Archive and seek the new owners of the copyright permission to substitute the word “Isle” to “Isles” to represent the three Islands.”

At the onset, I would like to thank my colleague, the Third Elected Member for West Bay for seconding this Motion. I also would like to thank the Honourable Chief Secretary who, from about two years ago, brought this issue to the forefront and I have had several discussions with him on this issue.

In July, 2003, Question No. 80 was posed in this Honourable Assembly to the Honourable Minister of Education. The question read:

“Who currently possesses the rights to the National Song of the Cayman Islands and what would be required to have the wording altered to reflect the three Islands by substituting the “Isle” with “Isles”?”

It is from that answer that it was detailed in this Honourable Assembly after much work and research by the Ministry that two options were available.

Option A was to obtain the consent of the owners of the song to make the change. Option B was to prevail upon the copyright owners to assign the rights of the original version to a third party, for example, the National Archive. The owners of the copyright could then change the words.

It is in option B that this Motion seeks to have this change reflected.

As our beloved country evolves through its various forms of governance and from our colonial state to our current state, and despite those who proclaim that we are not a nation, to many of us when we hear the Beloved Isle Cayman our emotions are tickled inside and we feel a sense of national pride just like anyone hearing the anthem of the United States or the national anthem of Jamaica. The Beloved Isle Cayman is now taught in our schools; it is recited over and over at all of our formal functions.

Cayman Brac and Little Cayman represent 20 per cent of the land mass of the Cayman Islands, five per cent of the population.

I am asking through this Motion for the title of the song, as well as any reference in the song, to be altered to reflect the three Islands.

As I do not anticipate any difficulty in the passage of this very straightforward Motion and given the late hour here in the Legislative Assembly today, I certainly do not intend to occupy much time in the presentation of the arguments for the support of this Motion.

I think it is a natural amendment and one which the entire Legislative Assembly would support. Perhaps this will put unnecessary leverage on those on the opposite side however, as point of note and interest, at our functions and in our literature, the United Democratic Party—this may not be permitted—has always amended it to reflect the three Islands. For those who possess any of our collateral material we have always sung the song reflecting the three Cayman Islands by referring to Isle in its plural sense.

This process is a lengthy one, I am sure, and one that will not bring about immediate remedy. However I felt obliged to bring an issue that may seem pedantic to many but to us in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman it is of extreme significance and we look forward to this Honourable Assembly giving its support to the passage of this Private Member's Motion that will bring the National Song of the Cayman Islands to be representative of the three Cayman Islands.

With those few words said, Mr. Speaker, I sit and ask for all Members to lend their support to this Motion.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As the Mover of the Motion said that at this late hour and perhaps with no question of whether the Motion will receive unanimous support I do not think I will speak to the Motion very long either.

For as long as I too can remember whenever singing the National Anthem I sing it not saying "beloved Isle Cayman" but saying "beloved Isles Cayman". That was not because someone told me to do so, it just came naturally. The fact of the matter is Mr. Speaker, it was years after doing it that I realised the correct name was just Beloved Isle. I did not know the difference because I know there are three Islands. However, knowing the family that the writer of the song came from and listening to many of them talk about it I got more familiar with it.

Just the specific note in the Resolve section of the Motion which reads: "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government prevails on the copyright owners to assign the rights to the original version to the National Archive and seek the new owners of the copyright permission to substitute the word "Isle" to "Isles" to represent the three Islands."

As I understand that, it is a matter of getting the copyright with the Archives and then getting the Archives to change "Isle" to "Isles."

The only comment that I would make about this is I have never spoken to representatives of the estate of our good friend, the late Mrs. Marcia (Bodden-Bush) and I am not one hundred per cent sure what their thoughts are regarding the copyright.

I would be happy if what the Motion is seeking is achieved however the point I wish to make is, even if the copyright does not change hands, the most important thing to happen from the results of the Motion would be to get the name officially changed from Isle to Isles and wherever it reads in the National Song itself.

While I believe that we should accept the Motion I think we should bear in mind, even if the copyright does not change hands we can still proceed and ask them to change the name. I am not suggesting that it would not change hands. I am saying let us make sure that we are talking about two different resolutions that we seek to achieve in the Motion and one does not hinge on the other.

The Opposition has talked about this on more than one occasion. I guess most of us when we sing it, we sign it as it should be sung thought it really was not that important however in any case this certainly would tidy the situation up as most countries have their own national songs and we know that copyright is not left with individuals or private estates.

Therefore, I respect the objective of the Motion. To repeat, let us make sure one resolution is achieved if not both.

The Opposition have no difficulty in supporting the Motion and certainly we would hope that both objectives are achieved.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, as the Minister with responsibility for Culture I have some fear and trepidation about what this Motion is seeking and I would have wished that the mover had spoken to me earlier about the Motion because what we are talking about is incorporated under international copyright and I have a fear and loathing of the Government, albeit it authorised by Parliament, trying to approach heirs or possessors to rest copyright in this way.

I think that listening to the Motion and listening to the song over many years, a case can be made that when the author refers to Cayman, she did not say Grand Cayman, she said beloved Isle Cayman. It is not unusual that in these kinds of poetic renderings that although the singular is written it could be incorporated because she is talking about one entity; Cayman. Really and truly, Mr. Speaker it is a question of semantics which are not that important and I think that we have to be very careful, in a time when we could be doing other things that the Government is not getting itself into a situation of contention when it does not necessarily need to.

Most recently the Ministry has been concerned with securing proper copyright and, as I understand it, these things are not easily changed.

Furthermore in 1993, if the records serve me correctly there was a move to have this wording changed and the heirs, successors and proprietors of this song issued an explanation that Cayman, as it was used in the song, meant the three Islands, Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and expressed a reluctance to change the wording to reflect anything other than what was written originally.

I think that Parliament should take this Motion under some advisement and, indeed, seek to promote the notion that when we speak about Isle Cayman, we mean the three Islands: Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

That is the position that I take and that is the position I would advise the House to take. I think to do otherwise we would be running the risk of involving this Honourable House in a contention and dispute that we would be well advised to avoid at this time.

On that basis, my recommendation for the easiest way out would be to withdraw the Motion or to amend the Motion whichever is easier. From the perspective which I inhabit, the Motion as it stands will no doubt lead us into contention if we accept it.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister of Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, I rise to give my brief contribution as it relates to Motion 09/03 entitled National Song Beloved Isle Cayman.

In anticipation of rising to make a contribution to this Motion I did take some time to go back and get an understanding from whence it came. Although the information seems very scarce in regard to such an important song being a National Song, which was adapted in 1993, I was unable to find the Hansard for it here in the Legislative Assembly although with some searching got some assistance from the National Archive.

Suffice to say, for me, if the Motion did pass today it would be just a matter of icing on the cake because I have always, like the Leader of the Opposition, added an "s", taking that against the background under the Interpretation Law when ever the singular is used it could be interpreted as a plural and the same thing with the gender. Being from the Brac we have always taken great pride in adding the "s".

I also fully understand it is cognisant to my learned friend the Minister of Education that when Mrs. Lelia Ross-Shier in the early 1930's put pen to paper, she was careful enough in her penmanship to say Cayman as opposed to being specific and saying Cayman Brac, Little Cayman or Grand Cayman.

I did go through the song and tried to insert it and one of the difficulties I came upon was that there are more words in the song that are singular beside the word isle and island so the difficulty that I found myself in was that, with the resolution it would almost need to say wherever it is singular, if we wish to make it abundantly clear, that the entire song should pluralised as opposed to just that.

I am making these comments public as I also was not sought for comment or opinion prior to today. When we look at the title it says, Beloved Isle Cayman. It is quite easy to add an "s" there however if you go down and try to get it to rhyme you will find the words 'you' and the word 'the' and one could also argue the similar synopsis that plural words needed to be added. I found, and I am no person for composing poems from a professional perspective, a lot of the verse will not rhyme so other words would have to be added.

I am not quite sure how the objective can be achieved because I know all of my constituents that presently reside on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as well as those of us on Grand Cayman would like to be able to say that we can sing Beloved Isles Cayman.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education has indicated a legal technicality therefore perhaps the mover may wish to speak to the Members of the Government as I was reminded by my good friend on the Opposition that I am bound by collective responsibility, which I know quite well and I also realise that there is a particular course of voting that I can take not to be in breach of that.

However I would not like to see the intent go by the wayside and perhaps the mover may wish to reconsider the position and either adhere to the requests of the Honourable Minister and or perhaps consider amending it so that we would be in a position to ensure that Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are encapsulated in the intent, and indeed the terminology of the song, without having to have the complete Motion thrown away and forgotten about.

May it please you. Thank you.

The Speaker: Before I call on any further Honourable Member to speak on this Motion, perhaps it might be opportune for the mover to meet with the Government Members to have a look at this Motion. It is a most unusual situation I see here this evening where a Back Bench supporter of Government is running into problem with the Ministers. I would have thought that this would have been dealt with in caucus. Notwithstanding that perhaps we could take a short suspension so that the mover, if he wishes to do so, could meet with the Honourable Minister and try to resolve this issue. Otherwise I would ask if there are any other Members that would wish to speak on this Motion.

The Honourable Minister of Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I did not hear an indication from the mover of the Motion and I rise to offer a few comments on Private Members Motion 09/03 National Song Beloved Isle Cayman.

In the WHEREAS clauses it clearly sets out somewhat of a historical sketch of where this song derived from and that is well known and I think accepted.

I do not know however I accept what I see in the second WHEREAS that the rights to the song are held by the estate of the writer's grand-daughter but the thing that really attracts me is the question of copyrights.

Copyright, particularly in a world of today, is one of the foremost concepts in one securing one's intellectual rights. An intellectual copyright is something which influences international trade. Therefore, I must agree with my colleague in the regard that this Motion, I am sure is well intentioned to satisfy certain local feelings, needs, wants or desires and that is quite appropriate.

Whenever I sing the song, and indeed it has now become something that while we may have the National Anthem, the National Song usually follows thereafter and I think all of us on all three Islands are moved by it.

If I talk about Cayman I talk about it in the plural, I mean all three of the Islands. Grand Cayman, if I want to be specific of this the largest island, Cayman Brac if I mean Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I can claim, and it stands in the records, that at one time we had Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac and Little Cayman were referred to as the Lesser Islands; I moved the Motion in this House, which was unanimously accepted, and it was changed in the all of the Laws of the Cayman Islands. There is no longer a reference to the Lesser Islands. In place of that is the name Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I took that from the perspective that I would not want anyone calling me "man" since I have a name. Each one, fortunately, has the right to something personal to ourselves. I think that in this case, it would not be correct. Particularly, I am attracted to the words: ". . . prevail on the copyright owners . . .". Webster's Dictionary speaks of it from the "[Latin prae-, before + valère, to be strong]1 to be victorious; triumph: often with over or against 2 to succeed 3 to be or become more widespread 4 to be prevalent—"

I think that it would not be proper for the Government to attempt to force a copyright holder to hand that copyright over to the National Trust or any such person. It is something that the Government could rightfully approach those persons to say to them "There is a feeling; there is a general desire to see a change. Would you consider doing such and such?" However, I think it would be more acceptable for the Government to be in a position to do that and only then could one consider pluralizing the word "Isle."

Whenever I participate in singing the song I say "Isles" but this is an opportune time for all of us when we are talking about Cayman to be inclusive rather than exclusive to any one given place within the three Islands.

Of course it is the Mover of the Motion's decision as to whether this Resolve section goes forward as it presently stands or whether he would seek to have an amendment made to it. In this form I think the Government needs to be very careful of attempting to give an undertaking that it will prevail over a copyright situation which would bring into question what the Government might do in another copyright situation.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I think it would be productive if we could have even just a two-minute break to talk to my colleagues in this very unusual and awkward position we find ourselves in this afternoon.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, you have heard the request from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. We are now ten minutes away from the adjournment.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, could we take a suspension? I would imagine that it is something which should not take very long to do because I am not sure that too many of the speakers that we could conclude it this evening if it was necessary to suspend the proceedings. It would go just a little beyond 4.30pm.

The Speaker: Honourable Deputy Leader, I am quite happy to do that. However it seems that we might have to go beyond 4.30pm therefore I hope all Honourable Members will understand why we have to do that. At this time I will take a suspension of 10 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 4.25 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.52 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Honourable Leader of Government Business, if you would suspend Standing Order 10(2) for us to continue beyond the hour of 4.30pm?

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I understand we intend to finish the item under discussion this afternoon. I therefore move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order to take business after 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended in order for us to continue business beyond the hour of 4.30pm.

All those in favour please say Aye. All those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow business to continue beyond of 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman continuing with Private Member's Motion No. 9/03.

Motion to Withdraw Private Member's Motion
No. 9/03
(Standing Order 24(14))

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker for allowing us the brief break to discuss this matter. After consultation with my colleagues I am asking permission under Standing Order 24(14) of the Legislative Assembly to withdraw Motion No. 9/03.

The Speaker: The question is that Private Member's Motion No. 9/03 National Song Beloved Isle Cayman be withdrawn in accordance with Standing Order 24(14).

All those in favour please say Aye. All those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Private Member's Motion No. 9/03 withdrawn.

The Speaker: The Motion that was made by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I think I heard the Third Elected Member for West Bay seconding the Motion, just to clarify that.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Elected Member for East End who is attending the 53rd Parliamentary Seminar in the United Kingdom (UK). I also have apologies from the Leader of Government Business and the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

I have apologies for late arrival from the Honourable Third Official Member.

Request from the Honourable Third Official Member

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member has also requested that I advise Members as follows:

"Before the Government is able to present their Strategic Policy Statement for 2004-5 and the Budget, the Public Management and Finance (2003 Revision) needs to be amended to reflect changes Government wishes to make to the Law so it is with some urgency that the amendment Bill needs to be passed. The amendment Bill, called the Public Management and Finance (Amendment) Bill, 2004, is quite lengthy, some 20 pages. To assist in the passage of this Bill through the House I would like your permission to hold a short, informal briefing of Members. This briefing could occur before the proceedings of the House start on Monday morning 15th March, 2004 at 9.30 am."

I have given my agreement to this, therefore the Third Official Member is asking all Members to be present here 9.30 am on Monday, 15th March.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF CABINET

Question No. 108

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

No. 108:Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture Have any difficulties been experienced with the temporary classroom facilities employed at some Government Schools this year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddin: There has been some condensate build-up to internal walls of two classrooms at the George Hicks High School (units T4 and T5), which resulted in a foul odour and some peeling of the fibre reinforcement plastic (FRP) covering to the sheetrock in these tow classrooms. There was also some leaking to two classrooms at the same school; these units were labelled T1 and T3. The roofs have been repaired and the problem has been corrected.

These units have been visited by the manufacturer and they have submitted their repair proposals for correcting the problem. The temporary classrooms are still under warranty from the manufacturer.

The correction includes replacing the fibre reinforced panels and carrying out a few other modifications. These repairs are scheduled to take place during the Easter which starts on 7th April.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As they are still under warranty I presume that these were new units when they were employed at George Hicks in August or September of last year, in which case there is cause for concern and that leads to my real question. In an answer to another question earlier this week the Honourable Minister said that temporary classrooms would be employed at John Gray for the upcoming school year. My question is, are these new proposed temporary classrooms at John Gray of the same material and supplied by the same supplier and/or manufacturer?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: The Honourable Member can be assured that the Ministry shares his concern and I have requested that we seek an alternate supplier to that from which these models were procured. Yes, the classrooms are still under warranty.

The classrooms are assembled here and they come in halves so that the workmen assemble the two halves together here. It seems there were some leakages which were the cause of the problem as far as we can ascertain. I have seen these classrooms in other locations, most recently on our visit to Vancouver, British Columbia and they had no such problem. What is peculiar is that the classrooms at the Bodden Town primary school exhibit no such symptoms; therefore we can only assume that it had something to do with the poor workmanship in their assembly, however, where possible, I would certainly encourage the procurers to seek another vendor from which to purchase the classrooms and also a different model.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I wonder if the Honourable Minister is in a position to tell us what the cost per unit is for these temporary classrooms.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I do not remember the exact cost however it seems to me that ball park figure was around $50,000.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? Madam Clerk.

Suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2)

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Gilbert A. Mclean: Mr. Speaker. I beg to move the suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) so that the Business on the Order Paper may be taken.

The Employment Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Gilbert A. Mclean: Mr. Speaker. I beg to suspend Standing Order 46(4) so that the second reading of The Employment Bill 2003 can be taken.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Than you Mr. Speaker.

This is an opportunity to beg that this Bill for a Law to Provide for the Regulation of the Employer/Employee Relationship; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes. May I beg that this Bill be accepted for debate in the Legislative Assembly at this time?

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Yes Sir.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, this Bill represents the culmination of many hours of dedicated work by many people. Permit me to give a brief synopsis of how we arrived at this position.

Upon assuming the responsibility for Employment Relations, based on feedback which we had from the public and for those persons directly responsible, it was thought that there was a dire need to change the system significantly from what had existed previously.

It was agreed that the old Labour Law, which was the original Labour Law crafted in 1987 had served its purpose and had done well, however, changes in the society and in employment relations necessitated a new and refreshing look at our labour practices.

There were some who suggested that what could have been done was a series of amendments to the old Law as it existed. Upon huddling and consulting with my advisors in the Ministry it was decided that it would be in the best interest of all parties to opt for a new law. Mr. Speaker, this has proved sensible because there is an old adage which says if you put new wine in old bottles the new wine will become rancid.

What we set out to do was to change the whole concept of labour relations by adopting the model set out by the International Labour Organisation and the Caribbean Regional Office of establishing a tripartite system of employer, employee and government; employer on one side, employee on the other side and the government in the middle.

We found that the old system, although good in its intentions and for a while efficient, had overburdened the system with an alarming number of tribunal cases with an outstanding backlog which needed to have been redressed. It was also an adversarial system which bode no party any good because what it did was pitied employer against employee and made the Government, who was firmly embedded in the middle, look like a bad guy when rulings came in favour of either side. We had a system existing in which the employees had no confidence in the Government and the employers had no confidence in the Government. The common complaint was when the rulings went against the employee that the bias was on the side of the employer and against the employee. When rulings went against the employer and in favour of the employee then the obverse obtained.

Therefore, it was difficult for the Government to come out of any situation with the respect and confidence of either party. We set about to change the system by first of all, creating an employment forum in which all areas of the employment sector in the Cayman Islands were represented. We had people from the construction industry, representatives from the Human Resource Managers Organisation, the Chamber of Commerce, the Union/National Alliance for Cayman Islands Employees (NACE) and we set about crafting some guidelines which we thought would lead up to the drafting instructions.

When we got the drafting instructions we circulated these for public comment, indeed I tabled them in the Legislative Assembly. As a result of that feedback we then, in the Ministry, made a response to those people who commented on the drafting instructions and it was from that point that we set about to launch what would form the meat of the Employment Bill.

All the way through we employed the widest consultation possible and we were as transparent and open as was necessary. Everyone had an opportunity, the consultative period was well announced and we received many comments. Many of them we adopted.

What we were a little disappointed about is that we received no comments from employee organisations because it seems that our system is weak on that. We took these and put them into a document and circulated it again.

I was disappointed that after all of this consultation and after all of this involvement the Chamber of Commerce saw fit to withdraw itself from what was transpiring, using the excuse that they could not agree to what was being put forward although I, as Minister, was under the initial impression that the Chamber of Commerce was generally satisfied that we had embarked upon the right direction.

It is important for me to say at this point that it really is not my prerogative nor is it my interest or overriding concern to craft an Employment Bill that the Chamber of Commerce accepts or is pleased with. Indeed, I would be suspicious if that were the case because the Chamber of Commerce is a special interest group primarily representing employers, in spite of what they claim.

My responsibility as the Minister is to craft an Employment Bill which is fair to employers and employees, and I say employers and employees not necessarily in any order of importance because the objective of the Ministry, and by inference the Government, is to set the system up so that we, in the Cayman Islands, can continue to have a harmonious society in which the employment relations are as cordial as they can be.

I can tell you that it was also an overriding concern and philosophy that the Employment Bill must, first of all, not be predicated upon the ability of any one party to come out in a commercially or economically advantageous position, as much as it is to guarantee that there is a fair day's wage for a fair day's work or a fair day's work for a fair day's wage. Balancing the ability of the workers to achieve a certain standard of mental and social well-being is necessary to ensure that our society continues and that no individual or groups of individuals are severely disadvantaged.

I want to interject at this point that it is my information, and indeed the information of other officers in the Ministry concerned with the drafting of this legislation, that in some quarters doctors are concerned with the high levels of work related stress and hypertension which results from that in our society. However, some people do not understand that because these are not the things that show up at the end of a financial year in the ledger or the profit and loss column. Nevertheless, that is important because if we have a society in which an inordinate percentage of the people are suffering from stress which eventually leads to hypertension, our society will eventually break down and instead of us eliminating the problem of a high dependence on imported labour we will be drifting further into the morass.

Thus, I say to the critics first of all that this legislation is not only about the ability of investors to realise a return on their money, which I am in support of, but it is also about ensuring that the people who work have access to quality time with their families and quality time off their work and do not labour under such onerous conditions that they have to take days off or sick leave because they are stressed or because they have developed hypertension.

In other words, there is a social aspect to work and we have to factor that in so that it is reflected in the legislation and we have tried to do that in as fair and balanced way as is possible. When I reach that part where I detail some of the clauses and the significant changes I will explain the philosophy behind it.

Suffice to say, Mr. Speaker, there were numerous complaints, mainly orchestrated by the Chamber of Commerce who went on a serious advertising blitz. Mr. Speaker, I want to say this; it summoned all of my resolve and all of the gentlemanliness in me (I did not know I had so much, I was flattered) because the natural reaction when people are put under that kind of pressure as the Opposition can well attest, is to defend oneself and to strike back. I bit my tongue several times and blinded my vision to the advertisement that I saw. All of it negative and sometimes I was hard pressed to believe that the Chamber of Commerce did not have a personal vendetta against me.

I want to say from this august podium, what is peculiar about the Chamber's pronouncement of them looking after the interest of both employees and employers, apart from the obvious contradiction because one cannot be all things to all men, is the fact that I never heard the Chamber take such a robust position against Cable and Wireless when they were a monopoly. I do not see the Chamber rushing to the side of those people who would like to see more reasonable and affordable electricity rates. I did not hear the Chamber of Commerce clamouring for sense and balance in the health insurance industry and yet they chose to flog to death this Minister from Bodden Town because he dared to suggest that there should be fairness in employer/employee relations.

I have another explanation. I do not want to introduce that at this forum because they might accuse me of racism and other things. I want to serve notice on them that the reticence of their inaction in certain cases is not missing upon my discriminating intellect.

I have decided to treat the Chamber with dignity and respect because it is a valid and valuable organisation and my tactics were to simply cut them off from the information flow since they were using information to kill me. When they refused to attend consultation at any forums, I welcomed that. Normally, I would have persuaded them and bemoaned their absence but I said, "Well if you do not want to attend, you are exercising your democratic right." The show will go on and we will deal with those who attend.

Most recently I saw in the Wednesday, 18 February issue of the Caymanian Compass that they had made an about face and seemed to have come to some terms with what we were doing. While on the one hand they were decrying the fact that proposals in the legislation was going to make it expensive and onerous because it was suggested that domestics should be covered under the pension plan, the Chamber now says in that column of Wednesday, 18 February 2004 that it would be a pity and it would be discriminatory if domestics were not included in the pension plan when in truth that was our proposal from the beginning and the Chamber was against it.

Nevertheless, I grant them the credit of being able to reverse their biased and jaundice views and I take them on board, I welcome them as a partner in this move to modernise labour legislation in this in the Cayman Islands.

Hon. Roy Bodden: No, Mr. Speaker, I have not forgiven them however I take them on board as a partner. In other words I accept them as an adulterous partner in this business of reforming labour legislation.

This has nothing to do with normal style, this has to do with emotions and I am afraid that one of the problems with me is that I cannot be a hypocrite. That is why I do not make a good politician because I am not a good hypocrite.

I would now like to state and debate the merits of the Bill. First of all the Bill is almost revolutionary, if you pardon that description, because it seeks for the first time to bring the public and the private sectors under one umbrella, with the exception of certain peculiarities, which we have to recognise that the state must be allowed to maintain, because there are certain practices in the public sector which are governed by things like the Official Secrets Act and Oats of Confidentiality. Nevertheless, for ordinary mundane purposes of employment both the private and public sectors will be falling under one umbrella and that gives me the opportunity to say this.

There is a biblical aphorism known to many of us that the physician must heal himself and so there are some practices that I would like to see improved in the Government/public sector. Indeed it is critical that this be done before we can exact the same kind of excellence and the same kind of good practice from the private sector.

It is my understanding that some time ago there were persons employed at the Public Works Department who had reached about 60 years of age and had worked for 20 plus years and were still temporarily employed. Mr. Speaker, this goes against good employment practice. I do not know to what extent it currently exists however I would like to say to those responsible, and I am certain that my colleague, the Minister with responsibility for this, will pass it through the official channels in the Government to see that we get this. I know that there are persons there now who are in 20 years service and would like to be considered for an elevation of their tenure. I think this is only fair and right in those cases where people perform diligently.

This is of critical importance because often in the private sector we exact this kind of treatment for our Caymanians from them. Hence, I think that it is only fair that the Government cast its eye to see that these cases are treated according to natural justice and according to what is deserving. That is the first significant change the Bill covers, that it brings both public and private sectors under one umbrella.

I am not going to go through the Bill clause by clause because that is not the purpose of this debate. You will not allow it however it is incumbent upon me to make certain comments about significant areas that were contentious areas both prior to the drafting of the new legislation and after the new legislation had been drafted.

We extracted any mention of pension matters from this Bill because as many people will know there is an attempt to reform the Pensions Law and so we have extracted any responsibility of pension matters from this Bill.

Another contentious issue, which is very important and I will deal with it at the very beginning; is that there was some issue about the length of the work week in the original law that this Bill proposes to replace. It had a work week of 45 hours. We have, upon serious consultation, seen fit to reduce the original work week by one hour and I will explain the rationale for that because I believe that it is important.

Under the existing Law, employers and managers mainly in the retail business, supermarkets especially, had a system in existence which governed overtime and overtime rates, which went like this. Employees could work overtime beyond the normal 45 hours if they agreed to work at straight time pay. This was how the agreement was made; it had to have the approval of the tribunal. What is peculiar, the applicant—being the person wishing to work overtime—came before the tribunal in the presence of a representative of senior rank of the employing organisation before a tribunal to say that they were willing to work overtime at straight time pay.

Now, Mr. Speaker, blind Bartimeus could see that there may have been an element of coercion or intimidation in that. Therefore, we decided that that system was not good enough because many people met me outside of any representative of the organisation to say “Mr. Minister I had to say that but that is not really how I feel in my heart but I need the little overtime and it was best to do it that way”.

We were not satisfied that in every case, although that in every case it appeared that there was free choice that there was. We wanted to arrive at a system where the perceived element of coercion or intimidation could be revealed and we thought it best to set up a different system thus we have reduced the work week by one hour so that it is 44 hours now instead of 45 is the regular working week, and those wishing to work overtime thereafter can enter into a contract with their employer, or employers, to work overtime at time and a half.

However, Mr. Speaker, it does not lend itself exclusively to a cash transaction for the overtime worked. It can be negotiated that the employee may wish to take part cash or part time off in lieu of time worked, or exclusively time off, or exclusively cash. For public holidays in the event there is no double time it is still time and a half. If you take the time off instead it is not calculated at double time, or time and a half; in that case it is calculated as straight time. For example, if you worked on a public holiday, the Queens Birthday for example, and you wanted time off instead, you would not get a day and a half off as you would get time and a half or double time if you worked for the holiday. If you took the time off it is only one day for one day, which we thought is fair and reasonable in that case.

We have now decided in lieu of all the complaints received that every employee will be required to have a contract which specifies their obligations and responsibilities to their employer. This is not going to cost the employer or the small business man any more money because the Employment Relations Department have templates that can be e-mailed to them, collected in hard copy or however they wish to retrieve them. Hence, with all due respect they do not need to pay an attorney any drafting fees; these can be had from the Employment Relations Department.

Thus, if we include overtime, three significant areas have been addressed so far.

Another contentious area is the area of gratuities. We have said that the requirements in this law regarding gratuities are that an entity can craft its own gratuity formula. All that we require is that the formula be accepted by the majority of those subscribing to the gratuities scheme. Upon that it must be registered with proof of the majority accepting it, with the Employment Relations Department. It is possible to have 15 different gratuity plans for 15 different organizations. In other words there is no national gratuity plan. Each organisation can have its own plan. We have given that flexibility. This was floated for the people in the industry and accepted. We are confident that this will eliminate all of the contentions regarding gratuities. In the proposed Bill we have defined who is illegible to get gratuities and who is not, thereby eliminating one contentious issue.

The matter of dealing with contentions, complaints and misunderstandings. The tribunal system which was inherited worked for a while except it was an adversarial system and it was time consuming. Some organisations turned up with attorneys while the employees had no such assistance. What happened was that the Labour Department was perceived as the advocate of those persons, thereby often dragging labour department personnel, who should have been neutral, into ill-repute.

We also relied on volunteers, many of them attorneys whose firms, when the work load began to increase, gradually became more and more onerous; grudgingly or sometimes disobligingly allowing their employees time off. In some cases these people bill heavy hourly rates and to spend all this time working in often pedantic, stretched out tribunals and having, at the end of that time, to write up the reports was, I thought, an unwelcome trespass on these people's time and made for bad corporate relations.

We decided that we were focusing anyway on arbitration, mediation and conciliation so we wanted to change the system somewhat and eliminate the high independence on tribunals. We set out to clear the backlog of outstanding tribunal cases. We are still—I can happily say—whittling away and we have the backlog down to what we believe is a management level.

There were instances under the present system where, for example, we were dealing with workers on work permits who had cases before the Tribunal and they left the jurisdiction and the results of the case were not heard, and I was most sympathetic. However, we could not very well lay blame on any one, it was just—as the former minister of agriculture talked about—the system.

I believe that what is proposed now is a better system because under the proposed legislation we believe that the contention should be tackled first at its source, so we encourage those having the differences (employer and employee) to go through a period of conciliation.

If that does not work the Employment Relations Department is prepared to go the next step; mediation, and then we are prepared to get a neutral arbitrator. If that does not work then we go to the system of tribunals. Ultimately, I hope we do not have too much of this, if people are displeased then they can go to the courts system.

It is important to set this out in an understandable and orderly fashion because we would wish the Cayman Islands to remain a jurisdiction of excellence in which the reputation for a harmonious working and social existence travels wide and far because our reputation depends on such. We believe that this in itself is a welcome change and an improvement from what existed.

We then come to the point of maternity and paternity leave. Maternity leave has been increased however paid maternity leave has not increased. We have increased the time that a mother should be given to bond with her child. We have not increased the obligation on the employer to increase the pay.

We have introduced a new concept – paternity leave – because we believe that this is in keeping with modern trends. This is not a mandatory leave nor is it a leave in which the father will be paid. It will be most interesting to see how this functions. I can tell you from feedback I received, it is welcome because many men in the society now are very knowledgeable and realise that they have an important role to play. In a society where boys and young men are at risk I would think that this is a welcome addition to any piece of social legislation.

I would also wish to mention that resignation or retirement pay, particularly as it affects those people in the employment sector before pension provisions came on line, have been changed. I heard the complaints, mainly from ladies but I know that there were men out there in the same position. I found that it was most difficult to accept that there were people working for one establishment for as long as 30 years who had no other provision for their golden years other than the generosity and altruistic nature and disposition of their employers. No children, no dependents. Yet at the end of that employment, conscientiously, diligently, honestly performed all they were going to get on retirement was one week's pay for every year worked with the cap of 12 years. Even Shylock would find a prick in his conscience for that. We have proposed that the cap be removed and that retirement and resignation pay for these people should be one week for every year worked so that if someone worked for 30 years, at the end of this period they should get 30 weeks' pay. That is a start. It is significantly better than what existed. There are many good employers out there. The good employers significantly outnumber those who are not so good and I am happy to say that some of these persons with whom I spoke and by whom I was contacted told me that they found this reasonable. I would hope that when the Law is accented to that it does not come too late to help some people.

A criticism of the Chamber is that this Bill was crafted to purely to satisfy international authorities and that we should not be concerned with international authorities; we should only be concerned with what happens in the Cayman Islands and with the ability of Caymanian investors to earn profits on their return. Mr. Speaker, let me put this in my language: we should avoid the temptation of becoming a community of philistines whose only motive and desire is to fill our coffers with cash at the expense of the social welfare, the mental health and the common decency of our people. I can assure you that the guiding philosophy behind this Bill, while it took into consideration international obligations—because we have them, and I am going to deal with them a bit later on—that was not the foremost, nor the most important philosophical underpinning.

The most philosophical underpinning was the fact that the Cayman Islands must remain a jurisdiction in which those people who contribute can feel that they are being treated fairly and that they get a fair day's wage for a fair day's work and it must remain a jurisdiction in which the employer can feel that he or she is getting from their employees a fair day's work, honesty, diligence and respect.

I would be falsifying the effort if I tell you otherwise. As I have said, we have to take into consideration what our international obligations because the Cayman Islands are no longer the Islands that time forgot.

The point that I have made vividly on many occasions was that I, as the Minister responsible for Employment Relations, was summoned to Geneva, Switzerland in the summer of 2002 to answer to the United Nations Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights in the presence of the United Kingdom authorities from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. It was a most enlightening experience and I will tell you what happened.

When the questions were asked concerning the Cayman Islands, the United Kingdom representative did not answer, he told the questioners a representative from the Cayman Islands in the person of the Minister is here, he is the best person to answer the question, ask him. Mr. Speaker, I did not see the Chamber of Commerce called, I did not see the Council of Associations called, I did not see the Contractors Association called, and I did not see the Merchants Association called. I saw Roy Bodden, Minister responsible for Employment Relations in the Cayman Islands.

They asked about many things. Complaints of discrimination in the work force, I was surprised because they had a report that I had not seen prior to my arriving to that conference hall in the United Nations Building. I was embarrassed and if I was not intelligent I would have been caught naked.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, for those people who are as myopic and short-sighted as to believe that just as our financial practice are not under scrutiny, that our labour practices are not under scrutiny, they are whistling in the wind.

At that same conference I was asked, "When are you in the Cayman Islands going to adopt a social security system?" These people told me, and not in the most cordial language either, that they are not interested in the National Pension Plan or Pension Scheme. What they demand is a social security system.

It is one thing for the Chamber of Commerce to flog me for my Law being idealistic. I know that is a euphemism for something else. However, they would not say it; I wanted them to have said that, because I would use the proceeds of the law suit that I would put on them to ensure that I had a healthy retirement. They would not say it, they said it was idealistic.

I am not a fool, Mr. Speaker. I came from 20 years in the private sector and I am not going to craft or bring any legislation to this House that is going to be destructive to any element in the Cayman Islands. I have not taken leave of my sense and suicides do not run in my family. Worst of all, political suicide according to General Tito is the worst death that anyone can die and that is not my plan. Thus, the Chamber of Commerce do not need to try to destroy me by dusting off that old bogey that so many of them used in the 1980; it will not work, Mr. Speaker, the record speaks for itself.

Going back to the merits of the proposals, it was necessary to make these changes and represent these in a new Bill because to try and do all of this work by amending the old Bill would have been an onerous exercise that would have mystified all but the greatest geniuses in this society.

The Bill also speaks to an element which was not adequately covered in the old legislation, namely discrimination.

When I first assumed responsibilities for employment matters and when people complained about certain discriminatory practices I have to be candid, I was so naive that I believed it had only to do with ethnicity. I carefully logged the cases and tried, as gingerly and diplomatically as I could, to refer them to the Employment Relations Department; some came to me with specific requests that I investigate.

As time transpired I got the shock of my life to learn—I was not surprised in many respects because I did not believe that was the case however I could not put my finger on the real situation, I made no public statement and I was cautious with how I expressed my fear and trepidation—I got the biggest surprise when I was able to find out that the prejudice had nothing to do with colour but had to do with the fact that it was a prejudice against Caymanians whether white or black.

I am telling you that there exists in this country among certain employers and organisations a stinking prejudice against Caymanians regardless of their colour (black, white, yellow or brown) and it does not matter whether they are educated, uneducated or untrained. It must come to an end!

I remember an instance where I had occasion to call in certain people and I was as respectful as I am now in addressing you, Sir, and those people complained to our previous Governor. "How dare he call us in and ask us to explain certain things?" It was a good thing that I was not out of order because they would have given me a whipping that my mother did not give me, and God knows she gave me enough.

As far as I could, I read the riot act to them. It was the jurisdiction of employment practices with which I was familiar and I confronted them and said, "I know and you know that you cannot get away with these kinds of practices where you come from, so why do you expect to visit them upon us. Are you forgetting that you are guests here? Are you forgetting that we are hosting you and that this is a partnership?"

For all those who proclaim that they are such staunch capitalists they do not understand the most basic formula, their prejudice is so great. Profit only comes by the efforts of labour making capital work!

This proposed legislation identifies and deals specifically with the business of discrimination in the workplace.

We have also clearly set out the whole system of dismissals because this is another practice that is still employed. I have to inject a little humour here to say this—it is a pity that some of these people do not read the Brer Anansi stories. Often when persons come to me I do not exactly disclose my level of intellect and sometimes I have found out it is advantageous to play fool. I had a certain incident where someone visited my office and was so arrogant that they returned to their office boasting to some of the staff, not realising that this is a small world and enough of us have cousins, that they had made an ass of the Minister and they only answered the questions that the Minister asked but they did not know that I asked only the questions I wanted to ask and they did not know that as soon as they left I detected that there was some reticence and obstinacy and set the mechanisms, available to the Minister, in motion. Mr. Speaker, when the reality of the situation rung home they were quick to call me requesting another appointment.

This is the contempt in which they hold us in when we try to seriously, diligently and conscientiously to improve relations. There are some people who believe that they are Gods and say, "We do not need to return calls or reply to any queries from them after all we have other friends in the Government."

I would hope that those who adopt this kind of behaviour will understand that the Law is the law and that the Law is for everyone.

It is sufficient to say that it is the responsibility of any government to see that the health and welfare of the society is nothing less than excellent.

There is a new book out which talks about the working poor. Well, I think that is an oxymoron because the mere fact that someone is working suggest to me that they should not be poor. There are elements in this society who must be still basing their moral philosophy on Calvinism and predestination; that there are those people who are destined to be born poor and to stay poor and it does not matter how much effort they exert, it is a sin for them to try to improve their lot in life. I am not a Calvinist. I believe people should be given the opportunity, through work, to realise a dignified standard of living just like I believe that investors are due to earn encouraging returns on the money that they invest.

The Cayman Islands is an incredibly successful jurisdiction with regard to the conscientiousness of Caymanians and the ability of investors to come here and realise good returns on their money. It must remain that way.

It seems to me that the Government can best contribute by setting that formula in employment legislation. That is what this legislation proposes to do and I will conclude this presentation and await the comments from my honourable colleagues in the House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: We will now take 10 minutes for the morning break.

Proceedings suspended at 11.55 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.14 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The First Elected Member for George Town and Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When it comes to the Honourable Minister for Education and, in this instance, the subject of labour, I labour whenever I have to follow his lead because there is always great difficulty in following his lead when it comes to a debate. Nevertheless, the Opposition has to reply. The Honourable Minister can rest assured that that was not a back-handed compliment.

Those of us who believe in the Christian faith and Bible are reminded that God laboured for six days while he was creating this world and everything and everyone who inhabited it, even the elements. The Bible tells us that on the seventh day he rested from his labours. Thus, from the beginning of time there was labour and as we travel through the annals of time we see that labour has perhaps been the most important ingredient in the building of any nation.

In the early days tribes, clans, and entire societies would seek to conquer others in order to dominate. Almost inevitably the conquerors would extract labour from the conquered, usually in the form of slave labour.

However, man has long realised that a key factor in the stability and growth of any society is the ability for its citizens to seek out opportunities and to provide labour for reward in order for them to have the individual resources to create the building blocks which will shape their own personal destiny.

History tells us, and it becomes self-evident especially in our own time, that as societies have evolved man always has a leaning to seek some type of advantage by developing means of using either his fellow human beings, animals, inanimate things, the elements or more recently, intellectual capital.

Mankind continually seeks to pool labour resources which will result in reward of some kind. There is always, and it has always been the question of how that reward should be distributed. Whether we examine socialism, communism, capitalism or any other form of core philosophies which are visited on a society, labour decides the level and speed of progress.

As we examine the evolution of the various societies more closely we see religion, family values and other intangibles taking on more important roles. Government, regardless of which system we examine, finds itself more and more responsible, just as it is responsible for law and order, for establishing the framework under which citizens provide labour for reward.

Whether countries are industrialized or their geographical location, climate or natural resources decide otherwise, we know and we accept that the entrepreneur spirit of man causes a phenomenon, and that is the phenomenon of employer and employee.

Modern day society recognises the value of this relationship and certainly it recognises the importance of its continuity. Nowadays, in our own society, it is potentially the most vexing of situations for a myriad of reasons.

Thus it becomes more and more important for Government to ensure that the framework under which the relationship between employer and employee operates is one which is not only conducive for the relationship to be a thriving one but that framework must also have the ability to dictate fairness and to be able to protect both parties from any type of abuse.

The Opposition is well aware of the importance of legislation of this nature. In fact, contrary to what seems to be the theme song of the Leader of Government Business, we, in the Opposition, do spend a lot of our time examining the landscape of these Islands. We continually seek input from all corners and we discuss at length among ourselves and continue to articulate what we believe are the best policy positions for the overall wellbeing of the country. Not only do we take our responsibilities as representatives, very seriously, but we are conscientious and we are consistent in our approach.

You will appreciate, Mr. Speaker, I am not going to take this line for very long, I will be right back to the point. It is such a pity that we are continuously distracted by the systematic attacks of the Leader of Government Business because we would all be better suited to concentrate on the job at hand and certainly the country would be better off. Even up to yesterday he accused us of smear tactics and dirty politics.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I would ask that you stick to the Bill as closely as possible. I can understand the deviation however—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Sir, that is why I told you that I would be right back.

Back to our debate. Much of our economy is stoked from labour-intensive operations and a large percentage of the work force is either transient or immigrant. I use those two terms because, as has been proven in these Cayman Islands, some of our immigrant work force is not transient and that is why I make the distinction between the two. Coupled with the fact that the majority of the entire workforce is at the bottom end of the income bracket it is fair to assume that employer/employee relationships can easily become strained. It is critically important that the rules under which both parties engage are clear and unambiguous in their interpretation. Hence the need for legislation that we now debate.

We believe that the legislation must be a clear guide, however, the Opposition holds the view that the rules must be such that while they are clear and unambiguous in their interpretation, they must also give both employer and employee ample latitude to make satisfactory arrangements between themselves resulting in both parties maximizing their returns. For example, some employees, either because of necessity or simply because of a desire to better their personal lot in life may wish to engage in longer working hours once the opportunity is there. Once this arrangement is not forced upon them by their employers then we believe that there should be latitude for them to make these arrangements once both parties are satisfied.

The Minister addressed certain areas specific to the point I just made, and I will get to that in short order because I believe that it is something that is an evolving situation and decisions have to be made and legislation has to be created. I think that we might still need to be talking this through. We might have to go with something now and see how it lives its own life, perhaps revisit it and see if adjustments have to be made. However, the Opposition accepts that, as a matter of looking at the legislation as a new one, there has to be a starting point. Once the thought process is thorough, taking all factors into consideration, by trying to make all those combinations into one situation that can work for not just the majority but, as far as is possible, all of the participants in the process.

As I move on I think we recognise also that at the very same time the oversight of the legislation must be robust enough so that employers, especially, are reluctant to attempt any tactics of intimidation to force or coerce employees into any unsatisfactory arrangements.

It is funny that when I was making my notes earlier this morning I heard the Minister refer to the same situation because it one that I am satisfied we are all conscious of and that is one area that certainly is the employees, more than employers, need protection. I think that is something that everyone agrees on. One of the other important factors is the networking and exchange of information between the various government agencies must be at a level where both parties (employers and employees) must feel free to make any complaints or reports without fear of penalty. I say the various government agencies because in discussions even during the presentation of the Bill at its early stage, we hear reports of people on work permits having to accept conditions that are not considered to be fair but because of another fear which is an "f-e-a-r" of a work permit being cancelled.

When we are discussing a Bill of this nature—I notice the Minister himself was very careful in his presentation and I think that was very fair; I better stop using fear and fair because they might get mixed up with the meanings—we have to be extremely careful because our experiences will have taught us, prior to this, that there are many employers out there who want to have good and productive employees and they do everything within their power to treat their employees fairly.

Unfortunately, legislation is necessary because this does not hold true throughout and the work place in the Cayman Islands is no different from anywhere else. Perhaps we could have made a half-hearted attempt 20 or 30 years ago to say that it was and maybe it would have some truth, however not today.

The pace of growth and development has had a lot to do with that and all of the outside influences which participate in this great success story of ours certainly must bring foreign thinking and practices into the mix. We find the result being that it is important for legislation to be fair to both sides but capable of working in a practical sense.

Lest my statement was not absolutely clear a minute ago, I referred to employees and employers. Employees also need to share some of the responsibility when there are problems in the workplace. It works both ways. I am absolutely certain that the crafters of the Bill are conscious of this.

This Bill, a Bill for a Law to Provide for the Regulation of the Employer/Employee Relationship; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes is, as the Minister described, an attempt on the part of Government to regularise situations that the Government sees that need correcting. They have taken the approach that this Bill being brought seeks to replace to 1987 Labour Law.

The Government's position as we look into the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons is that with the passage of time the 1987 Law has been rendered deficient both in relevance and its ability to be enforced. I am presuming that the latter being a result of the former; that it is not able to be enforced because many of its areas lack relevance to the modern day workplace.

The Government also believes that this 1987 Law we now have, has been overtaken by new international standards and local evolving trends in the local labour market.

In their efforts to bring about a new Bill that must be more relevant and created in such a manner that the various sections, when it becomes law, are able to be practically enforced the Government has had to take perspective from just about all sides. With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I am going to speak to some of the specific areas in the Bill.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I will make some general comments not to take position with the specifics of the Bill but to generally familiarise us with various portions of it which will make its intent obvious.

I do not know if it is the way this specific section is worded or whether there is a genuine disconnection with two specific sections.

Under the definition section on page 17(a): “contract of employment’ means a written agreement made between an employer and an employee by which a contract of service is instituted;” which is fine.

The Minister, in his introduction of the Bill spoke to the fact that every employer and employee will now have to have a written contract once the Bill has safe passage and becomes Law. That written contract I take to be the contract of employment.

Directly opposite on page 16 under the definition of arrangement: “arrangement’ in relation to anything that is to be agreed between an employer and employee means something that the Law does not require to be stipulated in the contract of employment but arises from it;”

That is supposed to be self-explanatory and when read in isolation it is however under Part II Basic Terms of Employment on page 22, section 6.(1): “Every employer shall enter into a written contract of employment with each employee [and here is where it is important] and the contract shall contain all the terms of this employment but need not specify terms that are part of the contract as a matter of law.”

If I understand that as it is intended, it is simply saying that the only thing that the contract need not specify are terms that the Law will specify as part of the contract. This means that whatever the Law requires within any contract need not be specified in the contract because the Law requires it. However outside of that, section 6 (1) says that a contract shall contain all other terms of his employment.

Going back to the arrangement in relation to anything that is to be agreed between an employer and an employee, this means something that the Law does not require to be stipulated in the contract of employment but arises from it. Section 6.(3): “The contract referred to in subsection (1) shall be in accordance with Form 1 of the Schedule of this Law and – (b) may contain such additional terms, not in abrogation of the minimum standards required as a matter of law, as the parties may wish to include.”

I am saying that on the one hand the contract shall contain all the terms of the employment and it moves on to say that it may contain such additional terms not in abrogation of the minimum standards. When it says in the very first instance that it must contain all the terms, I take that to mean all the terms. If it does not mean all the terms then it must not say all the terms.

Perhaps there is some follow through with the definition and other subsections which may prove that this wording is correct however I say this, with the reference just drawn, even if the wording is correct there is something wrong with it because that means the ordinary person is not going to understand it.

The best situation that we have with that section, in my view, is that it may be correct with its legal terminology and be able to be retraced or forwarded to some section which makes it right. For the person reading and trying to understand this piece of legislation it must be worded in a manner that is better understood.

I believe I can build a case from what I have just read to say that section 6(1) is saying different from section 6(3)(b). The legal draftsman might be able to justify the wording however it cannot be justified for the lay person reading it; that is my point.

In section 6.(8) on page 23 it reads: “An employee who continues to work ...” Mr. Speaker, with your permission allow me to go up two steps to make it clear. What this is referring to is section 6.(5): “Each employer shall provide for his employees, including probationary and part-time employees, regardless of age or length of employment, ...”

We are speaking to the responsibilities of an employer with regards to providing a pension plan for the employee.

Subsection (7) “An employer who contravenes this section is guilty of an offence.” That will have to do with the specifics of a pension plan or if there is a change of circumstances that renders a contract at variance with the changed circumstances.

Subsection (8) goes on to say— “An employee who continues to work for an employer that fails or refuses to comply with the provisions of this section is guilty of an offence and shall be liable to a fine of twenty-five dollars for the first offence and one hundred dollars for each second or subsequent offence.”

I know that these are tedious matters however when this becomes Law everybody is going to live with it. Therefore, some of us have to do the boring tasks and I have been charged with some today.

When I read that subsection it tells me, Mr. Speaker, that if I am employed by you to clean your cars every Sunday and I know that you have failed or refused to comply with the provisions of this section of the Law, which is to do with pensions, that I am guilty of an offence if I continue to work for you. I have to read that subsection to say that I must leave your employment if I do not want to be guilty of an offence under the Law.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am being reminded that in the new amendments this section is being taken out. I have to say that I am grateful that we will not have to argue this point because it seems that the point is already taken into consideration with the new amendments. Obviously, the point was valid in any case.

Please give me one minute to make sure what I am going to speak to now is not addressed in the new amendments, Mr. Speaker. [Pause]

Seems like that one too. Not everything that I point out will be that we have issue with because there are some things as I go along that we will certainly voice agreement to show that there is need, also in our view, for being included in the legislation.

I will touch on a matter that is a small matter nevertheless I think it needs to be looked at again because this is going to be legislation, Law that everyone has to agree to.

Section 31 on page 38 speaks to remuneration.

Section 31(1) reads: “The remuneration payable under a contract of employment may be paid in money or in kind, which means payment of provision of food, a dwelling or similar provision, as may be agreed in the contract of employment so long as -”

That is understandable because there will be instances when that has to be treated as a part of the remuneration package:

“(a)at least fifty percent of the total remuneration is paid in money;

“(b)no payment in kind shall include liquor, drugs or any illegal substance and;

“(c)payment in kind is fairly evaluated on the basis of its costs to the employer.”

That means I cannot take into consideration, if somebody is given a meal, what the meal would sell for at a restaurant, rather what it costs us to buy the groceries and prepare it.

The important section that I speak to is subsection (2) which reads: “Money remuneration shall be paid in legal tender but payment by cheque, direct deposit or postal order is allowed if the em- ployee consents, which consent may be withdrawn with thirty days' notice, and that consent shall not be unreasonably withheld or withdrawn."

This again may seem to be a minor matter however I look specifically to the phrase in the sentence which says, "if the employee consents".

Let us take any employer, whatever the system is that is used as a payroll system; in this day and age there is a matter of security. It has to be a consideration, history has proven that. As I understand it this is saying that if I employ 20 people I have a choice of either paying an employee by cheque or by direct deposit to an account. In many instances this is the case, there is a choice which can be made by a cheque or a direct deposit to an account.

This is telling me that if one or two of my employees say to me they have to get cash, it means that I have, or someone in my employment has, to go to the bank and get cash by whatever means (cashing a cheque or by direct withdrawal) and have that cash to be able to put in that person's hand. That cannot be the right thing to do in this day and age. I understand what it is trying to achieve however it cannot be by Law that an employees can decide on the system. That cannot be the case. It is a different thing if you are interfering with an employee's rights. This has nothing to do with that, this is a matter of what is practical.

You cannot force an employer to go through a system where cash is dealt with— what it can mean, if it is a large employer, you are speaking to having higher security because you are dealing with cash just to satisfy someone. The majority of persons in this world today, at whatever level of employment, engage in dealing with a bank in some form. It is not a major inconvenience for them to be paid by cheque or, if they have a bank account, a direct deposit.

If it is not said in here that the employee has to consent and if it is more convenient for an employer to pay by cash and he considers his actions safe and easy then fine. The point that I am making is the legislation must not be crafted to say that an employee can decide what methodology the employer is going to use to pay.

If one thinks that an employee may be wary of receiving a cheque from an employer because he has experience that the employer wrote a cheque and the cheque bounced that is understandable however there must be other ways of handling that problem than using this section to tell an employer that he or she has to play if the employee so decides, by way of legal tender, which is cash.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, although I have not extended myself to have rewritten that section of the Law I am confident that the Legal Draftsman has heard the point. I am also confident that he understands the point and I would hope that there would be the willingness to make the necessary adjustments in this piece of legislation.

The Speaker: Has the Honourable Member reached a convenient point to break?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Sir.

The Speaker: I would like to take the luncheon suspension at this time and we will return at 2.30pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.59 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.39 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Please be seated.

Honourable Leader of the Opposition you have one hour and twenty five minutes remaining.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, when we took the break I was summing up on the point of remuneration whereby the method by which employees were to be paid is indicated in section 31(2) and just to reiterate my point, I think that it needs to be looked at very carefully. Regardless of how this section is crafted it should not be left to where an employee can determine the method of remuneration. As I said, most employers use the method of paying by cheque or direct deposit and it is not in the interests of security for employers to have to deal with getting cash from an institution, handling it and having to distribute it to employees.

Another point I wish to clear up before I move on that is section 6.(8). We were of the opinion that that section had been deleted however it has not been deleted in the proposed amendments. Therefore, rather than leave it I have to go back to it because I do not believe that it should be left as it is.

This subsection speaks to: "an employee who continues to work for an employer that fails or refuses to comply with the provisions of this section is guilty of an offence and shall be liable to a fine of twenty-five dollars for the first offence and one hundred dollars for the each second or subsequent offence."

This is telling me that if the employee discovers that the employer fails or refuses to comply with the provisions of this section then it is in the employee's interest to leave the job. That cannot be the intention of the legislation.

The Opposition has spent many hours looking over this piece of legislation, talking to interested parties and gaining perspective. In our view, the onus should not be on the employee from the perspective of him being employed and discovering that such is the case he is liable to conviction and a fine. It should be left to the oversight of the legislation, and whatever agency is involved in that oversight, to take care of that situation. It cannot mean anything else, the employee cannot prevent the employer from refusing to comply. Thus, the onus cannot be left on the employee in that manner.

I am certain that is not the intention and I am saying that the legislation needs to be changed and whatever direction is needed with regard to this subsection cannot be levied at the employee. It can only mean one thing; the employee is hamstrung to do anything about the contravention of that section by the employer therefore you cannot penalise him. I hope that is taken into consideration.

As I move on to Leave of Part III, section 14 on page 27. It reads: “For the purposes of this Part, it is declared that an employee on probation is not entitled to vacation leave or parental leave.”

I know that there are other sections relating to this business of an employee being on probation. One of the sections that refers to probation allows for probation to occur in two incremental stages of six months each; an initial six month period and, by agreement of both parties, extended another six months. What I am not sure about is, if an employee faces a situation of having a one year probation period. If this section is to apply it means there is no provision for vacation or parental leave.

If there is another section that captures this, that is fine however I cannot relate what the other section says to know that this does not apply to those sections since it reads: “For the purposes of this Part, it is declared that an employee on probation is not entitled to vacation leave or parental leave” “this part” meaning Part III under the heading of Leave.

That individual may be on probation for an entire year and then may continue the employment, however, what happens to that year? I know in other sections of the Law that period of the Law is taken into consideration but is it taken into consideration for leave or parental leave? That is the question.

This reads to me that any leave or parental leave under this section would not apply to that person and that is what we need to clarify.

I noticed that section 7—a controversial section—refers to an employee having a primary and secondary employer. In our view, in terms of practicality we understood the intention in the drafting. For practical purposes it was going to be very difficult to monitor, have oversight of and really make it happen. We are happy to know that section is proposed to be deleted at committee stage, as we see in the proposed committee stage amendments.

It is also good to see in the proposed committee stage amendments in the section that refers to paternity leave, where instead of speaking to an entitlement, it is now being proposed that an individual may make the request and an employer may grant it. That means that it will be an arrangement that will be agreed upon rather than the legislation stipulating that it has to be the case.

If we were to be looking at it from a negative standpoint one might say that no employer is going to grant such a thing; I do not believe that to be the case. In this instance, it is fair to leave this type of arrangement as one that can be made between the two parties rather than legislation dictating the situation.

What I am moving on to now is a point that I mentioned earlier and we have to talk a little more about because I cannot say that we have been able to come up with the perfect answer to it. In discussing it with the Minister and his technical people from the Ministry and the Department involved, I think it is fair to say that everyone grapples with it and perhaps it is difficult to find a perfect solution. I want to talk about it because I think it warrants it.

Section 28 page 37 where it speaks to: “28. (1) Except as provided in subsection (2), the number of hours comprising a standard work week shall be agreed by contract between the employer and employee but shall not, for full time employees, be less than thirty-seven and one half hours nor exceed forty hours in any period of one hundred and sixty-eight hours.” (One hundred and sixty-eight hours being what is considered a week of hours.)

I dare say that the Minister has been told that there was a survey done by the Department and the results of the survey have come back to say that the average number of hours worked per week by Caymanian employees is in excess of 41 but less than 42 hours.

In whatever way that survey was done, and we are making all the right assumptions about the survey, it was extensive; the sampling of the empirical evidence was big enough and not skewed. Assuming all of that is true, one might easily say the result of that survey justifies what is being proposed in the legislation. Perhaps if one left it on the surface we could not argue the point.

I want to bring specific instances and tease our minds to see if there is somehow to be able to look at having an exception somehow that does not leave the door wide open and change the thoughts that are being put together in making the law the way it is. The Minister did say in his introduction when he spoke about normal working hours and what was fair, we do not want to question any of that because in principle we subscribe to the same thought process.

We do not want to be unfair to the employees however we want a situation that can work for both and

I am going to show the difficulty there. When we speak to not exceeding 40 hours there is an area which allows for four more hours to be negotiated between the employer and the employee thus allowing a 44-hour work week without engaging in any overtime pay. That is what this Bill is proposing. The present Law that allows for a 45-hour work week, and as the Minister explained there could be extra hours negotiated as part of a work week at a tribunal where employer and the employee representatives were present and all parties agreed.

When we had discussions with some members of the private sector there was a situation brought to us. Perhaps it is best not to call names now however before I speak about that situation I would like to remind all of that the survey also reported that there were 12 types of businesses in the Cayman Islands that a 44-hour maximum work week might negatively affect.

For hypothetical reasons, let us say there are a hundred types of businesses in the Cayman Islands and in making amendments to the Law which puts a 44-hour work week as maximum and which then says, that regardless of negotiations, any other hours worked by an individual beyond 44 hours for the week must be paid at least time and a half. In doing this the Law affects 12 businesses. We know it affects 12 types of businesses; what we do not know is the relationship between 12 and 100 when it comes to the number of employees. I can only suspect that the 12 types of businesses this section might negatively impact are businesses that employ greater numbers of employees.

As there is a difficulty with us not knowing how many real numbers this affects when it comes to the number of employees compared to the total number of employees in the country, I think we need to talk about it again because we are not sure how much of a majority we are satisfying with the new legislation.

I want to bring a specific example and try to flesh it out to make the point. I will do that as quickly as I can. The supermarkets are one of the larger employers of the 12 types of businesses that will be affected. Bear in mind the vast majority of their employees are wage earners and are paid hourly; it is only a very small percentage of their managerial staff which is salaried.

Let us say one of the supermarkets has several outlets and it employs 350 people. And let us use as an example an employee who is presently making $7 an hour for a 48-hour work week. The employer now has to renegotiate for a 44-hour work week maximum without overtime. The employer has to decide which one is more beneficial; whether to employ more staff and redo a roster which allows for those four extra hours per week to an employee without paying overtime, or to leave the work week as it is but change the salaries and everyone who is being paid now will get four and a half hours time extra rather than 48 hours straight time. That is a choice the employer will have to make.

The reason why I am questioning it right now is because if we take that employee who earns $7 an hour and he will end up having a 44-hour week and if the employer decides to employ more individuals rather than pay overtime then that employee who earns $7 an hour is going to be earning, seven times four which is, $28 a week less than they now earn. One might say that is nothing however let us put that into the perspective of a monthly salary. Four into 44 is in one eleventh. That is just under 10 per cent. It means that if the person is now working 44 hours per week at $7 an hour, and rounding it off for the month it is about $1,200 per month, then that employee is losing nearly $120 out of that.

The question is, does that individual earning $1,200 per month have $120 of disposable income? I do not think so. I do not see the average worker who earns $1,200 per month being physically able—I am not talking about cussing and riling up—to re-engage a work schedule which earns them a $120 per week less. That is where I have the problem.

The legislation does not tell the employer—we should not go beyond a certain level when it comes to interfering between both parties being able to make their own arrangements—that you have to pay the person overtime; it tells them if the employees work more than 44 hours you have to pay them overtime. It cannot say anymore and I am not suggesting that it should change. However, when it does that it puts these individuals in circumstances that I just explained.

The fear that I have, and it could really be satisfied if we really knew for sure, is that I truly do not know how many individuals will be affected by this proposal.

I want to say, straightforwardly, the Opposition very much wants to support the proposed legislation, therefore it is not about a fight or any play to say we can prove that the legislation is not worth it. The legislation is valuable. With what we can glean from the proposed committee stage amendments it makes it into an almost acceptable piece of legislation to parties concerned. For those who had serious reservations and were battling against it, these proposed amendments address most of the issues we have heard.

We always recognise that when you bring legislation, while not expecting perfection, you will have to live the legislation and see its workings and perhaps there will be tweaking and amendments to get it right within a given period of time. I do not think this situation is one we can afford to have if we are not sure of where we are. I know what wants to be achieved and the Opposition wants for that to be achieved too with the legislation. However, I sincerely believe that this area is a problem area.

Although one can say “Well, it is not going to happen” I do not think anyone of us can truly know for sure, the risk is if the legislation is approved and it has an immediate negative impact on employees we are never going to hear the end of it. All the good things in the legislation run the risk of the whole thing turning bottom-up because nothing is worse than an enraged work force. I am not suggesting they should be although as I sat here this morning and thought about it, and as I speak about it now, the fear of whether we are doing the right thing with this piece increases in me.

I can only speak on behalf of the Opposition with a clear conscience that it is not about us being absolved if it goes wrong; I am trying to speak about it before we have to decide that. This is not about whether the Opposition is right and the Government is wrong because the Government has already explained that they know it is a small dilemma. If I had the answers, Mr. Speaker, I would pontificate and stamp and shout and tell the Government this is what they should do however this is not what it warrants. I am just not 100 per cent sure if we do it in this manner, with all that we hope to achieve, that the number of individuals that it might negatively affect may not be many more than we can afford. If only there were some way for us to get a gauge.

I know when the argument came up with the initial proposal where the legislation was 40 hours – end of story. After 40 hours it was pure overtime. Now the Government has come and tried to bridge that gap while seeking to achieve what it wants to achieve and has gone to a 40-hour work week and you can negotiate four more hours without having to pay overtime. Hence, in actual fact, it is 44 hours rather than 40 but does it do the trick?

It was very glaring when we spoke about eight hours being lost in a person's work week, however even at four hours the question is if it went that route could people afford it.

If we look at the supermarkets, Mr. Speaker, it is not impossible for one of those chains, including wholesale, et cetera, to be speaking about 350 employees. Far from impossible. Of the 350 employees, you wonder how many of them are hourly paid. It could easily be anywhere around 300 out the 350, perhaps a bit more. You could have those 300 people being paid between $7 and $12 weekly, whether they are cashiers or working in the Deli, or whatever. I use the $7 as an average and the higher it gets the more an employee would lose if this were to occur. Percentage-wise it stays the same. However, with regard to actual money in pocket, you do not even know whether the person who loses $200 per month, rather than $120, can afford to lose $200 more than the person who only loses $120. You are not even sure which way to go and say who is going to be affected the worst. However, it is all about disposable income and the ability to continue to survive while earning that much less.

I have belaboured the point and have done so purposefully. I am sorry that I do not have all the answers although what I do know is that as hard as has been tried to make the situation the best, we are not sure whether there is a price that may not be worth it. We do not know that and I do not know whether we should risk that. It would have been a lot easier if I had just glossed over it and it was not a problem.

However, as I have said before, as I keep thinking about it this worries me more, I am not sure what the answer is. I do not know whether there is a way to find some classification perhaps with numbers of employees—I do not want to venture there because as much as we thought about it we have not come up with exact answers. Obviously, the Government has battled with it too. It is a dilemma.

What is proposed by the Government needs to be revisited. If we had all the relevant facts and figures in front of us then we would perhaps be better suited to take a specific direction in confidence. However, from where we sit we do not have all that information hence that is why we are left in that dilemma.

As I move on, there is another section. The Minister spoke to this for a while when he introduced the Bill this morning. That is the section in the present Law which speaks about an employee receiving up to 12 weeks' pay on retirement or resignation, et cetera. What is being proposed now, under the right circumstances, is if an employee departs after 30 years he is to receive 30 weeks of pay. Employees certainly must be happy once this is law.

For the main part, if not considered too big to absorb then it is not a big deal for employers. I have heard the argument put to us that this would be fine if there were no pensions involved as there is nowadays. In thinking about it I do not want to argue the point, I want to express opinion and fear of a possibility of it happening.

What I wonder about this is whether some employers are not going to be very conscious, while not having it as a written policy in their organisation, that they only keep individuals hired for x amount of periods of time, especially if they are not in key positions. In some quarters it is called the rotating stamp, that is, the rotating employee stamp. I am not trying to give anyone any ideas however it seems like there are situations elsewhere that have proven in some instances this is what has occurred.

What that does for your labour market and individuals, and whether the law of averages will allow people to find a job at least, the numbers will keep shifting from place to place, is another matter.

This is perhaps the most difficult type of legislation to really know that you are doing right because with the best and purest of intentions you can craft a section of the Law which makes it look very good from the beginning however at the same time when you look at the practical side of it there could be some problems. Obviously the Government must have thought of this in—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am being told about a clarification and if that is the case then perhaps there is great relief. Rather than go over the whole thing the Minister can easily explain it when he is doing his winding up so that we can have some clarity. That is not a problem. I understand that this section would apply to people who are not able to qualify for pensions. If that is the case there should be no problem there. At that point in time it would have been for those who already have been employed for long periods of time. If that is the case it takes away the validity of the argument that I was putting forward, and I am happy for that because that is not of those things I would like for us to contend with.

When we look at the Bill and we pull together the pieces to see not just its expectations but its aspirations, I think we can safely say that the intent of the Bill is quite laudable. In general, it has the desire to be fair to both parties; it recognizes inadequacies that exist in the present legislation and seeks to address most of those inadequacies.

While there could have been much longer debate on our part for the green Bill as it was, I have to say that the proposed committee stage amendments throw a different light on some sections of the proposed legislation and it will be more acceptable to the various interest groups; both employer and employee and the conditions that are being proposed under which the relationship should continue.

Taking into account the proposed committee stage amendments which make our lives a lot easier when it comes to being able to support the Bill and assuming all are made then we can support the Bill. That support is only qualified in two areas.

The first qualification says that we recognise that even when this is done as it is once it is practiced there are going to be things the Department and the Ministry will realise that might not be practical. It looks good when you put it there however when you put it to work you might have to make slight adjustments. We expect that and once the Minister, as I am sure, is conscious of that and, is willing to move swiftly to make whatever adjustments that might come to light after its passage then that is fine.

The second qualification, Mr. Speaker, is the specific section that I discussed at length just a while ago with the 44-hour work week. It is, as I said, wonderful if it can work however I believe, while the survey has been completed and the average working week is established, assuming all the samplings are sufficient, that we should take the time to look at the specific types of businesses that this is going to affect and be clear how many, and to what level, individuals might possibly be affected to ensure that the legislation which has the intention of protecting the employee does not actually put some employees in untenable circumstances. We have to make sure of that, otherwise we have not performed our duties to the best of our abilities.

I have outlined the Opposition's position and we look forward to listening to more discussion regarding the Bill from the Minister and/or his colleagues regarding any of the points that we raised. If they do not agree with those points they should give logical justification why the Government cannot or will not accept any of those points. Unless there is something that we cannot see between now and the time of voting then the Opposition will be supporting the Bill. We just hope we could get at least that one that I call a hairy situation a little bit clearer. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to offer some brief debate on the Labour Law and I will not necessarily deal on any large number of sections specifically. I remember many years ago after the time of the late Jim Bodden and I, the permanent secretary in the Labour Ministry for which he was responsible, tried to bring about a Labour Law. However, try as we did during that time, it did not happen because of continuous opposition from various employer groups and even from employees who, in some instances, did not understand that by having a law there would be clear standards and regulations set down that would protect both them and their employers.

I remember the former Minister, Mr. Norman Bodden, who took over that portfolio afterwards. One day at, what was then the Ramada Hotel, a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce where he had presented various views he rose and, in so many words, made it clear that he had taken every input that he could take and he had listened to everyone who had something to say and the time had come and he intended to take the Bill to the House and to see its passage. Indeed, that happened.

I think that everything in human endeavour works in cycles and there is a time for everything. The Labour Law has been revised by various amendments over time, the latest being 1987 Revision, if I am not mistaken. It has carried us to where we are now and it had certain very basic and fundamental provisions in it. Like the Immigration Law, which has been in effect way back from 1971 and gone through multitudes of amendments, it was not until the year 2003 after magnificent efforts of many people, that this Law was revamped, revised and we now have a modern piece of legislation that can and will serve us into the future for some time.

As with the new Immigration Law there were critics who swore that it should not be the way it is and that it should have been changed which way or the other. The same thing has been happening as I observe with this particular Law which my colleague, the Minister for Education, is facing now.

I believe that as long as the world lasts there will always be disagreements between employer and the employee, it is a natural existence. Business in a capitalist society will always be striving for bigger and better profits and I often observe that rather than bringing about greater efficiencies within practice and procedure in an organisation the first place that employers seem to look at making cuts is in labour as if that is the only point of costs.

I have observed that over the years and really wonder about it when costs, which could be in this building, for example, could be reduced by practising good use of the telephones, or replacing all of the light fixtures resulting in significant savings in the electricity bill and so on. These are all areas. However, most times one hears of downsizing and cutbacks it is always with labour. Therefore, I think it is a natural situation where one will always find that there will be differences of opinion.

The hard balancing act is for any government to be wise and courageous enough to keep its labour relations in step with what is happening in the world in terms of the relationship between employer and employee. One has to also look at what might have been considered fair 10 or 15 years ago; rulings in the court; or the general movement of the way things have changed in the labour force and labour market. Indeed, by international standards we are out of sync with it so one has to keep step if we are going to do that.

I think the Cayman Islands have a very good lesson to learn from the challenges which we have had to face in the recent times with the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) and the European Union where successive administrations kept attempting to put it off saying, "If we do not talk about it or deal with it or whatever things will take care of themselves." They do not really take care of themselves that way anymore. Globalisation, while I am not a disciple who believes all of the virtues that I hear espoused, is with us and certain things apply across the board.

We know that from the symposium which was held here a few years ago. It became clear from that symposium, where a multitude of international scholars spoke about changes in human rights and freedoms, that the big industrialised countries of the world who wield the power have reached the point where, whether it is because of past guilt from ages gone and how they treated labour or the way people with money and power abuse other people, I do not know, they say "These are the standards by which we are going to operate." It also came out at time that they are prepared to use sanctions in whatever way against countries which do not abide/accept these standards.

I am sure that you know even China, which is the factory for the world—there are industrialised nations that use them for cheap labour and production of cheap products—is constantly raising their human rights standards and what happens with labour. What happens in tiny Cayman here in the Caribbean is really no different. They are looking at us and what we are doing.

I feel sorry for my colleague Minister in that he has had to take on what has developed over time to try to correct it. It seems that we never learn from history in that it is better to correct something quickly rather than make it go for years and nothing be done about it.

I am sure I can cite the example of the Health Services Authority which you took on and initiated certain changes consultancies and reorganisations and which I have since taken on and tried to continue. Bringing about change is trying to change an accumulation of doing things a certain way for decades and so it applies to labour and labour relations in the Cayman Islands.

I think we need to also recognise that both sides of the divide, that is, employers/employees, are going to put up their fights. They will use whatever mechanisms possible and there are many available to them in that they tend to have capital and the employees tend to work for it terms of wages. I have observed over the past year that this Labour/ Employment Law have been on its way just what has been happening. I have seen the advertisements. The largest efforts against it, seems to me, to have been led by the various employer associations and the Chamber of Commerce.

I think some of the arguments cannot hold water because changes come about and businesses are capable of making adjustments, employees make adjustments, the world does not end, it goes on having certain adjustment being made.

This law is attempting to include new international standards and trends in the labour market and there is one thing that I think is significant and we should take note of. This is the boldest attempt that has ever been undertaken in the history of our country. There is going to be one Employment Law. In fact although that does not fit the Colonial administration it shows how far the world has moved away from the old traditional ways to the acceptance of certain change. The British Government and the civil service, the Governor of the day and the civil service administration, see the need to modernise and to bring into place a Law which both sides can share, with the private sector and the public sector, because there are certain basic fundamental principles with employer/employee relationships that are the same.

For the civil service there are certain differences. There must be the acknowledgment that there exists within the public service, for example, the Official Secrets Act which they say will go with us to our graves. There are certain things we cannot divulge and all the rest of it however that is something that still exists within the public service. Why is there a necessity to have different methodologies of changing the way of recruiting and hiring and when somebody becomes pensionable so that we have one country but two systems working as far as employment goes?

I think that is a major change and it is one that needs to be welcomed.

There are certain definitions which have been made clearer in this Law and there are areas where the Law deals with maternity leave. Having been a civil servant at the time in the Civil Service Association where we had to fight to see certain changes come about for women and maternity leave. The Member for North Side is reminding me that she took a major part in that effort and that is true to say. Changes have come about in that regard in this country.

This is very important because just a few days ago I saw some statistics and one thing became clear that one of the best things for the Cayman Islands is that it has women and lots of kudos to them because the difference between the employed women and men in this country is truly significant. It points to a social condition and one where I believe our own sex have to get wise and put out the effort and focus ourselves as do our women in this country.

Maternity leave is essential for the simple reason we need more people of our own in this country and they only come one way although there are certain instances happening in other parts of the world where it seems to me they are attempting to do what nature did not provide for. I personally believe that women play an extremely vital role in this world.

It is essential that we recognise, and we can do it on the basis of medical facts, that it is no more where a woman was off from work six weeks and she had better get back there or else. We live with realities, we know more about the medical side of it, the gestation period, how long it takes for a woman to truly recover, for her body to reach the situation as it was before and so on.

We can do things scientifically and we can apply that to social considerations. That is why in some societies when I look at things I see on television I marvel. I recall a horrid one-hour programme that was put on just before Afghanistan was attacked where women were taken and shot to death on the football field for everybody to see and I watched it in disbelief and I thought to myself, "How did that man that is murdering that woman get on the earth?"

I am lead every now and then to think of the social and reality side; the way that nature has placed us. I certainly support the idea that, in our Law, maternity leave is very important and it should be of a length that is suitable for the purpose.

In this Law there is the idea of paternity leave and I do not know how many men will be requesting such leave however I cannot see where it hurts because the situation with men nowadays is that they take a different view and the pressures from the women's side are saying "Look, you have to become more involved, you cannot leave it all to me anymore." That is a reality of the world right now and I cannot see us escaping it, I am sure that we are not. I cannot see anything wrong with that being placed in this Law because it is the reality of the times. I would not want to make any guesstimate as to how many men will take that up. It meets one of the guidelines that is being accepted internationally.

In the opposition to this Law I have heard statements such as we are accepting all of these socialist ideas from Europe and so on. A lot of them are driven by what is happening in Europe, some of them are different than what is practiced in the United States however they are there and we are not escaping them because we have not been able to escape them. In times past these Islands were the domain of Europeans when they were our masters, and they are still our masters from an economic point of view.

One area that I would like to mention and there is provision that the Law provides that there can be recommendation with regard to the minimum wage. Mr. Speaker, in 1980 when I was the Permanent Secretary responsible for Labour the then Holiday Inn was paying $1 per hour, I was never more shocked in my life than when I discovered it and indeed my Minister at the time, Mr. Jim Bodden took it up and we made representation (if I remember correctly) in Atlanta to the hotel from the point of view that it was unfair and unreasonable for people to be working in the Cayman Islands for $1 an hour and indeed it changed, not to a tremendous degree but it changed. The argument was that they did not want to pay more than that for the basic wage because they earned gratuities.

I have felt from that time until now that you can value a job. If a job requires certain work, certain ability by the employees, if it carries a certain amount of danger or responsibility you can place a value on it, be it $5, $6, $50, $200 per hour that is what job evaluation is all about. When we place a value on it that value should be paid.

I feel that this situation of gratuities, where an organisation, be it a hotel or restaurant has employees that they are not paying sufficiently, is forcing me, after I have paid the value for a meal which is likely to be overpriced, to pay 15 per cent more than the value of the meal, hence I am paying the employees, not them. I think something is fundamentally wrong with that, I always have felt that way and I still feel that way and I still believe that some strong and drastic action should be taken whereby establishments which collect gratuities, these should and must be paid to the employees and these entities do not skim off the top what was intended for the employees.

The amount that is paid in wages also has a direct connection with the number of hours that some employees work. Before I follow up on that thought, between 1980 (24 years ago) and now there are still some people in this country who are employed, particularly in the hospitality industry, who are only earning $2-odd an hour. Something is wrong with that. Hotel rooms then were about $80 they are $500 and $600. How can it be logically argued that the value of the labour for keeping these places clean and operating at a higher standard and the wages have not moved any higher than they have? It is unfair. We can check our statistics and see what the average wages are in the Cayman Islands by category, and this great wealth that we are talking about and that we are working for applies only in the higher categories and echelons of employment in this country. It does not apply in the hospitality industry.

Going back to the idea of hours of work, the reason why employees have been working for 45 hours is the longer a work day can be the better it is for an employer. That is obvious, particularly if the wages are low and the majority of employees in the Cayman Islands work within what Government calls the wage earners, the group employees. At the end of a day or at the end of a week, if they have not worked 45 hours then their wages are smaller and on average, if I am not mistaken, the statistics for the lower levels showed that a large percentage of employees were earning $735 per month, basic wage. We know that the present Government has established a temporary ceiling of $1500 per month where Government will allow certain payments and assistants from the Social Services Department however it is because wages are so low and none of us what to kid ourselves that things are extremely costly in Cayman. That is the flip side of it.

The cost of goods and services here, particularly goods, do not have to be as high as they are. It is as if those selling the goods want to get the top dollar, whereas the business they are in are going to continue forever. For example, those that sell food items, we will have to eat for ever so it is not as though you have to get all that you can get in this five year period; it is going to go on indefinitely and I marvel at it. Indeed, Customs show what goods are bought for in the United States however the amount they sell for on the shelves is a different story. The mark-ups on them might well be because in the places that are selling them, the cold storage might not be properly wired, the electricity bills might be too high or the way that they are handling or bringing in the materials, storing it, putting them on the shelves can easily be where the problem lies. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the hours of work and the work week and the work day is significant to human life.

A few evenings ago I was going into the Government Administration building at two minutes to five o'clock, I passed about eight employees leaving. You talk about being on time. They are monthly paid people and so that is their day. Very few could be convinced that they must work in those categories beyond those hours, it is just not done. Those persons can do a nine to five. However, there are instances I hear of that people working two shifts of 14 and 16 hours. The question then arises, do they have a right to hours of refreshment and sleep? Do they have a right that within that 14 or 16 hour period maybe they wanted to go see a movie like the rest of us do? I suggest that they do. So when a Law like this is being considered, these are the type of things that can go into it. Not that it can be perfectly drafted in Law because as I understand it no matter how good a draftsman you are you cannot possibly capture in writing, in a law, everything to address a particular social need. You get maybe 70-80 per cent of it however as the Leader of the Opposition said, no matter what we try now or later there will always be a situation that that legislation cannot address.

That is where management comes in. One must manage to try, where the law does not allow, to reach a point of fairness and reasonableness. I have not heard too much from the employers and I know a few years back they were pushing minimum wage in a major way. Perhaps that was because it was suggested that there should be minimum wage by categories and they wanted minimum wage to resolve it.

I believe that we cannot go on indefinitely as a country not having a minimum wage. For example, when an investor comes into the country one of the things that they ask about is minimum wage because they want to start doing numbers if they are hiring 10 or 50 people. If we do not have a minimum wage we are doing ourselves and the employees of this country a disservice.

It is in the categories where one calculates by hour and wages which tend to be in the lower scales. An exception, as my good friend the Second Elected Member for George Town reminds me, is his type of hourly wages, which includes other persons in his profession and in other private practices, does not fall in those categories.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, it is important to apply certain hours per week and certain hours for a day and 40 hours has been the standard for who knows how many years. 45 hours, as it is now, is over what has been the accepted norm for many decades.

Indeed, as was being argued by the Leader of the Opposition, if people who are being paid very low wages have one hour taken off that is $3 they are losing and that is significant to them. If you add that up over a number of days that is money that impacts them. However one cannot simply allow a work week to be longer than is reasonable or acceptable within certain norms to cater to those underpaid persons. That is the problem that we face here. There is no doubt that is a problem. In other jurisdictions there would be employees associations that would be advocating and pushing to have differentiation in wages in the various categories. That is not really the way that we are going in the Cayman Islands at this time.

I think it is important, and what makes it easy, even for those people who do not have the slightest clue about a work contract, that it is actually set out in the Law. Again, I am not saying this is the most perfect thing however it certainly provides a means—even for those who cannot read they can go to someone who can who in turn might have no expertise in employment or employment contracts—for them to fill out a form which will set out the necessary information, which will assist Government and the Employment Relations Department to better monitor and make sure that everybody in the country has some clearly defined requirement as to what they are to be doing; that they can be judged by their employer and then in turn the employee can expect certain reactions from the employer because of that contract.

I think that it has simplified things by having this form in the Law and I believe this is an improvement.

Severance pay is indeed something which needs review and what has been recommended here gets loser to fairness. I recall that there was a business in George Town when the Labour Law came in and there were a lot of older persons who were working there and who had been working for 20-odd years and when the idea that severance pay would have to be paid and there was a formula to do it, they simply terminated all of them and some weeks or months later they rehired some and new persons were also hired.

Fairness to the employer and employee is one of the goals that this Law should be working towards. One week for a number of years that a person has worked. We must not lose sight that every employee, even though they may have all been hired the same day they would have been hired at different ages and as things go they will be leaving at different times. If standards and formulas are set to what is expected in settlement then an employer has the opportunity to calculate what their cost will be and see that it is budgeted for when the time comes.

Pensions are a part of the employment condition in the Cayman Islands and there is no question about it in many instances it is a nuisance type of situation. The amount that is taken out is so small that the effort to do so is more than the cost of doing it however it is the Law and that is a part of the situation.

It also speaks of medical care and health insurance. That is another cost and now there is an opportunity that the majority of employees in the lower income categories have an opportunity of being covered by insurance through the newly formed Cayman Islands National Insurance Company. That is a significant part of life for employees.

No matter how healthy we are today, at some point in time we, by virtue of age and changing times and conditions, will have some ailment and one has to calculate that particular cost, which also needs to be a consideration when calculating wages.

Workman's compensation is one of the things which there will be resistance to in the Cayman Islands. Our people would most likely term them "All of these fancy things that they want us to provide now." Workman's compensation has been in place forever. It is just that we have not caught up with it and have not been paying attention to it and we have got away with it. We cannot stay there anymore, there has to be a forward movement.

Tribunal provisions are being made for that part of employer and employees relationship.

Overall, this Law is a gallant attempt to set down certain broad guidelines that will set the stage for relationships between the employer and the employee.

I would not stand here and say I believe that this is a perfect Law because—for example, in what I think is an effort to try to please as many as possible—the Minister responsible has a large number of amendments to this Law which will be coming at committee stage.

I think that there will be some amendments because of the debate and the arguments made by the Opposition. I think that the Minister has taken account of that.

Many years ago the then Minister for Labour, Mr. Norman Bodden, made it clear that the time had come to get the Law passed, I believe that the time has come for another Mr. Bodden to say that he has done all that he can, we have listened to all that we can, it has been amended time and time again, we need a Labour Law that confirms to the general international standards and that will provide some level playing field and reasonable fairness.

The time has now come that we pass this. I give this Law my support with the amendments which will be forthcoming.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

We have reached the hour of 4.15 pm, I know that there are other Members that would like to speak on this Bill and within the short period they may not be able to say very much. Therefore, if it is the wish of this House I would call on the Deputy Leader of Government Business to make a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, it is Friday evening and I think that Members would like to depart and I take note of your observation that there are just a few minutes left before the normal adjournment time.

I wish to move the adjournment of the House until 11 am Monday, 15 March 2004. This would allow the opportunity for the Financial Secretary who has requested a meeting with Members to complete that exercise and we should all be here ready to go back to work.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until Monday 15 March 2004 at 11 am. All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS
OF THE CABINET

Question No. 109

No. 109: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports if a Community Officer has been appointed for the district of North Side.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, a Community Development Officer (CDO) has been appointed for the district of North Side since 1 January 2004. The Officer resides in the district of East End and is very familiar with the district of North Side since she and the former community Development Officer for North Side have worked very closely together in the past with both districts.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister is in a position to say if any applications for this position were received from any persons from the district of North Side.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, my guess is that there were applications received from persons from the district of North Side. I am not exactly sure on the numbers however I was contacted by someone who I regard as being from the district of North Side. Therefore, I am aware that there would have been some applications, at least one.

It is also important to recognise that this Community Development Officer that is attached to the district of North Side was already in the employment of the Community Development Unit.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, could the Honourable Minister say in which district this particular officer was placed prior to coming to the district of North Side?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: The Officer now attached to the district of North Side previously worked in the district of East End and was moved to Bodden Town due to the resignation of the Officer who worked in this district in April 2003. It was recognised by the current co-ordinator that she was experiencing difficulties with assessing the district's varied needs and developing sufficient links to the community affairs and informal organisation. It was felt that this was due to her not being from the district of Bodden Town and being professionally unfamiliar with the area and unable to create these linkages. It was also recognised that the ability to acquaint oneself with the district was compounded by the large range of this district which begins in Savannah and ends in Breakers. Since the unit still had one vacancy the decision was made to relocate her to the district of North Side.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Honourable Minister of that reply. Could he say how the new officer in the district of Bodden Town is going to be able to relate to that district if one who had already been employed by the Community's section of his Ministry was not able to cope with it? How is this new officer now going to be able to cope with the district of Bodden Town? Or should it require two officers?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I think it is well documented and therefore it should be well known that the Community Development Unit as it was known had been changed to reflect the new direction which the Government felt it needed to go in.

The Community Development Unit is now part of the National Housing and Community Development Trust.

Therefore, the focus of Community Development Officers will be on the development of the social initiatives within the affordable housing communities. Persons will be selected from outside the communities and then we will work specifically with them within these communities.

One reason that this is possible is that what was previously the Department of Social Services has been restructured and it is now the Department of Children and Family Services.

We will have satellite offices in West Bay, Bodden Town and George Town that will serve the eastern districts.

Therefore, between the Department of Youth and Sports which will deal mainly with youth issues and the Department of Children and Family Services will deal with more adult issues we should be able to cover the same clientele that was provided for more exclusively by the Community Development Officer in those particular districts.

The Speaker: I will allow one more supplementary. The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister previously said that one officer could not handle Bodden Town and that the officer had a problem dealing with Bodden Town because of the size. His response to another supplementary was that they were going to have satellite offices in Bodden Town and West Bay. I suspect that Bodden Town would cover the three eastern districts dealing with the youth, sports and social adult/elderly issues. I am wondering if the Minister could explain how that is going to work. How many people are going to be in these offices? Will we get the same coverage in East End as were getting before with a social worker?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, many people have misunderstood the role of the Community Development Officers and they have used Community Development Officers for all sorts of tasks.

We feel that a Community Development Officer is a very important resource in the community and that they should be assisting people with their desire to live independently whether those persons are elderly people or younger people.

The fact is that many of the Community Development Officers were placed in environments where there was a lack of focus and so they ran from getting involved in one thing to another. Starting things that were happening in the community is basically a way of justifying their own professional existence.

We also knew that many of the Community Development Officers were given the task of becoming the financial assessors for people who were applying for permanent or temporary financial relief from the government. We have increased in the Department of Children and Family Services the number of persons that are now doing the assessment and those are people who are specifically hired for the purpose of collecting information from our clients and then used to determine whether or not they get financial assistance.

Therefore, that is one of the differences between the systems now and previously that relieves the Community Development Officers (CDOs) from that very awesome responsibility that creates certain types of conflicts between the CDOs and members in the community.

The satellite offices will have the persons that will be responsible for financial assessment attached to them directly. There will be a number of social workers in the different categories of work that the Department of Children and Family Services is involved with.

When I mention the Sports and Youth Department I am basically saying that those departments already do a substantial amount of work in all these areas with young people.

We see the reorganisation and the repositioning as very important. We see the dealings with housing and family issues as the primary issues that need to be dealt with in terms of resolving some of the social crises which we have been experiencing in the society.

Therefore, we saw that it would be a much better focus for the Community Development Officers, who would be qualifying to live in these communities, once they are in these communities, to continue to develop programmes to prevent social deterioration and prevent us from entering into ghettos or crises.

We think that in their new capacities the Community Development Officers are going to be able to strengthen the social fabric of those individual communities. Each community will have an affordable housing community. Since the Government did not have additional money to hire new officers to work along with the affordable housing initiative we thought it best to second them to this particular task.

The Employment Bill 2003

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my privilege this morning to offer my contribution to this very important Bill that is before the House; The Employment Bill 2003. My esteemed colleague, the Leader of the Opposition and First Elected Member for George Town, the Honourable D. Kurt Tibbetts, has offered a very careful analysis of the Bill and I am not proposing, with one notable exception, to deal in any great detail with the specific provisions of the Bill.

I wish to commence with a discussion about the historical significance of labour and about how the Cayman Islands have differed, in terms of its development of labour legislation, from most of the other Caribbean islands in the region, in particular those that were former British colonies.

I believe it is important that we have some insight into the past to understand why it is that we have such generally harmonious relations in this country in relation to employment as we are now beginning to call it. At the same time why it is that our employment legislation has generally lagged behind that of most other developing countries, again, notably those which were former British colonies in the region.

Perhaps one can call it providence, perhaps one can call it historical accident, however, there is a certain irony about the way things have developed in terms of Cayman's development generally. The absence of natural resources which resulted in general disinterest on the part of the imperial nations of the world has had two major effects.

It has affected the social development of this nation and largely a result of that Cayman is one of the most important small nations in the world. There is a certain irony in all of that because the things which were important to the imperial powers a few hundred years ago—that is colonies which permitted them to exploit the natural resources of the region and to have the economic benefit of those things transported back to the colonising powers were features which—were largely absent from the Cayman Islands.

As a result, we never developed a plantocracy system and we never developed the economy that many of the other overseas territories and former British colonies did. Therefore, we remained largely unknown, poor and cut off from the rest of the world which developed significantly in advance of these Islands.

The result of that, Mr. Speaker, was a very small population base, a largely un-educated populace but one which was not visited upon, in the way that other colonies were, with the incidence and cruelty that was inherent in slavery. We did have slaves here, I am not suggesting otherwise. However, my study of the history is largely that compared with other places and other British colonies in particular it was a more benign, if one can ever use that word in conjunction with such a terrible institution of slavery, form of servitude.

Thus, the people in these Islands tended and still tend to have tremendous regard and loyalty to the British Crown and did not share and still do not, share the sort of anger and disdain for the colonising power that many of our neighbouring countries did.

A sort of very unique society developed. There was very little economic wealth and there was significant poverty. However, a very docile and God-fearing and hardworking and generally contented people was the result of this process.

Because of the various incidents of history, when the labour movement began in the region, triggered after emancipation in 1834, by the masses of people, who were now the working poor and forced to operate in the most abysmal of conditions, the Cayman Islands were insulated from this.

Indeed, in Mr. Craton's new book, Founded Upon the Seas, there are some short paragraphs which referred to the concern of the then Commissioner Cardinal about the impact that the labour movement in Jamaica led by Bustamante would have had on the attitudes of the people in the Cayman Islands. The last thing he wanted to see was that sort of uprising spreading to these blessed shores.

However, because the Cayman Islands did not have the experiences and the advancement that many of its neighbouring countries did, we were not part of "the invited industrialisation", as termed by some writers, of some of the other British colonies like Jamaica, Trinidad, and Guyana.

We had a situation where Cayman was very backward, as many of the writers and contemporaries of the time said, because we did not have all of the institutions that naturally go along with a newly industrialised society. At the same time we did not have—because of the small population and lack of industrialisation—these deplorable working conditions which gave rise to this move and desire for social justice and ultimately independence.

We did not have those strong nationalistic views being expressed about the tyranny of the elite in the community, who were principally, in those days, white people, mostly the descendants and citizens of the colonising nations, in our case, in this part of the region, England. We did not have all of these complex, social interplays going on.

Again, for a long time the Cayman Islands were largely left to do what they did best, which was pretty much farming, fishing, and some ship building.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Everybody had land. That was important.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am reminded by the Honourable Minister of Community Services that another distinguishing feature of the way Cayman developed following emancipation, was that most people in Cayman did have land.

Many of the ambitions of persons in our neighbouring countries were driven by this need to own land. Even after emancipation the majority of the land was still owned by those who belonged to the colonising race. However, in the Cayman Islands most of the land was unclaimed. Therefore, the majority of the freed slaves—and even before some of them were freed—ran away and colonised, if I can use that expression, East End and North Side in particular.

Cayman developed, in spite of all of this turmoil within the region, in something of a vacuum, insulated from these important incidents of both global and regional history.

It is instructive to understand that these labour-related issues and the movement to achieve some form of social justice which resulted in the trade union movements culminated in the creation of labour parties. That is why historically when one looks around the region you see so many political parties which are characterised by the use of the word "labour" in their names. They were born out of the trade union movement and out of the move to achieve social justice and basic rights for workers.

Although I have been concentrating on the region, this is not unique to the region. The United States of America also went through that kind of turmoil and trauma in trying to obtain basic rights. That is what gave rise to the big union movements in the United States as well, to try to achieve basic rights for workers.

It is important that we understand what can transpire and how traumatic it can be for a society when fundamental rights of workers are not protected and addressed.

For the longest of times in the Cayman Islands there was resistance to any re-legislation which addressed the rights of workers and sought to place the arrangement between employer and employee on some sort of rational level where rights were clearly articulated and capable of enforcement.

I recall this very well because the first real job that I had was as an assistant labour officer in the Cayman Islands Government, in July 1981, and I recall when I applied for the job just having completed my A levels I had not a clue of what I would be asked to do or how I would be able to do it. Perhaps if I had I might not have accepted that position with such alacrity however when you are 19 years old and you are offered what looks like a huge salary you take the job.

I had an experience with Governor Lloyd. After I had been there for about six months he came to the Labour Office, which was then staffed by three persons and I should say that Ms. Joanne Watler was there when I joined in 1981 and she is still there, she has persevered. It was a labour officer; I think she was acting at the time just taking over from Mr. Leonard Dilbert, myself and a secretary.

At that time the only legislation that dealt with labour matters in this country was the Master and Servants Law, an 1842 piece of legislation, which came down from the United Kingdom through Jamaica to us. That piece of legislation stood until 1986 or 1987 when the Labour Law was passed and the Workmen's Compensation Law, which, regrettably, is still the only piece of legislation in these Islands enforced to deal with compensation for workers injured on the job and which is entirely irrelevant unless you are a workman as defined in the Law, and a workman is someone who earns less than $1500 a year. Both pieces of legislation were crafted to deal with a different time and reflected the true nature of our sub-colonial status, and I say sub-colonial, because we were not even a colony then, we were a dependency of Jamaica—I am not even sure what the relationship was before we were formally regarded as the dependency of Jamaica.

I remember the Governor, Mr. Lloyd, saying to me, who was very keen, after six months there, I had become exposed to enough and I had enough interaction with employers and employees to understand that there were problems.

The big problem that we had was that there was no legislation which governed any of this so what one had to do back then, Mr. Speaker, and I know that you are aware of this because you were in the Government Administration building in those days, was to place a call to Mr. Jim's (Jim Bodden) office when one had a recalcitrant employer who was giving problems and Mr. Jim placed a phone call to them and that sorted the matter out.

Even back then there were certain basic practices we had adopted, policy set by the Government. Two weeks vacation, 10 days sick leave, two weeks pay in lieu of notice; those were not written in any legislation. I remember saying to the Governor that we needed employment legislation very badly and he said that could be the worst thing that could happen to these Islands, we need to continue the laissez-faire practices and I did not know what it meant and I looked it up.

That has been the attitude of many in these Islands for a long time and the Minister of Education spoke to difficulties which the then Minister, Honourable Norman Bodden had with trying to promote the Labour Law in 1987.

I have tried to paint the historical context in which labour legislation has come to this country and to demonstrate why it was absent for so long.

However, when the Cayman Islands finally started to take off and when it became apparent to many who came here for investment purposes or to establish businesses that this was an almost idyllic place, there was the complete absence of any regulations which meant that they could exploit that (in the right way) and benefit themselves tremendously without having to worry about paying pensions, leave, workman's compensation or health because they came and they found a set of people who had been so neglected for their entire existence that not only were they resilient and hard working but they were entirely independent.

That absence of regulation and that independence and resilience of our people have contributed greatly to the success that these Islands now are. There is no question about that. That attracted businesses by the hoard, particularly those who came to establish the financial industry. This absence of regulation meant that they could do all sorts of things and as far as they were concerned, in my view, it was an added bonus. Because the population was largely uneducated, certainly beyond high school, they could bring in whoever they wanted without any worry about local persons competing or clamouring that they should have an opportunity to do these jobs. That is the way it was in the 1960s and 1970s.

I often reflect on something my father said to me some time ago and it struck me with such force when he said so because that point had never come home to me.

My father who is a former seaman and had the best education that the Cayman Islands could afford when he was coming up—he is now almost 78 years old—said to me when we were having the celebrations celebrating the tremendous contribution of seamen, “These Islands are forever indebted to the seamen in ways that most people do not realise.”

Because there were so few other opportunities every boy, from the time he was old enough to understand, aspired to go to sea and the result of that was that few of them, even if the opportunities did avail them, concentrated less on the importance of an education because there was not much point in that if you were going to leave for sea at the earliest opportunity you could. He said to me that the result of that was Cayman lost a generation—his generation—as far as education was concerned.

At a time in other places young men were pursuing an education, our young boys and men were sailing the high seas as a consequence of necessity.

When the first wave of immigrants came looking to pursue economic interest and use Cayman as a base for that, there were few here who were able to seize advantage of the opportunities that presented.

That is why for those who came to the Cayman Islands it was such an attractive place. A docile, friendly, helpful, deferential people who posed no threat to anything they proposed to do.

Cayman roared ahead in terms of development. Opportunities presented themselves everywhere and even in my generation, I have to admit, I had to be pushed and shoved to go on to higher education because there seemed to me, with all the naivety of a 18- or 19-year-old, that there was plenty of money to be made without the benefit of a higher education.

In the late 1970s and the early 1980s in this country, an 18- or 19-year-old could command whatever job they could dream of with four or five O Levels and because of the availability of jobs—not necessarily the jobs which 20 years from then one should aspire to do for the rest of your life, to make a career of—no one was complaining about working conditions because there was more work than anyone could do and immigrant labour poured into the country.

Immigrants generally do not complain about the lack of good working conditions because the fact that they have come here voluntarily means that the conditions which they find in this place are, at a minimum, better than those that they left or, if the working conditions are not so great, the living conditions and financial rewards are much better.

That explains why for a long time there was no groundswell for modern employment legislation in these Islands. For a long time there was no groundswell for pension and health benefits either and we ignored all of those things.

I am prepared to say that a large part of the social problems that Cayman currently faces; the difficulty Government and its agencies face in trying to help people who are now past their working years but who have no real means of support is because we failed to accept that (a lot of people in this country did understand) the Government had a responsibility to make sure that people made sure they provided for their latter years.

The fact is that Cayman, which is one of the richest, if not the richest, in the region in terms of per capita income, does not have in place basic workmen’s compensation and insurance in spite of all the development that has gone on.

The countless thousands of persons that have worked in very dangerous conditions building this country is a disgrace. It has been a deliberate policy decision by successive Governments not to do so; it is not something that has been overlooked. Mr. Speaker, as a lawyer who has worked in the field of personal injury in this country, I understand the hurdles and the costs involved in a construction worker having to pursue a claim through the courts, not to mention the delay. It is deplorable. It is a disgrace.

Cayman is at one of those forever talked about crossroads. Perhaps it is not as significant a crossroad as it was back in 1986/7. However we have those who complain that employers cannot bear any more burdens and the cost of doing business in this country is too great; they have a point. The cost of doing business in this country is high. However, generally speaking, the rewards of doing business in this country are very good.

I am always concerned too that we do not regulate things that we do not need to regulate. There are certain things that Government needs to stay out of and we have to be careful about over-regulating any aspect of industry in these Islands. That I accept; there has to be a balancing exercise.

I am not an advocate for conferring every possible benefit you can conceive on workers in this country. I do not believe that should be the objective of the legislation.

What the legislation ought to do is to recognise modern standards and conditions of employment. We are not in the era of masters and servants. We have even gone beyond the era of labour. The new term is now employment.

What the legislation ought to be about is setting the minimum standards under which any employee should be required to work. If employers and employees are able to negotiate better terms (which is usually the case), then fine. However, the Law is something that we should be able to hold up to the international community and say in the Cayman Islands, as an emerging nation, these are the standards to which we hold employers. Employees are not chattels; they are there to sell a skill, a service for which they should be paid. They have other lives outside the confines of the workplace.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Preach brother, preach! I wish more white people were hearing it.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, whether I am here after November or not remains to be seen. However, I believe I serve no purpose if I am simply here to make up numbers or to say what certain people want to hear. The reason I am here is because I believe that I can offer some insight and help to develop and improve the conditions for the people in this country.

To tell me, as I have been told even in the context of discussions about this Bill, we have to be careful because we need to continue to attract foreign business and entrepreneurs, developers and investors to this country is true!

However, I would rather not one of them came if them coming does nothing to benefit this country and my people. We have to understand that in everything you do in life there is a trade off. We have traded a whole lot of the most admirable qualities and traits and characteristics of this nation to get to the stage of development that we have. We have to be sure in such matters that there is a net gain to the Cayman Islands and the people in it. Otherwise, it is a bad trade.

While the Cayman Islands have generally been propelled forward at an amazing rate the social consequences of the pace of that development have been terribly high in some instances. All around the social decay is apparent. The fragmentation of the nuclear family, the loss of values and mores that used to be a natural part of growing up in Cayman are not there.

I am not crying about that; I am saying that we need to understand that when we pass legislation it should not be, as it has been far too often in the past, simply about bringing business to the Cayman Islands anymore. That investor should bring something to the whole Cayman experience which makes the people who are here lead better, more progressive, more enlightened, more comfortable lives. If it does not then we should tell them go away for they add nothing to the value of these Islands and to its people.

It is said more often perhaps than it should be but who are we developing this place for? That is something I have borne in mind from the time I was 23 years old. I understood how few persons here truly benefited from the tremendous wealth that was being generated by the very existence of this place.

The per capita figure is grossly misleading. I have forgotten what the figure is now, maybe twenty something thousand the last time I checked. I think Bermuda was slightly higher.

Only a very small percentage of Caymanians—and I use that in the broadest possible sense—are receiving anything near that sort of figure. My experiences over the course of the past three plus years have only confirmed the view that I earlier held from my other experiences in life, particularly my work with Lions. You get to understand when you do this kind of work how many people truly belong to this category called the working poor. How many people actually survive literally from week to week and often then only with some sort of subsidy from someone? The numbers are great. Representing George Town as you do Sir, which is the most populous district in these Islands (over 20,000), has given me an insight which is most worrying.

We should not resile from the view that the Employment Bill, which improves conditions generally, creates more enforceability is something that is in the overall best interests of these Islands.

I had concerns about some aspects of the Bill that is before us. By and large, with one notable exception, those concerns will be addressed as a result of the proposed amendments. I thought that some aspects of the Bill were over-reaching and I think the Honourable Minister of Education has spoken to them and that some of the provisions proposed were better left to be contained in the relevant legislation such the Pensions Law and the Health Insurance Law, et cetera.

I was also concerned with the proposed creation of this pre-Gorbachov-sounding position of Inspector General however I note it is proposed that provision be deleted from the Bill.

I think the Bill does what should be done; it is not perfect; there are still going to be certain problems. I think the whole question about overtime will continue to prove to be a vexing issue.

I have sat as the chairman of the Labour Tribunal for a couple of years, perhaps ill-advisedly, because it certainly was a far greater responsibility and came with far more work than I conceived. Therefore, I do have a fair understanding of not just how the current legislation works but of the issues that impact employer/employees relationships.

I also have the benefit, having been a public servant for three years, of having been at the very lowest end of the totem pole in a law firm—in a law firm an articulated clerk is somewhere below the cleaner in terms of value to the firm and, at least in the early days, is completely valueless—and I also now have the benefit of being an employer. Thus, I have seen this from all the available perspectives.

I come back to my point about the overtime issue. I believe the Honourable Minister of Employment Relations is absolutely right about the unworkability of the current provision in the Law which requires a tribunal to approve persons who work for hours in excess of their standard work week at a regular rate, that is, persons who are not managerial or professional. The current legislation says that any such arrangement for a non-managerial or professional person to work hours on excess of the standard work week at regular rates must be approved by the tribunal.

As the chairman of a tribunal I have actually gone through that exercise a number of times and there is no question in my mind that certain employers abuse that section terribly. They coerce employees into working additional hours at regular rates. I am not saying that all employers do that but I have two experiences that live in my memory.

One involved the tribunal going to a major business employing more than 300 people, being escorted into the board room on which was arrayed all sorts of the most delectable sandwiches and tidbits.

We were given a list of persons and had to sign off that we were satisfied that they had entered into this arrangement knowingly and understanding that they did not have to, and that no adverse consequence could flow from them not agreeing to, do this.

The first issue I had was that the human resource director insisted that she should be permitted to sit in on the interviews to which I politely told her that was not possible and that she should leave and take her offerings with her. That did not go down very well thus the management came and, of course, I know the management because they are Caymanian. So I said to them in my most diplomatic manner that this is not possible; that we have to be satisfied that these people were not being coerced, and if someone is sitting there from the management staff, we cannot be certain about that. They were not well pleased but they left and we conducted these interviews.

This is the saddest part and I am going to talk about two issues in due course. The first is about exploitation of immigration labour in this country and the second is about discrimination against Caymanians in the workplace.

I would like to take the luncheon break at this time. I would ask all Honourable Members to please return by 2.30pm sharp. It is the wish that we take this Bill through all its stages so it might be necessary for us to work beyond the hour of 4.30pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.00 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.30 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Second Elected Member for George Town continuing on the debate of the Employment Bill 2003.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might be reminded of the time remaining of my debate.

The Speaker: One hour and nine minutes.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Sir.

When we took the luncheon suspension I was relating some personal experiences with the current provisions in the Labour Law relating to the need for the tribunal to approve time worked by ordinary staff, non-managerial or professional staff, in excess of the standard work week and I related a situation where the Labour tribunal had been attending a place of business for the purpose of conducting these interviews to assure itself that individuals, who were working hours in excess of the standard work week at regular rates, were doing so of their own volition. I reached the point where I said that the human resource director of that establishment had insisted that she attend the interview and when that was declined the management sought to intervene.

The end of the story was that we were permitted eventually to conduct interviews in the absence of management staff.

The majority of the persons whom we interviewed with very few exceptions were all persons on work permits. Some of their English was not very good and most of them were quite intimidated by this process.

Having had some experience in dealing with people we were able to determine from some of them, although they exacted a promise from us that we would never tell their employers, that they were working these additional hours at the regular rates because they had understood that if they did not do so there were lots of other people waiting in line to assume their positions. Having come from so far away as the Philippines, in some instances, they were not inclined to lose the little work that they had.

I had another experience in relation to the much smaller operation of a professional establishment and it so happened that one of the young ladies that I had to deal with was someone that I had gone to school with and it was with that degree of confidence and based on our past association and relationship she asked that the other members of staff who had come for the same interview each be dealt with separately. Once the others who were not Caymanian had left the room she was then prepared to say that this employer had made it quite plain to her that if she did not work the additional hours at regular rates she could go and find another job.

My personal experience with that provision, having sat as the Chairman of the Labour Tribunal, is that it simply does not work. Not only does it put an impossible burden on these voluntary tribunals, who have to interview huge numbers of people if it is going to be done properly, but if one were to simply listen to what they say and not probe deeper and not insist that human resource people and management be excluded from the interview you would never get the truth.

Even when you get the truth you are afraid to tell the employer they are carrying on an unlawful practice because you know if you do the inevitable consequence is, particularly for those on work permits, that not immediately but as soon as that work permit comes up for renewal that individual who told you the truth is likely to be told that their work permit will not be renewed.

I have long been an advocate that that provision ought to be removed from the law. I accept that there is a dilemma because there is a significant number of people who would be willing to work additional hours without coercion at regular rates.

Thus the question is what to do to ensure that those people are not penalised? In this very expensive society in which we live many people need as many hours as they can get to work to make ends meet. On this side we have thought about it, debated it and discussed it with a number of people and I have come to the view that the only way that this could be addressed in a way that is reasonable is to have the work week extended beyond what might internationally be regarded as acceptable, which I believe is now 40 hours. Under the current Labour Law the standard work week is 45 hours and I believe that the proposal in the Bill that I have is 44, which will allow a certain degree of flexibility in there. Another four or five hours means another half day, essentially, as the standard work week for which the employer would not be required to pay overtime pay.

I believe that in this day and age it is not acceptable to expect people—that is persons below professional and managerial levels—to work for more than 45 hours in a week and not pay overtime; it is simply not acceptable.

You reach a certain point in the number of hours one works in any period, whether it is a week or month where it seriously impacts your health and your outlook and your ability to perform.

Unless persons are receiving some real incentive or have some particular goal in mind to do this for extended periods is counter-productive and I do not believe that it is internationally acceptable to have provisions which would permit persons to work for extended periods well beyond what is recognised as the standard work week at regular rates. Whether the Minister moves it up to 45 or it remains at 44 I am in favour of either of those.

I am certainly not in favour, as has been mooted and suggested to us by a number of opponents to the Bill, that there ought to be a laissez-faire approach adopted where it is a matter for employer and employee to negotiate what hours are worked at regular rates. That is not true negotiation because one party is in a stronger negotiating position and that is the position of the Law. That must be the objective of the Law to make proposals and to set out a framework which applies minimum standards to which all employers and employees are held.

When I concluded before the luncheon suspension I said that there were two other aspects that I wished to speak about in some detail and they were exploitation of immigrant labour and discrimination against Caymanians in the workplace.

Those are two bogey men that we are reluctant to talk about in these progressive Cayman Islands. Nevertheless, both are real and both seriously impact on the quality of life in this community. Both run contrary to modern views on social justice and I am pleased to see provision in this Law which prohibits its discrimination against anyone based on various factors including race and national extraction and the like.

I will deal with the discrimination issue in due course, however I first want to address the question of exploitation of immigrant labour and how that impacts on the community as a whole.

There is no question in my mind that there are categories of employees in this country, principally immigrant employees, who do work that most Caymanians are not prepared to do and who work in conditions that are less than acceptable and who earn wages which are not sufficient to live decently in this country. This forces them into situations where they live in squalor; six to eight of them share rooms at one time in order to survive. There are those who will say that is alright. After all, they are not Caymanians; they are doing things that Caymanians will not do and it suits whoever employs them to continue to employ them at those low rates because not having to pay what would probably be the economic rate means that they can either add more to the bottom line or reduce the cost of the service of goods that they are providing to the community.

Those people are not robots. They live and breathe and exist in this society in the same way the rest of us do. They are human beings; people who have to live in those circumstances are bound to have a certain attitude and view about the community which exploits them in this way albeit some may say that they are being exploited at their own choosing. The circumstances which they find themselves in Cayman are better than the circumstances in the place from which they come. Those people live in this community, have interaction with our people, they form relationships with our people and they get sick in the same way we do. We cannot treat them as some sort of sub-species.

Another important point that is becoming more and more common is that we, as legislators, are met more and more often these days by Caymanians who say, I cannot get any work because the other nationalities (I will not name any nationalities) are prepared to work for so little.

Those sorts of experiences are what make it more and more obvious to those of us who are discerning enough to understand the need for a minimum wage. There ought to be a rate below which no person in this country is paid because they simply cannot live and if the market was dominated purely by Caymanians, which has not been the case in the Cayman market for 40 years, you can say no Caymanian is going to work for less than $6 an hour and that is probably the case, however you are going to find other nationalities who earn significantly less than that. Therefore, we end up with the situation, because of the large immigrant pool of labour that we have in this country, where the rate paid at the bottom end of the market is artificially low. In addition to causing other persons to come in here and do that work that is displacing Caymanians out of work.

If we try to pretend that there is not a significant number of unskilled persons in this country who are Caymanian and who need to be operating at that level simply because they have no skills to operate above that level then we are telling ourselves a big story.

Those are the most vulnerable people in this community because they do not have the economic strength to cause stink anywhere (when I say those people I am talking about the immigrant labour operating at that level). They are so glad to get the job that they are prepared to put up with the most abysmal and atrocious conditions.

In addition to that, the other element is they can be forced to work in excess of 45 hours in a standard work week at regular rates. No, the Good Lord shall rain down on us if we allow that to happen.

The other bogey man is discrimination against Caymanians in the work place. I am sad to testify that that is alive and well.

I spoke about the history of labour in this country and what transpired in the 1960s and 1970s when the tourist and financial industries were developing; the lack of skilled, educated and professional labour that was generally available which resulted in the importation of significant number of immigrants to fill those positions.

There was little clamour back then by Caymanians for any of these top positions simply because we neither had the qualifications, education or experience to carry out these specialist jobs. However, my generation was told that we needed to be educated, go off to school, come back then the world is would be our oyster.

Caymanians, despite what the distracters may say, have done immensely well. As small as this community is, there are few that that have produced the number of professionals in 30 years as these Islands have done.

Even with all the new Caymanians that the Government has now added to the roll there are probably not more than 22,000 or 23,000 Caymanians — I am using Caymanian in the broadest sense—and when one considers the number of lawyers, doctors and accountants which are the three largest categories and add to that nurses, pilots, engineers, what this little place and that small population have produced is nothing short of astounding.

Forty years down the track, when you look at the number of Caymanians who hold senior positions in any establishment in this country, the results are not so good. There is a reason for that and that is pure and simple discrimination. All of us who have spent time in the expatriate dominated work force in these Islands, certainly in the financial and related industries, will understand that discrimination there is real and it is rooted not just in some ancient prejudice but it is also routed in the perceived need for the foreigners who have dominated certain industries in these Islands to hold and control. That is why 40 years down the track you can still count and have fingers to spare, the number of Caymanians who are in senior positions in the banks, trust companies, law firms, accounting firms. It is almost non-existent in hotels.

What has happened as a result of recent grants of status is that a significant number of foreigners, many in senior positions but still in the prime of their working life have been confirmed into those positions and will remain there for as long they wish to. We have younger members of my generation, those in their mid-twenties and early thirties who are angry, frustrated and concerned that the premise on which they sought their education and pursued a certain career has been significantly undermined because who they were training to replace have been confirmed in those positions.

Now, Mr. Speaker, what is done is done and there is no way that we can seek to categorise the Caymanians and say that those who got it this way should be give a certain treatment and those who earned it the old-fashioned way should be given a certain treatment and those who were born here to Caymanian parents another treatment. Once you are Caymanian you are Caymanian and we all have to get use to that.

The Leader of the Opposition and I had a delegation of young Caymanian professionals who came to see us very recently articulating these concerns and that was the advice we gave to them. We have to play the hand that we have been dealt and we have to accept that those that are Caymanian as a matter of law are Caymanian for all intents and purposes and we cannot try, as some would urge us to do, to find some way to give the indigenous Caymanian some sort of preference over these persons who have been granted Caymanian status.

We have to realise that it is a bigger issue than we have had to deal with in a long time. That makes it more necessary that when we are granting work permits, when persons are being considered for senior positions the board have got to be very discriminating and have to scrutinize the application and understand the circumstances that surround this particular job and position very carefully.

The last thing that we need to add to this volatile cocktail that we already have is added frustrations that indigenous Caymanians are being discriminated against and persons who require a work permit are being given preference in circumstances where that is not necessary.

Having grown up in that industry in these Islands, the 1 June will be 20 years since I have been at my firm, you get to understand all the nuances and the unarticulated prejudices that exist. You can design the criteria for a job application in a way that very simply makes it impossible for Caymanians to apply for it and in many instances those requirements that are written down are completely unnecessary.

I have lived and survived in this business long enough to understand what really operates in the minds of some persons who control the foreign-owned establishments in this country. Not all, because there are some very good ones who do look out for Caymanians, who do have a real interest in the country and in ensuring the upward mobility of Caymanians.

I am evidence of that because I did not get here all by myself. This is not a general indictment on the whole industry by any means, however there are significant numbers in enough of them and it happens often enough for me to know that there is a real problem.

I have had a senior partner in a major firm, in Cayman, in his cups, tell me that I am too intelligent to be Caymanian. That is why I say there are certain things that operate in their minds. That is not today. I have had it said to me and in the presence of others that the Caymanian stock is too small for us to produce persons who are intelligent enough to deal with major issues that arise in law firms. No one can tell me that these prejudices and attitudes do not exist.

The Immigration Board, the Department of Labour and the Employment Tribunals have got to have the resources—that is a critical thing; they need the resources—and they need to be more vigilant now than ever to ensure that discrimination is dealt with swiftly because it really exists.

I am not so utopian in my outlook as to believe that we could create something in Cayman which no one has succeeded in creating anywhere else. There will always be discrimination but those who practice it ought to understand, and that should be the object of the legislation, that the consequences of discrimination are this and that and that the consequences are going to be enforced.

What often transpires in this country is when the proverbial hits the fan then there is a huge lobbying effort by the Chairman of the Immigration Board or the Chairman of this Tribunal or this Minister and everything just gets sorted out.

However, part of the reason why I gave the historical introduction about labour—and how labour was the issue which galvanised the other British colonies in this region following emancipation and caused them to organise and develop trade unions, which gave birth to political labour parties—is so that those who live in some sort of cocoon in this community, despite the fact they may have come from somewhere else, come to understand that the worst thing that can happen to this country is a breakdown in social harmony; the very thing that attracted people and businesses here in the first place. The worst thing that you can visit on any country is a group of young, educated people who believe that their birthright is being denied them.

Mark my words, there is a growing number of disenchanting, disillusioned young professionals in this country, many with masters degrees, who feel that they are not being given their just due or opportunity; I have not met one of them that wanted a handout.

We, who sit in this Honourable House charged with the duty to represent them, and all people in this country will be derelict in our duty if we do not do all that we can to prevent discrimination against Caymanians in the workforce.

Discrimination against everyone is wrong. Well, not entirely because it is perfectly lawful and understandable in country to discriminate in favour of nationals in that country in terms of who should have employment opportunities.

We have understood that from morning because it has been enshrined in the Caymanian Protection Law (now the Immigration Law) for 34 years. I like the fact that we no longer use “protection” because it is not protection. Until the world no longer has borders—I will be long gone by then—it is in every country’s duty and responsibility to ensure that those who are citizens of that particular country have the right to employment in preference to those who come from elsewhere. How could it be otherwise, Mr. Speaker? Discrimination in that regard is fine.

I raise that because there is a provision in the proposed Bill which talks about national extraction and that should not be confused with nationality. National extraction, as I understand it, means that if my parents came from Jamaica, I am a Caymanian of Jamaican extraction. Fair enough. Lawfully you cannot discriminate against me for a job in Cayman simply because my parents came from Jamaica. However, it is lawful and should continue to be lawful to discriminate on the basis of nationality. Either you are Caymanian and entitled to a job here or you are not, in which case you need to get a work permit.

I could wax on about those sorts of issues for a while yet; however I must ensure that some important technical points that I wish to make are addressed in the time that I have and that I do not run over my allotted time before I get the opportunity to deal with those properly. I have mentioned them to the Minister this morning and I must confess that they did not occur to me, even though I had read the Bill a few times, until about 5.30 this morning.

I think it is a hangover from the old Law, however it was certainly a problem with the old Law and what I will do is to compare what the old Law said with what the new Law says, thereby identifying the mischief that I believe the new Law ought to address.

The problem had its genesis on the definition of complaint under the Law. The old Law defined a complaint as best as I can remember it as being a formal complaint to the director made under sections 46 and 54. Those two sections deal with unfair dismissal and the payment of severance pay. The problem which tribunals often experienced with the definition and the provisions of the old Law was that when an employee filed a complaint they complained about issues in addition to their unfair dismissal. Severance pay is simply a result of having left the employment in one way or another.

When up before a tribunal and the evidence unfolded they came to realise that there were other matters as well; perhaps the individual had not been paid the last week's pay that he should have been paid; perhaps he had not been given notice in accordance with the Law; perhaps there was unpaid vacation leave which had not been paid. When the evidence is led they come to understand that these are all important aspects of this employment relationship now falling apart which should be addressed. However, because of the way the Law defines complaint no order can be made by the tribunal in relation to matters other than severance pay or compensation for unfair dismissal.

Thus when I was around, the practice grew, that the tribunal would conclude that there was two weeks' notice due and they would say so in their decision. They would conclude that there was unpaid vacation leave and that was two weeks. However, when they actually made the order they could not order the employer to pay the unpaid vacation leave or pay in lieu of notice. The only order they could make was in relation to what the compensation was for unfair dismissal and the severance pay.

The problem was that if an employer decided not to bother to pay these the only way to get them paid would be if a prosecution was brought under the Law. They could enforce the other two in the same manner they would enforce the judgment in the summary court however the department would have to bring a prosecution, get a conviction and then take it from there. Very unwieldy. I do not think it worked very well. I think that problem was fairly well known because just about every tribunal, and certainly the department, was aware of that and indeed the definition of complaint in the Bill before us has been extended in a way that I believe is quite satisfactory.

It now says the: “‘complaint’ means a formal complaint regarding any employment-related matter made to the Director by –

- (a) an employer, employee, employers' group or employees' group; or
- (b) any government authority or department or any agent thereof having an interest in enforcing the employment-related Law;”

I believe that from a definition stand point it is now alright; it is no longer limited to a formal complaint related to unfair dismissal and severance pay in a way that the old Law was.

When I initially looked at the Bill I nodded with approval about that particular definition and thought that things were alright. As I said it was only after having read it and digested it a few times that I have come to the view that that alone does not address the mischief, which I know it is intended to do.

Part X of the Bill, section 74 establishes the “... Department of Employment Relations compris- ing of a Director of Employment Relations and such authorised officers and staff ...”

Section 78 establishes employment tribunals. Section 78(1) reads: “There shall be no Employment Tribunals for the purpose of hearing complaints from employers, employees, employers' groups, trade unions or any other party with an interest in an employment-related matter.” That compliments the areas that a complaint can cover so there is no problem there.

On page 63, section 79(14): “The decision of an Employment Tribunal upon a complaint shall, subject to the right of appeal conferred by section 81, be final and binding between the parties.” Again there is no problem there.

Section 80(1): “A person who refuses or neglects to comply with a decision or order of an Employment Tribunal is guilty of an offence.” There are critical words in there Mr. Speaker; “... a decision of an order of an employment Tribunal ...” And so the question arises, what decisions or orders is an Employment Tribunal entitled to make? An Employment Tribunal is a creature of statute, it has no inherent jurisdiction and therefore it can only do what the law empowers it to do, either directly or inferentially.

Section 80(2): “An award made by an Employment Tribunal for a sum of money may be enforced in the same manner as a judgment of the summary court or Grand Court for the payment of a sum of money, and using the same personnel.” Again, fine, Mr. Speaker.

Subsection (3): “Where an Employment Tribunal finds an employer to be guilty ...” I pause here, Mr. Speaker, just to say that I think that language is perhaps inappropriate in the sense that an Employment Tribunal should really be finding anyone guilty of anything. It should be that: “... an Employment Tribunal finds an employer” in violation “of this or any other employment-related Law and it is found that the same employer, in the two years immediately preceding the date of the violation before the Tribunal, committed a violation of a similar nature and was accordingly adjudicated to be guilty, ...” Again, I think that word should be amended, “... it may, in addition to any other order made to redress the complaint, order a penalty to be paid to the employee.”

In addition to any order made this subsection seeks to redress the complaint and again the question arises, what orders are the Labour Tribunal entitled to make?

We turn to fairness and unfairness of dismissal; part VIII, section 56(2): “Where an employee is dismissed, he shall, in addition to any remuneration and severance pay that may be due, be paid for earned vacation leave and any other benefits accrued at the time of termination, and the wage rate for the payment of such benefits shall be the same as the wage rate determined for his severance pay.”

That is very much in keeping with what obtains at present. Hence, as a matter of law when an employee is dismissed he is entitled to his remuneration for whatever work he has done and to severance pay, earned vacation and any other benefits.

Section 60(1): “Where upon a complaint of unfair dismissal the Employment Tribunal, summary court or Grand Court has determined that the dismissal was unfair, it may –

(a) order payment by the employer of a sum of money by way of compensation; or

(b) reinstate the employee with back pay for the period of unemployment.”

Clearly, the Labour Tribunal is entitled to make an order for compensation or for reinstatement. No problem. The next subsection deals with the matters they should take into account when deciding whether or not to make such an award.

A similar provision obtains in relation to severance pay. Section 51(1) speaks to an adjudicating authority. Again, I think that language can probably be improved. I do not see as a drafting point a lot of help in introducing some new terminology here—adjudicating authority—which has not been employed elsewhere in the Bill. That is a very technical point which I will just say and then leave it.

“Where an adjudicating authority finds an employer liable for severance pay, it shall, in addition to an order to pay severance pay under this Act and any other orders it may give, order the employer to pay to the severed employee a penalty not in excess of twelve weeks’ pay.”

The adjudicating authority is intended to include the Labour Tribunal. This recognises that the adjudicating authority for that Labour Tribunal is entitled to make an order to pay severance pay. There are other provisions in the Bill which say how severance pay should be calculated and those start at page 43, in part VI, section 44.

In my respectful submission there is clear authority and jurisdiction for the Labour Tribunal to make orders for compensation for unfair dismissal and to make orders in relation to severance pay under the Law as it currently stands.

However, on my reading of the legislation, that seems to be the extent of the orders it is entitled to make, and the Bill seems to proceed, as did the old Law, on the premise that other breaches of the law would be dealt with by way of prosecution before the summary court. I would be happy to be proven wrong about this, however if I am right I believe it is counter-productive because it simply means that to get recourse you have to go down a number of different routes.

In matters involving employer/employee relations the process must be simple and straightforward; as swift as possible and final.

An example of this is Part VII which deals with retirement and resignation allowances. I am not going to read all of section 52 however, to summarise, there are provisions which entitle certain employees who have attained the age of 60 years and some others to resignation allowances when they leave work.

An employer who does not make those payments is guilty of an offence. That is in section 52(5). Based on the definition of complaint and on the jurisdiction of an Employment Tribunal (not Labour Tribunal—I have been using the wrong term for some time now) an employer is entitled to find that this amount is payable. There was some question under the old Law whether a Tribunal could even properly make the finding of fact because it did not have the jurisdiction. I think the Tribunal, as this is currently drafted, does have the jurisdiction to make that finding but then the question arises, what does it do then?

As I see it there is no jurisdiction vested in the Tribunal to make an order requiring that this money be paid, which then leaves the director in a situation where he has to go and prosecute and leaves the person who is entitled to the allowance out of pocket while all of this is going on.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have 10 minutes remaining.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

That is one example. A similar situation obtains in relation to non-payment of remuneration that is due in relation to unpaid vacation leave, in relation to pay in lieu of notice. I think the same deficiency is also apparent in relation to some of the functions which are statutorily imposed on the director of employment relations.

As I am running out of time I am just going to have to make this one point. Page 40, part V, deals with gratuities.

This is an age-old issue about whether gratuities are being properly distributed. This one now seeks to deal with it and create a scheme whereby this process can be monitored and there can be some assurance that monies that are being received by way of gratuities are properly distributed to the persons to whom they are owed.

The section has hefty penalties for non-compliance with things like making a statement in a monthly record which is false or misleading; or whoever fails to distribute gratuities as required by this law will be liable to $25,000 fines and imprisonment, et cetera.

That is fine, however this is a process that is monitored by the director and, in my view, either the director or the Employment Tribunal should be in a position where they can actually make an order, having come to a conclusion that these things have not been paid, which would entitle the holder of that order to go down to the summary court or the Grand Court and ask the court to enforce the order against the employer.

There are few employees who are interested in seeing their employer prosecuted and put in jail. What they want is the money owed to them. Therefore, we have to devise a scheme which is effective and efficient so that those are owed money, as a result of an employment contract, are able to get it quickly and certainly.

There are a couple of other points I had hoped to deal with, however because I was so long-winded in the beginning I am going to have to leave those.

They are small technical points that I will quickly point out so that the Minister may address them when he winds up. Turning to page 48, part VIII, Dismissals. Section 57(4) is about warnings. It reads: “Where an employer has given the employee one warning for misconduct and three warnings [two warnings, if we include what is proposed as an amendment] for substandard performance as set out in Form 9, he may summarily dismiss the employee and, if he does so, it shall be presumed that the dismissal is fair unless the employee proves otherwise.”

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the “and” in the second sentence between “misconduct” and the word “three” should be “or.” Otherwise, you wind up with a situation where the employer has to give an employee one warning for misconduct and two, which I do not think could have been the intent.

There are a number of instances in the Bill in which the Law is referred to as an Act. I will be happy to point those out to the Honourable Minister at committee stage or before in order that he can have them addressed so that we can have a nice clean, error-less Bill.

I wish to conclude by saying that contrary to what may have been the perception of many, this Bill does not introduce any novel concepts now that it has been amended. It does increase in some respects the entitlement and the enforcement abilities of the director and his abilities to inquire into what is going on in particular business or operation. By and large, the structure is quite similar to what has obtained for some years now.

The Minister has introduced, as a statutory concept, conciliation which has really been a function of what is now the Department of Employment Relations for many years. What is happening now is that it is being given statutory recognition as a means of trying to settle a labour dispute. Arguably what they were doing before could have been considered ultra vires. For those who are less charitable it might have been considered something worse. I know a fair bit about that from my own personal experiences.

I really do not see why the Bill, if it is passed in this form with the amendments that have been proposed, ought to cause any alarm or a great turmoil or disturbance or concern in the community. I think it admirably reflects a modern employment practice, creates fairness and some degree of certainty in relation to employment relationships and that should be something that we approve of; something that we applaud rather than something that we denigrate and create the impression that there are huge problems and that we are turning Cayman into some sort of socialistic state.

As I have said, there is much more that I could say, however time has run its course and I must resume my seat.

I saw the Honourable Minister nodding and making careful note and no doubt he will address the points which I have raised when he winds up the Bill in due course.

I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not does the Mover wish to reply?

I think it is the desire of the House that we should take five or 10 minutes break at this time.

Proceedings suspended at 3.39 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.05 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Minister of Community Services mentioned during the break that he would like to make a few comments even though I had called on the mover to wind up. I will ask the Minister of Community Services to speak for a few minutes.

The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, thank you for your generosity in allowing me to have a few brief moments to comment on the Bill for a Law to Provide for the Regulation of the Employer/Employee Relationship; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

I want to say from the beginning that I support this Bill and I would like to give particular emphasis to the fact that the Minister responsible for Employment Relations has not wavered in his attempt to bring a more modern Employment Law to our country that will allow us to not just treat the private and public sectors equally under the Law but also to remove some of the difficulties, with regard to enforcement, which were obvious during the time that I dealt with a lot of employment issues in this country, many of them stemming from gratuity issues. Also, many people in the construction industry were being taken advantage of simply because they were members of the imported labour force.

We see all around us the need to balance the way in which we manage our society. Government should provide a conscience or should look to serve the general good. In attempting to solve the general good, it will always be possible and necessary for us to sometimes make legislation that does not really please some groups and individuals in our society.

At the end of the day Government must be the one to point out the benefits not to industry only but the benefits to all, in particular when we are talking about a labour law that will introduce some badly needed human aspects.

We are talking about how to improve parental relationships with newborns. We are talking about maternity leave, not for the sake of giving people more time to waste but encouraging people to become more strongly bonded to their children where discipline can stem from the relationship between father and child and between mother and child; where the state does not have to come down with a cannon in order to get young people to comply with the morals, values and norms of the society.

It is important that, from the very beginning, businesses understand that labour relationships or employment relationships, as referred to in this Bill, condition social relationships. Many of us are defined as a result of the work we do. Many of us are very much the result of the work we do. Just like we are, our children are therefore impacted as a result of how we come away from our employment environment. Therefore, it is important that we encourage a democratic, humane, working environment because this environment is a very important social institution in our country. Work is not just work it is also human interaction and relationships and I think this is what is being attempted in order to bring an understanding to this country.

When we talk about employment relationships we are not talking about labour relationships any more but we are talking about employment relationships and interactions between different people and how to make those interactions civilised and socially beneficial to the entire society.

The Second Elected Member for George Town made very interesting historical and sociological observations. I dare say that he was at his best in finding the expressions to convince, not just the Government but the Opposition and the general public that although we might not have had turbulent labour histories that have produced an obsession with labour and labour relationships, it does not necessarily mean that we should not introduce progressive benefits to the population that somehow might lack the consciousness on their own to demand of the Government better protection under the law.

One point that I need to stress is that we are so much defined by what we do and what we get for what we do since we all have a humane responsibility to each other; since the Government itself is obligated to give social and financial assistance to people that find themselves in situations where they can no longer work or what they work for is no longer sufficient to maintain the family; since the Government is charged by the private sector with this responsibility to socially maintain the fabric of the community, it is important that the private sector understands that the Government needs to work in different ways in order to achieve this.

One of the ways to achieve this is by making sure that the kind of work environment that will create healthy families and healthy communities is established; that will reduce the conflicts that exist in other societies as a result of labour differences and struggles over the years.

If the Government does not bring this Bill to improve labour relationships it will not come. If the Members of this House are not convinced that this is the best thing to do for the country, it will not happen because there is no group of workers in this society that are empowered, that have the ability or the consciousness to be able to force upon the Government these particular types of rights and responsibilities. Therefore, the Government is doing a good thing by being led by its conscience, by being led by what it knows it is good for all rather than what is good for a particular segment of the society.

I followed some of the discussions. I understood that the Chamber of Commerce— meaning those persons that term themselves employers—had concerns, however I do believe at the end of the day they will see and welcome this law as an improvement and at the end they will see that the productivity of the individual workers will be improved as a result of the types of harmonious atmosphere, which these types of laws can bring, because there is nothing that really creates unproductiveness like when an employee does not like the employer; where there are unresolved issues, where the rights and the responsibilities are not well understood.

I hope for the sake of future generations that the issue of the employment of women is given more and more consideration by those persons that employ because, especially in this society, where people continue to seek equity and equality in the workplace and where more women join men in the workplace, it is still important that employers use flexibility in terms of giving time off.

Although the Law is talking about minimum standards there are so many things that employers can do to assist us; trying to revitalise the family unit and by assisting us in this particular way by giving women time off; by having a consciousness in the workplace of those parental responsibilities, not only as it is dictated in the Law but as we practise it on a day to day level.

People have to collect their children from school and make sure that they are in a safe place. We are always complaining about the fact that kids have no supervision. What about the employers showing some kind of social interest and acting in a socially responsible way by making those decisions so that the Law is not mandating but is still possible in any event?

This law is talking about minimum requirements, minimum standards and I continue to encourage that more can be done in developing good relationships between people.

We have situations, for instance, with domestic helpers and I might say at this point that I recognise more and more how important a helper, an assistant in the home is to a family and the important role that they play and the kind of impact that they have on our children. My son is all about mopping and sweeping because that is what he sees. Mop is his most favourite word and he is out there mopping and cleaning.

Therefore, instinct tells us that we should not necessarily need a law to begin to improve the relationship between those people that work for us. At the end of the day we get more predictive results because the result of labour is not just physical; it is also social. That is the reason why we labour is that so our social beings can be enhanced and improved.

With that I would like to say that as a Member of this Government and as the Minister responsible for Community Services I think that this is a good and new beginning to start again to take control of the development of employment relationships in this country.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does the Honourable Minister of Education wish to exercise his right of reply?

[Inaudible Interjections]

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, if the Honourable Member wishes to say something, I would give him the opportunity.

The Speaker: If it is the wish of the Honourable Members I am sure that it would be a nice gesture.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman wishes to make a few remarks.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thanks to the Honourable Minister and for the leave of the House to allow me to make a very brief contribution to this very important Bill before this Honourable Legislative Assembly.

In my short tenure in the Legislative Assembly, this Bill has given me more labour than any previous Bill. Because it is a very important Bill to this nation and it is important to each and every individual in this country.

The great economist, Adam Smith, wrote, “What the common wages of labour are depends everywhere upon the contract usually made between those two parties whose interests . . .” Sorry, Mr. Speaker, I have lost the exact spot I want to read.

Adam Smith wrote that the parties of labour, he referred to this as; “... the master and the labourer ... have what can be considered as conflicting means.”

As important—as has been highlighted throughout this debate—is that a balance is achieved between what an employee needs and desires and what the employer requires to become efficient to realise a reasonable return on his investment.

After deep consideration by the Ministry responsible for Labour and great consultation throughout the community and a series of amendments I am confident that the Bill with the proposed amendments at the Committee stage is one that meets that balance.

It is important that we understand the role that labour plays into the whole economic flow. An improved labour force with better benefits, better working conditions, better terms under which they can meet the means because they are working to be rewarded for their skills in order to be able to consume the necessities and some luxuries in life.

Thus, in looking at the balance of the two things, that is said to be sometime unachievable, the one factor that we have in common, is that if we improve labour the businesses will always benefit because they have an improved consumer.

The same businesses that have legitimate concerns because labour is a significant part of their cost base must also bear in mind that an individual, if given proper reward for his services and his skills, will provide an improved consumer base for the products and services generated by the business.

It is in regard to that cycle and that important interrelationship between labour and businesses that I would urge all to familiarise themselves with the final Bill.

I encourage them in familiarising themselves with the final Bill to try to ignore or forget about the original draft bill because what is here is so significantly different from the original draft. I even found myself caught up in referring to what was there originally compared to what is there in the final draft.

Within the district that I have the privilege of representing we have some of the lowest paid wages in this country; paid within Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Therefore, a Bill that creates a minimum wage commission, something that this Government has advocated for some time, I have to support.

Within my district we have working conditions that cannot simply be moderated through negotiation. As the Second Elected Member for George Town rightfully pointed out, those negotiations between and employer and an individual employee—without any collective group—are not fair because the employer is coming from a stronger vantage point than the employee.

I have been visited by many constituents over the last three plus years, concerned about their working conditions, concerned about the unfairness under which they labour.

This Bill goes a long way in remedying most of those concerns.

The definition of an average work week was one of the key issues that I struggled with however I think the amended position of leaving the work week at 45 hours (44 hours as in the amendment but I understand that it may be possibly a 45 hour proposal) seeks to meet one of my great concerns. At 40 hours the concern was that individuals would not be able to work and they would be replaced through additional employees, thus the employee would suffer because of reduced income.

The district that I represent would require these things moving in harmony. We need to move with the minimum wage at the same time as we implement the average work week. Forty-five hours paid at straight wage at a reasonable pay would allow my constituents to meet their expenditure however with the 45 hour week alone at these very low wages, my constituents would have a difficult time; their having the need to work beyond the average work week. In most cases, if you are going beyond an additional four to five hours that you are paying at time and a half, it becomes more cost effective for the employer to seek another employee.

I urge that we need to look at these things all at the same time and the minimum wage commission should be established with some degree of urgency to have that implemented.

I also bring to the attention of Honourable Minister the category of special industries that were detailed in the amendment to add retail businesses on to the special industries. My concern is for the small retail outfit with only one employee. Who covers that employee for the 15 minute break, lunch break and the other 15 minute break? I ask the Honourable Minister and his staff to give consideration to making a provision for these. They would mainly be captured under the retail category that has been added into the amendment section. I know within my district I have many of those that would have difficulty—

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: Honourable Member if this is a convenient spot I would call on the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to allow debates beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) that debate may continue beyond the hour of interruption.

The Speaker: All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow the business of the House to continue beyond 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: Proceedings may continue.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, for the sake of clarity and emphasis I would just like to repeat the particular section I am referring to. It is the section that added retail businesses into the special industries. I am urging for that particular section that some caveat be made for small retail outfits that only have one employee and would have difficulty covering the periods of mandatory breaks in Clause 27(4)(h).

With those few words said I give the Honourable Minister responsible for Labour the undertaking that he will have my support at the time of the vote and I give the United Democratic Party praise for tackling a very difficult subject; for tackling a very difficult bill and coming to a point that this Honourable Legislative Assembly can give its support.

It is a difficult subject to find a happy medium, I give special recognition to the effort made by the Honourable Minister in this regard, I know it has been a testing period for him including demonstrating great patience with me.

I resume my seat and give my support to this Bill, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, in the interest of time, like King Henry the VIII said, "I shall not keep you long."

The Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for George Town has laid our position out with regard to the Law before us; the Employment Bill. Therefore, I will not go too far into the technical issues of the proposed Law; however I think it is necessary that some other things be mentioned.

I think I should preface my contribution by saying that no matter what kind of Law we legislate if the provisions of enforcement are not alive and well it is not worth the paper that it is printed on.

Like the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said, much of my time has been taken up with labour issues too. I am sure the Director of Employment Services is a little tired and fed up with me; however that time has primarily been taken up with discrimination. Like the Second Elected Member for George Town said, it is very much alive and strong in this country. Discrimination not only against Caymanians but work permit holders as well although in most instances it is the blue collar workers on work permits that this discrimination is levelled against. For too long we have laboured under the old law in that it did not have sufficient teeth and we forever hear complaints.

I think the Second Elected Member for George Town spoke briefly on our young people in this country becoming educated and coming back to this country and becoming disillusioned. I had the opportunity to visit with one of our young kind in college just yesterday at his dorm in Florida. He expressed the same concerns about coming back to the country where he was born, the country that has given him an education, and coming back into the work force and not being able to get the opportunities to excel.

For so long we have had a catch-22 situation where we tell our young generation they have to be educated to get the jobs. We educate them then they come back to this country and are discriminated against. We must remember that the Government of this country is the biggest culprit. We bring in someone else at that level and we let these young adults understudy these managers. At the end of the work permit period we find some reason why they cannot be promoted; they still lack experience.

I have had my share of that too however, perhaps it is true what my father has always said; my mouth would always get me in trouble. However, my mouth was never shut whenever I saw discrimination in the workplace I spoke up. There were times that this was to my disadvantage and at times it was to my advantage but one failure did not make me stop.

If the young person coming back from school does not get the opportunity to get the experience in the work place then they will never become qualified experience-wise. It all stems from discrimination in the workplace.

The Second Elected Member for George Town talked about how someone had said that he is not Caymanian because he is too smart to be Caymanian. Well, I have news for whomever that was because when Cayman was no place the records will reflect that we did more than most with less.

How many of us have not gone into that realm of seamanship and, given the opportunity, we excelled. I still contend that one cannot get where they want to get to, will never realise their dreams unless they are given the opportunity. Therefore, those who believe that Caymanians are not capable and discriminate against them in the work force must first of all give the Caymanians the opportunity and stop the discrimination.

When it comes to people on work permits, we bring them into our country and we exploit them then we hold the permit over their heads. I recently had a situation—and the only reason I did not call Mr. Whittaker was because I was travelling abroad nevertheless I shall report it to him—where a company (this complaint came to me from a Caymanian) is requiring a Caymanian to work 50 hours before they pay overtime and then they are requiring the work permit holder to work 55 hours without overtime.

We must take this into perspective; it was not a company that is run by a Caymanian. The individual seems to lean toward hiring expatriate labour rather than Caymanian labour. However, in these times of hardship Caymanians who are semi-skilled will go and seek employment with this individual. While the Caymanian, who is one of my constituents, will complain to me and when I go to engage one of the permit holders they will walk away because they are afraid. They certainly cannot make that kind of money in their country. However, when you are requiring someone to work for 50 hours a week you are putting your employees at a risk. There is a risk of accidents; fatigue has to set in at that stage.

The first proposal by the Minister was for a 40 hour week, he has now changed that to 44 or 45. The environment that I came out of was about 42 however I was paid overtime when I was in non-managerial positions. Thereafter, I probably worked 16 hours a day of the week when I was in a managerial position. However those hours were to meet deadlines and the likes and I know what it is to work late and to have fatigue set in. While I did that on a voluntary basis to meet my deadlines as a manager, asking someone to do that that does not have the responsibility of managing a company is unreasonable.

That is what we are doing and we continue and we could complain until the cows come home and the Employment Services can do nothing about it! On the other side of that they do not have insurance, they collect the money for pension and they do not submit it to the pension companies.

If we think that this country is not in a quandary when it comes to labour then we are hiding our heads in the sand on West Bay beach.

Talking about West Bay it is painfully obvious to see that the West Bay contingent is not here, especially the Leader because he knows—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I would remind you to keep your speech to the amendment before us and not about the absence of the Leader of Government Business. I have already given an apology for his absence. May we move on please?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I was just going to say that as the Leader of Government Business he has been the Member responsible for Labour at a previous time during his time in Executive Council and it would be nice to hear his experiences with the problems during that time. Comparing his tenure to that of the current Minister we could get a better perspective to it.

Another issue that really brings our country to a grinding halt is the fact that there is the absence of a minimum wage. I know the Bill does not call for the implementation of a minimum wage at this time. We hear so much of people living below the minimum standards that are set by any organisation.

I have not been in any of these rental properties however it is my understating—and it is rumoured on the street—that you can get 10 to 15 more people in them than those premises were constructed to accommodate. In most instances the reason why is that they are exploited. They are being paid below any reasonable amount to live a good life or to live a reasonably comfortable life like we would all love to do. That is why many people in this country have opposed a minimum wage.

There are many who support a staggered or categorised minimum wage; I want it to be known in this country that I do not support any such thing. It must be a minimum wage.

Do not tell me if there is a minimum wage for a particular category of worker that another category can go below that. All we are doing is promoting the same substandard way of life. There needs to be a commission set up to determine what the minimum wage must be to survive. Previous administrations allowed gratuities to be a part of the make up; we have to cut it out.

I know the complaint is going to be that it is going to drive up the cost of doing business. Well, if it drives for one it drives for all, therefore the wages and the cost of services will go up in certain categories. If we, as legislators and successive legislators, sit back and do nothing of it we are going to create a socialist state in that the Government is going to forever have to take care of its people!

I would like to know how much we are going to have to tax our people to take care of a minority in the country because the costs go up and our people fall deeper into the crack. We have to pull them out. If we have any morals, we would not leave them there. If we put provisions in place to ensure that all of our people are protected through the process of labour, then we will not have to tax the rest of the populous to maintain the select few.

Let me put it this way, Caymanians, as a rule, are not lazy people. They expect to be given a fair wage for a fair days work.

We keep hearing members of the United Democratic Party talk about how there is no need for a referendum; the people put us here to legislate in their interest. I say let us legislate in their (the people who put us here) interest. The country is not going to survive in the atmosphere that successive Governments have created. Albeit many years ago when there was no need to have a Labour Law, in 1987 we got the first Labour Law, however 1987 is 17 years ago.

We must applaud the Minister for remaining steadfast in his belief and his resolve to have this done and to bring it to the legislature whether he gets total support or not.

Let me digress; I want it to be made clear that I am not anti-foreigner. I would prefer to describe myself as pro-Caymanian.

I know many people have made representations concerning this Labour Law. The Minister has made some concessions and I think that he should be applauded for that also. However, we have to keep our focus on the big picture. At the end of the day it is those same Caymanians that employers are saying they cannot promote because they are not prepared to take over. Those are the same ones that are going to saddle this country as a result of the discrimination against them.

Opportunities are what it is all about. This Bill is a significant first step in that direction. I would really love to hear the things that many of the top management are saying concerning this Bill. I know many of them are saying that it is going to cost them more to do business. I sympathise with them, however I also have to sympathise with the employees because for too long they have been exploited.

In time this too shall pass and we will all be better off as a result. Very importantly, when we find employers arbitrarily discriminating against those individuals at the bottom of that totem pole, they too will be better off.

I can support the Bill; the Minister is proposing many amendments to it as a result of much consultation and perhaps the public will see that he is not as pigheaded as has been mentioned before. At least he is ready to compromise.

I trust that the employers are also ready because if we are prepared to make compromises then they should also be prepared.

I implore the Minister and Mr. Whittaker of the Employment Services, to ensure we have enforcement. It is very important and repetition bears emphasis in this particular situation.

It makes no sense for us to put this Law in place, as much as we support it, as much as we applaud the contents of it, as much as we applaud the Minister. It would mean nothing if the Employment Services do not have the manpower to enforce it. Too many people, too many employers wait for that moment when they know big brother is not watching and they do as they please and big brother cannot watch if big brother does not have the tools.

We cannot ask the Department of Employment Services to do a job if we do not give the Employment Services the tools and we cannot hold the Director of the Employment Services Department accountable if we do not give him or her the tools.

The time has come when Governments in this country must understand if we are going to legislate pretty laws that make the people feel good it is at a cost and that cost is the tools to enforce the laws.

We cannot wait until we get complaints; we have to ensure that this Law is enforced. The responsibility is the Minister's to ensure that the requirements of the Employment Services are met at a minimum to ensure they have the necessary tools to get the job done.

I trust that the Minister, having heard my appeal will do the necessaries to get this in place. I have talked to the Director of Employment Services on a number of occasions and in most instances he and his staff are so swamped with other matters similar to mine that it takes him days to address anything that I may give to him. That is not working, it is easy for us to blame and say that the Department is not working; the Department cannot work if it does not have to tools and I am talking about human resources as well and all of the other necessities.

I appeal to the employers of this country to show a little bit of compromise on their part. This is not only about protecting the employee but the Bill also protects the employer.

If you give someone something you will not hear any complaints however if you are requiring someone to do something which empowers someone else that is where the concerns are going to come from

I trust that this one is behind us and that the employers—who the greatest complaints were coming from because the employees never had anything before—will respect the compromises that have been made on their behalf and let us move forward.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Honourable Minister wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Roy Borden: Mr. Speaker, there are many things that can be said on an occasion such as this and I know that the hours of evening are approaching us however I feel compelled to conclude by offering some sobering comments.

I am going to begin in a rather unusual fashion by meting out thanks and appreciation to those Members who spoke in support of the Bill and I am sure that my colleagues on this side will allow for graciousness, on this occasion, and say that the contributions of the Opposition were appropriate, relevant, respectful and I did not know that the Second Elected Member for George Town was the social historian he turned out to be. I remember that I taught him history a long time ago however I take no credit for his interpretation of the vivid social history that he laid out; only to suggest to him that it strikes when his political career comes to an end he might find employment in a less adversarial forum.

I am grateful for the support even given by the Official Members whom it is not customary to hear from on these occasions but whose hearts are certainly in favour of seeing a social contract existing in these Islands where a fair days wage is had for a fair days work and where there is parity and mutual respect in the employment arena.

I would also like to extent my appreciation to my elected colleagues on this side who gave their support beginning with my colleague, the Minister of Health and the Minister of Community Affairs and then the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and even the one Member who did not speak.

Nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, for all of that I stand here with a heavy heart pondering and puzzling notwithstanding what has been given and I am reminded of Edmund Burke when he was commenting on the events in 1770 in a passage he entitled Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents when he said: “When bad men combine, the good must associate; else they will fall one by one, an unpitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle.”

I want to say that this experience has wisened me and in this business it is good not to make unnecessary enemies. I have proven that because were it not for the support of the Opposition it would be hard for this Bill to gain the assent of the House and I wonder if I am sober or if what I am witnessing has to do with some kind of inebriation—I have not been exposed to any spirit since I began debating this Bill. Mr. Speaker, the message is not lost at the Minister moving the Bill.

I am happy to say that all of the concerns and the points raised by the Opposition have been taken on board and when it is time to move the amendments, I am pleased to say that the Opposition will see that the commitments I have given have been reflected in the amendments moved in the committee stage.

I am not going to spend a lot of time dealing with some of these now because I think that we will have an opportunity to elaborate during the Committee stage.

I want to say that for purposes of my memory, labour and labour relations have been a challenge in this society for all of the reasons given by the Second Elected Member for George Town, who so eloquently elaborated them, and for others given by other Honourable Members.

There is one over-riding reason which cannot be to often mentioned or emphasised. There is an element, albeit not the majority, of persons in this country who believe that many persons less endowed than they are should not be afforded the dignity of an honest days wage for an honest days work.

It strikes me from my experience that some people believe that they have a God-given mandate to keep others in dire circumstances. In my brief experience of some three plus years, I have been shocked by the behaviour of some of these people who would set themselves up as paragons of virtue and enlightenment in our society.

Without calling names I am going to give you two brief examples that are heart-rending and that boggle the mind and challenge the spirit of any man or woman. A complaint was made to the Department of Employment Relations and to me as Minister of a long-standing employee who was alleged to have stolen some property. It is my information that when the tape in the security cameras was examined there was no such corroboration. The Police were called in, investigated the allegations and found no evidence to substantiate the claims and all that was predicated by the employee claiming innocence from the time of the accusation.

The result was that the employee was terminated after 17 years of employment. No severance pay, nothing. When the matter reached the Minister's desk I personally called the employers. The first person I spoke with was very sympathetic and accommodating, however must have been studying the tactics of Pontius Pilate. The second person I spoke with said: "Well, Minister we are not complying because it is our belief that the person is guilty." Even after I pointed out the section in the Law which said it had to be done they said: "We are not complying."

I said: "Sir, it is my understanding that the tape on your security camera did not corroborate the charge. It is my further understanding that the Police were called in, investigated the matter and found no evidence to substantiate the allegation, therefore the Law requires in this case that you settle the matter."

It was my understanding that a cheque was cut, however the last time I enquired the gentleman had not only not received what the Law says he is due but the parties concerned proceeded further to call around to prospective employers and say: "This man is a thief, do not employ him."

Those kinds of incidents try men's souls and I wondered what are these people trying to do and it is not an isolated case.

I have one more to relate. This one concerns a young lady who is now is qualified practitioner of that vocation practiced by the Second Elected Member for George Town. She started out in the firm as a clerk, worked her way through law school, passed the bar exam, got her professional practice and went to her employers and said: "Please may I have some challenging work in keeping with my qualifications so that I can retain sharpness of intellect in my trade?"

They told the young lady she could research cases and she could assume the responsibilities of librarian. When that young lady told me what her salary was after acquiring the degree and the professional practice certification I found out that senior tellers in the bank were making as much.

These are the cases that cry out to us and I am telling you in my three plus years, they are not far-fetched and I am here to tell you neither are they apocryphal; these incidents are true and I sometimes wonder if people believe that the only sins are wilful murder, sodomy and the likes.

There are those transgressions that cry out to heaven for vengeance and robbing a labourer of a fair days wage is one of them.

They should read the philosophers and the people who discourse on ethics and morals and find out; perhaps they should go back to reading the gospel and the epistles of St. Paul.

That is why it is necessary for us to have in Law a code which prescribes in unambiguous language the responsibilities and obligations of employee and employer. I am only sorry that the true tripartite system that we are advocating is missing one important element—an employee organisation—which would take care of the collective interest of the employees and therefore remove the Government from the sometimes and somewhat untenable position of having to take up the interests of the employees.

It is high time we face facts because who is benefiting? Are we becoming a community of phillistines that we are so intent on enriching ourselves that we are blinding ourselves to the fact that we are leaving a significant element of the community behind who are being so exploited that they cannot realise the means to a dignified existence?

I want to say, I know the names they have called me. It does not matter to me because my conscience is clear in what I am doing and I have never been a coward. I am not stupid. I tell people I was in the private sector for 20 years. I am not going to craft any Law that is going to destroy the investors ability to realise a descent return on his or her investment. I would be a fool and I am not a fool but neither am I going to sit back under threat of removal of political support or otherwise and allow a situation to obtain where people have to work 50 and 60 hours per week in order to take home a descent pay.

I am not going to do that because that is the class that I came from! I am not going to do that because it goes against the grain of that which I have called conscience.

Just as I am not going to encourage an employee to shirk, to be dishonest and to be exploitative, I am not going to encourage the employer to be a tyrant, to be exploitative or to be unfair. The Government is going to ensure that the legislation is fair and balanced and the Government is going to ensure that its organisation, namely the Employment Relations Department, calls a fair game.

That is what it is about. That is why I took on the concerns and made the significant amendment; that is why I came and huddled with all Honourable Members of this House, including the Opposition, because I am not pigheaded. Even with all of that that has been done I am still not saying that the Law is perfect. There are still things that we have to do and I will enumerate a few of those which I consider to be of most significance.

This has to be done if the Cayman Islands are to remain a jurisdiction providing excellent service. Why is it that we would wish to live with a situation in which some people, when the weekend comes, can go home lock themselves away in their ivory towers and forget about the cares of the world, while others who are less fortunate have to be scrounging around to find something else to do to feed the mouths of infants who are sometimes crying? Why is it that a man will have to continuously work the night shift when he has left a wife and children at home that he need to spend some time with to bond with?

I ask all of these questions and they must be answered because it is not that we should have to work every hour of the waking day at the expense of family time, at the expense of quiet meditating time for ourselves just to fatten some people.

No, I say a thousand times, no. It is incumbent upon the Government, upon the Minister, to craft a Law which is fair.

I want to say one of the most challenging and problematic sections has been drawn to my attention by the Leader of the Opposition.

We tried to make an adjustment however I have to serve notice that it is a matter which has to be under continuous observation. That is section 28, perhaps extending to section 29, which talks about the standard work week and about overtime. Before I explain what we propose to do about that I want to give you some sobering information.

The security business in Cayman society is a big business with a proliferation of companies. Many of these companies routinely work their employees for 14 and 18 hours per day when the international standard calls for a working day of eight hours. Supermarkets have a common practice of working their employees for about 53 and 55 hours per week when the normal work week is 40 hours. In France now there is a move to reduce it from 40 to 37½. This is not the extent of it, people often come and tell me that on the construction business they are forced to work 14 to 16 hours a day and threatened that if they do not work they do not have a job.

I heard the Second Elected Member for George Town talk about exploitation. It is exploitation and exploitation beyond exploitation! It cannot be allowed to continue!

The old Law, as good as it was when it was crafted, did not have clauses and mechanism to deal with these practices.

I want to say before I go much further, lest what I am saying is misunderstood, misinterpreted or used by mischievous people. The vast majority of employers out there are honest, decent and considerate. However, there are those to whom such qualities are foreign and it is those employers that we have to try to impress upon to operate within the bounds of what the Law says.

Many employers came to me and said: "Minister, we are aware of what you are trying to do and we are in support, we have nothing to hide, we agree and sometimes we are disadvantaged by those persons who are inconsiderate and who do not toe the line."

It is important that we get this right because those persons who insist on playing outside the rules seem not to understand is that the social harmony of this country depends on these kinds of relations.

If we insist on being manifestly unfair to the persons whom we employ many things will happen, not the least of which is one of these days the society will break down into social disharmony and social unrest and then all of us will be made to suffer.

This legislation is not the result of any idealism on my part. It is rather the result of a necessity to have order and fairness in the employment sector. That is what it is about. It is about dealing with discrimination, it is about establishing a minimum wage committee so that the people on Cayman Brac can earn more than $3 per hour. It is about ensuring that when an employee works a reasonable number of hours per week that they can have the opportunity to work beyond that at an overtime wage which is fair to them.

I come back to the point which I was making.

Section 28 was brought by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition when he was speaking and I requested the Director of Employment Services to do some investigations. We will have to do more investigations yet because it is a situation that, after further consultation, I am not satisfied is as effective as it should be. What we have done is move back the work week to 45 hours and we have said any work beyond this will have to be done at overtime.

It is my understanding, and we cannot be sure of the number of persons who will be affected by this, because what we do not wish to happen is for the Law to be so restrictive that it will preclude persons who wish to work overtime from being able to work that overtime at a reasonable arrangement. I know the system, Mr. Speaker. I know what is likely to happen.

Therefore, the undertaking that has been given is we will have to leave the Law with that arrangement at this time. However, this will be on the review and could be changed as a result of the numbers we have found out when we have spoken with persons who are engaged in the practice. It may be that we will have to bring an amendment to put this in a more palatable and satisfactory and acceptable form. By doing so I am sending the message that nothing here is cast in stone and etched in blood.

I circulated some pages. Working time; Its impact on safety and health, by the International Labour Office (ILO). I would like to draw your attention to page 11, the section which says the effects of working time on health. This was a report put out by the International Labour Office talking about Long hours and health: The current picture.

I would like to quickly scan through some points.

- “Regularly working in excess of 48 hours per week appears to constitute a significant occupational stressor which reduces job satisfaction, increases the effects of stressors and significantly increases the risks of mental health problems.
- Regularly working more than 60 hours per week, and perhaps working more than 50 hours per week, appears to increase the risks of cardiovascular disease.
- Individual attitudes and motivation appears to modify the response to work stressors, but whether these, or variations in physiological response, reduce long- term health risks has not so far been adequately investigated.

- Long hours appear to be associated with increased prevalence of somatic systems and health threatening coping behaviours such as increased smoking and poor and irregular diets.
- Some workers have reported adverse effects on family relationships, particularly where hours are in excess of 50 per week. However, data are limited in this area.”

On page 12 it goes on to talk about shift work and the effects of working time on safety and so on.

I draw your reference to this to say that it is recognised that there is a direct correlation between hours worked and mental and physical health.

That is what the International Labour Organisation, International Labour Office, International Conventions and human rights requirements recognise—that there, is beyond all of this, quality of life.

I know from history that when the industrial revolution came and we changed our lifestyle that from the outset it impacted on our physical and mental health. I want to say that many people do not realise the relationship between the health of a nation and the kind of work being performed by the population, particularly if the population in the majority is working under stressful conditions.

It has been proven that productivity does not provide an advantage in those cases where significant numbers of people have to seek medical attention for stress and stress-related factors for psychological symptoms, nervousness, stress and irritation. Family relationships break down where partners become agitated, tempers are short and abuse is the result of stress in the workplace.

Thus there is reason to believe that we will only derive the greatest effects when there is a balance between the work we perform and our ability to access and spend quality time with our families, friends and even, sometimes for those of us, solitude—just hanging out by and with ourselves.

I believe that God created the world in six days and rested on the seventh. Even from biblical times we have the principle of a balance between work and rest and it should not be otherwise even in a jurisdiction like Cayman where we hinge so much on our success and the ability to turn out excellence, particularly in the financial industry and related fields.

I want to underscore that, in my presentation of this Bill and in all of the events leading up to this, I have shied away from using any inflammatory or insightful language. I have only said that we need to recognise the fact that we have to arrive at a new social contract. This kind of debate would be ammunition for someone who wanted to be whipping up sentiments particularly in an election year. I have tried to be balanced and restrained in my presentations. So has the Opposition. So has everyone engaged, if the Opposition wants reassurance, so has everyone. The different opinions were presented in respectful ways. All we have been saying is that the rules of engagement must be clear and unambiguous and I believe that was the language of the Leader of the Opposition.

All that the Bill purports to do is to lay out the parameters in clear and unambiguous language. I give the undertaking that even when proceedings are concluded at the end of the day's Sitting, if there is any section which is onerous, which is unworkable, it will be re-examined and if necessary adjusted and amended. That is the essence of a good Minister and good legislation because at the end of the day we want a Law which is workable and accepted.

I was reminded that when we first began to talk about the direction in which we were going and the setting up of this system and the changing of the Department of Labour to an Employment Relations Department, the Caymanian Compass Thursday, 21 November 2002 carried the editorial entitled Labour Relations. I would like your permission to read this into the records of the Honourable House.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. Roy Bodden: It begins: “As the Cayman Islands economy has evolved rapidly over the years, employment practices have not always followed apace. The somewhat casual approach to employment that once prevailed here became increasingly outdated. The current Labour Law, when it was first created, was to introduce some standards. It was meant to be developed further as the need arose.

“Government has rightly come to the conclusion that a new Law is now required to better serve current needs.

“At a forum opened yesterday Cayman's current labour legislation and practices are being discussed. Yesterday, a representative of the International Labour Organisation (ILO) who was attending the forum noted that Cayman is behind most of its Caribbean neighbours in updating its labour legislation.

“It was rightly pointed out also that Cayman must enshrine in the new law respect for internationally recognised human rights principles.

“There are many other areas where clear and workable legislation is necessary. There have been far too many disputes which left all involved disappointed and frustrated.

“The new law, it is hoped, will provide clear guidelines to both employers and employees so that many of the situations now festering into disputes will in the future be avoided altogether.

“Both employers and employees need to have a clear understanding of their rights and obligations before they have occasion to disagree.

“Cordial relations at the workplace are crucial to the economy as well as the social harmony in general. A good law will promote such harmony.”

That is what the Bill purports to do; to produce social harmony.

Earlier the Chamber of Commerce had suggested that what should have been done was not to craft a new Law but to amend the existing Law. I put it to you that if you put new wine in old bottles, the old bottles will let the new wine turn rancid in short order.

What we have done is craft a new Bill based on the necessities of the time, based on the developments in Caymanian society as they are affected by international occurrences and international obligations.

Reactionaries and those without a social conscience may cringe at what is being offered. However, sensible Caymanians, and those with a sense of responsibility and a desire to set a new social contract, will welcome these efforts as but one chapter in the continuing evolution of Caymanian society into a respectful society in which all who labour as well as all who invest can realise a mutual satisfaction from their partnership.

In light of all that has been said by Honourable colleagues before, I do not need to say more than this. When we discuss the amendments even the doubting Thomas' will see that this legislation is not only workable but should be deemed as a model for us in which to operate in our jurisdiction of excellence.

Thank you.

Clause 22

The Clerk: Clause 22 Paternity leave: child birth.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: By deleting clause 22 and substituting therefor the following—"22. (1) A male employee who is the biological father of a child and who at the expected date of delivery will have been employed by the same employer for at least twenty-four months or who last went on paternity leave on account of a birth that took place at least twenty-four months before that date and while working with the same employer is entitled to request, and the employer may grant, two weeks' paternity leave.

"(2) Where the male employee has not completed the relevant period of twenty-four months referred to in subsection (1), he is still entitled to request and the employer may grant paternity leave but, if granted by the employer, that leave and pay shall be calculated on a pro-rata basis in relation to the period of leave stated in subsection (1).

"(3) An employee who is granted paternity leave is entitled to receive and the employer shall pay—
a) for the first five working days, the basic pay;
b) for the next five working days, no pay, and in calculating the leave days, public holidays shall be counted as working days.

"(4) A male employee may request to take paternity leave in such a way that it covers periods before and after actual childbirth and the employer may grant such request.

"(5) Paternity leave that is unused will not accrue and is not remunerable.

"(6) Nothing in this section shall be construed as allowing an employer to refuse to grant any paternity leave at all to an employee who has served for at least six months."

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, this is a very curious section which I confess to have struggled with at length. It seems to me that what is intended is to remove the earlier provision in the Bill which confers the right to paternity leave and as a gesture, to make provision in the Bill, whereby paternity leave may be suggested in certain circumstances and may be granted and if granted it provides for certain guidelines. I wonder about the purpose and efficacy of such a provision.

I am entirely confused by section 22(6). Section 22(1) having set out the provision allowing the request to be made, that is, you would have to be employed for 24 months or it has to be at least 24 months after you have last requested paternity leave.

Subsection (6) says that: "Nothing in this section shall be construed as allowing an employee to refuse to grant any paternity leave at all to an employee who has served for at least six months."

There is no provision in the section at all mandating that the employer grant the leave. It may be requested and it may be granted. I think that the whole section is confusing and does not achieve anything at all except confusion.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister has applied his mind to it and if he can perhaps explain it; if it is possible to explain its purposes and what it seeks to do.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: The intention was to allow for provisions to be made for paternity leave, which an employee might request, but that the granting of such leave should not be mandatory and would be left to the discretion of the employer having satisfied himself of certain circumstances.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for George Town and Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Going beyond the point of whether the section makes any sense or not, if we look at subsection (3), it moves from subsection (1) where subsection (1) speaks to the conditions under which paternity leave may be requested and subsection (3) speaks to when a male person has not completed a 24 month period and it says that he is still entitled to apply and as subsection (1) says, "... the employer may grant ..." and if the employer grants, then it is done on a pro-rata basis in relation to the period of one week therein referred to.

I know this is different from the point of my colleague but when it explains it in that manner then what does subsection (6) do to all of that?

Subsection (6) reads: "Nothing in this section shall be construed as allowing an employer to refuse to grant any adoption leave at all to an employee who has served for at least six months."

I hear the Honourable Second Official Member saying that subsection (6) is basically saying that if a person is worked for six months he is not eligible to request this paternity leave. I am not a legal draftsman and I will never attempt to be however there has got to be a better way of putting it than this.

All I am saying is, subsection (1) speaks to the conditions under which the leave can be applied for, and subsection (2) qualifies that by speaking to how it can be applied for if it is less than the 24 months specified in subsection (1). It has to be easy in the same subsection (3) to say that it can be on a pro-rata basis once it is over six months.

It might be seen to be nit-picking however to the average person reading subsection (6), it throws you completely off and you cannot understand what it said.

As I said, that goes beyond point of whether the whole section makes any sense or not because as my colleague made the point, if the leave is not mandatory and it is just that the employer may do so, perhaps you can argue whether it should be in there at all.

However, if we are going to accept that it can remain here simply to let an employee know what he is eligible to request even though it is not mandatory, if that is the salve on this section, then that is fine. However, subsection (6) must be able to be subsumed somewhere before we get to that so that it is not confusing.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Chairman, may I refer Honourable Members to new clause 22(1) and suggest that if we change on the last line where it says: "... employer may grant two weeks paternity leave..." to "... employer shall grant two weeks paternity leave ..."

No, I have another suggestion. Let us then consider going back to subclause (6): "Nothing in this section shall be construed as allowing an employer to refuse to grant paternity leave at all."

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If the Minister is referring to the confusion that I am talking about in subsection (6), then what I am saying is in subsection (3) where it says: "Where a male employee has not completed the twenty-four month period of employment ..."—

You are dealing with Clause 23 (3): "Where a male employee has not completed the twenty-four month period of employment ..." but has completed at least six months. What you could say is: "Where a male employee has not completed the twenty-four month period of employment referred to in subsection (1), but has completed at least six months of employment, he is still entitled to apply and the employer may grant adoption leave but that leave and pay shall be calculated on a pro rata basis."

Then subsection (6) is just through the window.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, I think that we are dealing with clause 22. However, the same point arises in clause 23.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Yes, Mr. Chairman, because I gather from what the Honourable Minister has said is that he wants the provision in there to cue employees that they may apply for paternity leave.

The problem with subsection (6) is that it unnecessarily conveys the impression that somehow granting the leave is mandatory and that is confusing.

The suggestion from the Leader of the Opposition will cure that and we should delete (6) in section 22. Even though he referred to section 23 the same applies there and when we get there we can sort that out.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Therefore, it will be section 22(2) and 23(3) then 22(6) and 23(6) will fall away.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Yes, Mr. Chairman, that is acceptable. We will delete 22(6) and make the addition, as suggested by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for George Town. It would then read—

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Mr. Chairman, I have a serious problem in understanding—

Hon. Roy Bodden: Subsection (5) can go also.

[Pause]

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Chairman, 23(5) can also be deleted and 22(5).

The Chairman: Would the Honourable Minister of Education please repeat that because it now forms an amendment to the amendment?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Chairman, I was saying that 22(5) and (6) can be deleted.

The Chairman: From clause 22?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Community Services was trying to speak.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Mr. Chairman, I hope that I do not confuse the issue any more. My understanding of what was happening here is that the Government did not want to make it mandatory for the employer to give paternity leave. Nevertheless, the Government is leaving in some mention of its willingness to see paternity leave granted. It is suggesting that a person can apply and the employer should consider, however it is not an obligation on the part of the employer.

To say then that: "Nothing in this section that can be construed as allowing an employer to refuse to grant adoption leave at all to an employee who has served at least six months."

I do not see why that does not add a little more force to the suggestion. I understand that it is creating the impression that it is mandatory but it depends upon who is reading the Law, so it might be a good idea to create that impression. If that was the Government's original intention in the first place and the Government is going to be a little soft on it then it is just—

The Chairman: Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Chairman, with the best of intentions, and I can see that the Honourable Minister's position, but judging from the flogging that I have taken from the Chamber of Commerce with this, I believe it would be wise to remove that.

The Chairman: May I call on the Honourable Minister of Education to please let me have the amended amendment?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Chairman, I was asking clarity if that is the only amendment or were there some other wording changes suggested by the Leader of the Opposition for clause (1) or (2) that needs to be articulated by the Minister to be part of the amended amendment.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, the suggestion was that we include in section 22(1) the reference to "... at least six months ..." which is contained in subclause (6) at the moment.

This is not how he articulated it, however, we would leave out the reference to "... twenty-four months ..." and substitute that to "... six months ..." if we want to give effect to what subclause (6) actually did.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Chairman, I would like to propose an alternative that subclause 22(2) reads, and this would still cover, in my opinion, the point made by the Honourable Member: "Where a male employee has not completed the twenty-four month period of employment referred to in subsection (1), but has served for at least six months, he is still entitled to request, he is still entitled to request ...".

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: That is much neater Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Mr. Chairman, before you move on, may I make an observation?

I think the words: "... employer is entitled to request ..." are a little inconsistent with the spirit and the entire section where it is all discretionary. While working with the same: "... employer is entitled to request ...", I am saying that it should be: "may request".

Amendments to Amendment

Hon. Roy Bodden: I see your point, "may request" and "the employer may grant", you are right:

- (i) in subclause (2) by adding after "subsection (1)", as it appears in the second line, the words: "... but has served for at least six months ...";
- (ii) in subclause (2) by deleting the words "is still entitled to" as they appear in the second line and substituting the word "may";
- (iii) by deleting subclauses (5) and (6).

The Chairman: Honourable Minister of Education does that conclude the amendments to the amendment?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The question now is that the amendments to the amendment stand part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendments as amended passed.

The Chairman: The question now is that the amendment as amended forms part of the clause and the clause forms part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 22 as amended passed.

Clause 23

The Clerk: Clause 23 Paternity leave: adoption

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: By deleting clause 23 and substituting therefor the following:

“23. (1) A male employee who has worked for the same employer for twenty-four months without taking paternity leave or who last took paternity leave (whether on account of adoption or the giving of birth by a female partner) at least twenty-four months previously while working with the same employer and adopts a child is entitled to request, and the employer may grant, paid adoption leave of one calendar week.

“(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), a male employee adopts a child when he assumes the care of the child with a view to adoption by him or by him and his partner jointly.

“(3) Where a male employee has not completed the twenty-four month period of employment referred to in subsection (1) he is still entitled to apply and the employer may grant adoption leave but that leave and pay shall be calculated on a pro-rata basis in relation to the period of one week therein referred to.

“(4) A male employee may request that adoption leave be granted in such a way that it covers periods before and after he assumes care of the child.”

Mr. Chairman, I move that 5 and 6 be deleted.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: In relation to both 23(1) and 23(3), the observation of the Honourable Second Official Member about the need to delete the use of the word “entitled”, this applies in both instances.

The Chairman: Would the Honourable Minister state if he moved an amendment to subclauses (1) and (3); in the penultimate line in subsection (1): “and adopts a child may request” and in (3) the second line: “he may apply”?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, “also” needs to be added in: “Where a male employee has not completed the twenty-four month period of employment referred to in subsection (1), but has served at least six months”—

Clause 27

The Clerk: Clause 27 Rest periods.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: In clause 27 (4) by adding at the end of the subsection, after paragraph (g), the following— "(h) retail business."

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment forms part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I am a bit concerned on subsection (2) of section 27: "An employer shall allow an employee who works an eight-hour shift or longer—

- (a) a rest break of at least fifteen minutes; and
- (b) a meal break for at least thirty minutes,"

I have a concern with the thirty minute break for lunch in this country as it now stands. Because when I go on to subsection (3) and we talk about specified industries then we go to subsection (4) and we talk about hospitality, we are not defining whether these are waitresses or waiters, we are just saying hospitality. Thus, are we saying that managers in the hospitality field are entitled to two 15 minute breaks and a thirty minute meal break, yet the young lady who sits behind the computer in the bank is only allowed a 15 minute break and a thirty minute break for a meal?

I need some clarity.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Chairman, it could well be that if that person is sitting behind a computer where he or she does not have to deal with the public then they can have a meal at their discretion

The Chairman: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Chairman, there are certain businesses in this country that provide no kitchen or eating area for staff and they are not allowed to eat at their desk; that is a fact of life.

I personally would like to see one hour for a meal rather than 30 minutes for a meal for staff employed at businesses in this country.

They must, at some point, have a little time to relax. We were just talking about stress a while ago under the International Labour Organisation. These people need a little more time. If you leave your office, drive to West Bay to pick up a sandwich it takes you one hour.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Honourable Member, before you continue the First Elected Member for George Town was trying to comment on the same point, so you might wish to answer both at the same time.

Honourable First Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Hearing what the Member for North Side has said I want to ask a question because I think we need to get something clear before we decide on what we are talking about here.

If we notice with this section we are talking about a specified industry and we are also talking about basic wage, where it says: “... and the employee shall be paid for each of the fifteen-breaks at his basic wage, but the remuneration for the meal break shall be agreed by contract between the employer and the employee.”

My question is, if we are looking at basic wage, is there a differentiation between a basic wage earner and a salary earner?

The Chairman: Honourable Minister of Education there are two questions, one from the Elected Member for North Side and one from the First Elected Member for George Town.

I think the First Elected Member for George Town wanted to continue his thought.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes Sir. Thank you. I asked that question because it relates to what the Member for North Side is referring to.

If basic wage refers to a different category from a salaried employee then it is in two different lights we would look at it because the person in the bank, I dare say, might be considered a salaried employee so this might not apply to that. I do not know that however we need to make sure of that.

The Chairman: To add to that, it is my understanding that in most businesses and industries, you do not get paid for the lunch break you are only entitled to a lunch but the eight hour day; 8am to 5pm does not include the lunch hour.

I do not know what the answer is. Perhaps the Honourable Minister can comment.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: First of all, this is exactly as it is in the old Law. We transplanted this from the old Law into the new Bill and we only added retail business to the categories. All the other categories were there. It was not problematic in the old Law and I do not see why it would be problematic in this instance.

I draw attention to a point that the Member for North Side made by saying: “... a meal break of at least at 30 minutes ...”, could be longer. It is a minimum of 30 minutes.

When we were doing this I said that we had to be satisfied with just taking incremental bites because I laid a caution not to go too far. I appreciate the concerns of the Opposition and I am grateful for their support because without their support, I do not know what would have happened; I would have gone down to an ignominious defeat.

Therefore, I want to be as obliging and as accommodating as I can however I would like to bear in mind, and I want the Opposition to also bear in mind, that there are persons out there just waiting to see how much we are going to give.

I suppose that the Opposition is deserving of consideration and I have to bear that in mind. At the same time I think that there is only so much we can accomplish this time around and we have to leave something for the next bite.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, the concern is genuine. However, I want to raise another point because I think if we look at it, it is not a contentious issue.

When we speak to salaried employees and you look in another section of the old Law and it speaks to 37.5 hours per week we were talking 8.30am to 5.00pm which is 8.5 hours and there was one hour for lunch—I am being told that did not exist in the old Law, I thought I saw it somewhere and that is how I was figuring the hours. Perhaps that has been changed before it got to this stage. To be fair, and so that the Minister will understand, I do not think it is an issue where we want to put anything in the legislation that is going to create a problem when it comes to the time. Perhaps, it may be best served, given the circumstances, that the Bill and this section, seemingly, now encompasses all types of employees although I would have thought there was a reason for this basic wage being included in it. There is a difference between wage earners and salaried employees and perhaps that need a bit more investigation.

I do not think that we want to push the issue, not being sure whether what we are doing is right or whether we are pushing the button a bit too far so perhaps we could leave that one for the time being.

I am certainly not trying to take away what the Member for North Side was saying, because that is a genuine concern and we do not want that to be the case. However, what we do not want to do is look at that problem then add time on which puts another problem into the whole affair. We appreciate what the Minister is saying.

The Chairman: Honourable Minister is that okay for you?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment forms part of the clause.

- (ii) in subclause (2) (b), by deleting the word “his”.

The Chairman: The Motion is open for debate. If no debate, the question is that the amendment forms part of the clause.

Clause 29

The Clerk: Clause 29 Overtime pay in general.

Hon. Roy Bodden: In clause 29:

(i) by the deletion of subclause (1) and the substitution therefor of the following— “(1) Except as provided in subsections (1a) and (2), an employee who works in excess of his standard work week shall, for those overtime hours, receive overtime pay or, instead of overtime pay, receive time-off with pay at his basic wage, during normal working hours, equivalent to the overtime hours worked.”

(ii) by the insertion after subclause (1) of the following— “(1a) An employer shall negotiate with the relevant trade union or, where there is no trade union, with a category of employees, with a view to agreeing with the employees as a group whether the hours in excess of the standard work week shall be remunerated at regular or other specified higher pay (amounting or not amounting to full overtime pay) provided that—

- (i) contracting out of overtime pay shall not be allowed with respect to time exceeding forty-five hours and any agreement purporting to provide otherwise is void;
- (ii) where the contract of employment includes, and the employee is enjoying, any payment or benefit that is not required under this Law and which is equivalent to the overtime pay to which he would have been entitled, the employee shall not be entitled to overtime pay.”;

(iii) in subclause (4) by deleting in the last line the word “underpaid” and substituting therefor the word “underpayments.”

The Chairman: The question is that the amendments—The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, there still seems to be some residual confusion about this so just to make sure that we all understand it; the cumulative effects of the amendments to sections 28 and 29 are that there will not be any statutorily fixed standard work week; they simply set out parameters on either end, a minimum of 37 and a maximum of 40, but that in certain circumstances an individual who works in excess of his standard work week can agree not to be paid overtime up to a maximum of 45 hours.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education, would you like to comment further?

Hon. Roy Bodden: No, Mr. Chairman, that is indeed as is indicated by the Second Elected Member for George Town.

The Clerk: Clause 31 Form of remuneration.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I know what the Second Elected Member for George Town explained in the amendments to section 29—the amendment to 29 by the insertion after subclause—however I did not hear one of the following after subclause (1)(a)(i) on page 5 of the amendments—“contracting out of overtime pay shall not be allowed with respect to time exceeding forty-four hours...”

Did we change that to forty-five? I just wanted to make sure.

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: May I make an observation in the final line of Clause 78(1) [where it reads] “... other party with an interest in employment related matters”? I wonder what is meant by “interest”.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: In this case, this reference could be made to someone who is speaking for the employee in situations where the employee may not be able to speak or articulate for themselves.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Mr. Chairman, may I suggest that we use an expression that is already in law, which is “sufficient interest” and that will probably restrict someone walking off the cruise ships and walking into a tribunal.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you Second Official Member.

The Chairman: What is the amendment?

Hon. Roy Bodden: The Honourable Second Official Member has suggested that we substitute, and I concur by deleting— “party with an interest in an employment-related matter” and substituting therefor— “party with a sufficient interest”.

(ii) by inserting after subclause (1) the following— “(1a) Any person who is dissatisfied with a decision of the Director to declare a complaint frivolous and vexatious under subsection (1) may appeal to the Grand Court by way of judicial review but only on the basis that the decision was made—

- (a) in bad faith;
- (b) without taking into account relevant considerations;
- (c) taking into account irrelevant considerations;
- (d) on the basis of a view of fact or law that could not reasonably be entertained;
- (e) on any other basis that would render the decision open to judicial review.” ;

(iii) in subclause (4), first line, by deleting— “The Director shall ...” and substituting therefor— “The Director may”;

I am instructed by the Honourable Second Official Member (for which I thank him) that you cannot appeal to the Grand Court by way of judicial review, which is a civil process.

The Chairman: “... may appeal to the Grand Court on the grounds that the decision was made ...”

Hon. Roy Boddén: “... was made ...” (a), (b), (c) and (d) are all fine. When we come to (e)—

The Chairman: Honourable Minister sorry to cut you: “... by way of judicial review but only on the basis that the decision was made ...”,

We could delete that and substitute it for: “... on the grounds that the decision was made ...”

Hon. Roy Boddén: Yes, Sir.

Everything is fine until we come to (e) and it should read: “on any other grounds that would render the decision open to challenge.”

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, I agree with the observation of the Honourable Attorney General. I had missed that provision entirely but are we sure that we want to have an (e)? Are we sure that we want a decision like that of the Director open to any possible challenge?

I would suggest that we limit it to (a), (b), (c) and (d).

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Chairman, with your permission the point is taken.

The Chairman: Honourable Minister, would you please move that motion?

(ii) in subclause (3) by deleting the word “... guilty ...” where it second appears and substituting therefor “... in violation ...”;

The Chairman: Honourable Minister, do you want to add in the words or just “... in violation ...”?

The Chairman: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Can I then ask what happened to (c), on the same notice of amendment?

The Honourable Minister of Education. would you move the amendment (c).

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, but is it not that the Second Official Member is authorised to make those amendments?

Form 1

The Clerk: Form 1 Contract of Employment

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: In Form 1 of the Schedule, by deleting paragraph 17 and substituting therefor the following—

“17. An employee pension plan is in place in accordance with the law for the time being in force relating to pensions, and the details of the plan will be made available by the employer to the employee as soon as reasonably practicable but in any case within 14 days of the signing of this contract by the employee.”

The Chairman: The Motion is open for debate. The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Could the Honourable Minister explain “Overtime pay” on page 74, under Form 1(9). It says: “The employees is a wage-earner ...”

We read that then we come to:“ ... (or) The employee is a salaried employee: Overtime pay at one-half times basic pay is not applicable ...”

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, I believe that because of the many amendments that have been proposed to this Bill, since it has been here, is that the Contract of Employment will have to be substantially and consequentially—

Hon. Roy Bodden: Will have to be changed to reflect—

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: —because it can only contain provisions that are permitted by the Law.

The Chairman: We have requested that the Second Official Member make those consequential changes.

Honourable Minister, would you wish to make any further comments?

Form 9

The Clerk: Form 9      Warning to Employee

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: In Form 9 of the Schedule, by deleting paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 (the latter of which ends immediately before: “Your first warning was issued to you on_____”), and also deleting the three lines before paragraph 1, and substituting therefor the following: “As this is a case of SUBSTANDARD PERFORMANCE for which you are entitled to two warnings, please note the following [delete below what does not apply]:

1. This is your FIRST WARNING regarding this substandard performance and you have _____ [insert a definite and reasonable period] from today during which you are not to repeat this kind of substandard performance.

2. As your substandard performance has not been corrected, this is your SECOND AND FINAL WARNING regarding the same. You have _____ [insert a definite and reasonable period] from today to raise your level of performance. IF YOUR PERFORMANCE DOES NOT IMPROVE WITHIN THE PERIOD SPECIFIED, YOU WILL BE SUMMARILY DISMISSED, FORFEITING ANY UNEARNED BENEFITS AND FORFEITING ANY SEVERANCE PAY, IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE EMPLOYMENT LAW.

Your first warning notice was issued to you on_____ insert date)”.

The Chairman: The Motion is open for debate. The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I wonder if the Minister is leaving this up to the employer to decide a specific time.

That could be dangerous in that an employer could give a week or two weeks and, I believe, that a reasonable time would be two to three months.

We are talking of substandard performance—not only behaviour—which could be attributed to something that the employer has provided as well; coaching and guidance. Thus, if the employer gives an unreasonable time in the interest of getting rid of that employee we could then be facing a situation where we get a complaint from employees who are subjected to this warning.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, I note the concern of the Member for East End. I note also that the current Law has a period of time which, I believe, is a month.

However, for the very reasons he has articulated, it is difficult to fix a particular period because what you need to do to remedy one situation, which is remediable in about two weeks, in another situation might require a couple of months.

The relevant section that would address one of his concerns, which is 57(3), has a provision which says: “Warning for substandard performance shall be accompanied by remedial instruction and training.”

However, an employer will have to bear in mind if the provision says “reasonable period of time”—“reasonable” is a term of art, and it is a matter that the Court is used to considering what is reasonable and what is not reasonable in these circumstances—and, if he is wise, an employer would have to err on the side of caution because they knew that if they intend to rely on this warning as a basis for termination, more likely than not this would be scrutinised by a tribunal or ultimately by the Court.

While I understand the reasonable concern of the elected Member of East End, I do not know how any of us would be able to put in a particular period of time and I think it probably is better that it says either in the substantive Law or in the Form we use the word “reasonable” or “reasonably” or some derivative thereof.

The Chairman: Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Chairman, I could not make that any more acceptable, Sir, that is excellent.

Form 10

The Clerk: Form 10 Registration of Workplace

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

Government of the Cayman Islands financial results for the period 1 July 2003–31 December 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Government of the Cayman Islands financial results for the period 1 July 2003 – 31 December 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The results that have been tabled in this Honourable House today represent the results for the first half of the 2003/2004 fiscal year which ends on the 30 June 2004. I will proceed by giving comments on the schedules that show the half year results. Commencing with schedule 1, page 1 shows that the actual operating receipts to 31 December 2003 were $138.4 million. This can be found around the half way section of the first column of schedule 1. The actual results are stated in the first column of schedule 1 and the budgeted profile is shown in the second column with the figures. The third column of the figures shows the full year of 2003/2004 budgeted estimates. When the $138.4 million of actual operating receipts is compared with a budgeted profile figure of $131 million a favourable variance of $7.4 million existed as at the 31 December, shown in the fourth column under the title Year to Date Variance. That column is abbreviated YTD variance. The last column of schedule 1 shows the variance in percentage terms between the actual and budgeted profile results.

Operating Expenditure

Actual operating expenditure was $138.5 million compared to a budgeted profile of $149.3 million. These figures can be found in the second to last column towards the left section of schedule 1. This has resulted in a favourable variance of $10.8 million, that is, the actual of $138.5 million when taken away from the budgeted profile of $149.3 million.

When the favourable operating receipts and expenditure variances are combined, Government achieved a virtually breakeven position at 31 December as opposed to a profile budgeted deficit of $18.3 million.

Schedule 1 shows an extremely small operating deficit of $63,000. This can be found in the very last item of the first column in schedule 1. I have described that actual result as being a virtually breakeven position given the size of the figures that we are looking at.

On its operating transaction for the half year to 31 December 2003 government achieved actual results that are $18.3 million better than the profile budget. Schedule 1A can be found on pages two through five (four pages). This schedule provides expanded details of the operating receipts figures shown in schedule 1. As an illustration of the connection between the two schedules, schedule 1 shows the operating receipt category of Duty to be $68.5 million at 31 December. This item is found at the very top of schedule 1 and it is the first in the set of figures appearing in the very left column. The overall amount is broken down into underlying categories – that is schedule 1.

We can see how the figure of $68.5 million is arrived at if we take a look at schedule 1A (page 2) at the first set of columns to the left. Inclusive in this amount of $68.5 million we have motor vehicle duties of $4.4 million; gasoline and diesel $9.2 million; alcoholic beverages duty approximately $5 million and the last item shows the value of $5.2 million for other stamp duty. When all of these figures are added up it gives you the overall total of $68.5 million which has been summarised in schedule 1.

Schedule 2 shows the balance sheet activities of the Government. Mr. Speaker, this schedule commences on page 6 shows the balance sheet items as opposed to the operating items which are stated in schedule 1. The separation of operating and balance sheet items accords with proper accounting practice. In the section, Caption Inflows, in schedule 2, the most significant item is actual deposit inflows of $14.3 million to 31 December. Deposits received by Customs Department from importers and deposits held by General Registry are examples of the items that are comprised within the $14.3 million for deposit inflows. Actual advances outflows of $3.8 million to 31 December arise from items such as repayments made to Government in respect of loans made by Government and repayments of overseas medical cost borne by government on behalf of members of the public. In the section captioned Outflows in schedule 2 the familiar categories of capital acquisitions and capital development outlays are shown. These are $3.9 million and $6.7 million respectively as at 31 December 2003.

Equity injections which represent government provision of funding to its statutory authorities and government-owned companies amounted to $3.1 million as at 31 December 2003. Advances outflows which encompass cash outgoings from government on items such as the cost of overseas medical care and the provision of the recoverable funding for the affordable housing project, amounted to $9.5 million as at 31 December. Again, Mr. Speaker, this item can be found in the very first column of schedule 2 towards the middle section of the top quadrant.

Deposit outflows would be in respect of items such as government repayments of customs deposits provided by importers and repayment of deposits provided to general registry were $11.1 million at 31 December 2003. Overall net balance sheet activity as set out in schedule 2 was approximately $5 million less favourable than that budgeted for the half year ended 31 December 2003. This $5 million arises from the actual expenditure or outflows of $16.4 million when compared to the budgeted sum of $11.4 million. Again we are comparing the figures in the first and second columns.

Although I have said that the net balance sheet activity was less favourable than budgeted, this hides a positive aspect. It reflects Government's investment in capital infrastructure and that of its statutory authorities and government-owned companies.

With respect to financing activity, again appearing in schedule 2, towards the bottom section, the Government did not borrow any funds in respect of the half year but instead made debt repayments of $4.5 million. This represents repayments of principal on the Government notes issue that was executed in April 2003. The borrowings will be taking place in the latter part of the fiscal year prior to the 30 June. The Government also paid interest in respect of its note issue but that amount has been properly disclosed as part of the operating results shown by schedule 1. This can be found in the first column of schedule 1.

Schedule 3 is found on page six and summarises the results obtained in schedules 1 and 2. As an illustration of this, the investing activity figure of $16.463 million shown in schedule 3 agrees with the $16.463 million shown in schedule 2. For comparison, they are on the same page. The operating deficit figure in schedule 3 of approximately $63,000 agrees with the same figure appearing on schedule 1, so these can be easily cross referenced.

Schedule 3 indicates that at 31 December 2003 Government's total cash balances were $38.8 million and these were $13.2 million better than budgeted. Mr. Speaker, the breakdown of the $38 million can be found in the first column of schedule 3. This is a netted position which takes into account the restricted balances of $50.2 million and netting the overdraft balance of $11.3 million, giving a net position of $38.8 million. Again, these figures can be found in the first column of schedule 3.

Schedule 4 commences on page seven and provides the detail makeup of the reserve and fund balance on schedule 3. For example, in schedule 3 there is an item Other Reserve Balances as at 31 December which is shown with a value of $3.853 million. This is a total of the following individual's reserves amounts shown by schedule 4. Student loan reserve fund of approximately $0.529 million as at 31 December; the housing guarantee reserve fund of $1.206 million as at 31 December 2003; and the national disaster reserve fund of $2.118 million as at 31 December 2003.

As I said earlier, these three when combined amounts to a value of $3.853 million. Therefore, it can be seen that schedule 4 provides the detailed makeup of the individual fund and reserve account balances and the total of these individual accounts are shown in schedule 3.

Schedule 5 can be found on page eight and indicates Cabinet's decisions made to 31 December 2003 to undertake certain transactions that were not included in the 2003/2004 that was passed by the Legislative Assembly in June 2003. Mr. Speaker, it is praiseworthy that government is disclosing these decisions openly and transparently to this Honourable House.

It is also important to point out that Finance Committee has already approved major items on this schedule, for example, the $7.9 million of transactions associated with equity injection by Government in to Cayman Airways. This item can be found in the second column on page five. The government has undertaken these transactions because they are both laudable and necessary. The building, for example, of a new primary school at Prospect is a good example of such an item that appears on schedule 5. We know that that advance will be reimbursed from the loan proceeds and approval has now been received from the United Kingdom to proceed with that.

Schedule 6 can be found on page nine and provides a detail breakdown of the advances and deposit balances at 31 December 2003. This schedule is self-explanatory. The total balance of advances as at 31 December was $21 million while deposits were $18.8 million. I would invite this Honourable House to take note of the provision that has been made for the writing off of $13.5 million from overseas medical advances. This, in effect, leaves a net balance against aggregate overseas medical advances of approximately $6.2 million. There is an exercise that is now being carried out by the Treasury Department to confirm that this realistically represents amounts that are recoverable.

The $13.5 million has not been broken down as yet against individual accounts but this is a general provision that has been made and it is hoped that when the exercise is completed by the Debt Collection Unit that the total amounts of overseas medical advances to be written off will not exceed this value. The assumption is that the $6.2 million remaining from the previous balance of $19.7 million now being reduced by this $13.5 million will represent an amount that is collectable by the Government and a good balance.

Schedule 6 provided the total of the advances and deposit account balances. We can see that the deposit account balances as at 31 December amounted to approximately $18.8 million.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would like to restate two key highlights from the actual results for the half year to 31 December 2003. On its operating transactions Government achieved actual results that are $18.3 million better than the budgeted profile. Schedule 3 indicates that Government's total cash balances of $38.8 million were $13.2 million better than the profile budget.

It is very good to be tabling the half year support in this Honourable House today and although these are the un-audited figures the Government is keeping a very careful watch on a month by month basis of the financial position. This will continue through the 31 June. I trust that you, Mr. Speaker, and Honourable Members, will find this information to be very useful.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Suspension of Standing Orders 23(7) and (8)

The Speaker: I will ask the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move Standing Order 23(7) and (8) to allow Question Time to be taken at this time, after 11 am.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move to the suspension of Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) in order to take questions after 11 am.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) be suspended in order for to take questions at this time.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Question No. 110

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, but may I bring to your attention that the Minister responsible for Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works is not in the Chamber.

The Speaker: Thank you very much.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Please continue the Elected Member for East End.

No. 110: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Minister responsible for Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works what progress has been made on the creation of a Roads Authority.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Continued progress has been made towards the creation of a National Roads Authority and we are on target to have the Authority set up to operate in the next budget year. Specifically, the process calls for the amendment of the current Roads Law and the submission of a new bill, the National Roads Authority Bill (2004).

The Ministry responsible for Works, in conjunction with the Legislative Drafting Department, is currently finalising both bills for presentation to Cabinet for its approval. Once the bills have Cabinet approval, they will be submitted to this Honourable House for the approval of the Members of the Legislative Assembly.

I might add that if at all possible this proposed Bill would come to the Legislative Assembly during the sittings of this meeting of the House.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Thank you. Are there any supplementaries? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I understand the Minister to say that it will be submitted for approval of the Members of the Legislative Assembly. I did not hear what time he said. Could he repeat that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I mentioned that if at all possible, the drafting can be completed and the approval can be had from the Cabinet that I would wish to bring the Bill forward during one of the sittings of the House during this meeting.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I wonder if the Minister can tell us what will be the complement of this new Roads Authority, that is, how will Public Works as it is now be split to accommodate a new Authority.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, every detail has not been worked out but certainly there is no need to think that the persons who are employed by the Roads section of the Public Works Department will have to leave that compound. It is expected that they would continue to be housed there and if it was necessary to move the management section of it to another location then that would be done.

The whole idea is to create an authority whose only business will be that of looking after development, maintenance and repairs of roads in the Cayman Islands. It will have a specific fund and there will be no longer allocations to the Public Works of a few million dollars that will go to Road that will be more or less in any given year. It will have its own standing and certain specific funds that now go into general revenue will be a sign to the Roads Authority to do only the business of roads.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End, I will allow two more supplementaries after this one.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Maybe that I did not ask that question clear enough. I am trying to ascertain from the Minister what additional costs will be incurred to run this new department by splitting it off from an already established entity. Will we need more staff and will there be more equipment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, it is not envisioned that there should be more costs. Already there are certain staff (engineers) that are employed in the Public Works Department and certain equipment is owned by the Public Works Department which is specifically for road works. These would be the things which by law, then, would be vested or transferred with the Roads Authority. The Public Works Department would no longer deal with the matter of road works. It would be a complete change and responsibility of an Authority which would be funded by specific funds that would go no where else but to that particular Authority.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I guess it would take us quite a while to finalise that one. Nevertheless, my question to the Minister is about the funds he just referred to as to how the Authority will be funded.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Roads Authority will be initially funded via a loan. In fact, that is the subject of one of the Bills on the Order Paper. Up until now there have been certain funds which have been advanced to the Public Works Department which presently deals with the business of roads. However, such funds which have been advanced would be repaid from the loan so that Central Government is not out of those funds.

I think Members know—perhaps the Member asking the question would like to know that there were no specific funds set in this half year's budget ending in June. This has been a concept now for some time that of creating a Roads Authority, which you, Mr. Speaker, would know about when you were Minister prior to assuming the Speaker's Chair. The concept is now in a law firm and it has come about and now it is necessary to find the funding for it.

The other thing that has been done is that certain money, as I mentioned earlier, will be specifically assigned to funding the Roads Authority which presently go into general revenue.

Also, the idea is to apply specific amounts presently paid on gasoline and diesel in the country will be assigned to the Roads Authority as it specifically deals with the fuel for transportation. Hereafter the idea is to create a situation where there is no longer a guesswork. If persons pay 10 cents on gasoline or on diesel they know that it is going specifically to the Road Fund and spent on nothing else, the Road Authority will be able to function. Of course as an Authority it will also have the ability to be able to borrow and so on. The increase in the number of cars, which is about 564 per month if I remember correctly, should generate sufficient money to keep the Authority functioning.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End, I would remind you that this is the last supplementary.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Minister will admit that we have the cart before the horse. He said that the Loan Bill (the subject of this meeting) is to fund the roads and the Roads Authority is not yet established. Monies have been spent and we are borrowing money, on the basis of a Roads Authority, to pay off what has been spent already on roads. Is that then not operating as the Roads Authority?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: First of all Mr. Speaker, I admit nothing. I think the Member is aware that Government has to take certain decisions which are then rectified in the process, within Parliament. The Government knows that it accepts the principle of creating a Roads Authority because it is something of such major demand in the country, and the Government's opinion is the only sensible way to do it. We believe we can count on the support of the Government side and I think that my friend there on the other side, being a person who is technically minded, will see the merit of it and support the Bill when it comes.

Question No. 111

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

No. 111: Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works what is Government's present policy regarding the importation of aggregate.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Government's policy regarding the importation of aggregate is specifically limited to construction quality aggregate only and does not include material such as marl, topsoil or fill. The Government's policy does not apply to aggregate transported to Grand Cayman from Cayman Brac. The procedure for application for the importation of aggregate is as follows:-

1. Before any application for importation of aggregate can be considered, the applicant (proposed importer) must first submit a letter to the Ministry for Works, which is responsible for aggregate importation.
2. New applications are considered based on the applicant's established expertise in the aggregate business and any subsequent approval for importation will be granted on the same basis (general approval) by Cabinet through the Ministry for Works.
3. Details to be provided by the applicant include but are not limited to:-
  - (i) Company background (including its Trade and Business Licence) and purposes for which the aggregate is to be used;
  - (ii) Able demonstration that the company has the capability to conduct such an operation.

4. Once the completed application is received and following the grant of general approval to import aggregate, the Ministry for Works will inform the applicant of general approval by Cabinet (and copy correspondence to the Chief Agricultural and Veterinary Officer (CAVO), Customs, Port Authority), subject to receiving import permit from Department of Agriculture (DoA).
  5. The applicant must then apply to the Department of Agriculture for an import permit. (Department of Agriculture has regulatory authority to protect against importation of pests).
  6. The Department of Agriculture would then arrange to visit the quarry in question and submits a report on the study to the Ministry for Works, copied to applicant (with no further approval from the Ministry being required). The applicant is required to fund inspection visits by the Department of Agriculture as well as costs associated with laboratory tests of the material.
  7. If the Department of Agriculture is satisfied with the aggregate to be imported it will issue an import permit with whatever conditions it deems necessary. Import permits (if issued) will detail the type and amount of material, to be imported; country of origin; specific quarry or mine and other conditions imposed by the Department of Agriculture.
  8. The permits are issued by the Department of Agriculture at a fee of $40 per year for a multiple entry permit and $5 per year for a single entry permit.
- [Mr. Speaker, it seems that the effort would be much more than the cost collected]
9. Imported aggregate must be offloaded at the George Town Port during evening hours only; payment of port fees at $2.00 per short ton and Customs import duty of $2.00 per metric ton.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition and First Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the substantive answer the Minister speaks to the policy that it is specifically limited to construction quality aggregate only and does not include material such as marl, topsoil or fill.

My question to the Minister is: does the Ministry, when considering these applications, bear in mind or have any facts to deal with any demand that is required at the time, or does it matter not how many applications are received? Is it just the usual laissez-faire situation where demand and supply in the private market will dictate the number of applications and the quantity imported?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Ministry is in a position to ask any application or would-be importer to provide information which shows that they are importing that material based on some demand that they will be claiming to supply.

Another thing that is required, which is part of a policy, is that they must show some means of being able to store the aggregate and those types of particulars are required to be given when they apply. If this type of information is not supplied then it can be requested prior to processing the approval through Cabinet.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: For clarity, Mr. Speaker, the Minister in his answer seems to have alluded to the question I am going to ask, but I do not think he specifically stated it. Is the Minister saying that the process of approving each application requires that the applicant supply information regarding the demand and the quantities to justify the importation of the material? Is that being done all the time? If I remember correctly, the Minister said that the Ministry is in a position to ask. Is that policy part of the requirement before the application is dealt with?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: The answer to that is yes, it is part of a policy which is in place that those requirements are requested.

The Speaker: I will allow two more supplementaries.
The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, in answer to earlier questions in this Honourable House, the Leader of Government Business indicated that the CH2M Hill International Report which had been submitted in September 2002 and tabled in this Honourable House had been approved by Cabinet. One of the conclusions and recommendations contained in that report is to the following effect: "Licensing of new aggregate and new fill excavations in Grand Cayman should be based on the demonstrated need for new construction material sources. Developing new mines without regard to island-wide long-range planning of infrastructure based on community needs could lead to incompatible adjacent land uses. Therefore a need based comprehensive development plan should be prepared by the Cayman Islands Government.

Continued licensing of upland mines without regard for Island based development planning or the production of prioritised environmental or cultural resources should not be allowed."

My question to the Honourable Minister is, would he apprise this House of what progress, if any, has been made by the Cayman Islands Government in the preparation of the recommended needs-based comprehensive development plan as this will impact importation of aggregate?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for works. Would the Honourable Minister wish to have the supplementary repeated?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: No, Mr. Speaker.

Cognisance is taken of the Report which the Member referred to in all dealings now relating to aggregate, fill and mining. A study, as such, has not been created to determine the overall demand at this time, but certainly within the scope of policy which is followed it does take into account the question of demand. Persons applying need to show that they are not just saying they want to import material into the Island. There has to be some indication that they have contracts and that they are going to use them in a specific way. It is meeting the recommended criteria in that regard, but at this time no specific study has been set up for such a determination.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, this is the last supplementary.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister will say when the Government intends to proceed with following this recommendation and the preparation of a needs-based development plan.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I would not want to set a particular date, but I can assure this Honourable House that the Government is totally cognisant of the specific need and it is now following guidelines imposed on itself with reflection to the Report the Member has cited.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTER AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Agreed. Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) suspended.

SECOND READINGS

The Public Management and Finance (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of the Public Management and Finance (Amendment) Bill 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been accordingly moved. Does the mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to say thanks to you and this Honourable House for allowing this Bill to be taken at short notice. I would also like to say thanks to Honourable Members for their indulgence in allowing this Bill to be taken.

On Monday there was a briefing made to Honourable Members as to why the proposed amendments were necessary. There were questions raised in relationship to one amending clause of the Bill and this had to deal with the global appropriation of two per cent which was proposed in the Bill which would have been an unallocated sum to be subsequently allocated by Cabinet based on proven needs.

Members were not happy with that provision and as a consequence a proposed committee stage amendment has been circulated. This will allow for advances to continue with the approval of Finance Committee being sought. It is to be taken that the concerns of Honourable Members have been addressed. In the course of my remarks I will comment on the committee stage amendments as they affect the relevant provisions of the Bill itself.

The purpose of the amending Bill is to make a small number of amendments to the Public Management and Finance Law (2003 Revision). These amendments are designed to address each specific set of issues. Four of these require substantive changes to the principal Law. The other four are more in nature of tidying up of terminology, definitions and transitional arrangements, and as such, have little substantive effect.

For the benefit of Honourable Members let me summarise the substantive changes. The first set of changes amends the Principles of Responsible Financial Management and involves the introduction of the term “core government”. This is defined in the Amendment Bill and is essentially the definition of Government that has traditionally been used for budgeting and reporting. It includes the Legislative Assembly, Cabinet, Ministries and Portfolios.

The entire public sector on the other hand, comprises: core government, statutory authorities and government companies. The key substantive change is to amend the Principles of Responsible Financial Management so that they focus on the core government rather than the entire public sector as at present. This is to reflect the fact that while the Cabinet has direct control over the core government it only has indirect control over statutory authorities and government companies.

At the time the original piece of legislation was brought to this Honourable House, the view was taken that it would be quite laudable to develop a budget on the basis of the entire public sector, which would mean combining the budgetary needs of Central Government with the budgets as prepared by the statutory authorities. As we continue the piece of legislation, and given the fact that it will be fully implemented 1 July 2004, experience has demonstrated that it would be impracticable to move ahead on this track.

Mr. Speaker, you were a Minister of Cabinet, and you will recognise that the Cabinet of the country has responsibility for the ambit of expenditure that will be embraced within Ministries and Portfolios, the Judiciary and the Legislative Assembly. However, the activities of statutory authorities, such as the Port Authority, Civil Aviation Authority and Water Authority are governed by independent boards. These boards perform their duties admirably but it would be very difficult to combine the activities that are being dealt with on a day-to-day basis with central Government and have meaning results at the end. It would not be possible to achieve anything meaningful from that exercise.

Consequently, our focus will be on core government, which will be as before. The only thing is that we are moving to an accrual concept with the new piece of legislation and the budgetary process commencing on 1 July 2004. Before, when we looked in terms of nominal numbers being the cost of a civil servant salary, what will now be taken into account is the value of the space – the buildings and other things being used by way of fixed assets. Values will be placed on that by way of depreciation so at the end of the day it will not only be the cost of salaries and other consumables but also the using up of fixed assets. This takes us to the position of getting a truer value of the cost of providing the overall services by the Government of the country. This information fits in with the spirit of transparency, accords with sound accounting principles, and at the end of the day provides meaningful and transparent information to this Honourable House.

The amendments relating to this set of changes includes adding the definition of “core government” and the amending section 14 of the Law, which contains the principles. A number of additional amendments consequential to these changes are also to be found in the Bill before this Honourable House. These include amending the sections relating to government budgeting and reporting so that these requirements include the core government as well as the entire public sector.

As I mentioned earlier, although the focus will be on core government, it will still be useful to provide information on the budgets of the various statutory authorities. An example that I would like to use is if the Water Authority is going to undertake the laying of pipes this will mean having to create trenches within three or four miles of road. At the end of the day, in the Authority’s Budget, it will have to be shown where provision has been made for the roads to be rehabilitated or Central Government will have to undertake that expenditure. If Central Government's budget cannot embrace that expenditure, then dialogue will have to take place with the Water Authority as to the timing in terms of the infrastructural work.

It will make sense to have the budget of core government together with the information on statutory authorities because at the end of the day it will also allow for the rolling up of the figures so that value can be placed in terms of the entire global asset structure of Government which would include the statutory authorities combined with that of core government. So the information will be there but the budgetary focus will be on core government.

This also involves amending the use of the term "Government" to ensure consistent usage between the terms "Governor in Cabinet," "core government," "entire public sector," and the legal entity, "The Cayman Islands Government." The terms "core government" and "entire public sector" are defined in either the Bill or the principal Law. However, the term "government" is defined only in the Interpretation Law and the committee stage amendments insert a definition for Government into the Bill to improve clarity and understanding.

In this regard I will have to say thanks for the advice you gave on this matter because when the legislation is through it will be a self-contained piece of legislation. And other persons looking on will be able to see all of the relevant terms defined within the legislation itself, rather than having to cross-reference the other pieces of legislation that they may not be aware of.

The Bill also uses the term "public sector" in an amendment to the definition of "generally accepted accounting practice." This term is used in an accounting standard setting context to distinguish public sector from private sector accounting. To avoid any confusion, the committee stage amendments substitute the term "public sector" for its common international meaning, namely, national government; regional government; local government; and related governmental entities such as agencies, boards, commissions and enterprises.

The second set of changes also amends the Principles of Responsible Financial Management. These changes are to reflect the agreement recently reached with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office over the borrowing powers of the Cayman Islands Government. The amendments involve redefining the debt servicing and cash reserve ratios contained in section 14(3) of the Public Management and Finance Law so that they reflect the definitions required by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The new definitions, while technically complex, are still broadly similar to the original definitions.

Another amendment involves the introduction of a new debt ratio; this ratio measures the relationship between the level of government debt and its operating revenue. The Bill establishes a maximum level of 80 per cent. That is aggregate public debt should be 80 per cent of revenue.

Thirdly this set of changes involves an amendment to the transitional provision in section 82 of the principal Law. It specifies the monetary amount of cash reserves that must be achieved each year between now and 30 June 2009.

The levels are for the fiscal year 2004/5 the end of year should reflect cash reserves to a value of 30 days.

For the fiscal year 2005/6—cash—the equivalence within the reserves, to a value of forty-five days.

For the fiscal year 2006/7 sixty days.

For the fiscal year 2007/8 seventy-five days.

For the fiscal year 2008/9 to a value of ninety days of expenditure.

This is what the value should be of reserves or cash on hand that will form the aggregate cash reserves.

The final amendment in this set of changes involves amending section 34 of the principle Law. This section establishes the authority of the Financial Secretary to borrow on behalf of Government. The amendment inserts a requirement to obtain the approval of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office before any borrowing is undertaken if any of the debt servicing, that is, net debt or cash reserves, is in breach. If the ratios are being complied with, the Government may borrow without reference to the United Kingdom (UK).

This arrangement is a significant improvement on the current arrangements whereby UK's permission must be sought each and every time the Government wishes to borrow.

The third set of substantive changes involves establishing a mechanism to replace the advanced warrant system used under the Public Management, Public Finance and Audit Law. This amendment is necessary as there is no mechanism under the existing Public Management and Finance Law for incurring expenditure not included in the Budget.

In preparing this amendment the Government has been very aware that it is Parliament's constitutional right to authorise expenditure in advance of that expenditure being incurred. The Legislative Assembly does this by way of the appropriation process. However, unplanned or unforeseen events do occur during a financial year and sometimes these require new or additional expenditure not allowed for in the appropriations. As a practical matter, a mechanism is needed to allow the Government to respond to these events while still ensuring that the authority of the Legislative Assembly is maintained.

The mechanism for this is provided in a new section 12A to be inserted in the principal Law.

The committee stage amendment provides a new section 12A from that included in the Green Bill.

I would like to explain the revised section.

The new section 12A allows the Governor in Cabinet to authorise executive expenses, or executive capital expenditures, for which there is no appropriation. However, before incurring any such expense, Cabinet must first obtain the approval of the Finance Committee. This is to ensure that Finance Committee is approving expenditure before, not after, it is incurred.

Approval by Finance Committee is not the same as appropriation however. So section 12A also requires the Government to include any authorised expenditure in the supplementary appropriation bill for the year under review.

The fourth, and final set of substantive changes, relates to the office of complaints commissioner. Both the Constitution and the Complaints Commissioner's Law provide for the independence of the Complaints Commissioner. Accordingly, it is necessary to amend the Public Management and Finance Law to ensure that the performance and financial accountability arrangement for the commissioner reflect this independence from the Executive Branch of Government.

Internationally, it is common practice for complaints commissioners to be part of the legislative branch and to be directly accountable to the legislature. The amendment Bill gives effect to this arrangement by establishing an office of Complaints Commissioner and making him the Chief Officer. It then makes the Commissioner accountable to a committee of the Legislative Assembly established by the Assembly to oversee the performance of the office. The Bill provides that if no such committee exists, the accountability line will be to the Honourable Speaker of the House.

The Amendment Bill inserts a new section 44(a) into the Public Management and Finance Law. This section specifies the budgeting, reporting and accountability arrangements for the office of Complaints Commissioner. The new section mirrors the existing arrangement for the audit office. The Audit Office is the other Government organisation that is accountable directly to the Legislative Assembly.

Those are the four sets of substantive amendments. The other four sets of amendments while numerous in number are tidying up amendments to bring the Law into line with current practice and terminology. The amendments include changes to section 54 of the principal Law to clarify the structure and operation of the executive bank account and the operation of the centralised cash management system. These are not substantive changes but rather drafting changes to make the wording better reflect the respective roles of the Treasury, ministries or portfolios.

The second set of tidying up changes involves replacing the term "performance agreement" with the term "annual budget statement" and replacing the term: "Portfolio of Finance and Economic Development" with the name "Portfolio of Finance and Economics". These amendments which occur throughout the principal Law are to reflect current usage.

Also included in this set of changes are amendments to the definition of Chief Officer for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs and the Portfolio of Finance and Economics. These amendments are to provide common definitions for all three portfolios. These are the Legal Portfolio, the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs and the Portfolio of Finance and Economics.

The third tidy up change is to amend section 35 of the principle law. This section deals with the power to make regulations.

The change is to require regulations to be issued by the Governor in Council on the advice of the Financial Secretary rather than the Financial Secretary acting alone. This amendment is to reflect normal practice.

The final set of changes involve repealing the commencement provision in section 2 subsection (3) of the principal Law and also transitional provisions in section 83(2),(3) and (4). Implementation of the financial management reform is now more advanced and these provisions are no longer necessary.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Member give an indication of how much time he thinks he needs to complete his presentation.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In less than one minute.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, in conclusion I would like to advise Honourable Members that while these amendments are necessary to reflect various changes in circumstances that have occurred over recent months, they do not fundamentally change the intent or the operation of the Public Management and Finance Law. The Financial Management Initiative continues to be implemented in accordance with the implementation strategy and I look forward to being able to bring the first ever accrual base budget to this Honourable House within a few months time.

I would like to say thanks to you and Honourable Members for allowing me to present the proposed amending bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Honourable Members I propose to take the luncheon break at this time but ask you to please come back by 1.30 pm. It is unusual that we return in such a short period but due to certain major items on the agenda and the programmes of certain Ministers it is being requested that we take a short suspension today.

So you will have about 20 minutes for lunch but I ask you to cooperate.

Proceedings suspended at 1.10 pm*Proceedings resumed at 2.48 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Honourable Members, as is usual, we will be asking in Committee that the Honourable Second Official Member correct any minor errors and so forth which will include numbering of Bills. We would not concern ourselves with those issues at this point.

The Honourable Third Official Member has spoken to the Bill before us. Does any other Member wish to speak on this?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition and First Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As the Honourable Third Official Member has explained, this is one that is being done speedily. However, I think we can appreciate the need to get this by us as he explained.

In his introduction of the Bill, he spoke to the main purposes of the Bill and about the first four main reasons for bringing these amendments. Most of the other amendments are a result of what has been expressed in the first four reasons.

At the beginning when we tried to go through this Bill—in the short time allotted—I noticed very early that there was a myriad of instances where the term “performance agreement” is being replaced in the Bill by the term “annual budget statement.” For a moment we wondered whether this was a distinct paradigm shift in the entire thought process behind the Public Management and Finance Law. As usual, the technical persons were able to explain this. We understand that the name-change to “annual budget statement” reflects what is called common usage, and performance agreements are not thrown through the window as we feared. Rather, performance agreements will be addressed in the new Personnel Law, which, I am told as we speak, is being made ready to bring to this Honourable Legislative Assembly. I mentioned that because the performance agreements, in our view, will be integral to the operations of the Public Management and Finance Law if it is to function as intended. I mentioned it for the benefit of all of us so that we do not go down that road and wonder about it. I am grateful for the information because it shows a different perspective from what we had first. It changes the tone of the debate. If we believed that that is what the case was going to be, then we were going to have great difficulty in supporting the Bill.

The Honourable Third Official Member explained very clearly from the onset the general purposes of these amendments so I need not repeat those reasons. The amending Bill has some areas with which we have some concerns and those concerns are at different levels. I will take a few minutes to express those concerns and in his winding up the Honourable Third Official Member will be able to explain those concerns away—or perhaps if there are amendments which are required then we might be able to deal with them altogether. On page six of the amending Bill it speaks to d) in the definition of the term “chief officer”

- (i) in paragraph (b)(i) by repealing the words “the Deputy Chief Secretary” and substituting the word “such public officer in the Portfolio as may be designated by the Governor”;

I remember when the Bill was first brought there was lengthy discussion with the former First Official Member regarding who should be the Chief Officer for the Portfolio of Legal Affairs. During those lengthy discussions, in our view, the change from what was supposed to happen where the head of each of the three official portfolios was not going to be the Chief Officer – to us it did not seem that the arguments were justified that the Honourable First Official Member at that time or any time should have been the Chief Officer for the Portfolio of Legal Affairs.

When we had the briefing on Monday, the Honourable Third Official Member, in this particular instance, explained for his portfolio (Finance and Economics) why the designation needs to be in the Law, giving allowance for more than one person to be able to be Chief Officer for certain aspects of the Portfolio. I will not go into those because that is not the point I wish to make.

Page six of the Bill that I just read says: “ ... by repealing the words “the Deputy Chief Secretary” and substituting the word “such public officer in the Portfolio as may be designated by the Governor”;”

I want all of us to think of this; I do not believe that it should conform in this manner because it sounds better for three of them to be the same. If there is no special reason why this should be the case then why change it? Is it because one or more might stick out like a sore thumb? The point with that is that we understand what the Honourable Third Official Member has stated as a reason which justifies in the instance of his Portfolio, but we do not see any other reasoning for the other portfolios. There may be, but we do not know where there is a worry, remembering from the very beginning when we were developing Financial Management Initiative (FMI), when we were moving forward with the Public Management and Finance Law. There were many versions of it before we finally got it to and through the Legislative Assembly. It was the expressed thought at the time by the majority of individuals including the technical and advisory staff that there may well have been a conflict of interest allowing the Chief Officer to be the individual in charge of the portfolios.

There is a similar position being taken when it comes to the Ministries. There is an elected Member in charge—the Chief Officer is not that individual—simply to ensure that there is no conflict of interests. The individuals in charge of the Ministries are directing policy. In the chain of command we then have the permanent secretaries with various departments beneath them. The permanent secretary is then the Chief Officer who is going to ensure via the various departments that the policies are implemented, but the permanent secretaries usually hold the purse strings.

I do not bring the argument that there may not be valid reasons but I flag it up because what I do not want to hear is that there is a certain Ministry that has a certain situation so the Minister needs to be Chief Officer. I am not suggesting that is the intention. I am only saying that from the very beginning the argument with the then First Official Member was about that same potential conflict of interest. It does not change anywhere you go, whether you speak to the portfolios or ministries. If there is a specific instance that justifies the case, to me that may well be something that we can understand. However, we cannot allow a precedent which would give room for anyone to be thinking along those lines: that is the point that we wish to make. So let it go on record that it is something that we recognise and we certainly want to ensure that it does not happen; that is the whole point about this specific amendment.

We do not want to take the position that if this is in this form then we are not going to support the Bill, because we recognise the intention. We recognise the practicality of the vast majority of the amendments. So we do not want to seem that we are not supporting it, for one or two reasons. However, I am with certainty that it behoves the Government to justify why they would wish for it to remain in this form. Or, maybe it evokes the thought-process on their part, why they might wish to amend before the vote is taken – that is the purpose of discussing it.

When we flip the page it goes on to speak about the Portfolio of Finance and Economics as I just explained. When we move down—this is something that is not so easy for us to discuss because we are not sure how the office of the Complaints Commissioner is going to be set up—there is a piece of legislation, but it is not specific as to exactly paint the picture about the set-up of that office. We are moving from one situation but we go into the Complaints Commissioner and it says: “... in the case of the Office of the Complaints Commissioner, the Complaints Commissioner; ...” Thus we are saying that the portfolios must have an individual who is designated by the Governor, but the office of the Complaints Commissioner it must be the Complaints Commissioner.

I say that just to make the point. It must not just be said, it must be explained why it is so. We move on, on the same page to the definition of global expense appropriation.

The Honourable Third Official Member spoke to that and in the amending version of the Bill;

“‘global executive expense appropriation’ means an appropriation for executive expenses granted in accordance with section 12A which does not relate to a particular ...” output group, category or transfer of payment or category of other executive expenses.

When we had the briefing on Monday, this global executive expense appropriation was discussed at length. Concern was raised regarding what we call the rubber-stamping exercise and one of the main purposes of FMI and one of the main thrusts of this legislation which exists now (the Public Management and Finance Law) is accountability. It speaks to accountability through every vein of its purpose and objectives; it addresses efficiency but walking parallel with that efficiency is accountability from bottom up and from top down. Our concern is simply that it should not be in legislation that any amounts are able to be appropriated in a generic fashion, and the executive branch of Government able to spend that amount without having to first of all go through Finance Committee: we all know the purpose of Finance Committee. In our view (and it was supported by the Deputy Leader when we spoke about it in that meeting) it was going to be a self defeating exercise to allow it to be done in this manner.

Now, one might say, “Why discuss this because we have a committee stage amendment before us which will rectify it?” The fact of the matter is, that this proves that when it comes to this piece of legislation, one has to have a clear grasp and understanding of the whole intent of the legislation. One has to be very careful with any type of amendment to this legislation that it does not encroach on that purpose and intent. The amendment which calls for the specific appropriations to be approved by Finance Committee before the Executive Branch can actually take action is appropriate.

Those of us who have been here for any length of time will remember, that from forever—long since I have been here—that there was always a problem with Finance Committee (especially at year end) having to rubber stamp all kinds of expenditure not only the amount, but the varying classifications of the expenditure. The money was spent already; whatever was being done was done already, and then it was brought to Finance Committee at year end. A former minister used to call it “a clean up exercise”. after all was said and done Finance Committee would rubber stamp it; we cannot have that. If we are going to have that at any level we might as well throw this through the window and go back to how we were and I am certain no one wants to do that. So the amendment rectifies the situation from the point of view of how the monies can be spent.

Some of us have a question as to whether a budget should have this type of appropriation in it. I have to admit that there are mixed views on a personal level about that. There are some of us who do not believe that we should have this type of appropriation at all, but there is another view that from a practical standpoint, experience has taught us that there will be situations which arise which justify this thought and thus having it in the legislation.

From an opposition standpoint, if you are purely and selfishly opposition, you would not want it in the legislation; you would not want a budget to be prepared like that because at the end of the day when these types of expenditures come around, you can beat the Government when they come for supplementary expenditure because you say that they should have thought about that when they were preparing their budget.

As you well know, Mr. Speaker, any opposition may become a government and any opposition with any type of intentions, whatsoever, would not only have the desire but the aim to be the Government. So one has to look at it from a practical standpoint. From that, understanding the working of the Government, regardless of who is the Government, we can appreciate the context in which the amendment is being proposed. Suffice it to say, the way the committee stage amendment is being proposed for this executive appropriation it is something that we can live with since there is a safeguard of Finance Committee having to agree to the appropriation.

The other problem that I have which is also for me, personally—the Honourable Third Official Member will remember hearing this from me over and over and I have not changed my view so I will have to express it again—is on page 11 of the amending Bill in the penultimate paragraph—“(e) cash reserves should be maintained at a level no less than the estimated executive expenses (measured using generally accepted accounting practice) for the following ninety days, where, for the purposes of this principle, cash reserves are defined as core government cash and cash equivalents, marketable securities and deposits, and other liquid assets, ...”

It seems they could not resist this one and I understand why they cannot resist it: “... including any amounts held for restricted funds and reserves purposes;”

In days gone by when we argued the point . . . I remember the Honourable Third Official Member stating that reserve funds, in case of an emergency, would have to be used to do whatever you had to do no matter what the funds were there for. Mr. Speaker, if that is the case then you only need one general reserve. What is the sense of having, by legislation, dedicated restricted funds for specific purposes? If you are going to be able to put in to a big pool under any given circumstance and say that it can be used when you are adding up the numbers of the reserves—

If I tell you that I have $100,000 in the bank you are going to believe. If I say no more to you that I have $100,000 in the bank that I can draw and use if I need it . . . In many instances individuals may have more than that in the bank, but the person who only has $6,000 or $7,000 in the bank has access to more cash than they do because the money that is in their name in the bank is tied up as collateral; hypothecated to some loan and there is nothing in the world they can say to the bank about needing to have that money released, because the bank is holding it as security. One might say that is not a salient point because the analogy is different. I know that the Honourable Third Official Member will justify the argument when he speaks. However, Mr. Speaker, I still contend that if you have restricted funds you should not treat it and calculate it as part of your reserves when calculating the purpose of the ninety days that are set into this Law—that if there were some catastrophe, internationally accepted norms are that the country should aim to have ninety days spending money in general reserves.

While those restricted funds may not be quite like funds hypothecated at a bank the fact of the matter is that those funds are dedicated to specific uses. And if you are going to show on the books that these funds are here for this use you cannot then, in my view, show that it is there for another use because it is only one set of funds. If you include those amounts as part and parcel of your ninety-day reserve fund then put them all together and call it a reserve fund. If you are going to have them for specific dedicated purposes then separate them.

I believe my thought-process is rational and I believe that I can listen, but unless the Honourable Third Official Member brings a new argument to me everyone that I have heard before did not convince me. So, I am not changing my mind about that. I am sure he has heard me bring the same argument before so perhaps this is one we will have to agree to disagree on. Mr. Speaker, we maintain that this should not be the case; it should not be put in legislation that there is that leeway. It does not matter who the government is for these purposes. It is just the thought of it being done in this manner. That is one of those that we will have to live with. It is not new but there is perhaps time enough for us to see a way to deal with it.

When we look at the bottom of page 14 of the amending Bill I believe this one is an oversight, but in my view, it needs to be addressed and corrected. It speaks to the amendment of section 39, powers of Chief Officer of a ministry or portfolio— “25. The principal Law is amended in section 39(3) as follows – (a) in paragraph (d) by repealing the word “acquire” and substituting the words “subject to regulations made by the Financial Secretary under section 35 . . . ”.

There is another amendment which the Honourable Third Official Member spoke to which says that it should read, “Subject to regulations made by the Governor in Cabinet on the advice of the Financial Secretary” because these new amendments do not allow the Financial Secretary to make regulations anymore. It says that the Governor in Cabinet makes the regulations on the advice of the Financial Secretary so it is pure terminology. However, the way that it reads now still says that the Financial Secretary can make regulations. I see the legal people nodding so I do not have to expound on that for long. I wish I had seen the nods for the dedicated funds but it does not seem much of a chance for that.

This is part of the legislation although it strays to the Complaints Commissioner and this one is more of a question than a position.

On page 15, section 28 says: “28. The principal Law is amended by inserting after section 44 the following section - 44A. (1) The Complaints Commissioner shall be the Chief Officer of the Office of the Complaints Commissioner and shall be accountable to the Legislative Assembly for the performance of the Office of the Complaints Commissioner.”

I spoke about that a little earlier; I am not raising the point now as to whether the Complaints Commissioner should be the Chief Officer for his office. It is when we move down to subsection 2(a)— “(2) Unless the context otherwise requires, Part IV shall apply in respect of the Office of the Complaints Commissioner as if-

(a) every Governor in Cabinet or a minister were a reference to the committee of the Legislative Assembly responsible for overseeing the performance of the Office of the Complaints Commissioner, or if no such committee exists, the Speaker;”

With time constraints we did not have opportunity to examine the other legislation which speaks to the Office of Complaints Commissioner. We would like to find out regarding this committee. Obviously the legislation would allow for such a committee to exist if it is being referred to in this amending legislation. Perhaps the Honourable Third Official Member may not be the person qualified to address this matter because there are other pieces of legislation which this piece of legislation itself will affect. There is a question regarding this Committee when it comes to a Complaints Commissioner who that Complaints Commissioner falls directly under. There is a similar thought process as to that of the Auditor General who is under the Legislative Assembly and retains certain autonomy from the executive branch of Government. Obviously this would be the same thought, but the Committee is strange. Perhaps one might say that I was here when the legislation was passed so I should know, but I do not; I really have not had the chance to examine it. I want to see some clarity with regards to this Committee that might be a Legislative Assembly committee for the oversight of the office of the Complaints Commissioner.

There is also a section which refers to government companies and the Auditor General. The section in this amending Bill after the definition of government companies speaks to a certain time line and a certain method of auditing for these government companies. It is telling me that the Government's companies such as Cayman Airways, Cayman Turtle Farm and other institutions of that nature must be audited by the Auditor General's Office. I do not know if that section of the Law is one of the sections that is being enforced now or will come into force in July. The point that I want to make about that is if this has to come into force in July then the size of these audits, without having being exhaustive in my thought-process, is going to add noticeably to the work load of the Auditor General's office. I hope that we are bearing all of that in mind in preparing that Office for whatever that work load is. I am not able to quantify it and I am not able to determine the number of extra bodies, if any. However, I want to make sure that we are not caught by surprise with the fact that the Law is going to call from 1 July for all of these government companies to be audited by the Auditor General's Office. I say that bearing in mind that just about every budget that I have ever witnessed the Auditor General's Office has been screaming because of lack of staff, space and resources. When things were not done on time those were always the reasons given.

Those are some observations that the Opposition has put together and that we thought were worthy of mention, in the short time that we have had to look at this Bill.

It is also clear to us that the original piece of legislation, with regards to those sections which would come into force 1 July, would certainly put the Government in almost an untenable circumstance to be able to bring to this Honourable Legislative Assembly a balanced budget because of simple practical reasons.

When all of the other public sector companies and statutory authorities would have been taken into consideration with regards to the Budget, when it came to the 10 per cent internationally accepted limit, for instance, with regards to borrowings and repayments — perhaps it may not have negatively affected the balancing of the Budget with the appearance of Government's liabilities and assets. I am speaking generally because I have not really gone into the specific sections of the Law to be able to quote them and use illustrations to make the point. I simply say what I am saying so that the Government understands that we understand that there were certain shifts that physically had to be made. And from a practical standpoint we were not going to be able to move through with the legislation the way it was and implement those sections 1 July and be able to function properly.

So far as where the United Kingdom comes into the play, in the presentation that was given to us on Monday—while we do not know exactly what the borrowing arrangements are that are agreed upon—we know generally that some of the terms agreed upon may be considered onerous. At least it seems like what is agreed upon, given the circumstances that obtain now we are able to function within those parameters.

I see in the proposed amending legislation that where there is a breach of any of these agreed guidelines—I think; I do not have that at the tip of my finger—when it comes to reporting to the Legislative Assembly on what the process is. The fact that there are borrowing arrangements it is good to have it in the legislation. You would not want to be contravening the guidelines and not have some check and balance in place to make you want to not contravene those guidelines and have continuous problems with London with regards to what has been agreed on. We agree that should be in the legislation. If that is the agreement, legislation or not, that is the agreement so the legislation should reflect that.

We are hopeful that the Honourable Third Official Member will be able to address the points that we have raised. Again we wish to support the Bill because we understand its intention. However, we would certainly like for the matters that we raised to be cleared up as best as possible so that we can move forward.

We, on this side, look forward to full implementation of this Public Finance and Management Law. We know that there was a time line for implementation in stages. In our opinion it will be for a smoother, well-oiled, and well-run government machinery once we get these amendments through and practice the legislation, understanding that total implementation was not something that could all be done at one time. We accept that.

As we move forward we do see some light at the end of the tunnel. And for all of the disagreements that we have with the Honourable Third Official Member sometimes, I have to say that it is fair comment that he has been very studious and dedicated in his approach. He need not think that those kind words mean that he is off the hook, but as they say “give the devil his due”. That is a pun on words. To call the Honourable Third Official Member “devil” would be terrible because he certainly is not that.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I have listened carefully to the observations of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition speaking on behalf of the Opposition Back Benchers and I have to say thanks for the support that has been indicated in respect of the proposed amending Bill.

The Honourable Member raised the question in regards to the definition of Chief Officer, as set out in item (d) on page six of the amending Bill as to whether the position will obtain in respect of the Honourable Attorney General's Office. And the Financial Secretary's Office should also be extended in respect to the Chief Secretary's Office. In this regard I would like to recommend that there should be commonality across the board and I will give the reason.

Unlike other permanent secretaries, the Deputy Chief Secretary and the Deputy Financial Secretary are often called upon to act as members of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly. However, that is not the main point why there should be commonality in terms of creating uniformity in this provision.

I gave an example as it related to the Portfolio of Finance and Economics where the Financial Secretary has direct oversight of the secretariat. In addition to that, and like the Office of the Chief Secretary, the Office of the Financial Secretary is located on the fourth floor of the Government Administration Building. I have a staff complement in my office and if it means that every decision has to be taken in respect of any given expenditure regarding output (which means that I will have to consult with the Deputy Financial Secretary, for example, in instances dealing with the international initiatives)—

I am a part of the Strategic Management Team where we meet on a weekly basis. We are looking in terms of following through with the European Union (EU) commitment that has been given where agreements will have to be entered into. We are looking at the implications of that.

In this instance I could say to the Deputy Financial Secretary, who is a Chief Officer, that the outputs you are to deliver are agreements with the United Kingdom, Germany, France, United States, and Canada. If, for example, I brought in the United States and Canada which are not members of the EU block, (but other countries that are there) it is not a responsibility for the Financial Secretary to delegate to anyone. Because at the end of the day it would mean, not only an agreement to provide cooperation in fiscal matters or under the terms of the EU Tax Savings Directive, but it would also mean sitting down as the Cayman Islands obtain the optimum reciprocal benefits that should flow here. The only way I have to make that point, just as you went through an amendment—

If you will permit, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Please continue.

I ask all Honourable Members to please be quiet and allow the Honourable Third Official Member to continue with his reply.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The point is that I will have to sit down as part of the Strategic Management Team, being fully satisfied and using my best judgment so that the Cayman Islands will enjoy the benefits that can be extended to us. This will accrue something positive to these Islands and to make sure that we have enhancement of the goods, services and products that are being marketed within our financial industry. For instance, I would have to be fully satisfied that if we are going to be entering into an agreement with Germany there is an explicit and full undertaking that they will not be keeping us on any domestic black list that they have in place; that we will have access to their financial services market or to get the best deal out of the arrangement. So, at the end of the day if we are going to compromise our position in terms of our confidentiality provision, or sharing of information, there has to be a quid pro quo. If we are giving up something, those countries must, in turn, be giving us something so that we find ourselves not being disadvantaged.

I cannot talk about the specifics of the office of the Honourable Chief Secretary, but it is located on the fourth floor of the Government Administration Building. Does it mean that if he wants to buy a pencil he will have to call the Deputy Chief Secretary's office for an invoice and say "Let me have this?" I know that I might be taking it to the extreme but I am sure there are instances in his portfolio where it becomes necessary for him to take decisions on certain matters. He has his staff working with him and it does not necessarily mean that the bulk of the budget will be pulled from under the control of the designated Chief Officer, who is the Deputy Chief Secretary. But, at least, by agreement between both of them specific provisions can be made whereby there are certain aspects over which the Chief Secretary has control. One thing is that neither the Honourable Chief Secretary nor the Honourable Financial Secretary can appoint themselves as Chief Officers. On page six of the marked up Bill—

I invite Honourable Members to take note of this as I read:

"Public Officer means any person employed in the civil service but does not include any member of the Governor in Cabinet or Legislative Assembly."

So I can appoint an officer in my office such as the Senior Assistant Secretary who is assisting me in respect of the international initiatives. The Honourable Chief Secretary has senior staff in his office that often times he can instruct in terms of specific outputs to be acquired in respect of his office. In this regard it would be useful, since this provision currently exists, in respect of the Legal Portfolio that it should run uniformly across the board. If the Honourable Chief Secretary finds that it is not necessary for such to be the case, it will mean that the entire budget can be structured in such a way where the Deputy Chief Secretary can have responsibility for all funds that are voted. It makes good sense if there is a need because at the end of the day it is not a question of power play, it is a question of who best can give direction in respect of the output.

What we are attempting to do is to optimise returns and at the end of the day we will have to look at the benefits that are flowing. These benefits are not coming to us individually; they are coming to us in terms of using our best judgments as managers for the greater interest of the Cayman Islands. It is not the Honourable Chief Secretary in his capacity or the Finanacial Secretary; it is a question of what decision will best guide the process.

Turning to the Complaints Commissioner, I do realise that it is a valid observation by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. However, unlike the Chief Secretary, Financial Secretary, or the Attorney General, the Complaints Commissioner will not be a member of Cabinet or the Legislative Assembly. So the conflict of interest in terms of this person being designated as a Chief Officer would not pose much of a problem. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition, however, further went on to point out in terms of the reporting line at the end of the day. It is yet a situation that will probably have to be refined.

As it now stands in terms of the reporting process for the Complaints Commissioner—I may not be the best person to speak on it—my general understanding is quite likely that issues for which the Complaints Commissioner will be having to deal with will be matters relating to complaints against senior public officers in the service. It could be against Ministers of the Government and it could be across the entire spectrum. It would compromise the independence and objectivity of such an officer if this person was reporting on Ministers who would be, in turn, making assessment of the Complaints Commissioner's observations and recommendations. So, it should be put outside of the purview of Cabinet for it to be dealt with in the most objective manner and treated with the degree of independence that it deserves.

The Honourable Member mentioned an amendment in order to correct for what was going to be the voted provision for global executive expenses and this has been addressed through an amending Bill.

Turning now to cash reserves. The Honourable Member and I will disagree on this for the reason that we (as a jurisdiction) do not have direct taxation. We are going from where we are at this time and have general reserves to the region of $28 million. Let us say that one quarter of the executive expenses that will have to be achieved are monies that will have to be accumulated, representing ninety days cash and cash reserves that we have on hand. Again it may seem as if it is a difficult situation that is being established where there should be no restriction against these funds. However, we have to look at the circumstances that will give rise to the need for these monies to be used. For example, we are talking about extraordinary circumstances and we have the titles comprising the Restricted Funds, Environmental Protection Fund, Roads Development Fund, Capital Development Fund, General Reserves, Housing Reserves and National Disaster Reserves. These are monies that are being accumulated for what we call the "rainy day", which we hope will never happen. At the same time we have to look at the circumstances that would give rise to the use of these funds; the types of circumstances would have to be extraordinary. These extraordinary circumstances would justify the need for these funds to be used even for them to be accessed before coming to the Finance Committee or the Legislative Assembly, which we hope will not be the case.

The Honourable Member went on to say that rather than having specific designation it would be useful to put all of these monies into a single fund. That makes a lot of sense if we are not going to make a distinction between restricted and unrestricted funds. However, I think it is very important to know, for example, the National Disaster Reserve Fund that was put in place by a Motion brought by the Member for North Side. I remember it started out with half of a million dollars. As at 31 December that Fund has a balance of $2.118 million in it. So we can see here that there is an increase that is taking place.

It would be useful if the disaster relates specifically to a hurricane or an earthquake or any natural disaster. It would be useful to know that out of the accumulated reserves position, how much of that is represented by this specific segment of it, which is the National Disaster Fund. At the end of the day we have to know that all of this is cash that belongs to the Government; we have to know that this has always been the principle in terms of a balanced budget.

A balanced budget means that you are just taking enough revenue to match your expenditure and to put aside something within these funds. If the restricted funds were going to be set aside but the only balance in the restricted fund account was going to be looked at to be built up in order to achieve the ninety days reserves, Mr. Speaker that could be done. However, I would suggest to Honourable Members that the only way we can achieve that by the year 2009 would be to bring Bills for significant revenue measures to this Honourable House, and as a result of that create a burden, unnecessarily, on the country. At the end of the day we are talking about a community at large – this is where the monies that are put into all of these funds come from.

So we have worked out with the United Kingdom what will constitute the reserve balance. This is not something that is made up within the Portfolio or Cabinet as such; it has been looked at very carefully. In terms of taking the funds in the general bank account we would not take the balance at the 31 January when we know at that time the revenue stream or flows are at their highest. That in itself would create a distortion. If we go it would be x million dollars as at 31 January, but if we were to look at the position as at the end of September it would not be matching. So the idea is to take an average over the year and if the average balance works out to be $1 million it will be added to the general reserves balance in order to arrive at the global pool constituting the ninety days of reserves.

So, Mr. Speaker, I think that addresses that point. It would not be quite likely to the satisfaction of the Honourable Member and I do respect his views on this. However, I think it is necessary to count the funds that are within the reserves account as a part of the cash balances of Government.

I think that I have addressed all of the points that have been raised by the Honourable Member and as I mentioned, there will be an amendment in the—
[Pause]

The Honourable Member also made an observation in respect of the onerous responsibilities that will be increasing in respect of the Audit Office having to deal with the audits of the Government companies. The Law also allows for the Auditor General to contract out audits as necessary. There was another point dealing with the regulations to be made by the Financial Secretary acting in his discretion. That is an oversight and will be dealt with as a committee stage amendment.

I will say thanks to the Honourable Member for that observation. With these comments I would like to say thanks to Honourable Members for their support of this Bill.

The Speaker: Honourable Members I wish to draw to your attention that all Bills that appear during the 2003 Session of the House will be named as 2003 but when the Laws are being numbered they will appear as 2004. We have not yet moved into the 2004 Session even though we are in the year 2004.

The question is that the Public Management and Finance (Amendment) Bill 2004 be given a Second Reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Public Management and Finance (Amendment) Bill 2003 given a Second Reading.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider the Bill. [Pause] It is the wish of Members that we go back to the Loan Bill before we go into Committee?

Madam Clerk.

The Loan Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Loan Bill 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Bill before this Honourable House seeks approval for the Government to borrow $13 million. If that approval is granted Government intends to use an estimated $7 million to fund the development of roads. It is estimated that $2 million will be used to settle compensation claims and the remaining $4 million on other road-related ancillary expenditures.

Honourable Members of this House will probably recall that when I delivered the 2003/4 Budget Address in June 2003 I said that the Government wanted to provide greater focus on road development. Consequently, Government decided to establish a National Roads Authority which was supposed to have been tasked with the responsibility of obtaining funding to develop new roads.

All Honourable Members will know that the Authority has not been established but there are concrete actions being taken to ensure that it comes into existence during the 2004/5 financial year. The Minister for Health spoke to that subject through a Parliamentary Question and I think the raising of the question was very timely in respect of the debate on The Loans Bill.

Meanwhile the need for road development persists even though the National Roads Authority does not yet exist. Government had, therefore, decided that it will seek the Legislative Assembly's approval for the borrowing of $13 million in order to pursue much needed road works. I would also inform this Honourable House that the Government wrote the United Kingdom to inform the Foreign and Commonwealth Office of its intention to borrow a total of $31 million in the fiscal year 2003/4. This figure is made up of—

- o $8 million to provide funding for some of the capital development programmes laid out in the approved 2003/4 Budget. This was dealt with as part of the Budget Address in June 2003
- o $10 million for the Primary School at Prospect. This was dealt with as part of a $15 million loan package which would have covered the improvements or the expansion of the National Archives and this $13 million which is now being sought through this Bill.

Loan laws have already been passed for the amounts of $8 million and $10 million. The $10 million was inclusive in a law for a loan of $15 million. Those laws are awaiting assent from His Excellency the Governor.

The United Kingdom has replied to the effect that it approves of the Government borrowing $31 million which is a figure that is inclusive of the $13 million that is now under discussion here in the Legislative Assembly and is being sought through this Bill.

Honourable Members will quite rightly ask what impact this additional $13 million borrowing request and the other approved $18 million will have on the Government's debt service ratio. When we add the proposed borrowing of $13 million, now before this Honourable House, along with the approved borrowing of $18 million to Government's existing public debt and self-financing loan obligations, the debt service ratio is only expected to be six per cent at 30 June 2004, which is well below the limit of 10 per cent stated in the Public Management and Finance Law.

This Bill for a Law, entitled The Loans Law 2004 is now before Honourable Members. It's Memorandum of Objects and Reasons and the three clauses are consistent with the remarks that I have just made. In light of those remarks I would invite Honourable Members to give their support to this Bill.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, obviously the Government thinks that borrowing $13 million is not a big deal but we on this side had no idea whatsoever until we saw this white paper in front of us this morning. Based on the Honourable Third Official Member's presentation they have been thinking about it for a while because they wrote to England and got a reply. Therefore, it seems like they are satisfied that they know what they are doing and they can just bring this down for a same-day-service and it is not a big deal.

It has been explained by the Honourable Third Official Member that the $13 million that is to be borrowed by the Government—obviously they have the numbers to pass the Bill—will consist of $7 million for road development, $2 million for settlement of claims and, $4 million for other related work. Obviously all of these have to do with capital expenditure. When we take a look back at the Budget Address entitled Charting Our Course For The Future delivered by the Honourable Third Official Member on Tuesday, 17 June 2003, there are a few points that should be noted which will specifically relate to this Bill.

Firstly, the Honourable Third Official Member has stated that this $13 million will bring—so far this fiscal year—the borrowing to $31 million. My estimate was $36 million but he explained that of the last $15 million loan Bill only $10 million has been used. There is $5 million that the Government is authorised to borrow but has not borrowed, which puts it to $31 million instead of $36 million. I think that the initial borrowing along with the Budget was $8 million then the $15 million and now the $13 million.

When the Honourable Third Official Member was giving his address ... with your permission I will quote so there will be no question.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Under business competitiveness he said: "Controlling the Government's own fiscal position is an important part of this strategy and the 2003/2004 Budget is again a fiscally responsible one. It has been balanced without the need for new revenue measures or increasing the level of public debt."

We know that borrowing does not necessarily throw a budget out of whack but I go by the Honourable Third Official Member's statements, which said it had been balanced without the need for new revenue measures or increasing the level of public debt. He goes on to state that to provide greater focus on road development the Government has decided to establish a National Roads Authority, which the Honourable Third Official Member spoke to in his presentation of the Loan Bill. He goes on to say:

"The legislation to give effect to this change will be introduced to the House in the early part of the financial year and the Budget makes provisions for the purchase of $3.7 million of outputs from the Authority. During 2003/2004 the Authority will construct $13.38 million of roads. This will include $7 million for phase three of the Esterley Tibbetts Highway from the Galleria to Indies Suites. This is a major initiative to reduce traffic congestion to and from West Bay. Also planned is $800,000 to extend the Linford Pierson Highway from Bobby Thompson Way to Walkers Road and $1.3 million for the district roads programme."

He then goes on to say, "The finance for these projects will be organised by the National Roads Authority in conjunction with private sector partners. This approach reflects the fact that a good road infrastructure is in the interests of both the public and the private sectors."

Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to take a couple of minutes to speak to that and to what we have heard today. There are some questions which come to mind which the Honourable Third Official Member will need to address.

Earlier on today in a substantive question to the Minister responsible for Roads, when he spoke to the National Roads Authority, he said that revenue for the Roads Authority would come from certain areas of revenue now that go into the general account for Government. As I understand that there will be certain dedicated revenue streams which will go to the Roads Authority and will help to fund the works of the Roads Authority. The Minister did not go into further explanations so I cannot make assumptions as to whether these amounts are anticipated to partially fund the operation of the Roads Authority once it becomes an Authority or whether it will entirely fund the operations of the Roads Authority, which I doubt. He did say that the Roads Authority will be empowered to engage in borrowing loans. Of course you would have to put the entire mix together as to whether the direct stream of revenue can fund whatever capital works is to be engaged and also service a loan or whether there has to be a combination of a subsidy of Government (if it is going to become an autonomous body such as an Authority.) I guess that will come in how the whole thing works but when we think about that . . . and the Honourable Third Official Member spoke earlier on to the fact that there is no direct taxation, which means there is a specific revenue stream that we know about. And as the Honourable Third Official Member stated in the 2003 Budget Address that that Budget, which is the one we are living with now, had been balanced without the need for no new revenue measures or increasing the level of public debt.

If general revenue is going to diminish by whatever that amount is, which is moving to the Roads Authority, what is that going to do for the balancing of the recurrent side of the Budget? While I know this is a Loan Bill that question needs to be addressed. The fact of the matter is this Loan Bill is the precursor to the Roads Authority. We need to know how that is going to work. The Honourable Third Official Member explained the three amounts as I quoted which will make up the $13 million. What I do not know yet is how much money has been spent on the capital side for roads thus far this year.

The Budget Address spoke to the fact that there was $3.7 million allocated in the Budget for capital road works. None of the three amounts that he mentioned totalling $13 million tells me that there is any money out of the $13 million that has to go into general revenue which has been used to fund road projects that there was no allocation for. Certainly general revenue is going to need to be repaid if money was advanced. I do not know that but we need to get that clear. He said $7 million is for roads development. What I am not sure about is whether that is road development that has already taken place and just a matter of replacing the money or whether it is road development to take place. That is what we need to have a clear understanding on because the Bill itself brings about a fair amount of questions. Of course, it also highlights the fact that even with a National Roads Authority it is not going to be the case that the approach, which was alluded to in the Budget Address, is going to obtain; where the Honourable Third Official Member stated that the finance for these projects will be organised by the National Roads Authority in conjunction with private sector partners. This approach reflects the fact that a good road infrastructure is necessary. Central Government is now borrowing although I know that the Roads Authority is not yet in existence. But it shows a completely different light on $13.7 million worth of road works for this year being allocated in the Budget, which leaves a $10 million gap. If the Budget did not reflect that $10 million in any form or fashion . . . it was supposed to be a joint private/public sector partnership and the Authority will stand alone and be able to deal with its own affairs. The Honourable Third Official Member needs to speak to how that relates to the entire picture now.

Based on what was proposed in the Budget Address and what seemingly obtains now, there is a $10 million difference in the approach which has to be accounted for whether it is by this loan or however else. So we need to know if monies have been advanced for Public Works to continue to do capital projects and if so how much. If that is the case how much of this borrowing is going to pay back for that. How does that reflect on the budget that was proposed in June last year whereby there was a $10 million open ended affair which was not reflected by any allocation in the Budget and whether funded by general revenue or by loan. If it is simply a matter of just adding to the amount of loan for the year then we need to hear that one way or the other.

I want to say that my understanding at the time was that this business involved PFI. When we spoke to the Public Management and Finance (Amendment) Bill on Monday in the briefing we talked about PFI. Even if I tell the Government that they have changed from what was the case with the Budget that was brought by the Honourable Financial Secretary, I have to say in the same breath that I am glad that this was not PFI. I have some grave reservations about that methodology of financing in many instances in any case.

The Loan Bill at present does not reflect to us the entire picture and it certainly has taken us by surprise without any time to think about it.

I believe that the Honourable Third Official Member, while he has brought the Bill and has done just a bit of explanation, certainly needs to explain on the wider ramifications what the position is. He also needs to explain the need for the borrowing of this money. It was purported that there would be no need to borrow any money and I think the instance with the school was a similar situation; it was an off the balance sheet situation being talked about but we knew the cost of the school. So we had to come and borrow money in the orthodox manner for the school and now we come to borrow money in the orthodox manner for the roads. They were spoken of in the Budget and boasted that they were going to be achieved but there was absolutely no allocation for either one of the two. That may not be pleasing for the Honourable Third Official Member but he needs to speak to that and justify the situation because it is two times over.

We also need to now if there is anything else that was in the Budget that is going to be borrowed to be achieved. Is there anymore borrowing planned by the Government before fiscal year end or is this it? There are some other areas that I could discuss but perhaps other Members wish to speak to those areas. Maybe the Honourable Third Official Member would be happy to answer those questions so that we can have a clearer perspective as to exactly what the state of the affairs is. We wait to hear his answer.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I commence by echoing the sentiments of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition about the seemingly trivial manner in which this matter of the Government seeking to borrow $13 million has been handled.

Sitting in this Honourable House on the Opposition side, we have grown used to the distressing regularity with which the relevant Standing Orders are suspended in order to permit the Government to railroad through whatever piece of legislation they awake that morning and decide they want to pass. This morning was another example and we are grateful to you for at least restricting today the number of Bills being dealt with, which we have not even seen, to one, which is this one but tomorrow there will be a new set.

To deal with this particular matter that the Government is seeking to borrow $13 million, it is either that they are lurching from crisis to crisis not knowing what they are doing in terms of the country's finances or they are deliberately keeping the Opposition out of the know on important fiscal matters.

The Budget to which the Honourable First Elected Member for George Town and the Leader of the Opposition referred was presented on 17 June 2003. In that document the Government boasted boldly about the creation of a National Roads Authority, which would have vested in it responsibility for road construction and maintenance in this country. Back then they identified the need for $13.38 million worth of road works. Why is it, on a matter as important as this, the Opposition should have to come to this Honourable House this morning to be presented with this Bill and asked by the Honourable Third Official Member to support it?! I think that sometimes the Government does not understand the important role that the Opposition is constitutionally bound to play. The Elected Members of this Honourable House are those charged with responsibility for voting funds. And it is a duty that we on this side of the Honourable House take very seriously. We want time to consider these matters and decide if the proposed expenditure is in accordance with what we believe to be good fiscal, prudent management of the country's affairs.

The Government does—not just us—the country a grave disservice when they treat the borrowing of money in such an apparently trivial manner. They have the audacity to ask the Opposition for their support. We have demonstrated how cooperative we are when we are given notice and when we agree that what the Government is proposing to do is in the best interest of this country. We did so as recently as Monday when the Honourable Minister for Employment Relations was practically abandoned by his government on a matter as important as the Employment Bill. The Opposition stood here until almost 8 o'clock to make sure that that important Bill was carried through all of its stages and passed. We understand the country needs road improvements and other capital works; no one is arguing about that but the Government must not treat borrowing and the Opposition in this way.

In reference to the creation of the National Roads Authority, the Honourable Third Official Member spent some time, both in answers to questions in this Honourable House this morning and in his presentation to this Bill. He said that the National Roads Authority is under construction and that it should be in place some time in 2004/2005 fiscal year. It seems that at least some of this money, which it is proposed that the Government will now borrow, will be vested in this Authority once it becomes established.

The proceeds of this loan are going to have to be repaid in one form or fashion in due course. I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member, in his winding up, can explain to us how the National Roads Authority, which he says is going to be authorised to borrow money, is going to repay these and other monies which it borrows. How is this Authority going to be funded? Is there going to be a cross subsidy from Central Government on a regular basis? Are they going to be toll booths set up so that the people who use the roads in this country contribute to the cost of those roads? I believe that the country and this Honourable House, in particular, need to have some indications as to how this new statutory creature is going to be funded and resourced to enable it to carry out the various functions which it is proposed that it will have. If in fact various means are not going to be found and created for this new creature to carry out its various functions then perhaps we need to think again about going through the trouble to set it up.

So, I add those few words to what the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has said. And I would ask that the Honourable Third Official Member does make a real effort to address the concerns that we have raised when he rises to wind up this debate.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The request being made of this House for a law to authorise the borrowing of up to $13 million is for matters that I think we all would agree are in the interest of the national good.

It is very important to outline from the beginning that the borrowing that is being sought does not introduce concepts in terms of expenditure and capital development requests that are foreign to the country or any Member of this Honourable House. Indeed, any Member who listened to the Budget Address and took part in the Budget debate would have known the position that was being put forward by the Government at that time. And that position has not changed. What is happening now is that the Government is seeking funding for some of those matters that were outlined.

So, when the Second Elected Member for George Town talks about being kept in the dark I cannot agree with him. What we must always remember is that he has a certain perspective that he comes to this House with, and he is right in saying that is his job. But it is so funny, just a few minutes ago he gave this House the impression that in some way he could not do his job because of a lack of timely information. Yet he could get up and sit back down and now indicate to me that his job has been done. The country and I need to know if his job has been done. Mr. Speaker, I think that the Second Elected Member for George Town knows precisely what this money is being used for and he knew it from June of last year when the Budget was presented. We debated the policy at that point in time. We are now coming to look for funding for some of that policy. So we must be clear that there is nothing new being asked for by the Government in terms of capital expenditure requests. This is simply to fund what we all knew about from last June!

I would have to presume that the Second Elected Member for George Town, and the entire Opposition, would have known about these requests and what the Budget was seeking to do. When we speak about being “kept in the dark” remember that you can either be kept in the dark by some force or you can put yourself in the dark. I offer my opinion that perhaps the Second Elected Member for George Town has kept himself in the dark. I think that he—along with all of us that are here—knows full well what was outlined in last year’s and the current year’s Budget, which was debated in June 2003. We are now looking . . . I am reminded that my initial instinct was indeed supportable and correct that the Opposition may have kept themselves in the dark because maybe they were not here for a portion of that debate.

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The Honourable Second Elected Member for West Bay is deliberately—that is why he is stammering so much—misleading this Honourable House. The Opposition did debate this Budget. The Hansard will show extensive debate from virtually every Member of the Opposition.

The Speaker: The point of order seems to be that the Honourable Second Elected Member for West Bay stated that the Opposition did not debate the Budget. Is this the point of order?

Honourable Second Elected Member for West Bay, are you listening to me? Would you please reply to that?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, if memory serves me correctly . . . maybe the terminology I used could be refined. I think I was referring to the Finance Committee stage which would have dealt with the detailed examination of the Budget.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Elected Member for West Bay, is it correct then to say that you were in fact not correct in saying that the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town walked out during the debate on the Budget, but did so during Finance Committee?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I think we are splitting hairs here. Finance Committee is when the Budget is approved and that is when we do the detailed examination. So when I say "the debate" I am looking at it in its entirety which is when you speak to the Budget Address. But then you also have to go through the process of examining it in detail. If I, in some way, upset the Second Elected Member for George Town on that particular point by choosing those words I apologise. But for the record, I think it would be fair to say that they were not here for Finance Committee and the detailed examination during Finance Committee.

The Speaker: Apology is accepted.

I would like to make the point Honourable Members that there has been a lot of use of a point of order called "misleading the House." Under Standing Orders there is no such point of order unless it is an intention to mislead the House and is intentionally and knowingly done as contempt of the House. However, if there is something that is done innocently there is no such point of order; it is only when there is a knowingly wrong act that it then becomes contempt. So I would ask all Honourable Members to be very careful in the use of stopping other Members under the guise of a point of order for misleading the House, unless it can be proven that this is being knowingly done by that individual Member and thus forming contempt for the Honourable House.

Please continue, Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I think that it is fair comment to say that if the Second Elected Member for George Town is going to be honest with himself and this House he would know—utilising the definition that you have just outlined from the point that he raised—that was indeed just an innocent slip on my part. I certainly would not have intended to make any statement that would have been in direct contempt of this Honourable House. I see from his response that he agrees with that point as well.

When we look at the requests that is before us we have been in full knowledge since June of last year that the Government intended to look at a new way of road development system; one that we believe would be more efficient and proactive in its approach to ensuring that this key ingredient to economic and national development is enhanced. The creation of a Roads Authority is worthwhile. From the outset last year, during the Budget process, it was made clear that the funding required to have the Roads Authority fully functional would have taken, if my memory serves me correct, some where in the order of about $13 million. Even from last year the Government, during the Budget process, did not fully fund that amount. The Government explored different ways in which it could best make up that difference. So after having done its research and its work the Government has now come to make a request to fund the shortfall by way of direct borrowing.

I do not think that there is anything to be alarmed about in regard to the requests that are being made of this Honourable House. I think that all of us have known, for the better part of nine months, that a Roads Authority was being worked on. Of course we had to do the ground work to ensure that it was properly structured in order to be efficient and capable of meeting its objectives and the issue of funding had to be explored. We had to explore all of the options. So I think we have now arrived at a stage where the Government have set their minds to one specific option and that option is to borrow the funds for this necessary and critical development tool, which is roads.

Mr. Speaker, when we look at what obtains in Cayman in regards to economic development and the enhancement and furtherance of economic development; when we see the road during rush hour in the morning or evening we will quickly realise that our current road infrastructure is incapable of dealing with the amount of vehicles we have. It is easy to sit on the soap box and come up with all sorts of ingenious solutions but at the end of the day this country has grown to a certain size. There are a certain number of cars that are in the possession of private citizens and private citizens need to get to and from work; to get their children to and from school; to get themselves to and from educational facilities and other necessary facilities such as a doctor's office and go shopping. So there are going to be certain amounts of traffic that are on the roads.

When we look at the main road corridors and look at the scope for expansion we see that we need to build additional road infrastructure.

There are some who will say, "Well, are you going to keep building roads on an Island this small and have them continue to be filled?" Again that is a very unproductive way of thinking. At the end of the day we have a situation as it is. When you consider the amounts of time you take to get around in Cayman we have to do something about it and part of it is developing a proper road network. I believe that the creation of the Roads Authority is a positive step towards reaching that objective. I think it is also important to reiterate that this request is for capital expenditure and not recurrent expenditure. These expenditures are being requested to be used to enhance the road network within these Islands.

I also think it is worth reminding ourselves that even after this borrowing we are well within the debt service ration as is outlined in the Public Finance and Management Law.

The whole issue of transparency and Government's willingness to be transparent continues to be called into question. Yet just this morning—might I remind all Honourable Members and the wider listening public—we the Government presented the financial results for the period 1 July through 31 December. I would have to say that presenting this information at this particular point in time is very timely. I do not think anyone can legitimately criticise the Government for not being timely or transparent because when since has the country and the Opposition in this Honourable House had the access to the amounts and quality and depth of information that this Government provides.

This Government is above and beyond reproach when it comes to the argument about being transparent. I would have to say we are crystal clear in terms of transparency. We see all the financial performance of Government broken down by the major heads and line items for all Members and for the entire country to see on a timely basis.

I believe that the request beings put forward to the Honourable House by the Honourable Third Official Member—to anyone who is going to be constructive and fair in their assessments—is indeed a reasonable request and one that is, I repeat, funding capital expenditures that we and the country have known about for the better part of nine months.

I rest after those brief remarks and I give my commitment to support this important Loan Bill.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any Member wish to speak? Does any Member wish to speak? If not, does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, the question has been raised by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and First Elected Member for George Town as to why there is a need to borrow this money.

The Loan Bill before this Honourable House today by extrapolation is not new. The House cannot say that it was not alerted to the need for additional financing to be provided. It was not set out in those words specifically but if you will permit me I would like to quote just one paragraph from the Budget Address. The paragraph reads:

"To provide greater focus on road development the Government has decided to establish a National Roads Authority. The legislation to give effect to this change will be introduced to the House in the early part of the financial year and the Budget makes provision for the purchase of $3.7 million of output from the Authority.

During 2003/2004 the Authority will construct $13.38 million of roads. This will include $7 million for phase three of the Esterley Tibbetts Highway from the Galleria to Indies Suites. This is a major initiative to reduce traffic congestion to and from West Bay."

The Government in this statement is saying that the Roads Authority, when established, will be constructing $13.38 million worth of roads. We went on further to say, "The finance for these projects will be organised by the National Roads Authority in conjunction with private sector partners." Mr. Speaker, the private sector partners that will be coming on board will be giving the value of the road to the Government for free. This means that this would have to be a liability, loan or some sort of financing arrangement that would have had to be entered into by the National Roads Authority had it been established. The Government said that $13.38 million worth of roads expenditure would be incurred and the Budget provided for $3.7 million, which means that there would have to be $10 million in value yet to be funded.

The fact that the Roads Authority has not been established as yet, and the Public Works roads section continues to have responsibility for roads, means that it is quite natural under this process for the funding to be sought by way of a loan by Central Government.

Had it been that the Roads Authority had been established it could be, in entering into arrangements with private sector partner, would mean having to raise the loan. Even if it was by PFI the obligations would have to be repaid over a period of time.

The question was raised in terms of how much money has been spent so far. On page 8 of the Financial Report for the period 1 July through 31 December it can be seen. There are three columns, in the second column the second item reads—"PCW IT/Capital expenditure/July to September for the National Roads Authority $1,525,000."

The second item, "PCW IT/Capital expenditure/October to December for the National Roads Authority $2,710,000."

Today is the 17th March which meant that expenditures would have been incurred during the months of January and February. Mr. Speaker, since the financials that I am looking at go to the 31 December it is natural that there would have had to be a further advance. I do not have that information with me. However, during the lunch break, I spoke briefly to the engineer with responsibility for roads and indications are that the expenditure up to this point in time could be in the region of $7 million. In presenting the Loan Bill it was mentioned that $7 million out of that money would be allocated to roads infrastructure and the remaining $6 million would be allocated; $2 million to the settlement of gazetted claims and $4 million to ancillary roads activities. I think that was the information I gave so there is a breakdown. We know that the monies that have been advanced by the Government will have to be reimbursed because this has come from the Government's operating cash. These are monies that were not allocated in the first instance or intended to be used for this purpose as it was intended that the Roads Authority would have been established at a point in time during the fiscal year. So the Government allocated $3.7 million from the Budget with the intention that the Roads Authority would be finding the remaining financing that would be required in order to complete the roads projects to the value of $13.7 million.

I should mention that if the $13 million that is being borrowed today is not used up by the end of June which is the end of the fiscal financial year 2003/2004 that money will be going into revenue or general reserves it is money that has been specifically air marked for roads development so the unspent balance will be available to be carried forward into the succeeding fiscal year.

In terms of the financing the National Roads Authority has not yet been established so this borrowing is a direct loan that the Government will have responsibility for. In terms of going forward the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Health and Roads Work will be bringing a Bill to this Honourable House for the establishment of the National Roads Authority. An integral aspect of that information will be to give information in terms of how the Authority will be financed. The Honourable Minister and the Portfolio of Finance have been engaging in discussions on the financing sources that will need to be established.

So far I can summarise by saying in this respect that $9.1 million have already been identified. It should be borne in mind that when the roads section of the Public Works Department is embraced within a National Roads Authority the expenditure will not be a new concept as such. It is presently a part of the Public Works Department. It means taking a part of what is the Public Works Department, together with the related expenditure being presently funded from general revenue, and the administrative costs that are now being covered will be moved out. So, therefore, to allocate a sum of money out of general revenue equal to that will not create a difficult situation, although it is recognised that the Authority will take approximately $3.7 million to $4 million for defraying its administrative costs. Over that it would require a sum of money in order to undertake road works on an annual basis.

If we were to assume for the fiscal year 2004/2005 that the monies in total that will be available will be the $9.1 million that has been identified up to this point in time, it would mean that $5.1 million would be available for roads development in the event that $4 million was used to cover administrative costs.

I know that there are going to be add-ons to gasoline and fuel levies in order to raise additional monies to fund the Roads Authority. But we have an Infrastructure Development Fund that will be earmarked for the Roads Authority. We also have the Roads Development Fund that will be available for the National Roads Authority. The financials on page 7 gives a breakdown in terms of the potential revenue that will be realised under the various categories of funds, for example, the Infrastructure Development Fund and the Roads Fund.

The Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town made reference to the fact that the Government seems to be lurching from crisis to crisis or keeping the Opposition in the dark. No Honourable Member of this House can validly make that claim. The information that was tabled this morning and on previous occasions sets out the Governments financial position. The level of transparency that is here is what most Honourable Members of this House have been asking for and this is the information that is available to Honourable Members.

So, Mr. Speaker, it is not the intention of the Government to keep any Honourable Member of this House in the dark. In terms of the source funding I am sure that the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Works, when he brings the Bill . . . and I know that he has been engaging in exhaustive review on this piece of legislation and looking very carefully at the funding aspect of it. As this Honourable House can appreciate the Bill is in the stages of being refined at this time and I would not want to pre-empt what the Minister will be saying when he brings the Bill.

So with these remarks I think I have addressed the questions raised and would like to say thanks to all Honourable Members for their support.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, before we move into committee I would like to say that it is the right, privilege and responsibility of each Member of this Honourable House to speak during debate if he so wishes. However, there is a procedure within the Standing Orders which must be followed and once I have called on other Members to speak and I see no Member rise I will then call on the Mover and continue to ask the Mover to speak.

I know because I have been on the Opposition and have tried to outfox other Members and wait until the last minute to speak. However, I shall be abiding by the rule that once I call on the Mover of a Bill or a Motion, or whatever, to speak, I will continue. If I see a Member getting up after I have called on the Mover I will continue to ask the Mover to speak.

I trust that all Honourable Members will try to comply with those procedures.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

Cayman Islands Government Budget 2004/2005 Strategic Policy Statement for the financial year ending 30th June, 2005

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table the Strategic Policy Statement for the 2004/2005 financial year.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak there to?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, The presentation of a Strategic Policy Statement is a requirement of the Public Management and Finance Law, which comes fully into force for 2004/2005. Under the Law the Policy Statement should be tabled by 1 December each year.

This year's Strategic Policy Statement is being tabled somewhat later than this deadline and I explained at a previous meeting of this Honourable House the reason for this delay.

As it turns out, the delay has been longer than was anticipated. Before we were able to finalise the Policy Statement we needed to agree the borrowing guidelines with the United Kingdom Government and then legislate for these and other changes in Public Management and Finance (Amendment) Bill 2003. Now that those steps have been completed I am pleased to be able to bring the 2004/2005 Strategic Policy Statement to the House.

Mr. Speaker, this Strategic Policy Statement is once again a testament to the leadership and vision of the United Democratic Party Government. It contains a set of policy priorities and financial targets that promote the development of the country and the achievement of the outcomes specified in the National Strategic Plan - Vision 2008.

Mr. Speaker, this Strategic Policy Statement is a fiscally responsible one and complies with all the principles of responsible financial management. This is despite the fact that the UK Government has imposed another ratio to be complied with.

This Strategic Policy Statement is a landmark document for another reason as well. It is the first ever government financial statement to be put together using the accruals basis of accounting.

The adoption of accrual accounting is a major milestone in the reform of government finances. It confirms the Cayman Islands position at the leading edge of public sector management.

The move to accrual accounting also reflects the United Democratic Party (UDP) Government's commitment to financial reform and fiscal transparency.

Mr. Speaker, this Government has nothing to hide. We welcome the openness that comes from regular reporting. We welcome the fiscal discipline that comes from using proper accounting methods and techniques.

In this spirit of transparency the Policy Statement not only provides accrual targets for 2004/5, 2005/6 and 2006/7, it also provides a basis of comparison by recasting the 2003/4 cash budget onto an accruals basis.

This recast is shown in Appendix 2 of the Policy Statement and shows that budgeted cash surplus of $5.7 million for 2003/4 is equivalent to an accrual deficit of $9.6 million.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I apologise for cutting in the middle of your speech but we have reached the hour of 4.30 pm. I would ask that you move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to allow us to continue beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

Hour of Interruption—4.30 pm

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) so that business may be completed beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow for business to continue. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow the business on the Order Paper to be completed.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, this recast is shown in Appendix 2 of the Policy Statement and shows that budgeted cash surplus of $5.7 million for 2003/4 is equivalent to an accrual deficit of $9.6 million. This reflects, for the first time, the true financial position of the Government.

The accrual deficit results from the inclusion of operating costs that are not recognised under cash accounting costs like depreciation, asset maintenance and, for the first time, the profit and losses of Statutory Authorities and Government owned Companies.

The 2003/4 deficit is not something of this Government's doing. There has almost certainly been an accrual deficit for a good number of years, but it has never been apparent or shown.

It is, however, something the Government is determined to do something about. As Members can see on page 12 of the policy Statement, the aggregate financial targets for core government show a surplus for the next three years, I will go into more detail later. And so, Mr Speaker it will be a surplus!

The Government has taken a $9 million dollar accrual deficit in 2003/4 and set targets for surpluses reaching nearly $38 million by 2006/7. That is fiscal responsibility Mr Speaker! That is the measure of the commitment of the Government to manage the finances of the country prudently, even in an election year. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, I should not say "even in an election year", I should say especially in an election year.

These Policy Statements that I have been delivering these past years serve to inform the public. During General Elections the public will not now be confused by any incumbent administration as to the position of Government's finances, nor can an incoming Government say that the country is broke. Everyone will be aware of the Government's financial state without the confusing rhetoric that usually accompanies the General Election Campaign.

In addition, the Government will be publishing a pre-election, -economic and -financial update which is around 40 days before the Election. This is sometime after the Budget and will provide updated forecasts of the Government's financial position. This will ensure that the public is fully informed of the state of Government's finances during the Election Campaign.

No Government in the history of the Cayman Islands has been as open and transparent as this Government although there are people who continue to say that we are not transparent.

Mr Speaker, the United Democratic Party Government will stick to our policy of fiscal prudence. We will not go on a spending spree before the election to secure votes as other Government's have done in the past. Spending sprees just create a financial mess like the one the UDP Government inherited. They are not good for the country economically and they reduce our reputation in the global investment market place.

The Government is rightfully proud of our fiscal record and this election-year Strategic Budget Statement continues the path of fiscal responsibility established over the last two years.

Overview of the 2004/5 Strategic Policy Statement

Mr Speaker let me now turn to the detail in the document.

The 2004/5 Strategic Policy Statement is in the same format and layout as the previous ones. However, as I have alluded to the financial figures presented in the Budget have been calculated on a significantly different basis.

Firstly, the financial activity is measured on an accruals basis. This provides a more accurate reflection of revenues and expenditures. What this means is that

- A strict operating and capital split is maintained.
- Revenue is recognised when it is due not when the cash is collected.
- Expenditure is recognised when it is committed not when the cash flows out.
- Non-cash expenses are recognised in the operating statement for the first time; primarily this is depreciation or the wearing out of assets.

Secondly, the expenditure allocations are to Ministers and Official Members not to the Chief Officers as in previous years. These allocations only cover executive expenditure, that is, the outputs that Cabinet is buying.

In accordance with the Public Management and Finance Law, from 2004/5 Ministries and Portfolios will be able to keep entity revenue. Entity revenue is the revenue they earn from providing outputs to other government agencies and third parties. The retention of this revenue creates a good incentive to ensure that revenue is collected promptly.

It also means that central service departments, like Personnel and Computer Services, will no longer be directly funded by Cabinet. Instead, they will charge other departments for the services they provide to them. That additional cost will then be included in the output costs of Ministries that use them. This will show the true cost of outputs and will create an internal market in Government which will lead to greater efficiency and cost effectiveness. It is anticipated in the future that private sector competition will be allowed for some of these services leading to further efficiencies.

The third major change in 2004/5 is the inclusion of the net operating results and net investment in Statutory Authorities and Government Companies into the forecast financial statements of core government. Apart from being an accounting standard requirement this provides a better reflection of impact these public authorities have on Government finances.

Mr Speaker, the Strategic Policy Statement comprises of six sections, and I would like to briefly speak on the content of the main sections.

Overview of Section 2: Outcome Goals

The eleven broad outcome goals specified in section 2 are the same as the previous year and reflect Vision 2008.

As a responsible Government we are not going to compromise our policy on fiscal responsibility and set the 2004/5 budget to make short term gains for political expediency. It can be seen from the financial tables in the Policy Statement we are looking at a 3-year timeframe, so we are mindful of the decisions that we make today and what effect they will have over the longer timeframe. The Government's resources are not unlimited so we are unable to tackle all things we would like to do at once and burden future generations with a high level of debt. We therefore have to choose our outcome goals carefully, prioritising on the basis of the best economic and social gain that can be achieved for the resources used.

The Government realises that while it can play a major role in achieving these broad outcome goals, in the final analysis it does not totally control them. Increasingly, events and pressures outside the Cayman Islands can also have a significant influence on whether the outcomes are achieved.

On page six the Policy Statement there is a summary of some of the Key Policy Initiatives that we as a Government will focus on in 2004/5 and that will be allowed for in the Budget. I would like to highlight these initiatives.

The Government will continue to provide quality education by building new assets and continuing the investment in information technology. This means that the completion and commissioning of the Prospect Primary School and the beginning of construction in the new secondary school at Frank Sound is very high on our priority list. In the interim we are going to provide temporary classrooms for the existing secondary schools.

The Government will continue with the acquisition of Barkers National Park, the purchase of properties that are readily available over the next three years. This reflects the Government's commitment to investing in the environment.

The Government is also committed to improving tourism by ensuring that the national airline has sufficient financial support to provide service to those destinations that benefit the tourist industry. This will continue to be a strategic priority that will be allowed for in the Budget.

The Government is also committed to supporting those segments of the population that are having difficulty in obtaining health insurance. For this reason the Cayman Islands National Health Insurance Company was formed earlier this year and the 2004/5 Budget will provide financial support to the Company. The Government will pay strict attention to the operation of the company to ensure that it performs as it was set up to do so that Government's liability is minimised.

The Government intends to strengthen the security infrastructure of these Islands to ensure that our reputation as a secure country is maintained. This is so important to us, not only from a tourism destination perspective but also for safety of our own people. We are going to have to put efforts into zero tolerance on criminal activity.

The Government firmly supports an open, efficient and accountable government. This is evidenced by the machinery of government changes that have taken place and the financial management initiatives we have supported. In the up coming year we will continue these initiatives. Personnel reforms that will focus on performance improvement and management will be implemented. Governance legislation will also be introduced to ensure that public authorities operate in an efficient and transparent manner.

Overview of Section 4: Aggregate Financial Targets

Section 4 of the Strategic Policy Statement provides aggregate financial targets for each of the next three financial years.

The Targets provide a modest operating surplus of $1 million in 2004/5 increasing to $23 million and $38 million in 2005/6 and 2006/7 respectively.

For the 2004/5 financial year the targets for government are as follows:-

- The operating revenue target is $328.2 million. This includes an additional $3.9 million from an increase in Fuel Tax to assist in the funding of the National Roads Authority.
- The operating expenses target is $307.1 million. This is $4 million more than 2003/4 and allows for the running costs for the new primary school at Sports.
- The Capital Limit has been set at $44 million this includes:-
  - $13 million for equity investments into statutory authorities and government companies (including the extra funding for Cayman Airways and the Cayman Islands Health Insurance Company).
  - $19.4 million for purchase or construction of new entity assets.
  - $10.1 million for purchase or construction of Executive assets (including $8 million to commence the acquisition of Barkers park).

I have already said where we are heading with that and I am going to make a further statement on the National Park.

- Targets for new borrowing have been set at $45.8 million and a further $21.3 million in 2005/6. No new borrowing is planned in 2006/7.

I should point out to Members there is no Capital Acquisition Target as acquisitions will now be covered by depreciation which is part of the operating target.

As honourable Members can see from the table 7 on page 15 of the document, the targets comply with all the principles of responsible management for all years. In fact the targets exceed the required cash reserves levels. They are also well within borrowing limits.

Conclusion

In concluding, Mr. Speaker, the Government's goal is to build a secure, prosperous Cayman Islands that can be a proud legacy for future generations. This Policy Statement lays out a set of policy and financial parameters designed to achieve this goal.

The Government is committed to the principle of fiscal transparency and the publication of this first Strategic Policy Statement prepared on an accrual accounting basis is a reflection of this commitment.

The accrualisation of the 2003/4 Budget has provided us with an understanding of the Government's true financial position for the first time. It contains an unpleasant surprise, an accrual operating deficit as opposed to an operating cash surplus. This highlights the difficult financial position the Government inherited.

Despite this the Government has established a set of budget parameters that ensure a surplus is achieved and the principles of responsible financial management are all complied with.

The policy of fiscal prudence is very dear to my heart as Leader of Government Business, the Government has to live within its means and deliver high quality services in an efficient and economic manner. This Government has continued to keep its operating costs down while trying to providing services at the same level.

Mr. Speaker, as I said in my introduction, this Policy Statement is a landmark document. We are now beginning to reap the benefits of public sector reform and I must congratulate the Financial Secretary for sticking to the task of implementing the reform. The formula is working and we have set financial guidelines that ensure the proper handling of government financial affairs for the next several years.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the indulgence of the House. I mentioned the Financial Secretary but I would also like to thank Mr. Tony Dale, Mr. Peter Gough, and the Accountant General, also Mr. Kenneth Jefferson, for their work. They are still here with us at this late hour of the day especially when some of our benches are empty. Nevertheless, I want to thank these fine civil servants for doing an excellent job.

With your kind permission I beg to lay on the Table of this House the Report and recommendation that I am bring forward as it relates to the Crown Grant on claim Block 65A Parcel 47 to the estate of Tyler Welcome (deceased).

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Report is very succinct and self-explanatory but suffice it to say Block 65A Parcel 47 was unclaimed at the time of Cadastral Survey and as since been held by the Governor of the Cayman Islands as Crown Land unclaimed. A claim in respect of the parcel has been submitted and the Parcel is located, for the benefit of Members, along the Queens Highway in the north east coast registration section of the district of East End.

The Report on this matter was duly considered by our Cabinet under your leadership when you were there and we wish to give you credit and gratitude for expediting the Crown Grant to this stage.

There have been several surveys; it is included within the Report. There were three separate surveys and accompanying the Report all of the necessary documents are contained therein.

With those brief remarks I would ask for it to be now laid.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Creating a Substantial Health Benefit Program by William M. Mercer

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House a report entitled Creating a Substantial Health Benefit Program, Cayman Islands Government, March 2002.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Members may recall that following the collapse of the Government's health insurance programme with Caribbean Home, the Health Insurance and Health Fees Advisory Committee was appointed by the Governor in Council. Chaired by the Ministry's Permanent Secretary, Ms. Andrea Bryan, the Committee was tasked with looking at alternative ways of providing health care to civil servants and other entitled persons. This Committee recommended that the Ministry hire William M. Mercer Incorporated (Mercer) to conduct a review of the self-funded programme, assist in securing claims processing services through a third party administrator and assist the Ministry with attempts to obtain reinsurance protection.

It is in order to say that it was your good self at the time, as Minister, who appointed this consultancy and I think it has proven a very sound judgment.

The report entitled Creating a Sustainable Health Benefit Programme is the outcome of the Discovery and Analysis Phases of the Mercer consultancy. It is divided into ten sections and includes a recommended health benefit plan design as well as a business case for change in the way government provides health care coverage for civil servants and other persons deemed eligible for free health care coverage. The Report provides details of the various factors and influences affecting the viability of government's health benefit programme at the time and included recommendations for consideration and action.

I am pleased to note that the Ministry of Health Services assisted by other government departments, namely Personnel and Computer Services have made great strides towards implementing recommendations made by the Mercer consultants. Therefore I will use this opportunity to not only present the main findings but also to inform Members of this Honourable House of the significant changes that have occurred since the Report was received. I will begin by citing the highlights of Mercer's analysis.

Following the review of the Health Insurance and Health Services (Fees) Laws at the time two points were mentioned, which are: That risk and costs can be shifted to the government without shifting revenue; That increases in Health Services fees automatically increase the cost of the benefit programme for Government.

In reference to the workings of the Health Insurance Law 1997 and the Health Insurance Regulations 1997, the Mercer consultants noted the impact this Law was having on the Government's health benefit programme and I quote: "Many of the features shift additional risk and cost to the government, without transferring or generating appropriate revenues from the people or entities who benefit from such a transfer. This fact has added to the current unmanaged financial state of the programme."

Members will recall that in response to Private Members Motion (No. 9/01 of 2001) which I moved, a Select Committee of the entire Legislative Assembly was appointed to look at the problems being experienced with the workings of the Health Insurance Law 1997 and the Health Insurance Regulations 1997 and to make recommendations for their review. Thanks to the work of the Select Committee of this Honourable House, there is a revised Health Insurance (Amendment) Law and Regulations 2003. The amended Law and Regulations now clarify benefits options and coverage terms as well as matters such as portability and employer/employee responsibility. Here I must thank those MLAs who regularly attended meetings of the Select Committee making it possible to have a quorum and who contributed fully in deliberations. They know who they are.

However, we went one step further. Given the difficulties being experienced through inadequate enforcement of the Law and Regulations, a new law, the Health Insurance Commission Law 2003 was also passed and came into effect this month. This Law is the key factor in monitoring the Health Insurance Law and Regulations and will ensure the Government has more reliable information regarding the cost of health care and the provision of health insurance coverage. Also in response to the concern noted in the Mercer Report, Government through the formation of the Cayman Islands National Insurance Company (CINICO) is now in a position to offer the underserved section of the population affordable health insurance coverage as an alternative to their reliance on Government to assist them. The aim of this Company is to control the escalating costs of covering persons enrolled in the Government Health Benefit Programme and reduce overall cost for other persons through premium income.

Health Fees Law – Mercer consultants noted that increasing fees charged by the Health Services would also increase the cost of the Government Health Benefit Programme. However, the Report went on to note the possibility that Health Services actual costs may be the result of overstaffing and inefficiency. Members will recall that the Health Services (Fees) Law had not been amended since 1993 and the increases in 2002 were an attempt to bring the fees in line with the actual cost of providing care and treatment.

In July of that same year (2002) the Health Services Department became an Authority and was charged under law to administer the Government health care facilities in an efficient manner and in such a way as to maintain and promote the health of the patients of those facilities. Much has been done in this regard and the Authority is working to increase the scope of services without increasing their operating cost. Under Section 16 of the Health Services Authority Law, 2002 which came into effect on 1 March 2003 the Authority is responsible for determining the fees to be charged for services provided at all of its health-care facilities. However, any new proposed fees shall only come into effect ninety days after their submission to the Minister of Health Services if the Governor in Cabinet does not disallow them.

The second topic examined by the Mercer consultants was called Community Perception and the following two findings were recorded:

- There is a perception that the quality of services at Government facilities is substandard;
- Participants are not aware of the true cost of health care.

Based on interviews conducted by the consultants it was found that throughout the community and among Government employees there is widespread perception that the care provided at the Government Health Services Facilities is substandard. The consultants went on to state that persons who participated in the focus group did not have a clear understanding of the economics involved in the provision of health benefits and as a result they lacked an appreciation of the value of their coverage.

Government's significant investment in a computerised hospital information system for the Authority will help to promote evidence-based best practices for treating patients. It is worth noting that physicians have welcomed this aspect of the system and is already making good use of the available resources. The Mercer report clearly states that continued use of the Government facilities is a key component in developing a sustainable health benefit programme. Until cost control mechanisms are in place and a decision is taken on cost sharing, individuals will not be able to self-refer to private providers.

After the Health Services became an Authority, the Ministry of Health Services took on the responsibility of paying the Authority for services rendered to all persons for whom Government has taken responsibility for the provision of their health care benefits.

In 2003, the average monthly payment which included overseas medical was approximately C$2.5 million and continued to increase. Presently the average cost for services is about $2.8 million per month. This cost was predicted by the Mercer consultants should no change to the benefit plan be made and the health fees were increased as planned.

Under Plan Administration the report lists the following concerns:

- There is a lack of commonly accepted, standardised coding used by Health Services for tracking medical treatment and services;
- Government departments/agencies responsible for tracking benefit plan eligibility do not maintain automated files with standard data;
- There is limited financial and no utilisation data available for analysis or strategic planning purposes.

As noted two important elements for successful plan administration, is the ability to capture claim and utilisation data by participant and the need for accurate eligibility data. Mr. Speaker, let me emphasise that no health benefit plan will be successful unless these two elements are in place.

Regulation 9 of the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2003 now requires all healthcare providers to submit UB-92 claim forms using Current Procedural Terminology (CPT) codes and International Classification of Diseases (ICD) codes and other approved diagnosis and treatment codes where applicable.

The Ministry of Health Services engaged the Computer Services Department on a project to create a centralised database. Work started on verifying eligibility in June 2003 and today there is a government database that contains eligibility data on all persons entitled to medical benefits through the Government scheme. By using information in this centralised database CINICO (the new Government insurance company) was able to produce insurance cards for the plan participants.

The next section of the report deals with the Private Health Insurance Market and makes the following point:

- Financial stability within the health insurance market is a key to the ongoing success of employer mandated health benefit coverage.

The Mercer consultants recommended that in order for the Health Benefit Programme to be successful the Cayman Islands Government must employ a financially healthy and administratively efficient health insurance vendor/administrator. However, it also noted that none of the local insurers interviewed by the consultants offered health plans with enough utilisation controls nor any type of pre-admission review for hospitalisations. The Report went on to highlight the concern that for the most part, insurers rely on a paper system to determine benefit liability for submitted health claims. This dependency would result in continued dependence on more expensive manual claim administration. Therefore according to the Mercer consultants it was most likely that these insurance firms would find it difficult to accommodate significantly greater business growth.

I have found that the private sector is not always as efficient as they would like everyone to believe, particularly when it comes to meeting social needs. As noted earlier, in line with Government's objective to ensure that everyone has access to affordable and quality healthcare coverage, on 25 November, 2003 Cabinet approved the establishment of the Cayman Islands National Insurance Company (CINICO). It was no longer cost-effective or sustainable for Government to continue operating a self-funded scheme without proper management by persons who have health insurance expertise.

CINICO has a local office staffed with persons experienced in health insurance and the company has also entered into an agreement with an independently owned, full service third party administrator (TPA) called CBCA. The TPA will provide enrolled member services, claim payment administration and manage all cases referred overseas for medical treatment. CBCA is able to negotiate significant discounts on fees charged by overseas healthcare providers, which is an improvement on what the Cayman Islands Government on its own has been able to do in the past. The Government has chosen not to renew its contract with Baptist Hospital because this hospital is part of the extensive network of over 400,000 providers in the United States which CINICO's clients have access to through CBCA.

The report also makes the following comments on the Healthcare Delivery System:

- Limited access to outpatient care on Grand Cayman fuels patient dissatisfaction;
- The need for additional general medicine staff on Grand Cayman and under utilization of clinical staff on Cayman Brac may be addressed by reallocating resources.

Efforts are being made to correct those areas highlighted but there is still more to be done to bring about improvements in the delivery of healthcare.

The final section of the report addresses the topic of Programme Cost and Funding and notes that—

- The current plan does not include cost sharing, encourages over utilisation, and is not appreciated by participants.

Contributing factors that impact the rate of increase of the Government Health Benefit Programme are highlighted. The Report states that the cost of the programme will not only increase because of utilisation and lack of cost controls, but also because of an increasing rate disease prevalence and use of services associated with the advancing age of the covered population. It was projected by the Mercer consultants that if the Government continued to be the sole source of funding for the Health Benefit Programme the annual cost would be 80 per cent higher by 2003.

A decision has yet to be taken on whether to change the current plan design and implement the recommendations on costing and funding the programme as outlined in Section 6 of the report. I repeat no final decision has been taken however, the critical success factors listed in the report for establishing a sustainable Health Benefit Programme are being considered. Through CINICO the TPA will be providing Government with detailed reports by each Ministry/Portfolio on utilisation data as well as financial information. This will allow the Governor in Cabinet in the near future to make informed decisions on medical benefits provided to entitled persons.

In conclusion I am pleased to be able to inform the Members of this Honourable House that here we are in March 2004 and through the efforts of several Government entities the following short-term recommendations listed in the Mercer report have been implemented:

Government through CINICO will continue to self-insure benefit coverage;

A TPA has been hired to provide eligibility verification, claim adjudication, care and disease management, provider network and management reporting;

- All providers both government and private are required by law to use standardised medical coding and claims submission;
- Through the reassigning of resources, access to outpatient services has improved;
- Efforts are being made to educate participants on the cost of health care and the value of healthcare benefits to participants.

The Ministry of Health Services is now in a position to begin addressing programme issues from a strategic perspective, instead of a reactionary one. In the 2004/5 Budget period work will commence on implementing the National Strategic Plan for Health and the focus will be on achieving the following long-term actions to create a sustainable health benefit plan, as recommended by the Mercer consultants:

- Create the healthiest possible covered population;

- Manage healthcare delivery;
- Control the cost of care; and
- Institute medical consumerism.

Against the will of certain parties, Mr. Speaker, I was determined that the Mercer Report should be made public as it has been today. I believe that the public is always able to exercise sound judgement when it is afforded the opportunity to be informed. The Report should not be seen as a volume of criticisms but rather an insightful examination of conditions relating to health insurance coverage in the Cayman Islands and recommendations to improve same. I am happy to say that due to the dedicated work of the staff in the Ministry of Health Services and many other persons in the Public Service, it has been possible to make various positive changes. I thank them all. We cannot, however, rest at this point as there is still work to be done.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, the Honourable Leader of Government Business has requested that he make a statement at this time and I so order.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Statement on Barkers National Park

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

There have been questions regarding the acquisition of land for the Barkers National Park which I would like to address. I want to alert the public to the status of the national park in respect to two Parcels of land which were actively being negotiated by the Lands and Survey Department for purchase. The first Parcel is the Aamon Ebanks' Estate located on Block 9A and Parcel number 240. The estate represents family land and there are some members of the family who want to sell and others who do not.

The second Parcel of land is located on Block 9A Parcel 251 and is owned by the Azariah Ebanks Estate. Again some members of the family initially agreed to negotiate the sale of the land but others were not agreeing so the Executors have subsequently retracted their offer to sell the land and there are now no negotiations on this Parcel of property.

I wholeheartedly support the purchase of these properties and all other properties identified for the National Park. If the majority of family members agrees—I am speaking to the Aamon Ebanks Estate—I believe that through negotiation and compromise, the purchases can be successful as Government is willing to purchase those properties for the good of the people. The Minister of Planning on the advice of the Permanent Secretary has made recommendations to Cabinet, which are still under consideration. Because of Cabinet's confidentiality policy these recommendations cannot be discussed publicly now, however, there are non Cabinet members who are of the opinion that the Government should secure the land by compulsory acquisition. I want to state abundantly clear, Mr. Speaker that I have a healthy respect for the will of the families involved and I do not support compulsory acquisition.

Recently, some family members have attempted to spread misinformation for political gain by claiming that the purchase of the Barkers land is affiliated with a Dart project. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The plan for the Barkers National Park developed as a result of ongoing discussions with the United Kingdom on the Cayman Islands' environmental obligations. The preservation of pristine lands is a primary objective of our various environmental commitments. In order to achieve this goal, the Department of Environment applied for and was successful in receiving a grant from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO). This FCO grant funded the initial feasibility study for establishing a park at Barkers. Following this Report, the Government adopted a plan to acquire for the people of these Islands and conserve the pristine lands at Barkers for the establishment of the Cayman Islands' first national park.

This generation has the opportunity to secure a place in these Islands where present and future generations may enjoy Cayman's natural beauty preserved in its natural glory. It is regrettable that detractors may compromise this noble and necessary endeavour – detractors within government and detractors on the outside.

In concluding, Mr. Speaker, I want to highlight the fact that some Caymanians often complain about the Seven Mile Beach being owned by foreigners. Yes, that might be so, but we must remember that the majority of beach property in these Islands was sold long before many of us were elected to this House or even before we were born. Mr. Speaker, I say this to say that while these properties, and in particular the Aamon Ebanks estate, are in private hands the Government is willing to secure, by way of purchase, these valuable properties for present and future generations of these Islands if the families agree. Failing that, Mr. Speaker, I will soon tell my Ministry to withdraw from negotiations and to purchase the beach properties which are being used now by the general public for the purchase then for posterity.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Agreed. Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Question No. 112

No. 112:Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works to provide details of the number of administrative and managerial staff hired since July 2002 by the Health Services Authority along with:

- a) Annual salary;
- b) Commissions and/or gratuities;
- c) Inducement allowances; and
- d) Any other benefits.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

No commissions, gratuities or inducement allowances are provided by the Health Services Authority (HSA) for staff. In addition to annual salary staff are enrolled in the Public Service Pensions Plan. The HSA also covers the medical costs of its employees.

After changing the Health Services Department to an Authority in July 2002, a review of the management structure resulted in the following appointments:

1. In August 2002 as part of restructuring the departments within the Cayman Islands Hospital a Nurse/Business Manager was hired for the General Practice Service.

2. In October 2002 a Managing Director was appointed by the Board of Directors—this short-term position was created as there was a need for someone to carry out specific directives of the Board related to creating efficiencies within the organisation and assessing its financial position. After both objectives were achieved the post was made redundant—the appointment ceased in August, 2003.

3. In March 2003 an Accountant was hired to assist with the work of making the Health Services Authority a financially viable entity and in preparing financial statements for the first time ever. That person is now Acting Chief Financial Officer and is being paid an acting allowance for the additional duties associated with the post. The substantive post has recently been advertised.

4. In April 2003 the position of Network Administrator was filled to support the implementation of the CERNER Integrated Hospital Information System.

5. Almost a year later, in June 2003 it became apparent that there was an urgent need for a high level of expertise to assess the changes that had taken place within the organisation since July 2002 and determine the future direction of health services in these Islands. Therefore Cabinet supported the Health Services Authority Board in its decision to hire a new Chief Executive Officer (CEO) for 36 months to set and achieve strategic goals for the organisation. A relocation allowance was attached to the post. No pension is payable to the CEO as he is past the age required by law to be enrolled in a pension plan.

6. In August 2003 an Accounts Receivable Consultant was hired on a short-term locum contract. The locum left the Health Services Authority in December, 2003.

7. (i) In September 2003 a Consultant Chief Information Officer was hired to oversee the implementation of the CERNER Integrated Hospital Information System and determine the technology needs for the health services.

The substantive post has been advertised and is expected to be filled very soon.

(ii) A Director of Marketing, Web and Programme Development was also hired in September. That post has been made redundant and the post holder left the Health Services Authority in February, 2004.

8. (i) On 1st March, 2004 a Director of Human Resources was hired. The post holder is required to administer, plan, co-ordinate, direct and implement the personnel services for the Health Services Authority. The current post holder leaves the Health Services Authority at the end of March.

(ii) On 15th March, 2004 a Human Resources Manager was hired. The post holder is a recently qualified Caymanian who will understudy the Director of Human Resources in preparation for taking over the substantive post.

9. Under Standing Order 23 (4) information on the salaries of these posts is declined in that an answer, in the opinion of the Government, would be contrary to the public interest as the present holders of these posts should be afforded the privacy enjoyed by employees generally in these Islands. Additionally, exposure of the salaries of these individuals will have an effect on future recruitment of individuals to similar posts in the HSA who would be wary of having their income and benefits discussed in the public domain, particularly that the HSA, for good reason, now follows a private sector model of governance.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, before I call for supplementaries, I would advise that Standing Order 23(4) states: “A Member of the Government may decline to answer a question if an answer would, in the opinion of the Government, be contrary to the public interest.” I think it is quite in order for him to decline from answering those particulars.

I will now call for supplementaries.

The Elected Member for East End.

Supplementaries

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Suffice it to say that I am a little puzzled as to how the disclosures of salaries of a public servant could be contrary to the public interest which pays those salaries.

The Speaker: Could you go to your questions please?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: My question is, can the Minister tell us what would be contrary to disclosing the salaries of a public officer?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker that would be a question I think the Member should pose to the Honourable Chief Secretary because I am speaking to the salary of someone who is an employee of a government authority and that is the difference. I am sure the Member is already aware of that and I have already answered that question in the last part of the substantive answer.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, in the substantive answer No. 8, the Minister said: “(i) On 1st March, 2004 a Director of Human Resources was hired. The post holder is required to administer, plan, co-ordinate, direct and implement the personnel services for the Health Services Authority. The current post holder leaves the Health Services Authority at the end of March.” That means that this person is supposed to do all these things in one month.

“On 15th March, 2004 a Human Resources Manager was hired. The post holder is a recently qualified Caymanian who will understudy the Director of Human Resources in preparation for taking over the substantive post.” This means that the Human Resource Manager, who was hired two or three days ago, is going to understudy for two weeks and take over the job of human resources.

Can the Minister state if that is reasonable and sensible?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the person that has been hired as director of Human Resources is a highly qualified and experienced individual who, prior to the actual hiring, had familiarised herself considerably with the situation and the present post-holder is really a consultant, and is there until the end of the March. The person is already in post and arrangement for hand-over has been done through the Chairman of the Board and the management.

The second person has also been hired on 15 March to assist with this particular exercise. Should it be found that a longer period of handover might be helpful I think it lies within the management of the Hospital to request the consultant to stay on a while longer. I would emphasise that the person who is staying on is a consultant, so there is some flexibility in that.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Just for clarity, when the Minister refers in: “8. (i) On 1st March, 2004 a Director of Human Resources was hired.” That is one person.

Further down he says: “The current post holder leaves the Health Services Authority at the end of March.”

Is that another person or are we talking about the same person? I think that is where I am mistaken.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, it is another person.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town. We will allow two more supplementaries after this one.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister can tell us if the Health Services Authority is self-sufficient or if it is still being funded from the public purse.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Health Services Authority, which we used to know as the Government Health Services Department, is doing the best it has ever done financially. There is, however, in the budget a provision of $4.5 million which is allowed for subsidy. Only about half has been drawn to date, nevertheless it is available should they need it.

The HSA is being encouraged by the Board and all persons concerned, including myself, to pay its own way. It was understood that that was the whole purpose of it. The various changes that have been made in the way the finances are handled, and by the use of the computer system, have helped to improve that situation. It is doing extremely well, however, a subsidy is available to the extent that it might be needed and can be proven to the Ministry that it is needed.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, given that Government is subsidising the Authority by $4.5 million a year. I would ask the Honourable Minister if he does not think, how that $4.5 million is being spent should be subject to scrutiny by this Honourable House which will be called upon in the usual way to vote those funds?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I agree with the Honourable Member, it is something which will be done.

Reports will have to be tabled in this Honourable House as to what has happened in the Health Services Authority. What that represents in large part is also monies which have been allotted to the Ministry to pay the Health Services Authority.

If a person goes to the Health Services Authority now—within the 10,000 people who Government covers for medical care—the HSA now bills Government and Government pays them just as it would pay any other provider of services to it.

The one difference that has occurred since the Cayman Islands National Insurance Company (CINICO) has been formed—we have contracted with a third party administrator—is that the Hospital now bills the third party administrator who examines the bills to see whether they agree with what is shown on that bill and then, if they authorise the bill for that amount, the insurance company pays the bill and settles it.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the whole situation of finances has been made more accountable. It is not just getting a bill in block and settling it. It has come under much greater scrutiny for considerable savings.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, this is the last supplementary on this question.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, given all that the Honourable Minister has said about accountability and scrutiny of the financial affairs of the Health Services Authority by this Honourable House I would ask him ought not that scrutiny be permitted to extend to the salaries paid, particularly, to the senior employees of the Authority?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, as the Honourable Member would know, the situation with the Budget has changed to one of an accrual system and Government purchases certain services. For those services it is no longer the line items, et cetera, which existed in the budget before. Even when we had another system of budgeting it would show the salary of a post within a salary range; it did not set down the salary of individuals.

Salaries are a very personal matter and I think anyone would agree with that. The fact that this question has been posed in this Honourable House would be airing people's personal salaries which has nothing to do with the ultimate approval by the House in truth. We are paying for services which require the payment of certain staff.

We also need to take into account the fact that the Hospital is now earning its own money to pay its own staff. Again, I say that salaries are personal and it cannot help the HSA in recruiting staff—be they from Timbuktu, the United States, England or wherever—to know that discussion in the Legislative Assembly which will be aired tonight is airing their salaries to the world.

I know what this question is all about. They wish for me to talk about the salary of the Chief Executive Officer and under the Standing Orders I am empowered to decline to do that. I do not see it as helping this country or anyone in it. I can give them no more information.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, the next question please.

Question No. 113

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town and Leader of the Opposition.

No. 113: Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works to give an update on the situation between the Civil Aviation Authority and Island Air Limited.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Civil Aviation Authority and Island Air Limited reached an agreement with regard to resolving the issue of outstanding landing fees claimed by the Civil Aviation Authority. On Friday 30 January 2004 Island Air paid an agreed sum to the Civil Aviation Authority to settle the entire debt and this matter is now concluded.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?
The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, could the Minister state if he finds it necessary to exercise Standing Order 23(4) in this instance or may I ask what the amount owing was and what the settlement was?

The Speaker: The first part of that question is not necessary, Honourable Minister. If a question is asked and a Minister deems it appropriate to state that he cannot answer under that section of Standing Order he will say so. Please answer the second part of the question.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, this was a matter that actually went before the courts. It is a matter which was outstanding for nine years and I think it is in the interest of the public to know that a debt owed to it over that period of time has been finally concluded.

Therefore, I would answer the Honourable Member. The details of the agreement were that Island Air, on or before the 30th day of January 2004, would pay CI$500,000 to the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) and it would waive the sum of CI$60,000 owed to Island Air by the Civil Aviation Authority in full and final settlement of the plaintiff's claim. Once Island Air had paid the CI$500,000 to the Civil Aviation Authority, Island Air would be discharged of any further liability in respect of the CAA's claim in action. The payment by Island Air to the CAA of the said sum of CI$500,000 would be a full and final settlement of all claims that either party may have had against the other or any other party arising out of the matter of this action. Each party would pay its cost of an incident to the proceedings therein. The amount claimed by the Civil Aviation Authority was $1.1 million.

The other side of the coin is that this was a matter that had gone for almost 10 years. In that time there had been two or three different Ministers and administrations that had dealt with this matter. Unlike what the press said, at the time that I first answered a question on this a year or so ago, I did know what had to be done to collect it, and I did that.

However, in fairness to the defendants — Island Air—I have read correspondence I supposed would only have transacted between Government and another party and no one took the opportunity to arrive at a decision.

There was no way for me, or the Court, I dare say, to know what transacted in those meetings between Government Ministers before me and I certainly was not prepared to try to guess that.

Thus, my position was this matter should go to the courts making them the ultimate authority. If they said money was not owed then that was fine. If they said it was owed then that was also fine.

The Civil Aviation Authority hired lawyers and it was litigated and the Court gave the opportunity for discussion and negotiation. Personally, I believe that in all of the circumstances each person can walk away feeling that a degree of fairness was reached.

The Speaker: I will allow two further supplementaries.
The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister state, as I am certain all of us are happy that the matter has come to conclusion, what effect the concluded matter will have on the relationship between Island Air's inter-island service and the inter-island service being conducted now by Cayman Airways?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, when this matter was concluded I was a very happy person. A statement was issued by the Ministry in which I was quoted as saying—not necessarily in the exact words—that I was happy that it had concluded and that I trusted that it would mean that Island Air would continue to offer services as before because I personally believe that competition was good.

My understanding at this time is that Cayman Airways now operates two De Havilland Twin Otters [DHC-6] that provide regular scheduled service. I have seen in the newspaper that Island Air is now offering service as a charter operation.

I also gather that it still flies quite regularly to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I understand that they are offering a reduced rate so competition is good. The Minister responsible is saying they are providing a good service there so Cayman Brac and Little Cayman have benefited from the whole situation and I understand most of the flights are full. There are better time schedules and everything else and there is nothing that hinders Cayman Airways from co-operating with Island Air or vice versa. I have heard of at least one incident where that did happen.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, the two supplementaries follow the last supplementary that you asked.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, just so that we might know—and certainly all of us are happy to hear that the situation is seemingly working out for everyone's benefit—can the Minister state, although I know he is not directly responsible, if Cayman Airways intend to continue the service that they started with the twin Otters and the inter-island route?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, in keeping with the policy of the Ministry in relation to Cayman Airways and undertaking to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to provide regular and dependable service, Cayman Airways is providing that service and will continue to provide that as long as there is a need for that to be done.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition; this is the last supplementary.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, that is good news. Can the Minister state, with the situation having concluded, if the arrangement in place now with Island Air, Cayman Airways and the Civil Aviation Authority with regard to landing fees is one where it is a pay-as-you-go situation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The operation of Cayman Airways, which is called Cayman Express, has been broken into a separate entity to offer that service and it is required to break even in its operations. For sometime now I have known that Island Air had begun to pay its fees and to the best of my knowledge both entities are now up to date on their fees.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

Question No. 114

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town and Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

No. 114: Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works if there are any plans to upgrade the Owen Roberts International Airport terminal.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Civil Aviation Authority commissioned an Airport Master Plan study for the Owen Roberts International Airport for which a report was submitted in November 2002.

This Plan is the first comprehensive report of its kind prepared for the Civil Aviation Authority. The report includes provisions for upgrading the main commercial terminal building, developing a new general aviation terminal facility, constructing a partial parallel taxiway and lengthening the runway.

It was recommended that implementation of the Plan be completed in phases with the main commercial terminal building upgrade identified for Phase 1 in this development project.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Minister state at what stage the main commercial terminal building upgrade is placed since it is Phase 1? Is it still being talked about?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Report has been looked at by the Ministry. The Civil Aviation Authority has taken certain steps to engage persons who might have an interest in developing the terminal and taking part in the development process but nothing has been done yet to formally go out to any particular bid and so on for the building.

An assessment of the structural integrity of the present building has been undertaken to see whether improvements can be made as have been envisaged and that is a process which, if not completed, should be reaching near completion.

I would say that ever since the word has been out that there is a master plan much interest has been expressed by entities who would wish to be contractors or who to participate by funding it. There have been various statements of interest from different parties.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. The Minister mentioned two things in that answer to the supplementary. He mentioned the master plan and I am not prepared to assume that the master plan he speaks about is the plan which is included in the report. However, if that is the case, can the Minister give us some idea of exactly what the recommendation contains with regard to Phase 1?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I could not give any specifics as to what has been suggested in Phase 1 because there are a number of things; however the plan does provide for a 20-year phased development.

One of the things that has been recommended is that the terminal be moved further eastward which would make it closer to where aircraft turn around approaching from the west, and that certain developments be made to the present terminal which would then serve for smaller light aircraft.

I could not accurately state exactly what is in the Phase 1 without having the document to look at it.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if, given the availability of the Report, it is the considered opinion of the Ministry that the Phase 1 process be recommended and if Phase 1 is something that needs to be acted on immediately, or what kind of time line is suggested based on the existing traffic and the load expectations that may be anticipated?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, work needs to be done on the present facility right now because it is pretty shabby in certain areas and certain things need to be done. There is an everlasting leak that cannot be found because it is a flat roof the way it is constructed. Attempts have been made to find out exactly where the leak is but that has proved somewhat of a mystery.

The terminal has outgrown itself and the number of people coming in or going out is much larger than originally planned for and something needs to be done about that.

Whether it makes sense to spend a lot of money to develop that further to meet the immediate need or whether it is better to begin to build a new facility and try to make-do with this until the other one is done is the major question that has to be answered at this time.

I have not received technical advice on that. In recent times I know it is something which the director of Civil Aviation and the Board was looking at. I could not accurately state what the situation is there now, however it needs immediate attention. The numbers are much higher than it was originally built for. There are more aircrafts and more persons at one time, particularly at the time of arrivals.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Minister can tell us, in all those plans that he outlined in the comprehensive Report, if there were any recommendations on the development of any revenue earning areas for the Civil Aviation Authority such as hangars, et cetera, on the properties.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I would not want to say that hangars were included. My recollection is that would be a part of the process, however within the plan there are definitely recommendations in terms of areas where revenue could be enhanced.

I would just say that as soon as that plan has been accepted by the Cabinet I intend to make it available and table it here in this Legislative Assembly. However, that part of it has not happened as yet and I am working towards that as quickly as I can.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, Madam Clerk could you continue please?

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/03

Suspension of Standing Order 14(3)

The Speaker: Honourable Members, the reason for the suspension of Standing Order 14(3) is that on Thursdays, Private Members' Motions take precedence over Other Business on the Order Paper. It is followed by Private Member's Bills, and then followed by Government Business.

It is proposed that the Private Members' Motions today will come after Government Business, thus the need for the suspension of Standing Order 14(3).

I would call on the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business to move the suspension.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 14(3) to allow Government Business to be taken before the Private Member's Motion which is on the Order Paper.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(3) be suspended.

All those in favour please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 14(3) suspended to allow Government Business to take precedence over Private Member's Motions.

Suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46(1) and (2)

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I would just like to say, prior to moving the suspension of the two Standing Orders, that I do apologise to you and this House that it is necessary to do this.

Had these Bills been completed prior to now and there had not been the time constraint that we must depart this building because of the need for it by the Court I would have circulated the Bills for a longer time.

I ask the indulgence of this Honourable House to suspend Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) to allow these Bills to be dealt with in a shorter period of time that would normally be allowed.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) be suspended.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) (2) suspended to allow the Bills to be read a first time.

SECOND READINGS

The Civil Aviation Authority Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Aviation.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move a Bill for a Law to Repeal and Replace the Civil Aviation Authority Law (1997 Revision); to Divest the Civil Aviation Authority of its Functions in Relation to the Management and Control of Airports; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved, does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, and Honourable Members, the approval of the Civil Aviation Authority Bill, 2004 will facilitate the separation of the regulatory and operational aspects of civil aviation operations in the Cayman Islands, an action that has been too long outstanding. This Bill seeks to repeal and replace the Civil Aviation Authority Law (1997 Revision); to Divest the Civil Aviation Authority of its Functions in Relation to the Management and Control of Airports. The separation will allow for the establishment of an Airport's Authority and also ensure that the Cayman Islands are compliant with the standards and practices of the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO).

Established in 1987, the Civil Aviation Authority has made great strides in developing acceptable regulatory and operation standards for civil aviation in the Cayman Islands. Although the industry has seen tremendous growth over the years the Authority can no longer continue the process of managing both regulatory and operational functions. To meet the demand for improved services with respect to international standards there is now a need to improve and redefine aviation operations in the Cayman Islands.

The United Kingdom Government has also directed all overseas territories to separate operational and regulatory functions for the avoidance of any conflict of rules, which is also in keeping with ICAO's recommendation.

Under the direction of the United Kingdom's Department of Transportation, Air Safety Support International has been established as a mechanism to ensure that overseas territories are compliant with the above recommendation and also, to provide a more cohesive system of civil aviation safety regulations in the overseas territories. If an overseas territory were unable to separate operational and regulatory functions the Air Safety Support International will be appointed as the regulator for civil aviation in that respective territory.

In light of the need to bring the Islands' civil aviation sector into compliance with ICAO guidelines a consultant was hired to advise the Civil Aviation Authority and the Ministry on the process for the creation of an Airport's Authority and the allocation of responsibility for aviation matters between the Civil Aviation Authority and an Airport's Authority.

Following a review of the aviation practices in the Cayman Islands the consultant recommended that the Civil Aviation Authority should be responsible for the following functions:

- a) All aviation safety services including airworthiness inspections, personnel licensing, aircraft registration, et cetera;
- b) the regulation of air navigation services;
- c) the regulation of aerodromes; and
- d) the provision of air navigation services.

Accordingly, and in addition to other functions, section 5(1)(a) of The Civil Aviation Authority Bill, 2003 sets forth that the responsibilities of the Authority are -

“(a) such functions as are, for the time being, conferred on the Governor by or under any Air Navigation (Overseas Territories) Order or other regulations of a similar nature made under any United Kingdom Act with respect to the regulation of civil aviation in the Cayman Islands (including the registration of aircraft), the safety of air navigation and aircraft (including airworthiness), the control of air traffic, the certification of operators of aircraft and the licensing of air crews, the licensing of air transport services, and the certification and licensing of airports;

(b) ... the provision and control of air navigational services; ...”.

It is acknowledged that the separation of regulatory and operational responsibilities is generally considered to be the ideal scenario for the development of an institutional framework of civil aviation. To facilitate this process an Airport's Authority will also be established to maintain the operational component of airports as discussed in paragraph one above.

It should nevertheless be noted that the Civil Aviation Authority will continue to provide air navigation services, which are not a regulatory function. There are two sound reasons for this:

(1) It is necessary for the Civil Aviation Authority to have additional revenue streams if it is to be a viable organisation and independent from government subsidy; and

(2) from the human resource perspective air navigation personnel will provide the pool for future regulators.

By keeping air navigation services within the CAA the significant investment in training will be kept within a single organisation.

It is important to note that ICAO, while recommending separation of regulatory and operational functions, states that this should be done only as far as is practicable and that member states should take the economic viability of their civil aviation organisations into consideration.

The Bill has been circulated to Honourable Members albeit in a short period of time. It makes for no surprises to the best of my understanding and belief, it is simply an attempt to bring about the separation of two functions; that of regulatory to that of operational.

It is before this Honourable House for the will and pleasure of Members. I invite Honourable Members to support the passage of this Bill.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? If it is the wish of Members we will take the morning break for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 12.12 pm

Proceedings resumed at 12.32 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition speaking.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you for your direction, Mr. Speaker.

This proposed Bill for a Law to Repeal and Replace the Civil Aviation Authority Law (1997 Revision), and what I call its companion legislation, which is a Bill for a Law to establish the Cayman Islands Airport Authority are, certainly in concept, two pieces of legislation that the Opposition welcome.

We are in agreement, from experience at varying levels, with the principle of separating the operational and regulatory functions of civil aviation here in the Cayman Islands. We have seen on occasion where the two co-habiting have caused not only conflict of interest but problems with resources on the one end causing difficulties with positive results that are needed on the other end.

The Minister, in piloting this Bill through, has spoken to the fact that this is in keeping with the recommendations of the international organisation called ICAO. If we do any reading at all about civil aviation it is accepted as the ideal scenario worldwide. We can safely say that from the experiences of other jurisdictions, not only from conceptualising the separation but from the experiences of other territories, it is the wise thing to do.

As is usual we, the Opposition, will do our best to look at the proposed legislation and make comments on individual clauses outside of the concepts that are being promoted as we see our responsibility as one which should be to make note or bring to light any specific points in the proposed legislation which the Government might wish to look at before passage of the Bill.

Just one more point before I go into the specific areas to be addressed. The Minister noted —and we want to put on record that we are in agreement with the circumstances being proposed —that the CAA, being the new regulatory body, will have as part of its function an operational section, air navigation services or as we loosely term it “air traffic control.”

If one were to nit-pick one might say, “Why leave the air navigation services with the Civil Aviation Authority? However, the fact is the purpose of that exercise is first of all an economic reality in order for the Civil Aviation Authority to not have to be subsidised and to be able to function autonomously and be able to make its own decisions under the parameters of the law with its own assets and its own income.

We accept that and we do not believe that this would interfere with the regulatory functions of the Civil Aviation Authority. The fact is, as mentioned by the Minister, we also agree that having the air navigation services, under the umbrella of the Civil Aviation Authority, will provide the continuity and the succession planning that is needed for the human resources that will be continually required within that Authority to be able to perform the regulatory functions and the training and background that is necessary.

As has been proven in the past with the Authority being under one umbrella, those who are both in middle management and at the top end of management in the present Civil Aviation Authority are just about all Caymanian individuals who came up through the ranks, got the necessary training and are now qualified to perform the functions that are necessary.

Thus, we are in agreement with the principle that is being proposed, so, lay the ground work because all is well on that end.

Moving to the Bill itself there are a few areas that we thought might need some comments. The very first one is on pages 14 and 15. It is more of a question than anything else.

In subsection (4), the middle of page 14, it speaks to the constitution of the Civil Aviation Authority Board and it reads: “The Board shall consist of a chairman, a deputy chairman and not less than three nor more than seven other directors, two of which seven directors shall be public officers, ...”

Page 15, section 8(5) it says: “The quorum of the Board shall be not less than one half of the total number of directors.”

This is pure addition. It seems to read that the chairman and the deputy chairman, while they have their designation, are also deemed to be directors. If that is the case, that is two people, and the minimum and maximum numbers are three and seven; when you use those figures you always end up with odd numbers. If you are speaking to a quorum being not less than one half of the total number of directors you will have to divide somebody into two. Hence, I think we need to look at those figures. Probably the answer to that, Mr. Speaker, is to use even numbers for minimums and maximums and you will be out of the woods. The only way I am not right is if the chairman and deputy chairman are not directors. It reads on further in the Bill and it speaks to them as directors. When we go to page 16 and look at section 9 it speaks about a director with a pecuniary interest. With your permission may I read?

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

It says: “If a director has any pecuniary interest, direct or indirect, in any contract, proposed contract, licence or other matter and is present at a meeting of the Board at which any of the foregoing is to be considered, he shall at or before the meeting or before the matter is considered disclose the fact and shall leave the meeting for the duration of and not take part in the consideration or discussion of or vote on the matter.” It speaks to being guilty of an offence if you do not do that.

Subsection (5) reads: “This section does not apply to an interest in a contract or licence or proposed contract or licence or other matter which a director has as a member of the public or to an interest in any matter relating to the terms on which the right to participate in any service is offered to the public.”

Perhaps this is something that has been the norm prior to this. It may well have been a part of the other legislation; I am not sure because I did not have time to go into other existing legislation.

It seems to me that if that director has any interest in a contract or a licence and there is any dealing with it whatsoever at a meeting of the Board —if, as I understand it, this section is dealing with a meeting of the Board—then I do not see any circumstances which would exempt that director from declaring that interest.

Subsection (5) speaks to it not applying in those circumstances. I believe that if there is any interest whatsoever, whether as a member of the public or as a director, if you are going to participate as a director in a meeting which has any effect at all on that interest you have to declare that interest.

I do not see the logic in an exemption in subsection (5), unless there is something that I did not catch in reading the proposed legislation. We need to take a second look at that because I am certain the spirit and the intent of the Bill is not to cause for any one, having been appointed a director, to be under public scrutiny with any question marks regarding their integrity—and more so the Board itself—of its functions. Hence, the point is raised.

I am little bit confused because it goes further, extending the point that I just raised. With your permission Mr. Speaker, I would like to read section 10 (4): “Where a director has an indirect pecuniary interest in a contract or licence or proposed contract or licence or other matter by reason only of a beneficial interest in securities of a company or other body, and the nominal value of these securities does not exceed one thousand dollars or one-thousandth of the total nominal value of the issued securities or of any class of issued securities, section 9 shall not prohibit him from taking part in the consideration or discussion of or voting on the contract or licence or proposed contract or licence or other matter, without prejudice however to his duty to disclose his interest.”

This is what I call the benchmark section. This subsection seems to me to be drawing a benchmark that if one's interest is considered to be nominal—because it quotes figures of “... one thousand dollars or one-thousandth of ... ”—then while you have to declare it you can still participate in the discussions and vote on it. I have to say that I do not agree with that.

I understand that this is not a question of an individual's integrity. You might find it impossible to have any one being part or Director of a Board and a situation of this nature not occur. The only difference that I speak to with what the proposed piece of legislation says is the fact that, in my view,—and I speak on behalf of the Opposition because we have discussed this—one should not put the Board in that type of situation because perception becomes reality.

It should not be difficult to have the legislation crafted in such a manner where, regardless of the interest, direct or indirect, it is declared and for that specific issue the person simply does not participate. If he or she is not supposed to participate at another level then I think this level should be the same. The point I am making is that subsection (4) should be taken out of the legislation because a person who would fall in the category of subsection (4), if it did not exist, would simply fall into the other category of section 9.

What we are doing with section 10(4) is laying two different categories of interest, and I do not believe we should do that. There is absolutely no benefit to the Authority in having that type of two-tiered disclosure from the point of view that someone can participate in voting once they declare the interest because it is less of an interest than another. I do not think it should be done like that, Mr. Speaker, therefore I raise the point and the Government can decide how they see it. I do not see it as a big issue because certainly the legislation cannot be crafted for an individual. There should be absolutely no reason why it cannot be considered in that light.

When we move on to speak to the personnel of the Authority I am pleased. When I looked at 11(1) I was not pleased because I was beginning to ask to some questions. I have to refer to this section and then the others afterwards. It says: “The Director-General shall be appointed by the Governor, at such remuneration and on such terms and conditions as the Governor may think fit, after consultation with the Board.”

My first question was, without having read anything else, what about terms and conditions under which the person is employed at present, assuming that there is a transition from existing personnel in the Civil Aviation Authority into the new Civil Aviation Authority after hiving off the airport's authority?

When we turn the page and go to section 14 there was a little question about this earlier this morning during Question Time.

We want to be very clear with this; section 14(1) reads: “A public officer employed in the Authority immediately before the date of commencement of this Law ... ” that is, now “... may, on or after that date, be offered employment by the Authority [just like the Director-General in what I read earlier] and, if he accepts the offer, shall become an employee of the Authority on terms and conditions of employment no less favourable than those that apply to his office in his employment in the Authority, except- (a) to the extent other terms and conditions are agreed between such employee and the Authority: ... ”

I am not suggesting that the terms and conditions under which the new Authority might employ an existing employee of the Civil Aviation Authority might be less favourable. It says the person shall be employed under no less favourable conditions except “... to the extent other terms and conditions are agreed between such employee and the Authority; ... ”

One might say that employee should be able to defend his position to ensure that the new terms of employment are no less favourable, but why have this in the legislation? What this is telling me is that the Authority may well have conditions that are less favourable, and I must say that I do not like it. It depends on which side of the fence you want to look; whether it is from the point of view of the employee or the employer. I do not see why this is flagged up like this and there is an exception however I am certain the Minister will be able to address that. It may be an unfounded fear that I have.

Moving on, Mr. Speaker. Page 19 clarifies: “(b) that disciplinary matters shall be dealt with in accordance with the Labour Law (2001 Revision) and the disciplinary rules and procedures of the Authority and not under General Orders.”

We have just seen the Employment Bill being passed quite recently whereby public officers come under the umbrella of that Law. However, I am not so sure whether all civil servants are removed from General Orders or not. Obviously, this set will be.

The real troublesome point here requires clarification because I do not think there is any intent that would be untoward.

I should read the subsection before section 15(1): “14. (2) Pension arrangements and medical benefits relating to an employee specified under subsection (1) shall be subject to sections 15 and 16 respectively.”

Section 15(1) reads: “The Authority shall subscribe to the Public Service Pensions Fund in accordance with the provisions of the Public Service Pension Law (2003 Revision) for the payment of pensions to all employees of the Authority.”

When we examine the Public Service Pensions Law there are two defined categories depending on tenure and date of employment. Those defined categories—if my memory serves me correctly—are defined benefits and defined contributions. I believe it was either 1988 or 1999 when the Law was changed.—I am not sure of the date but that is not important. Any civil servant being employed after that date was automatically placed on the defined contributions scheme. Employees hired prior to that date who were on the defined benefit scheme retained that scheme and such benefits. This does not speak to which scheme in the Public Service Pensions Law, it only speaks to the Public Service Pensions Fund.

What I am not clear about is if the majority people who are now employed with CAA—as I understand it one set is going to be with the CAA and one set will be with the Airport's Authority—will have the defined benefits scheme. However, there will be two sets of them depending on the time of their employment. What we want to make sure of is, if these two new Authorities are created and they are actually hired anew to those Authorities whatever scheme they were under, given what this proposed legislation speaks to, does not cause for all of them to go under the defined contribution scheme.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, we have reached the hour for the luncheon break. Is this a convenient time?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we will take the luncheon break at this time and return at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.00 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.45 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition, continuing.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, when we took the break I was speaking to the pension benefits of the employees of the new Authority.

I was questioning under section 15 whether those employees of the existing Civil Aviation Authority, who were under the defined benefits scheme, would retain those same benefits with the shift to the new Authority. In my view, it was not spelled out very clearly.

Section 14 says: “Pension arrangements and medical benefits relating to any employee specified under subsection (1) shall be subjected to sections 15 and 16 respectively.”

Section 16 says: “The Health Insurance Law (2003 Revision) shall apply to the Authority except that the Authority may elect to provide free or subsidised medical benefits in lieu of, or in addition to, insurance coverage under that Law.”

We are moving into the health insurance aspect of it. Before I speak to that, I would like to go back to section 15(3) where it says: “The Authority shall be considered to be an employer for the purposes of the Public Service Pensions Law (2003 Revision) and an employee referred to under subsection (2) (a) shall not be considered to have retired from Service for the purpose of that Law.”

That assists the situation however I have raised all of this to make sure that the Law spells it out so that the employees during the transition have no fear of what their employment arrangements are going to be with the two new Authorities. That is the entire point.

Whatever benefits they were deriving or are deriving now should at least obtain in the move forward. With regard to health insurance, if my understanding is correct, the existing Civil Aviation Authority is the only authority which is subject to public service regulations and General Orders. Thus, while it is an authority, what obtains presently is that it is managed and run as if it were simply an arm of the Civil Service from the view point of pensions, health and discipline. Whatever health benefits are derived by civil servants will obtain for employees of the Civil Aviation Authority.

The Minister spoke earlier this morning about the new government health insurance company and the move is to, if I understand correctly, have all civil servants insured using the Cayman Islands National Health Insurance Company (CINICO).

Section 16 says: "The Health Insurance Law (2003 Revision) shall apply to the Authority except that the Authority may elect to provide free or subsidised medical benefits in lieu of, or in addition to, insurance coverage under that Law."

I have not been able to assess whether that is more beneficial to the employer, employees or less, hence I am not quite sure. All I know is that whatever this is saying, it should allow the employees, when they move into their new employment arrangement — whether it is the Civil Aviation Authority or the Airport's Authority—to have the same the health insurance benefits that they have now.

There is another question that we have had much discussion on, and sometimes arguments over, in this Honourable Legislative Assembly. I am speaking about section 18(4). It is not limited to the Civil Aviation Authority. For many years we have talked about it and the Honourable Third Official Member has alluded to some arrangement being made. With your permission, Mr. Speaker, this subsection reads as follows—

The Speaker: Just to say, Honourable Member, when you are quoting from a Bill you are debating, you may quote freely.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Sir.

"The Authority shall pay an annual dividend into the general revenue of the Islands as determined by the Authority and the Financial Secretary in consultation with the Minister based on the availability of funds and planned expenditures, and the balance shall be carried forward to the account of the following year."

I know of many arguments in the past with attempts to try to get funds from the various authorities to either prevent a year-end deficit or to assist with a recurrent balancing of the budget. As this reads, I am reminded that on past occasions Governments have coerced the authorities to engage in a certain level of borrowing—at the time the borrowings being diverted to central government's revenue—and Government giving the commitment to repay the borrowings but not wanting it to show up on their own books.

I believe that this subsection speaks to a certain methodology which is that this dividend shall be paid into the general revenue and it is to be "... determined by the Authority and the Financial Secretary in consultation with the Minister ...".

The Honourable Third Official Member is not here. His deputy is acting. In the past when we spoke about this there has always been a leaning to allow a certain latitude so that it can be treated each time on its own merit. Legislation should not be crafted in that manner. As far as I am concerned, if historical data from the Authority, for instance, needs to be collected and looked at to see what is either a percentage of their earnings or a figure to be named, based on what history has proven that the Authority has been able to afford, plus given their new circumstances where we now have two Authorities, then do something about that. However, leaving it like this, Mr. Speaker, leaves it just like how it was.

I am not saying the answer is that easy. I believe that there should be a minimum agreed upon and then if the Authority finds itself in a certain position that it has surplus then that part of it can be agreed upon. To leave it open-ended like this is a danger given the history of it. It so happens now that we are speaking about the Civil Aviation Authority but I say that not all of the Authorities are going to be in the same financial position. We understand that the formula for each of them would be different however I think it should be more defined rather than be left like this. This, to me, sounds like what would be used in any law for any one of the Authorities.

At least, during my time here, history has proven that this does not work so well. Mr. Speaker, I dare say you have a bit more experience than I do with it and you know that it has not worked well.

Just a general comment for the drafting personnel and I am not going to quote the specific instances, nevertheless there are a couple of occasions in both of these Bills where it is referred to mostly as "Governor".

There is the definition section which defines that "Governor" means "Governor in Cabinet" but it says "Governor in Cabinet" on some occasions in the Bill. Thus, sometimes it reads as "Governor" and sometimes it reads as "Governor in Cabinet". It needs to be consistent when the definition says "Governor" means "Governor in Cabinet".

There is not much else in the actual Bill however there is another point that I would like to address.

Section 26, Part V on page 22: "There is vested in the Authority –

- (a) the land with the buildings and works thereon listed in the Schedule, together with such other land used, at the date of commencement of this Law, for civil aviation purposes, as the Governor may at the time direct; and
- (b) the plant, equipment, tools, and other goods the property of the Government, used in connection in civil aviation prior to the date of commencement of this Law, recorded in the inventory prepared at the direction of the Financial Secretary, approved by the Authority and entered as assets in the accounts of the Authority."

I have not had a chance to go through the Bill in fine detail so I will simply ask the question. I want to make sure that somewhere in this Bill it speaks to existing direct loans that the Civil Aviation Authority may have with the Government and that is addressed in the manner that it should be. If there are no loans outstanding then that is a better situation, however I do not know if there are any loans existing. Therefore if so, then exactly how does the Bill address the situation?

Section 31 reads: “Neither the Authority, nor any member, shall be liable in damages for anything done or omitted in the discharge or purported discharge of their respective functions, responsibilities, powers and duties under this law unless it is shown that the act or omission was in bad faith.”

The question is who or what entity could be liable? It seems like neither the Authority nor any member.

There is also an indemnification clause in section 32 which speaks to the Authority indemnifying the member against all claims, damages, costs or expenses. I suspect that it would be the shareholder which would be the Cayman Islands Government.

If this Bill which will be a Law—I am not professing that I know the entire situation—I would think that someone should be able to be liable.

If it is the Government and it is the intent of the Law not to state it and someone will have to find it out then that is fine too. However, it makes the point that neither the Authority nor any member shall be liable unless certain conditions exist which shows that the act of omission was in bad faith. There is a question Mr. Speaker.

It is noticeable in section 37(2) that perhaps when an investigation is being carried out for an accident, et cetera, the Director-General, as in the new terminology of the Civil Aviation Authority, shall have towards the general public powers equivalent to those exercisable by the Commissioner of Police in the carrying out of his duties “... and the Director-General shall take precedence over the Commissioner when ...” he “... is engaged in investigating an accident or incident involving aircraft.”

That may be what is acceptable and normal in the industry.

This is one that I am not one hundred percent familiar with. It would seem that depending on the type of investigation that evolves—for instance, an investigation which is of a technical nature where a tyre had blown on landing or an engine was in good repair—then I can certainly appreciate the way this is.

However, what happens if it is obvious that the investigation is one which needs to detect some type of foul play? Is it that while this Law gives the Director-General precedence over the Commissioner when investigating an accident, the Director-General will then readily realise and accept that this case is not of a technical nature but that foul play is suspected so therefore let the police take over? If that is the kind of without-saying then perhaps it is fine.

It is just the way it is worded here. What it says to me is that the Director-General will take it on his own whether he wants to give the Commissioner the authority to conduct an investigation.

My question is, is that the way it should be? We need to look at that. As I said, if we are speaking to an investigation of an accident or incident involving aircraft of a technical nature, fine, however when there is foul play suspected it is a whole different matter. We might wish to address that in some form.

Section 42(1) speaks to: “The person who immediately before the date of commencement of the new Law was the holder of the office of Director, shall hold the office of Director-General under and for the purposes of the new Law as if that person had been appointed under the new Law on the same terms and conditions that applied to the office of Director under the repealed Law.”

This speaks to the benefits and terms of employment under which that person is employed right now however it only speaks to the Director who will be the Director-General.

I am just about completed with making the observations in this Bill. I just want to make the point that I am a bit baffled with this companion legislation in certain sections that I have spoken about; where the conditions in the Airports Authority Law are different from the one in this. I wonder why. We will get to that, I think.

If you look on page 26 of the Bill which is the last page, section 42(8) specifically states: “On and after the date of commencement of this Law, neither the Governor [which means the “Governor in Cabinet”] the Civil Aviation Authority nor the Director shall be liable in damages for anything done or omitted in the discharge or purported discharge of their respective functions under the former Law, unless it is shown that the act or omission was in bad faith.”

This again, goes back to the point I made a few minutes ago about who is liable and who is not and who can be. Those observations are made and those questions are asked in an attempt for the Opposition to participate in the passage of this Bill; to give us the comfort zone that we can participate in the voting process without wondering whether we should support it or not.

There is nothing fundamental that we disagree with in the proposed legislation. There are just those points that we have come up with and raised to the fore to see if they can be addressed before the vote is taken. Perhaps there may be a few of the points raised that have good reason to remain how they are and the Minister can so explain and we will listen. I suspect that the majority of points raised are points which need to be addressed to make the legislation tidier and perhaps more in line. We will await the Minister's reply and certainly look forward to supporting the Bill. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I have a few very brief comments to make on this Bill for a Law to Repeal and Replace the Civil Aviation Authority Law (1997 Revision); and to Divest the Civil Aviation Authority of its Functions in Relation to the Management and Control of Airports; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The need for this change has already been spoken to by the Minister and obviously this is an important exercise for us to carry out in the Cayman Islands to ensure that we do comply with what is considered an international best practice regarding the manner in which we manage air services and airport services.

Looking at some of the specific sections—and I will ensure that I do not repeat points that have already been covered by the Leader of the Opposition—the definition of the term “Governor” means “Governor in Cabinet” except in sections 5(1) and 11(1).

If we look at 5(1) it deals with functions of the Authority and to be more specific 5(1)(b) speaks to the functions of the Authority which are: “ (b) with the consent of the Governor, to provide and control air navigation services.”

The Minister has pointed out that there are certain services that the Authority has to carry out also. I was wondering whether or not that specific decision would not be more properly represented by Cabinet having an input. Section 5(1)(a) already outlines what the Air Navigation Overseas Territories Order, and the regulations falling from that, call for the Civil Aviation Authority to carry out as a statutory authority.

When we look at one point that I think does need additional airing—and certainly I support the view that has been put forward by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition in regard to this whole business of the disclosure of interests and disclosure of directors’ pecuniary interests—section 10(4); where we start setting thresholds and benchmarks for what is going to be considered an indirect pecuniary interest.

I will read the introduction to section 10(4): “Where a director has an indirect pecuniary interest in the contract or license or proposed contract or license or other matter by reason only of a beneficial interest in securities of a company or other body, and the nominal value of those shares does not exceed one thousand dollars or one thousandth of the total nominal value of the issued securities or of any class of issued securities, section 9 shall prohibit him from taking part in the consideration or discussion of or voting on the contract or license or proposed contract or license or other matter, without prejudice however his duty to disclose his interest.”

First of all, setting benchmarks seems to be something that might be a tad dangerous for a piece of legislation to try and do. When we speak of a person’s interests and whether or not that interest is going to influence or appear to influence their decision, we not only want persons who sit on these Boards to be independent but to also appear to be independent in their decision making.

When we attempt to set benchmarks we have to be careful how we craft them because in speaking to nominal value many people will interpret that—as you know Mr. Speaker, from your former profession—as to what is the company’s nominal value for those shares.

Thus, as you well know, Mr. Speaker, in many instances the nominal value—and to come up with a nominal value of one thousand shares where a company has issued it shares and the nominal value is only one cent per share—could be a significant holding. Then, when you take that holding you and extrapolate it using the market value the holding could be significant. Even if it is $1 per share we are talking about one thousand shares. What if the shares are valued $1000 in terms of their market value?

Hence, when one looks for independence often if you are going to use a benchmark you look to the real or market value of holdings in relation to the holder. A couple’s holdings of $50,000 worth of shares in a particular entity yet their net value is $5 million, is significantly different to a person whose net value is only $200,000 and they are still holding that $50,000 worth of shares.

I think we have to be very careful when we start trying to put benchmarks in place as to what will define these types of interest. I think if a person has an interest, in a community this small, it might be much wiser to say that the person should not participate and should not vote on a particular matter. There are some people, and I dare say, most people, who serve on these Boards who are very honest and upright business persons. Their consciences would cause them not to want to participate because they realise that the appearance of independence would not exist in a case like that. They recognise that Cayman is a very small place and they would not want to be accused of anything.

The whole issue of the Authority having to pay out certain funds to Government in terms of an annual revenue covered in section 17(4). I think that section does need to be looked at closely from the standpoint that you want to come up with a formula that determines if and when Government is eligible for a dividend from the Authority. I would also suggest that we might want to establish in developing that benchmark some sort of trigger amount of net income that should be earned before the Authority would have to pay out.

We have to be careful not to have percentages because if history has proven that the Authority needs to accumulate x-amount in retained earnings. If that x-amount is $500,000 and in one year the Authority makes $250,000, but at the beginning of that year they had only got up to a $100,000 of retained earnings, that would mean that they still have $400,000. Would it be wise for Government to still get a dividend of whatever per cent knowing they have not even reached the desired level of retained earnings as yet?

Following on, Mr. Speaker, we would want to ensure that there is also a desired level of net income to be earned before Government may be eligible to have a dividend paid to itself. Again, if the Authority does not meet that target should Government realistically be expecting a dividend from the Authority?

I think coming up with that formula is a process that can be proven to be very difficult however I do believe that in all fairness the matter should be looked at very closely and may be we could develop a formula and handle it in regulations to the piece of legislation. However, I think we have to be very careful to ensure that we do allow the statutory Authority to mature in a rational and financially prudent manner.

Section 18(1), Financial procedure, says: “The revenue of the Authority shall be classified under the following heads of receipt -

- (a) dues and charges received by virtue of this Law;
- (b) amounts borrowed by the Authority; and
- (c) miscellaneous receipts, including interest and service of investments, ...”

That only goes to strengthen the earlier point that I made that we need to ensure that we come up with an appropriate benchmark and have appropriate guidelines in place in terms of what the retained earnings could be.

If we are going to count borrowings as earnings we could artificially inflate the net income as well and have Government qualify for a dividend simply because the Authority has borrowed.

In section 18(1)(b) we should not be speaking of amounts borrowed as being revenue. I think everyone knows that what you borrow is not revenue, it is a cash inflow; it is a borrowing receipt. It says: “The revenue of the Authority shall be classified under the following heads of receipt - ... ”

That again opens a can of worms that is prone to abuse. Therefore, I would recommend that section 18(1)(b) should not be there. Borrowing does not qualify under the definition of revenue at all.

We also have in section 18(1) where it says: “... and such revenue shall, within seven days of receipt thereof, be paid into a bank account approved by the Financial Secretary.”

I am not certain what the Public Finance and Management Law says, however I am sure it is covered. Knowing the nature of this Authority the seven days may not be problematic because I could not see this Authority handling large amounts of cash. The business partners that would be involved including large companies—airlines mainly—would for the most part be sophisticated to either pay by direct wire, draft or cheque.

Hence, the risk of misappropriation of funds being left around the office for an extended period of time is greatly diminished. However, if monies are paid over by cash seven days after receipt this would, in my humble estimation, be a weak internal control because I do not think any business person would want cash, whether in a safe or not, to be left in their place of business for seven days.

The Authority also has the ability via the Governor in Cabinet: “ ... to appoint any competent person or persons to conduct an investigation into the causes of the accident ... and the result of the investigation should be submitted to the Governor. That is found in section 37(1).

I am not sure if the Minister might want to be a little tighter in saying who is going to investigate accidents. I would think that we would not want to wait until an accident happens to then appoint the body that is going to investigate the accident. This may not be a major point because I must admit that I am not familiar with the workings of this type of legislation however it would seem to me that you would want to know who is going to be the investigative body when it comes to accidents. Obviously, most air accidents would be fairly serious in nature.

With those few and very brief remarks I can say that we certainly support the passage of this Bill, however, there needs to be some fine tuning done with some of the areas just to tighten things a bit an ensure that the intent and spirit of the legislation encapsulated within what it is that we will vote on and pass.

I thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, I will call on the Mover. Before doing so I will take a short suspension to allow for any amendments, et cetera, to be made before he replies.

Let us try to be back by 4pm.

Proceedings suspended at 3.30 pm

Proceedings resumed at 5.43 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Honourable Minister of Aviation replying.

[Pause]

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: I would call on the Honourable Minister to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) so that we may continue proceedings beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) so that proceedings may go beyond the hour of 4.30 pm. It is the wish of Members that we proceed to finish the other Bill on the Order Paper and then take the adjournment Sir.

I have also been deputed to ask that the Private Member's Motion be moved onto the next agenda. I would move that motion at the correct time.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended.

All those in favour please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to business to continue beyond 4.30 pm.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, just before I reply to the points raised by the Leader of the Opposition I said that there was one more Bill, but there is another short one to complete both of those. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I wish to thank the Members who spoke on this Bill and it seems clear that all Honourable Members of this Honourable House understand the reason why the two Bills are here.

It is clear to everyone, I think, that this change is necessary if we are to stay abreast of changes in the aviation world; particularly the need to be mindful of security in this day and age. Aviation matters can be best managed when there is a clear separation between the regulatory and the operational so that conflicts which might arise can be avoided.

The Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for West Bay raised certain points and I think it is fair to say that in almost all of the points which were raised—where an amendment was necessary—amendments have been made. These amendments have been circulated to Members which have also been approved by you, Mr. Speaker, and at the appropriate time at the committee stage I would wish to move them.

In the case of section 4 an amendment has been made which clearly defines what the quorum will be and there has also been an amendment in section 8(5). There has been an amendment in section 10(4). In clause 18 there has also been an amendment.

I think with these amendments, as I have just stated, all sides and all parties can be satisfied. I would but comment on one which is changed in clause 2.

A section has been added to that clause that is section 37(1) which refers to the "Governor" and the "Governor in Cabinet".

Under the Air Navigation Order the legislation from the United Kingdom under which the Cayman Islands aviation is governed in these three sections the Governor acts in his own right and in the other instances it is the Governor in Cabinet. Therefore, an amendment has been made there as well.

Without attempting to comment on every single instance other than to cite the amendments, I thank Honourable Members for their participation and indeed their patience and their agreement to go beyond the hour of normal interruption. I leave the Bill to be voted upon due course. Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, the question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Civil Aviation Authority Bill, 2003 be given a second reading.

All those in favour, please say Ayes. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Civil Aviation Authority Bill, 2003 given a second Reading.

Suspension of Standing Order 46(4)

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 46(4) so that the second reading of the Airports Authority Bill can be taken.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 46(4) be suspended.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 46(4) suspended to allow The Airports Authority Bill 2003 to be read a second time.

The Airports Authority Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Aviation.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move a Bill for a Law to establish the Cayman Islands Airports Authority with Responsibility for Constructing, Controlling and Managing Airports; Providing and Maintaining Runways, Taxi-ways and Terminals for the Efficient Operation of Airports; Providing Facilities for Customs and Immigration Services, and Health and Security Checks; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Airports Authority Bill, 2003 seeks to establish a Cayman Islands Airports Authority which will be responsible for the Management, Construction and Control of all Airports in the Cayman Islands. Currently the Civil Aviation Authority is responsible for the management and control of airports in the Cayman Islands while also exercising regulatory function over same.

The decision to establish a new body responsible for the operation of the Islands' airports arose from the concern of the Ministry responsible for Civil Aviation and the Cayman Islands Civil Aviation sector to comply with the recommendations of the International Civil Aviation Authority (ICAA). The ICAA recommends that as far as is practicable member states separate the regulatory and operational functions. Consequently, a consultant was hired to advise the Civil Aviation Authority and the Ministry on the process for the creation of an airports authority and the allocation of responsibility for aviation matters between the Civil Aviation Authority and an Airports Authority.

The consultant has recommended that those functions relating to the operation of airports including the provision of meteorological services be removed from the portfolio of the Civil Aviation Authority and transferred to an Airports Authority. The creation of a separate Airports Authority also gives recognition to the changing form of airport operations. Airports, in order to become commercially viable and to decrease reliance on Government's subsidy, have increased opportunities for commercial activities such as airport retail outlets and other facilities for travellers. As a result, the nature of airport management, while it continues to prioritise aviation safety and compliance with international operating standards, has now embraced a wider range of responsibilities which calls for a different set of skills.

Accordingly, the Airports Authority will act as a corporate body which will have the power to enter into contracts, buy and sell land and other property. The primary functions of the Authority will be to plan, develop, construct, maintain, administer, control and manage the airports in the Cayman Islands. In addition to other primary functions the Authority will also provide adequate facilities for the exercise of the regulatory powers of Government including customs, immigration, health and security checks.

The Civil Aviation Authority will regulate the operation of the airports and will certify each airport for compliance with the International Civil Aviation Organisation standards and recommended practices as regards its facilities and operational practices.

Under section 3(5) of the Airports Authority Bill, 2003 all property belonging to the Civil Aviation Authority with the exception of those parcels of land on which air navigation aids are situated is to be vested in the Airports Authority.

The Airports Authority will also manage the meteorological services of the Cayman Islands which is a necessary provision for aviation operators using airports.

Accordingly, section 5(1) (d) of the Airports Authority Bill 2003 confirms that the Authority will: "... provide or make adequate arrangements for the provision of meteorological services to the CAA and the users of any airport; ..."

"Clause 10 makes provision for the constitution and responsibility of the board of directors of the Authority.

"The Board will consist of a chairman, deputy chairman, and not less than three nor more than seven other directors, two of which seven directors shall be public officers, to be appointed for three years by the Governor, but who shall hold office at his pleasure.

"The Board will be responsible, among other things, for -

- (a) securing the effective implementation of the functions of the Authority;
- (b) overseeing the effective performance of the Authority; and
- (c) setting operational priorities with regard to the planning development, redevelopment and construction of airports."

Within the international aviation community it is acknowledged that the separation of regulatory and operational responsibilities is generally considered to be the ideal scenario for the development of an institutional framework of civil aviation. The Ministry responsible for Civil Aviation and the Civil Aviation Authority recognises that the separation and redefining of operational and regulatory functions of civil aviation will improve aviation operations in the Cayman Islands. Furthermore, the United Kingdom Government has directed all overseas territories to separate the operational and regulatory functions in keeping with the ICAO's recommendation.

Under the direction of the United Kingdom's Department of Transport, Air Safety Support International (ASSI)—a subsidiary of the United Kingdom Civil Aviation Authority—was established as a mechanism to ensure that overseas territories are compliant with this recommendation and also to provide a more cohesive system of civil aviation safety regulations in the overseas territories. If an overseas territory were unable to separate operational and regulatory functions ASSI will be appointed as a regulator for civil aviation in that territory in place of the CAA.

The Bill before this Honourable House makes it possible to effect the transition as stated.

I have taken into account, and have had certain discussions with Members of the House including the Leader of the Opposition, that certain amendments which have been made to the Civil Aviation Law will clearly need to be made in the Airports Authority Law. Mr. Speaker, I have requested the legal drafts-lady to produce such amendments and they have actually been done.

I would just like to alert Members to this fact when it comes to where they may wish to speak about it. Certain amendments have already been prepared. Having said that Mr. Speaker, I recommend this Bill to Honourable Members. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The First Elected Member for George Town and Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Perhaps I will not be as long with this one as the other one hearing what the Honourable Minister has said with regard to the parallel amendments. I think we will all agree that these amendments will be needed for this Bill.

In looking at the proposed Bill to establish the Cayman Islands Airport Authority and the committee stage amendments that have been prepared to the Civil Aviation Authority Bill, the Opposition is going to assume that similar committee stage amendments will be made for the Airports Authority Bill. Just to quickly go through them because there are a couple more points to be discussed besides what we assume will be committee stage amendments.

On page 15, I will refer section 7(1) and it reads: “The Authority shall not without the written consent of the Governor, [which means the Governor in Cabinet] temporarily close to air traffic, discontinue the use of, or divest itself of the management of, any airport.”

Subsection (2) says: “Notwithstanding subsection (1), the Authority shall discontinue the use of any airport if so directed by the Director-General, if in his view the airport does not meet the requirements for safe operation.”

The point that I wish to draw from that—and perhaps this will be a matter of opinion—is the Governor in Cabinet in this Bill is the only authority able to give authority in writing to temporarily close the airport premises.

Notwithstanding that the Director-General of Civil Aviation shall cause the Airports Authority to discontinue the use of any airport if he so directs if in his view the airport does not meet the requirements for safe operations.

There is a CEO of the Airports Authority and I respect the fact that we want to have some safeguards but is there no crisis imaginable where the CEO of the airport has the authority to shut it down or has the authority to temporarily discontinue the use? It could be 4 o'clock in the morning on a Sunday, people could be off the Island. This business about the Governor in Cabinet giving it in writing is fine. Mr. Speaker, I am not disagreeing with that.

However, I believe that there should be some authority given to the CEO of the Airports Authority, because if you are divesting the Airports Authority from the existing Civil Aviation Authority, and understanding the roles of both; one being regulatory, one being operational and understanding the role of the Cabinet, it is, in our view, not good enough to leave the only two avenues for action to be taken to exclude the CEO of the Airports Authority, whoever that person is.

It is just a matter of practicality that I speak to and I am not denying the fact that the Director-General of Civil Aviation should also have the authority if, on his examination as a matter of safety from a regulatory standpoint, he should be able to say, “Well, listen you have to discontinue the use of this facility until such time as whatever is wrong is made right.” I do not have a problem with that.

I also do not have a problem with the Governor in Cabinet having to, in writing, give authority for the closure of the facility but, God forbid, we never, ever know when a crisis may occur. I do not believe that the spirit or intention of this legislation was meant to leave the person in charge of the operational side without any authority whatsoever to deal with it.

It goes on, Mr. Speaker, in section 8(1) saying: “The authority [that is the Airports Authority] shall in the event of an accident or incident involv- ing aircraft, or any interference or damage to navigational aids, immediately bring such matter to the notice of the Director-General and act only on his instructions.”

I see the intention but when something of that nature occurs are we saying then that no one has the authority to discontinue the use of that facility until the Director-General of Civil Aviation is contacted and he makes an assessment and then he so decides? Something cannot be right in the chain of command there, Mr. Speaker. I believe the matter needs to be looked into.

In summary, I am not questioning 7(1) and (2); I am saying an ingredient is missing. When we read 8(1) in the context that it is, it throws the gap more glaring as a matter of any action to be taken. It says that if an incident occurs you have to contact the regulatory side of things in order to close the operational side of things. So why are we separating them? I think that there is validity in that and I think that the express opinion does not need to change 7(1) or (2) but just needs to add something which allows the CEO of the Airports Authority to be able to have authority to take action especially in cases of emergency.

On page 16, section 10(4) speaks to the same situation as before about the number of the directors. I do not have to speak to that in detail; I am just flagging it up to make sure it is dealt with. That works along with 11(5) on page 17 which speaks to the quorum. I am pretty certain that also will be dealt with. On page 19, section 13(4) is similar to section 10(4) in the other Bill. It speaks about the pecuniary interest and one thousand dollars or one thousandth of the total.

I believe there is already a committee stage amendment which came forward. I was going to address section 16(1) where there was a difference between this and the Civil Aviation Bill, in that, the Director-General was able to do the hiring. However, as this came originally it spoke to the Board of the Airports Authority being able to hire however I think the committee stage amendment that is put forward will correct that.

Section 17(1)(a) is also a point that I raised although it seems everyone else is satisfied that there is no risk. I want to put it on record that there is no risk of any employee, who is presently employed by the Civil Aviation Authority and who will be employed by one of the two new authorities, losing any of their pension benefits that they are now with expectation of receiving. Whatever pension scheme they are under now, whether it is defined benefits or defined contribution, it should remain without any chance of them losing any of those benefits.

I am not so sure in section 17(1) where it says: “A public officer employed in the CAA [that is the present CAA] on the date this section comes into force may be offered employment by the Authority.”

If there is a reason for using the term “... may ...” then we would like it to be explained because while there is a process it must be understood from the beginning that these two new Authorities are to be set up and run with as maximum efficiency as possible. At the same time, the existing Civil Aviation Authority now controls both operational and regulatory functions. In its separation, we believe that it is only fair for the employees now employed to expect to be employed within one of the new authorities. The duties should not be any different; it is simply that we are taking away any possible conflicts and you will have one Authority, namely the Civil Aviation Authority, taking care of the regulatory side of things except for the air navigation operations, and the Airports Authority doing the operational side of things, which has to be done now. This has been the case forever with the one Authority. As a matter of terminology, all we are seeking, to ensure for us to participate in and vote for this Bill, is that no one is put at risk. And we want to put that on record.

I am moving as swiftly as I can. Section 20(3) on page 23 speaks about the Authority paying the dividend to general revenue. I think we accept that there will be the same amendment as has been proposed for the Civil Aviation Authority Bill and I think that takes care of the amendments that we were dealing with.

There is one last section that I wish to deal with and I need to say very quickly that this is something that I have been aware of for quite some time. I have my own personal concerns and I am with the great hope that this specific concern is one that is unfounded but I am putting it on record and I would love to hear more about it so that I do not have to worry about it.

The Civil Aviation Authority Bill was just read a second time; I will make reference to in section 42(1) in order for you to see the relevance, Mr. Speaker. It reads: “The person who immediately before the date of commencement of the new Law was the holder of the office of Director shall hold the office of the Director-General under and for the purposes of the new Law as if that person had been appointed under the new Law on the same terms and conditions that applied to the office of Director under the repealed Law.”

Before I go any further, Mr. Speaker, I want to also make the observation that as I understand the chain of command to obtain presently with the existing Civil aviation Authority there is a director and a deputy. I notice in both of these Bills—and perhaps there is a valid reason—there is no provision for a deputy in either one of the new Authorities. It might be deemed that because the two Authorities are being separated neither of them is them is a big enough entity to require a head or a deputy head. I do not know whether the intention of the exercise is to ensure that the Civil Aviation Authority retains a certain “above-ness”—for want of a better word—on the Airports Authority or whether both of them are on a level playing field.

I notice on the regulatory side it said that — where I made the complaint about the authority of the Chief Executive Officer of the Airports Authority to stop the use of the facility—he had to report directly to the director of the Civil Aviation Authority who would then decide. I do not know whether that is where it immediately says where the level of authority is but when we move into this Bill, having set that background and having shown in section 42 of the Civil Aviation Authority Bill, on page 31 of the Bill that we are debating now Mr. Speaker, section 45(1) says: “A person who immediately before the date of commencement of the repealed Law was a member of the Civil Aviation Authority, shall be a director under and for the purposes of this Law as if that person had been appointed under this Law on the same terms and conditions that applied to him as a member of the Civil Aviation Authority under the repealed Law.”

I am absolutely and totally confused. I do not know what kind of director they are talking about, I do not know what they mean in this section. Mr. Speaker, I cannot even ask questions about it because I am totally lost. Forgive me if the person who wrote this expects me to understand it because I do not. If someone would take the time out to explain to me what it means I would be able to grasp it.

When I compare section 42 which speaks to the Director-General and we know that the terminology of the head of the Airports Authority is CEO I do not now which director they are talking about. As far as I can understand what obtains now is there is a Civil Aviation Authority Board for the Authority that exists now. When the two entities are separated and made separate entities there will have to be new Boards appointed. Obviously the Members who are on the Board that exists now are eligible to be appointed to one or the other of the Boards. However, there will have to be new people involved because the numbers that constitute the present Board are not sufficient to fill both of the other ones. Therefore, I do not know which directors we speak to with that.

I want to go back to section 14 of the Airports Authority Bill where it speaks to the appointment of the CEO of the Airports Authority. If my opinion is a biased one I will be happy for it to be called so however if the Civil Aviation Authority Bill can tell me who is going to be the Director-General—because it specifies who that person will be—and that person is going to be whoever is now the Director of Civil Aviation. When we move to the Airports Authority Bill it says nothing about who the person shall be, it simply outlines the terms and conditions of employment.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if there is absolute certainty about the process which has been talked about for months then I submit that those of us who are participating in the voting process for the passage of this Bill should know who is going to be the CEO of the Airports Authority also. If we are not going to know one then the Law should not tell me who the other one is either, and if the Law tells me who one is going to be I want the other Law to tell me who that one is too. I do not believe that that is unfair. It is obvious that what has to occur is all going to be done from taking the existing Authority and dividing it up in the manner that it needs to both with resources, property and personnel. Hence, we would not like to be nervous for a minute about the appointment of the CEO. It is very possible that everyone knows who it is and all of the discussions have taken place and everything is set to go; then let us know that. I do not want to make a case out of something that is not necessary but I have had enough experience not to take chances. This one needs to be clarified.

It is getting late and I do not wish to belabour that point however I would implore the Minister in his reply to deal with it directly so that we can feel satisfied on this side about how the situation is going to move forward.

We are quite content, as we are with the other Bill, to support this Bill and this one, in our view, is a lot easier than the first one because, they being parallel pieces of legislation, just about all of the amendments for the first one are going to fall through to the second piece of legislation.

It is only those two main points outside of that that we wish to bring to the attention of the Honourable Minister. I would hope that he would be able to address them so that we can all be totally satisfied and be able to participate in the safe passage of both Bills and that we may have a blessed and peaceful evening. I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Before I call on the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business to reply he has just indicated to me that he would like to have a break to go over a few points that were raised. I will take a suspension at this time to allow for this.

Proceedings suspended 6.32 pm

Proceedings resumed 7.10 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Minister of Aviation replying.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, I thank Honourable Members for their tacit support and the Leader of the Opposition for putting forward certain points and opinions on the sections of The Airports Authority Bill which is before this Honourable House.

Cognisance has been taken of the point in particular which the Leader of the Opposition made with regard to the possible practical application, or conditions that might occur, which, should they happen, would require the person who is in charge of the Airports Authority to take action of an immediate nature without having to wait to get in writing from the Governor or indeed notifying the Director-General that he needed to take immediate actions, temporarily; to close the airport in circumstances where he considered there was a situation of air safety being jeopardised.

An amendment has been made to this particular section and will form part of the amendments which I wish to bring in the committee stage. There have also been amendments to the constitution of the Board and to the quorum and there will be a deletion in section 13(4). I have enquired, Mr. Speaker, prior to now about the situation with regard to the position of the Chief Executive Officer and the reasonable requirement for a position of deputy Chief Executive Officer.

I have been advised by the consultant on these matters and it has been stated to me that while it is right and proper to have in law the post of Chief Executive Officer it would be unusual to also put in law that there would be a deputy Chief Executive Officer. There is provision that such a person would be appointed and indeed, Mr. Speaker, an organisational chart is being prepared which shows the position of a deputy CEO and such appointment would be effected by the Board.

Also, I have enquired in that relationship about the position of the Director-General and why in that instance there should not be a Director-General. However, the Air Navigational Order provides only for a Director-General who is appointed by the Governor in his own right. The opportunity does exist though where the Governor in his discretion and his authority could appoint a deputy so that there is some succession plan.

There was a point raised about the transfer of officers to the Authority and it is expected that the persons who are presently employed with the Civil Aviation Authority would have their jobs in the Airports Authority and some would be with the Civil Aviation Authority.

It provides for such an opportunity if, in the process, a job position might be upgraded or changed by the use of the word "... may ...". There are certain efficiencies which may be affected and so this provides for that degree of latitude. To the best of my knowledge there is nothing that is being considered which would mean the loss of any jobs. It is a matter of dividing the numbers and seeing how many should properly stay with the Civil Aviation Authority and which should go to the Airports Authority. One is that the CEO position would have to be filled.

Another reason that was given why there has to be a transitional clause with the Civil Aviation Authority is that in law and by international standards there cannot be created any time when there is not in place a Director-General or a director of Civil Aviation Authority for various requirements and standards, processes and practices. Therefore, to transition that person into the Civil Aviation Authority is necessary. We have a few weeks of latitude in terms of appointing a CEO to the Airports Authority. However, once these Laws come into effect both positions have to be filled because they will be doing separate functions.

I think I have answered the points which have been raised by the Leader of the Opposition. I know that certain amendments have been circulated so once again I would just like to thank Members for their support and again for agreeing to be here at this time of the night and I look forward to us finishing these Bills which are before the House. I thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Airports Authority Bill, 2003 be given a second reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Airports Authority Bill, 2003 given a Second Reading.

Suspension of Standing Order 46(4)

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 46(4) to allow the second reading of a Bill entitled The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 2003.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 46(4) be suspended.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 46(4) suspended to allow The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 2003 to be read a second time.

The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Temporary Provisions) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move the second reading of a Bill entitled The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Yes, Mr. Speaker, just briefly. This Bill relates to concessions granted in respect of infrastructure fees and building permit fees which were implemented by the Government in November 2001. The concessions generally provided for the temporary reduction of these fees by 50 per cent.

The initial concessions were introduced for one year with further extensions of six months which would then be followed by another six months and then by two months, totalling fourteen months. In January this year, the Cabinet agreed to continue the concessions until such time as appointed by the order of the Governor in Cabinet.

The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 2003 now before this House accordingly provides for these concessions and infrastructure fund and building permit fees to continue until such time as is summoned by Cabinet.

I ask for the support of this Bill which seeks to provide for the continuation of these incentives in the area of infrastructure fees and building permit fees at the reduced rate of 50 per cent until decided by the Governor in Cabinet. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just to say that the Opposition supports the continuation of the reduction in fees and to also say that this is proof that less involvement by Government usually turns out to be more from the populace.

We certainly support it. However, as we know there is there is also the reduction in taxes which is a companion to this which assists with the development in the country and it has worked exceedingly well over the last two years.

Also, I wish to say that this was initiated during the tenure of the Leader of the Opposition as the Leader of Government Business. So, we should not forget that this was an agreement between both parties whether it was then or now. We continue to support the position that we had at that time.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Mover please exercise his right of reply?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Mr. Speaker, just to say thanks to the one speaker and other Members for their support of this short amendment.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 2003 be given a second reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Development and Planning (Amendment) (Temporary Provisions) Bill, 2003 given a Second Reading.

The Speaker: The House will now move into committee on the Bills.

House in Committee at 7.27 pm

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House, may I assume that, as usual, we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct minor errors and such the like in these Bills?

Clause 8

The Clerk: Clause 8 Meetings of the Board.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Aviation.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, I wish to move – by deleting clause 8(5) and substituting the following – “(5) The quorum of the Board shall be a majority of the appointed directors.”

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment stands part of the clause.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Sorry, Mr. Chairman, but I was trying to catch your eye.

I am wondering if the word “appointed” needs to be repeated here. Is there a difference between some of the Directors? Because the two public officers are all appointed by the Governor for not less than three years. Therefore, I wonder if there is a distinction being made.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Aviation.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, I do not think that there is anything being said here except to emphasise the fact that the Directors are appointed: the quorum of the Board shall be a majority of the appointed Directors.

[Pause]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, I am advised that the word “appointed” is for a specific reason in that the clause allows for a certain number to be appointed but the full number may not be appointed. It speaks specifically to those who, out of the possible maximum, have been appointed.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: To ask the Minister if he could point us in the direction of the Law whereby other Directors will not be appointed.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Aviation.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, Clause 4 says: “The Board shall consist of not less than five nor more than nine directors of whom –

- (a) one shall be chairman;
- (b) one shall be deputy chairman; and
- (c) two shall be public officers, to be appointed for not less than three years by the Governor, but who shall hold office at his pleasure.”

What it is saying here is that there may not be more than seven persons appointed. There may not be a total of nine. Therefore, for the number that is appointed, that will be the number which forms the quorum.

The Chairman: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Chairman, I am a little confused because it says: “The Board shall consist of not less than five nor more than nine directors of whom –

- (a) one shall be chairman;
- (b) one shall be deputy chairman; and
- (c) two shall be public officers, to be appointed ... “

All of them are appointed, up to nine, for not less than years by the Governor.

The Chairman: I believe Honourable Member that the Honourable Temporary Third Official Member has an explanation to make on that.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In this situation it is possible that there might not be more than five people appointed as directors.

If you say: “shall be a majority of the directors” it could be interpreted—

That is why it is important to have “appointed” there because you might not have the full nine.

Majority of nine which you cannot have because—

That is the point, yes.

If you just say “of the Directors” that could mean all nine.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Which is correct if you appoint five—the minimum—three will form the quorum. If you appoint nine, five will be the quorum. Therefore, at all times whether it is five or nine they have to be appointed. They are appointed. Therefore, to be a director you have to be appointed so I am saying that the word “appointed” in: “... the quorum of the Board shall be a majority of the appointed directors ...” is unnecessary because they are appointed.

The Chairman: Honourable Member, I am trying very hard to make sure that you say all that you want to say and that you are not cut off.

Honourable Minister of Aviation, would you reply please?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, I think we understand that all of the Directors will be appointed by the Governor but the word “appointed” is being used here to define the actual number that is appointed.

The Chairman: If that is satisfactory may I put the question?

The question is that the amendment stands part of the clause.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendment passed.

The Chairman: The question now is that the clause as amended stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 8 as amended passed.

Clause 9

The Clerk: Clause 9 Disclosure of director’s interests.

The Chairman: The question is that the clause stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 9 passed.

Clause 10

The Clerk: Clause 10 Director's pecuniary interests.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Aviation.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, I move that - clause 10(4) be deleted.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment stands part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendment passed.

The Chairman: The question now is that the clause as amended stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 10 as amended passed.

Clauses 11 through 15

The Clerk:

Clause 11	Director-General.
Clause 12	Functions of the Director-General.
Clause 13	Administrative structure of the Authority.
Clause 14	Transfer of public offices to the Authority.
Clause 15	Pension Fund.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 11 to 15 stand part of the Bill.

The Director-General shall be replaced and, further down: “... shall take precedence over the Commissioner when that person ...” (again)

Is “... that person ...” not the same person as the Commissioner is?

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Aviation.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman. That would not refer to the Commissioner of Police. It is giving the person who has been appointed by the Governor the powers equivalent to that of the Commissioner of Police. It could be an incident that the Commissioner would not be appointed to deal with.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I see so “the” in both instances have to be taken out also and replaced with “that”.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, the words “the” in both instances should be deleted for it to read correctly.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It seems like this may be the most appropriate opportunity, because in the Ministers wind up I heard what he explained regarding the Chief Executive Officer but I must admit that it does not satisfy my question from the beginning and I wonder if there is any chance of getting the matter cleared up.

The Minister has explained that it is necessary by some type of law for it to be the case in the Civil Aviation Authority Bill but that it is not necessary in this one.

He did say that from the time that these Bills become law that a Director-General of the Civil Aviation Authority and a Chief Executive Officer of the Airports Authority will have to be appointed.

Regardless of what is required in law for one and required for the other, my question is—this is the only forum I have to express my concerns and I am hoping to have them satisfied—if there is assurance for the appointment of the Director-General for the Civil Aviation Authority, why does it seem like it wants to be left hanging in the air as to whether it is going to be someone from the existing Civil Aviation Authority who will be the Chief Executive Officer of the Airports Authority?

I would like to be satisfied with some type of answer regarding that specific question.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Aviation.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, it is understood that there has to be a person designated as the Director-General for reasons which have been explained and that is the call of the Governor in his own right and by the United Kingdom legislation.

In the case of the Chief Executive Officer, as decision at the time of this Law, does not require the appointment of a Chief Executive Officer. Moreover, the appointment of a Chief Executive Officer has to be the decision of the Board of Directors of the Airports Authority. It might be somebody who is presently employed by the Civil Aviation Authority, as we know it now, but the likelihood exists that it might be another person. That is the best that I can explain the situation. One has a different role and function in the two scenarios.

The Chairman: Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I understand clearly what the Minister has said because he just said that quite likely it may be—he can correct me if that is not what he meant—someone who is not a present employee of the Civil Aviation Authority.

Is that what the Minister just said?

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Aviation.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: I am very tired and perhaps I said that. I said it could be somebody who is presently in the management structure of the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) but it could be somebody else who might be chosen by the Board of Directors. The Board does have the opportunity to look at who is available in this particular scenario.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I heard what the Minister has said and I can only express my view. In my considered opinion the Civil Aviation Authority has been functioning quite adequately in dealing with the regulatory side and the operational side of the Civil Aviation in the Cayman Islands. It cannot be, and I am going to say it again, it cannot be that there is a need to go outside of the human capital within the organisational structure of the existing Civil Aviation Authority to be able to find heads for both the regulatory side, which will be the new CAA, and the operational side which will be the Airports Authority.

I am going on record to state that if there is an outside person who is appointed, I am not going to believe it is a fair process and I will be one who will be objecting strenuously to that. Not that I have any authority in the matter but I want it to go on record.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Chairman, is there any other Authority that has given the Board the discretion of choosing the chief person of the Authority?

The Chairman: The Temporary Third Official Member might be able to throw some light on this.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Mr. Chairman, I am aware of the situation with the Public Service Pensions Board which I would argue is somewhat different in that that Board administers funds for employees. In that situation the Board can appoint a managing director.

In the case of Cayman Islands Monetary Authority (CIMA) the managing director is actually appointed by the Governor in Cabinet. Actually, most of the older ones were done in that way but the newer ones are done in this fashion.

The Chairman: I would like to remind Honourable Members of Standing Order 50: “A committee to which a Bill is referred shall not discuss its general merits and principles but only its details.”

The merits and principles should have been discussed during the Second Reading debate.

Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am not going to discuss the merits anymore but I will say that I made my contribution to the debate Sir, and as I pre-empted what I said earlier I did not have another opportunity to speak to it and was using this forum to ensure that my thoughts were heard.

The Chairman: Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, I put the question that clauses 14 and 15 stand part of the Bill.

d) by inserting after subclause (3) the following subclause - "(4) No receipts under subsection (1)(d) shall be taken into account in calculating the amount of any annual payment into the general revenue of the Islands pursuant to subsection (3)."

The Speaker: Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, before I move the adjournment I would like to thank you most sincerely for your patience and the time spent here presiding in this meeting today which has taken us to almost nine o'clock and to all Honourable Members for remaining here so that we could finish the business which was on the Order Paper.

I would also like to thank the support staff, the Acting Director of Civil Aviation, the Consultant, Permanent Secretary and the Legislative Drafting Lady that also stayed with us until this hour to see this through and, certainly, the Legislative Assembly staff whose patience is phenomenal and their ability to work under stress the same. I must also thank Ms. Olivia Scott of the Compass who has stayed with us as well.

I would like to remind Honourable Members that we have met on the matter of the Elections Law and discussed certain necessary amendments to that Law which need to be taken care of as quickly as possible because time is running in the election process. It is my understanding that the Honourable First Official Member will be contacting Members about the matter of meeting for discussion of this Law prior to us meeting in the Assembly. However, it will be necessary for us to meet within this particular session to complete the exercise.

I would also like to give notice that I propose to bring forward the National Roads Law. I should have it in a day or two and I will see that it is circulated to Members. I would like to deal with that as it is in keeping with the responsibility which would be assigned to it having certain funds now being allocated for road works.

BUDGET ADDRESS

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to present the Budget for the 2004-2005 financial year on behalf of the Government. In keeping with the normal practice, I will share this responsibility with the Leader of Government Business who will move the Budget debate.

The title of last year's Budget address was "Charting Our Course for the Future". That speech, together with the address from the Leader of Government Business outlined the Government's plan for the economic and social future of this country.

It was a plan designed to support the local economy and create employment opportunities for Caymanians. It was a plan designed to increase the educational opportunities available for our young people. It was a plan designed to ensure that health care and social support are available to those in need. It was a plan designed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of Government and its agencies. It was a plan designed to set the foundation for the future of our country. It was a plan which, as the Leader of Government Business puts it, "charts a course to achieve ... our national aspirations".

Mr. Speaker, the latest economic data shows that the plan is working. The Cayman Islands experienced higher economic growth, lower unemployment and lower inflation in 2003 compared to 2002. The economic recovery is forecast to continue in 2004 with the latest Labour Force Survey showing unemployment less than half what it was three years ago. A modest increase in the number of tourist air arrivals is also forecast for 2004. This will help contribute to an economic growth rate that is projected to be nearly 50 per cent higher than the 2003 level.

However, Mr Speaker, as Honourable Members of this House know, achieving economic and social prosperity is not a one-year exercise. Achieving that goal requires sustained commitment and effort. Achieving that goal requires keeping the destination in sight. Achieving that goal requires a steady hand on the tiller.

That is the objective and focus of this year's Budget; it is a "steady as she goes" Budget designed to support the plan for this country established by the Government over the last three years. It is a Budget that ensures the course to prosperity is maintained.

It is also a Budget that has been prepared in full compliance with the requirements of the Public Management and Finance Law (2003 Revision), and the first ever Budget prepared using accrual rather than cash accounting. This makes the Cayman Islands Government a Caribbean leader in financial reporting, and one of only a handful of countries in the world achieving this level of transparency.

Key Aspects of the Budget

The Annual Plan and Estimates outlines the actions the Government plans to take in 2004 – 2005 to maintain the course it has set.

The Government's Outcome Goals

That course is based around the eleven outcome goals established by Vision 2008 and specified in the Strategic Policy Statement tabled in this House earlier in the year.

I know that Honourable Members are by now familiar with those outcomes, but for the benefit of the public I would like to summarise them briefly. The eleven outcome goals are:

1. A strong economy that generates employment, income and a high standard of living;
2. A healthy resident population;
3. A socially supported resident population;
4. A strong Caymanian community and culture;
5. An environment protected for the use of both current and future generations;
6. A well educated and vocationally trained resident population;
7. A safe and secure country for residents and visitors;
8. An open, efficient and accountable Government;
9. Young persons positively involved in the community;
10. Strong family units; and
11. Economically and socially vibrant Sister Islands.

Key Policy Initiatives in 2004/5

The Annual Plan and Estimates specifies the policy actions the Government will be taking this year to promote these 11 outcomes and then allocates funding accordingly.

Those actions include the purchase of 215 different output groups to a total value of $273.5 million. The Annual Plan and Estimates provides a rationale for each of those purchases as each output is specifically linked to the outcome, or outcomes, to which it relates. Many of those outputs will be produced by Ministries and Portfolios. However 91 statutory authorities and non-governmental output suppliers will also be funded to provide outputs.

This year's Budget also includes 78 non-output policy actions for which approval is being sought from the Legislative Assembly.

The Leader of Government Business will outline the specific policy initiatives for the year when he makes his remarks.

The 2004/5 Fiscal Position

The policy actions are one half of the Budget. The fiscal position is the other.

The Government is well aware of the need for fiscal prudence and expenditure control, Mr. Speaker, and I am pleased to advise that the Budget is once again a fiscally responsible one. It provides for an accrual operating surplus of around half a million dollars, a cash flow from operating surplus of around $17.5 million, and a net worth balance sheet position of around $366 million.

This result has been achieved even after recognising around $20 million of additional expenditure for the first time. This is a result of the move to accrual accounting. A 2.5 per cent cost of living adjustment for civil servants has also been allowed for in the numbers. Ministries and Portfolios funded almost all of this cost of living adjustment from efficiency savings.

The Budget contains no new revenue measures. This is despite the fact that the Strategic Policy Statement targets allowed for an increase in fuel levies to help finance the National Roads Authority. In light of the recent rise in international oil prices, the Government has decided not to proceed with this increase at this time. This means that this is the third Budget in a row where expenditure demands have been accommodated within the existing revenue base.

Importantly, Mr. Speaker, the Budget complies with all of the Principles of Responsible Financial Management including the debt servicing and net debt ratios, and the cash reserve requirements.

The debt servicing ratio is forecast to be 5.9 per cent at the end of 2004-2005, compared to the 10 per cent limit established by the Public Management and Finance Law.

The net debt ratio is forecast to be 56 per cent, which is much less than the statutory limit of 80 per cent. The cash reserves ratio is forecast to be 63 days, which is over twice the level of 30 days required for 2004/5 by the Principles of Responsible Financial Management.

While accrual expenditure is more than cash expenditure, the amount of accrual revenue is similar to the amount of cash revenue. This means that the achievement of an accrual operating surplus is a significant improvement on the operating position of previous years. As reported in the Strategic Policy Statement, the 2003-2004 cash Budget when recasted onto an accruals basis, showed a deficit of $9.6 million. The 2004-2005 Budget therefore represents a turnaround of approximately $10 million.

In order to achieve this, Ministers and Official Members worked hard to ensure that core Government expenditure stayed within the allocations established by the Strategic Policy Statement. This was despite the fact that the Government's policy action plan for 2004-2005 involved a significant number of new policy initiatives. This has required a strong focus on efficiency improvements and reprioritisation.

In the case of the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs, for example, in excess of $1 million of new initiatives, plus most of the cost of living adjustment, has been funded from savings and reprioritisation of expenditures within that Portfolio. This is a testament to both the new financial management arrangements and the dedication and professionalism of the civil service.

Ministers have also paid particular attention to the budgets of Statutory Authorities and Government Companies. With the move to accrual accounting, the aggregate net results of their operations are now included as a single line item in the Government Budget. Statutory Authorities and Government Companies were required to carefully examine their budgets to achieve a break-even position or minimise any forecasted deficits. This policy of requiring Statutory Authorities and Government Companies to comply with the same fiscal discipline that applies to Ministries and Portfolios will continue in the future.

A similar dedication to fiscal control is evident on the capital side.

Equity investments into Ministries, Portfolios, Statutory Authorities and Government Companies have been limited to an amount that can be financed from operating cash flows. The total amount of equity investments is $15.2 million, which is around $2.3 million less than net cash flows from operations. In other words, Mr. Speaker, in cash flow terms, the budgeted operating revenue more than covers both operating costs and balance sheet activity with short term benefits. This is a prudent, responsible and sustainable financial policy.

The level of capital expenditure has also been controlled. It has been limited to projects that have benefits that will be enjoyed by both current and future generations. These include new roads, school classrooms and the new abattoir.

Given the long-term benefit of these projects, it is appropriate that they be financed by borrowing. This ensures that the financing cost is spread over the life of the project. The Budget therefore makes allowance for $37 million of new borrowing in 2004-2005. The repayment of $10.5 million of existing borrowing will also occur during the financial year, resulting in a net increase in public debt of around $26.5 million.

Although further borrowing could have been justified on a cost-benefit basis, the Government has been conscious of the need to keep aggregate borrowing within levels that the country can afford. Accordingly, the amount of new borrowing is $8.8 million less than that allowed for in the Strategic Policy Statement. This has resulted from the careful and deliberate process of capital expenditure prioritisation undertaken by Ministers.

The excellent fiscal picture provided by the Budget is an indication of the Government's commitment to responsible financial management. It is also a reflection of the better fiscal management tools provided by the Financial Management Initiative.

The Last Big Change to the Budget—the Move to Accruals

Budget Documents

The Budget documentation is similar in format to last year and consists of four volumes.

The main budget document is the Annual Plan and Estimates, which is the one with the blue cover. This document summarises the planned actions and financial performance at an overall government level. The Estimates part of the book provides the list of appropriation requests.

The three other volumes support the Annual Plan and Estimates by providing information at a more detailed level.

The Annual Budget Statements, which is the book with the green cover, details the output delivery and ownership performance expected of Ministries and Portfolios.

The Purchase Agreements, which is the book with the yellow cover, specifies the outputs the Government plans to purchase from Statutory Authorities, Government Companies and non-governmental output suppliers.

The Ownership Agreements, which is the book with the pink cover, contains the ownership performance the Government expects of each Statutory Authority and Government Company.

Accrual Based Budget

As the Public Management and Finance Law comes fully into effect for this 2004/5 Budget, there are a number of enhancements to the content of the documents compared to previous years. Mr. Speaker, these are the last set of major changes required by the Financial Management Initiative.

The major change is the adoption of accrual accounting. The accrual method provides a more accurate reflection of the financial activity of the Government than the previous cash accounting approach. It results in four major changes to the way the numbers are put together.

First, a strict distinction between operating and capital expenditure is maintained with separate statements prepared for operating activity, assets and liabilities, and cash flows.

Second, operating revenue is recognised in the Operating Statement when it is due, not when the cash is collected. Revenue collected is reported in the Statement of Cash Flows and revenue due but not yet collected, is recorded as a receivable in the balance sheet.

Third, operating expenses are recognised in the Operating Statement when the expense is incurred not when the cash is paid out. Cash payments are reported in the Statement of Cash Flows, and expenses incurred but not yet paid are recorded in the balance sheet as a payable.

Fourth, non-cash expenses are also recognised in the Operating Statement. The major non-cash expense is depreciation. This reflects the use, or wearing out, of assets. Any write-off or reduction in the value of assets is also recorded as an accrual expense, as is the increase in any liabilities.

The financial information provided in all the budget documents has been calculated using the accruals method. The Budget forecasts themselves consist of a complete set of forecast financial statements that resemble private sector accounts. These include a Statement of Responsibility for their integrity and completeness.

Capital Expenditure

The move to accrual accounting and the full implementation of the Public Management and Finance Law means that the terms "capital acquisitions" and "capital development" are no longer used. Instead, a distinction is made between entity assets and executive assets.

Entity assets are the assets that a ministry or portfolio uses to produce its outputs. Under the Public Management and Finance Law these assets are controlled by chief officers and are recorded on the entity balance sheet. As part of the move to accruals, the cost of depreciation is included in the output price. This means that over the life of an asset, a ministry or portfolio is automatically funded for the replacement of that asset. This approach means that, as a general rule, it is no longer necessary to specifically fund entity assets.

However, there are two situations when the specific funding of an entity asset may be necessary.

The first is where the assets to be replaced are already depreciated. Many of the assets owned by Ministries and Portfolios are quite old and are already significantly or fully depreciated. This means Ministries and Portfolios are receiving little or no depreciation funding for those assets and therefore have no cash to replace them.

The second situation is where the asset to be purchased is new, rather than replacing an existing asset. If an asset is new, it is inappropriate to use the depreciation of existing assets to fund that purchase. To do so would result in no cash being available to replace existing assets when their replacement is due.

In these two circumstances, the Cabinet will provide funding for a ministry or portfolio to purchase an entity asset. Cabinet does this by making an equity investment into the Ministry or Portfolio. The requests for equity investments included in section 9 of the Annual Plan and Estimates include requests for this purpose.

Executive assets, Mr Speaker, are those assets that are controlled directly by Cabinet. These assets are recorded on the executive balance sheet and include Crown land, roads, public buildings, public recreational facilities, and the Barkers Environmental Park.

Under the Public Management and Finance Law, the purchase or construction of executive assets requires a specific appropriation. Requests for these appropriations are included in section 9 of the Annual Plan and Estimates under the heading "Purchase or Construction of Executive Assets".

The term capital development is no longer used as it previously referred to both entity and executive assets and as such is now ambiguous.

Inclusion of Statutory Authorities and Government Companies

The move to accrual accounting has also resulted in a change to the way Statutory Authorities and Government Companies are reflected in the Budget.

The accrual operating surpluses and losses of Statutory Authorities and Government Companies are now included in the Government's operating statement as a single line entitled "Net Loss in Investments in Statutory Authorities and Government Companies". Similarly, the net worth of Statutory Authorities and Government Companies is recognised as a single line in the balance sheet entitled "Net Worth in Statutory Authorities and Government Companies".

The inclusion of financial information about Statutory Authorities and Government Companies reflects the fact that the Government is the owner of these organisations. Their net worth is an asset of the owner and therefore needs to be recorded on the Government's balance sheet.

The inclusion of the operating surpluses and deficits of Statutory Authorities and Government Companies in the Budget also has a financial and economic advantage. As the aggregate loss is treated as a government expense, this loss needs to be compensated for by reduced core government expenditure. The budgetary decisions of the Government therefore automatically need to take account of the financial impact that the wider government sector is having on the economy.

Appropriations to Cabinet

With the coming into force of the Public Management and Finance Law, appropriations will now be to Cabinet rather than to chief officers.

This change is consistent with the accountability arrangements under the Law and reflects the role of Cabinet as the purchaser of outputs.

In line with this approach, from 2004/5 the funding that Ministries and Portfolios receive from Cabinet will only be for the outputs that Cabinet is buying. However, Ministries and Portfolios will also be able to keep the entity revenue they earn from providing outputs to other government agencies and from third parties. They will then use this revenue to fund their input costs.

Consistent with this change, from 2004/5 Ministries and Portfolios will charge each other for the services they provide to each other. These include, for example, outputs provided by the Personnel and Computer Services Departments to other agencies of Government. The cost of those central services is allowed for in the output cost of the Ministries and Portfolios that use the services and the appropriations reflect this.

These changes mean that a number of outputs are no longer being purchased by Cabinet even though they are still being produced. Where this occurs those outputs are now not included in the Annual Plan and Estimates or Annual Budget Statements.

Cash Management Arrangements

A new set of cash management arrangements will also operate from 2004/2005.

This will involve Ministries and Portfolios having their own bank account and managing their own working capital. The bank accounts will be within a suite of accounts overseen by the Treasury and will have no impact on the Government's overall cash position because an offset arrangement applies to the overall bank account structure.

The requirement to manage working capital will mean that Ministries and Portfolios will need to ensure that they collect their entity revenue in a timely manner and manage their debtors and creditors so as to maximize their cash position. When I say debtors and creditors, some Honourable Members will know these terminologies as receivables and payables. Significant aggregate working capital gains are expected from this part of the financial management reform.

In preparation for these new arrangements, an entity bank account has been established for each Ministry and Portfolio and working capital equal to one month's worth of expenses will be placed in those accounts on 1 July 2004. This level of working capital is reflected in the forecast ministry and portfolio balance sheets reported in the Annual Budget Statements.

Overview of the Economic and Fiscal Position

I would now like to turn to the details of the economic and fiscal position, starting with an overview of international developments.

Economic Position

The World Economy

Global economic growth improved modestly from 3.0 per cent in 2002 to 3.2 per cent in 2003. This improvement was mainly due to a continued expansion in consumer spending and a recovery in business spending, particularly in the second half of 2003. Generally, global fiscal and monetary policies were supportive of the need to spur economic growth. The recovery was broad-based, with most regions experiencing accelerated growth in 2003.

The US economy grew by 3.1 per cent in 2003, up from 2.4 per cent in 2002. Consumer spending remained strong last year, fuelled by federal tax cuts, mortgage refinancing, and home equity lines of credit. There was a turnaround in private investment from a 1.2 per cent decline in 2002 to a 4.1 per cent expansion in 2003. This rebound was due to a recovery in business spending on equipment and software as well as accelerated growth in the housing market.

US corporate profits posted healthy gains in 2003 and financial markets responded positively to this growth, with the Standard and Poor's (S&P) 500 index rising by 26 per cent.

The labour market showed some weakness, however. The US unemployment rate increased from 5.8 per cent in 2002 to 6.0 per cent in 2003 and manufacturing jobs declined for the forty-first consecutive month in December.

The US dollar fell against major currencies for the second year in a row. Against the Euro, it moved from US$1.05 at the start of 2003 to close at US$1.26 at the end of the year. This depreciation resulted from low US interest rates and a growing current account deficit. Another concern in some quarters was the growing federal deficit, particularly in light of tax cuts that the Bush administration wants to make permanent.

The UK economy showed greater resilience than other western European countries. Gross Domestic Product (GDP) rose from 1.7 per cent in 2002 to 2.1 per cent in 2003. Economic growth in the Euro Area as a whole, however, slowed from 0.9 per cent in 2002 to 0.5 per cent in 2003.

The Japanese economy showed signs of a recovery, expanding by 2.7 per cent in 2003 compared to 0.2 per cent the previous year. The acceleration was led by a turnaround in business investment and exports to the United States and China.

Developing Asian economies continued to show strength in 2003. China's growth accelerated from 8.0 per cent in 2002 to 9.1 per cent in 2003, driven mainly by inward investments. Strong demand from China for raw materials has impacted positively on resource-rich countries. The Indian economy also accelerated from 4.7 per cent in 2002 to 5.6 per cent in 2003, benefiting from the outsourcing of services from the United States and other countries.

Closer to home, Latin America and the Caribbean grew by 1.5 per cent in 2003, reversing the decline of 0.4 per cent experienced in 2002. Argentina grew by 7.3 per cent and real GDP growth of over three per cent was seen in Chile, Costa Rica, and Colombia.

The Caribbean economies, particularly the English-speaking countries, experienced better economic performance in 2003 compared to the previous year. One major factor was the rebound in tourism recorded in the region. Also, strong prices and higher volumes benefited commodity exporters, particularly Belize and Trinidad.

The Domestic Economy

Real GDP growth in the Cayman Islands accelerated for the second consecutive year from 1.7 per cent in 2002 to 2.0 per cent in 2003. This upward trend mirrored the performance of the global economy. The improvement was reflected in continued buoyant activity in the local construction industry, higher imports, and an increase in Government revenue.

Consumer inflation increased by 0.6 percent in 2003 compared to 2.4 percent in the previous year. The inflation rate was influenced by price increases for medical services, household equipment, food and education. These increases were offset by declines in other areas, namely housing, clothing, and personal goods and services.

The reduction in the unemployment rate provided another piece of good news for the country. The unemployment rate in the Cayman Islands has been steadily decreasing since 2001 when it stood at 7.5 per cent. The latest Labour Force Survey results place the unemployment rate at 3.6 per cent.

I will now provide an update on the key economic sectors in our country, Mr. Speaker.

The financial services sector, as we all know, is fundamental to our economic well-being. This sector recorded positive results in most areas in 2003. Growth was seen in mutual fund registrations, insurance company registrations, insurance premiums, stock exchange listings, stock market capitalisation, and new company registrations.

One notable exception was the decline in the number of bank and trust licences which fell by 34. The reduction in bank and trust licences resulted from consolidations within the banking industry and the cost implications of establishing physical presence as required by the law.

A better indicator of the health of the banking sector is that Cayman retained its position as a leading international financial centre. External assets of banks stood at US$1.02 trillion in June 2003, up by US$4.6 billion from the December 2002 position. External liabilities increased by US$1.5 billion during the same period to US$981.5 billion.

The total number of insurance licences increased to 672 in 2003. This was primarily due to a rise in the number of Class 'B' (captive) licences. Class 'B' licences increased by 44 to 644 in 2003. The net increases were mainly due to professional liability, healthcare, and workers' compensation. Medical malpractice lawsuits in the United States continued to be the driving force behind the growth in captives, followed by workers' compensation.

Premiums for captives grew by US$700 million in 2003 to US$4.9 billion. Net income declined by US$400 million during the same period to US$0.3 billion, mainly as a result of payouts by healthcare and property-related captives.

Mutual funds are another Cayman success story. With over half of the world's hedge funds registered in the Cayman Islands, we remained the leader in this segment of the global financial market in 2003. In recent years, hedge funds have grown in popularity among wealthy individuals and institutional investors mainly due to the attractiveness of potential returns and the fact that they are more nimble than traditional mutual funds. The Cayman Islands continued to capitalise on this global hedge funds growth with fund registrations increasing by 523, or 12.2 per cent, to 4,808 in 2003.

The Cayman Islands Stock Exchange also posted gains in 2003. Stock listings grew to 735 in 2003, an increase of 25 from the previous year. Between 2002 and 2003, market capitalisation rose by a healthy 20.9 per cent to US$43.9 billion. Most of this increase resulted from the recovery in stock prices in major capital markets worldwide.

Total company registrations increased to 68,078 in 2003, or by 2,819. New company registrations rose for the first time in three years. The continued strengthening of the global economy had a positive impact on registrations.

Ship registrations totalled 1,473 in 2003 with gross tonnage amounting to 3.2 million. The number of new registrations in 2003 amounted to 186, including 152 pleasure yachts.

In relation to international initiatives, the primary one that has been the focus of our attention for the past two years has been the European Union Savings Directive (EUSD). Following intense negotiations with the United Kingdom, we were able to agree a "Framework Document" that contains a number of undertakings by the UK that we expect will help safeguard the interests of the Cayman Islands. It was only after successfully negotiating these undertakings with the UK that the Cayman Islands agreed to the implementation of the Savings Directive.

In accordance with the commitment given to the UK, the Government intends, following consultation with our financial services industry, to introduce legislation under which agreements will be entered into with EU Member States.

The tourism sector is the other pillar of our economy, Mr. Speaker. Over two million tourists visited the Cayman Islands during 2003. This figure represented an increase of 12.5 per cent over 2002.

The Cayman Islands was able to capitalise on continued strong growth in the North American cruise market with cruise ship visitors totalling 1.8 million during 2003, an increase of 15.5 per cent. Two key factors relating to the growth of this segment of the market have been the safety appeal of cruise travel and the availability of affordable and attractive package options.

Air arrivals declined by 3.0 per cent from 302,000 in 2002 to 293,000 in 2003. Air arrivals were impacted by global events, such as the war in Iraq and the outbreak of Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS). As reported by the World Tourism Organisation, a 1.2 per cent decrease in international tourism was recorded over the 2003 period. In the Cayman Islands, while stay over arrivals from the United States fell by 12.5 per cent in 2003, the number of stay over visitors from the European, Canadian, and other markets grew.

Of some comfort, Mr. Speaker, is the fact that stay over arrivals grew by 4.9 per cent during the last quarter of 2003. Furthermore, that positive trend has continued during the first quarter of 2004. Group bookings are expected to boost the level of stay over visitors in 2004. These bookings extend to August 2004 and include weddings, families, divers, and meetings.

Real estate performed well in 2003 with the value of properties transferred growing by 19.0 per cent to $326 million in 2003. There was also greater activity in the marketplace with the number of properties transferred rising by 596 to 2,143 in 2003. A stronger global economy, historically low interest rates and an indefinite extension of the Government's stamp duty concession stimulated investment in real estate.

There was brisk selling of properties located along the Seven Mile Beach. One exceptionally large transaction was the $30 million sale of Vista Norte, a 270-acre prime area property.

Heavy pre-selling of units within the high-end condominium developments such the Meridian, Water's Edge and the Ritz Carlton also contributed to a rise in the value of properties transferred.

The strata apartment units of Frank Hall Homes, Secret Gardens and the Retreat developments also sold well during this period, with the Secret Gardens and Frank Hall Homes in George Town being sold out. The sale of single-family homes also rose.

Commercial space continued to be absorbed slowly by the business community. However, in comparison to the previous year, the pace of absorption was a little more rapid.

Real estate prospects for next year remain positive. While investor interest is expected to continue, the onset of higher prices is likely to dampen activity in the market place.

Construction continued to perform well throughout 2003. Favourable conditions such as historically low interest rates, and continuation of the 50 per cent concession on building permit and infrastructure fees bolstered activity in the industry. Significant projects slated for completion in the next year are the Ritz Carlton Hotel and the Royal Watler Cruise Terminal. Completion of the Ritz Carlton Hotel will bolster further sale of units within the development.

Economic Outlook

Let me now turn to the economic outlook, Mr Speaker.

Since 2001 there has been a steady improvement in economic conditions, as developed countries have adjusted to the fallout from the bursting of the dot-com bubble and corporate governance issues. Global growth is projected to accelerate from 3.2 per cent in 2003 to 4.1 per cent in 2004. This is well above the 1993-2003 average of 3.5 per cent.

Leadership in global growth is likely to come from the US where monetary and fiscal stimuli are providing a boost to near-term economic activity. Real growth in the US is projected at 3.9 per cent in 2004, up from 3.1 per cent in 2003.

Of immediate concern, however, is the jobless nature of the US recovery so far. Households tend to spend more when there is job security and when there is confidence about future job prospects. With the reduction in productivity gains from 5.0 per cent in 2002 to 4.4 per cent in 2003, there is hope that the unemployment rate will fall.

The Cayman Islands is likely to benefit from continued strengthening of the US economy in the form of inward investments and visitor spending. Real growth for the Cayman Islands is projected at 2.8 per cent in 2004, up from 2.0 per cent in 2003. Unemployment is expected to hold steady at 3.6 per cent in 2004. Inflation is projected at 2.0 per cent, up from a low of 0.6 per cent in 2003.

Early indications suggest that there will be a modest increase in the number of tourist air arrivals in 2004 – potentially the first annual increase for the Cayman Islands in years. With the perceived threat from terrorism continuing, North American travellers are more confident about travel closer to home. The Caribbean is relatively close and has traditionally been considered to be safe. These are factors that are likely to benefit the Cayman Islands.

Fiscal Position

On the fiscal front, the Government is forecasting to collect $338.2 million in 2004-2005. This represents an increase of around $29 million from that budgeted for 2003-2004. It reflects the rebound in government revenue evident in recent months.

Operating expenses are forecast to be $328.2 million in 2004-2005. This number is not strictly comparable with the cash budget number from last year because it has been prepared on the accruals basis. Accordingly, it includes some non-cash numbers not recognised in previous years. The largest of these is depreciation which amounts to $13.6 million for the core Government in 2004-2005.

The Operating Expense number also includes the aggregate net loss of Statutory Authorities and Government Companies which amounts to $5.4 million. These two items make up around six per cent of expenditure.

The net surplus, which is the key operating measure, is forecast to be $473,000. When the sizes of the revenue and expenditure flows are taken into account, this forecast net surplus is not significantly different from the target of $1 million established in the Strategic Policy Statement.

As a result of the move to accrual accounting, the fiscal forecasts include a balance sheet for the first time. This shows a forecasted net worth position for the Government at the end of 2004-2005 of $366.4 million. This is made up of forecasted assets of $716.7 million, less forecasted liabilities of $350.3 million.

The major asset category on the forecast balance sheet is Property, Plant and Equipment. This consists of physical government assets such as Crown land, roads and buildings. The projected book value of these assets as at 30 June 2005 is $454 million.

The Government's other major asset is its investment in Statutory Authorities and Government Companies. This is the value of the net assets of those organisations which in aggregate is forecast to be $167.9 million as at 30 June 2005.

The liability side of the balance sheet is dominated by two items: borrowings and the unfunded pension liability.

Borrowings are forecast to be $199.2 million at the end of the Budget year. This represents a net increase of $26.5 million from expected 2003-2004 levels.

The unfunded pensions liability, which amounts to $130 million, is the difference between the value of the assets of the Public Service Pensions Fund and the value of its future pensions payments. Under the Public Service Pensions Law the Government is legally responsible for this difference and makes regular payments to the Fund. Payments towards the past service liability have been budgeted at $10 million in 2004-2005. This is separate from the current costs which have been budgeted under the various Ministries and Portfolios.

The unfunded pensions liability figure is likely to be revised upward at some future time as a result of a recent actuarial report received by the Pensions Board. This report is currently under review before being submitted to Cabinet. Following the review, the Government will consider recommendations from the Board of Trustees that could have an impact on the level of past service liability contributions in the future. Any change to the value of the balance sheet liability will be made at that time.

The Government will have to look at the past services liability of the Pensions Fund very carefully. The assumption that has been made by the actuary is that the Government should be held responsible for the past services liability of not only central Government, but also Statutory Authorities as well. This is something that the Government will have to consider very carefully because it is now pushing the value of the past services liability up from the present $130 million to a new figure. What must be borne in mind, I am bringing this to Honourable Members because the actuary has presented a report, but this is one aspect of it that is being looked at very carefully.

To use an example, if a government department became a statutory authority on 1 January 1996, the Government should be held responsible for the pensions liability, up to that point in time, for all civil servants who would have been transferred over into the new statutory authority. However, if the statutory authority did not join the Pensions Fund until 1 January 1999, it would mean that there would be a gap there between 1 January 1996 through 31 December 1998 for which the Statutory Authority would be responsible for the pensions obligations of those staff members that it took on board even as civil servants on 1 January 1996 and new employees that came on board during that intervening period. That would constitute past services liability and although it will be administratively tedious for that exercise to be done in order to apportion the past services liability, it is important that it be done.

If it means that three, four, five, or six million dollars of that should be allocated to statutory authorities it is important that that allocation be made because statutory authorities have been set up on the basis of achieving certain efficiencies. If certain efficiencies are going to be achieved it means that the cost of their operation must be recognised and that includes the pensions cost of staff. I thought that I should point this out because this is one area where the Portfolio of Finance has been raised with Cabinet and there is common agreement that that section should be looked at carefully in order to allocate who has responsibility for what portion of the past services liability costs.

I said before and I repeat, Mr. Speaker, following the review, the Government will consider recommendations from the Board of Trustees that could have an impact on the level of past service liability contributions in the future. Any change to the value of the balance sheet liability will be made at that time.

The forecast cash flow statement provides for a net cash inflow from operations of $17.5 million, a net cash outflow from investing activity of $42.9 million and a net cash inflow from financing activities of $26.5 million. The overall impact on the Government's cash position from these activities is an increase in cash of $1.2 million. This results in a forecast cash balance of $48.2 million as at 30 June 2005.

Almost all of this cash balance relates to Funds, Special Reserves and the General Reserve. In aggregate these Funds and Reserves are forecast to be $47.6 million at the end of 2004-2005.

This means that the working capital cash balance is forecast to be $678,000. This represents a very lean working cash position and it is deliberately so, Mr. Speaker. The Government's working capital policy is to seek to begin and finish the year with a minimal working cash position, although the balance fluctuates during the year as revenue flows are uneven. What this is saying is that the Government has to be very conscious of the amount of money it takes out of the economy because if we want to consider the economic turnover effect, it means that as much money as possible must remain in the hands of the private sector and private citizens of the country, since when the money remains out there, we get the true multiplier effect taking place within the economy.

The Budget forecasts contained in Part C of the Annual Plan and Estimates contain a wealth of detailed information about the Government's finances. I am sure that Honourable Members will find this information very useful.

Reflection

As this is my last Budget, Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to reflect on the many changes that have occurred during my time as Financial Secretary.

Certainly the Cayman economy has changed much over the last 12 years. So, too, has the size and scope of government activity.

In 1992, nominal GDP was $653 million. The forecast for 2004 is $1,680 million. This means that the size of the economy has more than doubled over that period.

In 1992, operating receipts were $125 million. The forecast for 2004/5 operating revenue is $338 million, an increase of 170 per cent.

In 1992, operating expenditure was $117 million. The forecast for 2004/5 is $328 million, an increase of 180 per cent.

These numbers are interesting because they show that the size of the Government as a proportion of the economy as a whole has not changed a great deal over this time, despite popular belief to the contrary. In 1992, government expenditure as a proportion of GDP was 18 per cent. The forecast for 2004-2005 is 20 per cent. This is still quite low in international terms.

On the capital side, a total of $396 million has been budgeted for capital expenditure over the 12-year period, an average of $29 million a year. This is a significant level of investment for a country of our size. When one recalls that the total outstanding borrowing at the end of 2004-2005 is forecast to be only $199 million, it is clear that much of that capital expenditure has been financed from operating revenue.

There have also been some difficult and challenging times, Mr. Speaker.

As a relatively small economy, Cayman is susceptible to global economic influences not of our making. The standout example during my tenure is the impact that 11 September and subsequent related events have had on our economy and Government finances.

This ever-changing world economic situation is guaranteed to keep a Financial Secretary on his or her toes. So, too, does a slow down in revenue like the one we have experienced in recent years. This revenue reduction, together with the development pressures that come from a rapidly growing economy such as ours, has meant that each and every one of my 13 Budgets as Financial Secretary have been difficult to balance. Nevertheless, the commitment of the Governments of the day to achieving an acceptable solution has meant that a balanced budget has always been accomplished, even if it sometimes happened a little too close to the Budget deadline.

I have also had the privilege to represent this country in a number of international forums. My involvement with the Caribbean Development Bank has been most rewarding and helps put our own situation into the broader regional context. The two years in which I was Chairman of the Bank were a particularly enjoyable experience.

I have also been honoured to host a number of international conferences here in Cayman, most notably the Commonwealth Finance Ministers' meeting and two Annual Meetings of the Caribbean Development Bank. Such opportunities are privileges that one gives God thanks for and I have to say thanks to the Government of the day and to the people of the Cayman Islands for the trust that has been placed in me in order to be placed in a position to host these conferences.

As I look back over my time as Financial Secretary, Mr. Speaker, two areas of my work stand out.

The first is the three or so years starting in the late 1990s. This was the period when our financial services sector was under significant threat from a range of international initiatives, all of which we are thoroughly familiar with.

This was a particularly difficult time for the Cayman Islands, the Government, and the Legislative Assembly of the day and, Mr. Speaker, it is quite likely that there are still challenging times in the future. While I am sure there will be ongoing work in this area, it is pleasing to know that there is now in place the expertise to assess and address these initiatives. In this regard, I am very grateful for the willingness of the private sector over the years in working with the Government to address these initiatives.

At this point, I must say that I was particularly pleased with the robust position that the Honourable Leader of Government Business took when he met with the Paymaster General during December last year. He pointed out to her that if the Cayman Islands were called upon to sign up to the EUSD tax savings directive, this could not be done unless the Cayman Islands was seen to be receiving something equal in return.

I remember on one occasion that both of them sat one on one, leaving the technocrats, persons such as myself, in the waiting area. I think that when we got back in, there was a more positive atmosphere which facilitated negotiations and, at the end of the day, what emerged from that was a framework document. I referenced that document earlier; we know that the intentions of the United Kingdom have been expressed in that document in terms of what they plan to do for the Cayman Islands. It is yet to be fleshed out and we do trust particularly the comprehensive tax agreement that is so important to this country, that we will see some window of positive work being done before 30 June this year comes around. I do believe that we have developed the expertise. I recall that both the Members of the Opposition on one occasion said in this House that there are certain things they are divided on, but when it comes to the financial services industry that is so important to the country of the Cayman Islands, that they will move in lockstep in order to secure what is in the best interest of the country. This is very gratifying and important for me to have this knowledge of that level of commitment.

The second area that stands out is the financial management reform.

To tell the truth, a decade or so ago I did not think there was too much wrong with the way the Government managed itself. Other Members of this House were championing financial reform long before I became an advocate myself.

In this regard I have apologised since to the Honourable Minister of Health and the Honourable Minister of Education. Mr. Speaker, I remember when they brought the Motion, but I am sure by now they have forgiven me in their hearts.

However, as Members of this Honourable House know, in early 1998 the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and I attended a Commonwealth Secretariat course on modern government financial management. That was a very intensive, but very interesting, experience. I quickly came to understand the way the Government budgeted, accounted and managed itself not only needed to be modernised, it was one of the causes of less than effective performance.

Not long after my return from the course, I invited the Honourable Ruth Richardson to visit Cayman and tell us about the New Zealand experience. That was the beginning of what has become known as the Financial Management Initiative or FMI. In this regard, I have to give credit to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition because he would call me on a frequent basis to find out what was being done and this was quite encouraging. I must say when the current Government came on board they came with the same level of enthusiasm and there has been commitment on both sides of the House to the reform.

FMI was launched in 1998. As with any major change management project, the path has not always been easy, nor the support unwavering. This should be no surprise to anyone. FMI was always going to be an ambitious project. Indeed, it needed to be, as it had to fundamentally change the way the Government manages itself.

The benefits of the reform are already clear for all to see and none more so than in the Budget documents presented to this House today. It is a great personal pleasure to be able to present the first accrual Budget in my last Budget address.

In many ways this Budget represents the culmination of the financial reform effort. However, there are many more opportunities to improve government performance. I look forward to turning my attention to personnel reform and following on the excellent work my colleague, the Honourable Chief Secretary has been doing in this area. Financial and personnel reform complement each other and both are necessary for good government performance.

Conclusion

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank all those who have worked so hard to prepare this Budget over the last several months. The move to accrual budgeting and the full implementation of the Public Management and Finance Law have resulted in some new challenges this year. These have required extraordinary commitment and dedication on the part of the civil service and I would like to thank the whole of the civil service for this effort.

I would like to pay special recognition to the staff of the Budget and Management Support Unit, the past Deputy Financial Secretary, Mr. Joel Walton and the Treasury who have worked tirelessly for many months to achieve the landmark documents presented to this House today.

I would also like to acknowledge finance staff in departments, and particularly the chief financial officers of Ministries and Portfolios. They have carried an extra heavy burden in the move to accrual accounting. I should say that since the present Deputy Financial Secretary has come on board, he has approached this with an increased level of enthusiasm and that is very good. Mrs. McLaughlin in the Treasury, Mr. Jefferson in the Deputy Financial Secretary's Office, chief officers, Mr. Gough and his team in the Budget Unit — all of these individuals have contributed tremendously. Also, I give recognition to the excellent work that has been done by our consultant, Mr. Tony Dale.

I point out that during the Budget process it was quite heartening to see Ministers becoming so emerged in the Budget process themselves and inviting the heads of Statutory Authorities, particularly one, to give an account in terms of why a projected loss for the upcoming fiscal year had been set at that level and to invite that projected deficit to be revisited. The benefit of their hard work over the last few months will be evident for many years to come.

I would also like to take this opportunity to thank you and all the Ministers, Official Members and Members of the Legislative Assembly that I have worked with during my time as Financial Secretary. I am grateful for your courtesy, consideration and support over the years.

I would also like to thank the staff of the Portfolio of Finance and Economics, both those currently in the Portfolio and those who have retired or moved on, for their support. Managing the Government's finances is always a difficult and pressured task and I thank them for the dedication to the welfare of these Cayman Islands.

In presenting this Budget it is pleasing to be able to bring to the House a document that is not only fiscally responsible, but one that is also coherent and understandable. The standard and quality of budgetary preparation that has now been achieved leads the Caribbean and is among the best in the world.

The Cayman Islands Government is one of only a handful of national governments that budget and report on an accrual accounting basis and in full compliance with internationally set accounting standards. It is something that we should be rightfully proud of. It gives us an international standing that most other countries can only hope to aspire to.

While much has been achieved economically, fiscally and in public management over recent years, we must not rest on our laurels. The search for excellence is never ending and I look forward to seeing how the Budget develops in future years.

The policy actions and fiscal position contained in the 2004-2005 Budget continue the Government's plan for the economic and social future of this country. While it is deliberately a "steady as she goes" Budget, it is a Budget that ensures active progress towards the Government's outcome goals.

The road to economic and social prosperity is a long, perhaps never ending one. However, with God's help, I am confident that as a country we can achieve it.

May God continue to richly bless these Cayman Islands and I am honoured to recommend to this Honourable House the Appropriation 2004/05 Bill 2004.

My presentation will now be followed by the Honourable Leader of Government Business who will set out the Government's policy initiative for the upcoming fiscal year 2004/05.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Applause.]

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Policy Statement

"Protecting, Enhancing and Promoting the Cayman Islands"

The Speaker: I call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to do the Policy Statement.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

I must first apologise to Honourable Members for the late arrival of the Budget as the new Public Management and Finance Law which governs finances in these Islands mandates that the Budget must be brought by the first day of May.

Preparing the Budget under the new arrangements is very onerous therefore we are late, but only by six days. I pay tribute to the hard work of the Financial Secretary and Budget Management staff and, of course, my Cabinet and Back Bench colleagues for being able to present again a responsible Budget to this Honourable House. We are late with its presentation. I am sure that the people of these Islands, nevertheless, will be pleased with this Budget.

The old financial year ended in December of each year and therefore ended December last year. While we have traditionally started a new session in the beginning of each year and because we have started a new business year which now ends on the last day of June and begins on the first day of July, the last meeting of the last calendar year has been extended so that we can begin the process of conforming to the new Law.

The House should be prorogued under the new arrangements in time for His Excellency the Governor to open the new session in July thereby keeping in step with the new financial year 2004/05.

Introduction

The Honourable Financial Secretary titled his budget address "Maintaining the Course with a Responsible Hand at the Tiller". That responsible hand is the United Democratic Party Government with a solid civil service backup led by the Honourable Financial Secretary.

When the United Democratic Party (UDP) Government took office a little over two years ago the Government's budget position was a shambles. The previous year, 2001, the Government budgeted to borrow $55.5 million, much of it to fund recurrent expenditure which was spiralling out of control. The 2002 Budget, which was being prepared as we took office, was heading in the same direction.

Therefore, the very first thing the UDP Government did, Mr. Speaker, was to scrap that draft 2002 Budget in November 2001 and start again. Not only did we balance that Budget, we did it by cutting expenditure. We did it again for the 2003 (half-year) Budget; we did it again for the 2003/4 Budget and we have done it again for the 2004/5 Budget. That achievement is a clear indication that the UDP Government is a responsible hand at the tiller. It is not merely words, Mr Speaker; it is fact.

When Government took office, not only were the Government's finances in a mess, so too were most of its policies. In fact, in the course of reworking the 2002 Budget, it became increasingly clear that there were not any coherent policies.

Therefore, we energetically and diligently began the process of establishing clear, consistent and coherent policies to set the foundation for the future of this country.

As I have said many times over the last few years, the UDP Government's goal is to build a secure, prosperous Cayman Islands that can be a proud legacy for our children and grandchildren. You cannot achieve that, Mr. Speaker, without knowing what course you are taking and how to get there.

For a government, this means considering the policy options, choosing the ones that will best achieve your outcome goals, allocating resources according to those priorities, and then ensuring those policies get implemented.

Last year's Budget, which was entitled "Charting the Course", laid out the Government's medium-term policy plan. That plan was the culmination of much hard work and shows that the UDP Government is not only a responsible hand on the financial tiller; it is an equally responsible hand on the policy tiller.

Good policy is important, Mr. Speaker. However, policy without implementation is worthless. To achieve the desired results, policy must be implemented well, and done so consistently over time. It requires sustained focus and effort on the part of both Ministers and the civil service. The UDP Government has addressed this issue as well.

Last year we established the Cabinet Office headed by the Cabinet Secretary to co-ordinate the development of policy across Government and, most importantly, to monitor the effective implementation of that policy.

We have embraced and supported the new accountability arrangements under the Financial Management Initiative. The Annual Budget Statements, Purchase Agreements and Ownership Agreements, which are now in Members' hands, provide effective mechanisms to ensure that the policy actions approved by Cabinet are, in fact, implemented.

Most importantly of all, we have put together this year's Budget so that it supports and enhances the policy plan established in last year's Budget. That policy plan is working, Mr. Speaker. As the Financial Secretary has just outlined, the economy of the Cayman Islands is out-performing the world's economy. Our domestic growth is rebounding and unemployment is falling. In 1999, up to 2001, unemployment stood at over seven per cent, perhaps more. Today it is down to 3.6 per cent – the latest figures. Mr. Speaker, it took hard work, licks and, perhaps in getting all that done, there were many times of disappointment, of criticisms, of accusations, but we have done it.

Strategically, this Budget is therefore not something new or different from last year, or indeed the year before. It is a continuation of our policy initiatives to improve the social and economic prosperity of this country. It shows that the UDP Government is a responsible hand at the implementation tiller as well.

Overview of Policy Initiatives

We are not interested in words, Mr. Speaker; the UDP is interested in action.

During our short time in office, we have been one of the most progressive, determined and productive governments in the history of these Islands. For the benefit of Members and the public, I would now like to summarise some of the actions we have taken over the last two-and-a-half years and some of the new policy initiatives contained in the 2004-2005 Budget.

A Strong Economy

The UDP Government understands that a strong economy is the foundation on which a country's prosperity, including its social prosperity, is based. Stimulating economic growth, reducing unemployment and controlling inflation have therefore been high priorities for the Government.

Fiscal Management

We recognise, Mr Speaker, that the most important thing a government can do is to manage its own finances well. This is why fiscal responsibility has been the highest priority of all for the Government.

The Government is fully committed to responsible fiscal management and compliance with the Principles of Responsible Financial Management.

This Budget fully complies with those Principles. This is the third Budget in the history of the Islands to do so, all under the UDP administration. It even complies with a new debt-servicing ratio that the United Kingdom has recently forced us to adopt. Not only does the Budget comply with these Principles, it complies easily.

The debt-servicing ratio is a little over half the allowed limit and the cash reserves are more than double the level required. When this Government took office the cash reserves were practically zero.

We did not balance this Budget by increasing taxes on our people like other governments have. That is not the way to achieve prosperity.

No, Mr. Speaker, we balanced the Budget by controlling expenditure and assisting the private sector in growth. We re-prioritised existing expenditure to fund new initiatives and the Ministries and Portfolios were told to self-fund, through efficiency savings, the 2.5 per cent cost of living adjustment that we feel is only right should be provided to civil servants in the upcoming financial year.

The Government is also committed to ongoing improvements in government efficiency and performance. We have actively supported the Financial Management Initiative, even though it often constrains what Ministers would sometimes otherwise want or have been requested to do. The output approach enables Ministers to know more clearly where the money is being spent and it helps us to re-prioritise funding to areas of strategic importance to this country.

I congratulate the Financial Secretary and his team for their perseverance with the reform over the last several years. It is pleasing to see the reform culminating in the accrual Budget he has presented today.

The Government's efforts to improve efficiency do not stop with this Budget though, Mr. Speaker. The Chief Secretary will shortly be introducing a Public Service Bill to reform the Government's archaic personnel management system.

A Public Authorities Bill is also being prepared. This will provide an over-arching framework for the governance and accountability of statutory authorities and Government Companies. This Bill will complement the Public Management and Finance Law and the Public Service Law and will provide the Cayman Islands with a system of public management that will lead the world. This is, Mr. Speaker, the 21st century.

The Budget also makes financial provision for the office of the Complaints Commissioner. Not only will the establishment of this position help to improve civil service performance, it is yet another example of the UDP Government's commitment to openness and transparency. We should have the Complaints Commissioner in place shortly.

The proof of this commitment will be seen later in the year, Mr. Speaker. A month or two before the election the Government will be publishing a Pre-election Economic and Financial Update. That document will report the state of the economy and the Government's finances as they exist at that time. No government in the history of these Islands has ever provided the voters with information like that during an election campaign.

A government with things to hide would not do such a thing, but the United Democratic Party administration has nothing to hide. We stand by and on our record. The country can see for itself that the UDP Government is a good government. It is a government that can be trusted. It is a government that is open and honest about what it is doing for the people of this country.

As yet further proof, the Government plans to progress the Freedom of Information Initiative in 2004/2005. This reform will provide citizens and residents with the right to access government information. As specified in the Annual Plan & Estimates, we will bring enabling legislation to the House during 2004/5. I hope, Mr. Speaker, that we can get that legislation and there is nothing barring that legislation before the House is prorogued for General Elections.

While I am talking about government performance, Mr. Speaker, I would like to address government accommodation. As the Leader of Government Business, I have taken a keen interest in this issue, as has the whole of Cabinet. The new Minister has been very active in this regard with our Ministry.

Our two "headquarter" locations — that is the Glass House and Tower Building — are less than satisfactory for a number of reasons, not the least of which is the fact that both have serious code deficiencies and have reached the end of their useful lives. In addition, neither location affords Government the ability to carry out its functions effectively and efficiently. Government spends a great deal of money on private sector leases and is continually asked to spend more money to repair the Government Administration and Tower Buildings when the provision of new accommodation would be less expensive. The Government has previously committed itself to relocating Tower Building occupants no later than 2006.

For these reasons, the Government is taking swift action to address this serious problem. After carefully considering the various options, we have decided to acquire office accommodation under a standard lease-to-own arrangement, over a term of 20-25 years. While not a Private Finance Initiative (PFI), a lease-to-own arrangement is a well-established form of public/private venture. In this case, Government believes that new accommodation will be occupied earlier than under the previous PFI option.

The Government is currently reviewing a number of commercial proposals and will act with urgency so that the provision of new accommodation can coincide with earlier decisions to demolish the Tower Building in 2006.

In keeping with Cayman's reputation and leadership in the financial sector, one of the new buildings will be a Financial Services Centre which will also accommodate the Ministries. The other buildings will accommodate remaining government services and agencies.

I should point out that in 2001, Mr. Speaker, under the former Leader of Government Business and now Leader of the Opposition, Government started out on a course that would cost this country approximately $200 million on new office accommodation for government offices. Mr. Speaker, I can assure this Honourable House that we will deliver new office accommodation prior to the previously scheduled completion date and well under the proposed costs. The country cannot afford to spend that kind of money. We do not have it – simply put.

Economic Management

Responsible financial management is vitally important, Mr. Speaker, but it is only one part of the UDP Government's economic management strategy. The other key elements involve lowering the cost of doing business, promoting key sectors and promoting inward investment.

Lowering the Costs of Doing Business

Over the last two-and-a-half years we have worked tirelessly to make the Cayman Islands an attractive place to do business.

The deregulation of the telecommunications sector now well advanced with the successful removal of the Cable & Wireless monopoly, the establishment of the Information and Communications Technology Authority (ICTA) as an independent regulatory body, and the entry of new providers into the market place.

This reform has dramatically reduced telecommunication costs for businesses and private individuals alike. A recent promotion offered phone calls to the UK at 15 cents a minute. Prior to deregulation a common charge was $1.20 a minute. That is a reduction of 400 per cent, Mr. Speaker.

The Government will continue to work to reduce utility costs for businesses, including the electricity sector. This may involve the establishment of a further regulatory agency to oversee the operation of this sector.

The Government has also focused much energy and support into promoting and supporting key economic sectors.

Financial Services

In the case of the Financial Services Sector this has involved two years of extensive lobbying and negotiations with the United Kingdom over the European Union Savings Directive. This has required a significant investment of both financial resources and effort from the Government at both ministerial and civil service levels.

During this process we have been clear that we will not be pushed around and that we will control our own destiny. As Honourable Members are aware, this has culminated in a satisfactory resolution which has the support of the sector and which includes some very significant concessions on the part of the UK Government. The Government here is delighted that the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange (CSX) has been granted status as a recognised stock exchange by the UK Inland Revenue Department. This is something the Government has been pushing for as it puts the Stock Exchange on the same footing as competitors such as the Dublin and Luxembourg Exchanges.

For our part, we have agreed to negotiate specific tax information exchange agreements with relevant European countries and the Budget makes financial provision for this work.

The Budget also allocates funding for more media and public relations support for the financial services sector and for improving the research and policy capability in international tax and regulatory initiatives.

Tourism

In relation to the tourism sector, the Government has been pro-active in responding to the downturn in tourism following September 11, 2001. This has involved a concerted effort to attract greater cruise ship visitors and the numbers outlined by the Financial Secretary show that this strategy has been highly successful as an interim measure to alleviate the downturn. Mr. Speaker, we did not panic nor did we respond with any knee-jerk actions following the events of September 11, 2001 although criticisms levelled at me would probably have made someone else run for cover. We restructured our Department of Tourism (DoT) operations shifting the focus of our expenditure from administrative to marketing the destination. We restructured by putting more Caymanians in places. This restructuring resulted in a reduction of the DoT Budget from CI$24 million in 2000 to CI$20 million in this Budget. The Department employed and promoted more Caymanians than ever before.

The Government also commissioned the National Tourism Management Policy to establish an overall strategic direction for the sector over the medium term. This is currently being implemented and has a greater emphasis on stay over visitors.

Over the last two-and-a-half years the Government has committed significant financial resources to promoting Cayman, particularly to the North American and European markets. It is pleasing to hear the Honourable Financial Secretary report in his address that the number of stay over visitors has now begun to rebound. This is evidence that the Government's strategy is working and it is proof positive that we did the right thing in not knee-jerking because of criticisms.

The Budget also provides resources for the future benefit of the sector by promoting tourism as a career for young Caymanians. It also provides funding for better support to the sector through improved statistical information.

The Government has also worked to ensure that the strategic focus on Cayman Airways aligns with the National Tourism Strategy. This has seen the opening of new routes to Fort Lauderdale, Chicago and Cuba, with a new route launch anticipated before the end of the year. This expansion has required additional shareholder support from the Government, but will provide extensive benefits to the tourism sector and the economy as a whole.

Cayman Airways

The 2004/5 Budget provides continuing funding for both tourism promotion and Cayman Airways (CAL) support. Mr. Speaker, on the 8 January this year I joined the Cayman Airways Board of Directors at their annual Strategic Planning Retreat in Little Cayman. In my opening remarks at the retreat, I said that when we gathered for our retreat the year prior in February 2003, we could not have foreseen then that we would be having our next planning session in Little Cayman, having flown over on our own Twin Otter operation. The launch of Cayman Airways Express is a symbol of our responsiveness, ingenuity and commitment to advancing the interests of all three Cayman Islands.

I have consistently kept the country up to date with the progress of Cayman Airways and while it is unnecessary to repeat all of our achievements in the past two years, I would like to highlight a few major successes.

In 2002, Cayman Airways responded to calls for more efficiencies by implementing broad reforms which realised crucial efficiencies and resulted in unprecedented savings. Last year, as Government aimed to revitalise the local economy, Cayman Airways was given the opportunity to take centre stage and show that it could be an engine for economic growth.

Working with the Department of Tourism, Cayman Airways identified and launched the new routes I spoke about. Consumers embraced our strategies to be the fare leader, to simplify the fare structure, and to provide a reliable and convenient schedule. This consumer support is evident by the higher load factors and increased number of passengers transported, including tourists. The next gateway launch is expected to be in the fourth quarter of this year and will be in the north-east region of the United States. In preparation for the next gateway launch and because we will have to retire one of our current Boeing 737-200s in 2005, Cayman Airways is actively negotiating the lease of a second Boeing 737-300 aircraft, making it two.

I want to commend the Board for working tirelessly to achieve a turnaround and yield positive results on behalf of the country. We would all be well advised, Mr. Speaker, to have guarded optimism as I have come to appreciate how fickle this industry is. It requires your best efforts every day, and as we grow our business, it will become increasingly important that we become brilliant at the basics. The efficiencies that Cayman Airways has realised in keeping overheads low, the staff complement appropriately sized, and productivity high, cannot be forgotten as we turn to growing the airline. We must remain competitive, we must remember that the shareholder is not the Cabinet but the people of these Islands and we owe them the highest level of diligence.

In terms of the future, Cayman Airways will continue to strengthen the relationship with the Department of Tourism. For a country of our size and limited resources, we must make such logical and natural synergies work. I can already see improvement in the performance of both agencies since this partnership has been resumed. Tourism is a major sector of our economy and Cayman Airways should take its rightful position as the pre-eminent air service provider for the Cayman Islands, one that we can depend on as our own in times of turbulence; when we do not have a grip on world affairs and no control on what hits us.

Cayman Airways must continue to seek beneficial synergies externally, such as code shares with other airlines. There is renewed confidence in the carrier and I believe that they can leverage this asset to the benefit of Cayman Airways and its mission to serve these Islands.

Cayman Airways has also been charged to either establish a credible and frequent cargo service or discontinue dedicated cargo service. CAL should set a standard to do what it does well or not to do it all. We cannot afford to be mediocre in any of our business efforts.

Before concluding my policy remarks on Cayman Airways, Mr. Speaker, I must speak briefly on the Cayman Airways 2004/05 Budget, which is included in the documentation before us. The Budget shows a deficit of CI$4.9 million after the equity investment of CI$7 million by Government. Mr. Speaker, while it would not be prudent for me to publicly divulge Cayman Airways' commercial information with respect to the launch of its next gateway, what I can tell this Honourable House is that the cost of launching that new route is expected to be approximately CI$350,000 and the cost of acquiring the second Boeing 737-300 aircraft is anticipated to be in the region of CI$1.85 million for a total of CI$2.2 million.

When you subtract that CI$2.2 million from the projected deficit for Cayman Airways of CI$4.9 million, it leaves a negative position of CI$2.7 million after the equity investment. I make this point, Mr.

Speaker, to say that Cayman Airways is doing better even as we continue to expand our operations and increase our already appreciable contribution to our national economy.

In that regard, I must remind this Honourable House that over one year ago the Deloitte study on Cayman Airways conservatively estimated the airline's annual contribution to the Gross Domestic Product (GDP) at 12.9 per cent using data from 2001. Clearly, Mr. Speaker, that contribution has since increased given the improvement in our load factor and it is timely for Cayman Airways to have that study updated.

It is also important to recognise that when an airline commences a new route it takes time for that new route to mature and to produce a profit. Mr. Speaker, we must demonstrate to our clients that we are serious when we take such decisions and we must ensure that our service to new and existing gateways is consistent, credible and sustainable. Mr. Speaker, we must avoid the mistake that was made in Atlanta many years ago when Cayman Airways pulled out of that market prematurely because they had some bad days. Going forward Cayman Airways' approach must, and will be, consistent and determined.

I know that Honourable Members will support Cayman Airways.

Film Commission

This year we intend to establish a Cayman Islands Film Commission which will become a sub-agency under the Department of Tourism.

The mission of the Film Commission will be to attract film and television production to the Cayman Islands through aggressive marketing and to foster the continued development of film and television infrastructure throughout these Islands.

The Film Commission will be a one stop source for productions originating outside the Islands to find locations, facilitate permitting, rent equipment, secure qualified crew in the region and locate necessary support personnel (for example, police and fire service personnel). The Commission will act as a liaison between film productions and the various public and private entities that are necessary in order for filming to take place.

The establishment of the Film Commission is an important component of our strategy to aggressively market the Cayman Islands as an ideal location for the filming of movies, documentaries and commercials.

Inward Investment

The Government has put particular emphasis on promoting commerce and inward investment as a means to growing our domestic economy. The Cayman Islands Investment Bureau was established in 2003 and now operates an office in London and New York as well as locally. The Marketing and Promotions Unit was transferred from the Portfolio of Finance to the Bureau last year to provide a promotion capability.

Together with the Financial Secretary, I recently led a delegation on a visit to Hong Kong both to learn from their experience and to promote investment in the Cayman Islands. This was a highly successful trip and a Tourism and Investment Office will shortly be established in Hong Kong as a vehicle for promoting Cayman investment and tourism to Asia.

The 2004/5 Budget makes provision for the establishment of an Investment Bureau website and the increased provision of printed collateral. We will also be putting significant effort into activating the "Brand Cayman" initiative, developing an investment incentive policy and establishing processes for the Investment and Growth Management Advisory Board to make recommendations to Cabinet on investment proposals.

The Government's inward investment strategy is already showing dividends, Mr. Speaker. Three new up-market hotels are planning developments in the Islands. A five-star Four Seasons Resort will be constructed on Seven Mile Beach and the developer has already purchased the land for this resort.

Two five-star hotels are planned for the Eastern Districts. One of them, a Mandarin Oriental facility, is in the advanced planning stages.

Economic Development

The economic management initiatives I have just outlined are designed to support the economy as it now is. It is clear from the data provided by the Honourable Financial Secretary in his address that these initiatives are working. The Cayman economy is growing at a rate well ahead of the United States and, indeed, the global economy as a whole. The financial services sector is secure and the aggregate level of assets is growing. The tourism sector is rebounding.

However, the UDP Government is concerned about the future as well as the present. The economy that has served us all so well in the past may or may not be the economy that will deliver prosperity in 10 or 20 years time. With this in mind, last year the Government commissioned Deloitte, a large accounting firm, to prepare an analysis of the current economy and make recommendations for its future direction.

The results of that work were reflected in the Cayman Islands Economic Development Plan that I recently tabled in this Honourable House. That Plan is currently being reviewed by a committee of senior civil servants under the leadership of the Cabinet Secretary. That committee is identifying how the Plan can be effectively implemented and will report to Cabinet shortly.

Economic development is an issue for the country as a whole, not just the Government. Last week I launched a major consultation paper entitled "Protecting, Enhancing and Promoting the Cayman Islands” to get the view of interested parties on the Government’s economic development measures.

In addition, the Budget also makes provision for other specific economic development initiatives including the preparation of a secondary development plan for Bodden Town, of course, continuing pressing forward with plans for Cayman Brac, promoting Cayman Brac as often and as much as we can and trying to work with the Cayman Brac people in order to lift the economy forward. These initiatives are yet another example of the UDP Government’s economic leadership of this country.

A country’s economic development is highly dependent on the quality of its infrastructure. Some of our key infrastructure assets are now over-stretched and unable to cope with the demands on our ever-growing economy. A failure to deal with this issue will have long-run detrimental consequences for the future economy of these Islands. We cannot afford for these Islands to come to a standstill again.

The UDP Government will not let that happen. Although there are people in some quarters who want to ignore this issue, the UDP Government is not frightened to do what is in the best interests of the country. The major infrastructural issues that we know need to be addressed, and for which the Government has requested that options be developed, are three-fold.

The first is the pressure on our road network. The only long-term solution to this problem is the construction of a national arterial highway from East End to West Bay; and the quicker we do it the better off we all will be. We have already committed significant resources to this vision through the funding provided in the 2003/4 Budget and now the 2004/5 Budget for the extension of the Esterley Tibbetts Highway to Indies Suites.

The second is the need for enhanced port facilities. It is clear to us all that the current facilities in George Town will not be adequate for the demands of our economy in the future. A more modern and efficient set of facilities is required and this will not be possible at the existing location. Although there are those who say, “not in my backyard”, for the good of the country we all have to consider our backyards. The most viable alternative option — as the East End Member has just said we should go to the North Sound; maybe he could propose that — is a brand new port complex in the eastern districts. The Government will continue to work with the Port Authority to develop and accept viable proposals for the construction and financing of a new facility.

The third infrastructure need is our airport facilities. These are the lifeblood of our economy — the port and the airport. In 2003/4 the Government invested in the expansion of the airport terminal in Cayman Brac and the 2004/5 Budget provides funding to the Civil Aviation Authority for the construction of a new airport in Little Cayman. The Minister has already been able to pave a piece of what we currently use as an airstrip in Little Cayman.

However, in the medium term something will need to be done about Owen Roberts International Airport. The increasing passenger traffic, together with the length of the current runway, means that this facility is quickly becoming too small for the traffic that it needs to handle. The Government has commissioned the Civil Aviation Authority to develop options for the expansion of our airport facilities, including the option of relocating the international airport. My vision would be that the present Owen Roberts International Airport could become a Corporate/Executive Terminal and a regional station for maintenance which would create a very significant revenue source for this country. Mr. Speaker, I hear the grumbings, but we must be proactive and plan for the future development and needs of the country. We have already made mistakes and we should not make them again because we are going into this with our eyes wide open.

These are serious issues which the country must address. They also involve a large financial investment. As a country we need to be realistic about this and accept that we will be unable to afford this development within our existing revenue base.

The Government, therefore, is also addressing options for increasing government revenue in the future, something we know we all need. There is no use for political bickering, just for one-upmanship. When we cannot fund schools, when we cannot fund hospitals, when we cannot fund roads—in fact, when we cannot pay healthy salaries in this Legislative Assembly—then what? Not in my backyard? I say it has to be in someone’s backyard. When we cannot fund housing and social needs, what then? We must get the revenue that is needed to keep this country safe, and it cannot be kept safe by talk. It can only be kept safe by taking sound actions and moving forward for the good of all. However, Mr. Speaker, it must be acknowledged that the Government does not have sufficient resources to improve our infrastructure to the level that is required; therefore, we shall be seeking to achieve these results through public/private partnerships. The UDP Government does not support a policy of increased taxation. Perhaps those people who are saying “not in my backyard”, who do not want to see the increase in revenue can put forward their taxation policy, because that is the only place that the revenue will come from; either income or property tax of some kind, which will send us down the road to damnation. The UDP does not support a policy of taxation. Government cannot fund the needs of the country without encouraging good development and establishing the required infrastructure. This is where the revenue will come from. Mr. Speaker, within the next three to five years we anticipate approximately — already before us — CI$2.5 billion in direct development investment in the Cayman Islands. However, let me be very clear and repeat my position, Mr. Speaker, we will not consider an option that will merely further burden the people of this country. No taxation is our policy. New revenue bases must be created.

Healthy Resident Population

The UDP Government's performance in relation to health care is a good example of this Government addressing the hard issues.

One of the first things we did is tackle the problem of spiralling health costs by establishing the Health Services Authority. More recently, we have amended the Health Insurance Law and established the Cayman Islands National Insurance Company (CINICO) to ensure that affordable comprehensive insurance coverage is available to all Caymanians. We have achieved all of this, Mr. Speaker, within the constraints of fiscal responsibility.

The 2004/5 Budget continues our reform of the health sector by providing funding for the Health Insurance Commission and the Health Practitioners Board. These regulatory bodies will help ensure that the health sector operates in a safe and equitable manner in the future.

The Budget also provides continued financial support for both the Health Services Authority and CINICO. This is to ensure that health services and health insurance are provided at an affordable level.

The Budget also provides $1 million for the development of new landfills in Cayman Brac and Grand Cayman. Also included is $900,000 for new Mosquito and Research Control Unit (MRCU) facilities and for the completion of the abattoir.

New health related outputs include more focus on controlling breeding mosquitoes and extend substance abuse services to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Government will also be revising the national strategic plan for health during 2004/5.

Planned legislative measures include developing a strategic plan and legislation for dealing with HIV/Aids, and several new laws to improve health status, including a revision of the mental health law.

A Well-Educated Population

The future of our country depends on the educational standards of our young people. The UDP Government has therefore been very active in the education area since taking office. They have given the Minister every bit of support that he needed in this area or that we have been asked to do.

A key initiative has been to prepare our children to be able to fully participate in the modern technological age. This project, which is called Improved Teaching and Learning in the Cayman Islands (ITALIC), is now in its third year and the 2004/5 Budget provides $1.2 million of further funding to support this initiative.

Last year, the Government introduced 100 additional education scholarships and funding for these continues this year. One hundred, Mr. Speaker! You do not hear much about that on the talk shows, but it was done and funding for these continues this year. So too does the Government's extensive financial support for pre-schools, private schools and tertiary institutions. This amounts to a contribution of $2.1 million in 2004/5.

Funding to the Community College has been increased to fund the introduction of the four-year degree programme in 2004/5.

Other new outputs planned for 2004/5 include funding for the West Bay public library, an extension of library outreach programmes, and pre-employment training for job seekers. I had better amend that to say continued funding because there are still funds in this year's Budget and hopefully that will begin shortly.

The Government's major financial investment into the education sector, however, is capital funding for the completion of the new Spotts Primary School, and output funding for its operation from the beginning of the 2004/5 school year – something I heard someone say in this House was not going to be done; proof positive that we are a government of action and not words.

The Government has also agreed to proceed with the construction of the new secondary school at Frank Sound and has instructed the Ministry to begin the pre-construction process and funding has been provided for this. However, the Government understands that there is significant pressure on classroom space at the existing High Schools. The Budget therefore provides for temporary classrooms as an interim measure.

A Socially Supported Population

The Government recognises the need to provide social infrastructure to assist those persons less fortunate in society.

Over the last two-and-a-half years a key part of our focus in this area has been the affordable housing project. The construction of these houses is well advanced and the National Housing and Community Development Trust has been established to own then resell the houses at an affordable price.

This year's Budget includes funding for the Trust to construct community facilities.

The second area of the Government's focus has been to improve the institutional arrangements for the delivery of social services. This has included the establishment of the Children and Youth Services (CAYS) Foundation, and the restructuring of the Social Services Department into the Children and Family Services Department and the Probation Unit.

New social policy initiatives in this year's Budget include increased training for adults with disabilities, increased places for residential drug treatment, and extending in-home care services for the elderly and adult disabled.

Other new outputs include expansion of the Cadet Training Corps and an increase in the number of foster parents trained in order to create more child placements. The Government will also be extending probation and aftercare services to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Government is also keen to support the community and will continue to provide ongoing support for a large number of community organisations providing youth programmes, sports programmes, community development activities and after school programmes. In 2004/5, funding will also be provided to establish sport and recreational leagues and for a new basketball court in West Bay, in the Mount Pleasant area.

A Safe and Secure Country

Safety and security are matters of concern to all residents and visitors and continue to be a high priority for the Government, especially at a time when there is a worldwide threat from acts of terrorism.

Over the last two years the Government has actively responded to threats to law and order and domestic security. The 2003/4 Budget provided additional funding to the police to allow increased foot and bicycle patrols. It also made provision for the replacement of a fire truck to maintain the capability of our fire service.

Further policy actions are allowed for in the 2004/5 Budget. An amount in excess of $1.7 million has been allocated for police interception equipment, the upgrading of the East End Police Station (which will be done in the next few months, before the end of the year) and the new Drug Task Force facility at the Marine Base.

In relation to emergency services, provision has been made for fire services in Bodden Town and a new fire substation in Little Cayman. An amount of $300,000 has also been allocated for the replacement of emergency generators for hurricane shelters.

To support the administration of justice the Government has allocated additional funding to the Judicial Administration to cover the servicing of the new Drug Court, as well as providing capital funding for the new Summary Court building.

A number of legislative measures are also planned. These include a review of the Police Law to update discipline procedures and a Penal Code (Amendment) Bill.

Constitutional Reform

I would like to comment briefly about constitutional reform as a matter of policy, Mr Speaker.

The Cayman Islands came under British control in 1655 and our relationship has evolved over time. When Jamaica became independent, we opted to retain direct links with the Crown.

The UDP has no desire to break these links or to seek independence. However, we do want the Cayman Islands to have greater powers to determine its own affairs. This policy is consistent with the UK Government's policy.

The UDP aims for a more progressive partnership with the United Kingdom. The Cayman Islands needs a constitution fit for the 21st century and the UDP desires a stepped change from the existing colonial constitution. This is a dynamic and forward-looking Island and we need a modern constitution to reflect our ambitions and to do the work that is necessary. We will continue to be impacted in various ways by Europe due to our connection with the United Kingdom. Therefore, we must secure for ourselves the constitutional ability to safeguard our future, particularly in our two most important industries of finance and tourism. A constitution that embodies the protection of our monetary systems and other key industries must be enshrined in the constitution.

I wish to state at this point, Mr. Speaker, that having regard to the changes within the European Union and the implications for the United Kingdom's own constitution, the Cayman Islands should adopt the approach that not even the Bermuda model is acceptable to us and the United Kingdom should not expect the Cayman Islands to accept old colonial constitutional templates that have continuously featured during constitutional talks with them, particularly the one done by the last Commission. Clearly, the developments in the European Union have made these templates, for all practical purposes, obsolete and we need to adopt a fresh approach.

The Cayman Islands is not a socialist country. While we believe in taking care of our own and while we believe in taking care of our own state of affairs, it is not a socialist country. Therefore, what comes from Europe in terms of some of the stuff that we have seen cannot be pushed on us.

Therefore the Cayman Islands must seek a constitution that is uniquely crafted for our country and that takes into consideration the changes that will inevitably occur in the United Kingdom and the issues of globalisation and the implications thereof. We must imbed in the Constitution our monetary system, our commerce including shipping and insurance where they cannot be touched. We cannot afford to settle for anything less!

The Government will continue to pursue constitutional discussions with the UK along these lines and we will make this an election issue one more time, so that all and sundry will have a chance to voice their opinions on the matter. I will table in this Honourable House a document for one and all once it has gone through the Party.

Tribute

I would like to take this opportunity to commend my colleague, the Honourable George McCarthy, on his last Budget Address as Financial Secretary, Mr. Speaker. As you are all aware, Mr. McCarthy will relinquish his responsibilities as Financial Secretary to take up the mantle as the next Chief Secretary. Those who have worked with Mr. McCarthy in this Honourable House will confirm that his character and work ethic are beyond reproach. Mr. McCarthy, the Honourable Financial Secretary, is a Christian gentleman and someone whose humility and commitment to excellence exemplifies the best of the public service and Christian fortitude.

Having first joined the civil service some 30 years ago in 1974, he was appointed Financial Secretary in 1992. Mr. McCarthy has achieved many worthy goals during his 12-year tenure as Financial Secretary, both in his primary position and in regard to his role as Chairman of the Government's Private Sector Consultative Committee. He has seen this country through unprecedented external challenges such as the European Union Taxation of Savings Directive, the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) Tax Initiative and the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) Review. Throughout these difficult times, he has provided sage counsel, passionate leadership and unwavering determination.

However, perhaps the most notable of his achievements, is his foresight in launching the Financial Management Initiative which has heralded the public service boldly into the 21st century. In the past three years in particular, Mr. McCarthy has championed financial reform and has fought to ensure that budgetary reporting tied Government's fiscal objectives closely to its policy objectives. By shrugging off antiquated approaches and embracing necessary change, Mr. McCarthy has enabled greater transparency and accountability in the public sector.

It is most fitting that his promotion will give him the opportunity to complete the second phase of reforms, when as Chief Secretary, he may continue to tackle personnel reform within the Civil Service. There is no end to his commitment to this country and his resolve to see the civil service and the country improved under his stewardship.

Therefore, while I regret that this is the last Budget which he will present in this Honourable House, I am confident that he will equally excel in his new role.

Mr. McCarthy, you have my sincere gratitude for your hard work and passion for reform and I wish you, your good wife and your family the very best as you embark on a new role within the public service.

I plan to continue to work alongside him and to have his sincere guidance.

I also wish to commend the incoming Financial Secretary, Mr. Ken Jefferson, on what I am confident will be the continuation of a legacy of achievement. He has demonstrated that he has the ability and will to fulfil this role and I look forward to working more closely with you in coming years.

Finally, I want to congratulate the Honourable James Ryan on the eve of his retirement. He has dedicated himself solely to the public service for some four decades. His leadership has benefited people on all three Islands as he had a significant tenure as District Commissioner for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. On behalf of all the people of all three Islands, thank you for a job well done.

Conclusion

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, the UDP Government is a government of vision, energy and action. We are a government with a clear plan for the economic and social development of this country. We are a government that is not afraid to face up to the hard issues and deal with them.

We are a government that is happy to be open and transparent about what we are doing. Most important of all, Mr. Speaker, we are a government that delivers. We deliver good policy; we deliver good implementation, and we deliver fiscal responsibility for all the people of these Islands.

In just two-and-a-half years year, Mr Speaker we have turned around the fortunes of this country; one from where people were leaving, apartment buildings were closed, people could not rent their investment, children that I know whose parents were not able to buy Christmas presents in December 2000 and in December 2001 things were very bleak. The fortunes of this country have been turned around by hard work and I thank Almighty God for all of the wisdom that He has given us and the help to tackle the problems before us.

The Budget presented in this House today is clear evidence of that and it is evidence of one more thing: that the UDP Government is a responsible set of hands at the tiller to lead the country in 2004 and beyond.

I thank you for your indulgence, Mr. Speaker, and I thank Honourable Members for theirs.

Suspension of Standing Orders 21(1) and 24(5)

The Speaker: I call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business for the suspension of Standing Orders.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, as I stated earlier, because we are proceeding to a new financial year, the last meeting of the last calendar year is extended so that we can begin the process of conforming to the new financial year.

The Public Management and Finance Law which has mandated a new process; the Budget by 1 May and the closing of the financial year at the end of June, and the beginning of the financial year on 1 July. As we had to do this by law, Members were not able to put their questions or motions in and the Government decided that we would suspend those Standing Orders in order to facilitate all Members. We have made that decision in Cabinet and in the Business Committee, which I chair. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I beg for the suspension of Standing Orders 21(1) and 24(5).

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 21(1) and 24(5) be suspended.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Orders 21(1) and 24(5) suspended.

Vote of Thanks for Temporary Accommodations

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I had intended to make a few remarks at the first sitting of the continuation of this fifth meeting of the 2003 session of the Legislative Assembly which commenced on Friday, 7 May 2004.

Due to circumstances beyond my control, I was unable to attend that sitting. In order to ensure that all Members of the Legislative Assembly including myself and the officers of the Legislative Department are better informed as to the proposed dates of upcoming meetings, I have written to the Honourable Chief Secretary, who is also the First Official Member and is the Administrative Head of the Legislative Department, requesting him to use his best efforts to obtain a schedule of future meetings including the date of prorogation of the 2003 session and the official opening of the 2004 session.

As soon as I receive the requested information, I will ask the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly to inform all Members accordingly. I should also say that this memorandum was sent to him prior to my leaving the Island.

Honourable Members, I wish to thank the Honourable Financial Secretary for allowing the Legislative Assembly to be temporarily accommodated within these offices of the Investment Bureau and all members of the Investment Bureau staff for the courtesies they have extended to us.

May I also once again publicly thank the Honourable Chief Justice for allowing the Legislative Department the use of his offices and allowing the Assembly to utilise Court 5 for our meetings over the past 13 months.

I also wish to convey our thanks to the Public Works Department in relocating the Legislative Assembly from Kirk House to these premises.

Our sincere thanks also to Mr. Peter Young of Rothstein Kass and Company (Cayman) Certified Public Accountants and his partners for allowing the officers of the Legislative Department to use their boardroom on the fifth floor of this building on Monday mornings to hold our weekly devotions.

Special thanks also go to the Clerk and officers of the Legislative Department who worked diligently in preparing these offices for the legislative proceedings and to accommodate our legislative staff.

Honourable Members, please note that I will be off the Island from Thursday, 20 May through Tuesday, 25 May 2004.

Lastly, I will, in due course, provide this Honourable House with an update on the progress report of the Legislative Assembly building.

Thank you, Honourable Members.

SECOND READING

The Appropriation (July 2004 to June 2005) Bill 2003

(Continuation of the Second Reading debate)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, a wise man once said if you plan for a year to plant a seed, if for 10 years then plant a tree and if for 100 years then teach the people. When you sow a seed once you will reap a single harvest. When you teach the people you will reap 100 harvests.

As I listen to the Honourable Third Official Member and the Honourable Leader of Government Business articulate the Government's fiscal and policy statements last Friday, I was struck again by the fundamental, philosophical difference between the United Democratic Party (UDP) Government and the People's Progressive Movement administration. It is plain to me, especially from the utterances of the Leader of Government Business, that the Government has no economic development or social plan for the Cayman Islands which is sustainable beyond the next year, let alone the next ten years. It is equally clear that the well-being of the Caymanian population, and particularly the young people, features very little in the Government's plans.

What has been outlined in the Budget address and the Policy Statement is a laissez-faire approach to the development of this country which says to the investor we will take what we can get and as much as we can get whenever and however we can get it regardless of how much it will cost us to get it.

What is very apparent is that the Government is intent on shackling the economic and social fortunes of the people of this country entirely to the wagon of indiscriminate and unbridled foreign investment and, if they have their way, the country will once again begin another cycle of uncontrolled physical development at tremendous social and environmental cost, the principal beneficiaries of which will be foreign investors and, indeed by pure observation, a select group of Government sympathisers. However, even this misguided and unsustainable approach to the development of these Islands has not been thought through properly.

On closer examination of the Budget document, we swiftly see that very little of the $328 million that Government intends to spend this year is being allocated to improving critical infrastructure such as roads, landfill and sewage facilities; absolutely and vitally needed to support Cayman's present development let alone, Sir, cope with three more five-star hotels as has been announced by the Leader of Government Business.

Everywhere I turn in Grand Cayman people are complaining bitterly about the state of traffic gridlock and with good cause. This is the case whether you are coming from West Bay or from the eastern districts in the mornings. Quite frankly, the traffic situation in this country has become intolerable and the Government is doing little more than paying lip-service to it. I dread to think what the situation on the West Bay Road is going to be like when, as the Honourable Third Official Member has stated in his address, the Ritz Carlton hotel is completed and opened during the course of the next fiscal year.

Simply allocating funds to extend the Esterley Tibbetts Highway to Indies Suites, as the Government has proposed in this Budget, is not going to materially improve the traffic situation.

The congestion on the roads continues to contribute to great inconvenience and higher stress levels for all people who live and work here and have to use the roads at least twice daily. It also makes Grand Cayman decidedly less attractive as a place to visit for a holiday or even as a place to do business.

I would have thought that all of that would have been patently obvious to the Leader of Government Business, who is also the Minister of Tourism and, as he quotes it, "his responsible hand at the tiller" would have caused some significant effort to be made to address what can only be termed at this point in time as a dire situation. Perhaps if he spent a little more time here on the Island and less of Government's funds on official travel he might be more aware of local concerns and there might be more funds available for basic requirements such as roads.

That aside, the Leader of Government Business did acknowledge in his address, and I quote: "Some of our key infrastructure assets are now over-stretched and unable to cope with the demands on our ever-growing economy."

He went on to say: “A failure to deal with this issue will have long-run detrimental consequences for the future economy of these Islands. We cannot afford for these Islands to come to a standstill again.”

He pontificated that: “The UDP Government will not let that happen ... The major infrastructural issues that we know need to be addressed, and for which the Government has requested that options be developed, are three-fold.

“The first is the pressure on our road network.”

Despite this acknowledgment, however, in the schizophrenic manner to which we have all become accustomed to with this Government, relatively little is allocated to these critically necessary road works in this Budget.

We have been treated in the combined addresses to the now familiar and very tiresome diet of sensational announcements of grandiose plans or proposals which, as the past three years have proven time and time again, generally come to nothing. What is clear from these infertile pronouncements is that the Government's economic and social development policy, in my view, is fundamentally flawed.

We entirely agree that a vibrant and thriving economy is key to the success of this country and that it is Government's duty to take actions, create initiatives and generally foster an environment which invites, encourages, supports and stimulates economic activity. It is also a fundamental reasonability of the Government to ensure that the economic activities of the Cayman Islands benefit the majority of our people.

Development is necessary for the economy of these Islands and good development certainly ought to be encouraged. However, the resources in these Islands, given their smallness, are limited and in most cases non-renewable and irreplaceable.

Government is entrusted to steward the natural and other resources of the country and to ensure that there is a future not just for Caymanians today, but for those future generations who are yet unborn. This is where the People's Progressive Movement parts company with the United Democratic Party. We regard their approach to development as narrow-minded, short-sighted, unsustainable and, in many instances, downright reckless.

The Leader of Government Business is fond of saying that we must embrace wealth or reap poverty. This seems to suggest that development must be encouraged and permitted whatever the cost and whether or not Caymanians benefit significantly from it. Indeed, in his recent address, the Leader of Government Business referred to anticipated direct development investments of $2.5 billion over the course of the next three to five years, and cited this as the means by which government revenue will be generated to fund the necessary infrastructural improvements the country needs. Mr. Speaker, this is absolutely unrealistic. The reality is that each new development creates more infrastructural demands. Therefore, it is impossible to gauge what infrastructural costs are going to be at present when all of these developments are taking place. The key, therefore, is to choose the right projects, those which are environmentally friendly and which fit into the overall developmental strategy for these Islands and also to plan properly when they come on stream so that the maximum benefit can be derived by the Caymanian people—I say it one more time—so that the maximum benefit can be derived by the people of the Cayman Islands.

I make the point again, Mr. Speaker, that not only is the United Democratic Party Government's physical development policy all wrong, but, in my view, their priorities are skewed. Even more glaringly obvious is the lack of attention and resources being devoted to the social and educational development of the Caymanian people who, when I repeated about maximum benefit being derived by the Caymanian people without the skills and education needed, will not be able to participate to any meaningful extent in the economic opportunities presented by a robust economy. History has proven that to us over and over again. It is said that only the insane keep repeating the same course of action expecting a different result.

Over the past 30 years or so Cayman has gone through at least two major development booms which have created tremendous economic opportunities in these Islands. While I will be first to admit—and I know it is a fact—that some of our people have benefited from these boom periods, significant numbers of our people have not. Principally, because they were not equipped with the necessary skills and/or they lacked the financial resources to do so. The reason for this—and this is something that I have preached for years and I believe it more and more every day of my life as I experience the problems that young people in this country have—is because I firmly believe that our educational system has never been properly geared to produce sufficient young people with the skills necessary to enable them to seize the job opportunities that our economy and our ongoing industries offer.

In order to truly benefit from the robust and vibrant economy, which we all agree is necessary, everyone in these Cayman Islands must be given access to both the tools and the opportunity to participate to the full extent of their abilities in the workplace and in the marketplace. That means they must have the benefit of the best educational system and product we can afford and a level playing field in the job market. I will talk about that for just a minute.

Human capital and education are the cornerstones upon which hinge the social, economic and cultural well-being of any society, ours being no exception. We believe, therefore, that it is any government's responsibility to foster a culture of life-long learning and self-improvement among the people of the country. Likewise, it is part of government's role in education and training to set standards, to promote educational and vocational excellence and to reward achievement. We believe, also, that it is government's duty to provide the nation, the children, the young people and the mature adults alike with learning facilities, programmes and opportunities which are relevant to both their aptitude and to the skills required by the industries in these Islands. This necessarily requires the recognition by government of the concept of multi-intelligence and the need to tailor school curricula to include vocational training as well as core academic subjects. Mr. Speaker, with the best of desires we have not achieved that and the tales are telling as we speak.

To achieve these fundamental goals government must, at a minimum, allocate sufficient resources to the development of education. Those resources include policy and curricular development, human resources and, very importantly, a physical plan. Quite frankly, given the lack of attention that most of these areas have received over the course of the current administration, and particularly in this Budget, education would not appear to be a priority of the current Government, although in his address, the Leader of Government Business paid lip-service to a few areas. That is unfortunately why, after three-and-a-half years in office, the Minister is hard-pressed to point to any one significant achievement or improvement in our education system since he has been there. Obviously, even if he has had great desires to make great strides his Government has not considered education to be a priority. However, of all of the under-achievement in this regard, there are two critical issues that are particularly tragic. The first and the most unforgettable of these is the failure of the Government to provide proper and adequate classroom facilities for our children in this country. The second is the failure again by the Government to include vocational training as a core component of the Government schools curricula and to make adequate provision for vocational training beyond high school.

They boast of the statistics that unemployment is the lowest it has been for four years, but if they check that unemployment survey and look to youth unemployment, they will find out factually that youth unemployment is in to double digit numbers and if that is not telling a story, then tell me.

It has been known for a long time now that a number of the educational facilities provided by Government has reached maximum capacity and that overcrowding had become acute. Indeed, while they paid no attention to it, the need for two additional primary schools and an additional high school were identified by the Government prior to 2000. This is not a new issue, yet here we are almost at the end of the term of the current Government and the Spotts Primary School is not yet finished and property, as I understand it, has not even been purchased for the needed high school in Frank Sound, although it has been announced where it will be located.

The situation at the George Hicks High School is so dire that the Government imported prefabricated temporary classrooms last year and there is provision again in the current estimates for more to be imported because they have to be used.

I really do not know what is going to be done in relation to the John Gray High School because, although I understand that overcrowding is going to be an issue there as well, as far as I can see there is no provision in the Budget for temporary classrooms for that site.

It is all a question of priority and education, by all indications, is not a high priority with this Government, meaning the United Democratic Party Government. I say that under a People's Progressive Movement (PPM) administration, education will receive high priority, particularly the upgrade and provision of adequate classrooms and related facilities.

The development of vocational training curricula or programmes or the provision of facilities for vocational training receives little more than an Honourable mention in the Budget address. It is the position of the PPM that vocational training needs to be made a key component of the curricula of all the government schools at varying levels in the various stages of a child's schooling.

Further, greater emphasis needs to be placed on vocational training beyond high school. I quoted those double digit figures for youth unemployment, meaning—I am not one hundred per cent sure, but I think—ages 18 to 21, because there is a lack of vocational training beyond high school. We have a short-, medium- and long-term problem and each of those needs to be addressed in a different manner. The current system of public education, in our view, is weighted too heavily in favour of the academically gifted student and it needs to be tailored to accommodate multiple intelligence and to recognise and honour the inherent value of vocational aptitude and its ability to bring self esteem to an individual and for them to find their own niche; to be the best that they can be.

While the PPM administration will continue to support and encourage academic excellence—let it not be misunderstood that any less focus should be there—and the pursuit of university education by as many of our people as possible, we will also promote vocational training and the acquisition of marketable skills by people who demonstrate a talent, willingness and aptitude for the trades and vocations.

In order for our people to be able to properly exploit the employment and economic opportunities which the Cayman Islands will offer under the PPM administration, we recognise that they must have the skills which the market place demands and is willing to pay top dollars for. In the past, far too few of our people have had the opportunity to acquire these skills in a properly structured learning environment and as a result the skilled trades and occupations in these Islands have been dominated by imported labour and much of that imported labour is integrated in our society. Many of them are friends of ours, the vast majority of them are all good people, so it is nothing to penalise them, but it begs the question, why can't our people benefit from those opportunities? We will seek to ensure that learning opportunities are made available so that our people will come to look at the trades and vocations as occupations worthy of pride from which they can earn a very good and decent livelihood.

This applies not just to the tourism industry, but equally to the construction, mechanical and electronic trades as well.

I spoke earlier of the obligation of Government and the intent of the PPM administration to ensure that our people have access to the best education product we can afford and a level playing field in the job market. The two have to go hand in hand. Employers cannot be expected to employ persons of any nationality who do not possess the basic skills necessary to function in the workplace. While there will be positions for which the employer is able to offer on-the-job training, essentially employers want employees who can do the job that they are hired to do. That is why education and vocational training are so critically important to our people and to any future success of our society. Our people must develop the requisite skills to make them marketable in the Caymanian workplace otherwise they will not be able to demand the high-paying and satisfying jobs. That is simply the reality, otherwise that double digit figure that I speak to of unemployment among the young people will simply continue to spiral.

However, when our people are qualified and able to do the required job, they must be given first preference and they must be paid at the same rate that their foreign counterpart would be paid if he or she held the job.

When our people qualify for promotion they must be promoted and not passed over simply on the basis that they are not of suitable national origin. These are strong words, but I use them advisedly because by experience in observing and talking to these people I am very much aware of the phenomena that operate in the Caymanian workplace in some areas. I know that there are some of our people who believe that simply being Caymanian is a qualification in itself and that by virtue of the fact alone they are not only entitled to a job, but a promotion and raise each year as well. We know that is not the right attitude.

I also know that on the other side of the coin that discrimination in the Caymanian workplace is real and that worthy and qualified Caymanians are not always compensated or promoted in the way their counterparts are.

The position of the People's Progressive Movement on this is straightforward. Caymanians must acquire the necessary skills, qualifications and proficiency for their chosen occupation and should not expect to be hired or promoted merely on the basis of being Caymanian. However, qualified, willing and able Caymanians must be given preference in employment and promotion and discrimination, in terms of compensation on the basis of national origin, must be penalised because that is the only way it is going to stop.

Lest it be said that I and the People's Progressive Movement are anti-development or do not understand the importance of a thriving economy to the overall health and well-being of the nation, let me make this absolutely clear: I have been in business all of my working life and I have had a hand in some development as well. All of my colleagues fully understand that without a vibrant economy very little is possible and that poverty exacerbates social problems and lack of earning power hamstring the ability of government to function and to provide the services that it needs to. I could never forget that. As I assumed the office as Leader of Government Business in 2000 when the global and Cayman economies were on a real downturn, coupled with this was a terrible state of the Government finances which we had inherited.

Then there was September 11 which literally drove the entire world into a recession, so I know first hand the challenges of running a government in hard times. I also know, as the Honourable Third Official Member has acknowledged in the Budget address, that the relatively small economy of these Islands is inextricably linked to the economies of the larger countries of the world and, in particular, the United States. I understand full well how dependent all of our industries are on foreign trade and on investor confidence not just in the Cayman Islands but in global trends. I am also very conscious of how susceptible our economy is to global threats such as terrorism.

Therefore, I know that while the present Leader of Government Business and his Government, like virtually all governments before them, are quick to claim credit for the recent and cautious economic upturn, the reality is that this is to be expected given the generally improved state of the global economy. However, the Leader of Government Business has gone even further than claiming credit for the current economic conditions; he has blamed me for the poor state of the Government finances which he says were in shambles when he took over in November 2001. In doing so, as is his usual style, he has conveniently ignored the state of affairs we found when we took office in 2000 and his role as Deputy Leader in the 2000/2001 Executive Council.

Because his statements to this effect are so misleading I am forced to refute them. I will do so in a bit of detail.

The special report of the Auditor General on the State of Public Finances prepared in 2001 certainly gives a clear picture of the Government's true financial position at the time of the General Elections in 2000. It provides some real insight into the state of affairs of the Government, of which I was the Leader of Government Business, inherited when we assumed office in mid-November 2000. The long and short of it is that the Auditor General's Report shows that at the time of the General Elections in 2000 the Government was running a deficit after loan financing of CI$45 million.

The reality which we faced when we assumed office was that Government was unable to pay over $22 million of suppliers' and employers' invoices and we had to increase the overdraft facility from $4.5 million to $15 million in an attempt to meet some of these debts. We came to the Legislative Assembly to get permission to do that. Because the year 2000 was an election year—we all knew that—the 2001 Budget Address was not delivered until sometime during the second quarter of 2001 after months of battling to bring recurrent expenditure to some semblance of reality compared with projected revenue.

In addition, the economy had seen a tremendous downturn and although we knew we had to bring revenue measures, we tried to be both sensitive and sensible about it.

The revenue package that we proposed totalled some $19 million, Mr. Speaker, but because approval would not be granted by Finance Committee and this Honourable House until after the second quarter, we knew that we would not be able to collect at least $12 million of this $19 million during 2001 since this portion represented increased fees relating to the financial industry and the annual fees for the financial industry are always due on 1 January. So the vast majority are paid within the first quarter of the year and we could not tell them after the fees were paid that they had been increased retrospectively. The end result was that, in order to not repeat the mistakes of the previous Government and to be truthful about the financial position of the Government, some $54 million had to be borrowed of which $28 million went to balance recurrent expenditure and the remainder to fund capital acquisition and capital projects.

Most of the capital projects had either been started or committed to by the previous Government. We were also faced with relatively large numbers of people being laid off if we had chosen not to proceed with the capital side of the Budget. As it was, we had to do major reprioritisation, otherwise borrowings would have been significantly more.

The Government's Back Bench has at least three Members on the Public Accounts Committee (PAC) including the chairman, the Second Elected Member for West Bay; the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. They have all had the full benefit of understanding the Auditor General's entire report on the finances of Government at year end 2000. No doubt they will have apprised the Leader of Government Business of the contents of that Report if he has not read that for himself.

The next year, the new Government which also comprised three Members of the Executive Council of the 2000/2001 Government; namely the current Leader of Government Business, your good self, Mr. Speaker, and the Minister of Education, produced a budget with a $55 million tax package plus they would also have had the benefit of collecting the $12 million that year that the 2001 tax package did not benefit in 2000.

The point is if we had even produced a $75 million revenue package in the 2001 Budget more than $50 million of that would have been uncollectible because that amount would have related to the financial industry which had paid most of its annual fees prior to the Budget being approved. I am certain the Leader of Government Business fully understands what transpired and has not forgotten what the situation was in 2000 and 2001, but, Mr. Speaker, as the Caymanian Compass noted in their editorial recently, it is an election year. So I understand the stones being thrown even when the facts are being twisted.

On page six of his Policy Statement the Leader of Government Business said, and with your permission, Mr. Speaker, I quote: "I should point out that in 2001 under the former Leader of Government Business and now Leader of the Opposition, government started out on a course to spend approximately $200M on new office accommodations for government offices. Mr. Speaker, I can assure this Honourable House that we will deliver new office accommodations prior to the previously scheduled completion date and well under the proposed costs that the former Leader of Government Business was pursuing."

That is what he said. It never ceases to amaze me how the Leader of Government Business with full knowledge of the facts can taint those same facts just to suit his own desires.

When I was Leader of Government Business we announced plans to build two new buildings to house personnel. Here was the rationale: the Tower Building with 40,000 square feet of office space was fast approaching the end of its useful life; we all knew that and know it today. We were advised by the technical staff that the Government Administration Building—the Glass House as we all know it—was badly in need of repairs and it would have had to be vacated by its occupants to be repaired, but it made sense to refit the 28,000 square feet of office space that building has. Based on the projections and the existing data from the accommodation section in the Lands and Survey Department, the plan was to build two five storey structures of approximately 60,000 square feet each and a two storey car park. We would also refurbish and refit the Glass House and government's accommodation requirements would be met for several years to come. The projected cost for all of this through orthodox financing at that time was estimated to be $60 million, not $200 million as the Leader of Government Business has recently, untruthfully, said. Government's cost of leased space at the time was somewhere between $4 and $5 million annually and the projected repayments for the entire project would cost no more than those payments were. The only difference was that instead of paying rent as we still are we would own the buildings and simply use the money to finance the repayments.

The real reason that this original plan was recently scrapped, as I understand it, was because after I disappeared from the scene along came the Public Finance Initiative (PFI), the theme song of the Government, and they finally realised that under the PFI this plan was going to cost $200 million—nothing to do with me. Mr. Speaker, because of that I can maintain today that my plan still clings fast to the table of logic more so now than ever. The truth is that we were looking at the entire Government debt and looking to put together a financial package which would have reduced the overall debt service and provided needed capital to fund a number of critical capital projects. The refinancing package we were looking at during that time was some US$250 million which approximately would be CI$200 million. This would have liquidated Government's central debt, built the two government office buildings that I referred to earlier, the primary school which is now under construction at Spotts and the forever talked about but never built, Frank Sound High School. That is what the package of $200 million that we were looking at would have done then for the country.

Instead of doing this, the Leader of Government Business and his UDP Government nearly two years later borrowed $136 million and we took nearly $22 million of this borrowed money on which interest is being paid as I speak, into Government's general reserves. Why? I heard all kinds of reasons then why it made sense, but in my view, it was so that in this election year the Honourable Third Official Member could come to this Honourable House and tell the country what a wonderful job the Government has done. Just look at the general reserves. We have 63 days general reserves in hand, 30 odd more days than the law calls for, but $22 million, plus whatever interest has accrued since then, is borrowed money so that the Leader of Government Business could also boast, as he has in his Policy Statement, that cash reserves are more than double the level required.

It is easy to have reserves if you borrow the money. That is like me borrowing money from Royal Bank and taking it into CIBC and putting it on a fixed deposit then coming back to you and saying, "You think that you have any more money than me you check CIBC", but I did not tell you about what I owe Royal Bank.

That is their great financial logic, but it does not end there. Having put the borrowed $22 million into general reserves they then turned around and re-borrowed another $10 million to build the primary school at Spotts. We are still paying approximately $5 million in rent. I have no idea of the figures now, but I know that it has to be more because other Government accommodation have been leased. In fact, several more have been leased since then.

The Government still does not have the new office accommodation and, if my understanding is correct, it has not even purchased the land for the school at Frank Sound yet, let alone started the project, despite the Minister of Education announcing on two occasions in the past that the school would be completed in time for the start of the 2005 school year.

Then, the Leader of Government Business has the audacity to tell this Honourable House last Friday that the Government is taking swift action to address these serious problems. Had the Government followed the plan developed, that I just spoke about while I was Leader of Government Business, Government would by now be occupying the two new office buildings or be very close to occupying them. The lease payments would have ceased for the Government accommodation, the Primary School would have been built—understanding that it would have taken some time for the technocrats to go through the planning stages I would like to say that the High School would have also been completed—but if not completed it would have been well on the way to completion. Our children at that point in time would not be housed in temporary classrooms today, tomorrow and next year.

It is, indeed, refreshing to hear the Leader of Government Business speak so positively about Cayman Airways (CAL) now that the subject is under his Ministry. He says that in 2002 Cayman Airways responded to calls for more efficiencies by implementing broad reforms which resulted in unprecedented savings. However, if the truth be known, the Leader of Government Business is claiming credit for reforms that were largely underway when he took over responsibility for the airline from me in November 2001.

I want to take a minute and quote a few figures regarding the subsidy and I want to bear in mind from the very beginning that all of the figures I am quoting will be in Cayman Islands (CI) dollars.

The subsidy this year is up to $7 million as compared to $4.6 million in 2000, $4.6 million in 2001, $4 million in 2002 and $4 million in 2003. The Leader of Government Business went to great lengths this time in his address to explain the large deficit of $11.9 million. He spoke about launching a new route, he spoke about a new lease, but no matter how he explains it even if he brings a bit of "Trumanomics" into it, the operational deficit is still $11.9 million. This compares in previous years to deficits of $11.5 million in 2000, $12 million in 2001, $5.7 million in 2002 and $9.2 million in 2003. Mr. Speaker, the same way he took the time out to explain something, I need to take just a minute to explain something else.

In 2000, when there was an $11.5 million deficit for Cayman Airways, what had transpired over many years before is that there had been no write downs for the equipment that Cayman Airways had. It is the same thing that we spoke about earlier on when we had the presentation this morning, about depreciation of equipment. So having not done it for several years, in 2000 it meant they had to have an aircraft write down of $5.8 million which is included in the $11.5 million deficit. In 2001, there was a $6.5 million write down in equipment depreciation and its value and that is included in that $12 million. Curiously in 2004, in what is projected in this $11.9 million deficit, there is no aircraft write down.

I am not suggesting that there is not a valid reason for that. I think in doing what they did in 2000 and 2001 it brought it up to where it should be so they do not have to have any major write downs again. However, the fact remains that if we speak to operations and nothing to do with depreciated value of the aircraft, the end result is no better today than it was before. It is absolutely no better!

I am not taking any pot shots at Cayman Airways; it is a matter of understanding the value of the airline.

We all know that with the best of intentions and with all of the resources that we can put to it and with as good a board that the airline has, the industry and all of us are quick to admit that. Some of us have more knowledge of the industry than others, but it is truly fickle and one can only dream of Cayman Airways being financially self-sufficient. The principle, in my view, that has to be applied is that you continually have to strive to contain the financial bleed with Cayman Airways so that it does not become a haemorrhage.

The key to the whole affair is recognising CAL's contribution to the economy and it seems that now that it is his baby, the Leader of Government Business has suddenly realised the tremendous value of these contributions both directly and indirectly.

I vividly recall the Leader of Government Business' past actions and statements when his position was that closing Cayman Airways down was the only option. In his 2002 Budget Speech, he plainly said that the Cayman Airways subsidy was going to be $4 million; that was that and it was sink or swim! Indeed, Mr. Speaker, looking back on it; "so loud is the thunder but so little it rains.

Therefore, here we are now with projected losses being comparable, as I just proved, to the previous years. Instead of it being the worst thing in the world, and there being cries by the Leader of Government Business to shut it down, he now recognises that the airline has great value to the economy and it must continue to strengthen its relationship with the Department of Tourism (DoT). Mr. Speaker, God must have had a hand in the paradigm shift in his outlook. I say thank you God, thank you very much but God, would you please help us in a few other areas?

That brings me conveniently to the subject of tourism. In his Budget address the Honourable Third Official Member went to pains to point out that tourism is one of the pillars of our economy and that over two million tourists visited the Cayman Islands during last year. He boasted that this figure represented an increase of 12.5 per cent over 2002. However, he was forced to concede that air arrivals had continued their downward trend during this period, falling by a further three per cent in 2003.

In his policy statement, the Leader of Government Business referred to the National Tourism Management Policy and claimed that this is being implemented and that it has a greater emphasis on stay over visitors and says that tourism is on the rebound.

However, Mr. Speaker, the question is do his statements bear examination? It is fair comment to say that tourism is the life-blood of this economy. It is estimated, depending on which quarter it comes from, that it contributes anything from 30 to 50 per cent to our Gross Domestic Product (GDP) and that foreign exchange earnings from tourism could be as much as 70 per cent of our total foreign exchange earnings.

However the tourism industry's history of continued growth and prosperity is no longer assured. Not just because of international factors such as the aftermath of 9/11 but for reasons also to do with both the quality and the cost of our tourism product. Bluntly put, the widely held perception is that Cayman is an overly expensive destination and the quality of its tourism product may well be on the decline. To a large extent we are at the mercy of the external factors which impact the industry, but there is much we can do, both about the quality of the product we offer and the widely held perception that the Cayman Islands are no longer good value for money.

My contention, Mr. Speaker, is that Government simply is not doing enough to address the problems with this critically important industry at their root cause. Sure, we are treated to a regular diet of press announcements about some novel initiative that is going to develop some new niche market for the industry. In reality, little or nothing has been done to address the underlying problems with our tourism product, which are eating away like a cancer at the long-term viability of that industry.

During this administration, the Government commissioned The Tourism Company out of London, UK to carry out an analysis of the Cayman Islands tourism product and to provide recommendations to address the problems identified and to develop a plan for the continued sustainability of the industry.

We have talked about this before, Mr. Speaker, but we have to talk about it again because nothing is being done.

The Tourism Company delivered a report to Government in December last year and that report was entitled "Focus for the Future, a draft tourism policy framework for the Cayman Islands". The report, which runs to some 85 pages, provides an in-depth analysis of the state of the tourism industry in these Islands. It identifies strengths and weaknesses and it makes very specific recommendations to the Government as to what should be done to correct the problems that it has recognised. It refers to earlier reports and it is obvious that many of the issues relating to our tourism product which this report identifies now, have been around for a long time and have been recognised in these previous reports. It is carefully researched and it is a well thought out piece of work.

The only problem with it is that although Government has said publicly that it has adopted the report, in actuality, the Government is not only ignoring many of the key recommendations, but, in my view, it is deliberately pursuing a course of action in direct contradiction to those recommendations.

The report recognises what all sensible persons in these Islands already knew. Simply, tourism cannot be left to develop unchecked. It needs to be managed in a sustainable way; meaning that it will not dry up tomorrow, and 10 years from now and for the next generation, it will still be a healthy vibrant industry providing employment opportunities for our young people and also making its huge proven contribution to our economy.

A policy framework is needed to ensure that everyone involved in the industry is aware of the overall goals and parameters and that everyone is pulling in the same direction.

On the issue of sustainability, Mr. Speaker, the report confirms what has been widely believed that as the number of cruise ship visitors has skyrocketed, the number of stay over visitors has correspondingly diminished.

In 2000, there were 354,000 air arrivals. This number fell to 334,000 in 2001. In 2002, it dropped further to less than 303,000. It dropped further still last year to a mere 293,517 bodies.

Comparatively, Mr. Speaker, the number of cruise ship passengers has grown rapidly. In 2001, the figure was 1.2 million. In 2002, it rose to 1.5 million and last year it rose further yet to 1.8 million.

As at the end of March this year, there have been just under 95,000 air arrivals and 671,091 cruise ship arrivals. I did not go further with these figures because the first quarter does not always trend out proportionately to an annual figure, but it does give a very good indication.

The report noted the concern at the decline in the number of stay over visitors and the impact that this is having on the national economy. There is also concern that the proportion of visitors to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman remains very small, at between three and four per cent of the total stay over visitors, while comparatively they have approximately seven per cent of the bedrooms in the Cayman Islands. If we were to extrapolate figures what that would mean is Grand Cayman proportionately gets twice the number of stay over visitors as Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The point here is that efforts need to be made to increase because you cannot have these rooms and the occupancy levels being so low that it is not good business to keep the doors open.

The report also acknowledged that the growing imbalance between the two visitor types—the cruise ship visitor and the stay over visitor—is one of the overriding issues raised by tourism stakeholders in the Cayman Islands, that is, in the private sector.

Such large volumes of relatively low-spending visitors is seen as a deterrent to stay over visitors as well as cruise ship visitors, seriously diminishing the quality of the experience in George Town and at key attractions, for example, at Stingray City. It is also seen as a major contributor to congestion and the reduction of the quality of life for those who live here.

Importantly, the report noted that recent research suggested that while the Cayman Islands continued to enjoy a positive image, especially with regard to safety and the friendliness of the people, the overall conclusion was that the tourism product was deteriorating.

This is not me standing up and saying this, Mr. Speaker. This is a report that has been accepted by the Government of the Cayman Islands. It goes on to say: "The current image associated with the Cayman Islands is one of expensive living overdevelopment, traffic and people congestion notably at the western end of Grand Cayman which is also exacerbated by the cruise ship issue. The Cayman Islands image is being diluted by perceived poor service, narrow product offerings and a product that is more American than it is Caymanian."

The report warned that the short-term strategy of increasing the number of cruise ship visitors to compensate for the loss in stay over visitors was, at best, a short-term and stop-gap measure which is likely to be temporary and which may actually compound the problem in the long term.

More importantly, in the long term, the unconstrained growth in the number of cruise ship visitors will simply strangle the tourism industry as the built and environmental infrastructure is overwhelmed by the sheer number of bodies that are forced upon them.

It is for this reason that the report recommended Government limit the number of cruise ship visitors to 9,200 or four ships per day.

In December 2002, when the report was presented, the port was working with thresholds of up to 14,000 passengers per day with projections that this would continue for the next two to three years.

In page 54 of the report it expressed alarm, and I quote with your permission, Mr Speaker: "... that the real concern is that this growth is happening without a clear understanding of the impacts or a long-term strategy for managing these visitors."

It sounds the following warning, Mr. Speaker: "Cayman is in a position to negotiate controls as long as it remains a special destination. It will not be if that advantage is lost."

As I said, last year there were 1.8 million cruise ship visitors. That number is expected to increase this year and we are already greatly exceeding the recommended number of 9,200 per day.

The Minister of Tourism and the Leader of Government Business will no doubt say that the Government is bound by existing contractual arrangements with the cruise ship companies and cannot reduce the number of visitors overnight. There may well be a certain truth in that assertion but, faced with the recommendations contained in the report of The Tourism Company which I have just discussed at some length, how can the Minister explain the agreement which he signed with the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association (FCCA) which has the effect of committing the country to accepting more than two million cruise ship visitors a year for each of the next 15 years.

When I made that statement a few months back, Mr. Speaker, he just about called me a liar and that I was misleading. That was not the case.

As stated in the local press—and it is as clear as crystal—the Port Authority will be borrowing US$26 million which will be repaid, with interest at LIBOR plus 1.5 per cent over 15 years by the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association, from a fund created by a charge of US one dollar per passenger brought by them to the Cayman Islands. That fund gets its money from one dollar times each number of the bodies that are brought by FCCA to the Cayman Islands. Since it is one dollar we can just talk about numbers from here on in because anything times one is the same thing.

At the present, which is a very low LIBOR rate of 1.5 per cent, the repayment rate for this loan will be $2.17 million per annum. This simply means that in order for the FCCA to repay the loan from this fund you need 2,170,000 bodies coming in here, that they get one dollar each to put into the fund. If we want to simply round it off and give everyone the benefit of the doubt, no matter which way we cut it we are talking about a minimum of two million cruise ship passengers annually. Some people will say, “Well, it goes for good business, bring them in.” If that were the answer my life would be easy too. I would not have to think about it. I would tell them to bring 40 ships a day. However, we know that for every good there is an accompanying downside.

So, while the Minister of Tourism has paid lip-service to the report, his actions, and, I believe, his inaction, in certain instances, make it plain that in accepting the report the Government still has rejected the most fundamentally important recommendations that are in it. There will be no restriction on the number of cruise ship visitors and, indeed, the number is bound to continue to increase significantly. While this may have the short-term effect of making certain people rich, if I may simply use that four-letter word, it is going to have disastrous consequences for our tourism product and for these Islands generally in the medium and long term.

Every one of us who has been in this Legislative Assembly for any length of time speak to short-term gain for long-term pain in so many different areas, because as we are here long enough we actually live the facts and see why it makes no sense to cut off your nose to spoil your face; to just think about today and not remember tomorrow.

It is plain to me that despite the recommendations of the report, the Government seems to have decided that mass tourism is the way to go for the Cayman Islands. Quite frankly, a mass tourism policy for Cayman—I have said this before and will say it again—in the medium and long term is nothing short of lunacy. It is certainly not sustainable and it will further erode both the natural and built environment. It is going to significantly reduce the appeal of these Islands to affluent stay over visitors and it is going to negatively impact the quality of life of the people who actually live here—not the visitors but us who live here.

The future of the tourism industry and by extension the Cayman Islands, in our view, does not lie in mass tourism. It takes a bit of courage to make that statement because plenty of people can be fired up in the short term because they will say that you are trying to keep them out of their jobs and all that. We have to develop a culture in this country that as legislators and representatives of the people and the leaders that are looked upon for sage advice and everything else, that we must be able to see further than tomorrow and to be able to inculcate in the minds of our people what is in our best interests, not just for today but for tomorrow and future generations.

The Cayman Islands does not have a future in mass tourism. The future lies in preserving, improving and marketing those natural gifts we have been blessed with. The Cayman Islands have a small and finite land mass. Our unique appeal for tourism lies in our natural beauty, our climate, the quality of the marine environment, our relaxed way of life, our special character and, Mr. Speaker, never to be forgotten, our people.

We cannot hope, nor should we wish, to compete with major resorts on the mainland or larger islands. Our future lies in us being different and unique. We must work on making the Cayman Islands more Caymanian and less American, as the report states, or just another Caribbean island. We must come to appreciate the importance of Caymanians interacting with our visitors as part of the visitors' overall impression of their holiday experience. This means we must concentrate on getting more Caymanians into the tourism industry, not only because it should provide good and well-paid employment to our people, but because our own people are critical to the quality of the tourism product that we offer to the tourist who visits these shores.

We must make greater efforts to protect, preserve and promote our natural environment by limiting the number of persons who visit places like Stingray City and certain dive sights. We must educate our people and the visitors of the importance of our environment to the overall quality of life of this nation including our tourism industry.

The Speaker: We will now take a 10 minute break and let us try to be back by 4.15 pm. Thank you.

Proceedings suspended at 4.12 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.23 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition continuing.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we took the short break I was speaking to the need for greater efforts to protect, preserve and promote our natural environment by limiting the number of persons who visit places like Stingray City and certain dive sites, and the fact that we must educate our people and visitors of the importance of our environment to the overall quality of life in this country, including its importance to the tourism industry.

Our view is that we must create more open spaces and more greenery in urban areas; simple little things but aesthetically pleasing. We also believe we must convert central George Town into a friendlier shopping environment and find wholesome ways to make it come alive at night. We need to manage that industry, not allow it to manage us. We make the strong statement that we must control development and its pace, insisting on high standards and resisting development just for the sake of development.

Obviously Cayman, at this juncture, will never be a low-cost destination nor, in our opinion, should it strive to be, but what is important is the fact that we must provide good value for the money that is spent by visitors. Therefore, we must improve the quality of the product. We must excel in performance and service and, in so doing, gradually we will rid ourselves of the prevailing image of being overpriced. Mr. Speaker, it is just like everything else. If someone goes to Foster's and Kirk's and they buy an item that is commonly bought by all consumers and they see that one is priced noticeably above the other, they are going to tell all of their friends; they are going to say go to one or the other because you get so and so cheaper. It is the same way in that industry; word gets around, besides all of the advertising.

If the experiences of those who come here are not what their expectations are, then when they go back home they are going to talk about it and it just continues. As good as it is, is as bad as it can be, depending on what their experiences are.

The tourism industry, and its future, is a challenge, but we believe in the right hands it will have a bright future. Those right hands are our hands, the hands of the People's Progressive Movement and certainly, God willing, come November of this year, tourism will be in the right hands and back on the right track.

I could not give a contribution to this debate without addressing Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, even if I do so briefly. Cayman Brac and Little Cayman need special attention, and each of them of a different nature. Little Cayman's development needs to be planned more carefully, especially in the light of the construction of the new airport, while Cayman Brac needs more economic activity—activity which benefits the residents; again that is our cry for here. Obviously, tourism will need to play an important role and eco-tourism has been spoken about. There are many natural attractions on Cayman Brac; the difficulty has always been getting the bodies there whether by air or by sea. There is tremendous potential for cruise ships. There are some natural drawbacks which exist because of the present facilities; where I grew up as a boy; where we call the Creek—

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we have reached the hour of 4.30 pm and I would call on the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to allow the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to complete his debate.

It is my understanding that Honourable Members would wish to take an earlier adjournment than was announced on Friday following the debate of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. Therefore, after the Honourable Leader's debate, I will call on the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business to move the adjournment.

Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business, will you move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) so that we can continue?

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) so that the debate may continue beyond the hour of 4.30 pm and the Honourable Leader of the Opposition can complete his debate.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to complete his debate before adjournment.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to conclude his debate on the Budget Address.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition continuing.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was speaking about the facilities that presently exist on the Brac where cruise passengers could be tendered to shore and that is at the port facility in what is known as the Creek. The unfortunate situation with that location is the prevailing winds allow for the weather not to be conducive for this to happen much of the time. Without having all the knowledge to make any firm suggestions, there needs to be a closer look at another location which would allow for cruise ships to be able to stop in on a regular basis and not be affected so much by the weather. The answer is not one where you click your fingers. However, I believe that is where we need to head to look for a solution and, if that is encouraged, the natural spin-offs would occur. If you even had two cruise ships a week coming to the Brac, there would certainly be enhancement of business opportunities and the economy of the Brac would get a well-needed injection.

I think also if a concerted effort was made to encourage more, what I call, local tourism, better packages including hotel, car rental, restaurants and air fares between here and Cayman Brac for residents of Grand Cayman to enjoy a weekend or a few days. It is not a new thought, I am sure, but certainly efforts need to be made in that direction.

We talked about this years ago, but I firmly believe that the transfer of some of the existing overflow of public service activities and the location of new public service jobs on Cayman Brac remain a very viable option. I believe that. I am not going to get into specifics because time will not allow, but I believe that we simply need the real commitment to make that happen. It is obvious what happens in the Brac—many of us, including myself, are examples—because of the lack of employment opportunities there, most of the young people have to come over to Grand Cayman to seek decent employment and it continues in that fashion and it has the double whammy effect on the economy in the Brac. If we were able to get more jobs placed in that location, we would have more people staying on in the Brac. Not only that, we would have many because there are many who would gladly return if they had opportunities to have decent employment. Those are some of the things that we really need to look at very seriously.

The Honourable Financial Secretary spoke with great enthusiasm about the Government's plans, its goals and its achievements that, if I did not know better, I would think that he was running for office. However, I do know that as a Member of the Cabinet, he, unlike some others, understands the principle of collective responsibility. In other words, part of his address sets out the Cabinet's position and we should see it as such. On the other hand, his Budget address provides a quantity of important information and some genuinely encouraging facts, along with some which, after careful reading, I thought I could be tempted to say, needed to be taken with a pinch of salt, but that was only a temptation.

With regard to the financial services sector, the Financial Secretary, the Honourable Third Official Member, gave a number of interesting statistics for 2003 and, as I said, most of these are encouraging. It is particularly heartening to have confirmation that mutual funds work continues to increase in the Cayman Islands and we say, long may this last. The mutual funds business has become a major factor in our economy. So major that we must make every effort to address developments abroad that could have an impact on that business here. Of course, we must make every effort to maintain and develop other parts of the financial industry remembering the old adage about not having too many eggs in one basket.

In one important respect, the picture is not quite so encouraging. The Honourable Third Official Member acknowledges a decline in the number of bank and trust company licences. He suggests that this decline resulted from consolidations within the banking industry and the cost implications of establishing physical presence, as required by the law. However, I want to proffer two other factors in addition to the logic that he put forward because I believe they deserve mention.

First, licence fees for banks and trust companies were raised substantially by the present Government, notwithstanding warnings that this would have an adverse effect on the number of licences.

Second, there are disturbing indications of a decline in private client work due partly to an unfortunate and, I hope, a mistaken perception that the Government is not interested in retaining or encouraging that part of the industry. I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member is in a position to provide us with statistics on the health of that part of our financial industry and maybe he might also be in a position to indicate what steps are being taken to turn things around and to recover Cayman's pre-eminence in that field. Perhaps he would wish to comment.

He also stated, and I quote: "In relation to international initiatives, the primary one that has been the focus of our attention for the past two years has been the European Union Savings Directive (EUSD)".

There is still a great deal of mystery and uncertainty about what exactly did happen Mr. Speaker, or what did not happen over the last two years and what exactly the concessions that were negotiated by the Government last December are. From all appearances—and Mr Speaker one must draw conclusions from the Government's refusal to answer questions raised in this House—the Government is trying to make the best of what it seems was truly a bad job.

Of course, the Opposition and the private sector are keen to make the best of things, particularly to make sure that the cost of doing business in the Cayman Islands is not increased and to get as much as possible from the concessions which seem to depend very much on the continuing goodwill of Her Majesty's Government.

Nonetheless, the Budget debate is, in part, a retrospective look at what has happened. It seems clear enough that this was a serious case of Government mismanagement; something that it is not the first time that I have alleged; and something that I can be taken to task to at any time because no answers seem to be forthcoming that are clear and concise that give us the true picture.

It was also troubling, to say the least, that the Honourable Third Official Member made no mention whatsoever of another aspect of the international initiatives. One that I believe, after speaking with many of them, that most people in the financial industry would regard as more serious than the European Union Savings Directive at this time. I refer to the growing trend in other countries to introduce tax laws, other laws and practices that discriminate against offshore centres such as the Cayman Islands. I also refer to the pressure being put on the Cayman Islands to enter into tax information exchange agreements with other countries.

For the last year, the financial community has been saying to the Government that we have to focus on this and get it right. In talking to them, I am told unequivocally that they have been offering their assistance to get it right, but there seems to have been a quite extraordinary lack of any effective reaction from the Government. It seems like the Honourable Third Official Member was right when he said that the Government's focus was elsewhere, that is on the European Union Savings Directive.

I am sure that this reminds myself and others of 1999 in which the Government focused on the Organisations for Economic and Co-operative Development (OECD) initiative and overlooked what the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) were doing, resulting in the Cayman Islands being placed on a blacklist and suffering a very serious set back and causing us to have many sleepless nights trying to rectify that situation.

It is now essential that Government focuses on the related topics of foreign discrimination and foreign demands for tax information. It is essential that we get this one right. The future of the financial services industry depends on it. It is absolutely essential that we do not have another episode in which nothing constructive is done until the last minute when it is too late to make any real difference. It is essential that the financial community also be fully involved. No more secret trips to make deals that no one else has heard about. Let us hope that this Government will have learnt from its mistakes.

There will only be a few months until the General Election, but those few months do matter. Mr. Speaker, not only is this the final Budget being presented by the Honourable Third Official Member, but this is the final Budget to be presented by the UDP Government.

Every means has been sought by the Leader of Government Business and, to a lesser extent as I have explained, by the Third Official Member, who understands collective responsibility, to claim for the UDP not only responsibility for the cautious economic upturn, but also accolades for sound fiscal management. The reality is, however, that the economic fortunes of these Islands are largely a result of the improvement in the global economy. As far as prudent management is concerned, the UDP like every Government before them, have not reduced recurrent expenditure; not in the figures that I see. As I pointed out earlier, the reserves that they boast about are in the vast majority borrowed money on which we are still paying interest and the surplus of less than a half a million dollars is, if I may use the word, unremarkable.

The real question that must be asked of the stewardship of this Government is whether it has adopted economic and developmental policies which are sustainable in the long term. They will have their view and they will argue that view, but so will I have mine. I submit that they are not. The policy of indiscriminate development will create an environment requiring huge numbers of imported labour and will seriously stress both the social and the environmental elements of the country.

The lack of proper educational and vocational resources will result in Caymanians being unable to participate significantly in the development and will create serious social and labour issues.

The policy adopted in relation to tourism, if it is allowed to continue, will ultimately destroy that very important industry. The combination of unlimited cruise ship visitors and of inattention to the quality of the overall product offering will prove fatal to that industry in the long run.

The true test of any government is how it allocates the limited resources at its disposal because there is always more demanded of government than it can provide, so it comes down simply to prioritisation.

This Government, the United Democratic Party Government, I submit, has its priorities all wrong. This country deserves a government which cares about its people and puts those people first—not just with words, not just to tell them how things are going well—and gives them the tools and the opportunity to share in this great experience of the Caymanian story.

Those here in the Cayman Islands who hail this Budget as a stroke of genius, must cast their minds back to the last budget presentation and the one before that. Twenty-four hours after the presentation there is always a feeling of comfort and satisfaction based on, what I term, the literary gymnastics of the Leader of Government Business and, as I said to a lesser extent, the Honourable Third Official Member.

Last year those persons who took at face value the stated intentions of the Government went away believing that many, if not all, of their fears and concerns would be addressed. They heard the Government broaching many of the issues of concern to them both in their personal and their professional lives. They heard mention made of the social sectors and a resolve to tackle the problems in health, education, youth deviancy, care of the elderly, housing, economic empowerment and such like. All the budgets of this country have glossed over and given lip service to these issues, but three years after assuming office the country is still awaiting that paradigm shift that was promised.

The point which has to be made is that when it comes to this annual ritual and exercise, the people of the Cayman Islands have come to appreciate and realise that talk is cheap. Any good speechwriter can assemble words of reassurance. This Government has exploited to the fullest the fact that it is blessed with a few good speechwriters who can master the English language. They can use and disguise figures to bear out almost any point, but in the final analysis the records will show that essentially this is all that they do. When the speeches are written and they are presented by the spokespersons for the Government that is where the seeming obligation of the Government ends.

For three years we have heard of the concern of this Government over the plight of our young people. They have established committee after committee to look into crime, anti-social behaviour, youth deviancy and lack of economic and entrepreneurial opportunities for our school leavers who are not the most academically inclined. The Leader of Government Business, to his credit, said precious little about the so-called low income and Affordable Housing Initiative undertaken by this Government. I am sure that he is aware of the very negative reviews that it has received in many quarters. We will have more to say on this issue when we see the final product that is being offered to the residents of this country in 2004 and when we hear what the final cost to the purchaser will be.

This Budget presentation fits the agenda of the UDP this time. The UDP wishes, in my view, merely to echo a few catchphrases in the hope that the sound bites that emanate would resonate in the country. This Budget is not the end result of consultation and dialogue with the people of the Cayman Islands. The UDP has set forth its policy and, no doubt, they will shortly take to the streets in symbolic fashion to consult the residents of these Islands on the issues that concern them.

We, the PPM, have been on the ground, not underground, with the people for the past 18 months and we are fully apprised of the issues that are of concern to them. There is no way that a PPM administration could have come to this country in 2004 without addressing specifically the issues of youth and youth opportunities; issues such as health care and the issue of HIV/AIDS.

This Government comes to the country and makes no reference, for instance, to the lingering issue of the grant of status to 3000-odd individuals and the impact this will have on our social and core services, particularly health and educational institutions.

You see, we are long past the stage where one discusses the efficacy of the action itself. It has already happened, but the fact remains that there are now a minimum of 3000 additional individuals who now have to be factored in to the social and economic equation and that is the bare minimum. Obviously, the UDP Government has given no consideration to this because there is nothing in the Budget that shows any consideration for that.

I guess the so-called silly season is upon us. A Government that has ignored and virtually silenced the voice of the people in three years will now overnight become totally transparent and accountable. We hear of special publications to account for the stewardship of this Government. We hope that all the issues of interest and concern to the people of these Islands will be also addressed in that document.

We expect that very soon the Ministers and their Back Bench supporters will return to the communities that elected them four years ago. For four years the vast majority of them stood away from the people of this country. For four years they have been too busy to listen, but the election is nigh at hand. Now we expect that in the weeks and months ahead they will be knocking on doors with notepad in hand wanting to hear all that the people would wish to say and aspire to.

My appeal on this occasion is that the people of this country be not fooled. The policies of this Government are formulated among a small elite group of advisors and there is essentially no provision in the process for ordinary Caymanians to input or participate. Not even, as I understand it, are the rank and file members of the UDP consulted on matters of national importance. The people of these Islands must not allow themselves to be fooled and they must not be fooled by the crocodile tears of those who will come and say that they are not supporting the Leader of Government Business in what he does and how he does it. If that is the case and they feel that strongly about it then they must step out of the arrangement and make it clear to the electorate that they wish not to be painted with the same brush.

The Budget, as presented last week, is essentially more of the same thing; it offers nothing new and it does not address the issues of pressing concern to the people of this country. The PPM has been out there among the people, consulting them every step of the way and very shortly we will be coming to this country with a blueprint for change; a blueprint for recapturing the pride and a sense of belonging; the blueprint for bringing about greater social and economic cohesion in this society.

In my view, the Budget, as presented, was, in effect, a non-event. It has not generated any great interest or excitement in society because, for the main part, it is abstract to the needs and aspirations of the average resident.

We, the PPM, are in touch and by now we are in tune with their needs because we have spent the time to determine what those needs and aspirations are. Come November 2004 we are going to provide the alternative that the country so desperately needs. Today, I urge the residents of this country to hold strain for a little longer because in six months they shall have a government, not only of which they can be a part, but one of which they can be justly proud. This country deserves a PPM government. November 17 beckons and, pray God, hasten the day. Thank you.

2003

(Continuation of the debate on the Budget Address)

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to offer my contribution to the Budget address. In fact, because of the change in the financial year for the Government, this would be my fifth contribution because we did have a 2003 half-year Budget as well.

This is an extremely important part of the legislative process. This is when the Government of which I am a back bench member, comes to the country and offers its policy statement whilst in the Budget document we do have the broad outcome goals. It is the resource allocation that is outlined in the Government's Budget that tells the country precisely how, for the next twelve months, we are going to go about trying to achieve our goals.

This is the debate on the Budget address during an election year and I think it would be remiss of me if I did not thank the people from my great district of West Bay for having the confidence to send me to this Honourable House to represent them and for the trust and the confidence that they put in me some three-and-a-half years ago. For that I will be eternally grateful, Mr. Speaker.

I say all of that with the confidence that given the performance of which I am a part, the contributions that I have made over those three-and-a-half years that the good people of West Bay would see fit to send me back to continue the important work that has been started on all of our behalf.

It was quite a painful episode yesterday to have to sit through—and as I mulled over what I would put forth in my debate and what I would say in response to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I must say that I did have to search because as I said it was quite a painful episode to sit through—what was an eloquent delivery and a well-written speech but it lacked substance to challenge the policies of the Government and to have us rethink precisely what it is that we are doing in regard to raising revenue and the allocation of the resources of the country as laid out in the Budget.

So, no pun intended, after mulling it over for about a half hour or so, I said, since that was a painful episode to have to sit through let me read from one of my favourite authors, Thomas Paine, the legend of the American revolution. On December 19, 1776 he said and I quote, “These are the times that try men’s souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country; but he that stands it now deserves the love and thanks of man and woman.”

I will come back to that a little later in my contribution.

The Honourable Financial Secretary, in his Budget Address and the Honourable Leader of Government Business, in his Policy Statement spoke much about the tiller and the responsible hand that the United Democratic Party has on all of the critical areas that affect this country. I would like to focus on fiscal responsibility, policy development and implementation and the prioritisation of Government policy.

I think it is fair comment that some of the details of individual ministries will be covered by speakers to come. In regard to policy development and implementation this not only involves the financial position of Government and the state of the economy but also the social development within this country. In particular, it is important to note that the Government continues its heavy investment on youth and youth-related programmes; also programmes designed for the care of the elderly, for the persons who built the foundation upon which all of us now benefit and upon which this Government continues to build and enhance.

I can confidently say that the Budget that has been presented before us is very grounded in the here and now, grounded in today but building for the future. What more can a country ask for of its Government than to have that critical factor be the predominant theme and underlying current in the formulation and presentation of its Budget?

It is grounded in today because the United Democratic Party Government continues the strong fiscal legacy that we started, and you were a key part Mr. Speaker in your former role as Minister, when we started down this road of insuring that the financial footing that this country was placed upon in 2002 was one that was solid and one that did not continue to stress and stretch and reach into the pockets of the common man and woman on the street.

I remember those days vividly when we put together that first United Democratic Party Budget and I remember then how the current leader of the Opposition and the current Second Elected Member for George Town in particular, painted a picture of doom and gloom. They said that we were going to chase away Class B banks in the Cayman Islands; that we were going to make ourselves so uncompetitive from a price perspective that the fees implemented as part of the $55 million revenue enhancement package at the time were going to have a dramatically negative effective on the finances of Government. I remember them clearly saying that not only would we not achieve the $55 million on a long-term basis but that the country was going to be set back to a worse position because we were going to lose that business; so even with the enhancement of $55 million which went on top of some $20 million that were already being raised, we were going to lose the entire piece of revenue from the Government.

Well, Mr. Speaker, it is often good to sharpen the eye and to sharpen ones perspective; sometimes one has to look back. And so here we are in 2004 and yet in the areas that the Government raised the $55 million in revenue we have not only realised it but we have built on it because the business volume has increased over the past 24 months. The Honourable Financial Secretary has outlined for quite some time in this House the reasons why the Cayman Islands would lose some Class B licensees. With the requirement to have a physical presence in the Cayman Islands there have been entities that have chosen for business reasons not to take that up and to simply relinquish their licence. It is clear and has been proven that from the outset, from the very first Budget presented by the United Democratic Party—the Opposition has not agreed—our performance has proven us right and has proven us to be prudent managers of the financial resources of this country.

I think if the Opposition were true to themselves and completely true to the people of the Cayman Islands they would have to admit that Government has had a strong fiscal record and has delivered the necessary service to promote the interests of the Cayman Islands and its citizens not only for today but building for tomorrow and the future.

We regard prudent fiscal management as a crucial deliverable as a Government, for how is it that we are going to implement and continue to enhance policies that are designed to benefit our people and to further the interests of our people if we do not have the financial resources to fund them?

In this Budget we do have, by our standards, a much larger than usual borrowing package. However, when one looks at the Budget document and when one looks at the critical areas that are going to be improved, one who is going to be fair in their analysis can quickly and readily agree that the borrowings of the Government are building for tomorrow. Because if you get so lost in today and so entrenched in looking back at yesterday you lose all perspective and vision and in fact you may not then have the ability to have any vision in moving forward.

As I reflect, if there is one thing that dominated some of the minds too often post the 2000 Election was looking back, laying blame and talking about the country being broke instead of having as a clear vision, as a clear goal looking forward, knowing that you are in a bad situation but looking forward, and coming up with ways in which you are going to make the situation better. Because if you find yourself in a bad situation and you ask for pity from the public by crying about the bad situation without doing something about it what better are you going to be and how are the people of these Islands going to be better off.

When we look through this Budget document, the Annual Plan and Estimates as presented by the Government speak volumes in regard to how the financial resources of this country are going to be spent in order to enhance the quality of life and to further the interests of our people.

The Leader of the Opposition had much to say about youth and youth-related spending and I am sure, as we are in an election year, all the typical suspects are going to come out with the all the typical same old rhetoric that I can remember hearing from the time I was a young boy in this country. All that changes are the faces but the difference that the United Democratic Party has made is that we have done something about it and we have tried and continue to have a programme in place that deals with the major issues that face this country.

It depends on how one would like to count so I will give leeway to different opinions and interpretations; I beg to put forward the view that somewhere around $55 - $59 million in this year's Budget are directed at youth and youth-related services. Out of a Budget of some $300 million 20 per cent is a significant amount of resources to be allocated toward the future generations of this country.

One could easily pick up the Budget document and get lost by simply looking at the spending of the Ministry which has the title "Youth" and, if one is crafty enough, one could mislead the public by looking at that Ministry's Budget and complain by saying, "What is the Government doing for our youth? How is the Government allocating resources towards our youth?" I would like to put forward the view that because the Government has a cohesive structured policy towards youth that one has to look in various budgets to see precisely what the United Democratic Party is doing to build for tomorrow and the future, because I did start off by saying that this Budget is grounded today but investing in the future.

I will look at the major areas in which the Government proposes to invest in our youth and many of them are not contained in the Budget of the Ministry for Youth.

I start off with the Ministry of Education because surely primary and secondary education upon which the tone of $36.6 million are being spent this year on investment for the future; that is direct spending on the youth because the last time I checked the school age in the Cayman Islands is geared toward the youth because we have in our Budget an investment that is going to reap many benefits in the future.

I know that everybody likes to play on words and likes to split hairs so let me, for the benefit of the Opposition, say that when I say youth—if one wants to get technical and start talking about definitions of youth—I am simply talking about persons in this country who are under the age of 25 years. One can start talking about nine to 25. People who are less than nine years old under the education Law have to be in school from 4-plus years. And so we continue to spend heavily on education.

I believe that the Ministry continues to enhance and develop policies that are going to bear fruit in the future. You do not see all of the results of an investment overnight. When one plants a tree, if one expects to go and pick fruit the next morning one is being unwise to say the least.

When we look in that same Ministry and we see $4.5 million being spent on special needs children's education. We see $1.5 million being spent on transportation and canteen services, we see just over a quarter of a million dollars being spent on the Cadet Core. We see $1.3 million being spent on public library services. All of those services are designed to enhance the opportunities of all our young people.

We realise that it is not the amount of money you spend but it is how effective those programmes and policies are at reaching those persons and impacting their lives. So we have the opportunity to continue ...

The Speaker: Order!

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: ... to build upon the foundation that we laid from 2002.

When we look at the $2.1 million that is going to be spent on tertiary-level teaching and vocational training; when we look at the provision of pre-school education programmes, youth rehabilitation programmes, youth after-care programmes, school lunch and uniform programmes, the supervision of pre-school programmes, the foster care programme, the national mentoring programme, the monitoring of the implementation of the national youth policy, education scholarships for recipients to study overseas, education scholarships for study at local institutions, we see that in scholarships alone the Government is allocating somewhere around $3.5 million this year. Those are investments in the future; those are investments that will continue to bear fruit in the long term in the Cayman Islands.

We have the possibility to continue to build and that is what we have grasped, the opportunity to make that possibility a reality for the people of this country.

There are often debates among people as to what is the most critical area that a government should spend on. Some will say education, others will say health. I ask Honourable Members of this House and the wider listening public a very simple question. If you had one last dollar to spend on your child and the choices were send them to school or to give him/her a vaccination that you would save their life, which one would you spend the dollar on? It is easy to get caught up in the catchphrases that are thrown out by the Opposition but we have to get back to reality; we have to get back to realising that resources have to be allocated in all the critical areas that the country needs, and I say that the country's spending on health services in this Budget looks out for the interest of the Cayman Islands because you must have a healthy resident population and we must have that before you get an educated resident population.

Therefore, in this Budget the Government is proposing to spend some $33.6 million on health and health-related services. Much of the spending of Government goes unnoticed because people tend to focus on their own favourite topic but where would we be without spending the $800,000 on the collection and disposal of waste? Where would we be without spending the $4 million on the mosquito control service that is offered and provided by the Government? Where would we be without the $5.2 million that is going to be spent on the medical care for our indigent people? Where would we be without the $1.8 million that is being proposed to be spent on overseas medical?

The Government recognises all the needs and allocates its resources accordingly for that is our duty as we are the managers of the financial resources of the country.

However, if you ask the same parent about that one dollar and ask them another question, would they rather spend it on ensuring that their child is secure? That throws another element into the equation for consideration and so the Government is proposing to spend $9 million on policing and police-related activities in the upcoming year. I think under the new Commissioner and his new management team the Police are refocusing their methods of policing and the way in which they are part of our community in building relationships, building trust and getting back into the community at the grass roots level and ensuring that they are not seen as the enemy/outsider.

In that vein the people of this country need to appreciate more the necessity for a strong police force. All too often we hear complaints and gripes simply because people refuse to admit that their own family could be at fault so if the officer had to arrest him justifiably then it is the officer that is the bad guy.

We have to continue to instil in our own minds and in so doing in the minds of our young people, the respect for authority and the necessity for a good police service within these Islands.

What of community development and the policies to ensure that we are building a vibrant community, that we are building the infrastructure that allows Caymanians and the Caymanian community to continue to have the type of community that is peaceful, loving, caring and nurturing?

Thus, the Government has to act as a social agent. In any country you go to all Governments have to play that role. That is one of those roles that while the private sector contributes, and I must say that in the Cayman Islands it contributes heavily, the Government has inevitably to be the key social agent.

When we look at the $6.6 million that are being proposed to be utilised for social services for families this is money that has to be spent. This is not money that the Government just wants to spend; this is money that needs to be because we must ensure that those who fall through the cracks for whatever reason have the possibility of picking themselves back up if they are able and of the age to do so, to get back into the mainstream and become productive citizens. One of the key policies of the Department of Children and Family Services is to instil within the recipients in the social programme the whole concept and notion that they are there receiving a benefit however, once you are of the age and have the health and strength to do so, you must be able to also try to rearrange your life to get back on your feet.

We do have aged persons in our population who do need permanent assistance, who have reached that age that they cannot work any longer and do not have the resources to take care of themselves. So when one looks at the poor relief programme you see that the Government continues to invest heavily in our elderly. When you look at the monies that the Government has allocated for institutions like the Golden Age Home and the Pines Retirement Home, one sees that the Government continues to take care of its resident population where it has to. We have well in excess of $14 million that is being spent on community development type services.

Some that would fall of the radar that are important include the spending for small business development by the Government and the small business loan programme that is in place at the Cayman Islands Development Bank. That continues to serve a very useful and productive service to young entrepreneurs who may need some guidance to refine their business idea and the finances to make that idea grow to reality.

I spoke earlier of the elderly; we also are proposing to spend around $8.1 million directly on items principally for the elderly. We have proposed spending of $2.9 million on the medical care for seamen and veterans. The ex gratia benefits programme for seamen is some $2.7 million. The payment to ex-servicemen is some $1.9 million. These are persons who built this country when Cayman Islands were not the Islands that so many outside persons were willing to come in and invest in, when the Cayman Islands were the Islands that time forgot, when the Cayman Islands were overridden by mosquitoes; our seamen and our elderly women who took care of the homes were the people that built this country. I often hear people say, "What of the good old days?" but really what has changed most about the Cayman Islands has been the good old values and the good old work ethics that persons in that age group brought to the table.

We do have and continue to have a very ambitious indigenous population in the Cayman Islands. However, I think all of us in this House would agree that certainly every one of us have had the benefit of development that causes us to not have to work as hard as our forefathers.

Hence when the Government proposes to continue to care for elderly persons who cannot care for themselves I do not think anyone can fairly criticise the Government and say this is not money that is well spent.

Infrastructure and infrastructure development continues to be a high priority of the Government. It realises that for the next wave of economic activity to truly be maximised in the Cayman Islands that we do need the road corridor that is going to run from West Bay, linked to the Esterley Tibbetts Highway and its continuation into the district of Bodden Town, North Side and East End.

We are blessed to have made it this far with the limited infrastructure that we have. However, for us to be able to build for the future we must have an enhanced policy that leads us towards furtherance of our infrastructure.

I think all in this House would agree that given the resident indigenous population that is here, we simply do not have the people to sustain the level of economic activity that we benefit from. Thus, like every other country, we benefit heavily from foreign direct investment!

Foreign direct investment, as I said in this House before, does not only take the form of a person coming into the Cayman Islands and proposing to build a hotel; that is physical foreign direct investment. But what of the financial services industry and the monies that are spent by that industry that benefit all of the persons in the Cayman Islands by the fees that are paid over to the Government?

For every mutual fund that is registered here, for every bank and trust company license that is taken and continued, for every captive insurance that is formed in the Cayman Islands there is a benefit that is derived directly to all. There are more specific benefits to the persons who work in that industry. What would happen if that industry were not in the Cayman Islands? What would happen if we did not have the 400-plus accountants that work and live in the Cayman Islands, the 400-plus lawyers that work and live in the Cayman Islands? Some of them are Caymanians, many are not. Those that are not require housing. Think about the monies that so many Caymanians have invested in real estate that benefit directly from the professionals that live and work among us in the Cayman Islands. That is just a small example; look at the supermarkets. When we look at the benefits that we derive from foreign direct investment and the element of outside labour that is in the Cayman Islands we quickly see that a lot of businesses would not (at least not with a prudent business sense) have made the types of investments they made had it not been.

So, we see the Government continuing its policy of inclusion as being a key to the future survival and future development within the Cayman Islands.

I would like to touch on a point that I have heard a number of people raised. In fact, I had a constituent raise it with me just last week and it is a perspective that is quite understandable. The person posed the question, "Why is it that the Government is supportive of a $30-plus million development at the Cayman Islands Turtle Farm when we have other critical areas, such as the road infrastructure and investment buildings, such as the school buildings, that are still needed?" Mr. Speaker, whilst I can see the reason for the question, the one thing that all of us in this House and the wider public must continue to remember is that private sector activity versus public sector activity is very different.

The funding of the Turtle Farm is not Government money. Government is not talking the money out of the Budget and spending $36 million on the Turtle Farm. A private debt offering was used to raise those funds. Those are persons who are making an investment. Unfortunately, one of the things that frustrates people when they look at capitalism and realise that it is the best system, is the fact that they often see the public sector not having the types of money that the private sector can have. However, we must remember that the motivation for profit drives people to put resources in certain areas that they will not put money in willingly in the public sector and that is for good reason. People who have the creativity and the want and desire to make themselves better is what drives the economy.

I would like to draw an analogy. When we look at the United States of America, the country that most people use as the prime example and pillar of capitalism and democracy, we see every presidential debate in the last two decades has had education and building education as a key subject. However, just yesterday, 12 May 2004 on the New York Stock Exchange there was a total of 3,456 issues that changed hands. The volume of trading was well in excess of $1 billion. We see that in that country their citizens could make the same argument and the same confusion in terms of looking at public sector versus private sector. In one day we had that type of activity on one stock exchange. Sure, if that money was all spent on education it would build them the grandest schools, the biggest and brightest schools as some of us like to say. However, that is private citizens spending their money on private uses.

So, to bring that back to focus, the Turtle Farm project is the same thing. This is a private placement in which people were allowed to invest and in those types of investments one has to go to large institutional investors because it is not ready and it is not subject to the type of infrastructure environment that would allow a private placement offering, because I know that there would be some people who would argue that point and ask why Caymanians did not have the opportunity to benefit.

That is something that is in the focus of the Government. We do need to continue to build the Stock Exchange and continue to build the infrastructure in the Cayman Islands so that we can get more sophisticated in our methods of raising capital for various projects so that people in the Cayman Islands can readily benefit.

That is an argument and a debate for another day, Mr. Speaker. However, I would like to have it on record that that is another issue that the Government, of which I am a part, are actively looking at and trying to ensure that we have that built into the equation of the Cayman that is to come.

We have shown beyond a reasonable doubt, and I would argue that we have shown as a matter of fact, that we are prudent managers of the financial resources of this country.

We have delivered a balanced Budget again and when we look at the difficult time that national governments are having globally, and when we look at the numbers of the G7 countries whose governments are running large deficits in order to try to buoy their economies and keep the vibrancy in their economies and continue to try to ensure that economic turnaround is sustained, we, in the Cayman Islands, can once again be well pleased that our Government has not had to institute any such measures.

The confidence in this economy, the confidence in the way forward of this country is unbelievable. When we look at the dollar value of approved projects that are currently on the way versus 2002, 2001 in particular and even 2000, we see that this economy is moving in the right direction and I say, that as I have been told on a daily basis by people in this community, the hard work of the Government and the fiscal performance and prudence of the Government has gone a long way to contributing to this turn around.

The Leader of the Opposition inferred that one of the main reasons for the turn around has been an improvement in global economic conditions. However, global economic conditions impact only certain sectors of our economy directly and when we look at the dollar value of approved projects it is a key measuring stick and they know this; if they do not, they do now. It is a key measuring stick for what is really happening within the Caymanian economy.

I know one prominent Caymanian who I happened to have a detailed conversation with some time in the last month and he outlined that currently he has under way some $18 million of projects with $32 million that are either in the planning or approval stage and he had one comment that the United Democratic Party is not preaching a message of doom and gloom that the country is broke, blaming it on the past Government, but that it took the reigns and dealt with the situation, put the financial position of the country back on an even keel. Now people can have the confidence to move forward because they know they have a Government that is balanced, a Government that—whilst it spends on the development of its people and enhancement of the life of our people—is grounded in the reality that jobs create earnings, not the other way around and will continue with the programme that is in place because it is bearing fruit and it is doing good for this country. I know one of the things that the Opposition wishes they could throw at us would be poor fiscal management but they know truthfully they cannot.

I would like to deal with a few matters that were said yesterday by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. As I sat and listened and was troubled by the very thought that here were all of the usual criticisms with no real tangible alternatives or solutions, I had to say to myself, “Wow, this, to the country, seems to be reading of its obituary.” I must say that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, which spoke on behalf of the Opposition, got up and talked about everything single under the sun yet I have yet to hear one real tangible and concrete solution that they are going to produce. However, I must say in his two hours there was a little teaser. He said that they are going to produce a blueprint. So I guess we are going to have to wait to see the blueprint because the blueprint is really what is going to knock our socks off and will really have us on our heels and jumping for joy at the thought that the People Progressive Movement (PPM) would be the administration that we want. I find it rather convenient that at this time and stage—the perfect forum, the last Budget by the United Democratic Party—that the blueprint would have not have been outlaid yesterday.

We should have been left on this side of the isle scratching our heads and scrambling to come up with responses because they had come up with all of the solutions to all of the problems and everybody is going to live happily ever after and that everybody could feel warm, fuzzy and comfortable. But no such luck.

I must say I am glad to be living in a democratic society because I realise that the Leader of the Opposition, in his usual style, is going to criticise. But

I am so glad that another side can be told and what is so beautiful about democracy and debate is that one side is thrown out then the truth comes.

[Laughter]

I must say that the Leader of the Opposition conveniently forgot to mention that he was not only the Leader of Government Business but that he failed miserably in his one year as Leader of Government Business to deliver any of these grandiose things that I hear him talking about now. I must say that few things change around here as I have now come to understand and one is that the Leader of the Opposition has a consistently short memory; so I will remind him because I have a consistently good memory.

I will remind him, this country and his colleagues that to just get up and criticise is not good enough because Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition said that he is now a changed man, he has a change of heart; the people's opinion is what matters now. He now says, when elected he says his PPM administration is going to be the dawn of a grand new day for the Cayman Islands. But I want to get an answer as to why for one year as Leader of Government Business is it that the current Leader of the Opposition did not have all of the consultation and public meetings that he is now talking about.

You get over run in the street these days by the People's Progressive Movement! Yet for one year I was out there on the street and boy, I could not see them anywhere. You see it is now a convenient thing. However, I think the doctor of forgetfulness has struck again.

There was mention made that there was some $136 million borrowed by this administration. I can see where the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is coming from but there is yet another piece of that story that needs to be told. In 2002 the Government restructured its debt and had a private placement note issuance/bond issuance. We all know what we are taking about. So whilst in the year 2002 you would see that the Government borrowed $135 million we also repaid $113 million because we had to repay the debt that was outstanding. It was a simple refinancing! So, Mr. Speaker, if you go, or some citizen goes, to refinance their house and moves their mortgage from Royal Bank to Cayman National Bank (CNB), just because you have borrowed $200,000 to do that in a particular year, you cannot then say that you have borrowed $200,000 and say that is the complete story. You have to then say that you repaid an existing debt on the other end.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I propose to take the morning break now. I hate to interrupt the Honourable Member when he is on a roll but I propose to take a 10 minute break now and to remind the Honourable Member that he has one hour remaining.

Also, to remind Members that I have been requested by the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business to have the House adjourned following the completion of the Honourable Member's debate to allow all Members that would wish to attend the funeral of Mrs. Carolyn Hislop Bodden who was a former head teacher and education officer in these Islands. I know many of us were taught by her and those of us that were not I am sure had some interaction with her during her lifetime.

I believe that because of the contribution she made to these Islands that at the adjournment I will invite all Honourable Members to pay a moment of silence in her honour.

We will now take a 10 minute suspension.

Proceedings suspended at 11.53 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.14 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Second Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When we took the suspension I was clarifying the issue of Government borrowing and I wanted to ensure that the House and the listening public were aware of the entire story in regard to borrowing. I did not even know this but just to ensure that no one gets up on a point of order, the portion of the Leader of the Opposition's speech has been already typed, so it is not just my notes and I said that he said it was $135 million but he said it was $136 million in borrowing.

The net borrowing was dramatically less than that. The net borrowing was only $18 million and we see that the Government continues on its programme of prioritising and ensuring that we do get a physical infrastructure that is of national importance completed.

The Leader of the Opposition spoke at length on tourism and this is another area that I would like to offer a slightly different perspective.

Firstly, he quite rightly pointed out that in order to finance the loan for the Port developments around 2.1 million cruise passengers would be needed at the $1 per head increase coming out of about $2.1 million for the repayment of the debt. He also said that there were skyrocketing numbers of cruise passengers arriving and a slight fall-off in air arrivals. He seemed to suggest that the increased cruise arrivals is causing or contributing to the downturn in air arrivals. He then went on to say that we should be brave and educate our people, many of whom are surviving off the cruise arrivals, as to the damage it is doing to our tourism product. Whilst the Leader of Government Business has admitted in this House and in many forums, including public meetings and the Chamber luncheons, that yes, on certain days the numbers of cruise ship passengers arriving does greatly burden our infrastructure.

However, what the Leader of the Opposition failed to also acknowledge was that yet again the Government has a plan of action. Yet again, the Government is building.

Unfortunately, we were not in the position, because there were contractual obligations made and we also knew how difficult it is to get business back once you have shunned it. Weighing all that up Mr. Speaker, we decided to go ahead and have the cruise program increased to somewhere around two million passengers to be levelled off at that level for the foreseeable future.

Hence, the Royal Watler Cruise Terminal is being built as we speak. That facility is going to go a long way to ease the burden caused by cruise arrivals. To go along with that everybody knows that we have proposed the building of a West Bay cruise facility and again we do realise that ferrying a large number of cruise passengers directly into West Bay will ease the burden of landing everybody into central George Town. Going to West Bay is logical. The two most popular attractions are in that district, the Turtle Farm and Stingray City. If persons are taken directly to the facility in West Bay by ferry and do not have to clutter the road infrastructure and do not have to come through central George Town we will definitely have persons going directly to the attractions and we will have persons landing in West Bay, being able to go to the Turtle Farm and Stingray City. We also know that those tours, depending on the length and exact tour that a cruise ship passenger buys, are typically offered either two or three times per day.

One of the other bits of information that we are aware of in consultation with the cruise industry is that a lot of persons come off the ships to initially go on their tour and then they go shopping. Some do come off, go shopping and then go on their tour. However, by moving people directly to West Bay we will achieve the objective of not having large masses in central George Town all at once because the person who goes on the early tour directly to West Bay will be returning to that facility and coming back to town later in the day. The persons who went into town to shop and then go on their tour will be leaving George Town at that time going to West Bay, to Stingray City, Hell or Turtle farm on their tour.

We see that as being the type of progress that is needed in the Cayman Islands. When we keep saying that Cuba is going to open up, what impact it is going to have when Cuba opens up; we have to have ourselves ready. Are we going to then be in the situation where some government will sit there and blame everybody in the world and say, "Tourism is off because Cuba is finally opened up and nobody prepared for this day"?

The United Democratic Party Government knows how to plan; the United Democratic Party Government is building for the future. Everybody knows that Cuba currently has some eight ports that cruise ships can go to. It does not take a rocket scientist to realise that a seven-day cruise could be just on Cuba alone.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, we have to ensure that we expand our port facilities around these Islands to ensure that the benefits are spread around, the people are spread around and we can then get to a situation where we can have less of a strain on central George Town.

Cayman Brac is also in the plans. We have spoken extensively with the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association in developing the viability of getting passengers to Cayman Brac. The initial concept is that we would offer a tour for passengers arriving in Grand Cayman to take them to Cayman Brac and back to Grand Cayman before they leave on the cruise ship.

In the long term, we know that we need to find the place in Cayman Brac that we can get a cruise facility so that ships can go to Cayman Brac. That is necessary for the long-term interest of having a stable economy in Cayman Brac. It goes to show that we are thinking about all of the Islands and all of the possibilities to allow us to accommodate more people.

Some people might ask, why West Bay first? But cruise—I hear the Opposition laughing like cackling hens as usual over there but they know what I am about to say is absolutely true. You have to have facilities built; then it becomes the egg and chicken situation. Do people invest in facilities before the cruise ships come or will the cruise ships come before facilities? We know that the cruise ships are not going to go unless there are tours on land for their guests to enjoy. Because of West Bay being home to the two most popular land-based attractions, the Turtle Farm and Hell, and the most popular water-based attraction, Stingray City, we saw that as part of the packaged solution that would serve the interests of the Cayman Islands in the immediate term.

We understand clearly that we need to ease the burden in central George Town and so the Government is doing that.

I do lay a challenge to the Leader of the Opposition. He spoke about the education process; that we need to be leaders and statesman and to pronounce to the persons in this country the damage that the cruise industry is doing. I challenge him, since he seems to have positioned himself as the People's Progressive Movement's education and tourism minister, to go out and be the statesman and preach and start that education process and I want to ask him to make sure that in the education process he gives a voucher that is backed by hard Cayman Islands or United States currency so that the people who are employed and have developed businesses in this industry can take them to the bank and to Foster's, Hurley's and Kirk's supermarkets, because people have invested and the benefits from the cruise industry are immense to this economy.

There have been many studies in various jurisdictions. The last study that I saw and I must admit this is aged, this study was done in the early 1990s, suggested that in the less lucrative Caribbean jurisdictions, the average spending was around US$50 to $60 but in the more premier destinations such as Cayman the spending was more in the order of $75 to $100 per passenger. With the increased activity that we have had onshore over the last five years, but in particular over the last two-and-a-half years, I dare say that spending will have increased. However, I do not have a study so I say to this House and the public that is my opinion. I think it is a logical opinion because the last study was done many years ago.

The financial community and the international initiatives; I must say that—whilst the Leader of the Opposition accused the Government of having Ministers who got up and made well-written speeches—he had a well-written speech yesterday, a very shiny and new speech, bigger and better than any he has delivered but I say that either the Leader of the Opposition or his speech writers fundamentally do not understand what is happening in the financial services community because if they did his message would have been completely different.

The financial community has welcomed the approach of this administration; they have said that the openness and transparency in which this Government operates is a breath of fresh air.

Let me use a classic example, the European Union Savings Directive (EUSD), I know that they know and I will prove it. Mr. Speaker, during the consultation in regard to that crucial matter, in its final meeting with the financial community the Government had a position put forward by members of the community as to the stance the Government should take—I was at the meeting so this is not hearsay—and, of the 19 members from the financial community present at that meeting, 17 supported the position that was put forward. Therefore it was obvious that many of them had already spoken to each other and had come up with a collective view. That is the position the Government took and came to this Honourable House with. How can you say that there is no consultation if the position with the financial community put to us was the position that the Government took and there was consultation right the way through on this important critical matter? I know that the Opposition knew because their chairman was at this meeting for the entire meeting.

I was going to say something unparliamentary and I will restrain myself Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Member.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I say that to say that the Member who said that I would get maimed if he does not listen a little more and stop being an East End parrot that he would learn a lot in this House.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order!

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, he has to understand and acknowledge the fact of what I just said. The chairman of his party was there the entire meeting and it is no surprise that of the two of the 19 members who did not support the position of the Government he was one; right on cue. I take it therefore that it was his ill-advice to the Opposition that caused them to come to this Honourable House and abstain on this most critical and crucial matter to the country where we should have put aside petty politics and shown one united position for this country.

The other person that was there that did not initially agree when asked just said he was there to listen; he had been sent by his association. He was then asked about his personal view; he said personally he supported the position but he could not vote because he was there as a representative from The Society of Trust and Estate Practitioners (STEP)—I cannot remember the gentleman's name however I can certainly find that out and inform any Member who would wish to know. I am sure the Honourable Third Official Member could easily find that out for us.

Any wonder why they abstained in such a critical matter? Ill advice. If that is going to be the advisor for the financial services industry, woe be to that industry if the People's Progressive Movement is elected in November. Imagine this: one out of 19—a distinct minority—and that is the position that they would take instead of a position that was taken by 17 of the 19 that were there—a distinct majority. Disagreeing for disagreeing sake.

The Leader of the Opposition rattled off some statistics about the mutual fund industry. The Minister of Education and I have been talking in recent times about the specific needs of not only the financial services industry as a whole but in particular the mutual fund industry. One of the things that people automatically draw images of in their mind when they hear of vocations is persons who are carpenters, electrician, mechanics, air-conditioning technician and plumbers. I suggest to this Honourable House and public that there are specific need areas in the financial services industry that do not require any formal tertiary education or specific qualifications for Caymanians to be employed and employable once they are given skills sets in a particular area, and the mutual fund industry, in my humble submission, is one that is right.

We know that it is the fastest growing sector within the financial community and we also know that we have a number of large reputable administrators and more coming to the Cayman Islands. I understand that there are two major groups that are going to be coming here sometime in the next six to eight months and they need people and not all of them need to be qualified accountants. You need the qualified accountant to be the overall account manager, the overall supervisor, the person that signs off on the Net Asset Value (NAV), however often the fund reports this to its holders.

There are jobs in the shareholder and registration area, there are jobs in terms of becoming experienced administrators and there is much reward. My sister is a classic example of a person involved in this industry. She does not have a university education and she is therefore not a qualified accountant but she has gained experience in that area and right now she makes as much as some qualified accountants in the private sector. When she told me the package that her current employer gave her I was shocked, and when she came to me over the Christmas and showed me what her bonus was for a person that was unqualified I was shocked.

One of the things that those employers do need is persons who can come to the table with skill sets. I am of the view that within our current education environment there is room for us to be able to craft certain curricula to suit our particular needs. We can be flexible in that way because we see where the growth areas are. Once you start to apply skills there is no reason why a high school leaver could not come out knowing what NAV means, what shareholder registration and transfer agent work involves, they already do a general business studies course. We have the opportunity—and, as I said, the Minister of Education and I have spoken about ways of improving and moving forward—to start to equip young people and people coming out of school with skills that they can take directly to employers because that only makes a person more employable and it only helps the economy by giving us better skilled people because Mr. Speaker, at the end of the day that is something that is definitely on the Government's agenda to continue to strengthen, enhance and improve.

I must say that it would be interesting for the Leader of the Opposition to verify the unemployment figures that he had for youth because he said that he thinks—he thinks—that if the Ministers got the information that they would find the statistics were a certain way. I could get up and say that I think that you would find anything once you have done the research but the House should be about the facts; what the existing factually documented situations are? They have other speakers to come so maybe we will be enlightened.

The Leader of the Opposition seems to suggest, in his speech, that he is going to be the great saviour for education and tourism; that he is going to be the great leader the country is in desperate need of. However, I think they know and I think that he knows as well as anybody else that he has shown the country how he would act and react once given that opportunity because he has once before. You see that is the beauty of this whole situation that we have before us; he has been there.

Since he had so much to say about education he too would agree that one of the key ingredients for parental involvement in the Cayman Islands is the reporting session. So, I say that one of the key ingredients of every citizen who is eligible to vote in this country is also the reporting session; we just happen to call our reporting session the General Elections. Mr. Speaker, as you in this Honourable House would remember there is always time for us to reflect and so I say, that at this point and for the next six months, it is indeed truth time, Cayman. And I say that on this 13th day of May 2004 that I can give a very unbiased and independent report card for the Leader of the Opposition versus the Leader of Government Business. The report card will be laid out as follows. I will name the subject, give the comments and give the final grade.

Openness and transparency; that is such a great political buzz phrase, it just sends shivers up the spines of the voters because they want an open and transparent Government and they want an open and transparent politician.

Comments on the Leader of the Opposition, the Honourable Kurt Tibbetts; in one year as Leader of Government Business he held no public meetings; there was no genuine consultation with the people. I do not know how that can be described as open and transparent but I think that is a fair commentary. Therefore, based on those actions, the grade would be an F. In our school you either pass or fail and F is for fail.

The current Leader of Government Business, the Honourable McKeever Bush in his year as Deputy Leader of Government Business and the last two-and-a-half years as Leader of Government Business; we have held quarterly public meetings and special meetings on special topics.

Speaking of special topics, the Leader of the Opposition kicked up a lot of hay about Cayman Airways. Well, with Cayman Airways, the Leader of Government Business, my other two colleagues from West Bay and I held a public meeting in West Bay before we made any final decision on what our position was going to be on Cayman Airways. If we remember correctly, we were going to Finance Committee for a restructuring of Cayman Airways. Remember that Cayman Airways was the subject of the Leader of the Opposition at that point. We held a public meeting; we even took a poll at the public meeting. We asked who was in favour and who was not. The Member for North Side said it was all set-up, Mr. Speaker. I would like to know how we could set-up a public meeting which was advertised and any member of the public could come. I say how can you set-up a nationally advertised public meeting? But perhaps she may have a way of doing it—

The Speaker: Order.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: —she may have done it before.

No, you were not with me at the meeting, you were somewhere else.

[Member: I was]

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I would like to know where the Leader of the Opposition was at that point, it was his subject and he was not even at the meeting.

Based on performance, not people's opinion or warped opinion, I would have to say for openness and transparency; pass for the Honourable McKeeva Bush.

Accountability; dark days reigned in this country for one long, tiresome year. You talk about democracy under threat. I tell you that was a long, long frustrating year.

I refer back to my comments on openness and transparency. If you are not meeting with the public, going public with your feelings and if you are not consulting with the people I cannot see you being accountable so, Mr. Speaker, I am forced to give a failing grade to the Leader of the Opposition.

Accountability; the Leader of Government Business is willing and does listen. He changes his mind based on other people's points of view. The Opposition has got up in this House and questioned why we changed our minds during the Constitutional debate. Yesterday, the Leader of the Opposition questioned why the Leader of Government Business changed his mind on Cayman Airways. It seems to me that people who are accountable to the public are willing to face them and are willing to change their mind if the public do not agree. I am once again forced to give a passing grade to the Leader of Government Business.

I want the Second Elected Member for George Town to listen to this carefully because it proves how unbiased I am in my reporting.

Achievement oriented; Leader of the Opposition. He wants to make a difference. This can be noted during his service in the Lions Club and standing for public office and having been elected three consecutive terms. No doubt, the gentleman is achievement oriented; passing grade.

The Leader of Government Business has given 20 years of his life to public office and has a deep yearning to help people; passing grade. Achievement oriented; both passing grades.

The next subject is one that is crucial. Makes promises and spreads propaganda; the Leader of the Opposition and the People's Progressive Movement is the best of the best. They drive the biggest and brightest promised automobile. The Leader of the Opposition is often heard—

The Speaker: Honourable Member would you please take a seat and allow me to make a statement.

Honourable Members, I know we are in an election year and having been in politics for a very long time I can well appreciate that we are going to have some crosstalk, especially as we lead up to the November Elections. You are all seasoned politicians and I would ask you all in the interests of the good order of this House to try to desist from crosstalk and I would also invite the Members who are on their feet speaking to ignore these comments because the listening public is not really hearing what is being said and you are not really making too much sense by trying to answer the comments that are being made by the Opposition or anybody else.

I also draw Members attention to Standing Order 34 in regard to interruptions in the House. Many of you, I know, know better and I expect better from you. So please co-operate with the Chair in assisting me to conduct a well-run House and that the proceedings go uninterrupted.

Please continue Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I would say thank you because yesterday when the Leader of the Opposition was making his speech, we desisted from making any commentary and we allowed him to proceed. I think the old adage is the truth hurts, and so I can expect to have crosstalk as I deliver what I believe to be a truthful representation of the facts as they exist.

As I was saying, the Leader of the Opposition is often heard saying, "PPM, let 's get in the promise mobile" and off they speed in no real direction but they speed off anyway; passing grade. Remember the subject, makes promises and spreads propaganda.

Like any good politician the Leader of Government Business has been at this business a long time and so he makes promises like the best of us. Everyone one of us has to make promises otherwise no one knows the future so we have to promise what we are going to do for the electorate. However, we really do not get our propaganda out very well and so oftentimes on the talk shows and the other forums you do hear the propaganda that is being spread and so I am forced to give a failing grade on this point, to the Leader of Government Business, that is, makes promises and spreads propaganda.

Keeps promises; that is a key subject and that is where the PPM rubber never meets the road.

The Speaker: Honourable Member. I just want to make another point, please take your seat.

Whilst it has been a tradition and is well accepted that on the Budget debate and Throne Speech the [Chair] will give a lot of latitude to speakers especially in this Election year, it is something that I propose to do but I would nonetheless remind Members of Standing Order 63(2) and I will read that: "On the motion for the Second Reading of an Appropriation Bill, debate shall be confined to the financial and economic state of the Islands and the general principles of Government policy and administration as indicated by the Bill and the estimates."

As I said it is proposed to give latitude as has been done in the past but I will remind Honourable Members that we are debating the Budget. Thank you.

Please continue, Honourable Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, to tie everything back to the Budget, one key ingredient to this report card is the fact that the Leader of the Opposition got up and said that come November 17th there would be a new administration; his PPM administration. He spoke very eloquently in a well-written speech as to all the promises and different things that they were going to make. So I think my colleagues on the other side would also admit in doing that, that when we debate we have to also offer our position in regard to how viable some of those promises are and whether or not we believe that the House and the country are going to see the benefits of those promises.

I can say that, as has been noted there is an elaborate, well-versed, good-sounding and bright and shiny PPM promise mobile but the promises have to be kept and I am forced therefore to suggest that the grade here would be a failing grade.

When we look at the Leader of Government Business we see a man who keeps his word and actions speak louder than words. He is focused on getting the job done.

Fiscal responsibility: who can say truthfully that the United Democratic Party Government is not a fiscally responsible Government? When we look at the Budgets that we have presented and the actual results that have emanated from those Budgets over the last two-and-a-half years, the Budget is balanced again. We are living within our means. So I would have to say that having three full years Budgets that are balanced and having the first two-and-a-half actual results meet them we would have to receive a passing grade on this point and I know the Opposition agrees.

On fiscal responsibility the Leader of the Opposition admitted yesterday that during his time as Leader of Government Business he had put together a $55 million borrowing package—and these are the numbers straight from his speech—and that is in one Budget. A whopping $28 million was used to cover recurrent expenditure. Mr. Speaker, I cannot give a passing grade on fiscal responsibility; an F.

Ability to prioritise. The ability to prioritise during the Budget process and ensure that what you propose to the country via the Budget is a crucial skill that this administration has attained. The Leader of the Opposition spoke eloquently about the $60 million towers that were going to be used to house civil servants, but he said nothing about why it would have been that he would have proposed the $60 million for towers versus for schools, yet he turned around and said that we are in dire need of schools and therefore that is where the money should be spent. Whilst we understand the need for additional and new accommodation for the civil servants, we have to prioritise the resources of this country and the building of those towers does not elevate in importance beyond the items the Government has presented in the last two Budgets that we have used in regard to capital works.

We are continuing to and making good progress on the road infrastructure. The Primary School in Spotts is almost complete. We know that the Minister and the Government is moving forwards and making progress in regard to the High School in Frank Sound. Thus, when it comes to prioritising we could not see how spending on the towers was justifiable over those other areas that are building for the future.

Conveniently, the Leader of the Opposition also stated that we have done nothing to reduce recurrent expenditure. I remember correctly when the Second Elected Member for George Town once said in this House that the amounts of money we are spending on personal emoluments was too great and I agree with that comment and I think all Members of this House agree with that comment. However, given that comment, why would we go and proceed at this point with the towers when we know that currently there is fundamental restructuring in the civil service in terms of personnel reform which is now following the financial reform that has taken place? We really have to get to the point where we are confident and we know precisely how many civil servants need to be housed in these towers. Why build for building sake? We do need to ensure that the Government continues to prioritise and continues to show good leadership in prioritising.

Therefore, I am forced to give the Leader of the Opposition a failing grade on the ability to prioritise and to give a passing grade to the Leader of Government Business on prioritisation.

Now for the overall grade Mr. Speaker. I think it is fair comment to say that for those who have followed and listened keenly to the subjects and to the grades on the subjects that overall we have heard a very good speech by the Leader of the Opposition. Good points were raised.

However, we do understand that we do see—when we look at the overall grade and what is good for the Cayman Islands—a very sharp, fancy PPM promise mobile. It is an election year as you pointed out Mr. Speaker, so this is the year when all of the critiques are heightened and the promises are sharpened and so we do see a very fancy PPM promise mobile driving around. I proffer the view that it is a hazard to the good Cayman Islands' public. Please beware, because you may wind up in a disastrous crash with the PPM promise mobile. I say avoid it on reporting session on November 17th.

Overall grade therefore would have to be fail. The Leader of Government Business gets the job done, positive results are his strength. I say no more; a pass grade.

When we look at the picture that was painted by the Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Speaker, he envisages a PPM administration after the 2004 Elections. I think we really have to look at that and think about this Budget and say, "If it was the People's Progressive Movement, what would they have done differently?" because that is the mother element of debate that was lacking in that well-written speech. I did not hear a lot of alternatives but then we also did not hear a lot of "What we would do if we were there."

I say that when we truthfully look at the administration he is proposing we see that there are five of them and there are five cabinet seats. Of course, they will have others running with them and we are not sure yet who is going to be proposed as their cabinet so for right now we can only deal with the currently elected Members. I challenge them and I ask each of them what is different, how they would have improved the prioritisation and the allocation of resources? I do not think that they would have been able to improve it. In fact, I am confident in saying that they would not have been able to come up with such a good Budget.

We see that we have a number of friends on the other side—I do mean that Mr. Speaker because I think the public sometimes gets the view that once you are on opposite sides in politics you have to dislike each other but that is not necessary at all—and since they are such good friends and friends can give constructive criticism to friends I would beg to also proffer another little insight to the House. This one is not to the voting public so I am not campaigning; I am now speaking to the House and to all of us because we are 15 Caymanians with a lot at stake. This is a precious country and we all love it dearly. However, Mr. Speaker, I am not sure if we are going to have a Ministry for trying to make McKeeva look bad, but if they do I would propose that the Second Elected Member for George Town would have to be that Minister because that seem to be his modus operandi (MO) and I am hoping that during this debate that we hear some fleshing out of the blueprint.

We would have nothing that a good committee cannot fix. That is certainly an MO that also fits with our friends on the other side.

The Speaker: Honourable Member you have 10 minutes remaining.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

The Minister of Commerce wants commerce and economic development but he keeps saying not in his backyard. I would say that when it comes to Health Services our current Minister of Health has done a wonderful job and, in your year as Minister of Health Mr. Speaker, you started and did a lot of work in that area; you worked tirelessly in that area. We must remember when it comes to health it cannot be cured by any doctor deaths. We must have people who are willing to take the decisions to deal with health insurance, the structure of the Health Services and to move those critical issues forward because a healthy resident population is something that we all recognise as a national priority.

I could not end the last Budget address before the General Elections by saying what I know the good Leader of the Opposition would say if he were here, in terms of my commentary for his proposed administration, "Oh bobo, you see, it really not like that".

[Laughter]

This election and this debate needs to be about the issues and the fact that the United Democratic Party Government has delivered again on what I believe to be is a key responsibility for Government that is prudence and fiscal management.

I say that this country is in the right direction and I will turn back to Thomas Paine before I end. He once said: "The dejection lasts only for a moment; they soon rise out of it with additional vigor; the glow of hope, courage and fortitude will, in a little time. . . kindle the whole heart into heroism."

I will now apply this today in our circumstance in this House Mr. Speaker. The dejection that Mr. Paine speaks of was the feeling that the majority of the people in the Cayman Islands was left with for the past 13 hours when they had to listen to the address by the Leader of the Opposition and at the thought that the PPM would become their Government.

"The glow of hope, courage and fortitude," is the thoughts and feelings of the majority of our people when they think about the United Democratic Party and its leadership. The kindling of "the whole heart into heroism" is what every eligible voter needs to do for their country on November 17th and return the United Democratic Party and their fiscal prudence to office.

I think it is beyond a shadow of a doubt that whilst we heard some sweet nothings about a blueprint the country has been left with no alternative but to realise that the fiscal hand, the hand that is at the tiller, the United Democratic Party Government is the right hand for fiscal responsibility, the right hand for policy creation and implementation, it is the right hand with prioritisation.

Therefore, I give my whole-hearted support to the 2004-2005 Budget and I want to wish the Honourable Third Official Member a warm, happy and prosperous move as this was his last and to wish the Honourable First Official Member God's Blessings on his retirement. I think it goes without saying that whilst we may not have a big shiny promise mobile we do have a house that is built on results.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members as announced earlier I now propose to take the adjournment. However, before calling on the Deputy Leader of Government Business to do so, I would invite all Honourable Members, Officers and members of the Press to join me in observing a moment of silence in honour of Carolyn Hislop Bodden who sadly passed away yesterday. As mentioned to Honourable Members Ms Carolyn made a major contribution to these Islands especially in the field of education and is very well known to all of us in this House. I would ask all in these Chambers to stand for a moment of silence.

(Continuation of debate on Budget Address)

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to make a contribution to this year's Budget debate. It is important that I speak and make my contribution for a number of reasons, not the least of which is the fact that as a Minister of Government I have a responsibility to report on my stewardship. Importantly, too, is the fact that I am proud to be a member of the United Democratic Party (UDP) which is the governing political directorate.

I also need to reply to the debate by the Leader of the Opposition. I do not know why the Leader of the Opposition, who seemed to have failed at leadership, thinks he can be a successful Minister of Education. The gentleman is my friend, but when I get through my debate I am going to set the record straight and inform the country as to who should be the Minister of Education and who is most fitting and deserving to be so by outlining my record, speaking of my vision of education and educational leadership and speaking of my professionalism.

There is a difference, Mr. Speaker. I am a professional educator. I do not consider myself to be in the ranks of amateur educators. Amateur educators can make a lot of comments and I will explain the difference between those who are armchair educators from those who are professional educators and players and why it is important for the country to be led by the professional educators and leave the armchair educators, like we do the armchair footballers, to talk about the game on the weekends. However, when the actual game is played it is played by the professional quarterbacks.

I want to begin, Mr. Speaker, by talking about the path which we have embarked upon now in terms of financial management and this whole business of the new financial system that has been implemented which makes it more sensible, more easily understood and more practical for us in the management of our country's finances.

I am proud to be associated with the movement from which this emanated. In 1995, my colleague, the now Minister of Health, and I brought a motion to the Legislative Assembly which asked for the Government of the day to adopt the system similar to what was in place, in practice, in New Zealand at that time. Mr. Speaker, the Hansard will show that we almost got railroaded out of town by the then Government. Certain Ministers—whose names I will not call now because there is an old adage that says “speak no ill of the dead”, the political dead, that is—got up and said it was not their business to know what the laws of New Zealand were and that we were introducing an act of parliament of an independent country so we were trying to take the Cayman Islands into independence. Mr. Speaker, on that occasion there were only three people who supported the motion; myself as the mover, the then Minister of Health and the present Leader of the Opposition. The Government got up and went from A-Z in the encyclopaedia saying we did not know what we were talking about, we were trying to lead the country into independence, and we had no experience.

I am happy that time and events have proven us right and that at last the Government has embarked upon a system of accrual accounting which makes our financial management sensible, practical and achievable. I feel especially proud to know that the Cayman Islands are one of a handful of, less than 10, jurisdictions who now operate under this system. I am sure, Mr. Speaker, when knowledge of this is digested by the administering power in the halls of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office they will be pleased to know that we have such a system in place. Such a system, Mr. Speaker, I might add, which they do not have because they are still operating on the old system.

When I came into the Legislative Assembly, I wondered then how it was that our system was so antiquated because I came from an establishment in the private sector where, at the end of any given day, I would quite frequently see my Managing Director examine his ledgers. Many times he called me in as Manager and he would say, “Manager, I want to bring this to your attention. This is where we are now, a year ago we were here.” or “This thing is not doing so well. Why? Why is it, when a year ago we had achieved this level?” We were operating on an accrual system and everything was so clearly laid out.

Thus, when I came into the Legislative Assembly and found we were operating an antiquated system where we were one year behind I said, “How in the world can a Government function like this when we are a whole year behind in our financial records? What is the problem? Why can we not change and have at our fingertips the most up-to-date information and knowledge which will give us the power to make greater, more effective and more beneficial financial decisions?”

I am happy to know that this system was pre-empted over, and to a great extent has been orchestrated by, the Financial Secretary for whom this will be his last Budget Address. I am happy that he could have seen this move. I am also happy to know that he was so gracious as to acknowledge that when this move was proposed he did not understand nor was he so willingly accepting of it. Mr. Speaker, it is a mark of the gentleman's humility that he acknowledges the error of his ways.

I congratulated him and told him that he is fortunate because it is not often that the Compass makes saints out of people in their Editorial when they are still alive. I am happy to see that not only did the Compass beautify him but they declared him a saint when he is alive and can appreciate it because most of us have to wait until we are six feet under for the Compass to give us that kind of recognition and even then they do so only grudgingly.

These are indeed interesting times in the Cayman Islands. As we embark our election campaign no more will we have the wrangling as to how much money the Government has and we will not need to summon Auditor Generals to sign off on statements saying this is the balance sheet or this is not the balance sheet and the Government saying one thing and the Opposition saying another and everyone pointing fingers, accusing and wrangling. We will have the facts.

However, Mr. Speaker, I am most happy about this; that I can stand up here and associate myself with a government which has produced not only a balanced Budget, but a Budget with a modest surplus. Good stewardship, good management is something to be proud of in these days because so many people had written us off, “This bunch of crackpots, they have no experience. Who do they think they are? They are not going to get far. They will self-destruct. They will come asunder.”

We have proven the critics wrong and you know what? Greater things have yet to come. I am confident that when the results of the elections of 2004 are known, the United Democratic Party will come back with a resounding and sweeping majority mandate. I believe that to my soul. I believe that to my heart. I believe that because I know and I have confidence that the people of the Cayman Islands can understand and appreciate good management.

You know what? This is not a good time to be in the Opposition. Trust me; I am a good judge of that, because I was there for 12 years. This is not a good time because the Government has performed well, the Budget is balanced and the future looks good. I am happy that I am on this side because the prognosis for the Opposition is more years of opposition. I expect that they will try to make the Government look bad. I expect that they will try to put us down. I know about that too. I could write a book on that. I had 12 years of that, Mr. Speaker. I am not angry with them. They are doing their job. I do not blame them. Oftentimes, my colleague and good friend, the Minister of Health and I have a little side-bar and chuckle and we say, "Boy, if we were in Opposition, this is what we would do."

We understand and appreciate that they have a responsible role to play and I heard the Leader of the Opposition speak, although I regret that he burdened me most when I was out of the Chamber. I read what he said in his speech and that is his job Mr. Speaker. His job is not to make the Government look good; his job is to make it look like we do not know what we are doing and the alternative lies with them. They are my good friends but they know when it comes to performance the Minister of Education can perform. As Mr. Speaker witnesses, I have no cues, no notes, no books, no pencils, and no paper. However, I am going to get across to you convincingly, Mr. Speaker, why you should vote for us to be returned as the next government.

I am happy that at this time in the Cayman Islands all and sundry can have hope and confidence that things are well. Tourists are coming; even the rains are coming now, Mr. Speaker. We are doing well. The Government is confident.

Of course, we have our challenges. I heard the Leader speak about roads that are traffic-congested. However, I say that success often comes with its own set of challenges. Perhaps we would be lamenting if we had roads and no traffic on them. Of course, we have to find a way to deal with the traffic congestion and we need to find a long-term solution. A long-term solution may be expensive but if we continue to prosper, if our economy continues to grow and we continue to attract people to come here to work and we continue to promote ourselves as a tourist industry we are continuously going to have to deal—not only with cars on the roads—with a congested town centre, when we have five and six cruise ships with 14,000 and 15,000 people. Therefore, we are working to finding a balance.

I often say too, that the Cayman Islands are on a treadmill from which cannot get off easily, because no one would want his standard of living to suffer. No one would want his standard of living to decrease now because we want to slow down.

I believe that development must have a balance, that we must find a formula to grow at a manageable rate. Now, it is a vogue to describe it as sustainable development and, of course, there are concerns. There are concerns I share with the Opposition; there are concerns that we in the political directorate of the Government share amongst ourselves. We are striving diligently and working assiduously, to find the formula that is manageable, and affordable, that we can achieve without mortgaging the future, without sacrificing the future to the present or without frittering away the future of our progeny.

I think the Cayman Islands are doing well, Mr. Speaker. I think we are eminently poised to take advantage of worldwide economic situations. I think we are eminently poised to continue to be a model, not only in the Caribbean but in the world.

I have just returned from a breakfast function being held for the visiting ship Logos II and I heard speaker after speaker mention how impressed they are with this community, its cosmopolitanism, the fact that it is clean and orderly. These are things for us to be proud about in spite of the preaching of those people who preach doom and gloom, those persons who say that the Government was going to self-destruct and that we were going to come apart. We are doing well. The country has good leadership and good stewardship, Mr. Speaker, and there can be no greater proof than that today of the Budget that has been presented; the outputs that are proposed to be brought; the services that we are aspiring to provide for our people; the vision that we have of leading them into a future with confidence; of preparing our young men and women to take their places not only in this society but in a borderless world by introducing them to the knowledge economy, Mr. Speaker.

This is a good point for me to launch into my vision of education and my explanation of what I have done and why I have done it. Mr. Speaker, much hullabaloo was made by the Leader of the Opposition of temporary classrooms and the fact that we need schools. I want to begin by saying that the Opposition already has to eat a big pile of crow because they said that the new Prospect primary school would not be finished. Oh, Mr. Speaker, that they would have a good appetite, because they are going to have to eat some crow!

We have temporary classrooms. Why? It is a problem that this Minister inherited, Mr. Speaker. However, I am not frightened by that. It is not an insurmountable problem. It is not a challenge which is going to defeat me. It is but a temporary measure because we have a ballooning public school population for which ample provisions were not made down the line. I am not pointing fingers. I am not blaming my predecessors. I am not blaming anyone. It is for me, as a good educational policy maker and administrator, to deal with that in a way that our children, our cohorts of students, are not detrimentally affected. I have said that we have brought in temporary classrooms and they are serving the purpose. Even as we speak, Mr. Speaker, we are in negotiations to buy 26 acres of land for $590,000, for a new high school in Frank Sound. It will come but, Mr. Speaker, my vision for the educational development of this country is not unifocal. I do not only want to provide school buildings, I want programmes because it is the programmes that are going to make the difference. I have already provided effective programmes.

I did not hear the Leader of the Opposition talk about the challenge we had with the gravitation of our young people toward criminal gang behaviour; I did not hear him talk about the national mentoring programme; he did not talk about the Cadet Corp; he did not talk about the Coaching for Success whose graduation we just had a few days ago; he did not talk about the success of these programmes. You know why, Mr. Speaker? He does not know because he is not a professional educator. I am the doctor!

He talked about school buildings. You could put up the most impressive edifice but if you do not have people inside who can direct the orchestra what good is it to have expensive instruments? What good is it to have the best seats if the football team cannot perform, if the coach is no good, if the quarterback does not give the right signals?

That is where they are making the mistake and that is where the country has to understand that the difference lies between the person who is not only going to make provision for the buildings but who is going to ensure that within those walls there are programmes.

I did not hear him talk about ITALIC (Improved Teaching and Learning in the Cayman Islands). Mr. Speaker, you know what we have done? We have embarked upon a movement that is going to profoundly change the way we deliver education, the way our students learn, the way they interact, the way they are being prepared for the knowledge economy. IBM: we have signed a strategic agreement, they are our strategic partners.

Education in the Cayman Islands is going to be different from what people have known. We are talking about information and communications technology and intranet and internet wireless, preparing our students for the knowledge economy in the 21st century. Over the next five years, approximately $6 million not only in hardware and software but in consultancy services; that is the strength. An ongoing consultancy where our cohort of students and our teachers are going to be introduced to the best provided by the leader, IBM, on the cutting edge of information technology. I did not hear the Leader of the Opposition talking about that. He does not know about the importance of that; he does not know the significance of that.

You see, Mr. Speaker, anyone can read the play book but it takes a smart quarterback to know when to call one signal from the other. And that is what it is about. In his debate he tried to make it seem like I was not supported and I did not get the resources. Mr. Speaker, nothing could be further from the truth.

I cannot stand here this morning and debate and say anything other than my colleagues have been ever supportive of the requests I made for the provision of educational services. To say otherwise I would be stifling my conscience and I do not do that easily and lightly. I have received the support I requested.

I think that we are dealing with the challenges well, we have programmes in place, we are increasing them. I did not hear the speaker comment that there is about to be implemented consultations towards a new modern Education Law, which is going to take account of education and its relations across the spectrum from even our dealings with parents, from the responsibilities of parents, the responsibilities of students, the responsibilities of the teachers, the Ministry and the Education Department.

So, do not come trying to make it seem like the UDP Government gave education short shrift. No! Mr. Speaker, a thousand times no! I am confident that the country has the best education Minister it could have at this time. I am not a theoretician. Check my record in the Caymanian classrooms when I was there—flawless! And a flawless academic record! I have married the theory with the practical and we are delivering tangible, achievable, affordable results.

I did not hear the Leader of the Opposition talk about the Community College and the concept of its transformation to a University College and why it is important for us to do this; I did not hear about that. He only talked about temporary classrooms and no school buildings. Mr. Speaker, I am telling you that I have so much confidence in myself that were I given the physical facilities of a tamarind tree I could deliver excellent results because I know what the vision is and what it should be for our children.

Let me say something about technical and vocational education. Anyone can make some analyses. You believe that we can, overnight, implement a successful system of technical and vocational education? You could package anything but is it effective? I could put this water in a dark bottle and tell you that it is an elixir that will give you youth ad infinitum but is that so? I do not want to have the kind of system where I build a building or put one computer in it and say this is a technical or vocational. I want a programme with a logical progression from the primary schools right up to the university college because my vision for education is about life-long learning. That was tried before. I saw programmes where students were paid to go into vocational areas and it flocked. You know why? Because no one gave the thought to establish any natural sequence or natural progression or make any provisions for foundations.

What we are doing is the right thing, Mr. Speaker; administering the right medicine in the right portions. We are building the curriculum, we are strengthening the curriculum. Not only are we strengthening the curriculum; we are simultaneously identifying students of promise at this time and routing them into technical and vocational studies.

I did not hear the Leader of the Opposition say that we are sending eight students from the Community College to the British Columbia Institute of Technology in September to pursue courses and degrees in Applied Technology. At the same time as we have consultants coming from British Columbia to strengthen the curriculum in our high schools in areas of technical and vocational education.

As a coach I am not unifocal, I do not drill my players only in physical exercises and make them physically fit, I give them the game plan which involves tactics and techniques and set plays and teach them how to win coming from behind. I do not see anything in what the Leader of the Opposition said that should frighten me. I am prepared to bare my chest and go the country and tell them to examine the record of the United Democratic Party (UDP) in education.

I did not hear the Leader of the Opposition talk about the Government encouraging institutions of excellence coming here like St. Matthews University which gives scholarships to our students and where one of our students, Mr. Darren McField, scored in the top one per cent of all students who took the medical board examinations in the United States. I do not hear the Leader of the Opposition talking about that. I do not hear him talking about how to build capacity by encouraging the University of the West Indies to become more closely involved in the development of our community by enhancing its presence in setting up a distance learning centre. I did not hear him talking about distance learning and virtual education. He focused on buildings. Buildings are the least.

I do not want to waste the Government's money building $30 million high school with no purpose other than to warehouse the students. I am talking about programmes that complement the buildings, I am talking about a vision for education that deals with life-long learning, putting facilities in place so that people can train and re-train so that there can be lateral movement; so that people who have now been in one profession or vocation for 20 years can have the opportunity to go to an institution and cross over into something else. I am talking about educational programmes that ensure that our at-risk youngsters have mentors, models, people that give them self-esteem and self-confidence. I am talking about an educational system which offers constructive opportunities like the Cadet Corps so that our youngsters need not gravitate toward criminal gang behaviour when they want attention.

I did not hear him talk about programmes in citizenship education and human rights education as has been implemented by this Ministry and by this Government. No, Mr. Speaker, he focused on buildings and said "The long often talked about third high school, not on line yet."

Ah, Mr. Speaker, that does not mean that our children are disadvantaged. We will get the high school, these things take time. There is a process and procedure. All has been achieved within the budget, in an obvious time line; in a schedule that is acceptable. We are making these achievements every year. Since I have been in the Ministry the numbers of students we have sent over seas have increased. I did not hear the Leader of the Opposition say that. At the same time we are making provisions for that 80 per cent who do not excel in ways that would send them to colleges and universities. I did not hear him talk about these things at all so I want to set the record straight; I have never been handcuffed by my other Cabinet colleagues. I have all the resources that I have asked for.

I did not hear him talk about what is at long last happening with one of the primary schools in his constituency (thanks to the constant bringing to my attention by Dr. Frank McField of the situation which exists at the George Town Primary school). I did not hear the Leader of the Opposition talk about what we are doing; how we have project definition plans and design plans for addressing the flooding, for modernising the school and we are starting to do that by using the classrooms in the new Prospect school to transfer some children from George Town Primary school that will give us an opportunity to bulldoze those old facilities and to fill the grounds and bring it up to a level so there will be no more flooding and that the children can have physical surroundings and can learn in a physical setting where they will not be inconvenienced by flood waters. I did not hear him talk about that. I took him to show him the facilities and told him that we are going to address this and we are beginning to do so because we have set the wheels in motion.

I did not hear him talk about the money that the Ministry and the Government have expended on updating school libraries and ensuring that our students have access to the internet and intranet with proper supervision.

Let there be no doubt, Mr. Speaker; there is a difference between the Leader of the Opposition and me. I have a vision which is not unifocal. The Government would be ill-advised to focus only on buildings and edifices without at the same time complementing that investment with programmes and personnel which can administer effective education and learning that our students can grasp and appreciate. Life-long learning; that is the difference and I am proud to be the person responsible for presenting the United Democratic Party's educational plan because it is a plan which can stand scrutiny barring none. It will take the five members of the Opposition to be one education minister that I am and if the people elect them for the Government the Government will only have one ministry because it will take every Member of the Opposition to make a minister of education. What would happen to the other ministries?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Our Improving Teaching and Learning in the Cayman Islands (ITALIC) is the envy of the Region. We have had people from the Bahamas and other jurisdictions who want to model what we are trying to do. From May 2002 until now we have made great strides in that programme and will continue to do so. I did not hear the Leader of the Opposition talk about that.

I look forward to inviting my colleagues on the other side to witness the success in these things. I am confident but my responsibilities not only lie with education. I have to tell you the truth although I am educator by training I have to give equal attention to the other areas that I have assigned to me by His Excellency the Governor. Human resources, which we have come to accept as labour and culture, and equally so we have made great strides in the Ministry in these areas.

The business of employment and employment relations in the country is as critical as is this whole idea of providing an effective education and opportunities for training. I want to say quite solemnly and soberly that the business of employment relations in this country continues to be a challenge. Even now as we speak there is confusion with regard to when the new Employment Law is coming into effect. If we do not have excellent employment relations in this country then we will not have good budgets because people will not want to come here to work. People will not perform and we do not want the kind of society where there is disharmony or disruption because it is us against them, faction against faction. So, it is of crucial importance that we have, as a beginning, to craft policies that will enable all who come and operate in this jurisdiction to feel that they have a stake in what is happening.

I am happy and proud to be associated with a Government which takes this seriously and knows that we have to expend monies on human resources, on the development of our people on changes of attitudes on this whole business of being accommodating and building relations with people who come outside.

For the first time in the history of governance in this country and constitutional developments there is a ministry which has three portfolios with logical links; Education, Human Resources and Culture. Mr. Speaker, as Minister, I have tried to make the best of that by building on the links between education, employment and culture and I think that we are doing that well. We are setting up a national training board and the responsibility for training is actively placed with the Employment Relations office. I never heard the Leader of the Opposition talk about efforts that are being made to train persons. I never heard the Opposition talk about efforts and investigations made into the development of an apprenticeship programme; this whole business of the TechVoc (technical and vocational) Fair that we had and how successful it was.

There cannot be an overemphasis on this. You cannot build a system on a plan which is unifocal; it has to be comprehensive. We are talking about not only educating the top 20 per cent but coming to grips with meaningful training programmes, attitude changes, development of interpersonal skills with the other 80 per cent who also have to be constructive citizens and these things cannot be delivered only by building buildings and edifices. It has to be delivered by exposure, experience and involvement. That is what we are about and that is the support and encouragement that I got, from my colleagues in the United Democratic Party, to deliver. We are doing that. The Cayman Islands continue to remain an attractive jurisdiction. Education itself is becoming attractive to the economy because frequently now the Ministry is receiving applications from educational institutions who want to use this jurisdiction to set up. So, education as a service is growing in ways that we will be able to contribute to the economy of the country and will help us balance our budget.

There are those who would dare to believe that the United Democratic Party political directorate is bringing the Cayman Islands to an economic end. I say the contrary. The United Democratic Party Government is leading the Cayman Islands into economic prosperity. If there were any Doubting Thomases they should check the records. For all of the brief time that we were responsible for the stewardship of this country the economy was in sound hands.

I want to say, with regard to borrowings, that no government or entity in the private sector which is vibrant, successful, and which has a plan to grow, can do so without at some stage accessing capital for development outside of its own internal orbit. There is nothing wrong with borrowing and the records show that we are well within manageable means. We have improved the funds in the general reserves; we have demonstrated that monies expended on capital project were expended on needy capital projects. We have demonstrated that we have a concern for the recurrent expenditure and the spiralling of the civil service by trying to be constrained in its growth. All these things are not happenstance, all these things are not the work of fools and nincompoops and idiots, all these things are the work of persons who are committed and who are aware and who have a vision. I say without fear of successful contradiction that there is no alternative at this time to the Government which is the United Democratic Party Government. No alternative, no alternative. There has been, as far as I am concerned, no convincing demonstration of an alternative financial, educational, social or medical plan that would lead me to doubt that what we have offered in this Budget and what we have done in the past is not what should be done or what is best at this time for the Cayman Islands.

I look forward with confidence to the future. I am heartened to know that the electorate, discerning and informed as they are, will make the right decisions. I say, as far as I am concerned, I will continue to do my best to see that the finances of the Cayman Islands are properly managed and that sensible growth can take place.

I encourage the Opposition in their responsibilities. I understand that they are not going to get up and admit that the Government is doing excellently because it would mean that they would be dimming their chances of becoming the government. However, I wish to caution them by saying that so far they have demonstrated no credible alternative, no acceptable and believable reason why they should be the government.

As far as education and the education vision is concerned perhaps when I decide to leave—if I open my consultancy, as I am minded to do—and the Opposition can afford my services, I will sell them an education plan from my consultancy. But as of now I am firmly in the ranks of the United Democratic Party which is the best party and the most responsible Government, the most visionary Government and a Government which, I think, pools the best prospect for the future.

After 16 years here I realise that I no longer have to be long-winded. There is a certain confidence that comes with the aging of good wine. Its effect is not in the quantity one drinks but in the quality of the sip. I do not need to go beyond what I have already said because I have established beyond a doubt that the responsibility which I hold has been carried out effectively and appropriately to the best of my ability and, I say again, could not have been bettered by the Opposition. As respectful as I am of their efforts they fall short because you cannot send an amateur quarterback when you have need of a professional, and I am a professional.

Thank you.

[Members: Hear, hear]

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I will take the morning break at this time for 10 minutes and I would ask you all to please be back by 11.30 am. Thank you.

Proceedings suspended at 11.19 am

Proceedings resumed at 11.54 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I rise to make my contribution to the Budget, as I listened yesterday and again today we had a lecture from the teacher/preacher and he even gave us a grade. Fortunately, Mr. Speaker, this is not how the electorate grades us politicians. That will be done by a secret ballot on the 17 November. Sadly, that is a final grade.

As I looked in Cayman Net News, dated Tuesday 11 May, there was the heading on page 2; Innovative Budget Released for 2004/5. Government preaches one thing and then does another thing. When I was a member of Executive Council from 1994–2000 I always felt that respect was due to those who not necessarily supported the Government, who were on the Back Bench. It was always my feeling that respect must be shown to them. I am not complaining I am just making comments as I go through. The press was lucky enough on 7 May to have a press briefing on the Budget and its documents before we had the honour. A very educational job was done here for us five days later on the 12th. It is not for me to decide at this time who and when learns about the Budget and the new process that we are now going through. That is life and it goes on.

It was good to see in that press statement it said that: “Financial Secretary, Mr. George McCarthy, had a vision in 1998 for this innovative budget and today is a landmark day for him.”

We all take our hats off to the Financial Secretary and I am a person who believes in giving credit where credit is due. We all know, and the Hansard of this House will reflect as was indicated this morning by the Minister of Education that this first concept started with him and the present Minister of Health back in 1995 when they brought a Motion.

I was in Executive Council (Cabinet, as it is called today) when this idea was put forward and the Honourable Leader of the Opposition today, Mr. Kurt Tibbetts, along with the Financial Secretary, made the trip to New Zealand. Once we understood the benefits that could be reaped from this we agreed with it and it is good to see that it has now come to fruition. As a matter of fact some of the people who are now touting it so loudly were not in the Government at that time and I am pleased that the support was given. We know you cannot get the fruit until you plant the seed. The seed was planted. It is good to see that a few years later it has finally come to fruition.

The Honourable Third Official Member said in his delivery on Friday May 7th that this Budget has been prepared in full compliance with the requirements of the Public Management and Finance Law 2003 and the first ever budget prepared using accrual rather than cash accounting. That is exactly what has happened and I must take my hat off to the perseverance that not only he but the entire legislature, including the Members who were elected in 2000, continued with and made sure it came to fruition.

He mentioned that as a result of accrual accounting a 2.5 per cent cost of living adjustment for civil servants has also been allowed for in the numbers and that ministries and portfolios funded almost all of this cost of living adjustment. Just to draw to the attention of the listening public—this is something that has been done a number of times in the past and indicates that this is the third budget in a row where expenditure demands have been accommodated within the existing revenue basis. Further down in the document we have preparation to borrow $37 million. Sometimes you wonder—and I am no accountant—but accommodations are made within the budget. Then, as with all governments, money has to be borrowed.

The achievement of an accrual operating surplus is a significant improvement on the operating position of previous years, he says. I wonder how this was measured against previous years when, to my knowledge, there are no figures or documentation or what could have happened if this process had been adopted earlier. But that is all history, it did not happen, we were not ready at that time so we must now go forward.

I come to the area of tourism where it is indicated that arrivals declined by three per cent and one of the reasons given for that was the war in Iraq, yes. The next one that I question is the outbreak of Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS). To the best of my knowledge this was heavily concentrated in the Asian countries. Looking at some of the other Caribbean territories, we see that their tourism has shown some increases. I would think that with Cayman being where we are, that should be one reason why there should have been some increase in tourism.

Yesterday, the Second Elected Member for West Bay commented that certain infrastructure have been put in place to cater to cruise tourism. He indicated that a cruise visitor spends between $50 and $75 on a visit here. A stay over visitor, Mr. Speaker, would probably spend that at Burger King or one of the other fast food chains while staying here from three to 10 days, depending on whether they pay their bills to the hotels, the restaurant, the taxis, rent-a-cars, night clubs, tourist attractions such as Hell, West Bay, Stingray City, tips to the waiter, tips to room maids and busboys, and yes, our very most important asset; Cayman Airways. There are probably billions of dollars invested by the hotels, restaurants, condos, rent-a-cars, to name just a few, and it is my belief that they will not survive if we do not continue to seriously look at the continued decline in stay over passengers. It does not take a genius to show that. It is my belief that these same stay over tourists spend ten to twenty times more than the cruise ship visitors – and a whole lot less congestion as we have seen in George Town on certain days.

I feel like most of us would, if we went to a city or a destination literally having to turn sideways to walk down the streets, as is happening now in George Town. It does not leave a good taste in that visitor's mouth and when he goes back I am sure he will tell his friends and others that, yes, Cayman is a nice, safe place but oh, what a crowd.

I think one of the great selling points that we could have here in the Cayman Islands is the safety factor. We need to be pushing this more because there are not too many places in the world that you can go that have the safety that we have here in Cayman. I am hoping that the powers that be will be looking at this.

The Honourable Third Official Member entitled this Budget Address, "Maintaining the Course with a Responsible Hand at the Tiller." That is true but where is the good ship Cayman going on this course? Is this the course the Cayman people have told the Government they want? Did the Cabinet or the Government discuss with the residents (tracking back over the last three years) if they wanted a party type system of government imposed on them as transpired in the first quarter of this new election that took place back in November 2000 and on that fateful day 8 November 2001?

The people indicated they would like to see certain improvements in their Constitution, Mr. Speaker. As we know much of that had been agreed except for a few points but, without going back extensively to the public, that was changed. Emanating from certain proposals in the draft Constitution 17 single-member constituencies were established. Lo and behold that was changed.

Thousands of people wanted a referendum so they could have input into what they felt should be in their Constitution but that did not happen for whatever reason.

The granting of almost 3000 Caymanian status without any discussion with the public who elected us as their representatives; some of these recipients were here for short periods of time, some had been turned down by Immigration, some had left the Islands. Sadly there are still a number of people who have been here 20/30 years who have not had the benefit of receiving that security of tenure. But that is still an open book.

When we talk about openness and transparency we really cannot consult with the people one out of the four years that we have been elected. We talk about transparency and openness; sadly many of us do not practise it. We bring Bills with very short notice and expect to do all three readings, sometimes in one day.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, there have been significant improvements in the way that we do finance business within the government. Once again I take my hat off to the Honourable Third Elected Member for spearheading this.

Moving on to the area of drugs and crime: As we read in Tuesday's Caymanian Compass a young defendant who was incarcerated (I believe, at Northward Prison) went to court and testified before the Judge saying there is still availability of drugs within Northward Prison. I am asking, Mr. Speaker, where are the drug dogs? We need to stay on top of this.

Mr. Speaker, as I have said to you a number of times, and other colleagues of mine, it is very, very important to deal with international financial issues such as we have done when we had to—the Organisation for Economic and Cooperation and Development (OECD), Financial Action Task Force (FATF), whatever—and I have worked through some of them with the different government entities.

I am saying it again today if we do not deal with drugs and crime in the Cayman Islands the rest of the financial initiatives really will not matter. When you look at some of what has happened in some these districts, George Town, West Bay, East End, Bodden Town, the results . . . We know that most of the inmates at Northward Prison, probably over 60 per cent, are there for drug related offences. Mr. Speaker, it is a sad situation. I remember being in ExCo at that time with the representative for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman when she shared her concerns of things going on in Cayman Brac and it is my belief there is still not relief over there. I am saying that if we do not deal with this cancer “dog eat our supper.”

It was pleasing as I looked at the newspaper this morning and saw four very sharp young ladies who have taken over certain senior management roles at the Health Services Authority.

[Applause]

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: I take my hat off to the Minister of Health and I am sure he was behind seeing that this type of management Ms. Eloise Reid, Ms. Shirlene Henriques, Ms. Lizzette Howell and Cathy Gomez and I would like to offer my congratulations to these very capable ladies and I am glad that they have had this opportunity and I am sure they will make us proud.

I will touch on just a couple of areas and perhaps the Minister of Health, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, will respond. There was a situation that was brought to my attention where a lady who went to a specialist clinic back in November last year had some tests were done and it was not until May of this year she eventually got them, I think. Perhaps he could find out why there are delays like this.

The other area that I would like to look at was, and he will probably have an explanation, the Budget for Cayman Brac. On page 443 of the Purchase Agreement, where in the forecast 2003/4 year there was approximately $3,319,000. The Budget for 2004/5 indicates $2 million. Maybe something has been shifted to another area. I just wonder because it also indicates that the health transactions that would take place would increase from $17,538 to approximately $18,700. I hope there is some explanation.

As I visit the Hospital there are still some concerns of the people who work there and hopefully this will be dealt with. Some of the morale is not as high as I would like to see it but this is what happens in business and I think it needs to be looked at.

I would like to briefly speak about an area on page five of the Policy Statement. I found it quite interesting and for the record, with your permission I would like to clarify where the Honourable Leader of Government Business says, “A month or two before the election the Government will be publishing a Pre-election Economic ... (and Financial) Update. That document will report the state of the economy and the government’s finances as they exist at that time.”

This is the catching part that if the people do not know any better they could be misled or misinformed.

“No government in the history of these Islands has ever provided the voters with information like that during an election campaign.”

Do not let the public believe that this was put in place by the UDP leadership. This is required under the Public Management and Finance Law, section 26. With your permission I would like to read this . . .

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: . . . so that the public listening can know that this is not some fancy thing put in place by the UDP Government, this is something that any government, even after this one, will have to follow.

“26.(1) Subject to subsection (4), not more than forty-two days, nor less than twenty-eight days before the day specified in a writ issued by the Governor under the Elections Law (2000 Revision) as the date for a general election, the Financial Secretary shall gazette a pre-election economic and financial update.

(2) A pre-election economic and financial update shall include-

- (a) economic forecasts for the current financial year and for the next two financial years, which shall contain the information set out in Schedule 1;
- (b) forecast financial statements for the entire public sector for the current financial year and for the next two financial years which shall contain the statements and information set out in Schedule 2;
- (c) a statement specifying the date on which those economic forecasts and forecast financial statements were prepared; and
- (d) an explanation of those forecast financial statements accord with the principles of responsible financial management and, if those forecasts depart from those principles, the information required by section 14.”

It goes on Mr. Speaker, but this is what I just want to bring to this House’s attention and to the public in general that this is not some miraculous thing that was created by the United Democratic Party. It is stated in a Law passed by this entire Legislative Assembly and is part of the Public Management and Finance Law. It says that: “this Government has nothing to hide” and “would not do such a thing.”

“We stand by our record. The country can see for itself that the UDP government is a good government.”

As you, Mr. Speaker, and I know people will decide that come November.

As I alluded to earlier, in tourism I found this quite interesting on page seven of the Policy Statement under Tourism. The Honourable Leader indicated: “This has involved a concerted effort to attract greater cruise ship visitors ...”

Later on he talks about adopting the tourism policy study but to me this is a contradiction in itself when the study indicates that one of the difficulties that we seem to be experiencing is the congestion within central George Town and with the many numbers of cruise visitors as opposed to stay over visitors. I look forward to seeing this area addressed; it is extremely important.

Many decisions have been made by this Government without asking and discussing with the owners, the electorate, “Is this the course you want the good ship Cayman to take?” As I said earlier, they will make the final decision. Come November 17th the electorate will decide whether that responsible hand at the tiller has charted the course that the owner of the ship said they – you the people – wanted. “Can we trust you with four more years making your own decisions without first coming to us the people?”

I would like to close by reading a quote from George Washington, the father and first president of the great United States. As I look along and see what is happening in Cayman; the imported culture, the continued increase in liquor licenses, the extension of restaurant and bar hours, it is my belief that when people come to the Cayman Islands it is for the special reason that we are different and no one can convince me that the majority of them come here to drink and party.

I hope and trust as I read what George Washington said that we as legislators will bear in mind “it is impossible to rightly govern [this nation] without [reference to] the Bible.”

People say you should not mix religion and politics. Yes, that is true but when you go back and look at history all of the great nations of the world from Babylon on down, the day that they turn their backs on their Maker was the day that those countries started to crumble from within.

As we look at what is happening in the great United States; the turmoil that is going on—you cannot read a Bible in the public classrooms. They will not allow judges to post the Ten Commandments in certain areas. Look at the murder rate. Look at the devious and evil things that have happened in that once powerful country. I just hope that we can learn from history as we go forward. No, you do not have to go to church here every day and stand up with your Bible but it is my firm belief that we need to be extremely careful on the course we are treading and where we are going. Let us not forget where we came from – the belief that our ancestors have made these Islands the most wonderful nation in the world, rising to prosperity that is second to none. This can disappear overnight if we do not do the right thing. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business and Minister for Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I always get somewhat of a kick out of watching when the Speaker calls for someone to speak and everyone gets “turnitis”; they are turning to the next one to see who is going to get up because the situation is such that when one speaks the next one gets to come behind and criticise and maybe even say things that you cannot reply to. Mr. Speaker, that is nothing new and I have been around this Legislative Assembly for a number of years and I do not think it will change too much as time goes by. However, be that as it may, each thing has its own special characteristics and so does the Legislative Assembly.

I rise to speak to the Budget 2004/5 laid in this Honourable House which will take effect once it has been voted on by the majority of the House and I expect that will be in another few days. Mr. Speaker, we have come from a situation of doing things in a certain way to a modern change in the way we do our public accounting in the Cayman Islands. This accounting, I am told by people who are accountants and by people who know, is the type of accounting that any accountant out there in the private sector could take these accounts now and look at them and see exactly what has been happening in Government, which they could not necessarily have done in the old cash accounting system.

When the proposal first came to the Legislative Assembly to make a change in the accounting way back in 1995, Mr. Roy Bodden and I, (who were members at the time) brought the Motion asking for it. For the historical records and to see how ignorant and dismal things were then in the way of thinking, people should read the Hansard of this Honourable House and read. In it they will see that every stupid remark that could have been made, about independence for one thing, was made by the people who were then on the government side. Those days if you said the word “independent” it was treated somewhat as a crime and it was an old bogey man that the Government of the day used repeatedly to try to frighten the people of this country who really were not informed the way they are now about our constitutional status and indeed where we are and where we should be.

At that time (again, just for the records) the House was made up of the following Members:

Honourable James M. Ryan

Honourable Richard H. Coles

Honourable George A. McCarthy
Honourable W. McKeeva Bush
Honourable Thomas C. Jefferson
Honourable John B. McLean
Honourable Anthony S. Eden
Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.
Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks
Mrs. B. Thompson-Murphy
Capt. Mabry S. Kirkconnell
Mrs. Edna Moyle
Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Mr. Gilbert A. McLean
Mr. Roy Bodden
Dr. Stevenson A. Tomlinson
Honourable Truman M. Bodden

Interestingly, Mr. Speaker, when the Division was taken on Private Member's Motion 10/95 the following people voted for it. The Ayes were: Mr. Kurt Tibbetts, Mr. Gilbert A. McLean and Mr. Roy Bodden.

Today we have been able to leave some of the dark ages behind and some of the ignorance of the past about independence where certain people did their best to frighten their fellow citizens with ignorant talk about independence. In fact, it was suggested by a whole slew of the people who spoke on this Motion that for us to adopt any thing like we have now was another way of myself and Minister Bodden trying to get independence for the Cayman Islands. So, it then begs the question that if they were advocating that it took dependent territories . . .

The Speaker: Order.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: . . . to be the ones who had the best accounting systems, where did the accounting systems come from anyway? Was it the five little dots in the Caribbean or was it the industrialised and developed countries of the world? Of course, the latter is the case.

I think it is important to refer to the times then, to the times now, how we got to this particular point in time, who the players were and what happened in those times. Mr. Speaker, you know as I know that the Budget is now contained in four new huge volumes. The details in there are enough to satisfy even those who are most thirsty for detail. Government's accounts are settled now in a way that every single bit of expenditure is shown in a particular way and in the greatest detail. The accounting system which we have been following since last year is the strictest that government has ever followed in all of its history simply because of the type of system that it is. There is no such thing as padding a budget any more. That used to happen on the cash system. Everything now is in great detail.

One must compliment the people who worked with this: the people in the Treasury Department and certainly the budget management, Mr. Gough and Mr.

Dale had much to do with it. They really have to be complimented because I know they were working against some of the strictest deadlines, there were certain changes but yet they have come up with these documents which will be scrutinised in greater detail in the Finance Committee.

The point that was made back in 1995 is the point that we can make today. No longer can people, including those who were members of the House back in 1995 who did not vote for it, get up and say, "These are not the Government's accounts, here is my accounting system; these are what the accounts of the country really are." These are the accounts of the country. The Cayman Islands are better off now for having this system which brought about this particular type of accounting so that all of those arguments in effect, have been killed and laid to rest.

The Opposition or anyone else might criticise that this Government is not giving the right priorities to areas that we think should have priority but they cannot go now, as was done in the past, to get the Accountant General and so on, to sign inter-office memos about something that they publish in their manifestos in an attempt to show that what came out was wrong from what the Government accounting officials were saying.

There has been a major change. Mr. Speaker, I am glad to know that I played a part in it and that today this is the way we now account for the people's money and that politically we are better off that we can, in an election year, have accounts where the old argument of how much was in the Treasury and how much was not there is laid to rest by this system. Of course, that does not stop anyone from criticising where the priorities are in it.

I would only wish to speak to certain areas of my responsibility in this particular Budget because it will be gone into great detail in the Finance Committee. However, to comment on it now, I think, is in order.

Let me take, for example, the matter of roads. For the Opposition and the Leader of the Opposition to say that nothing has been done with the roads infrastructure, he is absolutely stifling his conscience or telling an untruth. Mr. Speaker, before you took the Chair of this Honourable House, you were the Minister for Works and there was considerable road work done during the approximately two years that you were there. And I say without flattery to you that I can truthfully say that you accomplished much in the area of capital development in this country, including roads.

I can also assure you and this Honourable House that for the past six or seven months road works have become my responsibility; considerable road maintenance and improvement has also continued and is taking place. What the Opposition never seems to get around to saying to the public on a whole is that, everything costs money and money is extremely limited.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, just one second. I would ask any Member discussing within the Chambers to please keep it as low as possible. It is a small room and it is carrying right across and disrupting the Minister speaking. So, please keep the discussion as low as possible. Thank you.

Please continue, Honourable Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Finding a way forward with roads is a big challenge. We all know that over the years, government always took a portion of the money that came in as revenue normally about $3.7 million to $4 million to use for road maintenance, development and the like. Obviously, with the increase in the number of vehicles using the roads this can no longer be an acceptable way of dealing with things.

Many years ago when my colleague, the now Minister for Education and I, were Back Benchers, we brought a motion to the Legislative Assembly asking that Government set up a particular fund that would receive the revenue which came in from motor vehicle licensing, motor vehicle oils, fuels and so on, and that it be put into this particular fund which would be specifically earmarked for the development, maintenance and so on of roads. That has to be almost ten years ago.

At long last, and I wish the Opposition to be aware of this, that there is in the works a National Roads Authority. In fact, a white paper has been produced where that dream is actually taking shape and will be before this House, God willing, this Meeting. So, that is there.

One of the challenges of the Government was if you break out certain revenue that went to central Government how do you replace it? It has taken months of work by the Financial Secretary, the Deputy Financial Secretary, the Financial Secretary designate, the Budget office, and so on, to try to craft a way by percentage; how much could be taken from one area and how much could be taken from the next until we could accumulate sufficient money to be able to even start what is obviously a sensible thing to do. Those are the realities of government that the Opposition tends to forget, Mr. Speaker.

Once the National Roads Authority is in place, given sufficient time, the Government will be in a position in any given year to set policies and say to the Roads Authority, "Here is what we would like you to accomplish."

Of course, if what the Government wants accomplished falls short of what the Roads Authority has to spend then central Government will have to give it the extra money to accomplish the work to be done. The thing about it is that there will be clear areas going straight into a fund for roads in this country and that has to be a better situation than it has been over all the years that we have known it.

It will not be purely a matter of it being a subject for Grand Cayman; it will also apply to Cayman

Brac and Little Cayman. What we are talking about is management just like the new accounting system. What we are talking about is a new way of managing the money and accomplishing the work.

While I am aware every day of my life of the gridlock on Cayman's roads something is being done about it in a most innovative way and a way that past Governments did not do anything about. Therefore, I can report that this is one more thing that has been addressed by the present government, the United Democratic Party Government.

There is one thing that is very much a characteristic of the Cayman Islands, the country of which I was born and love, and that is we love to criticise. We do not necessarily like to sit down and count our blessings. There are a few countries on the earth—I do a fair amount of reading and research and listening and watching television—that are as well off economically as the Cayman Islands. It did not happen by an accident, it took building over the years. While I have been critical of Governments prior to this I acknowledge that they have played a part in it. While I criticise and even disagree to some proposals, even within the Government of which I am a part—I have my views as to where we should spend the larger sums of money or whatever and perhaps the methodology—I try to admit that we are so very fortunate in these Cayman Islands; the standard of living that we have, the roads that we drive on.

One of the things that the Leader of the Opposition spoke about was education. We can have an education system which is purely learning theory about something. It is like mathematics, you can have pure math and you have applied math. We can have education where someone gets a Masters or a Ph.D. and be full of theory and who does not use that theory to interpret things in life. We have another difficulty in our country where our people, in some ways, are encouraged by political acts over the years to believe that everything is free and that the Government has all the money in the world and all they have to complain or ask and their needs will be satisfied. Nothing could be further from the truth. Mr. Speaker, we need to start a kind of education to get across to the people of this country—and I must say some residents who come live here from other countries, tend to catch our malady real fast, they believe it is all free—that there is nothing that is free. To have roads to drive on it is absolutely necessary that we pay our vehicle fees. The charges that Government makes are so that the Government can find money to satisfy the wants and needs and the requirements of the public at large. If we get across that particular education then that will definitely flesh out and fill out our whole education process, which I think is very high.

The Leader of the Opposition also spoke about the number of tourists coming by boat. Any sensible person must acknowledge that there is something called saturation and it is possible that we can have too much of anything, including visitor arrivals at one time. However, it is not a perfect world and we cannot perfectly adjust the flow because when doing so the flow might go elsewhere. We have to try to accommodate that flow as is much as is possible. Going back to the idea of gaining revenue we have to look at it in terms of it bringing revenue to the country to the Government so the Government in turn can deal with the roads, schools, hospitals, pay the salaries. That is the way it is. Mr. Speaker, I am afraid that we have a long way to go in getting that point across but we must work in getting that done otherwise we are going to miss a clear understanding of the reality of life as we have here.

One cannot cast aside the fact that other countries of the world—I think some of the dependent countries—do have taxes of whatever level in whatever areas of a different kind than we have in Cayman. Everything is in the red. If the goods are not coming in, if we do not import a whole lot of goods here then our revenue falls instantly because the majority of it comes from customs duties. We have sources from the financial sector of course, and in comparison to other countries we know the amount is small for in other jurisdictions these institutions are highly taxed and that is why they are coming here to get away from it. It is always a balancing and a juggling act. We need to get this across to our people in a major way in these Islands.

One of the things that I believe we need to look at in this country as well—and we are talking money, we are talking—

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, if you are moving to another part of your debate perhaps this might be a convenient time for the lunch break.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Mr. Speaker, that is fine.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: Before taking the break I would just like for the records to reflect that I was told yesterday by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition that he would be absent today.

Honourable Ministers and Members, I propose to take the lunch break at this time and return at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.55 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.48 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Minister for Health continuing.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we took the suspension I was about to mention another area where I think we could wisely help ourselves as a people—certainly I believe the commercial sector would be better off if we paid more attention to it—and that is the area of pricing of goods and services.

I think that the Cayman Islands as a country would be better off not to allow ourselves to be consumed by greed; we do our best to sell an item that might be worth $10 for $25. A basic principle of good business is volume and it seems to be lost on a number of people in the commercial world in the Cayman Islands.

We can hardly continue to attempt to convince people to buy in Cayman and not go to Miami when the price of the goods is so much excessively higher than what one can pay if one should buy a ticket, pay for accommodation and everything else compared to what one could go to Miami for and buy these goods.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, you know like I do that in the majority of instances our people are tending more and more to look on Miami as a district of the Cayman Islands when it comes to going shopping. I think in terms of the way it affects the country on a whole, the way it affects the Government in purchasing goods and services from the private sector here in Cayman to build buildings, fix roads or do whatever, it is a reality that is everyone's business; the business of government and certainly the business of the private sector. Education is such a wide spectrum concept and if we are going to educate as I believe we should, we have to educate to these realities.

And as we are talking about finance and the Government's Budget here today and for the past few days these are things that we need to take into consideration. This, of course, applies to the electricity company and the telephone company.

I must say again when attempts are made by the Opposition to diminish the achievements and the efforts of this United Democratic Party Government they should think back to what has been accomplished in terms of liberalisation of telecommunication services, which you started, Mr. Speaker, in your time as the Minister, and which has been carried on since and indeed, with the new Minister, what we have been able to achieve in negotiating reduction in prices for electricity in these Islands. Thus, the Opposition has an extremely difficult task to disprove the proven and I submit that a very strong record of accomplishment and action stands on behalf of the present Government.

As I speak about the Government I observe that those who would be detractors or those who would blame are following a particular strategy; they are attempting to point to certain individuals because to point to the whole is too big a picture and it is too plain. Therefore, the strategy is that when they say "The UDP Government "they attempt to direct it at an individual or two as the case may be, and so detract the minds of the public from the overall reality.

There are two parties here, Mr. Speaker, although the Opposition Members tend to call themselves a movement they have moved into the position of a party. I am one who has always subscribed to the concept that the best way to accomplish and achieve in government is under the Westminster system. You take a dozen different views and bring them together, agree on a particular course of action and follow it. Thus, I have the opportunity, being in the position I am now, to take forward any course of action to accomplish a particular objective. I do it first for and on behalf of the people of the Cayman Islands and certainly I do it on behalf of the Government of which I am a part. When we put all the pieces together that is what this Government is talking about and what we take credit for, knowing that we have accomplished certain things in this country in the past 27 or 30 months.

I would like to mention a few of the subject areas that I am presently responsible for Mr. Speaker, and one is the area of Aviation. The transition from one entity into two is an ongoing process. Again, it is a question of money as to how well it succeeds. Fortunately, the entity as it presently exists, and will until it changes on 1 July, has been quite successful in its efforts of doing business for and on behalf of central Government.

The present entity will stay in its mode as the regulatory entity for Aviation in the country. With us raising the standards higher, so to speak, there will be the opportunity of more employment. Again, it is a question of cost. We are in a process, which comes out in this Budget as well, of having to cost each item and identify them now in the Budget for that. That is clearly set out.

The other part of the Aviation operation is one that deals with the operation of the Airport and all that goes with it; the rental of spaces, the landing and parking fees, et cetera. To be run to the level it should be, now that it is becoming a new entity all in itself, there is an opportunity there of employment as well.

It is set out in the Budget what services will be paid for and what it expects to get in revenue. For example, the Airports Authority that will deal with the operational side will now buy services from the fire services. It is simply no longer the case, as we have always known it for the past 30-plus years, that there is a fire service and their budget is a particular amount. They will sell their services and the two inter-agencies will pay each other for the services it receives. So, again one will clearly identify where costs are going and where revenue is coming from.

In that regard, to answer the question raised by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, the reason for the reduction from $3 million plus in the Budget for Cayman Brac to $2 million is easily explained because that amount goes to actually run the plant (the hospital and its ancillary business and operations in the Brac and Little Cayman). The extra million went to pay for the medical care for civil servants, veterans, and seamen and so on and that is no longer shown under that particular heading because it is now being paid through the Cayman Islands National Insurance Company (CINICO). That is the reason for the shift in that but you can certainly see how it would show up in the Budget in another area. That again is a major change in managing our finances and it has to be emphasised that never before has any government ever been called upon to "toe the financial line" like this Government does under this system.

I take the credit for being the one in the forefront and spearheading whatever has been accomplished in the area of Aviation, but I am doing so on behalf of the people of this country and the Government of which I am part as Minister.

The Health Services Authority is the toughest job I have ever undertaken in my whole life and professional career in attempting to build on what was there before and to correct problems which existed before. It has challenged every thought, view, every bit of skill or knowledge I have in management and it has tested my nerves and my patience, to say the very least.

I want to make the point to all concerned in this Legislative Assembly that I did not create the Health Services, it was created a two generations or so ago and in more recent times in the past two or three decades. I did not create the problems in it; I simply had to deal with what problems I found. Unlike what the Member for East End says, I am not crying, I am talking the hard cold facts.

The thing that I am amazed about is that those who criticise, expect a perfect world of health services and such a thing does not exist in the world. If someone goes to the Hospital and does not get seen in a minute and a half it is a major problem. If they go to Miami they might sit in a corridor and wait for three hours and it feels good, I guess, because you do not get any complaints about that. However, let the slightest thing go wrong, as is perceived by the person in a Cayman Islands hospital, and it is a national disaster.

The Cayman Islands Hospital is not a perfect place, it is not perfectly run. There are difficulties and there are problems in every single area of it but what the objective is to minimise that as far as possible. Criticism came from the Opposition and, in particular, the Member for East End over the months from last year that I was taking away the jobs of Caymanians and they were losing their jobs. I understand that coming from him as a Member of the Opposition, that is the right type of song to sing but if he does that for the purposes of political gain, which is not wrong, it is the game that he is in, but if he understands I would like him and everyone in the country to understand that right-sizing of an organisation is necessary in certain instances if one is to cut away the surplus costs because of over-staffing and so on.

Does the Hospital now need staff in certain areas? It does. There are about two or three doctors being recruited now and I hear of instances where it is thought that there needs to be an increase in nursing in certain areas, and this has to be done. However, before one can try to fix it the Hospital management has to work it to see whether it works correctly or not and make such adjustments.

At one time, the only thing about the Hospital that mattered was the fact that an individual that was hired as a Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and the only thing that mattered was how much he was making. Mr. Speaker, I hope that anyone who works gets a certain salary and he was paid a considerable salary but that was done on the basis that he brought certain skills, experience and qualification and connections and everything from two of the most outstanding medical institutions in Florida, our second home. The Board decided that his person could help us move things forward. As it turned out it did not quite work out that way and the individual left but now there are four Caymanians who have been promoted by the Board into positions of management. Now I want my friend up there from the East End district to go and criticise them. Let him do that now.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Four women!

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Four women! Very qualified and experienced. They have my support, they have the support of the Board and I believe they will do a good job because they have an interest in it; they have something to lose. If they do a good job the world will love them, if they do not the world will criticise them, although they will be criticized anyway, that is for sure. However, I want to tell my good friend, the Elected Member for East End, that I am still not going to tell him what their salaries are either because it is not in the best interests of the country.

The Hospital services have been improved, in that we have put in the Hospital—and it has cost money—close to about US$5 million, but it has made a tremendous difference. There are still a few bugs here and there but it has reached the point where we are seeing the result of having it. It was the only way that we could fast-track to getting somewhere for the Hospital to function as it should financially. Its finances are improving and I certainly hope that—and I would love to believe that within the coming financial year—it could break even or come up with a small surplus. That is the objective that it is working toward. Whether it will be achieved is left to be seen. It all comes down to finances. The arrangement between Central Government and the Health Services Authority is "Go out and you must try to get paid for the services that you deliver. If you have tried your best and you fall short in the overall then the subsidy which is there will be paid to you to top it up so that you can meet your financial commitments". There are ongoing efforts to catch up with bills to know what the situation is overall and it is an everyday process. I try to kid no one where that is concerned.

The difference between me and Members of the Opposition is that I do not believe in sitting and looking at a situation that needs to be fixed and not attempting to fix it. If fixing it means that you have a piece of dead wood that needs to be removed I believe proper management dictates that you get rid of that dead wood and bring in a piece of live wood and you give them the job and let them get on with the job. I do not have any problems at all in supporting that kind of management because it is dynamic. The other kind is didactic which some of my friends just like to talk, that is what didactic is all about.

Another area that has been necessary to be dealt with overall is health insurance. The Cayman Islands is one of a few countries in the world that health insurance is mandatory and, that being mandatory, the state is not providing the service. The Law as it was and as it is makes it mandatory and it is left strictly to the providers of health insurance in effect to do as they see fit. While it was made mandatory it was not made mandatory that the insurance companies had to insure everybody. In fact, there are clauses that they can absolutely be excluded and they have been doing that right, left and centre, hundreds of people, for all sorts of frivolous reasons, as far as I am concerned. I have been trying to grapple with it now for two years and the only thing that I saw to do was to provide an alternative.

I think what the insurance companies wanted me to do was to try to strong-arm them and tell them they must insure this person, that person, whom they had chosen to exclude. They would have had a real field day with me but I did not do that, Mr. Speaker. I looked around and realised that the Cayman Islands is the place of registration for hundreds of captive insurance companies and companies on the whole and certainly the Cayman Islands Government is not precluded from forming a company of its own. Therefore, the Cayman Islands National Health Insurance Company (CINICO) was formed, under the same strict and stringent rules as everyone else, having to meet all the criteria like every other company.

Thus, the people for the first time, since being forced to have insurance now have an alternative. Now, the health insurance companies that have had it all their way are really lamenting and screaming and hollering and saying it is not sustainable, and what I did, and Government is infringing their rights to make their money, exclude who they want and leave that cost to government. Well, they are out of luck because there is an alternative now. The poor, who could not afford the high premiums, can get insurance. Those who are sixty years old, that they say "It is time for you to die now, off to the side", can get insurance. Those who were excluded for frivolous reasons can get insurance. Mr. Speaker, it is very clear—and I hope the insurance companies catch the idea—that the more clientele they create the bigger CINICO will grow.

I go back to that old concept of volume. Perhaps the premium that CINICO is charging is low but if you get enough people into it then the cash flow becomes a thing of beauty. I think the insurance companies are aware of this shift now and they would like to see it go away but it is not going away.

Right now—and this relates to the Budget—what has happened is that the $22 or $24 million that the Ministry of Health used to handle has now been taken and divided up among all the civil servants, be it 3000, 4000, or 5000, whatever. Each department pays the health insurance company (CINICO) an amount as a premium. Therefore, when those folks out there, who would have the world believe otherwise, say that nothing is being paid and there is no cash flow to CINICO they have $22 million to $24 million and that is the true thing that is really rattling their chains because the Government must use our health facility and our doctors on staff first, which is only right. We are handling the people's money. Government is subsidising it and that is what the great holler is about right now. We should not for one minute believe that there is no money going into CINICO; try $22 million to $24 million.

There is an added benefit, Mr. Speaker; having in place a computerised system specially built for health care management. The hospital bills are no longer sent to the Ministry, where we added the columns up and got the right amount, there was no question of paying anything without reconciling it. We now have a third party administrator whose business is to do this type of business and look at every single bill to see whether a procedure was necessary or not. Mr. Speaker, they will even say to the Health Services Authority (HSA) "Look, you did a procedure here that was not necessary and we are not paying you for it" so the Health Services Authority will have to find it elsewhere.

I also want to make the point that private doctors are not precluded from giving medical service to a civil servant or a covered person but they must first go via the HSA system. If a doctor there says "We cannot deal with you here, you need to go a specialist" the money that would be charged by that doctor in the private sector is paid for by CINICO. So, there have been major improvements. While I have been working point on it, it is attributed to the work of this Government at this time which I hope will go on for a long time ahead and there will be improvements to what is in place and that it will grow better and better all the time.

The Leader of the Opposition spoke about Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and he said he did not want to see them left out. Well, they have been getting quite a bit of attention in the Budget before us, and that will be seen as it is examined over the days ahead.

However, from my own perspective, while I had the subject assigned to me; that of District Administration, I can cite a couple of things that happen in the first place that you see when you get to the Brac and that is at the Gerald Smith Airport. A new conveyor belt that has been needed forever has been improved. There is much more space and it easier for visitors and local passengers coming into the Island. There has also been an extension to the east side of that terminal where a whole baggage screening machine can be put into. From about 1980 or whenever it was completed there has been a huge open space upstairs over the terminal building that has now been turned into offices.

Road work has been ongoing there since the subject was given to the Minister of Planning who is a representative for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. This is an ongoing exercise.

Between both of us, for the first time in history, the Little Cayman Airport has been chipped and sprayed and we are looking at extending it another five hundred feet which will cover the 2000 feet. I am told that they are working on it right now. For the first time in history of the Little Cayman Airport there has been a complete study done of wind direction, et cetera. We have located property on Crown land and surveyors have completed two-thirds of the survey on it. Little Cayman will have a designated area and Airport to the level of its needs. If I am around and have continued association with it I am not going to get into some of these $10 million grandiose things like I see things develop into. It will get all that it needs both in the facility and the actual runway because we must realistic and stay within a budget.

All of these are accomplishments of this Government and so having mentioned these things it certainly must flex the minds of my good friends on the other side, who wish to replace the present management, to be able to convince people that we have done nothing.

No doubt Mr. Speaker, I will be grilled in all the areas related to the subjects that I am responsible for during the Finance Committee and I will be happy to answer all questions, except the individual salaries of the doctors and nurses and the managers at the Hospital. The details that I spoke about now I thought were necessary. There is but one other which comes to mind, as I have not prepared a written speech, that I would like to mention before I take my seat.

In the separation of the Airports Authority from the Civil Aviation Authority or the regulatory from the operational it is necessary to hire a Chief Executive Officer of the Cayman Islands Airports Authority. When I had that Bill before the House I was distinctly threatened that if a particular individual was not allowed ascension I would have serious answers to give and what would be done and so on because of that. I would just like to let the Honourable House know that we have hired a consultant who has been working with us for the past several months; a person of unquestionable experience, ability and qualifications.

The consultant has recommended that we should advertise only the post of the CEO at this time and attempt to hire a CEO because there are about five or six management posts within the operation now which will meet the requirements of the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO). However, it is necessary to get a CEO who could become involved with the interviewing when these posts are advertised rather than just advertise a slew of posts at one time. I thought it made sense. I am not and will not be involved in any selection. The post of CEO has been advertised both within the Aviation department locally and it is also being advertised in one of the biggest international aviation magazines and there has been a large number of applicants, some of them with incredible experience and qualifications from different parts of the world. I do not know why they are particularly interested; maybe they feel like they would like to come to a pleasant society, sea, sand, sun and so on.

The present Chief Executive Officer of the entity wrote to the department inviting all members of the department who wished to apply to do so and some did. They have all been included in the short listing. A four-person panel is set up that will be interviewing all the applicants on a points basis. If they are handsome or beautiful so much for that, if they walk on two legs so much for that, if they have worked for ten years so much for that, and at the end it will be all added up and we will see how it has been weighted. Why I did that Mr. Speaker is because when I get questions here I would like to have that in my hand so I can invite all Honourable Members to take a look at it and re-do it if they will. That is the way it is proceeding.

My good friend, the Second Elected Member for George Town said he wanted to know about the salaries there. Well, I do not know about the salaries but they have to be a lot higher than what they are paid right now. I believe in Government keeping salaries at a level that is reasonable, that can be justified. I do not think the Government can try to attain the level as the private sector does for the simple reason there are less people employed in any given corporation than in Government in the Cayman Islands. We are talking thousands. So, if we increase everyone's salaries we are talking tens of millions. However, it certainly would need to be increased and I hope that the consultants come up with a salary that is realistic.

When you say "realistic", I have had to argue the point quite a bit in recent times that the minute you take a department and put it into an authority you pay them more salaries. Well, there is one fundamental reason why. When a person is a civil servant he has what is forever called the security of tenure. Health care is free, vision is free, dental is free; everything is free, just that alone. Pension is free. When they cross the line and they go into the wall of reality in the private sector those things do not go with them. In each authority that I have association with it stops, what you earned up to this point is frozen and kept for you until such times as you will collect when you have reached the appropriate age. However, from hereon you get into the world of reality where there is no more security of tenure; where you are called upon to pay some of your pension, where you are called upon to pay for your health care or can be done, and they go under the Employment Law. So, that is where the difference comes in.

In the private sector jobs are carefully evaluated. If you are at the top of a big corporation like the airport, that is an international airport and we have a number one rating throughout the world (class A rating), you are in charge of all the planes and all the lives coming in there and all the security and all of the other things that go with it you pay those persons right. Therefore, I hope the CEO will be offered an attractive salary. Indeed, I will certainly recommend that the salary of the present person who is in charge be reviewed because that individual will also be entering into another brave new world and should be compensated accordingly. That is why out in the big world of reality you do your job or you get fired. No one cries, you do not apply to any public service commission or having to be warned six times and so forth; you are fired. One of the most fundamental reasons why salaries change is because they no longer have these goodies on this side, they move into a world of greater uncertainty and more demand on them. I simply make that point as I think it is very necessary. I feel and smell that something is occurring in that direction and I just want all of those with interest to hear and know that I am waiting to answer their questions.

There are other things that I could speak about Mr. Speaker but I will not do so at this time and I thank you and Honourable Members for allowing me your attention. I thank you very much.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, may I call on the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, just on a quick point. I certainly would like to make a contribution to this very important Budget. However, I am catching a flight to my constituency which will extremely limit the time that I will have to contribute. I am simply rising at this point to ask if there is any concession that could be made in that regard because I certainly would like to speak but I have to catch a 4.40 flight.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I think the request that has been made by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman seems to be a reasonable one. I am really in your hands in this matter.

I believe the Honourable Minister for Community Services would like to speak at this time.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, this is not the most comfortable venue nor is it the most appropriate time for me to begin what might be considered to be a long defence of the Government's budgetary proposals for 2004/5.

I was reflecting on what is meant by a national budget. What is really being presented? Why is it being presented? My understanding is that I, as a Member of the Government, have decided upon certain policies that are supported by the Government with regard to social development and that the Government proposes to implement these policies by seeking the financial resources to make this task possible.

So I am here today as a Member of the Government to defend the Budget that has been brought to this Honourable House to get this Honourable House's approval for the fiscal year 2004/2005.

Because I am the Minister responsible for Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs which is responsible for the strategies and methods to enhance positive social change and address some of the negative social factors will concentrate on this particular part of the Budget and leave the other Ministers to presenting and defending their particular proposals.

I could have come here—especially that this is an election year, if my Government had been so minded, to be careless, reckless, without prudence in dealing with the fiscal affairs of the country—with a wish list that was massive, especially recognising the potential strength of such a portfolio. It is one of the portfolios that deals with the allocations of limited resources to the general public in the form of providing them with poor relief, financial assistance, school lunches, playing fields, playing equipment, housing and money for repairs. All types of needs that cannot be met by the general public are provided through the agencies involved in the Ministry of Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs.

Therefore, from the point of view of a political platform, this Ministry could have been reckless in saying that to increase this and increase that, to take care of this and take care of that, would in fact cause some persons to believe that that would be looking after the general good in a responsible manner. However, Mr. Speaker, we have learnt through the years, especially by the past governments—governments that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town was involved with—that they left office not having to give the country a strategy for fiscal and social development. They did not have to do a budget before the elections. As a matter of fact the Budget at that particular time went all the way to the end of the year and it would be in the March after the Election that people would know exactly how much money the Government had spent and the financial state of the country and only then could we talk about the fiscal health of the country.

Before going to out to campaign we are allowed to truly know and note the proposed spending of the Government and what the Government intends to accomplish by spending money in this way.

I would like to remind the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town that when the Leader of the Opposition, who he now proposes to be the future Leader of the next Government, took over in November 2000 he started to make statements about the fact that the Cayman Islands Government was left without money. That there was no money for him to begin as a new Government, decide on new policies and new strategies for the country.

We can remember in 2000 the way in which asphalt was put on the roads in a hurried manner. We can remember the conduct of the last Government, the Government that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town was a part of. We can remember that the transparency that we are able to offer here today did not exist then, otherwise the Leader of the Opposition would not have been blinded by what he would have discovered when he went to the Glass House and when he brought his Budget in March of 2001. When he went out and borrowed all the money even to pay for recurrent expenditure, he was blind. He was taking over the ship without all of the documentation that he needed.

Whichever government we have in 2004, they will have the advantage of this new system that is a part of our Law that compels all of us to manage the fiscal affairs of this country in a particular manner. That is an advantage that most of them would want to take credit for also but still not credit the process that we have arrived at.

"I was the Government", says he "that was involved in encouraging this." Well, what we have encouraged is what we are dealing with today and although I might not have been involved in this, in the very end I see the benefit of the results.

I can truly say to the country that this Budget is the most transparent of all the budgets. All that we have to do is look at the documentation, explanation and the contracts in the explanation to recognise how transparent. Back then it was always a row about the fiscal affairs of the country and whether or not the country had or did not have money and who was more prudent. We understand now that prudence had nothing to do with age and conservative background; it has to do with intelligence and reason. The United Democratic Party Government is not old or conservative but it is new and reasonable and it has used reason and said that this is the best system possible which we have accepted. It gives every citizen in our country that will take the time to examine exactly why the Government is spending the money, the opportunity to know so.

What is the criticism of the Opposition then? The criticism of the Opposition is that the country has more social needs, the Government has not dealt with all the social needs, the country has young people that are in need, the country has people that are without employment and they are right. When I was elected in 1996 I knew from the very beginning that there were so many things that had to change and I know that I have not done that much that all of the things that I wish could happen, have happened. I know that there are still critiques that I must make but I do not make them on the performance of the United Democratic Party but I make it of the society as a whole, that we have not through the ages been able to collectively deal and manage certain issues to the point where we can say that we live in a utopia or a totally harmonious society. There are challenges that continue to present themselves to us. There are challenges that we have tried to get a grip on but which have evaded us simply because they are too deeply rooted, simply because of the performances of previous Governments that had no interest in the social development of the people of these Islands.

When I hear the Opposition trying to pretend that they represent the common folk in these Islands I have to say that is because they probably cannot find a position. At the end of the day, I recognise that through the Leader of Government Business, the Honourable McKeeva Bush and his Cabinet and Back Benchers, we do not only represent the working people, we represent the business people, and we represent all the people. The United Democratic Party motto is "For all the people".

We recognise that without finances we would not be able to allocate to sports development what we are allocating to sports development. When we take an association one by one, I could read through all of the associations, all of the contracts, all of the donations that the Government will give to allow the associations to carry out their strategic objectives in using sports as a tool of social and intellectual development.

All these things the Government does as a result of raising revenue. We have a system of indirect taxation, we raise revenue because of economic activity and the higher the activity the more the revenue, the lower the activity the lower the revenue. Who creates the economic activity if it is not the business class?

So what would people like me, who has to come in to try to be the fixer at this very late stage in this development, do without the economic class generating the business activity to generate the indirect revenue which I am now dependent upon to do housing, substance abuse issues, to improve the prisons, to have the crisis centre to protect battered women, to give partial community development scholarships to people? What would I do without the business class?

The Opposition must say, therefore, how they would be able to improve the revenues of this country, to do more than the United Democratic Party is proposing to so through this Budget. The Opposition must say how they would be able to increase funding within my Ministry in order to do more things for more people. They must tell us how; where they will get these funds from.

Will they increase the stimulus for economic activities to generate more indirect revenues or will they tax? Will they tax the rich, will they tax the poor or will they tax them all? Will they increase taxes, will they be like past governments that have spent all the money during election time and as soon as it comes to March, and the first Budget after the election, they introduce taxes? Where will the money come from for their ambitious programmes, where?

I would not venture to say that we have done as much as we should do. I am only saying we are doing as much as we can do without taxing the financial resources of the people.

I think that we have an agreement with the general public on this point. I think that the general public knows that they want more playing fields, that they want more coaches, that they want more homes; that they want more financial assistance; they want more. They want more, and we think that they could use more.

The question is where should the resources come from? If this is not a good Budget because it does not deal with all the incredible whims and fancies of the Opposition, then the Opposition must say where they would finance a different Budget from. They have no answer to that, because if they had then All-to-All and the Kingdom-of-Everything (where everything is nothing and nothing is everything) would have dealt with it when he read his very nicely prepared speech.

I am saying that I do not have to come here and argue what I am doing in sports. The sporting community in this country knows what I am doing in sports. It is not because of spending more money, because we cannot afford more money. It is because I become more involved and I actually assist in the improvement of dialogue, vision and co-operation; I assist the process by the way in which we employ coaches.

At the end of the day, our sports programme, over the last three years, has been assisted in development. I know that there are a lot of people in the sporting community ... not all of them, of course, because some of them are members of the Opposition and they are not going to give me credit for anything I have done in sports.

As a matter of fact, they are out there talking about how I have de-stabilised everything, but that is the way they will talk because they are Opposition (opposition means they are "opposed to" anything the Government does). That is why, Mr. Speaker, it is not a nice job to be a member of the Opposition. I am happy that I am not a member of the Opposition, at this particular point, because to oppose without having solutions is not a comforting thing, not even to those persons who are saying it because at the end of the day they are going to think, "Well, I just said that to that person but maybe that person is going to have enough sense to know that what I am saying, I am saying just because anybody can say anything.”

Being a member of the Opposition is not easy, especially when you are opposing people who are on the right track, who are doing creative things, who are bringing new ideas, who are taking the same money and getting more of a result out of their actions.

I know that what I have done in sports—in terms of my involvement, showing my concern, care and interest, encouraging coaches, the Department of Youth and Sports to be more active and more aware—has made an impression on people.

We just had countdown to GOAL 2004 at the Harquail just a few nights ago. We did not have any members of the Opposition there, because members of the Opposition do not come to anything I do. They did not come to Eagle House when we opened that either.

However, I am saying that if they had turned up at the Harquail they would have seen that it was not the first time that we had done these programmes. They would have seen the interest. They would have seen the way it has developed in terms of the interchange between people and ideas so that everybody really knows at the end of the day we are not competing. We have to co-operate and collaborate. We have to find ways of using the limited resources which the community has in such a way that it satisfies all of us; in such a way that we are not divided into expatriates and Caymanians, women and men but in a way where we come together collectively to know that “Yes, there are limitations on the amount of resources we have in this society and we have to come together to use them more effectively and more efficiently rather than to ask for more and more and waste more and then indebt the country and the future generations”, which had been the pattern established in this country for so long.

I do not know how the Opposition proposes to do many of the things that they propose to do. I know that there are certain things that the Opposition seems to want to mock me about. However, I am a candidate in the next election. I will be running with the United Democratic Party. I have said publicly in this country that I have had issues with certain members of the United Democratic Party and I do not have to retract that. I know, Mr. Speaker, that in a new system their personalities will all be different, and I am not the easiest person in the world anyway, a lot of people know that. The fact that I might have issues with someone does not mean I have to divorce. I want to make it clear at this particular point that I do not see the Opposition members as any saviours to this country or to me. Therefore, I am satisfied with being a member of the United Democratic Party and I intend to campaign on that particular level.

I know that people who are going around me understand that one of the things the United Democratic Party has achieved, through my initiative, and embarked upon is an Affordable Housing Initiative.

They continue to ridicule it and make accusations about my involvement in it. They go around to peoples' houses and they say certain things to people about peoples' characters, because they have to devalue that initiative. That initiative has been important to people in this country for a very long time, so they have to devalue it.

That is what an Opposition is like. They devalue even the smallest possibility of somebody on that level to achieve something simply because the Opposition did not put it forward, the Opposition is not control. They make the Government look like it is corrupt and filthy and horrible because they are not in control. The same institutions, the same chairs that they are mocking, so they want to paint the picture of this Government and persons like myself as dark as they can. Why? To discredit us, so that people will believe—that although we have performed in a fantastic manner—we should not return.

The Budget that we bring here today Mr. Speaker, challenges all of their pretences. It says to the people, clearly and fairly, that this Government's stewardship over the past three years is superior to the stewardship during the first year and is superior to the kind of stewardship that that Leader of the first year is offering people over those other years to come.

I am saying this because it is about time we understood that there are certain people in this country who are more talented when it comes to using personality issues. Some of us have to work hard to be recognised. We have to produce things. So, when I produced the Housing programme, which is talked about in this Budget, which we have come to the Government to say give us funding for certain things here ... Mr. Speaker, I will make a separate report to this House on the Affordable Housing Initiative before we close.

I would just like to say with regard to this particular situation; they laugh at us about trying to help the people? If they want to make fun of the way in which I struggle to help, then let me see them do something concrete for the people. I do not want to talk about John Crows on the wall, sitting there. I am saying what the Government proposes to do with this Affordable Housing scheme, what the Financial Secretary has done ... Do you know how the idea started?

The idea started when the Financial Secretary and the Leader of Government Business in discussions with the Caribbean Development Bank found that it would lend the Cayman Islands Development Bank $4 million for affordable housing for the Caymanian people, The maximum [per person/family] would be $70,000. So, here was the amount of $4 million that they were willing to lend us, but we had no product that cost $70,000 or less.

What point was there in having the money when our people could not buy homes for that amount? Perhaps in Barbados and Guyana that amount could have been helpful, but in the Cayman Islands we have no housing product where people can buy for that amount. So we started to think and the Financial Secretary said that if we could find a product, he would let our bank here lend a person and then it would make a request to the bank there and they would send the money back to the Cayman Islands Development Bank.

I thought it would be great if we could get our hands on the $4 million. We could start developing something. Then we thought we could not get our hands on the $4 million because they would only give the money over after you have loaned the money here. As a result of that we were able to find someone who convinced us that they were able to supply us the material for the affordable houses for below $4 million. We went to Cabinet and they agreed we could purchase the material.

The point that I am making, Mr. Speaker, is that we paid $3,116,486 for the material. We then said that we would need to build the houses nevertheless and we decided to employ the persons who had secured the materials for us – we gave them a contract to construct the units and that contract was for $5,628,152.

The Financial Secretary advanced us the money to pay for the materials and to mobilise the contractors and, of course, there were other costs as we went along. However, what happened was we were genuinely of the opinion that if we were able to develop houses for $70,000 or below we could sell them. At least we knew that there would be up to $4 million to sell them from the Caribbean Development Bank.

I must say that I had my own ambitions to see these houses completed as quickly as possible and not everything has worked according to my dreams. I have learnt a lot along the way. I am just trying to say that I am tired of those persons in the Opposition trying to cast aspersions on people with regard to this particular scheme and trying to make it seem as if these houses are not decent enough for people to live in. That is how much I feel that they begrudge our accomplishments and they begrudge the common people.

With all of this negative publicity about these homes we have over 300 applications completed and turned in. We have done numerous interviews. I see the Member for North Side looking in disbelief but soon, because we live in a transparent Government, all the information can be made available to her and her colleagues. We already have over 180 applications for the 63 houses that we will finish in George Town by July.

I am just saying this to say to the general public, Mr. Speaker. We recognised from the very beginning that housing had to be one of the core issues in a new dynamic social management strategy.

I hear them talking about youth and they are talking about youth as if, at this particular point, we define them from 11-21 or if we define them from 9-21; that somehow this is some kind of objective criteria and not a subjective thing. I could say that the youth is as soon as it comes out and has the potential to be a human being and to enter whatever. We are interested in our youngsters, our children. We know that to talk about them in isolation from their families is confusing. It is because they lack social intelligence and have no social research why they say “youth, youth, youth, youth” as if it some phenomena that can be separated from the family.

We, therefore, propose to have a multi-disciplinary integrated approach to solving youth issues, since youth issues are related to parental issues. Thus, housing was one of the issues that we needed to be tackling simultaneously with trying to deal with some of the more serious family issues.

The fact that we will make housing available; the fact that we are going to make more community space available for more communal programmes; for pre-school, after-school, baby-minding and counselling programmes through these new communities, is something that the Opposition also refuses to see. We are not just building homes; we are building and managing communities.

That is the reason why the social development unit was eventually transferred to the Notational Housing Trust becoming the National Housing and Community Development Trust so that we can deal with all of the issues. It is only when you have that kind of approach to solving social problems that you will really be able to be successful. So this thing about youth in isolation from family is because they do not know.

The affordable housing, or affordable rent because we do not have to sell the people the homes; people do not have to buy them. Even if we rented to people they would still be getting rent much cheaper than they are getting it now where they are paying $1,200 for a one or two bedroom. The fact is that we are making accommodations available to low income persons. Who tried to do it before? Why is it therefore that I am getting all the blame for doing something wrong when the wrong has to be in the fact that no body has tried to really to do it before?

They figure if I am successful, which I will be because God has blessed me to be, this will be a big plus for the United Democratic Party in the election. So they are going to run down this and that. All that they do is prevent some poor person from inquiring sufficiently to know what the Government has made available to them but there are so many other people that do not let the Opposition fool them. They come and see what is there. Many of them are builders and have worked in the construction trade and know that these homes are stable, safe and aesthetically pleasing and that they are above value for money! It has not cost the Government one cash dollar!

Those people are being integrated into a system where they can afford to pay for their own accommodations. We are making available the product to make that possible since the friends that you all come to support most of the time refuse to develop homes that that particular income class could have access to as renting accommodation or as homes that they would own; not even if they had given them for homes to own but at least make them available as renting accommodation. Look at the price of rent in this country for a poor single mother! Look at the money that Children and Family Services are spending at this time and that we have spent in this financial year; over $700,000 to deal with rental assistance to people.

Why should the Government not make the effort? I have been to Bermuda where they spend millions and millions of dollars each year to support people to allow them to have accommodation, not to own but at least to be able to live in accommodation at a cheaper price because of the real estate value in Bermuda and we have a similar situation here because land costs are so high.

The mere fact that we are trying to locate the majority of the 200 homes in the district of George Town where people have access to schools, hospitals, transportation and to jobs to maintain payments on these homes is a task in itself because land in the district of George Town so very expensive.

Imagine these people having the possibility to live off Eastern Avenue, next to Kirks where they can go to the supermarket and across the street to catch the bus to Seven Mile Beach and get a job as a waitress or somebody who is cleaning rooms and we will help them in the community with our community development system to upgrade their skills so that their earning power can be increased because that is part of our vision and plan.

All they try to tell this community is nonsense and this is the reason why they are going to be surprised in the district of George Town, if nowhere else, because people have been tired of being told nonsense for so long. They can see and touch and we will give them the possibility to touch and see these houses and to feel the real pride of ownership. That is one of the things that we thought and analysed will have a great impact on the lives of the people who we want to socially assist and manage.

The Trust is up and working and as I said, I will make a full report in this Honourable House because the Opposition wants to know, I see in their propagandist piece they have said that they would like to know, what the houses will really cost Government. It asks why Dr. Frank McField's Ministry did not award the contract to fill the low-cost housing site in Windsor Park to the lowest bidder and about the true cost of low cost houses. They will have the possibility to know that. Also, I would like everybody to know that the Auditor General's office has had their turn to come look at the records and I am not the record keeper in my office but if anything is wrong I am quite sure that the people who are competent and qualified by the Constitution to look into these issues will do so. I am just tired of the Members of the Opposition slurs about people.

One of the interesting areas that we have in terms of the new Budget is the Budget's purchase agreements for statutory companies and non-Governmental suppliers. When we hear them talk about youth and I look in the Budget and see that Cayman Against Substance Abuse (CASA) is going to receive from the Cayman Islands Government monies to work with young people. We have increased the amount to CASA by not putting any additional burden on the general population but by rearranging the amounts that we were spending in some of the other areas. That has been the motto of my management, not to create new expenses but if you want something new you will have to give up something that is old.

However, with CASA, it will conduct an annual challenge leadership training programme for high and middle school students, government and private, on Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac during drug awareness month in October. The Challenge Leadership Programme is a student workshop focusing on leadership skill, development, team-building and character education. The goal is to foster improved communication between school leaders and school groups, to enhance leadership skills, teach the powerful impact of teamwork and help students feel better about themselves and the positive impact they can have on their schools.

CASA will also be conducting parenting, anger-management, self-esteem workshops and workshops on relationship issues including domestic violence and workshops on the dangers of substance abuse for the inmate population of Northward and Fairbanks. The goals of this are to provide a safe and drug free passage for the children of the Cayman Islands by strengthening the adults that surround them. CASA will conduct Youth to Youth Programmes in all senior and junior high schools, government and private, on Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac by employing a full-time person to conduct the programme.

Youth to Youth is a positive peer prevention programme designed to equip and empower young people with the attitude skills and motivation to make healthy lifestyle choices. It also covers other issues that our young people are confronted with such as violence prevention, sexuality life choices, community responsibility and self-esteem. The broad components of this are namely personal growth, information and education, community action and drug free fun.

This is just one case. CASA also have programmes to conduct annual youth workers training. The workshop will be open to all persons in the community who work with our young people. Prevention programmes on the dangers of substance abuse and violence aimed at youth housed at Eagle House. Eagle House is the new youth and juvenile rehabilitative/correction facility.

I would just like to point this out because, if I were to go through all of these purchase agreements,—one with Cayman Brac Sports Club which tells us the outputs and what the Government is purchasing—it is about time that people realise what Government really is. Government does not have to be the supplier all the time. We are also the purchasers of outputs or of assets be they human or physical assets that can benefit the community.

When you look you will find we are making so many agreements in these purchase agreements. We have one here with the Cayman Islands Athletic Association and it tells you exactly on what basis we are paying a $30,000 grant to this sporting organisation and why another $40,000—a total of $70,000—is being paid to that particular association during the financial year 2004/5 and what we have contracted to specifically receive from them.

In addition—we will go through numbers and numbers of different places—basketball, churches and others are types of associations that are willing to deliver to the community the kind of social and personal development programmes that we think are important.

So when they say that nothing is being done they must not forget that people have access to these documents that I am going through. If they have access to these documents and see them then they realise how misleading.

The Cayman Islands Rugby Association will develop a junior programme; they have thousands of kids already in their programme. What about the swimming and softball programmes? The Cayman Islands Government is coming to Legislative Assembly to get approval to spend its money on all of these things for the general betterment of the population. How can the Leader of the Opposition say that there are no programmes to improve the general welfare of the country?

There are probationary and aftercare units since we know that we do have serious crime in our society. We have recognised, and it is pointed out in the Budget in the way in which we have decided to pursue certain strategies and purchase certain outputs, that although we try to intervene in the further development of anti-social behaviour and criminality, that we have missed someone.

When I say “we” I do not mean the United Democratic Party but I mean that institution of government which transcends whatever group is in power. We have missed certain kids and they become adults and many have become career offenders. Thus the probation aftercare unit is seen as a very important instrument in reducing recidivism and better therefore in assisting people to realise their full human potential thereby having an impact on the youth/children that they have fathered. We have got to see the connection because we know that the children that are getting in trouble are from families that have already been in trouble in the majority. We take the whole question of rehabilitation and therapeutic policies very seriously.

We are coming to ask for money for the Probation Service Aftercare Unit which serves the courts, the prisons and the community. We have separated the Probation Service Aftercare Unit from what used to be Social Services and we have allowed the Probation Aftercare Unit to become a unit on its own to better deal with the questions of rehabilitation. In this Budget we are going to fund, which we are doing at this particular moment, we will continue to stress this development where we have an additional officer responsible for looking after community service orders. We had one before now we have two.

We are also hiring two new probation officers because we realise how important the whole issue is. We note with some degree of encouragement that the prison population at this moment (males at Northward) is below 160 and when we note that the average last year must have been about 200 and odd—

(Continuation of debate on the Budget Address)

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports continuing with the debate. Just to remind the Honourable Member you have one hour and five minutes.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

It is a beautiful morning here in the Cayman Islands from this perspective; nice showers. I am quite sure all the plants and trees can use this great water. It just goes to show that we are a blessed people and regardless of what the Opposition says about what a terrible state of affairs the country is in, we see that we are blessed when we observe the fact that in our country, although we have crime and some serious crime, there is still safety and security for the majority of our citizens, residents and visitors. Of course, Mr. Speaker, part of my Ministry's objective is to make sure that we have a healthy resident population and a safe and secure country for residents and visitors. We have always attempted to achieve this through co-operation and collaboration with all departments, agencies in Government and outside in the private sector.

Just to recap, Mr. Speaker, I am still interested when the Opposition gets up to speak against my presentation to know from them what do we do in a country that has made the decision, traditionally, not to introduce a system of direct of taxation. What do we do if the revenue base is as narrow as it is? Do we come each time we present a budget and tax, or do we learn discipline and prudence, thereby allowing us to somehow adjust the expectations within what the country can afford without being pushed into a direct taxation system? The question again to the Opposition is: Do they feel that the Government could and should do more? Where would the finances come from? Would they enlighten this Honourable House and the general public as to where they would find these additional funds to implement these programmes they have in the back of their minds or someplace in space near their minds?

I believe again that this is a conservative Budget that pays specific attention to the priorities of the people of these Islands, in particular, respect to my area of concern, which is the Ministry of Community Services; we have done a reasonable job pointing out areas where we would like to receive finances for over the next years.

In order to make sure that we have a healthy resident population, and in order to achieve the safety and security for the country, visitors and residents, the Cayman Islands' Her Majesty's Prison (HMP) in Northward, strives to achieve these objectives by being there to enforce the orders of the courts when individuals are sentenced to prison. The prison system is there to make sure, first of all, that the orders of the courts are carried out. In order to do that the prison system seeks to provide regimes that are workable, culturally applicable and which will address offending behaviour, improve education and working skills; develop civic pride and cause prisoners to lead a responsible and law-abiding life.

We do recognise that this is a difficult task that we are asking the country to continue to provide money for, to improve and implement. At least 50 per cent of the persons in prison are there because of drug related offences. It would be ludicrous for us to continue to seek solutions in the same manner that our predecessors have sought the solutions to these particular issues. Therefore, we intend to establish a therapeutic community at Northward Prison over the next year. The primary goal of this is to change negative patterns of behaviour, thinking and feeling that predispose drug use.

We have also recognised that certain key factors for the success have been identified. First of all, that the Prison Service Senior Management recognises the impact of drug abuse economically upon the community, the prison budget, public safety and ultimately the entire government. Therefore, staff members are willing to break new ground in addressing these issues and appropriately train prison staff to understand the rehabilitation philosophy. In doing so the Prison Department is beginning to develop partnerships with other agencies, and in particular the Department of Substance Abuse and the Probation and Aftercare Unit. They are working closely and effectively with the prison, the parolees, prison staff and the general community on a continued basis. Over the next years we will see this developing, in terms of spending the money that is being requested for the Prison. The Prison has recognised the importance of the inter-disciplinary and inter-agency approach to problem solving. We do not expect to achieve rehabilitation solely by containment or confinement.

We are requesting a substantial amount of money again for the Department of Substance Abuse Services. In the next year this Department will attempt a system analysis. It will embark upon a public relations strategy to get a greater level of awareness of substance abuse issues and the willingness to assess and point others towards help, in order to gain a reduction in the impact of substance abuse on society. We will be establishing, with the finances that we are asking for here, a community outreach programme, which will begin to network with other agencies.

Just as we have spoken with regard to the Prison, the Substance Abuse Services will be seeking to network with Children and Family Services, with Probation, Aftercare and the Prison Service. There will be a greater integration of these services thereby being more efficient in the use of the people's money. We are going to increase outputs while at the same time decreasing or maintaining the inputs that are invested in these services. I would not take the fact that we are not spending a lot more money to be indicative of what we are attempting to achieve. We have readjusted the way in which we go about achieving a more healthy resident population and a society that is safe and secure; not by spending more money, but by being more co-operative with each other in the different agencies.

The Probation and Aftercare unit is a very important part of that entire multi-disciplinary, multi-agency approach that we established when we came into Government in November 2001, which was to put these different agencies together to achieve exactly what it is that we are now beginning to finally achieve. Thus, Probation and Aftercare, Substance Abuse and the Prison Services are now beginning to move closer together in order to evaluate the services and identify needs; to collaborate with other agencies and to better meet the clients' needs. So, within the next year, the Probation and Aftercare Services will enhance public education; the prevention programmes will use newsletters, presentations and workshops in order to better identify needs and better meet the needs of their specific clients and partnering agencies.

There is much talk about the youth, Mr. Speaker, and the introduction of Eagle House to provide a structured, safe and secure environment for youth and staff in that particular institution, as it is a magnificent development. It is unfortunate that society needs this lockup for young people but it is now there and we are proud that we have the physical capability to establish a comprehensive, effective and integrated continuum of care ranging from assessment through treatment and transition programming that will adequately and responsibly meet the needs of male youth committed to Eagle House by the courts.

Again, Mr. Speaker, it is taking some time, but we have not just produced a secure remand facility for juveniles; we have produced a facility for young offenders. I note that the intention of the previous person responsible was to produce facilities for juveniles only and that would have meant that the young offenders would have remained locked up in the adult prison at Northward.

There is much to be done in terms of building the programmes at Eagle House and we have assembled a management team that is doing a tremendous job in making sure that there is a good understanding of some of the difficulties that will be encountered.

The Department of Children and Family Services was previously referred to as Social Services, which had such a broad meaning that it was decided to focus and bring society's and government's attention to the fact that when we identify social problems we can say that these social problems stem from parental and family relationships. The child learns to develop his attitudes, his character, and his learning desires between years one and five. We knew that if the educational system is a system that just deals with children at a later age it would not be able to deal with some of the root causes of juvenile delinquency and a social behaviour. For this reason we started to focus on the family, not just on the youth. Juvenile delinquency is the result of us not having taken preventative measures in the early life of the child and the particular family.

The Department focuses on children and family and does recognise that it cannot treat them in isolation. What they will do over the next year in employing this Budget is to develop regulations for the Children Law 2003. Also, they will pilot a "Support Towards Autonomy, Retraining and Self-sufficiency (STARS)" initiative to enable repetitive temporary financial assistance clients to become more self-sufficient. Rather than to continue giving them financial assistance it is to help them become more self-sufficient. I will explain that a bit, Mr. Speaker. We have started to decentralise services to all districts, which is an important development that this Government has done and it has been difficult for us sometimes to get total co-operation which is necessary but it was possible and we are happy that we have achieved this result.

This Department will also use their Budget to expand the Golden Age Home to provide additional residential spaces for indigent, elderly persons and improve day-care facilities for disabled and elderly persons. I hear the Opposition say that we are not dealing with the social needs of the community. We will use this money to develop a national parenting programme because parenting is not an easy job and it is so essential to get it right if we are going to prevent children from developing a social behaviour and becoming delinquents that end up in our court system, eventually at Bonaventure, and then, perhaps, at Eagle House.

We will continue to implement staff training programmes with the money the Legislative Assembly will vote to us. We will continue to deal with the essential relief services, preparation of hurricane shelters, recruitment and training of shelter wardens and district representatives. We will continue a host of programmes with the money that we are asking the Opposition to also vote for here. The Opposition says that we do not do anything, but if we do not get the money for these things, Mr. Speaker, it means that we would even do less. Perhaps that is the intention of the Opposition; to make sure that we cannot do anything; that our hands are tied by voting against this Budget; by criticising it and coming prepared to vote against it. Imagine! If we needed the Opposition to pass the Budget the people would not have any money because the Opposition says it is not a good budget.

Just a little bit more about some of the money that we are asking the Opposition to vote for; where it is going to go with the STARS programme, which allows recipients receiving temporary financial assistance to develop a self-sufficiency plan that will prepare them for jobs while providing support services. The aim is to remove recipients from temporary financial assistance to work as quickly as possible. The STARS initiative is being piloted with 20 clients in Grand Cayman and five in Cayman Brac and will later expand to include temporary financial assistance clients as dictated by evaluation results. So, we need the Opposition to vote some money to help these people to come off welfare.

The referrals to STARS programme will be made by social workers, after intake and assessments. Clients will continue to have an assigned social worker. Support will be given through life and job-skills training; apprenticeship programmes; networking with other community agencies; mentoring; financial assistance; career testing and public education. I think that it suggests that the Government's programme in terms of social stabilisation and social improvement is well thought out. The district offices that we now have (one in West Bay) will include additional service such as group counselling, community outreach through back yard meetings in the various neighbourhoods, workshops such as parenting classes, budget management, managing relationships. These seminars and workshops will be held in conjunction with the STARS initiative and other related agencies. There will be liaison with other agencies such as the Department of Substance Abuse Services, Cayman Islands Crisis Centre, Police and Family Support Unit, Education Department and the Probation and After-care Unit. We can see how we are beginning to develop those units in the various districts to be better positioned to deal with the social programmes from a preventative, interventionist perspective rather than trying to wait for the problems to become chronic and then try to cure them or throw money after them.

The George Town office will be relocated and will address a number of issues which currently plague, or at the very least, hinder this Unit's ability to deliver efficient and effective services. The challenges include, but are not limited to, poor public image of the Department; inadequate parking in current location; a physical redesign of office space to separate the welfare and therapeutic services. It is very important that the welfare and therapeutic services be separated. Therefore, we are asking the Government to give us the money to be able to have this happen because sometimes people believe that Social Services is only about welfare. We want to extend flexible hours of operation, which is something that should have come in a long time ago—the whole idea of social workers being nine-to-five—with earlier and later working hours to facilitate and enable clients to access services and attend groups outside their working hours. These are programmes that are being offered to the country by those people who are in need of counselling and assistance in order to improve their social and vocational skills, and therefore, the quality of their lives and the lives of their children. This is what this Government is offering. What has the Opposition offered?

Further restructuring of the Unit to include specialist teams to provide services currently being provided free of charge, which could generate income. These services include, but are not limited to, mediation, custody evaluation or social inquires, which are requested in relation to divorcing families, supervised access, adoption assessments and supervision. The Department is also thinking about how to make some money back in order that government does not always have to come to tax the people in order to deal with some of the social issues or challenges that we have in this country.

There will be an office in Bodden Town, slated to be opened by the end of May 2004, which will serve the three districts of Bodden Town, East End and North Side. A social worker will be assigned to the four primary schools in the districts: Savannah, Bodden Town, East End, and North Side. This being the assignment to the perspective schools, it is hoped that problems can be identified and addressed before they escalate into full-scale behavioural problems; that is what the Government has been doing and is doing, Mr. Speaker.

We have been working out a social scheme enabling us to better manage the social problems. The Opposition can get up and criticise us for the fact that we have crime in the country but we have only been in government for less than three years. So, the real serious crimes developing are the result of chronic anti-social criminal behaviour that has been produced as a result of the lack of social intervention by previous governments, including the one that was there for one year, which caused us only to have three years.

Office hours will be staggered; for instance, Bodden Town: 8:30 am - 5 pm on Mondays, Tuesdays, 8:30 am - 8:30 pm, as hours will be extended to facilitate group work, Wednesdays, 8:30 am - 5 pm. Thursdays 8:30 am - 5 pm. Fridays 8:30 am - 7 pm with extended hours to facilitate collection of financial assistance by clients.

The Sunrise Adult Training Centre is one of the issues which we are seeking finances for from the House. The vision there is to provide the support and services needed by all persons with disabilities in the Cayman Islands, to build permanent facilities that will address programme needs and provide appropriate residential options as well, though not necessarily in the same building. People with special needs form a very important part of our society. Those of you are familiar with the Special Olympics will know that they perform emotionally as beautifully as they perform athletically. It is up to us to continue to have that responsibility for them, not just in the Lighthouse School when they are protected by the Education Law, but that we extend care and protection beyond into adulthood and that we make provisions for giving them the kinds of skills and residential abilities to be able to help look after themselves and lead productive and enjoyable lives. Again, we come to this Parliament to ask for the financing to deal with this issue. We cannot see how the Opposition would be contemplating voting against these persons, for this particular cause.

The Women's Crisis Centre is an important issue that we come again to ask for funding for; $200,000 to be exact. The slogan for that particular organisation is "There is no excuse for domestic abuse." The mission here is to provide, safe, temporary shelter and a supportive environment for abused women and their children.

How can the Opposition say that the Government is not looking after the social needs of the country when the Government recognised from the very beginning that violence is first of all learned in the home? Unless we are willing to tackle domestic violence we are not going to be able to deal with public violence. Again, we go back to rooting out the evil at its inception, where it is produced and nourished. Yet, the Opposition says that the Government does not have a clear vision.

However, the Opposition cannot point to their accomplishments with regards to these issues. The Opposition cannot say that a crisis centre for women was established during their period in government. Perhaps it is simply because we are able to adjust our vision to the point that the country can afford it rather than having these highfalutin ideas about how to bring something into being and not being able to pay for it at the end of the day, but being able to criticise and say how terrible the Government is that we do not have swimming pools at the Crisis Centre.

The objectives of the Crisis Centre are to provide safe shelter, to facilitate counselling, education and support, to assure community resources are made available to women and their children and to work with existing community organisations to increase community awareness about domestic abuse with the aim to eradicate it. How can the Opposition say we are paying no attention to women issues when in fact we are being criticised by men because there is not a crisis centre and a resource centre for men? How can they say that we are biased and prejudiced against women? What did they do?

What would it all be like without housing? For all these problems and all of these things that we understand about social problems, what would a government be like in tackling its social problems if it did nothing to make housing affordable? How can we talk about families and not talk about houses? The Opposition will have to criticise the Government again for doing something by criticising the National Housing and Community Development Trust. I have lectured on that already and I will be giving a statement to this Honourable House on all the details that the Opposition wants to know. They seem to want to know more about those details than they want to know about the social economic conditions of the people that we are providing these homes for. Perhaps their friends have something to do with the interest in those details that they want to find out rather than ask about the details for the common people that we will be helping; no, they are not interested in that. They will get all the details. Just like their general has access to them, this Parliament has access to all the details. Mr. Speaker, again it is a major accomplishment that was necessary if we were going to have a holistic approach to solving social problems in this country. They cannot say that this Government does not have a vision; that this Government does not have a blueprint for social development and management. All they can do is to demean what the Government has accomplished.

The Department of Youth and Sports spends so much in maintaining fields in coaching. We coach inmates, students and youth within the districts, we spend so much money on upgrading and maintaining fields. We could deal with more fields. There is not an athlete in this country who would not tell you that he does not need increased facilities. However, we have always said that we have to live within our means otherwise the Government would have to tax. The people do not want the burden of taxation and as a result of that the people say "Let us live within our means and do as much with what we have" and not always try to outdo the other one by building something more like how it went when they had to build this in this district and that in that district.

At least there is one good thing about party politics and that is, it does not give that pork barrel politics where, "because you got it in your back yard I have to have it in my back yard too". We maintain the sporting fields to international standards in this country; we work with the Water Authority to ensure that the fields and parks are adequately watered; we work in the park with youth to empower them; we have Youth Flex, Hotline and other programmes going like the Scranton, Arthur H. Martin Creative Empowerment Youth Centre that is an extension of our vision to get more youth who are not clubbable, who were not easily integrated into the more traditional sporting programmes to give them the possibility to become involved in more creative activities.

Because you offer something does not mean that people take it up right away or because you put bait out there for the fish it does not mean that they will bite. However, in time it proves to give them possibilities to develop what might have just been a leisure leaning to something that is a skill which is saleable. They could be DJs, producers, people who put commercials together. They could sell their songs and be proud of being involved in something that is creative, which at the same time is something they can exchange for something else they need, namely cash.

We are doing something to help the youth but we have to remember when we say "the youth" we are not talking about the 99.99 per cent of the youth in this country who are quite willing to be involved in the wholesome activities that their parents, the school system and the Government are able to provide them with. We are talking about some youth that are detached and have problems. However, they make it to believe that because these youth are not easily cured; because the problems are chronic or that they are not easily contained, we are not doing anything about the youth in this country and that is nonsense.

I hear people still going around saying that there is nothing for young people to do in this country and I have been hearing it for the last 30 years. My schedule in terms of attending events is so busy that I say to the people "Give me a break", because this thing is happening this evening and that thing is happening. There are so many things happening that it is a shame anyone in this country would say today there is nothing for young people to do. It is a shame for people to say that. It is a shame!

Some children do not want to do anything more than they want to do. Regardless of what you offer them and regardless of how you friend them at that particular point in their lives, when their social issues have become chronic it takes time, professional intervention, and a lot of resources to be able to turn those individuals around. Therefore, do not judge the performance of this Government by the fact that we have some children who are angry with themselves, their parents and with their country. We came 20, 30 years too late to this problem. We came too late but we did not come too late because of our own decisions. We came too late because other people prevented us from participating in the decision-making process that would impact these youngsters as far back as 1972 in this country. We are not to blame! We are trying to help!

The Opposition would be well advised to assist us with the task of trying to rehabilitate those most serious offenders and anti-social youngsters in our country. I know that we have held out jobs to these youngsters. We have said to them "Look, we have mechanics in the area; we would like you to become an apprentice to someone in your community if you do not want to go into another community. If we feel that there is some kind of social distance you can take up an apprenticeship in your own community with people there; we will pay those persons in your community and we will pay you." At this particular point, Mr. Speaker, it is so difficult to get children involved in that. The same people that are running around saying the kids are angry because they cannot get jobs or be included are only creating and sowing the seeds to give rationalisation for criminal acts against society later on, when it is not society that is to be blamed at this particular point. The problem happened in the family from an earlier stage and perhaps, if the Government had got involved before, as we are suggesting, on that particular level, we would have prevented it from happening. However, it has happened and there is no point in us feeding them with the ammunition to come back to attack us.

I do these things sometimes in offering programmes because I feel I need my conscience at least to be clear. I know that we are making an attempt in central George Town to deal with some of the issues that impact these children. If the Opposition cares for them then they should tell us. Even within the next three or four months that we are still in Government, tell us what to do since they know. Let us see them down in these areas working with these kids getting them to change. Since they know so well how to change and how to relate to these kids, let us see them do that if they have the magic. If they want to devalue what we are trying to do, then let them tell us what to do. We are so interested in finding a solution, not just for the benefit of these children but for the benefit of the entire society; to make the entire resident and visiting population safer in this country.

The National Youth Commission, Mr. Speaker, which we will again fund this year, has adopted a literary theme as the primary focus of its work in 2004. The Commission will evaluate the effectiveness of out-of-classroom programmes and activities and recommend new and improved programme systems and practices where necessary. Tell us if we are not going in the right direction. Do not let us go blindly if we are not doing it right. Opposition, tell us if we are going down the wrong path. The Commission will work within the guidelines of the National Youth policy goals (b), (e) and (i) as well as relevant national goal policies and strategy.

My Ministry is definitely blessed in having some of the most energetic, intelligent, dedicated young Caymanians. They have been responsible for assisting this political directorate in developing a vision that is holistic, which takes into account all of the different aspects needed to be figured in if we are going to have a healthier population, where we will be able to achieve the security and safety of our residents and visitors. These young people have been promoted within the Departments. We have seen someone new in Probation and Aftercare who does a fantastic job in developing that Unit. We see someone in Substance Abuse Services, we see the decentralisation of the Children and Family Services that will give a head to the one in George Town, Bodden Town and West Bay, creating a more lateral type of management rather than a traditional hierarchical management where people are just working to try to get up to the last two positions. We have seen the change. We can see how the Government has spent its money in this particular area.

Usually, people who are responsible for social management are criticised for wasting money in developing dependents. We have not wasted money over the last two years and in this year, 2004 to 2005 we will not waste the people's money. We have used that money as effectively and efficiently as it has ever been used in this country by social management. We have reduced the numbers in our prison and we are reducing the numbers that are becoming dependent on government.

Just look at it this way: if we create these communal communities that we are talking about in these housing estates, rather than them becoming ghettos they become places where people can go back to traditional values of helping each other: one woman helping the other one with her children. There might come a day, while everyone is going out to work, one woman decides to stay home and look after the children, and as a result they pool together and pay that woman something. We are going to provide the facilities within all of those places.

You will see in the Budget for the capital that we are requesting $760,000 to put the communal facilities in each of those places, which we think should be government's responsibility, and which is a direct government interjection of cash in order to better manage the social problems by getting back to the community. Imagine the kind of communities. I am asking the Opposition, just do not think about marl and fill, think about a community where single mothers can work later at night. If they need two jobs to pay their mortgage they can do so because within that communal concept there is a possibility that their babies can be minded; there are the facilities to use if they are having difficulties with rent or mortgage. If they are having problems with their employers there are counsellors there; if they are having substance abuse problems there are people right there—not far away—to begin to deal with this from the beginning.

We know so well, and I have been stressing this—I lost my job in 1979 because I said pre-school education is the key. It is still the key! I envisage our little community with a $250,000 subsidy from the National Housing and Community Development Trust—with programmes for these kids, these people will be special. These are special communities.

Members of the Opposition, we are asking for $250,000 to go towards the National Housing and Community Development Trust to start to put the programmes there directly and not have to wait until the day comes when we have to put the police there. That is crime prevention! I want you to examine your hearts when you talk about this programme; when you try not to find out anything about it besides who got the contract for the fill. I am telling you that there is more to it than who got the contract for the fill.

Let us be fair and tell the people that this is a well thought out Budget; that the Budget is a result of their monies and resources; that the Government does not reach into the sky and get the monies, but the Government takes the monies from them directly or indirectly to create the finances for the country over the years. Let us tell the country that if the Government is to have access to more money at this particular point, to spend more, it must take more from the people. Let us give the people a choice. Let us ask the people if they prefer taxes or do they prefer living within their means. They will tell you that they prefer living within their means and that they are happy the United Democratic Party is of that disposition and not of the other disposition, which is to lead them down the path of living beyond their means and bringing them into a situation of direct taxation afterwards. Therefore, we are given the people the possibility to help improve all that we are asking to be financed.

We continue to rely upon voluntary organisations and to hold them up as shining examples of good citizenship. Without the Rotary Club, the Lions Club of Tropical Gardens, Kiwanis Club, the Boys Scouts, the Girls Brigade and all of those organisations, the Government would have to spend ten times as much the money. Voluntary support is what we need. We need to encourage people even in the poorer communities to understand that they can volunteer and help; that they do not have to wait until rich people come to their neighbourhoods to give something back; they can also give something back. In our communal communities we will be guiding people in that direction, creating a spirit of pride and voluntarism that perhaps never existed in this country before.

So, we do not want the message to get out that this is not a place that people want to be. We would like them to understand from the very beginning that the Cayman Islands Government, the United Democratic Party, is one hundred per cent behind people who need these houses. We are not building them to run alone or get into any kind of difficulties; we are there with them with regards to the physical and social management of these communities and these houses.

Mr. Speaker, I think that I will just finish by saying, if you will allow me, Sir, that I know that there is an election in November; I know now that the Opposition in George Town will most likely not come at me but they will send their friend from North Side to come at me. She will probably start talking about how I dislike women and all those other things she accuses me of to make me look bad while the two Opposition males from George Town go by as if they have nothing against me.

I would just like to say to this House and to the people in George Town that I have done my best and I am willing to be evaluated upon my performance and not upon hearsay or vindictiveness or jealousy or lack of respect from other Members of this House. I am willing to say to them that had I been given an opportunity in November 2000 (when the Leader of Government Business, now Leader of the Opposition) to be the Minister that I am now. . . Even after signing with my own pen an agreement, he went against it and went to West Bay. Now he tries to blame me for the fact that the gentleman from West Bay is now the Leader of Government Business; I do not know how that could be.

I am saying that I am the Minister responsible for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports because the now Leader of Government Business gave me the possibility of being a Minister. He obviously did not listen to any of those people and none of these people told him that I was too black and too radical to be in this position. However, obviously someone else must have been told something like that as I heard through the grapevine why they did not want me to be a Minister in 2000. Therefore, they are on the Opposition and I am in the Government. If people think that that is bad for the country, that I am dishonest, that I am playing games then they had better check the Leader of the Opposition and find out a little bit more about the games that he plays and the way they use the lady Member for North Side to do their work for them. They need to stop criticising me because when they start doing that I have already told them how it is going to rock and roll.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, perhaps this is a good time for the morning break. We will now take 10 minutes and I will ask you all to be back here by 11.55 am.

Proceedings suspended at 11.45 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.17 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Honourable Members, on the request of our Opposition Members the Government has agreed that we take a suspension at 3 pm this afternoon with the understanding that we will reconvene at 6 pm for the continuation of today's sitting. You will further recall that it had been previously agreed by this Honourable House that we would continue each sitting until 10 pm until the business before the House is completed. We also propose to take just an hour today for lunch so that we can get back by at least 2 pm, but no later. Thank you, Honourable Members.

Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? I will ask for the last time then I will call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to close the debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for North Side.

[Pause]

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Before I start my contribution, it seems like it is a joke because I got up to speak. The last speaker, the Honourable Minister of Community Affairs, has said that I will defend the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for George Town, but he—more than any other Member—knows that the Second Elected Member for George Town needs no one to defend him against him. If we go back to the records, the Second Elected Member's debate on the entire last Budget Address was dealing with matters under that particular Minister.

In making my contribution to the debate on the Budget Address and the Annual Estimates of Expenditure for 2004 to 2005, I wish to comment on the social aspect of the Budget or the lack thereof. The Leader of Government Business in his Policy Statement talked about a socially supported population. The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Affairs got up and told us of the amount of money in the Budget for these programmes.

Mr. Speaker, I come from a small district and in reply to a supplementary question that I asked at the last meeting in this House, the Honourable Minister sent me the reply. Unfortunately, I did not bring it with me but I guess Parliament must have been supplied because it was sent to me directly from the Ministry. He spoke about all the programmes that are in George Town, Bodden Town and East End and admitted there were no programmes in the district of North Side for coaching of football, netball or otherwise. He spoke at length this morning and yesterday on funds that the United Democratic Party is providing in the Budget. I hope when it comes to Finance Committee those Budget figures can be broken down to include the district of North Side.

We heard much about the housing project. The Honourable Leader of Government Business in his Policy Statement said we have spent some two and a half years on this project and we are being told that it is an affordable housing project. The emphasis on that project must be on the word "affordable", affordable for the people who need that sort of housing. We have spent two and a half years on this project and the Honourable Minister has admitted that there are only 63 of these houses completed. My question to the Honourable Minister is: What has caused this serious delay?

I have typed the quotations that I wish to quote rather than leafing through the unedited Han- sard of this Honourable House. I am going to quote from the unedited Hansard of 28 February 2002 where that Minister in an answer to a question from the Second Elected Member for George Town said, and I quote: "It is the intention of the United Democratic Party Government [The word intention is used again which I think is a typographical error] to make available approximately 200 low-cost houses for Caymanians to acquire over the next 12 months."

I quote once again from the unedited Hansard of 28 February 2002 in a supplementary to Question No. 23 asked again by the Second Elected Member for George Town. So, we all know that the Second Elected Member for George Town does not need anyone to defend his cause in this House, I quote: "Madam Speaker, I intend to prove to the Second Elected Member from George Town that that is not a pipe dream that we have, to put these 200 houses on the market within a year." We are now in the year 2004, May, as a matter of fact, almost a half of the year has gone by and still we only have 63 houses completed.

You know, Mr. Speaker, when a country spends some $8 million on housing for the people of this country who need housing, certainly, since 2002, at least one house should have been sold. There has to be something wrong. I am no genius and I know nothing about building, I admit that, but certainly if we have spent two years and $8 million something should have been shown for that amount of money having been spent.

I quote now from the unedited Hansard of Wednesday, 1 October 2003, again in reply to Question No. 84. This time the question comes from the Honourable Member for the district of East End. I quote the answer of the Honourable Minister. He said: "Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly are aware that we are presently constructing 200 affordable homes. It is anticipated that approximately half of these homes (100) will be completed by January 2004, and the other half (100) by the end of May 2004."

The question is: Where are these homes? Have we already paid the contractors the $5.3 million that the Minister mentioned in his debate and still have no homes?

Again, Mr. Speaker, in the Honourable Minister's debate he stated in October 2003 that they now have over 300 applications for these houses. That is what he said in his debate yesterday. But in the answer to the same Question No. 84, I quote: "Honourable Ministers [I think that meant "Honourable Members] are also reminded that in July 2003, Finance Committee approved the funds advanced by the Government for the Affordable Housing Initiative. The $25 million that we are presently seeking is to allow the NHCDT to pay for these 200 homes and to provide an additional 200 homes. These funds will be drawn down in tranches in order to ensure that the Government and the NHCDT are able to recoup their investment in a timely manner. It should be noted that as soon as this is feasible, the Government would make arrangements to recoup the advanced money from the NHCDT. Currently, over 800 people have expressed an interest in purchasing these homes.”

In the purchasing of these homes, I again ask the question: Why are the people not coming forward to purchase these homes? Why are only 63 homes completed in two and a half years?

I hear the Honourable Leader of Government over there speaking, but I am sure that in his winding up he will deal with whatever is necessary.

I have spoken to many women in these Islands, particularly. They have come to me and said that rent is so expensive, and when I ask how much rent are you paying they say $600 a month. I say to them, “Why do you not go and look at the low-cost houses that are being built in Windsor Park?” and their answer to me is, “I am not going to live in those.” That brings me to the point, Mr. Speaker, that there was no research done as to whether these particular homes would stand up to the elements in the Cayman Islands, as to whether the people would be interested in living in project style homes—

Point of Order

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Affairs, please state your point of order.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: I think that the Member for North Side is misleading the House when she says there was no research done and she has no information to prove the fact that no research has been done. So, that is to deliberately mislead the House and the public to think that there is some defect in terms of the way in which this was done.

The Speaker: Member for North Side, on this point of order the Honourable Minister is saying that you are attempting to mislead the House in saying that no research has been done on the low cost housing, would you reply to that please.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, any Member of this Honourable House has the right. It is my opinion, because I have been told that these houses are already rusting.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Member.

Instead of making a categorical statement you have qualified it by saying that it is your opinion and it is not based on any empirical evidence so I would ask you to continue.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I will go back to the Cayman Net News on 18 June 2003.

In a statement to this Honourable House by the Honourable Minister responsible for Housing on 23 June 2003, in referring to an article that appeared in the Cayman Net News publication 18 June 2003, I quote, the Honourable Minister said: “The journalistic quality of the Net News article is poor in that it states that houses will be available for $50,000 or less and yet we have repeatedly said that our most expensive unit will likely be priced at CI$59,500 and the smaller unit $48,500.”

I now ask the question: Are those prices still the same? It has been brought to my attention that they are now going to cost $65,000 and $54,000 respectively. The Minister himself admits that they will now cost more than that. The question must be asked and answered, why, when in the beginning were we quoted a price of $59,500 and $48,500?

There are local contractors in this country who build three-bedroom pre-cast cement homes for CI$90,000. I continue to ask the question, why have the prices of these homes increased so dramatically? Are we really building houses for the people in our communities who really need low cost houses? In my opinion, I do not think we are. I ask the Honourable Minister: Is it because of the housing scheme? The building of these schemes has been re-engineered so that they can now, in my opinion, stand up to the elements in the Cayman Islands?

Why, I ask, are we building these homes for the needy people in our society? I have such a good memory, and it stems from the fact that I worked as Clerk of this Honourable Parliament with the Honourable Speaker, Mrs. Sybil McLaughlin. At the time when she was Clerk, I was Deputy Clerk. The proceedings of Parliament had to be taken in Pitman's Shorthand and retyped on Gestetner paper to be run off on the Gestetner machine. I have built up a very good memory because sometimes when they spoke, they spoke so fast I had to record it in my brain.

I remember the Honourable Minister (again from the unedited Hansard of this Parliament 23 June 2003) in his debate on the Budget Address saying, and I quote: “They seriously believe the government that can deliver affordable housing in this country will win the next election. Therefore they have to sabotage . . .” speaking about “they” meaning the Opposition. So, was it an effort to put in place something that would allow them to win the next election without any thought of the persons buying these homes?

I believe if the Government had spoken to a number of local contractors who are in the building trade and has been for many years, these houses could have been provided at a price that the people needing this housing scheme could afford. Persons requiring these homes probably make $1,200 per month. How are they going to qualify to purchase one of these homes unless the Government has taken the decision that it will be putting in place a fund to pay for the monies to be borrowed for these homes for these people? All I am saying is, if that is the case, tell the country.

When we look in the Eastern Caribbean, and I say this without fear of contradiction by anyone sitting in this Parliament, we can see that it is a pleasure for persons who require these homes to go and buy one, two and three-bedroom homes built of concrete. They are about $30,000 to $40,000 cheaper than the price we are going to have to sell these low-cost houses for. We have not been told the true figure of what these will be sold for.

When I look in the Budget document—and if I am wrong I am sure the Honourable Third Official Member, in his reply, will correct me—we are now carrying in our advance account approximately $8 million for these homes. I look in the pink one and I see the target for 2004/5 is $2 million for the completion of 200 houses. Is this another $2 million to be added to the $8 million that has already been advanced until the National Housing and Community Development Trust gets set up and they will be paying the Government the monies that have been advanced?

The houses I spoke of are those I saw in the Eastern Caribbean. They are well designed and have low maintenance costs for the persons buying them. If we have a building of concrete, I am sure that at Christmas we can power wash it if we cannot afford to paint, and it will look new; yet, we have gone about putting in place these metal buildings that salt spray, no matter how much we spend to maintain, will destroy. You know, Mr. Speaker, if the persons buying these homes between $70,000 and $80,000—I am throwing out a figure—have to go the bank and get a loan for 20 years what will be the total cost of that house at the end of 20 years? I have heard it said in this House that the life span of these homes is only 20 years.

Point of Order

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister would you state your point of order.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, it is incredible how the lady Member for North Side, doing the job of the Second Elected Member for George Town, continues to misinform this House, speculating about issues that are not removed from the ability to prove. We are dealing with an empirical fact here. This is not a social issue where it is her opinion; this is an issue that is documented. When she says that the life of these buildings, for instance, is 20 years, that is a lie and it is misleading. There is no evidence to prove that she has available to her—just like many other things, but, in particular, with regard to this, the Member is totally out there making allegations about this particular project without any basis in fact.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, as I said earlier, I know this is an election year and we are going to have these issues arising. However, I would ask all Honourable Members not to use inflammatory language such as “another Member telling lies” or that sort of thing. Just say that “perhaps it is not true”—using a softer term because that can only inspire a similar reply.

Now, the Honourable Minister stated that there is no empirical evidence to support what you, the Member for North Side, have said about the life-span of the buildings being 20 years. Was that a statement made in your opinion, or do you have facts to support it?

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will not get into an argument with the Honourable Minister but I am certain. I do not have the Hansard, but I heard that said in this Legislative Assembly. However, Mr. Speaker I will withdraw—

[The Hon. Minister of Community Services rose]

The Speaker: All right. Just a second, Honourable Minister!

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I will withdraw saying “the life-span of those homes is only 20 years,” but I call—

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker!

The Speaker: Just a minute, Honourable Minister.
[Addressing the Member for North Side] You have withdrawn the statement that you have made. Honourable Minister, may I hear from you?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, if I am a business person and I have a product and a member of the public in the position that the Member for North Side is in, is allowed to devalue that product and to discredit that product without using the facts—

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, just a minute.

The Member for North Side has just withdrawn the statement so I cannot allow any further debate on that particular point.

Honourable Member for North Side, please continue.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

If that point upsets the Honourable Minister to that degree, I will ask to have it edited out of the proceedings.

The Speaker: I think by saying it was withdrawn it would be made null and void, so would you please continue by moving to a different subject please?

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I now ask the question: what is the lifespan of the homes? Mr. Speaker, I would like to read a letter from the Hansard of this Parliament, dated 23 June 2003. It was read into the Hansard of this Legislative Assembly by the same Honourable Minister, Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField, and I think it was written to the Auditor General when some questions came up about the Stores Regulations for putting out—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, could you give me the date of that Hansard again please?

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: 23 June 2003, unedited Hansard. It reads:

“Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Dear Sir, following ratification by Executive Committee, the Ministry of Community Services, Women’s Affairs, Youth and Sports is now to embark upon the procurement stage of the Affordable Housing Initiative. I have retained the services of Mr. Andrew Gibb as project manager responsible for the procurement and execution of the assembly, erection and delivery of two hundred houses under phase one of the initiative and over a period of time not exceeding fourteen months.

“The Ministry has embraced the concept of value engineering in order to achieve the procurement of these houses at the least possible cost and over the shortest possible time frame.

“As purchase prices for these houses are determined by affordability to purchasers rather than the sum of total input cost, we are committed to a dynamic process of cost benefit analysis on an ongoing basis and as such have already embarked on a fast tract procurement program that challenges traditional construction methodologies and related cost.

“I have directed the project manager to spare no effort in applying rigorous cost reduction criteria to every stage of the procurement and delivery process in achieving cost and the time targets that I have set for this project, he will have to ensure that everything procured for the initiative will have to be at the lowest possible cost within the shortest possible time frame and in so doing will comply with Government’s requirement for best value for money.”

This is 23 June 2003 unedited Hansard. We are almost one year later and we have now discovered that the price of these homes will be increased and still have not completed 100 homes. There is something wrong! I make no accusations but it is a matter that needs to be looked into deeply and carefully.

I know full well, as a representative for the district of North Side, that there are needs of people in my district who also require these low-cost houses. I think from what I see in the Budget, a total cost of one hundred will be approximately $14 million. I am sure if I am not correct the Third Official Member or the Leader of Government Business will correct me. If it is going to take some $28 million to provide 400 homes, when will the Government be in a position to provide a similar service facility to the people of the eastern districts?

I had nothing to say when the Honourable Minister for Community Services was speaking; I listened to him very carefully. I even listened to him more carefully when he ended so that I knew exactly what he was saying. There are some people who can go on the theatre stage—I am not one of those.

[Inaudible interjection]

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I can only act on the things that you have taught me to act on, Mr. Leader of Government Business.

The Speaker: Please continue Honourable Member.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Now, Mr. Speaker, I have said what I had to say on the housing scheme and I want to make it very clear that I, as the representative for the district of North Side, call on the Cabinet of these Islands to investigate this housing project and let the people know the true facts because we must clear up the perception out there.. It is left to the Cabinet to take on board that challenge because I personally will not support another $2 million in this Budget, whether I be accused that I do not want those people who require these homes to be able to get them or not. However, I am not, as a Legislative Assembly Member, going to continually support funds for a project that is going no where. I am here to say that if I were a part of a government, my first interest would be to give homes to these people that they could afford, not to build a project to get me re-elected in the next election. Let us stand on our records, not using these people to get re-elected because in the meantime we are using the country’s money that the country cannot afford.

I will now touch on Social Services. That one year that I spent in the Ministry it would seem as if I were superwoman and could have achieved all kinds of things. You know what Mr. Speaker, I am here to list today the things that have been achieved in that Ministry in the last three years. They were left there during that one year that I had the opportunity to serve there.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I did not implement them; I am saying they were there so it is much easier than starting from scratch. You remember the libraries when Julie used to go and open them and you got so upset that you had started them? Same thing! All right?

I refer to the Crisis Centre. I am not here to say that I started the Crisis Centre.

You know, Mr. Speaker, was it Mr. Jim who said that when you throw rocks in the pig-pen the one that squeals the loudest is the one that it hits. That is what is happening here this morning. I never interrupted this man. Ask him to shut up until I am finished!

The Speaker: Continue, Honourable Member.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, are you rising on a point of order?

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Sir. I think I have to rise on the language that is being used. No one on this side of the House is a pig and it is not right for that lady Member to say that. I understand the back and forth that is going on, Sir, but I draw the Chair's attention to that type of language.

The Speaker: I think it is a very good point made. As I said, I know that this is a very emotional period in our political session; that it is the election year, but I would ask that we try to contain our language to a more civilised situation so that we are not directly insulting anyone. I have heard that phrase used before and I think it is in the Hansard but I would ask that we desist from using it.

Please continue Honourable Member.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As I was saying, there was a plan for the Crisis Centre when I went into the Ministry—I guess if I use another word here now of what took place in 2001 I am going to be asked to withdraw that so I will say, 'after what took place in 2001'. It was a priority in that Ministry and this entire country knows that in 1995 it was Edna who piloted Private Member's Motion No. 1/95 to set up a women's affairs office within one of the Ministries. If we go back to the Hansard debate on that Motion, a place of safety for women was in the debate on that Motion that every Member of Parliament accepted without change to anything.

Retooling of persons on temporary financial assistance was what I was having the Permanent Secretary in the Ministry look into, along with the Director of Social Services. The facility for the Sunrise Centre was a disgrace; I left funds in the Budget to rent a larger facility, which was followed through. Community officers in the district and social workers in the schools; if the Honourable Minister of Education was present he could bear me out that a meeting took place between him, his Permanent Secretary, the Chief Education officer, the Director of Social Services, the Assistant Permanent Secretary in the Ministry of Community Affairs, and myself, because there is a dire need for social workers in our primary schools. I do not believe the answer is going to be using the social workers who need to deal with other matters in the district, in the schools. There should be educational social workers because—Mr. Speaker, I have been privy to this—the anti-social behaviour in the primary schools in this country leaves a lot to be desired. We can put in place as many programmes as we want and spend as much money as we want, but if we do not nip that anti-social behaviour in the bud in our primary schools it is too late when they reach George Hicks and John Gray.

We heard about the Children and Youth Services Foundation (CAYS). I congratulate the Minister on setting up the CAYS Foundation but the question that begs to be asked is why it is that the first Chairman of the CAYS Foundation relinquished his position? It is my understanding—and I am sure the Honourable Minister will get up on a point of order if I am not correct—that the entire Board has resigned because they were requested to fire the Chairman.

How are we going to achieve if we are going to constantly be changing the people who are trying to deal with these problems? We are compounding the problems if we continue to take these things. Mr. Speaker, the country needs to know why we got the land that was purchased in East End sometime ago. We heard we had to get this property, it had so many fruit trees on it and it had this and it had that, saying that all Members of this Assembly are interested in the welfare of our juveniles who need help.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, if you are going on to another subject perhaps this is a convenient spot to take the luncheon break. As I mentioned earlier, we will return in one hour sharp so that we can reconvene at 2 pm as we plan to do a suspension at 3 pm to reconvene again at 6 pm and continue until 10 pm tonight if that is necessary. Thank you.

Proceedings suspended at 1.01 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.14 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Member for North Side continuing her debate.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Before I pick up where I left off when we took the luncheon break, I think in my debate where I said $14 million was for 100 houses that should have been 200 houses.

Sometime ago, this Honourable House approved funds for the purchase of property in the district of East End for a programme to be known as the Wilderness Programme. This programme was for the juveniles in these Islands. I now question what has happened to this programme? How many juveniles are at that programme? How many have achieved from that programme and how many have not? The country needs to know what programmes are in place at Bonaventure Boys Home for the rehabilitation of the young people being held there. I wonder if we are only providing a babysitting service for these juveniles who need serious help.

You, Mr. Speaker, on many occasions in this House, since I was removed from Executive Council, have heard various Members say that nothing was achieved in the Ministry when I held that position but I am here to say today that the biggest mistake that the United Democratic Party made, as far as the juveniles of these Islands are concerned was when they closed Cayman Islands Marine Institute (CIMI). I have to say that when I was given responsibility for that Ministry CIMI was in disrepair. There were no programmes; the kids would run away; nobody would go and look for them. I made it my business to visit the American Marine Institute in Tampa that was providing us with that service and I sat with them and said I wanted someone in charge of the Cayman Islands Marine Institute that would deal with our juvenile problem. They sent a gentleman, I do not recall his surname, but his first name was Dan and, if the Government does not believe what I am saying they can sit with the Director of Social Services; that programme improved tremendously! That young man came to these Islands and got involved with the juveniles. I think it was the greatest increase of juveniles being sent to that facility by the courts in many years. He got involved to the point that if a child left, that child was found and returned to the Cayman Islands Marine Institute because of the relationship he had with the police.

I am of the opinion that no such programmes now exists at the Bonaventure Boys Home. If I am wrong I will be happy to apologise because the juveniles of this country together with our good youth are the future of the Cayman Islands.

We hear of Eagle House on the grounds of Her Majesty's Northward Prison. Whether the Honourable Minister or the Government wants to believe that because this is a separate facility, the stigma of Northward Prison is not going to be with those juveniles for the rest of their lives, they are sadly mistaken.

When I was the Minister we knew that we had to find a facility in a hurry for our juveniles because the downtown and West Bay lock-ups were unfit for human beings, much less juveniles. Therefore, the Social Services Department and the Ministry got together, and I believe the Ministry of Education was involved, but I may be wrong. We got a plan drawn for Orchid House which was going to be a facility where the children would be educated, it would have been on the property next to Fairbanks, but that was squashed because it was going to cost too much to operate it.

When I look at the description under rehabilitation, development and education in the Budget of juvenile offenders it reads, and I quote: "To provide prisoners with individual and group counselling ..." Yet they are telling me these juveniles will not have the stigma of being known as prisoners, and yet the Government, in the description, tells me it is: "To provide prisoners with individual and group counselling ..." I do not claim to be any accountant and I would not take that profession from the honourable accountants in this country, but in my opinion the sum of $177,461 is a laugh to operate Eagle House with the proper staff members required for a juvenile facility. We cannot use prison officers from the adult prison; they have been trained to deal with adult prisoners. These officers that will be dealing with the juveniles at Eagle House must have the necessary qualifications. I believe that the only member of staff at Eagle House—I may be wrong and if I am, I apologise—who has had any training at facilities of this type for the rehabilitation of juveniles is the lady who now heads that facility.

My next question is: What community developments will be taking place in the district? Before I move on to that my Honourable colleague has reminded me—where is the juvenile facility that will house young girls? It has been stated that Eagle House is only to house male juveniles. I go back to the community officers. I remember when the National Team was putting in place community officers for the districts; at one point there was some discussion about using the community officer for Bodden Town for the district of North Side.

The Speaker: Just a minute Honourable Member.

I will ask Members to please keep the discussion very low as it is a small room and it is feeding throughout the room and disrupting the proceedings.

Thank you very much. Please continue.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I met with the Honourable Minister responsible for Social Services at that time, my colleague, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, and the district of North Side was provided with a community officer. We are now being told that these community officers will be at the housing scheme — I want to make it clear before I am accused. I understand that there is a deed in the housing scheme for community officers but we cannot allow, particularly, the eastern districts to be without a community officer even though we will have social workers in Bodden Town. The presence of that community officer in the district is very important because it is time that we started to empower our communities.

I now ask a question on the Housing Scheme. On page 536 of the Purchase Agreement it says to me: "Provision of a grant to fund the administrative and management services to monitor the implementation of the Government Guaranteed Housing Scheme and the Affordable Housing Pro- gramme. Quantity: number of management staff: 2. Quality: a qualified chairman of the Trust: 90-100%: for a cost of $250,000." I need to know what are the qualifications of the Chairman, whoever that may be, of the National Housing Trust, to require this type of salary, as I do not have a clue. Are there other things included in this $250,000?

I would now like to move on to the Annual Estimates under the heading: "Central George Town Community Projects. Description: Provision of youth and community programmes based on the Rehoboth's Action Plan and including the provision of the Scranton Programme."

Appearing in the Budget is a figure of $300,000. Forecast for 2003/2004 was $286,000. My question is, in Finance Committee on the last Budget a Member of the Opposition, I think it was the Honourable Member for East End who saw a figure of $241,000 for the same Central George Town Community Projects. When this was questioned it was said that it was a computer glitch. I would like for it to now be explained: Why is the forecast for 2003/2004 in this Budget quoted $286,000 and it is going to be increased to $300,000? I ask the question because as a representative in this Legislative Assembly, I need to know in order for me to vote these funds. What is the Rehoboth action plan? I do not have a clue!

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Order.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: The reason I now ask this question; I have heard of transparency, accountability and openness.

The Rotary Club of Grand Cayman was on CITN advertising its Meals on Wheels through the same community programme. We need to know what the Rotary's contribution is to Meals on Wheels; what the Government's contribution is; who are the qualified personnel, the recognised institutions, and how many are in the adult literacy programme. We need to know if any parents pay for the after-school programmes and how much, and the reason for the specialty visits to four persons per week.

These are the questions that need to be answered and the Honourable Minister is whispering across to my colleague about Ms. Lucille Seymour writing this for me. I need to make him understand, you should be the first one because it is your sister who operates the Rehoboth Ministries. Let it be transparent alright!

The Speaker: Honourable Member, please continue.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: When we look under that same heading we see that a community development officer is to be provided by the Department of Youth, Sports, and Community Development, which will also be providing the recreational and educational programmes included in the $110,639. My question is: Is the salary of this Community Development Officer being paid from that sum or is this being paid otherwise?

We heard a lot said about sports and I agree that sports can be a positive force on young people because I have been there. Yet, in this Budget I have looked and there is very little to assist the young people of the eastern districts to reach their potential in any sport. I particularly mention the district of North Side; it is the only district that has not had a coach provided over the past year.

We must understand that when you try to punish me through lack of facilities for the young people; when you do not allow them to develop their potential as in any other district in the Island, it is not me that you are punishing. I particularly mention swimming; it is a fast growing sport but there is not one primary school child, to my knowledge, in the eastern districts who is able to travel to the Lions Pool to reap the benefits of the services offered there.

I would love to have seen in this Budget, at least, a small sum that the Ministry would have been looking into the possibility of providing those young people in those districts with a swimming pool and not only the young people, but there are many adults who cannot swim. I guess it is because I am a Member of the Opposition and so is the Member for East End.

I have made mention to the Honourable Minister responsible for Sports, if he recalls. When we look at the photograph of our swimming team going to CARIFTA, and I am proud of those young people and I would particularly like to make mention of Shawn Fraser who has now qualified for the Olympics. However, there is not one Government primary school child in that number of children! There is not one George Hicks, if we want to go that far. There was one John Gray and one Triple C, so it has to be that we need to allow these primary school children to develop their potential.

I now come to the end of my debate, but I spent until 1 am trying to find that figure in the Budget that used to be there from when the Honourable Leader of Government Business was responsible for senior citizens and social services. There was a figure and there were plans drawn up for a facility for the district of North Side because the senior citizens of that district are in East End and at The Pines. I wonder why that figure has now been removed. It is a genuine need in the district of North Side for a facility for the senior citizens.

When we come to Finance Committee, I hope that the Minister of Education will be in a position to identify that enough funds are in the Budget to provide the North Side Primary School with the full number of teachers. We can no longer deal with double classes. I will also be looking to that Minister, if there are funds, because I have requested for a bus for the North Side Primary School. In 1993 when the National Team was in Government the North Side Primary School returned the reception class to the school and it has been growing and has now outgrown the bus that it has. To transport those children to sports day at the Truman Bodden Sports Complex it takes two buses. I have spoken to the Honourable Minister and I look forward to him identifying in the Budget funds for a North Side school bus.

I am calling on the United Democratic Party Government that should there be discussions with the Minister of Health on the use of the old North Side Clinic as a resource centre for the people of North Side, and this building can be used, that they will provide the necessary funds for the renovation. This is a facility that is sadly lacking and the young people have now come on board and are searching for a place to house computers that they have asked companies who are changing their systems to donate and have been donated.

That brings me to the end of my contribution and my contribution has asked many questions and I look forward to receiving answers to these very important questions on the social aspects and particularly, the housing scheme in these Islands.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The third and last call! Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I understood that the house would be adjourning . . .

The Speaker: At 3 pm.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The funeral starts at 3 pm and I am a participant in it, as was indicated.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I think the Member has raised a reasonable point. If it starts at three o'clock then he would need a little advance time to get to the funeral if he is a participant. Perhaps someone else would wish to speak. We have 22 minutes remaining.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we want to accommodate and that is why we took the break at this time to accommodate the Opposition who is going to this funeral, and if the Member is going to speak he should say that and then we will adjourn.

The Speaker: Is it the intention of the Honourable Second Elected Member to speak? My understanding is that he would speak when we return at 6 pm.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Honourable Members, please work with me on this. Is it the understanding Second Elected Member that you will speak when we return at 6 pm? Alright, if that is the wish we will take the suspension at this time to return at 10 minutes to 6 pm so that we can start precisely at 6 pm. Thank you.

Proceedings suspended at 2.40 pm

Proceedings resumed at 6.07 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

I recognise the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As I rise to offer my contribution for the fifth time in this Honourable House on the Budget of this country, I find it necessary to reflect and perhaps lament on the process. It is now 10 minutes past six and if this process of debating the Budget is to be something more than some ritualistic exercise it ought to be done in circumstances which the country is able to hear what its elected representatives are saying.

I note, Mr. Speaker, that there is not a single member of the press present. That is a situation which should not obtain, particularly, in relation to a matter so critical, as a debate on the country's Budget. We are here in circumstances, as far as I am aware, which have never occurred before, where not even a proper Budget session or meeting of the House was called.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: I wonder if I could just interrupt the Honourable Member. Procedurally we should have called on the Leader of Government Business to suspend Standing Order 10(2) so that we can continue business beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move for suspension of Standing Orders in order to take business after 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended in order for us to continue proceedings of the House.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

That exercise just underlined the point I was seeking to make; that the business of this Honourable House is ordinarily conducted between the hours of 10am and 4.30 pm.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am not, for a moment, afraid of hard work or late hours. I am a nocturnal creature by nature. I do my best work late into the night; it has always been my way. That is not the point! If this Legislative and debate process is to be accorded the respect that it is due, it ought to be conducted in circumstances in which people have an opportunity to see and listen to what is being said about the country's affairs.

Now, everywhere I go Mr. Speaker people say to me: "I heard you all on the radio last night but I couldn't stay up till 11-12 o'clock to hear what was being said." That is what we do to the process. That is how we deprive the people who we are elected to represent—of access to what their elected representatives are saying when we do things like this. As the Honourable Leader of the Opposition said, I take succour from the fact that the end is in sight and hasten the 17th November.

This process, this ritual, in my respectful view, is what this has been reduced to. What we are now going through is something which is in entirely irrelevant to what the people in this country are feeling, seeing, hearing and experiencing.

The Budget produced by this Government suffers from a real disconnection from the reality we live in Cayman. The Honourable Third Official Member and the Honourable Leader of Government Business combined have presented, what one of my constituents has said to me, a Glass House Budget.

The Honourable Third Official Member devoted much of his address to explaining the benefits of the new system of accounting, which the Government now employs. It is a good system, Mr. Speaker. I am not suggesting otherwise. However, as far as the average person in the street is concerned they could not care less. What they want to know is what the Government is doing about the things that matter to their day-to-day existence.

I cannot help but to also say that with all of the aplomb with which the Honourable Third Official Member spoke about, this new system, and how he lauded the Leader of Government Business for his contribution to the exercise, I cannot help but reflect on what the Honourable Leader of Government, as he now is, said about this same system for which credit is now being given to him. When the issue was first floated some years ago, it was by the now Honourable Minister of Education and the now Honourable Minister of Health and the now Leader of the Opposition. We will see, Mr. Speaker, who really promoted this system and who really ought to be given credit for persevering to see it through.

On the 15th September, 1995 as recorded in the Official Hansard Report of this Honourable House for that year, on page 714, the Honourable Leader of Government Business, as he now is, had this to say: "I think Honourable Members on the Government side who have spoken have clarified well what we are doing and what has already been done. I agree with them that we do not need to incorporate what they are asking us to do." That, Mr. Speaker, became known as the Financial Management Initiative (FMI).

"The Honourable Financial Secretary has said that a new reporting system is to come mid-year but that it is already in the works.

"Why should we pick up on a law that is more complex, which is predicated on a different economic and political structure, where you have a Minister of Finance rather than a Financial Secretary who is a civil servant, and seek to implement it here in the Cayman Islands? I say we already have mechanisms in place, and continuing to develop these to suit our own environment is what is most needed.

"So to sum up, I cannot agree with Motion. It is just another way for the Opposition to try to give themselves credit, saying that the country's finances are awry and that we need these sort of systems in place to keep politicians in check. They have amended that by saying that you do not know what you are going to get in the future. That is true, but I do not believe that we can incorporate what they are asking for, and it would not do us any good in our present system."

He went on to say: "The Motion itself does not make any sense because it asks us to introduce something similar to the Fiscal Responsibility Act of New Zealand, and it says nothing about the companion Bill that would need to put in place if we were to accede to what they want us to do.

"Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I thank the House for their time. I do not believe the Motion makes any sense other than what the Third Official Member said we needed to do, and he already has that in hand."

So Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Member please let me have the date of that extract from the Hansard.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: 15 September 1995, Sir.

The Speaker: Thank you so much.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: So, Mr. Speaker, the much maligned Leader of the Opposition of whom all manner of evil has been spoken in this Honourable House and outside its confines, is not as quite as bereft of vision as some, in particular the Leader of Government Business, would like it to appear.

Mr. Speaker, it now seems, as it has on a number of occasions in the recent and not so recent past, that the Honourable Leader of Government Business has seen the error of his ways pointed out to him by persons like the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. He now applauds this process, boasts about the fact that it has come to be under the United Democratic Party Government, conveniently leaving out in the process that the Bill, which gives life to this was brought to this House under the leadership of the now Honourable Leader of the Opposition, my colleague, the First Elected Member for George Town. However that, Mr. Speaker, is another example not cited when the long list of 'un-achievements' is conveniently trotted out by the United Democratic Party Government and its Back Bench supporters. However, as has happened more than once in these past two and a half years, the country comes to know eventually the truth and in this election year we shall all come to know the real reasons why the Honourable Leader of the Opposition sits where he now sits.

This Budget seems to ignore the apathy and cynicism and seeming indifference that the public perceives Government has in relation to matters of governance, often manifested within this very Chamber. The delivery of the Budget Address and the companion Policy Statement is a prime example. The Honourable Leader of Government Business paid us a courtesy call read from a prepared script in transit to parts unknown to which he then departed. Sufficient respect for the process was not even accorded so that Members of the Government and its supporting Back Bench and the Leader of Government Business would present themselves in numbers to hear the response of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, which was delivered last Wednesday. There were occasions when the Honourable Leader of the Opposition was presenting the official reply of the Opposition, when less than three of the elected Members of the Government and its supporting Back Bench were present in this Chamber.

You see, what we say does not matter, as far as they are concerned, because, as I said, this is merely a ritualistic exercise; the Government has decided what it is that it is going to do and that is it. Then Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Minister of Community Affairs has the audacity to stand and repeat over and over like a mantra: "What is the Opposition saying?" Had he been sitting here, perhaps he would have heard.

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition, my colleague, the Third Elected Member for George Town, and the Member for North Side have all spoken at considerable length and in considerable detail about a number of issues. I am not intending to traverse that ground in any detail. However, there are a number of postscripts I believe I ought to add in addition to dealing with a number of substantive issues, which were not covered by my Honourable colleagues. I regret that it does not appear that my Honourable colleague, the Elected Member for East End, will have an opportunity to debate the Budget Address and Policy Statements, as he is really quite ill and could not be here today and I understand will have to travel to Miami tomorrow for medical attention. I may, if time permits, take the opportunity to say a few things about one or two aspects, which he was intending to cover, in particular, this whole question of the port at Half Moon Bay.

I really must say something about this whole question of the Affordable Housing Initiative. The Honourable Minister of Community Affairs has said in this Honourable House (I cannot say he has said it elsewhere because I have not heard him, or I have not had it reported to me that he said it elsewhere) in my presence that the Opposition, and in particular, the George Town Members, are doing everything they can to sabotage his Affordable Housing Initiative. That derives principally because of concerns we have expressed about the way the whole project is being organised, administered and the number of black holes existing in the information that has been forthcoming from that Honourable Minister's Ministry in relation to this project. I know that the Honourable Minister for Community Affairs will say, as he often has, that we do not want to see poor people get anything and that is why we are crying down his project and he wants to make sure that poor people get a roof over their heads, and that sort of thing.

I know that although he did not know me very well before I entered politics, and was ultimately elected to this Honourable House some three and a half years ago, the Honourable Minister knows me well enough that, whatever he may say publicly, I do care deeply about the social issues in this country and about providing the best possible life for the people I was elected to represent. He knows that. However, we all have a duty in this Honourable House and the Opposition has theirs, and it is to question what it is the Government is doing or is not doing, as the case may be. I am one who believes firmly in following due process. Therefore, the initial questions I had about the project related to that and the concerns have now extended quite beyond that concern.

When you hear him talking about we need to think beyond marl and fill, the issues go way beyond marl and fill. To be precise, the Finance Committee of this Honourable House has approved a guarantee of $24 million for this project. The objective of which is to ensure that those who need it and those who cannot afford access to other housing have the opportunity to get for themselves their own place where they can live in decency and with pride at a price they can afford. Nothing the Honourable Member has said in this Honourable House or elsewhere within my earshot convinces me that this project is achieving any of those objectives.

The Honourable Minister said to this House in February 2002 that 200 houses would be delivered in 12 months. To be best of my knowledge not one house has been delivered thus far. Not one! There are concerns that have been expressed to me by members of the community about the standard of these houses.

The Honourable Elected Member for North Side referred to rusting. I have had similar reports. I have been to the Windsor Park site on a number of occasions and have seen that certain work is being carried out there. I did not have access within the houses so I cannot say what was inside or what has been done to correct these things if they did exist. I have not actually seen them rusting with my own eyes. If it were not I would say so, otherwise I am not going to pretend I saw something I did not see.

I also understand there were concerns about the structural integrity of the initial tranche of houses that were constructed and that a new engineering process or system has now been employed in relation to the others.

It behoves the Honourable Minister to tell all and sundry what the true situation is. I also understand that the cost, if I remember correctly, initially proposed was $48,000 for two bedrooms and $59,000 for two bedrooms with a study, which is, essentially three bedrooms.

I understand now, Mr. Speaker, from a number of sources—although the amounts I have been told have conflicted so I am not going to state any of them because obviously some of them are not right—the proposed costs of the houses have now increased significantly. Are these houses going to be affordable or not; affordable in the sense that persons who would not otherwise be able to purchase a home in the conventional way through getting a mortgage from a bank are going to be able to afford them? That is the question that ought to be answered.

I also understand that the whole question of the administration of the National Housing and Community Development Trust (NHCDT) is another real issue, and that the administration of this whole thing is in chaos. I understand from sources that the Minister himself is Chairman of the NHCDT. The Honourable Minister ought to tell us because if that is the case I think it is a huge error. I can say to the Honourable Minister that I could never support a situation where the Minister chairs a board that should be reporting to him. What is the point of having the Board? The way the system should work is that you have a board which is supposed to follow the broad policy framework that is set out by the Minister. The Minister appoints people with good judgement and relevant experience to carry out that function. However, the Minister ought not to be the Board otherwise the whole reporting system, the checks and balances that are inherent if it is properly followed, simply does not apply.

I have to speculate that a large part of the problems with being able to deliver even one house to the people of this community relate to those administrative issues. My sources tell me there is huge dissent on the Board and the Minister insists on running the show himself to the point where various Board Members have been thinking about quitting. What is the point? One of them said to me: "We simply come here to be told by the Honourable Minister what it is he wants done." The Minister should explain what is transpiring in relation to the administration of the Housing Development Trust. There is C$24 million at stake.

There is another problem that I have with the way this whole affordable housing initiative is being developed and run, and I can say that a People's Progressive Movement (PPM) administration would not do it this way. When this question of providing affordable housing was mooted, it was at a time when the domestic economy of these Islands was pretty poor; there were many people involved in the construction industry who were simply out of work. We are talking about two and three bedroom houses—I am sure the Minister will correct me if I am wrong—900 and 1200 square feet, all of which are a very similar design if not exact. You are building off a template. The grand plan is 400 houses.

I do not know who it would take to convince me that we do not have the expertise, personnel and the desire within the construction industry in these Islands for local contractors to produce those homes at a price, which would be better than they are now going to be sold to potential purchasers. It never went out to tender. No local contractor ever had an opportunity to participate in this or to even tell the Government what they could do the job for.

I remember the Honourable Minister saying at the time—I cannot recall if it was on the Floor of this Honourable House, but certainly in my presence—that the objective of this exercise was not to create employment and work but to produce houses. Now, Mr. Speaker, where the Honourable Minister and by extension, the Government's philosophy departs from that of a PPM administration is this: there should be a symbiotic relationship between the two. We should have a situation which benefits the local populace all around with local contractors getting the jobs and local people doing the work thereby producing homes for our own people.

I recall one of the compelling reasons put forward as to why that was necessary: Mr. Speaker, because the Honourable Minister felt that the timeline, production and delivery of these houses were so short that he had to be able to have the assurance that they could be done within the time frame, which he said then was 12 months from February 2002. Well, there is no test like the test of time. Those who were contracted—I can never say the name correctly—I think it is Vetromeccaniche, some Italian outfit. I do not know what the contract said; I do not know whether the contract required production by February 2003 or not and I do not know whether the Government is in breach of the contract or not. I have heard rumours that the Government is going to be sued but it is pure rumour, but again, I ask the Honourable Minister to address that.

What we do know is that as at this moment, 19 May 2004, not one single house has yet been delivered. That much we know. So, who is truly benefiting from this exercise? Are the persons for whom these homes were intended going to benefit as a result of this? I trust the contractors are benefiting.

The Honourable Minister has spoken about developing communities. I do not know that I agree entirely with his commune approach to these things but I do know and agree with this aspect of what he says he is proposing to do (as yet we have seen little evidence that it is happening), that the persons who should be taking residence in these places will need the support of community officers and of the Social Services system. There is no question about that but my sources tell me that the extent of what is being proposed now are simply the establishment of a nursery and a Laundromat at each of these sites. There are no other social programmes that have been mooted or developed, or any where near close to being able to be delivered when the houses, hopefully some time soon, are delivered.

The Honourable Elected Member for North Side pointed to $250,000 in the Budget for the administration of the National Housing and Community Development Trust. Whether that is simply to fund the salaries of the professional Chairman, and I am presuming by that point the Honourable Minister will have—

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are you rising on a point of order?

Point of Order

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: I am rising on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, the deliberate attempt here is to mislead this honourable House to think that I, as the Chairman, am to benefit financially on this $250,000. The Member for North Side made that suggestion this morning and I would just like the Second Elected Member for George Town to read the Purchase Agreements correctly. He knows that is not the case. So, there is no reason why he should be suggesting anything about salaries for the professional Chairman.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, that is an explanation to what the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town raised. However, I think it is sufficient explanation to provide the person on the Floor now with the information in regard to the $250,000 that it is not in regard to the salary of the Chairman. However, he did not provide any further details on the breakdown of that. Perhaps he could do that in due course.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, just to note that I was at my office just now and I am told that this is the way the Purchase Agreements are written.

The Speaker: Thank you very much Honourable Minister.

Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town, would you please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, just to make two points. I was not for a moment seeking to suggest that the Honourable Minister himself was going to get this salary at all. If I conveyed that impression I apologise and I withdraw that. I was simply referring to what is contained in the Purchase Agreements for Statutory Authorities, Government Companies and Non-Governmental Output Suppliers. If you would be so good, Sir, to give me a moment I will turn to the relevant page so I can read what it says.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Sir. [Pause] Mr. Speaker, I will not delay proceedings in this Honourable House any longer. I have asked the Elected Member for North Side to try to find it and I will move on to another point until it is found.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, there are two persons employed for the administration of the Trust. Again, perhaps the Honourable Minister at some point can explain in detail. I know he does not like this and I have to ask the whole world to forgive me but I am a person who believes both God and the devil are in the details. Perhaps I can be forgiven for insisting on some detail in relation to what I am about to say.

As I understand it these houses are to form part of a strata or various strata. They are to be owned by the Trust and are then to be conveyed in some way or another to potential owners. I am not sure whether it is outright ownership; some sort of lease arrangement or whether these people will hold the property on some sort of trust and that the property will then revert to the National Housing and Community Development Trust upon their demise. I am not sure whether or not they will have the ability once they have come to own these properties to sell them or bequeath them in the way one normally would expect; that is another question I believe the Honourable Minister would really assist all to understand better of this process—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I just want to make a point here. You will have another opportunity to raise these issues in Finance Committee. At this point I know that Standing Order 63(2) speaks to this, that the debate shall be confined to the financial and economic state of the Islands and general principles of Government policy and administration, as indicated by the Bill and the estimates. I do not think that the intention is to get answers during debate so I would ask that the Honourable Minister take notes of these points that are being raised and in Finance Committee you can deal with these in further detail.

Thank you. Please continue, Honourable Second Elected Member.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to belabour this issue much longer because there are other aspects of the Budget and the Policy Statement that I wish to address. I will conclude by dealing with the point to which the Honourable Minister took exception.

On page 536 of the Purchase Agreements for Statutory Authorities, Government Companies and Non Governmental Output Supplier for the year ended 30 June 2005, there appears under the Purchase Agreement between the Cabinet of the Cayman Islands and the National Housing and Community Development Trust. The following says: “Management of National Housing and Community Development Trust.

“Description: Provision of a grant to fund the administrative and management services to monitor the implementation of the Government Guaranteed Housing Scheme and the Affordable Housing Programme.

“Measures.

“Quantity: number of management staff; two, at present and two projected.

“Quality: Qualified chairman of the Trust.

“Supplier: National Housing and Community Development Trust, Cost: $250,000.”

That is where my observation came from and I just want to make it clear that whatever differences I may have with the Honourable Minister for Community Services I am not seeking to suggest anything about him that is untoward—

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of . . .

The Speaker: Are you rising on a point of order?

Point of Elucidation

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: On a point of elucidation.

The Speaker: On a point of elucidation the speaker may continue speaking. The only time that he must sit is if a point of order is being raised. Therefore, I will ask that the Second Elected Member for George Town continue unless he is being stopped on a point of order.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I would like to then rise on a point of order.

The Speaker: What is your point of order please?

Point of Order

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, the Member is misleading the House and I am suggesting that the Member is quite aware of the Ownership Agreement which forms part of the documents that we are referring to. My proof of the fact that he knows is that he is not referring at the same time to page 289 in the Ownership Agreement which deals with the National Housing and Community Development Trust, which states quite clearly to him what is being purchased.

The Speaker: Thank you very much Honourable Minister. I have dealt with the question of points of order being raised under the question of misleading the House. There is no such point of order in our Standing Orders. Unless it can be proven that the misleading of the House is intentional and fraudulent, I would like for Members to desist from using that as a point of order unless that can be proven.

Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town, would you please go to another point and leave that one.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Since I have the Honourable Minister of Community Services squarely in my sights, I might as well pursue this other aspect under this Ministry. That has to do with this whole question of what is called Cayman and Youth Services (CAYS).

The Honourable Minister spent a great deal of time demonstrating all of the wonderful work that he and his Ministry have done in relation to the social uplifting of this country and this community. He pointed with pride to many programmes and achievements, and he spoke with disdain about the efforts that had been made by those who preceded him in that office—in particular my dear colleague, the Elected Member for North Side. He even spoke about CAYS, but what he did not do was tell this honourable House the monumental disaster that CAYS has become.

When the decision was taken to get rid of the Cayman Islands Marine Institute, and those associated with it, and to take the Bonaventure House and the Frances Bodden Girls Home and put them under one umbrella called by the acronym CAYS, there were many in the communities who had concerns about this. Nonetheless, the Minister is in charge and he is entitled to determine policy—and so he did. However, the understanding that persons associated with it had was that CAYS was going to be created as a legal entity charged by its Articles and Memorandum of Association with responsibility for the welfare of young people. If I remember, its remit was not limited or restricted to Bonaventure House and the Frances Borden Girls Home.

Here we are, if I am not mistaken, almost two years down the road. As far as I am aware, CAYS, as a legal entity, still does not exist. There was a board appointed by the Minister. I am not sure one could properly call it a board because CAYS was not established as a legal entity. Nevertheless, we will call it an executive committee. Its first Chairman was Mr. Richard Arch; he has since left. We had Mr. Roach, a Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of sorts; he is gone. There was Mrs. Mary Lawrence, I am not quite sure if she was a CEO but she was a certainly a person who acted as though she were in charge; she is gone. Now, Mr. Speaker, a few weeks ago, the entire Board, I gather, has gone. So, who is now in charge of the administration of the boys' and girls' homes in these Islands? I guess the Minister, or the Ministry, or both.

When the Honourable Leader of Government Business stands up on the floor of this House and reads a prepared speech talking about a responsible hand at the implementation tiller he needs to point to these examples of implementation. The whole exercise of the executive must be more than making nice speeches in the House and clapping each other on the shoulder and pounding their own chests about their achievements. To use the expression overused by the Second Elected Member for West Bay, they have to produce evidence that they have done what is necessary and that they have achieved results when the rubber meets the road. When the rubber meets the road is when implementation is required. When you speak about stewardship it is about whether you are getting results. If one person could do the job there would be no need for all of these committees, boards, organisations and other entities, which are charged with the responsibility for various things.

The Minister cannot be all to everything and everyone. If one is going to have the hand on the tiller you have to be able to inspire confidence in those who you lead and charge with responsibility for the execution of the programmes that you have developed. You have to be able to take their advice and not create impasses so that when you disagree with what the board wishes or says, in its good judgment should happen, you refuse to yield and they all leave. That was what happened with CAYS. We are not talking about some bunch of young irresponsible people, we are talking about people, many of whom are charged with pastoral care, like the Reverend Joe Crawford, Pastor Al Ebanks; people with good, sound judgment.

However, the Honourable Minister, as he has already threatened, will say that because the Opposition—and in particular me—takes issue with that management style, that it will cost [us] support in George Town. One of the issues that brought the situation about related to whether the employment of Mr. Michael Myles should continue or not. I know Michael and I like him. I have no idea whether what the Board decided to do was right or wrong but we have to understand when we sit in these responsible roles that we have to get beyond personalities.

In recent years the Honourable Minister was fond of talking about the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and me as 'frien frien government'. This comes back to a point which I take over and over again with this Government: They are far too ready to depart from established rules and procedures when the going gets a little rough.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I will not even bother to repeat what he said. I will not [give] it that degree of respect.

The whole system falls down when we do not follow procedure and I am not going to read the litany of examples that exists this evening on that front. However, I say with the greatest of sincerity that the problems that have arisen with the administration of the Affordable Housing Initiative; the problems which exist in relation to CAYS, all comes back to that fundamental point because when we have rules everyone should follow them. As soon as you make one exception because it is the Minister then the rules no longer have any strength; no one has any regard or respect for them.

I say to this honourable House and to the people who we, the Opposition, represent in this country—which is everyone—that a PPM administration will respect the rule of law, will have regard to proper process and procedure, will consult and listen to advice. That is a fundamental philosophical difference between the PPM and the UDP (United Democratic Party). The country can decide which they prefer—and they will.

I am not quite through with that Honourable Minister yet. The Honourable Minister said that I had sent the honourable Elected Member for North Side to do my dirty work because I was afraid to deal with him. I know he knows better than that as well, but the Honourable Minister should be ashamed of himself.

We had a situation in George Town in January of last year which traumatised the people who lived in the inner-city areas—flooding. He knows it well because, to give him his due, he was out there like the rest of us and he did, Mr. Speaker, like your good self, use his best endeavours to make the lives of those people as comfortable as he could in those difficult times. However, he sits in the halls of influence and decision. I do not. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition does not. We brought a Motion to this Honourable House a year ago (graciously accepted by your good self as the Minister responsible) to have an investigation carried out and for steps to be taken to address the problem of flooding in central George Town. Here we are on the start of the rainy season. A report was to be presented; a committee was to be established which would prepare a report. I have not heard, Mr. Speaker, since you demitted the Chair—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I assume you are going to tie this into the Budget debate.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I can because the Budget is about the allocation of resources.

Our indictment against this Government, which was read by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, was that the Government's priorities are all skewed. They have allocated the resources of this country to areas and to issues that we believe should take a lower priority in Government's thinking and consideration. Just as we speak about infrastructure, I am speaking to people's lives and existences and homes. As far as I have been able to ascertain, there is not one penny in the Budget allocated to addressing this issue.

What are we going to do?

Are we going to wait until we have another downpour akin to that in January one year ago, and people are put out of their houses, their personal possessions are destroyed and damaged, they are traumatised again and Government has to deploy the Social Services Department and agents to go and help put things back together again? When they talk about all these wonderful social programmes they are not addressing the things that are truly important to people's lives—like where they live.

I am so sorry, Mr. Speaker, that the Honourable Minister of Community Services has left these Chambers because he really needed this lecture.

I move on to another two related subjects, which are near and dear, not just to my heart but the whole PPM philosophy and policy about how one should develop a country and a society. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition spoke at great length and with great passion about the lack of attention and lack of resources allocated in this Budget by this Government over its tenure to technical and vocational training. I am not proposing to spend a great deal of time rehashing any of that.

What I want to talk about is the shortsightedness that is apparent from the Policy Statement of the Honourable Leader of Government Business when he speaks, in his usual vague and general way, about the proposed development of three new 5-star hotels. The whole question of labour, social relations and education in the broad sense are all inextricably linked and it seems to me that this Government has failed to make that connection and they see issues as disjunctive and completely separate.

Let us use an example that is ongoing. We have the Ritz Carlton Hotel which has been the subject of the Lord knows how much controversy, and that is not what this is about. That is for another day, but very soon. It is being built by a foreign developer, principally by foreign labour. I saw a report some time ago saying that the Ritz was applying for a thousand work permits. I will pause here and say who is that development truly benefiting? Aside from certain people including some politicians who are deriving benefits from commissions on the sales of the residences—

The Speaker: Honourable Second Elected Member I would remind you again that we are debating the Budget. I am giving a lot of latitude because this is usually done with the debate of the Budget and the Throne Speech, but I would like for us to focus our attention as closely as possible to the Standing Order 63(2), which I read. Unless you can show how this is tying back into the Budget I would ask that you move on to another subject please. Thank you. Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, Sir, I am accepting your invitation to refer you specifically to the Policy Statement, which is referred to by the Honourable Third Official Member in his Budget Address. He says that he is dealing with the fiscal matters and the Honourable Leader of Government Business would be dealing with policy matters; that the Budget was two-dimensional so they were taking responsibility for separate aspects of it.

My referral to the three new 5-star hotels comes directly from the Policy Statement of the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

It is at . . . I will give you the page in a minute, Sir.

The Speaker: I recall, so please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Sir.

Mr. Speaker, I was saying that the development is foreign owned, the labour is principally foreign labour. If and when it is completed who is going to staff it? How are labour needs going to be met?

That comes back to the position we have taken from the beginning: that development purely for the sake of development is a very bad idea. If every Caymanian was happily employed, the problem would be less of a problem. However, the problem we have is compounded because the educational system—to which we contend sufficient resources are not being allocated—is failing our young people. They are not equipped to take advantage of the employment opportunities which developments such as this offer. We do things like going and buying a property in West Bay some two years ago—it used to be owned by John Burns, I believe it is called Island House—ostensibly for the development of a hotel training school. I have not heard anything about any training school being developed.

As I said, where are the masons, carpenters, electricians, plumbers and other staff going to come from to construct these three new edifices? We certainly have not in place anything like the kind of technical vocational establishment which would be able to impart to them the necessary skills so that they could seize the advantage of these very lucrative jobs when they come up. Who is going to staff them? We are going to import more people again because our people do not have the wherewithal to take those jobs within the hotels. Our people should not be relegated to the bottom rung in the vocations and trades and that is what the failure of this Government to allocate sufficient funds to technical vocational training and education overall is doing.

When the Honourable Minister of Education spoke, he said (with some degree of pride) that the Government was offering a hundred scholarships a year—which he says is more than what previous governments have done. I agree with him. However, on closer analysis we understand that this is not quite as good as it sounds because many of these scholarships are not four-year academic scholarships. Many of them are for much shorter periods at the Community College. I am not saying it is not good, but it is not quite as good as it sounds. I am approached regularly by young people (and some not so young) in this country who desire the opportunity for further education. They simply cannot afford it. My view is that this country cannot spend too much money on education. I would rather we do not have a $47 million Turtle Farm but we have the kind of educational institutions and the kind of scholarships that we need available to our people.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: It does not matter, Mr. Speaker, where the money for the Turtle Farm comes from. The same way that the Government can come up with innovative ways to fund that kind of project, they can find ways to fund education if education is a priority—which I contend it is not of the UDP Government. I solemnly promise the people of this country that it will be for a PPM administration.

I want to deal with the question of Health Services, but the Honourable Minister responsible has been operating below the radar for far too long. He almost brought me to tears with his impassioned speech the other day (I think some of it is reported on the front page of today's Caymanian Compass), when he said how hard this job was and he has never done anything harder in his life. I almost thought that he was asking for some relief! The 17th of November is not too far away, so I ask him to hold on at least until then.

The Honourable Minister of Health Services has I know, politics apart, worked very hard at this very difficult issue, but again, I come back to what I said in relation to the Honourable Minister of Community Services. When it comes to implementation, despite the claim of having a responsible hand at the implementation tiller, the Government, as a whole, in administering, in particular in this instance, has been tried and found wanting. If you ask anyone in this country whether they believe that the provision of Health Services has improved since the creation of the Health Services Authority (HSA) in July 2002, you will be hard pressed to find one person who says 'yes'. Now, the re-creation of the HSA (because it did exist before—I think the Leader of Government Business remembers that well). We supported and still support the concept of the HSA. The problem has been in some very poor judgment.

To start with, the transitional process was too short. It was rushed as, in my view, has been just about anything that this Government has proposed. The result was resistance from those who work with the provision of Health Services. The decision to cut the number of personnel (as was done in 2002) from 666 to 84 less than that, 582, about 40 per cent of which were Caymanian. The result was an immediate downturn in the quality of service being provided by the Hospital. They were asking significantly less staff to do the same work.

In what I believe was the craziest decision I have ever come across, they put persons in charge of the HSA Board who had not a clue about health services but were going to run it as a business.

Thus, what we had in not quite two years since the HSA was formed, was a pilot at the helm (with him as CEO or Managing Director or whatever), but he had Mr. Lewis Ebanks who is a very successful business man, but as far as I know never had a thing to do with health services before that. Both of them are now history.

We then said, "Well, that is not quite working" so we imported a professional in the person of Mr. Michael Elliot, who was paid a salary that is still the greatest mystery in these Islands. There are conflicting reports that Mr. Elliot himself has quit. Sources close to him have told me that nothing could be further from the truth; that, in fact, the goodly gentleman was off of the Island and returned to find his office door with a new lock on it. I am told that legal proceedings are imminent in relation to his departure from the Health Services Authority.

Lo and behold, in another sensational announcement, we have four new persons at the helm of the HSA who, astonishingly, were always there. It seems that the HSA and the Minister have suddenly awoken two years later and realised that the kind of expertise and ability that they needed in a CEO for the Hospital was actually there already. It is quite an amazing set of events. The Lord only knows—for I am sure this honourable House will never know—how much money has been shunted down the tube in the fiasco in relation to the HSA over the course of the past two years.

When is the Minister going to realise that you cannot have an HSA Board charged with responsibility for the administration of the Hospital, which does not have the requisite experience, training and background on it, especially if, as I am told, it is a board that micro-manages the Hospital down to the point when someone complains about having to wait too long. In the emergency room you are likely to see the Chairman of the Board come and accost the doctor. The trained medical staff members, many of whom have more degrees than a thermometer, are being told what to do by people who were selling furniture before they were Chairman of the Board. That is what the administration of Health Care in this country has been reduced to.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: [response to comment made] . . . could not even do that properly.

With the greatest of respect and regard for the Honourable Minister, Mr. Speaker, I am not sure who is directing his hand when it is on the tiller in relation to choices about the top staff at the Health Services Authority, or on the Board. However, I do hope that the new group of very able, long-serving persons, all of whom are women, who have recently been appointed, are left to run the Hospital.

The Board needs to understand that its role is about the development of policy and ensuring that its policies are being implemented and results are forthcoming. The Honourable Minister ought to have more than two physicians and persons with medical experience and training on that Board.

In the same way I chided the Honourable Minister of Community Services about his involvement with the NHCDT, I say the same thing to the Honourable Minister of Health. He ought not to be on that Board either. The Board ought to report to the Minister. You cannot have Caesar reporting to Caesar; otherwise you might as well not have the Board. Again, I point out that it is those sorts of fundamental but often overlooked differences in how our PPM administration would operate that separates us from the UDP.

On the decision (which I alluded to earlier) to cut the staff in the way that it was done in 2002, that has been proven by time and experience to be the wrong call. The staff amount was 666 when it was cut in July 2002. Last year's Budget had forecasted a staff complement of 608. The forecast for this year is 624. It is climbing back to the levels we were at in 2002 because someone has finally understood that when you cut the number of professional staff in the radical manner that was done you compromise the quality of service. We are not just talking about waiting time; we are talking about the difference between life and death in many instances.

There is another matter in relation to the Health Services Authority that I have great concerns about. I understand from sources that they now have a full-time lawyer on board. I hope that that is not out of concern for potential liability. I need real convincing that the monies of this country should be allocated to full-time legal representation on the HSA. Lawyers do not come cheap—unless they are like me who now does it for nothing!

In terms of allocation of resources, again we do not believe that enough resources are being allocated to long-term planning in relation to decreasing the incidences of a number of chronic diseases which are rampant in this community: hypertension, diabetes, obesity, cancer and, increasingly, depression. More needs to be spent on educating the population about these conditions. We need more physicians and nurses in the district clinics, we need more to be done in terms of preventative medicine. The department of Public Health ought to be engaged more in country-wide planning and screening for these kinds of chronic conditions.

Sexually transmitted diseases (STDs), is another area which more resources need to be allocated to education. The related subject of teenage pregnancy and promiscuous and very early sexual activity among school children is another area that deserves more of Government's funding.

This whole question about care of the elderly is becoming an increasingly worrying one. An extended care unit was built at the hospital, but space was required for the Women's Health Services. That is a very worthwhile clinic, and I am not suggesting for a moment that we should go and throw them out and return this to an extended care unit. However, it is clear (if you talk to the people at the Pines and to people who have the responsibility for older people in their families) that the Pines is not only almost always full but it is not equipped to deal with persons who have acute and chronic illnesses. The country desperately needs a proper extended care facility to deal with these matters. There are funds in this Budget for it and there ought to be funds in this Budget for it.

The whole question of getting the right people and a sufficient number to fill the various positions required by the Health Services Authority is another issue. There has not been a pathologist at the Hospital since December 2003. There has not been a full-time radiologist since July 2003 until just recently when, remarkably, the HSA rehired the radiologist that they fired in 2002. That is the responsible hand at the implementation tiller at work.

Much has been said about the Cerner (computer) System that was supposed to perform magic and be able to capture all of the expenses and the billings which hitherto had gone uncaught. I think the Government paid somewhere between $5 million and $6 million for that system. The only problem is, all this time down the road, it is still not working properly. The doctors, nurses and the administrative staff are all complaining and, as importantly if not more importantly, all of the properly billed charges are not being caught.

I now come to CINICO, the Cayman Islands National Insurance Company. We all agree that the situation with the uninsurable in this country is deplorable. We cannot on the one hand have legislation which requires every person to have health insurance and then have a situation whereby a significant sector (in fact, even one person for that matter) of the community is unable to get insurance. So, the Minister is to be lauded for understanding that and seeking to do something about it. However, the issue is that CINICO is being promoted and touted by the Government, the Minister in particular, as being the be-all and the answer to all of the problems in relation to the health care coverage and insurance.

The reality—and this is the point I wish to make in some detail—is that CINICO is really and truly little more than what I shall call a supersonic administrator. It does not do any more. But we hope to marshal the Government's resources and funding put into it in a better way so that, hopefully, we will get a better return on our money and the bleed will be that much less. That is to be commended.

The difficulty I have is the promotion of this idea that somehow because of the creation of CINICO all of Government's funding problems in relation to the provision of health care are going to go away. The reality is that, under the Government policy as promulgated by the Honourable Minister, Government is going to still be responsible for uninsurable persons, indigents, seamen and veterans. Those are dealt with in the Budget by way of Cabinet expenditure and it comes to the tune of some $10 million plus. The reality is that $10 million plus out of the Government's revenue on an annual basis is going to be transferred to CINICO to pay claims by those categories of persons. I am not saying that is a bad thing, but it is a reality.

A further $11 million, or thereabouts, is also allocated in the Budget to pay civil servants' and pensioners' health care costs. Again, I am not suggesting that it should be otherwise however, I wish for no one to come away from this discussion believing that by having created CINICO we have somehow managed to avoid Government's liability for the health care cost of the categories of persons who I have just outlined.

What will happen if it works properly (which pray to God it does) with the introduction of the third party administrator, is that claims will be dealt with more efficiently and we will be able to source the right kind of health care service and provider more ably and thereby will significantly reduce how much it is that Government has to pay out on an annual basis for the provision of these services.

We all need to understand very clearly that almost half of what is allocated in the Budget for the provision of health care goes to pay for the provision of health services to those persons that I have mentioned. The big question for this Government, and perhaps the one to follow that, is: Is this sustainable in the long-term? As the population grows and the number of pensioners, civil servants and indigents increase (I do not think the number of seamen or veterans is likely to increase) we need to know where the money is going to come from to pay for these services. Let none of us believe that CINICO has answered everyone's prayers, it has done some very important things and I acknowledge them and laud the Minister for them; it allows uninsurable persons to get coverage and, hopefully, it will create a more efficient system of processing. However, the fundamental problem about the funding of health care still requires an answer that eludes us all at this stage.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have 21 minutes remaining.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I wish to address a couple of issues (one of which was only brought to my attention over the course of this evening) relating to statements made by the Honourable Leader of Government Business in his Policy Statement about the development of ports.

I understand that there was an announcement today that the proposed cruise ship landing in West Bay will not proceed in the manner that had been earlier announced. I am surprised, but perhaps I should not be, that such an announcement was not made in this honourable House so that Members would have been properly apprised of what is clearly a policy change on the part of the Government. Nonetheless, I am trusting that the Honourable Minister, the Leader of Government Business, will in due course apprise this honourable House of what is now being proposed so that we can all have an opportunity to consider the issue and to consult with the electorate about what is now being proposed.

As I said earlier, Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Member for East End is not here, and I know he was chomping at the bit to discuss the alarming proposal in the Policy Statement delivered by the Leader of Government Business that the previously discussed dock or port in Half Moon Bay was to go ahead.

Again, we have heard many rumours about this question; we understand that a major businessman in this community has been involved in the purchase of the property. We understand that it is proposed that a 90-acre lake be excavated in the Half Moon Bay area and that the proposed location of this lake is over the most significant fresh water lense in the country. There are grave concerns about that. We have heard that the fill from this lake is being proposed to be used to fill the Dart project. There are all sorts of rumours that abound and I believe that the Honourable Minister responsible, the Honourable Leader of Government Business, would serve us all well if he shed some light on that.

Although it does not seem to fit neatly within the parameters of the debate on the Budget, I believe I am entitled to refer to the issue of constitutional reform because it appears in the Policy Statement of the Honourable Leader of Government Business, which is part of the Budget according to what the Honourable Third Official Member said.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business has said some important things about constitutional reform on page 16 of his Policy Statement. I do not think that any of us on this side will take issue with what he said in that regard. He said that the UDP has no desire to break the links with Britain or to seek independence. We welcome that assurance.

[Certain words were ordered by the Honourable Speaker to be expunged from the record]

The Speaker: Please continue, Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

According to the Leader of Government Business, the UDP also aims for a more progressive partnership with the United Kingdom. Again, we agree with that. He refers at length to the impact of Europe on the UK and consequently on our relations. We also acknowledge and reflect those concerns.

Where I believe we have to part company with the UDP Government, based on recent experiences, is that we believe whatever constitutional arrangement is ultimately arrived at; whatever form our constitution eventually takes here ought to be something that is embraced by the nation as a whole. It ought not to be something that is imposed on the people by their elected government. There must be opportunity for participation of the people in that decision process. Again, fundamentally, this is where we differ from the UDP. We believe that the days of a Lone Ranger government that operates within a vacuum advised by an elite group of people are over.

Criticisms have been hurled at the Leader of the Opposition because of his willingness and desire for real consultation, and by that I mean consultation that takes place before a decision is taken,—

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: . . .not consultation which is entered into after the decision is taken—

The Speaker: Order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: . . .an attempt to create the impression that everyone is on board, as what happened recently with the EU Savings Directive.

The process, Mr. Speaker, must allow for the people of this country to have a say in the governing of the affairs of this country, not to simply be a group to whom we report in the months before an election saying: “See what a good job I did, please vote for me again.”

What the PPM has been espousing for the past two and a half years is a consultative process, one which allows the people to have a say in the critical decision-making in relation to policy matters on a broad level all the way through the tenure of office. That is what our PPM will bring to this country, an age of enlightenment. That is what this whole exercise is about, and that is what we have devoted the past two and a half years to creating and developing. God willing, that is what this country will rush to embrace come 17 November this year.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Honourable Members, I think this may be a good time to take a 10 minute break.

Proceedings suspended 8.04 pm

Proceedings resumed 8.34 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I, too, would like to make a short contribution to this Budget before this Honourable House. I assure the Members of the Legislative Assembly it will be short, as is my normal fashion.

I am a founding member of the United Democratic Party. I seconded the Motion that created this Government. In deliberating over this Budget I looked back over the past two and a half years and I feel good about the decision I made. It was the right decision for this country and the evidence is in what we are able to produce and deliver two and a half years later.

If you read the Hansard in 2001, every Member in this House spoke of the inherited financial position of this country. Every Member spoke of the need for correcting the finances, priorities, and way of governance for this country. However, it is the United Democratic Party who can take pride in saying that we have delivered and brought about positive change and a balanced Budget; in fact, a budget with a surplus. Mr. Speaker, in doing so we had to carefully plan, not just for one or two years but we took a long-range plan and understood all the needs of this country and the priorities. Therefore, it must be understood that to deliver them you must first correct the financial position of the country to ensure that we are able to provide for our people without taxing them.

In 2004, two and a half years later, we are producing the Budget that is delivering products, projects and programmes to our people without the necessity of taxing them at the same time. No increased taxation. I commend the United Democratic Party Government, the supporting Ministers and Back Benchers and the entire ranks of the UDP for a job well done in such a short time frame.

During the contribution made by the Leader of the Opposition, Leader of the PPM, he spoke about the noticeable differences in philosophies between the PPM and UDP. That is true and as time goes on we are able to see and differentiate between these two groups, and that is good. The polarisation of ideas will aide the electorate come 17th November 2004 to make a well-informed decision. In the same contribution made by the Leader of the Opposition he talked about the need for the UDP to focus more on our people; to look at the needs of the people and ensure that development was done that benefited Caymanian people.

I was stunned at such a contradiction when the Second Elected Member for George Town, from the same political party with the same philosophy that was outlined by the Leader, got up just over the last couple hours and performed a great assault on a young Caymanian person; a man who has taken on the responsibility of chairmanship of the Health Services Authority, who has given of himself to serve his country, to provide his services and in his capacity as an Elected Leader of the very district this individual comes from. He got up as a leader and attacked this individual personally and then I must expect our people to believe that that party truly cares about Caymanian people; about helping them to benefit in this society and from the development, when our Elected Leader's Representative is going to get up there and try to tear him down personally.

He talked of empowering the people? No, he is suffering from what a now very famous Cayman Bracker, Quincy Brown, talked about; the soldier crab syndrome. Caymanians keep tearing down each other.

I am urging this Honourable House, especially that Honourable Member that we must be careful and be responsible with the use of the English language especially when it comes to an individual's character. In fact, that particular attack went directly after this individual's professionalism within the area that he makes a living and feeds his family, and a leader, his representative, is going to come and publicly in this Chamber attack him: his colleague.

Therefore, I ask the Peoples Progressive Movement, please do not come and try to come and convince me that they have Caymanians at heart. Mr. Speaker, the same situation persists with the young man Michael Myles that we have all come to respect.

In the Leader of the Opposition's speech and in the Second Elected Member's, the General Secretary for the PPM, in their contribution talked of the need for prioritisation and the need for a shift. They make the charge that the United Democratic Party's priorities are skewed. They make other suggestions of things that should be top priority but the art of prioritisation means that when you put something as more important you must then determine what you are going to sacrifice to bring about that which is more important. Is he suggesting that the items he determined as being higher priority should be addressed by the Government? Is he willing that this country should sacrifice things like the Prospect School? Is he suggesting that George Town Primary is not a high priority?

When we talk about the need for prioritisation it is not simply to come and give your wish list; that is not prioritisation. What he should have got up to say is "I think these should be the priorities instead of . . ." Give a suggestion. He seems to have taken on his leader's position, the First Elected Member for George Town, where he writes with white ink when he is developing his blueprints. The Second Elected Member talked of the blueprints but we did not see any from him. We did not see any new priorities, we saw some new wishes.

The UDP is a responsible Government and are good mathematicians. We can understand that if you are going to spend on something and if you do not reduce something else then you are going to have to tax. We made a commitment that we are not going to tax in this year; that we were going to deliver a budget with a surplus and deliver items, projects and programmes that will ultimately change and alter the developmental capacity of this country.

I gave an undertaking to my colleagues that in my contribution I was going to focus on the electoral district that I have a responsibility to represent. I thought it important, however, to address those broader issues first.

During the contributions of the Third Official Member, the Leader of Government Business and the Leader of the Opposition, all spoke of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The Leader of the Opposition provided us with an estimated 1,457 lines in the Hansard on this contribution. Of that he devoted 17 to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I attempted to calculate the percentage but the zeros went on for too long so I cannot say what it came out to be. Mr. Speaker, he claims and would like to make suggestions that he holds Cayman Brac and Little Cayman close to his heart but his body must be of a different structure than mine because his heart is so far away from his head. I do not hear nor do I see plans. He makes suggestions that he really and truly has a blueprint and what Cayman Brac and Little Cayman need is some special consideration. What are those special considerations? Nothing new! They need cruise ships. We have all said that. The Leader of Government Business has been saying that and delivering upon it, which I will address shortly. He said we need some back office work to be done in Cayman Brac. That is nothing new.

I beg your indulgence as I refer to the Hansard. I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, I have to adjust it, it was not the 17th line, it was the 18th line that he gave.

He said the “overflow of public service activities and the location of new public service jobs on Cayman Brac remained a viable option.”

That is nothing new, Mr. Speaker, we have all talked about it and looked at it but the Government is delivering. We have always identified that what was needed for that to happen is more office accommodation in Cayman Brac because the District Administration Building is full. New office space has been identified right across the street, as I understand it, and once that is done there are options for back office work for some government services that are now provided in Grand Cayman to be provided in Cayman Brac. Thus, in his entire contribution for the Island that he calls home, for the Island that he calls so close to his heart, he gave us 18 lines and gave us nothing concrete to go home with; he repeated what everyone has always said.

I would also like to say that the United Democratic Party Government, which I am a part of as a Back Bencher, from its onset, did not give any resistance to giving one of our seats on the Cabinet to, in this instance, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac. It was part of our agreement from the start because our Members saw and understood and appreciated the need of having a Cayman Bracker in Cabinet.

I am asking this question but I am not expecting an answer, as we have heard the Leader of the Opposition say, and now the general secretary, the Second Elected Member for George Town, that they are looking forward to the 17th day of November because they are sure of a victory. Who is the PPM administration advocating putting into Cabinet? Is it a pure George Town Cabinet? Because Mr. Speaker, I do not see them with Cayman Brac representatives and Cayman Brac candidates, I do not see them with any strong plan to ensure that Cayman Brac and Little Cayman will have a member on their Cabinet.

I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, the United Democratic Party is running with a slate of candidates who understand and appreciate the need of having a Cayman Brac representative in Cabinet. I know that my people—and when I talk of my people I am talking about the Cayman Brackers, not only those who live in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman but those who also live in George Town and all the districts here in Grand Cayman—will be looking carefully at the party that is going to best represent the place that they all hope to return to one day.

We heard the Leader of the Opposition also talk of this great idea to promote domestic tourism. He said that the Budget was detached from reality; in fact, he made an allegation against the Leader of Government Business saying that if he spent more time on the ground rather than travelling he would know what is going on. Perhaps if the Leader of the Opposition spent a few more weekends travelling to the Brac like he did last weekend he would see that domestic tourism is growing; it is very strong and the United Democratic Party delivered, not just talked about it.

The United Democratic Party was responsible for the creation of the Brac Express to improve service to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to promote domestic tourism. Last weekend I travelled on the same aircraft with the Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for George Town and we all had trouble getting our seats because the plane was full and this is a regular occurrence. The First Elected Member, the Minister of Planning and I travel to Cayman Brac more than anyone else in this House and we can tell you that the planes are running good load factors, especially on the weekends. Domestic tourism is a great thing, I agree, but he is way too late in advocating it. The United Democratic Party has delivered and will continue to build on domestic tourism.

About the cruise facilities: He said “Well, the Creek is not really good but we must look for somewhere else.” We did not hear and see with that invisible white ink in a blueprint of where we are going to go. He has an obligation, as a party that is putting themselves up for candidacy in the up coming general election when they are going to come forward and criticise the Government to come with some alternatives and give the true picture so that the general public will know what to vote for. He says “Well, we should do this but I am not quite sure where we should put it or how we are going to do it.” So, while he is iffing and iffing and biffing about it, the UDP is working on it and delivering.

Two and a half years ago the Leader of Government Business initiated a concept of bringing cruise passengers to Cayman Brac via air service. The concept was a simple straightforward one. We have problems with port facilities in the Brac; we have problems with the prevailing wind and the lay of our Island, and we have problems that we have not developed the image as a cruise ship destination. He suggested to the Florida-Caribbean Cruise Association (FCCA) that we examine the possibility of landing passengers in Grand Cayman and flying them over to Cayman Brac for a day trip. The advantages are many. First, these passengers would get to know Cayman Brac and would eventually build up a reputation on the Island where they were demanding it from the FCCA as a destination. It allowed Cayman Brac to incrementally build its capacity to handle cruise passengers because it would have them starting in controlled numbers until the infrastructure, the craft markets, the transportation and the food issues were developed. Then we could talk about maybe two tours for the day rather than one. By the way, Mr. Speaker, that is 220 people landing on our shores, buying lunch and souvenirs, driving around. More importantly, it was pointed out at a recent Florida-Caribbean Cruise Association convention that 38 per cent of those who visit Caribbean destinations visited first by cruise ship. That is a good conversion rate from a cruise passenger to a stay over passenger. Therefore, this day trip also had positive potential on air arrival potential in the future. No one is going to convince me that there is any better way of promoting a destination than to give the individual a preview of the destination for six hours and saying: "This is what it is all about; this is the beautiful Island of Cayman Brac; this is the Brac experience; this is our nature tourist product; this is our museum; this is our Bluff and these are our caves. Come back by air and spend a week, ten days or two weeks."

I take this opportunity to further inform this Parliament and this country of this project. It is a project that my colleague, the First Elected Member, the Minister and I, have great hopes for. It is a project that we have both put much work into because it has the capacity of creating ten jobs instantly. It requires five buses which have to have a driver and a tour operator. That in itself—ten jobs on Cayman Brac is a major achievement and a good goal to have.

The concept is, and we all agree with the Opposition, with everything here, that within central George Town to have the numbers of cruise ship passengers land here the experience would be enhanced if it were to distribute those passengers and the benefits from those passengers over the Cayman Islands in a wider way, over to West Bay, over to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. This would offer a tour that would be equivalent in time to a tour to the Botanic Gardens. The drive from George Town to the Botanic Gardens would be of an equal time frame as the drive from George Town dock to the Owen Roberts Airport through the general aviation on to the plane and over to the Brac. Mr. Speaker, it is a concept where on the way over on the plane you would be given some fruit punch and a little explanation about Cayman Brac and given an orientation. It would be the only tour in the Cayman Islands that would allow you to see all three Islands because you would have a low fly over of all three Islands and then a six-hour period on Cayman Brac. It is a tour that Tropicana Tours would be involved in by picking the passengers up from the dock in Grand Cayman to the airport. By the way, I stress Tropicana because he is also a Cayman Bracker. Once they get over to the Brac they will be given options of two tours; a more relaxed tour or a more energetic tour, so they could see the beauty of the Island. Mr. Speaker, this is not just hypothetical talking any more because we invited the FCCA to come to Cayman Brac and make an evaluation and they did. They made a report back to us that we are now in possession of. The conclusion of the Report is that the product can be delivered.

Rather than the Opposition getting up there, saying that we are not doing anything, I urge them to get behind the Government and support projects such as this that will ultimately, directly affect the economy of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. When the Opposition rise in this Honourable House and talk about the Government doing nothing I would like it to be known that since the United Democratic Party has been the Government with the steady hand on the tiller the largest employer (meaning the Government) in the electoral district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has not had what has been a historical trend of periods of layoffs and back on. They have been provided with steady dependable work. The history of this country will show the very few occasions that that has been done, but this is one on the United Democratic Party.

I heard the Second Elected Member with my own ears talk about what is needed and the things that affect people personally. Nothing affects a person as much as the ability of feeding their family. The United Democratic Party and, with emphasis, their two Brac representatives have worked hard to ensure the Public Works Department of Cayman Brac are kept in steady, strong work. We have gone further insisting that the days of keeping our employees as group employees where they can be laid off tomorrow without any formal notice must change. We must slowly but meticulously move our employees. We have supervisors who have been there for 20-24 years but still as group, or temporary employees. 'No' those individuals cannot go to the bank and ask for more mortgages because their employment is not steady; the appointment is just like a week-by-week basis. We need to move these individuals and we will continue to persist so that we get more of our individuals at Public Works moved on to salaried positions and to a greater degree of stability in the economy.

It is a reality that in Cayman Brac we are suffering from some economic illness. We need a permanent cure. The Government has accepted that it is a responsibility of our Government to provide Cayman Brac with economic recovery. We have solicited two studies: the Economic Report of 2003-2008; and the Deloitte & Touche Economic Report that deals with a lot with Cayman Brac economy. With that information at hand and the first hand knowledge that the First Elected Member, the Minister and myself bring from Cayman Brac, we will help the Government and ensure that a sustainable economic plan is in place for Cayman Brac. Much of the ground work is being done. We have accepted that the future of Cayman Brac is going to be on the Bluff.

We are not building new roads but we are paving existing roads that in many cases were previously inaccessible because of the amount of rocks bumps, and now we see where electricity has gone through to the Bluff and people are building. There are signs, although not as much as we would like, that good things are in the future for Cayman Brac. To build the economy to a level that can sustain its population, and by sustaining its population I am not only talking about its existing population because we need a larger population, we need to attract some people back and ensure that of those 20-plus students graduating from Cayman Brac high school next month a good percentage of them will get jobs in Cayman Brac—we are getting the foundations done and the right information at hand. We are doing government projects that will ultimately improve the standard of living and make the Brac more attractive for individuals to come and reside and make it their place of abode.

This Budget goes a long way in improving the standard of life on Cayman Brac. It deals with roads and accessibility to land-locked areas which will release value in the economy. It deals with establishment of domestic fire services mid-island. It deals with improvement of our policing ability. I did not hear the Leader of the Opposition or the social engineer of the Opposition get up and talk about the fact that the Minister of Community Services has put in place what they have criticised before about the Brac, a drug counsellor, working aggressively to deal with the issues in the community. These are achievements that the United Democratic Party is proud of and I am proud of being a part of the group that has seen these things come to fruition.

I really hope that the weekend retreat of the Secretary General and the Leader of the Opposition was much more than barbeques and they took a chance to truly understand the economy, the community, the society. It is a unique group of people; we are proud people; and the reality is that we are subsidised to a certain degree by Grand Cayman. We do not like it but it is the reality. We would like to have an economy that can sustain itself, that we can pay fair share, that we have great economic and job opportunities like our counterparts in Grand Cayman. It takes leadership like we have now with the United Democratic Party and time to cure the problems.

Today was a fabulous experience for us on this side of the House because those in the Opposition who were also invited asked the question about receiving their invitation for the ceremony to mark the National Radio Communication System. We were there in great numbers, and saw the experience of having radio communication between three Islands. For those within my constituencies who might not have heard the broadcast of whichever station was present there today—I know CITN and Radio Cayman were there—but those that might be hearing my voice; it was inclusive—the three Islands participating in communication by radio. I give my personal thanks to the Minister who has that responsibility now and who previously had that responsibility for initiating a system that, from the start, was inclusive of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to ensure that during hurricanes or any other national emergencies that we have good radio communication and the ability of communicating not just down the road but right across the three Islands. Is the United Democratic Party is not doing anything? The PPM, as we know, is closely affiliated with a very valuable organisation in this country, the Lions Club. The Lions Club offers an optical programme that they need to check out a little bit more carefully because anyone can see what we are doing.

I want to go back and focus on the district that the First Elected Member and I call home, that we love and everyone here loves. I know during your time, Mr. Speaker, of being in the position of influence, that you have always given Cayman Brac and Little Cayman top priority and I thank you. Your mark has certainly been left permanently on those Islands, Sir. We are greatly appreciative of that.

The Deloitte & Touche Report made some good recommendations and provides some good statistics on the economy of Cayman Brac. The most startling statistic was that they took the time and initiative and the Gross Domestic Product (GDP) was statistically quantified for Cayman Brac and compared to that of Grand Cayman. It also provided the relating figure of the GDP per capita, which would be the measure of your quality of life and standard of living. The comparison showed that in Cayman Brac the GDP per capita was 50 percent of that of Grand Cayman, some $17,000.

We all agree this is a problem that has been creeping for the past 20-odd years and we need to address it. I hope that my three children will have the same luxury that I had of bucking my toes on the iron shore, playing marbles on the streets of Cayman Brac and enjoying the same quality of life that we enjoyed growing up in Cayman Brac. When we talk of Cayman Brac it is from the heart and I assure you and the general public that as long and beyond the time that I have the privilege of being in this Honourable House to speak on behalf of Cayman Brac, I will certainly defend the position of Cayman Brac and advocate strongly for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I will take a few minutes to outline the programmes, procedures and physical developments that are necessary in Cayman Brac. Mr. Speaker, for Cayman Brac to develop beyond its existing means we need to continue to promote the day trips and look aggressively at all long weekends to ensure that there are themed weekends with packages for domestic tourism; that is being done but we need to enhance it. We need to look at issues such as the schools in Cayman Brac. I now see at the high school the projected enrolment for September is 158 students, which is going to put the school at its capacity. We need to look at these issues. We need to look at the community development issues within Cayman Brac. All these things the Government is busy doing but we took care of the first things first. We got our finances in order to be able to deliver and now we are about to start on these projects with our first Budget that has a strong financial backing about.

I do not agree with the prognosis of the PPM but I can understand why they would want to believe that on 17th November there will be a change. I strongly believe the wisdom of our people, as Caymanian people, and I believe that they are not going to sit here and listen to two Members of the Opposition get up and try to tell them that it is pouring rain outside when the sun is shining; that the country is in doom; that there is no prioritisation; that the Government is not achieving when they are all working.

I even heard the Second Elected Member for George Town in his contribution make a good comment. He referred to the low-income housing project, saying that back then when the project was being conceptualised the economy was in poor shape and people were out of work, including contractors. That is an admission that the economy is now different. Neither he nor the Leader of the Opposition is going to successfully convince anyone in this Chamber or the general public that the United Democratic Party had nothing to do with the transformation.

The Secretary General, the Second Elected Member for George Town, upon my rise to speak referred to me as an economist. Yes, I like charts and graphs. If you graphed the economy of the Cayman Islands you would see the noticeable difference between the time that the People's Progressive administration and the Leader of the Opposition was in charge of this country versus the time that the United Democratic Party got steady hand at the tiller. There is a difference in the economic activity. For that to continue I would say that the United Democratic Party needs the chance to continue.

We have a busy agenda, we have much to do. We in the United Democratic Party are workers, we are not talkers. I have talked enough. Now I will set aside and give time for my colleagues to say a few words so we can get out and work. Thank you, ladies and gentlemen.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Before I begin my contribution to the 2004/5 Budget Address, which was delivered by the Honourable George McCarthy, OBE, JP, Financial Secretary to the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands on 7 May 2004, I would like to take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation to a gentleman whom I highly respect.

The Third Official Member delivered his final Budget Address in the Legislative Assembly as Financial Secretary. For his many years of outstanding stewardship he must be commended for a job well done. The editorial of the Caymanian Compass, 10th May, perhaps said it best when they recognised this honourable man for his 13 years of dedicated service. The article reported that the economy of the Cayman Islands owes its well-being to the financial sector and, in spite of the fact that two pillars of economic development are financial management and tourism, finances lead the way.

Once that fact is recognised Mr. Speaker, it then stands to reason that any time a single person can be credited with the propelling of the financial sector in the right direction such an individual must be saluted. Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that the Financial Secretary led the Cayman Islands through troubling and challenging times and through it all he has been successful in pulling us out of the mire.

It is only fitting that he is recognised for his contribution to the development of these Cayman Islands. However, as the Financial Secretary moves on to another post Mr. Ken Jefferson, Financial Secretary designate, a young Caymanian from West Bay, will assume the post of Financial Secretary. Although Mr. Jefferson will have big shoes to fill I have all faith that he will assume his responsibilities with the same enthusiasm and vigour that he has shown in his post as Deputy Financial Secretary. I have all the respect in the world for this young man and I know he will do his country proud.

Moving on to my contribution: It gives me great pride to hear what the Financial Secretary has outlined in his Budget of the Cayman Government for 2004/5 financial year and as well as listening to many accomplishments to date. Although the Leader of the Opposition tried to paint a doom and gloom picture with no evidence to support his allegations I will endeavour to prove otherwise. However, for the benefit of the listening public and Member of this Honourable House I will keep my level of contribution upbeat and positive.

As a former sea captain and an airline pilot licensed by the United States Coast Guard and the United States Federal Aviation Authority I am very familiar with such phrases as "steady as she goes" "charting/plotting the course" and "maintaining the course with a responsible hand at the tiller." I have been a sailor aboard the good ship Cayman for almost three and a half years now keeping watch and for the first year I was very concerned about the course we were on. It was clear to me that if we did not change course soon we were going to hit the rocks.

[Members' cheers]

However, it was not until 8 November 2001 when we changed the captain and put the First Elected Member for West Bay, now Leader of Government Business, at the helm, that we found our true position. The position was not a pretty picture. On his watch he ordered a 180° turn to starboard.

[Laughter]

If you turn to the right you turn to the starboard. That was the right direction they were turning and took the good ship Cayman back out to the open sea. It was only then that I could breathe a sigh of relief.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: That is right.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, in last year's Budget, Government outlined the plans for the economic and social future of the country. Those plans called for supporting the local economy and creating job opportunities for Caymanians, increasing the educational opportunities for young people, ensuring that health care and social support were available for those in need, improving efficiency and effectiveness of government and its agencies, as well as setting the foundation for the future of our country.

I think it is fair to say that under the leadership of the United Democratic Party Government we have made great strides to ensure that domestic growth is on the rebound. Unemployment has decreased from 7.5 percent in 2001 to 3.6 percent, according to the latest labour force survey. Education continues to be on top priority with the new Spots Primary school being completed in time for the up coming school year. The Health Services continues towards a healthy population by introducing a new health insurance company, CINICO, and Mr. Speaker, the list goes on.

The Financial Secretary also reported that the latest economic data shows that those plans are working. He goes on to say that achieving economic and social prosperity is not a one year exercise. However, to achieve the objectives of this year's Budget it requires sustained commitment and effort, keeping the destination in sight and a steady hand at the tiller. Mr. Speaker, those are the objectives and focus of this year's Budget. The United Democratic Party Government is well underway now to maintaining and staying on the course that it has set.

I want us all to take a moment to reflect. Let us go back to September 2001 or better known as 9/11, the day most, if not all, Caymanians would like to forget. What happened on that faithful day in the United States affected us here in Cayman just like it did any where else in the world. We all can recall that many people were laid off from their jobs at the major hotels on the Island because there were no visitors arriving. Many companies laid off employees due to no work. Let us not forget the many homes and automobiles that the banks were forced to foreclose on due to customers not being able to meet their commitments. I remember seeing many automobiles and boats parked just about every where with for sale signs on them. I remember work permit holders returning home because their employees were unable to pay them. It was indeed a bleak period in the history of the Cayman Islands. In fact, the Cayman Islands economy had almost come to a complete stop.

Compared to where we were then two years ago and where we are now it is most appropriate to label it "steady as she goes." Today as we are witnessing a rebound of the economy Cayman is experiencing a boom. Obviously this did not come overnight. This came through an economic growth rate that is projected to be healthy for this coming year. In fact, it is projected to be 50 per cent higher than last year. This came about through hard work and someone responsible at the tiller. A lot had to be done to get the good ship Cayman back on course and although there is still much to do, it is safe to say that much has already been accomplished. However, we only need to read the local news papers or watch CITN to know that we are indeed seeing the fruits of our labours.

The front page of the Cayman Compass dated Friday, 23 April, reported "Tourist Tallies Up." In this Report it gave the good news that the latest tourism arrivals for March had already shown an 8.6 per cent increase year to date over last year. This is evident with the many visitors seen in the rental cars or walking along the West Bay Road.

Back in April I was told that most of the hotels and condos were completely booked. Car rental agencies were sold out, flights were arriving full, many stores, supermarkets, and restaurants reported their busiest April in recent memory. The ever popular Market Report produced by Coldwell Banker Realty probably put it all in perspective. Their 2003 year-end Market Report predicts continuing improvements of the market and a positive outlook for this year.

With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I would like to read a few pages of that report.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: It reads: The Cayman Islands has "had a good 6-12 months and one of the strongest Falls in recent memory. The statistics bear this out. ... The number of property sold is up 50 per cent over last year ... while the dollar value of units sold is up 27 per cent. The number of deals pending (under contract but not yet closed) is up 82 per cent ... This indicates strong buyer interest but prices not yet rising."

Other highlights of this Report indicate that: "37 per cent more single family homes"—that is significant, it shows that people working can afford to get back in a home—"were sold over the last 12 months but at sale price nearly 30 per cent less than previously, so purchasers have been reacting favourably to lower prices. The supply of homes is about the same as last year so prices are not likely to rise immediately.

The Report goes on to say that: "The condominium market saw 63 per cent more units sold over last year also with a substantial price decrease. However, these condo numbers do not account for any of the Ritz presales, or the 12 presales at Water's Edge, or some of the 33 presales at the Meridian, [had those been] "factored in not only would the number of sales be way up but so would the average price."

The Report says: "We have clients waiting in line to purchase units at some complexes."

This speaks volumes for the Cayman Islands at this time so much so that Coldwell Banker Cayman Islands Realty opened a branch in Little Cayman with the announcement of Cayman Airways resuming flights to Little Cayman and the anticipated opening of a new airport. The future of property values on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman look very positive. They have certainly given the United Democratic Party kudos for extending the stamp duty reduction on real estate. With the indefinite extension on stamp duty concession, as well as the interest rates being the lowest in many years, Government has recognised the positive impact and this has had the real estate market and the construction industry moving positively.

While on the subject of construction, Mr. Speaker, the old port building has been demolished to make room for the new Royal Watler Cruise Ship Terminal in George Town. With this major project coming on line I am sure when completed, cruise ship passengers will find their visit to the Cayman Islands a much more enjoyable experience.

We cannot continue with the traffic congestion during cruise ship days, therefore plans are in the works to improve on this. The extension of the West Bay road bi-pass will undoubtedly bring some much needed relief for this growing concern. However, as an interim measure Government is considering introducing two lanes of traffic going into George Town in the morning. This should greatly improve the traffic flow to George Town along the West Bay road during peak traffic hours.

The United Democratic Party Government continues on their quest to see the Cayman Islands remain prudent and as financially stable as possible. We have done an outstanding job to ensure that the Cayman Islands remain at the forefront of the financial industry. Although there was a decline in the number of banks and trust companies licenses, insurance licenses increased to 672 in 2003 with mutual funds continuing to be Cayman's success story. It is very encouraging to know that the Cayman Islands remain the leader in this segment of the global financial market.

Another success story is the ever-growing number of ship registrations. In 2003, ship registrations totalled 1,473 with a gross tonnage amounting to 3.2 million. Also, in 2003 new registrations amounted to 186, including 152 pleasure yachts. It is heart-warming to see, when visiting US ports or other Caribbean ports, the amount of vessels, ships and mega-yachts and sport-fishing yachts, not based in Cayman, flying the Caymanian flag over the stern on which it says "George Town, Cayman Islands". It gives me a great sense of pride when I observe this and I go looking for it particularly to see how many boats are registered in Cayman.

Having the opportunity of skippering many yachts to the Cayman waters I always feel a sense of pride when, on the high seas, talking back and forth among the boats if there is also another vessel registered in Cayman, especially if they have some Caymanian crew on board. It is also noteworthy of mention that for the past few years the Shipping Registry has had a booth at the Miami and Fort Lauderdale boat shows, which has obviously played a major role in attracting new yacht registrations to our ship registry.

The Cayman Islands continues to make international news overseas. The Leader of Government Business led a delegation to Hong Kong recently to promote investment in the Cayman Islands. This was obviously a very successful trip as a Tourism and Investment Office will soon be set up in Hong Kong as a vehicle for promoting Cayman's investment and tourism in Asia.

He also led a delegation to San Diego, California, to attend the 42nd Annual Risk and Insurance Management Society Conference and Exhibition. The Leader of Government Business assured everyone that the Cayman Islands continue to be a leader in international insurance as a result of healthy partnerships. He went on to say that in moving forward it is our goal to continuously develop the optimal combination of business facilitation and prudent regulation that consequently created the ideal platform for international business.

Despite the Cayman Islands only being a dot on the world map it is most interesting to know that we are a country that other countries envy. We are a country that other countries follow and look up to. We are a country that can only get better if we work at it together. For the good ship Cayman to stay on the right course we must continue to steer with much skill and due diligence.

Government has been instrumental in introducing competition into the Telecoms Market. This has certainly brought some reductions in telecommunications rates. For many years the people of these Islands have been paying some of the highest telecoms rates in the western world. The introduction of competition in the telecoms market is one more example of what the United Democratic Party is doing to bring down the cost of living to the people of these Islands. While the United Democratic Party continues to work at keeping the cost of living down it is gratifying to know that the civil service has also received a 2.5 percent cost of living adjustment without any new revenue measures.

It was also encouraging to hear the Financial Secretary say that there would be no revenue measures. This now means that this is the third Budget in a row where expenditure demands have been accommodated within the existing revenue base. I know many of the people who have expressed a sigh of relief when this was announced.

With just six months away from another general election, I say to all of my colleagues in this Honourable House let us build up together, not tear down. We all have children and we must think of them. Let us lead the country in a positive direction as we lead by example.

I trust that after outlining some of the positive accomplishments of the United Democratic Party Government the people of the Cayman Islands would get a better picture—

The Speaker: Order.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: . . . of all that has been done to date and what is still to come. I find it appalling that the Opposition will try to mislead the public into believing that the United Democratic Party is steering in a direction headed for disaster. Do they not realise that we have to live here too? For what earthly reason would this Government want to steer the good ship Cayman on the rocks? In spite of what the Opposition has said I believe the Honourable Financial Secretary has delivered a good balanced Budget. We all know for this country to move forward in a manner that we all would like to see it move, it must be done together and in unity.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, with the fabulous five in control of the good ship Cayman,—

[Laughter]

I feel confident that the policy actions and the fiscal position outlined in the 2004/5 Budget, the Cayman Islands is headed in the right direction: I say again, Mr. Speaker, steady as she goes. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Members' cheers]

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we have just 15 minutes remaining. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I rise to make my short contribution to the 2004/5 Budget Address I too would like to—

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Order.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: —use this opportunity to give my sincere thanks to the Third Official Member for all the assistance that he has given me and my colleagues, the younger Members in this Legislative Assembly, and for the good job he has done in keeping the finances of the country on such a positive track.

As I stand here looking at this my fifth budget I have to think back at how quickly time has passed since the first budget that we were involved in right after the election in 2000, and how much more difficult it was in getting up at that time to debate a budget that imposed new tax measures on the people who we were elected to serve. It was hard to get up and speak to that Budget and to try to defend the position of the Government of which I was a part at that stage, knowing and feeling that not all of the possibilities had been examined, and that once again the easy way was chosen as the way of the day under the then leadership of the now Leader of the Opposition with new tax measures and significant borrowings, which we all know is increasing the debt for our future generations. The scary part of that stage is that we were borrowing to fund recurrent expenditure.

How ironic, four short years later, that we have the same gentleman who was the Leader of Government Business at the time, who is now the Leader of the Opposition, getting up and criticising the Budget process, the prioritisation and the level of expenditure. It is funny how quickly we tend to forget. Now, if we listened to the Members of the Opposition who are now being led by the individual who was the Leader of Government Business, at that time, there were no solutions. The only thing that they could do was to go to the people and tax them more.

I know that the defence is going to be that it was the first budget and there was not enough time. I have heard the explanation that at that time of the year they would not be able to increase the fees because they would not be able to recognise the revenue from those fees.

However, if we move forward to the next year, to Friday, 2 November 2001 Hansard, the contribution from the then Leader of Government Business still did not have any information about the Budget. We were planning to bring the Budget, at the end of November. If he, as Leader of Government Business, had some idea or if he was going to try to impose the fees, which he said he could not do in March 2000, he sure had ample time at that stage to start looking at alternative ways to raise the revenue. Even at that point in time there were no ideas. All we could assume is that once again we would have to come and tax the people and borrow more money. It is my opinion that if the PPM administration that we keep hearing so much about — I heard it being referred to as the “people’s promise mobile”—had been in power for the last four years we would have only had the same type of leadership; borrowing money and taxing our people. If our people, that I have full confidence in, do make the mistake based on promises that were made, and put that administration in power in November, obviously, from the track record, what they will have to look forward to is more taxation and more borrowing.

It is hard for the individuals that were there, even in the 2001 Budget, when the leadership of the United Democratic Party, after we had worked for a year, recognised that there was no changing of the methods and our people were going to be faced with the same thing; a heavy tax burden and an increase in debt. We had no choice but to remove the then Leader of Government Business and replace him with the now current Leader of Government Business, along with the United Democratic Party, who has shown and exercised great leadership abilities.

We did not expect them to be creative and come up with the ideas for the Budget because we realised that at that stage it was a lack of capabilities at that point. All we asked them to do was to come and support the Budget and I am sure that you remember, Mr. Speaker, in November 2001 when the Budget came forward, we all heard the doom and gloom, of how the United Democratic Party Government was going to destroy the financial industry; how the Government, by increasing the fees on our banks, would drive away all the business. There were all sorts of questions asked as usual. I quote from the Hansard of 12 December 2001, the then Leader of Government Business said: Regardless of what the needs are it remains to be seen how well thought out the situation has been and only at the end of the day will there be the proof of the pudding, as to whether the revenues that are anticipated and projected in these estimates from these sources will materialise. ” [2001 Official Hansard Report, p. 1360]

Well, Mr. Speaker, it is now time to taste that pudding. It is now time to see the “proof of the pudding”. If we compare all the scare tactics that were used in regard to how the proof was going to turn out and now we look at this Budget 2004/5, page 11 of the Honourable Financial Secretary’s Address under Domestic Economy. It says: “The employment rate in the Cayman Islands has been steadily decreasing since 2001 when it stood at 7.5 per cent. The latest Labour Force Survey results placed an unemployment rate at 3.6 per cent.”

That is the doom and gloom. When they criticised the United Democratic Party for taking the stance that it took, what we are seeing now is how good that pudding really tastes. We are seeing that unemployment is down. We see that the financial services sector that we all know is fundamental to our economic well-being, recorded positive results in most areas in 2003. Growth was seen in mutual fund registrations, insurance company registrations, insurance premiums, stock exchange listings, stock market capitalisation, and new company registrations.

If the good people of Cayman were looking for the evidence of just how truthful or factual the people’s promise machine is; if they look at the performance of the People’s Progressive Movement as when they got up and tried to frighten everyone by saying how terrible the decisions of the Government were in 2001, how then can we come back and have such positive growth in the financial industry, the same industry that we were supposed to be killing? It says: “A better indicator of the health of the banking sector is that Cayman retained its position as a leading international financial centre. External assets of banks stood at US$1.2 trillion in June 2003, up by US$4.6 billion from the December 2002 position.”

The total number of insurance licenses increased. When we increased the insurance fees they said that the insurance companies were going to leave as well. Premiums for captive insurance grew by some US$700,000 million in 2003. Mutual funds are another Cayman success story. The stock exchange posted gains. Total company registration increased by almost 3,000. New company registrations rose, ship registrations increased.

Just by that alone we can see how truthful that administration would be. Not only did it not have the competence to come up with new ideas or plans but when they did find someone who was willing to do that,—at least if they were smart enough to jump on board. You know how it is, Mr. Speaker. If you are not too good at what you are doing you try to get along with someone who can pull you along. They got up and criticised and talked about how bad the Cayman Islands were going to be under the United Democratic Party. Now we come to see that all of that doom and gloom was unfounded. There is evidence that they had no idea of what they were talking about. We all assumed that from the very beginning. Now, it is proven. Like they said, “Now that we see the pudding, the United Democratic Party”, which could be unbelievably delicious pudding, “has delivered a great tasting pudding compared to the PPM.”

If the people go the polls looking for something good on 17 November we can see what they would choose. Either they would choose a lot of hollow promises or they are going to choose the United Democratic Party.

Real estate performed well in 2003 with the value of properties transferred growing by 19 per cent to some $326 million. The number of properties transferred increased. Just looking at this record it is hard to understand . . .

I can just imagine the difficulties that the PPM found them-selves in when they were trying to detract. What would have been a smarter thing for them to do Mr. Speaker, instead of trying to fool the people because the people see the positive results and then they get up and tell them how bad things are, it would have been better if they admitted and said to the people: “We were wrong, we could not do it, the right people are now at the helm and we will continue along and make them go and allow us to stay here and watch and follow.” Instead of doing that they got up and tried to tell the people that the country again is in a bad financial position and the United Democratic Party does not know what they are doing when all the evidence is here in black and white. They cannot believe that our people are so uninformed that they cannot see.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, we have reached 10 o’clock but since you are going to be in the Chair tomorrow morning I believe it is only reasonable that we give you a few more minutes to complete your debate.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will try to be as quick as possible.

Finishing up on the domestic economy, they said that global growth is projected to accelerate from 3.2 percent to 4.1 percent in 2004. One thing that is conditional and I am sure—I guess the Financial Secretary could not put it in—if we continue under the good leadership of the United Democratic Party Government we can continue to expect to see positive growth.

There is a developer in West Bay that has done a lot of development and he has just finished building the complex in the centre of West Bay. He said that even though he had some other developments going on he was waiting to see if the Government changed in 2004 because the confidence is there. Obviously economic activity is booming but if the Government changes they are not sure as to what could happen. So, there is that wait and see attitude. As long as the Government of the day continues the development will continue but if we were to make that mistake of going back to where we were at pre-2001 then, like my colleague from West Bay said, we will probably flounder and go on the rocks.

Even if we come away from the Budget Address and look at the news headlines we see land sales are up, unemployment is down, telecoms rates are down, electricity rates are down, planning approvals are up, stay over tourism is up, cruise ship tourism is up.

When they criticise tourism they talk about mass tourism and they say we are destroying the environment. Mr. Speaker, Cayman has just won an international award for being one of the best diving and snorkelling locations. This obviously shows that we have recognised the balance between maintaining our natural resources as well as the need for increased tourism numbers. There is a new cruise ship port under construction, new tourism attractions are being built.

Development is on the increase. New schools are being built to take care of our children's education. The Community College curriculum has been expanded. We now have a medical university in the Cayman Islands; we have more scholarships that have been given; houses that are being built for the needy; and more financial assistance is being given to our senior citizens. There are new community parks in almost all of the districts. The satellite district office of the Social Services Department has been started so we can get quicker service. We have a new sewage treatment plant.

They get up and make these unfounded statements that there is no plan; the infrastructure is not being developed for the increases. We have just spent $17 million on a new sewage treatment plant with the Water Authority. The point is that the infrastructure is being developed to accommodate the increases as a required. I am not saying who did it but it is being completed now and we did it under the UDP Government. It shows that the infrastructure is being considered.

[Inaudible interjection]

Health care is being provided for our people at sustainable rates. Our people who were refused health insurance before can now get insurance. Our financial industry is robust and growing. There are more programmes and opportunities for our young people. Just today, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac made mention at the hand over of the new communication system for not only Grand Cayman but for all three of the Cayman Islands. Mr. Speaker, we talk again about infrastructure needs. That, again, shows that in time of emergency the United Democratic Party has looked and addressed the needs of our people.

Yesterday there was an announcement that the Cayman Water Company was posting record sales and they attributed this to the increase in stay over tourism and development. There is no question that under the United Democratic Party the economy of the Cayman Islands is strong and on good footing.

We can only assume that when the PPM get up and talk about all the things that they should have, they do not prioritise and say that in place of building the new school they would do this, or in place of providing assistance for the elderly they would take that money and do something else. All that they do is come with a wish list and say all the things that should be there. We can only assume that if their administration was in power what we would get is what we got in 2001, more taxes and more borrowing. Otherwise, how are they going to fund it?

We have not heard one suggestion to say that this is the way that we are proposing or this is what we are going to cut instead. All they have talked about is what they would do under their administration. Mr. Speaker, I guess if that were to take place our best position would be that we probably would not have to worry about new taxes or borrowings because while they promise and talk a lot we have seen that the problem they have is implementation. We would not get a lot done; we would fall behind if that administration were to take place. Hopefully the benefit of that would be since they are not going to do anything, there would be no need to have to borrow more money or put more taxes on. It would be a very short lived government because people would see that nothing was being done. Meanwhile, the country would be stagnant for that short period. Hopefully, we would not fall too far behind under that type of administration.

That would be the worse case scenario. If the promise mobile does do a good job and they are able to convince the people—even based on their past record of achieving nothing—that they are going to give them a chance to continue to achieve nothing, that is something we would have to live with. I would prefer not to see that happen and I have every confidence that come November when the people look at the report card from the People's Progressive Movement as to what they have achieved or what they have even shown to be capable of achieving, once again, the good people of the Cayman Islands will realise that they are not an alternative.

I have often wondered why we were in problems in 2000-2001, with such a lack of foresight. Realising that ... even though the Leader of the Opposition said that the proof is in the pudding and we will have to wait and see.

I quote that same gentleman from the Hansard draft verbatim transcript of 12 May 2004. The Leader of the Opposition now says: "Mr. Speaker, we have been treated in the combined addresses to the now familiar and very tiresome diet of sensational announcements of grandiose plans or proposals which has the past three years have proven time and time again generally come to nothing. What is clear from these infertile pronouncements is that the Government economic and social development policy, in my view, is fundamentally flawed."

Why it is going to be fundamentally flawed for the Leader of the Opposition is because it is obvious that after all that has been accomplished; after what I just quickly laid out in terms of the domestic economy, that Member who is a responsible Elected Member for the district of George Town, the Leader of the Opposition, could still get up and say that nothing is being done. He says that promises come to nothing. Now I realise what our problem is. The Leader of the PPM is so far removed from the reality of the Cayman Islands that he cannot even, when the pudding is so good to taste; it is all there in black and white and he still cannot see what has been done.

Everyone else can see it, knows what has been accomplished and recognises the economic upturn that has occurred in the Cayman Islands. Everyone is working.

I heard the gentlemen advertising the car wash a few days ago; he was on the radio station saying that if he had to import some people from Philippines to operate the car wash because he cannot find Caymanians to be employed there. He said he could find people to be part-time because they all are employed elsewhere but he cannot run his business on a part-time operation. Yet the PPM gets up and says the good ship Cayman is not on a good path. Even for something like a car wash we have to import labour.

I looked at their problem again.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, if you are moving to another point just to remind you there are five minutes left on this tape so we will have to change it if you are going to go on beyond that.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I will try to wind it up to that as close as possible, Mr. Speaker.

One of the references that I saw (I see where much has been discussed about the United Democratic Party) and heard about was the leadership in crisis. Mr. Speaker, as a founding Member of the United Democratic Party, one of the successes of that party and one of the reasons why that Government, the fabulous five, as they have been called and have been able to deliver such impressive budgets is because there will always be challenges for leadership when you have capable, ambitious leaders. That is a good thing because the Leader of the United Democratic Party knows that he has to stay on his toes and do a good job of leading the country, he has to keep the support because there is someone there waiting.

Therefore, yes, Mr. Speaker, it says: "leadership in crisis" and that is a good thing. The People's Progressive Movement also has a leadership crisis and they have a difficulty in finding a leader. They have a different type of leadership crisis. What the people of Cayman will decide on 17 November is whether they want a type of party that has five, six or seven capable individuals who at any time can step forward if the leader does not do what he is supposed to do and does not keep the support of the majority of his party. Or, they can choose the alternative, even after they have seen that the current leadership is not capable, that there is still no one to step forward and lead. So, by default the person remains the leader regardless of capabilities.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I have good confidence in the smart people of the Cayman Islands to know which type of leadership they will see as being better for the country for the next four years and beyond.

The question was asked and there was a note made. I heard the Second Elected Member for George Town say that the Leader of the Opposition was criticised on numerous occasions for consultation. There was never a criticism for consultation; the problem is that for the full year you consult and then achieve nothing. The problem was for his lack of implementation. We recognised that he would consult but if you elect him in November 2004 they are going to consult until November 2008 and in the meantime nothing is going to get done. Consultation by itself, like he said when it comes down to the rubber meeting the road implementation, is where it is at.

They make the big point of taking credit by saying, "Oh well, the Leader of the Opposition was one of those who were supportive in agreeing for the new type of accrual accounting system." Perhaps that would have been the way it was if he had asked for it and he would have consulted and said it was good. However, the implementation was the United Democratic Party. Anyone can talk about how good it would be to have it but if you do not have someone who is willing to aggressively work to get it you will never know whether it is good or not; and that is the fundamental difference, when we talk about fundamentals, between the People's Progressive Movement and the United Democratic Party. That is the fundamental difference. One is a group of talkers and one is a group of workers; and the group of workers has obviously been working and leading the country to a sound financial position.

The Speaker: We would like to change the tape at this time.

[Proceedings were interrupted to allow the tape to be changed]

The Speaker: Honourable Fourth Elected Member for West Bay you can continue please.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In winding up I would like to say that I am proud to have been a part of the United Democratic Party during this period when they have so aggressively looked out for the best interests of the good people of the Cayman Islands who we are privileged to have been elected to serve.

When the Members of the People's Progressive Movement get up and criticise and say that there is no concern or care for the social fabric of our society and that we are detached, I need to remind them that while we were looking at increasing development and the revenues of the country we were also looking at doing things that would make life easier for the little man.

If we look at the cost of living increase to the Civil Service, we look at the fact that even moving to an accrual base of accounting and that the strategic policy statement had an increase on the duty on fuel, the United Democratic Party Government chose not to institute that increase. Even though we had given advance warning, we had informed the folks that they could plan ahead, and we looked at the high cost of fuel, anyway we were able to adjust. We were not in such a desperate position that we could not take into account the concerns of the people. Mr. Speaker, we have no new revenue measures.

Another important point that needs to be made is that again in the strategic policy statement we were allowed to borrow up to $8.8 million more for capital. We had proposed to borrow more. You would think that in an election year an irresponsible government would have gone out and borrowed the maximum amount so that they could be seen as doing a lot to try to get re-elected. I heard mention being made earlier on as to whether the houses were genuine or whether they were being done as an election ploy. Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that by leaving the $8.8 million that we had proposed to borrow in an election year the Government recognises fiscal prudence and has not exercised the maximum borrowing even though the norm would have been to use as much as possible because it is an election year to get re-elected.

Before closing I want to mention some of the developments that have occurred in the district, which I have been proud to represent for the last almost four years. We have a new post office, a new community park, which is heavily used every weekend and an after school. We have a new cricket field. We have a refurbished turtle farm, one of our major tourism products, which was destroyed after the natural disaster Hurricane Michelle. Under the United Democratic Party Government, again with much criticism, I am sure you will remember all the questions. We got local contractors. There were so many questions and innuendoes made in this House, Mr. Speaker. What ends up happening? We have a new turtle farm ahead of schedule, under budget and built by our own local Caymanians. It is so ironic when we turn around and hear the questions about the local contractors that could have been used to build the houses but when small contractors were given the Turtle Farm there were all the criticisms in the world as to who had done it correctly and whether it went through the right process and why the Minister had gotten involved.

Hypocrisy, Mr. Speaker! We can see that it is pure talk. We have a new town centre in West Bay. There is a bank. Our little old people can now walk out there and get their money. They can pay all their utility bills. They do not need to go to George Town anymore. They have dry cleaning, a pharmacy, a doctor's office, all the telecoms offices, a fast food restaurant and a new library under construction.

Again, all was accomplished without putting the country in a dire financial position. It was well managed. We took our time and looked at what was possible. We did not go out with a wish list and say because we wanted to get elected back in West Bay we need to spend x amount of millions there or x amount of millions in George Town so we need to borrow it and put the country back in debt. We have an improvement to the old people's home in West Bay.

There is just so much that is happening. Under the United Democratic Party Government we were able to renegotiate the telecommunications license and get the liberalisation and get competition. As you know, Mr. Speaker, because it was under your Ministry with you leading the charge that we are now enjoying the benefits of reduction in prices. We are in negotiations currently with the utility provider but even before the conclusions of those negotiations we have already seen a reduction in electricity costs. Before, it was almost automatic that there would be an increase. The three per cent increase was the accepted norm. Now, instead of an increase we actually have a decrease. And yet the People's Progressive Movement will get up and try to convince the people that the United Democratic Party Government has not been looking out for their interest.

I am proud to have been a part of this Government. I am proud to have been able to assist the "fab five" in achieving the goals that have been achieved in the short time. If it was not such a serious exercise you would be tempted to give the People's Progressive Movement an opportunity in the event that their first year was a mistake. However, the good Cayman Islands are too important for us to take the chance that they have watched and followed and learned over the last three years. In listening to them, even with the many accomplishments they still seem to have a difficult time accepting them. Thus, if they have not learned and still cannot even see what has been accomplished the chances of them making any significant accomplishments or changing the style that they have shown in the past is slim to none.

In the best interests of the Cayman Islands I plead with all those Members of the United Democratic Party that have worked so hard and so long and have been able to achieve such a turn around for the Cayman Islands to continue the fight in the best interests. We all can see that if by any chance, by default or otherwise, that what has been offered up as the alternative to this Government, if we have to go through a four-year term with them at the helm of the Cayman Islands, we all know that the circumstances and the consequences are going to be dire. Not only do I plead with the good people of the Cayman Islands but I plead with the elected Members of the United Democratic Party: Stand strong, hold fast and let us keep the good ship Cayman on course.

Before I go, the advice that I gave to my colleagues is the advice I want to give to the PPM. What they try to do is concentrate more on their own troubles and problems within their group and not worry so much about the United Democratic Party sticking together. As could be heard from all the contributions it is obvious that the United Democratic Party is a strong cohesive unit. Regardless of how much they may try to divide, how much time they will spend, we can hear that the United Democratic Party is looking forward to competing in the general election.

One of the questions that I would like to ask on behalf of my people, that I represent in the district of West Bay, is that so far we have not seen any candidates for the upcoming election from the PPM. The people of West Bay, who are very happy right now with their representation, and the Minister and Leader of Government Business are asking who is it that the PPM, because so far the PPM looks like the George Town, East End and North Side party? There is no space for a Minister for West Bay and there is no space for a Minister for Cayman Brac or Bodden Town. Perhaps that is one of those things that they want to address. If we have three members from George Town that expect to be Ministers; one from North Side, and one from East End, that is five. That is the question I want to ask and perhaps Mr. Eden could answer but we know that there are three members from George Town and one from North Side and one from East End; so that leaves the other districts out.

Thanks so much for your patience, Mr. Speaker, and for allowing me to continue and I wish you a safe journey. Thanks again.

MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Update on Government's Affordable Housing Initiative

The Speaker: I have received notice of a statement by the Honourable Minister of Community Affairs. I acknowledge him at this time.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, and Members of the Legislative Assembly, I gave notice to this Honourable House two days ago of my intention to present this House with an update on Government's Affordable Housing Initiative. It now gives me great pleasure to present to you this update, especially after the Member from North Side made so many misleading statements about this worthy humanitarian initiative. The Member, in her contribution to the 2004/2005 Budget, raised many questions but gave no answers. I will now, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Ministry responsible for Housing, and on behalf of the Cayman Islands Government, provide some answers.

The Government embarked on this Initiative in August 2002. It has been a massive undertaking and an educational experience for the Ministry to be involved with such a far-reaching initiative. Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly are reminded that former Government reports and studies suggested that the lack of affordable housing is one of the key factors that contribute to social problems faced by our people.

Prior to embarking on this Initiative, the Ministry revised these reports and reviewed other studies and statistics from the Department of Children and Family Services (formerly Social Services) and the 1999 Census. The Leader of Government Business and I, as well as representatives from our respective Ministries, visited a number of affordable housing initiatives in other countries. The Leader of Government Business also had discussions with members of the private sector in an attempt to find affordable materials, financing and labour. No contractors came forward with a plan to develop affordable housing at the level that Government wanted to impact for the benefit of the working poor.

We can play with the word "affordable" as the Member for North Side has done. The end result will be that we will find low and very low-income individuals form a large section of our working population unable to afford homes. Thus, what might be affordable to a person making C$24,000 per year is not affordable to the very low-income person making C$12,000 per year. We should therefore not confuse Phase 1 of this Affordable Housing Initiative to be an end all for our affordable housing inadequacies. This phase, Mr. Speaker, is a major stride along the path of the affordable housing provision, of social empowerment and of humane governance.

The National Housing and Community Development Trust (NHCDT)

Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly are aware that the National Housing and Community Development Trust (NHCDT), a wholly Government-owned not-for-profit company, was established in September 2003. The purpose of the Trust is to construct and maintain affordable homes, provide financing with less onerous qualifying terms than a standard commercial mortgage, and to offer new methods of homeownership and housing tenure to address our community's social needs.

The establishment of the NHCDT was necessary in order to produce and preserve affordable Housing Units. The NHCDT will achieve these objectives by acquiring land and providing funds for the materials, erection and completion of these initial 200 units. Once these homes have been completed, the further task of the NHCDT will be the preservation of these units and the communities it has formed, as well as the procurement of further additional housing stock. Experiences have taught us that the best way for this to be achieved is to provide the physical management of the housing estates and the social management of the affordable communities created within them. The NHCDT is therefore set up also as a mechanism to assist with the social support of the needy families and communities.

In order to ensure the long-term quality of the affordable housing communities, and by addressing the social needs of homeowners and their families, the Ministry responsible for Housing seconded the officers of the Community Development Unit to the Trust. The Trust is aware of the importance of this aspect to the long-term success of these communities.

Applicants are being assessed financially, as well as socially, in order to ensure that a cross-section of the Island's population who fit the criteria are selected. The staff from the Trust has been reviewing applications to determine the social eligibility based on the need to have a balanced ratio of populations represented within each community: single mothers, the elderly, young professionals and couples with children. The Trust will maintain involvement with the socially eligible buyers for the sale of homes when initial homeowners become financially qualified to upgrade their homeownership should they so desire.

The Trust will address their ongoing social needs in order to support the social infrastructure of each communal community. The staff will conduct on-going assessments and develop community-specific programs and collaborative referral systems to address these needs. Some programs will be created and implemented as preventative measures, based on the comprehensive knowledge of the social makeup of the qualifying families. As part of the purchase contract, homeowners will sign an agreement mandating that they work with the Trust team and adhere to specific behavioural norms. This will ensure that the Trust has the full co-operation of homeowners to participate in programs, or follow through with referrals when problems have been identified that may have an adverse impact on the housing community. Some programs will be needed and offered to all of the housing sites (structured child care programs, parenting and budgeting workshops), while others will be tailored to the specific needs of the individuals within the communities as they are identified.

One of the main goals of the social programs is to offer community officers to work along with residents through a "one-stop service shop" by providing community centres on site. This system is designed to provide a social network support and to break down the stigma of indigence and the applications of being a recipient of particular resources.

Social support services will be provided in a family-friendly environment, while offering assistance and empowerment from infancy to old age as needed. The idea that a family or individual is able to obtain services at one place within their home community and avoid having to go in search of resources will greatly enable them to obtain assistance before embarking on crises that can come with the reality of homeownership. Because the facility is on site and is designed to house various programs, client confidentiality is enhanced. Additionally, these programs will assist the homeowners who experience difficulties (due to financial, social, and emotional limitations) to gain the necessary skills to remain employed and productive. This will promote positive growth and development of the communities and the country.

Annual Grant

However, in order for the Trust to function effectively, an annual grant of approximately C$250,000 will be required to ease unforeseen cash-flow difficulties caused by catering to customers in the high-risk mortgage sector. It should be noted that during the infancy stage of the Trust, teething problems will be encountered and unforeseen financial restraints presented. Based on the financial projections, this will be required for the first five years of the Trust's operations.

Funding for the Community Development Unit will be transferred from the Ministry as a grant to the National Housing and Community Development Trust to cover the cost of operating this section of the Trust. Currently, this is projected at CI$550,000 and was previously under the Department of Youth and Sports budget.

The Board of Directors

The Board of Directors of the Trust is diverse and consists of highly proficient persons employed both in the public and private sectors. The Board has been meeting since December 2003, and in conjunction with the Ministry, has achieved the following:

- The provision for accommodations for the staff of the Trust.
- The secondment of the Community Development Unit to the Trust. These officers have been busy over the past few months pre-screening over 280 applications for the affordable homes.
- The hiring of a Finance Manager. The Finance Manager has worked in the banking industry and brings many years of experience to this important post.
- Undertaking negotiations with the financial industry to secure the best rate and terms of financing for the Trust.
- The production of draft Sale and Purchase Agreements for use between the NHCDT and prospective home purchasers.
- The drafting of proposed NHCDT by-laws for consideration and adoption in due course by the Board of Directors of the NHCDT.

The Cost of the Project

The total cost of the homes, excluding Government subsidies, is estimated at CI$12,581,213. This may be analysed as follows:

Residential Units:

Materials Supply	$3,116,486
Container Transport	$15,000
Units Construction	$5,628,152
Construction Utilities	$28,000
Contractor's Storage Facilities	$72,500
Bank LOC (Materials)	$35,700
Project Management & Administration	$79,700
TOTAL	CI$8,975,538

That is the cost for the actual homes.

The total inhabitable area of Phase 1 of the Initiative is 179,120 square feet which equates to a construction cost of CI$50.11 per square foot.

Private-sector-for-profit residential development construction costs for equivalent finish specifications would, at this time, be unlikely to be less than CI$75.00 per square foot.

Land Preparation & Services:

Site Clear and Fill	$1,650,000
Water Supply & Sewerage Disposal	$615,500
Roads, Kerbs, Sidewalk and Drains	$812,275
Site Electrical Installation	$53,000
Landscaping/Fencing	$250,000
Project Management and Administration	$109,900
Survey and Strata Establishment	$110,000
Engineering Consultants/Tests	$5,000
TOTAL	CI$3,704,675

Based on the total inhabitable area as given above, the cost of providing land preparation and services, including survey and strata establishment, equates to CI$20.68 per square foot. Equivalent costs in the private sector for equivalent land preparation and services provision specifications would be unlikely to be less than CI$30.00 per square foot per house area.

In addition to the above, the Government has provided land for the following sites at a total estimated cost of CI$2,411,000. The Government did not purchase these lands, these lands were there:

Site 1	Windsor Park, George Town	CI$330,000
Site 2	West Bay	CI$500,000
Site 3	Eastern Ave., George Town	CI$542,500
Site 4	Fairbanks Rd. George Town	CI$1,038,500

The Ministry has estimated that a further subsidy of CI$1,838,400, in the form of the waiver of Government fees, will have been given by the end of the procurement of this phase of the Initiative.

In terms of assisting the general public in understanding what we have done, we have broken down the actual cost of the materials and the construction costs of the 200 units and the site preparation, which means, urbanisation in the sense of sewerage, water, landscaping and fill were all separated. We also then showed that Government has added a non-cash contribution through these land donations.

If the Trust is to recover the direct costs of this initiative, the Trust will have to set a price of CI$69,600 for the 2 Bedroom + Den Units and CI$56,900 for the 2 Bedroom Units. While these are reasonable prices for these homes in terms of affordability, if the Government believes that, at this time, the prices should be lower, then it will require a cash subsidy of CI$1,141,413 to the Trust, in order to reduce the prices of the homes to CI$49,999 and CI$61,999. This results in a cash subsidy of CI$5,707 per unit. We are not aware of any examples of affordable houses being developed and maintained in any other jurisdiction without direct Government-cash subsidy towards the cost of production and maintenance.

The Opposition has made the point that these houses, at the prices they are being offered, are not affordable. I would therefore like to solicit the support of the Opposition for the Government to give a cash subsidy in order to maintain the affordability of these houses in their view. Monthly payments for the purchase of homes, if they are to be sold to recover all cash subsidy, based on a 20-year mortgage, fixed at an interest rate of 8.5 per cent, is thus expected to be set as follows:

2 Bedroom + Den Unit:	CI$1,500 deposit + CI$594 per month
2 Bedroom Unit:	CI$1,000 deposit + CI$485 per month

Monthly Strata Fee (including insurance premium contribution) is expected not to exceed CI$100 per Unit.

Financing for the Homes

This Honourable House is aware that on 15 December 2003, the Standing Finance Committee authorised the issuance of a Government Guarantee to a bank, or other financial institution, on behalf of the NHCDT to obtain a Bond Issue in the amount of US$29,000,000, or CI$23,925,000. The Ministry responsible for Housing and the Board of the NHCDT have been in negotiations with Scotiabank since January 2004, to secure financing for Phase 1 of the Affordable Housing Initiative. Initially, the Ministry responsible for Housing, along with the Leader of Government Business and the Honourable Financial Secretary, met with the major local banks in order to secure funding for the Trust. The local banks agreed that Scotiabank be the lead arranger for this Bond. The Trust is to finalise this Bond Issue within two weeks.

Audit of the Project

As a footnote, Mr. Speaker, I note that the Lady Member was calling for an investigation. The Cayman Islands Audit Office is in the process of conducting a value-for-money audit on the Affordable Housing Initiative. This audit started in March 2004, and the Ministry welcomed this review, as all expenditure on this project has been carefully monitored. Additionally, the Ministry has requested that the Audit Office carry out a further review at the end of the project to ensure that the funds expended on the Initiative are fully accounted for.

Update on the Project and Completion Dates

Progress on the delivery of the 200 houses comprising Phase 1 of the Affordable Housing Initiative, as at 12 May 2004, continues to be encouraging:

Windsor Park: Total Provision of 30 Houses.

Thirty houses are nearing practical completion and, subject to fit-out items, are to be ready shortly for handover to the Trust and subsequent hook-up of utilities. Of these utilities, water supply installation is 40 per cent complete, sewerage treatment installation is 20 per cent complete and Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC) installation is 90 per cent complete. Kerbs/walkways are 20 per cent complete and roads and parking are 15 per cent complete. Estimated latest date of occupation: 15 July 2004.

West Bay: Total Provision of 69 Houses.

Sixty-nine houses are nearing practical completion at this site. Of these, just over 30 houses are currently being inspected for compliance with hand-over requirements ready for formal handover to the Trust and subsequent hook-up to utilities. Of these utilities, water supply installation is 70 per cent complete, sewerage treatment installation is 90 per cent complete and CUC installation is also 90 per cent complete. Kerbs/walkways are 90 per cent complete and roads and parking are 50 per cent complete. Landscape preparation and finish grading commenced last week. Estimated latest date of occupation: 30 June 2004.

Eastern Avenue Site: Total Provision of 33 Houses.

Twenty-seven houses are complete to roof level, and of these, 24 are under interior fit-out operations, while six are awaiting completion of superstructure. Installation of utilities is progressing steadily, with water supply installation being 20 per cent complete, sewerage treatment installation 40 per cent complete and CUC installation around 50 per cent complete. Kerbs / walkways installation has commenced, with roads and parking to follow shortly. Estimated latest date of occupation: 30 July 2004

Fairbanks Road Site: Total Provision of 68 Houses.

Negotiations with the Health Services Authority are ongoing for the acquisition of approximately 22 acres of the site just off Fairbanks Road, George Town. This property has been partially filled to an extent of approximately five acres of the total seven acres needed for the final 68 houses of Phase 1 of the Initiative. This property, already the location of Her Majesty's (HM) Prison Fairbanks, has the added advantage of an existing floor slab and substructure designed to hurricane shelter specifications and is slated to be used for the construction of a Community Centre. This fourth site is scheduled to have Planning Approval granted and filling operations completed within eight weeks, in order to achieve the scheduled estimated Occupation Date. Estimated latest date of occupation: 30 November 2004.

The Applicants

Much has been said and speculated about the future applicants of these homes. It should be noted that the Ministry responsible for Housing has re-requested a recent breakdown of the number of applicants for these homes according to nationality. Of the 280 applicants to date, 76 per cent (213) are Caymanian and the remaining 24 per cent (67) are non-Caymanian.

The Board of the Trust has made it abundantly clear that the first choice for the homes will be given to Caymanians subject, of course, to compliance with the selection criteria. Every effort will be made to ensure that as many qualified Caymanians as possible are given the opportunity to own their own home.

Regarding the provision of Housing outside of West Bay and George Town, only four of the above applicants expressed a preference for houses in the Eastern Districts. This, we believe, is due largely to the fact that these districts were not included in this first phase of this Initiative.

It is anticipated that Phase 2 of the Affordable Housing Initiative will address the specific provisions of affordable homes in Bodden Town, East End, North Side, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman on a needs basis and in accordance with future market research. We are aware that Housing demands exist in these districts, and it is both the Government's and Trust's intention to ensure that these demands are met. In the meantime, the Department of Children and Family Services, with the able assistance of other public and private sector agencies, continues to provide social Housing assistance.

In conclusion, the Ministry responsible for Housing, on behalf of the Cayman Islands Government, is very grateful for the support given to the Affordable Housing Initiative by this Honourable House. I extend an invitation to all Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly to visit all three sites currently under development, as well as the offices of the NHCDDT, to see the progress being made on Phase 1 of the Affordable Housing Initiative.

For too many years the Cayman Islands have been devoid of an affordable housing policy and lacking in the machinery to implement one. The Government has assertively stepped forward and filled the void by embarking on this Initiative and by appointing civic-minded, caring Caymanians to both staff and direct the operations of the National Housing and Community Development Trust.

I thank them for their hard work and commitment and remind them that their work in this field is just beginning. I also thank the hundreds of Caymanians who have pledged their support for this Housing Initiative by applying for homes and for their interest and patience.

As a footnote, I also requested that the Ministry include a provision in the contract with the Vetro-mecaniche Invest Ltd because I think the impression is somehow that the contractors were paid and the houses were not built. I want to show that the contract is a contract.

When we bought the materials, for instance, upon delivery of the materials a letter of credit was drawn up. With regard to construction, initially workers received the mobilisation payment and are now paid according to parts that they complete; our project managers assess the work done and then pay them on a monthly basis. There is no way that the fund has been expended and that we have not had a result.

There appears to be no way to assist the Opposition in having clarity of thought and reason. Therefore, I hope this will assist the general public in seeing the depth that the Opposition will now go to, to destroy one thing being done to help the people in this country.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. I have also been given notice by the Minister of Education who has a statement.

I acknowledge him at this time.

Coming into Effect of the Employment Law (2004)

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This statement regards the coming into effect of the Employment Law (2004).

Members of this Honourable House are aware that the Employment Law was assented to by His Excellency the Governor on 31 March, 2004. There was some confusion caused by a newspaper article on Friday 11 May, as to when the new legislation will take effect. The Ministry responsible for Labour and the Department of Employment Relations are cognisant that employers and employees need some time to understand and respond to the requirements of this important new legislation.

Over the past few weeks the Department of Employment Relations has been organising itself to prepare for the implementation of the new Law.

Various activities have been organised including the following:

1. A two-day retreat to brief Employment Relations officers on implementing the new Law was held last week.
2. A comprehensive training session for the entire staff of the Department of Employment Relations will be facilitated by the Law School next week.
3. Various fact sheets on the new Employment Law have been prepared for general circulation.
4. A media campaign is underway.
5. Employment Relations staff will hold a briefing on the new Law for all of our Ministries' Heads of Department, units, and sections. This can be done for other Ministries upon request.
6. The Department is arranging a series of district meetings to speak to employers and employees which start next week.

7. Meetings with individual employers have been set up and will continue by request.

The Law states that: "1. (2) This Law shall come into operation on such date as the Governor may by Order specify and the Governor may appoint different dates for the coming into operation of different portions of this Law.

"(3) Without limiting the generality of subsection (2), sections 6 (5)(b) and 63 (both relating to workers' compensation) and other provisions dependant upon these provisions shall come into force on 1st December, 2005 or such later date as the Governor may by Order appoint."

This means that the workers' compensations provision shall not come into force before 1 December 2005 or a later date. However, the Ministry intends to have the main body of the Law come into effect on 1 September 2004, and this will be recommended to the Governor in Cabinet.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your indulgence.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Bills

The Appropriation (July 2004 to June 2005) Bill 2003

(Continuation of the debate on the Budget Address)

The Speaker: For the continuation of the debate, does any other Member wish to speak?

I recognise the Minister of Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I sat here and listened quite intently to our Honourable Financial Secretary, the Honourable Leader of Government Business, as well as my other United Democratic Party (UDP) colleagues, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and his People's Progressive Movement (PPM) colleagues, make their contributions and play out their respective roles in this Parliament. I, for a moment, thought I would forego making my contribution at this time, rather, make it at the Throne Speech in a few weeks' time when His Excellency the Governor so presents. I thought this would be in the interest of time and in getting to Finance Committee, where funds could have been voted upon and our Government could get on with the business of completing the various projects in our respective districts. However, last night I thought that I would like to present a somewhat different and, some may dare say, courageous angle to this debate.

The late John F. Kennedy once said: "Being courageous requires no exceptional qualifications, no magic formulas, no special combination of time, place and circumstance. It is an opportunity that sooner or later is presented to us all."

This being my eighth Budget Address in this Honourable House, it is now my opportunity to try a different approach to the Budget debate.

This Budget, in my respectful view, presents the UDP Government's financial roadmap for the 2004/2005 financial year. In this Budget we have offered, among other things, our descriptions, objectives and goals. Government Members, in their debate, have said how our application fits into the broader scheme of things.

This Budget, in my respectful view, has been based on a unified social theory for all of the Cayman Islands and not for a selected few. Indeed, I further submit that it has been based on a rational budgetary foundation. It is based on the premise of representative Government through the process of analytical procedure that avoided implicit or direct bias.

We have endeavoured to refrain from electoral politics in this Budget and have made considerable effort to ensure that this Budget is prudent and responsible. It is based on sustainable, financial concepts, the genesis of which has been dedicated to fiscal control both on the recurrent side of our Budget, as well as with our equity investments in the various ministries, portfolios, statutory authorities and even our government companies. These amounts have admirably been limited to an amount that we can finance by operating cash flows.

In the 2004/05 Budget we have offered what I believe is the most transparent Budget ever presented in our country's history. I dare say that it is a budget based on the principles of democracy; it is user-friendly and welcomes public evaluation.

Income redistribution is a major activity of most governments. Most public interventions, whether they are fees, expenditures or regulations of various sorts, change relative prices and serve thereby to redistribute income away from some groups towards others, despite how we wish to think. The whole range of public policies has distributional consequences. However, different governments will undoubtedly have their own explanations, their own methodologies for prioritisation as to the manner in which they seek to redistribute and prioritise their financial resources.

Perhaps the most conspicuous example in this 2004/05 Budget of the concept of redistribution is shown in our Government welfare policies. We have based these policies on our ethical obligations to the poor and the needy in our Caymanian community. More often than not, various Governments are viewed as, what I would term, the "charitable despot and considerations of noblesse oblige" (obligations of honourable, generous and responsible behaviour associated with high rank). These are often construed to motivate various agencies in the Government.

This year, being an election year, our Government could have easily yielded to the common temptation of unjustifiably increasing our social welfare vote for the wrong reasons. Instead, we chose to marry the fiscal and financial prudence with reasonable and affordable social welfare principles. Simply put, the public welfare expenditure in this Budget involves the proposition that the Caymanian public desires public redistribution, even if they do not themselves directly benefit from this redistribution. We believe their reasons for this desire are nothing less than admirable. We believe that the Caymanian community and our Government are indeed desirous of ensuring that the poor in our community are satisfactorily taken care of because it will then lead to a more healthy, equitable, unified community.

For the most part, the Government has risen from the ranks of the grassroots. We know, from a personal perspective, what it means to be poor and in need. We do not need to be convinced to make provisions in our Budget as it relates to the various welfare programs. This Budget will, in fact, bear out that we have once again taken a holistic approach in nation building and have therefore provided as far as possible for the poor and needy in our community. I believe we have achieved this most important goal without having to raise taxes. Certainly, this has to be recorded as a better balanced approach.

This Budget offers continued confidence and stability to our investors. The question then can be posed, Why so much stability when our opposers concluded some three years ago that the overriding component to the formation of our Government was one of convenience which they predicted would lead to less than desirable consequences? Some may say it is a fair question.

Majority rule does not always necessarily generate a stable outcome, as there is no outcome that cannot be defeated by a majority of votes. What I suggest is that the picture of democratic politics is one of continual policy change as the composition of the decisive coalition alters. There will be, and has been, a shifting of priorities in order to secure whatever outcome is best for our beloved Cayman Islands. However, what actually keeps this cycling and expressive preference in focus is the presence and the involvement of what we call a charismatic, energetic and dynamic leader. This type of leadership is sufficiently confident to allow circular indifferences (and that we have) because our Leader knows that, at the end of the day, we in the Government have one common goal: be the very best representatives that we can be to the people of the Cayman Islands.

Of course, such dynamic leadership often opens itself to the receiving end of political rhetoric. However, in politics we learn sooner or later that rhetoric is a kind of noise screen which attempts to hide the real play of competitive interests underneath. Especially in an election year, we can all prepare ourselves for political rhetoric, but let us not become dismayed. I truly believe that it is nothing more than political advertising, more or less, analogous to the kind of bikini-clad girls and sporting celebrities used to sell cars, cigarettes and beers in the marketplace. Just as in marketplace advertising, where the seller seeks to provide an association between the product and the attractive image, so too, I submit, the political advertiser makes a similar appeal to relevant images in order to attract votes. I certainly heard a lot of that in the last few days.

The traditional Parliamentary debate is essential evidence of democracy, Mr. Speaker, although in most cases, I believe there is virtually no prospect that the debate may persuade anyone on this Honourable Floor to change their minds from their particular party lines. There may even be the heroic vision of us arguing our way towards a common mind of accepting this Budget, but we all know this vision is nothing more than a romantic notion.

After eight years I have concluded that the budgetary parliamentary debate is like a forensic exercise, like debating competitions with the purpose of persuading the general public rather than persuading the opposing team. This is merely an observation. Nonetheless, not just any budgetary policy will do in these times. Only those policies that are consistent with the political and ethical positions of our Caymanian community can identify us with the public and the public with us as politicians. We are, however, constrained by the perception of the political good that we endorse, and even more constrained by the requirement that we publicly articulate and defend our particular policies. To this end, I believe that parliamentary debate is therefore very critical to our democratic process, not because it instantiates the ideal forum for us in this Parliament, but because it structures and supports the crucial, expressive aspects of community valuation and political participation. That is why I rise to make this contribution today.

I wish also that the Parliamentary record reflect that our Party will suffer if our economy sputters because voters will perceive the Party as failing to cope adequately with national economic problems. Thankfully, the UDP's Budget does not reflect an economy that is sputtering. Indeed, the opposite is the case. I am therefore extremely confident that if we place our trust in God and seek His guidance and purpose for our country, the good ship "Cayman" would not have a significant change of crew, if any, come 17th November.

The Government, of which I am a part, remains committed to ensuring an economically and socially vibrant Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the constituency for which I represent. The capital section of this Budget is a testament to the UDP Government's commitment to place necessary resources for the utilisation of necessary projects in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. This Budget will indeed present an opportunity for us to provide the long-evaded sub-Police station in the district of Spot Bay, at the new commercial centre.

At this juncture, I particularly commend a local businessman from Grand Cayman who ventured to put his money where his mouth is by taking the great economical risk of investing thousands of dollars in the eastern districts of the Island and, to date, has been quite successful. That is the person we know as "Mr. Biggie".

My Ministry has been diligently working to achieve many varied, and often complex, technical outputs, and the country, on the whole, has benefited from our efforts. The Ministry continues to work to ensure that the cost of living is decreased in the areas that we have been given constitutional responsibility for.

The Government understands that in order to facilitate the operation of an efficient public and private sector, we are constantly looking to create and find innovative means to ensure that, as trustees of the country, we take the country forward while being able to maintain an appropriate border security and protection. We, I believe, still live in the best country as far as safety and blessings from Almighty God, and this is a most important aspect. I am aware that the Honourable Leader of Government Business continues to find solutions to guarantee that there is security within our borders. We must all join hands together as this is an effort that will benefit all.

This Government continues to increase necessary resources for our faithful, dedicated and hard-working Police Service. We believe, even in the day of fiscal constraints, it is vital to provide the necessary and appropriate tools for them to carry out their various policing in our districts, not only in Grand Cayman but in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as well. I praise the various task forces.

Coming from Cayman Brac, this is an ongoing, arduous job and we are often left to depend on the expertise and resources from Grand Cayman—Immigration Services, Customs Department and the Police—in our fight towards drugs on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I am grateful to be part of a Government that does not exercise their discretion in an ostrich approach to this problem, but indeed has tackled it head-on. As the fight continues, we trust that the community and the persons involved will see that the UDP Government has a no-tolerance approach for drug and domestic abuse.

This has taken high priority on the UDP checklist because drug activities, if left un-addressed, are worse than a cancer in any society. On the Brac we dubbed it the "Slim-Fast diet" and that is not to put an anecdotal perspective to it. We have seen once strapping young men and women now walking our streets who have lost, in some cases, over one hundred pounds. We can always put on our fine clothes and drive our fine cars and say that it is not our problem; but I always look at it from the perspective that he or she is some mother's child and it is the Government's business to work in partnership with every member of our community to ensure that they have a reasonable chance of succeeding. After all, it is our community and not just theirs.

This fight against drugs and other crimes must come to the forefront of everyone's mind. I believe that this is one arena in which politics should become an expatriate. There is no room in the fight against crime for politics to play a role because, at the end of the day, there is no discretion for those who choose to shoot indiscriminately around the town; there is always the occasion where the bullet becomes the stray bullet. We are a small, close-knit community and you do not have to search very far to find a cousin or relative. It has a very significant, negative impact seeing that tourism is one of our main industries here in the Caymanian jurisdiction.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, as a second phase of his development, the Minister responsible for Housing has also committed, within the party, to provide low-income houses to the eastern districts, including the district from which I come, Cayman Brac. I publicly thank him for this undertaking and assure him that there are easily 20 to 25 persons who, we believe, would qualify within our community for this long-awaited, real hope of finally owing their very own home.

For the Brac, 20 to 25 low-income homes will have a significant, economical impact. Not only will it have a positive, economical impact, but just as importantly—or perhaps more importantly—it will allow some of our single-family parents to, at long last, come out from very cluttered and inappropriate housing accommodations to start generating, creating and cultivating a pride of having their own home. It will be a place where their children can play not only indoors, in safe and comfortable surroundings, but also have the luxury of going out into their own yard to play. They will be able to cultivate a good family relationship and maintain a good quality of life in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I am happy to say the Government, of which I am a part, has allowed for an allocation within this Budget for property which can be used—if the Minister deems fit once he visits the Brac—for the provision of locating the low-income houses and also to augment the necessary, ancillary infrastructure with his vision of building a whole community as opposed to just creating buildings.

I turn to the economic impact that Cayman Airways has, in particular, to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I am glad to say that under the capable leadership of the Leader of Government Business, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman have seen the addition of two Twin Otter aircrafts. Lest anyone say that this has not had a significant impact, I am reliably informed that last month we received over 3,000 passengers to the Brac. Tourism is alive and well; so much so that this past weekend on the Brac I was actually bumped from one of the flights to allow someone else to get onto the flight to Grand Cayman.

That is not an exception. Those of us who go to the Brac on the weekend have a very difficult time getting a seat. However, because we are committed to ensuring that there is sustainable tourism on the Brac (especially on the Brac side of the journey) we have no problem offering up a seat in order to assist in the fight to guarantee we have an economic development that continues.

We have not made an impact in the financial industry as has our sister, Grand Cayman. Nonetheless, we are satisfied that we have lent (if I may be so bold to say) much of our intellectual capacity to that industry. We are satisfied to build our tourism industry on the Brac.

Many people will look at the development of the Brac and consider it a "brain drain". I choose not to have the half-cup philosophy when considering the Brac and its development. Indeed, I look at us as the Cayman Islands. It helps us if we have students that work within our community, ensuring that the Cayman Islands maintain their position as fifth, perhaps even higher, largest financial centre in the world.

We will see that, perhaps, every time the Budget is presented there are huge amounts in the Budget that are referred to as subsidies to the Brac in one form or another. I refer to them as being paid back for the intellectual capabilities that we send across to Grand Cayman to assist in the nation building of our country. I am content we have a Leader who understands that nation building encompasses all components; that is why he is so popular in the Brac and can go there, in my humble submission, run anytime and win a seat.

I am also pleased to say that the Honourable Leader responsible for Tourism has been actively engaging in dialogue in a consultative manner with the Florida Cruise Ship Association. I have been fortunate enough to have the opportunity, with your good self and others, to attend negotiations in an attempt to portray the physical and geographical restrictions that we have on the Brac of not being afforded the blessing of a natural harbour. We are well on the way to having the Florida Cruise Ship Association accept the concept. My colleague said yesterday, they have visited and we are now in possession of their report and findings. Indeed, some of our infrastructure requires some tweaking; we have provisions in this Budget for that. We are happy that the private sector has come on-board as a partner with the Brac and have already begun purchasing the buses that will be necessary for the various tours: Tours A and B.

Often, the Brac's development suffers from the chicken-and-egg syndrome. This Government is not prepared to wait for the chicken to hatch, rather, it is prepared to provide the incubator and necessary environment to make certain that not only the chicken hatches, but the chicken hatches and continues producing more chickens and more eggs in order to keep the viability of the economy on the Brac going. I hear my learned friend from George Town saying that he thought that we would fry the egg. Perhaps that is a Freudian slip that I will take up in another forum, as the eggs from the UDP are there for prosperity and not for elimination.

Yesterday afternoon was a most historic day, especially for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Many of us here in this Honourable House witnessed the commissioning of our national radio communication link. Indeed, it was an exciting and wonderful privilege for me, as Minister responsible, to make the first radio link across to the District Commissioner. Of course, being who I am, for a split second I had some trepidation, wondering whether the link would connect, especially before of an audience of technocrats and communications experts. Thankfully, Motorola and my dependable staff came through for us and the link was made. It was certainly good to hear.

I am a person who can be termed a "hurricane chaser". From the time they roll off the coast of Africa I am on the internet checking, mapping and verifying where they are going. As recently as Hurricane Lily—and my constituents can attest to this—I was never off the roll, much to my mother's detriment and fretfulness.

It became quite evident that this project—which began under the leadership of the last Minister, the now present Speaker—needed to continue, because in the eastern districts, in particular, Spot Bay and some locations on the Bluff, we could not get communications, not even from our beloved Radio Cayman who broadcasts reliable and consistent hurricane weather forecasts.

Thankfully, we reached a digital phone and I was able to aptly communicate with the Deputy Chief Secretary and Mr. Kirkland Nixon to get out information, particularly when the eye was deemed to be passing over Cayman Brac. Persons in the eastern district who thought it had passed came out into the road to celebrate—in their form of celebration—and because of the communication we were able to take them. Now I will not have to risk my life to go on the road to get that vital communication as to what to expect because they can sit in the comfort of their homes, or if they wish to, go in the caves as many of us still do. This in itself can only be a positive improvement, in particular, for them. On behalf of my constituents, I wish, in anticipation, for a full agreement for this particular part of the Budget. I thank all Members for their support in this regard.

Another significant aspect which occurred yesterday was that Little Cayman was involved as well. Oft-times, we endeavour to airlift the tourists and residents wishing to leave in case of emergencies or hurricanes. However, having put in the necessary infrastructure for the Hurricane Centre—which serves the double purpose of housing our Public Workmen in very comfortable accommodations on Little Cayman—we made the decision to build that to hurricane standards. Now with the communication link in Little Cayman, it gives them the option of staying on the Island, if they so desire, and protecting their property, family and any other assets they so wish.

From an economic perspective, my Ministry also continues to work along with the management from the Government in its commitment to ensuring the liberalisation of the utility sector.

Much has already been said in this and other previous debates in this Honourable House as to the process which led us to some very live competition with telecommunications and great prices in the market for the very first time. We are now diligently working with the other leg of the utility, that is, Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC). At a more appropriate time, once we have successfully concluded our negotiations—which we anticipate in short order unless there is an overriding factor beyond our control—we shall have another positive announcement which will be made in true partnership in a joint statement to this Honourable House first, then to the wider community.

Suffice it to say, this is the first and only Government successful in negotiating a sizable reduction—3 per cent at the end of October last year—to a very significant aspect which contributes to the increased cost of living: the electricity component of one's expenditure.

Being the encompassing Government that we are, we did end our progress as it related to CUC here on Grand Cayman. As Minister, I took keen interest in the renewal of the license for Cayman Brac Power and Light, and I was fully convinced that they needed a fifteen-year contract, albeit non-exclusive as we have entered the era of competition and the Government mandate was steadfast and continues to be in that regard. I took great pain and effort to ensure that there was some mechanism within the terminology of the contract to ensure that the cost of living on the Brac did not become a "runaway train". In fact, what we have accomplished has not received that much publicity, for whatever reason, but I can tell you that the people on the Brac are exceptionally happy.

This is the first time that any government has been able to put in a freeze on rates for the entire duration of the contract, being fifteen years. To put that in layman's terms, we were able to get the company under the leadership of Mr. Moses Kirkconnell, who has a social conscience for the community, to accept that they had to play a role in the development/partnership on the Brac. By so doing, they agreed to a term in the license that no electricity rates would be raised for the next fifteen years unless it was a carry-through fuel factor, which is an understandable aspect.

We are also grateful that the vision of development on the Brac is finally becoming a reality.

For many years Members from the Brac, the Honourable Chief Secretary, when he had the responsibility, and I took much abuse and political licks—if I may so resort to that terminology—for significant sums of allocations in the Budget for roads. Again, we will see in this Budget that the UDP Government has not deviated from their commitment to the development of Cayman Brac because there is half a million dollars for the development of roads on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. This is important in our vision of developing a sustainable and vibrant economy.

You see, Mr. Speaker, the UDP has a philosophy that it is not good enough to provide a fish; we need to provide the tools for the fishing so that once that fish is consumed that person has the requisite skills and techniques to continue to prosper in such an environment. That is why we strive to ensure that all of the components are lined up so that all and sundry can benefit.

We have embarked upon a road program on the Brac. It took us investing in the provision of electricity lines and poles not only to provide necessary access to various properties on the Bluff, but also to encourage persons to begin residential development and to get back to the agricultural development. We believe that the Brac, as in past times, has potential to develop its agriculture. Believe it or not, there is much fertile soil on the Bluff, and judging from the success of our last Agriculture Show, the persons who visited from Grand Cayman were amazed to see the high quality of the produce there on the Brac.

Because I always like to lead by example, I took the bold move to construct my own home on the Bluff, even before knowing if there would be electrical or telephone lines. I paid the high cost of cell phones to make the statement that not only did I believe that the Bluff was the future of the Brac's development, but that I was willing to make an investment.

I am happy to report that in the past two years the amount of development on the Bluff, as it relates to residential homes—very nice residential homes both from our local constituents/investors, from abroad and a large percentage from Grand Cayman who seek summer/vacation homes—is really commendable and a testament to the vision of development on the Bluff. This vision is a correct one which we should continue to support.

I know that we will get the opportunity—in our continuation of this forensic exercise when we approach the various line items and policies in the Finance Committee—to say more about our respective responsibilities in our Ministries, as well as have the opportunity to make statements as need arises. In an effort to expedite the process, I will conclude by saying that the UDP Government is a Government that I have found, from a personal perspective, not to be a vindictive Government. I trust that regardless of what the future holds, any Government that will be good for the Cayman Islands must guarantee that that continues.

There is an element of divisiveness that has come about, for whatever reason, within our communities—the Brac as well as Grand Cayman—which cannot stand to bode well in our community. I agree we must take every effort to maintain and ensure that our Caymanians are protected. We who herald and often taut the fact that we are a Christian nation must also take a step back in a humanistic approach and see ourselves as creations of the Lord God Almighty and that we are all somebody's child.

Like the late Manly said—and I am sure I speak for all of us here when I say—our greatest duty is to ensure where the jobs come for our local people, and even more importantly, where the next meal comes for our people. However, we must also ensure that we do not become such deviants from the global village as it develops in that direction, that when the curb of economic success takes a downward turn in our community that we become like leopards in the worldwide stage of the economic development.

The Caymanian community has always been a travelling community. Many of our ancestors have hailed from abroad, and today we still have many close relatives in Jamaica, Cuba, Southern USA, England and Canada, and perhaps all over the world. I am reminded by the Second Elected Member that we have many in Honduras as well. I am glad that he has reminded me of that because they too play a most vital role in our community, which I am sure he is quite aware of. Simply put, what I am saying is that we must make every effort, in engineering our concepts and policies, not to create a utopia in Cayman because it cannot have a sustainable, beneficial interest in the long run.

We believe that the Minister of Health has indeed done his very best to ensure that there is access to excellent health service on the Brac. There is always room for criticism in any Ministry; I certainly do not claim to be perfect and I like to think that I maintain an open-door policy. I do not think that there is one Member of the Opposition or the public that can say that, if I can help, I have not tried to help. I do not adhere to the policy that because one is not within a particular Party that they should not be able to advance their wants or desires from their constituency. I approach it from the view that their constituency voted for them, they obviously have the confidence of the constituents and I have to respect that until the constituents so change.

I believe that for Cayman to continue to have its success not only politically but socially and economically, we have to somehow depart from us and them in this House and outside the House. That is why it gives me grave concern to see the direction that the granting of the Caymanian status has taken. Because I do not want to enter into the peripheral of sub judice, suffice it to say that I believe the outcome will record a very black day in the history of Cayman when a particular branch sees fit to challenge an Executive Order for carrying out a very appropriate and humanistic approach within our country.

Many of our own Caymanians have dual citizenship, some perhaps have more. It is the trend of the day when you travel to have your Cayman and British passports, and some their US passports. It is difficult to say that it is good for us but not for another country. We must learn to live with people. No man is an island, and neither do the Cayman Islands operate within a vacuum. Indeed, we need to strive to see how we can reach out, join hands and band together in this humanistic approach and fight in this world.

We have young people coming up. The youth in our society are looking for statespersons, not just politicians, who are willing—as I endeavour to illustrate in the preliminaries to my debate—to make very difficult and complex decisions and who will not be biased in their decision-making; who will cater not just to an elite group but to everyone within the Cayman Islands including our visitors as well.

We can surely say that Cayman is the fifth largest financial centre, but we did not do it on our own; we required a lot of help from the outside. Yes, with the good we will also have the bad where there are prejudices. I have seen that for myself so I know that it is not just a speculation. However, we should not take that paint brush and paint all the expatriates, because they have made a significant contribution to our economy.

I know, particularly as it relates to the European Savings Tax Directives, we have formed a consultative committee and we rely heavily on their expertise seeing that they are, for the most part, the movers and shakers in the economic industry within our community. For that, the Government continues to be most grateful.

I realise the Honourable Leader of Government Business will have much to say with regard to his leadership style and vision. Of course, it would be remiss if he got up and did not respond to the allegations. I chose not to get into that area because we are capably covered on this side in that respect. I trust that if not all, at least one word of what was said today will help us set the parameters for the upcoming elections so that we can continue beyond 17th November. Yes, that is an anticipated date, but Cayman will not stop on that day.

We need a blueprint, a vision that is conspicuous and transparent. It must be clear to our constituents that it is one which they can endorse and feel proud to associate with; not one which compares to the bikini-clad sports competitor scenario but one which can hold up whether or not the frills are there.

I thank you and Honourable Members for your indulgence, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak? If not, I will call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business for his reply.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak to the Budget before us and in response to contributions by the Opposition for the Second Reading debate on the Appropriation Bill.

I want to, firstly, thank the Member of the Cabinet and the Minister of Planning, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for what was a very well-put, educational contribution. She must have made a serious impact because the Member for North Side, who cannot sit still at times, jumped up and ran out, of course, followed by the General Secretary, the Second Elected Member for George Town.

I suggest that the Second Elected Member for George Town began his contribution as usual: complaining and making mountains out of mole hills. Instead of trying to solve some of the problems that the George Town district and its people face, he spends his time making mountains out of mole hills, complaining about everything and trying to cause problems at every end.

He started by saying that the country must be able to hear. He complained because we were going on as we said we would; he complained that the Press was not here. Well, we would like for them to be here; however, the House has to go on regardless.

Shortly thereafter one of them did arrive and was here from 10 am to about 4.30 pm, when the House took a break. When we started the Budget procedure we said we would have to work until 10 pm some nights; each Member of the Assembly was written to in that regard. His objection is that people say they cannot wait up until 12 am to listen to the broadcast. That is true. I do not like that either, but the Government does not set Radio Cayman's time to broadcast; that is set by Radio Cayman.

The problem with that young man is that he wants his way, and although he says plenty about democracy he believes that because he says so it must be so. They believe that the five of them — and if they could get their way, bring in their cohorts from outside—could run the Government. Mr. Speaker, they had their opportunity to run the Government, and he complained that nobody was here to listen to the Leader of the Opposition. The truth is I have heard enough from the Leader of the Opposition, who can only talk but is not capable of taking action and managing. I have the country's business to run and I am going to run it. In regard to my travels, I will make mention of that later on.

The truth is there is so much flour in the rhetoric from the Leader of the Opposition that if we were making anything other than turtle stew, he would have plenty of dumplings to put into the meal. Fortunately, the country is no longer under this type of leadership and the country's downward spiral has been righted, it is on the move upward, for one and all.

The Financial Secretary's Budget Address, and my own Policy Statement on behalf of the Cab-net that led this Budget debate, provided a clear overview of the contents of the Budget and, in particular, the steady course it plots for the future. During the course of this debate, this Honourable House has heard from Ministers of the Government about the United Democratic Party Government's vision for the future of these Islands and the actions we are taking to achieve it.

We have heard from the Minister of Education about the programs that have been implemented over the last three years to improve educational and vocational standards of our young people, and we have heard of his vision for continuous learning in the workplace. The complaints from the Opposition that the Government does not assist the Minister of Education are so wrong, and their accusations are merely accusations and not based on fact. I do not know where they got that from, but of course, they have been passing enough potatoes, tomatoes and sweet peppers over the table for anything to be said. However, whenever the Minister of Education puts a plan before us for any expenditure, he is supported. He said that publicly some time ago when he suggested that I was one of his biggest supporters on the Cabinet. That made the front pages of the local media.

Anything he asks for he gets because it is a priority. We are not all Education Ministers, and we are guided by his policies when it comes to educational matters, but he gets support from every one of us: from the Back Bench and from the Official Members of the Cabinet. He is supported fully and staunchly on his educational programs. Yes, we too would like to see the vocational standards improve—and this is not something I talked about today, it is something that we have been talking about for years—but we realise that it takes time. He says that it is more important to get the programs than to get the buildings, so we support him in that move.

We heard from the Minister of Health about the reform of the health sector and the provisions of affordable comprehensive health insurance for all Caymanians. We have heard from the Minister of Community Services about his initiatives in social policy including the Affordable Housing project and the many programs provided for our youth. Our social problems did not begin today; they started many years ago but nobody looked at them. We did not train our people to take charge of them.

One simple illustration: we have not even realised in the past 30 years how our population has aged, and we have not trained. When we opened the Cayman Brac home for the aged, the Kirkconnell Community Centre, no one had that kind of ability; there were only a few Caymanians. The Social Services Department, with me as Minister at the time, had to train Jamaican ladies to take up that position.

Over the years we have not cared to pay attention. I have been preaching that for the last 20 years and I have tried to make my own input and inroads into the problems. We need to pay more attention to social aspects or building up the financial side. If we let that go by, we lose everything, and I have said that many times.

Since the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town is here, he must understand this because it would only be hypocritical of him to now talk about the social problem like Government is not doing anything about it. I am still waiting to see what he did with the Social Family study that I commissioned. When I moved out of Council in 1997, it was put in his hands as Minister then.

Do not come pointing fingers at Government. To the present Administration, when you had a chance to do something and you did not make any serious inroads yourself, you should at least understand the problems that that administration has!

It is pure hypocrisy to now make people believe that the whole social infrastructure of the country is in a downward spiral because of the United Democratic Party. They would love people to believe that but I ask, what are they doing and what have they done?

We have heard from the Minister responsible for Planning and responsible for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. She has to pay a lot of attention to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, but she has tremendous other duties. She outlined some of them in the telecommunications and the utilities. These are huge issues for us to deal with. No one else tackled them, rather, they ran away from them or else they had shares in them and so only lip service was paid. The United Democratic Party has no shares – and thank God for those that have—but we have to look after the good for the whole country.

I turn now to the Leader of the Opposition's contribution, and I couple his with that of the Second Elected Member for George Town, the General Secretary of the PPM, because what one says the other parrots. The first thing they jumped up and made a lot of noise about is that the Financial Secretary had given me a little bit of credit about the work on his side and the things that are important to the country. Other Members, even from my side, jumped up to talk about this new financial system. Well, the Member from George Town likes to read what people say but is so dishonest that he cannot read the full Hansard because, of course, it would bear out something different than what he is saying.

What about this new system? I was not convinced about the system when they brought it because I said that the Government could not put in place the Fiscal Responsibility Act—which is the motion they now claim credit for in this new system — without putting in place the other Law of New Zealand, the Companion Law, the Public Finance Act of New Zealand, and that is exactly what we put in place and what was passed here. What they were asking for was the Fiscal Responsibility Act. They were two different things; one has bearing on the other and that is what I said in 1995. However, I was not convinced that we were doing the right thing jumping into that without having all of the other things before us.

One thing which I pointed out was that we needed a different structure of Government, and we have come a long way in getting this accrual system. However, the fact is we do not have the Constitution to work it, and therefore, that is one of the reasons why I close the debate today and give a policy statement. According to Law, if they work the system fully it requires an Elected Member at the helm and serious other Constitutional changes. So, let no one jump up now and take credit for everything under the sun like they were the saviours.

I give all who supported the Motion credit, but do not say that I get credit that I do not deserve because what I say here are the facts.

First Corinthians 3:6 says: “I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase.”

Anyone can talk about a system, but what matters and what counts is the one that makes that system work and produce. We did that. As a Government this past four years, we did it; the entire Cabinet of the Cayman Islands did it, not the Leader of the Opposition!

Everybody had their hand in making the accrual system work. I take my hat off to the Financial Secretary, and he knows where I come from in my respect for him.

I know the licks that I have taken and I know the amount of time that I have spent. I travelled overseas to keep this country on a sound foot. All of us contributed and gave the increase.

When the Leader of the Opposition was the Leader of Government Business work had already started. How can he claim that he put it in place? How can the propaganda Minister from that side—they call themselves an administration now—prefer going out into the coffee room during this reply because he cannot take the truth?

When he was Leader the work had already started and we put the Law in place. Those are the bare facts. I hope I hear no more about it.

The leader of the Opposition, and by extension his PPM, have repeated many times that the people are not getting anything out of this economy or the development that we have and still push for and he says that my economics are all wrong. I wonder where that Member and his PPM are living when they say that Caymanians are not getting anything out of this economy. Today I will prove them wrong!

I have to ask whether he is living in the Cayman Islands in 2004, or is he living in the Cayman Islands of 2001 when he was the leader? At that time it was safe to say that people were not getting anything out of it because those who were here for a long time were moving away, the economy was in shambles and unemployment was high. I specifically remember that Christmas. I always give until it hurts, but I had to give more that year than any other time because people did not have anything to give their children, not even for school. People do not remember how hard it was. Business people were coming to me and saying they had to borrow to fund their businesses. They had to borrow to keep staff on because it would only make matters worse if they laid off their staff. They had to borrow to pay salaries.

The Leader of the Opposition chooses to forget about all of this; and I do not worry about the other three that are sitting with him now in the Chamber at times because they do not know whether they are coming or going. But he should know better because he was the Leader!

A good indicator of how well the people are doing in any economy is planning statistics. I want to focus on two figures in particular: houses and apartments.

On the statistics for apartments for the years 2002, 2003 and the first quarter of 2004, there were total apartment developments valuing over $105 million. These apartments are ventures that Caymanians have historically invested in; some have been able to build two or three while others have built as many as 10 and more. The fact is that Caymanians are getting something out of this development and they have been able to construct or take part in apartment construction, exceeding $105 million.

I point out to the Opposition and this Honourable House, this is not Government's Housing, that is another investment. This is private sector housing; this is separate and apart. This is the people investing because they see the opportunity and can make the investment in this kind of economic environment, which this Government have fostered.

This achievement in apartment building is paralleled in the Housing construction figures. This country boasts home investments for the same period of 2002, 2003, through the first quarter of 2004, totalling over $123 million. No wonder the Second Elected Member for George Town and the Member for North Side headed to the coffee room to hide. They like to stand up and talk foolishness, but when you throw statistics and facts at them, they get all heated up. I suppose they do not want people to see them getting so nettled. Perhaps it is a good thing if they stay out there drinking coffee and smoking cigarettes.

How can the Opposition claim that Caymanians are not getting anything out of this economy? $123 million in Housing. Caymanians, in various strata of life more than ever before, are being afforded an opportunity to participate in this economy and to experience outright homeownership because we have brought better economic times; people have more funds and can get a mortgage, yet the Leader of the Opposition says people are not getting anything out of the economic development that my party, our Government, the Cabinet and the Civil Service have fostered.

Although the Opposition would like the country to think otherwise, the UDP is a Government of vision and action, and this Budget and this Budget Debate show that very clearly.

I do not intend to take up the valuable time of this Honourable House by answering point-by-point the Leader of the Opposition and his PPM colleagues. I will not do this for two reasons:

Firstly, much of his speech was not worthy of response, so to answer would only give it the credence which it does not deserve.

Secondly, his assertion that we have no sustainable policies on health, education and social welfare has been more than adequately dealt with by my UDP Cabinet colleagues and our Back Bench supporters. I am sorry that I missed the proceedings last week; unfortunately, Government Business took me overseas as it has been for some time. However, I will deal with their criticisms later.

It must be obvious to the Opposition and to the listening public that, although Cabinet Ministers may have different styles and approaches, we are united in the vision we have for this country and pursuance of well-thought-out policies.

The Leader of the Opposition tries to demean what we have achieved by trying to convince people that we have been successful only because there has been an upturn in the global economy. Let me assure the listening public and the PPM, our success is because we have developed good policies, established a clear path of implementation and took action. The Cayman Islands' economy is doing better than other countries, and that is because the United Democratic Party Government has stimulated the economy and has been fiscally prudent.

The Leader of the Opposition declares he has a blueprint. Oh yeah, he has a blueprint now! He ought to have had it before. Well, Mr. Speaker, if you have a blueprint for a house, it takes a long time to get to the point where you can occupy the house. There are many stages: you have to get your blueprint approved, arrange your finances and contract a team to build it.

I am reminded when the Leader of the Opposition talks about his blueprint plan that a fisherman who built a house on the iron shore did not have planning permission, did not have a plan, and when the planning officer went there after complaints about him being there and said, 'You cannot do this, you have to have a plan', he said, 'A plan? I need a house.'

At this stage of our administration we have progressed long past the blueprint stage. We have built the house and have some of the furnishings in place. God willing, if we return to power on the 17th November we will complete what we started. However, we could not do it all in three years and we could not do it with the mess which was left unattended for years and, especially, the overwhelming situation that we had to deal with in 2001.

In some jurisdictions the Opposition is called the "shadow government" or the "government in waiting". From what I have heard from the Opposition in this Budget debate, the PPM will continue to wait in the shadows for a few more years to come. They cannot lead and they had no plan. They said they have a plan but they have not presented that plan to the country yet.

The Leader of the Opposition credited the Government with being blessed with good speech writers; I compliment his speech writer also. However, I feel sorry for his speech writer; at least we have a good story to tell. I guess it is much harder to be a writer of fiction, but anybody can tell a lie.

During the course of the debate, it was suggested that the Government has paid insufficient attention to Tax Information Exchange Agreements. Perhaps the Second Elected Member for George Town—since the Leader of the Opposition has been absent from the House since yesterday—should be in here to hear this. This is not the case.

While the European Union Savings Directive has rightly required close attention, the Government and the Financial Secretary have been able to proceed with the program of negotiations with Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) member states on co-operative arrangements involving Tax Information Exchange Agreements. Both the 2003/4 Budget and the 2004/5 Budget make financial provision for this work.

In the process of these negotiations, all matters relating to existing and potential barriers to Cayman's financial services are raised, including, where relevant, the issue of blacklists. The issue of blacklists is also being pursued aggressively in the OECD Global Forum, of which Cayman is a member, as it is the collective position of the non-OECD country Forum members that the use of arbitrary and subjective blacklists undermines the OECD commitment to a level playing field.

The House will also be aware that the necessary legislation to enable us to give effect to the Tax Information Exchange Agreements is in Green Bill form for approval by the House, and I know that the Attorney General intends to bring that soon.

The Leader of the Opposition accused the Government of having no economic plan. As I said, he has his deficiencies but I did not know that he was blind or deaf. Less than a month ago I laid on the Table of this Honourable House a Draft Economic Development Plan prepared by Deloitte covering the next five years (the medium term). As we speak, the Cabinet Secretary is heading a team of Senior Civil Servants developing an implementation plan.

The Leader of Opposition also accuses the Government of shackling the people of this country to the wagon of foreign investment, although the PPM does not tell us how they would fund the required infrastructure and programs. If their funding does not come from outside, then it must come from our own people and we all know what that means: direct taxation. We, the United Democratic Party, are against it.

We all know what he would do, and that is, increase fees on everybody. That is what he did in 2001 when he was Leader and you could not tell him otherwise because he would not listen

While the Leader of the Opposition accuses me of not appreciating the traffic problems because of overseas government business, he fails to appreciate that the Cayman Islands has to operate on the world stage and our economy is dependent on the rest of the world. This important work cannot be done from my home in West Bay, with my head stuck in the sand hoping that others will make the decisions on our behalf. We must remain engaged within the international arena, where matters of economic and social welfare are raised and would be affected.

I know that they criticise the travel that I have had to do, but this is no fun travel, this is no easy life. This is work. Other officials have to travel as well as myself. As long as the Cayman Islands is under threat by European expansion and United Kingdom's co-operation with Europe, the Financial Action Task Force (FATF), the OECD and Members of the Government will have to travel and this will have to be a cost that the Government will have to bear.

As Leader of the Government, my position is taken very seriously no matter how jealous they are. For far too long these Islands suffered, and our key industries of financial services and tourism were shackled at times because certain leaders did not attend the meetings, or in the case of the Leader of the Opposition, forgot to send letters to foreign governments at the right time, as did the Leader of the Opposition on the European Union Savings Directive. Of course, he would never go anywhere; he had to send his Foreign Minister, the Member for North Side, who, when she got there, did not say quehey.

My position is, when the Cayman Islands' name is called at the Table, I will answer or somebody will have to answer, I will debate and negotiate in the best interests of these Islands. I have my responsibilities as the Leader of the Government and I have my Ministry of Tourism, matters of trade and commerce.

We had to go there. I had never been and never chose to go before to carry a forum, but this one dealt with maritime security and we will come into a new level of security soon. Had the Leader of the Opposition sent that letter at the right time, Cayman's problem with the European Union Savings Directive might have been less, my travel would definitely be less, and we might have even ended up like Bermuda.

One thing is certain though; if I did not attend those meetings the PPM would be criticising me on every street corner, under every almond tree and in every bar for not attending. I have told my colleagues in West Bay, and I have told my people, if I have to travel during nomination time, I have to do it. If there is a serious meeting that I need to be at, Cayman will be represented. Then the people would have to make their choice. However, while I am in this position, I am going to do what I have to do in protecting this country. I am determined that these Islands will not end up with something they do not need or deserve because I am not there to speak up for us. Globalisation demands that we be present and I cannot do that from my office, house or from the Glass House.

In terms of roads, yes, we would like to spend more money on the road network. However, the country has many other needs and funds are limited and people have to understand this. The Leader of the Opposition should examine his record on roads before criticising the UDP Government. When he was Leader of Government Business, his budget allocated $6.4 million to roads, of which only a quarter was spent on major roads. The Government has budgeted an average of some $11 million in our budgets, which is significantly more, and we will continue to do work on the road network.

We have to stop and consider that what he should say to the public of this country as a leader—and one who claims he understands things and understands finances—is that we cannot continue to build roads. We have to do some work. For instance, the arterial road is needed. We are having a hard time on West Bay Road, and we are going to offer that certain areas become two lanes up in the morning and one lane down to see if that can help for the short-term. There are long-term plans, but where are the funds going to come from? He has not said.

We cannot continue to import numbers of vehicles in this country and continue to build roads or else the money will all go on roads and there will be no money for schools, young people or health care. We cannot! We, as leaders, must be upfront and say, 'Look, every family cannot have three or five cars'. We have to change our attitude and we have to give and take because we are developing the country and we have to put up with some inconveniences at times.

I think some Departments already have a different work hour, "flex-time" they call it, which will help, but we are still in a country that is half swamp! We are the size of Nassau but we are half swamp! We cannot continue to import the vehicles that come into this country. I do not have the figures, but I can tell you the tremendous amount. Of course the economy is good and everybody wants transportation, but we are going to have to look to other means.

Everybody wants a maid, but they do not like Jamaicans. They do not like Philipinos but they are bringing them in, and every one of them wants a vehicle too! How will this work in this little country that is half swamp, 21 miles long and, at its widest point, seven miles long? They say 'Do not touch the swamp because we can get mangrove stake out of that and that is good for us.'

I only have two hours, let me not digress too far.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister I am just wondering if you were moving on to another point, or if this would be a good time for the luncheon suspension?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I should just end by saying we will continue to do what we can. Many years ago I said that you cannot bring to this country $300 million of plans for roads. Where will we get the money? We cannot! Nobody is coming up with any means. Every time you come up with something that will raise funds for the general revenue/budget, they cuss you from East End to North Side and say that you are crazy.

Nobody wants to pay but everybody wants something. How are we going to do that?

I am 49 years old. I have spent 20 years here. I do not need to placate anybody. I have represented my people well and I understand their needs. I give until I hurt sometimes and do what I can to help people. No one is turned away from my door, home or office. However, the country can only do so much with the present revenue base that we have.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and by saying that I am not finished with my speech.

The Speaker: Fully understood, Minister. At this time I propose to take the luncheon suspension and we will return at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.07 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.58 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business continuing his debate.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When we took the break I was talking about the criticisms made by the Leader of the Opposition in saying that the people of these Islands were not getting any benefit from the ongoing development. I had shown where Housing had increased to $105 or $120-something million in Housing starts, and over $100 million for apartments which were investments for Caymanians. So those were real benefits.

The Leader of the Opposition has accused the Government of artificially increasing General Reserves by executing a Note Issue and using some of the proceeds of that Note Issue to place in General Reserves. I knew that he would not be here for my reply because he knows that I can refute his wild allegations to be the untruths they really are. Hence, they are staying away and they are going to come back and say they had legitimate reasons for not being here; but he is wrong.

On the use of the Note Issue proceeds, the Leader of the Opposition is either genuinely confused or he knows better but is simply trying to distort the true position and hide the facts from the people. Here are the cold facts:

On 8 April 2003, the Government of the Cayman Islands executed its very first Note Issue. That Note Issue was executed only after a number of legislative hurdles were passed. Firstly, the Legislative Assembly passed the Cayman Islands Registered Stock Law, 2002, and the Cayman Islands Registered Stock (Amendment) Law, 2003. Secondly, the Legislative Assembly passed Government Motion No. 1/03, therefore, the Note Issue was duly endorsed by the Legislative Assembly. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition, of course, is a Member of the Legislative Assembly.

The size of the Note Issue was $163.2 million. Let me outline how that figure was determined.

The size of the Note Issue was established to accomplish two effects: pay off the vast majority of Public Debt loans, and provide Government with $8 million to fund Capital Development Expenditures.

The Legislative Assembly approved the Loan (No.2) Law, 2001 which empowered Government to borrow $8 million. Government decided that the $8 million should be obtained from the proceeds of the Note Issue, rather than borrowing from a local commercial bank. At the time when the Note Issue was first contemplated in 2001, it was decided that the vast majority of Public Debt loans should be repaid using the proceeds from a Note Issue because it was, financially, the sensible course to pursue. It made good financial sense to repay variable interest rate Public Debt loans using the proceeds from a fixed interest rate Note Issue, especially at a time when interest rates were at their lowest levels for more than 20 years.

At 31st December 2001, the principal outstanding on Public Debt loans that the Government decided to repay was $127.9 million. This amount was approximated to $128 million; this figure plus the $8 million that I mentioned earlier gave a total Note Issue of $136 million; $136 million translates into US$163.2 million, which is the size of the Note Issue that was executed on 8 April 2003.

Initially, the Government envisaged that the Note Issue would be executed in late 2001, but we were advised that interest rates were likely to fall even further and it was in Government's best interest to delay execution. In the end, the Note Issue was executed on 8 April 2003.

During the period from 2001, when the Note Issue was to have been executed, to April 2003, Government was obliged to continue meeting its loan repayments. Government made those repayments from its General Revenue bank account.

When the Note Issue was executed in April 2003, the outstanding principal on the loans that Government wished to repay was $108.5 million, whereas at 31 December 2001, the outstanding principal on those loans was $128 million. This means that the Government's General Revenue bank account had been used to pay $19.5 million of loan principal during the interim period from 2001 to April 2003, when the Note Issue was executed.

Government could have argued that its General Revenue bank account ought to be reimbursed by the $19.5 million that was taken from the account to meet loan repayment obligations. The Government did not take that approach; instead, it made a far more responsible and mature decision.

The proceeds of the Note Issue that remained after Public Debt loans were repaid, were transferred to General Reserves. The Government did not spend those excess funds; those funds now find themselves in General Reserves. I think this is a very prudent, mature, and responsible act. If you turn that into a question, you would have to say the answer is a thousand times YES!!!

Let us look at the present position very carefully. The Government could have taken the $19.5 million, placed it in its General Revenue bank account and spent it. That did not occur. Those funds are now in General Reserves which means that the Legislative Assembly has the sole power to determine their use, not the Cabinet. Once again, these are responsible actions from a responsible Government.

The level of General Reserves at 30 April 2004 was roughly $27.2 million. When we look back as far as 1984 when I first entered this House, the annual accounts of Government that are produced by Treasury and examined by the Auditor General, there is one clear-cut position which emerges: this is the highest level of General Reserves ever! This is an undisputable fact! No matter how much the Leader of the Opposition might try to muddle this, he cannot get away from that fact. This happened on my watch in the United Democratic Party Government.

I have been defending Government's actions after those actions have been attacked by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. That entitles me to reply. The Leader of the Opposition criticises the Government for borrowing and placing funds in General Reserves. Let us examine what his administration did when that administration borrowed funds.

In May 2001 the Legislative Assembly approved the Loan Law, 2001; this was only seven months after the present Leader of Opposition was in office as Leader of Government Business. Under the authority of the Law that I just mentioned, some $55.5 million (US$66.6 million) was borrowed. This was the single largest loan that a Government had ever borrowed, but the greatest tragedy was that $26.2 million of the total $55.5 million (47 per cent) was borrowed to pay for recurrent expenditures.

Although he may not want people to understand it—which is why I have taken the time to point it out—this is like going to the bank for a loan to pay an electricity bill or a telephone bill. This was a sad state of affairs. This $55.5 million loan was one of the loans that my administration repaid in 2003 with the same money that he is criticising.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, the only Member of the Opposition sitting in the Chamber, is keeping watch here for them. This sad state of affairs came about because he was part of an administration for two years. You may look at the accounts of Government and see clearly when the drift started; after I left Executive Council. We had money, we were careful and we had not borrowed any funds. We had problems, but we never had anybody to put a foot on the brake at the time. I was spending on social programs, but I was always careful as to where money was coming from.

Thus, they left such a bad position that we had to take money to pay the bills; not for projects, not for roads or Cayman Airways or anything else; but paying for everyday bills. That was a sad state of affairs.

Let us look, once again, at the fallacy of the Leader of the Opposition's attack, as well as the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town who also had his part to play in this attack on the Government's economic position. In 2004, in an election year, they have attacked the Government for borrowing and placing excess amounts emanating there from into General Reserves. In 2001, while in command as Leader of Government, the Leader of the Opposition borrowed some $55 million and spent approximately half of it on recurrent expenditures.

This demonstrates the fallacy and shallowness of what has been said by the Leader of the Opposition and his PPM group. His administration borrowed and spent $26.2 million on recurrent expenditure, yet he still has the absurdity to attack a far superior position that my administration concluded if you are judging it on his and my administrations.

The listening public through the media will be the judge of which of these two positions is the superior one. However, there is no doubt in my mind, nor in the minds of sensible people, that the decision taken by the administration which was headed by the present Leader of the Opposition is unacceptable. I must keep pounding this point because it is important to do so.

I would like to turn to the areas that I am responsible for: Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce.

While it is true that, as in the years 2000 and 2001, Cayman Airways projects a loss for this financial year, it would be inaccurate to say that the bottom line of the airline is evidence that things have not improved. As I said, the Leader of the Opposition must be somewhere else; he cannot be living in today's Cayman. We are looking at a substantially re-engineered airline.

From being the political football of the past—Mr. Speaker, would you mind calling those people who are sitting in the coffee room and ask them to come in so we can have a quorum?

The Speaker: Honourable Member, please take your seat. I will ask the Sergeant to call a quorum.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: If they do not come in we will go into Finance Committee.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, we are now quorate. Please continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I am glad that we finally got a quorum. You know, Mr. Speaker, this is sad. The truth is, I have been here for 20 years and when I am here I try to be in this House. You have the Opposition who will sit outside rather than come in to make up the quorum.

I wonder what they believe the Government is paying them $8,000 a month for. Whether they like me or whoever is speaking, their duty when this House is in session is to sit in their seats and be here to make up the quorum so that the business of the House can be started. The Second Elected Member for George Town has the temerity, the barefacedness to talk about democracy, yet he and his cohort, the Member for North Side, are drawing a salary, sitting out there and refusing to come in to make up a quorum.

From being the political football of the past, Cayman Airways has been transformed into an economic engine for these islands. There has been a fundamental transformation in the way we approach the airline. This was not so much by divine intervention as the Leader of the Opposition has given as his opinion.. He went on to attack me about what I said about Cayman Airways when I took it over. What I said was true; the Airline had to swim or sink. That, as far as I am concerned, was the right attitude to take. It is true it was quite a lot different from his style of leadership.

I said that Cayman Airways had to swim or sink, but I did something. I took action and certainly inefficiencies were cut out and we saved over $10 million. The bleeding had to stop, so I had to put them on notice that we were not a bottomless pit, which was certainly unlike what he said and what he did and what he had started. He never did anything! I have never seen a group like them that have done nothing and tried to take credit for everything.

When I took over there was a lot wrong. He and his consultants had got as far as paying over $100,000, looking at and trying to decide on types of planes and were promoting, at that time, the regional type of plane like what is used in the United States. They did nothing. I appointed a good board, gave them direction and we worked together to bring about a more enhanced airline. Mr. Speaker, he says that the write-down is not a true loss. He may not agree to accept the write-down. He is not an auditor; he is not even a good financial person. The auditors say the bottom line is a loss, and it is an audited loss of $14.6 million for 2001.

The same old bleeding, he did nothing and ended up a big loss. For this current year the loss is $9.7 million. This loss came about because we had new routes—Chicago, Cuba, Montego Bay and Ft. Lauderdale—and we had new equipment, a new plane, then we lowered ticket fares and instituted a new inter-island service. What people are not realising is that today Cayman Airways is the number two carrier of tourists to Grand Cayman. Is that not a better position? Where is he living?

Under my leadership a deliberate strategy has been employed to ensure that Cayman Airways strives for more. No longer is the airline maintained barely at minimum levels of existence. No longer does it operate primarily as insurance in anticipation of 'What if?' Instead, Cayman Airways has been reintegrated with the tourism industry and has become a viable, contributing member of this economy. It has become a reliable and affordable air bridge for our tourism industry, in all three Islands, Mr. Speaker.

Under my leadership, a sensible governance model was introduced and the Board of Directors was recognised and empowered to succeed. Management and staff share in the company's overall mission to be the pre-eminent air service provider to and for the interests of these Islands. This is a far cry from what existed in 2001; ill-conceived plans and massive confusion and uncertainty. Simply because the Minister then—the Leader of the Opposition now, the First Elected Member for George Town—did what he does best, nothing! He cannot make a decision and therefore is ineffectual as a leader.

The airline has grown by adding direct jet service to new destinations: Montego Bay, Havana, Ft. Lauderdale, and Chicago. The airline has launched an inter-island service to better promote tourism and economic development to all three Islands. The airline has begun the process of upgrading its fleet. For the first time, the airline is working together with the Department of Tourism (DoT) to efficiently and effectively grow tourism for the benefit of the Cayman Islands. Since 2002 Cayman Airways has grown to become the number two airline for tourist arrivals to the Cayman Islands.

During this period three international carriers serving the Cayman Islands have filed for bankruptcy protection. As you can see, Mr. Speaker, the losses in of 2003/2004 would more accurately be described as investments – investments in new routes, investments in new aircraft, investment in growth of air arrivals – for the benefit of all three Islands. We expect that many of the investments made today will bear fruit in 2004/05 and 2005/06 as the load factors increase on the new routes and the losses decrease accordingly. I am praying that world conditions will get better—or not any worse at least—than they are now because if they do, it could seriously impact Cayman Airways and, in fact, our entire tourism industry and economy.

When he gets up and talks about what I said, 'It has to swim or sink', yes, I said that; that is the way I do things. Perhaps I do not use the best language at times, but what I am saying to them is, 'Look, you have to do better. We cannot continue the old way; changes have to be made.'

Thank God, Cayman Airways rose to the challenge! Members of the staff did an excellent job. They endured no increases in salary and they endured the layoffs of their colleagues by cutting out what we thought was $10 million of inefficiencies. That is a better position. Better than his! He had consultants that were paid $100,000 and we got some work. I am not saying that the consultants did not do any work; I am saying that under my administration we got somewhere and under his administration we did not get anywhere. That is where we full stop.

In terms of tourism, Mr. Speaker, again we have to look at the saddened state of the industry in 2000. The DoT organisation was poorly structured, the statistical data was fatally flawed and the internal and external communication channels were failing. There was bad rapport between the director and the private sector, there were constant fights and bickering and carrying on. There was no television advertising, much like the relationship with the tourism private sector which was non-existent.

I immediately tackled these issues and began to build a coherent plan for tourism from the ground up. This culminated in the National Tourism Management Policy which is now being actively implemented by some 100 tourism-related partners, although the Leader of the Opposition and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town attacked it. When I went in there it was an administration that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town left. I will deal with some of that later.

While I can take credit for insisting that a new Policy be developed after the last Government allowed the policy to lapse, I must acknowledge the many men and women from all walks of tourism who contributed to the development of the management plan. Similarly, I have entrusted the implementation of this plan to approximately 100 people comprising of both public and private sector representatives. This level of transparency in the process, clarity of the mission and uniting of efforts is unprecedented in the tourism industry.

If I was a bad manager, the kind of manager that I am painted as by the two Members who spoke on it — the Leader of the Opposition and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town—I would not have put that Tourism Management Policy on the internet. I would have, much like most reports are done in Government, said to do that report and only make one copy and give it to McKeeva. I did not do that! I wanted the whole world to see the mess that existed and put it on the internet where everybody and their cat and dog could read it!

Even before the official launch of the National Tourism Management Policy (NTMP), the Ministry and Department of Tourism had endorsed its findings and was well under way toward integrating its recommendations. Still, the Opposition criticises the plan, the plan I initiated and the plan which the wider tourism industry is actively implementing.

While this year was good, the 2004/05 year promises to be just as aggressive as we enter the third year of the implementation of the restructuring of the Department. From a macro perspective, the National Tourism Management Policy is, perhaps, the single most important program because it is the business plan for the overall tourism industry. When I took over at the end of 2000 the previous management policy document had expired—I repeat that for emphasis, Mr. Speaker—and the Minister and his administration sought not to develop a new management policy or even to uphold the old one.

Thus, there are some 70 action items being implemented by over 100 members of the community and several sub-committees through a Steering Committee. In fact, the Department reported to the Steering committee some of the actions were already being dealt with. If something needed to be done the Department could not wait; it could be done and it was done. Therefore, this accusation of me not following the National Plan is a bunch of hogwash, to say the least, and being talked by people who really do not know.

Cruise tourism has been severely criticised and has become a popular target. In its typical fashion, the Opposition is distorting the facts for lack of knowledge, or perhaps lack of concern, for the potential damage that could be done. However, that is good and this is how they look at it: 'That is McKeeva so we have to beat on him and make him look as bad as possible. That is who we are going to attack and this is what we are going to say.' That is what the Leader of the Opposition and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town did.

Almost every island in the region depends on cruise tourism to augment its tourism earnings. Certainly, stay-over visitors contribute more revenue per passenger, but I can tell the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town that he better go and check his figures. If he thinks it is something like 20 times over he is making a big mistake. However, for the thousands of persons employed in retail, transportation, food and beverage and tourism attractions, every bit of the contribution made by each cruise passenger is still vital.

The Tourism Management Policy calls for managing the overall numbers handled each day. This responsibility has been assigned, with the other 69 action points, to be addressed by the Steering Committee for the National Tourism Management Policy. They are considering this matter and will, in due course, make recommendations.

We have always had a winter-season, which is an on-season. During the on-season you can host many people. As far as cruise tourism is concerned, instead of getting two million, we could get four million if we wanted, but that is not what we want. They do not know what mass tourism is. They are looking at Cuba, Santa Domingo and Mexico; that is mass tourism, not what we have here. Go to those countries and you will see the styles and the type of tourism. That is not what we have.

We also have an off-season. I have done more with the taxis and the Land and Sea Co-op than any other unit in my Ministry over these past four years. I have met with them and they now complain that there are not enough people due to the off-season and less ships.

You see, Mr. Speaker, they like that laid back attitude where nothing much happens; only what is happening is what has gravitated around them and their colleagues, such as what we saw happening in 2001 when they were preparing to elect their people as heads of boards and handing them the construction jobs. They already had their architects.

You see, Mr. Speaker, they think that we forgot. However, that is what they are like. Today everybody is getting something out of it. According to what I hear, they are not getting so much; some are going into deep bankruptcy. Perhaps bad management is their problem and that is why they are grabbing for power. They figure that will take them out of it.

Port Facilities are being improved with an aim to enhance the visitor experience. With the design of the new facilities, greater emphasis is being paid to spreading the loads. We have many yes, and we must manage this. That is what we are attempting to do.

Programs, such as the Cruise Conversion Program, have been launched to utilise Cayman's popularity as a preferred destination and to channel this into a free opportunity to directly market ourselves to stay-over passengers.

While Members spoke harshly of that sector, others have observed our success. Other countries are looking at us and saying, 'Boy, you are doing good' and are preparing themselves to compete for today's cruise visitor. We simply cannot afford to ever become complacent in this area.

Following 9/11 we saw firsthand the devastating effect of having a drastic reduction in air arrivals when you are only depending on the one bit of tourism, that coming by plane. Look at what happened to us in those couple of weeks when all of the planes stopped coming here. Only last week an unfortunate joke by one irresponsible passenger sent a keen reminder of how precious and, at times, vulnerable even cruise tourism can be. Why carry on the way that I hear them carry on? Why? Again, that is topical. That is a lot of people complaining about all of the people down there, 'That is McKeeva so beat him up.' But what good is it doing the country?

We owe it to the thousands who depend on this sector to remain vigilant and competitive and not to criticise for the sake of criticising without offering alternatives. Others have experienced the sudden withdrawal of cruise ships. What has occurred in these instances is not sudden prosperity from increased air arrivals. Do they believe that if you turn away half of the cruise ships that suddenly our air arrivals are going to spring to 400? No, that only happened during the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town's time with his Ministry of Tourism when he was cooking the books.

Where were you then, sir? Why were you not paying attention when he was saying that he was getting 450,000 and actually he was only getting just about 300,000? If that is not dishonesty, Mr. Speaker, then tell me what it is. I did not do that! I came to the country and said 'This is the problem and this is what I am going to do.' I did not knee-jerk because I am not a hypocrite. I do not know figures that well to cook the books! I am not dishonest. However, that is dishonesty at its core, and when people sit and deliberately do it, you must call it that.

What happened with those countries when they left was a sharp rise in unemployment which triggered an economic crisis for the country.

Look at the people that are involved. I have had more people coming to me wanting to get buses, and that is the open industry that we have. That is the kind of economy that we have; we are not stopping anybody who wants to do business. Look at the many young people that have started businesses because of the cruise industry.

When you talk about and criticise hotels—and I understand the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town criticised them too—look at who was getting all of the business; one company. All of the snorkelling, diving and fishing went to one company in their three hotels—the Hyatt, Westin, Marriott and the Holiday Inn which is now Marriott Courtyard.

Look who is enjoying the benefits from the cruise industry. We helped them pay their insurance. We formed a Co-op and said 'Go out and work it.' I know that you cannot please some of them, but at the end of the day they have to know. As I said to them a few afternoons ago 'Do not tell me that you are not doing better. Every one of you has upgraded from a 9-seater or a 14-seater to a 30-seater, so what are you getting at me for? Are you going to build a bigger house? You had five children and you had three bedrooms and now that the five children have gone and built their own homes and done well you are going to build a 10-bedroom house? That does not sound like sense to me. You must be planning on getting more children.' What I am saying is that they are doing better.

I am committed to prudent management and look forward to receiving viable options from the NTMP Steering Committee. However, I have little tolerance for those who, for short-term political gain, would threaten the financial security of so many who are dependant on cruise tourism.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town also jumped into the battle to criticise talking about Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS). He should not get into areas he does not understand. It was not because SARS started in China and affected Hong Kong that we were not feeling the effect here, Canada was affected! When something happens in countries we usually get a majority of people from and that country is affected, it will stop people all over from travelling and that is what happened with SARS. It is irresponsible of the Member who was the previous Minister of Health to say that it did not affect us. Therefore, our tourism was affected. Stop talking nonsense!

When terrorists attacked the World Trade Center in New York that very much affected us, as well as the whole world, and our tourism went down. As I said, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town should really get on his knees to pray for God's forgiveness because his Minister of Tourism, his friend in West Bay, even counted the residents here to get 450,000 people. I did no such thing. I ask him again though, instead of telling me what I should be doing, what happened with that Family Study that he had, since everything is so wrong and the children are in so much need. What did he do with it?

The Second Elected Member for George Town—the General Secretary of the PPM—asked 'Why are we building these hotels?' I ask him and anybody else who might question that, 'Do we say to the banking industry and to the legal and accounting professions that they cannot expand because there are not enough locals to staff them?' No, they are expanding and spending, and it is a good thing too because that is what expands the economy. We need five- and six-star hotels that will put our tourism product on a higher level. He is quick to complain and make allegations, but he has gone into the coffee room to hide.

He said that the Hotel Training School had been purchased two years ago and we did not do anything. What is intended to be the Hotel Training School has just been purchased and finalised the early part of this year and not two years ago as he said. Why can that Member not tell the truth? Why can that boy not tell the truth? I swear to God, in school they would flog him everyday!

What we intend to do now is work with the Caribbean Tourism Organisation (CTO) who will provide assistance in setting up the school. However, we do not have bottomless pits of money that we can draw from for this. I was only given $150,000 in the Budget and that is what we have; we had to keep the Budget at the size we wanted. Next year more work will be done on it. I intend to speed things up for the next couple of months on this matter, but it certainly cannot be opened this year and we knew that.

I do not know if anyone could believe that we could do everything in three years, but I want to say this: I did not get any support from them for the Hospitality Training Centre in 2001. I tried but could not get it. They refused; they did not see how we needed to go that way. 'Wait, bobo, we are going to do something about that. I am going to work with you on that, bobo. Yes, you look like a bobo.' That cannot help this country, Mr. Speaker. The weight has broken down the dock!

The Leader of the Opposition complained about my economic development plans and, in fact, said what we are doing now is unsustainable. Another criticism was that I had done nothing to safeguard the environment. Mr. Speaker, we are devoted to ensuring that our economic policies are balanced with environmental preservation. We have a proven track record and I would now like to very briefly outline some of these achievements:

In September 2001 we signed the Environmental Charter with the UK Government.

In December 2001 we passed Legislation amending the Marine Conservation Law, introduced to reduce catch limits, impose closed seasons and provide new mechanisms for the protection of conch, lobster, whelk and several species of ornamental fish. Legislation also introduced minimum size limits for all finfish and licensing provisions for fish pots.

In March 2002 we tabled a white paper on the proposed National Conservation Law.

In April 2002 we announced Government's intention to establish the Cayman Islands' first National Park, in the Barkers area of Grand Cayman.

In May 2002 we tabled the first Cayman Islands National Environmental Policy. We never had one. We have one now.

In December 2002 we tabled the Final Report of the Aggregate and Final Study carried out on behalf of the Government by the consulting firm CHM2 Hill.

In May 2003 we tabled the report of the Beach Review and Assessment Committee.

In June 2003 funding was allocated in the 2003/4 Budget for four additional Marine Enforcement Officers for the Department of Environment.

In December 2003 protection was afforded to all Cayman Islands' Nassau Grouper spawning aggregation sites.

In January 2004 a contract was awarded to West Indian Marine Ltd. for the re-nourishment of the southern section of Seven Mile Beach, in accordance with the Beach Review and Assessment Committee's Report. That is something else that they were giving us blame for; they said that we were taking away the sand. They never stopped to think that weather had so much to do with that. Yes, building affects it; but as soon as Northwesters came back the sand came back, plain and simple.

In May 2004 we purchased first parcels which officially inaugurated the establishment of the Barkers National Park.

Yet they have the audacity to say that we have not done anything for the marine environment.

My pastor on Sunday told of a story which I had heard before. The renowned preacher, Dwight L. Moody, made numerous grammatical mistakes in his sermon and one of his parishioners said, 'Sir, you know you made 17 mistakes in your sermon today?' Mr. Moody replied, 'I have done the best with the abilities that God has given me, what have you done with yours?'

I say to the Leader of the Opposition, 'What have you done since November 2000?' In fact, the people of George Town need to ask him, 'What have you done since November 1992 when you were first elected?' Why do other districts get things going and you find that those two Members do nothing else besides run around promoting the party? Why are they not doing things in the district?

I also direct this to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. Instead of complaining, what has he done since November 2001? How many questions has he asked in this House? How many motions has he passed? How many district programs has he got involved in? What did he do for the children he complains have nothing to do? What are they doing as paid representatives of this House?

The only thing that I can say for the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and what he is doing is that since the Elections started, he and his supposed running mate have gone now to register young people. Yet what have they done to help the young people? I know they will say that they started a progressive youth. More power to them and I am glad that young people are getting involved. Nonetheless, what have they done to affect better life for those young people? Tell me of one motion or one program that they have done as legislators.

Do not come and talk about what the social clubs have done; they raise money from everybody in the country. If you say 'I am a member of the social club and they are doing it so I am doing it,' then if I give to the social club does that not say that I am doing it too? It must be!

Stop playing dirty politics; stop accusing people of things that are untrue. What have they done since November 2000? I know what they have done; they sit or stand under some grape or almond tree, smoking cigarettes, drinking beer and talking about people.

Let me turn to my good friend, the Member for North Side, who refuses to come in here. I listened to the debate on Housing, and it brought back some very tough times for me. I listened to her virtually making accusations against the Minister of Housing. It was for me déjà vu all over again.

I went back to 1995 or 1994 when I was responsible for Housing and I put forward a plan for affordable housing. All kinds of duppies and ghosts were conjured up, and all kinds of things were said about what I was doing wrong. They even accused me of involving my real estate company, a long time even before money was found to fund the project or even the full plan was set out.

A motion was brought to the House which the Leader of the Opposition was party to. Everything was done to smear that project, to kill the people's minds and make the people feel that the Housing project was bad. I am sure that people remember what was said. Everything was done to create doubt, so much so that the civil servants and colleagues at the time decided to drop that aspect of the project and we were not able to get government low-income housing. They were saying that the costs were too high and they forced us to deal with the banks and costs became higher.

At that time you heard that every contractor in the world could do it. In between that time and when this Minister announced his plan, how many contractors did it? Nothing was said! They always want to use that segment of people because they can play on their minds and never give them anything!

I heard the Member for North Side say that in the Eastern Caribbean there is better housing. I do not know where she went, but we know they always bring someone from the Eastern Caribbean; I did not know they go there too. I travel quite a bit and I want her to show me—outside of perhaps some cement homes in some parts of the Eastern Caribbean—a better product than what the Minister has. The Minister has a good product!

There are things that are wrong, and we know that. When I say wrong, there are things that need to be done and he outlined them this morning:

The Minister still does not have the funding. It is not easy to get land for low-income housing; what everybody says is 'Not in my backyard'. However, when you go into the interior of the country, the eastern districts, you will find good and flat hard land. Remember, I said that the country was, more or less, 50 per cent swamp. The Minister had to use swamp land and other land which had to be filled! Do you know how costly that is, Mr. Speaker?

The Member for North Side does nothing but criticise, smear people and smoke cigarettes. The Member does nothing for her $8,000 a month but stand here and make accusations on not only the man's character, but his sister's as well.

The other problem with low-income housing in this country is that these are not cement houses and most people want a cement house. These are not cement but they are good houses. Back in 1975 when I got married and was looking to buy a house, if they had them I would have taken one. They would not have been $400 or $500 a month then because that is what they are now. This is a good opportunity and the Opposition should be telling the public the people need it.

Can you imagine, Mr. Speaker, that the Member for North Side, the Second Elected Member for George Town and the entire PPM are spreading propaganda? Can you imagine that the people I know who are paying $900 and $1000 a month for rent—and who we sometimes have to help—who had no chance of getting a home now have that opportunity?

We disagree, and we have to inside Cabinet and inside parties. Mr. Speaker, tell me which institutions do not have disagreements or which church or marriage does create doubts on themselves. They should be outside telling those people to sign up for a home. Instead, they have done what they did to me in 1995: they are telling the people 'Do not do this; this is a bad thing' and 'I want an investigation'. And you know Cayman, Mr. Speaker. As soon as you say "investigation" it is something dirty and something wrong, and that is what she was trying to push the other afternoon. She is a ridiculous Member of this House when she does those kinds of things.

These houses are different, but they are still good. They are approximately $50,000 for two bedrooms and $69-$70,000 for three bedrooms. What they should do is come up with innovative ideas, like Singapore, and look at what they are doing for housing. If they have $200 million in pensions, their members pay for the down payment. That is what Singapore is doing. Yet, Mr. Speaker, all they have done is criticise the program. Have they tried to help anybody? They invest in apartments themselves. That is the truth of it; they do not want to see low-income housing in this country because they want people to continue to be running to them. They are nothing but a bunch of hypocrites!

She talked about Rehoboth and had all kinds of questions. She was the Minister before, and while that program was in operation. To be honest to the Minister of Community Affairs now, that was ongoing from something that I started! Why be so hypocritical?

She wants to criticise the Government and the Minister of Sports. Last summer we had a camp and the person who was organising the sports called on that Member to assist. She would not give one red cent or even go out there to kick off the ball. She would not associate with it; she would not do anything. She does nothing but come here and carry Kurt Tibbetts' bag for him!

See her out there grinning? but she cannot come inside here. You know that she is worried when you hear her out there cackling like some kind of fowl you cannot see but will not come in here. Let her laugh at me. I do not care! The fact is she is not doing what she is paid to do. Only concerned about self!

I remember when she got up here to talk about swimming, which was another project I was criticised for. I recall appointing the coach and some said I needed to get a different person and not that old foreign boy, and she was one of them. 'What are you getting him for?' Now they are doing better, but you do not hear that McKeeva had any part to play in it. That is part of my legacy though, the good things that I have done and that is it. What has she done?

I will tell the good people of North Side and East End that they have two representatives who have done nothing here for them. They do nothing but smoke cigarettes all day long and see what kind of strife they can sow and how much propaganda they can spread. They have done nothing but act as an extension cord for the two George Town Members. I reckon that is doing no good for North Side or East End.

They even believe that they can wage psychological warfare on us by bringing sweet potatoes, tomatoes and peppers for some of our Members. (They have switched from turtle meat!) I have always known that while they were bringing the sweet potatoes and tomatoes what they were doing was criticising our Members, the same ones they were giving them to. You heard it today, the kind of attack that was made on them, but they believe they are smart. While they were bringing the sweet potatoes and tomatoes they were going out there and spreading all manner of evil against those same people.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I just want to remind you that you have 20 minutes remaining.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I have a lot to say and I hope I am allowed to say it in that time.

I do not think that we have a quorum, Members are still out.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, we are now quorate. Please continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

My good friend, the Minister of Education, always has in his possession some very good books. He has one on Caribbean civilisation which talks about housing. I took the liberty to mark it and it says that if a family knows it can move from a slum to a public housing development and later, as its economic condition improves, to a home of its own, it has greater freedom of spirit than one that despairs of ever being able to improve its lot.

I hope the Opposition realises that instead of trying to create strife and to tear apart the name of the Minister of Housing. I hope they will tell the people 'Go get yourself a house.'

I have been criticised about the economic plan. Well, he has been in office for the past four years this term and, frankly, he has never provided sound economic strategies. He has complained about development, but he has never laid out any strategies which could lead this country through the tough economie times we have experienced. Only this Government could have implemented strategies to ensure that businesses could experience economic growth and our people could find employment and receive other tangible benefits.

Had the Leader of the Opposition taken the time and dealt with the economic development plan which I tabled some time ago, and articulated what the plan could and could not do, and what the PPM would or would not do—in other words, give a viable alternative—then he would have been honest with the people in saying what is wrong and what is right. What he has done is merely shown that he is not a man of substance and that the PPM does not have a sound economic plan for these Islands.

The problem is that the PPM is clearly not capable of developing an economic plan for these Islands. Their only economic strategy is to criticise our plan but never to develop a plan of their own which they would have to stand and defend publicly. It is totally wrong for any person, representative or candidate, to sit by for four years and not produce one iota of an alternative—even in the districts they want to run in or that they represent—to what their main complaints are. Yet, during an election year, they come again to the public without a plan and armed with only criticism. Still they say that the Government is wrong. Their only promise is that one day they too hope to bring a plan.

Mr. Speaker, you heard what I said this morning about the fisherman in West Bay who told the planning officer 'I do not need a plan, I need a house.' That is what he has to remember. The people cannot live on promises.

If the Government was doing such a bad job all this time, as Leader of the Opposition and as Members of the Opposition and this House, the PPM should have already developed a plan and presented it to the country so that the country could benefit according to him. The Opposition Leader continues to say what the Government's plan is not doing. He says that Caymanians are not receiving any benefits from development. Let me show how wrong he is.

We have seen tremendous growth in the construction industry. Mr. Speaker, this increase did not come about by chance. It came about because of our hard work and the implementation of strategies to facilitate and foster economic growth. We have given businesses the comfort that this country is being well managed and will continue to implement regulations and laws to facilitate and encourage growth.

Families are now building homes because they feel positive about the economy of the country, and the banks are creating attractive mortgage products to encourage people to borrow. This has only been achieved because of the money available as a result of direct capital investments made by foreign investors.

I heard him talking about foreigners. That is the first thing that they fling out and they know that it is an easy thing for them to say to Caymanians, 'Foreigners have it all'. Without the investment of people from outside where would we have been?

Investors are confident with the management of our fiscal and monetary policies, but this was certainly not the case when the Leader of the Opposition was in Government. I have seen him make bankers sit all day, see-sawing up and down, and sometimes the only thing that you could hear was the big F-word. When he would slam his hand down on the desk with that big ring and that big bracelet you could hear it across to the Immigration Department.

Have we forgotten how he had the bankers mesmerised by doing nothing, keeping them all day and they were complaining, saying that they had enough of this? You could hear it all the way to Hong Kong. Mr. Speaker, they have the nerve now to complain, talk and accuse people.

Our people were complaining that the country was mismanaged and that we needed to create an environment where businesses and our people felt positive about the future. Everywhere I go I hear of small and large Caymanian-owned businesses investing and expanding their operations. Two of our largest Caymanian retailers have invested a significant amount of money in a new warehouse because they feel comfortable in the economic environment of the country at this time and they are planning for future growth. We have also seen major buildings in the George Town area.

A company has recently opened a world-class shopping complex that will certainly enhance the on-Island experience of our visitors and residents. Are you saying, Mr. Leader of the Opposition, that Captain Eldon Kirkconnell should not get back his investment because you and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town feel that cruise tourism is not giving the country sufficient dividends? This company has invested over $15 million not because of the paranoia spread by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Leader of the Opposition about the economy that the PPM continues to talk about both publicly and in this Honourable House; but because of the investor confidence that these companies have in the country and where it is headed at this time. Whether they like McKeeva or not is a different story, but we are doing the right thing!

They say Caymanians are not benefiting from our economic growth but, Mr. Speaker, let me state more facts:

The Leader of the Opposition has nothing of substance to show for his time at the helm. His contribution is to tear down what others have done. That is what he did with Mr. Truman Bodden and that is what he would like to do with me, except that I have a different style.

His contribution is to tear down what others have done as opposed to constructing something of his own. He only seems able to criticise without ever providing tangible and meaningful plans for these Islands. And I say without any fear of contradiction that he could only tear down in those days by using the information he was given by a certain civil servant who he was close to. He had his chance, Mr. Speaker, and frankly, he failed miserably. One has only to look back when he was Leader of the Government, his fiscal and economic plan included the borrowing of millions of dollars. Simply, the Leader of the Opposition does not have the leadership skills or the understanding of what this country needs economically in order to maintain sustainable economic growth.

I am a man of the people and have always subscribed to the philosophy that it is extremely important for a country to grow economically as well as socially. I have a good record of accomplishment that they or some others might not wish to acknowledge. However, when it comes to the implementation and development of plans which have helped this country economically and socially, I have nothing to be ashamed of. My colleagues who are serving now are well on the way to making their own mark, and if they are all honest they will say, 'McKeeva, you did a good job, look at Sports and some of the things that you have been pushing for.' They will give credit where credit is due. However, that is not within the realm of the Opposition, and we will continue to create an environment which is conducive to fostering successful businesses, both local and foreign.

We cannot adopt the philosophy and strategies that the Opposition Leader has articulated in his economic outline and expect to continue to attract inward investment. In this age of globalisation, we are competing not only against our regional neighbours but against all other major financial and tourism destinations worldwide.

Mr. Speaker, as a business person, you know very well that we have to prepare to compete; we cannot sit back. The Leader of Opposition does not understand this and does not have the ability to manage this country in this day and age. Frankly, Mr. Speaker, he simply cannot lead; he does not have the management skills.

The People's Progressive Movement does not have a plan for this country and does not have the ability to develop a plan which will allow the country to move forward economically. Mr. Speaker, it is totally irresponsible for the Opposition to say that we should not continue to implement policies which promote and develop an environment to allow businesses to survive and succeed. I am ashamed that a Member of this Honourable House and a former Leader of the Government does not and cannot see the importance of having an environment which promotes good business.

I am sure our business leaders are concerned about the statements that were made by the Leader of the Opposition about why we should not continue to implement strategies to promote businesses as we have been doing. If businesses are not successful, where then does he expect to fund the necessary social development he is talking about? That is the easiest thing, and I pitched on that too but I did something about it.

What we cannot do, Mr. Speaker, is sit idly and do nothing because there could be a potential impact. Inertia can be dangerous as it has a way of lulling you into a false sense of security. You begin to think, 'If I do nothing then things will not get worse.' Well, the problem with that thinking is that things also have no chance of getting better. That is what Caymanians demand; leadership that aspires for improvement, that actively strives for improvement and actually achieves improvement!

Due to lack of forward planning over the years certain infrastructure is not in place. However, we are pro-actively addressing all of these needs. In order to enhance our infrastructure we need to have money. I will acknowledge that from the beginning of our economic boom in the 1960's, certain people have been left behind over the years. We must continue to do what is in line with my philosophy as leader of the Government, which is create an environment whereby business can be successful and investment opportunities exist for both the Caymanian and foreign investor.

We must create opportunities through the granting of scholarships. In 2002 we granted over 203 scholarships, 62 overseas and 141 local. In 2003 we gave 65 overseas and 173 local, which is 238. For this year, 2004, we have 120 overseas applicants alone. I have said to the Minister that the money must come and we must award the scholarships so that down the road, when we want to take up the mantel and say that we want to rule ourselves, we will have academia behind us. That is how we will get education and our own academia and we will not go anywhere else to get it! We cannot go and fight the United Kingdom unless we have our own academia!

Last year there were nine tourism scholarships awarded, and again in this year's Budget there is provision for a further nine to be granted. If this is not planning for the future, then what is? These are Caymanian children who are benefiting and getting a better education in their chosen field.

My philosophy is to provide our people with what all human beings strive for: food, shelter and clothing. This Government is the only one that created and implemented a strategy to provide low-income housing on a large scale.

Our philosophy is to provide an economic environment whereby the banks are comfortable providing long-term mortgages. Today, more of our middle-income people are getting homes than during any other time in the history of these Islands. This is extremely important to ensure that we maintain a healthy and vibrant middle class!

Our philosophy is to provide jobs for our people. The unemployment rate is at one of its lowest points that these Islands have seen. These are Caymanians who were unemployed but now have jobs! These are but some of the major accomplishments of my administration.

In contemporary times when so many nations are experiencing economic hardships, and the Cayman Islands is experiencing a difficult time maintaining its competitive position, I am appalled and frightened by the talk that they might be the next government and they are advocating that we should turn away foreign investment because we are not ready for it. Do they believe that they can turn it on and off as they want? They cannot do that.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, you have 10 minutes remaining.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

We cannot turn foreign investment off. That is what happened here a few years ago when they were driving everybody away. You could not touch this and that; you could not build this and that. That is what was happening to us. The coffers ran out; there was no money because they were killing the goose that laid the golden egg. The goose is the Cayman Islands environment and what we have. To gain something you always have to give something. To continue this standard of living we have to give a little bit. We cannot be like how we were in the 60's; it cannot work that way.

That philosophy is exactly what exacerbated past economic slowdowns and caused the Leader of the Opposition, who was then Leader of the Government, to borrow $50 million to balance the Budget. That was the first time in this country's history where the Government had to borrow such a large amount of money to balance its Budget. The strategies that the Leader of the Opposition and the PPM propose are exactly what will put us in the hands of agencies like the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank.

What they believe is, you do not bring in the investment but you must have the infrastructure so you have to borrow more money, spend and tax. Borrow, spend and tax. That is what will put us down the drain; that is what has put his Caribbean friends into the drain, if that is where they have been at times! That is not where we want to go. That is not what we want to do.

Sustainable development is what we are aiming for. We are looking at the future needs of our people both economically and socially and encouraging the local and foreign investors necessary to generate sufficient income to sustain the economy and to provide for its welfare of our people.

I heard the Member for George Town say that the new port that we were proposing is being built over an aquifer. What a lie! It is thousands, perhaps hundreds, of acres away from where the new dock was proposed. The Member knows better, but again, to frighten people he would say that because he believes it is so. That is why he is not here; he knows that I would challenge him and he knows that he cannot stand up to the truth. When the truth jumps on the table wrong is going to cut its tail, run, hide, drink coffee and smoke cigarettes out in the coffee room.

The Member for North Side would not come in, but as I said, she cannot come now at this election time calling about football. Earlier last year she was invited to attend and assist a football camp and she did neither, never even gave one cent to assist and would not even go and kick off the ball. Now she says that she cares for the young people. They care about themselves, their power, where they are, who they are with and how much they can manipulate and control for themselves and how much they can try to spoil people's character.

I am begging the people of these Islands to be aware. This is an election year and you are going to hear all sorts of things. There will be attempts to smear me, as Leader of Government Business, and that has already started. They will be told exactly what the Leader of the Opposition said in his speech. The PPM will make them believe that nothing is right and everything is wrong. I will beg the people of this country and Members of this House, 'Do not be sidetracked.' We are on the right track; we are doing the right things. There are wrong things and we are trying to correct them. Mistakes are made, but we try to correct them. They are not our mistakes.

The Leader of the Opposition mentioned the Constitution. He said his desire is to consult, but I wonder whether he has ever consulted anybody on anything since he formed his party. He goes to his party friends and they say that they do not want the Constitution in the way I propose. I propose that we put the Constitution in our manifesto so that one and all can have their say on it during the election campaign; outline it to the people. He says he does not want it that way. Well, what way do they want it?

They want it the only way that they can have it, where they have all the say and the control, where they can appoint people they want to their boards and control and put people in the Civil Service. I will say again, if the Leader of the Opposition was still in Government we would not have a free and fair public service. He was infiltrating and carrying mangoes and peppers to everybody that he could and doing all sorts of things. Some of them would not dare challenge me because I know who was taking out the news and who was trying to do what in the Glass House in 2001.

I am glad today that that did not happen, that we had strong people at the head of the service who said it must be fair and it must be impartial and that is the way that it was.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, you have two minutes remaining.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, one of the things that we want and need is a security system to protect our borders to assist in the interdiction of unwanted goods and substances. We have two new officers at the head of our Police force. We have to work hard to give them the tools they need to do the job.

We must protect our country's borders, so a radar system, a plane and a properly equipped boat are needed; the Commissioner is investigating such equipment. It will cost a lot but we will have to do it. While over the years we have been busy trying to educate and doctor drugs, we need more capabilities in the interdiction of drugs. The equipment and this system that I am talking about can be used for many more things. For instance, search and rescue, and can also meet other needs of the country.

The Leader of the Opposition spent much time telling this Honourable House what he did when he was Leader, although everywhere you go people, for good reason, say he did not do anything. There is no evidence of what he has done. I will not comment further on that as his record speaks for itself. Failure! Nothing else but pure, unadulterated failure because he had no plan and preferred to move things his way, that is, sit back, talk, talk and then talk again. And while Rip Van Winkle slept and dozed away, his gun rusted and time passed him by. Mr. Speaker, I am more focused on the future, not the past.

The 2004/5 Budget is a good one. It is a fiscally responsible Budget, as the previous government's budgets have been since 2002. It is a Budget which sets a clear course to achieve economic and social prosperity in the Cayman Islands.

I thank the Honourable Financial Secretary, the Auditor General, the Chief Secretary, Mr. Gough, Mr. Dale, Mr. Ken Jefferson, Mrs. Sonia McLaughlin and all those civil servants who worked very hard.

In closing, I heard the Opposition talk about the Ritz Carlton. As I said, they can challenge me anytime because my life is open. They might have heard, or may be able to tell us about a client I heard about who came here some time ago with a suitcase of money, dubious as he was—whose law firm he went to, which lawyer he was attached to, if there were any due diligence done then, if the funds went into a bank account or, if not, where did the funds go and whether that lawyer reported it, whether apartment buildings or warehouses were bought, or trucks and cars were bought, even for their girlfriends. The Budget has nothing to do with that, but I want to give them due warning. As I said, my life is an open book and if they are firing cannons at me then they will be fired back. I warn them.

Let this campaign be honest, above board and about the issues that we face. Do not try to smear people's characters and destroy people's families. I beg one and all: go into this campaign and deal with the issues.

I thank this Honourable House for its indulgence and I thank you for your patience and I am sorry that the Opposition stayed outside.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure that this is the appropriate time to do it but there are a number of errors in the Chairman's Report of which the minutes form part.

May I proceed?

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: In relation to the attendance, I note some errors.

The sixth sitting which was Wednesday, 2 June, was a very long day – almost 12 hours and I certainly was present for most of that day. I was not here when the sitting started but I was here when it concluded, as was the case, I believe, with the Honourable Gilbert McLean who I know was here. There may be other errors in the attendance and I will let the other Members speak to them but I note that there were some persons here who are marked absent on some days.

The Speaker: Thank you Second Elected Member for George Town for bringing these to our attention and I would ask the Third Official Member to meet with the Clerk and have those errors corrected.

I understand from her however, that these errors will be corrected before the final Report is completed.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Honourable Members, this brings us to the end of the short Order Paper for today. I do know that on Wednesday we will have many more items because the Business Committee will be meeting shortly after this meeting. Therefore, I now call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move the motion for adjournment.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Wednesday, 9 June 2004 at 10 am.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever, Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make his face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable First Official Member who is away on Government business, the Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture, the Honourable Minister of Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology, the Second Elected Member for George Town and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Ruling on use of laptop computers or silent touch-typing device by press (SO 84(1))

The Speaker: I have two readings which I will do at this time Honourable Members.

I have received representation from the Press requesting permission to prepare transcripts from the Legislative Assembly proceedings through the use of laptop computers or other silent touch-typing device.

I have considered their request and regard it as reasonable and progressive considering the long-standing precedent that has been established in this Honourable House through the verbatim recording and broadcasting of legislative proceedings by Radio Cayman.

Standing Order 84(1) states and I quote: "The Presiding Officer may grant a general permission to the representatives of any journal or newspaper to attend the meetings of the House, and such permission may be granted under such rules as he may make, from time to time, for that purpose. If such rules are contravened, such permission may be revoked."

Pursuant, therefore, to the powers given to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly under this Standing Order, 84(1), I make the following rule that permission is hereby granted to any representative of the press who is approved under the Register of Interests Law, 1996—Declaration of Press Interest—to prepare transcripts of the Legislative Assembly proceedings through the use of laptop computers or silent touch-typing device. However, other electronic recording device, photography or television, is forbidden without the expressed permission of the Presiding Officer or the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly.

If any member of the press has failed to register in compliance with the Register of Interests Law 1996, they shall not be permitted to enter the press boxes to cover proceedings. When a declaration has been completed and received by the Clerk a press badge will be issued and at such time admission to the press boxes will be permitted.

The press are required at all times to wear the press badge issued to them for each sitting.

Update on progress of the Legislative Assembly and Autonomy of the Legislative Assembly

The Speaker: My second reading. Honourable Members, in accordance with my undertaking to keep this Honourable House apprised of the progress of the renovation works on the Legislative Assembly Building, I can report that I was informed by the Deputy Chief Secretary on Thursday, 29 May 2004, that the building was scheduled for completion on Monday, 7 June 2004. However, as of today's date, it seems that finishing touches are still being carried out on the building.

Following my telephone conversation with the Deputy Chief Secretary, the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly and I were taken on a tour of the building by the Project Manager, Mr. Jim Scott. Following that I emailed the Deputy Chief Secretary, with copies to the other individuals who were directly involved with supervising the renovation works, expressing my deep concern about the very bright yellow/orange colour that adorned the wall behind the Speaker's chair. I am pleased that the Honourable Leader of Government has agreed to look into the matter and, if possible, have the bright colours subdued prior to the opening of the 2004/5 Session of the House.

The Parliaments of most democracies in the civilised world are held by their people in the very highest esteem. The Legislature is indeed one of the three branches of Government, the other two being the Executive and Judicial branches. Accordingly, the Legislature should be given the appropriate level of respect and protocol that is common in most democracies, especially those modelled on the Westminster system of Government.

It is against this background and long-established precedents that I feel constrained to express the view that it is high time that the Legislature of the Cayman Islands is made an autonomous body by Government, answering directly to His Excellency the Governor. To me it seems quite wrong for the Speaker, who in order of precedence is the fourth ranking official in Government, to have to answer to any person within the Civil Service, other than the Governor himself.

Finally, may I take this opportunity to thank all those who have worked hard in carrying out the renovation works on the Legislative Assembly Building. I have to, in all honesty, state other than for the bright carnival-looking colours previously alluded to the workmanship, the renovations seems to have gone well. I will, however, take the opportunity to give more detailed recognitions on the occasion of the Official Opening of the 2004/5 Session of the House.

Thank you, Honourable Members.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

The Report of the Standing Business Committee Fourth Meeting of the 2003 Session of the Legislative Assembly

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business and Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Before I lay this Report I beg your indulgence to say that I thank you for making that statement. The matter needs to be cleared. For the information of this Honourable House and the wider public, no Member of the United Democratic Party had any hand in choosing any colour, carpets, or anything. When we were asked to vote money, whatever we were asked to vote, we voted. We too have decried the long time it has taken the Legislative Assembly to be refurbished.

I thank you for clearing the air this morning. In fact, I intend to make a full statement later on about it and I intend to take up with His Excellency the Governor the matter of who exactly is responsible for the Legislative Assembly. I do not think the Governor should be. I think that the matter should lie with the Speaker of the Honourable Legislative Assembly; that is who should be in charge.

I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, the Report of the Standing Business Committee, Fourth Meeting of the 2003 Session of the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Sir.

The Economic Report January–September, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Economic Report January–September, 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you Mr. Speaker. The comments I will provide will be a summary of the developments in the economy during the first three quarters of the year 2003 as presented in the Economic Report January–September of that year.

My summary also contains information on unemployment which became available after the Report was completed. Honourable Members of this House will therefore be updated accordingly.

Inflation

The consumer price index rose by 0.8 per cent in the third quarter of 2003 compared to 2.9 per cent during the comparative period in 2002.

Notable price increases were seen in the following areas:

- Medical care 10.4 per cent
- Education 6 per cent

Modest increases were seen in:

- Personal goods and services 2.8 per cent
- Household equipment 2.5 per cent
- Food 1.6 per cent
- Transport and communications 1.4 per cent
- Clothing 1 per cent

The increases were counterbalanced by declines in the following categories:

- Housing minus (-)4.3 per cent
- Alcohol and tobacco -0.1 per cent

Labour

Work permits in effect rose by 1,608 to 13,662 during the first three quarters of 2003.

Unemployment fell from 5.4 per cent in October 2002 to 3.6 per cent in October 2003. I mentioned earlier that this information came in subsequent to the 30 September cut off of 2003.

Trade

Imports rose by 3.1 per cent during the first nine months of 2003 from $361.3 million during the first three quarters of 2002 to $372.5 million during the comparative period of 2003.

Financial Services

The financial services industry recorded positive results in most areas during the first three quarters of 2003, the notable exception being the number of banks and trust licenses. This has been commented on in previous reports and the reason therefore for the decline.

Mutual fund registration grew 408 or 9.5 per cent; from 4,285 at the start of the year to 4,693 in September.

The number of insurance licences increased by 18 or 2.9 per cent; from 629 at the end of 2002 to 647 at the end of September 2003. Gross premiums rose by 11.9 per cent during the same period—$4.7 billion.

Stock exchange listings grew by 2.7 per cent—729, while market capitalisation expanded by 13.8 per cent—US$41.3 billion.

The total number of bank and trust licenses in effect at September 2003 was 474, compared to 508 at December 2002, reflecting an overall decline of 34.

The number of Class 'A' Bank and Trust licenses decreased by 3; from 30 in December 2002 to 27 in September 2003. This decline was as a result of Barclays Bank plc, Bank of Bermuda (Cayman) Ltd., and Aall Trust and Banking Corporation Ltd. changing their 'A' licences to 'B' licences. Class B Bank and Trust licences also declined by 29; from 353 in December 2002 to 324 in September 2003. This decline in the number of licences was mainly as a result of the statutory requirement for a physical presence instituted in 2001. Other secondary factors influencing this decline were the global economic climate, as well as consolidations resulting from mergers and acquisitions. Total Trust companies declined by two; from 125 in December 2002 to 123 in September 2003.

New company registration during the first three quarters amounted to 5,290 and represented a 0.3 per cent increase compared to 2002.

Tourism

Cruise arrivals registered an 8.9 per cent growth during the first three quarters to 1.3 million.

However, air arrivals fell by 5.4 per cent to 221,045.

Real Estate

The values of property transfers rose by 36 per cent from $175 million during the first nine months of 2002 to $237.9 million during the comparative period of 2003.

Construction

Planning approvals increased by 22.8 per cent to $214.2 million.

Building permits fell by 18 per cent to $174.1 million.

This decline was anticipated, given some large projects that were granted permits in 2002. These included:

- Ritz Carlton Hotel & Condominium development US$109 million, and
- UBW Ltd Building (Citrus Grove) $6.5 million.

Utilities

Electricity consumption was up by 4.7 per cent.

Water production grew by 3.4 per cent.

The number of paid telephone and fax minutes contracted by 8.6 per cent from 30.3 million during the first three quarters of 2002 to 27.7 million during the comparative period of 2003.

I would like to thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to present this update.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Not at this time, Mr. Speaker.

Suspension of Standing Order 24(5)

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 24(5) to allow a Government Motion to be brought to affirm the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2004.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Standing Order 45 to allow for the Bills to be read a first time. However, I am going to ask for a deferment to be allowed in respect of the Tax Information Exchange Authority Bill, 2003 as there has been a request by the financial community for more time to be allowed with respect to this Bill.

The question is that Standing Order 45 be suspended. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

SECOND READINGS

The National Roads Authority Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Bill before this Honourable House entitled the National Roads Authority Bill, 2003 will, if passed, bring into effect a National Roads Authority for the first time.

Prior to this there has been what has been known as the Roads Division of the Public Works Department. For all the years that road works, development, maintenance and the like has been carried out, it has been carried out by this particular section of the Public Works Department.

At this time the idea is to create a National Roads Authority whose responsibility will be to ensure the effective and efficient management of public roads in the Islands. I would like to make the point that this responsibility will extend to all three Islands: Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

This is not a novel idea nor is it just coming to light at this time. In the 1990's my colleague, the present Minister for Education, and I, moved a Private Members' Motion asking Government to consider the creation of such a body. I suppose it is the case, as has been said many times, that nothing happens before its time and I would like to believe that the time this can be done is now.

Part I of the Bill contains clauses 1 and 2 which are preliminary provisions. Clause 1 provides the short title and makes provision in respect of the commencement of the legislation and clause 2 of the Law is the interpretation clause.

Part II of the Bill deals with the establishment and administration of the National Roads Authority and contains clauses 3 to 10.

Clause 3 establishes the National Roads Authority as a body corporate having power to enter into contracts and to buy and sell land and other property. The clause also provides that property belonging to Government and specified in the schedule will automatically vest in the Authority.

Clause 4 contains the provisions relating to the youth of the Authority's seal.

Clause 5 sets out the functions and duties of the Authority. The Authority is required, among other things, to –

- (a) plan, design, construct, develop, maintain, protect and administer public roads;
- (b) tender, let and administer contracts for public road improvement and rehabilitation projects;
- (c) carry out a comprehensive continuing programme of professional staff development and appropriate skilled training for non-professional staff;
- (d) Establish and operate facilities for the testing of materials in connection with the construction and the maintenance of the public roads;
- (e) supervise the work contracted out;
- (f) provide to the Minister responsible for roads advice on -
  - (i) the adequacy of the funding provided to the Authority from the Road Fund for financing, maintenance and construction of public roads;
  - (ii) the need to develop new, or abolish or amend existing, financing instruments for the Road Fund;
  - (iii) the optimal level of Authority revenue from the Road Fund in the context of other revenue sources of the Authority.

The Authority's functions will be performed through the Managing Director of the Authority, subject to policy directives by the Board of the Authority.

Clause 6 enables the Minister responsible for roads to issue policy directions to the Authority after consultation with the Board.

Clause 7 makes provision for the constitution and responsibilities of the board of directors of the Authority. The Board will consist of the following directors appointed by the Governor in Cabinet –

- (a) one individual, not being a public officer, who shall be the chairman;
- (b) one individual, not being a public officer, who shall be the deputy chairman;
- (c) one individual who has demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Governor substantial knowledge of and experience in planning, design and development of public roads, who shall be the Managing Director;

- (d) one individual who has demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Governor substantial knowledge of and experience in planning, design and development of public roads, who shall be the Deputy Managing Director;
- (e) the Permanent Secretary of the Ministry responsible for roads or his nominee;
- (f) the Financial Secretary or his nominee;
- (g) three individuals who have demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Governor substantial knowledge and experience in one or more of the following areas -
  - (i) tourism;
  - (ii) law; and
  - (iii) environmental matters; and
- (h) not less than three but not more than four individuals.

The Board will be responsible, among other things, for -

- (a) overseeing the performance of the Authority; and
- (b) setting operational priorities with regard to the construction and maintenance of public roads.

Clause 7 also makes provision for the appointment of an Executive Secretary of the Authority who shall be answerable to the Board for his" or her "acts and decisions.

Clause 8 makes provision in relation to Board meetings.

Clauses 9 and 10 require directors to disclose their pecuniary interests in contracts being considered by the Board.

Part III of the Bill contains clauses 11 to 17 and deals with the personnel of the Authority.

Clause 11 makes provision for the appointment of the Managing Director and the Deputy Managing Director of the Authority. The clause specifies the circumstances in which the Deputy Managing Director is empowered to function as Managing Director.

Clause 12 sets out the functions of the Managing Director, and these include –

- (a) overseeing certain technical operations of the Authority;
- (b) concluding contracts on behalf of the Authority subject to approval by the Board;
- (c) monitoring the operations of persons administering road user charges;
- (d) appointing staff of the Authority; and
- (e) supervising campaigns aimed at sensitizing the general public to the role of roads in economic development.

The Managing Director will be the principal executive officer of the Authority entrusted with day to day management and administration.

Clause 13 requires the Managing Director to perform his responsibilities in accordance with an operational plan approved by the Board.

Clause 14 enables the Board to engage the services of professional and technical personnel which, Mr. Speaker, will be necessary at certain points in time because such may not be fully available to the Board.

Clause 15 makes provision for public officers to be transferred to the Authority.

Clauses 16 and 17 prescribe the pension and medical benefits applicable to employees of the Authority.

Part IV of the Bill contains clauses 18 to 28 which are financial provisions.

These, Mr. Speaker, are set out in detail.

Clause 18 provides for the discontinuance of the Roads Development Fund. The clause also provides for the establishment, within the core government, of the Road Fund. The Road Fund will be accounted for as a discretionary reserve in the financial statements of the core government in accordance with the provisions of the Public Management and Finance Law (2003 Revision).

This is a provision which has been set up, particularly to provide for the funding of the Roads Authority as the Roads Authority has no right to assess taxes which is the authority only of Government. The Government has made arrangements, as I referred to a moment ago, so that funds can be received and passed on to the Roads Authority for works to be completed.

Clause 19 enables the following executive revenue, upon being earned by the Government, to be placed in the Road Fund –

The Roads Authority could not function if there was no money provided for it. It has been calculated that the percentages, which I will speak to in a moment, will provide a flow of capital to the Roads Authority that will provide sufficient funds to carry on the business which it will have to do. Where this falls short, and core government might want additional work done, which this would not provide for, such funds would have to be found through whatever means by core government.

The first item of clause 19:

- (a) twenty per cent of the duty charged, collected and paid pursuant to the Customs Tariff Law (2002 Revision), upon motor gasoline imported into the Islands;
- (b) sixteen and two-thirds per cent of the duty charged, collected and paid pursuant to the Customs Tariff Law (2002 Revision) upon diesel oil imported into the Islands, excluding diesel oil under code number 27.03 in the First Schedule of that Law;

That is diesel fuel which is provided for Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC) and the Cayman Brac Power and Light Company.

- (a) one hundred per cent of the fees paid to the infrastructure fund pursuant to section 38(4) of the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision); and

- (b) eighty per cent of the fees paid in respect of the registration of motor vehicles under Part II of the Traffic Law (2003 Revision).

What has been attempted here is to allocate funds from areas of revenue within core government which relate to the business of roads.

Clause 20 provides that the Road Fund shall be used by the Governor in Cabinet to –

- (a) acquire or construct public roads and other related executive assets;
- (b) purchase from the Authority outputs related to the maintenance of public roads or the exercise of any other function of the Authority; and
- (c) to make equity investments into the Authority.

Clause 21 makes provision for public roads to be treated as an asset of the government and accounted for in the financial statements of the core government.

Clause 22 sets out the procedure for the imposition, levy and collection of road user charges.

Clause 23 specifies the revenue and resources of the Authority, and these are –

- (a) such monies as may be appropriated by Law for the purposes of the Authority, including those from the Road Fund;
- (b) road user charges collected by the Authority in accordance with section 22;
- (c) gifts or bequests received by the Authority in accordance with section 27;
- (d) other monies paid and property provided to the Authority by way of grants, rent, interest and other income derived from the investment of the Authority's funds;
- (e) monies derived from the disposal of or dealing with real or personal property held by the Authority;
- (f) monies borrowed by the Authority in accordance with this Law; and
- (g) any property lawfully received or made available to the Authority.

Clause 24 provides that the financial year of the Authority shall end on 30 June.

Clause 25 empowers the Authority to borrow in connection with the performance of its functions.

Clause 26 provides that the Public Management and Finance Law (2003 Revision) will prevail in the event of any inconsistency between that Law and the National Roads Authority Law, 2004.

Clause 27 contains provisions related to the Authority's ability to receive funds, gifts and land.

Clause 28 provides that any annual payment of the Authority to the core government shall be calculated by a formula determined by the Financial Secretary after consultation with the Authority and the Minister responsible for Roads.

It is expected and hoped that in the long term the Roads Authority might approve surpluses of which a certain percentage would be paid back to the core government after it has kept back funds to cover its own operations.

Part V of the Bill sets out general provisions and contains clauses 29 to 34.

Clause 29 provides the procedure for the disposal of premises which the Authority no longer requires.

Clause 30 empowers the Governor in Cabinet, upon recommendation by the Authority, to make regulations relating to –

- (a) minimum standards for the maintenance of public roads to promote accessibility to any area in the Islands; and
- (b) the fees to be charged for any service provided by the Authority.

Clause 31 authorises the making of rules to enable the Authority to regulate its internal management.

Clauses 32 and 33 are immunity and indemnity provisions, respectively, and clause 34 contains savings and transitional provisions.

This Bill, though not extremely long, provides quite comprehensively for the various areas which would be covered under the National Roads Authority and it sets down guidelines and provisions as to how they should be done. It is the first such attempt to manage the development, design and maintenance of roads in this fashion. It will of course take time in transitioning into an Authority and it will have to work out the glitches as it goes. However, I believe this brings about a new era in this area and as such, I recommend it to the Honourable Members of this Honourable House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to make a contribution to the National Roads Authority Bill, 2003 that is before us. At the outset please allow me to say that the Opposition supports such an entity and in so saying we will not necessarily criticise the Bill. However, we will bring to the attention of the Minister certain areas that we have concerns with, which we believe, will ultimately be the operation of the Authority. We hope he will take it in the light that they are given. Like he said at the end of his presentation, this is the beginning and it is a teething process. We hope that he can address it, if necessary, in removing some of those little teething problems that will ultimately be a part of this Bill.

One of the things that I immediately noted when I read this Bill was that there was no provision made for the Authority to have jurisdiction over lighting roads. I believe during the Finance Committee recently we questioned whether the responsibility was the undertaker's or the government's to ensure that street lights are maintained properly. As it currently stands, if someone requires a street light, which serves as a form of security, we have to go through the Minister or Ministry, whichever he or she chooses to let the Members of the Legislative Assembly apply through.

I believe that the Roads Authority should have jurisdiction over the lighting of roads. Sir, please allow me to explain why I said that. Because of my past experience in that field, having worked for CUC for a long time, and seeing and understanding other jurisdictions like America, Canada, etcetera, it is a third party that is responsible for the lighting of roads. The reason for that is there are certain standards that have been developed over many years for different roads. For highways a certain level of lighting must be maintained and it is the same thing for subdivisions.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, what happens is that you will not have the public calling to have a security light on the corner down the road from them. It should be put in place based on those standards. You may have the public complaining that their road is too dark but if it meets the lighting standards then there will not be any other lights installed. However, if that third party—in this case the Roads Authority—finds out that they have not maintained the lighting level on that road then they will do the necessary changes to maintain lighting levels. I believe that the Roads Authority should have jurisdiction over that.

The Ministers have enough work to do and they should not have the responsibility of worrying about passing it on to Public Works. Currently, we pass it on to Public Works and the road section investigates whether or not the light is necessary or whether they can safely instruct Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC) to put the light in and they can pay for it; it goes to the Roads Department, I believe. Therefore, the National Roads Authority should have that responsibility and remove it from the Ministry.

I bring that to the attention of the Minister currently piloting this Bill and ask him to take a look at that. May I just add that under the responsibilities of the Authority that the maintaining of street lighting levels could easily be included. The intricacies of that can be worked out in the regulations.

I would like to turn to Part III, and the provisions for personnel of the Authority, on page 20: “Transfer of public officers to the Authority” and “Pension fund”.

I welcome section 15(3) where it says: “The Governor may, subject to such conditions as he may impose, approve the appointment of any public officer in the service of Government by the way of secondment to any office with the Authority, and any public officer so appointed shall, in relation to discipline, salary, pension, gratuity or other allowance and to other rights and obligation as a public officer, be treated as continuing in the service of the Government.”

That is very important for the people who are currently working in the Roads Department. Most of those employees are group employees and some are permanent and pensionable employees (PPEs). While PPEs and group employees are public officers this section does not say whether all those employees are going to be PPEs or group employees.

I think we need to address that because we know how the people working in those areas are sensitive and concerned about continuity and their retirement for the future. I think we also need to ensure that when these people are transferred it is made very clear what their position is; what their terms of employment with the Authority will be from thereon in. We will be inundated as Members of the Legislature to try and find out when we hear people say: 'Well, we are being transferred and we do not know if we are going continue; whether they are going to fire us or what position we are going to hold and what our tenure is going to be.' All those questions are realities within that arena and I think the Minister needs to pay particular attention to them so that we do not get all those concerns surfacing again like we have had on occasions when departments have turned into authorities. After a while it smoothes itself out but the initial stages seem to give them a little concern and they get excited. Some of them may even become animated as a result of it.

I have become a little concerned about another section and perhaps the Minister can give us some answers. Section 16 says: “(1) The Authority shall subscribe to the Public Service Pensions Fund in accordance with the provisions of the Public Service Pensions Law (2003 Revision) for the payment of pensions to all employees of the Authority.

“(2) Notwithstanding subsection (1) –

(a) where an employee transferred in accordance with subsection 15 (1) [which I spoke of earlier] is entitled to a contracted officer's supplement the Authority shall not subscribe to the Public Service Pensions Fund in respect of such employee during the period in which the employee remains entitled to such supplement;”

I thought that was over, Mr. Speaker. This was while the current Minister was Her Majesty's loyal Opposition in 2001, and he and I, and other Members banded together and took up the fight to have Contracted Officer's Supplement (COS) removed from the books. As I recall, the then Governor, Peter John Smith, supposedly the Governor, replied to us in writing saying the contracted officer's supplement was being done away with and those who were contracted officers in the public service would, at the end of their contract, no longer be receiving COS. Even so, I do not know how we could trust what he said then

It may be a simple explanation whereby there are still people at the Public Works Department whose contracts are still in place, prior to 2001. If that is not the case then I believe it is necessary that the country knows who these employees are. If we can have a Governor who says that it is finished, and then there is a continuation of it, then I have to question the abilities of such people and the honesty of such Governors. Mr. Speaker, at the time—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I would ask you to be extremely careful how you couch your questioning of the integrity of any Governor, past or present. You may continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for that but I would beg your indulgence to guide me here because as I understand it the Constitution says I cannot say anything about the Governor. It did not say the past Governor. I would ask for your guidance in that respect, Sir.

The Speaker: You may continue, I am just asking that you be careful in the choice of your words. Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I will not go over on to the current Governor, but I did not have much trust in the past Governor.

Perhaps the Minister can explain to us whether these are new employees or if they are employees who have been around prior to 2001. I think it was June 2002 when we were not supposed to see anymore COS and I stand to be corrected but I know there was a commitment made to stop COS. There was a motion either in this Honourable House or Finance Committee that got the full approval of this Honourable House. Therefore, I bring those two to the Minister's attention.

The area I would really like to concentrate on now is that of the Financial Provisions, Part IV, page 21.

I think all, current, past, and future Members of this Honourable House will welcome the provisions made in section 19, which are the revenues for the Road Fund.

For many years, long before I even thought of running for office, I supported the position that monies collected directly related to use of the roads in Cayman should be earmarked for its maintenance and its development.

However, at the time most of us, and I know I thought that a hundred per cent should go over there. I guess that was asking a little bit too much. I understand, for instance, 20 per cent of the duty charged upon gasoline importation would equate to about 10 cents per gallon that would go into the Road Fund. I see the validity of doing sixteen and two-thirds per cent of the duty charged upon diesel which currently stands at 60 cents. That again equates into 10 cents which will be charged against gasoline and diesel with CUC, the undertakers, meaning the electricity providers in the country, being exempt because that is not directly used for transportation in the country. It would be nice if government would do that because CUC burns somewhere around 24 and 26 million gallons per year. The government coffers get some $13 million a year off the 50 cents charge on that diesel alone. Perhaps government should consider putting 20 per cent of that into the Road Fund.

I will touch briefly the total amount, from a conservative perspective, that would be derived from these areas. Section 28(1): “Annual payment to core government” may be a dream for the Roads Authority. I know the Minister said one day it may reach that point. I do not know which day that will ever be but he is more optimistic than I am. I hope his day comes earlier than mine. That would be nice.

Clause 19(1)(c) says: “one hundred per cent of the fees paid to an infrastructural fund pursuant to section 38(4) of the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision);”.

I cannot say how much that is because based on development that could fluctuate, one way or the other. Certainly when we look at (d): “eighty per cent of the fees paid in respect of the registration of motor vehicles under Part II of the Traffic Law (2003 Revision).”

If we use the conservative figure of 20,000 cars I would venture to say that we are looking at maybe $2 million or thereabouts. If we use a conservative figure of 10 million gallons of diesel and gasoline together we are looking at another million which is $3 million. Let us say we get a million from the infrastructure fund, we are looking at $4 million. Therefore, I do believe that the Government is going to have to make some major equity injections other than to maintain our roads, particularly now where the road infrastructure in this country requires the building of major roads in the not-too-distant future. That is why I said to the Minister that section 28 may not be a reality in the foreseeable future, because the Authority will have to stretch its resources to ensure it maintains, constructs and administers the roads in this country with the funds it will receive. Certainly, borrowings will be an option and the Government currently borrows money to do the roads. I notice that we have now transferred that responsibility to the Authority and rightfully so. However, it has to come to the Legislative Assembly. We welcome the removal of this over to an Authority.

However, it does not finish there because any Minister who may be in that position has the authority to instruct after receiving advice from the Board. I believe that is an area we have to be extremely careful with because we know what has transpired in the past, particularly during election years when supporters get what they want through the Roads Department. I trust that the Authority will be much stronger than that. I am hopeful that it will happen.

One of the sections I am extremely concerned about, which I believe, needs to be revisited, is section 22: “Levying and collection of user charges”. When I say I am concerned I am speaking on behalf of the Opposition. Just a week or so ago when the Public Works Department Director was here defending his Budget I questioned areas of revenue that the department currently enjoys. I was told by the Director that there was no area of revenue. Some of my Government Back Bench colleagues said to me that I was promoting tolls. I do not know whether tolls or user fees are to be employed but the Government currently employs road user fees in the form of a Traffic Law whereby you have to register your vehicle.

I know there will come a time for something to be done. I am not in a position to say what that is today because some kind of study needs to be done in order to determine the impact it is going to have on the economy, and the lack thereof it will have on the development and maintenance of our roads. However, my experience, although limited on this particular subject of tariffs for road users, says to me that if you put up a toll booth the cost for the use of the road is based on the vehicle, be it a Sedan, a multi-axle vehicle (trucks) or whether it is three or nine axles, and weight in most instances. However, I have never in my experience seen class of persons. Section 22 says: “(1) Subject to the approval of the Governor, the Authority may levy and collect a road user charge on users of public roads provided that the amount of the road user charge –

- (a) is directly related to the amount of usage of roads by the users concerned;
  - (b) is determined in a transparent and equitable manner; and
  - (c) is regularly reviewed for accuracy and equity.”
- (2) Before levying a road user charge in accordance with subsection (1), the Authority shall publish in the Gazette a notice specifying –
- (a) the amount of the proposed road user charge;
  - (b) the classes of persons or vehicles to be charged with reference to the amount of the proposed road user charge; and
  - (c) the classes of persons or vehicles, if any, to be exempt from the road user charge;”

That spells politics to me, Mr. Speaker; we need to get away from that somehow. We cannot distinguish the difference between poor and rich, haves and have-nots if you have a car and you are using the road. You are going to be charged to use the road because you have a vehicle. The target must be the vehicle and not the people. Commercial vehicles may be charged more than privately-owned vehicles and that is not necessarily on a toll provision because there are other ways that this can be done. It may very well be that the Government will have to say that when you go to license your vehicle, from here on, passenger vehicles are going to attract $100 more a year and commercial vehicles are going to attract $500 a year more. I do not know if that will be the case, but that is where you can levy charges which are not necessarily tolls because it is going to be extremely difficult for us to put toll booths in place, in this country.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the House to follow my position on this toll for road users. If we put a toll by the Heron Harbour (Hurleys). . . Yes, we are going to capture all of those from the eastern end of the Island. We could put a few on South Church Street, Walkers Road, Thomas Russell Way . . . It is not going to work because if we only put in South Sound and Walkers Road to capture those residents they are going to go through Thomas Russell Way and there will be flooding of cars there. The people who come from East End, Bodden Town, North Side and Savannah are going to pay their toll at Heron Harbour and drop their children on Walkers Road, and pay another one. If one is not placed at Thomas Russell Way we are going to flood that even more. It is going to be difficult for us to apply these taxes. It is not impossible but it is going to be difficult.

My understanding of a toll is that it is for the convenience of you getting to your destination quicker. You are not going to see tolls within your urban areas, but for you to get outside without getting in the traffic you can jump on the highway. Mr. Speaker, what I am saying is that there is a possibility of putting it on the Esterley Tibbetts Highway because that removes the people off the Seven Mile Beach road.

If I am going to West Bay I would not want to be caught up in the traffic so, I would pay a premium to travel on a road which has no traffic restrictions. Then at some stage when we get the proposal, which has been proposed from your time, Mr. Speaker—from East End which the Opposition of that day destroyed, in the 80s and 90s. Mr. Speaker, you were a visionary then. If that had been adopted we would not have the problems and the expense we are going to have to get a proper road infrastructure in this country.

I do not say that to be funny, I say that because it is true. I was on the Central Planning Authority at that time, but as I understood it then, there were no proposals to build roads. The proposals were to gazette the corridors.

The Deputy Chief Secretary was the Chief Engineer of Public Works at the time and he was a strong proponent of the master ground transportation plan. The Leader of the Opposition was a member of the Central Planning Authority and a strong proponent of the master ground transportation plan and so was I. The Government of the day was a strong proponent of it but the Opposition at the time successfully manipulated the people's minds of this country. They will not successfully do it again though because they are done; they are gone. The whole country is paying the price for the successful manipulation of the then Opposition and we know who that was; Mr. Truman and his little group. They must be reminded of that.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, my position is that until we get the one for the eastern districts it will be difficult for us because there will not be any equity in the people in George Town not paying a toll and using the roads, and the people from the eastern districts having to pay every day in and out of George Town where the point of commerce is at; the capital. Ninety per cent of the people in the eastern districts have to come to town everyday and if you are paying in you have to pay out. Until we get the highway the people from the eastern districts can decide not to fight with that traffic. They are going to have to pay a premium to travel on the highway; that is when we can bring in a toll on the road infrastructure.

I cannot say that I do not support the toll. I look forward to the day when we have a main highway where I can get to East End from George Town in 20 minutes, as opposed to it taking me 35 or 40 minutes and I have no others stops besides traffic holding me up. I will pay my premium to cut my time down by 15 to 20 minutes. It is going to be difficult to charge a person under the current conditions.

Section 1(2) of the Bill says: “This Law shall come into force on such date as may be appointed by order made by the Governor and different dates may be appointed for different provisions of this Law.”

I trust that we will judiciously watch over those provisions.

I now go back to the part of provision for ‘classes of persons’. Mr. Speaker, I am very concerned. That provision should not be there. I really do not understand how we are going to tax classes of persons. Someone needs to explain that to me; who is going to be exempted, etcetera. From my own knowledge I explained what a toll is all about.

We need to explain to our people the need for provisions to build and maintain their roads and that the road user cost is going to increase. It should be applied as it is now in an equitable manner, straight across the board, whether it is five per cent or 10 per cent on the licensing fees. That money should be earmarked specifically to build those highways and after they are built the cost should be reduced for those who choose to use the highways.

I respectfully ask the Minister to think about the classes of persons in that provision because we do not see it as being an equitable way of doing tolls. I know when I go the police station to license my vehicle I am going to pay the same as other classes of vehicles. However, I am not going to pay any differently from a different class of person such as someone who owns a hundred thousand dollar vehicle. The cost is the same. Less government is better. You have different classes of vehicles but not different classes of people. We need to remove ourselves from that.

We saw a classic example recently of how that does not work when we did the Marine Conservation Law and proposed initially to apply $1000 to people on work permits who would be fishing the country. Within a short time we had to change that and to this day it cannot be enforced. Why? Because everyone would have to walk around with proof of citizenship so that when the Marine officer comes and asks if you are eligible to fish off-shore, you would have an identification showing that you are Caymanian; therefore I would have to walk with my certificate. That is where we will get problems in trying to identify classes and the classes we are going to apply it to.

Another area that I would like to address is section 23(d) which says, “The revenue and resources of the Authority shall comprise –

“(d) other monies paid and property provided to the Authority by way of grants, rent, interest and other income derived from the investment of the Authority’s funds.”

If we look at 18(2), and I know the Second Elected Member for West Bay likes to follow these things; it says: “There is hereby established within the core government a fund, to be called the “Road Fund” which shall be accounted for as a discretionary reserve in the financial statements of the core government in accordance with the provision of the Public Management and Finance Law.”

If we then look at section 20, it says: “The Road Fund shall be used by the Governor to –

- (a) acquire or construct public roads and other related executive assets;
- (b) purchase from the Authority outputs related to the maintenance of public roads or the exercise of any other function of the Authority; and
- (c) make equity investments into the Authority,”

In section 23(d) how the Authority’s funds are going to derive income interest from investments has escaped me. The Authority’s funds are those which the Government is purchasing outputs with. Therefore, if the Authority is going to have funds to invest I do not know how they would be investing them. Core government has the Road Fund where all the money which I spoke of earlier, under section 19(1), is going into core government. That is the only fund other than that which the Authority may get through revenue and I am going to talk about that under section 30. One would assume that when core government purchases an output from the Authority that it is their major revenue source because all the monies are being held by the Governor, that is, Cabinet. Thus, I think it is highly unlikely that the Authority will have sufficient funds to invest to get a dividend. The Minister may want to speak briefly on that.

Under responsibilities of the Authority, the Authority will be responsible for the maintenance, in particular plan, design, construction, development, protect and administer public roads and related road works. Mr. Speaker, when I spoke earlier about section 28: “Annual payment to core government”, that is all well and good for an Authority such as the Water Authority which has an independent of core government. However, when core government pools the funds and gives it to an Authority to do an output there is no money to invest. It is impossible to get money to invest. It is going to be extremely difficult for the Authority to find money to invest out of that when the core government is purchasing these outputs to be done within one year. The Authority would have to go out there to qualify or to be required to pay government an annual payment, as it is called, and they are not readily available to them at this time or in the foreseeable future. The investment section needs to be explained.

I would like to turn to section 30: “(1) The Governor may, upon recommendations by the Authority, make regulations prescribing –

- (d) the fees or portion thereof that are to be charged for any service provided by the Authority.”

When I questioned Public Works Department about the Roads Department, as to whether it had any revenue base, I was told: ‘No’. It is my understanding that the current Roads Department may very well be doing works for revenue in assisting other contractors, etcetera, when they do not have any interest of timing for the contractor. Therefore, it would be interesting to see how much time is allocated to revenue-based projects versus how much time is allocated to the public roads, administration, construction and maintenance of those. It would also be interesting to see what section of the Authority will be available for those kind of revenue-based projects, or to see if the Authority will have sufficient personnel available to be able to contract itself out to private individuals to do roads.

Its primary function will be roads so naturally that would be the kind of work the Roads Authority would be engaged in. Thus, it would be interesting to see if that is the direction we are encouraging the Authority to go towards; providing services in the private domain to do roads. Mr. Speaker, I am not here condemning that, I am merely asking if that is the meaning of some of their revenue sources; if they are going to be able to compete with the private sector in the building and maintenance of roads and parking lots.

The Speaker: Honourable Member if this is a convenient break in your debate I propose that we take the luncheon suspension to return at 3 pm. So I would ask all Honourable Members to please be back promptly at 3 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.56 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.24 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Elected Member for East End continuing on his debate on the National Roads Authority Bill 2003.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When we took the lunch suspension I was dealing with Part IV: The Financial Provisions of the National Roads Authority Bill, 2003 and, lest it be misunderstood, when I spoke about investments by the Authority I should make it clear that I understand short-term investments that the Authority can make when they do draw downs.

My question is how draw downs from core government will be made to the Authority. That is the only explanation I require because under the new system and any system there would be draw downs based on the schedule. Certainly, if all the money is drawn down at the same time, then the Authority would have means of short-term investment over the year, to invest albeit small amounts that they will be receiving but they would still receive revenue through that source. However, if it was the position where it was going to be drawn down based on the expense on a monthly basis, I just wanted to know how that was being proposed, under the new provisions for the Authority.

The other section I intended to bring to the attention of the Minister is section 19 (2) and (3) but I briefly discussed it with the draft lady and she agrees with me that (3) should read regulations made under subsection (2) as opposed to (1). I think that was just a typing error.

I support the creation of the National Roads Authority and all the reasons that I laid out at the beginning. The Opposition supports it and contrary to how the Leader of Government Business will say that the Opposition opposes for opposition's sake, this is again a shining example of the Opposition supporting what we believe is in the best interests of this country; sometimes conditionally and sometimes unconditionally. Nevertheless, with proposals to ensure that it is done in the best interest and with as few problems—

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I ask you again to please keep the talking down. It is disrespectful to the person speaking and it carries through this small area. Please keep your discussions to the minimum.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: In conclusion I would like to say that I wish the Authority well and I look forward to the future in this country with a Roads Authority because there is much to be done with regard to provisions for transportation in this country now and particularly for the future. More and more disposable income will be available for individuals to purchase transportation as we move into the future. If we do not have a sufficient roads infrastructure then it would be useless.

Today, we see Public Works Department desperately trying to cram what should be a much larger reserve into 50 feet of road reserve; I am talking about Spotts where they are making provisions for the access to the new Prospect School. If we had bought some property and made provisions for infrastructure we would not be cramming it into the small reserve that we have now, which is in most instances 50 feet. We must applaud past Legislators such as Mr. Craddock Ebanks, Mr. Warren Connolly and those persons who made those provisions. However, since then, the amount of prosperity that this country can boast of is very little, because very little has been done in the form of making provisions for road infrastructure in our country. I mentioned the massive ground transportation plan as well. We are now trying to purchase property for the Esterley Tibbetts Highway, which is costing us much more than I am sure it would have 15 years ago. I believe that the establishment of the Roads Authority will make the necessary provisions for the future. If provisions had been made years ago expenditures that we are now experiencing would not be of today's astronomical costs.

I will ask that the Minister reply to the things that I have brought to his attention, and in particular, I trust that he will reply to the lighting of streets that I mentioned. I look forward to this necessary Authority, Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I congratulate the Minister on bringing this Bill to the Honourable House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition, and First Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As my colleague, the Elected Member for East End has stated the Opposition supports the Bill in principle. However, I will explain that there are some issues we thought needed to be aired and perhaps will give a better perspective and maybe at the end of the day the finished product moving from a bill to a law might be what would be considered to be a better law. I will deal with some of the other issues that my colleague has not dealt with.

When I was reading the Bill — Part II, subsection (3) — I kept wondering about the Authority being able to sue and be sued in its corporate name and I wondered about individual directors of the Authority being indemnified, but as I read further I saw in sections 32 and 33 this is taken care of. I make mention of that because it is always important that directors of these statutory boards not be personally exposed to any legal proceedings. I am glad to know that it taken into consideration in the Bill.

Under section 5(2)(g) — I am at a disadvantage but I will only speak with the knowledge that I have — it reads: "The Authority shall ... (g) subject to any Law for the time being in force, tender, let and administer contracts for public road improvement and rehabilitation projects and for pub- lic road maintenance activities for which contracting is considered by the Authority to be cost effective or otherwise advantageous;”

We need to refer to some other pieces of legislation when we look at this subsection because there has always been some difficulty with some of us due to the fact that core government has one specific set of tendering procedures which is followed by the various departments, ministries and some of the government owned companies.

Statutory authorities unlike that, basically and literally follow their procedures via board decision. The Water Authority will deal with the process in one manner; the Port Authority in another; perhaps the Civil Aviation Authority dealing with another methodology and now this piece of legislation is saying that the National Roads Authority, subject to any Law for the time being in force shall tender, let and administer contracts for public road improvement, rehabilitation and maintenance activities in a manner that they deem fit, as described in the proposed legislation to be cost effective and advantageous.

I think this is a very important point because we have moved to the accrual system. The financial activities of these Authorities are going to be reported under the umbrella of the Budget process, which will be delivered whether it is in a quarterly report or the Annual Plan and Estimates, or the Annual Budget Statements, the Ownership Agreements or whatever. When it comes to reporting the financial activities of the Government and proposed outputs being purchased, most importantly, the financial position of the Government at the end of the day, the National Roads Authority is not going to be an exception when it comes to borrowings, contingent liabilities, et cetera. Everyone will be audited working and reporting under the same accrual system. However, we have a tendering process that is all over the place and there is no ability to refer one to another because the tendering system is consistent and I have a problem with that.

If the method proposed in this piece of legislation is the preferred method then let everyone do that. If it is not the preferred method and there is another method that is a preferred method then let everybody do that. The Financial Regulations which are an accompaniment to the Public Management and Finance Law are a new set of regulations that are to be gazetted. Seemingly they are in the process so I do not have access to that bit of regulations at this time, but it is a very important ingredient to my line of argument.

If memory serves me right—I have to go on memory now because as hard as I tried during the lunch break to get a copy of it, I could not. There are several sections in the new Finance Regulations which refer to core government and the way the tendering process operates but in the Finance Regulations there is no reference to statutory authorities falling under the same umbrella.

While the statutory authorities are coming in line with the system when it comes to the tendering process they are still left with their own ability to decide as they see fit. It is important if we are involving ourselves in a new system that we have all claimed ownership to that and the system is uniformed throughout; that is my point.

I do not know which other piece of legislation could address this matter. I think there is another piece of legislation pending, I am not sure the name of it, and I think it is some type of omnibus legislation for the statutory authorities but I do not know what the name of it is. Now I do not know whether that is going to address the tendering process but I would find it odd for that piece of legislation to deal with the tendering process because that piece of legislation is only to do with the statutory authorities. My point is not for the statutory authorities to have their own process and for core government to have their own process. I am saying that I hold firm to the belief that if we are all now operating under one operating system then the tendering process should be consistent throughout.

If I am correct, and I believe I am correct because I do not think that they can pull it from being printed; if my memory serves me right and if I am correct, then the Financial Regulations which are being printed will not address this issue and it will still be left that the authorities (in layman's terms) do their own thing. I do not believe that should be the case. While we support the concept of a National Roads Authority coming into being, I have made the point before and I find it impossible to not make the point again because we are only continuing in the same vein.

When we had the Civil Aviation Authority being separated to the new Civil Aviation Authority dealing with the regulatory side of things and the Airports Authority being formed to deal with operational side of things, I made the same point.

Some of the authorities will, out of the abundance of caution, take it on their own, although they are not obligated to do so, to use the tendering process that core government uses now; that is fine, but they do it because they so desire not because they are bound by legislation.

I am saying core government's established legal policy of tendering should follow through with the statutory authorities. That is my main point. I am not arguing today that that tendering process is perfect either, if we want to examine the process to see if it needs to be fine tuned, whether we want to give more latitude or whether we want to make it more stringent, regardless; all I am saying is that we must have one process. I seriously ask the Minister to take on board this point so that the matter will be addressed.

Unfortunately at this point in time it is not limited to this Bill but certainly this Bill is included in that process and I think that it is absolutely important that the matter be addressed. It extends itself further to the Minister because it also has direct implications with the Department of Finance and Economics, in that the Public Management and Finance Law is operated through that portfolio. The Financial Regulations are an attachment to that piece of legislation and as far as I can see that is where the matter should be addressed.

As I said, if memory serves me right, what is in the Finance Regulations does not include this and the matter has to be addressed.

In section 5(2)(k) I also notice that the Authority shall: “(k) establish and operate facilities for the testing of materials in connection with the construction and the maintenance of public roads;”

Again this is a very important aspect of the National Roads Authority, its autonomy and its independence. I have known occasions when first of all the Public Works Department, because there was no National Roads Authority at the time, had to be sending test samples overseas to get results. It takes days to courier it, get the results, get it back and fourth. In the main time you have supplier arguing about the quality of the aggregate and one supplier is saying the other supplier aggregate is inferior because their tests show so. You can imagine the chaos that creates and people think when orders are given to one set of suppliers it is because there is a special arrangement, and all kinds of things go on in the minds of people.

If they have this ability it takes away all of that and it can be done in-house and it removes all doubt from the process with regard to the quality of the product that is being supplied. So, that is very important.

Section 5(2)(n) speaks to the fact that the Authority shall: “(n) acquire, hire and improve property required for the exercise and performance of the responsibilities, powers, duties and functions of the Authority and to dispose of such property, provided that the Authority may only acquire or dispose of immovable property with the consent of the Minister and subject to such conditions as the Minister may determine;”

Regardless of which interpretation you wish to take from this, clearly it is saying that the Authority may only acquire or dispose of immovable property, such as land with the consent of the Minister. So, the Minister has to give the Authority permission to acquire or dispose and subject to such decisions that the Minister may determine. It says nothing more.

So, what it says is the Minister can sit down and to the best of his or her ability decide what conditions to attach to the sale or purchase of this immovable property. The way it is worded contravenes other existing legislation such as the Governor Vesting of Lands Law (1998 Revision). When we look at section 9 of that Law which is the authority of the Governor to sell land, it reads: “The Governor in Council [which would now mean the Governor in Cabinet] may sell, convey, grant or devise any of the lands, tenements or hereditaments respectively vested in the Governor under this Law and execute all such deeds and assurances as may be necessary fully and effectually so to do.”

It is not simply a contravention but a contradiction because when the Authority is formed and when the Law comes into force the Government is going to vest in the Authority the immovable properties such as roads, etcetera. The Authority will, while being a government owned entity, these roads and immovable properties will be vested with the Authority.

The Law is saying that it is only the Minister who they will have to get permission from to either buy or sell. It goes on to say that if Government does not want to buy then they can get permission to dispose of it to a public entity. When we read the Governor vesting of Lands Law, we speak to the Governor in Cabinet having the ability to dispose of such land for the properties that are vested in the Crown.

If the land is vested in the National Roads Authority then albeit it is a Crown owned entity but it is not vested in the Crown otherwise, the Crown would not vest it in the Authority as it is so what we see, in that this piece of legislation is saying to let the Minister decide what to do with it but every other bit of Crowned owned property is decided on by the Governor in Cabinet. So, it is not a balance there at all and that needs to be corrected. Whatever wording is needed to bring everything in line it absolutely has to be corrected because I dare say that what we also have to recognise is that in matters such as these, all of these Authorities will have immovable property being vested with it. So, these pieces of legislation have to be in line and you cannot tell me that if the Airports Authority owns the Owen Roberts Airport and if the Minister tells them to sell it, they can sell it! It cannot work like that!

I know that it goes on about section 9 of the Constitution but how it is read here it still does not make the legislation clean to the point that it is acceptable. In instances (as you and I know) when we refer to any section in a piece of legislation you are not going to read an entire Law to see if there is any other reference to it. If you pull up section 5(n) that clearly tells you the Minister decides whether to sell the land or not. I am saying by inference or however else—let me back track a second, when I refer to section 9 of the Constitution—if we check that section, it will deal with the subject the Minister has. To be specific section 9(2) of the Constitution reads: “(2) It shall be the duty of a member so charged with responsibility to act in the exercise thereof in accordance with the policies of the Government as decided in the Council and in accordance with the principles of collective responsibility, and to support in the Legislative Assembly any measure decided upon in the Council, unless he has received the prior permission of the Governor to act otherwise or not to support such a measure.”

Referring to section 9 of the Constitution only strengthens my argument. It speaks to policy, collective responsibility but section 5(n) says that the Minister has to give permission to sell or not to sell. Even if we speak to section 9 of the Constitution and we go back to the Governor vesting of lands all it does is confuse any lawyer looking at the three sections. We know that the Constitution is the overriding piece of legislation but the fact that this is in Bill form, my point is— because I want to move on and I want to make sure that I have made the point, that there must be a better way to word that subsection to make it absolutely clear so that there is no confusion as to where the real authority lies.

The Authority will deal with the Minister but there must be some reference as to what the Minister has to do with regards to the purchase or sale of lands. That is all I am saying and it should not be difficult to be dealt with.

Section 5(3) speaks to: “Without prejudice to subsections (1) and (2), the Authority has the power to carry on any activity which appears to it to be requisite, advantageous or convenient for or in connection with the performance of its responsibilities, functions or duties.”

In reading through the legislation I do not see anywhere specifically where there is any reference to what many of us have complained about for many years, although they have a committee formed with representatives from the various utilities. There is a constant barrage of complaints that this road was fixed last week and the Water Authority came in the following week and ripped it up to lay water pipes.

My point is that when we look at this subsection, I would very seriously like to see in legislation because for as long as I remember we talked about it, and I have heard about this committee and the amount of meetings they have and the same thing happens over and over. So there has to be something wrong, but in planning roads, whether it is maintenance, new roads or resurfacing, we have to be able to liaise with the other public services for two reasons. Firstly, if Public Works is going to purchase the construction of a road and there are certain essential utilities which also have to be part and parcel of the arrangement, then you must be able to make the arrangement that you make the road, go back to dig it up and then have someone coming afterwards to do a little job on it and then everyone complains about it saying that the money is wasted. You must be able to synchronise the efforts for what is right and for it to be cost effective.

I am also a very strong proponent that in this legislation the National Roads Authority must be in charge of roads all the way and they can call it draconian in this respect if they wish, but my experience have taught me that it is the only way, in my view, that it can work. The other public services; the Water Authority; Cayman Water Company; Cable and Wireless; Caribbean Utilities or any other utility company, all do not use the same entities. Some of them use their own people to fix the roads and they have some a little make shift operation going. So, I believe that it should be in the legislation that the National Roads Authority should be in charge of roads all the way.

If any entity needs to disrupt the roads they must get the permission, have it synchronised so that there will not be any wasted or duplicated efforts and the National Roads Authority must be the only entity to be in charge of putting the roads back in the conditions that it should be. That is the same reason why we have ten different levels and qualities of roads today. If you look where one utility has been and somebody else come and do a job, you will see the road is either six inches higher or six inches lower, and if you roll over it one time there are fifteen holes in it. The National Roads Authority must also have by legislation the right to make the assessment as to what it is going to cost to return the roads to its proper condition. This is not about only getting one person to do whatever has to be done to the roads, but it is about maintaining uniformity in the quality of the roads and it is also about cost efficiency. When that is the case, and you have a national roads authority board properly functioning, it is only then, in my view that you will get things happening the way it should be happening.

Let us say for instance that the Water Authority is going in Poindexter Road in front of Mariners Cove where the Prospect Primary School is being built, with the now existing Public Works Department by the time that is done they might have the National Roads Authority. The Water Authority is going in there to lay pipes to make the connections right and the National Roads Authority is scheduling works to be done, bear in mind common sense can prevail sometimes, but if the efforts are not synchronised and if the left hand does not know what the right hand is doing (and someone might even know and do not care) you could have whoever the Roads Authority purchases going in there and making the finest surface in the world and one week later compulsorily, because they have to put the water lines in, they go in and dig up four or five feet on the edge of the surface and the entire road has to be redone. Who is paying for that? I think the point is made and if it is not put in the legislation there will be no guarantee that it will not continue the same way as it has been. There is absolutely no reason in my book why it cannot be in the legislation, not only should it be in the legislation but it makes all of the sense in the world for it to be in the legislation. It does not restrict anyone from doing any job. All it says is that there is one entity in charge of making sure the end result is the right thing and I think it should be done.

As we move on to section 7(4) perhaps this is only a matter of clarity but I believe it is one that I need to address. It reads: “(4) The Board shall consist of not less than twelve nor more than thirteen directors of whom – ...”

I specifically wish to refer to subsections (c) and (d): “(c) one, who has demonstrated the satisfaction of the Governor substantial knowledge of and experience in planning, design and develop- ment of public roads, shall be the Managing Director;”

Subsection (d) says the same thing but that is referring to the Managing Deputy Director. So, both of these posts, which are the Managing Director and the Deputy Managing Director of the National Roads Authority, must be individuals who have demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Governor, substantial knowledge of and experience in planning, design and development of public roads. Both of these shall be sitting Directors of the National Roads Authority.

If we take a jump to the National Roads Authority Board, section 11 subsections (1) and (2) speaking to the personnel of the Authority subsection (1) says: “11. (1) The person appointed to be a director under section 7(4)(c) shall be appointed by the Board to be the Managing Director of the Authority, at such remuneration and on such terms and conditions as the Board may think fit.”

Subsection (2) speaks to the Deputy Managing Director and says the same thing. It says that the Board appoints them but the one before says it has to be to the satisfaction of the Governor, so I want to know who is who in the picture.

I am not going to belabour that point because we all know how it works at present and we know that there is a new Public Service Law coming but it needs to be very clear in the Law as to who makes the appointment. If you simply look at it and these two individuals have to satisfy certain criteria set out by His Excellency the Governor, then what it is really telling me is that the National Roads Authority Board makes the appointment after the Governor tells them who to hire. If that is the case, then just tell me that, do not give me two different sections and make my head twisted up about the whole thing.

We need for it to be very clear as to where the Authority lie with hiring. Obviously who hires should be able to fire. If the Board is going to do the hiring, what are the terms and conditions of employment of a former civil servant who was under General Orders, who knew what his security of tenure was, etcetera? Now what we are saying is that if you have a falling out with the Chairman of the Board and the Chairman tells the Board ‘me and this person cannot make it, you have to decide between me as the chairman or him’. What will happen then? It has to be very clear.

Without going into all the details, the Bill goes further on to speak to pension, health insurance and terms of employment, etcetera. It also makes a good attempt at ensuring whatever potential benefits were enjoyed by the individuals prior to the formation of the National Roads Authority that those same benefits will continue. I do believe that matter needs to be made clear.

There is another point I would like to make here with section 8. I want to throw this one out because at one point I was convinced when I looked at it that it should be different. This is to do with meetings of the Board.

Section 8 (1) speaks to the fact that: “The chairman if the Board shall summon regular meetings of the Board as often as may be required but not less than ten times in any one year.”

Subsection (2) speaks to how and where the meetings shall be held and at such times as the chairman shall determine. “Meetings of the Board shall be held as such places on such days, and at such times as the chairman shall determine, and due to notice of such place, date and time shall be given to each director in writing at least seven days before the time at which the meeting is to be held.”

This is quite fair. So, in other words the chairman can call a meeting whenever he wishes but seven days notice has to be given. Subsection (3) says: “The chairman may at any time call a special meeting of the Board within two days of receipt of request for that purpose addressed to him in writing and signed by any three directors.”

So, if the chairman calls a meeting on his own volition it is seven days notice. He can call a meeting within two days after receiving notice addressed to him in writing and signed by any three directors. My question is, if something occurs that is absolutely important and vital, the chairman has knowledge of it, where is the chairman’s prerogative to call a special meeting without giving the notices that are spelt out in the two subsections which I speak to?

I am saying that a chairman of any board must have the ability to call an extraordinary meeting of that board and it must not be without giving him the latitude to call it whenever it is necessary.

We have two methods, one is seven days and the other way is he can call it two days after being given notice and signed by three directors so if he wants to hold a meeting he has to get three directors to give him notice, then two days after that he can call it. I am saying that he must have more than that. It is easy for something to occur that you may need to call a meeting today; that is what I am saying; that is my point and this does not allow for that. Even if it is the chairman who wants to hold the meeting and he contacts three members of his board and ask them to come sign it for him so that he can have the meeting earlier than the seven days, he still has to wait two days; I do not read it any other way. If the object of the legislation is to ensure that the chairman cannot have it earlier than two days then leave it as it is. I do not think that is very sensible.

Subsection (2) reads: “Meetings of the Board shall be held as such places on such days, and at such times as the chairman shall determine. . . ”

If it stops there it would be fine but it speaks to notice and under normal circumstances notice must be given. I am saying there must be some latitude if the chairman needs to hold a board meeting today he must be able to do so. This is telling him he cannot. It only gives two conditions under which a meeting can be held. It cannot be anything about silent legislation; it specifically determines the two triggers that call for the meeting.

We cannot say that because something is not said about something else that the chairman can do it. 'No', this is clearly spelt out to me and I believe that the chairman must have more latitude than that.

Section 13 reads: "The Managing Director shall perform his responsibilities, functions and duties in accordance with an operational plan approved by the Board, which shall -

- (a) specify a three year public roads development programme, including-
  - (i) construction programmes for new public roads; and
  - (ii) maintenance, rehabilitation and upgrading programmes in respect of existing public roads;
- (b) specify a procurement plan relating to such development programme; and
- (c) specify a human resources plan for the Authority with a defined organisational structure for the purpose of giving effect to paragraph (a)."

We just completed the Budget process a few days ago and under the Purchase Agreements for statutory authorities for the outputs to be delivered in 2004/2005 by the proposed National Roads Authority, under description the very first sentence says and I quote: "Provision of medium to long-term plans for road development in keeping with Government's long-term plans as published in the National Roads Plan and the implementation of identified new road projects which involves the provision of the following services."

We are making the point to show the importance of a national roads plan. While we know you were not here in Finance Committee, being the Speaker, we were questioning the chief engineer of Public Works about the National Roads Plan and he gave specific timelines as to the plan; when the first one would be completed; then he spoke to specific timelines for every subsequent year for a new one to be. So, it is something that is live; the National Roads Plan is something that is evolving and it will be updated with specific timelines for it to be current all the time. That is something good and in line with the master ground transportation plan, not the same thing but it speaks to looking into the future procuring property, gazetting corridors and those types of things.

However, we have a bill that is proposed to become a law which is creating a National Roads Authority. Section 13 speaks to a three year public roads development programme including the construction programmes for new public roads, maintenance and rehabilitation. Is this the National Roads Plan that we are referring to? If it is then let us say the National Roads Plan. I do not know if it is, so I have to pose it in this fashion. If it is the National Roads Plan then let it be said that it is the National Roads Plan because that is the Plan that we are going to follow based on the outputs we have and continue to deliver every year. If it is not the National Roads Plan then how can we be referring to the National Roads Plan in all of the outputs to be delivered and in the legislation where there is no reference? The legislation is telling me that we are going down a different road from the outputs to be delivered if that is the case. I cannot say which one is the case because the way the legislation is crafted it is vague. From section 13 we really need to know what reference there is to the National Roads Plan in that section and how it is done.

If we go on to section 14: "14. (1) The Board may employ, at such remuneration and on such terms and conditions as may be approved from time to time by the Board, such employees and engage under contract for services such professional, technical or other assistance, as it considers necessary ..."

It goes on to talk about pension arrangements and medical benefits. My colleague, the Elected Member for East End questioned persons under contracts and in discussions with the Minister I am sure he will be able to explain that one away but the point that I wish to come to is section 16 (2)(a): "(a) where an employee transferred in accordance with section 15(1) ..."

Section 15(1) simply refers to anyone who accepts an offer by the National Roads Authority: "... shall become an employee of the Authority on the same terms and conditions as those applicable to him on the day immediately proceeding such date except -"

- (a) to the extent other terms and conditions are agreed between such employee and the Authority; and
- (b) that disciplinary matters shall be dealt with in accordance with the Labour Law (2001 Revision) and the disciplinary rules and procedures of the Authority and not under General Orders [which is fine. However 16(2):]
- (a) where an employee transferred in accordance with section 15(1)" is entitled to a contracted officer's supplement the Authority shall not subscribe to the Public Service Pension Fund ..."

That one simply refers to if you are a contracted officer and you still have to get contracted officer's supplement for a period of time then during that time you are not going to get the six plus six in addition to that. I am pretty certain that is what that means.

In (b) when we look to:

- (b) with respect to employees employed by the Authority after the date of the commencement of this section and

- who have not been transferred in accordance with this Law, the Authority has the option of subscribing to the Public Service Pensions Fund or of creating and maintaining or subscribing to a fund in accordance with the provisions of the National Pensions Law (2000 Revision); and
- (c) the Authority shall not subscribe to any fund in respect of those employees who are employed under contracts which are six months or less in duration.”

The point that I want to speak to—

Moment of Interruption – 4.30 pm

The Speaker: Honourable Member if this is convenient, we have reached the hour of 4.30 pm and I have been informed by the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business that he would like to have the Second Reading of this Bill completed before we leave this afternoon. I understand that the Second Elected Member for West Bay has a very short contribution he wishes to make.

So I call on the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to allow the proceedings to continue.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, in accordance with Standing Order 10(2) I beg to move the suspension of same so that business of the House can continue beyond 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow proceedings of the House to continue so as to allow for the completion of the Second Reading of this Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town continuing.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you Mr. Speaker. I will not be much longer.

Earlier I was referring to subsection (b) where it speaks to: “the Authority has the option of subscribing to the Public Service Pensions Fund or of creating and maintaining or subscribing to a fund in accordance with the provisions of the National Pensions Law (2000 Revision);”

This is in respect of employees who are hired after the National Roads Authority is formed and who were not previously public servants.

I know there is a bit of a risk with the theory that I want to propose but I think it is something well worth our consideration. Prior to the National Pensions Law coming into effect public servants hired prior to 1999 were and still remain under what we call a defined benefit scheme because the fund is so under funded, that is one of the reasons, it was totally unsustainable for Government to continue to hire employees and to have them under that defined benefits scheme. From that date all personnel who were hired, were hired under what you would call a defined contribution scheme.

If we are telling an Authority that you have one option or the other; you can come in to this defined contribution scheme or you can go out and decide on your own pension scheme, we are not being consistent. My argument is not to tell anybody which one of these is right at this point. To me that is another line of argument but we are being inconsistent if we want to look at the autonomy and the independence of these authorities. We still need to recognise that they are government owned entities. I want to subscribe that we are going to have, in the very near future, every employee under the same conditions, generally speaking, because you are not going to simply forever be able to sustain a condition where you have one entity operating with certain conditions and another with different conditions, and benefits to employees having a variation. In principle it is not fair and while these employees may not be core government employees and the roads section of the Public Works Department may be hived off to form an Authority and there is every good reason to do so, I do not want to contradict the principles that we are trying to apply here but surely there has to be some base where it is level for all of those employees because it makes no sense to have employees say, ‘I wish I could get over in this section because the benefits are different.’ That makes no sense!

I am not talking about salary levels; I am not speaking about how much who gets; I am speaking about the benefits which are basically two benefits. The terms and conditions of employment, as I would think, the new Employment Law has mandated that public servants come under the Law, so the Law allows that when you apply to be employed by the Government just about anywhere it tells you after so many years the amount of weeks and sick days you get off, etcetera. The only thing that it cannot tell you is how much you will be earning five years from now. Nobody can tell you that; so that is fine.

It is almost a pity that we have to use the National Roads Authority to deal with these issues but it is better for us to deal with these up front because they are going to relate to all of the Authorities.

A question was raised in Finance Committee when we spoke to not only the past service liability but the actuarial review when it comes to the Public Service Pension Fund and the level of under funding that exists. The Honourable Third Official Member spoke to the fact that it has to be determined what contribution has to come from the Authorities with regard to the under funding. This is telling me that if the Authority wishes to it can go to the silver, blue or white that fund and say, I want you to fix me up.

I am saying that if we have, after a certain date in 1999, all employees being employed under the defined contribution scheme, then just as this says, if you were employed by Government prior to the formation of the National Roads Authority, whatever those terms were then those will continue, which is right. This means that if a person was employed at Public Works prior to 1999 under the defined benefits scheme when that person moves over to the National Roads Authority that will continue. That is what this is telling me. I am saying that anyone who was hired from 1999 in other government departments are under a defined contribution scheme. This is telling me that any new person who is hired with the National Roads Authority, the Board has the option of subscribing to the Public Service Pension Fund, which to me, would mean the defined Contribution Scheme in the Public Service Pension Fund or of creating, maintaining or subscribing to a fund in accordance with the provisions of the National Pensions Law. I am saying that if you are saying, an authority must have that option then you must tell the entire government service that you have the option, and if that is not what you want to do then everybody must do the same thing. You cannot have one man doing one thing and another man doing another thing.

Where do we have a level playing field for the employees of the Civil Aviation Authority, the Port Authority, Water Authority, and National Roads Authority or of the Health Services Authority when it comes to pensions and health? I am not speaking to salaries and personal emoluments; I am speaking to pension benefits and health benefits. We now come to the health benefits and it says: "17. The Health Insurance Law (2003 Revision) shall apply to the Authority except that -

- (a) the Authority may elect to provide free or subsidised medical benefits in lieu of, or in addition to, insurance coverage under that Law; and
- (b) any person described in section 15(1) shall, unless otherwise notified by the Authority, be entitled to receive from the Authority the medical benefits provided to him on the day preceding his transfer to the Authority."

This one is even more glaring. What this is saying is that anyone receiving the normal health benefits of a civil servant who was hired by the civil service prior to the formation of the National Roads Authority, when that person moves over to the National Roads Authority they will receive the same benefits.

Anyone else who comes on board the Authority may elect to provide free, which is what the other people are getting, or subsidised medical benefits in lieu of, or in addition to, insurance coverage under that Law. What do they mean by 'in lieu of or in addition to?' It means the same way I spoke to a new person being employed and the difference in the Law from the defined contribution scheme, which everybody else who is newly hired would get. It does not matter whether you are hired new now or whether you are an old time employee, civil servants have a certain type of health benefit, whether it is sustainable or not is another matter and whether this is an attempt to recognise it is not sustainable, is another matter. When you change one rule you change all of the rules. You cannot do this with the National Roads Authority with new employees. I should not say that you cannot do it, I should say that you should not do it because you cannot have those employees employed at the National Roads Authority being under different conditions from what everyone else is getting, that is all that I am saying.

Mr. Speaker, I hear the Second Official Member differentiating between civil servants and public servants and I know he is a legal luminary but I am going to pretend that I did not hear him say that in this regard, because in this regard there is absolutely none when it comes to those two benefits that it should be. There should be none because one is an authority and one is what you call core government employee civil servant, a public servant under the new umbrella that we are dealing with. The whole intention is to create a level playing field when it comes to the accrual system, Financial Management Initiative (FMI) or the new public service law. It is to have everyone be the same, do not tell me about civil servant and public servant.

I am going to repeat one more time that this section is saying to me that somebody hired by the National Roads Authority is going to receive a different benefit when it comes to their pension and health benefits than an individual hired under any other area of Government. You see, Mr. Speaker, I know what kind of individuals this can talk about such as the varying types of contracts when they hire people who work on the roads, etcetera. However, I believe, and this is not politics, if you are working on the road, you are working. If you are cleaning the bathroom, you are working, and if you have pen in hand behind a desk, you are working. They are different kinds of work but you are working and you should not make a differentiation in those areas because these individuals may not be long-term employees. That is where the problem is.

There is a stipulation in the Bill that if the person is hired under six months there is no dealings with pension because that is considered short-term, so I am not talking about those people because that is already dealt with in the Bill. For example: If you have a fairly volatile rotation of young professionals in what is now called the Public Works Department and some of them stay there for about three or four years after they gain their qualifications, when the private sector that is always scouting for these bright, young, new talents offers them substantial more, they will go; that is the way life is and that is not going to stop.

However, insomuch as Public Works Department now suffers from that, you are telling me that on top of all of that, when you hive off the roads section and you create a National Roads Authority you are going to make matters worse because even the pension and health benefits that everybody else gets, they are going to get less too. I know that regardless of what anybody might say or whether they wish to address it or not the point is valid! This needs to be addressed because it certainly creates an inequity for new people coming on board. If somebody going on to tertiary level education acquires an undergraduate degree and is not in the Portfolio of Finance or is not in the Legal Department, but is into architecture and civil engineering, does that in itself, tells them that they must get less? No, that is not the intention; that is not what I am trying to say – I am trying to show how glaring the inequity is.

Section 20 is a very simple point to make and it says: “20. The Road Fund shall be used by the Governor to -

- (a) acquire or construct public roads and other related executive assets;
- (b) purchase from the Authority outputs related to the maintenance of public roads or the exercise of any other function of the Authority; and
- (c) make equity investments into the Authority”

There maybe something that I missed and I am not 100 per cent sure but if (b) speaks to purchasing from the National Roads Authority outputs related to the maintenance of public roads or the exercise of any other function of the Authority then why would (b) speak to the Governor in Cabinet acquiring or constructing public roads? As far as I understand it, acquiring and constructing the public roads is going to be done by the National Roads Authority, so why in (b) are we purchasing from the Authority the outputs relating to so and so and in (a) we are not purchasing the outputs, we are simply saying that the roads fund shall be used by the Governor in Cabinet to acquire/purchase public roads? Perhaps it is just a way of expression but I find it a bit inconsistent to speak to (a) in one manner and then speak to (b) in another.

Section 22 was dealt with at length by my colleague the Elected Member for East End but there is just one point that I wish to make in section 22 which is to deal with the levying and collection of user charges. Section 22(1) says: “Subject to the ap- proval of the Governor, the Authority may levy and collect a road user charge on users of public roads provided that the amount of the road user charge -

- (a) is directly related to the amount of usage of roads by the users concerned;
- (b) is determined in a transparent and equitable manner; and (c) is regularly reviewed for accuracy and equity .”

Subsection (2) reads: “Before levying a road user charge in accordance with subsection (1), the Authority shall publish in the Gazette a notice specifying -

- (a) the amount of the proposed road user charge;
- (b) the classes of persons or vehicles to be charged with reference to the amount of the proposed road user charge;
- (c) the classes of persons or vehicles, if any, to be exempted from the proposed road user charge;
- (d) the manner in which the proposed road charge is to be paid. . .”

Subsection (3) says: “ The notice referred to in subsection (2), shall be published at least three months prior to the date . . .

“(4) The Authority may authorise any other person to collect a road user charge on its behalf in the manner which the Authority deems fit.”

I do not want to sound contradictory in my arguments so I am going to be very careful. As I understand this the Authority in collaboration with the Governor in Cabinet, whether the idea of the charge is coming from the Governor in Cabinet or whether it is coming from the National Roads Authority itself, the process is that once the Governor in Cabinet approves it the Authority may levy the road user charge. I question when it comes to the other authorities or when it comes to any other fees charged because as far as I knew there are two methods which bring about fees and that is via this Honourable Legislative Assembly or via regulations.

In most instances there is a piece of legislation just like this, which authorises the Governor in Cabinet to create regulations and which may cause fees to be charged from various areas, whether it is infrastructure, planning, landing fees or whatever fees. What I do not know from what is proposed in section 22 is if there will be a set of regulations which determines this or whether it is going to be a simple operation that if a paper is taken to Cabinet, Cabinet approves it, the Authority is advised of it, then the Authority can go about and physically begin to levy the fees. I do not know whether that is what is intended or whether there are regulations which will determine this. For a matter such as this, my question is: is this a situation which needs to be determined by the Legislative process or is this a situation which needs to be left to the Executive Authority of Cabinet? If that is what is intended all I wish to be sure of is whether these fees are going to be decided on by way of regulation or does Cabinet simply make a policy decision and hands it down to the Authority for them to act.

I wonder how the Governor in Cabinet is going to deal with Cayman Brac and Little Cayman when it comes to road user charges and levying fees. Whether there will be one consideration for all, special consideration or no consideration or whether we are only talking about Grand Cayman. I do not know, it is just a thought but I wondered what they are going to say or think about it.

In section 28 (1) which refers to the annual payment to core government, I am extremely happy to see that the Government has confidence that the National Roads Authority will be able to make contributions to core government. All I can say is that it is going to be a long, long time before this becomes a reality. However, the real point I wish to make about section 28 is that it is good to see we are finally coming on stream with specific methodology. I have noticed that it was in the Airports Authority Bill and the new Civil Aviation Authority Bill, after we used to have some real weird situations where when central government needed money it would go and bleed the Authorities for money which they did not have available to them. I even know of an instance when they had an upcoming loan payment to make, but just to create a certain balance by the 31st of a certain month the money was taken from them with the promise that when the payment needed to be made they would make it next year because life would be different. So, I am very happy to see that there is direct methodology being employed and it is consistent when it comes to the annual payment by the Authority to core government and how it is calculated.

I believe that this, while it does not speak to percentages or anything, I believe that the methodology employed here is fair; it allows for the consultation process but it is the same methodology for all of the Authorities. It is not the case yet but it seems as we are on the way.

Section 34(1) of this Bill speaks about savings and transitional provisions, subsection (1) reads: “34. (1) Subject to the provisions of this section, the Governor shall on such conditions as the Governor may determine, transfer to the Authority such liabilities, rights or obligations, which relate to or are connected with the management of roads by the Roads Section of the Public Works Department. . .”

My understanding is such liabilities, rights or obligations, which relate to or are connected with the management of roads by the Roads Section of the Public Works Department, on the date immediately, the roads section of the Public Works Department only acts on Government policy. It is a vehicle for implementation of Government policy. So, any liability that is there at the time of going in to a national roads authority is as a result of Government policy and if you are going to start the National Roads Authority on its right footing we should not be transferring any liabilities to it on the day of its commencement, in my view. I would like for the Minister to explain what liabilities we are talking about and what we can expect.

By now we know, and this goes back two Budgets about road works and how it had to be done under advance because of the public/private partnership that was going to occur. We are not into the new year and we see where certain amounts of the monies have been spent before the year starts on 1 July, so I do not know what the relationship is between what this bill is seeking therefore, I would like if the Minister could have dialogue with the Honourable Third Official Member to get clarification so that we can know exactly what we are looking at and the amount we are talking about, that way we can know before we vote for this Bill because we have the right to know that. I do not say that with anything else but sincerity, but the least we can do is have knowledge of all of this. I do not want any generic stuff in front of me, then afterwards you find out all kinds of horrific stories; I want to know exactly what we are talking about. The Minister might not be aware of what we are talking about hence the suggestion because I would very much like for him to address it.

Section 34 (5) says– “(5) On the date of commencement of section 18,” let us make sure that we know what section 18 is so that we are not lost– section 18 speaks to financial provisions and section 18(1) speaks to,

“18. (1) Subject to section 34(5), (6) and (7), the Roads Development Fund is discontinued with effect from the date of commencement of this section.

“(2) There is hereby established within the core government a fund, to be called the "Road Fund" which shall be accounted for as a discretionary reserve in the financial statements of the core government in accordance with the provisions of the Public Management and Finance Law.”

So we get to 34(5), which speaks to that date and it says: “Any amounts held in the Roads Development Fund shall be transferred to and vest in the core government without further assurance, and the core government shall have all powers necessary to take possession of, recover and deal with, those amounts.”

So, on the date of commencement of section 18 the existing Roads Development Fund will cease to exist and there shall be established a new fund called the Road Fund. We shall have a formula and from there on in it tells you how it is going to derive revenue from certain areas; this percentage of the diesel tax and this percentage of gasoline tax and infrastructure. Notice that the money that was being put aside for roads is not going to the National Roads Authority. No, we are sending them on a new venture, passing on all the liabilities we wish to pass on to them and the little bit of money that we should make them start of with we are going to say, 'no that stays too, you go about your business, you are not getting this.' They make sure that there is not even a one cent difference because the very next section says, “(6) Where, immediately before the date of commencement of section 18, any amount is owing to the Roads Development Fund, such amount shall be deemed to be owing to the core government.” So, even after we have a new Road Fund, if that amount were owing before the new Road Fund was formed, it is still going to core government. Mr. Speaker, I am corrected but because that one sounded so good I had to say that, however, let me correct it because I will have to read the rest of it. Even though that would have been a good one I must admit that someone had the good sense because as we read on we see where: “such amount shall be deemed to be owing to the core government, and when paid or collected, shall be credited to the Road Fund.”

Thank God for that little bit.

The Honourable Third Official Member is asking for me to apologise. If I was trying to mislead I would not read this section and correct it but if he think that he needs an apology I apologise quite gladly, but in doing that he might get the mind going again so I best stop there.

I am just about through. I have a slight problem with the correlation between those two events with regards to liabilities being passed on to the new National Roads Authority, and at the same time, whatever funds were in the Road Development Fund not being passed on also. If you are not doing the plus then do not do the minus; that is my view of the matter.

All in all we wish to support this Bill and the points that the Elected Member for East End and myself have basically covered on the Opposition's arguments on the Bill. I hope that the Minister will take the comments and the spirit that they have been delivered and certainly I am sure that the arguments raised will give rise to perhaps some type of tweaking or amending so that we have a better Bill, as was original proposed. I also hope that the comments will be taken on board and that the Minister will be able to explain the questions we have asked so that we are with clear minds when it comes to the vote. Again, we would like to support the Bill.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Members I propose to take a 10 minute suspension and would ask you to be back promptly after 10 minutes. Thank you.

Proceedings suspended at 5.15 pm

Proceedings resumed at 5.40 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you Mr. Speaker.

My contribution to the debate on the National Roads Authority Bill, as you indicated earlier, is going to be brief. However, I might not be as brief as I normally am because after listening to the points raised by the Leader of the Opposition there are some points, which I think, can be addressed and clarified for the benefit of the overall debate on this Bill.

First, I would like to congratulate the Minister and the Government for brining this Bill. This Bill is in line with what I like to term, thinking outside the box and trying to do things in an efficient and effective manner. It would be remiss of me though if I would go any further without congratulating you, Sir, for the work that you have done over your political career in regards to the development of roads in this country. I think anyone who is going to be honest about the situation would have to agree that in your time in the Legislative Assembly, but in particular as a Minister responsible for roads on two separate occasions, if memory serves me correctly, you did this service a great benefit and a great amount of justice in regards to the building of roads. I believe that it is important to pay tribute to people when they can hear.

In regards to the Bill before us, we see that it tries to provide a framework for the establishment of this mechanism, the National Roads Authority to build, maintain and plan the development of our road network. I am fond of saying that as a country, as we move toward our next wave of economic activity, it is crucial that we build roads in a manner that is forward looking and accept and appreciate the fact that the road network is critical to having sustainable economic development.

All of us, irrespective of what district you are from, have to deal with the congestion on the streets of the Cayman Islands. I think it is fair comment to say that not in anyone's wildest imagination would the Cayman Islands have grown at the pace and the level that it has grown over the last 15 years. It is incredible when looking at the number of cars on the roads. I do believe that in creating the National Roads Authority and in moving along with the priorities established in this year's Budget, to continue the Esterley Tibbetts Highway; and looking forward to establishing the Highway that will run from the capital George Town into Bodden Town, and further into the two other eastern districts of North Side and East End, is crucial to the way forward for us in the Cayman Islands.

The current infrastructure has served us well. We boast a country that given its population base has a per capita income and indeed an income distribution that is enviable to the rest of the world. However, we would all agree that we have outgrown the current carrying capacity on our road network.

In regard to the issue of creating an unfair advantage among persons who are moving from core government versus the persons who remain in core government, when it comes to issues like pensions and Health Insurance, I think the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has raised a valid area for concern. However, I do believe that when one looks at the issue, in particular, the issue of the past service liability and the fact that every time that you create an Authority and you take persons out of the sheer number of people who would have been contributing to the past service liability, it naturally causes concern in regards to the review to the actuary. When you do the actuarial review and look at past service liabilities, one of the components to determining the rate that people have to contribute is the number of people which equates out to their salaries and the percentage of their salaries. When you have persons who transition into statutory authorities you have to be concerned that the current percentages are in place and even the percentages that will be in place. The Honourable Third Official Member explained during Finance Committee that once the review of the contributions of all those remaining in Government is settled you have to be concerned with lots of employees who will have the possibility, not that they will necessarily accept or utilise that option, but they do have the option of going on to a pension plan under the National Pensions Law.

However, I do believe, and agree with the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, that it is an issue which needs to be looked at from the Government perspective, that is, central government and all of the authorities and companies that government owns, because all of those are simply wholly owned entities by the Cayman Islands Government. So, when there are distinctions between persons who happen to work in what could be considered as a subsidiary of government versus the person who is working for the main government itself (the parent company) one has to be careful in ensuring that you do have a policy in place that does not necessarily create an opportunity for persons to say, 'well, why is this person simply given an option that I do not have; they are working for this entity, the same entity I work for, which is wholly owned by the central government?'

However, I think, when we look a little deeper into the situation we will see that when government made the decision to cease the defined benefit pension plan and have to now look at funding the liability under that plan, at that date there were already government companies and statutory authorities established that did have this option. For example, the Turtle Farm, Cayman Airways, the Port Authority and the Water Authority was in existence and I am sure the Civil Aviation was in existence before that issue came up of having to fund the past service liability. So, we need to consider the fact that those entities were already established and you did have employees who were already employed by those entities with particular benefits accruing to them, which is the ability to choose how it is that they invest their retirement. However, I will leave this issue for the Minister to speak more in-depth on because ultimately it will be a decision that Cabinet has to look at, analyse and determine the way forward.

I do believe that there is validity in the argument of having persons who are employed by a wholly owned entity of the parent company, which is the Cayman Islands Government, and the continuation of having further authorities established. We do understand from this year's Budget that the National Roads Authority is in vision, and we are debating it now. There is going to be a Maritime Authority and Radio Cayman is seeking to become an Authority. So, we do need to look at that whole issue and possibly one of the things that may have to happen is to make the decision that once you are no longer in core government that this option be there. However, to work with that option it may necessarily need to be mandated that all of those persons would have to, on their behalf, have a contribution made toward the past service liability, irrespective of whether or not they are operating under the Government's Pension Fund or a fund established under the National Pensions Law because that is the concern.

The concern is being able to ensure that you have the numbers to be able to adequately fund the past service liability, which is a future obligation this country has to deal with and have to continue to adequately fund. It is a liability and it is a commitment to all the persons who have benefits that is going to accrue to them under the past scheme, that is, the defined benefit portion of their retirement benefits.

There are a lot of people who also argue that there are other disparities that crop up once government creates statutory authorities. How it is that those are going to be dealt with in the future is also another challenge because the Leader of the Opposition skillfully pointed out that he was talking about benefits and not salaries. Let us look at the situation in its entirety: One has to be concerned when employees who work for central government, which in this instance is the parent entity, have seemingly different and differing salary structures than that which exist between Government and those particular entities. I think that many people argue that this allows government to be able to carry out more effective important public duties, attract and maintain high quality professionals in those key areas, by being able to offer salary packages that are not so strictly confined as to the standing system that occurs within central government. There are some people who see that as a perceived benefit. I do not think, included in that group are all the employees of the parent company, central government. So, that is of real concern and it has to be of real concern to us as a Legislative Assembly. What will happen is that everyone will want every department to be statutory authorities and then the big argument will be that government itself can become one big statutory authority. Where would it end? These are, in all seriousness, serious issues that do need to be looked at.

I do believe that when we look at the real benefits of creating statutory authorities, once we do the score card, in most instances most of us would agree that the statutory authorities existing have been created and indeed this one has to be created. The National Roads Authority does create more benefits to government and by extension to the public, than it does causing issues and problems such as this one, which is persons looking at benefits and salaries and feeling as though one is penalised because one does not work for a statutory authority.

In regards to the levying and collection of user charges 22(1) says: “22. (1) Subject to the approval of the Governor, the Authority may levy and collect a road user charge on users of public roads provided that the amount of the road user charge -

- (a) is directly related to the amount of usage of roads by the users concerned;
- (b) is determined in a transparent and equitable manner; and
- (c) is regularly reviewed for accuracy and equity.”

When we look at that mechanism I have read and interpret that to mean that Cabinet is not going to be the entity that promulgates the user fee and the user fee structure. This will be an argument, I guess, for lawyers, as to precisely what is the meaning of “subject to approval” but I read that to mean that the Authority would be the entity charged for coming up with structure and the fees. They cannot simply oppose them, but would have to have the approval of the Governor in Cabinet, and that it is not Cabinet having the discretion to create it. So, I think one of the points made was as to whether or not Cabinet can approve them only or whether the legislative process should be involved. However, I think, that the Bill, as it stands addresses that adequately because it is the technical people in the Authority who are charged with this most important obligation of having to come up with the fee structure. The rationale behind it is that the Cabinet sits there to ensure that from a policy perspective it is what the Government of the day (whoever that Government is) wants to do.

I think that 22(1) adequately deals with that point. I will admit that I have never been trained in Law or interpreting Law and whether or not it needs to be clarified, I am not one hundred per cent sure, but I do believe that is the intent and it is how I read it.

The Leader of the Opposition did raise an issue in regards to whether or not these fees would extend to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I have not seen anywhere in this Bill that says whether or not we are looking at the Cayman Islands or Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac or Little Cayman. I always saw the utilisation of road levies as being roads specific and so you look at a particular piece of road that is being built, irrespective of where it is and you then determine whether or not that road needs to be funded by the particular levy on that road. So, whether or not that road is in George Town, West Bay or it cuts through districts on any of the Islands, I believe that you have to look at the road and be specific.

The whole issue of the transfer of liabilities in 32(1), whilst I can appreciate the line of argument by the Leader of the Opposition, I do differ somewhat in my interpretation as to what and why these liabilities are mentioned in regards to transfer over. It is standard that when an entity is going to be created and that entity subsumes or takes the place of an entity that already existed, it is natural that all of the right obligations and liabilities would have to go along into the new entity. I say that as a point of principle, however, when we look at the accrual system of accounting, one of the things we will know is that the roads division of Public Works will not necessarily have paid its bills, etcetera at the moment when this Law comes into effect. So, if the roads division had went out and purchased equipment or if it had other legal obligations, possibly even a law suit or something like that which existed at the date that this Bill comes into Law, those obligations would naturally have to flow into the Roads Authority. To leave them behind would cause the Roads Authority to basically be in a position to start off initially from a nil position.

Ultimately, just as section 34(6) has pointed out, the amounts that are due to the Roads Development Fund will be paid over. The amounts that are due to the Roads Development Fund would be credited to the Roads Fund, which is the fund that will be utilised to fund the activities of this Authority. Those accounts receivables that exist at that date are going to be carried over and so it is natural to have that exist also.

Section 34(5) is easily explained as well because if we remember and turn our minds back just 10 to 14 days ago when we were going through the Budget process; one of the things revealed in the Budget was that the Budget was prepared in anticipation of the Roads Authority being created. So, if we look at the ownership agreements we will see on page 313 of the ownership agreements that there is going to be an equity investment into the Roads Authority of some $631,500. We will also see in the projected financial statements of the Roads Authority that there are going to be outputs funded by Cabinet on the order of some $6,190,372. My understanding was that the idea behind creating the Roads Authority was to have all the funds in the Roads Development Fund— all the monies that sat in that Fund transferred over to government and for government to establish and fund the Roads Authority by way of this first year Budget. So, that equity investment and the monies that are going to be paid over form a total part of the big picture of the way in which the Roads Authority would be funded. I understand that is out of revenue.

The Member for East End has pointed out that the revenue that is going into the Roads Authority and the equity investments that are being injected into the Roads Authority is coming out of the revenue of the country. However, we have to look at what is core government and indeed how it is that core government is going to fund this because this Bill has been green for several weeks now. I do believe that not all Members grasped this when the Honourable Third Official Member and the Minister spoke about the Roads Authority during Finance Committee. However, this was my understanding as to how it was—that the Roads Authority was to be started and funded. Whilst I understand the point that has been raised, the reason it is being done by core government in this way is simply to be able to establish, get the Roads Authority funded by a capital injection of the $631,500, purchase the outputs from the Authority for the first year and in the future as we move on we will then have to monitor the activity. I believe that adequately takes care of how this movement of funds is envisioned.

I think that there will be persons who may question the amount of dollars in the Roads Development Fund at the date that this Law comes into effect, and have concern as to how much may not be paid over, if any, by core government to the Roads Authority. I do not have the balance in my sight right now but just looking at the sums that are here of $631,000 for the equity investment, and the $6.297 million that is going to be paid over by Cabinet to the National Roads Authority, I do not believe that there is a greater amount sitting in the Roads Development Fund. In regards to section 28 and the issue of the formula being established for the annual payments to core government by the National Roads Authority this is a standard section that sits in all the Authority's legislation. The key is, as ways forward, government by authority and the Authority need to be specific in negotiating this pay over.

Mention was made by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition about government trying to come up with some formula to deal with the Authorities. While that is a good argument in principle, when we look at how different each Authority is and how different the income streams of each Authority is, I think government would be wise to continue down this path of having the very general provision in the enabling legislation for each Authority, but determine negotiations between that Authority and the Financial Secretary as to precisely what that formula would look like. For example, what is good for the Water Authority may not be good for Information and Communications Technologies Authority. It may not be good for the Port Authority and for the Civil Aviation Authority, and indeed may not be good for the National Roads Authority. So, I think that this Government has been prudent and responsible in regards to the whole issue of monies that get paid over from statutory authorities. In line with our strong and good fiscal record I do not think anyone can successfully argue that we have gone in and raped any statutory authority, caused it to borrow funds simply to make core government look good.

This Government's finances are transparent. We abide by the principles of the Public Management and Finance Law because ultimately that Law refers to and mandates entirely, which is Government and all its owned subsidiaries whether they are in the form of a company or a statutory authority having to report all their financial statements. We go along with that principle because we recognise that you cannot rob Peter to pay Paul and try to fool the public. What we would be doing is being unfair to future generations because someone ultimately has to pay the bill and raise the revenue to be able to successfully pay down any liabilities, whether or not they are through borrowings that Government or any statutory authority incurs.

In regards to the development of the country, I believe that we have to continue to have a holistic view and approach just as government does, whilst the public, this Legislative Assembly and everyone will have their own views as to what is more important than the other. Road development, infrastructure development brings about benefits that people may not see today or tomorrow. Certainly, when we look at the traffic congestion on Grand Cayman, we would all agree, we need to ensure that a more adequate infrastructure is developed so that this country can move forward to the new level of economic development and prosperity which we will enjoy. At the end of the day, whilst the current infrastructure has served us well and has gotten us very far, we cannot physically survive any longer with that infrastructure.

Being able and focusing on roads and ensuring that we have the adequate technical persons in place empowered to be able to deliver to this country the type of road planning that we need, is crucial and this Bill for a law to create a National Roads Authority is one of utmost importance.

As I said a bit earlier, I do not think anyone needs to be alarmed about the liabilities being transferred because that is a very necessary and usual transition provision that all of your benefits, liabilities etcetera are transferred over to the new entity. The old entity, that is, the roads division of Public Works would have incurred certain bills and obligations that need to be paid, so it is more transparent, open and accountable for government to transfer those over to show the financial picture of the Roads Authority to the public. We could have easily left off those liabilities and paid them under the old department, but under the accrual system of accounting and in the spirit of the Public Management and Finance Law, it is crucial that we go that extra mile to ensure that the finances and the financial picture of this Authority is clear, transparent and the public can look at it and see exactly what has happened.

We on the Back Bench lend our support to this Bill. We believe it is crucial to the next wave of economic development and with the further enhancement and development of our roads we will also see that our local population will also benefit by not having to sit in traffic for substantial periods of time during the peak traffic periods in the morning; close to the mid-day hour and in the afternoon.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, and as promised I was not long. So, with that I would encourage all Honourable Members to lend their support to this Bill. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not would the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I wish to thank the Honourable Members who spoke to the Bill for their support and for those who by their tacit supported the Bill also.

Various points were raised and I would like to reply to some of those points which I think were pertinent overall to the debate.

The Member for East End spoke to various points in the Bill and, in the order to which he raised them I would like to offer some comments in reply. A point raised by the Member for East End was the question of street lighting; this is not something strange to you. Having been the former Minister for road works on two different occasions, this is a matter that is indigenous to all of the people here in Cayman because there are regular and often constant request for lighting on a particular road, be it subdivision, main road or wherever. Up until this time these requests are normally sent to the Minister for Works which includes roads. This, in my opinion, cannot strictly be a Ministerial matter. It is certainly a political matter in certain instances and one expects the Minister to respond because of the political responsibility for the lights, and indeed, that is happening now with me.

If a request comes to the Permanent Secretary or myself we refer it to the Public Works Department Roads Division and we ask them to check the road and pole in question and see if, in their opinion, it is necessary, and whether that particular pole will best suit the illumination of the area and if so they should have it installed. The Public Works Department with the Roads Division, which we expect to transition into the National Roads Authority, could just as well deal directly with this and applications for same could be made directly to the Authority. Not to say that anyone would be prohibited from writing to their representative or indeed the Minister, if they believe that the Roads Authority was neglecting doing as they asked and it was a reasonable request. On this particular area, I have asked legal council if they can reflect this particular responsibility in an amendment before the House, and to which I would ask for your approval before the Committee Stage.

The Member also spoke about section 15 and the transfer of civil servants to the National Roads Authority. The Leader of the Opposition also spoke to this particular clause in the Law and it is true that some of the employees of the Public Works are what is termed PPE, permanent and pensionable establishment and some are group employees.

For decades I personally have questioned how it is possible for a person to be on temporary appointment for twenty seven and a half years. I know of instances where over the years when I was in the civil service, and since I have been in the political arena, that there are persons within the Public Works Department and within the roads section who have been there for many years and they never seem to reach a position of permanency. Whether they are called permanent pensionable establishment or whether they continue in group employment, such employees must be permanent employees because temporary suggests three months, six months maybe a year at best. So, I think this is something which needs to be corrected from a point of view of proper employment law, proper employer and employee relationship. I supported those things being addressed then and I do now.

I have met with the Public Works on one occasion since I have been assigned responsibility for it and I have said to them that I intend to have this addressed because there has to be fairness in employment. I also believe that to refer to someone as being a temporary employee for two decades makes us all look a bit foolish and I think it is something which needs to be rectified. Certainly, when people transfer from the Public Works Roads Division to the National Roads Authority they must be given the assurance that they will not be starting a new life; that would be absolutely unfair. We would have to take into account the time that they have worked prior because it would not be reasonable to do otherwise.

I can inform this House that only yesterday evening the Permanent Secretary and another administrative officer met with members of the Public Works Roads Division to discuss this matter with them. I was not there but I assume that they expressed any concerns they had to the Permanent Secretary, and I feel sure that their concerns would have been taken into account for final decision.

On page 20, section 16 of the Bill there is a reference to the contracted officer's supplement, which as both the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the Member for East End stated, it was their understanding that this came to an end in 2002. That is correct and I have taken advice that it was in June 2002 that a contracted officer's supplement was discontinued. However, it still does apply to some officers who are on three year contracts and at the end of those contract, it will fall away, as it has for everyone else as of this time.

The Member for East End spoke about the percentage assignments of revenue to fund the Roads Authority. I think we all agree that there is a necessity for certain revenue to fund the National Roads Authority. What has happened over the years is that Government normally allocated on average about $4.0 to $4.7 million for road works and maintenance and so on, which was always taken out of the Budget so that this could be addressed. It is a very important area because we all use the roads one way or the other, and it was a matter of looking at what percentage of certain revenue streams could be allocated to the Roads Authority, and it does not change the overall Budget in anyway. It is simply assigning certain percentage of these revenue streams to the Roads Authority and particularly, those which are associated with roads and gasoline, diesel and so on.

Both Members spoke about section 28 saying that it will be a long time before the Roads Authority is in a position to pay anything back into core government. I think that they are both right but the clause is here, and if, and when it gets to that stage, it can be something negotiated and there is a formula which can be worked out between the interested parties so that it may pay into core government some funds where there may be a surplus.

In section 22—Levy and Collection of User Charges, the Member for East End particularly spoke of tolls. The advice available to me and indeed he made the point as well, it is not the most straightforward or easiest condition to deal with. We know that it would be like in the United States where there are certain highways and when you take them one comes to tolls, you put in $1.00 or 50 cents as the case may be. We are talking about an Island that is not even the size of a county in Florida. However, it is possible to have a toll if indeed this is seen to be something to do to raise revenue.

I know and I am sure that you do too, Mr. Speaker, that for at least twenty five years there have been a drawing at the Public Works for making a central highway through the centre of Grand Cayman from East End to George Town. At one time it would have come out somewhere by Tropical Gardens, which would surely make life easier for people who come from East End, Bodden Town or the various areas along the coast line; North Side as well would connect into it. It would be a matter of once on that road you would get to George Town in ten minutes and from there the traffic would bottleneck, of course, but it would flow from there and you would have saved twenty minutes or so coming to the George Town area. So, in instances like that I think the toll could work but I do take the point that was made by the Member for East End that within the George Town township it might require a number of toll booths to be set up and that would not seem to be practical to me. At least if there were toll areas these would be worked out by the Authority where they could be best located with prices and everything else.

The intent of the idea in creating road user charges would be, as it has been stated, that they would be based directly and related to the amount of usage of roads by the users concerned, and that it should be transparent and equitable and regularly reviewed for accuracy and equity. The sections of the Law provides in 22 (3) that before any change come about the public would have full knowledge of what is going to happen and the least notice that could be given would be three months in advance, which would have to be gazetted. So, if a charge was coming into place it would have to be gazetted at least three months ahead of time and the public would know about it. There would be certain feedback on it and the Governor in Cabinet would be in a position to agree with the recommendation from the Roads Authority about the particular fee, or disagree with it. Should it be agreed, by Cabinet, that such was reasonable and necessary, then the Cabinet could approve that fee by simply gazetting and saying that the recommended fee which has been gazetted has been accepted and is in force. Rather than having to put it in the regulations which would mean amending the regulation every time that happens, revising the regulations would be a much cleaner management position to have it done that way.

There are various ways motor vehicles can be taxed or fees can be applied to them. Some can be done by weigh, or as was described by the Member for East End, where there are large trucks, even now they attract different fees and this would continue and certainly, I think this could continue, but I think that with a Roads Authority it could be refined.

The commencement order as it is set down in the Bill says that parts of it would come into effect at different times, I propose an amendment to this that it would come into effect on 1 July because it is then that the fiscal year would begin for the Authority and it gives a few weeks yet for this to take place and the transitioning process to be carried on. It was felt by the Ministry that this would be a much cleaner way of dealing with it, and then we could proceed from there.

On page 22 in section 20, there is the statement regarding the Road Fund. I have taken advice on this during the suspensions and there is nothing legally wrong with the way it is presently worded that the road fund shall be used by the Governor to acquire or construct public roads and other related executive assets and as (b) goes on, to purchase from the Authority outputs and (c) make equity investments into the Authority.

In this regard, Mr. Speaker, I could also refer to section 23 where the question was posed as to where would interest and other income from the investment of the Authority's funds come from. I can but think that there would have to be an account and when monies are transferred to that account, for whatever time it is in the account, it would accrue certain interest and this would be handled in that manner. I do not know if monies of such an amount would be drawn down over so long a period that the road fund or the National Roads Authority (NRA) would invest those funds in any particular place; I think it would be more of the interest it might accrue if it is there for 30, 60, or 90 days, as the case may be.

There was also a question as to whether the NRA would be doing work other than for the Government. At this point in time, there is certainly no intention to contract out the services of the NRA to any other private entities; it would be to do the business of Government as set down in whatever policy might be at that time. It is more likely that the private sector companies would be contracted by the NRA to do certain work for them.

Just to say, that when I was getting a few pointers in terms of the concept of roads and the use of roads on the world scene, there are certain concepts in place when roads are built and there is a privilege to use the roads. That is a concept in any given concept, and how much the road is used is also a concept that is in-keeping with the whole idea of transportation by road. How much the people are charged for the use of the road is connected, for example, with the amount of charge that is on gasoline because the more people drive the more gasoline they use; so in effect they are paying for the amount of usage they carry on. The idea is that when it comes to roads, any country needs to be in a position where it can charge the people who use the roads in the most effective manner and through the most effective means available to it.

The Leader of the Opposition noted that the immunity and indemnity of the Authority was covered under section 32 and 33 and this is very important for Authorities; all of them, and there are a few of them that this has been proven for there.

The Leader of the Opposition also raised the question regarding section 5 (g) which dealt with the tendering of works. The point he raised is indeed a factual one that there are variations in what the different Authorities do. However, I am also advised that what use to be the Central Tenders Committee fell away when the regulations under the Public Management and Finance Law came into effect. I am not absolutely sure whether they repeated in that the section out of the Financial Stores Regulations, which I hope they did not because it would still mean that it would be centralised tendering and that does not make any sense. If it were the case where each Ministry could follow set guidelines in tendering as the Member has said, it would make every sense in the world and I fully support that concept.

I have seen so many instances where matters could be handled in a quicker manner and where it could be done more effectively than a Ministry having to write to the Central Tenders Committee, taking time to do this and all the rest of it; it definitely does not have to be done this way. I support the idea that Ministries under guidelines which could be set in regulations should be able to tender. Certainly if we could trust chief officers, permanent secretaries and administrative staff with $20 to $30 million, surely we can trust them to receive an envelope in which there is another envelope, record it and sit down with two or three and see which one would be awarded the contract. It is all a matter of accountability. They will be audited and everyone will know what the situation is.

There is one thing I believe would help: For ultimate and full transparency if we got six tenders when a ministry decided on one they simply publish the one which is successful and publish the other five as well; there would be no doubt but total transparency. One has to bear in mind that with government tenders there is the proviso at the bottom of it that government does not have to accept the lowest or any tender. So, the fact that the Government may not accept the lowest might be a reason for not doing that; maybe the people might not have the capacity to do it. It might be the highest that is chosen but for full transparency that would be my preference if I had something to do with it.

The Leader of the Opposition raised the point about the Governor vesting of lands. I believe he has made a clear point in that regard, and I have asked Legal Drafting to clarify that and make it clearer in the section where it says that the Minister will give approval for the disposal of lands.

It was left out of the Law but I have also asked Legal Drafting to insert a section which will give authority to the NRA to be the entity that any other entity must apply to in order to cut the roads or disrupt what is presently there. Those persons giving permission to cut the roads or break the surface in any way must replace that road surface to the satisfaction, direction and to the level the Roads Authority dictates. The Roads Authority may not choose to do it itself, it may choose to direct that an entity be hired but I have asked for that insertion.

The point was also taken with regard to the appointment of the Managing Director and I think, it was an oversight there where the Governor had to be satisfied about the person's knowledge and experience. It was intended that it should be the Board and I have also asked for amendments to that section. The Board is appointing, therefore the Board must be in a position to decide the most suitable person for it.

I cannot say whether in section 13 it is referring to the National Roads Plan because I do not think that there is a National Roads Plan at this time. I know that there is a committee, which is ongoing and looking at such a thing I share the view expressed by Members. Unfortunately we cannot go into the past but the Master Ground Transportation Plan would have offered a national plan if we choose to call it something else now. If the wisdom of that design was followed for all the roads, it would have been the way to go. It was through the Law being of people like the Member for East End that I think it did not succeed in the years when it could have been passed.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: Are you rising on a point of order, Honourable Member?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: On a point of clarification.

The Speaker: On a point of clarification you will have to get the agreement from the Member speaking to give way, and he does not seem to be in the mood to do that.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: No, Mr. Speaker, I think that we can proceed on with the observation.

The point was also taken with regards to meetings of the Board. It could possibly be that there is normally seven days notice where a special meeting could be called in two, but the Chairman of the Board should be in a position to summon the Board if something of great importance happens; maybe summons them in two or three hours. Something could stem from a disaster or accident of some kind, so I think, from a management point of view, that makes logic and I have asked Legal Drafting to look at that particular section.

From the point of view of the pension, which is dealt with in section 16, I think it is correct that from 1999 government decided for persons who were joining the service after that date, would pay a defined contribution because prior to that it was the case that there was a defined benefit. I prefer the latter because it is an undertaking by government that you will be paid two thirds of your salary calculated by a particular formula. I do not particularly like the defined contribution because that same undertaking is not there but that is part of the Pensions Law.

I think, the Cayman Islands Government is one of the most generous government's on the face of the earth. They took the position that they would recognise those persons who were getting the defined benefit and allow them to continue in that mode. However, the new ones coming on, for the reasons started by the Leader of the Opposition, it could not go on indefinitely to be funded in the way it was attempting to be funded by no contributions from the people who are paying. Actuarial review showed that there were various deficiencies there and I believe, the Government took the right decision at that time but it does carry on that way.

What has happened in this particular Law is the attempt to do the same thing. For people who go over to the Roads Authority and are civil servants, they would continue to have this particular benefit. However, it also gives the National Roads Authority the right to utilise the National Pensions Law, which is the defined contribution.

I take the point of view that it needs a review, and my view of it is: the Government needs to do a complete review overall in the service and in the authorities based on actuarial study and analysis. At that point, a determination that as of such a date, this is the way it has to be except where it has already given an undertaking to the ongoing civil servants who are due and contracted to receive that. It is nothing that can be done in isolation and it is something that needs to be addressed. I know that certain discussions within Government are taking place in this regard.

This is something which I expect in the not too distant future, that there will be some definite decision taken on this.

A similar thing happens where the health insurance is concerned and it is also provided if you will a choice. The majority of the country deals with the Health Insurance Law where there are contributions from employer and employees. In government we know there is unlimited cover and we know from a study that is done that they have found that it is not sustainable. At some point, in the future, this is a matter which has to be addressed as to where to fund this coverage and I think both employer and employee are going to have to be asked. Let us all put in the pot and that way it can work best for us.

The question also has been raised about payment to core government under section 34(1). I believe the Second Elected Member for West Bay dealt with that as it factually is, from the point of view of a financial perspective. I have also enquired about it, from the point of view of a legal perspective and I have been advised that having the transfer of liabilities, rights or obligation there is nothing wrong with that. In fact it sets up clearly that there is a break between central government and the Authority.

Central government where it knows or it is likely to happen, that the Authority may fall short, let us say if it is pursuing a particular course of action, central government or core government can help through cash injections. However, it is a matter of saying to the Authority, 'look you had better grow up now because you have to take on these responsibilities that central government was carrying before and see them through to the end.'

Section 34(5) (6) and (7) has to be read in succession to understand what it is saying here. I quote from these sections— “(5) On the date of commencement of section 18. . .”

Section 18 deals with the percentage amounts from revenue that will be coming into the Road Fund: “. . .any amounts held in the Roads Development Fund shall be transferred to and vest in the core government without further assurance, and the core government shall have all powers necessary to take possession of, recover and deal with, those amounts.

“(6) Where, immediately before the date of commencement of section 18, any amount is owing to the Roads Development Fund, such amount shall be deemed to be owing to the core government, and when paid or collected, shall be credited to the Road Fund.

“(7) Where a document refers expressly or by implication to the Roads Development Fund, the reference shall be construed as a reference to the Road Fund.” I think that clarifies itself if one reads the three together.

Core government acts by collecting then apportioning out these monies to the Road fund and I made the point earlier that an Authority cannot tax; that does not lay with an Authority. An Authority might charge a fee for a service, which it does, but it cannot tax and the monies which will flow in are coming from areas of tax from core government and thus it is necessary for monies to flow to core government and from core government on to the Authority.

I think I have spoken to the areas which raised useful views; which could be addressed and I have tried to explain other points which were raised. I thank Honourable Members for their attendance here at this late hour and for the fact that they have addressed the areas that they have. So, I recommend the Bill to the Honourable Members of this House.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the National Roads Authority Bill 2003 be given a Second Reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Health Insurance Law (2003 Revision)

The Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2004

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business and Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move Government Motion No. 8/03 titled The Health Insurance Law 2003 Revision, The Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2004, which reads:

“WHEREAS section 19(1) of the Health Insurance Law (2003 Revision) provides that the Governor in Cabinet may make regulations;

“WHEREAS section 19(2) of the said Law provides that regulations made under the said Law are subject to affirmative solution by the Legislative Assembly;

“WHEREAS the Health Insurance amendment regulations 2004 were laid upon the Table during the sitting of the Legislative Assembly held on the 9th day of June 2004.

“BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT The Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2004 be affirmed by the Legislative Assembly pursuant to the provisions of section 19(2) of The Health Insurance Law 2003 Revision.”

The Speaker: The question is that be it resolved that The Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2004 be affirmed by the Legislative Assembly pursuant to the provisions of Section 19(2) of The Health Insurance Law 2003 Revision.

Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

[Pause]

The Speaker: I will just suspend for 5 minutes until all Members have a copy of the Resolution and the Motion.

[Pause]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the new definition of portability allows employees who have had continuous medical coverage to change employers without losing coverage. Also, employers will be able to change approved insurers without the necessity of medical underwriting or the fear of losing coverage altogether. Employees and employers who change insurers now will be guaranteed benefits no less than those provided in the standard health insurance contract No. 1.

Employees can now rest assured with the proposed amendments before this House that changing employers will not result in the loss of vital medical benefits. Employers can enjoy certain peace of mind in knowing that they can shop for competitive bids within the health insurance industry without the fear that their actions will be detrimental to their most valuable assets; their employees.

Mr. Speaker, section 7 of the amended regulations also defines “pre-existing condition,” as a term that insurance companies have used at their discretion to exclude certain benefits or to exclude a person or a group from coverage altogether. By specifying in the regulations precisely what a pre-existing condition is we will create consistency among all approved insurers operating in the Cayman Islands. Mr. Speaker, this question also of pre-existing condition has created major hardship for people. They have lost insurance, they have been excluded from insurance and a major problem has been that each insurance company could determine themselves what pre-existing condition meant. The amendment in the Regulation is to clearly define what a pre-existing condition is.

Approved insurers who deny or exclude coverage based upon a pre-existing condition will now be required to abide by a strict definition of the term, a term defined by the regulations and not one by the insurance companies.

In the Cayman Islands to date little has been done to ease the patient’s burden of completing claim forms and submitting them to the insurance company for payment. This process is very detailed and laborious even to the most educated among us and has drawn the ire of many patients in these Islands.

Mr. Speaker, many of the people who must attend health facilities or health practitioners are not educated people. In fact, one of the repeating misfortunes of any society is that it is often the poorest among our society that tend to need health care because their economic conditions tend to be worse. So, they are not necessarily able to take care of their health in a way that is possible by those who can better afford it. For these persons to fill out some of the forms which are required is almost impossible on their own. Even people who have knowledge of it still find it difficult.

Mr. Speaker, The Health Insurance Law and Regulations never intended to establish a reimbursement plan that required patients to pay the doctor, fill out a claim form and wait for their money. I want to emphasise: it was never the intention of The Health Insurance Law and Regulations to establish a reimbursement plan that required patients to pay their premium every month for insurance coverage. So, when they went to the doctors they must pay them, as well as bill the insurance company to get their money back and wait for a very long time. Of course the Member who could speak to this was the Minister at the time of the passage of The Health Insurance Law and Regulations. I believe that he could confirm what I have just said. Certainly, in the records of this House, I saw nothing that said that any Member at the time stated that was the intention when this Law was passed.

The Laws and Regulations were meant to establish an insurance plan in which people who pay their premiums can visit their doctors, present their ID cards and receive medical attention without the burden of paying the doctor out of their own pockets and then submitting claims to the insurance company.

The 2004 amendments to the Regulations clarify in Section 8 that the responsibility of submitting claims to the insurance company shall rest squarely on the shoulders of the registered medical practitioners and health care facilities and not the patients. This change to the Regulations will allow patients to place their trust in the doctors who treat them. The new Regulations should also lead to medical facilities and offices that are staffed with professionals to deal with the insurance companies, leaving the doctors to practice medicine and the patients to concentrate on their treatment and recovery.

Section (9) deals with claims processing and it states that claims must be formatted with CPT codes and ICD codes and submitted to the approved insurer within 180 days of services rendered which corresponds with an amendment to section 15 of the Law stipulating that health care facilities and medical practitioners must, barring extenuating circumstances, file claims within 180 days or waive their rights to a recovery from the insurance company or the patient.

Patients are paying for full service health insurance coverage and this amendment will ensure that claims for services are processed in a timely manner. In balance, the amended regulations also state that approved insurers must pay an uncontested claim submitted by a medical practitioner or health care facility within 30 days. If valid claims submitted within this time frame are not paid, the insurer will be required to pay interest on the amount of the claim beginning on day 31 at a rate of 2 per cent above the current prime interest rate in the United States.

Mr. Speaker, there is no why reason health care providers who perform their duties in a timely fashion should be penalised for insurers who do not. This amendment provides that all parties are duty bound to perform within a prescribed time frame. This has been a festering sore over the years where untimely payments have been a major problem. Particularly, a patient who has been required to pay the doctor then that poor, suffering patient must also try to collect from the insurance company. Of course, the reason why the Regulations call for the use of the CPT code and the ICD code billings is that all of the insurance companies—if an insurance company at all—understand those codes. There are laboratory, ICD and diagnostic codes and there are those which are procedural. They understand them immediately; they can refer to them, see what has been done – if it is a clean bill, as it so called. They can and should pay within 30 days.

Mr. Speaker, these Regulations will also help to control cost by reviewing precisely what services are and are not allowed to be claimed under a standard health insurance contract. In addition to the time frame of submitting and paying bills approved insurers will not be liable for any claims submitted by a medical practitioner or health facility that are deemed to be frivolous or medically unnecessary. By so doing, an attempt is being made to balance the scales right across the board. This will require that patients better understand their medical benefit plans, that doctors understand that approved insurers will not be responsible for unnecessary or excessive procedures and that insurers maintain accurate timely information on current accepted traditional medical practices.

Mr. Speaker, these amended regulations will not disrupt or adversely affect current enforced contracts of health insurance. Upon the coming into force of these Regulations all health insurance contracts in place that will provide benefits equal to or greater than those provided in standard health insurance contracts 2 - 4 must be converted to one of these standard contracts. This will ensure consistency in coverage for all and a minimum level of benefits for the employees in the Cayman Islands labour force.

Mr. Speaker, the amendments are thus before the Honourable Legislative Assembly for their debate and ultimate action.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition and First Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, we have listened very carefully to the Honourable Minister for Health in his explanation for the reasoning behind these amendments. Certainly the Opposition has to take on board the concept that is being proposed and the gaps that are being filled with these amendments to the Health Insurance Regulations. It is a fact and all of us can attest to it. There have been many complaints in recent years about people not being able to be covered and being refused coverage by health insurance providers. The Minister spoke to pre-existing conditions and there has always been a great difficulty with that and it was left up to the “whim and fancy” of the provider. Of course, most naturally, if it is not addressed by law or regulation the provider is going to play the game as safe as is possible for himself. Needless to say there are many situations where people who, prior to this were not able to get health insurance coverage, will be able to do so now.

Mr. Speaker, while we on the Opposition are with a clear understanding of all the intent put forward in the amending Regulations, there are a few items that we have problems with. It all has to do with benefits which may be excluded under a standard health insurance contract. That is on page 10 of the amending Regulations, part III. It is good for us to note that while the heading says that “benefits may be excluded under a standard health insurance contract”, the very next sentence clearly states that “Benefits will not be provided in connection with . . .” I know that after talking for a few minutes about this whole listing, there is a section that gives a definition which helps to clarify certain situations. However, it still does not ease the problems that we see.

Page 10, part III, refers to benefits which will not be provided: the treatment of any illness or injury that occurred prior to the commencement of any contract. That is quite understandable. That also gives the latitude whereby unless the illness or injury or other pre-existing condition was fully disclosed in writing, which is only reasonable and then at that point in time it would be up to the provider whether to exclude or not to exclude that condition in the contract.

The second one speaks to consultations in connection with, and treatment for infertility including in vitro fertilisation, artificial insemination and other experimental services. I think even that we can understand. Consultations in connection with and treatment for sexual dysfunction or sex change procedures. The second one we can understand but perhaps the first one is debatable because I am certain no one ‘wills’ being sexually dysfunctional on themselves. If that is classified as a luxury condition to be treated then that is something we need to debate. That is, if you are a pragmatist about the circumstances which may befall an individual it is just like anything else that can happen to you. However, perhaps it is seen as something that is not necessary in life and one can do without – I do not know. As we even make light of the situation I believe that it should not be one of the classifications.

The next one is contraceptives, drugs or devices or sterilisation. Mr. Speaker, we speak to family planning, we speak to individuals who proliferate the scene of pregnancies. We always, in a society, will have situations where the only answer dealing with certain individuals having children and not being able to take care of them is sterilisation. That may seem to be a radical thought but it is a fact. It has happened, it is happening and it will continue to happen and we do not know what circumstances that individual is in. If one takes these situations and applies them in certain sectors of the society one can easily understand why you may wish to exclude that from benefits being provided. However, in many instances there are other sectors which these conditions and the treatments are absolutely necessary.

The very next one is treatment for any illness caused by or injury sustained in a war, whether it is declared or undeclared, or while a person was in active military service in any country. I guess the thought behind that is if the country can afford to send you to war then it can afford to take care if you get hurt. We will not argue that one so much.

The very next one, Mr. Speaker, is treatment for illness or injury arising from or associated with a psychiatric condition. I am not a psychiatrist and I do not profess any desire to be one and will not make an attempt to sound like one, but what I do know is that a psychiatric condition is not necessarily a condition that a person is born with. I also know that a psychiatric condition is not necessarily a condition that a person wills on himself or herself. I am reminded that as the years go by such conditions are being discovered more and more in people. Years gone by we used to wonder what was wrong with them. Now we know what it is. However, for such a condition which is not a pre-existing condition, to be excluded is not fair. If we look at the odds this is not one of those where you have multitudes of people, so why are we saying that we want to exclude it? If we want to speak about a heart condition which is much more common—I am not suggesting that it be excluded, I am just making a comparison—I do not believe that the treatment for illness or injury arising from or associated with a psychiatric condition should be excluded.

The next one is drug or alcohol abuse. That is understandable. Self-inflicted injuries are understandable. Sexually transmitted diseases are debatable but understandable because individuals should know how to protect themselves. If we go down the whole list we have a clear understanding why certain conditions or treatments are excluded from benefits. However, the few that I am mentioning here we think seriously should be reconsidered. Mr. Speaker, I must be honest, I have not had a chance to clearly understand what this syndrome is in the next one, but if going by the sound of it means anything it sounds like something is a bit deal. I am going to spell this name, I will not try to pronounce it but it is treatment for any illness or injury arising from or connected with the human immuno deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Speaker, I have to admit I am being told that that is HIV. It is being confirmed to me. I did really know that it was a syndrome. We only hear of it commonly called HIV/AIDS but anyway, that too is a situation where having understood what that means we hear more and more of people contracting the virus by accident. What I mean by that is there are—while it is not common and people are being more careful with blood transfers and such the like—situations like that and other circumstances that can cause it to happen. It seems to me even when I go one up and we talk about sexually transmitted diseases and we come back down to this HIV/AIDS situation, what we are clearly saying is if people are in these circumstances and they do not have the wherewithal to take care of themselves; we are immediately now saying to the rest of the world it is the state’s responsibility. If that is the position of the state, so be it. However, I am not satisfied that is the way we should look at the position. I understand some of these things, but there are some circumstances that I have begun to outline, which I do not believe should be excluded.

Mr. Speaker, when we say that benefits will not be provided in connection with, what these Regulations state is that there is absolutely no way—at least that is the way I understand it when it says . . . that benefits will not be provided. I know it refers to a standard health insurance contract but if we are going to categorise these health insurance contracts and people have options unless we are saying that for certain types of contracts there are no options then I do not think the statement should be made that benefits will not be provided. Because if I go to a health insurance provider and I say I want a standard health insurance contract and then the health insurance provider says, "Well do you want dental coverage or do you want visual coverage or any other condition that has to do with eye sight." You have the ability to add that as a part of the contract so that should be left to the individuals to negotiate. It is a considered view that when we have these conditions outlined here and above it says that the coverage will not be provided in a standard health insurance contract. I think what we are saying there, is that neither the health insurance provider nor the person who seeks health insurance can decide that with such contract the person can be covered if he or she is willing to pay for it.

Mr. Speaker, there has always been this situation – we have encountered it before here in the legislative process and we still have a problem with the language. I do not know if the drafters can find no other way or whether it is intended to give the latitude to the individuals involved. However, I have a problem when we say, in number 11, treatment which in the opinion of the approved provider is not medically necessary. When this is over for purposes of this part medically necessary in relation to treatment medicine or other supply which is . . . and there is a whole slew of things appropriate to the diagnosis or treatment of the illness consistent with accepted medical professional standards not primarily for the personal comfort or the most appropriate level of treatment. There is a whole list of circumstances which define the terminology "medically necessary."

Mr. Speaker, if these terminologies are supposed to clarify what medically necessary means in this circumstance why are saying "in the opinion of." Why do we not leave those circumstances as the ones which would cause for the treatment not to be medically necessary. We are outlining the circumstances where treatment is not medically necessary but then we are adding something to it and saying that the provider 'in his opinion'. So, we are saying over and above these if the provider, in his opinion, it is not medically necessary then he still has that other latitude, and I am not so sure that we should do that. Because if that is the case the provider is going to hire someone and put them behind the desk to find what is not medically necessary with every claim, in my view.

Mr. Speaker, marital counselling, occupational therapy, charges for rescuers, custodial hospice or geriatric care, periods of legally enforced quarantine or isolation, services received in hydrous or nature cure clinics; and the list goes on. Number 19 speaks to cosmetics surgery and for a minute I was going to argue that one but I see where for the purposes of this part, cosmetic surgery is actually defined and it does exclude, meaning other than, surgery for the repair or treatment of an injury or a congenital bodily defect to restore bodily functions. In such instances, obviously coverage should be there and it does clarify that so we do not have to argue that one.

The very last one, number 22 treatment medicine or other supply which is experimental. That is debatable because while the FDA or such other body may not have recognised within a certain period of time certain types of treatment. If the professionals who are administering those treatments because of their experiences to date with the treatment are of the view that such a treatment may well have a reasonable percentage chance of either curing or alleviating a person's medical condition. Then if the person is willing to take that treatment based on the advice of medical professionals; I see absolutely no reason there should not be coverage for it.

All of these things that we are showing the other side of the coin for, I grant there can be arguments to and from about the circumstances that we speak to and I understand that nothing can be all embracing so that everything is covered properly. I also understand that the insurance providers are not supposed to be expected to take care of every single thing and circumstance. However, I do believe that the points just raised warrant some consideration in the Regulations before they are passed, gazetted and a date set for them to come in force.

Mr. Speaker, we offer those comments in the hope that consideration be given to see where we might be able to be more fair with the circumstances; not be seen to be leaning in any direction either that of the insurance provider or the persons who need such coverage. As the Minister outlined from the very beginning the intention of these amendments is, in his own words, to create a more even playing field which is obviously the intent of all of us. The suggestions that we have just made, hopefully, would make that playing field more even. Notwithstanding that, Mr. Speaker, the Opposition certainly wishes to lend its support to the intent of the Bill but in doing so we hope that our opinions are not cast by the way side. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just wish to offer a few observations in relation to this Bill. The Leader of the Opposition has done a fair job in outlining the position of the Opposition in relation to these proposed amendments. However, I do wish to add a few other points.

We have a situation in this country where health insurance is mandatory and I believe that is as it should be. The provision of health care and particularly, affordable health care continues to be a challenge throughout the world. Even the mighty United States is sorely tried to be able to reach a stage where the populace can feel that they are getting the level of health care that they deserve and the health care providers are able to provide that service and feel that they are being properly remunerated for that.

In saying what I propose to say I am not for a minute trying to suggest that the solution is simple or straightforward. However, I think we need to look carefully again at what is being propose here. Mr. Speaker, where the real challenge lies is that under health insurance coverage for treatment of certain catastrophic illnesses are excluded in the sense that it is not mandatory that a health insurance policy does cover things like treatment for HIV/AIDS. We know already that the provision of health care in this country is heavily subsidised by government. In this Budget it is suggested that the target for expenditure will be somewhere in the region of $50 million over the course of this year, of which about $22 million is being subsidised by government by one means or another. That is, either by way of contributions in relation to civil servants coverage or in relation to indigents or seamen or veterans.

Mr. Speaker, the question that follows from that is if insurance companies are not required to provide coverage in relation to catastrophic illnesses like HIV/AIDS, a person who contracts that is not covered for health insurance purposes; where will the money come from to treat that person for what can be a long illness requiring major expenditure. The reality is that in this country as in most other countries most people are able to cope with "run of the mill" illnesses themselves. They might quarrel and complain a little bit about having to go to the doctor and pay him a few hundred dollars for this or three hundred dollars for an x-ray. But by and large by one means or another they can generally cope with those sorts of expenses. It is the catastrophic illnesses that completely wipe out whatever savings people had, which put their homes at risk.

The other side of it is when one contracts a catastrophic illness like that you are unable to work so your income is also cut off at that point. So, who is going to cover, in the absence of health insurance coverage, the expenses of persons who are suffering from HIV/AIDS? We all know what the answer to that question is, that is the way it has always been in this country; government is left to pick up the tab. Persons charge their homes, whatever property they have, other family members are required to sign guarantees. However, the reality is to find the cash necessary to enable these sorts of treatments to be carried out government is required to pick up the tab.

Mr. Speaker, the country cannot sustain that in the long-term. We are having difficulty sustaining it now. Given the advent of CINICO, a government owned company, I would have expected that if it is to be the insurance provider and if it is going to act as an insurance company (as we received assurances during Finance Committee that that is its long-term objective) at a minimum CINICO would be able to issue insurance policies that would permit coverage for treatment of catastrophic illnesses such as HIV/AIDS. We might as well face the facts; by one means or another, the Cayman Islands Government is going to be required to cover those instances where people contract HIV/AIDS and require long, expensive treatment periods. It seems remiss of the Government to come down to the Legislative Assembly at this stage, propose substantial amendments to the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations most of which we agree with. Much of this, if not all, is the product of the discussions we had in the Select Committee of this Honourable House which dealt with the need to amend the Health Insurance Law and the Regulations.

We do agree with the Minister that far too many instances of abuse were occurring where insurance companies simply only want to cover the perfectly healthy. The only way that the health insurance can work—there is a huge challenge in a market as small as this—is if the healthy people pay the premiums and based on those premiums coverage is extended to claims which are paid for the older, less healthy population. That is the way the system generally works. It is a huge challenge with a population as small as we are. I believe that we are going to have to explore other means of extending the number of persons that are covered as part of our market; if we are going to be able to fund health insurance in this country.

The principal concern that I certainly have in what is being proposed now is that it simply continues to exclude situations which clearly Government is going to have to pay for by one means or another. So, might as well face it now and ensure that the standard health insurance contract at a minimum provides coverage for persons who contract catastrophic illnesses such as HIV/AIDS which is specifically excluded in this instance.

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition also spoke to the psychiatric illness point. Many people are not prepared again, to face the facts and to accept the growing number of mental health illnesses that exist in this community. More and more persons—whether it is as a result of the stresses of modern day society or whatever—seem to be succumbing to some form of mental illness or another. The attitude in the past has been to simply lock them up at Northward when they become too difficult to manage. Thankfully, we finally, I understand, now have a wing at the Hospital that is open and capable of accepting and dealing with some of these persons. I think they only have a facility for six persons or thereabouts but that is fare better than what we had in the past.

I am not for a minute not going to acknowledge the efforts that have been made in that respect but I think it runs counter to that position we have taken that we should provide health care for these people; to also pass a regulation which now permits insurance companies to say we are not going to give health insurance coverage to someone who does develop a mental illness. Who is going to pay for treatment for these people? I have an instance right now with one of my constituents who has a son who is incarcerated at Northward Prison who everyone says has some form of psychiatric illness. She was contemplating until very recently—because there was an incident that occurred over the weekend which seems to have changed those plans—spending her own money to take the young man with the Prison's permission to Cuba for treatment.

Mr. Speaker, we should in this enlightened age, accept that there is going to be a sector of the population that is going to suffer from mental illness and we have to make provision for them. If it is not provided for in the health insurance contract we all know that Government in 99 per cent of the cases is going to be called upon to care for that individual. Let us not pretend otherwise, we might as well write it into the Regulations and ensure that any standard insurance contract requires an insurance company to cover care of persons with mental illness. If that means, as it almost inevitably will, that there has to be adjustment of the premiums upwards then so be it. By one means or another, the people of the country are going to have to pay those costs. When we are proposing such a comprehensive revision of the health insurance regulations and are finally telling the insurance companies, "Listen you have to provide an insurance contract which covers the basic necessities for health care provision, you have to cover illnesses that we know are likely to be contracted by the population and mental health as well."

Mr. Speaker, this whole question that it is possible for them to exclude contraceptive drugs or devices or sterilisation. Again, that seems to me to be "penny wise and pound foolish." Contraceptive drugs are by and large very cheap, far cheaper than having to provide for what are often termed "unwanted children". Children who put an additional strain on the entire social system because their parents either did not want them or are unable to take care of them. So, if there are circumstances in which contraceptive drugs are indicated and the physician wants to prescribe them and the patient is willing to take them, I see no reason whatsoever why a standard insurance contract should not cover payment for those drugs.

That leads me to the whole question about coverage for treatment for sexually transmitted diseases. It seems ludicrous for an insurance policy not to be required to cover treatment for sexually transmitted diseases. If sexually transmitted diseases are not treated we significantly increase the risk of their spread. By and large these are highly contagious diseases. People who contract them are persons by their very nature are sexually active. How can it be that a standard insurance contract can exclude treatment for STDs? I would ask the Minister to seriously reconsider that provision in the Health Insurance Regulations and to amend it by deleting the provision which permits an insurance company to contract out of covering treatment for STDs.

Mr. Speaker, I think the Honourable Leader has covered sufficiently the other point which I had and I simply close by urging the Minister again to seriously reconsider the Government's position in relation to the standard health care contract. We must ensure that doing what we are doing, which is going to make the situation better than it has been in the past, that we do not set ourselves up for government to have to incur significantly more cost in relation to the covering of provision for health care in this country. Government already heavily subsidises health care in this country. If we do not insist that certain basic provisions are written into a standard health care insurance contract, government is going to have to pick up the tab for even bigger figures in times to come.

I am afraid that things like HIV/AIDS are not going away and people who contract them generally live long periods of time. Treatment for those sorts of diseases are very expensive and government had better face the fact that either we pay for it up front or we insist that the insurance contracts do cover those sorts of illnesses and we can pay for it over a long period of time and share the cost by everyone. That is the only way that this system is going to work. So, I urge those points on the Honourable Minister and look forward to hearing his response. Hopefully, we can have the necessary adjustments made and this Bill can pass without reservation by all Members of this Honourable House. I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not would the Honourable Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today is a moment of truth and the tabling of the Health Insurance Regulations 2004 has brought about this moment of truth. In 2001 I was a Back Bench Member of the Legislative Assembly in the Opposition. I brought a Motion asking that the Health Insurance Law and Regulations be reviewed by a committee of the whole House. Mr. Speaker, you will recall that you were the Minister of Health at that time and you started that Select Committee and after there were changes in the government I carried on the work which you had started in that Committee. I remember on that occasion that in somewhat horror and dismay, I listed and spoke about every single one of the twenty-two exclusions of health care which existed in the Health Insurance Law at that time. The truth is everything that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for George Town read is identical to what existed then. These have simply been just restated in the exact form.

Mr. Speaker, I remember saying then that this standard health insurance contract excluded ten times that which it included and this is where the country has stood since 1998, if I remember correctly, when this Law came into effect. These are the rules of the game that was set for the insurance companies and they have been doing anything and everything they have wanted to do using this as the basis from which to do it.

Mr. Speaker, since the Health Insurance Commission has been formed; we have been getting in lots of raw data and fax that we were not getting before. We have found that in some instances insurance companies in this country supposedly offers up to 30 contracts. I think any of us here would imagine that is really pushing the limits. It is pushing the limits. What has been happening with insurance companies is that they take this plan of exclusion and they take two or three things excluded and throw it in along with what is included and say, "I will charge you this amount of premium." Then they take a third contract and they take a few more exclusions from the basic contract and throw them in and say, "This is another contract offer you." It has gone on and on that they have created in some instances up to 30 different levels of coverage.

The great tragedy is that what is in these contracts most people, even highly educated do not sit down to read. So when they go the doctor if they are lucky he might accept their card. If the doctors accept the card for plan 27 and that might be $5000. When he goes back to the insurance company they say, "Oh look, we do not cover this whole $5000, we only cover $3,200 because we do not cover this and this and this in the plan." No one really knows except the insurance company just what they are doing with what is covered and what is not covered. It puts the hospitals and the clinics in this country at risk, it puts the doctors in jeopardy who deliver the cost and it certainly puts the insured person in jeopardy. That is when the doctors or the hospitals or the clinic go after the individual saying, "Listen you owe me $1,800 because your insurance company did not cover it." So, what has happened is that the doctors in the hospitals and clinics have said to people (who want to obey the law by paying every month for their coverage) "I do not want to deal with those insurance companies, I do not know that they have you covered for, you do not know, only they know. You pay me what I say you owe me and you go and deal with the company." That is the grave tragedy that exists in this country.

Mr. Speaker, that is why I said if they were lucky that the doctor took the cards from the insured person. The real unlucky ones are those that the doctors . . . and that has become generally the practice where doctors in hospitals say, "You just pay me and you go and collect from your insurance company." Mr. Speaker, not even in the land of wrong could it be right for something like that to exist in what is supposed to be a civilised society. This is the situation that I found and which I am glad that all Honourable Members are becoming more greatly aware of with the whole insurance situation. This is what these amendments are trying to correct.

Mr. Speaker, this Law was purely for the insurance companies. I have said that and they have been unhappy about the fact that I said but I have said it once, I say it twice and I will continue to say it because it is the truth. They virtually did as they chose. They charged any price and every time an amendment came (one came last year) that was an excuse for them to jack the prices up through the sky. That is so and I have in fact, seen a correspondence from one of these companies advising its insured clients that they are going to raise the price again. Guess what they are doing? They are blaming me because they say I am amending the Regulations that are costing them more money. Mr. Speaker, that is false.

Anyone who wants to know how false it is, when these people get on the radio stations in this country to attempt to feed the people all sorts of misinformation only needs to take up this Regulation and this standard contract to see the falsehoods in it. Their propaganda is never ending. In attempt to try to deal with this and after much advice in the Ministry, from the Commission, meeting with the insurance people and taking the advice of a consultant and an actuary it came down to a situation where the advice to me was, "Look, games have been played with this insurance contract 1, let us not even try to get into that just leave that way for whatever games have been played let them continue to try to play it." However, herein after by producing—and Members will see on page 14 there is a standard contract 2 where everything is set down in a table form; what is deductible, what is co-insurance, what is maximum, what will be the price in network and out of network, exactly what the insurance covers. It shows in-patient and out-patient and maternity services. Members will see on page 15 that contract 2 covers mental health, in-patient and out-patient. Substance abuse is also included in that.

Mr. Speaker, on page 16 Members will see there is a standard contract 3 which offers even higher coverage. A correction on page 15: mental health, in-patient and out-patient 'NC' means not covered. However, in contract 3 it is covered by 80 per cent and it shows the amount and what would be the cost in network or out of network. On page 18 standard contract 4 covers just about everything that one would normally find in the highest coverage of any kind of insurance contract. Let me tell this Honourable House what happened when this was done. In the meeting of 14 representatives of the health insurance industry in the Islands they really could not find anything technically wrong with this. Why? Simply because the Hospital, clinics, doctors, the health insurance company and the insured person will know by getting a copy of this document about exactly what you are covered for and to what percentage.

On that day they told me that this would force them to compete by costs and they wanted to compete in other ways. That is exactly what was said to me. So, I said to them, "How else could you compete except by costs and by the service that you give?" This levels the playing field and it seems to me like the insurance providers have a real problem with levelling the playing field. Mr. Speaker, by a given date these four contracts will come into effect and from that date forward all contracts issued by health insurance companies will be one of these four. Where an insurance company has a contract with an individual that is in effect now; they will not have to change that contract with that insured person until the date of expiration of the contract and then it becomes one of the four.

Mr. Speaker, one of the new things that some companies are saying is that, because this limits things to a $1 million life time they are saying, "Oh, but some of my contracts provided up to a $2 million annual for out-patient and/or in-patient coverage. I am told by various persons who know this business is the standard number that is used there. So, that is one of the ways they are attempting to say persons are being excluded or given less than what they are presently offering. The trouble is that people who have what they consider very good coverage with the insurance companies do not have anything looking like what is in this Regulation with everything set down in tabulated form so everyone can see and know.

Mr. Speaker, it no longer becomes a secret if an individual goes to a doctor's office and they have their card which says, "I have standard contract 3." the doctor immediately knows what is covered. The doctor no doubt, will say to the patient, "Look you have to pay me 20 per cent of this cost and my cost is this amount." There is no more difficulty. In addition, the Regulations now require that billings be done by the doctors in the hospitals and the labs in the ICD or the CPT (common procedural terminology) coding, which is, again, the language of the health insurance industry. The common practice terminology is that there are thousands of codes to which is attached all the procedures that are known to medical science, and at the end is the cost for that particular procedure. It helps in the insurance company, in that, immediately the insurance receives that bill on a CPT coded format so they know that doctor x has done these five procedures when he should have only done three.

The insurance company will then say to the doctor, "You did these five, you and I know that these two should not have been included with it so we are not paying you for it except for these three. Here is your money." It is the same situation with the ICD coding which is another means of billing the International Classification of Diseases where straight away when a doctor bills on an ICD form the insurance company immediately knows that this person did these six tests and will say, "That is excessive I am not going to pay for all of these, only four." So, it has immediately standardised it. The health insurance companies in the Cayman Islands now have had removed from them the excuses that I have come the Legislative Assembly, with the assistance of other Members of this House, and have created an impossible situation for them so they have to raise people's premiums. This has changed that situation.

Mr. Speaker, there is another little thought here in this regard and that is they are saying how it is going to cost them so much money to change their set up in their computers and so on for these plainly written four plans, and what it is going to do the industry supposedly and cause them to go out of business. I do not believe that, it is nonsense! If that was the case they have been crying for the past five or six years that they are losing money. That is the only private sector business that I have ever heard about that keeps losing money and keep on going. So, they cannot sell that story either!

Mr. Speaker, these Regulations here make a difference with the health insurance companies. The fact that the Members on the Opposition side have cited these things in contract 1 I absolutely agree with it. However, I would only say that when it was created my understanding from my enquires and what I have seen in the Hansard was to create a minimum basic package for in-patient care. If a seriously injured person goes to the hospital then the standard health contract would cover him or her more for in-patient. There is as one will see, twenty exclusions in that, but rather than try to pick out some of these and add them as the insurance companies, obviously are doing, three other contracts were created which brings transparency to the whole process and most of things excluded are now included between contracts 2 to 4.

Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for George Town both spoke about the situation with HIV. We are very fortunate in this country because it has been an ongoing situation for several years (more than a decade) now that the Government of the Cayman Islands has undertaken to provide medicines for people with HIV/AIDS.

Mr. Speaker, about three weeks ago I attended a World Health Assembly and one of the diseases that is killing millions of people is HIV. In fact, I forget the exact number that is dying every second in Africa in particular. We are lucky that we have a society that cares to the extent; that serious blocks of money are voted to take care of those persons who might fall outside of the realm of those who may have contracted it that they can pay for it. This is covered under the Public Health Law and it is an ongoing situation. Mr. Speaker, what is certain is that we need to continually increase the level of education and understanding among our people including the young about how their mode of behaviour may expose them to HIV. Therefore, they can take the necessary precautions because that is the only cure for HIV – not getting it. Once you have contracted it there is no cure. So, it is an ongoing concern and education is the best medicine to make sure that this does not spread.

If I am not mistaken I am told that there are twenty-odd cases known in Cayman now and those persons do receive treatment in a discrete manner and fortunately the major stigma and fear about this disease has been broken down to a considerable extent which makes it more manageable. I can also say that through the Red Cross there has been a significant programme and effort to educate young people. If I remember correctly it was the latter part of last year, I attended a meeting over at the Red Cross building and I was most impressed to listen to teenagers and hear them talk to one another at their level of understanding about it. They no doubt would be best messengers to their peers so efforts are on the way to educate in that regard.

Mr. Speaker, the two Members who spoke also raised the question of contraceptives as a means of keeping in check unwanted pregnancies. That is not covered in contract 1. Again, it is not something that is so expensive either so that is within the realm of persons being able to find $2 or $3 as the case may be per month to provide themselves with contraceptives. That is something which I think women—have a concern about getting pregnant or not—can take more personal responsibility for in that regard. It is not covered in this contract but I would, at a guess without trying to find it right now, say it is covered in the other contracts. If not, it falls within the realm of not too expensive.

Psychiatric care, Mr. Speaker, is a growing condition in this country. Fortunately, we have a mental health care unit at the Hospital now, but the two Members are quite right; it is growing and areas that it is growing in are areas covered by the big word “depression”. Again, I had the opportunity to listen to some presentations at the World Health Assembly on depression and there is a multitude of ways that people can be suffering a mental depression while they are not loony or doing crazy things, it can be an inward thing that is making them sick.

They are now recognising that depression comes in so many forms that the medical science needs to be aware that certain things presented as a medical problem is really more mental and it falls under this big term of depression. Certainly, Mr. Speaker, that is something we need to think about. There are areas I certainly never thought about like unemployment which may create a state of depression. Of course grief may do so. It may be a love affair gone wrong, it may be the hope of achieving something and having not done so. There are multitudes of areas.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, the Member is right: in the Legislative Assembly too. The type of torturous way of having to deal with my friend from East End and what not, could cause depression.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Or that we have to deal with Government.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, these are areas that all of us need to be conscious of by my one appeal is for the Honourable Members—and I know they have not had the amount of time with these amendments as I would have liked for them to have had—to take these amendments and look at them more carefully they will see in the areas where there has been amendment it has addressed a specific need for people, health care providers, and for the insurance companies.

Mr. Speaker, there is also the opportunity for persons to buy supplemental health insurance which, I think it was the Second Elected Member for George Town who alluded to the fact of optical not being available as supplemental coverage. A person may buy dental, buy optical and even alternative medicine from the coverage from the insurance companies. Over and above that, they may even include other things which they can have if agreed between themselves, the Health Insurance Commission and the health insurance companies. So, the story that is going around that because of government’s action trying to correct that which is wrong is driving up the costs of health insurance in this country, is not true. I would just like to add that since the formation of the Health Insurance Commission to further assist the health insurance companies, the insured person, the hospitals and the clinics.

The Health Insurance Commission is charged with coming up with what is called the usual customary and reasonable fee for everything. Again, what has been done is that the 7,000 procedures that are covered under the CPT coding a charge has been placed for every single one of them by the health insurance commission. That is now almost completed. I have had discussions with the health insurance management and actuaries that are now working for it, and within the next three to four weeks I would hope to be able to take to Cabinet recommendations from the Health Insurance Commission as to what are usual customary and reasonable fees. What that will do, Mr. Speaker, is, again, provide a transparency never heard of in this country and in most countries, for that matter.

However, what it will mean is that a patient can go to a doctor to have a certain procedure done and they can actually get a copy of that list of fees and they know exactly what amount their insurance company is required to pay. The doctor knows how much he can expect from the insurance company because the insurance company will not be required to pay more than the fee which is considered the usual customary and reasonable.

Mr. Speaker, I want to make the point that it is not true as is being said in certain quarters that the Government is trying to tell doctors how much to charge. They can charge any amount that they choose to charge but they will not get paid more from the insurance companies than what is prescribed in the usual customary and reasonable fee. Therefore, it means the insurance companies can get away from the excuse that doctor Y charges so much and doctor X charges so much so they have to keep raising their premiums. We are taking that excuse away too. They will know by going to the CPT coding how much they have to pay for the 7,000 procedures, so that excuse is also removed.

I would like to say that if I choose to go to any given doctor and just to note that using the CPT coding, which is the practice terminology commonly used for these procedures around the world, doctors will know exactly what they are going to be paid, the insurance companies will know what they have to pay, and the insured person will know what to expect. However, if someone chooses to go their particular doctor and that doctor likes to charge high fees, and may of them do, and the usual customary and reasonable fee is a thousand dollars for that procedure but their favourite doctor charges two thousand dollars, they must understand straight away that their insurance will pay for the thousand and they will have to pay for other thousand out of their pockets. However, again, it is believed that once the fees have been published, the doctors, clinics, hospitals are going look very carefully at what they are charging and try to bring their charges as close in line as they can with what they know the health insurance companies will be paying.

Mr. Speaker, it has been a long road to travel with this and I am sure that attempts will be made to close the holes left in these Regulations to be able to get around what is being done here. However, that is the way it is with legislation and when one finds the need for amendments then the thing to do is to bring those amendments to correct the situation.

I must say that I have been fortunate in that I think all Members of this House, Government side and Opposition side, share a common view with the problems which exist with the health insurance. Because of that it has been easier for us to move forward rather than having to fight our way through. Today the amendments here are simply an attempt to improve over and above where we have gone since July of last year. Using that date reminds us that when the insurance companies said these contracts have been sprung upon them is also untrue because they knew about these from last year July. So, if they have not done anything to cost these, it cannot be the fault of the Government in bringing about these amendments.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to recommend these amendments to the Health Insurance Regulation 2004 and I ask Honourable Members for their support.

The Speaker: The question is BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2004 be affirmed by the Legislative Assembly pursuant to the provisions of section 19(2) of the Health Insurance Law (2003 Revision).

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Government Motion No. 8/03 passed.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/03

Licensing of Fishermen to take Conch for Fishing

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 12/03, Licensing of Fishermen to take Conch for Fishing. It reads:-

"WHEREAS the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) prohibits the taking of conch from Cayman waters during the months of May to October inclusive;

"AND WHEREAS there are Caymanians who use conch for fishing during the said period of the year;

"AND WHEREAS there are Caymanian fishermen who depend on fishing for their livelihood;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government takes step to amend the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) to allow Caymanian fishermen to be licensed to take up the five conchs per day from Cayman waters during the months of May to October inclusive, for the sole purpose of fishing."

The Speaker: Is there a Seconder?

The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The question is be it therefore resolved that the Government takes steps to amend the Marine Conservation Law 2003 Revision to allow Caymanian fishermen to be licensed to take up to five conchs per day from Cayman waters during the months of May to October inclusive for the sole purpose of fishing.

The Speaker: The Motion is open for debate. Does the Member moving wish to speak to the Motion?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Motion that is being sponsored by me and seconded by the Lady Member from North Side, has come to this Honourable House as a result of representations by the populace and in particular, fishermen, in East End, North Side, Bodden Town, George Town, and to a lesser extent, West Bay and Cayman Brac.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that it is reasonable to call for a reasonable request of Government, in that, it is specifically asking for a particular section of society to be licensed. If I could refer to the Official Hansard Report of this Honourable House, in particular 27 November 2003, when Private Member's Motion No. 8/03 was brought by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac calling for an amendment to the Marine Conservation Law to affect the same thing as we are trying to get affected now. However, it was for the use of sea urchins by fishermen for the purpose of fishing. Mr. Speaker, that Member in his presentation of that Motion, said, and I quote, "Mr. Speaker, again, as mentioned earlier, this particular Motion aims at a cultural tradition. In the constituency of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, we have individuals—in Grand Cayman also, I am sure, especially in the district of East End, and perhaps in West Bay—who swear by the use of the short-spine sea egg as an instrument to assist them in catching their fish. They will tell you that with that particular bait they can give you a guarantee that they will catch that day. Without that bait, they cannot give such a guarantee." [page 1067]

Mr. Speaker, such is the case in point. The fishermen in East End and other areas in this country will guarantee you their fish if they have particular bait. What this Motion is calling for is for them in particular to have the ability to have the use of conch bait for fishing. The period of time that there is closure on the taking of conch is May to October inclusive. Those times are very important to be noted because during that time (as we speak) the snapper season is upon us. If you talk to any fisherman he will tell you that that is bait that snappers prefer, guaranteeing him his catch of snappers.

Mr. Speaker, while I have in my constituency of East End older men who are fishermen, who for whatever reason fish—some exclusively, others as a means of supplementing their livelihood. In most instances they are retired due to aging or for whatever reason that prevents them from carrying on their chosen vocation (their only means of income) there are a few younger ones who fish as well but in most instances they have a few day's work here or there.

I will try to avoid calling names but I will point out to the Government that we have some individuals in East End in their 80s and in their late 70s and I know there are other gentlemen throughout this country around that same age who fish exclusively. They have no other means of income. Mr. Speaker, many of these fishermen swear by their conch. I believe that it is the Caymanian tradition to go fishing in this country and it is fortunate that these people still have sufficient pride in them to take care of their own, albeit they are not sharing in the economic prosperity that this country enjoys. However, nevertheless they hold steadfast in that pride that they can provide for themselves and for their wives in most instances.

I think that we should applaud the fact that these people in their 70s and 80s continue to work and provide for their families. Mr. Speaker, many of them could very well ask for hand-outs which would make Government saddled again with people. I know the argument would be that there is bait substitute that can be used. While I understand that it certainly is not as effective as the conch and there is bait substitute for the fishermen who kept squabs with the sea-eggs also, the Government decided to accept the Motion by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac, which was, I might add, seconded by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay at the time.

I believe the Government accepted that on the grounds that it would be in the interest of the fishermen, and that is what I am asking them to also do now. I must point out on the issue of alternate bait for the catching of squabs there is such a thing as the soldier crabs, of which the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac spoke. He talked of how many of those can be caught in Cayman Brac which they too are very effective in catching squabs. So, when the Government accepted the Motion I understood they were doing it in the best interest of keeping a tradition alive.

Mr. Speaker, you know of some of these gentlemen, particularly in my district. You grew up among them and you know the pride they have in knowing that they can provide for themselves and that is the Caymanian way. I believe that giving them the opportunity to take a few conchs is not going to deplete the supply of conchs. What we find is that it is not those people who destroy the marine life. Ever since I came to this Honourable House I have been preaching and beseeching the Government to increase enforcement in these areas. I must pause and congratulate the Department of Environment over the last year and in particular over the last six to eight months. They have been doing an excellent job in the eastern ends of the Island. However, that is during 8 am to 5 pm; where we get the problem is that the younger generation is beating them at the game and they have changed their times approaching and they have gone to the nights. So, my argument still stands, we need (or almost) round-the-clock enforcement of these Laws, particularly the Marine Conservation Law.

Mr. Speaker, another argument that is going to come up is that it is going to be difficult to enforce licensing of a fisherman to take conch. How is it going to be enforced? I just said that the enforcement arm has been very active in my district and being an avid fisherman myself they have checked me on occasions. I have also seen them there checking boats on a daily basis. So, it is not as if they do not know. They know who the people are and they check the boats on a regular basis. Any boat that is on the water in East End is checked. Even these older people are checked to see if they are alright and what have you. So, there will not be a situation where they will not be able to enforce whether or not someone has conchs in their boats.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, if this is a convenient time for you to take a break we will take the luncheon break and return at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.00 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.55 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Elected Member for East End continuing his debate.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we took the luncheon break I was on the issue of enforcement of the Marine Conservation Law and I believe that I had adequately covered that.

Mr. Speaker, as I now restart the presentation of this Motion, I think it is necessary that I make it abundantly clear before we go any further, that all Members of the Opposition support the conservation of our marine environment. I think it is absolutely necessary that that be said, lest it be construed that this Motion is being brought because of our lack of support for the marine environment.

Mr. Speaker, one of the issues that I know many have concerns about is the definition of fishermen. When the lady Member for North Side and I did this Motion we used the words "Caymanian fishermen". That is extremely broad in definition when you think of 'Caymanian fishermen'. The intent was not that anyone who goes fishing be licensed to take up to five conchs per day for the sole purposes of fishing. It did not include them. What I thought was that those people who, traditionally, we know use fishing as a means of livelihood, people in our constituencies who do not have a steady income or a job earning a wage within the private or public sector. For instance, the Leader of the Opposition is an avid fisherman but he uses it in a recreational manner and so do I. There is no way that I or the Leader of the Opposition could apply for a license to take five conchs. That is not the intention.

At the beginning of this presentation I spoke of some members of my constituency who are retired for whatever reason; many times because of age, a few because of the lack of physical capabilities in their vocation so they take up fishing. Since then they have always been fishermen but have now taken it up on a full time basis as a means of livelihood. Those are the people that I am talking about. I know many young men in East End who go to work everyday and on weekends or evenings they will go fishing. Those are not the people that we are talking about here. I know we all have these individuals in our communities and in particular, in our constituencies that we represent. For instance, the West Bay district and its representatives know of many people in that district who live by the sea, do fishing commercially and they supplement their income significantly and they can live from fishing.

One Motion brought by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and seconded by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay to assist those people who use sea urchins for fishing.

Mr. Speaker, we all know of an individual in the district of North Side—the lady Member can deal with that—who through an accident is now incapable of holding a wage earning job, and that person farms and fishes. These are the people we are talking about. In Bodden Town . . . I know my cousin is not here but he has poked a bit of fun at me for the last few days. I am not poking any fun at him now, this is serious business.

Mr. Speaker, the two Ministers from Bodden Town recently started the construction of a ramp for their handful of fishermen to be able to launch their little boats right within the district. Other than that they would have to go to the Frank Sound ramp. Those two Ministers, in particular the Minister for Health and Agriculture, know about that and they must be complimented for trying after all these years to get a ramp in Bodden Town. During the lunch break, I had a conversation with the Minister for Health and Agriculture, and when I spoke to him concerning the definition of fishermen he could not even get a handful. So that tells you how truncated this section of our society is. It is but a few.

I would venture to say that there may be 15, maximum 20, people in East End who would qualify to have a licence. Perhaps in George Town we may get a little more. Let us stretch our imaginations and say that in this country, including Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, there may be a hundred and fifty people who would qualify. Mr. Speaker, I believe that it is worth it for us to maintain that tradition. The reality of life is that that is a dying breed in this country. I do not want to sound morbid but that is what it is. However, it will not be for that long.

As I said before, these people are full of pride. They want to be self-sufficient and they do not want to chase people down and hold their hands out. Can we not, as Legislators, distinguish these people and give them the privilege of maintaining their tradition?

Mr. Speaker, if this Motion is accepted we are, as I said earlier, looking at roughly one hundred and fifty people. Under the Law, all and sundry are allowed five conchs per person or ten per boat, whichever is less, during a season that runs from the end of October to the end of April. The Law allows for everyone to take conchs. If such was the case in what this Motion proposes, then I could understand. It would not be any different from what we had before. People go to get them during the open season so that they can eat. I do not propose that, Mr. Speaker; not everyone who goes out in a boat is a fisherman. I cannot consider myself any big time fisherman; I go fishing and hope for the best. These people go fishing and know what they are going to get, but they need the bait to get fish for their sales. In most instances, the conch is the preferred bait.

Mr. Speaker, I know the question of issuance of a licence will also be a concern by Members and most likely by the Department. I do not know how that would be a concern and I will try to explain. Form A in the Schedule under the regulations is application for a monthly fishing licence, which attracts a fee of $150. There is not much revision to be done to these schedules. The applications can be changed to say "application for licence to take conchs" and in the body of it there could be minor changes. Mr. Speaker, once we define fishermen; at the bottom of the application that is proposed in the Regulations—keeping in mind the Department has not started this yet as far as I understand—it says. "Please sign below indicating that all information provided in this application is true and complete. Any falsification or withholding of relevant information will result in denial or withdrawal of a fishing licence." So, Mr. Speaker, that excuse has now been nullified.

Mr. Speaker, if we as representatives want to go even further we could require that they sign an affidavit explaining in detail and affirming that they are fishermen who do not hold wage-earning jobs. Let us really look at the number of licences we have issued to allow Caymanians the right to carry on their tradition. Let me just pause here for a minute and I will come back to that.

I was out for lunch today and listening to the talk show when a lady called in and started to talk about the erosion of our traditions and values. I thought it was timely because here I am trying to impress upon the Government the same thing. We have members of our community talking about how we allow the external pressures to dictate how we live. There comes a time when a country must chart its course but it must not chart its course down a road that is entirely someone else's course. We must preserve some of the things that are uniquely ours. We are not the only country that has tried desperately to maintain that. I hear the Minister for Culture, the Honourable Roy Bodden's passionate plea to the people of this country to try and maintain their culture and heritage; seen in his financial proposals in developing that. I hear the Minister for Tourism and Leader of Government Business doing the same thing. This is part and parcel of their passionate plea for Caymanians to maintain their tradition. Remember, Mr. Speaker, I did not support the ban on conchs so all I am doing here is continuing my campaign for the tradition of this country to be maintained. That is all I am doing.

Mr. Speaker, please allow me to turn back to the types of licences we have issued in the interest of maintaining our tradition, so that our children can understand our uniqueness and they can experience it. Yes, Mr. Speaker, some may say, "Well, if we do not allow anyone to take conchs that would be part of that." That is true and I support that but if we do not allow the fishermen to continue taking and utilizing them in a judicial manner then we are losing that tradition too.

Mr. Speaker, there are at least five different things we have decided to continue to give licences for to maintain that tradition and ensure it stays alive. Let us look at them: One, turtling. CITES (Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora) has banned the hunting of turtles the whole world over. We, through the United Kingdom, are signatories to that international band. Nevertheless, the Legislators in this country saw the need to maintain the Caymanian tradition and they allowed the people who were initially trapping turtles to continue that, and they grandfathered them in. Then we look at seining of fish and we did the same thing. I am not condemning it because I support it but it must be on a limited basis.

We did the spear guns. Again, maintaining the tradition that is uniquely ours. I said five but another one came to me just now; fish pots. When the Bill was amended in 2002 I supported the ban on certain types of fish pots coming into this country, z-pots they call them. They are uniquely Jamaican. Ours is uniquely Caymanian and is 3ft x 4ft x 3ft. Some people would do them 2ft x 3ft x 4ft depending on who had to pull them up they would decide what size they had to make. It was a specific size mesh. In our days whenever we found ornamental fish in the fish pot we would throw them back over the side, nowadays we cannot take that chance. So the proposal was to increase the size of the mesh in order that they go out on their own, particularly when you are pulling it up they can swim out—and we have licensed Caymanian, again. Only Caymanians can have pots. That is what I am talking about. You think we did that because we just wanted to do it? No, my understanding was that we did it to maintain a tradition. We did to ensure that the children, even the unborn, will have the opportunity to see how we lived and maintain that tradition.

Recently, we got the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay bringing two Motions to amend the Marine Conservation Law to allow the taking of sea urchins, periwinkles, bleeding teeth and chitons for the use of our craftsmen for sale in the tourist industry and the resident population also. I supported all of those as long as it done on a limited basis so that we do not totally deplete our marine life. That is the same thing I am doing now, Mr. Speaker; limit it to those people who traditionally are fishermen. That is all the Members of the Opposition want.

As I said earlier, all the Elected Members in this Honourable Chamber know of the fishermen in their constituencies who would welcome this. I know those in my district would welcome it. Some of those in my district, Mr. Speaker, are your childhood friends and some of them are your disciplinarians, and mine too, when we were growing up. Those people must be respected for trying to continue to live the Caymanian way. We hear everyday on the radio and in private conversations of how our Caymanian tradition is becoming diluted, like adding too much water to the swanky. I wonder how many out there in radio land know what swanky is. The ones who listen will know but not too many around here know what it is. However, we know what adding more water to the swanky is going to do and we hear it everyday.

Even though we do add more water to the swanky, make sure we have enough so we can still have the taste of swanky with the brown sugar. That is my plea to the Government. I know all those Members of the UDP are going to be caught up in a moral dilemma here today if they oppose this because they have to report to their people. I do not want to ever be caught in that dilemma. I know there are Members on that side who will support this Motion. The Third Elected Member for West Bay has been on the water all his life, so much so, that we call him captain and he knows the value of maintaining that tradition because he has lived it. He has contributed to maintaining that uniqueness called Caymanian. He is one of those gentlemen who have continued this seaman thing. Caymanians have always been known to be good seamen and the Third Elected Member for West Bay is one of those people who have perpetuated that way of life because he has passed it on to his children as well.

Some of the younger ones in this Honourable Chamber do not know what it is to go to sea and that kind of stuff but they know of their parents who did it. It has been cut off and that is fine. I try to take my kids out as well but they are more interested in computers so at some stage it is going to be cut off. I hope that I will not die a natural death anytime soon because it is necessary for us to preserve some of the tradition that we have enjoyed and that has sustained us for hundreds of years. Let us not just cut off our nose to spite our face.

Mr. Speaker, I am a little bit concerned that the Members for Cayman Brac are not here, especially the Second Elected Member. I do not know if that is out of convenience because the Motion was coming today and they might have to support the Government on it. However, I am sure because he said to me that he had many members of his constituency who would like to be able to take up to five conchs for fishing. I am not going that far to say that he is conveniently absent, I would not do that but it is unfortunate that he is and also the Minister of Planning and First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, because she knows about these things. Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: Just to say Honourable Member that the Honourable Minister for Planning and First Elected Member for Cayman Brac did in fact give her apologies that she has to be out of the Chambers attending a very important meeting at this point. So, I do not think she has deliberately avoiding the debate.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I do apologize if you got the impression that I said the Minister. I said it is unfortunate that she is not here because she understands. I was not going that far to say that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac was conveniently absent. I would not go that far.
Mr. Speaker—

Mr. V. Arden McLean: . . . as I was saying these Members are all aware of what I am trying to impress upon them. If it is necessary to define fishermen in the Motion then fine. We can move an amendment to the Motion to that effect. I do not have a problem with that. I know some Members may be a little concerned of the sweeping definition of a fisherman so I am prepared to do that or accept if someone wants to move it, which ever way. If I hear the Deputy Leader gets up in reply and say that then I will certainly be quite receptive to that.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that it can be policed. I believe there are many ways of doing it. Unfortunately some of us believe that we can legislate certain things and impose upon the people certain laws in order that they do not do it but you cannot legislate morality. If you legislate to the point where you kill the people it is for naught. I believe that these are honest, genuine Caymanians from one end of this country, including Cayman Brac, to the other end. In a debate earlier on in 2002 I talked about the resistance that Sir Vassel received when he brought this into being while he was the Minister responsible at that time during the 1984-88 administration. The resistance this man received 20 years ago from the same people that I am talking about in East End today are now defending the protection of the marine environment. I saw them go at him the night that he was in that church hall talking about taking away their tradition and way of life, but Sir Vassel steered his course. Thank God he did. Otherwise today people like me would not be in this Honourable House trying to keep the tradition alive. It would have died a long time ago. I thank him and applaud him. No wonder he was knighted; he deserved that. Just for this alone he deserved that. Not all the financial thing: that came into it, but just this in my humble submission he was deserved to be knighted. I wonder who is going to be knighted for maintaining our tradition and continuing the work that he started.

There is much to protect still, not only the marine environment but our tradition, Mr. Speaker. We are taking it away. I know my good cousin from Bodden Town is going to support me in my efforts to maintain our tradition. I look forward to the acceptance of this Motion by the Government and if it is conditional then that is fine, we can look at that.

Mr. Speaker, I do not want to hold us up any longer in this presentation. I think I have done enough to show the Government the necessity for accepting this Motion and to amend the Regulations to allow the fishermen (who carry this tradition on) up to five conchs for the purposes of fishing. If it is necessary that the legislators have to get involved in their individual constituency then so be it. That is part of their responsibilities. They must work! However, we want to have it nice and easy without having to identify the people who do this type of vocation, if we can call it that, for a living. I am prepared to submit names of people that I know for sure. I am not prepared to be dishonest with it and be carte blanche with it. Anyone who wants me to do that I am sorry but I cannot. I know there are some good, honest men in that community called East End who will welcome this provision and who will respect that the Legislators in this country respect their pride.

Mr. Speaker, I commend all of them for their restraint in trying to keep the marine environment in tact and I now recommend this Motion to this Honourable House in the hopes that all Members will see the need from a moral and country perspective to support his worthy Motion.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

ADJOURNMENT

The Health Practice (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

This is a very small requirement of this Honourable House to make a few amendments to The Health Practice Law.

Prior to the debate, may I ask that the law to amend The Health Practice Law (Amendment) be given a Second Reading.

The Speaker: Before calling on the Honourable Minister of Health to speak to the Bill, I would like to mention that I have indeed received apologies from the Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture, the Second Elected Member for Cayman

Brac and Little Cayman and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town whose aunt, I understand, has passed away. We would like to publicly extend to him our very deepest sympathies.

The Honourable Minister of Health Services continuing.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I acknowledge that it took longer than anticipated to establish the necessary infrastructure to make The Health Practice Law, 2002 operational, but I am pleased to inform Members of this Honourable House that the Law came into effect on 1 June 2004.

This Law provides a more flexible and encompassing legal structure than before.

The new framework allows the Minister of Health Services to ensure that public health is protected through more detailed and sophisticated regulation of health professionals and institutions in which health services are provided.

Members will be aware that a Health Insurance Commission has also been established under the Ministry of Health Services.

The Health Practice Law, 2002 also allows for the establishment of a Health Commission.

In order to avoid a possible confusion by establishing another Commission, the Bill before the House seeks to change the name of the Health Commission to the Health Practice Commission. The functions of this Commission are different from those of the Health Insurance Commission. If passed as the Health Practice Commission, the role is to advise the Minister of Health on policy relating to health practice in the Islands and to provide guidance and monitor the performance of four separate, professional councils. Namely, the Medical and Dental Council, the Nursing and Midwifery Council, the Pharmacy Council and the Council for Professions Allied with Medicine.

Each of the four councils is responsible for ensuring that only properly qualified and experienced health professionals are permitted to provide health services in the Cayman Islands. They also provide continuing education and ensure that proper, professional conduct is maintained.

The Health Practice Commission will also advise the Director of Planning on applications for the development of health care facilities and oversee the certification and inspection of these facilities.

A well-informed public is a crucial element in helping to control the cost of health care in these Islands. Prior to receiving treatment, it is reasonable to say that a person should know the fees their doctor charges for health care services, the amount their insurance company will reimburse the practitioner and what portion the patient would be responsible for paying.

To facilitate this, Clause 4 of the Bill would amend Section 10 of The Health Practice Law, 2002 to state that the manager of a health care facility should display—instead of provide upon request—a list of fees charged by the facility for all health services provided there.

Mr. Speaker, I bring to the attention of this Honourable House that the Cayman Islands Medical and Dental Association have, for almost a year, published what they see as their usual customary and reasonable fees in Current Procedural Terminology (CPT) coded form. Therefore, I am not talking about something that is strange nor am I attempting to invent the wheel in this regard. It would simply mean that instead of a patient having to ask what the fees are, the medical professional would have the fees in a booklet form and the patient can see exactly what his/her doctor is charging for a particular procedure.

The Bill also contains miscellaneous amendments to the Schedule. For example, in Clause 6 it lists medical technologist as a separate profession from medical laboratory technicians under Schedule 6, as these are two separate categories of laboratory personnel.

When I began I said that this is a very short amending Bill, simply an attempt to clarify a few areas in the Law. As such, I recommend them to Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, just to thank Honourable Members for their tacit approval of these amendments.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Health Practice (Amendment) Bill, 2003 be given a second reading. The reason that I mentioned that it should be 2003 is that we are still into the 2003 Session, and the 2004-2005 Session will commence with the opening of the House with the Governor's Throne Speech.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Health Practice (Amendment) Bill, 2003 read a second time.

The Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, this Bill is also an amending Bill and it proposes to amend The Health Insurance Law (2003 Revision) to effect miscellaneous amendments relating to health insurance contracts.

Clause 1 of the Bill provides for the short title.

Clause 2, among other things, amends Section 2 of the principal Law to redefine the term "spouse" as a Caymanian or a person entitled to reside in the Islands in accordance with the Immigration Law 2003.

Clause 3 inserts into the principal Law a new Section 2(a), making it an offence for a person other than an approved insurer, to issue a contract of health insurance, to provide insurance coverage in respect of health care benefits relating to a person resident in the Islands.

Clause 4 amends Section 3 of the principal Law to provide an age limitation in respect of a seaman applying for health insurance.

Clause 5 repeals and replaces Section 11 of the Principal Law to enable a person to conclude with an insurer, in addition to a standard health insurance contract—contracts 1 to 4—any other contract of health insurance providing for supplemental health care benefits that are greater than those contained in a standard health insurance contract. The term "supplemental health care benefits" means -

- (a) dental benefits;
- (b) vision benefits; and
- (c) alternative medicine benefits.

Clause 6 amends Section 14(a) of the principal Law to delete the requirement for the Commission to publish, in the Gazette, health benefit fees charged by health care facilities and medical practitioners.

Mr. Speaker, this was an oversight when the Law was first passed because it was never the intention that medical practitioner's fees would be published in the Gazette. What will be published in the Gazette are the usual customary and reasonable fees, which will be determined by The Health Insurance Commission, after receiving the fees from the various medical practitioners and an actuarial study is done to determine what can be accepted nationally as the usual customary and reasonable fee.

Clause 7 repeals and replaces Section (15) of the Principal Law to require a person providing medical care to submit his claim for recovery of a sum due in respect of the medical care, not later than one hundred and eighty days after the medical care has been provided - unless there is a good excuse.

Clause 8 corrects a clerical error.

Clause 9 contains savings provisions that preserve the existing rights of a non-Caymanian or non-resident spouse who is currently covered under a contract of health insurance. By virtue of the clause, that spouse will continue to be treated as a spouse, for the purposes of the new Law, and will continue to be covered by that contract of health insurance, until the expiry of the contract of health insurance.

Mr. Speaker, those are the amendments proposed in this amending Bill, and as such, they are before this Honourable House for it to express its will.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition and First Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, these amendments will bring about improvements to the Law itself and the effect of the operations of the providers and those who are insured.

There are a couple of points which I wish to raise while my colleagues are digesting what the Honourable Minister has said in his presentation. For me it is a bit of confusion when we speak to an approved provider. In the main law there is reference to an approved provider and there is a definition for that. However, in the amending Bill, Section 3 says that the principal Law is amended by inserting after Section 2 the following section, which is Section 2A. This section reads: "2A (1) No person carrying on business in or from within the Islands, other than an approved insurer, shall issue a contract of health insurance to provide insurance cover in respect of health care benefits relating to a person resident in the Islands."

Subsection (2) reads: "(2) Any person who contravenes subsection (1) is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine of twenty thousand dollars and to imprisonment for one year, and in the case of a continuing offence to a fine of one thousand dollars for each day during which the offence continues."

Others may not, but I question the absolute clarity of this. I wonder if there are individuals or institutions within the Islands who, for one reason or the other, may have access to health insurance provided from entities outside the country. I do not know if that is the case. I do not know how many instances there are, but we speak to an approved provider in the main Law and the definition "approved provider" means an insurer licensed under the Insurance Law 2003 (Revision) as a class 'A' insurer and approved by the Authority to provide standard health insurance contracts. Obviously, an approved insurer is one who has to be licensed locally by the authorities.

The new section 2(A) speaks to anyone carrying on business in or from within the Islands. My question is, if it is a case that there are individuals or entities who are now being insured, or who have access to being insured through entities that do not have a class A insurers license, what does that do for that situation?

If we look back on the Health Insurance Amendment Regulations, which we dealt with yesterday, I directed the House to part 3, on page 10 of the Health Insurance Amendment Regulations. Part 3 deals with part benefits which may be excluded under a standard health insurance contract. The second line says that "benefits will not be provided in connection with". It simply and clearly states that benefits will not be provided in connection with a list of things. That long list includes dental and treatment for visual deficiencies, etcetera.

In the new Bill, under the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, we have: "Clause 5 repeals and replaces section 11 of the principal Law to enable a person to conclude with an insurer, in addition to a standard health insurance contract, any other contract of health insurance providing for supplemental health care benefits that are in addition to those contained in a standard health insurance contract. The term "supplemental health care benefits" means -

- (a) dental benefits;
- (b) vision benefits; and
- (c) alternative medicine benefits."

The regulations state that benefits will not be provided in connection with a standard health insurance contract and it includes those three benefits that were just mentioned.

The amendments to the Law says, "Notwithstanding section 3, nothing in this Law shall be construed as preventing any person from concluding with any approved insurer, in addition to a standard health insurance contract, any other contract of health insurance providing for himself ..."

When we speak to a standard health insurance contract and an insurance company providing these options, as I know, to date there are no separate policies/contracts. Therefore, we need to understand whether these benefits that can be negotiated have to be done as a separate contract or as an addition to the standard contract. If we have to go into a separate contractual arrangement, then I guess the world is going to have to live with it. However, I would suspect that would be more cumbersome than one would want it.

If you have standard contracts and they exclude certain things, you want the ability to allow the person who is to be insured to pay the extra amounts. After they are told what the amounts are, one would think they should be allowed to be able to add these benefits to that contract. What we are asking is how far do we have to separate the ability to have additional benefits once the adjustments on the premium are accepted by both parties and contracted for? Do we have to deal with separate issues or do we simply have an addendum or addition to that contract.

I bring this up because (without going into the details), there are four contracts listed as the standard health insurance contracts. Each one is incremental in the coverage that it provides, and obviously, it will be incremental in the premium that it will attract. With the four contracts having separate benefits and premiums, we look to the repealed section 11 being looked at in this Bill, and the new section 11 being substituted. The new one simply says, "Notwithstanding section 3, nothing in this Law shall be construed as preventing any person from concluding with any approved insurer, in addition to a standard health insurance contract, any other contract of health insurance providing for himself, his employees, his spouse or his children supplemental health care benefits that are in addition to those contained in a standard health insurance contract..." I am reading from page 7 of the new Health Insurance Amendment Bill, section 5 which speaks to repealing the existing section 7 of the Law and substituting the following section.

Are we saying that these additional benefits being proposed in the Bill speaks to these additional benefits as if none of them are included in any of the four contracts? If we pick up any one of these four contracts and we have the additional benefits — which an employer or employee, or whatever entity it is, wishes to have and is prepared to pay the additional premium — do we have to speak to a separate contract? Do we have the ability to adjust whichever one of those four existing contracts we have with whatever additional benefits there are?

As I see it, unless methodology does not call for that to happen, if you have two separate contracts you must attract two separate premiums which will double the administrative work. Claims will have to be made under two separate contracts and the like. When we speak to those kinds of numbers in the health insurance industry, if we are talking about fifteen thousand contracts, we go this route and add another six or eight thousand contracts to it, there has to be a tale told in the administrative cost of this. So, while it may not seem an important point, we are looking at the possibility of huge numbers.

Therefore, I ask the Minister to clarify the point. Are we physically speaking of a new contract from the insurer to the insured for these additional benefits? Will it be the case that whichever one of the four standard contracts a person has from an insurer, can any additional benefits not included in the original contract be added or are we dealing with a separate contract?

The way it is worded tells me it would have to be a separate contract. I say there must be a way to conclude business without having to go that route. It will certainly add a huge, administrative load to the entire process with the policies themselves, the regular premiums, the claims and the payments from A-Z in the entire process.

Those were the main points that I found when looking at the Bill. These are certainly not points which cause us to not want to support the Bill, but they are points which we raise because we believe that they should be examined prior to final passage.

It is possible that some of my colleagues may have some other points, but certainly they will have the opportunity to raise those before the Minister replies. Presently, those are my two main points, and I hope that the Minister can address them prior to us voting on the Bill.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Minister for Health Services wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Firstly, I wish to thank the Member who spoke and raised the points which he did.

The first point I would like to clarify is that there are persons on the Island who had prior coverage/insurance before coming to the Cayman Islands which they chose to keep. The amendments here attempt to ensure that all insurance companies and insurance providers are regulated within the Island. Therefore, the Health Insurance Commission is able to carry out the function and see what the companies are doing.

The reason it is necessary to clearly define an approved provider is because certain smart aleck insurance companies in our country said, and indeed committed to writing, that they were not regulated by the Health Insurance Commission. They were a 'Class A' insurance company and saw themselves as outside the regulatory Health Insurance Commission. Therefore, they could charge whatever price they wanted and offer whatever contracts of insurance they pleased. The whole issue was that they were attempting to say they were licensed by the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority so they were not under the Health Insurance Commission.

The Law, even as it originally stood, stated that to be a health insurance company you had to offer the basic package. Therefore, from the time they were offering the first basic package, as it was called, it put them under the regulatory function of the Health Insurance Commission. They offered health insurance and the only contract that was prescribed in the Law was the basic package. However, they tried to say they were not and they saw that as a loop hole to do as they chose. This definition offers assurance that there is no more doubt and that all companies offering health insurance in the Cayman Islands are regulated by the Health Insurance Commission.

The other point raised by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition was if supplemental insurance would be in addition to the contracts. The answer to that is yes. The reason is because the actuarial calculations have been done using the four contracts as set out in the regulations, and in that way, the Health Insurance Commission is able to see what is happening with premiums and what is happening across the board. It levels the playing field in that regard, but it does not hinder a person from contracting for additional coverage for dental, vision and alternative medicine under a separate contract.

I have seen examples of it during discussions with some of the administrators from Baptist Hospital, where even though they have what might be termed "basic coverage", if they want vision and dental it is approximately $15 extra in one instance and $10 in another. It was a supplemental add-on to the basic medical coverage they had.

It is not that it is something unusual, but this would be something negotiated with the Health Insurance Providers over and above contracts, at least, 2, 3, and 4. The Member rightly pointed out that in Contract 1 there is a whole list of exclusions which say "it shall not be", but it is specific to that particular contract.

Mr. Speaker, these amendments, again, are an attempt to clarify, correct and plug certain loopholes that have come to light for the Health Insurance Commission in the past months. I have no doubt that the clever people who offer health insurance will find other loopholes. In turn, the Government will have to respond in the best way it can to make sure that it is entirely transparent to both the company, the insured person and those who deliver healthcare. That is what these few amendments attempt to do.

Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled "The Health Insurance Amendment Bill, 2003" be given a second reading. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Health Insurance Amendment Bill, 2003 has been given a Second Reading.

Agreed. The Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill 2003 read a second time.

The Roads (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Roads.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill to amend the Roads Law (2002 Revision) for the purpose of abolishing the Highway Authority and transferring its powers to the National Roads Authority and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Again, Mr. Speaker, this is what we could term "consequential amendments" due to having the National Roads Authority approved yesterday. In very brief summary, the Roads (Amendment) Bill, 2003 seeks to amend the Roads Law (2002 Revision) for the purpose of abolishing the Highway Authority and transferring its powers to the National Roads Authority.

There is a recurring amendment in the Bill that refers to decisions made by the Governor changing to include the requirement to act on the recommendations of the National Road Authority. There is a new section, as well, included in the Bill that provides for the enforcement of standards for private roads. It also provides for the option of owners of existing, as well as future, private roads to carry out work at their own cost, in order to meet minimum standards.

Mr. Speaker, the Bill before this Honourable House makes it possible to effect the transition from a Highway Authority to a National Roads Authority, and as such, I recommend it to Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition and First Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Sir.

As the Minister has intimated, the main purpose of the Roads (Amendment) Bill, 2003 is to amend the Roads Law (2000 Revision) for the purpose of abolishing the Highway Authority and transferring its powers to the National Roads Authority. To this end, we are in full agreement with the Bill. In fact, as we read the Bill, we move straight through from section 1 thru section 15 of the Bill. We see, as the Minister has said, it is simply a matter of consequential amendments substituting the words "Road Authority" for Highway Authority.

However, we have a huge problem with the section the Honourable Minister just mentioned in the last part of his delivery. He really added it as just another consequential amendment. As the Bill reads now, the Opposition cannot support the Bill, and I will explain why.

Mr. Speaker, section 16 reads, with your permission, Sir; "The principal Law is amended by inserting, after section 18, the following section –" which speaks to, as the marginal note refers, "Enforcement of standards for private roads." Mr. Speaker, the very first sentence of the new section 18A. (1) "This section applies to all private roads whether constructed before or after the date of commencement of this Law." So, this Bill speaks to every existing private road and those to come. Mr. Speaker, draconian is not the right word for this; we have to try to invent another word in the Queens English if this Bill is going to remain as it is.

Mr. Speaker, besides proposing retroactive legislation, it is going to be physically impossible and it will create the type of hardships that are unbearable, in many instances, for existing private roads. Many existing private roads are not the roads owned by the rich and famous, who close them off once a year with a gateway or a piece of chain running across to keep it private, with proper dimensions and so on. Many private roads that are still block and parcel with the names of individuals attached to them are roads for families who live close to each other; family land being allowed to be subdivided without the width or the level of construction of the road that is required by law today.

Mr. Speaker, people have built houses, built their fences and have done all sorts of things that this would disrupt. I am absolutely certain, in my mind, that somebody did not realise what they were doing when they crafted the Law in this manner. Now, Mr. Speaker, we would totally agree that, from hereon in, this is the way it has to be and these are the standards that have to be set.

When we move to section 17 of the Bill and it says that "The principal Law is amended in section 19 as follows – [and we go to subsection] (b) by inserting, after paragraph (e) the following paragraph - "(ea) "prescribing standards for the dimensions, design, maintenance, and improvement of private roads with a view to ensuring the safety of persons using these roads."

Mr. Speaker, I wonder if anybody stopped to think that if this is allowed to pass in this manner, what chaos there will be in the outer world, outside of these Chambers in which we would have participated. Mr. Speaker, in those instances, it is not a question of whether we want the roads to be like the other roads. That is wishful thinking and it would be wonderful if it could happen, but in many instances, physically to make it happen is impossible. We could go, perhaps, a half mile from these precincts and prove that. We could go into every single district throughout these Islands and prove that. My colleagues and I are not going to go down in history participating in that.

So, Mr. Speaker, we are all for the amendments, we are all for the new section 17 which will allow for the prescribing of standards for private roads. However, you see, Mr. Speaker, whoever did it knew, and that is why it is so shocking. Everything that reads after what I read earlier tells you how they are going to do it too. With your permission, Mr. Speaker, allow me to refer to the new subsection 3 to really make the point and then I will conclude.

The new 18(a) subsection 2 reads, "Where the dimensions", now this is after 1, and I will just read all of them in sequence together again so that we all gather the picture. The new 18(a) subsection 1 reads, "This section applies to all private roads whether constructed before or after the date of commencement of this Law." subsection 2 reads, "Where the dimensions and design of a private road do not conform to the standards prescribed by regulations made under section 19(e)(a)" which is what I just read a minute ago, "the owner of the private road shall, after receiving a notice thereof in writing from the Roads Authority, forthwith at his own cost carry out road works on the private road to secure compliance with the regulations and in the event of non-compliance with such a notice by the owner, the Roads Authority may cause road works to be carried out on the private road in such a manner as the Authority may think fit to secure compliance with the regulations."

Subsection (3) goes on to read, "Where the Roads Authority causes roadwork to be carried out on a private road under subsection 2 (a) the Roads Authority may, without giving notice authorize any persons to enter upon any private road for the purpose of causing the road works to be carried out; and (b) neither the Roads Authority nor any person authorized by the Authority shall be liable for any damage occasioned by the road works unless the same is caused by such persons' wilful neglect or default; and (c) the cost of the road works shall be defrayed by the owner of the private road [and to bring in the Honourable Second Official Member into it too] and shall be recoverable as a civil debt without prejudice to the penal and civil liabilities of the owner of the private road."

Subsection (4) reads, "The powers conferred by subsections 2 and 3 are in addition to and not in derogation of the powers conferred upon the CPA to enforce planning control under section 21 of the Development and Planning Law (1999 Revision)."

So Mr. Speaker, why I said that however this was crafted was in line with retrospective legislation is because what I just read is not something with which we would disagree. If the Law read so people knew that and they built a private road that did not conform to the standards, it has in here that the powers conferred by subsections 2 and 3 are in addition to and not in derogation of. What it means is that when they go through the planning process, these conditions for the construction of private roads are going to have to be added to the approval criteria for the individual or entity. The Roads Section of the Public Works (upon approval the National Roads Authority), I am certain will have their association with the Central Planning Authority just like the Fire Service does and the other agencies. These agencies make up part of the conditions of approval of any type of development, whether it is a road or house or whatever.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, when we speak to any new private roads and these conditions having to be met, we do not have a problem with that. However, I will make a comparison, and I will say that if we approve this piece of legislation as it is worded, it would be the same thing as approving a new piece of legislation under the Planning Law to say that every single home in the Cayman Islands must be a minimum of 1,500 square feet. It would be a similar situation, so that means every single home that is less than 1,500 square feet, in the Cayman Islands, would have to be increased to 1,500 square feet. The reason why majority of the people who own a home less than 1,500 square is because they cannot afford one that is more. Mr. Speaker, I am absolutely certain that my point is made. I rest my case, and we await the verdict.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

We were hoping that we would have had some sort of response from the Government and their supporting Backbench, but it looks that they have left the Honourable Minister to deal with this one on his own. Mr. Speaker, I just wish to add my voice to that of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition in relation to this whole question of private roads, their state and their upkeep. This whole question about private roads is one that has plagued the Country for many, many years and Government does have a very difficult situation, quite a dilemma I should say, in relation to how we cope with private roads. Over the course of the development of this Country, particularly over the course of the last 30 years, and the growth of subdivisions, roads were permitted to be put in during the early days to very minimum standards, if any standards at all. Once the developer had reaped his profit from it they tended to walk away from the subdivisions, leaving the roads, which had been built to not very high standards in the first place, to fall into a state of disrepair.

Government then is plagued by complaints from those who live and use those roads and eventually Government is called upon to do what Government always has to do. That is, to step in, fix what has gone wrong, bring the roads up to standard and then usually the roads become gazetted, (probably before they are actually repaired) then become public roads. So, we do understand the dilemma of Government under situations like this, but as the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has said, we believe that what is being proposed now is radical and draconian. It will cause tremendous problems, hardships to many individuals and impractical in some respects.

There are many private roads which have perhaps one, maybe two, houses on the road or adjacent to the road. In other instances, you are going to find situations where the road is still in the Land Registry with a block and parcel number registered in the developer's name but the developer is long gone. He no longer has any interest in the property and this would require him now to bring that road up to the new standards. Failing that, the Authority will step in, have it done, and send him a bill. If he does not pay it, then the amounts owed are recoverable as a civil debt.

Mr. Speaker, that is impractical because it seeks to impose, retroactively, a responsibility and a liability which was not otherwise there. I am afraid, Mr. Speaker, that while Government is still going to have to negotiate this very difficult issue of what should be the standards of private roads in the future, I think that we are going to have to take stock of what exists now. An assessment is going to have to be made about the standards of those roads. Government cannot seek to impose on the people who live on those roads or the developers of those roads, responsibility now to bring them up to what are the modern standards and expect them to bear that cost. That is simply not going to be acceptable, Mr. Speaker, and as the Leader of the Opposition has said, we cannot support the Bill which seeks to impose that retroactive burden on developers or persons who are responsible for the upkeep of private roads.

Now, as to the future, Mr. Speaker, again we are met all the time by persons who are seeking to develop subdivisions and we are not talking about the big subdivisions or the gated communities which are in vogue in some parts of this Country. However, subdivisions of property which is family owned or owned by, shall I say, ordinary people who propose anywhere from six to two dozen lots in a particular subdivision.

The dilemma of Government is what sort of road standards ought to be required for the smaller subdivisions. I understand that very well, given what has happened in the past with the insistence of roads being paved with barba grain and then asphalt concrete. The mandate was that it be 30 feet wide, road reserves to allow for the Water Authority, CUC, Cable & Wireless and all those things. We appreciate that, but the result of having to meet these requirements in relation to these smaller subdivisions is that it significantly drives up the cost of the lot to a point where either the development is unviable or the lots are so expensive that the average person cannot buy them.

I believe that some sort of medium has got to be reached where we do not place unnecessary, financial burdens on developers of smaller size subdivisions whose principal market for those lots would be the local population. Since we are getting to a point in this Country where the average person finds just the purchase of a lot of land out of their reach that is not in the overall interest of the Country and is certainly not in the best interest of the native people of this Country. So, that is a dilemma I know that has to be faced and there is no easy answer to it. That perhaps, is an argument for another day, but certainly in relation to existing private roads, these provisions that are proposed in section 18(a) of this amending Bill are retroactive in nature; they will have tremendous financial impact on the persons responsible for those private roads and they are impractical in many respects.

I just wish to lend my voice to that of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to say that in this form, the Opposition cannot and will not support this Bill. I urge the Honourable Minister to take steps to try to mitigate the harshness of this provision. We understand what they are seeking to achieve, but this is really going much too far and is bound to cause great hardship. I believe in the short run, let alone the long run, the Honourable Minister is going to be met with a tremendous outcry from the persons to whom this will affect. I would urge him and the Government to reconsider this provision and let us see if we can remould it in a way that the Opposition can support what is otherwise a commendable effort by the Government to place the National Roads Authority and the whole question of roads on a correct and appropriate footing.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business and Minister for Works wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I think the Second Elected Member for George Town, who just spoke, did a sufficient job of explaining the national situation in regards to private roadways on the Island and in subdivisions particularly.

The Cayman Islands Government has spent millions of dollars and it must continue to spend millions of dollars to fix the roads in old subdivisions in the Cayman Islands. It was never the intention of the Government, me or the Ministry, to create anything in this Law which would cause an impossibility or a hardship for people who are living in some of the older subdivisions I can think, which are many. In fact, in the eastern districts most of the subdivisions were built in the mid 70's and a before; most of them have been there for many, many years. To attempt to apply, retroactively, the requirements here would indeed create a hardship, and I can assure the Members raising this, and all the Members of this House, that for the words in 18(a) "whether" and the words before "and" "or", I have requested legal drafting to remove them and they will come as an amendment to this Bill.

Mr. Speaker, such was not intended, but I think that debate is always good. I believe that it makes a whole lot of sense. Like the tree that withstands the hurricane-force wind, you can bend with it because if you stand too unbending, then the hurricane breaks the tree, the Government is willing to do what is right where good cause is clearly seen and shown.

I must say that the retroactive aspect of this really slipped by me until this moment in time. As you know, Mr. Speaker, a Minister does not get the chance to read word-for-word every single piece of legislation that comes here. However, that is where the opposition came in and I think they did an excellent job this morning. I in turn did an excellent job in responding to remove the offending clause.

Mr. Speaker, I will also be asking to add a phrase under section 18 of the Amending Bill on page 11, 18(a)(ca) which reads "owns a private road". I will ask legal drafting to insert the words "con- structed after the date of commencement of this law", so it is absolutely clear what the law is speaking to. Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Member should be aware that it is only right to bring water to some of these older subdivisions and for Government to correct these roads because the people who built these subdivisions 25 – 30 years ago are no longer around. A lot of them have left this Island while the road is there and the people who are living on it are the ones who have to deal with it.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Or left this earth.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Or left this earth. It will be something which Government will have to look to do over the long term. It will be an expense to Government because many of the people who were able to buy those subdivisions those days, even though they have lived through and built their houses and so on, would not necessarily be financially able to pay now even to have the roadwork which would pass the frontage of their homes. So, these are just realities we have to be aware of and understand that that is one other beckoning cost to Government in the future.

One of the things I believe, Mr. Speaker, that we need to do – and it is certainly something that I have spoken with the Chief Engineer about – was also something eluded to by the Second Elected Member from George Town. The cost of roads in subdivisions, if we make the requirements so incredibly high, (particularly the hot mix part of it) the largest cost in buying a lot of land can be paying for the road. The paving with hot mix has zoomed off somewhere into outer space in terms of cost, so this is a reality that we have to look at and I have spoken with the Chief Engineer in this regard. I believe that there is scope for looking at where there are small subdivisions of, say, six lots or thereabouts and it should be sufficient to have two coats of "spray and chip", as it is called, or bitumen surface dressing. Mr. Speaker, you would certainly understand what I am talking about, and I think most Members do. The larger, more upscale subdivisions with more lots will have more traffic so those should require hot mix asphalt.

These are realities, Mr. Speaker, that I believe really need to be addressed. That is something which I will certainly be putting recommending to Government, that we can set standards along those lines as a policy so that it is adequate to the need.

Mr. Speaker, having addressed those points, I think that we can take comfort that this Bill is simply trying to tidy up and correct the consequential amendments which were needed due to the fact that we have passed the National Roads Authority. I thank Members for their participation in the debate process and I recommend it to this Honourable House.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Roads (Amendment) Bill, 2003 be given a second reading.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Roads (Amendment) Bill 2003 read a second time.

The Endangered Species (Trade and Transport) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business and Minister for the Environment.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I move a Bill for a law to give effect to the Provisions of the Convention on International Trade and Endangered Species of wild fauna and flora, commonly called CITES, to help conserve wild populations of endangered and threatened species of animals and plants by controlling trade, transport, and related activities in designated species and in products derived from them and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to introduce to this Honourable House the Endangered Species (Trade and Transport) Bill, (2003), which seeks to give effect to the provisions of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of flora and fauna and help conserve wild populations of endangered and threatened species of animals and plants. The Convention on international trade in endangered species of wild fauna and flora is an international agreement between governments. Its aim is to ensure that international trade in specimens of wild animals and plants does not threaten their survival.

The provisions of CITES, Mr. Speaker, were extended to the Cayman Islands in 1976 and I remember well that it caused a furore in the Country affecting, probably even before or by 1978, the trade of the Turtle Farm. This Bill, Mr. Speaker, has been published in White Paper form for the past two years. We tabled it two years ago in 2002 so that, Mr. Speaker, Members would have sufficient time to understand the parameters and the intentions of this piece of legislation.

Mr. Speaker, although the Cayman Islands have been party to CITES for almost 30 years, I believe that the public's knowledge of the Convention and how it works is limited. I therefore believe that it would be useful to provide information on CITES and how it works.

CITES works by subjecting international trade and specimens of selected species to certain controls. These require that all import/export or re-export and introduction from the sea of species covered by the Convention have to be authorised through a licensing system. Re-export means the export of a specimen that was imported. The species covered by CITES are listed in three appendices according to the degree of protection they need.

Appendix 1 includes species threatened with extinction. Trade in specimens of these species is permitted only in exceptional circumstances. Species in this appendix can be found in Part 1, Column 1 of the Schedule of the Bill.

Appendix 2 includes species not necessarily threatened with extinction, but in which trade must be controlled in order to avoid utilization incompatible with their survival. Species in this appendix can be found in Part 1, Column 2 of the schedule of this Bill.

Appendix 3 contains species that are protected in at least one Country, which has asked other CITES parties for assistance in controlling the trade. Species in this appendix can be found in Part 1, Column 3 of the Schedule of the Bill.

Mr. Speaker, the Convention dictates that each party to the Convention must designate one or more management authorities in charge of administering the licensing system and one or more scientific authorities to advise them on the effects of trade on the status of the species. The Bill proposes that the Cayman Islands management authority will be the Permanent Secretary of the Ministry with responsibility for environmental matters, or such other person or persons as the Government in Cabinet may, from time to time, designate. The Cayman Islands scientific authority is proposed as a committee comprising the Director of the Department of Environment, the Chief Agricultural and Veterinary Officer, and three persons with relevant scientific or technical knowledge appointed by the Governor in Cabinet.

I would, at this time, Mr. Speaker, inform Honourable Members that I intend to bring a Committee Stage Amendment to Clause 5(1)(c) so that it continues to read, "three persons with relevant scientific or technical knowledge appointed by the Governor in Cabinet" and stop at that. That amendment, Mr. Speaker, should be circulated and they should have it by now.

Mr. Speaker, the Convention also stipulates that a specimen of a CITES-listed species may be imported into, or exported, or re-exported from a state party to the Convention only if the appropriate document has been obtained and presented for clearance at the port of entry or exit. There is some variation of the requirements from one country to another and it is also necessary, Mr. Speaker, to check on the national laws. However, the main conditions that apply for each appendix are described.

Appendix 1: Specimens. An import permit issued by the management authority of the State of import is required. This may be issued only if the specimen is not to be used primarily for commercial purposes and if the import will be for purposes that are not detrimental to the survival of the species. In the case of a live animal or plant, the scientific authority must be satisfied that the proposed recipient is suitably equipped to house and care for it. An export permit or re-export certificate issued by the management authority of the State of export or re-export is also required and, Mr. Speaker, an export permit may be used or issued only if the specimen was legally obtained.

The trade will not be detrimental to the survival of the species, and an import permit has already been issued. A re-export certificate may be issued only if the specimen was imported in accordance with the provisions of the Convention and in the case of a live animal or plant, if an import permit has been issued. In the case of a live animal or plant, it must be prepared and shipped to minimize any risk of injury, damage to health or cruel treatment.

In Appendix 2: an export permit or re-export certificate issued by the management authority of the State of export or re-export is required. An export permit may be issued only if the specimen was legally obtained and if the export will not be detrimental to the survival of the species. A re-export certificate may be issued only if the specimen was imported in accordance with the Convention. In the case of a live animal or plant, it must be prepared and shipped to minimize any risk of injury, and no import permit is needed unless required by national law. In the case of specimens introduced from the sea, a certificate has to be issued by the management authority of the State into which the specimens are being brought for species listed in Appendix 1 or 2.

In the case of trade from a State that included the species in Appendix 3, an export permit issued by the management authority of that State is required. This may be issued only if the specimen was legally obtained in this case of a live animal or plant, if it will be prepared and shipped to minimize any risk or injury, damage to health or cruel treatment. In the case of export from any other State, a certificate of origin issued by the management authority is required. In the case of re-export, again a re-export certificate issued by the State is required.

The Convention requires parties to make certain exceptions to the general principles described, Mr. Speaker, notably in the following cases:

For specimens in transit or being transhipped;

For specimens that were required, before CITES provisions applied to them known as pre-convention specimens;

For specimens that are personal or household effects, as defined by the Convention;

For animals that were bred in captivity as defined by the Convention;

For plants that were propagated as defined by the convention;

For specimens that are designated for scientific research;

For animals or plants forming part of a travelling collection or exhibition, such as a circus.

When a specimen of a CITES-listed species is transferred between a country that is a party to CITES and a country that is not, the country that is a party may accept documentation equivalent to the permits and certificates described above. Clause 6 in this Bill, Mr. Speaker, sets out the permits and certificates required by the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, the passage of this Bill will result in the repeal of the current Cayman Islands CITES implementing legislation, The Endangered Species Protection and Propagation Law 1978, which was passed when CITES was first extended to the Cayman Islands. However, Mr. Speaker, the legislation is extremely out-of-date and out-of-step with the current provisions of the Convention. This has resulted in the CITES Secretariat assigning a Category 2 rating for the Cayman Islands legislation. That is, Mr. Speaker, legislation which does not meet all the requirements for the implementation of the Convention.

One of the main problems with the old legislation is that the original list of appendices of species subject to trade controls were embedded in the body of the law with no clear and responsive mechanism to give effect to changes in the appendices approved by parties to the Convention from time to time over the 29 years that the Convention has been in effect. This, Mr. Speaker, has meant that species such as black coral, hard corals, and queen conch that were added to Appendix 2 of CITES after 1978, have never been recognized in the Cayman Islands' legislation. In the past few years, this has caused a multitude of problems with visitors returning to their countries of residence in possession of CITES-controlled articles; black coral rings, conch shells, and so on, Mr. Speaker, without the proper documentation. This normally results in an encounter with Customs Officials and an unpleasant aftertaste of the Cayman vacation and so gives a situation that we do not wish to continue.

Mr. Speaker, section 36 of the new legislation provides a mechanism where the management authority may make changes to the appendices, whenever changes have been approved under the Convention. In addition, Mr. Speaker, section 6(3) of the Bill proposes to consider black coral jewellery, black coral sculptures, conch shells, and similar items as tourist souvenirs which will not require a CITES export permit. However, vendors of these items will have to be licensed by the Cayman Islands Management Authority and will be subject to the CITES importation requirements for any raw materials, as well as inventory controls and checks. In addition, Mr. Speaker, licensed vendors will be required to submit regular reports on sales of CITES-controlled items. The management authority will still be able to issue

CITES export permits for tourist souvenirs if they are requested. However, as is provided for in the implementation of the Convention, key tourism partner countries will be informed of our new CITES implementation methods when they become law, and it is expected that all of them will accept these new procedures.

Although the new law will require some extra work from souvenir vendors, Mr. Speaker, Government will be able to point to a well-regulated tourist souvenir trade and thereby deflect any international criticisms, which could, hypothetically, lead to the restrictions in the trade of these products. Mr. Speaker, aside from implementing the provisions of CITES, this new legislation will allow Government, for the first time, to be able to regulate the movement of species of fauna and flora between the three Cayman Islands. This will afford a greater degree of control over the conservation management of our unique endemic species like our Blue Iguana and the Cayman Parrot, as well as our many unique species of plants. This is important, Mr. Speaker.

Sometime ago, I saw some visitors who were removing all sorts of species of fauna and flora out of the Islands. It is a good thing the Department is as vigilant as it is because they were caught before they removed them. So, this legislation is necessary and timely.

In conclusion, the Bill has been a long time in coming and the Cayman Islands, as I said, needs this legislation in order to comply with the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Flora and Fauna. That is one of several multi-environmental agreements that the United Kingdom has extended to the Cayman Islands and I commend this legislation, this Bill to the House and hope that all Members will support it.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to offer some brief observations on the part of the Opposition in relation to this important Bill, which as the Honourable Minister has outlined, will give effect to the provisions of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Flora and Fauna (CITES).

Mr. Speaker, it reminds us again of our obligations as members of the international community and of the fact that we are not so remote, as we once were, from the happenings on the world stage. We will not be permitted to operate in isolation, and the United Kingdom will continue to insist that its Overseas Territories, and in particular this Overseas Territory, complies with the UK's international obligations under various conventions and treaties.

Mr. Speaker, we have been aware in this jurisdiction, I think, of CITES and its various obligations and requirements for more than 30 years now. I think our relationship with CITES has, in the past, been somewhat controversial and adversarial. I noted that the Honourable Minister did not refer to the situation in relation to turtle products, which has been a bone of contention with CITES for many, many years. I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if the Minister could say, at the conclusion of his debate on this, whether we have made any progress, whatsoever, in relation to the marketing of captive-bred turtles or turtle products overseas. That, Mr. Speaker, I know has been an issue for a long, long, time.

We are quite capable of producing jewellery from turtle shells and other products from turtles in these Islands, but the problem has been that we have been unable to market them. As the Minister alluded to, this is also one category of souvenir which is swiftly confiscated if it enters, certainly, the United States. Notwithstanding the absence or the inability to market its jewellery overseas or even locally by persons who visit, the Turtle Farm has proved that it is a viable entity and it is an intricate part of the Cayman culture.

Consuming turtle meat goes back many generations and current generations enjoy it tremendously as well. However, it is a crying shame that manufacturing jewellery from the shells is limited given the inability of persons from overseas to take them back with them when they visit. So, I wonder if the Honourable Minister would address that and say whether any progress has been made or whether there is any possibility of any progress being made to convince the CITES authorities that these are, indeed, captive-bred animals and that they are now producing new generations of turtles from the captive-bred stock. These turtle products are in no way endangering the wild population. In fact, the Turtle Farm here releases thousands of young turtle hatchlings annually and is, in that way, restocking the wild population.

I know all of those arguments, Mr. Speaker, have been made many, many times in the past, but the arguments, I know, are as strong, perhaps stronger now than they were some years ago. Given our willingness demonstrated by acceptance of this Bill to give local effect to the provisions of CITES, I believe it is important that we continue to press for those sorts of concessions with CITES, to improve the viability of our Turtle Farm and its continued production of turtle products.

While it is well and good, and quite proper, for us to adopt the provisions of CITES, which deals with the transport and trade in endangered species, I believe that the greatest threat to our endangered species is not in their international trade and transport but by what we do or do not do in these Islands. Many of our endangered species are being threatened simply by development and the indiscriminate destruction, in many instances, of their natural habitat. The destruction of the mangroves along the Western peninsula bear, I believe, stands as tragic testimony to what we have done to the natural habitat of many of the endangered species in these Islands.

Mr. Speaker, it has always been so with mankind, but I believe that given the sheer smallness of these Islands, we really need to concentrate far more on ensuring that we preserve large enough areas in the right places to ensure the continuance of our endemic species of fauna and flora. The whole question of the survival of marine life in these Islands is a major, major issue. The many reefs around these Islands are severely stressed by the number of persons who visit these Islands on a daily basis and who are attracted to the sea, the North Sound itself.

Therefore, we have this great dilemma, this great struggle to balance the need for us to continue to attract visitors to support the economy and to make Cayman a viable place for us to live. However, at the same time, we have to ensure that the very things that they come here to see (the very things that attracted them in the first place), are not destroyed in the whole process of allowing them to explore and experience the attractions, particularly the marine environment, that the unique Cayman environment offers.

That I believe is a great dilemma for us. We have not come close to addressing it, although we have the need, desire and the understandable insistence of the local population that they are permitted to enjoy what they believe to be their birthright.

There is a motion being brought by one of my colleagues, as we speak, which again highlights that particular dilemma. However, I believe, Mr. Speaker, that unless we as a people are able to step aside or step out of our own personal little boxes, look at the big picture and at the long term, the very future of these Islands and its ecology are going to be seriously compromised in the course of our lifetime. That is, those of us who are sitting in this Honourable House now, Mr. Speaker. Our grandchildren will, in many cases, simply read about and be told what a magnificent marine environment the Cayman Islands had.

I do not believe, Mr. Speaker, that this Government, or any previous government, has done enough to protect the ecology and promote awareness of its overall importance to the Cayman Islands as a whole. It is tremendously important for that sort of thing to be done. It is going to make a lot of people very unhappy. We are going to have to tell people that the North Sound simply cannot accommodate the sheer number of cruise ship visitors that are dumped in it on a daily basis. It is simply, Mr. Speaker, not sustainable.

So while we can come to this Honourable House and we can pass commendable bills such as the one before us which will give effect to the provisions of CITES, we are swiftly heading down the road where this will not be relevant to any of us in this Honourable House or in these Islands. That is, we will not have any endangered species for anybody to trade in or transport; they will all be gone. If the Honourable Minister wants to know what the relevance of what I am saying is to the Bill, that is the relevance.

I wanted to make those points and I wanted to assure this Honourable House that the Opposition is in complete support of the Bill, its objects and reasons. As well, I apprise this Honourable House that there are broader and more fundamental considerations we, as a country — and those of us in this Honourable House with responsibility for the passage of legislation and formulation of government policy in relation to conservation — need to bear in mind.

Mr. Speaker, with those short observations, I will conclude my contribution to the debate on this important Bill.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, this might be a convenient time for us to take the luncheon break. I would ask all Members to reassemble at 2:30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.48 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.39 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Endangered Species (Trade and Transport) Bill, 2003 is now before the House. Does any other Member wish to speak on it? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, may I call on the Honourable Leader or Government Business to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, most times when people refuse to debate, it means that they cannot find anything to complain about, or they greatly support the matter before the House.

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that this is a good piece of vital legislation. I thought, well, what will the Opposition find wrong with it? As I thought, they never fail. They came prepared not to offer thanks to the Government or to the Department, but with tongue-in-cheek to throw cold water on the Government's effort and to raise a spectre of the ills of over-development; not offering any alternative or solution as has been their modus operandi.

Mr. Speaker, the Opposition raised one point with regard to the trade in products of the Turtle Farm. Progress with the marketing of captive-bred turtle products will only be possible once the Cayman Turtle Farm is recognised and registered as a captive-breeding facility by parties to the Convention, that is, the CITES Convention. When I say agreed by parties, that means agreed by all the countries thereto.

The last attempt to achieve registration was made at the last conference in Chile in 2003. At that point, we were informed and encouraged by the United Kingdom to put in our bid. What we had hoped would have been successful was not. While it came close on a vote in the plenary conference, they rejected our bid. Mr. Speaker, I do not know how much the United Kingdom did to convince other countries at the time to support us, but we did not get that support. Management of the Farm and the Government have now decided that the next attempt at registration will be in approximately four years, as is required, in order for the Farm and the CITES Management Authority to be as prepared as possible.

Mr. Speaker, this is a very tough situation. We have met the requirements, but every time we get to that point somehow the goalposts slip and they find an excuse not to support us. Cayman does not have a lot to bargain with, to put on the table and play with; therefore, while we get some support, we never seem to get enough. We all know that was a very viable aspect of the Turtle Farm, and we hear the suggestions to build our tourism. We are told by the European Countries and the UK to build sustainable tourism. Yet, here we are with the Turtle Farm now raising or breeding in captivity, and they still refuse to recognise us. There is nothing much we can do but what we have always done—present an appropriate and factual case. Then we will have to see if we can get the support of other nations. We are actively working and preparing and we have another four years for that.

They said, Mr. Speaker, the Opposition came prepared to throw cold water, with tongue-in-cheek, and to raise the spectre of the ills of overdevelopment. I wondered what they were going to say. While the Member claims that the Government is not doing anything on this matter of protection, well, we are bringing the law, even if we are not doing anything else.

Mr. Speaker, do you know what has happened to the Cayman Islands? We have too many people that believe that they know it all, and sometimes a practical situation is better than science. I have always espoused a policy that is balanced between the environment and development. When taking over that part of my Ministry, I did not just talk...we did some things. If the Second Elected Member from George Town was paying attention to what is happening, rather than creating stories where he thinks he can smear peoples' names, then he would understand what the Government is doing.

Mr. Speaker, some time ago we published the National Environmental Policy, the first one for the Country. Allow me to read some of it just to refresh their memories, although they should have this in their arsenal somewhere.

It says that:

(1) To manage the human use of the natural environment of the Cayman Islands so that it yields the greatest continuous benefit to present generations while maintaining its potential to meet the needs and aspirations of future generations;

(2) To integrate consideration of the conservation and sustainable use of the natural environment into national physical and economic development planning and, in so doing, to aim for solutions which benefit both the environment and development and;

(3) To promote the protection of ecologically critical terrestrial marine and coastal areas and preserve essential habitat for the flora and fauna of the Cayman Islands. To effectively implement obligations under the multilateral environmental agreements extended to the Cayman Islands and to continue to cooperate with and contribute to regional conservation initiatives.

To seek expert advice and consult openly with interested parties on decisions affecting the environment, and to enact legislation such as the National Conservation Law and the Endangered Species Trade and Transport Law to provide the necessary regulatory framework to adequately address current environmental issues and to help ensure that Cayman complies with its treaty obligations under a number of multilateral environmental agreements.

To establish a national system of protected areas starting with the creation of the Barkers National Park—which they have been criticizing the purchase of—to promote and support scientific research and monitoring programs aimed at addressing issues relevant to the sustainable use and management of the natural environment and resources of the Cayman Islands.

To formalise the requirement of environmental impact assessments in the developing/planning process.

To promote cross-sectorial consultation on development proposals within the public sector; encourage the use and development of green technologies; actively support the use of renewable sources of energy; conduct and support environmental awareness and public education programs; encourage involvement by the NGO's and voluntary organisations in matters of environmental conservation and general beautification of the Islands.

Mr. Speaker, following on from the development of this National Environmental Policy framework we have been trying to follow as closely as possible, we have this law before us now. We will bring the National Conservation Law which will follow on from this National Environmental Policy and it will address the many comments that the Second Elected Member from George Town made, including providing for the establishment of protected areas. However, I say that he came here tongue-in-cheek because he said that I have not done anything, nor did any other government.

His party has a motion before us where we have gone ahead and protected the marine life by putting a banned season on conchs. They have a motion before us to take that out and utilise the time when the moratorium is on and to allow five conchs per day to everybody who claims they are a traditional fisherman. Now I suppose they will tell us how that will work. I do not know, Mr. Speaker, how they are going to define them, whether it will be by a hat or what. As I said, they come here tongue-in-cheek. It only bears out the hypocrisy of the Opposition because every time that my friend from East End keeps mumbling over there to himself that he is going to fix me, I hope he can help me lose some weight!

Mr. Speaker, they like to chat, as he is doing, but they are so hypocritical that they forget where they are at times. Right in the same timeframe, in the same meeting, they are doing exactly the opposite of what he was complaining about.

Now let me get to this point, Mr. Speaker. As I said, I have always espoused the policy of balanced development. I know the period that we went through. I know the period when things were stopped from happening in this Country. Mr. Speaker, we want to protect the mangroves. There is nobody like me that likes to go in that part of Cayman, but you have to be sensible. You cannot eat mangrove steak! I am sorry! It has to be balanced.

When I took over the Environment I said that to the Director, and I said that to the Government. I campaigned on that which you will find in my manifesto! We all complained, if everyone recalls, about SafeHaven, Mr. Speaker. It was a big outcry. However, if you want to catch fish today, you go out to SafeHaven where they have cut into the North Sound; they cannot say it does not help fishing. As I said, I do not agree with that aspect of the science. If you go there you can catch fish when you could not do it before.

Now the Country, Mr. Speaker, is approximately 50 per cent swamp. What this Country has not done is diversified and spread out its development. They expected to put everything in George Town or everything on the Seven Mile Beach. Therefore, we did not move anywhere and everybody claims we are overdeveloped. We are not overdeveloped, Mr. Speaker, it is just the way we have planned over the years. I give every government credit in trying to do something, but simply put, every government had an opposition and every opposition did not agree with the Government.

Mr. Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town would happily be the first one to stop anything that is going on. I offer the analogy that the person who burns down the fire station is the one complaining on the sidewalks about 'what in the world is Government doing about a fire truck'.

We have all had our share, but I thought we passed that stage, being as older as we all are, where we recognized that opposing for the sake of opposition and talking for the sake of talk has gotten us nowhere. All that has happened in these Islands is that we have gone back when we should have been full speed ahead. We should have had our entire infrastructure, but we listened to this one, we take advice from that one, and many times we fouled up. I have been part of it, Mr. Speaker, I have seen it. Thank God, I am older. I know what it takes to run the Country, even if the Member from East End does not.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: You do not know what I know. Older and no wiser.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Maybe.

Mr. Speaker, I have to laugh. He who knows and knows not. He knows not, should not be followed.

Mr. Speaker, they have not offered any solutions or alternatives regarding development, and they should recognise that yes, we have to have development, and I say good development. Thank God we are in a phase where, internationally, people have confidence in the country. We now have some good opportunities for good development, with good environmental policies and where everybody knows what they have to do when they come here; they can talk to the growth management board that has all the relevant civil-service entities. They know where they stand before they try to come here.

I think that is the stage that Cayman needs to be at. While we can criticise and talk about someone coming in not for Caymanians; if we allow them to come in and accept their dollars, then how can we criticise what they are doing?

Development; there is a need for it. It brings the jobs, pays peoples' bills, feeds the children, makes peoples' businesses grow and it pays our salaries because it gives Government revenue. Without it, the Country would die. I say that there is a need for a balance between the environment and the development. I do not think that there is any overdevelopment in Cayman. It is overdevelopment to the extent that we only have one George Town, one place where everybody congregates and does business, and only one main road throughout the Country. So it would seem that we are overdeveloped. We only have one dock. Mr. Speaker, I will not get into that aspect of the overcrowding of cruise ships because that is a pet peeve. When they do not have anything else to jump on, that is what they jump on.

So, the Bill is a good Bill. Mr. Speaker, the upcoming National Conservation Law will bring with it committee stage amendments. I do not think it will get here now (this month) but I intend to have it at the State Opening Meeting. I hope that the Opposition is going to support it rather than sit down or stand up with all their noise, clatter and clack, and offer good input and support for what will help us in the protected areas; what will help the marine environment and give guidelines to people coming here to develop. I believe good development will help this Country in the long-term.

That is my position, Mr. Speaker. I thank all Members for their tacit support and otherwise.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Endangered Species (Trade and Transport) Bill, 2003, be given a Second Reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Endangered Species (Trade and Transport) Bill, 2003, has been given a second reading.

Agreed. The Endangered Species (Trade and Transport) Bill, 2003, read a second time.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, earlier this morning, when we reached Items 3 and 4, I did mention that due to official business, the Honourable Minister responsible for these items, the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications, District Administration, and Information Technology was unavoidably absent. She has informed me that she is ready to take these Items at this point. So I propose to take Item 3, at this point.

Clerk.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

Report & Recommendation of the Minister responsible for Lands on the Vesting of Crown Land Block 1D Parcel 47 to Armando Ebanks

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House a report on the Crown Property that has been prepared in accordance with the requirements of the Government Vesting of Lands Law 1998 (Revision).

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I can confirm that as required by the relevant Law, the details of this land matter have been published in the Cayman Islands Gazette Issue Extraordinary No. 6 of 2004, dated on the 9th February this year, as well as in the Caymanian Compass on the 10th February, 2004. Also, as required by the said Law, three valuations have been carried out on this subject property. Each valuation report forms part of the overall report and provides a general indication of the value of the property that Government now proposes to vest.

Mr. Speaker, the report deals with the vesting of Block 1D, Parcel 47 to Armando Ebanks. This property is located in Northwest Point Road in West Bay on the inland side of the road south of the Turtle Farm. The parcel is approximately .30 acres in size and the Government has determined that this land is not required for any public projects. Mr. Armando Ebanks is interested in purchasing the parcel in order to gain access to his property, Parcel 49, at the rear. To this end, the Governor in Cabinet has agreed to dispose Block 1D, Parcel 47 to Mr. Armando Ebanks. A report on this matter was also considered by the Governor in Cabinet, and after careful analysis and consideration of the reports provided by the Director of Lands and Survey, the Governor in Cabinet determined that it should dispose of the property to Mr. Ebanks for the sum of CI$25,000, which corresponds to the estimates on the Open Market Value for the property.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Report & Recommendation of the Minister responsible for Lands on the Vesting of Crown Land Block 25B Parcels 495 & 496 to the Cayman Islands Football Association

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I once again, beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, a report on Crown Property that was prepared in accordance with the requirements of the Government Vesting of Lands Law 1998 (Revision).

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, also as required by the Law, three evaluations were carried out on the subject property. Each valuation report forms part of the overall report, and it therefore provides general indication as to the value of the property that Government now proposes to vest.

Mr. Speaker, the report deals with the vesting of Block 25B, Parcel 495 & 496 to the Cayman Islands Football Association (CIFA). This property is located off Poindexter Road, next to the site for the new Spotts Primary School. The approximate area of the Parcels is 17.03 acres.

By way of background, Mr. Speaker, I would offer the following information:

In 2001, the Cayman Islands Football Association (CIFA) was selected to benefit from the Goal Project initiated by the Federation International Football Association (FIFA). The awarding of the Goal Project is dependent on CIFA's ability to secure land for the construction of a national training centre and must do so this year in order to maximise the monetary contribution from FIFA.

CIFA is proposing a national training centre to be developed over three years and to include several facilities including the following:-

- An administration building;
- Changing facility and public restroom;
- Natural and AstroTurf fields;
- Bleachers;
- Dormitories;
- Cafeteria and meeting rooms;
- Gymnasium and clinics;
- Storage and maintenance buildings.

CIFA requested Government's assistance in locating land suitable to meet these specific needs. To this end, Mr. Speaker, the Governor in Cabinet has approved the two Crown Properties that should be vested in the Cayman Islands Association. These two properties are Block 25B, Parcels 495 & 496, and they are to be leased to CIFA for 99 years at one peppercorn per annum.

A report on this matter was duly considered by the Cabinet, and after careful analysis and consideration of the reports, provided by the Director of Lands and Survey as well as the comprehensive proposals from the Cayman Islands Football Association, the Governor in Cabinet determined that it should vest these two parcels by way of a 99-year lease to the Cayman Islands Football Association for one peppercorn per annum. The valuations of the subject parcel is estimated on the Open Market to be of value in the region of CI$750,000.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would like to state that CIFA's proposal will result in the development of a valuable resource in the Cayman Islands. As Minister responsible for Lands and the Government on a whole, we are happy to have been able to assist in the promotion of football (both locally and internationally) as well as boosting the potential for sports tourism in the Cayman Islands.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Before taking Question No. 115, I would call on the Honourable Minister for Planning to move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) to allow for question time to continue beyond the hour of 11.00 am.

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) to allow questions to commence and continue beyond the hour of 11.00 am.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow question time to commence and continue beyond 11.00 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against. No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Deferred Question No. 115

No. 115: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology what is being done by Government to alleviate the growing shortage of space for burial plots in the district of George Town.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, at the moment, there are three (3) sites in the district of George Town which have been available to the public for burials.

Two of these sites, namely, Spotts and the Dixie Cemetery, have been closed for sometime, with only reserved plots or vaults remaining. The third site is at the Prospect cemetery, which has seen an average of approximately 40 vaults constructed per year. At that rate, I am advised that the currently prepared and cleared area of the site will reach capacity in approximately two and a half years.

As we speak, Environmental Health staff is presently taking steps to construct at least twelve (12) new vaults on the present site.

My Ministry and the Environmental Health staff are fully aware of the need for additional burial plots in George Town and, accordingly, the necessary plans have been made to accommodate this future need in the district of George Town.

To that extent, I am happy to report that, Crown land adjoining the Prospect Cemetery has been earmarked for cemetery expansion. Specifically, I am advised that the additional land comprises approximately 5.78 acres of undeveloped land on the northern side (or rear boundary) of the Prospect Cemetery. During the upcoming 04-05 fiscal year, I expect that the property will be cleared and filled to prepare for subsequent vault construction.

Therefore, Mr Speaker, I am pleased to say that by keeping abreast of the need for burial plots, my Ministry has been able to address these needs accordingly, namely, in the district of George Town and we are grateful for your foresight during your time at the Ministry.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I am grateful for that response. I wonder if the Minister can say whether the property currently being cleared in the Prospect area, just passing on the main road in the area by Red Bay Primary, is part of the property that is proposed for this. It would seem to me to join the Prospect Cemetery. Or is that for some other purpose?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As far as I am aware, that is not being cleared for that purpose. I believe I am correct in saying that it is in private ownership. The piece that belongs to the Crown is further east, almost in front of Mr. Terry's carpet store that he used to have on the corner, to the south of the McRuss store.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the Minister probably has noted herself, because she lives in the same area as I do, that area is being cleared as well. Is that for the purpose of the cemetery, or is that some other property as well?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As I understand it, the clearing has not yet started for the cemetery property. On the basis of deductive reason, I would venture to say that that is also in private ownership.

The Speaker: Are there any other supplementaries?

The House will now go into Committee to consider the Bills.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

House in Committee at 3.25

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House, may I assume that, as usual, we should authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to correct minor errors and such the like in these Bills.

Would the Clerk please read the Bill and read its clauses?

The National Roads Authority Bill, 2003

Clause 1

The Clerk: Clause 1 Short title and commencement

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Roads.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52(1), I, the Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works, give notice to move the following amendment to the National Roads Authority Bill, 2003: that the Bill be amended as follows: That Clause 1 subclause (2) be deleted and the following be substituted: "(2) This Law shall come into force on the 1 July, 2004."

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment stands part of the Clause.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendment passed

The Chairman: The question now is that the Clause as amended stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 1 as amended passed.

Clause 2

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it

Agreed. Clause 2 passed.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Chairman, am I allowed to ask a question on Clause 2?

The Chairman: We had taken the vote, but you may go ahead.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Chairman, for clarity, is the Honourable Minister in a position [to say if] the definition of Roads Authority or Authority means the National Roads Authority.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Roads.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, could the Member please repeat?

The Chairman: Honourable Member for North Side could you please repeat your question?

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: When we look at section 2 subsection (c), "Roads Authority or Authority means the National Roads Authority." Why the necessity for Roads Authority or Authority?

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, it is because, in some instances in the Law Roads Authority is used and in other instances just the word Authority is used. That is to clarify that situation.

Clauses 3 and 4

The Clerk:

Part II Establishment and administration of the National Roads Authority

Clause 3 Establishment of the National Roads Authority vesting of property.

Clause 4 Use of seal and authentication of documents.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 3 and 4 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it

Agreed. Clauses 3 and 4 passed.

Clause 5

The Clerk: Clause 5 Responsibilities, function and duties of the Authority.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, I beg to move that Clause 5 be amended in subclause (2) by inserting after paragraph (a) the following paragraph:

"(aa) subject to the provisions of the Electricity Law (2003 Revision), be responsible for ensuring the installation, repair, maintenance and operation of works for the supply, transmission and distribution of electricity in relation to public roads (including street lighting).

"(ab) be responsible for ensuring the repair or restoration of public roads that have been opened or broken up pursuant to the provisions of the Electricity Law or any other Law, and the repair or restoration of such public roads shall be in accordance with the standards required by the Authority."

In paragraph (n) by deleting the following words "with the consent of the Minister and subject to such conditions as the Minister may determine" and substituting the following words "with the consent of the Governor and subject to the provisions of the Governor (Vesting of Lands) Law."

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment stand part of the Clause. All those in favour—
The Member for East End?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I hate to disturb the drafting people again, but I wonder if (aa) should not have some indication as to whether or not the work should be carried out with their standards like (ab) has.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, I would think that it is understood that we are speaking here of the authority vested in the National Roads Authority. I would have to take advice on that if it is necessary legally.

(Pause)

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Works continuing.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, I am advised that it does not hurt if we were to insert the words "in accordance with the standards required by the Authority" after the word "lighting" in (aa).

So I would like to move that after the word "lighting" there be inserted the words "in accordance with the standards required by the Authority".

I do not know if it is necessary for this to be typed immediately or whether it is something that we could rely on the Clerk to have done.

It has been suggested to me that it needs to be done now.

The Chairman: I will take it on the floor of the House and I will take it as you have said. I will repeat it "in accordance with the standards required by the Authority".

All those in favour of the Motion please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendments passed.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment—

Elected Member of East End, do you have a further point which you wish to raise?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Chairman, when we say open or broken up, the broken up part—

The Chairman: Please repeat the question.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Under (ab) "be responsible for ensuing the repair or restoration of public roads that have been opened or broken up pursuant to the provisions of the Electricity Law or any other Law". I wonder if the words "broken up" are right because if it is open, I do not think one would deliberately break up a road. A road is broken up by virtue of use, weather or something of that nature. So, I am wondering how that works.

I know under the other part of it, the distribution of electricity would be part of— overhead interventions would fall under the Authority. Certainly, the distribution of electricity and height requirements would fall under that, but I do not understand the "broken up" part and there may be some engineering terminology for "broken up" and how it can be broken up—

The Chairman: I am sure the Honourable Minister for Works will try to explain that.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, I am advised that that is the term that is used in the Electricity Law and "broken up" is quite proper to use as it has been stated here.

The Chairman: Do we have any further questions from the Member of East End on that point? If not, the question is that the amendments to the Clause be accepted.

All those in favour of the Motion please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 5 as amended passed.

Clause 6

The Clerk: Clause 6 Minister may give general directions.

The Chairman: The Question is that the Clause stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour of the Motion please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 6 passed.

Clause 7

The Clerk: Clause 7 Constitution and responsibilities of the Board of the Authority.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, under Standing Order 52(1) and (2) I beg to move the amendment that Clause 7(4)(c) and (d) be amended by deleting the word "Governor" and substituting the word "Board".

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment stands part of the Clause.

All those in favour of the Motion please say Aye. Those against, No.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment stands part of the Clause.

All those in favour of the Motion please say Aye. Those against, No.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 18—
The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
Under 19(2) and (3), I believe that (3) needs regulation made under subsection (2)

The Chairman: I think that you are correct, Honourable Member.

Honourable Minister for Works, would you confirm or otherwise that that is correct?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, it seems that it is a typographical error there and it should be (2).

The Chairman: As mentioned earlier, the Honourable Second Official Member will deal with minor corrections.

Thank you so much, Honourable Member for East End.

The question is that Clauses 18 through 21 stand part of the Bill. All those in favour of the Motion please say Aye. Those against, No.

Clauses 30 through 34

The Clerk: Clause 30 Regulations.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, I beg to move that Clause 30(1)(d) be amended by inserting after the words "service provided by the Authority" the words "or in relation to the repair or restoration of public roads under section 5(2)(ab)".

The Chairman: The question is that amendment stands part—

The Honourable Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I am wondering if service would not also include when the Authority is requested to go out and show these utilities where they need to place their mains and the like, since we are specifically pinpointing the one under 5(2)(ab) because this is only about repair or restoration of public roads. Maybe the Authority should be able to charge a cost for the consultation as to where the roads can go. The mains, that is, water, electricity, cable whatever, because it is quite labour intensive to review plans and the likes, so I am wondering if the Minister has considered that or should we look at it?

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Works.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, it would seem to me that in (d) it says the fees or portions thereof that are to be charged for any service provided by the Authority. It seems to me that that could be considered a service and that it could be charged for.

(Pause)

The Chairman: I propose to take a 3-minute suspension whilst the Honourable Minister confirms with his colleagues, but I would ask Members to please remain in their seats.

Committee suspended at 3.52 pm

Committee resumed at 3.56 pm

The Chairman: Honourable Minister for Works, continuing.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, I have taken note of what the Member of East End has said. However, on consulting with Legal Drafting and other legal advice, for now it seems sufficient that the term for any service provided by the Authority should capture what the Honourable Member is speaking about. We will look at it and see how it works. Should any difficulties arise, we are prepared to make an amendment to it in the future.

(Pause)

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment stand part of the Clause.

Implementation of the European Union Savings Directive

The Speaker: I call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Members will remember that earlier this year I recommended to this Honourable House for appropriate legislation to be enacted by 30 June 2004, for the implementation of the European Union Savings Directive subject to the terms of a negotiated agreement with the United Kingdom Government. Leading up to the Finance Minister's meeting scheduled for the end of June 2004, the European Union Savings Directive has been subject of intense negotiations between the free market European countries such as, Switzerland, Liechtenstein and other members of the European Union. The final outcome of the negotiations should become clear at the end of June together with an indication as to whether the members of the European Union will be in a position to implement on the schedule date of 1 January 2005. As Members will recall, the Government only agreed to accede to request by the United Kingdom to implement the Savings Directive after a vote by the private sector organizations in favour of the negotiated agreement with the United Kingdom.

There are a number of very important outstanding matters to be finalised pursuant to the negotiated agreement and subject to these being completed in an acceptable manner, and the outcome of the final agreement between the European Union members of the June meeting, the Government will be in a position to bring before this Honourable House the implementing legislation. The Government remains committed to ensuring the Cayman Islands are in no worse position than Switzerland and other free market countries in the European Union and to working with the United Kingdom on finalising the outstanding matters agreed to in the terms of the negotiated agreement.

The financial industry, one of the main pillars of our economy, has been carefully built up over many years. Despite the agreement reached neither the Government nor the private sector organizations have ever been of the view that the European Union Savings Directive will be beneficial to the Cayman Islands or the free market economies of the world. Our studies indicate this and other studies have reached the same conclusion, it is essential that the final terms of the negotiated agreement with the United Kingdom afford the Cayman Islands substantial and material off setting benefits. This Government is diligently pursuing that objective.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The next statement is from the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology.

Joint Media Release by the Government of the Cayman Islands and Caribbean Utilities Company Ltd – Government and CUC Reach Agreement

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

After extensive and intensive negotiations the Cayman Islands Government and Caribbean Utilities Company Ltd. (CUC) have reached agreement on a plan that will allow competition in the electricity industry and grant new licenses to CUC to operate in the Cayman Islands for 20 more years from 2004. The agreement will result in substantial rate reductions to go into effect from the latter of the date of the new CUC licenses or 1 October 2004 for both residential and large commercial users. Residential consumers will see immediate price decreases in basic billing rates of approximately 4.7 per cent and large commercial users of approximately 2.3 per cent. These decreases are in addition to the 3 per cent across the board roll back of rates in November 2003.

The negotiations between the Government and CUC over the past few months focused on developing a model that would work here in the Cayman Islands market.

Competition in the electricity industry has been implemented in other countries with the goal of bringing lower prices to consumers. It is believed that the parties have achieved a model that introduces elements of competition and related benefits to consumers but which, at the same time, recognises the unique conditions of a small Island electricity market.

The agreement replaces the current guaranteed rate of return formula for rate adjustments with a price cap mechanism based on published consumer price indexes. More importantly, Mr. Speaker, the agreement ensures the continuation of a reliable supply of electricity far into Grand Cayman's future and brings price stability and predictability to electrical consumers. Specifically, the parties have this morning signed a heads of agreement, while not legally binding relates in detail to what the parties have agreed to. The heads of agreement will form the basis of the licensing document that is expected to be signed late summer. The highlights of this agreement include the following areas:-

1. Regulatory Authority.

A Regulatory authority will be established with the overall responsibility of regulating the electricity industry in the Cayman Islands. The regulator will oversee all licensees established and enforced license standards; review the proposed price cap mechanism and ensure a level playing field for all. The license standards will be designed to ensure that Grand Cayman has adequate generating capacity so that continued sound business and engineering practices are employed in the electricity industry and that established standards for the protection of our natural environment are also enforced.

2. Licenses for the Trade and Distribution (T&D) and generation.

The Government will issue non exclusive licenses for transmission and distribution, and generation providers. While the T&D license to be granted to CUC will be non exclusive, duplication of the T&D infrastructure and facilities is not desired nor to be encouraged. Competition for generation capacity will however, be encouraged to provide a market-based incentive for suppliers to offer low prices for power.

3. T&D.

The term T&D licenses will not exceed 15 years except in the case of CUC which will be granted for an initial license of 20 years and a 15-year term thereafter for any future renewal. An evergreen provision will allow for automatic renewal of the T&D license if no action is taken not to renew it. CUC through its T&D license will purchase power through Power Purchase Agreements (PPAs) with generation licenses. CUC T&D will build retail rates and charge customers to cover the T&D cost and to pass through the cost of wholesale power including any government and regulatory fees and the cost of fuel.

4. Generation.

CUC will be granted a license in respect of its existing generation capacity at an agreed price. Competition and generation will be introduced through competitive PPA solicitations for the required incremental capacity. CUC will be responsible under the terms of its T&D license for determining the need of future generation based on load growth and operating reserve requirements and for administering a bidding process for multiple generators to compete for incremental need in generation. CUC will work with the government to solicit for 28 to 32 megawatts as the next increment of generation capacity to be operational no later than the 1 May 2007, and will have the right to bid competitively with others for this and future incremental needs for additional generation capacity.

The regulatory authority will review, oversee and approve the selection of the successful bidder(s).

5. Rate Reduction.

The following reductions by rate class for retail rates will take effect from the latter of the date of the new CUC license or 1 October 2004. For residential it will be 4.7 per cent and for large commercial it will be 2.3 per cent.

6. CUC price cap and rate freeze.

CUC T&D rates will be subject to price cap mechanisms. The price cap mechanism will adjust the CUC T&D base rates in accordance with a formula which takes into account inflation as measured by blend of US and Cayman Islands Consumer Price indexes. Under this formula the rate increases would normally be significantly less than the rate of inflation.

CUC and the Cayman Islands Government entered into negotiations on 1 November 2003 with the objective of restructuring the electrical industry here and creating an alternative to CUC rate of return formula that was employed under the current license agreement to establish pricing. Negotiations initially were commenced under the then Minister, the Honourable Linford Pierson, OBE, JP, and on the change of the Minister of Planning, Communication, District Administration and Information Technology, the negotiations then came under the direction of myself. All Members of the UDP Government gave their full support to the negotiations and a special subcommittee of the Government Utility Advisory Board met regularly with the CUC team to negotiate a new licensing agreement. MLA, Mr. Cline Glidden, chaired the subcommittee which consisted of Mr. Stephen Hall-Jones, Mr. Stewart Diamond, Mr. Phillip Thomas, while CUC chairman, David Ritch, president and chief executive officer, Peter Thompson, executive vice-president and chief operating officer, Mr. Richard Hew and the chief financial officer, Eddington Powell, represented the utility company. Both parties employed professional consultants, ICF consultants on the part of the government and RW Beck for CUC in order to assist with these negotiations.

On behalf of the Government I was quoted as saying and I wish for the record to repeat the same: "indeed these are exciting yet challenging times, however, the Cayman Islands Government is committed to successfully concluding these negotiations. We are indeed confident that the residents of Grand Cayman will have a legitimate expectation that they will be the economic beneficiaries. I would also like to thank my Permanent Secretary, Mr. Gomez, and other Ministry staff for their assistance, as well as the Honourable Financial Secretary and the Honourable Attorney General for their contributions during the negotiation process. I also look forward to the next four weeks during which time we hope to conclude the main agreement and then have another joint press release to this Honourable House."

Speaking on behalf of CUC, their representative, Mr. Thompson, will be quoted in the press as saying: "that although at times our talks were spirited, even contentious, that is to be expected when negotiating matters as important and complex as the future of Grand Cayman's energy needs. We have always taken a position that what is good for a company is also good for the Caymanian consumer. I am certain that our agreement once signed, will benefit our customers, government, the company and its shareholders."

Mr. Speaker, I am happy to report that the said agreement heads was signed this morning and I thank you for your contribution and your indulgence.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/03

Licensing of Fishermen to take Conch for Fishing

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End continuing with his debate.

It is my understanding that the Elected Member for East End had completed his debate. If that is the case, does any other Member wish to speak on this Motion.

The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

My contribution in support of Private Member's Motion No. 12/03, to allow fishermen to take five conchs for fishing will be quite short, as the Mover of this Motion has done an in-depth presentation.

We have heard people saying that this is asking to reopen the taking of conch to the entire population; nothing could be further from the truth. The Motion is brought through representation of fishermen, particularly in the districts of East End and North Side. These fishermen have traditionally used conch for bait particularly during the snapper season. It is a tradition that has been long-standing that was passed from their grandfathers to their fathers, probably from their great-great-grandfathers to the present fishermen in these Islands. When I speak of the present fishermen it comes to my mind of people like Mr. Daniel Rankine, who most people in these Islands know has been a fisherman all his life, as well as doing farming, and who through an accident has but one arm and one leg; fishermen like William Whittaker who does a small two or three hours work for someone in the days and he then supplements his income through fishing; and people like Mr. Clinton Whittaker. There are many more that I could stand here and name out this morning.

I have heard some in here ask what the definition of a fisherman is. You know, Mr. Speaker, there was a Private Member's Motion No. 8/03 that was brought by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, which was seconded by the Fourth Elected Member for the district of West Bay, asking to allow fishermen to take the sea urchin, the black short spine rock-boring urchins for fishing for squabs. In that Motion I see no reference of the definition of fishermen. My question is that the Motion itself does not refer to fishermen taking these sea urchins; it only speaks about being allowed to use these short spine rock-boring urchins. However, in the debate the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said and I quote from the Official Hansard Report dated Thursday 27 November 2003: "This Motion seeks one simple thing, and that is to allow our fishermen to use the short-spine sea eggs for the purpose of bait for fishing." The Motion before us specifically states that this Motion for the taking of five conchs is to allow the fishermen who have had this tradition for many years, who use fishing as a means of living or fishing as a means to supplement their low income. So, Mr. Speaker, if we have been able to accept a Motion to allow the fishermen to take the sea urchins without a definition of fisherman, well then I feel that someone is in a position now to tell us what the definition of a fisherman is.

Both of us, the Mover of this Motion and me, understand that we must preserve our marine life as it is the mainstay of the tourism industry. However, I stress, I have always heard the Honourable Leader of Government Business say that the environment must be balanced with the development. I say, Mr. Speaker, that we must also balance the traditions of our people with the industries. We cannot continue to criminalize traditions that have been passed down from generation to generation. I hope that the Government will see fit to accept this Motion in the spirit that it has been brought.

The Marine Conservation was amended to limit the number of groupers during grouper season; it was amended to have fish pots licensed and it was also amended for the taking of whelks and other various marine life. So, I ask the question: if it is going to be so hard to monitor the fishermen who are taking these few conchs, how has the Department been able to monitor the taking of grouper during grouper season? My good friend on my left, the Member for East End, has just passed me the list stating that we allow turtle traps, we allow seining, we allow the use of spear-gun, the taking of sea eggs, the taking of bleeding teeth, fish pots and groupers. My question is: how is the Department now monitoring the taking and the use of these? If my memory bears me out I think some of these that were allowed have been Caymanian versus non Caymanian.

So, Mr. Speaker, the Motion is seeking to allow the Caymanian fishermen who have had the tradition of taking conch all their lives to have the right to take five conchs to continue that tradition during fishing season.

I have heard some Members in this Legislative Assembly say, during suspension or before the start of Parliament, that the Motion says nothing about the Government considering. Private Member's Motion No. 8/03 and Private Member's Motion No. 7/03 mentions nothing about the Government considering. I know that the word "consider" is normally used in Motions that are asking the Government to expend funds, then it will ask that the Government consider because we have no right to increase the Government's Budget. However, the same extra enforcement officers that will have to be put in place to see and to control the taking of the sea urchin, which was requested in Private Member's Motion No. 8/03 and the taking of chitons, periwinkles and bleeding teeth for the craft persons, can be used to monitor the taking of the five conchs. So, there is no increase and that is why there was no request in this Motion to ask the Government to consider. We believe that we would not be increasing any cost to Government seeing that we have recently passed these other two Private Member's Motions.

Mr. Speaker, I say once again, Sir, it is hoped that the Honourable Members of this House will see fit to allow the fishermen of the Cayman Islands to continue this tradition that they have had for many, many years, which they have passed to their children. I speak specifically to fishermen in the district of North Side because I am not familiar with the fishermen of other districts. It is not every day that those fishermen will be going fishing that there will be a need to take five conchs. Over the years I have seen the fishermen in that district, particularly at snapper time, get five conchs, go fishing at night and if they did not use the five conchs they were put in bags and tied in the sea for use the next time they were going fishing. I believe that the fishermen in these Islands—we have watched them and I know we have had some who will go into the marine parks, but I think the majority of them are learning and they are law abiding citizens. These men are only asking the Government to allow them to continue a tradition. As I said before, these are proud people and many of them rather face the hardships of fishing to supplement their livelihoods and to provide for their families than to accept handouts from the Government.

As I said, my contribution to this debate would be short because I think the Mover of the Motion, the Elected Member for East End, has done a very good job in presenting the Motion and I would not repeat what he has contributed because I know, Mr. Speaker, you would quickly remind me of tedious repetition. So, with these few words I ask the Government to please consider accepting the Motion to allow a tradition of Caymanian fishermen to continue.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I intended to rise to make a contribution to this Motion, however, after the Member for North Side provided such a detailed explanation of my quest over my tenure here to protect tradition and to protect our fishermen, I have very little more that I can say about my efforts for the fishermen.

Mr. Speaker, it is correct that I brought a Motion, as she detailed, to allow the fishermen to use the sea urchins for fishing. In my contribution, I specifically referred to the fishermen in the district that I represent. It is correct that I also requested that chitons, periwinkles and bleeding teeth be allowed for craft purposes. The difference between that particular desire of continuing a tradition and this one is the fact that once an individual is seen with a bucket of sea urchins it is fair to assume that he is using them for fishing. As for conchs I, like everyone else, like them stewed better than on a hook.

Mr. Speaker, it is a much more difficult task to control and monitor conchs because it would be everyone's excuse that the conchs in their possession is to go fishing with. I am sure that this Honourable House would agree that conch stew is much more of a Cayman tradition than stew sea urchins, chitons or periwinkles. It is for this reason that I would urge the Honourable Members to look carefully at this Motion and understand that we would be creating a very difficult issue to control and monitor. The fishermen in my district who use the sea urchins is for a specific period of time and location, just off the iron shore mainly, whereas the conch is used so widely and there are so many available substitutes for conch.

So, where I agree with the desire and primary motivation that is presented here, which is to protect the fishermen, I will not suggest that there is any other political motivation behind it and I do agree that we need to do everything within our ability to preserve the fishing tradition. As the Member for North Side said, these individuals are proud people who want to provide for themselves and not rely on handouts from Government, and we must encourage and do whatever to balance that issue of development and environment, as she pointed out, to ensure that these traditions are in place. I think the Government has circulated a very wise amendment because two broad-leaf conchs are a lot of conchs to go fishing with.

Mr. Speaker, if this is going to be for fishing purposes only then that is a noble attempt by the Government to put something forward that balances the tradition of preserving the conch; allowing them to breed and multiply so that we continue to have them on our menu in our kitchens. So, Mr. Speaker, I do give credit to the Member for East End for bringing what has come to him as representation from his district. That is his purpose; to come here and articulate it on behalf of his people but at the same time, as a legislator, he has to balance that with the quest for the environment to protect and preserve for future generation the conchs that we are talking about.

With those few words said I would urge the Mover of the Motion to look carefully at the amendment proposed by Government and consider it as being Government's gesture to meet you halfway, and to certainly make a contribution to the fishermen on these Islands.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not may I call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to reply.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, it is my Motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: Before calling on the Honourable Member for East End to reply I believe we have an amendment by the Honourable Leader of Government Business, which I would call on him to move at this time.

[Pause.]

The Speaker: Honourable Members, procedurally even if the Honourable Leader of Government Business does not move the Motion, it has been circulated. If you wish to speak to it you may do so. I will, nonetheless, call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move the amendment at this time.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I do not know if there are any more points to be advanced by the Mover of the Motion. I would have preferred to hear if he had any more points and then move the amendment but I will continue at this time.

The Government respects that there are a few older Caymanian men who still go fishing as a means of supplementing their income in a few districts. We can think of a few of them but that is not the problem, the problem is going to come in where everyone is going to want it. I believe that we have come up with something that is liveable. We put a limit on the season for conch and the open season is from November to the end of April and from May to October, which is a closed season and, which the Motion seeks to move. Mr. Speaker, I will formally move the amendment being circulated: in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2) I, as the Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce move the following amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 12 in the Resolve clause by—

1. deleting the words "take steps to amend" and substituting there for the words "consider amending"; and
2. deleting the words "five conchs per day" and substituting therefor the words "two conchs once per day".

Mr. Speaker, as I said the Government took the position after much calls for this to have been done over the years and—

The Speaker: Honourable Members, the question is on the amendment to the Motion. So that it makes sense to even the listening public, I will read the Resolve of the substantive Motion which says: BE IT THEREFORE BE RESOLVED THAT the Government takes steps to amend the Marine Conservation Law 2003 Revision to allow Caymanian fishermen to be licensed to take up to five conchs per day from Cayman waters during the months of May to October inclusive, for the sole purpose of fishing.

The amendment that is being moved by the Leader of Government Business is amending the substantive Motion and this is stating

1. deleting the words "take steps to amend" and substituting therefor the words "consider amending"; and
2. deleting the words "five conchs per day" and substituting therefor the words "two conchs once per day".

Members are reminded that you are voting on the amendment to the Motion and the Motion as amended will later be voted upon. All those in favour of the amendment . . . He can still speak to the amendment; I am taking a motion on the resolve of the amendment at this time. The Motion has been moved and I would call on the Leader of Government Business to speak to it at this point.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I think it is such a good compromise that we were all satisfied we were going the right way (laughter).

Mr. Speaker, the Government over the years, have been requested to do something about the depletion of conchs and that is why we put a limitation and the seasons. The Department is still conducting the annual survey and we have not yet seen the effects of that band and what it could do. The Department told me that scientifically the generation time of a conch is four to five years and it takes that long for them to reproduce.

While they have some raw data—I will not go through all of it because it does not look good; it is a very small amount. The open zone in the North Sound is ten conchs and eighty sites. In the Barkers replenishment zone is nine conch and eighty sites. That is not a whole lot, and as I said they are still taking their survey. I would like the Assembly to give the Department an opportunity to run the necessary analysis on the data they are presently collecting.

Much is being said about the short-spine sea urchin and the point is that these sea urchins are not in demand for food nor are bleeding teeth or chitons, but conch, on the other hand, is one of the favoured local dishes. We have a serious depletion of the conch population and it is no good of any Member getting up here talking about which district is doing it; I hear that grumbling, but this has been done over the years and I think it is a worthwhile move the House has made in the protection of it and it is widely accepted.

I have at least three people in my constituency who spoke to me. So, I think the compromise I have presented is to give the Department time so that they can complete their work. The reason we have taken steps to protect the conch is because the Government wants to ensure that we will be able to continue to take conch in the future for food. If we do not take this measured stand at the time then we are going to be in trouble.

We keep talking about enforcement, but the more work we give to the Department with such things, the less they get opportunity to do enforcement into the real areas that need it. Seining and turtle fishing are very obvious activities and is easier for them to enforce. However, not so at the many people that can come in and say I am a local Caymanian and therefore I have a right to a license and I want to go fishing. We can license them but it is not easy to enforce Five conchs per day throughout the whole year is going to negate the work that we have done with the legislation in the past year and a half.

The other point I would like to make is that while there are various licenses created by various governments over the years and there are different reasons for the licenses, there is no legislation that prohibits locals over foreigners. I do not know of . . .

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: So who are you protecting then? Who are you protecting? You are protecting the local. Well, Mr. Speaker, whether that is what they meant, I know what I heard and as I heard it, other people could take it to mean the same thing. When I heard the Second Elected Member for George Town and the general secretary of the PPM saying that it was not the eastern districts that destroyed the conch population in that area, that is why I had to make that because these are serious things and we say them and create problems!

The Speaker: Order, order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I think the House would do well to give the Department an opportunity to finish their work and see what the results are.

I intend to come back to the House in July at the State Opening, make a report to the House and say what will happen at that time, whether I have the advice from the Department to go ahead with two conchs; that is why I have said two conchs. I think we should give them that chance and give the Government this opportunity to do that.

I am not saying that we should consider just to say, "I have no excuse" or I will say to the Government let us just kill the motion; I am not doing that, I am saying let us compromise. While we know that we have the problem in various districts with a few people, and out of respect for them, we will try to find a mechanism, because we know who they are. The East End Member spoke of a few and the North Side Member spoke of people that we all know and respect, and I can name certain fishermen in West Bay whom I respect and who do it genuinely.

So, I would ask that the House give us that opportunity and we will come back to the House in July and say what will happen. Thank you for allowing the amendment, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members before calling on the Elected Member for East End, I would like to refer Members attention to the Standing Order 25(4) so that the procedures are fresh in everyone's mind. It has to do with amendment to motions.

"An amendment to a motion may be moved and seconded at any time after the question upon the motion has been proposed by the Presiding Officer and before it has been put by him at the conclusion of the debate thereon. When every such amendment has been disposed of, the Presiding Officer shall either again propose the question upon the motion or shall propose the question upon the motion as amended, as the case may require, and, after any further debate which may arise thereon, shall put the question to the House or Committee for its decision."

Does any Member have a comment to make on this? I now call on the Honourable Member for East End to wind up. I do not imagine that any other Member wish to speak on this since the amendment was circulated and all Members had an opportunity to speak on it.

The Honourable Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, for clarity, am I now allowed to debate the Motion or to wind up my . . .

The Speaker: Just let me give you the clarity that you seek.

You are now winding up on the Motion as amended.

If Honourable Members wish to have a vote on the amendment which I sought to do earlier, I will do that at this point. All those in favour to the amendment to Private Members Motion 12/03, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Private Member's Motion No. 12/03, as amended, passed.

The Speaker: It is difficult to now see what will be opposed to, since all Members of the House have agreed on the amendments to the Motion, but nonetheless, I call on the Honourable Member for East End to wind up his Private Members Motion 12/03 as amended.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I am a little confused because I did not get the opportunity to debate the amendment to my Motion as presented by the Leader of Government Business.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, please take your seat for a second. I would like to make a correction.

The statement that you have just made is not correct. You will have every opportunity to debate the Motion as amended which will take into account the amendment to the Motion. It is not correct to say that you will not have an opportunity to debate the amendment.

We have just taken a vote on the amendment as was the wish of the House. No dissention was given to that amendment; therefore, the amendment to the Motion was passed unanimously, no record or any dissent.

You may now wind up on that Motion as amended.

Please continue Honourable Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I really do not know where to begin, but I certainly find it a little strange that the Government would bring an amendment to this Motion. I heard what the Leader of Government Business said in his moving this amendment, however I do not agree with the reasons for bringing such an amendment and I will—

Point of Order

The Speaker: Please state your point of order Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, the Member is trying to revive a debate on something that has already been voted on, which is the amendment.

The Speaker: That is not a point of order and it is for the Chair to decide whether a previous argument is being revised.

Please continue with your debate Honourable Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As I was saying before I was interrupted by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that I do not agree with the reasons of the Leader of Government Business, as he expounded for bringing this amendment to my Motion, No 12/03.

I am going to go into why I see his reasoning as unreasonable. The Leader of Government Business, in moving to amend my Motion, said that everybody will want it and he was referring to a license to take conch during the period of May to October inclusive. If the Leader of Government Business and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman were here when I made my presentation they would not have come up with those things because I made it quite clear, and I think that I went out on the limb on one occasion to stretch the limit of people that this would be extended to, as I said, up to one hundred and fifty. When the Leader of Government Business used that as a reason it was not reasonable for him to use that as a reason.

Both, the Leader of Government Business and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman talked about how difficult it would be for the Department to enforce and ensure that those people were only taking five conchs. I wonder how difficult it is now to ensure that they are not taking five conchs. It is the same thing and there has been no indication as to how difficult it would present itself two versus five. Neither the Leader of Government Business nor the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said anything about that in their presentation.

I am wondering how they are being monitored now. How are the lobsters or the right to take turtles being monitored? How is the right of seining being monitored? How is the right to use a spear gun, fish pots and the lack of the right to take groupers for the next eight years being monitored? Simple! The marine officers that we have are on the water all the time and to ensure that no one is taking conch out of season; they have to visit the boats. Mr. Speaker, you will recall during my presentation of this Motion, I mentioned how the marine officers come to my boat to check on me. I see them going to other boats to check on them and I also said that I believe, those who are breaking the Law are doing it outside the hours those poor marine officers spend on the water.

I also congratulated the Department over the last six months to a year because there has been an increase in activity from the marine officers within my district, and they are doing a good job while they are on duty. However, outside that duty time is where we have our problem, thus my call for additional officers to ensure that we get the coverage.

The UDP Government has to decide whether we are going to pay lip service to the protection of the Marine Conservation Law or the Marine which is so vital to our economy in the tourism industry or if we are going to just legislate laws from a moral standpoint and hope that people do not break the laws, because that is what we are doing.

Mr. Speaker, here is where the Leader of Government Business, his Government and I do not break bread. I want to see more enforcement officers to ensure that we preserve the marine life in our country. In every debate in this Honourable House I have called for that since I have been here, and the Opposition and I continue to call for that. The Leader of the Opposition made passionate pleas during the debate on the amendment to the Marine Conservation Law about the provisions for more marine officers.

The Opposition is not here trying to destroy the marine environment. We are merely trying to maintain a tradition and the Government is not, in my view, fair to bring such a motion because there is no reason whatsoever, that I have heard, where it is going to deplete the conch population any faster than if it was not given to that select few fishermen.

The Leader of Government Business talked about—and his Motion proposes to change my Motion from five conchs a day to two conchs once per day. Now, Mr. Speaker, if we thought that monitoring of November 1 to April 30 was difficult for ten conchs per day, this is going to be even worse. There is no way those marine officers are going to be able to prove that it was not twice per day. So, it just does not make a lot of sense to have two conchs.

Let me go to having two conchs to fish with. When my good friend Mr. David Ritch was along the iron shore in East End we were getting more than two conchs to fish for grunts. I hear the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman making his little noises; I just have something to say to him. I have wrung out more salt water out of my socks than he has ever seen.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for East End you are directing your debate to the Chair not to the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I would ask that we would try to desist from the cross talk because in trying to answer things that are said by the Opposition or from another Member it does not make much sense of the debate. So, please concentrate on your debate and ignore any comments you may hear from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, or anyone else.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you Mr. Speaker, I was just trying to make the point that I have been on more salt water than he has ever seen.

That is not to say that I am the authority on anything. It is the Department of Environment who have the scientist, scientific data and qualified Caymanians who are qualified to do this. I heard the Leader of Government Business read statistics that I did not totally understand but I have spoken to one of the bright minds of the Department and explained to him (it was not the Director but a young Caymanian) my experiences growing up in East End. The conch population at that time went to rock bottom because I think that every time we see a rock bottom population in conch, in particular in my district, it has always been that the economy is down and people use that as a means of supplementing income. Over the last few years enforcement has assisted in keeping it up and I think them for that. However, I am not convinced that a few conchs—in my district, I would venture to say there are about fifteen people who would qualify as exclusive fishermen.

It is not going to absolutely affect these people. I spoke of how the enforcement officers doing such a good job in East End. They know every coconut husk boat that go into the East End sound. So, they know who would qualify as a fisherman. They know I do not qualify as a fisherman, unless of course, I am travelling with one of those members in the society who is qualified as a fisherman, I am not suppose to have conch in my boat during the period of May to October inclusive. If they catch me with them then I would have to pay the penalty of going to the courts and going to prison, or a fine. So, I do not qualify and I have to uphold the Law but there is a small group of fishermen that would benefit from this.

I said earlier that when I went fishing along the beach I got more than two conchs. It is almost impossible to give a fisherman two conchs and expect him to go out there and use it as bait to catch some of his prize fish. I heard the Leader of Government Business say that he is coming back in July to tell us if two conchs are sufficient or if it has been approved. Mr. Speaker, I believe the Leader of Government Business specifically said that to get the public off the Government's back because he is further amending my Motion to say: BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Government take steps to amend the Marine Conservation Law 2003 (Revision)/ I believe that the Leader of Government Business did it on his own because a number of people in the Government would support the fishermen taking five conchs. He proposes to delete the words “take steps to amend” and substitute the words therefor the words “consider amending”.

I have been in this Honourable House since 2000, albeit a short time, but one thing I have been gifted with is a long memory. I have brought motions to this House in that short time asking for Government to consider, and to date, they are still considering and as soon as this Honourable House is dissolved in September this year, it falls away. Nevertheless, I would like with your permission to read the Resolve of Motion No. 8/03.

The Speaker: Honourable Member I have no objection to you making reference but I would remind you that we are not debating a matter that has already been passed by this Honourable House. Motions 7 and 8 were referred to earlier in debates but I am giving a lot of latitude so I will allow you to read the Resolve of that Motion if it is going to strengthen your argument.

Further, may I also repeat that we are not now debating the amendment to this Motion, a vote has been taken on it and a unanimous decision has been reached. What we are now debating and the new amended Resolve to this Motion reads as follows, just for clarity. BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Government consider amending the Marine Conservation law 2003 (Revision) to allow Caymanian fishermen to be licensed to take up to two conchs per day from Cayman waters during the months of May to October.

Can I ask for some quiet please? I would further clarify for Honourable Members that during the Months of May to October is the closed season and this is why this Motion is being brought.

Please continue Honourable Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for allowing me to read the Resolve of Motion No.8/03 which was brought by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and seconded by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

The Resolve says, "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Section 18 (2) (c) of the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) be amended . . ." My Motion was "take steps to amend" in essence it is saying the same thing. That got unanimous support by the Government. All of a sudden the Opposition is bringing a motion and the Government has to consider it.

Mr. Speaker, that is unfair to the people of this country. I am not considering it from my perspective; I did what I had to do. Now, it is the people that the Leader of Government Business and his Government has to answer to, not me. I did what was requested of me as a representative. The Leader of Government Business is doing this to 'save face' because I know when this Motion was proposed . . .

Mr. V. Arden McLean: When this Motion was proposed the Government came here with the intentions of refusing it and subsequent representation from the general public has now made them change their mind to come here to amend my Motion in order to 'save face'.

Mr. Speaker, there are many rumours in this country about other people taking marine life and they are not being monitored. I pose the question today to the Government: How is the dive industry in this country being monitored, particularly at night? I have none of that empirical evidence that the Minister of Education like to talk about. In this, my country, I know where there is smoke there is fire.

I have had much representation from the fishermen and, in particular, for those who go fishing at night, of dive boats taking lobsters from within the Cayman Islands waters; I have never seen it. If we are going to monitor Caymanians and the little fishermen then we are going to monitor the dive boats in this country, as well. If such a thing is happening, I think it is time that the Department, if they are not already doing so, start monitoring the dive boats at nights.

Mr. Speaker, the Leader of Government Business says that we should give the Department time to gather sufficient data on the amount of conchs to see what the population is doing. I support that I am not trying to take anything away from the Department; it is their job to do that, not mine.

In monitoring and gathering that data, I wonder if the Government can tell this country if the Department has any data on the amount of fishermen are in this country. We all understand that the taking of groupers are banned and it was based on the amount of fishermen and the amount of fish that were being taken at that time, and scientifically the Department estimated the sustainability of groupers in these waters. There must be some data available to say how many fishermen are available.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said that there are a number of substitutes for conch that can be used for fishing. I am here to tell him that there are a number of substitutes for sea urchins also, in order to catch squabs. You can catch them with soldier crab and if he is only talking about sea urchins being used only in Cayman Brac, Cayman Brac has a greater population of soldier crabs than we have here.

Again, there is no reason why we cannot allow our people to have five conchs and I would ask the Government to withdraw this amendment. I want to be understood that there is no way the Opposition can vote against it but it is the Government that is utilising their power and political will that they do, to the people of this country, and they have always done this. The United Democratic Party has always done this! Only a select few in this country benefit with any significance from the actions of the United Democratic Party.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for West Bay, are you rising on a point of order?

Honourable Member for East End, please continue, but I ask you to be very careful of statements categorically made. If is in your opinion, I would like for you to say so.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Politics is about an opinion, and it is, in my opinion, that 99.9 per cent of the decisions made by the UDP are in the interest of a select few in this country. Here we are trying to bring a motion to assist the fishermen to maintain a tradition. It is not about tradition anymore; it is about modernisation, like the paint colours inside the Legislative Assembly! It is not about tradition; it is in preserving the wood in the Legislative Assembly and preserving our people so that they can fish. We need to hold on to some of those values and traditions that were instilled in us so that they can be passed on.

The Government has its numbers. I will tell the people who made representation to me that I did my job and I will show them how the Leader of Government Business changed my Motion to suit him. There is no reason why it has to be changed and the people will have to live with what he proposes because the Government has the control. If it was the other way and the Opposition had the control they would be in power and it would be the tail wagging the dog. So, it is always the dog that wags the tail and we are the tail. God help us, Mr. Speaker. We really need God's help under the administration of the UDP.

Mr. Speaker, I understand and I will not go on much further but there is one thing that I need to leave in the minds of the Members of this Honourable House. I said in my presentation, and the Member for North Side also spoke of snapper season, which is now upon us and that is the particular time that fishermen use conchs. There is alternative bait but the alternative bait is small fish under 8 inches. So, what we are doing is creating criminals of our own fishermen. We will not give them the conch but they can take the small fish to fish for snappers and that is illegal. So, it is six of one and half dozen of the other.

Point of order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I must rise on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I think the Member is being repetitious, and he is misleading the House.

There is no control over fries or sprats, and yes, they may be under eight inches but there is no control on them. I really think that the Member is constantly repeating himself, although I know you are keeping a watchful eye on proceedings.

The Speaker: Honourable Members as stated earlier we are giving latitude on this Motion and there has been a lot of tedious repetition but I do also understand that the Order Paper before us is perhaps the last item during this 2003 Session, so I am allowing Members to vent a bit. I would ask a bit.

I would ask that we try to stay as closely to the Motion as possible. The question now before the House is the winding up of this Motion by the Honourable Member for East End and if he made any suggestions that are not factual then I am sure again that he would qualify it by saying, in his opinion. I would not want to delay the proceedings of the House by dealing with these petty issues.

Please continue with your debate Honourable Member for East End and try to be as factual as possible with the points you are making.

Thank you. Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Please allow me to clarify what was said when I said 'small fishes that are under eight inches'. The Leader of Government Business got up on a point of order and said sprats, which are under 8 inches are used for fishing; 'yes', I totally agree with him! Now I need the Leader of Government Business to get up and say if there are any restrictions on fish such as grunts, yellow tails and those other kind of fishes. Once he has clarified that then I can tell him they are used also for snapper fishing. The Leader of Government Business is trying to prove that I was saying something wrong and it is not so! I am not talking about sprats; I am talking about the fish that have restrictions on them, which people are using and have always used, therefore in the absence of other bait such as conch, they will continue to use them and we will be criminalising these people! So, he must not get up here on a point of order if he has never fished for snapper. He does not even know where to go to catch them.

That is why we perish in this country because of the lack of knowledge, such as what The Leader of Government Business has, who have no knowledge of what it takes to catch snappers and what baits are used. So, when he gives advice he must understand what he is getting and clarify what he has said.

Mr. Speaker, I will leave it to the Government. I suspect that this Motion will never (five nor two) see the light of day because of the consideration amendment to this. I would be very surprised if the Government bring it in July. So, the Leader of Government Business and the Government can say as they please, but it is my opinion, that they have no intention of ever allowing fishermen in this country to take two or five conchs during this particular period.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members to ensure that everybody is quite sure I will repeat again for the third time that the question will be put on the amended Motion.

Let me say again, that a vote was taken on that and passed unanimously so we are now going to be voting on the amended Motion. The question is that, BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Government consider amending the Marine Conservation law 2003 (Revision) to allow Caymanian fishermen to be licensed to take up to two conchs per day from Cayman waters during the months May to October inclusive, for the sole purpose of fishing. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Private Member's Motion No. 12/03, as amended, passed.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, can we have a division?

The Speaker: There were no objections so the Motion has been carried unanimously.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I taught I heard one and that is why I called it.

It is the presiding officer but I am at liberty to ask for it if I thought I heard it and that is what I thought I heard.

The Speaker: The Motion has been carried unanimously.

Madam Clerk, please call the next item.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/03

Motion to amend Part II of the Traffic Law (2003 Revision)

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 14/03, a motion to amend Part II of the Traffic Law (2003 Revision).

It reads, BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider undertaking a review to amend Part II of the Traffic Law (2003 Revision) with a view to restructuring the policy in regards to unregistered vehicles.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder for the Motion?
The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The question is, BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider undertaking a review to amend Part II of the Traffic Law (2003 Revision) with a view to restructuring the policy in regards to unregistered vehicles.

The Motion is open for debate does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Before starting with my debate I just want to be sure to emphasise that even though I am the Member of the Government Back Bench that this Motion calls for Government— it says: “BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider undertaking a review . . .” I want to make it clear that I am only asking for consideration.

This will be a very short un-contentious Motion. I think that all Elected Members, like me, have been exposed to numerous requests by individuals who have had difficulties with vehicles that were licensed previously, but due to some unforeseen circumstances have been off the road for extended periods of time. Usually what happens under the existing policy is that the Motion calls for a restructuring of policy in regards to unregistered vehicles because in researching the Motion I have had difficulty finding exactly where in the Law the policy is found. I think that we are all aware of the problem which exists where someone will come to license a vehicle after purchasing it from someone, after it has been off the road for an extended period of time, only to find that there are license fees owed, sometimes in excess of four to five years, which tends to make it difficult on the new owners to then get the license brought up to date.

In researching the Motion to find where in the Law that is allowed to be done. I did research of the Traffic Law (2003 Revision) Part II, which refers to registration and licenses of vehicles. In section 6 (4) it says, “The director in being satisfied that this Law and the Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risk) Law (1997 Revision), and regulations respectfully made thereunder, have been complied with, shall register the vehicle by assigning it a serial registration number and recording the prescribed particulars in the register, and shall issue to the owner registration plates and a certificate of registration in the prescribed form.” That says that a part of registering the vehicle is issuing the owner registration plates.

What has happened in the past is that if someone takes their car off the road, does not carry the plates to the Director of Licensing advising that the car will be off the road for an extended period of time and the license registration expires, upon trying to renew that registration it is required for the individual who is registering the vehicle to then pay the fees since the expiration of the previous registration.

The Law specifically makes provision for someone to temporarily take the car off the road and notify the Director of Licensing, but in some circumstances that have been expressed to me, many times an individual do not plan for the vehicle to be off the road for extended periods of time. In one case, I know of an individual where the truck was off the road for a short period of time because he was doing work on the back of the truck, changing it and injured himself while doing so. The person was off for medical reasons for a long period of time, not realising that the vehicle was there and not expecting to be off for that period of time. Before he realised it, he was off doing physical therapy and so on, and a year had passed. He started working on the vehicle again and because he had to wait for parts two years had passed and it got to the position where he had to pay license fees for two years. So, in trying to get the money to do that, this was a longer period of time. He could not come up with the funds anymore and someone approached him about purchasing the vehicle and the sale of that took an extended period of time. When the new owner finally completed the purchase and went to license the vehicle there was two to three years in outstanding fees.

I said earlier that I think this is going to be a short Motion because we are all aware of the problem. If I could be permitted again using the Law section 14(1) (b) it says, “A vehicle licence may be taken out for three six or twelve months and shall come into effect upon a subsequent application for a vehicle license in respect of a vehicle on the day following the day of expiry of the last vehicle licence issued in respect of that vehicle, irrespective of the date of such application.” that is where we get to the back fees.

Earlier on I mentioned in section three where it says that the owner of a registered vehicle intends not to keep the registered vehicle on the road for a period in excess of three months; he may lodge the vehicle license with the Director and make applications with the Director in the prescribed form for a suspension. Looking at the cases where it is not a planned long term; we get to section 10(3) of the Law. I think the recommended solution to the Motion would be 10(3) which says, “The Director may delete from the register any vehicle for which a vehicle licence has not been taken out for a continuous period of three years.” My recommendation is to change that to say that the Director shall delete from the register any vehicle for which a vehicle license has not been taken out for a continuous period of one year.

What would happen then is if a person's vehicle is not license for a year it would now be removed from the register. If they wanted to license thereafter it would be dealt with as a new re-licensing so there would be no back fees associated with whatever period of time occurred. If they waited for two or three years at that time it would be dealt with as a new license because it was removed from the register at that time. So, there would be no need for back fees to be paid for that period.

Mr. Speaker, in the event that the person is driving the vehicle for that period, I would also recommend that the fines for driving an unlicensed vehicle would be increased which would act as a deterrent to ensure that people do not go over that period because they would then stand the chance of being caught and paying a higher fee.

When it says that the Director may delete from the register, I am not sure whether that policy is being used. If that is the case then no one should be paying fees for more than three years because after the three year period the Director could delete it from the register. I have had references made to me that is not the case because it says that the Director may delete, so if it has not been deleted, if it is still showing on the register even if it is four or five years later, then the fees that are outstanding are expected to be paid.

My proposal is to change the word “may” by substituting it with “shall be deleted”. If the experts in the Department say that maybe it should be longer than a year, maybe a year and a half, it would still solve my dilemma because in the event if a person finds that they are only outstanding for one year or eighteen months, it would mean that they would have to wait six months more and when they go to register the vehicle it would not be required to pay any outstanding fees, only the new registration. Hopefully that will allow for one of the hardships that our people are having. In most cases people who cannot afford to pay those outstanding fees, as I said, many times they purchase a car not knowing that the fees are outstanding for extended periods of time.

In many instances we have been asked to write to the Financial Secretary to get those fees waived. Hoping that with this amendment to the Law the process will be a bit easier to address. Mr. Speaker, hopefully this Motion meets with the approval of the Honourable Members of the House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, this is a matter that the Government will explore. It is one of policy and it is one that affects all Caymanians at some point in time. I think the Member has done a good job of presenting his case. I want to tell the Opposition that I stood by the door and listened to what the Member had to say, although I had to deal with people outside.

Mr. Speaker, the Opposition is so willing to cause trouble; so willing to try to throw cold water on a good thing. They have such a problem but as I said, the Government is going to explore this matter. It affects everyone and I think it is something that we can genuinely examine and we intend to do that and make a report in July at the State Opening.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, this Motion 14/03 is one which most, if not all of us, in this Honourable Legislative Assembly can relate to because I have on occasion on behalf of constituents had to write to the Financial Secretary, the Honourable Third Official Member, explaining certain situations regarding these back fees that are referred to in the Motion. The various sections and subsections that the Honourable Mover has referred to are very relevant to point out the problem that ensues on occasion.

So, from the point of view of looking into the matter to see if there is an easier method to solve such problems when they occur because it is as the Mover has said, we have it on both sides. You may well have an individual who have physically paid for a vehicle and actually exchanged keys and cash prior to going to license the vehicle and on reaching the Licensing Department is when it is discovered that there are three, four or five year of back licensing fees that they have to pay if they wish to drive the vehicle. The difficulty with that is they cannot go back to the person and say here is your vehicle I want my money back because the deal is done.

So, there is a problem like that and we accept that. There is also the problem which he mentioned of individuals—I think lots of time they simply forget and do not really realise it because the vehicle is not on the road for some reason, and eventually you will have situations where a couple of years may go by and in the odd circumstance several years will go by before a vehicle is back on the road. In many instances that is not private vehicles. On many occasions it more likely for that to happen with heavy equipment than the car or jeep that you or I would drive. Many times with heavy equipment they get put aside and somebody who is in that business will have two or three other vehicles put aside and they will buy this one that has been laid up for four or five years in order to make one vehicle out of all the different pieces they have together, then they are faced with that problem.

To view the Motion from the point of view that the problem is accepted is that everyone is in total agreement. To say that we are going to have a look at it, as the Government has said, is fine too. However, more so than any other reason, why I wanted to say a few words on the Motion is because I do not think there is a question of whether everyone accepts having a look at this. What we have to bear in mind is if you look at the existing Law at the section and subsections that have been referred to, the reasons those sections are in the Law is simply because there are individuals who would, if they were allowed to, break the Law unless they are caught. So, my point is, that in looking at it and trying to find a way to bring about a situation that is not so onerous for an individual in the circumstances, which we referred to, we must insure that in doing that it does not create a loop hole for those would be law evaders. I cannot be specific with that because I do not know what the solutions are going to be that are brought forth. I only want to raise the point that the reason why the Law is this way is for the reasons I just mentioned.

Any solutions to be had, it must also be borne in mind that we do not want to bring about a situation that makes life easier for those individuals. I do believe that whatever the solution is, I think that there has to be a mechanism of verification so that I just cannot wake up one morning, sit with my friends and develop a yarn to spin and I spin the yarn and problem solve. There has to be a mechanism whereby a Justice of the Peace or someone will attest to the fact that what this individual has put forward as his case is the case.

Subsection 3 of section 10 which the Mover pointed out, where it says: “the Director may delete from the register, any vehicle for which a vehicle licence has not been taken out for a continuous period of three years.” a solution of “shall” and “one year” instead of “may” and “three years” is being offered. I think we may want to be a bit careful with that because the truth of the matter is, and again, I go back to heavy equipment, which is not always on the road but at some points in time, may have to be transported from one point to the other and actually go on the road if it is not on a flatbed being transported by another vehicle. People can take advantage of that and not license it for a year, then license it for a year and do not license it for another year and say it was not working because it was off the road.

I only bring those points up to say yes, if we can find a way to make life easier, fine, but at the same time we must bear in mind in trying to seek those solutions that we are not allowing too many loop holes in the various areas that the Law itself is meant to capture at this point in time.

So, Mr. Speaker, I do not think there is a problem with supporting the Motion. I just thought I would raise those few points so that they could be borne in mind when consideration is being given.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not would the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would like to thank all of the Members from the Government and the Opposition who have spoken in support of the Motion.

The intent was that once there were an agreement we would ask the people in authority who have the expertise and experience to consider and if they can come up with a solution that will help everyone that would be a reasonable outcome to the Motion.

Section 6 (1) says, “whoever, in any place, uses or keeps or, being the owner, permits any other person to use or keep any motor vehicle, not being a vehicle exempted from registration under this Law and which is not registered, is guilty of an offence.” According to the Law if you have it and not using it you are guilty of an offence. Section 2 goes on to say that no person is liable for penalty for a breach of subsection 1 if he proves that he has taken all reasonable steps to comply with its requirements, and when the vehicle is in use on the road that it is on the way for the purpose of being registered.

So, I think that there is agreement where the situation needs to be reviewed and I trust that with the support of the Government and the Opposition the Motion will pass, and the respective bodies will come up with a more practical solution.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is, BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider undertaking a review to amend Part II of the Traffic Law (2003 Revision) with a view to restructuring the policy in regards to unregistered vehicles. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Private Member's Motion No. 14/03 passed.

The Speaker: Honourable Members I propose to take the luncheon suspension at this time but would ask all Honourable Members to try and be back by 2.30 pm so that we may resume.

As you will notice there are only two items remaining and those two items could be completed today which would complete the items available for the Order Paper for this 2003 session.

I would, however, remind Honourable Members Standing Orders 23(8) which reads, "...Provided that if all other business for the meeting has been disposed of, such postponed questions and all other questions listed on a Business Paper but not placed on the Order Paper shall be answered in writing by the Member of Government to whom the question was addressed ..." I would ask all Honourable Ministers and Members of the Government to comply accordingly with this Standing Order.

What I would also say is that when we return Honourable Members confine their debates to the motions before the House that we could finish the items on the Order Paper today. I do understand that there is a 4.45 pm meeting which has been called by the Third Official Member and we will not be able to work late this evening, but I will leave it in the hands of all Honourable Members.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Sorry, Mr. Speaker. I was just wondering whether you can take the luncheon break until 3 o'clock as we have a 2.30 meeting with Members which will last until 3 pm.

The Speaker: The request is that we extend the luncheon until 3 o'clock to allow for certain official business to be conducted. So, we will break now and return at 3 pm.

Thank you Honourable Members.

Proceedings suspended at 1.00 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.49 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 13/03

Acquisition and Preservation of Property for Agriculture

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I rise to move Private Member's Motion No. 13/03, Acquisition and Preservation of property for agriculture.

The Resolve reads, BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider undertaking a study to identify and acquire suitable acreage of property on all three of the Cayman Islands with the view of preserving the property for agriculture purposes.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The question is, BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider undertaking a study to identify and acquire suitable acreage of property on all three of the Cayman Islands with the view of preserving the property for agriculture purposes.

The Motion is open for debate.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In my short tenure here at the Legislative Assembly it is not often that I have had the opportunity to rise on a motion that I believe is uncontroversial and one that will have full support of this Honourable House.

With that said I would like to point out that the allegation made by the Member for East End that because it is Opposition they could not bring a motion that required definitive action but had to have it considered, is once more proven to be wrong. As you see, with this Motion we are simply asking for the Government to consider.

We live in an era where self reliance is of ever increasing importance. The ability for a country to supply its food, its source of life is growing increasingly important. I had a visit from one of the farmers in the constituency which I represent, several months ago, who stressed to me the growing trend of prime agriculture property that was now being used for subdivisions; being paved over; bulldozed with no regard to the true value of this property. In the district of Bodden Town and the Newlands area, I see it on a daily basis. I see where the red mole is simply covered by roadways. In a country that has such limited productive land mass it is imperative that we identify the very little agriculture property that remains in this country and take initiatives to ensure that this property is used for agriculture development.

I would like to address one of the components of this Motion. In the Resolve it specifies that we look at the three Islands. There are some unique considerations when we talk of identifying and labelling property in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as agriculture because there is no zoning in place. However, I would like to stress that this will not affect private individual property; this would be property that the Government would acquire and own, then designate it, preserve and hold it in trust for agriculture purposes. This is not a general blanket arrangement where the individual will remain the owner of the property but it will be labelled as only for use of agriculture. The Motion seeks for Government to acquire the property and hold it for agriculture purposes.

There are many ways in which the Government could consider and look at how they use this property and allow the farmers to use this property throughout the three Islands. It could be through a token lease arrangement, or it could be where a farmer is allowed to acquire the property from Government outright once the purpose is for agriculture.

We live in the 21st century and rely on importing most of the produce, meat and everything. We have seen through recent events where this vulnerability to outside forces has played a true role in determining the standard of life in these Islands. We saw after September 11th (9/11) where air cargo service did not come in and our fresh produce was not on the shelves. We have seen in the scares of the mad cow disease where certain processed meats can no longer be imported and even the other produce that affects the plant life such as the pink mealy bug. It is of increasing importance that we try to develop our agriculture industry in these Islands, and the key component of any agriculture production is the quality of the land that you are producing it on.

As a hobbyist farmer myself, who farm on some of the very best land in the Cayman Islands, in the Newlands area, I truly appreciate the value of having good land versus land that I have to over fertilise because the cost of growing would exceed the potential benefit that you could reap.

So, Mr. Speaker, I bring this Motion before the Honourable House and I take the opportunity to thank my colleague, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, for seconding the Motion and while he was seconding the Motion, I am not sure if heard, that the Second Elected Member for George Town attempted to bestow upon him honourable citizenship of Cayman Brac. We always welcome his involvement and support of Cayman Brac but this Motion affects the three Cayman Islands, and I hope and trust that the full body of Legislative Assembly will find it within themselves to support this Motion.

It is an opportunity for us to draw on tradition, as the Member of East End talked about this morning, because farming and having our own little ground and produce, drawing our own cassava and yams— and I would like to let the Member of East End know that I have plenty red mole between my toes also—it is part of our tradition to have our own production of agriculture products in this Island and to do so we have to urgently address the ever declining available agriculture land in this country. On a daily basis all of us who drive through our districts will see situations where agriculture land is being used for subdivisions, and private dwellings that end up with brick paving over the property, and not properly utilised for agriculture property.

Mr. Speaker, with those short words said on this Motion, I reserve the right as given to me under Standing Order to reply and I will add further comments at that time.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

It gives me great pleasure to second this Motion. Just to elaborate a little further on the point made by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman in regards to the importance that agriculture plays as countries develop.

We see in the world in which we live that one of the key stumbling blocks for the World Trade Organisation, as we speak, to reach international consensus to have a true international trading system in place is the whole issue of agricultural subsidies in major countries.

Many of the developing countries of this world can grow certain types of agricultural produce cheaper than developed countries. However, developed countries and their governments see it as a matter of national security to subsidise farming in certain areas because they do not ever want to become reliant on other countries in the world to provide those critical foodstuff. So, those governments, for example, in the United States continue to subsidise their farmers in order to continue production in their countries, even though whilst they may have technological advances that make them efficient, the costs of other inputs, especially labour, into the agricultural industry causes them to be more expensive than they could have acquired those products on the open market internationally from certain other countries. Those governments realise that if in the event of a war, for example, they were left at the mercy of being able to either fly by air or bring in by vessels on the sea, certain produce into the country that would be potentially cut off in times of war. So, those governments make a conscious decision to continue to subsidise their agricultural industries.

As we in this House would know, there is a feeling that there should be a perfect system economically in the world today whereby those countries that can produce things at the most cost effective price, should be able to produce them and sell them to other countries. So, each country would go along the lines of what is a competitive advantage to them and they would then produce those goods and services. However, as we all know, a subsidy is one of the most widely used market distorting features in the world today because a subsidy is nothing more than that, a distortion of the market; a government making a conscious decision that even though they, as a country, may not be able to produce something, and in this case agriculture produce at the most economical rate; they continue to ensure that it is done domestically, simply for national security purposes.

We have said for a long time in Cayman and people continue to say: "wow we are overly dependent on the outside world for everything that we have in this country." I believe that this Motion, whilst it does not provide the complete solution to our food dependency issue, it is a step in the right direction to us recognising that it is a critical issue for us, as a country, therefore we ask the Government to consider taking a step that would assist in the long term to us being able to produce and provide more foodstuff for ourselves in the Cayman Islands.

I know that there are going to be other considerations that must be given, that is, there is always a budgetary consideration and certainly we do bear that in mind. However, the Motion is crafted so, that I do believe, it provides the flexibility for us to start making the steps down the road to being able to acquire certain lands that we see are currently being used for other purposes, mainly for residential dwelling places; going down the road of being able to preserve some of that land for the future use of agriculture.

The Member has already spoken in regards to the issues that exists in Cayman Brac and we do recognise that we will have to deal with this issue slightly differently for both Islands, but he did make the point that this Motion is not seeking to come up with any land use criteria for people. It is simply Government paying cognisance to the fact that we have a situation in Cayman where we are, I would not say completely dependent, but so close to it that some would argue that it is too close to being completely dependent on outside countries from which we receive our very vital and necessary source of food.

The Motion is simply looking for Government to locate lands that would be suitable, purchase and preserve those with a view that they could be used for agricultural use. It is nothing new for the Crown to own property, it currently owns property and this is simply trying to ensure that we do get property with a specific view in mind, that is, that it would be used for agricultural production.

Mr. Speaker, I lend the Motion my support and I do commend the Motion to my other Honourable colleagues in this House.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Planning and District Administration.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to make my contribution in respect to Motion No. 13/03—Acquisition and Preservation of property for agriculture. If you will permit me I would like to read it again to make sure that I am fully cognisant of it because this is the first time I am actually seeing it is on the Business Paper.

BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider undertaking a study to identify and acquire suitable acreage of property on all three of the Cayman Islands with the view of preserving the property for agriculture purposes. If I understand what the Motion is asking, I believe it is asking three things:

Firstly, that Government be the entity who considers-

1. to undertake the study which would identify and
2. that they would acquire suitable acreage of the property on the three Cayman Islands.
3. lastly, with a view of preserving the property for agricultural purposes.

Mr. Speaker, I would start by way of introduction to say that the intent of this Motion has been along for many governments, certainly when you were the Minister responsible for agriculture; when the previous Ministers were; and I am sure the current Minister responsible for agriculture feels the same way, having had an opportunity to speak to him during a break earlier today. It is also reflected in our Development Law from some time back that there was an important need to ensure that agricultural properties were preserved within all three of the Islands. Obviously, as the Second Elected Member for West Bay indicated, the treatment of preservation and acquisition of properties for this purpose is by operation and regulations of the Development and Planning Regulation 2003. This would operate in a slightly different fashion in that to have done the Motion otherwise, we would have been caught within Regulation 35(3) which to an extent, exempts Cayman Brac and Little Cayman from having any particular type of zoning or land use, whereas regulations 1 to 34 does not apply to the constituency in which I apply.

I am happy to see that the drafter of the Motion asks for Government to consider acquiring as opposed to taking the approach of asking for a specific land use because that would have put us in somewhat of a technical difficulty.

We also would have seen that from the 1977 Development Plan under the Agricultural and Residential Zone that the drafters from back then thought that these lands should be designated on the map, and in fact were so designated as being preserved primarily for agricultural and residential uses. There are a number of different conditions but the one relevant to this particular debate would be that agriculture and single family residential use should be allowed in this zone.

I think this is where some of the problem has been created, as far as the land use specifications are concerned, although under regulation 21 it says that one house per acre may be built on agriculture and residential property. We are finding that persons have wanted to build homes on many of these properties as it relates to Grand Cayman. We are aware of the caveat that is found in the proviso under regulation 21, which allows the Governor in various circumstances, not involving water lens, to go up to three homes. So, we are seeing that some of the property has been used for residential purposes.

Several months ago I got representation from a renowned farmer in my constituency, one well known to this Honourable Parliament, Mr. Mercherito Chantilope, and in one of my many conversations with him he indicated that there was a particular large tract of land in the Creek area that the proprietor wished to sell and he, of course, would be keen in farming the area as he has done with various other properties. He wanted to find out whether Government would entertain acquiring the property. In following correct protocol I directed him to the Minister responsible for Agriculture who I know think the same way as it relates to the Brac, having been a representative there for some eight years. So, having given that commitment to Mr. Mercherito I have no problem in supporting the Motion today, which would seek to achieve a similar purpose and certainly would assist in that position.

I am somewhat dismayed that perhaps we could not have had an opportunity to peruse the Motion a little earlier seeing that we have just completed the Budget. I certainly, as Minister responsible for land acquisition, would have been in a better position now that we do not have the luxury of advance warrants under the new financial management system to try to get this property much earlier.

So far it seems like there will be support on the other side unless there is some debate to the contrary based on what the Mover has said. So, perhaps when I would seek to ask for a supplementary for various acquisitions, once this Motion is passed today, we would have positive passage with that as well.

Mr. Speaker, in all fairness we should look at the latest Development Plan, which I believe was done under your stewardship. We will see that over 50 per cent of Grand Cayman is already designated as agriculture land. Some 2 years ago, if I am correct, the Planning Department tried to do that, but as a young girl I was told that there are a couple of things belonging to Caymanians that you do not touch, one of them being land. So, it is not always easy to do it through the planning procedure.

In the interest of my Planning Ministry and the Planning Department I would like to put on record that they have made many attempts—previous Ministers including yourself, to ensure that there was sufficient agriculture zoning, not only on Grand Cayman but back in 1996 to 1997 we tried it for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as well. Mr. Jim Bodden way back then tried to do zoning to make sure that we had sufficient zones which investors and residents could plan in a way forward that they would have some certainty of the development but it was not accepted by the constituents on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

So, again I am happy to see that the way the Motion is worded with Government acquiring it, if the consideration result is in the positive and I trust that it would be once we reach that stage, then that land could be designated through Executive Council or Cabinet for that sole use.

As it relates to Cayman Brac the traditional areas of the mould land, which would be used for agricultural purposes, I would dare say, 99.9 per cent would be on top of the Bluff. We are at an opportune time if we were able to go in the direction of making it a priority to acquire and preserve for agricultural purposes. Residential development has just started its gestation period on the Bluff and we have the rare opportunity to actually plan the entire Bluff in a proper way so that we will not have ad hoc development. Persons can plan from now even before starting investments or with state planning to ensure that there will not be any planning surprises on the way as they continue to develop it.

I realise that as we go further towards the western section of my constituency there is perhaps less arable land. So, there would have to be an arrangement made for there to be equity in parity for the persons wishing to access these Crown properties for agricultural purposes, maybe through a co-op or something of that nature, and maybe a committee could be put together. I realise that when, under your stewardship, the recommendations for the sustainable development of Cayman Brac 2003 to 2007, presented to your good self, the Honourable Leader and the Deputy Leader, was taken with cognisance that there was a need for agricultural production in industries. As you will see, on page two of that Report it said that there was a necessity to facilitate a robust and dynamic economy by sub-paragraph (2) reducing the reliance on all imported goods and by investing in agricultural production and like cottage industries. Also under the development of the Bluff on page 11 it says, in sub-paragraph (5) that it is recommended that wherever practical agriculture land, locally known as mouldy land, will be retained for present and future use for pasture agriculture and horticultural purposes.

I am happy to report that the Ministry since your departure to a much higher position, took a Cabinet paper and my colleagues on Cabinet has approved for the Committee to be chaired by the District Commissioner. A number of other outstanding citizens from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are to look at the various terms contained within this Report and to report back to the Minister on a quarterly basis, as to the way forward and how we can best implement.

So, this Motion would go hand in hand with that. The only missing ingredient would be the actual funding for it and that is the dismay. Perhaps if the Motion had been discussed at an earlier stage we could have had something to give to the farmers even before this year goes out. However, suffice to say, since Members seem to be in a good mood this afternoon I will sit down on an optimistic note and hope that when I come for a supplementary I would have the full support to acquire the properties for agricultural use.

May it please you and I thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Agriculture.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to speak to Private Members Motion No. 13/03, Acquisition and Preservation of property for agriculture.

I think it is appropriate that I should do so in that I now have the responsibility for the subject of agriculture in the Ministry for which I am responsible.

I must confess that since being closely associated with the subject of agriculture, I have become much more aware of how vast a concept, agriculture is.

It certainly is no longer limited to the older man or lady in the field in overalls with a pick and a plough and all the things that we have associated agriculture with over the years. Agriculture now is something that the world is making major advances in by using science and technology.

A good example is, in the state of California, which is one of the largest in the United States and it is also one of the richest, but the majority of wealth of the state of California comes from agriculture and all its areas such as its vineyards, production of wines and the citrus and all the various types of fruits which they produce there. They have applied science in ways by using techniques, which they use in this particular state. In fact, it is the largest agricultural state in the United States, as I was told last year when I attended a conference there. It was strange to me because I always thought that the big farming states were in the Midwest area where there is corn and so on, but I came to find out otherwise.

Mr. Speaker, in the Cayman Islands, it is strange and it is almost funny, and perhaps we would call our forefathers in the modern day—I suppose we would say that they were real dumb because they did not know the value of beach land. Their greatest value of beach land was for launching their boats and to go fishing. The early settlers in these Islands considered agriculture land, land that is inland, to be more valuable simply for the fact that they can grow and produce food to sustain themselves.

Agriculture crops and meats relate to food and food sustains life. I think that when we think of agriculture in the Cayman Islands, we ought to think beyond the supermarkets. Supermarkets or shops can buy foods from overseas, some of the developed countries much cheaper than it can be grown in the Cayman Islands. Some of the best food that is produced in these countries does not go outside of their own borders; they keep the good food and send the not so good food into third world countries. So, we should think of agriculture in very broad terms.

Agriculture has to do with politics and we know that one nation can act against another nation economically by stopping the trade in certain food products, and I know that to be the case as we all do when one country will take sanctions against another. I know, for example, that with the mad cow disease scare in Canada when the borders were closed off suffered immense economic loss. I know that the same thing was happening in Mexico; Mexico was not sending cows to Texas for butchering and it was a major consideration. We are talking about hundreds of millions of dollars being lost. So, when we are speaking about agriculture and the production of food, we are speaking about economics in a very big way.

When I was at the World Health Organisation Assembly I bought a book called, Social Determinants of Health; a booklet called the solid facts and just to quote one caption of it under food it says: "because global market forces control the food supply healthy food is a political issue." It also says: ". . . a good diet and adequate food supply are central for promoting health and wellbeing. A shortage of food and a lack of variety cause malnutrition and deficiency diseases. Excess intake, also a form of malnutrition contributes to cardiovascular diseases, diabetes, cancer, degenerative eye diseases, obesity and dental caries."

To connect the agriculture, food and health, it is really something that impacts all of us and what we need to be looking to, as has been pointed out by certain Members, is that we can have some degree of sufficiency in the production of food via agriculture. We know that after 9 September 11th (9/11) there was a question of aircraft movement, and of course, most of the food coming into Cayman that we buy every day in the supermarket is flown in from the United States. So, there was for some weeks a sort of touch and go situation as to whether it will arrive on Thursday as it usually does. If it were the case where these borders had to be closed because of a happening elsewhere, the Cayman Islands could end up with a food shortage. It is simple and factual as that. So, looking to promote agriculture is a very important thing.

I would like to say to this Honourable House that it is a subject which a lot of people; farmers and even those who do it just for the sake of farming that they want to produce some, are very passionate about this matter of agriculture.

I have had representation made to me along the very same and identical line of what this motion is asking for. The agricultural society brought this matter up and they have put it to me and said that they have also put it to various Ministers over time, and I suppose that was also when you were the Minister for Agriculture, Mr. Speaker. The representations made to me was that government should try to buy some of the land available and suitable to be used for agricultural purposes, lease it to them, the farmers, or work out some sort of arrangement whereby a share cropping deal that they would farm it and so much percentage of the sales would go to the Government and so much would be for them. However, there have been many representations to me for this type of situation—

The Speaker: Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business would you move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) so that the proceedings may continue.

Suspension of Standing Order 10 (2)

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) that debate may continue beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10 (2) suspended.

The Speaker: The House will continue proceedings.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: As I was saying, there has been a lot of representation about farmers getting land, which they can farm. I would like to make the point in supporting this Motion that no one should get the impression that anyone is talking about acquiring land or taking peoples' land or any such thing, which is so far fetched that maybe I should not mention it, but then again, knowing what can be said in here and how it appears in the media, perhaps it is best that I do.

Someone was reminding me that there was a caption in the Paper "farmers market must go" or something like that which grabs your attention. That all led up to the fact that it is in the zone where the airport has a protective zone where it will eventually have to physically move from there, but certainly not the idea that it has to go. If anything we want it to come and not to go.

Mr. Speaker, it speaks of acquiring suitable acreage of property. It clearly intends, and I believe and support that there is some acreage in Grand Cayman and I think some in the Brac, as well, and perhaps even some in Little Cayman that could be used as agriculture land. Indeed some of the land that is still left in Cayman used to be used for agriculture purposes. I am told that even in Little Cayman quite a lot of cattle were raised there and some of it was exported. So, there is some land available and the Motion is asking for a study to identify where this may be and certainly to acquire it Government would have to pay the market price for it. So, as the Minister for Lands said, it will need money and for us to be able to do this we would have to have some money and perhaps slowly or progressively acquire some acreage that we know is for the specific use of agriculture.

Mr. Speaker, on the question of zoning, we have been fortunate here in Grand Cayman that we were wise enough to give some latitude that it was residential agriculture, so you will find places where people can get approval via the Planning Authority to build on the land while a part is still being used for agriculture. I still support that view of land utilization.

It would be remiss of me if I did not encourage everyone in this House and everyone everywhere else to consider having a small home garden. Other parts of the world people have a four by four spot that they grow vegetable in and certainly one can take a pot and grow tomatoes using a hydroponics type of system; and that is what we need to look and encourage.

The aquaculture side of agriculture is considered to be a sub area of agriculture, but aquaculture is something that is immense. What I have seen that can be done is quite amazing and I think that we are on our way here on the Island for this to develop. I know some have been achieved through the schools. The Cayman Brac School has done considerably well. I understand they have grown fish from fingerlings, about an inch long and now they have fish that are a pound and a half. They have really latched on to this idea and they have learnt the scientific process. They have also done it with vegetables and it is quite an outstanding effort.

The George Town Primary School has also done so and I think the word is spreading in terms of people becoming aware that agriculture is not the back breaking stuff anymore. If one want to take it a bit further, agriculture is even growing plants, roses, flowers or whatever, is the ornamental side of things; horticulture. It goes on and on and it comes under the huge concept of agriculture. I honestly believe that is one of the areas of business for these Islands. We should seriously look at it because we need to go into certain economic diversification and it is something that we should look at real seriously.

We need it from the point of food security, food supply and, of course, employment. There are very few farmers in Cayman who are farming for someone else; they are farming themselves. They are farming someone else's land, which they give some of the crops to, but they are self employed. I think that is something which we need to look at real carefully and give lots of support to. The Agriculture Department is doing quite a lot in the process of educating, particularly children. Some farmers are set in their ways and you can get across certain concepts or skills to them, but they like growing their stuff in a particular way. However, there are always new techniques that can be applied to improve the yield or to protect it against pests and so on.

Today is a very good day for us to focus on the idea of agriculture. What it really means, is that it is no longer the little thought, it is a huge world out there that every one of us can become involved in some way or the other.

Mr. Speaker, I would certainly support in the future here because I do not think any money was provided for this in the 2004/2005 Budget, but certainly along the way if there is land which could be bought at reasonable price for this purpose I would be one to support it and the Motion does ask for this consideration in all three Islands. Once it is purchased I think it should have the stamp of agriculture on it and it should not be used for any other purpose. Let the building go on, nobody is saying nay to that, but certainly we need to secure certain lands strictly for agricultural purposes. Again, from a scientific point of view, we can see what crop can be best grown there or it might be the case that it is far enough distance from residences that one may choose to raise some kind of livestock.

Mr. Speaker, having offered those views on this Motion I give it my support and I hope that we can move forward to acquire at least one parcel of land sometime in the near future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As I listened to all of the contributions thus far on this Motion, my thought began to broaden in scope. Certainly the Opposition support the concept that the Motion is bringing fourth. The Minister for Planning, in her contribution, when she spoke to the fact that this is not a new thought and that previous governments were of like mind but simply did not get to physically do it, that is a fact. For those of us who have been here for some time we have heard mention of it before.

I was pleased to hear the Honourable Minister for Agriculture mention aquaculture but what I did not hear him tie into his line of argument, which I would like to be considered (he did say that horticulture and aquaculture and such are under the huge umbrella of the word agriculture) and in considering undertaking a study, as the Motion requires, to identify and acquire suitable acreage of property on all three Islands with a view of preserving the property of agricultural purposes, I want to presume that the word agriculture here is that big umbrella and that it would be considered as seriously as the Minister has pointed out, that such lands may be able to be acquired, which are suitable for aquaculture in the same vein without separating the issues, but to make sure that it is included.

I am with firm conviction and belief that individuals and or entities with a keen desire to explore the possibilities of aquaculture in the Cayman Islands are tremendously hindered because of not having the land to do it. The investment required for many of these individuals when you speak to the size property that you physically need, depending on what the type of aquaculture you are doing, where you are rotating various ponds or whatever, you would need sizable properties to be able to do that. The idea of being able to do so and Government encouraging this, if there were designated properties set aside that are suitable by way of the study that the Motion speaks to, then one could easily entice that type of activity in the country and it all bodes well for the whole industry.

As the Minister for agriculture rightly pointed out, in my view also, and I support the thought, it is perhaps one of the most conducive ways for this country to diversify its economy. If one simply tapped into the information bank on the importation of certain goods, produce and meats into this country, while understanding that there may be a bit of difficulty sometimes competing with prices, but in the area of aquaculture what is paid for importing such things as shrimp, tilapia fish and other things, I am absolutely convinced that there are certain choice items there that we could easily get to the point where we could support the local market. Forget about exportation; if we ever got to that it would be what the Jamaican man call the 'brotta'. We could aim to satisfy the local market because our local market is not just the local market, as you well know. Our local market involves the visitors so hotels and restaurants especially, are businesses which imports huge quantities of these different meats, fish and shrimp. So, there is a huge market for it. The question is not the market, the question is having the ability to produce and be competitive for that market.

If someone does not have to import a certain quality of meat, fish or shrimp and it is able to be produced locally at a competitive price, why would they want to import it if it is much fresher here and everything else. That is just one of the examples that we would want to be looking at when looking at all of this.

The other thing the Minister of Agriculture mentioned is that there are many people in the country today—well, relatively speaking, there are several individuals who farm other people's property. The concept is not far fetched where Government can lease the land. For instance, there may be a fairly large tract of land that is family land in an estate which involves forty to sixty people and they may not have a great desire to dispose of the property and divide the proceeds they may get $1,500 to $2,000 each. However, it is not beyond them because they would wish for the property to remain in the family for generations to come, for Government to actually be able to lease the property.

So, we need to expand our thoughts, not just purchasing land but if we can engage in leases in such a manner that owners of property know that there is a fixed time that Government will have it leased for, maybe 5 years, 10 years or 15 years, whatever! I believe there are properties that people will allow for that to happen because they do not want to dispose of it but they would participate in assisting in encouraging agriculture and such. Of course, there would be a certain income to be derived. In doing that the Government would be able to widen the scope without having that huge level of capital outlay to purchase all of these properties, and if people are allowed to farm individual properties for five or ten years or even fifteen years, then no one is going to regret the investment they make on a property if they have that length of time to farm and reap.

Besides the quick cash turnover crops there are other crops that take longer to reap, but if you have fifteen years on that property and you are going to reap for ten years, it is worth it. You can always make arrangements after to renew or do whatever improvements there are to be done on the property and when it is over there is a certain value to be paid. All of those things are not foreign; countries do that because of all that has been said and more about encouraging agriculture.

A small mention was made of the Farmer's Market and if one simply jogs along the thinking path with that same Farmer's Market; with the same individual people leasing and part of the lease arrangement is sharing X amount of produce or whatever; it is in line with a properly managed farmer's market where everybody competes against each other. It is right up the alley.

I will tell you this much, Mr. Speaker, if we are going to say we are serious about encouraging agriculture, aquaculture, horticulture or hydroponics in this country, as I believe we are serious, we must have a proper avenue to consolidate and distribute all of that produce or we will have chaos. In that sector we create anarchy because if it is not handled properly you will have one or two heads popping above the others, then there is deep trouble all along and we do not want that to happen. I am sure I do not have to go into details to explain the point that I am making.

When we are thinking along these lines we need to be thinking of what we went through with the Budget process not long ago when we talked and had sensible and almost intriguing dialogue about the Farmer's Market, where it can get to and what should be done. I know it is going to take some money but believe me I consider it as important as anything else we spend money on in this country. It is a total win, win situation if it is done properly, sensibly and fairly to all concerned.

The Opposition and I are very supportive of the Motion and its concept but we have to take not just what the Motion hopes to achieve but we have to integrate the Motion's intent with several other things so that we do not lose sight of what is hoping to be created with the big picture. Certainly, we will support the Motion and we hope that we are able to bring the thoughts to reality. I want to impress on the powers that be to widen the scope of the Motion. I am not talking about making amendments to the Motion because we understand the Motion, but when we move into it, actually do things we look to; the things that we speak to when we say agriculture, that we are including aquaculture.

We should also look at the very real possibility of engaging in lease hold of some of these huge and remote properties, that although they are remote they have access to them and people are willing to farm them, and the owners of the property are not necessarily in a hurry to either dispose of or develop. Many of them, I do not believe, will have problems dealing within that manner and what that will do is widen the pool and increase the various locations and the acreage of what you have available to individuals. You will also have the ability if you look and have them in advantageous areas, so that you do not have to take one piece of property with people competing alongside each other because you have to divide it into ten places and run fences, and this one does not want this one along side of him and those kind of problems.

So, if we look at it along those lines it will certainly bring about a successful revitalization of the agricultural sector and I do believe that all those who are not participating in agriculture, whether it is hobby farming or commercial, would welcome the thought and would also assist in making these things become a reality.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Mover of the Motion wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

First, I would like to thank those who have expressed their support for this Motion and those who have tacitly supported this Motion.

We have an ideal situation here in this Parliament where we have the Government that is thoughtful, insightful, wise and bring great motions before the Parliament and an Opposition who is there to help by dotting the "i's" and crossing the "t's". I look forward to a similar arrangement post the General Election.

The Leader of the Opposition pointed out the need of having the term agriculture to encompass some of the sub components that were mentioned and I think that is fair and absolutely accurate, and that was definitely the intention of the Motion.

So, I thank him for dotting that "i" and crossing that "t". I would also like to give a special thank you to the Minister for Agriculture as he brought insight to the world affair of the growing concerns of being dependent on foreign sources of agriculture products.

I think it is safe to say that both sides of the House will be supporting this Motion. I thank the Honourable Legislative Assembly for passing what I agree with that was said by both the Leader of the Opposition and the Honourable Minister of Planning. It is not a new concept; it is something that has been there before, but it is a certain statement from this particular Parliament that we do support agriculture and the preservation of the limited property for agricultural purposes.

Without anymore to be said I trust that this Motion will see successful passage.

The Speaker: The question is BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider undertaking a study to identify and acquire suitable acreage of property on all three of the Cayman Islands with the view of preserving the property for agriculture purposes. Those in favour please say Aye. Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have agreed that we would adjourn the House today sine die. Before doing that I seek to move that all outstanding business be carried forward to the next meeting which begins on 2 July, including all questions and the Report of the Standing Finance Committee Government Guarantees Meeting held 15 December 2003, Report of the Standing Finance Committee Meeting held Wednesday, 10 September 2003, Report of the Standing Committee on Cayman Airways Meeting held Friday, 16 April 2004.

The Speaker: All those in favour with the Motion please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I think some Members did not catch what I said. What I did was seek to move that all outstanding business be carried forward to the next meeting.

Mr. Speaker, this has been a very long meeting and the day has been very tedious, in fact, I do not think the Member for East End wants me to be in any palaver with him at this time, therefore I move the adjournment of this Honourable House sine die.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn sine die. All those in favour with the Motion please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 5.03 pm the House stood adjourned sine die.
