The Speaker: The result of the Division is as follows: 8 Ayes, 3 Noes and 6 Absentees. The Motion is carried.

That concludes the debate on the Second Reading of the Appropriation (July 2003 to June 2004) Bill, 2003.

Agreed by Majority: The Appropriation (July 2003 to June 2004) Bill 2003 given the Second Reading. The Bill stood committed to the Standing Finance Committee.

The Speaker: I have received notice and granted approval for the Honourable Third Official Member to make a personal explanation under Standing Order 31. Out of the abundance of caution, I will ask the Leader of Government Business to move the suspension of Standing Order 14(1), which allows for the order of business to be changed.

Suspension of Standing Order 14(1)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I move for the suspension of the relevant Standing Order to suspend Standing Order 14(1).

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(1) be duly suspended to allow the Honourable Third Official Member to give a personal explanation at the close of the business day.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 14(1) suspended.

The Speaker: Please proceed, Honourable Third Official Member.

Personal Statement (Standing Order 14(1))

RE: Criticism of the Budget process, and Attacks on the Reputation of the Financial Secretary

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I am grateful to you and this Honourable House for allowing me time to make this brief statement.

I am cognisant of the fact that the Leader of Government Business has wound up the debate on the Budget Address and that, as a consequence, my comments will relate to two assertions. These are erroneous assertions that have been made by two Members of this Honourable House.

I am also of the view that when a person makes it his or her mission in life to look for only what is perceived to be wrong in everything, there will never be any person, situation or event that will ever be found to be above fault. I will submit that the primary mission of these individuals in their criticism of the Budget process, and by attacking the reputation of the Financial Secretary, was to create a state of panic and create the impression that the Budget process is one that was not carefully thought out.

Madam Speaker, how well these individuals would have succeeded can be assessed or determined by the obvious clarity and professional presentation of these Budget documents prepared by the Budget and Management Unit. It is quite obvious, going through the Budget documents and the Annual Plan and Estimate, that complete clarity as to the Government's financial position and where the country stands, have been carefully set out.

Over the past few days, Madam Speaker, the Government and country heard various remarks from certain Members of this Honourable House pertaining to the 2003/2004 Budget Address.

One contention from these Members is that the Budget Address was not a balanced one. Madam Speaker, let us examine what a balanced budget is. A balanced budget is one—

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: It is my understanding that the Honourable Third Official Member is purporting to give a personal explanation pursuant to Standing Order 31. However, he is, in fact, debating the Budget which is expressly forbidden by the provisions of that Standing Order, which reads as follows; “With the leave of the Presiding Officer, a Member may make a personal explanation although there is no question before the House; but no controversial matter may be included in the explanation nor may debate arise thereupon.”

Madam Speaker, my point of order is that the line of purported explanation being given by the Honourable Third Official Member is in contravention of Standing Order 31. He is in fact, debating the Budget Address again and he is also raising controversial matters.

The Speaker: The Chair has listened thus far to the debate of the Honourable Third Official Member; I have taken full cognisance of the point of order, which was just stated by the Second Elected Member for the district of George Town. I am fully aware of the extent of Standing Order 31, which allows a person, with my approval, to give a personal explanation because the Financial Secretary indeed also sits in a capacity of the Honourable Third Official Member. I have given the leeway for him to make a personal explanation because the remarks which he wished to respond to were directed to both his personal and professional capacity which is difficult to separate from the role which he plays here.

The last concluding comment that the Chair would like to make is that I took it against the full background. When similar allegations were made to the past Second Official Member, who was not present at the time of the allegations, there was a request from many quarters that in the interest of natural justice the person should have an opportunity to respond in light of the parity and equity which this Chair would wish to exercise. At all material times I have given that same opportunity to the Honourable Third Official Member who is present and, in my humble and respectful submission, should have a right to respond to any allegations made from any quarters therein.

Please proceed.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

I can assure this Honourable House that I am not being controversial and I have stayed away from even opening the Budget documents although I will have to reference one or two figures.

Madam Speaker, as I was saying earlier, a balanced budget is one in which income or revenue equals expenditure.

The Government has presented a budget that has done much better than this. It has presented a budget in which operating revenues exceeded operating expenditure by $5.7 million. This is, as mentioned earlier, stated in the Budget document itself, which is the Annual Plan and Estimates.

The Government, I will submit, did much better than producing a balanced Budget. It produced a surplus Budget; a surplus on its day-to-day business or operating activity. When these Honourable Members are effectively saying that when capital expenditures and equity investments and other balance sheet activities are taken into account, we no longer have a balanced budget, this is not a correct assertion. This view is wrong and does not accord with normal accounting treatment.

In very simple terms, how many of us in this Honourable House would criticise ourselves if during the course of a month our income exceeded our expenses and therefore we ended up with savings, but we had to use those savings to fix the roof of our house. Would we criticise ourselves? I would submit that the answer is no.

It is completely within the norm for operating surpluses not to be able to meet or cover the balance sheet activity of Government 100 per cent. What is important, as is the case with the 2003/2004 Budget, is that the operating activities make a positive contribution towards the balance sheet activities.

Madam Speaker, if we went back as far as 1984 - almost 20 years ago - there was only two years in which operating surpluses were able to cover balance sheet type activities. These instances occurred in 1986 and 1993. In both instances, it would be true to say that balance sheet activities were only covered by operating surpluses.

It is true that Government's plan for 2003/2004 will give rise to additional financing needs. That position is clearly set out in table 8 on page 293 of the Annual Plan and Estimates. Government needed to obtain $30.7 million to carry out its balance sheet activity during the course of the year and this is clearly set out in the Budget document itself.

How has the Government behaved in this regard? Very responsibly, I should say. Table 8 on page 293 once again shows Government's plan to use all of its existing expected resources before planning to borrow a small amount of $8 million during 2003/2004. This is responsible fiscal management. The Annual Plan and Estimates also shows where the Government plans to do a tempered drawdown of less than $6 million on its overdraft account. I should say that under normal circumstances when we look at the surplus at the end of a period, the surplus for the Government as set out in the Strategic Policy Statement envisioned that it would have been in the region of

Representing that surplus was always the difference between advances and deposit account and that was in the region of about $5-6 million, the same extent to which the drawdown will be taking place on the overdraft account. What the Government decided to do was what was set out represents or takes on the format of a statement of cash flows. This is set out in the Budget document that, that differential should not be taken in order to represent cash that would be available. At best, it could be regarded as receivables. This is why, as a matter of prudence, the view has been taken to go for the temporary overdraft.

It is quite likely that those amounts on the advance account will be translated into cash during the course of the year and the need to draw down on the surplus and deficit account to that extent will therefore be avoided.

Madam Speaker, the crowning jewel in these Members' debate has been their attack on the Government's low-income housing initiative plan. The Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town spent 37 minutes short of two hours predominantly on this matter. Comments have been made which was evidently an attempt to tarnish the professional reputation of the Financial Secretary. My responsibility in connection with this matter was ably carried out by the Central Tenders Committee under the Chairmanship of the Deputy Financial Secretary. Not once did this Honourable Member state that he was dissatisfied with the role of the CTC (Central Tenders Committee) or its decision. I therefore take that to mean that as Financial Secretary, I have carried out my duties correctly because no criticism was levelled at the process by this Member, although I observed that he was invited to read the relevant section of the Financial and Stores Regulations by the Honourable First Elected Member for George Town, setting out what the responsibilities of the Financial Secretary are.

I am cognisant of what my responsibilities are as Financial Secretary and I can put my hand on my heart to these Honourable Members, to you and to this country, that I have discharged my responsibilities and will continue to do so within the best interests of the Cayman Islands. I am not saying that I am perfect, but, Madam Speaker, within my limitations I will continue to do my best to serve my country and to serve my God and my people.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Can I have a Motion for the adjournment.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, we will adjourn until the Financial Secretary is ready to report back. As we had indicated, we will now go into Finance Committee.

The Speaker: The question is that the Honourable House now stands adjourned until Finance Committee completes its business. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 5.49 pm the House stood adjourned until the conclusion of Finance Committee.

MONDAY
23 JUNE 2003
6.40 PM
Eighth Sitting

The Speaker: Please be seated. It has been a long day. I recognise the Leader of Government Business to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

I also wish to take this opportunity to recognise in the Public Gallery one Mr. Michael Letterlow who will be representing the Cayman Islands Branch of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, with Mr. Alexis Bodden as a Youth Parliamentarian at the 4th Youth Parliament to be hosted by the Nevis Branch of the CPA in July of this year; and last year's youth delegates, Kamal Connolly and Laurel Ebanks. This Honourable Assembly wishes them the very best as they debate on behalf of the Cayman Islands.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

The Stamp Duty Regulations 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Stamp Duty Regulations, 2002 Revision.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Will the Honourable Third Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, in accordance with Section 26 (a) of the Stamp Duty Law 2002 Revision these regulations that are being laid this morning are subject to a negative resolution of the Legislative Assembly. The effect of the Regulations, Madam Speaker, is to continue the present 5 per cent Stamp Duty rate until the 12th of November of this year. These Regulations were approved by Executive Council on the 6th of May of this year but they are subject to a negative resolution of the Assembly as I mentioned earlier.

Madam Speaker, the origin and purpose of the 5 per cent stamp duty rate is well known to yourself and all Honourable Members of this Parliament. The Government introduced the 5 per cent rate in November of 2001 as a stimulus measure for the local economy following the devastating September 11 terrorist attack in the United States of America. The Government decided, therefore, to extend the 5 per cent rate to 12 November 2003 because there is strong evidence to suggest that it is having a positive effect on the real estate industry; and borrowing some recent words spoken in this Honourable House, 'it is benefiting the masses'.

Madam Speaker, when the stamp duty rates were 7½ per cent and 9 per cent the value of land transfers was $257,000,000. For the first eleven months of 2001 stamp duty rates were 7½ per cent and 9 per cent. The 5 per cent rate was introduced in November 2001. The value of land transfers in that year declined to $173,000,000. Because the 5 per cent rate was not introduced until November, it probably did not have a significant impact upon the land transfers in 2001.

In 2002 when the 5 per cent rate was in existence for the entire year, the value of transfers increased to $270,000,000.

For the first quarter of 2003, Madam Speaker, land transfers amounted to $85,000,000. If this level of activity continues for the rest of the year, the end of year position would be $340,000,000.

Madam Speaker, because of the overwhelming evidence to support the positive impact the continuation of this 5 per cent stamp duty rate is having, it is being recommended to this Honourable House that this concession continues. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

Question No. 34

(Deferred 13 June 2003)

The Speaker: I recognise the Second Elected for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

No. 34: Mr. Lyndon L. Martin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports, if there has been a bid or interest expressed in the purchase of Cayman Brac Water Authority by any private entity.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the Water Authority has not received any bid, or notice of interest, expressed in the purchase of the Water Authority operations in Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 36

(Deferred 13 June 2003)

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

No. 36: Mr. Lyndon L. Martin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports, if the Water Authority Board or Department has undertaken any feasibility assessment for the incremental extension of piped water supply on Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, yes. In 2000 the Water Authority completed a feasibility study into providing piped water supply from West End to Spot Bay in Cayman Brac.

The report showed that even with a contribution from the Cayman Brac Public Works Department in the form of labour, heavy equipment and road reinstatement, the project would still be financially unfeasible due to the high cost of installation, the relatively small potential customer based and the associated small projected water sales.

The Water Authority is very much aware of the desire of the Cayman Brac residents to see extensions to the piped water supply and is cognisant of its responsibility to provide the required infrastructure. During this calendar year, the Authority will undertake the assessment of alternatives and will further review the financial viability of providing piped water supply up to the Faith Hospital area. The Authority realises that the island of Cayman Brac would benefit from this project as it will improve the standard of living plus contribute to the Brac economy during construction as a significant portion of the construction costs would be incurred locally, for example, labour, back fill, material and accommodation. In addition, improved infrastructure may encourage further development on the Island.

Recognising that the cost of extending the piped water system throughout Cayman Brac is a limiting factor, the Water Authority in 2002 invested in a third tanker truck and has increased the production capacity of the Reverse Osmosis Plant to more than double the original capacity. With these facilities in place, the Authority is able to supply excellent potable water in a timely manner by tanker truck to those outside the piped distribution area.

The Speaker: Before asking whether or not there are any Supplementaries, if we could beg the House's indulgence for the Serjeant to re-enter for distribution of the responses.

I recognise the Deputy Leader for the Motion for Question Times to continue beyond the hour of 11 am.

Suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) & (8)

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I wish to move the Suspension of the relevant Standing Orders to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 am.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that Standing Order 23, (7) and (8) be suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Orders 23 (7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries?
The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Supplementaries

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Will the Honourable Minister be able to inform the Honourable House as to the estimated total cost for the extension of the piped water as estimated in the 2000 feasibility assessment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the estimated cost of the project to extend the piped water infrastructure in Cayman Brac at the time of the original report and using the assistance from Public Works in Cayman Brac was C$2.9 million. The project is divided into three phases: from the West End to Faith Hospital, from Faith Hospital to Tibbetts Turn, and from Tibbetts Turn to Spot Bay. It is estimated that each phase would take approximately 14 months to complete.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The Member for East End.
Do you have a follow up Member from Cayman Brac? Please continue.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In the substantive answer, it was stated that a further feasibility study would be done during this calendar year. I am hoping to get an undertaking from the Minister that this feasibility study will look at incremental stages and the feasibility of each stage, rather than at the whole project so we could look at whether it would be feasible to have it to the high school or would it be feasible to have it to the Tibbetts Turn or to the whole Island. So each stage, each phase would be looked at independently to see whether the whole project might not be feasible but there may be one component of it that is feasible.

The Speaker: The Minister for Community Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the cost which I gave as a result of the feasibility study is a cost that the $2.9 million would be the result of the Authority doing the job in house. But should they not do the job in house, of course it would cost a lot more. The Ministry is willing to give an undertaking on behalf of the Water Authority to do a feasibility study this year that would give us an idea of the cost to the Hospital and to the High School.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you Madam Speaker. Madam Speaker, the Minister has said that the Water Authority acquired another tanker truck and will now be able to provide water outside the piped distribution area. I am wondering if the Minister can tell us if that is at the same cost as the customers within the distribution area or if any concessions have been put in place.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the cost of the piped water is about $25 per thousand gallons and the cost of the trucked water is approximately $28 per thousand gallons, so there is a price difference, yes.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you Madam Speaker. Seeing that it is not feasible for us to put piped water to the rest of the country, I am wondering if the Government is not mindful to give those outside the distribution area, that water at the same cost.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, to answer that supplementary; I have been told that the price for the trucked water at the moment sometimes meets the cost and sometimes it does not. However, it would not be something that the Authority would entertain at this time, in order to lower the cost to the point where it was equal to the cost which those residents in the piped water area are paying.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
If not, we will move on to the next item of business.

The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I would like to add that the Water Authority has not raised its rates since 1995. I think that is an important point to mention.

The Speaker: Thank you. Madam Clerk.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

National Roads Plan

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you Madam Speaker. I would like to take this opportunity to provide this Honourable House with an up-date on the preparation of a National Roads Plan. Honourable Members will be well aware of the attempts over the years by successive governments to develop a comprehensive plan for road works and traffic management. In the last 20 years we have seen tremendous growth and development but only a few miles of new primary roadway has been constructed. The Ministry of Planning, Communication, Works and Information Technology has embarked on renewed efforts to address the issue of roads from a more holistic perspective.

This new plan will address the road network but also look at other related issues such as the socio-economic and environmental impacts. Wider roads do not necessarily translate to fewer traffic jams or greater public safety. It is important that not only vehicular movement is considered but other related activities such as pedestrian and bicycle traffic. These activities must be provided for and encouraged for many reasons and the necessary amenities provided so that they can be developed and conducted in a safe manner.

The National Roads Plan will have a 25-year horizon phased into smaller Transportation Improvement Plans. Key elements will include a central Business District Traffic Circulation Plan, a Master Traffic Ways Plan supported by Access Management Plans and the various District Corridor Plans. Amended annually under Section 25 of the Roads Law, the Plan will be a living, working document, and will form an integral part of the Development Plan which is reviewed every five years.

It is anticipated that the National Roads Plan will be completed by June 2004. A core team of specialists has already been assembled within the Roads Division of Public Works Department (PWD) which now consists of three full time individuals qualified in transportation planning. The team is actively working on finalising the required activities in carrying out the study for developing the plan.

Given the dynamic nature of development on the Island and in an effort to provide flexibility in locating roadway corridors, the implementation of the National Roads Plan should be recognised in the context of the ongoing review of the Development Plan undertaken by the Central Planning Authority, which is conducted every five years. Pursuant to the provisions of Section 25 of the Roads Law (2000 Revision) the purpose of the National Roads Plan is to establish the framework and operational parameters that allow the Roads component of the Development Plan to be modified on a more frequent basis (perhaps yearly for the next 5 years) until the formulation of a national ground transportation policy has been adopted.

The Ministry has also assembled a multi-disciplinary National Roads Plan advisory Committee. That includes both public and private sector representatives and this committee is charged with overseeing and guiding the process.

The terms of reference for the National Roads Plan Advisory Committee are as follows:

1. To act as the overall steering committee in the consideration and selection of appropriate and cost effective solutions to plan for ground transportation infrastructure and strategies to improve the performance of the existing road network and its future expansion.

2. Define and finalise the parameters of a National Roads Plan for a 25 year planning horizon having regard to the following goals:

Access and Mobility: Provide an integrated transportation system that maximizes accessibility and includes a variety of mobility options that serve the needs of residents, visitors, and businesses island-wide.

Transportation and Land Development: Establish guidelines for creating land development and land use patterns that support public transit.

Transportation Efficiency: Preserve the Island's transportation system efficiency by creating a roadway network that reduces congestion, vehicle miles travelled, travel times, and improve levels of service.

Sustainability: Provide an optimised transportation network that fosters the unhindered movement of goods and services island-wide through the implementation of a street hierarchy system which separates local traffic from island-wide traffic; while minimising and mitigating impact on the natural ecosystems wherever feasible. A key element will be appropriate storm water management principles to be incorporated within the implemented transportation network.

3. Identify and define the barriers (institutional legislative, physical and economical) which lead to inefficiencies of the existing infrastructure network.

4. Review and assess the current inventory of transportation infrastructure network (for example roadways, signage and traffic control devices, parking supply, et cetera) and identify levels of traffic demands and conditions.

5. Analyse the existing population, socio-economic conditions and land use trends, and develop future growth scenarios for the planning horizon of the Plan.

6. Forecast future traffic growth, considering the effect of changes in population, socio-economic conditions and land use.

7. Develop and analyse future transportation network and infrastructure alternatives and evaluate each individual alternative against a cost/benefit analysis approach.

8. Design and develop a framework for the implementation of a National Roads Plan divided into a number of smaller Transportation Improvement Plans namely: Master Traffic ways Plan, Access Management Plans, District Corridor Plans and a Central Business District Traffic Circulation Plan.

9. Develop and recommend a framework for project prioritisation based on sound transportation planning and engineering principles as well as economics.

10. Identify sources of funding and recommend a Financial Plan for the implementation and management of the Plan.

11. Facilitate a Public Involvement Programme that fosters community understanding and support of the Plan.

Madam Speaker communication is critical to the success of this initiative. Efforts are ongoing to develop a comprehensive Public Involvement Program and in this regard special focus group sessions have begun and are being coordinated by Government Information Services personnel who serve on the National Roads Plan Advisory Committee.

Focus group sessions have included the participation of individuals from a wide cross-section of the community such as:

1. Cyclists and Pedestrians
2. Motorists
3. Land Owners
4. Students
5. Taxi Operators
6. Bus Operators
7. Community Development Groups
8. Environmental Groups
9. Land Developers
10. Emergency Services
11. Emergency Services
12. Business and Commercial Organisation
13. Heavy Equipment Operators and Utility Providers; and
14. Elected Representatives of the Legislative Assembly

The first round of focus group meetings have been completed and the purpose was to determine the information from those whom the Plan would impact most directly by discussing the following topics:

- Do they have enough information to make informed recommendations?
- What type of information do they currently have?
- What are their attitudes and expectations about the need for a plan?
- What is their level of confidence in Government's ability to plan, involve the public meaningfully and effectively execute its plans?
- What type of information do they want?
- How willing are they to participate?
- What are their aspirations and needs?

The information gained, Madam Speaker, from these focus groups will allow a better understanding of what the public wants from the National Roads Plan, how much they currently know, and to what extent they would be willing to participate. To that extent, Government Information Services will prepare a report on the outcome of the focus groups, with the aim of sending the report to Steering Committee members for review prior to the next meeting.

The report will organise and analyse the Focus Group information into various relevant areas (for example transportation, public participation, government's role, et cetera). Additionally, it will provide base line data against which to compare people's knowledge and attitudes at later stages. At the 26 June meeting the Steering Committee will discuss the report and agree on a way forward for the Public Involvement Programme.

Work is also ongoing on the gathering and organisation of various socio-economic data. Traffic counts have been conducted along West Bay Road between the intersection of the Galleria Loop and Coconut Place Plaza driveway. The information was collected with automatic traffic recorders as well as manual intersection movement and vehicle classification counts and licence plate tracing survey. Data has been summarised to provide daily and hourly distribution at various survey locations and generate an Origin-Destination Matrix for the study area.

Planning approval and building permit information since 2000 from the Planning Department's Permitting System has also been assembled and analysed. This information has been summarised, at the district level, to determine built development since the year 2000, committed development and anticipated and potential developments over the next three years.

Madam Speaker, a request has been forwarded to the Chief Statistician seeking assistance for the acquisition of demographic and employment information on various parameters from the 1999 Census and other surveys, collated at the enumeration area level. Additionally, input was requested on the development of long-term population and employment growth scenarios. The latest zoning information for the ongoing development plan review update exercise has been obtained and a list of potential data sources on school and student population, economic and tourism activity has also been assembled. Much work now has to be done utilising the socio-economic data and including the need to analyse information provided by the Economics and Statistics Office to ascertain population and employment characteristics and spatially summarize the data using the mapping software ARC geographic information system.

Geo reference (mapping) the Planning data and cross-reference it against the census information provided by the Economics and Statistics office. Access the completeness and validity of the various data sources, identified above and determine its usefulness in the National Roads Plan exercise. Begin the assembly and analysis of the zoning data in order to define an action plan for developing growth scenarios. The team, Madam Speaker, will also be kept very busy over the coming months undertaking various work, including:-

- Undertaking traffic data surveys at various intersections and driveways of major traffic generators in George Town and the Seven Mile Beach corridor area.
- Conducting a Parking Supply Inventory for the Downtown area and hopefully undertake a parking demand analysis at the main locations.
- Begin the assembly of the transportation road network data in a compatible format for the modelling software. The required information will include roadway widths and lane markings, intersection configuration, such as length and location of turning lanes; location and supply of offsite and on-street parking; signal phasing and traffic control devices, et cetera.
- Carrying out a detailed pavement inventory, then develop and implement a comprehensive pavement management programme.

Madam Speaker, the development of a National Roads Plan is a significant but priority undertaking for my Ministry. I would like to thank all Honourable Members for their continued support and input into the process. I also wish to voice my sincere appreciation to the general public for assisting Government in this important initiative. I intend to keep this Honourable House regularly updated on progress in this important matter.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Minister. Honourable Deputy Leader, is it also your intention to make another statement at this time?

Please proceed.

Cayman Islands Development Plan

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In accordance with Section 13 of the Development and Planning Law (1999 Revision) the Central Planning Authority is required to carry out a fresh survey of the Development Plan every five years. The current review of the Development Plan 1997 is well underway and is on schedule to be presented to the Legislative Assembly in November of this year.

In May of 2001 the Central Planning Authority (the CPA) commenced the review of the Development Plan 1997 through Public Meetings held in each district. At these meetings volunteers agree to participate on district sub committees which undertook visioning exercises to arrive at broad statements that outline their vision for their district. These vision statements were presented to the public in the summer of 2001.

In addition, the Central Planning Authority appointed a Steering Committee for the Development Plan Review. This committee known as the Development Plan Review Committee (DPRC) consisted of representatives from various government departments and agencies, statutory authorities and boards, private sector and the district subcommittees. The Central Planning Authority has been overseeing the review of the Development Plan 1997 and has produced two documents; the Report of Survey and the Proposed Amendments to the Development Plan 1997. Based on the district subcommittee reports, the Development Plan Review Committee identified a number of critical issues and appointed Special Issue Committees (SICs). These Special Issue Committees were technical committees formed to undertake reviews and make special recommendations for amendments to the Development Plan 1997 and the Report of Survey.

The Report of Survey is a culmination of efforts of various community volunteers from the district subcommittees and special issue committees. In January of 2003 drafts of both documents were released in a series of public meetings in each of the districts of Grand Cayman, commencing with the final public review period.

On the 20 March 2003, the public comment period for the proposed amendments came to a close with a total of 137 representations received.

The Central Planning Authority considered each of the representations and on 5 May 2003, the Ministry received copies of each representation as well as the Central Planning Authority's recommendations regarding same. The Development Plan Tribunal will consider each representation during a series of tribunal enquiries scheduled for the 8 - 10 July 2003.

On the 30 May, my Ministry sent letters to all those persons who filed representations inviting them to appear before the tribunal in July. Once the tribunal hearings have been completed, a Report of Findings will be submitted to my Ministry and then the Central Planning Authority. The Central Planning Authority will review the Tribunal's recommendations and then submit the Proposed Development Plan including any amendments proposed as a result of the Tribunal's recommendations to the Legislative Assembly.

Madam Speaker, I would like to thank all the members of the public who have given of their time in this comprehensive and nationally important initiative and I look forward to bringing the Development Plan amendments to this Honourable House in November 2003.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

FIRST READING

The Loan Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Bill was deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READINGS

The Registered Land (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled, A Bill for a Law to Amend the Definition of the Expression Opportunity of Being Heard for the Purposes of the Registered Land Law (1995) Revision.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved.
Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Under Section 15(5) of the Registered Land Law the Expression Opportunity of Being Heard is defined to include a person's failure to attend before the Registrar of Lands after not less than 90 days notification of the proposed date of attendance.

This Bill, Madam Speaker, seeks to shorten that period of notification to thirty days in order to improve the administration of the principal law. Madam Speaker, the Registrar of Lands has over the last year received enquiries from a number of interested parties including landowners, surveyors and developers indicating that the existing ninety-day notice period is excessive and inefficient for many business transactions. For example, a reduced notice period will facilitate shorter periods for the completion of registration of fixed boundary surveys as well as the more obvious occasions of a registrar's hearing. There is a pressing desire for all government activities to be undertaken in as short a time as possible, and wherever change is simply and readily accommodated I think government should take that action.

Accordingly, Madam Speaker, this is as can be seen a very short Bill and I can I recommend that it be approved in order to reduce the period for notice or Registrar of Land hearings from 90 days to 30 days. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to give, on behalf of the Opposition, our support to the amendment before us on the Registered Land Law. We believe, like the Minister, that efficiency and effectiveness should be the order of the day within government. Therefore, we quite gladly give our support to him and to this Bill in the interest of making government more efficient.

We thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, does the Honourable Deputy Leader wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Yes, Madam Speaker. I wish to thank the Honourable Member for East End and my esteemed cousin for his support on behalf of the Opposition and indeed for the tacit support of Members of the Back Bench and other Government Members. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Deputy Leader. The question is that a Bill shortly entitled, The Registered Land (Amendment) Bill, 2003 be given a second reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Registered Land (Amendment) Bill 2003 given a Second Reading.

The Development and Planning (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled, A Bill for a Law to Amend the Development and Planning Law 1999 Revision to further extend the temporary reduction of amounts payable as contributions to the infrastructure fund; to further extend the temporary reduction of building permit fees and to make provision for incidental and connected matters.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It may be useful to Honourable Members if I provide a historical background on these initiatives to date.

The Development and Planning (Amendment) Temporary Provisions Law 2001 enable the temporary reduction of contributions payable to the infrastructure fund. The amount of the contribution was reduced by 50 per cent for a period of one year and commenced on the 14 November 2001. The Development and Planning (Amendment) Temporary Provisions Law 2001 which provided for the 50 per cent reduction in building permit fees for one year, commenced on the 20 November 2001.

The Development and Planning (Amendment) No. 3 Bill 2002 extended the one year concession on infrastructure fees by another six months. The Development and Planning (Amendment) Extension of Temporary Provisions Regulations 2002 providing for the extension of building permit fee reductions for another six months.

Madam Speaker, the Development and Planning Amendment Bill 2003 now seeks to extend the existing 50 per cent fee reductions to the 12 November 2003. In the case of the contribution to the infrastructure fund and the 21 November 2003 in the case of the building permit fees. Clauses 1 to 4 of the Bill address the points made earlier and clause 5 seeks to validate the collection of building permit fees after the 22 November 2002 at the 50 per cent reduced rate as earlier pointed out.

Madam Speaker, I would ask for the support of this Honourable House for the Development and Planning Amendment Bill, 2003 which seeks to provide incentive for continued development construction activity and the strengthening of the economy in general. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise again to support the continuation to further extend the temporary reduction of amounts payable on contribution to the infrastructure fund, and to further extend the temporary reduction of building permit fees and to make under the Development and Planning Law 1999 Revision. We believe that it has served its purpose. Like the Honourable Third Official Member said (borrowing a few words from me), at least this one has the masses and we totally support that.

We believe that especially in this time of economic hardship that it is necessary to further extend it. We will support a further extension at a later time, if necessary, when this one expires. We believe that it will and has stimulated Caymanians into building their homes and other things such as commercial buildings. It is not only for the foreign investor, but certainly foreign investment is also stimulated. That has what we often refer to as the trickle down effect and particularly at this time, we believe that that is necessary in our economic situation.

Madam Speaker, we give our full support to the Minister. As usual we support him in the development of the country. His effort in this regard is commendable and we thank him for once again extending these reductions.

I thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not will the Honourable Deputy Leader wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It seems like the future augurs well because the Opposition has given their undertaking to support me on these issues.

I want to thank the Honourable Member for East End again for his support on behalf of the Opposition and indeed for the tacit support of those who did not speak on the Bill. I agree with him that these initiatives have indeed stimulated the economy. There is of course a sister initiative to this which has been dealt with by the Honourable Third Official Member. That is, is the reduction in stamp duty on transfer within certain areas. Again, I thank the Honourable House for their support on this most important amendment. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that a Bill shortly entitled, The Development and Planning (Amendment) Bill, 2003 be given a second reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Development and Planning (Amendment) Bill 2003 be given a Second Reading.

The Speaker: Would Members wish to entertain a break now or would you wish to go with the Honourable Third Official Member's Loan Bill.

Suspension of Standing Order 46 (1) and (2)

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Orders 46(1) and (2) to allow the Loan Bill 2003 to be read a second time.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that standing Order 46(1) and (2) be suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 46 (1) and (2) suspended to allow The Loan Bill 2003 to be read a second time.

The Loan Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill, The Loan Bill, 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved.
Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Loan Bill before Honourable Members was circulated earlier with the budget. It seeks to borrow up to $8 million to assist in the financing of the 2003/2004 fiscal year Budget. Honourable Members will know that the capital development programme for core government is $12.1 million. This loan will therefore assist the government in the carrying out of this programme.

If Honourable Members will refer to page 316 of the Annual Plan and Estimates, they will see that in the Balance Sheet Activity Statement (under Financing Activity) inflows of $8 million for borrowing and outflows (that means repayment) of approximately $9.1 million. This means that the government is reducing its public debt by approximately $1.1 million for the year 2003/2004.

I would like to highlight some of the major capital development projects that will be carried out by core government in the 2003/2004 fiscal year. The detailed schedule of capital projects is contained on pages 275 to 281 of the Annual Plan and Estimates. The more significant projects are:

Refurbishment of the Legislative Assembly	$0.9 million approximately
New land facility in Cayman Brac	$0.3 million

New facility for the mosquito research and control unit	$0.4 million
Land purchase for additional land at the landfill in Grand Cayman approximately	$0.435 million
Land acquisition cemetery sites for Bodden Town	$375,000
School maintenance programmes	$775,000
Land for secondary school	$600,000
Public library extension	$400,000
Temporary classrooms	$420,000
Abattoir to be located in Grand Cayman	$0.5 million
Facilities for sports development	$400,000

Madam Speaker, the government normally borrows on the open market at the three months LIBOR (London inter-bank offered rate). As of today the three months LIBOR is 1.1 per cent. There is normally a spread that is applied and it ranges from 1 per cent to 1.5 per cent. Therefore, it is likely that the highest interest rate the government will be paying against this loan, and assuming that interest rate will continue to hold the way they are for the short-term, will be 2.5 per cent. The 5.3 per cent debt service ratio mentioned as a part of the Budget Address include this borrowing of $8 million so this ratio will not change. Since the details to support the budget were set out in the Annual Plan and Estimates and the other documents that were provided. I therefore, with these remarks, commend this Bill to Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, would the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: To say thanks to Honourable for their support.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled, The Loan Bill, 2003 be given a Second Reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Loan Bill 2003 given a Second Reading.

The Speaker: Honourable Deputy Leader, is it the intention to the go through the Committee Report and conclude today's proceedings?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider the Bills

House in Committee at 12.06

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
26 JUNE 2003
2.20 pm
Tenth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable Minister responsible for Planning to grace us with prayers.

The Speaker: I have received apologies for non-attendance from the Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

PRAYERS

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

Quarterly Reports for Ministries and Portfolios—
The Government of the Cayman Islands for the 1st Quarter ended 31st March, 2003; and

Quarterly Report of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the three months ended 31st
March, 2003

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Quarterly Reports for Ministries and Portfolios—The Government of the Cayman Islands for the 1st Quarter ended 31st March, 2003; and Quarterly Report of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the three months ended 31st March, 2003

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please proceed accordingly.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker on behalf of the Government, it is my pleasure to table the two Quarterly Reports which I have just done for the quarter ended 31 March 2003.

In accordance with the timeline established by the Public Management and Finance Law 2001 the quarterly report was gazetted within eight weeks of the end of the quarter. Concurrent with its gazetting, the reports were also published on the government's website.

In accordance with the Law the Report is being tabled in this Honourable House at the first available opportunity after gazetting. Also being tabled is the Quarterly Reports on the eight Ministries and Portfolios, the Judicial administration and the Cayman Islands Audit office. The tabling of this Quarterly Report is the second major milestone in the implementation of the financial management initiative. It marks the beginning of regular comprehensive and timely reporting of the actual performance at both the whole of government and ministry level. This new level of transparency means that for the first time the Legislative Assembly and the public will have regular information with which to monitor the performance of Government during a financial year.

The Government Quarterly Report is in three parts which are preceded by an introduction. Part (a) reports actual policy actions taken during the first quarter compared to the policy action specified in part (a) of the Annual Plan and Estimates. This plan is organised by type of intervention with the biggest of course being the outputs delivered. The section on output delivery performance reports the cost spent on each output group during the quarter together with the quantity, quality, timeliness and location of outputs delivered. An explanation of the major variances is also provided. Part (a) also provides a summary of the Government's overall financial performance for the quarter.

Part (b) reports actual appropriations used compared to the appropriations granted by the Legislative Assembly through the Appropriation half-year law 2002.

Part (c) provides detailed financial statements for the quarter. The format of these statements mirrors those in the Annual Plan and Estimates but include some additional statements. These new statements are a statement of loans, which includes the advances, a statement of borrowings, a statement of accounting policies and notes to the financial statements. These new statements represent a step toward the accrual financial statement that will be produced from the 2004-2005 fiscal year.

Madam Speaker, I will now turn to the performance reported for the quarter. Overall the actual intervention performance for the first quarter is in line with the Annual Plan and the financial performance is better than budgeted. The progress on legislative measures is reported in section (3) on page 17. Of the thirty legislative measures specified in the Annual Plan and Estimates 1 has been enacted, 5 have been finalised and await introduction, 14 are in the process of development and 10 have been deferred.

Output delivery performances reported in section (4) begins on page 20. The mix of outputs actually delivered during the quarter was the same as that specified in the Annual Plan and Estimates and all but a few of the specified outputs were delivered during the quarter. In other words, delivery is in line with the plan for the period.

The output reports show a range of variances between the actual and the budgeted quantity, quality, timeliness and cost. For the most part these variances indicate that a lesser quantity of outputs was delivered compared to the first quarter's budget. It appears that this reflects ambitious budgeting rather than a lower level of service delivery compared to previous years. This is not too surprising given that this is only the first year that the Ministries and Portfolios have budgeted and reported on this output basis.

One unbudgeted output was delivered during the quarter. This was output ICT 1 which is regulation of the IT (Information Technology) and communication sector. This, Madam Speaker, was more of a technical change than a new activity. It resulted from a decision to pay all course of revenue relating to the communication sector to Central Government. The budget, when prepared, had assumed that the revenue would be retained by the ICT Authority to fund its outputs.

Transfer payments performance is reported in section (5) on page 265. These payments were in line with the budget for the quarter. Financing expenses are reported in section (6) on page 268. Interest on public debt is significantly less than budgeted due to the later than expected finalisation of the bond issue. This variance resulted from the fact that the budget assumed that the bond repayments would be made into a sinking fund each month. However, this payment was not required in the first quarter.

Other Executive expenses are reported in section (7) on page 269. These are also in line with that expected for the first quarter. A number of subscription payments are not due in the first quarter. This is why there were some zero actual amounts reported. There are two new Other Executive expenses reported. These relate to the Euro Bank's defence cost and terminal benefits to the previous Attorney-General.

Equity investment made is reported on page 272. Again, these reflect the budget although some payments will not be made until the second quarter. There is one additional equity investment. This is a payment to the ICT Authority to cover its office fit out expenses. Ministry and Portfolio capital acquisitions are reported on page 274. These are running at only 62 per cent of the budget for the quarter, which is fairly usual at this point in the financial year. The variances expected to be timing difference and will correct itself in the second quarter.

Capital development expenditure is reported on page 275. Again this expenditure is in line with the first quarter's budget. The major expenditures relate to land settlement for the Linford Pierson Highway and the development call for Quincentennial Square. Neither of these was included in the Annual Plan and Estimates but has been paid under the authority of a warrant.

Loans made are reported on page 283. As Honourable Members can see no loans were made in the first quarter. However, loans have been made, commencing in the second quarter. Borrowing is reported on page 283. Temporary new borrowings amounting to $833,000 occurred in the first quarter. This was short-term bridge financing and resulted from a later than expected finalisation of the bond issue. The borrowing was repaid in the second quarter when the proceeds of the bond were received.

Madam Speaker, I would now like to outline the Government's financial performance for the first quarter. As I mentioned earlier, this is reported in detail in part (c) of the Quarterly Report and summarised in section (9), which begins on page 284. The operating surplus for the quarter was $61,775,000. This was $16.9 million or 38 per cent better than the budget for the quarter. Operating revenue was $123.179 million. This was $7.2 million or 6 per cent better than the quarter's budget. Operating expenditure was $61,404,000. This was $9.6 million or 14 per cent less than the quarter's budget. This expenditure includes unbudgeted expenditure of $2.22 million resulting from the dismissal of the Euro Bank's trial and resignation of the previous Attorney-General.

Madam Speaker, some of the more favourable items are appearing in the first quarter. These are timing differences and certain assumptions were made that these payments would have been made during the first quarter. However, such will not be the case. These expenditures will be incurred in the second quarter. So these are items that will correct themselves.

Some of the variances are permanent and are expected to flow through to the final operating result for the half-year. On the asset side, net balance sheet activity before new financing for the quarter was an outflow of $9.498 million, which was around $5.4 million worse than budget. This results primarily from the unbudgeted capital expenditure relating to road settlements and the Quincentennial Square project. I mentioned these two items earlier.

Net balance sheet activity also reflects the impact of the deposits and advances, including advances relating to low cost housing project. Historically, neither advances nor deposits have been included in the budget forecast, however, they provide or consume cash and so have been included in the financial statements for the quarter to ensure those statements actually reflect the activity and cash position for the quarter.

Madam Speaker, I will digress a bit to mention that in respect of the affordable housing the advances that have been provided by the Government in order to fund the project up to this time it is anticipated that those monies will be recovered. This is why they were not showing in the financial year budget for the 2003-2004 fiscal year—because it is expected that these monies will be recovered in full. To the extent that there are variances or amounts that will not be recovered, these, when become known, will then be included as an expenditure item in the Supplementary Appropriation Bill on the year that will be submitted to this Honourable House. However, it is anticipated that the bulk of the funds that will be advanced to the point of seeing the units through to a given stage of construction will be recovered in full. This is the plan of the Government and it is expected that this plan will be realised.

Historically, as I said earlier, Madam Speaker, neither advances nor deposits have been included in the budgeted forecast. However they provide or consume cash and so have been included in the financial statements for the quarter, to ensure that those statements actually reflect the activity and cash position for the quarter. Adding the operating surplus and the net balance sheet activity together gives the overall surplus. The overall surplus before the temporary financing was $52.277 million. This was $11.4 million or 28 per cent better than the budget for the quarter. This is an excellent financial result for the quarter and indicates that the Government is on track to achieve the financial performance for the half-year-end established in the budget.

Madam Speaker, as I mentioned earlier when the strategic policy statement was tabled in this House it was anticipated that the Government would have realised (I am going by memory now) a surplus of $26 million. However, when the Annual Plan and Estimates was tabled it was then shown that the Government, after revising its figures for the half-year ending 30 June, would have realised a surplus of $22 million. Preliminary figures so far indicate that the surplus for the period will be in the region of $21 million and $16 million out of that will be represented by way of a cash balance. This is what has been carried forward in the Budget for the fiscal year 2003-2004.

The difference of $5 million, up until recently the net position between the advances and deposits were always taken to represent a cash position that would be realisable. This is on the basis that advances will always exceed deposit and advances represent an asset balance to the Government. Upon looking at this item very carefully it was felt that this item should best be classified as a receivable rather than as a cash balance. This is why it has been proposed by the Government that there should be a temporary draw down on the overdraft account to the value of $5 million. It is likely that the draw-down may not occur because during the course of the year what is now being regarded as a receivable balance will quite likely translate itself into cash. However, going along on the side of caution, Madam Speaker, the view was treated as a receivable balance.

Madam Speaker, preparing quarter reports is not an easy task. It requires a large change in the management culture of Ministries and Portfolios. It also requires the collection of information not previously collected. This in turn requires the development of information gathering processes and systems in each government agency. While significant progress has been made the development of these systems is a significant task and as envisaged in the implementation strategy for FMI is an ongoing effort. At this stage of implementation there is limited actual performance data available for some outputs. Further, in a few departments the process for collecting time sheet data are still being developed, meaning that output cost are based on only partial data. Given that this is the first Quarterly Report these data efficiencies are to be expected.

It is important that Members of the Legislative Assembly take account of the learning curve, which is going on in Ministries and Portfolios, when reading and assessing the documents that have tabled today. Madam Speaker, notwithstanding these comments, the tabling of this Quarterly Report is a significant achievement. It represents another important landmark in the modernization of financial management practices of the Government of these Islands.

I must take this opportunity to say thanks to the Budget and Management Services Unit and also the chief financial officers within the various Ministries and Portfolios that have contributed to the compilation of these documents. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. I recognise the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Personnel Department Employment Information and Personnel Activity Report 1st January, 2002 to 31st December, 2002.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I will be very brief in my comments.

Madam Speaker, the document that I have just tabled is a document that will largely give statistics. Quite often Members of this Honourable House, as well as the press, indeed the wider general public, will want information on the civil service. The number of Caymanians in the service, et cetera. This document (I do not know if all of the answers) but it will give a fair bit of information for the year 2002. I am not going to take up the time of the House to go into detail but Members will have the chance to peruse. I trust that it will be found useful.

I thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Auditor-General's Report on the Audited Accounts of the Cayman Islands Government for the Year Ended 31 December 1999

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Government Minute for 1999 on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Auditor-General's Report on the Audited Accounts of the Cayman Islands Government for the Year Ended 31 December 1999.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Member wish to speak to the Paper?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Just briefly, Madam Speaker, to say the normal practice would be to read through certain sections or to lift certain excerpts from the report. However, there has been such a transition between 1999 and now. In those days we were talking about heads, subheads, items and, at best, inputs. Now we are talking about outputs, outcomes, strategic policy statements and all of these. To go into details on these would just confuse the issue so I will just lay it for information.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Second Elected Member for the district of. . .

I recognise the Leader of Government for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8).

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Orders so that the questions can be asked after 11 am.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow Question Time to commence and continue beyond the hour of 11 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Deferred 13 June 2003

No. 35: Mr. Lyndon L. Martin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sport, if all applicants and past recipients of seaman ex-gratia, veteran's pay and permanent financial assistance have been assessed or re-assessed under the new qualifying criteria.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Not all applicants and past recipients of Seamen Ex-gratia, Veterans pay and Permanent Financial Assistance have been assessed or re-assessed under the new qualifying criteria. Below is the status for each of the categories:

1. SEAMEN EX-GRATIA: The present criteria for the seamen ex-gratia benefits, which were last changed in March 2002, are:

- The applicant (Seaman) must be Caymanian.
- The applicant (Seamen) must be retired from sea.
- The applicant (Seamen) must have gone to sea for a period of not less than three years. If the applicant is not a born Caymanian, he should have had Caymanian Status for at least three years of his/her seagoing career.
- The applicant (or surviving spouse) must be 60 years of age or older. The only exceptions are:
  - a. The applicant seaman is unable to work due to medical reasons. This must be proven by a medical certificate from a recognized medical practitioner as registered by the Cayman Islands Health Practitioner's Board.
  - b. The applicant seamen died at sea while on duty and the surviving spouse is unable to meet the needs of her and surviving dependents.
  - c. Any benefit that can contribute to his/her income has been listed and is deemed to be insufficient to meet the needs in b above. Both b and c above shall be determined by a standard means test.
  - d. He/she MUST NOT be receiving any income, benefit, gratuity or other form of subsidy or payment that total more CI$1,500 per month (inclusive of this grant).
  - e. The applicant or surviving spouse MUST NOT own or operate a business.

Since the last revision to the criteria for the benefit, the staff of the Ministry has called all existing and past recipients to ensure that an Affidavit of Income was submitted. Additionally, there are 45 (forty-five) past recipients who have not submitted an Affidavit of Income. The Ministry has contacted all of these by telephone requesting this information.

2. VETERAN (EX-SERVICEMEN): The only change to the original criteria for the Ex-servicemen benefits was done in September 2001, when a decision was made to exclude all Ex-servicemen living overseas. As these individuals are living overseas it is very difficult to check on whether these ex-servicemen or their surviving spouses are still alive. Additionally, the Cayman Islands Government would not have access to information or benefits that these Caymanians living overseas are receiving. Therefore, the decision was made previously to discontinue both the Seamen and Ex-Servicemen benefits to Caymanians who are permanently living overseas.

The Ministry has no outstanding Ex-servicemen applications.

3. PERMANENT FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE: All new applicants for Poor Relief (previously known as Permanent Financial Assistance) assessed since May, 2002 were assessed under the new criteria. Persons who were reassessed prior to that time were reassessed under the previous criteria. Since the new criteria has been utilised, a total of 109 new applications for Poor Relief have been reviewed.

New applicants reviewed since 31 May 2002 to 31 May 2003: 109.

- May 2002 recipients = 722 (722—33 deaths = 689)
- Terminations on reassessments since 31st May, 2002 = 11 (BT—1; BE -2; NS—2; WE -5; GT—1) Terminations due to placements in Pines/DSS Homes = 6 Terminations reinstated: 5 (NS—3; GT—1; WB—1)
- Recipients May 2003 (689 + 65 new cases—17 terminations + 5 Reinstated) = 742
- Cases Reassessed and reviewed under the new criteria since 21st May, 2002: 54 cases.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? If there are no supplementaries we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 37

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, Leader of Opposition.

No. 37: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology: in a Public Notice published in the Caymanian Compass of Friday 21st March 2003, there was a proposal for alterations to the Development Plan 1997, whereby the Central Planning Authority is considering the rezoning of 60 plus acres of crown land, West Bay North Block 10A Parcels 227 and 43 Rem 2 from low density residential, public open spaces and mangrove buffer to Hotel/Tourism and mangrove buffer. Is it the Government's intention to dispose of the Crown land?

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I would like to address this question in two (2) parts: First, to respond to the question of the proposed change of zoning; and second, to respond to the query about Government's intentions regarding the land. I would note at the outset that neither the change of zoning, nor the sale of Crown land can take place without the approval of this Honourable House.

First, regarding the issue of zoning, I can confirm that the Central Planning Authority has considered rezoning the subject lands from Public Open Space and Mangrove Buffer to Hotel/Tourism and Mangrove Buffer. In accordance with section 14 of the Development and Planning Law (1999 Revision), the proposal was advertised in a local newspaper inviting members of the public to view the proposal at the Planning Department and make representations in support or opposing the proposal. To my knowledge only one, (1) such representation was received. In accordance with the Law, since a representation was received, the matter has now been referred to a Development Plan Tribunal for an enquiry where the Tribunal will hear from the objector and the Central Planning Authority. I understand that this enquiry is scheduled to take place on 8th July 2003.

Once the Tribunal prepares its report and/ or recommendations, the Central Planning Authority will consider the matter again to determine whether to recommend that Government proceed with the proposed change of zoning. Executive Council will review the CPA's recommendation and if Council recommends in favour of the proposed change of zoning, then the matter will be forwarded to the Legislative Assembly. In short, like any other amendment to the Development Plan, this proposed change of zoning cannot take place without the approval of this Legislative Assembly.

Second, regarding the question of Government's intentions for the land, I can confirm that these are indeed Crown lands and in accordance with the Governor (Vesting of Lands) (Amendment) (Dispositions) Law, 1997, Government cannot dispose of Crown lands without first tabling the matter in the Legislative Assembly.

I can also confirm that Executive Council has not taken a decision to recommend disposal of the lands. If Council does take such a decision in the future, as I indicated earlier, such a decision will be subject to tabling the necessary reports in the Legislative Assembly in accordance with the Governor (Vesting of Lands) (Amendment) (Dispositions) Law, 1997.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries?
The Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, understanding what has been read by the Honourable Minister in the substantive answer leads me to the fact of this public notice in the Caymanian Compass dated Friday 21 March. It says (and I am going to turn it into a question) "This is to announce to the public that the Central Planning Authority is considering . . ." So, the Minister has answered that there has been no decision from Government regarding any rezoning.

If the Central Planning Authority is considering the rezoning, then I would have assumed that there has been some type of application for them to consider. The fact is the property is Crown land so I wonder where such application could come from if the Government did not make the application for the rezoning.

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, the Honourable Member is correct. There was a directive to the CPA or the Planning Department for the rezoning to be given consideration.

The Speaker: The Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if that directive came from Executive Council or from the Ministry or from whom.

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, this directive came from the Ministry, not through the Executive Council.

The Speaker: The Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Could the Minister state the reasoning behind the Ministry's directive?

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, this rezoning was considered and directive given to the CPA in the event that Government considered developing this area. The existing zoning of public open place would preclude most investment-oriented developments. In addition a higher zoning designation such as hotel tourism, if this was indeed approved, is not only in keeping with surrounding land uses and zoning, but would result in a higher return to Government; if it did decide to dispose of the property.

The Speaker: The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I want to be very clear, the Minister if I heard him correctly, just referred to the possibility — if Government wanted to develop it. Is that suggesting that the rezoning might be because Government is considering going into the hotel tourism business.

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, the answer to that would be no.

The Speaker: Are there any further—

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, as I said earlier, it is being rezoned in the event it becomes necessary for Government to give permission for this to be used for such a purpose. However, there is no specific application on the table at this point in time.

The Speaker: The Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker, there was also a public notice on Friday, 17 January 2003 in the Caymanian Compass with proposal for alterations to the development plan. The map in this public notice shows some 13 parcels which either

'button and bind' (as we term it) these two pieces of property that belong to the Government or the adjoined properties to that is a continuum. The application for this rezoning is from low-density residential neighbourhood commercial tourism and mangrove buffer to hotel tourism. The first important part is that it says nothing about mangrove buffer. However, secondly, in my view, because these two pieces of government properties adjoin these and there is some time between the applications, but there seem to be some relation.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, could you please turn it into a question.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, I certainly will, Madam Speaker, but I wanted the Minister to be absolutely clear as to where I am coming from so forgive me.

Could the Minister state if there is any relationship between the public notice application of Friday, 17 January and the one on Friday, 21 March?

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, it is my understanding that there is no formal relationship between the two. The one in January was from the private sector and the one referred to in March was from the Government.

The Speaker: The Leader of Opposition. I will allow two more Supplementaries.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Based on the fact, the present zoning of the government properties are not what is being considered. From a value point it is simply the Government's intention to have it rezoned so that it is valued more. There is absolutely nothing specific to this application for rezoning with regards to any type of development. So, to be absolutely clear, are we to understand that the government properties published on Friday, 21 March, are being considered for rezoning?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, the Honourable Member is quite correct in his assumption.

The Speaker: Are there any further Supplementaries? If not we will move on to the next question.

The Elected Member for East End.

Question No. 38

No. 38: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology, to give the names of companies that have applied for a telecommunication licence.

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, until the present negotiations with Cable and Wireless have been completed, the Information and Communications Technology (ICT) Authority will not be in a position to accept licence applications from alternative providers of telecommunications services. The answer to the question therefore is that no companies have applied for such a licence.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Based on what the Minister just said, does that mean all the advertisements by potential applicants currently being run in the media, is out of speculation and anticipation for jobs, for customers and the like?

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I think I understand what information the Honourable Member is trying to obtain. Technically, the Authority cannot accept applications until the negotiations with Cable and Wireless are over. Yes, there have been expressions of interest that they want to come into the telecommunications market once the liberalisation process is being completed but no formal applications have yet been submitted.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. This is my last supplementary. I wonder if the Minister can say if Government's intention is to control the number of companies that will be given a licence or is it going to be open to whoever qualifies?

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, although we have received a number of expressions of interest, the decision on the successful applicants will be made by the ICT Authority under that Law. However, it is correct that from a Ministry and Government's point of view, we would not wish to see so many people in the market so no one is really making a profit. So, I think that will be taken into account.

Secondly, it has been made very clear that anyone coming into the market will not be able to 'cherry pick' but will have to take a cross section of the services—the good with the bad.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Minister could say why Government has not made known publicly, the position that they are only going to issue two or three licences or whatever the number. The public will then know how many licences the Government will issue and it does not mean that more people will not be able to apply.

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, in consultation with my colleague he did remind me that there are many areas of the telecommunication services. Therefore, various people will want to apply for various sections; some for ISP, some for mobile services, some for international services and may be we will find some that will be interested just in the domestic services. So, it is difficult to say at this stage whether there will be one or two or three licences issued. I can say to the Honourable Member that up to this point in time we have had expressions of interest, which he would appreciate, is confidential at this point, from at least a dozen people.

The Speaker: Are there any further Supplementaries? If not we will move on to the next question.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Question No. 39

No. 39: Mr. Rolston M. Anglin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology, who inspects gasoline pumps for accuracy and how often are they tested.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, in the past the industry has been self-regulating. Service station dealers normally do daily sales reconciliation to determine if they are gaining or losing product by comparing tank dips to meter readings. Based on excessive gains or losses a contracting party calibrates the meter on the pump or dispenser, using a test measure. Test measures are shipped to the USA and tested by the Office of Weights and Measures according to the National Institute of Technology (NIST) then returned to the local petroleum company. Both oil companies are now calibrating retail meters on an annual frequency.

Additionally, in order to independently verify that the public is receiving the correct amount of fuel as purchased, Regulations are being drafted that will provide for the Chief Petroleum Inspector to witness the annual meter calibrations and for the meter to be sealed and a sticker bearing the date and signature of the person carrying out the calibration to be placed on the pump or dispenser.

The Petroleum Handling & Storage Bill is expected to be brought to this Honourable House during the September 2003 Meeting.

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? If not we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 40

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

No. 40: Mr. Lyndon L. Martin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, if the Department of Tourism has a dedicated individual assigned to the marketing and promotion efforts for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The Department of Tourism currently has a Manager, who is responsible for addressing both the marketing and the product development projects in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The responsibilities of this position include:

- Meeting on a regular basis with the Sister Islands Tourism Association (SIT A) and the District Administration to discuss and plan joint promotional activities.
- Reviewing collateral material requirements for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and working with the appropriate parties to develop produce and distribute them as necessary.
- Working as a member of the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Project Team for product enhancement, such as the recent sinking of the Oceanic Voyagers Statue, which took place in Cayman Brac earlier this year.

The Department of Tourism is currently working on a number of marketing and promotional initiatives with the Sister Islands, some of which include:

- The development of a Nature Cayman brochure for the Little Cayman nature product.
- Working closely to promote the new Family Week programme in Cayman Brac with carefully crafted publicity and specific 'family' oriented Visiting Journalist familiarisation trips to Cayman Brac.
- A new Sister Islands ad for use in domestic publications that will target visitors and local readers and will encourage them to visit Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, either as a day trip add-on or for longer stays.
- Facilitating requests from consumers on the Cayman Islands web site who want to receive a bi-annual Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Tourism Association Newsletter.

- Working closely with the Sister Islands Tourism Association to develop specific Sister Island familiarisation trips for the travel trade. So far in 2003, four travel trade industry familiarisations and three visiting journalist trips have been planned.

The newly developed Domestic Industry Familiarisation trips to target front line employees who work in the tourism industry in Grand Cayman, and take them for a visit to the Sister Islands, so that they are in a better position to promote the Sister Islands to visitors who are in Grand Cayman.

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? If not we will move on to the next question.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Question No. 41

No. 41: Mr. Lyndon L. Martin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, if there is any intention of positioning a tourism-marketing agent in Cayman Brac in the not too distant future.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, as of May 26th, District Administration has filled a full time tourism officer post based in Cayman Brac. This officer will liaise with the Department of Tourism on all Sister Island initiatives.

Additionally, the DoT has agreed to provide an internship programme in the Grand Cayman offices, as well as in the North American offices, to give the new officer hands-on experience with the fully integrated marketing communications program that the DoT is currently executing.

The Department of Tourism has two full-time employees in Cayman Brac. The DoT manager responsible for marketing the Sister Islands works closely with members of the Sister Islands Tourism Association and with District Administration, and is always available to travel to either Cayman Brac or Little Cayman for meetings, projects or events as necessary.

To date, feedback has confirmed that the current approach is highly effective. The numerous examples of collaborative promotional activities specifically targeting tourism in the Sister Islands further supports the continuation of this arrangement.

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Before you do so, I would like to thank publicly the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac in supporting and requesting, over the past two years, someone to work fulltime in Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: If there is no supplementary that concludes Question Time. Is this an appropriate time for the afternoon break or would Members wish to go on?

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Beach Review and Assessment Committee

The Speaker: I recognise the Leader of Government.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, as Members of this Honourable House are aware my policy address on 17 June I provided an over view of the major findings contained in the interim report recently prepared by the Beach Review and Assessment Committee. The report deals specifically with the areas of Seven Mile Beach, north of Crescent Point. The Committee is in the process of developing recommendations for the area south of Crescent Point and other beaches.

In the interest of time I will not repeat that presentation. It is my intention to make this interim report a public document for the immediate information of all stakeholders and other interested persons. I also want to thank all persons who have served on this Committee and members of the public who contributed to the preparation of this document. The interim report effectively tackles the highly sensitive and complex issues surrounding beach erosion. Further, it offers effective and practical recommendations of both the short and long-term handling of this phenomenon.

It is important to note that the current status of the Cayman Islands coastlines including the most famous stretch of Seven Mile Beach has resulted from decades of both natural and man made factors. Therefore, combating this issue will equally require long-term resolve and interventions to turn the tides on this problem. However, as they say, Madam Speaker, the journey of a thousand miles begins with the first step. Accordingly, I am confident that we have achieved with the preparation of this report significant strides to combat the erosion of our precious beaches.

Madam Speaker, I would invite Members to visit the boat ramp in West Bay, at the junction of Town Hall Road and Northwest Point Road. There Government built a boat ramp some time ago and that was built on iron shore. In all of my years (48 years old) I have never seen that area of iron shore become a beach and today that is exactly what it is—a beach. It only shows that nature takes control when it so desires whether it is El Niño, or whatever affects islands, it is certainly affecting us. It would do the public and Members well to look at that because it is very telling what has happened there and what is happening to our beaches.

Madam Speaker, I now beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the interim report of the Beach and Review Assessment Committee.

The Speaker: So ordered.

I believe you have a second statement, Honourable Leader?

International Initiatives

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, Honourable Members will recall the comments that were made on the various International Initiatives by the Honourable Financial Secretary and myself during the presentation of the Budget. I want to say to Honourable Members that the relationship between the Cayman Islands and the US Government is excellent and growing even better every day.

Our recent trip to Washington was both a reflection of this as well as an opportunity for us to improve upon the relationship. So many of the representatives, senators and staffs with whom we met, numbering over 20 from both the Democratic and Republican Parties said that they learned a great deal about the Cayman Islands from what we had to say to them. Several commented that the opportunity to meet face to face was of great value and that they came away from our meetings with a new appreciation of the Cayman Island's importance to the United States and vice versa.

Many of those we met were chairmen of critical committees and subcommittees determining the legislative course on issues essential to the Cayman Islands. They included the chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, the chairman of the House Financial Services Committee, the chairman of the trade subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committees and the chairman of the subcommittee on Financial Institutions of the Senate Banking Committee. We also met with the US Department of Treasury, Justice Department and State Department and the New Homeland Security Department where we explored many issues of bilateral concern ranging from co-operation and anti-terrorism issues, information exchange and future expansion on tax agreements. We expressed our interesting in ensuring that through their internal public relations and outreach efforts as well as when testifying before the United States Congress that they mentioned, when appropriate, strides made by the Cayman Islands new agreements and co-operative initiatives made between the Cayman Islands and the United States.

While we pursue these initiatives because they are the right things to do; they comply with our beliefs and are good for our citizens and those of the rest of the world. We also welcome being recognised publicly for these accomplishments. We, the Cayman Islands, have been trailblazers within the Region and have become models for several agreements; the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty and the Tax Information Exchange Agreement. If indeed that is the case we would not mind deriving appropriate benefits for having led the way.

It was evident in each meeting that the United States officials are interested in continuing the dialogue with Cayman and a host of subjects with potential mutual benefit. We were pleased to have members of the private sector join us on this trip. Our public private partnership in the Cayman Islands has been a defining element of our strength and growth. This did not escape recognition by those with whom we met in Washington. We insisted on keeping our delegation together in meetings with the Executive and Legislative Branches. That demonstrated the spirit of mutual support and cooperation between our government and private sectors, a subject familiar to the Washington policy makers as well. In that regard, I delivered a speech in Washington at the Heritage Foundation, the powerful free enterprise think-tank.

I reminded the audience of the misconceptions many hold about off shore financial centres. I will quote one paragraph, “I am sometimes asked whether it is hard to see such regular criticism of so-called tax savings off shore or even specific mention of my own home land, the Cayman Islands. What many financial experts will tell you is; that on shore versus off shore has essentially ceased to exist. What matters now is that international standards be upheld everywhere to the same level no matter how big or how little the jurisdiction itself. Quality business will be drawn to and remain in those places and I believe the Cayman Islands is one of the premier jurisdictions where international standards are not just met but exceeded day in and day out.”

Due to that recent visit, Madam Speaker, and also the ongoing work performed by our consultants in Washington; there is a much better understanding in Washington regarding what an important financial centre Cayman has become. When we began our effort to improve Cayman's relationship in Washington nearly a year ago, we sought to convey to members of the United States Legislative and Executive Branches, as well as members of Civil Society in America, the extraordinary progress that has been made by the Cayman Islands. A host of issues important to the United States; including our contribution to the war against terror and transparency and financial matters affecting security, drug smuggling and other Washington priority issues. I can now safely say and accurately report that Washington has begun to recognise and appreciate that progress. Our next goal is to capitalise on this growing relationship with Washington to seek the support of policy makers there on some issues of importance to the Cayman Islands. I trust that the Government can count on all of us here to continue to cultivate these relationships.

I have invited many of those with whom we met to visit us here to meet with Members of the House and other business people to see for themselves and to get to know us better. I will call upon Members of this House to share their own views. It is only through relationship building that we will meet our objectives.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. I now recognise the Honourable Deputy Leader for two statements.

Matters Relating to Petroleum Storage and Handling

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to update this Honourable House on Matters Relating to Petroleum Storage and Handling. As Members will recall the Cayman Islands Government previously commissioned an evaluation of our petroleum storage and handling activities and the reports of the consultants ERM Business Risk Solutions were tabled in this Honourable House in 2001. The specific objectives of the review were to:

- assess whether industry was adequately managing its obligations to safeguard environment, health and safety; and

- assess whether existing government capabilities and infrastructure provided an adequate framework to over see industrial activities in this regard.

The evaluations concluded that more needed to be done to protect the environment health and safety and that changes in government were needed to oversee these industrial activities. A number of recommendations resulted from these evaluations with key ones being that government should:

- Begin to address land use planning and existing land usage issues near hazardous industrial sites through a formal risk assessment of specific petroleum storage and handling operations

- Recruit and appoint a qualified chief petroleum inspector to conduct a variety of duties including annual inspections of facilities tied to renewable licences.

- Revise and update the Petroleum Storage and Handling Laws of 1996 and promulgate regulations thereunder.

Madam Speaker, progress has been made on each of these key recommendations.

The formal risk assessment process identified in the first key recommendation has been initiated and progress achieved. On 3 September 2002 a contract was signed with Advantage Risk Solutions Inc for a selected quantitative risk assessment of bulk propane or liquefied petroleum gas marine tank or off loading liquid petroleum gas pipeline and terminal facilities bulk liquid petroleum fuel marine tanker off loading at Jackson Point terminals and a screening assessment of the Jackson Point terminals.

This work is being conducted to provide additional information regarding the hazards and risks posed by these industrial facilities and for better decision-making in managing the risk. In mid October 2002 initial meetings were held between Esso, Home Gas and Texaco and Advantage Risk Solutions in order to review the marine off loading sub sea pipeline, and terminal facilities and to gather the necessary data for the quantitative risk assessment. Advantage Risk Solutions was also able to observe marine tanker propane off-loading activities. The project kick-off meetings were completed at this time as well as initial risk and additional work under the original quantitative risk assessment.

Much of the original scope of work will be nearing completion at approximately the end of June 2003. While assessment efforts continue to also include all home gas facilities and proposals in their application to the Central Planning Authority. The addition of the home gas quantitative risk assessment extension takes completion of the technical analysis (for all currently ongoing evaluations) to early September 2003. The draft study results and draft reports are expected to be available for review by my Ministry and the local petroleum industry in October 2003. That is, approximately one month following completion of the draft technical analysis.

The Government's overall quantitative risk assessment and evaluation process is already resulting in positive benefits to the Cayman Islands people with improvements in safety and protection of the environment. This includes a new home gas underground propane pipeline from the shoreline to the terminal with leak detection and isolation capabilities, installation of and proposed plans for improved designs including new propane terminal facilities at Home Gas and improvements at Texaco and Esso, new fire systems, improved operating procedure within facilities and a number of other beneficial changes. In addition, Madam Speaker, Cayman Brac Power and Light have upgraded their fuel trucks for fuel deliveries thereby improving the level of safety.

Following up on the second key recommendation to recruit a qualified chief petroleum inspector, Government concluded the selection process in the search for a suitable individual for the post. Interviews were conducted in October 2002 assisted by the consultant during his visit. A Caymanian, Mr. Gary McTaggart, was recommended and hired as the chief petroleum inspector. Mr. McTaggart began his duties on 6 January 2003. Some of the initial activities of the chief petroleum inspector are as follows:

- The Home Gas Caribbean Utilities Company and Texaco pipelines have now been added to the land information system database.
- Development of working relationships with key government agencies involved in regulating industry partners such as Fire, Planning, Environment and the Water Authority.

- All industrial and wholesale customers of the petroleum fuel companies have been identified, located and data prepared for entry into the land information system.

- Initial inspections of marine terminals on Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac have been completed.

- A 'One Call System' has been initiated to better respond to accidental, external impacts on buried pipelines due to excavation. This is accomplished by a single phone call by the excavating party to all other parties involved in response. Research is also being done by Cable and Wireless on the possibility of dial out telephone base system. That can be used in the event of an emergency to simultaneously alert potentially affected neighbours with a pre-recorded message advising them of the emergency.

- Drafting instructions for regulations providing for an annual calibration of all retail pumps and dispensers have been prepared. These regulations will ensure that customers receive the correct amount of fuel as purchased.

- The chief petroleum inspector participated in the March 2003 meetings between the petroleum industry and consultant and is involved in ongoing efforts in advancing data collection efforts.

- The chief petroleum inspector has been included in the Department of Planning's list of commenting agencies with regards to planning applications.

Madam Speaker, the chief petroleum inspector's future plans include:

- Continued assistance in data gathering and assistance to advantage risk solutions.

- The Education of the general public and petroleum hazards such as static electricity, approved fuel containers, and inhalation health hazards associated with siphoning-off gasoline.

- The introduction and use of material safety data sheets, more generally in the Cayman Islands, to raise the awareness of hazards associated with the use of various fuels and chemicals and to improve the level of safety and protection of the environment.

- Continued monitoring of all petroleum sites.

- The development of an annual operating permit system whereby all industrial and wholesale fuel storage sites are closely monitored and upgraded as necessary.

- The introduction of new regulations to safeguard the environment and human health and safety.

- Recruitment of an assistant petroleum inspector is underway and it is my Ministry's intention to fill this post with a Caymanian who can understudy and provide support to the chief petroleum inspector.

Madam Speaker, the third key recommendation, to Revise and Update the Petroleum Storage and Handling Laws of 1996 and promulgate regulations there under, is also currently being addressed. A draft of the Petroleum Handling and Storage Bill, 2003 was recently produced and the final Bill should be completed during this month, June 2003.

Madam Speaker, much progress has been made in the local petroleum storage and handling industry. My Ministry intends to continue to work closely with our private sector partners and the various government agencies in an effort to provide better and safer products and services in the national interest.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Deputy Leader. You may proceed with your second statement.

Update on Solid Waste and Garbage Fees Issue

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, Honourable Members will recall that a prior report entitled, Alternate Systems Analysis (ASA) Solid Waste Feasibility Study for Grand Cayman was completed by the Department of Environmental Health (DeH) along with consultants from Post Buckley Shoe and Jernigan of the United States and was tabled in the Legislative Assembly in 2002. This report reviewed, discussed and costed various options for consideration but did not clearly recommend a particular collection treatment and disposal system for solid waste management in the Cayman Islands.

Today I am pleased to announce that an interim report which deals with these waste issues has been completed and submitted to my Ministry and EXCO for review. This recent report was prepared by the Waste Disposal Options Review (WDOR) Committee, which was established in July 2002 by Executive Council under the auspices of my Ministry. The WDOR Committee's task was to evaluate, select and make recommendations on the preferred solid waste treatment and disposal options in accordance with the agreed terms of reference.

This interim report reviews historical and technical information and makes recommendations for the preferred technology options as well as time lines, planning, land acquisition, fee structure and management issues. A time frame of 20 years was used as the planning period for the new solid waste treatment and disposal facility. The WDOR committee was chaired by the director of the Environment Health and comprised of selected government agencies, including the Department of Environment, Planning, Public Works, Water Authority and private sector representations from the fiscal advisory group.

Madam Speaker, some of the key recommendations and observations of the committee as follows:

- The existing George Town landfill will reach capacity in 2005 at the current disposal rate.

- A reasonable estimated time for a new treatment and disposal facility to become fully operational in early 2006.

- The new waste treatment and disposal facility to be located at an adjacent to the present site.

- The preferred technology for the treatment and disposal of solid waste is a hybrid system comprising (a) waste to energy component which is a type of autoclave system (b) composting of the yard waste (c) shedding of waste tires (d) recycling aluminium, ferrous materials, waste oils, lead acid batteries and (e) disposal of mainly biologically inert materials that is; glass, plastics and building rubble on a properly engineered landfill.

- The waste treatment and disposal system is to be acquired by government under a lease to purchase agreement, that is, the successful company will finance a hundred per cent of the capital cost and be operated by private interest under contract.

- The pre-qualified companies will bid on this project in accordance with the Central Tenders Committee and public sector investment committee guidelines.

- Selection of treatment and disposal for the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman will be determined after a final decision has been made for Grand Cayman.

- The existing garbage fee structure is to be abandoned a new system of cost recovery implemented.

Madam Speaker, I would also like to inform this Honourable House that a subcommittee of the WDOR Committee is now actively analysing the feasibility of up front fees as a way to collect revenue to directly fund the treatment and disposal of municipal waste. The fees are a most essential and critical component of this system, as sufficient money is needed to manage the entire operations. If this approach is adopted it would be a much fairer garbage fee system for everyone. That is; (a) persons will now pay their garbage fees based on user-pay philosophy, which spreads the collection of revenue throughout the year and the existing billing of annual garbage fees will be discontinued. (b) Government will be able to collect its waste treatment and disposal fees at the time the goods enter the country to cover its expenses including contracted obligations and related services; such as the collection of indiscriminate dumping, litter control and beach and roadside cleaning. (c) This method also eliminates many problems which currently exist with the cost of revenue collection, waivers, delinquent fees and uncollectible debts.

Madam Speaker, I would also like to state that ongoing works are continuing for the proper closure of the existing waste disposal facility on the south side of Cayman Brac and the development of a new Cayman Brac landfill site to become operational within the next 18 months. This matter of collection, treatment and disposal of municipal solid waste is a very important one for any community and my Ministry to arrive at solutions to the related issues and in an environmentally conscious and financially viable manner utilising private sector partners.

I would also like to thank all of the committee members for their time and efforts in compiling the report within such a tight deadline. I would also like to say that the Ministry is anticipating the completion of the review process very shortly. Therefore, we can proceed to the public pre-qualification and tendering phases within the next three months.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

I will allow for a short question under Standing Order 30(2) by the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Short Questions—Standing Order 30(2)

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In his statement the Honourable Minister has said that the existing George Town landfill will reach capacity in 2005 at the current disposal rate. In answers to questions and in previous statements to this Honourable House, the Honourable Minister said capacity at the landfill would be achieved by 2002. I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say what has transpired in recent times for the Ministry to have a more optimistic view about the capacity of the current landfill site to be able to accommodate refuse through 2005.

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, the management of the landfill is an ongoing process and it is correct that information given some time ago has changed up to date. This is as a result of various factors, some being that solid disposal material has been shipped off the Island to Cuba and other arrangements made at the landfill. I do not have all of the details as to the reason the director of the DoE (Department of Environment) or the WDOR Committee (that was chaired by that director) has now estimated that the landfill will be able to go until 2005 or until it reaches its capacity in 2005. Therefore, that is the information that has been made available to me by my technical staff and provide I have provided herewith.

The Speaker: Thank you. We will now take the afternoon break for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 4.01 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.19 pm

[Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, we move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Friday, 27 June 2003. Mr. Speaker, I am advised that we should be meeting at 11 am instead and so I move the adjournment until 11 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House be adjourned until 11 am Friday, 27 June 2003. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.20 pm the House stood adjourned until Friday, 27 June 2003, at 11 am.

MONDAY
30 JUNE 2003
10.55 AM
Eleventh Sitting

[Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: I invite the Second Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to grace us with Prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen

Proceedings resumed at 10.58 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable Minister for Communications and the Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, who are both off the island on Government business. I have also received apologies from the Speaker who will be arriving later on during the Sitting and I have received apologies from the Second Elected Member from West Bay who is also out on official business.

Presentation by His Excellency
Mr. Bruce H. Dinwiddy, CMG
Governor of the Cayman Islands

The Speaker: I would also like to take this opportunity to inform Members that the Governor is coming to the House later this morning to present Instruments of Appointments to the Leader of the Government and the Leader of the Opposition.

The plan at this stage is that we should take a break to suspend proceedings around 12:20 pm to await his arrival. So, around 12:20 pm we will ask for a motion to suspend to await the arrival of the Governor.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

The Budget 2003 (Half) Supplementary Annual Plan and Estimates for the Government of the Cayman Islands for the Six Month
Financial Year ending 30 June 2003

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Budget 2003 Half Supplementary Annual Plan and Estimates for the Government of the Cayman Islands for the Six Month Financial Year ended 30 June 2003. This document is to support the Schedule to the Supplementary Appropriation Bill when that Bill is presented.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Not at this time, Mr. Speaker. I will offer comments when I deal with the Supplementary Appropriation Bill.

The Speaker: Thank you.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

The Speaker: In the absence of the Ministers for the questions, could I ask for a motion for the deferment of the questions until a later Sitting?

Hon. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move that under the Standing Orders. . .

[Interjections]

Hon. McKeeva Bush: I thought Members were in agreement with moving the Motion. . . if Members want to ask the questions, then they can go ahead, but I will have to defer each question asked.

The Speaker: Whatever the will of the House is.
The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, it is not a question of us not agreeing to it. We understand the Ministers are not here. It is just that the provisions of Standing Orders require that the questions be asked and then deferred, Sir.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am in the hands of Members.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, whichever way is easier, we could move for the suspension of that Standing Order and then also do the deferral.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, that is what I was proceeding to do, until I was interrupted by the other side. I do not know which direction they want to take. However, that is what I was going to propose: we suspend the Standing Orders and I move that the Questions be deferred until a later Sitting.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, if that has the acceptance of the House, if I could have the Motion for the deferral of the Standing Order.

Can we have the Motion for the suspension of that Standing Order?

Suspension of Standing Order 23(5)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, that is what I was proceeding to do. I was going to ask that Standing Orders be suspended in order to defer questions until a later sitting.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(5) be hereby suspended to allow for the questions to be deferred.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 23 (5) suspended to allow for the questions to be deferred.

The Speaker: Can we also ask for the motion to suspend Standing Order 23(1), just in the interest of the Members?

Suspension of Standing Order 23 (1) and (2)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move that Standing Order 23(1) be suspended so that we can defer questions to a later date. Out of an abundance of caution—so that I can satisfy the other clerk on the other side—I also move that Standing Order 23(2) be suspended.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 23(1) and (2) be hereby suspended.

All those in favour please say, Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 23(1) and (2) suspended.

The Speaker: Could we now get the motion for the deferment of the questions?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I believe I am safe in moving that questions be deferred until a later sitting. That is, because the Honourable Minister of Planning is away and also the Honourable Minister of Sports .

The Speaker: The question is that Questions No. 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47 and 48 be deferred until a later sitting of this House. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Questions Nos. 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, and 48 deferred until a later sitting.

DEFERRED QUESTION 42

No. 42: The Second Elected Member for George Town to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology: What is Government's policy with respect to the hiring of vehicles for the use of Government Departments or employees, and what amount has Government paid for hire of vehicles since 1st November, 2001.

DEFERRED QUESTION 43

No. 43: The Elected Member for East End to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology to give an update on efforts made by Government to attract E-business since November, 2001.

DEFERRED QUESTION 44

No. 44: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports what is the policy toward the provision of low cost housing on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

DEFERRED QUESTION 45

No. 45: The Elected Member for North Side to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports if the 'Learn to Swim Program' at the Lions Pool is available to all Primary School children.

DEFERRED QUESTIONS 46, 47, 48

The Elected Member for North Side to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports

No. 46: Will the Juvenile Facility at Northward Prison be able to accommodate both male and female?

No. 47: If a decision has been taken as to which properties will be utilised for the Affordable Housing Initiative.

No. 48: How does a person qualify to purchase one of the homes being built under the Government's Affordable Housing Initiative?

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no notice of any statements.

Suspension of Standing Order 45

The Speaker: Can I have the motion for the suspension of Standing Order 45 to allow for the First Reading of the Supplementary Appropriation Bill?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I move that Standing Order 45 be suspended to allow for the First Reading of the Supplementary Appropriation (January to June 2003) Bill 2003.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 45 be suspended.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 45 suspended.

BILLS

FIRST READING

The Supplementary Appropriation (January to June 2003) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Bill has been deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for the Second Reading.

SECOND READING

The Supplementary Appropriation (January to June 2003) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled, The Supplementary Appropriation (January to June 2003 Bill) 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I have spoken a number of times about the many facets and phases of implementation of the Financial Management Initiative (FMI). I consider that changes brought about by FMI to the Budget process are the most visible and most significant of its many facets.

The Budget documentation has provided all Honourable Members of this House and the general public with detailed information on what Government intends to do and how it plans to spend the public's money.

The recent reporting documentation in the form of the first quarter's report for 2003 details the performance of Government. The third set of documents is called the Supplementary Annual Planning Estimates which I am proud to present today and which I tabled earlier, Mr. Speaker.

Honourable Members will recall that previously when expenditure was different to the approved Budget, those differences were scrutinised and approved by Finance Committee and then incorporated into a Supplementary Appropriations Law at a later date.

Section 25 of the Public Management and Finance Law requires that the process be changed. The Supplementary Annual Planning Estimates and Supplementary Appropriation Bill that is before this Honourable House today has been prepared to comply with the implementation of the Public Management and Finance Law.

The new procedure requires that any changes to the original appropriations will be made through a legislative process that mirrors the main budget. This involves the tabling of the Supplementary Annual Planning Estimates and the introduction and enactment of a Supplementary Appropriation Bill.

Mr. Speaker, this is like having to present a mini budget. As with the main budget the process will involve Finance Committee stage where any additional expenditure and variation in output classifications can be scrutinized.

However, Mr. Speaker, the Supplementary Annual Planning Estimates is prepared on an exception basis. This means that only those items that have changed from the originally enacted 2003 half year budget are included in the Supplementary Annual Planning Estimates.

The structure and contents of the Supplementary Annual Planning Estimates is similar to that of the main annual budget and estimates. The document is in three parts:

Part A: details changes to the annual Planning Estimates for the 2003 half year;

Part B: details changes to the Appropriations;

Part C: shows revised forecast cash financial statements.

Honourable Members who would like to get an overview of what the Budget contains can turn to pages 5—7 of the Annual Planning Estimates, as this gives a three-page summary of the main points.

Mr. Speaker, before I provide an overview of the Supplementary Annual Planning Estimates I would like to inform Honourable Members that the revised financial forecast contained in the documents before, are the same as the half year comparative figures as was shown in the 2003—2004 Budget which was recently passed by this Honourable House. The forecast projects an operating surplus of $54.6 million compared to the original budget of $43.1 million. These forecasts take into account the supplementary expenditure being requested today.

For information to Members, I would like to briefly highlight some of the main changes outlined in the Supplementary Plan and Estimates. I will begin with Legislative measures: Twelve of the thirty planned legislative measures that were specified in the annual plan and estimates have been deferred until the 2003—2004 fiscal year. The details of these are on page 9 of the Supplementary Annual Plan and Estimates.

Changes have been made to a range of outputs and most of these changes are fiscally neutral. These changes are easy to reflect a change in the quantity and therefore a change to the costs of an output or in some cases to reflect a technical change to an output cost. The technical changes reflect changes to the way in which outputs are being costed compared to the method used in the original budget.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to suggest that Honourable Members of this House do not look too harshly at these variances. I will explain, Mr. Speaker. The 2003 half year budget was the first output based budget ever for this country, and I am proud to say that it puts the Cayman Islands on the cutting edge of public sector reform in the region and indeed the world. The Financial Reform team provided a great deal of training and support in the area of output costing.

However, for Ministries and Portfolios to change from an input to an output focus and to keep records of civil servants' time so that outputs could be properly costed was a huge change in the way of doing business. Some agencies have no culture of recording time and consequently no historical data was available to base their estimates on. This is the reason why Honourable Members can see a number of variations, or part of the reason.

Over the course of the last 6 months, Mr. Speaker, a time recording system has been introduced so that all civil servants can record their time against outputs they produce. This has improved the quality of the data and the 2003-2004 output costs are much more robust and will continue to improve each year. Honourable Members will note that the reasons for the changes are detailed at the bottom of each output group.

Mr. Speaker, one new output has been added and that is the ICT1 which is the Regulation of Information and Communications Technology sector. This was a technical change that resulted from a decision to pay all coercive revenue to Government rather than allowing it to be retained by the Authority to fund its outputs. This decision was taken after the Annual Planning Estimates for the 2003 half year was approved by this Honourable House.

Output NGS 40 Investors in People's Programme has been removed as this output will not be delivered in the 2003 half year.

Mr. Speaker, the total amount of transfer payments is unchanged, but the allocation between TP 10 and TP 11, both of which relate to education scholarships has changed to reflect a different timing than originally planned.

Turning to other executive expenses: There are a number of small changes to other executive expenses due to timing differences and forecast expenditures being different than the budget. However, there are two new substantial items that were not included in the original budget and so require supplementary appropriations. These are the payments of (1) the defence legal cost relating to the Euro Bank trial which is $1.95 million, and (2) terminal benefits to the previous Attorney General amounting to $296,000.

Mr. Speaker, I would now like to turn to Equity Injections. Although this is not an appropriation issue, I would like to draw Honourable Members' attention to page 125 as it shows that cash injections to the Health Services Authority has been reduced by $1.3 million. A subsidy to the Authority is still necessary, but it is at a level less than what was originally budgeted. However, the Government decided to make a new capital injection of $387,500 to the ICT Authority to fund its fit-out costs of their new offices and to provide some working capital. This was not budgeted for.

Mr. Speaker, there are a number of changes proposed in the area of capital acquisitions and capital development. I would like to start with capital acquisitions. The major changes to capital acquisitions are in respect of four ministries and portfolios. The portfolio of Internal and External Affairs is requesting an additional $364,000, primarily for vehicles and equipment for the Police Department and also to replace the Governor's car.

The Ministry of Planning, Communications and Works is requesting $518,000 for urgently needed garbage trucks.

The Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture, is requesting $1.6 million for computers and other related hardware for the ITALIC project.

The Ministry of Community Services, Women's Affairs, Youth & Sports is requesting $137,000 for vehicles and equipment for the prison services.

Changes to the Capital Development Expenditure are twofold: firstly, as a result of the new projects not budgeted for, and secondly, increased expenditure on budgeted projects. Mr. Speaker, the significant new capital projects are:

Repairs to the Legislative Assembly building	$280,000
Construction of Chapter House	$150,000
Upgrade to parks and sports facilities	$100,000
Quincentennial Monuments and Square	$340,000
Repairs to the George Town Primary School	$300,000

Mr. Speaker, the major expenditure increases on budgeted projects are purchase of lands—$690,000

Road settlement of Gazetted claims	$1,900,000
Road projects—Little Cayman	$110,000

Mr. Speaker, under the category of Loans made, a single change is being made which relates to a loan to a school which was not budgeted for.

As I said earlier, the revised financial forecast contained in the documents before Honourable Members are the same as the 2003 half year comparative figures as set out in the Annual Budget for the fiscal year 2003—2004.

The revised financial forecast for the 2003 half year shows a revised forecast operating surplus of [$54.6 million.] This is around $11.5 million more than that originally budgeted for in the 2003 half year. This resulted from an extra $7.6 million in revenue and a [$3.9 million] reduction in the originally budgeted expenditure figure.

Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned during the presentation of the annual budget, we have got the case where as part of the cash balance that we have been using to support the surplus is the difference between advances and deposits.

Now advances in normal terms would represent monies that are expected to be recovered in the short term. However, this is not proving to be the case especially with overseas medical advances. So, at some point in time, soon, this will have to be addressed. An approach was taken in order to address this because this is why we will be using up a part of the overdraft to fund the budget for the 2003-2004 half year.

There is a question and this matter has been lingering for a long time. The Auditor General has commented on it on several occasions. Honourable Members of this House have commented on this because the question is, How should this really be addressed?

It is to a point now where while these monies that are recoverable can be classified as assets, receivables, monies that are due to the Government, they cannot really continue to be factored as a part of the cash balance. So, this is an area where the Government is turning its attention in order to address this matter.

The revised fiscal forecast for the 2003 half year complies with the fiscal strategy outlining the Strategic Policy Statement for that half year and with the applicable principles of responsible financial management. Mr. Speaker, I think all Honourable Members will agree that the new format and process for approving supplementary expenditure is far more sensible and transparent.

I would like to thank Chief Officers and Chief Financial Officers in the Ministries and Portfolios and the support staff in the Portfolio of Finance and Economics for the excellent job they have done in putting together the Supplementary Annual Planning Estimates for the six-month period ending 30 June 2003.

Mr. Speaker, as an overall concluding remark, I would like once again to make the point, that amounts shown in the Supplementary Annual Planning Estimates for the June 2003 half year, have been included in the revised forecast figures shown on Table 1 at page 133 for the 6-month period ended 30 June 2003.

Even after including these supplementaries, the expected out turn position for 30 June, is one of operating surplus. That is $11.5 million better than the original 2003 half year budget and an expected over all surplus of $14.7 million better than budgeted. However, as I mentioned, Mr. Speaker, this figure includes receivable balances but now we are going to—

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Tibbetts, I cannot give you the exact figure at this time, but I will do so later on.

We are now going into accrual accounting. It will not be unusual to have this situation, because it will not only be the revenue that is collected during the course of a year, but the revenue that is forecast to be collected. This is what will be recognised as revenue under the new recognition principle.

We have to bear in mind that we are moving from a strict cash basis to an accrual accounting basis. We are in the middle of this process which constitutes a hybrid for the reason that the statements presented to this House are statements of cash flows. This is why the receivable component will have to be factored out in order to reduce that aspect to mere cash. However, it does not really deny the fact that a surplus is being achieved—only that it is not representative of strict cash.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to say thanks to Honourable Members. I would recommend that the Supplementary Appropriation Bill stand referred to a short meeting of Finance Committee in order to grant approval to the figures. For this reason I would suggest that Honourable Members find the necessary supporting details for the items that are appearing in the Schedule of the Supplementary Appropriation Bill. I would advise Honourable Members to focus attention on pages 141 through pages 146 of the Supplementary Annual Planning Estimates,

This sets out details of all the figures that are set out in the Supplementary Appropriation Schedule.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have listened carefully to the Honourable Third Official Member's presentation of a Bill for a Law to Appropriate Certain Additional Expenditures for the six month period ending 30 June 2003.

Now, Mr. Speaker when we look on the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons for this Supplementary Appropriation Bill, it reads: "It is necessary to enact an Appropriation Law in respect of each financial year, giving the Financial Secretary authority to spend the money necessary for the services of the Government in that year in the manner directed by the Legislature".

The main Appropriation Law for the 2003 half financial period was enacted in November 2002. This Bill is for supplementary appropriations for that same period. It seeks approval for changes to expenditure for the six-month financial year ending 30 June 2003, under the several heads of expenditure set out in the Schedule, and charges the additional expenditure on the revenue and funds of the Islands.

So, Mr. Speaker, in moving to the accrual system from the cash system, we have changed our calendar financial year from January 1 to December 31, to I think, July 1 to June 30. This represents changes in expenditure for the half year that just ensued for us to regularise that time period which begins I think, coincidentally, today July 1st. [Corrected by Members] Sorry, I am a day ahead of myself! The six-month period ends today (June 30th)!

Mr. Speaker, in years gone by, whenever it was time to speak to a supplementary appropriation, Back-Benchers were always with the feeling that it was a rubber-stamping exercise after the fact already done. All Members in this Legislative Assembly now, even those Members of Government—the elected arm of Government—were at some point in time on the Back-Bench and all had the thought that it was a rubber-stamping exercise. The procedures to go through basically were simply while required by law, really already done. So, what is the sense of us talking about it!

Now, Mr. Speaker, I know that the Honourable Third Official Member will do his winding up. However, I think we need to address this issue in some form or fashion. I know that the whole process is changed; I know that we are having quarterly reports being done. There is a whole sequence of events which perhaps I would not be able to outline verbatim at this point in time, but I think the Honourable Third Official Member will be aware of what I am speaking about.

In that vein I am trying to determine very clearly if moving from the cash system to the accrual system we will find ourselves in the same position as we found ourselves previously—whereby supplementary appropriation and its approval process is always after the fact.

You see, if that is the case then, from that perspective there really is no remedy. Regardless of how well the Public Management and Finance Law was crafted, or how accountable and transparent the system is that we are purporting to move to, we have to be very careful. This has no bearing or reflection on the Government of the day. I speak to the system and I know we are new into it and I think we really need to think seriously of this.

If we are going to have supplementary appropriation in the same manner as before—after the fact and basically a rubber-stamping exercise—then any government could put forth a budget in a certain manner and everybody could approve that budget. However, now that it is output-based—a whole different regime—shifts can be made during the year either to ‘outputs’ or to ‘outcomes’. An actual using of resources including financial resources that may have been predetermined prior to the budget but not included, and simply when it is all over, knowing full well that is what you were going to do but you do not say it up front; you wait until afterwards and say it and then nothing can be done.

So, now I raise this point, because I believe the Honourable Third Official Member—whether it was thought of before is not so important—the fact is that I believe there is great relevance to the question and we need to be able to satisfy ourselves that the system being employed at this time does not allow for this to happen. I do not wish to go into specific examples, because it need not relate to just recurrent; neither does it need not relate to just capital, but in the strictest sense of the word it can relate to both.

Mr. Speaker, the other question that it begs immediately is: While we have supposedly crystal clear methods of outlining and exposing the expenditure via the outputs and the outcomes and there is an internal mechanism that is supposed to be set up which will justify the expenditure and not only monitor that but ensure that the outputs and the outcomes expected are achieved and that is monitored on a regular basis. While all of that is supposed to be in place, it is not too far fetched if the mechanisms do not prevent it. For capital resources—that is, money-wise. Also for recurrent to be mixed and all kinds of confusions—I am not saying that it will happen. All I am saying is that I wish for the Honourable Third Official Member to outline that nothing like this can occur because that is one of the reasons why we were moving from one system to the other. Perhaps it will be crystal clear: I see the Honourable Third Official Member smiling so I do recognise that he is confident he can clear the issue up.

However, I just want to make sure that we are straight on target and moving on track. The original question I believe is still one that we need to make sure the Supplementary Appropriation does not come in the same manner that it used to come. I believe that by using the mechanisms we have in place, we would prevent any such thing from happening.

Now I recognise also, that there are certain sections of the Public Management and Finance Law which do not come into force until 1 July 2004. However, I am absolutely certain that the Honourable Third Official Member will recognise that while there may be certain procedures allowed now that will not be allowed then, the fact is we must be prepared by then to ensure that what the Law calls for that we are able to adhere to. Not just as a Government, but as a matter of principle, because that is the line that we have taken from the very beginning in being proponents of this whole new thought process, this brand new Law and all of the sections that are contained in the Law.

Mr. Speaker, there is one other issue and I believe it could be dealt with in this debate. We may have to get into some specifics during Finance Committee, but the Honourable Third Official Member spoke to some of this so I do not think I am going beyond my realm in raising the issues that I will now raise. As I said, he mentioned it in his delivery. The first one that I want to speak to—and I do not remember hearing him speak about it, but I wish for him to make it absolutely clear in his winding up on this Bill.

In the Supplementary AP&E on page 6, under output groups, the third paragraph, and with your permission I will read it. It is not extremely long.

It reads: “One new output has been added. ICT1 Regulation of the Information Technology and Communications Sector. However, this was more of a technical change that resulted from the decision and this is what is important here— that resulted from the decision to pay all coercive revenue to the Government, rather than allowing it to be retained by the Authority to fund its outputs”.

This decision was taken after the Annual Plan and estimates for 2003 half was approved. Now, Mr. Speaker, where that jumps out at me is totally accepting that we are moving into a new system, but also understanding, and if I understand what this statement says correctly, where it speaks, “the decision to pay all coercive revenue to the Government, rather than allowing it to be retained by the Authority to fund its outputs”.

First of all, my question is: Does this relate solely to this Authority? If it relates to all Authorities, then it poses a very serious question in my mind. I see the Honourable Third Official Member indicating that maybe it does not, but I wish for him to be able to publicly clear the matter up. I am certain he realises right away, Mr. Speaker, exactly where I was going if it applied to all of the Authorities. For if it applied to all Authorities, I believe that all would be lost.

However, I am glad to see the indication is that it is not the case. As I said, I would really wish for him to expound on the matter when he is winding up on the Bill. I would like him to make it absolutely clear how this will work: Is its application to this specific Authority a temporary situation? Is that what will obtain down-line, or exactly how it will work? And/or if there is absolutely not any relationship to this methodology being employed with any other Authority.

The only other question that I wish to raise in this Bill, Mr. Speaker, is where the Honourable Third Official Member referred to certain sections in the Supplementary Annual Planning Estimates. I crave your indulgence because there are certain sections of this I need to read.

On page 7 under the Revised Financial Forecast, Mr. Speaker, the first paragraph stated that the Revised Financial Forecast for 2003 half year show a Revised Forecast Operating Surplus of $54.673 million. This is about $11.5 million more than that originally budgeted for in the 2003 half year budget”.

It results from an extra $7.6 million in revenue and $3.9 million in expenditure, than was originally forecast. Now, I am assuming that the revenue (or rather the expenditure) means $3.9 million less in expenditure, it does not say clearly. However, when the two amounts are added we get $11.5 million so that is what it has to mean.

It goes on to say, Mr. Speaker, that the Revised Forecast for Net Balance Sheet Activity before new financing is $17.938 million, which is $3.1 million better than the original 2003 half year budget which was presented November of last year. This reflects flows for advances and deposits, which traditionally are not included in budget forecasts. The revised overall surplus before financing is $36.735 million, which is $14.7 million better than the original budget forecast. This primarily reflects the better operating results. This primarily reflects the better operating results.

Now the Revised Forecast includes new borrowing activity of $28.358 million. This is primarily the surplus proceeds from the bond, which were not allowed for in the original budget. When that budget was prepared it was assumed that the bond would be finalised in 2002. It was not finalised until April 2003.

These surplus proceeds have been placed in General Reserves. The Revised Forecast Cash Balance is now $78 million, which is $18 million better than the original forecast. The Revised Fiscal Forecast for 2003 half year is in compliance with the Fiscal Strategy of 2003 half year outlined in the Strategic Policy Statement for the year-end with the applicable principles of responsible financial management.

Mr. Speaker, this is what I would like the Honourable Third Official Member to do. I have read what the Revised Financial Forecast says. The Honourable Third Official Member just a few short days ago was extremely put out by a line that I took when I debated the Appropriation Bill 2003-2004. I think he was also with a similar thought from my colleague, the Second Elected Member for George Town, even though he took more pains than I did to explain to that Honourable Member that the line of argument was not intended to cast any reflection on the person, but rather the duties.

Mr. Speaker, let me make it absolutely clear (if I am allowed to continue my debate), that I am not raising any matter. What I am going to speak to now is what I just read. I will continue, Mr. Speaker.

As I was saying, what I would like the Honourable Third Official Member to do in his wind up . . . and I was going on to say that he is as aware as I am of how well presentations can be made and how these presentations are factual but if one does not understand how several of the figures are arrived at one may well form an opinion that is not totally correct as to how we got there.

Mr. Speaker, I will use for example the very last sentence which speaks to the new forecast showing an operating surplus of $54.67 million; this is around $11.5 million more than originally budgeted for and it results from an extra $7.6 million in revenue and $3.9 million reduction in expenditure.

If we simply isolate our thoughts to the statement, what we are going to see is that in its natural performance, that is, in its usual way of collections, the Government collected $7.6 million more in revenue and it was able to save $3.9 million in expenditure and the story ends there.

We go on to read the other parts of it and this is where I want to make it very clear. It is not that the facts are not in the document, but one can easily get lost in being able to put the whole sequence of events and how the total end results are arrived at, if one is not able to sequentially follow how it is stated.

I know the Honourable Third Official Member is extremely capable because on many occasions, Mr. Speaker, I have had that Member explain certain things to me. So I would like him in his winding up to explain just by simply drawing all the figures together the sequence of events to show where borrowings took place; how that relates to a surplus; and how it affected the surplus. I am absolutely certain as I said, Mr. Speaker, that the Honourable Third Official Member is quite capable of doing that.

This is not for my benefit, Mr. Speaker, because I do understand. However, rather than get into a to and fro situation I will ask the Honourable Third Official Member to walk the country through that and certainly the job will be completed.

The remaining sections of the Supplementary Annual Plan and Estimates, Mr. Speaker, which also include what I have just spoken about, will be dealt with in Finance Committee. However, I just thought that it would set the stage for all of us and a clearer understanding for the Public if in moving into the Finance Committee on the Supplementary Appropriation Bill the Honourable Third Official Member would just make some very clear explanations as to how we arrived at certain of those figures.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The final call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

If no other Member wishes to speak does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Honourable First Elected Member from George Town raised certain observations and I will clear up those of concern.

If that Honourable Member and other Members of the House will, I am sure that Honourable Members are aware of the points that were observed on page 7 in respect of the surplus for the half year. If we were to turn to page 133— it is necessary for that Honourable Member and others to have their documents in front of them.

Mr. Speaker, the very first item shows there is a table comprised of four columns and the very third column to the right shows at the time when the Strategic Policy Statement was tabled in this Honourable House that it estimated that revenue would have been $188.8 million.

At the time when the Budget was presented, the Estimate was revised downward to $184.25 million but based on the performance up to the time the figures were compiled by the Budget and Management Services Unit, based on information provided by the Treasury Department, there were indications that up to today the revenue to be collected would have been $191.875 million. We have to bear in mind that is not necessarily the exact figure because the compilation of this document would have started over a fortnight ago.

So, when we look at that, Mr. Speaker, we see the difference between the Annual Planning Estimates, which was the Budget presented in this House of $184.245 million, and what has been revised by the Treasury Department of $191.875 million that gives a difference of $7.63 million. This is what is being talked about.

Now when we take this figure, in order to see a breakdown of this we now go to page 149 of the Annual Plan and Estimates and following the principles as I have just explained in terms of the three columns, we can see the breakdown of the $184.245 million at the time the Annual Plan and Estimates were provided and also the revised forecast.

It gives you on an individual basis the comparison between the figures. This will have to be deduced in terms or arrived at taking one from the other but gives a breakdown of that.

We now revert to page 133. We see the same thing with expenditure. At the time the Strategic Policy Statement was tabled in this Honourable House there were indications that expenditure would have been $144.453 million.

That was revised downward at the time of presenting the Annual Planning Estimates and it then became $141.141 million. Now, based on expenditure trends and taking into account the information flows from all the Departments flowing into the Treasury Department, there are indications that up to today the expenditure of Government would be $137.202 million.

Now if we look under the original Annual Plan and Estimates, if we take the revenue that was forecasted of $184.245 million and we deduct the operating expenditure of $141.141 million this gave an operating surplus of $43.104 million.

But when we look in terms of the revised position, we see that the operating surplus taking $137.202 expenditure from forecasted revenue of $191.875 gives a difference of $54.673 operating surplus and this is how this figure has been arrived at.

Now if you take the $43.104 which is the operating surplus that was forecasted in the Annual Plan and Estimates from the revised figure of $54.673 million then you arrive at the difference of $11.57 million.

Mr. Speaker, before we get to that if we again revert to page 149, it can be seen there the operating expenditure figure according to the Annual Planning Estimates it is the second set of figures from the bottom, $141.14 million and it gives the breakdown of this in terms of the expenditure column and it makes the comparison between the forecast of $137.202 and this again is the forecasted or revised expenditure figure according to the Treasury that will be spent up to the end of June but the breakdown is provided here.

Mr. Speaker, then we go into the area of net asset activities. We find we can see the figures that are there and at the time the Annual Planning Estimates gave an indication that the value of net asset activities would be in the region of $21.061 million. That is the bolded figure appearing under the net advance activities and net deposit activities and I am going to show Members how these figures have been arrived at.

When we look in terms of the forecast through the end of the year, this amounts to $17.93 million. When you take the $17.93 million from the $21.061 this is what gives the favourable position of $21 million. So when you take the $17.953 from the $54.673 immediately proceeding that the bold figures up top being the operating surplus, then you have the operating surplus before financing of $36.735.

When you take the $36.735 the operating surplus before financing and you take into account the borrowing of $28.358 million. These two figures when added together gives you the total of $65.093 million and the breakdown of this to show the comparison, I would refer the Honourable Member and others, it follows the same figures but this gives a total. You can see what is happening on page 138 of the Annual Planning Estimates in Table 8.

When we go down to the $65 million now, Mr. Speaker, then we have got cash balance opening, a balance of $12.96 million and we have got the net movement in cash which is the $65.093 as I mentioned earlier gives a total of $78.053 million.

The Honourable Member and others will notice that there is an asterisk or a little i which cross-references this total to page 150.

When we go to page 150 we see a statement that is now called the Revised Financing & Reserve Statement and in this it shows the forecast cash balance again, operating surplus, the net balance sheet activity coming up with a forecast closing cash balance of $78.051 million.

However, that table then goes on to show a breakdown of the $78.051. It shows cash balances held on restricted cash balance, $16.104 million. If Honourable Members will recall this is the figure that appeared in the Annual Planning Estimates for the 2003—2004 as a part of the financing that would be required under the making of the financing. That is referred to as the General Bank Balance.

Then we have got the Restricted Cash Balance, we have got the General Reserves of $28.337 million. We have got other reserves, $3.318 million and we have got fund balances. The fund balances, if we were to look at the table to the right, the sum of all of those balances there amount to $13.972 million.

The $3.318 that would be like the Student Fund Reserve, the National Disaster Fund and these reserves have all been aggregated to arrive at this $3.318 million. The restricted balances give a total of $45.627 million.

So, when we take this $45.627 million there are now what we call Deposit Accounts. These are monies such as Immigration fees—these are not monies that are going to Government. These are funds belonging to a third party and it says “funds held on behalf of a third party: Third party $16.320”. This is normally a rolling fund balance. It is not that the Government will have to pay this out tomorrow but it was felt that it was necessary to identify this sum of money as belonging to third parties.

What we have done here, Mr. Speaker, previously and under the arrangement, we would not only have the deposit but we would also have the advances. However, as I mentioned earlier, we have decided to treat the advances as receivable balances instead of a cash balance. So this is a composition of the $78.051 million.

The Honourable Member has made a point that with the complexity of these documents, it will take some time really, because not all of the information is centred in any one place. It is a new process and we are working at it. As we hear the concerns raised by Honourable Members, we are fine-tuning the documentations, also the information is up on the website immediately.

It is difficult to go to any one paragraph or any one page and glean a complete understanding of what all of these balances mean. You have to cross-reference. These cross-references are necessary just like when you are looking at a set of financial statements from any private sector organisation. However, given the importance what this means for the country and the fact that we would not want anyone to draw the wrong conclusion as to what these figures mean, it is necessary for us to take into account what is rendered as constructive criticism and use that to refine the information as we go forward.

Mr. Speaker, I would also want to draw the Honourable Member's attention to page 141 of this document. He raised another point earlier where there could be some surreptitious attempt—and I do not take it as a criticism on his part. He mentioned that there could be the case where an output that should be properly classified in the Budget document may be misrepresented—knowing that in terms of this output this is what is intended to be pursued or to be achieved. However, in order to (I am paraphrasing what I think he would have said) make a presentation in the Budget and (probably to put it more favourable) to put forward that output in a different disguise and then pursue the original output as planned.

Mr. Speaker, I do trust that no Government of this country would ever do something like that. For the reason the Budget document is so important, we will not present to this Honourable House at any point in time (whether it is me or any other person) a perfect set of documents. However, where it is known that a specific output or activity is to be pursued but it is felt that it is much better if it is disguised and presented in another form to get acceptance, yet pursue what was originally planned, this would take collusion on the part of Ministers of Government working together with a Finance Minister or the Financial Secretary or whoever is there and I do trust, Mr. Speaker, that something like this will never be done.

However, one of the things that should always be borne in mind, Mr. Speaker, and with the best intentions in the world, the Budget document as presented will always be a set of estimates. There will be cases where the Government cannot accurately predict when certain expenditures or certain events are going to occur, thus requiring expenditures outside of the budget.

Now this was anticipated and I think this is why this Honourable House took the view to give certain flexibility to the Chief Officers and also Executive Council to vary the outputs and outcome subject to timely reports being made to this Honourable House.

Mr. Speaker if we were to go back to page 133 and take a quick look at what we see there, we will see that the operating expenditure which was set out in the Annual Plan and Estimates, amounted to $141.1 million, but the revised position of $137.202 takes into account $3 million less than the Annual Plan and Estimates and takes into account the Supplementary Appropriation Bill that we have got in front of us.

Mr. Speaker, when we add the figures in the Supplementary Appropriation Bill, we find that everything amounts to about $23 million, but it would not present an accurate figure and this is why totals have not been given to say that approval is being sought for $23 million.

If we were to go to page 141 again and we were to look at, for example 1EA1, we take the original Budget of $265,904; we add the Statutory Expenditure of $17,878; and we less what is referred to as the unspent portion $35,445. We see that the revised total for this output is $248,337 which is less than what was originally approved in the Annual Plan and Estimate which is the $265,000+ and the $17,000+. So when you add these two together you are looking at about $290,000.

We then go down, Mr. Speaker, and we take for example item IEA 22 which is Investigation of Crime. We have got the statutory provision of $317,095 and we see where the original approval was $3,521,190 but there seems to be an under-spend of $2,071,924 so the net expenditure is $1,776,000.

Now if we were to stop there, Mr. Speaker, again it would not present a fair position. It would not allow for the right conclusion to be drawn and this is where this type of transparency is very useful because again when we go a bit further up, Mr. Speaker, we see for example under IEA 19 Police Patrolling, the original approval was $566,425, the Statutory Expenditure $45,997, but we see where there is an additional appropriation of $1,799,540.

Now because of the fact that Chief Officers and Chief Financial Officers have got the ability to move funds between outputs, we can see that this section—monies that were placed under investigation of crime—the Chief Officer and Chief Financial Officer together with the Ministry took the view that a better output classification for this, or the bulk of this expenditure, would be under the area of police patrolling. So, this is what is happening.

As we continue to do this, we will find that these variances will become much smaller and less frequent as we progress in future years. However, this was the first budget that was presented on that basis Mr. Speaker, and when you add up all of these (what appear to be savings) they must obviously have exceeded the Supplementary Appropriation Bill. If that had not been the case, we would not have been saying today that there is going to be an under-spend of $3 million on what was budgeted.

So, this information needs to be looked at very carefully, Mr. Speaker, before the wrong conclusion in order to arrive at the right conclusion as to what has been taking place.

Mr. Speaker, what we have here are not just figures that have been taken up and put down willingly. These are figures that are flowing from the Chief Financial Officers within Ministries and Portfolios working together with the Portfolio of Finance and Economics and whenever variations are to be made within the Authority—allowed for in law—these are brought to Executive Council for approval.

Mr. Speaker, the ICT Authority: the Honourable Member has raised a good point, for example: we have got coercive revenue. Coercive revenue, Mr. Speaker, is anything that is authorised in law, for example customs import duty.

Customs import duty, these are fees in law that are payable to the Government. They are coercive. Let us say, Bank licences—but that would not be the case with the Water Authority. The Water Authority provides a service; so the monies that the Water Authority collects are for services rendered. The same with the Health Services Authority and the Port Authority.

Now with the ICT Authority, this is where it is being looked at in order to try and break out the fee. There is an exercise on the way at this time to determine what portion, or what aspect of the fee would relate to services provided as against what is coercive. Take for example, the monies that people are by Cable & Wireless that is quite a substantial sum on an annual basis. Surely that could not be regarded for services rendered so it was felt that because of the fact that the ICT (Information, Communications and Technology) Authority, when it was set up in the first instance the way the Law was drafted, the Law proceeded the finalisation of the Public Management and Finance Law, so there were certain provisions in the ICT Law that revenues derived should flow to the Authority.

However, when we put in place the Public Management and Finance Law, we realise that that could not have remained because had that remained then this could create a distortion to the process. So this is why this distinction has to be made.

Wherever fees are earned for services provided, that is revenue to the Authority. Wherever the Authority collects a fee on behalf of the Government, a fee that is in law has to be paid. It should be quite evident in terms of what these fees are, for example: a Category A Banking Licence which varies between sums of money that are quite substantial. This could not be regarded by the Monetary Authority as fees being collected for services provided.

In this instance this is why the Budget of the Monetary Authority is included as a part of the operating expenditure and these monies are paid over. Whereby, from the Water Authority at the end of the day if there is a surplus and a determination made that a dividend should be paid to the Government, this is how monies are paid over.

The formula is not a standardised one. Each one will have to be varied according to the specific circumstances. However, there is legislation that is now being drafted in order to provide an overall framework for all of the Authorities to operate within constraints that are reasonable and necessary for their economic existence.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled, Supplementary Appropriation January to June 2003 Bill 2003, be given with a Second Reading.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Supplementary Appropriation (January to June 2003) Bill 2003 given a Second Reading.

Motion to Suspend Proceedings

The Speaker: Could I now have a motion for the suspension of proceedings?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, it has been agreed that this Honourable House will rise to await the arrival of his Excellency the Governor to present Instruments of Appointment to the Leader of the Government and the Leader of the Opposition.

The Speaker: The question is that the House do rise to await the arrival of His Excellency the Governor to present Instruments of Appointment to the Leader of the Government and the Leader of the Opposition.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Proceedings are hereby suspended.

Agreed: That the House do rise to await the arrival of His Excellency the Governor to present Instruments of Appointment to the Leader of Government and the Leader of the Opposition.

Proceedings suspended at 12.20 pm

Invitation by the Speaker

The Speaker: I now invite His Excellency the Governor to make his presentation to both the Leader of Government (to be) and the Leader of Opposition (to be) constitutionally formed today. Please be seated.

I should wish to clarify that the Instrument will be dated 27 June 2003 but it will be presented obviously today 30 June 2003. Hence the disparity and the dates on the Instruments.

It is now my great pleasure on this historic occasion to invite His Excellency the Governor to do the said presentation. I would ask both Members to stand.

PRESENTATION OF INSTRUMENTS OF APPOINTMENT OF LEADER OF GOVERNMENT BUSINESS AND LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION

Appointment of (first) Leader of Government Business

His Excellency Mr. Bruce H. Dinwiddy: In exercise of the Powers conferred upon me by Sub-section 1 of Section 5A of the Cayman Islands Constitution Orders 1972-2003 and of all other Powers in that regard enabling, I Bruce H. Dinwiddy, CMG, Governor of the Cayman Islands, do hereby by this Instrument given under my hand and the public seal, appoint you, the Hon. W. McKeever Bush, OBE, JP, to be the Leader of Government Business.

The Speaker: I now invite the Honourable McKeever Bush to approach the Clerk's dais.

Appointment of (first) Leader of Opposition

His Excellency Mr. Bruce H. Dinwiddy: To the Honourable Darwin Kurt Tibbetts, JP, Greetings. In exercise of the powers conferred upon me by Sub-section 1 of Section 24A of the Cayman Islands Constitution Orders 1972-2003 and of all other powers in that regard enabling, I, Bruce H. Dinwiddy, CMG, Governor of the Cayman Islands, do hereby by this instrument given under my hand and the public seal appoint you, the Honourable Darwin Kurt Tibbetts, JP, to be the Leader of the Opposition.

The Speaker: I now invite the Honourable Mr. Kurt Tibbetts to approach the Clerk's dais.

Please be seated. This being the most historic occasion, I will recognise both Leaders. Firstly, the Leader of Government, secondly, the Leader of Opposition should they wish to make brief remarks.

The Leader of Government.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. Today is an auspicious day and it is a profound day in the course of our history. I hasten to say it is a day that should have taken place in 1993-1994 for that was the way I foresaw our constitutional development.

Madam Speaker, Your Excellency, and Honourable Members, we live in a great little country! We have made mistakes in the past; we have had shortcomings; we will probably make mistakes in the future and fall short of our own best hopes. However, I can say here like the old Jamaican festival song, "there is no better place than yard". I can rephrase that for you, Your Excellency: There is no better place than the Cayman Islands to live. You can call me selfish, you can call me conservative or reactionary, or perhaps use any other harsh adjective you see fit to apply but I was born a Caymanian. A Caymanian! I have remained here all my life; I can never be anything else but Caymanian.

I must at all times think of these Islands first in any arrangement. I have never had but one oath of allegiance: that should not, nor will I ever divide it, except, Your Excellency, that I do have a party (United Democratic Party) of which I have been elected as the leader. I bear that in my mind at all times but first comes the interest of the Cayman Islands.

My party (UDP) is one that has been formed and has been voted into force constitutionally by all our members. I am proud of it because we have come a long way in this country. I do believe that the majority of people are accepting the way forward—constitutional development as well as party politics development.

Winston Churchill said that the destiny of man is not measured by material computation. When great forces are on the move in the world, we learn we are spirits not animals. He said that there is something going on in time and space and beyond time and space which, whether we like it or not, spells duty. We do have a duty. We have a rendezvous with destiny, I believe. We will preserve for our children and their children, and their children, and theirs, these little Islands or we will sentence our posterity to take the last step into a thousand years of darkness. We will keep in mind that our people have faith in us; they have faith that we have the ability and the dignity and the right to make our own decisions and determine our own destiny in their best interest.

Your Excellency, and Madam Speaker, in the future days which we seek to make secure, we look forward to a world founded upon at least three essential human freedoms. The first is freedom of speech and expression—everywhere in the world—but we stand here in this House, in these Islands and we want our administrators afar off to understand that our wishes in this House, at this time, in these Islands, should stand fast and hold fast with them.

Secondly, the freedom of every person to worship God in his own way; everywhere in the world; and in these Islands; at this time.

Thirdly, freedom from want, which, when translated into world terms and closer to our terms, means economic understandings which will secure to every person a healthy, peace time life. That is no vision of a distant millennium; it is a definite basis for a kind of world attainable in our own time and in our own generation.

Sir, I hope that these words are written on your heart as they are written on mine. I would ask that these words here be imparted to those administrators afar off.

I thank you, Sir, for your kindness and likewise the Honourable Speaker of this Honourable Legislative Assembly, my colleagues, elected and non-elected for we are all part of one thing and that is the best interest of these our Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader. I will now recognise the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Your Excellency, my colleagues in the Legislative Assembly, and the wider listening audience, while I am very proud to accept this appointment, from the onset I wish to state that I accept it with great humility. I have always deemed it a sacred privilege to be a representative of the people of this country regardless of where I find myself—whether in Government or in Opposition. Certainly one has to look at that privilege as something that is sacred. I accept that appointment, Your Excellency, with humility, as I said.

Certainly, as the Honourable Leader of Government Business referred to his Party, I must say that I am very grateful for the confidence that has been proposed in me by my colleagues in the Opposition and also, to this point, the members of the People's Progressive Movement.

The country, as we know, has experienced some rapid changes in our political history. Although not every one of our citizens is quite yet comfortable with the move forward, I believe that as we move forward the people in the country must be circumspect; they must be able to come together in order to advance.

What is of absolute importance to me and to the group that I represent is to ensure that, while we recognise this need to move forward, certainly and absolutely most importantly, we must ensure that the people are part of that process and that they have knowledge of it. We must ensure that they understand what the options are that we may have. As representatives, in putting forward our positions, either through you, Your Excellency, to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, or to any other external agency, we need to ensure that those positions reflect the wishes and aspirations of the majority of the people of this country.

We have here the Government and the Opposition, and while there will always be the usual profiles the Opposition's role here, as I see it, must reflect a level of responsibility. While we are the checks and balances for the Government, so to speak, at the same time we do recognise that we must be fair in our presentations. We must accept our inherent responsibility of ensuring that any positions that we put forward are informed and will help to allow the people of this country not only to be part of the process, more so than ever before, but also that they understand the country's affairs.

Madam Speaker, I am grateful for your facilitating this affair. I must admit that while I had only recent knowledge that this was going to happen, I was not really shocked, I do not think anyone knew about this for very long. This is a very, very important occasion in the history of this country. Notwithstanding, the fact that it clearly defines the lines of Government and Opposition at this point in time, I am confident that as we move forward the Members of this Legislative Assembly have the ability and the commitment to live out their roles and certainly ensure that we bring about a better result from having been a part of the process.

I wish to thank you again, Sir, and to give the Opposition's commitment to fulfil its role to the best of our ability and to be responsible in our actions regardless of whether we are in agreement with you, the Government, or both, or not.

Some Honourable Members: Hear, hear!

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader of the Opposition. Before calling for the Motion of the adjournment, I will recognise His Excellency the Governor who wishes to address the House at this time.

His Excellency the Governor: Thank you, Madam Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly. I would just like to say to the Honourable Leader of Government Business and the Leader of the Opposition, how much I appreciate their two statements. I have, of course, noted them carefully. I thank you all for attending this historic occasion today. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, Your Excellency.

For the record, the Chair would also wish to clarify that notice was short, but so be it. I was informed at 10 o'clock this morning and it was no direct intention of His Excellency the Governor, but we thought it was necessary to expedite such an important occasion. We trust that as the Hansard typists records it, that all and sundry would take an opportunity to share this record with members of their constituencies, in particular our schools as they embark on social education within our country. I believe that this will be a day that will long be remembered in the journey towards a more successful Cayman Islands.

I thank you. It is my pleasure to recognise the formalised Leader of the Government for the suspension for the luncheon break. I have also given permission in advance to any member of the press who may wish to capture this occasion with His Excellency or with the two new constitutional Leaders or any other Members of Parliament, as the press would so desire.

Honourable Leader of Government—

[Pause]

The Speaker: If it is convenient we will now suspend for the luncheon break until 2.30 pm.

Presentation concluded at 1 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.05 pm

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Budget 2003 (Half) Supplementary Annual Plan and Estimates for the Government of the Cayman Islands for the Six Month Financial Year ending 20 June 2003

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The question being put on the Second Reading of the Supplementary Appropriation (January to June 2003) Bill 2004, the House will now go into Committee.

The question is that the proceedings of the House will remain in a suspended state until the conclusion of the Finance Committee.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 3.06 pm the House stood in a suspended state until the conclusion of Finance Committee.

MONDAY
30 JUNE 2003
6.50 PM
Twelfth Sitting

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

I invite the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture to grace us with Prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Roy Bodden: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings resumed at 6.52 pm

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, the First and Second Official Members, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member from the district of George Town.

My colleague and I wish to extend apologies to the Spott Bay Primary School whose graduation we will not be able to attend tonight because of our official commitments.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

REPORT ON BILL

The Supplementary Appropriation (January to June 2003) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to report that the Standing Finance Committee met to consider the Supplementary Appropriation (January to June 2003) Bill 2003 and approved the Bill subject to the following amendments—

1. By deleting item NGS 19 – Community Development and Beautification Programmes in the sum of $1,336;
2. By deleting item NGS 35 – Central George Town Community Programmes in the sum of CI$264,438;
3. By deleting item NGS 36 – Sports Ambassador Programme in the sum of $7,263; and
4. By deleting item NGS 37 – Refugee Relief Services in the sum of CI$22,883.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly reported and is set down for Third Reading.

The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to move Standing Orders 47 . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Member, may I interject?

On perusing the Order Paper it has come to my attention that this was a scrivener's error and that we are into a new Sitting albeit the same day. Therefore, it is not necessary to suspend Standing Order 47.

The Third Reading, Madam Clerk.

THIRD READING

The Supplementary Appropriation (January to June 2003) Bill, 2003

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to move that the Supplementary Appropriation (January to June 2003) Bill, 2003, be given a third reading and passed.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: Thank you. Before putting the question I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) seeing that the hour of interruption has passed, to allow this business to continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order to take business after the hour.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be hereby suspended to allow business to continue beyond the hour of interruption.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow business to continue beyond 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: I will now put the question that a Bill shortly entitled The Supplementary Appropriation (January to June 2003) Bill, 2003, be given a third reading and passed.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Supplementary Appropriation (January to June 2003) Bill, 2003, given a third reading and passed.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: I recognise the Leader of Government for the adjournment motion.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, before I move the adjournment allow me to say that the process that we went through today was one of supplementary expenditure and we had to go into Finance Committee for that.

The 2003 Half Year Budget for the six-month period that ends today was passed in November 2002. We were today in Finance Committee to seek approval for supplementary expenditures on certain outputs. This is what the Government is obliged to do. Counter-balancing that we have had under-spending on certain other outputs, when we put all the outputs together the savings on outputs are greater than the supplementaries being requested today.

The overall effect is that even after the supplementary requests are taken into account, the expenditures for the six-month period to the 30 June 2003 will be less than the original budget expenditure that was passed last November. Madam Speaker, I thought it appropriate to put that on record. I thank you very much.

I now move the adjournment of this Honourable House for a date to be fixed.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House be adjourned for a date to be fixed.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 7 pm the House stood adjourned until a date to be fixed.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
16 JULY 2003
10.44 AM

Thirteenth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable First Official Member to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. James M. Ryan: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

*Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.47am

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS

Oath of Allegiance

By Mr. Samuel W. Bulgin, Esq.

The Speaker: Please stand.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I, Samuel Washington Bulgin, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law so help me God.

The Speaker: On behalf of this Honourable House I wish to welcome and congratulate the newly appointed Attorney General in and for the Cayman Islands. I trust you would have a most uneventful yet happy and successful three-year tenure.

Please be seated.

Honourable Members, seeing that this is a most historic and long-awaited day I would like, at this time, to invite the Deputy Leader and the Leader of Opposition to say brief remarks by way of congratulations to the Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I believe that the appointment of the Honourable Samuel Washington Bulgin is an indication that these Islands have matured beyond expectation.

For many years we have been wishing to have our own Attorney General. I say our own Attorney General because not only is Sam married to a Caymanian but he is a Caymanian in his own right. It gives me much pleasure this morning to be able to welcome him not only as Attorney General but indeed welcome him into the Caymanian family.

I know that Mr. Bulgin will do a sterling job as he has done in the past. It has indeed been a pleasure to work with him during his acting capacity and even prior to that while he served as Solicitor General.

I do believe that this country will be well served by having Mr. Bulgin as our legal advisor in the Cabinet of the Cayman Islands. Not only will he be available for advice in the Cabinet but, as we know, the Honourable Samuel Bulgin is easily available to most of us when we need him for legal or other advice. I believe I share the sentiments of the other Members, my colleagues in Cabinet, when I say that these Islands are indeed fortunate to have someone of the calibre of Mr. Samuel Washington Bulgin, the Honourable Attorney General, to serve us in the capacity of Legal Advisor.

Mr. Bulgin, we welcome you into the family of the Cabinet and, indeed, in this Honourable House and we feel sure that our trust in you will in no way be misplaced.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Deputy Leader. The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. On behalf of the parliamentary Opposition I would like to extend congratulations to our new Honourable Second Official Member.

On a personal note, I have had the privilege and pleasure of working with our new Attorney General for the past ten years, since his arrival here, in various capacities. I have always found the goodly gentleman to be very affable but very studious and he has always displayed an ability to have on hand, at any given time, whatever knowledge is required.

I wish to say, like the Deputy Leader of Government Business, it certainly is a proud moment for us to be able to say that our Honourable Second Official Member, the Attorney General, is a Caymanian Attorney General and I think that bodes well for the future. I also believe that it is fair comment to say that the holder of this post, Mr Bulgin, as he has done in the past, will certainly contribute much to the development of these Islands as principal legal advisor to the Government.

I would like to say to him here and now that while there is no allocation for extra salary the Opposition would expect the same courtesies extended whenever we need so.

Again, Madam Speaker, we wish to congratulate Mr. Bulgin and look forward to very, very fruitful working relationships with him in this Honourable Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader of Opposition. Madam Clerk.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received notice of apologies for the late arrival of the Honourable Leader of Government Business, the absence for the Minister of Community Services, the Minister of Education, the Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and Elected Member for East End. That concludes the list of apologies.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

Cayman Islands Monetary Authority 2002 Annual Report

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority 2002 Annual Report.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. During the year 2002 the Monetary Authority continues to contribute the enhancement of the financial industry and play a role in the international fight against money laundering and terrorism.

In February the Cayman Islands underwent a second round of review of its anti-money laundering framework conducted by the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force (CFATF). The resulting report concluded that the commitment and resolve of the Cayman Islands Government to preserve the reputation of the jurisdiction and safeguard the financial services sector was unmistakable. The report also noted that the institutional framework appeared robust and extensive and that the level of private sector collaboration and awareness on money laundering issues was very high. These observations are commendable and demonstrate the commitment of the Cayman Islands Government and its people to a regulatory regime that meets international standards as long as it is cost effective and relevant.

Throughout the year the Monetary Authority maintained its presence on the global stage through attendance and participation in leading international events and working parties. The Monetary Authority was represented at the Offshore Group of Banking Supervisors (OGBS) the working group on cross-border banking, the Offshore Group of Insurance Supervisors (OGIS), the recently formed working group on trust and company services providers, the CFATF and the overseas territories regulators. Participation in such groups is instrumental in ensuring that not only do the Cayman Islands keep abreast of the current offshore international developments but that they continue to play an active role in the international regulatory developments.

A significant focus of the Monetary Authority was the preparation for operational independence, which became effective on 10 March 2003. Operational independence places decision-making into the hands of the board of directors of the Monetary Authority. It is anticipated that these changes will help increase the efficiency of the licensing process and increase the responsiveness of the Monetary Authority to the needs of the financial services industry. The regulatory mandate of the Monetary Authority has been widened to include securities investment business following the introduction of two orders under the Securities Investment Business Law. Responsibility will rest with the investment division.

During the year the Monetary Authority continued in its partnership with the industry most notably through the continuation of the policy project that commenced in 2001. The consultation process was extensive and resulted in a plethora of guidelines and policies being issued. Five of the twenty-six policy guidelines issued to the industry for review were formally approved and posted on the Monetary Authority's website.

Moving on, the financial statements included in the report were audited by the Auditor General in accordance with the provisions of sections 35(2) of the Monetary Authority Law (2001 Revision) and section 45(1) of the Public Finance and Audit Law (1997 Revision). The annual financial statements of the Authority as at 31 December 2002 are shown on pages 46 to 57 of the annual report. Among the highlights are total assets of $63 million. This includes $67.2 million of currency reserves representing investment and current call and fixed deposits. Total liabilities of $53.1 million include $51.6 million of demand liabilities for currency in circulation that are fully secured by the currency reserve assets as required by section 28 of the Monetary Authority Law (2001 Revision).

Total reserves and capital are now $15.2 million and the general reserve is now maintained at 15 per cent of demand liabilities as required by sections six and eight of the Monetary Authority Law. The general reserve requirement increased by $40,000. Net income for the year was $2.1 million. With respect to movements in statutory reserves the board approved a transfer of $80,000 to the currency issue reserve to provide for future currency reprints. Approval was also given for the transfer of $530,000 to the paid-up capital account. After satisfying these statutory requirements the Authority was still able to exceed its budgetary target by transferring $1.3 million to the general revenue of the Cayman Islands Government.

As part of the independent process, Madam Speaker, I stepped down as chairman of the board of the Monetary Authority and I would like to take this opportunity to welcome my successor, Mr. Michael Austin, who has been a member of the board since the Authority's inception in 1997.

In addition, I would like to extend a warm welcome to new board members, Mr. Linburgh Martin, Dr. Richard Rahn, Mr. Timothy Ridley, Ms. Leticia Solomon, Mr. Don Seymour, Senator James Kellehar, Sir Alan Traill and Dr. Warren Coats. I would also like to congratulate Mrs. Cindy Scotland, general manager and head of currency operations at the Monetary Authority on her appointment to the position of managing director.

I would also like to congratulate the staff of the Monetary Authority for the excellent work that they have been performing since its inception. Sincere thanks is given to outgoing board members namely, Mrs. Jennifer Dilbert, who also served as interim managing director from January to June, Mr. Arthur Hunter, Mr. Peter Tomkins, and long-serving director Mr. Richard Chalmers who has served on the board since 1997.

With the addition of the five new appointees in 2003, the board is now at its full complement and comprised of a wealth of both national and international experience. I would also like to thank all the staff of the Monetary Authority once again for their commitment and hard work over the past years and wish the Monetary Authority success in future endeavours. Thank you, Madam Speaker

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member.

Environmental and Cancer Study (Deferred)

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and District Administration.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. With the permission of the House I would like to defer the laying of this study today and have it on tomorrow's Order Paper.

The Speaker: The question is that the paper entitled Environmental and Cancer Study be deferred and placed on the Order Paper for tomorrow.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Environment and Cancer Study deferred for tabling until the next Sitting.

The Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and District Administration.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Health Insurance Law 1997, the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak on the said paper?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I would defer speaking at this time to the point when I move the Motion that relates to it. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

Suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) and (8)

The Speaker: I will call upon the Leader of Government to move Standing Order 23(7) and (8) to allow Question Time to begin and continue beyond the hour of 11am.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) in order that Question Time may continue beyond 11am.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be duly suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11am.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11am.

The Speaker: I recognise the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Question No. 42 Deferred 30 June 2003

No. 42: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology what is Government's policy with respect to the hiring of vehicles for the use of Government departments or employees, and what amount has Government paid for hire of vehicles since 1st November 2001?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, the amount spent by the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services on car hire between 1st November 2001 and 15th January 2002 was $45,356.15.

Although the breakdown is not in the answer I would like to provide this to the Honourable Member and the Honourable House, and is as follows:

Health Services	$26,354.23
Public Works Department	$17,939.17
Finance Department	$664.87
Immigration Department	$335.08
Social Services Department	$62.80

On the question of the Government's policy, this service was decentralised on the 15th January 2002. From that time, any decisions taken or funds spent on vehicle hire are handled by the individual departments concerned.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The question asked what amount has Government paid for the hire of vehicles since 1st November 2001. I am not concerned about whether the service has been decentralised or which department has made what decision. The question is aimed at determining what the total cost of the Cayman Islands Government of hiring of vehicles since November 2001 is, and I would be grateful if the Honourable Minister could provide a complete answer.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Works.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, it seems there is no way of satisfying that Member. I thought I was being useful by giving him the additional information. He asked what Government's policy with respect to the hiring of vehicles for the use of government departments or employees is.

In the second part of his question he asked what amount has Government paid for hire of vehicles since 1st November 2001?

There were two parts to the question and I gave him the answer. I said, "Madam Speaker, the amount spent by the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services on car hire between 1st November 2001 and 15th January 2002 was CI$ 45,356.15".

I went on to give him a breakdown—even though it was not in the answer—which says, "On the question of the Government's policy, this service was decentralised on the 15th January 2002. From that time, any decisions taken or funds spent on vehicle hire are handled by the individual departments concerned".

I am not sure how I can answer his question anymore fully.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I am happy with the response in so far as it goes, however the question addresses the period from 1st November 2001 until the present. There is a year and six months gap between the 15 January 2002 and today. Therefore, it is that 18-month period that I am asking the Honourable Minister to provide an answer for and he has not done so despite all of his ruminating.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Works.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I am not going to comment on the frivolous comments by the Second Elected Member for George Town because I wish for this Meeting to be conducted in a proper manner. I have no more information to give the Member. The service was decentralised. If he understands what that means; each department is responsible now for its own spending for vehicles and the various Ministers would therefore be responsible for those various departments. I do not have that responsibility. Therefore, I am unable to give him the answer since decentralisation has taken place.

The Speaker: Are there any further Supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I guess I will have to accept that the Government is unable to say what the cost of hiring vehicles has been over that period.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, could you phrase that into a question?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Yes, Madam Speaker. That was an observation so I will move on to the question. The first part of the question seeks to determine what Government's policy with respect to the hiring of vehicles is.

I note that the Honourable Minister has said in his substantive response that the service has been decentralised however he has not addressed the fundamental point of the question, which is: What is Government's policy regarding the hiring of vehicles? Is it Government policy to hire vehicles rather than purchase new ones or additional ones when it is determined that the use of these vehicles is required on a regular and consistent basis? Or, is it Government policy now to reduce the number of vehicles which it actually owns and to resort to hiring vehicles to replace or to fill this need?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Works.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, if I wanted to be frivolous I would ask the Member to repeat that because it is a convoluted question. His substantive question to me is dealing with hiring of vehicles. Now he is talking about purchasing.

I explained to that Honourable Member that as of the 15 January 2002 this service has been decentralised. What that means is that the policy of Government has been changed from the central hiring of vehicles through the Vehicle and Equipment Services Department to where each individual department is now responsible for that service. It is that individual department that has to provide the answer.

Under the present output system of Government all departments are going to be responsible for their own expenditures and this will not be controlled from a central point. Thus, the purpose of the answer when I said this service was decentralised and that decentralisation was among the various departments using or needing the service. That Honourable Member cannot reasonably expect that I would have the information for every department of Government for which I do not have responsibility. I can only give him the answer for those departments that fall under my Ministry since this service has been decentralised.

If he wants to get that future information he can pose that as a substantive question or if he wishes for me to give him that in writing I will be prepared to give him what occurs within my Ministry. He would then have to ask the question to other Ministers to find out what occurs within their Ministries. That was the whole purpose of the decentralisation. I am not trying to not give him full information; I am giving him all the information, Madam Speaker, that I have available.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for that response but again it has not addressed my question. The Minister is a Member of Cabinet and I would presume that he would be aware of what policy is set in Cabinet. I am seeking to determine what Government policy is with respect to the hiring of vehicles at a broad and Cabinet level. In other words, is it or is it not Government policy now to reduce the number of vehicles in fleet and resort to hiring? I do not believe I could be clearer than that.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town; as I understand it the question you have posed does not have an inherent problem of clarity but one of jurisprudence and accountability.

In light of the fact of the changes within the finance of Government I cannot say that this question could relate to the Minister you are now directing that question to, for a number of reasons. He is not the Leader of Government and cannot answer. Therefore, you would have to put that in a substantive question either to the Financial Secretary who is responsible for the finances or the Leader who is responsible for policies.

Are there any further Supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of Opposition

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, thank you. I have listened carefully to my colleague and I have listened carefully to the Minister of Works. I have listened carefully to you and I crave your indulgence, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Is it a question or is it a comment on my ruling?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It is going to be a question, Madam Speaker. Have no fear.

The Speaker: I do have a fear, Honourable Leader.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is just a way of speaking. Regardless of where policy emanates and who is answerable to the policy, the policy must trickle down. Even if the Minister is not directly responsible for that policy, in asking the Minister what Government policy is, obviously the line that the answer has taken would have to reflect on what the policy is whichever department it is. If the policy has been with regard to decentralisation and each individual department being responsible for its own hiring of vehicles they still have to live within a policy that affects the entire central Government.

Therefore, the question is asking what is Government policy regarding the hiring of vehicles. This means that any department or Ministry should be able to answer that question because it should be common throughout. That is the question, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: With the greatest respect, Honourable Leader of Opposition, what you just made was a statement unless I am to understand that the last few words were intended to be a question.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Certainly, Madam Speaker. I said that there must be a policy and it must be able to be answered. Since there has to be a policy for Government with regards to hiring, and it has to affect every Ministry and Department, if you would like me to be very clear my question then is: What is that policy with regard to the hiring of vehicles? That is what the question is.

If I may—because I do not think there is need for argument—I think the answer simply deals with what actually goes on and how it works; instead of one central body hiring vehicles for all departments now, the departments become responsible for their own hiring. However, the question in itself is not seeking as to how it works but what the actual policy with regards to vehicles is.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Works.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, with due respect to the Leader of Opposition, and I do have respect for him, I am not sure that he clarified much more than what the Second Elected Member was trying to ask. The answer I gave is a full answer, a proper answer and it said that this service was decentralised. Now, if those two Honourable Members understand the workings of Cabinet, which I know one does, they would know that each Minister is responsible for a number of departments. It is impossible for with this size of the service for any one Minister, even the Leader of Government Business, to have all the details at all times of the various departments. This is why you have various Ministers and that is why the answer is that this service was decentralised.

I believe it would be unproductive for me to go further on this line; I do not have further information; I have honestly given all the information I can give; I do not know the motive for pursuing this matter although I have done as much as I can in providing the answer.

This service was decentralised on 15 January 2002. The Auditor General's Report will give the details in due course. This was done in 2002. The Auditor General's Report at the end of 2002 will show all of the details. There is no hidden agenda, no information is being held back from the Opposition, it is a very transparent system and it should be understood by all. I am amazed that it does not seem to be understood.

The Speaker: I will allow one more supplementary. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, may I then ask the Honourable Minister what the policy is with respect to the hiring of vehicles in relation to his discreet Ministry?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Works.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, the policy for hiring of vehicles is as it has been with the Vehicles and Equipment Services. It is the same policy but the difference is that each Ministry is now responsible for the various departments.

A case in point is where the policy before looked after every Ministry in Government. During the period from 1 November 2001 to 15 January 2002, the only department within that $45,365.15 group, that is, within my Ministry was the Public Works Department, which spent $17,939.17.

These details will also be broken down in the Auditor General's Report, I am sure, or Members will be able to get further details during the Public Accounts Committee, if they wish. Madam Speaker, this is the position and I do not see why this is creating such a furor.

I believe it is very clear and I have no further comments to make on that at this time.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

Question No. 49

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

No. 49: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics to give a report on the surplus/deficit position at 31 December 2002.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The General Revenue Fund's position as at 31 December 2002 was as follows:

The accumulated deficit as at 31 December 2002 was $227,369 and a surplus of $735,549 on the capital development fund.

The supporting details on the General Revenue Fund are as follows:

	CI$ JAN-DEC 2002

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, please do not treat this as a supplementary. With the correction that the Honourable Third Official Member just made, if he goes to page 1 of his substantive answer, at the bottom, should that also be 2002 or should it remain as 2001?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, it should be 2002.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker, could the Honourable Third Official Member state if in all of these figures given with regard to the surplus deficit position whether there was any consideration during the 2002 year for payments to the past service liability section of the Public Service Pension Fund, and if so, how much it was.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I do not have that information at hand, however this would be a part of the payments under statutory expenditure that have been made. My apology, Madam Speaker, the amount paid out for past services liability during the course of the year was $10.2 million.

The Speaker: Are there any further Supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker, I trust the Honourable Third Official Member would be able to answer this. Perhaps this is going outside the ambit of the question however if he can answer it I would appreciate it. This past service liability, if my understanding is correct, there is an actuarial review that is supposedly done every three years, I believe. I see the Honourable Member nodding his head in the affirmative. Assuming that is correct, can the Member state when last was this review done and in general terms, in synopsis, what were the recommendations of that last review?

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Opposition, could you please repeat that question again?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I really do not wish to be rude, however. the Honourable Member seems like he quite understands it and he has the information available and he seems quite willing. I said earlier I know it was outside the ambit, I was only asking if he could answer. I know you are always courteous once the Members are willing to answer the questions.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Opposition, there is no doubt why you are the Leader of Opposition. Suffice to say that there is no necessity now for you to repeat the question in that you have confirmed that it was outside the ambit of the substantive question. That was the justification for me, out of abundance of caution, asking you to repeat it. As you are more amply aware there are two stages to a question; one stage being that the Chair approves it in accordance to existing standing orders and the second stage (if the first stage is passed) is that the Member responsible answers. Unfortunately, you have not passed the first stage therefore it goes to another supplementary.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I can assure you that I do not purposely try to step aside without going through the first stage to the second stage. Nevertheless, I am sure I can get the answer from the Member outside of this forum as he seems quite willing to give it.

In the substantive answer the Member referred to the transfer from other funds into the capital development fund. I think he broke down $4,145,000 coming from three different funds. The next section he referred to was the Loan Proceeds. Could the Member give a breakdown of the $10,107,444 with the loan proceeds? Was that all loans approved during the year 2002 or was some of that carried forward loans?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, if you will just allow me a short pause for me to get the information from the Accountant General if she has it available.

The Speaker: Certainly.

[Pause]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I would ask if the Honourable Member could go on to another supplementary. The Accountant General will be calling through to the Treasury Department to get the information.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition, is it your preference based on what he said or would you wish to have it a later time in writing?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, to be very honest with you I will be satisfied whenever the Member gets the answer and he tells it to me. In order not to waste the time of the House, I personally do not have any more Supplementaries unless some of my colleagues or back bench Members on the other side do.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. This question is one that certainly perks my interest and it asks for the surplus and deficit position as at 31 December 2002. When looking at the surplus deficit position we would think of the operating surplus therefore I ask the Third Official Member if he could say, where he has in his answer the surplus for 2002, if that is the actual operating surplus achieved?

The Speaker: Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, at various stages in the answer the surplus positions have been pointed out; the four transfers and at the end of the year the $227,369 is not a surplus but it is an accumulated deficit on the general revenue fund. That would be actual deficit position at the end of the year. On the capital development fund $735,549 would be actual surplus position.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I do not think the Third Official Member followed my question. At the beginning of the answer it speaks about the general revenue fund and in the middle there is a bold line which says, "surplus for 2002". I take it that that is the operating surplus for the year and after that is a reconciliation of the actual operating surplus to reconcile all the uses of that money to fund the general revenue fund.

The Speaker: Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Madam Speaker, the Honourable Member is right. The operating surplus is $3,448,890 however as I mentioned there were certain payouts against that surplus position; it should be surplus for 2002 before transfers.

The transfers have been set out giving us a surplus position for the year after transfers of $858,244. However, as the Honourable Member will recognise, we have to take into account the surplus or deficit position for the immediate preceding year; the balance brought forward was a deficit of $1,085,613 giving a net deficit at the end of the year of $227,369. However, the surplus for the year, after transfers to various funds, was $858,244.

The Speaker: If there are no further Supplementaries we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 50

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

No. 50: Mr. Rolston M. Anglin asked the Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration if any persons over the past ten years have been granted Legal Aid for appeal to the Privy Council and, if yes –

- (a) what are their names;
- (b) what crime were they convicted of; and
- (c) what is their nationality.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, research carried out by the Legal Department and the Judicial Department has only uncovered two criminal appeals to the Privy Council in the last ten years; both appeals were successful.

1. One appeal was by a convicted defendant, Barry Victor Randall.
  - (a) He is a Caymanian/British National
  - (b) The offences were theft and obtaining money by misrepresenting the identity of the company shareholders.
  - (c) He did not receive legal aid, although the Crown through the Attorney General's office made a contribution to his costs.
2. The other appeal was by the Crown against Carlyle Rudyard Roberts.
  - (a) In that case, the respondent Roberts was a Jamaican national.
  - (b) He was convicted for possession of cocaine with intent to supply.
  - (c) He did not apply for legal aid. However, the Attorney General was asked to assist with his legal costs of the appeal. The Attorney General contributed £7,500 to his costs.

However, when the Crown won the Appeal the Privy Council awarded cost against Mr. Roberts. He was ordered to pay to the Crown the sum of £27,500. He left the Cayman Islands before the court order was made and therefore has not paid this sum.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: While an attempt is made to photocopy page 2, are there any supplementaries? Are there any supplementaries relating to page 1 or the oral part of page 2, so that the House can continue its business while page 2 is being photocopied for the perusal of Members?

Do I take it that there are no Supplementaries? Silence is consent.

Madam Clerk, next question.

Question No. 51

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

No. 51: Mr. Rolston M. Anglin asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration if any persons over the past ten years have been denied Legal Aid for appeal to the Privy Council and if yes –

- (a) what are their names;
- (b) what crime were they convicted of; and
- (c) what is their nationality.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, the Legal Aid Law does not expressly allow for the Grant of Legal Aid to persons wishing to appeal to the Privy Council from a Criminal conviction.

Persons wishing to Appeal in a criminal case to Her Majesty's Privy Council have to petition the Privy Council in London directly. The local courts have no jurisdiction to entertain such an application. It follows therefore that the local courts cannot entertain an application for Legal Aid in such matters.

The Speaker: Second Official Member, I think your second page is attached to this answer so that might have rectified the position.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Sorry about that, Madam Speaker.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? If there are no supplementaries we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 52

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

No. 52: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs what priority is being given to providing a new Police Station and lock-up in West Bay?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, the West Bay Police Station houses the 22 operational staff and is also the district headquarters and lock-up.

The lock-up facilities are poorly designed and in relatively poor condition and the working conditions for staff are inadequate.

The large population of West Bay would be better served by a new facility. However, currently there are no firm plans to provide a new police station and lock-up in West Bay because of the priority given to other capital projects, coupled with a limited capital expenditure budget.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Honourable Member has stated what I think is common knowledge that the lock-up facility is substandard.

I wonder if the Honourable Member can say whether that lock-up in its current condition meets, or is it going to meet the standards required (as set out in the draft Bill of Rights which will come into effect when we get our new Constitution) to ensure that there is not an infringement of basic human rights and care of prisoners.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. When this country gets a Bill of Rights it is unlikely that the present facility will meet the standards. However, I do not think the West Bay Police Station is going to be alone in that. I suspect there will be other facilities that will have to be looked at. The Government is very cognisant of the fact that the facility is, perhaps, inadequate. There have been preliminary discussions and we hope that in time we will see the problem rectified. Certainly, we will look at improving the conditions in the present facility while thought is being given to what will be done in the future.

The Speaker: Are there any further Supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Member can say how many prisoners are capable of being housed in their facility at West Bay presently and whether or not that carrying capacity is being overreached on a regular basis.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The facility in West Bay has a capacity for holding ten prisoners. When the facility reaches capacity any prisoners over that number are transferred to George Town to the Central Police station lock-up.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Member can indicate what sort of sanitary facilities are provided for the use of prisoners within the lock-up, in particular, whether he regards them as sanitary in the first place and adequate for the ten prisoners.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

[Pause]

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I note that the Honourable Member asking the question wanted to know if in my opinion the sanitary facilities are adequate. I do not know if I am in a position to offer an opinion on it but my understanding is that they are sanitary. For the record, I would like to clarify something that I said earlier. The Government has been keen to ensure that the conditions at the lock-ups, while they may not always be adequate, are not in breach of a person's civil liberties.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, this is not a supplementary. I do not think the Honourable Member got the entire question. I asked him whether they were adequate for the ten as well. I accept that he does not want to express an opinion but I am asking him as a matter of fact whether they are adequate for the ten prisoners.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, my understanding is that the sanitary facilities are adequate for the ten prisoners.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I think it was in 2001 that this lock-up facility in the district of West Bay was condemned by the UK's Inspector of Prisons. I do not remember exactly who the person was, however, I wonder if the Honourable First Official Member could say if that facility has been upgraded since then and what the upgrades have been.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. What was stated in 2001, if my memory serves me right, is that it was recommended the juveniles not be held in the West Bay lock-up. It was not that the lock-up facilities were condemned for general use.

The Speaker: One minute, Member for North Side.

Honourable First Official Member, now that the responsibility has changed, are lock-ups still considered a part of your responsibility, or has that section been transferred to the Honourable Minister of Community Services under Prisons?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, it is a bit of a grey area and since it is a police station I am prepared to attempt to answer questions, while the Honourable Minister responsible for Prisons does deal with juveniles and the lock-up facilities.

The Speaker: Member for North Side, please continue.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. If my memory serves me correctly I think the entire facility was condemned but we are not going to argue over that here this morning.

[Inaudible interjections]

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: [Addressing an honourable Member] I am not speaking to you, okay? So, will you shut up until it is your time to answer a question?

The Speaker: Order!

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: My next supplementary is directed to the Honourable First Official Member. Are you in a position to say if juveniles are still being held at that facility?

The Speaker: Honourable First Official Member.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order!

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The matter of juveniles is a matter dealt with by my elected colleague and a different arrangement is made. For the record, juveniles are no longer held in the West Bay lock-up.

The Speaker: Are there any further Supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 53

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

No. 53: Mr. Rolston M. Anglin asked the Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and District Administration if any chemical substances, banned for use in the United Kingdom, United States of America or Canada are allowed for use in the Cayman Islands (e.g. agricultural, pest control chemicals). If yes, what are they and why are they allowed for use in the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and District Administration.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker "Banned Chemical," means a chemical all uses of which, within one or more categories, have been prohibited by regulatory action, in order to protect human health or the environment.

The Department of Agriculture can only respond to the question in terms of chemicals that are categorised as pesticides.

As a result of a Pesticide Usage survey conducted in December 2000, the Department became aware of four pesticides in the Cayman Islands that occur on Banned Lists, published by certain countries. These are as follows:

1. Benzene hexachloride (BHC), an insecticide, with the Trade Name: Screw worm & Ear tick killer.

2. Bromoxynil butyrate, a herbicide, with the Trade Names: Tritox - Groundclear, Total Vegetation
These are banned in the United States.

3. Dicofol, an acaricide, (a pesticide used to kill mites) Trade Name: Kelthane

4. Quintozene, a fungicide, (used to treat fungal diseases in plants) Trade Name: Same as the active ingredient

These are banned in the United Kingdom and European Union.

None of the pesticides found in the Cayman Islands occur on the Canadian Prohibited list ("Level I" in Canadian terms).

Benzene hexachloride: One aerosol can of the product containing Benzene hexachloride was found on one cattle farm; an extremely small quantity.

Bromoxynil butyrate: Small quantities of herbicide containing Bromoxynil butyrate were found at a retail outlet.

Quintozene: Quintozenone was found in the inventory of one retail nursery.

Dicofol: Of the four pesticides listed Dicofol was detected most frequently. It was found in the inventories of retail nurseries, farms, households and the Department of Agriculture.

The Department of Agriculture no longer imports Kelthane. The last shipment was received in 1998.

These four pesticides were used in the Cayman Islands as they are highly effective against target pests and are duly registered in the countries from which they are imported. The active ingredients in these pesticides are low to moderately toxic. The registration process in the country of origin of the pesticide determines that the formulations of the active ingredients are safe for their use. This registration process further dictates labelling that is appropriate for safe use as well as precautions that should be taken during application of these pesticides.

The Department of Agriculture is wary of the potential hazards of pesticide use. It has accordingly undertaken constant vigil over the types of pesticides it imports into the Cayman Islands, and who can access these substances through purchases from the Department. In 2001, the Department acted upon the recommendations of the Government Consultant regarding four other active ingredients namely, Chlorpyrifos (trade name Dursban), Chlorothalonil (trade name Daconil), Propoxur (trade name Baygon) and Dichlorvos (trade name Vapona). As new scientific evidence became available about the hazard posed by the use of these active ingredients the Department met with importers of pesticides, and advised them to voluntarily desist from importing products which contain these compounds. The Department itself no longer sells Dursban.

The establishment of a pesticide regulatory scheme for the Cayman Islands is being pursued with high importance and is actively engaging the attention of the Department. A framework document and model act instructions have been developed and are being reviewed by the Ministry.

Significant assurance may be derived from the Department's findings over the years, that importers generally will not bring chemicals in unless they are EPA approved. Also, very little is kept in storage.

Hazards include, abuse (for example, for pet poisoning); contamination of ground water, accidental poisoning of children and/or adults and wild life; over exposure to applicators.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries?
The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker, on the last page of the substantive answer, the second sentence, the Minister states in his answer, "In 2001 the department acted upon the recommendations of the government consultant regarding four other active ingredients ....".

The Minister might have had to attempt to say all of these but I certainly will not. The Minister says that "the Department acted upon the recommendations of the government consultant". Could he explain what the dangers of the specific product with the trade name Baygon might be? I am absolutely certain that it is still being sold on the shelves because I bought it last week.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and District Administration.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am advised that it is not possible to state directly in medical terms precisely what these substances do. It has been recognised that the chemicals contained do pose hazardous to and can affect human health.

The Speaker: Are there any further Supplementaries?
The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I hope I understand what the Minister was saying but just to follow up with a question.

If there are dangers and this product itself is a household product, it is used in homes where doors are locked and families are there. While I respect in the answer the response that the Department is actively pursuing what needs to be done via a pesticide regulatory scheme for the Cayman Islands, if during that interim this is recognised as one of those products that may pose health hazards I would suspect that we need to do something about it. Therefore, does the Department have any intentions of doing anything like an awareness programme?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Health.

[Pause]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I was consulting with the Chief Agriculture and Veterinary Officer on the question.

I am told that there are various concentrations of the chemicals in various products and that these products do have directions as to their application; one being the use of it in enclosed areas on which it advises that there should be proper ventilation. In effect, the use of these is done at the risk of the person using them. The Department has met and talked with the importers on Baygon and they have been alerted as to possible hazards it might pose. No ban has been imposed on it, in that, we really do not have a law to do so and that is one of the laws that is being prepared at this time; where the Government will be in a position to actually stop the importation of certain chemicals. One can import this particular product (Baygon) at this time but offer the information, as I am sure the answer to this particular question will raise today, that it is an agent that can pose certain health problems if improperly used.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition, do you have a follow up? Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I think the observation needs to be clearly made that it is fair to say that once a product is on the shelf, the majority of people who use those products do not really look on the container and read properly as to how it should be used and what the dangers are.

I am saying that while there is no law would the Minister consider ensuring that the Department makes direct attempts to inform the public through some type of public relations (PR) method with regard to the dangers of this product?

As the Minister has said, the Department has spoken with the importers and obviously it is being imported. When I say imported I mean it is an item that you can get off the shelf just about anywhere. Had I not read this answer today I would have no idea myself. I am not saying that I do not have my own responsibility to read the label.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, just a moment to consult, please.

The Speaker: Certainly.

[Pause]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, in reply to the supplementary, the products which we are speaking about are not banned in the countries from which they are coming but they do carry labels which warn of possible health hazards. It raises the necessity for users to be aware that it poses such potential problems to health.

From the point of view of the Department doing something about the situation it is possible, and indeed I can give the undertaking on behalf of the Agriculture Department, that this can be reinforced with the importers in this regard. However, it is something for consumers to be aware that such does exist and take responsibility for informing themselves in this regard.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Could the Honourable Minister say who monitors the pest control companies in the Cayman Islands and the application of their products?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Once again, Madam Speaker, I would like to consult.

[Pause]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I am told that seminars are held for, particularly, those persons and also to farmers whose business it is to offer pest control in the proper use of chemicals. Up to now there is not a specific law that places the responsibility on an agency or a department with regard to these importations. This is why, at this time, the Ministry for which I hold responsibility is attempting to get this law completed. We have engaged the services of a consultant in this regard and I would hope that at least by the September Session we would have a law that would authorize and empower an agency to have the responsibility for prohibiting, where necessary, and enforcing the law in regard to these chemicals.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Currently, is there no agency within the Government of the Cayman Islands that ensures the standards of use of whatever products that are being used by such companies? I must be clear that when I ask this question I am speaking about the Government and that is not to say that these companies do not have standards in-house that ensure safety, proper application and proper warning to the consumer when they come to your house to apply these products.

Therefore, I want to make that clear because I do not want to start a scare among people, I just wanted to make sure that there is no agency in Government that ensures any sort of standards of use for those particular products.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Health.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, there is no specific law that enforces prohibition or empowers an agency of government to act in this particular regard. I would point out again that the products are imported by the Registered Environmental Property Assessor (REPA) certified importers of these chemicals, and these suppliers offer certain training to the people who use them. Of course, it might be safe to say that these people do use the advice and the knowledge they have in the use of these chemicals, if no more than for their own safety. However, at this time there is a lack of a law which empowers the Government, as the Honourable Member has asked, to offer the level of enforcement which we would like to see.

The Speaker: If there are no further Supplementaries, that concludes Question Time.

We will now take the luncheon break and reconvene at 2 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.27 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.20 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Update on Street Vended Operators

The Speaker: I have received notice of statement from the Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Department of Environmental Health (DEH) is charged with the responsibility for the monitoring and regulation of food premises. To this end, the Department has been actively involved with raising the hygiene and safety standards at these premises for the protection of the public.

Most recently a number of joint inspections and actions were taken regarding street vended foods; mainly jerk chicken and barbeque operations which were operating along the main roadside in Grand Cayman. There were also cases of vendors directly serving and selling foods from car boots, or trunks, to the public.

In November 2002, the Departments of Environmental Health, Immigration, Planning and the Trades and Business Licensing Board released a joint statement in the press and on radio informing local businesses, including street vendors that they had to comply with the required guidelines and policies to operate legally. At that time businesses had to be compliant by 30 November 2002, and some businesses did comply by the stated deadline. However, no on-site visits, inspections or enforcement operations were immediately conducted by the agencies at the expiration of the notice period until 21 January 2003; therefore, effectively extending the grace period for almost two months.

During January of this year the Departments of Environmental Health, along with the enforcement section of Immigration, acting on behalf of the Trade and Business Licensing Board conducted numerous night visits or inspections to street vendor locations. The Planning Department did not attend but all information was forwarded to them. A total of 24 food premises were inspected during the monitoring and enforcement period. All of the facilities had numerous operational and structural deficiencies that increased the risk of food contamination and food-borne illnesses to the public. Additionally, the food handlers were not trained in basic food hygiene and safety measures and many of the facilities were substandard for their food operations. Consequently, the majority of the premises were closed due to the high number of violations and for carrying out a trade without a valid permit.

The DEH has been working, and will continue to work, with the various proprietors to assist them in bringing their facilities up to the required standards. About three months after the programme started approximately 70 per cent of the food vendors were back in business with facilities that met various departmental standards and were also in possession of a valid trade permit. It is expected that 90 per cent of operators will be in operation within the next few months. Four premises ceased operations completely, however, in one case a street vendor now operates a fully-fledged bar and restaurant. Also, the other operators have moved to better facilities or improved their own facilities, which in turn improved the operational standards and reduce the food risk. Only one food vendor did not respond to the Department although several efforts were made by the DEH to assist all businesses. The illegal serving and sale of cooked foods directly from utensils and pots in the trunks of vehicles is an ongoing situation that must cease immediately as this kind of operation poses significant risk to the public. Therefore, it is advisable that foods not be consumed from such vendors or unlicensed operators. These operations should be clearly distinguished from legal delivery services such as those offered by Fine Dining and the various Pizza franchises.

Overall, the DEH is now more confident in the quality of food hygiene and safety standards since this operation began. As most food handlers are now trained food vendors, facility and standards have been raised across all levels and the public can feel safer consuming foods from a licensed and approved facility.

The DEH will continue to monitor and regulate these and all other food premises in an effort to ensure the safety and protection of our local population and visitors alike. The Ministry is also pursuing environmental health legislation to assist the DEH in carrying out its functions in a more efficient and productive manner and to address the enforcement matters related to food premises. These efforts are for the benefit of all concerned; the vendors and businesses themselves as well as their customers, our residents, and I am sure that in time everyone will see the benefits and advantages they will bring to the reputation of our Islands. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Deputy Leader. At this time I recognise the Leader of Government who has also given notice of a statement.

Response to Certain Statements Published in the Media by Three Former Members of Executive Council

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I would like to take some time to respond to certain statements that have been published in the media by three former members of Executive Council. These former members have been writing in recent months on various subjects and have been misleading the people of this country with innuendoes and downright false statements. I believe that it is time we call a spade a spade and put forward certain perspectives on the Floor of this Honourable House. These three former members, who now profess to have all the answers, have no credibility, no performance record, and cannot be trusted to lead Caymanians.

Let us start with their leader; a man who cannot tell the difference between a gang and a group within our schools. This is the man who was in charge of education for some sixteen years. We must ask ourselves why he does not write about his sixteen years of presiding over education in this country. We would think that for all that time he could speak about the advancement of Caymanians. Instead his record reflects the elimination of several of the finest minds from the civil service of this country. His colleague, who he took the title of Leader of Government Business from, also led this country's finance and tourism for eight years, and his record shows that the government he led borrowed $138 million, to say nothing of the accounting for tourism arrivals created by those financial wizards.

I should not have to speak about the performance of these three gentlemen. The Auditor General, in his Special Report tabled here in the last Meeting of the House, detailed why the finances of this country cannot be trusted to the performance of these gentlemen.

More importantly, Madam Speaker, are the constant scare tactics used by these individuals to frighten the Caymanian public into believing that everyone who spoke the words "constitutional reform" should be a leper in a British colony. They would have us believe that anyone wanting constitutional reform was deviously seeking independence.

As everyone knows Madam Speaker, the United Kingdom Government has offered us a constitution after months of public consultation and debate here in the Cayman Islands. When we met with the United Kingdom Government representatives last year, at Lancaster House in London, we were not told of other options for constitutional change.

We have since learned, through the United Nations, of other viable options and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has confirmed in a paper earlier this week that there are at least three options for constitutional change available to us, as outlined by the United Nations. After pressing and pressing for the advancement of Caymanians we now find out that there are other choices. Being aware of those options and getting public feedback from various forums, in particular the Chamber of Commerce, I recognise that we should be talking to the United Kingdom regarding those options.

As the country's first constitutional leader what I am seeking for the Cayman Islands is the protection and integrity of these Islands. I ask you, Madam Speaker, should we deny our people these choices or should we trust these individuals who would want us to believe that there is only independence or colonialism. These gentlemen who have now become experts at letter writing do not want any constitutional change because this would mean greater accountability and more transparency and their actions have never been able to and cannot stand the light of day.

Two previous Ministers, Truman Bodden and Tom Jefferson, want the system in place in this country where all their dirty work can be done, people victimized, and no one can say they were in charge.

Let us talk about trust. Madam Speaker, besides implanting fear of the words, "constitution" and "constitutional reform" we have constantly heard that political parties and everything concerning the Caribbean is bad for us. This Government is open and accountable and more so in regard to the constitution. I propose to say, to my party and the Government, that we should ask the Chamber of Commerce to set up and chair a bi-partisan committee: including myself, the Leader of Opposition, or nominees from both sides, and non-governmental organisation (NGO) representation, but with no more than six members, to examine the proposals sent to us by the United Kingdom and to make recommendations to the Government on a constitution similar to Bermuda's.

I have never advocated that we should have a constitution just like Bermuda's; I have advocated one similar to Bermuda's where the Governor, in this 21st century, cannot spend our money as he sees fit and international agreements cannot be made for the Cayman Islands before discussion and input is given by the Government of the Cayman Islands.

I am looking for a constitution that ensures the independence of the judiciary and the civil service. I have not advocated for a premier but a chief minister with a constitutional deputy.

If there are other options open to the Cayman Islands for our protection why not grasp them? What use would there be to have a minister of finance if the United Kingdom is allowed to destroy our financial industry? The constitution that I propose is for the protection of our financial industry and for the best interests of the Cayman Islands.

We must ask ourselves what did these gentlemen accomplish while they held office in this country? Did they provide the country with the solutions that they now profess to have? The problems we face now are the legacy of their so-called leadership. In fact, it is ironic that they are now questioning what the Government is doing about various issues in the country. Certainly, like every other person that is their right to question.

However, Madam Speaker, when they declare that nothing is being done it is time for us to question their motives. They have accused me of focusing on issues of power but I ask you, Madam Speaker, and this country, why are they being the obstructionists that they are? Is it because elections are coming and they are focusing on their own power?

No reasonable person can accuse this Government of not making every effort to revive the economy and improve the social conditions of all Caymanians, in every area: budgeting and finance, tourism, education, health, social services, security and infrastructure. We have been bringing forward new projects and, I dare say that, while we have detractors like these three former ministers, these projects have been receiving widespread acceptance from the public and the business community.

Allow me, Madam Speaker, to outline some of these initiatives we have been implementing for the good of this country. We have taken many issues that needed to be dealt with and have dealt with them fairly and squarely; Cable and Wireless being one, and the next being Caribbean Utilities Company. Immigration has always been a sore point however we believe we had to give security to those people who had contributed significantly to our development. More recently Cabinet has given special dispensation because of our Quincentennial year to grant status to 258 worthy individuals in this country. We believe that this is fair and just.

Crime Measures. As we have told this House, this Government is not sitting back and denying the problems. As far as crime is concerned we have taken the pro-active approach. I, as Leader of Government, asked the Governor to establish a committee which includes him, the Police Commissioner, the Chief Secretary and me to come together to consider certain measures to address the problem which I spoke about in the Budget Debate. We can no longer allow a liberal regime in this country where the rapist smiles on his way out of prison, where the drug importer and seller keeps doing their business even while they are in prison, where the illegal gun importer and user can walk away and businesses are victimized. Tomorrow there will be a press conference on that matter. I can only hope that the Opposition will support the Government on these measures when they are announced to the public.

Tourism. Madam Speaker, these former members have accused the Government of doing nothing about low tourist arrivals. I have to wonder if they are really in touch with the country, or the world for that matter. In every destination across the globe tourism has suffered drastically since the 11 September attacks. The figure for stop-over visitors for the entire Caribbean showed significant declines in both 2001 and 2002. In fact, in 2002 the Caribbean declined for the second year in the row with a three per cent drop, much bigger than the 1.9 per cent decline suffered in 2001. However, we are not sitting back and ringing our hands expecting that someone else will solve the problem. In less than two years we have restructured the tourism office and reduced expenditure from $27 million to this year's budget for tourism of $19-plus million. With a much smaller budget we have been doing more and I am proud to say that, after a long hiatus, we are back with our television advertising in major markets in the United States.

I have always acknowledged that there are problems in today's Cayman Islands tourism industry. The Islands experienced a decline in arrivals even prior to 2000. I have stated many times the reasons for this decline included the fact that there was no planning, no tourism management policy, no television advertising, poor collateral to promote these Islands, where the tourism budget focused funding on administrative costs and the Minister's whims and fancies as opposed to core-marketing activities.

No one ever said that 11 September 2001 was the sole cause of our problems although it must be honestly acknowledged that 11 September of that year has shaken world tourism.

The Cayman Islands is not a mass tourism destination. We, the Cayman Islands, cannot be compared to Jamaica, Cancun, Santo Domingo, Cuba or the Bahamas which have a mixed tourism product that includes some affluent tourism but which is predominantly mass tourism. We do not offer gambling and if we wanted to attract 50,000 more people—the spring break crowd—we could do that; however that is not the kind of tourism the Islands have been developed for. We are not a mass tourism destination.

We now have active and productive public relations (PR) and marketing agencies that have been working closely with us to do the best job in selling the Cayman Islands, including launching new products. We are making significant progress as far as cruise ship arrivals go. We are targeting new cities in the United States and staging Cayman expositions in those cities before launching flights. Very soon we will be in Chicago as part of this programme.

We have developed a five-year management plan for tourism which, from all indications from major partners in the tourism industry, provides a solid foundation for taking us forward with our tourism product. On the visit to Washington I pressed for approval by the United States Government, of the Convention Tourist Tax Credit which will enhance our stay over tourism and prove to be a great marketing tool. We are working on that aspect.

We are developing a Jazz/rhythm and blues (R&B) music event, which will attract visitors. While our competitors have Jazzfest, which carries 5,000 to 15,000 people to that event, for obvious reasons we cannot compete with that nevertheless we will do one event more suited to our product.

These are examples of the initiatives which have been launched, Madam Speaker. Everything we are doing is open and above board and done in consultation with the people in the industry.

What I will not do is to mislead the people of this country with over-inflated figures and allow them to have expectations and business projections based on false numbers. The country will recall the former minister of Tourism, Mr. Tom Jefferson, reported arrivals figures at something close to 450,000 people, which included residents of these Islands, when the real number was in fact 100,000 people less. I have recognised and set up a system of statistics that are published before the figures are sent to me. They are on websites for everyone to see. I do not and will not manipulate the arrival numbers as the previous minister did. That is being dishonest.

Cayman Airways. Madam Speaker, this is no time for anyone to criticise the national airline. In short, let me say that given world conditions the national carrier is holding its own. In 2000, the loss on operations was US$11 million and the total loss including losses from non-operating items was US$19.2 million. In 2000, even after the government subsidy of US$5.5 million, Cayman Airways reported a net loss for the year of US$13.7 million. A similar picture was evident in 2001, with a loss on operations of US$10.8 million, a total loss including losses from non-operating items of US$20.8 million thereby resulting in a net loss after subsidy of US$14.6 million. In 2000, under my responsibility, Cayman Airways has reported losses on its operations of US$10.8 million and the overall loss before subsidy was $11.6 million. Cayman Airway (CAL)'s net loss, after a reduced subsidy of $4.8 million, was therefore $6.8 million. Madam Speaker, we have a lot to be thankful for and I believe that all Caymanians should be supporting the national airlines. We have to move forward now, I will soon be coming back to Finance Committee with a new plan for Cayman Airways including new equipment, hopefully by September. However, thank God, it is holding its own even in these drastic and difficult times. I urge all Caymanians to support it and fly it because we pay for it.

Pedro Castle. While present management has made an improvement at Pedro Castle we are not yet out of the woods in regard to the project. What is now evident is that the previous minister, Mr. Tom Jefferson, manufactured figures to show income, that the project could not make, so that he could get it done. If left as is, we are told by the Auditor General, this could cost the country some $30 million in fuller depth in ten to fifteen years time. Madam Speaker, this is dismal. However, I have plans for the project in that we believe that a very upscale boutique hotel with spa and whole new concept for the project could enhance and save government money in the long run. I have commissioned a study, which is now in hand, however, the question that the previous minister and his colleague must answer is, where is the money? Nine or ten million dollars that was supposedly spent on Pedro Castle.

Infrastructure. Madam Speaker, this Government has been on an aggressive programme to improve every facet of this country's infrastructure by encouraging new investment, by building new roads, by improving telecommunications, by putting in the mechanisms for e-commerce.

We supported the Ritz Carlton project so that it could move forward after being in limbo for far too long. Many of our people have been able to get jobs as a result and it has brought well-needed investment at a time when we were hurting from the slump in tourism. We have announced, and are implementing, various initiatives including the dock and port facilities which will enhance the image of the Cayman Islands as a tourism destination.

We must plan for the future for the short-, medium- and long-term economic prosperity of these Islands. We can do very little to stimulate the economy without the foreign investor. People cannot get work without the foreign investor. People will not be able to pay their bills nor feed their children nor take a vacation without the foreign investor. However, the foreign investor must be made to feel welcome in these Islands, he must be given the room to do his business fairly, legally and without undue interference. At the same time the foreign investor must be prepared to build and positively contribute to these Islands. This is the only way the Caymanian owned businesses are going to make money or for money to be generated for local businesses because the foreign investor brings his money here. In that regard, there is continued hope for the future of these Cayman Islands.

There are presently proposals for development of these Islands totalling over US$2 billion in the next three to five years which will generate business and bring long-term employment to Caymanians. In Cayman Brac there is a hotel spa and golf resort, valued at well over US$500 million, among other development envisioned there. In Grand Cayman over US$1.5 billion is being discussed for development in the next three to five years. Over US$1 billion is planned for the development of five to seven star hotel resorts on both ends of the Island and a trade centre for international trade. The projects previously mentioned are all private investment projects.

In the government related sector in the same period the East End dock and Marina plus the east/west corridor is estimated at over US$150 million. The George Town and West Bay cruise facilities are estimated at US$26 million.

Let me say something, Madam Speaker. For two years I have languished with those two projects trying to please everyone. It is time that I moved forward and I will move forward. I know in my constituency there is political interference however I am issuing them a good warning here today; if they want a fight they will get it. That project is well deserved; we need to spread out the cruise industry in this country and West Bay offers a good place for that facility. It is not for my good but for the good of various people who will benefit and it will help the transportation sector.

There are two cruise ship berthing facilities to hold two ships each in the eagle class of the QE2 and the new Queen Mary, the type of cruise passenger I am pursuing for this country, which are slated to cost US$60 million.

The Airport development, which is only part of the Airport Master Plan, is slated to cost US$20 million in the next three to five years. The proposed new government administration block and the three new schools are slated to cost somewhere in the region of US$87 million.

These government-related projects are all proposed for the next three to five years and this will be achieved with no borrowing by the Cayman Islands Government. This total development expenditure of well over US$2 billion in the next three to five years demonstrate solid confidence in the future of these Islands and we must make it work for the people of these Islands. Politics must be put aside in this world of uncertainty. This is for the people of the Cayman Islands.

Housing. Madam Speaker, the Government and the Minister have come under criticism about our low income housing initiatives. Why? Owning a home is the dream of every Caymanian. We will bring this dream to our people. It will become a reality. The Minister is doing something that in ten years—and after much discussion by certain Members of the House and outside vested interest—was left undone and nothing was accomplished. We must give the Minister some praise for his efforts. We have given keen attention to the economy and our financial industry because we believe in the proper and efficient management of our resources. That is why we have commissioned an economic development plan for the country, which we will have in hand by November this year.

We are working with lobbyists in Washington and the United Kingdom to promote and protect the interest of these Islands and we are doing everything possible to safeguard the financial industry; the life-blood of these Islands.

Please note, Madam Speaker, that we are not signing every single document that comes across our desks to wipe out our financial industry as these three letter-writers did.

In connection with the European Savings Tax Directive it is important to outline their sins of commission and omission. On 5 November the European Commission published its proposal called a package to tackle harmful tax competition in the European Union, which included a provision on the taxation savings income. This has come to be known as the European Tax Package.

In May 1998 the European Commission published its draft Council Directive on the Taxation of Savings Income. This draft Directive was something that the government of the day was aware of. In May 1998 discussions on the drafting of the revised European Union Overseas Countries and Territories (OCT) decision also commenced. These discussions continued into summer 2001. Bermuda indicated it wished to continue being excluded from the OCT decision.

In September 1998, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the United Kingdom Government's treasury held its first tax seminar, which presented information on the European Union Tax Package and was attended by representatives of the Cayman Islands. At about this time the Foreign and Commonwealth Office also forwarded to the European Union a summary of the constitutional arrangements that it had with its dependent territories as were then referred to. Indicating that, in the case of the constitutional arrangements with Bermuda, the United Kingdom did not have the power to disallow legislation passed by the Bermuda legislature, and further did not have the power to force legislation on Bermuda as Bermuda's constitution did not allow the United Kingdom to use the peace order and good governance order in council process that was available in the case of the Caribbean territories, including the Cayman Islands.

In April 1999, the European Commission held a meeting on the subject of the revised OCT decision which was attended by representatives of the Cayman Islands and other United Kingdom Caribbean Overseas Territories.

In June 1999 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the United Kingdom treasury held a second tax seminar, which presented information on the European Union's Tax Package and was attended by representatives of the Cayman Islands. In addition, during 1999, extensive discussion occurred within the European Union regarding the structuring of the draft Directive on the Taxation of Savings Income. The United Kingdom lobbied extensively to ensure an exchange of information model was used rather than a withholding tax model so as to preserve the London Eurobond market. They were protecting themselves.

On 20 February 2000, the United Kingdom released a discussion paper on the then current form of the draft Directive on the Taxation of Savings Income.

On 19 June 2000, the heads of government of the European member states, meeting in Santa Maria da Feira, adopted the proposal of the European finance Ministers for a revised form of the draft Directive on the Taxation of Savings Income, which has now become known as the Feira Accord; an agreement to adopt the automatic exchange of tax information as the basis for enforcing extra-territorial tax regimes of the European Union member states. The document specified the requirement for the Netherlands Antilles, as well as the United Kingdom dependencies of the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man and the UK's Caribbean territories, including the Cayman Islands, to adopt the same measures as the European Union states in regard to the Taxation of Savings Income. This is also the document that did not include Bermuda.

In November 2000, meetings were held where the Government of the Cayman Islands was not represented but at which representatives of the Caribbean overseas territories and department of the European Union member states began discussions of the revised OCT decision which was to come into effect in November 2001 for a period of ten years. This meeting reviewed a commission prepared draft revised OCT decision containing specific reference to the taxation of savings. The wording is as follows in the Annex:

“ ... on the taxation of savings: Article 2— Member states which have dependent or associated territories or which have special responsibilities or taxation prerogatives in respect of other territories shall take appropriate measures, within the framework of their constitutional arrangements, to ensure that provisions concerning interest payments to Community residents, equivalent to those...” laid down in any community directive which may be adopted, are introduced in the OCTs.

All these events took place under the leadership of Mr. Truman Bodden and Mr. Tom Jefferson—who did nothing.

In March 2001, the Baroness Scotland, QC, wrote to the Overseas Territories, including the Cayman Islands, in relation to the European Savings Directive, indicating that the United Kingdom expected the Cayman Islands to comply with the Directive on the Taxation of Savings Income, and requesting a response by the end of April 2001. The Leader of Government Business of the day (the now Leader of Opposition) was given a draft letter that could have got us out of that particular mess—that letter was not sent.

Today, one of the greatest fights that we have on our hands, and one of the greatest challenges these Islands face, is the imposition of that Directive. There would be loss of revenue to the Cayman Islands and loss of jobs in the financial sector. The resultant negative fallout for the people of these Islands will tremendously hurt Caymanians in all sectors as the financial services industry impacts all of the others. This is what my Government is determined to prevent. To top it off the fiasco with the Euro Bank and the admittance of a sinister “London Plan”, which involves spying on the Courts and the financial industry of the Cayman Islands, was exposed and admitted to by the United Kingdom earlier this year. It was admitted that it was going on during the leadership of Mr. Truman Bodden and Mr. Tom Jefferson.

They were conspicuously silent during the upheaval and the public exposure of the “London Plan” and the No Confidence Motion on the former Attorney General, David Ballantyne. Did Truman Bodden and Tom Jefferson know every step that was implemented of that plan?

Regarding our financial affairs, let me say that as Leader of Government Business and our Government, in 2001 we took over a government that had borrowings in excess of US$66 million. Madam Speaker, the Auditor General's Report is there to bear witness to the unsatisfactory handling of our country's financial affairs during the administration of those two previous ministers.

One of the first things we had to do was to take control of the budget process. For 2002/2003 we produced a balanced budget. We have done it again this year for the 2003/2004 budget. The country will recall that I, as Leader of Government Business, and the Cayman Islands Government, received high praise and commendations from Baroness Amos and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for the budgets we produced. Compare this to the damning report on their performance as noted in the Auditor General's Report.

In the Caymanian Compass editorial, dated 15 April 2003, regarding Government finances stated that a ringing indictment of the previous government's money management in the year 2000 is included in the special report by the Auditor General presented in the Legislative Assembly at its last Meeting. Many people felt uneasy about government finances in 2000 and when the new administration came in after the elections that year it revealed that, indeed, government coffers were empty. The new Executive Council's first priority was to secure funds to cover past expenditure and outstanding bills. It is only now through that independent verification of the dismal state of affairs is available from the Auditor General's Report. The Auditor General, as an independent watch dog over government accounting is meant to be critical of what has been done with government money. And in this Special Report he does not hold back. This is as it should be.

It is unfortunate that these reports usually become public long after the event when intervention is no longer possible. One can only hope that similar occurrences can be prevented in the future. New legislation to regulate government finances and a new accounting system may go some way towards that end and may also make the process more transparent. Budgets are based on estimates of future income and as with all estimates actual collections may differ from the projections in case of revenue shortfalls budget expenditure estimates must be revised just as ordinary citizens must cut their spending when they are faced with reductions in income. For government there must be a mechanism to secure and protect funds needed to cover day-to-day obligations and civil service salaries. And that mechanism must come into action whenever the need arises.

This Government has done well to bring our finances to the point that we have many more days now of financing if the need arises.

Through Private Financing Initiatives (PFI) we intend to finance a number of capital projects without committing the country to further borrowing. These former ministers have also questioned our use of private financing initiatives and have clearly shown a lack of understanding of it. Private financing initiative is an acceptable means for governments to acquire use of an asset without actually owing them at the time. It is carried out extensively in the United Kingdom.

PFI's involve the private sector supplying an asset for use by a national government for a certain agreed annual payment to be made by a government to the supplier of the asset. The real purpose of a PFI arrangement is to transfer the risks associated with the ownership of the asset to the private sector. Its purposes are not off balance sheet accounting as these former ministers have suggested. The reason that national governments do not place PFI assets on balance sheets is simply because the asset is owned by the private sector and the risks associated with ownership continues to rest with the private sector supplier of that asset. That is what the Minister of Planning has been telling us for the last several months. Madam Speaker, this Government has been open and transparent with the people of this country regarding all projects and undertakings that are done on their behalf and will continue to be so.

Government will have to subject the award of any PFI building contract to the scrutiny of the Central Tenders Committee. The annual cash flow payments for any use of PFI asset will have to be shown in the government's annual budget which will be examined by the Legislative Assembly and its Finance Committee.

Running this country is not about staying in the background and writing letters or getting your supporters to call into the radio shows with frivolous matters and innuendos; making mountains out of mole hills. Letters to the editor cannot negotiate with the United Kingdom about the advancement of Caymanians or with the United States Congress as my Government have been doing. They cannot eliminate borrowings, cannot find solutions to crime, cannot increase tourist arrivals or provide jobs. Letters to the editor cannot build a school in Spotts for 500 children, or a school in West Bay or another high school needed when Truman Bodden had responsibility for Education. Nor can they erase those gentlemen's records of non-performance, give them credibility or fool the people into trusting them.

I challenge these three letter writers to debate their record against that of the United Democratic Party Government, not on paper but before our people. From hereon whenever my administration is unjustifiably accused and lied about I intend to come to this Honourable Legislative Assembly to defend our record. If that means this kind of statement again in September I will not hesitate to expose the evil doers and the evil planners.

I guess I am this afternoon, as the hymn writer said -

*"Just as I am, though tossed about with many a conflict, many a doubt,
Fightings within and fears without,
... I come".*

If there are any among us who cannot live with the circumstances this United Democratic Party and I, as Leader, have to face and choose to go against what the Government determines, after discussion and taking advice, then they can face me through the democratic processes of the United Democratic Party, or the electoral process of these Islands. As far as my record goes in leading this country in the past year and a half, I have done my best. I believe that the Government and all of us have done our best, we have worked hard and I will certainly continue to do that for all the people of these Islands.

I am sorry that it was a lengthy statement Madam Speaker, however there were things that needed to be cleared up and I intend to do it again if they keep on telling the amount of lies and slander that is indicative of the Opposition. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

Suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1)

The Speaker: I recognise the Leader of Government for the motion asking for the suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1).

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I move for the suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) to allow Bills to be read for the first time.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) only would be hereby suspended to allow Bills (1) to (5) to be read a first time.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) suspended.

Suspension of Standing Order 14(4)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, in accordance with Standing Order 14(4) we propose to change the order of Bills. I move that item (6) be taken first item (1) second, (2) third and (3) fourth and propose that (4) and (5) be deferred at this time.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(4) be suspended to allow today's business order to be changed.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 14(4) suspended.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to move the second reading of a Bill entitled, A Bill for a Law to combat Terrorism; to suppress the Financing of Terrorism; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Madam Speaker. Thank you.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, and Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly, with the leave of this House I wish to present a Bill entitled, The Terrorism Bill, 2003.

With the advent of globalisation it means that the Cayman Islands have plugged into the international community and therefore we are a part of that global village.

A significance of this recognition is that, as a country, we have to be cognisant of, and be guided by, international protocols. It should therefore come as no surprise to anyone that the Cayman Islands have been taking steps in joining other countries, including the United States, in ensuring that there are appropriate legislative frameworks and mechanisms in place to further enhance our capabilities to combat the scourge of terrorism in whatever form it may exist, including safeguarding against the use of our financial institutions in the financing of terrorism. We, in the Cayman Islands, are persuaded that this evil must be eliminated and we are equally persuaded that this can only be achieved by coordinated, global, systematic and sustained efforts.

Although none of the actual atrocities of 11 September took place on our soil it is common ground that the Cayman Islands and its people have been severely impacted by those despicable acts. Accordingly, it might be appropriate, at this stage, to observe and remind Honourable Members that in order for the Law to be effective it is recognised that there may well have to be some levels of encroachment. However, we are conscious of the fact that the state should never violate principles of due process. Accordingly, the Law will seek to strike a balance between honouring our international obligations in combating terrorism while ensuring the protection of civil liberties.

In October 2001, as an immediate response to 11 September attacks, the United Kingdom extended the Terrorism (United Nations Measures) (Overseas Territories) Order 2001 to the Cayman Islands. This was also extended to other overseas territories. This order was understandably very limited and only deals with the measures necessary to combat the financing of terrorism.

Accordingly, it was necessary for the Cayman Islands to build up on the UK order. In so doing we are guided by the fact of the passage of the UK Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act, 2001. We recognise that there is the need to incorporate provisions of that Law into the Cayman Islands legislation. In fact, the main precedence for the Bill before this Honourable House comes from the UK Terrorism Act, 2000 and the UK Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act, 2001. The Bill also billed up on the Terrorism (United Nations Measures) (Overseas Territories) Order 2001.

While innovative thoughts should not be discouraged in preparing legislation we do not seek to reinvent the wheel and we have endeavoured to comply as closely as possible with other current UK legislation in this regard. Other legislation which was taken into account was the draft model legislation sent to other overseas territories by the Commonwealth Secretariat. The Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000, the Anti-Terrorism (Financial and Other Measures) (Overseas Territories) Order 2002, the Biological Weapons Act 1974, the Chemical Weapons Act 1996 and the Nuclear Material (Offences) Act 1983. These are all UK legislature.

With the leave of this House may I now attempt to provide this Honourable House with a summary of the Bill itself?

Part I of the Bill is the introductory section and sets out the definitions for the purposes of this Law and it includes the definition of terrorism. If I might add, this definition is merely a repetition of the definition which is contained in the Terrorism (United Nations Measures) (Overseas Territories) Order 2001:

In accordance with clause 2, “terrorism”, means the use of threat of action where-

(a) (ii) the use or threat is designed to influence the government or to intimidate the public or a section of the public; and

(iii) the use or threat is made for the purpose of advancing a political, religious or ideological cause;”

It involves, “(b) (ii) serious damage to property; (iii) endangers a person’s life, other than that of the person committing the action;” for example, suicide bombers.

The definition in this Bill recognises that terrorism may have religious or ideological or political motivation. It says it therefore seeks to cover actions which might not be violent in themselves but which can in a modern society have a devastating impact.

These could include, for example, interfering with the supply of water or power where life, health or safety may be put at risk.

In the definition section(b)(v) covers disrupting of key computer systems, for example. (c) provides that where actions involve firearms or explosives it does not have to be designed to influence the government or intimidate the public. This is to ensure that, for instance, the assassination of a key individual is covered by the provisions of the Bill.

Part II deals with terrorist offences and weapons of mass destruction.

Clause 3 makes terrorism a predicate offence and provides that: “(1) A person who commits an act of terrorism ... is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life.”

Some of the other offences dealt with under this part include training a person to use firearms, explosives, chemical, biological and nuclear weapons for purposes related to terrorism; includes developing, producing, stock piling, acquiring and retaining biological weapons and the toxins for purposes other than peaceful purposes. It also includes, for example, directing terrorist organisations or possessing articles for terrorist purposes.

Part III of the Bill deals with offences relating to financial support for terrorism. The term “Terrorist Property” is used to make it clear that in the Law Part III offences apply not only to money but also to other property. These offences include the following: soliciting terrorist property; using or possessing property for terrorist purposes; arranging property to be used for terrorist purposes and; money laundering.

The Bill imposes a duty on certain persons to disclose information relating to the offences specified above. The duty relates to suspicions which arise at work; legal advisors privilege material is exempted.

Schedule 1 makes special provision for the disclosure of information by persons in the regulated sector and also persons in the public sector. This can be found on page 14 of the Bill.

Persons in the regulated sector are those persons who work in businesses, which are regulated by, for example, the Banks and Trust Companies Law, Building Societies Law, Corporative Societies Law, Insurance Law, Mutual Funds Law and Money Services Law.

I pause to point out that the Securities Investment Business Law, 2001 could be included in this list. At the appropriate stage I intend to move a committee stage amendment to include this. I have already circulated the proposed amendment.

It should also be noted, Madam Speaker, that a Charities Bill is being prepared which will provide for the regulation of charities. Until such time as that Bill is passed the not-for-profit associations which are licensed pursuant to section 8 of the Companies Law will be regulated by schedule 1 of the Bill as well.

Part III of the Bill also gives powers to the court to order forfeiture of any money or other property connected with offences in schedules 2 and 3, and also gives details of any forfeiture procedures to be employed in such circumstances.

Part IV provides that schedule 4 makes provision for orders to monitor accounts at financial institutions. A judge may, for example, on an application to him by a constable of at least the rank of an inspector above, make an account monitoring order if he, the judge, is satisfied that the order is sought for the purposes of terrorist investigation or for the tracing of terrorist property or the order will enhance the effectiveness of the investigation in circumstances.

May I also add that a committee stage amendment will be made to delete 1(1)(d) of schedule 4 as a licensee under the Securities Investment Business Law. The reason is that a licensee under the Securities Investment Business Law, as I understand it, will not be responsible for holding accountings to which an account monitoring order can relate. Their client accounts will be held by approved banks.

Schedule 4 is adopted from the Anti-Terrorism (Financial and Other Measures) (Overseas Territories) Order 2002, which was extended to the other overseas territories. The Bill provides for extradition and, importantly, neutral legal assistance, in criminal matters.

Clauses 32 to 35 are based on provisions included in the draft model legislation that was provided to the overseas territories by the Commonwealth Secretariat which I referred to earlier. The clauses provide for mutual legal assistance to appropriate authorities in foreign states in matters relating to the actions and movements of terrorist groups suspected of involvement of commission of terrorist acts. It also provides for mutual legal assistance in instances where there is use of forged or falsified travel papers by persons suspected of involvement in the commission of terrorist acts. It also covers instances of traffic in weapons and sensitive materials by terrorists.

The Bill provides that counter-terrorism conventions may be used for extradition purposes. Thus, for example, where the United Kingdom becomes party to a counter-terrorism convention (and it extends such convention to the Islands and there is in force an arrangement between the United Kingdom and another state, which is a party to that counter-terrorism convention), the arrangement shall be deemed, for the purposes of mutual legal assistance legislation in the Islands, to include the provisions for mutual assistance in criminal matters falling within the scope of the convention itself.

Also, where the United Kingdom becomes a party to a counter-terrorism convention (and it extends such convention to the Islands and there is no arrangement between the UK and another state, which is a party to that convention for the purposes of mutual assistance) Cabinet may, by order, publish in the Gazette and treat the counter-terrorism convention, for the purposes of giving effect to this Law, as an arrangement between the UK Government and that state for providing mutual legal assistance.

The Bill provides the police with powers to arrest and detain suspected terrorists and with broader powers to stop and search vehicles and pedestrians and to impose parking restrictions. They give the police power for a limited period to designate and demarcate a specified area as a cordoned area for the purposes of terrorist investigation. For instance, in the wake of a bomb explosion, police have the remit of cordoning off a particular area to facilitate the investigation.

Clause 41 of the Bill deals principally as outlined in schedule 5—Entry and Search of Premises and Seizure of Materials for the Purpose of Terrorist Investigation.

1(5)(c) of schedule 5 gives a judge discretion over the necessity for a warrant in a particular case.

I will explain the reasoning behind this and it is probably best illustrated by a hypothetical example. Suppose the police need to find, seize and retain certain materials on a particular premises. The police may have successfully contacted the persons entitled, or who have the power, to grant entry to that premises. The person may very well grant access to the premises however he might refuse to consent to certain materials on the premises being seized by the police. The police may, therefore, need a warrant to authorise seizing and retaining the material in those circumstances and it is to cover this eventuality that a more general test, that is, the issue of a warrant is likely to be necessary, as in circumstances of the case used above.

Part VIII, clause 55 of the Bill provides for the “power to intercept communications and the admissibility of intercepted communications”.

It also provides:

“(1) ... that a constable who is of the rank of inspector may, for the purposes of obtaining evidence of the commission of an offence under this Law, apply to the Governor in writing for an interception communications order.

(2) The constable may make an application ... only with the prior written consent of the Attorney General.

(3) The Governor may make an order-

(a) requiring a service provider to intercept and retain specified communication or communications of a specified description received or transmitted or about to be received or transmitted by that service provider;

(b) authorising the constable to enter any premises and to install on such premises any device for the interception and retention of communication or communication of a specified description and to remove and retain such device;

if the Governor is satisfied that the written consent of the Attorney General has been obtained as required ... and that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the material information relating to-

(i) the commission of an offence under this Law; or

(ii) the whereabouts of the person suspected by the constable to have committed the offence is contained in that communication or communications of that description.

(4) Any information contained in the communication-

(a) intercepted and retained pursuant to an order ...; or

(b) intercepted and retained in foreign states in accordance with the law of that foreign state and certified by a judge of that foreign state to have been so intercepted and retained, shall be admissible in proceedings for an offence under this Law...”

Part 9 of the Bill, the General Provision, contains further what I would describe as technical provisions. Under this part, clause 62, for example, provides that:

“Where any act or mission constitutes an offence under this Law and also under the Terrorism (United Nation Measures) (Overseas Terrorism) Order, 2001 the offender is, unless the contrary intention appears, liable to be prosecuted and punished under either this Law or the Order but is not liable to be punished twice for the same offence.”

Clause 63 provides that: “The Attorney General shall lay before the Legislative Assembly at least once every 12 months a report on the working of this Law.”

Terror is defined as intense fear or dread. It is irrelevant whether we live in a country or countries in which acts of terrorism take place or not. Terrorists seek ...

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member, just for the Chair’s clarification, did I understand you to say that clause 63 gave the power to the Attorney General to lay before the Assembly? If that is the case perhaps you may want to address your mind to the Memorandum explanatory which says that the Chief Secretary would do the same thing. Am I correct in understanding that?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes. Madam Speaker, there should also have been a committee stage amendment to substitute the “Attorney General” for the “Chief Secretary” where that appears.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Sorry.

The Speaker: Has that amendment been submitted to the Clerk?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: May I just . . . (Pause) I thank you, Madam Speaker. The clause in section 3 actually says the “Attorney General” but the Object, as you quite rightly pointed out, refers to the “Chief Secretary”. With the leave of the House I will seek the appropriate committee stage amendment.

The Speaker: Yes, I am fully cognisant that the committee stage is the appropriate forum. However, so that there was no intent to mislead by omission or otherwise, it was in contradiction to the expressed form, hence the reason for my elucidation. I am grateful.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I am indeed grateful to you, Madam Speaker. Thank you.

As I said, terror is defined as intense fear or dread. It is irrelevant whether we live in a country or countries in which acts of terrorism take place or not. Terrorists seek to conquer us by instilling fear and thereby limiting our choices and we cannot permit them such a victory. We should also not be complacent and think that such things cannot happen in the Cayman Islands. Madam Speaker, the United States of America did not anticipate the attacks of 11 September. Indeed, we all recall that Bali, a tourist resort, and playground in the East, was attacked last year by terrorists. It follows that any country could easily be the subject of such cowardly attacks and we must be vigilant in this regard. It is hoped that we may never have to use the provisions of this piece of legislation but we, as mere humans, cannot predict tomorrow and we should be at all times prepared.

I have attempted to give a brief summary of what I consider a very important Bill and I now commend it to this Honourable House and seek Honourable Members' approval in its passage. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? I recognise the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to offer supporting principle of the Opposition to this Bill for a Law to Combat Terrorism; to suppress the Financing of Terrorism; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Cayman Islands have been the subject of some criticism recently for being "soft" on terrorism. Some of that criticism is perhaps justified; much of it is not. Perhaps the first observation I should make is that one is left to wonder why it has taken almost two years for this Government to address the issue of terrorism through local legislation following the events of 11 September 2001. Nevertheless, late though it may be, it is worthy of commendation that we do have before this Honourable House a Bill for a Law to make provision to address the global threat of terrorism.

It should not be understated that this legislation is necessarily draconian and far-reaching regarding personal liberties. In the United Kingdom there have been numerous challenges to the legislation brought there and which has been held, in a number of instances by the UK courts, that provisions of their respective legislation have infringed upon the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual, which is another way of saying that aspects of it are, perhaps in the UK, not unconstitutional although in any other jurisdiction would be regarded as unconstitutional. The effect is still the same. Those provisions are incapable of being enforced.

I have had an opportunity to look at the tenure of legislation here and I must say that I am reasonably happy that our Law, by and large, does not go that far. Understanding, as I think we all must, that for the legislation to be effective and for it to achieve the purpose for which it is designed, that is, to prevent acts of terror, there are going to be times when due process would not be able to be followed.

However, by and large, I think many of the somewhat draconian and far-reaching powers given to various entities—particularly the police and its powers to search premises and persons, and to forfeit items or property which is owned by or suspected to be owned by terrorists—are subject to judicial oversight and review. That gives me considerable comfort.

The legislation is far-reaching and the Law creates an extra-territorial jurisdiction in relation to acts committed outside this jurisdiction. If they were committed within this jurisdiction they would be offences against this or another local legislation. However, that is necessary given the global nature of terrorism as we have, unfortunately, come to know it in today's world.

Therefore I do not have any fundamental problems with that, although it is somewhat an unusual provision. If it were in the context of other legislation one would seek to question why that should be the case. However, it is perfectly understandable, reasonable and acceptable, I believe, in the context of legislation which is aimed at preventing terrorism.

There is also provision in here for account monitoring, where there is suspicion that an account might be used to finance acts of terror. Again, I take some comfort that this is the subject of judicial oversight and that the accounts can only be monitored with the approval of the court. There are appropriate provisions where there is evidence that the account is not being used for that purpose for the holder of that account to make an application to the court to have that order discharged. There is provision in these instances for judicial oversight and for the persons, who are affected by the orders that have been made, to have access to the court so the court can review what has been done and decide on the appropriateness of continuing or not continuing the orders that have been made.

I speak in those general terms to convey the view and the position of the parliamentary Opposition; that, in general, we regard the legislation as being good. However, there are a number of concerns that we have and I will take an opportunity to deal in detail with specific reference to the sections of the Bill.

One of the things that the legislation does, which again is unusual and in the context of any other legislation would be grounds for real complaint and concern, is that it imposes a positive duty on various categories of people to make disclosure, to persons in authority, of information, relating to acts of terrorism or property, which might be items used to further terrorism.

Generally, in Criminal Law there is no positive obligation to disclose information to anyone about anything. In the context of other aspects of Criminal Law you cannot give false information, however, there is generally no provision which requires an individual to make a positive disclosure. That is not the case with the Terrorism Bill and understandably so. It does impose a positive obligation in section 17. (1): "A person who has any information which may be of assistance in-

- (a) preventing the commission by another person, of an act of terrorism; or
- (b) securing the arrest of prosecution of another person for an offence under this Law, shall, as soon as reasonably possible after receiving such information, disclose the information at a police station to a constable not below the rank of inspector.”

Hence, that is a positive obligation imposed by the law. If you know that someone is planning an act of terror, as a matter of law, you are required to make a report to the Police Station. If you do not do so you commit a criminal offence. In section 17.(4): “A person who fails to comply with this ... is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for ten years, and to a fine.”

It is a serious offence not to do so and this applies to all and sundry with the exception that it does not require the disclosure of information which is protected by privilege. By privilege, I take it that means legal professional privilege, which is discussed at some length in other sections of the legislation. I am going to deal with that particular point because it gives me some concern.

I return to section 17.(1), which requires any individual to disclose this information to a person of the rank of an inspector of police or above. The concern in relation to that is this, and I am going to speak frankly; not everyone in the community reposes a great deal of confidence in the police. That is a fact. Some may say that that lack of confidence is unwarranted. I am not there to debate whether it is or not however because the Law creates, for the first time that I am aware of in this jurisdiction, a criminal offence for failing to disclose information on anyone. I believe we need to ensure that the disclosure of that information is possible to other persons who are trusted within the community and, in particular, have the trust of the individual who is required to disclose that information.

For the failure to disclose the information, if on conviction, would render that individual liable to ten years in prison. I believe that there should be provision in here for the disclosure of information to persons such as ministers of religion, who are traditionally the people in whom the community reposes tremendous trust and confidence. It might well be that individual does not want it to be known that he knows what is going on.

Madam Speaker, the real objective of this section and of this whole exercise is to ensure that the police have the information so they can intervene to keep the act of terror from occurring. I know police, by nature, have a propensity to want to question whoever the person is that gave the information. I know that that will be part of their answer to my submission; however, it is far more important in the first instance that the information actually gets into the hands of the police.

If an individual who is required to disclose this information is afraid that if he goes to the police there might be adverse consequences to him, he is more likely to breach the law and suffer the consequences, which is bad, however even worse is the fact that valuable information, which might keep the act from happening, might never get to the police, and then the consequences of that could be extremely grave. Therefore, I ask the Honourable Attorney General if he would bear that in mind when he is concluding his debate on this and, if it does find favour with him and the Government, perhaps the appropriate proposals for amendments could be made at committee stage.

There is another section which deals with the disclosure of information and places an obligation on someone who is in possession of it to disclose it to the authorities. Section 25 deals with information, or persons who receive information, in the course of their business, trade, profession or employment, which is another category of persons. In this case pursuant to section 23 (3): “A person commits an offence if he does not disclose to the Reporting Authority or to a constable as soon as is reasonably practicable his belief or suspicion and the information on which it is based.”

The Reporting Authority is the Reporting Authority established under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law. Again, I believe that this section could be more effective if it permitted the disclosure to other trusted persons, in addition to the Reporting Authority and a police constable. However, I urge this with less force than the earlier section because, in this instance, we are dealing with people who have obtained information in the course of their employment or profession. Perhaps these people are more likely to understand and be willing to deal with police officers and the Reporting Authority in this context than just the average person who gains information on the marl road. Again, I say this is a section that could be looked at.

I come back to the point about privilege, that is legal professional privilege, and perhaps the Honourable Attorney General does have an explanation for this. However, the difficulty I see with the way this is currently drafted is that the subsection does not require disclosure by a professional legal advisor, that is legal professional privilege.

Legal professional privilege is something that has been the subject of much discussion over the course of many years. It has developed to a point where, I believe, it is as clear as these things can possibly be to most people. There is much case law on the point therefore it is quite clear what information is covered by legal professional privilege at common law.

Section 23(6) says: “Subsection (3) does not require disclosure by a professional legal advisor of-

- (a) information which he obtains in privileged circumstances; or
- (b) a belief or suspicion based in information which he obtains in privileged circumstances.”

Section 23 (7) says: “For the purpose of subsection (6) information is obtained by a pro- professional legal advisor in privileged circumstances if it comes to him, otherwise than with a view to furthering a criminal purpose from-

- (a) a clients or client's representative, in connection with the provision of legal advice by the adviser to the client;
- (b) a person seeking legal advice from the adviser, or from person's representative; or
- (c) any person, for the purpose of actual or contemplated legal proceedings."

I have no difficulty with what is set out in those two subsections (6) and (7) however my question is; is the objective of those two subsections to somehow narrow down what the common law is in relation to the legal professional privilege?

If so, I have a fundamental problem with it because it is encroaching on one of the cardinal principles in relation to an attorney's ability to properly receive information and advise his client. If that is not the objective and what is being attempted is to expressly state in the Law what the common law is in relation to legal professional privilege then I ask why?

We are running a real risk now of creating scope for much more argument, discussion and questioning as to what the Law really is. We have hundreds of years of case law which has established the parameters of legal professional privilege. Those of us who practice the law can have reference to it and understand whether or not a particular bit of information is the subject of legal professional privilege or not and the context in which it is given is really the guide post as to whether or not information is subject to legal professional privilege or not.

I say that if the objective is to settle the common law then we need not do that and in fact we are running a real risk that we going to create more case law as lawyers argue as to whether or not this is actually an accurate reflection of the common law or not or whether this goes further or does not go as far, and we have lovely and fertile ground for legal argument and much delay and academic debate, running up some nice costs for lawyers who love to argue these points.

Therefore, I ask the Honourable Attorney General to explain the rationale for having those two provisions included in this legislation.

I now move to page 30, Part VI, which deals with the extradition and execution in criminal matters. The first observation I have is that section 32, which deals with the exchange of information relating to terrorist groups and terrorist acts. In section 32 (1): "Subject to subsection (2), the Reporting Authority and the Commissioner of Police may, on a request made by the appropriate authority of a foreign state, disclosed to that authority, any information in its possession or in the possession of any other government department agency relating to any of the following -

- (a) the actions and movements of terrorist groups suspected of involvement in the commission of terrorist acts;
- (b) the use of forged or falsified travel papers where persons suspected of involvement in the commission of terrorist acts;
- (c) traffic in weapons and sensitive materials by terrorist groups or persons suspected of involvement in the commission of terrorist acts; or
- (d) the use of communications technologies by terrorist groups.

In section 32(2) it says: "A disclosure under subsection (1) may only be made-

- (a) if it is not prohibited by the provisions of any other Law;
- (b) subject to provisions of any other Law regulating the procedures to be followed when making such disclosure; and
- (c) if, in the opinion of the Reporting Authority, after consulting with the Attorney General, and the Commissioner of Police, it would not be prejudicial to a national security of public safety."

I think that is absolutely fine and spot-on because it makes the disclosure subject to whatever legislation exists in addition to the safeguards of the Reporting Authority, the Attorney General and the Commissioner of Police. That, I believe, is the way that legislation should be drafted so that when information is being disclosed it is being done pursuant to legislation, which permits it, or at least which does not expressly prohibit it. I have no difficulty with that.

I do have a major difficulty with Part VI where it seeks to deal with extradition. Section 33 addresses counter terrorism convention to be used as a basis for extradition. I do understand the difficulties which the government faces in the absence of expressed extradition agreements between us and various other countries, and I acknowledge that.

However, I believe that seeking to address this area of extradition, which is controversial, any of us who have been in Cayman for a while will understand how heated and drawn out and expensive extradition proceedings can be. I believe that the whole question of extradition which the legislation attempts to address, is going to create real problems for us. I am not saying that there is another way that it can be dealt with shortly, because I understand that it would take some time and tremendous effort to forge extradition agreements with just about every other country in the world if that is the way we were to go. However, the way that it is proposed to deal with this is so vague, and perhaps necessarily so, that we are inviting all sorts of challenges to the process.

I will read two of the subsections, which will help to make the point I am seeking to advance. Section 33(1): “Where-

(a) the United Kingdom becomes a party to a counter-terrorism convention and it extends such convention to the Islands; and

(b) there is in force, an extradition arrangement between the United Kingdom and another state which is a party to that counter terrorism convention, the extradition arrangement shall be deemed for the purposes of giving effect to this Law to include provision for extradition in respect of offences falling within the scope of that counter terrorism convention”.

What his law is seeking to do is to import and create offences which have been identified in a convention which the UK has become party to with another state which is also a party to that counter-terrorism convention. Madam Speaker, that is going to be the subject of real challenge if we ever seek to rely on these provisions as the basis for an extradition proceeding.

However, 33 (2) is even more problematic:

“Where –

(a) the United Kingdom becomes a party to a counter-terrorism convention and it extends such convention to the Islands; and

(b) there is no extradition arrangement between the United Kingdom and another state which is party to that counter terrorism convention,

The Governor in Council may, by order published in the Gazette, treat the counter-terrorism convention for the purposes of giving effect to this Law, as an arrangement between the United Kingdom and that state for providing for extradition in respect of offences falling within the scope of the counter-terrorism convention.”

What is contemplated is a situation where the UK, although party to the counter-terrorism convention and having extended that convention to the Islands, has no extradition arrangements between itself and that other state. However, we are seeking to rely on that convention as a basis for creating an extradition procedure and statutory basis in relation to that other state. As a matter of law, I believe that is fraught with real difficulty.

I have similar concerns relating to section 34 as well. Perhaps I should read that one for the sake of completeness. It is a difference circumstance; it is about mutual legal assistance nevertheless the concern is the same. Section 34(1) says: “Where-

(a) the United Kingdom becomes a party to a counter-terrorism convention and it extends that convention to the Islands; and

(b) there is in force an arrangement between the United Kingdom and another state which is a party to that counter-terrorism convention, for mutual assistance in criminal matters,

the arrangement shall be deemed for the purposes of mutual legal assistance legislation in the Islands to include provisions for mutual legal assistance in criminal matters falling within the scope of the counter-terrorism convention.”

The concern is perhaps less than it was in relation to the section 33, however there is still a concern that those provisions are vague, and perhaps—if I am not being too unkind—untidy.

Madam Speaker, before I move on to the other substantive point I would like to deal with section 47, which by way of observation, creates a power to stop and search individuals in specified areas where there is concern about their potential involvement in terrorist activities.

This procedure again is unusual, if I can use a neutral term, because it permits a police officer of at least the rank of inspector to authorise other police officers to stop and search persons without the benefit of a warrant. It is an authorisation of a limited tenure and of a restricted scope however it is quite a draconian power, and one which is not, in the first instance, subject to judicial oversight. I am not complaining about its inclusion in the legislation. I am simply pointing out that this is quite radical legislation; to ensure that no one thinks I am complaining about it, that this is necessarily so, given the threats that the legislation is designed to deal with. However, it does impose tremendous responsibility and judgement on the police in the exercise of the significant powers and ability which is given to them under the terms of this legislation.

I think it is a good thing that there is provision at the end of the law for both the Attorney General and the Chief Secretary to be able to bring a report to the Legislative Assembly about the working of this Law so that we have a continued oversight about how well the provisions of the Law are working and whether or not they are being abused by this Honourable House. As it is such an onerous and responsible task to prepare this report we have two Members of Executive Council who are charged with the responsibility to prepare and bring it.

The last point I have a real complaint about, is section 55, which refers to the “power to intercept communications and admissibility of intercepted communications”.

Curiously, throughout this legislation there is provision for the Governor in Council to do various things: to make orders, to have them gazetted and to do various other things which are required under the law. However, under this section which relates to the power to intercept communications the power is proposed to be vested not in the Governor in Council but in His Excellency the Governor. Given recent events which I will not tire the House with repeating, I believe we all have concerns about vesting the power to intercept communications in the hands of Her Majesty's representative in these Islands.

An Honourable Member: Hear, hear!

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, there may be some who do not repose sufficient confidence in the Cabinet of this country to give the responsible duty of determining whether or not communications should be intercepted to them. However, I believe there are even more who have less confidence in reposing that responsible duty in the hands of Her Majesty's representative, particularly in light of recent events, as I said.

Section 55(1) says: "Subject to subsection (2), a constable who is of at least the rank of inspector may, for the purposes of obtaining evidence of the commission of an offence under this Law, apply to the Governor" not the Governor in Council "in writing for an interception of communications order.

(2) The constable may make an application under subsection (1) only with the prior written consent of the Attorney General.

(3) The Governor may make an order-

(a) requiring a service provider to intercept and retain a specified communication or communications of specified description received or transmitted or about to be received or transmitted by that service provider;

(b) authorising the constable to enter any premises and to install on such premises any device for the interception and retention of a specified communication or communication of a specified description and remove and retain such device,

if the Governor [not the Governor in Council] is satisfied that the written consent of the Attorney General has been obtained as required by subsection (2) and that there are reasonable grounds to believe that material information relating to-

(i) the commission of an offence under this Law; or

is contained in that communication or communications of that description".

Again, I question why that responsibility, relating to the power to intercept communications, is proposed to be vested in the Governor and not the Governor in Council. Perhaps the Government Members who are present can provide us with some explanation as to why they appear to have agreed to such a provision in this Bill since it is being presented by the Government. There are fundamental objections on this side of the Floor to reposing that tremendous responsibility in the hands of the Governor, whoever he or she may be.

Hour of Interruption—4.30 pm

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of 4.30 pm. Is this a convenient time for the adjournment or would the Member wish to go on a bit more?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I am entirely in your hands. I still have a substantial amount to deal with.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: It seems that it is the will of the House for the adjournment to be at this time. The Honourable Deputy Leader, may I have a motion for the adjournment?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until tomorrow, Thursday 17 July 2003.

The Speaker: Thank you.

I recognise the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Point of Procedure

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker, just before we take the vote for the adjournment, as I understand it from the Clerk there is no scheduled Business Committee Meeting for today, and tomorrow being Private Members' Motion day, I just wish to get a clear indication as to how the business of the House is intended to be handled.

Frankly, it does not matter to us on this side; we would just like to have a clear indication whether we are going to go through the Government Business first or Bills.

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, it is the feeling of the Members on this side that we should go through Government Business first before we deal with other matters.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: That matter has not been disposed of. I will put the question that the Honourable House be adjourned until tomorrow, 17 July, 2003 at 10 am.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.32 pm the House stood adjourned until Thursday, 17 July, 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
TUESDAY
17 JULY 2003
10.45 AM
Fourteenth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable Second Official Member to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived : We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Cayman Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come. They will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10:48 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable First Official Member, the Minister of Education, the Minister of Community Affairs, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, the Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the Elected Member for East End.

Honourable Deputy Leader, is it the intention of the House to sit until 6 pm this afternoon?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, that was my understanding. Having had a look at the Order Paper, I believe that if we are lucky we might get through before that time.

The Speaker: Thank you. I will recognise the Deputy Leader for the Suspension of Standing Order 14 to allow the business on today's Order Paper to be changed to allow the Presentation of Papers to come at a later stage.

Suspension of Standing Order 14

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I wish to move the relevant Standing Order to allow the Presentation of Papers and of Reports to come at a later stage.

The Speaker: The question is that in accordance with Standing Order 14 the Order Paper be changed to allow the Presentation of Papers to be presented at a later stage during today's Sitting.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Order Paper changed to allow the Paper to be taken at a later stage during this Sitting.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Management of the .ky Internet Domain

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Over the past eighteen months I have, on several occasions, updated this Honourable House on the situation concerning the management of the .ky Internet Domain.

Members will recall that prior to the enactment of the Information and Communications Technology Authority Law, 2002, the administrative contact for the .ky Internet Domain was Mr. Clint Mole; an ex-government employee who, by then, was working for a local company on a work permit. When the new Law came into force in May 2002, the Authority proposed to grant Mr. Mole temporary authority to continue his duties so that a smooth handover to the Information and Communications Technology (ICT) Authority could take place. In practice, Mr. Mole decided that because of his legal liability to third parties, he would simply cease to perform the functions of administrative contact.

Within 24 hours, the ICT Authority took over the duties and responsibilities of administrative contact with very little disruption to the smooth running of the domain. They have continued to do so ever since.

Mr. Mole has now returned to the U.K. with his family and has no further involvement in the administration of the domain. Indeed, because he is outside this jurisdiction, he is ineligible to do so.

Technical services for the .ky Internet Domain had been provided by a company called Message Secure Corporation of Boston, Massachusetts, under a contract from IMS Inc. of California. The hardware and software on which these services were running were owned by Internet Management Services Incorporated (IMS Inc.) and were located at a secure network access point in Boston with a duplicate system located in a similar facility in Los Angeles, California.

When the Information and Communications Technology Authority (ICTA) Law came into force, IMS Inc. recognised that the series of contracts under which they were providing technical services might not be valid. Accordingly, the initiated action to sue the shareholders of the company called Domain Name Trust Incorporated (DNT Inc.) who had sold them these alleged rights. They also offered to sell to Government the hardware and software that was being used to run the domain, plus to provide an electronic copy of all relevant registration data.

As a result of the legal proceedings between IMS Inc. and DNT Inc. there was a real risk that DNT Inc. would seek a Court ruling that would allow them to seize all of IMS Inc.'s assets including the domain name servers.

On the 7 June 2002, Executive Council therefore agreed to purchase the hardware and software from IMS Inc. for a sum of US$238,000. This purchase included seven machines located in Boston and Los Angeles together with the associated communications and network security equipment and the source code and licenses for all software developed or purchased by IMS Inc.

In addition, an electronic copy of all registration data was transmitted to Government the same day. My Ministry also took over the contract that previously existed between IMS Inc. and Message Secure Corporation for the provision of technical services.

The value of cost of this contract is CI$7,900 per month. This includes the cost of housing the equipment in the network access points in Boston and Los Angeles and of providing monitoring and technical support twenty four hours a day, seven days a week.

Responsibility for the payment of this contract has now been transferred to the ICT Authority. The Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN) and its subsidiary organisation, the Internet Assigned Numbers Authority (IANA) are the two bodies charged by the United States Department of Commerce with overseeing the management of internet domains.

My Ministry and the ICT Authority made a joint submission to ICANN requesting that the responsibility for the management of the domain be formally re-allocated to the Authority. I am pleased to report that following an exchange of documents, that clarified the respective responsibilities of ICANN, the Government and the Authority, ICANN's Board of Directors approved our request earlier this month.

That decision has now been endorsed by the United States Department of Commerce and our Master Records have been changed in ICANN's data base. I am sure that all Honourable Members will be gratified that the Cayman Islands now has proper control of our own Internet Domain and that this outcome has been achieved without the need for any form of payment other than that detailed above to the parties previously involved. Thank you Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Deputy Leader. I believe you had another statement as well.

New Cable & Wireless Licence as Issued by the ICT Authority

Hon. Linford A. Pierson. Thank you, Madam Speaker. The 10 July, 2003 was a most important day in the history of the Cayman Islands. For the past 37 years Cable & Wireless has been the sole provider of domestic and international telecommunications to this country.

There is no doubt that they have given excellent service during that time. They invested in this country at a time when no one else was prepared to do so. They have put in place an excellent telecommunications infrastructure. They have trained, encouraged and developed our local people. Not only is a vast majority of their staff Caymanian but many, who are now employed elsewhere in the ICT sector, owe their technical expertise to their initial training by Cable & Wireless.

Cable & Wireless have also been first class corporate citizens, but times have changed. In today's information based economy the ready availability of the widest possible range of high quality telecommunication services at the lowest possible, yet sustainable prices, has become key to our country's economy and the development of its citizens.

Almost everyone from the World Trade Organisation (WTO) to individual governments has concluded that the best, if not only, way to achieve this goal is to liberalise the sector.

The spur of competition will drive prices down to their lowest economic level whilst improving the range and quality of services provided. Another consideration is the convergence of the many technologies that make up the information and communications technology sector. For example, radio and television broadcasters are already able to distribute their programming over the internet as well as over the air.

Cable television providers are providing telephone and Internet services. Internet service providers can incorporate local and international telephone services into their offerings and, in some jurisdictions, telephone service providers now include subscription television amongst their services.

I have no doubt that this trend will continue in ways we cannot now imagine to provide customers with true freedom of choice and to allow the best solution to their development in the market. It is important that legislation and regulations do not artificially distort the market by applying different rules to different technologies.

The Cayman Islands was one of the first countries in the world to address this issue by enacting a single law, The Information and Communications Technology Authority Law 2002, and establishing a single Regulatory Authority, the ICT Authority, to licence and regulate the entire ICT sector in a consistent and non-discriminatory fashion.

Cable & Wireless also understand that the ICT sector has changed. They recognise that their future lies in a liberated market where they have the opportunity to re-act quickly to user requirements and competitive pressures. They can earn revenue from selling their services to other providers and where innovation, expertise and quality of service are appropriately rewarded.

They, therefore, have publicly stated on many occasions that they are committed to supporting the liberalisation process. Of course, they wish to be assured that the new regulatory environment is fair, equitable and non-discriminatory.

They also owe it to their shareholders to ensure that they achieve the best possible terms for voluntarily surrendering an exclusive licence that, in the normal course of events, would not end until December 2011. Negotiations were robust and challenging for both sides however have always been conducted in a thoroughly respectful and professional manner.

I am now delighted to say that these negotiations have been successfully concluded and on the 10 July, 2003 I signed a main agreement between Government and Cable & Wireless that resulted in the surrender of their existing exclusive licence and the issuing of their new non-exclusive one by the ICT Authority.

Not only was this achieved within the one month specified in the Heads of Agreement that was signed on the 10 June, 2003, but it results in full liberalisation being completed by the 1 April 2004. This is significantly earlier than the target date of August 2004 that I set when I first announced the liberalisation initiative at a Chamber of Commerce speech back in July 2001.

I must also emphasise as I have before that I am talking here about the final step in the liberalisation process, that is, the liberalisation of international telecommunication services, competition and all other services will commence much earlier.

In this instance, as in many others this Government has not shirked from tackling a difficult issue that has been with us for some time. Yet again, we have delivered on our promises and delivered ahead of schedule. We have done and will continue to do our part.

I now look to the private sector, not only to take advantage of the opportunities we have created but also to pass the resulting savings onto their customers which will reduce the cost of doing business here in the Cayman Islands and likewise have a positive impact on the cost of living.

I believe it would now be appropriate for me to repeat the details of the liberalisation timetable. With immediate effect, application forms for all types of telecommunication licences may be issued including the re-sale of Cable & Wireless International Services.

As soon as they are licensed, new entrants may compete for the provision of domestic telecommunications. Newly licensed entrants, wishing to provide other services such as mobile, may begin to construct their networks.

On 1 November 2003, alternative licence internet service providers may begin operation. Cable & Wireless will standardize their local and inter-island call charges to fixed lines at nine cents for the first minute and two cents per minute thereafter.

On 1 December 2003, Cable & Wireless business line rental will increase to $30 per month. At the same time all international call charges will be reduced on average by at least 40 per cent for residential and business subscribers.

On 1 January 2004, Cable & Wireless' residential line rental will increase from $6.25 or $4.75 where the subscriber has chosen not to rent a handset to $9 per month. Cable & Wireless will introduce a light-user scheme with a line rental charge of $8 per month and a rebate of up to $3 per month on the cost of local fix-to-fix telephone calls.

This will be a restricted telephone service package that permits access to the telephone network and emergency services. It therefore will be available only to residential customers with a single line and will not include enhanced features such as call waiting and Internet access. The cost of calls in excess of the $3 rebate will be charged at the normal rate. Full details of the light-user scheme are contained in the main agreement.

On 1 February 2004, licensed domestic mobile service providers may commence commercial operations and re-sell Cable & Wireless international services.

On 1 April 2004, competition in international telecommunications may commence. The liberalisation process will be complete with competition possible in all areas. Cable & Wireless' residential line rental will increase from $9 to $12.

It is difficult for the ICT Authority to know exactly when the first competitive licence will be issued because it depends on the applicants as much as the Authority. Nevertheless, they have given the following provisional timetable.

Application forms which have already been the subject of public consultation were made available to new applicants with effect from Monday, 14 July 2003.

At the same time, the main agreement and Cable & Wireless' new licence were made publicly available. Within fourteen days of the signing of the main agreement, that is, by 25 July, potential new applicants will be required to submit to the Authority a formal statement of their intent to apply for a licence, detailing the networks and services in which they are interested.

Shortly thereafter, the staff of the Authority will hold a briefing session for potential applicants. Applicants who wish to be considered for a licence during 2003 will be required to submit their full applications within 30 days from 10 July; the 30 days will be up by 10 August.

No further applications will be accepted until 1 January 2004. The authorities aim is to issue the first licence or licences by 10 September this year 2003 at the latest, thus giving new licensees a good chance of completing their technical and commercial arrangements in time to begin commercial operations at the earliest possible date.

I would like to record my sincere appreciation at the tremendous effort and extremely long hours put in by both negotiating teams, especially in the last month, between the signing of the heads of agreement and 10 July when the main agreement was signed.

I would like to make special mention of my colleague and fellow Member of the Legislative Assembly, Mr. Cline Glidden, Jr., for his invaluable assistance, my Chief Officer and the staff of my Ministry, the Board, Managing Director and staff of the ICT Authority and all other Members of the Government negotiating team including you, Madam Speaker.

For the benefit of all Members of this Honourable House, it was at this point I was going to give out the main agreement — and I believe that this has been done already by our efficient Serjeant-at-Arms, Madam Speaker. I now have pleasure in tabling this statement and a copy of the main agreement with Cable & Wireless.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: This includes at Schedule 2 a full copy of the new Cable & Wireless Licence as issued by the ICT Authority. Members of the public may obtain copies of these documents from the Authority's website at www.icta.ky or printed copies from the ICTA offices for a nominal fee. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Deputy Leader. I recognise the Member for North Side.

Short Questions—Standing Order 30(2)

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Under Standing Order 30(2), I wonder if you would allow me to ask the Honourable Minister two short questions on his statements on the .ky Internet Domain.

The Speaker: Yes, please proceed.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could provide this House with the name of the local company together with the names of the shareholders and directors that Mr. Clint Mole, an ex-government employee, was employed by. That is my first question.

The second one regards the first page where it says: "Mr. Mole has now returned to the UK with his family and has no further involvement —"

The Speaker: Member for North Side, sorry for the interruption but may I ask you to repeat the first one please as the Minister is trying to record in order to respond. Perhaps he can respond to one at a time. Thank you.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The first question is if the Minister is in a position to provide the House with the name of the local company together with the names of the shareholders and directors that Mr. Clint Mole, an ex-government employee, was employed by at the time that he had the .ky Internet Domain.

The Speaker: Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, unfortunately I do not have those details here with me however I would be pleased to provide the information requested by the Honourable Member in writing.

The Speaker: Thank you. Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I thank the Honourable Minister for that undertaking.

My second question regarding the first page of the statement where it says: “Mr. Mole has now returned to the UK with his family and has no further involvement in the administration of the domain. Indeed, because he is outside this jurisdiction, he is ineligible to do so.”

My question is, should he return to this jurisdiction will he then be eligible to have further involvement in the .ky Domain?

The Speaker: Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Member could explain what she means by “further involvement in the .ky domain”.

The Speaker: Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I am only repeating what is written in the statement and it says: “Mr. Mole has now returned to the UK with his family and he has no further involvement in the administration of the domain. Indeed, because he is outside this jurisdiction, he is ineligible to do so”. My question is, should he return to this jurisdiction will he be able to have further involvement in the administration of the domain?

The Speaker: Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I wish to thank the Honourable Member for that clarification. I can assure the Honourable Member and this Honourable House that as long as this Minister is in charge of the ICT Authority and of the .ky Domain then Mr. Clint Mole will have no further involvement in the administration of the domain.

The Speaker: Member for North Side, you have asked two questions however I will allow you one more.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Well, it is a follow up, Madam Speaker, if I may. I thank you.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I appreciate the Honourable Minister’s reply but could he say if it is in the Law whereby this gentleman will be prohibited from having any further involvement in the administration of the domain?

The Speaker: Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, as far as my memory calls it is not specifically stated there however I do have policy directives that I can exercise and that is one which will be exercised.

The Speaker: Thank you.
Madam Clerk.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

Response to Private Member’s Motion 12/00, Environmental and Cancer study

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House a response to Motion 12/00, Environmental and Cancer study.

The Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereon?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, thank you. Madam Speaker and fellow Members of the Legislative Assembly.

Private Members’ Motion No. 12/00, moved by the then Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, Mr. Roy Bodden, and Seconded by the then Elected Member for North Side, Mrs. Edna Moyle, reads, and I quote:

“WHEREAS the Mosquito and Control Unit has been conducting aerial spraying over Grand Cayman for many years now;

“AND WHEREAS to date no scientific study, to our knowledge, has been carried out to ascertain what, if any, effects such long term spraying has on the environment, flora, fauna and human population;

“AND WHEREAS some Members of the Legislative Assembly have received concerns from their constituents and other members of the public with regard to what many of these persons believe, is an abnormal cancer rate in the Cayman Islands,

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider commissioning a scientific study to ascertain:

“(1) what effects, if any, long term aerial spraying has on the flora, fauna, environment and people of these Islands; and

“(2) whether there is any scientific evidence to support the notion that there is an abnormal cancer rate in the Cayman Islands which emanates from aerial spraying, hazardous leaks from the George Town landfill site or any other environmental cause.

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the report, in its entirety, be tabled immediately upon receipt in the Legislative Assembly for debate.”

This Motion was passed by this Honourable House and the Ministry of Health was asked to co-ordinate the investigation of

- (1) the Environmental effects of the use of pesticides for mosquito control used in long term aerial spraying over Grand Cayman; and
- (2) the publicly perceived abnormal rates of cancer in the Cayman Islands.

The then Honourable Minister of Health requested that the Health Services Department form a steering committee to review the existing data and make recommendations as to the way forward.

As a result, an eight-member steering committee was formed under the Chairmanship of the then Chief Medical Officer.

As the Minister of Health, it is now my duty to lay on the Table of this Honourable House a response to Motion 12/2000, The Environmental and Cancer Study Report. In speaking to the Report, I shall deal with the two Sections separately.

The First Section: “BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider commissioning a study to ascertain: (1) what effects, if any, long term aerial spraying has on Flora, Fauna, Environment and people of these Islands.”

The Mosquito Research Control Unit began mosquito control operations in the mid-1960s. Throughout its existence, a number of different insecticides have been used for this purpose.

Currently, the Mosquito Research Control Unit employs insecticides designed either for killing adult mosquitoes, usually applied as a fine mist at the time of peak mosquito activity, or larval mosquitoes applied directly to the aquatic habitat where immature mosquitoes occur.

I would like to draw to the attention of Members of this Honourable House the following statement in Section 1 in the Report: “All insecticides used by the Mosquito Research Control Unit (MRCU) are registered under the US Federal Insecticides Fungicides and Rodenticides Act (FIFR), are approved for use in Mosquito Control by the US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and are applied at rates approved by the EPA.”

The approval process of the EPA includes vigorous testing to ensure unreasonable adverse health or environmental effects do not occur.

Operations and research conducted by the MRCU including insecticides employed are presently governed by the Mosquito Research and Control Law, 1974. However, legislation specific to the use of pesticides in the Cayman Islands is expected to be brought to the Legislative Assembly in the near future.

It is expected that the Legislation will be modelled on that which applies to the State of Florida in the United States, although it will be suitably modified to take into account the specifics of the Cayman Islands.

The Report also highlights that following a number of enquiries to the Department, MRCU has begun collaborative research with Clark Mosquito Control and Iowa State University to determine whether, and to what extent, any residues of the insecticides may occur in the roof collected cistern water and thus far the initial tests were negative for chlorpyrifos insecticide residue.

It is intended that MRCU along with other interested agencies and departments will enhance pesticide residue studies with drinking water, soil samples, mangroves, leaf, litter, and so forth.

MRCU will develop appropriate project proposals for implementation and eventually establish a routine monitoring programme to ensure insecticide residue levels do not exceed established safe levels.

The environmental study envisaged by the Motion is one that looks at the flora, fauna, environment and people of the Cayman Islands. It is extremely broad in scope and will likely be prohibitively expensive.

It is concluded, therefore, that the matter will need to be addressed through a series of smaller studies on various components of the perceived problem.

Concerns associated with insecticides and their effect on human health, non-target organisms and the environment in general have been studied for many years and there is a large body of published research in this area.

In the absence of information specific to the Cayman Islands, a prudent first step would be to conduct a comprehensive literature review that would assist in focusing future studies.

The US Environmental Protection Agency, the World Health Organisation, academic institutions, environmental consulting firms and pesticide manufacturers are all bodies that could act as sources of expertise to assist with a literature review.

I seek assistance from my colleague, with responsibility for the Departments of Environment and MRCU, for the introduction of such a review with a purpose of identifying any local research needs.

Noting the difficulty of drawing conclusions from studies with small size territories and small populations, it makes more sense to depend on extensive global literature rather than re-inventing. For example, the medical care we provide here in the Cayman Islands is based on research conducted elsewhere.

However, I hasten to add that we must have monitoring systems and operational research components as integral parts of all programmes to ensure safe practises.

In summarising part 1 of the report, I would like to re-state the following:

- (1) MRCU uses approved insecticides in an approved manner;
- (2) Pesticide Residue Studies will be further enhanced;
- (3) MRCU will undertake to develop and implement monitoring systems for safe practises;

(4) A comprehensive literature review will be carried out to determine what information is currently available globally and how such information relates to the Cayman Islands;

(5) The completion of a literature review should provide a clearer picture of likely harmful environmental effects of long term aerial spraying.

This review will enable Government to establish whether further research is required and, if so, in what form it should take.

I would now like to deal with the second part of the Motion which states: “BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government consider commissioning a study to ascertain: whether there is any scientific evidence to support the notion that there is an abnormal cancer rate in the Cayman Islands which emanates from aerial spraying, hazardous leaks from the George Town landfill site or any other environmental cause.”

Mortality and morbidity data in the Cayman Islands was reviewed.

This report discusses and compares the Cayman Islands incidence and mortality rates due to cancer with the world in general, the Caribbean region and individual countries with similar economies and population make-up, such as the Bahamas, or with close ties in terms of migrant population, that is the United States and the United Kingdom.

Published mortality data due to cancer in the Cayman Islands has been available since 1984. The data was in a consolidated manner until 1991. Since 1992 the data has been computerised, hence initial reference is made to cancer deaths since 1984 while details are only available from the data since 1992.

Members of this Honourable House should note that information in this report on cancer cases detected is based on cancer diagnosis made at the Cayman Islands hospital laboratory.

From late 1991, the pathology laboratory of the Cayman Islands hospital started the diagnosis of specimens for cancer and this is the only laboratory in the Cayman Islands that maintains a comprehensive database of all cancers identified. Therefore, morbidity data from this database is the only source of information used in this report.

As shown on page 16 of the report, “ . . . With some minor fluctuations, the crude death rate has, in general, gradually fallen from 5.4 per 1,000 population in 1984 to 1987 to 3.3 in the period of 1996 to 1999 . . . ” and to 2.8 in 2002 indicating our people are living longer and longer and that there has been reduction in premature deaths overall.

The Report goes on to examine mortality rates due to cancer, tumours or malignant neo-plasms which are groups of cells with the ability to invade and destroy surrounding tissues and are able to spread to other organs through the blood stream or lymphatic system.

I understand that there are more than 100 different cancers known; each with its own description, natural disease progression, treatment and survival rate.

Around the world, including skin cancers, an estimated 3.5 million people died from malignant neo-plasms in year 2000 and 5.3 million were suffering from various types of cancer.

Following cardio-vascular diseases in the developed world, cancer is the second most common cause of death.

In the USA, one in every three individuals will develop some form of cancer in his or her lifetime and one in every five individuals will die from it, making cancer the second leading cause of death. In the USA, cancer was responsible for 23 per cent of all deaths in 1998 and again in 1999.

Turning now to local information, during the entire period of 1984 to 1999 there was a total of 1,856 deaths of which 377, or 20.3 per cent, were due to cancers in the Cayman Islands.

The proportion of cancer deaths over the years remains similar with only minor fluctuations. In 2002 there were about 120 deaths, of which 20 per cent were due to cancer. “ . . . annual cancer mortality rate for the Cayman Islands has fallen from 109 in 1984 to 77 per 100,000 population in 1999.” This figure declined to 56 per 100,000 population in 2002.

During the period under review, the second most common cause of death in the Cayman Islands resident population, accounting for 20 per cent of deaths, was due to cancers. These figures are similar to those of the United States of America.

Diseases of the circulatory system were the first cause of death responsible for about 40 per cent of all deaths.

As indicated in the report, cancers are degenerative diseases associated with the aging process and occur most frequently in individuals above 40 years old and are also more common as a cause of death after 60 years of age.

Such was the case in the Cayman Islands with 80 per cent of cancer deaths occurring after 60 years of age.

I would like to now highlight some key points from the report:

(1) In general around the world in both developed and developing societies, more males than females are diagnosed with cancer and die of cancer. Such is the case in Cayman with the male cancer mortality rate per 100,000 population being 93.8 for males and 63.8 for females. These figures are similar to that of the Bahamas with 98 per 100,000 for males and 80 per 100,000 for females. However, the rates in the United States and the UK are double that of the Cayman Islands figures.

(2) The Cayman Islands crude incidence rate of male cancers for 100,000 population is 97.78; lower than that of the Caribbean figure of 167.2. The United States and the UK figures are four times higher. The Cayman Islands crude incidence rate of female cancer is 142.9 per 100,000 population; again less than that of the Caribbean rate of 172.9 and 176 for the Bahamas. The UK and the USA figures are four times higher.

The low crude incidence of male cancers in the Cayman Islands has to be considered with some reservation as some cases might have been diagnosed overseas and not captured in the data in the Report.

(3) In the Cayman Islands the five leading sites for men's cancer incidence were: prostate, 27 per year; colon, 2-3 per year; bladder, 1-2 per year; stomach, 1 per year; and unspecified multiple sites.

(4) The five leading sites for women's cancer incidence were: cervix/ uteri, 7-8 per year — this figure dropped to 4 per year on review; breast, 5-6 per year; uterus, 2 per year; colon, 1-2 per year; other genital organs, 1-2 per year.

(5) In the Cayman Islands, the crude incidence of the most common male and female cancers was broadly similar to that of the Caribbean region and the Bahamas. However, an exception was the much higher rate of incidence of cervical cancer found in the Cayman Islands.

The crude rate of incidence of 46.5 per 100,000 population in the Cayman Islands is almost three times that of the world wide rate of 15.66, 1.3 times higher than for the Caribbean region rate of 34.8 per cent and 2.3 times higher than that estimated for the Bahamas, which was 20.26 per cent.

USA and UK crude incidence rates for cervical cancer was only 9.37 per cent and 11.81 per cent respectively. This prompted a review of the way cervical cancer data was collected. This review revealed that a significant number of non-evasive cases had been entered as cervical cancer in the tumour register. With the adjustment, the incidence of invasive cervical cancer is 22.2 per 100,000 population, being similar to that of the Bahamas and lower than that of the Caribbean.

The crude incident rate for prostate cancer in the Cayman Islands, 38.29 per 100,000 population was very similar to that of the Caribbean, 34.33 per 100,000 population. The mortality rate due to prostate cancer in the Cayman Islands 21.54 per 100,000 population was also very similar to that of the Caribbean region, 19.73 per 100,000 population. These figures are far higher in the USA, 140.8 and the UK, 73.7.

In conclusion, part 2 of the report indicates that the overall cancer incidence and mortality rates found for the Cayman Islands are less than those of developed nations such as the USA and the UK.

This could be the result of either fewer cancers in the local population or improved diagnosis of cancer in the USA and UK, or both. Based on the analysis of the available Cayman Islands crude incidence and mortality data, and its comparison with international data, neither male nor female overall crude incidence and mortality rates of cancer for the Cayman Islands can be considered abnormally high, rather the figures are lower, except for cervical cancer.

Similarly to the USA, cancers were the second most common cause of death in the Cayman Islands resident population, accounting for 20% of deaths. This should be considered in the context that in general one in four to five deaths in the developed world are due to cancer.

The committee compiling the report made some recommendations for improving the quality of data, prevention and treatment programmes. It is recommended that a comprehensive National Cancer Register (NCR) for the Cayman Islands be developed immediately.

The Report highlights the need for continued improvement of existing strategies of the public health sector to address cancer issues in terms of prevention programmes, education on sexually transmitted diseases in the schools and other health promotional activities. I am pleased to report that the recently revised National Strategic Plan for Health will be addressing this issue.

The Report also calls for a National Policy on tobacco and tobacco products, importation and consumption, as several of the most common cancers in the world are related to tobacco consumption.

The National Drug Strategic Plan addresses this issue in a separate strategy. However, this is one of many areas in which I will be working with other Ministers to address issues affecting the health of the people of the Cayman Islands. Later this year I propose to bring legislation to this Honourable House to regulate the sale of tobacco in this country.

Another recommendation is that improvements in the management of existing cancer cases should continue to be a priority to increase survival wherever possible.

I am pleased to inform Members of this Honourable House that the Cayman Islands hospital has engaged the services of an oncologist since the development of this report and much work is being done in this area now.

The report also calls for a National Health and Safety Committee to be created and legislation produced that addresses the prevention of exposure to environmental cancer agents among other issues of health and safety. This is another area where Ministries will need to work together.

The report highlights the difficulty in attempting to find statistical relationships between the occurrence of certain types of cancer and possible causing agents present in the environment due to the small numbers of cases, being one to two in most types.

It is recommended that we depend upon the large body of international literature and join our data with larger institutions, pooling data for countries and areas with similar population sizes and characteristics. In accepting this recommendation, I have discussed the subject with the Pan American Organisation Health (PAHO) representative stationed in Jamaica, with responsibility for the Cayman Islands, for assistance in reviewing this report and offering advice.

I shall be sending the report along with data up to the end of 2002 for their review.

May I remind Members of this Honourable House that cancer is a public health problem? Worldwide every year, more than 10 million people are diagnosed with cancer and more than 6 million die from cancer.

It is predicted that in the next 20 years, these numbers will increase by 50 per cent. The term cancer covers more than 100 different diseases which arise principally as a consequence of exposure to cancer causing agents, carcinogens.

In a press release in June 3, 2003 the World Health Organisation (WHO) and the International Union Against Cancer called for action through concerted efforts by all sectors to prevent and treat cancer throughout the world. If others can do it, we can do it.

Vision 2008 and the Revised National Strategic Plan for Health address the issue of cancer. I aim to develop with the support of this Honourable House, comprehensive and affordable programmes for prevention, early detection and appropriate cancer care services to improve the quality of life of our people. Together Madam Speaker, I think we can achieve this objective.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Minister. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Through you and under the relevant Standing Order, just a quick question as we all know a number of people go to private sector doctors who then refer patients onward to treatment overseas. I wonder if the Minister could comment if there will be a requirement that the private sector doctors report to the cancer registry because I know of instances where people never go to the George Town Hospital laboratory for a diagnosis. Will there will be a requirement so that this can be more comprehensive and more complete?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, what the Honourable Member has said is a fact. It has been pointed out that a number of persons go to private sector doctors and it is not a requirement to report it. That is one of the areas private sector physicians will be requested to report so it can be entered on the Register and it is true that with this billing of data we will be in a better position to know exactly what the situation is and how to respond to it.

Suspension of Standing Order 14(3)

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Deputy Leader for a Motion to suspend Standing Order 14(3).

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(3) to allow Government Business to take precedence over Other Business.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(3) be suspended to allow Government Business to take precedence over Other Business.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 14(3) suspended to allow Government Business to take precedence over Other Business.

SECOND READINGS

The Terrorism Bill, 2003

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: I recognise the Second Elected Member for George Town. We have one hour and 19 minutes remaining.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Before I launch into the continuation of my debate, I just wish to make the observation that there are no questions on today's Order Paper again. There are over 100 questions that remain outstanding and I must register the concern of the Parliamentary Opposition that we do not believe that questions are being given sufficient priority.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, if I may interrupt, The appropriate time to register that concern would be at the adjournment.

Please commence your debate and then on the adjournment I will take your comments.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. When we adjourned yesterday evening, I had completed my discussion and analysis of a number of the sections of the Bill for a Law to combat Terrorism and I had pointed out that this is a Bill that includes a number of unusual and, some may say, draconian provisions, because the whole object of the exercise is to entitle those in authority to move swiftly and to take steps to prevent acts of terror and that necessarily involves considerable invasion of privacy.

In the context of this particular piece of legislation it also involves the creation of extra territorial jurisdiction in relation to the commission of offences. It also permits arrests without warrant and creates the ability for the police to stop and search persons in certain circumstances without warrant.

I noted, Madam Speaker, that this was absolutely necessary in the context of the world in which we live where acts of terror are becoming far too common and the consequences of them are dire. Thus there was no complaint on the part of the Opposition about the objective of the exercise.

I had reached the point where I was registering a fundamental concern with the Bill in section 55 which has the marginal title: "Power to intercept communications and the admissibility of intercepted communications".

The point I made was that this particular section curiously confers an authority on jurisdiction on the Governor to make an Order requiring service providers to intercept and retain specific communication or communications on an application by a police officer of the rank of Inspector or above.

What I noted about this is that it is an authority which is conferred on the Governor and not on the Governor in Council. Throughout the Law, the Governor in Council is given the authority to make numerous orders and to take various steps to ensure that the objective of the Law is achieved. However, in this instance, that power, to Intercept or to require the interception of information and to require service providers to do so, is vested solely in the Governor. I noted that is something with which the Parliamentary Opposition cannot agree.

Perhaps we would not consider this provision so insidious if we had not had the experience last year in connection with the Euro Bank case. We know it is not a question of speculation; we know that the United Kingdom Government, when it considers it necessary and appropriate, will take steps which contravene the provisions of the Cayman Islands Law or Laws which overreach the authority even of the Courts.

For us to be expected to give legislative sanction to that ability is absolutely astounding. Now, I note again, with surprise, that the Government has brought to the House a Bill which contains such an offensive provision.

We have been treated to many, many an exhortation by the Leader of Government Business, in particular, expressing his and the Government's outrage at the way the United Kingdom Government tends to treat us in many matters, particularly in this one. Indeed just yesterday, the Leader of Government Business again complained, and rightly so, about the attitude of the United Kingdom Government to certain aspects of the governance of these Islands.

Again, we express surprise on this side of the Floor that the Government, notwithstanding those concerns, will bring to this Honourable House a Bill which contains such a provision.

Now, Madam Speaker, you see it is all well and good to rail about the injustices that are being perpetrated and that might be perpetrated on the Cayman Islands by de-colonising power. However, it is when the rubber meets the road that we truly come to understand what, or not, the Government is prepared to do to stop these sorts of invasions of privacy in the Cayman Islands.

If the Government is truly concerned about this sort of conduct on the part of the United Kingdom Government, then the proper thing to do is not to present a Bill which contains a provision which would entitle the Governor to make an Order requiring a service provider to intercept communications.

While the objective of the section is perfectly good, we want to be able to intercept communications when there is a risk or a concern that what is being discussed relates to terrorism, because we want to be able to intervene and stop potential acts of terror. That is all well and good, and none of us have a problem with that. The problem is that it opens the whole situation up to abuse.

Now, whether or not the section is in the Law or is not in the Law, it is quite possible the United Kingdom Government will do whatever it wants to do in relation to these matters and might well cause the interception of communication in other instances. They did so in relation to the Euro Bank trial. Indeed, it was even alleged that they sought to intercept communications to the Chief Justice of these Islands to tap his phone. The fact that it is, or is not, in the Law is not going to make them do or not do, whatever it is that they wish to do or not do.

We, who are elected as representatives of this country, should not be seen to be given legislative sanctions to such conduct and I can say on the part of the Opposition that we will not vote for a Bill which contains this provision. I call for solidarity between the Government and ourselves on this point.

We need at least, in this instance, to bridge the political chasm that exists and we need to send the clear and distinct message to Her Majesty's Government that we are not going to give legislative sanction to a provision which entitles the Governor to require the interception of communications. That power and authority is necessary, however it needs to be vested somewhere else other than in the hands of the colonising power.

Recent events should have taught us the lesson that we cannot trust them to exercise that power and authority judiciously and in the best interest of these Islands. An authority needs to be vested in an entity which does have the interest of the Cayman Islands at the forefront of their minds and I am calling on the Government to unify with the Opposition on this point and to either seek to amend this particular provision or to remove it entirely.

Now, I have given this some thought overnight. There may be the real question as to whether or not the appropriate authority or entity, in which to vest this ability to order interception of communications, should be the Governor in Council. There is a good argument that perhaps it should not be Executive Council or a Cabinet anymore than it should be the Governor alone. I am persuaded that a matter such as this, which involves real invasion of privacy, should be subject to judicial oversight and control.

The submission of the Opposition, Madam Speaker is that such an order, requiring a service provider to intercept the communication or communications and to transmit that report to Executive Council, should be made by the Grand Court of the Cayman Islands.

The application should be made to the Grand Court who will then consider whether or not it is an appropriate case for an order to be made. Under the provision of section 55, as it currently stands, the application would be made to the Governor. We are saying that we substitute Grand Court for Governor.

Let the Court review what information there is, let the Court decide whether or not it is appropriate to make an order which will significantly invade a person's privacy.

If there is an appropriate case, the Court will unquestionably make the order, however let it be subject to judicial review and control. Let it not lie in the hands of the colonising power, because, as I said before, recent events have told us quite clearly that they cannot be relied upon to act judiciously.

What is being proposed is not in any way unprecedented. There is, in the context of this particular piece of legislation, the forfeiture of terrorist cash, the monitoring of accounts and the restraining of funds; all of which are subject to judicial oversight and control. No one can simply go and restrain funds, call up a bank and say this account is to be monitored, or forfeit cash which is suspected to be cash for terrorist purposes, without the Court having considered and reviewed the matter and making the Order.

We urge that the Government seek to amend section 55 to require this very important function of interception of communications to be also subject to judicial control and oversight.

Now, I believe that the Government, left to their own devices, would be much happier with a provision along the lines that I have just suggested and that some of them might too regard section 55 as being offensive.

I know that some, the United Kingdom, might get up and say we need to recognise where we are. This Legislative Assembly operates by virtue of an authority which has been delegated under the Constitution and that at the end of the day, if the United Kingdom Government decides that a certain course is to be followed, that course will be followed regardless of what we say or what we do.

We recognise that on this side and we recognise that some of the provisions in the terrorism law, if not all of them, might well be there because that is what the United Kingdom Government wants to see.

However, we answer, if the United Kingdom Government wants to continue to have the ability, and to now have it by virtue of legislation, to invade the privacy of the residents and visitors of these Islands by being able to intercept communications and they want to continue to have the ability to make that judgment call as to whether such an order is necessary themselves then let them do it by order in Council. Let not those of us in here who have a sacred duty to represent the people who elected us and to protect their interest be seen to be given legislative sanction to the United Kingdom to invade our privacy to decide whether or not somebody's phone, including the Chief Justice's should be tapped because they think it is in the best interest of some bigger picture or bigger concern that they have, which those of us who happen to be resident in these small Islands will never quite understand.

Let them do it by order in Council. Let not our Government come down to the Legislative Assembly, present a Bill with such a provision and expect the House to vote in favour of it.

When we are railing about the injustices perpetrated on the country by the United Kingdom as the Leader of Government is always keen to do, let us lead by example, let us send a clear and distinct message to them that we will not be seen to be sanctioning such behaviour. I am hoping that somebody on the Government side, and I am leaving the Honourable Second Official Member aside for that purpose, is going to get up and explain why it is that section 55 is in this Bill and why it is that the Government is not taking serious issue with it, given all of its other protestations about the way the United Kingdom has treated us and is continuing to treat us particularly in relation to these sorts of matters,

We are going to sit and we are going to wait.

The Speaker: Is this an appropriate time for a break?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Yes, it is.

The Speaker: We will now take a 15 minute break.

Proceedings suspended at 12.14 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.21 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you Madam Speaker. When we took the adjournment, I had just about concluded in relation to section 55(1), which seeks to confer on the Governor the power to intercept or to cause the interception of communications by requiring a service provider to intercept and retain a specified communication or communications.

I thought Madam Speaker, that I should, for the sake of completeness refer to a provision in the Information and Communications Technology Authority Law, 2002, which I note was passed by this Honourable House prior to the Euro Bank debacle. That particular piece of legislation contains a provision which although it does not express it in the manner that section 55(1) of the Terrorism Bill does, it does implicitly give authority to the Governor to permit the interception of communications and it does so in a sort of back door or back-handed way.

What it does is to say, there is a general provision which says, that the interception of information or of communications by anyone over an Information and Communications Technology (ICT) network or by means of an ICT service is an offence and then it creates certain carve outs and section 53(2) says: “A person shall not be guilty of an offence under this section if- (a) the message is intercepted, monitored or interrupted in obedience to a warrant or an order issued by the Governor;”.

There is a similar provision relating to the privacy of subscriber information and the similar prohibitions against disclosure of that information except, again, in circumstances where the disclosure is made in obedience to a warrant or order issued by the Governor.

Now, the authority by which the Governor can exempt persons from criminal sanctions is not spelled out in the ICT Law and it seems to derive from some residual authority of the Governor, derived, I presume, by virtue of his appointment or by virtue of that office to which he has been appointed.

There is provision in existing legislation, the 2002 Law, and perhaps that is even more insidious than what is in the Terrorism Bill because in the Terrorism Bill at least, it makes it quite clear that the Governor is going to be invested with this particular authority to cause the interception of communications.

What I say about the provision in the Information and Communications Technology Authority Law, is this; that legislation was passed pre-Euro Bank and prior to all of us, in this Honourable House and outside it, becoming aware of precisely the lengths which the United Kingdom Government is prepared to go when they wish to obtain information and the use to which they are prepared to put that information to further what they regard as the best interests of the United Kingdom. Dress it up though they do under the title of good governance.

Therefore, Madam Speaker, I suggest to Government that instead of bringing a Bill to this Honourable House which contains the provisions of section 53 of this Bill, what they indeed need to be doing is bringing a Bill to amend the Information and Communications Technology Law to remove the power of the Governor to exempt from criminal sanctions individuals who intercept communications under that Law. That is really all I wish to say about the Information and Communications Technology Law.

I will conclude by, again, urging the Government to join ranks with us on this particular point and to propose an amendment at the committee stage to require section 53(1) to be amended so that applications should be made to the Court rather than to the Governor when orders are sought requiring the interception of communications or requiring a service provider to cause such interception to take place.

We can pass the Law in those terms, if it is the will of this House so to do. If His Excellency the Governor or his higher-ups are determined that a provision similar to that of section 53(1) in the Bill must have application then let them do so and let them cause it to happen in another way. The Governor can refuse to assent to the Bill as passed by this Honourable House; he can send it back down for us to reconsider the matter or Her Majesty in Council may disallow the Law which we have caused to be passed here. Let those things be done by the United Kingdom Government. Let us not give legislative sanction to such an ominous and potentially abusive power by giving it the stamp of approval here.

I say to those on the other side that the Opposition will not be seen to be party to a Law which contains a provision giving the Governor those powers in light of what has transpired. If the Government insists on going ahead on this basis they and the country will know that the full responsibility for that and any consequences that flow from it is going to be squarely on their shoulders.

We are prepared on this side, and we have acknowledged the importance of this Bill and the objectives it seeks to achieve, to support the Bill in principle, subject to the specific comments I have made. This point is so fundamental, particularly in light of all that has transpired that we will not vote in favour of this Bill, in its current form.

Indeed, I can make this quite clear that if the Bill proceeds through all its stages without section 55 being amended in terms similar to those I have outlined, we shall, in due course, be making a public statement about the reason why we were unable to give this Bill our support.

I ask the Government to live in accordance with the principles that we have outlined. Let us get beyond the point of ranting and raving about the wrongs that are being done to us.

When the opportunity presents itself for us to be able to actually take concrete steps and send the right message to Her Majesty's Government, let us seize the opportunity. Let us not pretend that we are trying to do the right thing by standing up and spouting off nice-sounding words showing how strong and powerful we are and how we are going to resist the encroachment on the privacy and principles in our Constitution with every sinew in our bodies.

When we are afforded the opportunity to make a concrete statement, to demonstrate to all and sundry that we are not going to simply stand by and allow them to ride roughshod over us we do nothing, let us come together on this point at least, and send a unified solidified message to the UK Government that we are not going to stand for this kind of encroachment on our rights as a people.

I beg the Government to do something and not simply be full of sound and fury, which at the end of the day signifies nothing. Thank you Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

Given the world climate there is no doubt that the Bill before this Honourable House is needed. We see it every day, we hear about it every day and, Madam Speaker, those of us who have to shoulder the responsibility in Cabinet, have to deal with it at times.

Most times, of course, national security is not discussed with us because it is the prerogative of Her Majesty's Government's representative in these Islands. That terrorism is an evil perpetrated on nations and innocent people of the world and that it is something that is causing tremendous upheaval in the various economies of the world needs no questioning. National economies are seriously disrupted through cost and by other means because of terrorism. We pray to God that we may never have to use the legislation that is before us.

Having said that, Madam Speaker, let me reply to the wailing of the Second Member for George Town. He has asked Government why we have not given serious treatment to the Bill and why it is here with section 55 contained in it. I will tell him why it is here in that form.

That Member, perhaps the Party that he represents here, would like people to believe that we have not taken serious cognisance of what the Bill is all about and certainly that was the way he chose to debate. I take special regard of what the Member said in closing. It seems that his objective while trying to debate objectively, was trying to provoke also. Well let that be as it is, I will not follow him in that. This is a most serious matter and I do not think that the House or the country can get anything out of it.

There are many issues our Government are faced with and has had to tackle, over the year and a half for which I have been the Leader of Government Business, and our Executive Council and now Cabinet has been dealing practically with at every meeting.

The greatest challenge in dealing with the new wave of external pressures and the threats to us, to our survival, is because we have a weak Constitution and therefore Madam Speaker, the almighty powers of His Excellency, the Governor, are so profound and the United Kingdom Socialist Government is not failing to utilise them.

First of all I think that most Members here understand that no business can be taken to Cabinet, formerly the Executive Council, without the Governor's approval. There was a draft Bill before the one presently before us, which came to Council, which carried the section for interceptions needs to be applied to a judge. Our pleading for the matter fell on deaf ears. Madam Speaker, I should say that my colleague, the Minister responsible for Telecommunications, did ask the Governor in Executive Council to remove that section of the ICT Law however the Governor would not listen. Thus, our pleading on those matters fell on deaf ears. His Excellency the Governor said that he would take the matter to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and so he did. This memo provides information to us and to the House as to what took place and it is written to the Acting Attorney General from the Governor.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, please permit me to interrupt. Does the memorandum carry the caption of confidential?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, it is dated 5 May 2003,

"Subject: DRAFT BILL TO COMBAT TERRORISM

1. Thank you for showing me this draft Bill including section 55(1) under which a constable could apply ex parte to a Grand Court judge for an interception of communications order.

2. I have consulted the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) about this. There is now some surprise that the draft model legislation which you also showed me provided for interception to be authorised by a judge. The considered FCO view is that the power to authorise intercepts should continue to rest with the Governor. This is what I expected. and I would be grateful if the draft Bill could be amended accordingly before you submit it to Executive Council (ExCo)."

The Speaker: Is it your intention, Honourable Leader to lay it on the Table?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: If I am asked to. If not, I do not have to. However if you think it is necessary I can.

The Speaker: Is it the will of the House to have sight or copies of it or are the Members satisfied with the reading thereof?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, we have nothing to hide. We can lay this on the Table of the Honourable House. I would ask the Serjeant to lay the copy of the memo.

The Speaker: So ordered, thank you.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Perhaps he can get copies for each Member's perusal.

This is the kind of power the Governor has—

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, listen and you will understand that you are not the only one who has ideas, concerns and can plan. We had to plan also, Madam Speaker, to get to this point.

This is the kind of power the Governor has and I think that Members ought to read and re-read their Constitution to understand just where we are, rather than to continue a big fight with the Governor in Executive Council where, no matter what we want, he has the authority to go against us, we took the next best option in allowing the green Bill to this stage. We chose to bring it to this domain where we have the support of our Back Benchers and where we are not bound by the constitutional constraints of confidentiality, while we are bound by collective responsibility. However, in that domain where the Governor reigns supreme, neither did we have the manoeuvrability.

In the Cabinet under this existing Constitution, we can only give advice, which His Excellency is not bound to accept and he can go against us by going to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and, as I said, that is what he has done. I do say here to the Member for George Town, my question is, had we gone the other route, what would have been the Opposition's position? It seems when we are going right he is determined to go left.

We realise that the Opposition would try to make much ado out of the Bill coming here but we also had our own plan.

The Opposition perhaps, should stop and think a little bit more before coming out at the Government with so much blame at all times. Furthermore, all his chat about the fiasco of the former Attorney General is rather tongue in cheek because the only conclusion one can draw from his debate and actions during that most frustrating and dangerous time for the Government and the country was that he was more in support of the former Attorney General than he was of the Government.

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order, Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The Honourable Minister is misleading the House. If he can point to one thing that I said in the course of that whole debate on the issue about the Attorney General that shows that I was in support of the Attorney General then he must do so. Otherwise he must withdraw that misleading remark.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader. Do you have with you supporting evidence or are you prepared to take it to the level of an opinion?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I did say it seemed that it is what he is doing. Hence, if I said: "it seems" it meant that it was my opinion. As I said, the conclusion I could come to was drawn from his debate and from his actions publicly later on. I leave him to his sins of omission or his commission.

The Speaker: If I may rule on the point of order, Second Elected Member for George Town, the Honourable Leader of Government has confirmed that he has not taken it above the level of an opinion. Hence, it is not a statement of fact and until it reaches that level it would not fall within the ambit of misleading.

I will continue to listen carefully to ensure that it does not.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: As I said Madam Speaker, his remarks are a little bit tongue in cheek, in my opinion. Nevertheless, giving regard to all that he said during that debate it is definitely good, really good, to hear him crying for solidarity.

If there is anything that this country needs at this time it is unity. I have made that a theme for this Quincentennial year. All of us needed so much solidarity when we were dealing with the worthlessness of the former Attorney General and the London Plan, which sought to destroy our financial industry.

We have always said that our first duty is to protect our people as best as we can under the Constitution. I have heard their call. We have listened here and we have not abrogated that responsibility in any shape or form, notwithstanding that the United Kingdom Government has the final say in these kinds of reserve powers of internal and external affairs.

We too, that is, our Back Benchers and the United Democratic Party, felt it was a most serious and unnecessary intrusion and erosion of an individual's basic right to privacy, which we could not support. I mentioned our plan, and, rather than get into an all out fight in Executive Council, it was simply that we come here with the Bill and he asked why we had to bring the Bill. We had to bring the Bill because there are sections in the Bill that we feel are necessary, given the world situation. I have informed the Governor that we could not support the United Kingdom section 55 and that I would be offering an amendment, which would be, as we have argued for, in Executive Council.

As I have said, the Opposition is far too willing to play politics with most matters even though they call for solidarity. Words can say anything but actions do speak louder than words. The draft Bill was sent to Council. You see, I have to go step by step because that Member took his time trying to make a case where he believed that he could make people believe that we had not done anything.

I do not believe that, Madam Speaker, because the Minister of Telecommunications himself was trying hard to get it removed from the Information and Communications Technology Authority Bill.

Well, Madam Speaker, I see that the Member wants to play with words but he had better not test me while I am on my feet because this is a good subject. As I have said, they are far too willing to play politics with every matter.

Even though we were accused of not doing anything and of coming here when we should have done otherwise, that first draft Bill which was sent to Council was one where section 55 contained what we wanted. Therefore, let not the Member feel that his chat made us change any mind, as he has just said over there; his clack. That draft Bill contained what we wanted and I want to read from that draft Bill section 55. This is the original Bill that we had in Council first and I read section 55(1): “Subject to subsection (2), a constable who is of at least the rank of inspector may, for the purposes of obtaining evidence of the commission of an offence under this Law, apply ex parte to a judge of the court for an interception of communications order.”

I say, Madam Speaker; this is what I have been fighting in Council for and talking about for some time. Therefore, let them not believe that they have any prerogative for right of concern for the people of this country that people on this side do not have.

I do not have much left to say, Madam Speaker. I hear the Member saying now that he agrees with me and I should sit down. He should have done that when he was over there chattering away; clack.

I propose to remove the new section before us by an amendment and I do give notice of that amendment.

The Governor has warned that they will put through the Bill with section 55 as it is before us. If the United Kingdom desires to put it in place, they have that authority. I say again, Madam Speaker, that I wish we did have a Constitution with similar provisions to the Bermuda Constitution where the Governor does not have the kind of authority that he does in today's Cayman Islands.

I do hope, as I said yesterday, that at some point if the Peoples Progressive Movement (PPM) and their elected representatives in this Assembly, feel the kind of frustration and have the kind of concern that that Member said they have, that they recognize that our Constitution as it is; the one that is in force and the draft before us does nothing to help us in this situation. It does nothing to help us. The only thing we can get out of what they have given us is two more Members: a Chief Minister, a Leader of Opposition and his Deputy—they would not even give us a Deputy Chief Minister.

I do hope, as I said yesterday, that Members opposite will join the Government in solidarity and accept what I said yesterday in regard to the Committee that is proposed to be set up through the Chamber of Commerce, with them included, to look at the similarity of what more we can get from the United Kingdom, at least something similar to the Bermuda Constitution.

No one need believe that we are going through an easy time. It is becoming more and more difficult, even on paper. If I say “my Government” the Governor says, “Oh no, not so” it is his Government. That is the way that it is. Sometimes it is probably best to laugh at it however the fact remains that we are a facing serious challenge and we really need solidarity and I do hope that the People's Progressive Movement will go along with what I asked them yesterday to do.

I do not think that I need say anymore. Our Attorney General is a very capable man and he has the right to wind up this Bill. However we felt it necessary to put on record the frustration of Executive Council, now Cabinet, in this matter and what we had to do to get to this point.

Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker, I was just asking the Honourable Leader of Government Business if he could let me just have a copy of the original draft. Thank you. I certainly am not going to be long, however I think that it needs to be reiterated very clearly so that London can understand exactly how all of us feel about this specific situation.

We could go back to speak about the famous Euro Bank trial and other things and mention has already been made of that. Suffice it to say that it is, in my view, at this point in time, a matter of principle, because regardless of the relationship that the Cayman Islands has with Her Majesty's Government and the United Kingdom, the fact is that that relationship should never extend itself to the point where any matter such as this can occur, and, similarly to what transpired some months ago, that we ourselves know nothing about it only finding out by some misadventure or chance.

Now, I, for the love of me, cannot understand if London is, as has been explained by the Leader of Government Business, not prepared to relinquish this type of authority.

I must say right here and now that, if needs be, after the amendment is moved and passed through Committee stage, the Hansard could be sent to them so that they really have a clear understanding. I want to speak about this very personally today because it tells me I am one of those people who make attempts to enjoy a cordial relationship with London. However, if London is telling me, as a representative of the people of this country, that this is not going to be changed, they are telling me that I must trust them but they cannot trust me; it does not work like that.

Now, with your permission, as the Honourable Leader of Government Business has loaned me the copy he read from, I would like to read section 55(1) of the original Bill, and compare it with what is coming in, just to make a few brief comments, on what is proposed now. This is before the amendment.

The Speaker: Is it your intention, Honourable Leader of the Opposition to read it verbatim.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just a part of it, Madam Speaker. It is two lines. Is there a problem with that? It is fifty five words.

The Speaker: If you do, Honourable Member, the direct consequence is that I am going to ask you to lay it on the Table.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It is already read into the Hansard, Madam Speaker. I am just saying to you and I am not going to get crossed up here. It is a document.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I can probably help here. Madam Speaker, I can help in that regard.

I propose to lay that copy on the Table of this Honourable House.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: We might yet keep peace one of these days, Madam Speaker. That is fine, which takes the problem away. Thank you very much.

Section 55(1) in the Bill that was originally drafted reads: “Subject to subsection (2), a constable who is of at least the rank of inspector, may for the purposes of obtaining evidence of the commission of an offence under this Law apply ex parte to a judge of the court for an interception of communications order.”

Thus, this original subsection lets the process take place in a manner where a judge of the Grand Court, who is entrusted with hearing cases and deciding on convictions or whatever else, is also able to hear that evidence and decide whether it should be allowed or should not be allowed.

Something that may not seem important at all to us however something that we refer to on occasion is the separation of powers.

When we refer to the rights of people understanding the nature of this legislation notwithstanding, it is only fair that there is a system in place which allows for clarity of purpose and intentions when it comes to obtaining such an order.

Granted, Madam Speaker, that order may not be done and the Caymanian Compass reports it the next day because otherwise it would not serve any purpose. We understand that, but at any point in time after that, whatever transpires if the day ever came that one had to justify the action, one could go back and say this is why it was done; this is what was presented to us and this evidence caused us to say yes or no.

This way you will never know about it, no matter what happens and that is where I have a fundamental problem. As I said before, it is a matter of principle. There is no human being, in my view, under any circumstances and I am not going anywhere to test any waters, I am speaking specifically about this situation, who should believe that in my country, he, she or any entity should have the ability to perform such an act without any system in place in my country having knowledge of it, or having oversight of it. This cannot happen. This one they have to let go.

Therefore, not to prolong the argument, what is proposed now in the green Bill that is before us, although I understand from the Leader of Government Business that there is an amendment being proposed, which goes back to what I just read which was in the original draft that was done, where it says: “Subject to subsection (2), a constable who is of at least the rank of inspector may, ... under this Law, apply to the Governor in writing for an interception of communications order.”

I will end however I will say this as clearly as I can. I believe that London has some vacuum in the thought process to expect to be able to make this fly. Forget about Euro Bank, although you cannot, what I am saying is, let us take all of those arguments out of the window and let us look at this by itself, and they still cannot do it. That is what I am saying.

Now, the Euro Bank situation certainly exacerbates this thought process, but if you even disassociate anything that has transpired before and you look at this and you think about this for a second, it cannot happen. I am not saying this for us to posture, however I come back to the point that somehow they must understand this is a matter of principle and as such they cannot expect to be able to do this regardless of the relationship that we supposedly enjoy with them. It cannot happen, and I only wanted to get up to personally go on record and say that whatever type of relationship we might wish to continue with Britain and the Cayman Islands; I have no problem with us discussing that separately and I do not want that to come into this argument.

However, as we stand now and the relationship that we have with them; regardless of what they might think, they cannot and should not expect this to be our legislation or for our legislature to be party to its passage.

I am happy and I wish to extend thanks to the Government for being willing to propose the amendment. I think it is fair to assume now that with that amendment there will be unanimity with regard to the passage of this Bill and clearly if the Governor is not prepared to assent to it, and London understands our situation, we will see what happens from there.

While they expect logic and purpose of thought in any dialogue with them, this is one that they must understand that they have to re-think because it is unacceptable, not only to the representatives of the people of this country but to the people of this country, and they must respect that. That must go on record and that is the message they must get.

They must not believe that we are divided in here politically, as is only natural because there is a Government and there is the Opposition. They must understand that with this everybody is one, and I am absolutely certain that if we go to the public we would be looking long and hard to find one person, even if he is an Englishman living in Cayman, who would agree with this.

Let us do what we have to do and we have to deal with what was mentioned about that ICTA Law too. I say that to the Minister in charge and I do not expect that to be dealt with today.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, if the Honourable Member would just give way, I would like to give a little information on that.

The Speaker: Please proceed. He has, by action, given way.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, just to say that when the Information and Communications Technology Authority (ICTA) Law was proposed in Executive Council, it was proposed, in the identical form of the Bill that was just read from, that the court would have to give approval before any interception of telephone lines would be available and the then Governor, Peter Smith, removed it from the Law. He would not sign it into Law with that section in it.

Recently, Madam Speaker, I brought the situation again to the present Governor. I wished to have it amended so that before any interception could be done to telephones, it would have to go through the Grand Court and not the Governor, because the section reads: "the Governor" not meaning the Governor in Executive Council but the Governor in his own position, solo.

We opposed that, and I still oppose that and I must say that I am happy with the position that this House is taking and I hope that it will lay a precedent that I can now bring a Bill to correct the ICTA Law. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As I just was mentioning the ICTA Law, I was happy to give way to the Minister and he has explained that, therefore I do not have to say anything more about it.

I personally believe that there is need for dialogue. I do not expect London to simply say, "OK fellows, do not worry about that, we will just change it." However, I believe London must understand that this is something that the people of this country do not want.

Regardless of what their reasoning may be or how far their thought processes go, I am absolutely certain that the people do not want this and as a representative of the people, I have to say that and I will extend the thought further by saying with every grain of intelligence that I have, every warning bell is flying all over me with this one and it tells me that it is wrong. When I speak on a point of principle Madam Speaker, I am totally sincere and serious about that, thus as a matter of principle they are wrong to expect to do that regardless of the relationship.

I feel, (I feel like talking about him a little bit...) and I believe very strongly, that if London understands what all of us think and that we are in unison in that, that they will accept what should be done.

I may not find a lot of other people agreeing with me with that, but I believe that if they understand that it is no situation about divide and conquer with this one that they will do what they have to do. That is my belief.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, you have one hour and fifty minutes remaining.

[Laughter]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I have kind of changed my mind about talking about that goodly gentleman because it may not be quite appropriate and it might be way outside the relevance of my debate therefore I will not test the Chair. However, I will find the right time, Madam Speaker, and perhaps we might be lucky to have him in the Gallery when I do that. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I rise to offer my brief remarks on The Terrorism Bill 2003 to make it abundantly clear, the position of the supporting Back Bench Members of the Government of the United Democratic Party.

Many of the points that we had questions on have already been covered therefore I thank the speakers before me so that I do not have to stand here any longer than necessary for the good job they did at bringing out the major points of concern that we also had with this piece of legislation.

We, the Members on the Back Bench, are always in a very peculiar position when it comes to matters like this because the Ministers of the Cabinet do have a framework within which they have to operate every week that I am grateful that I do not have to be subjected to under the present constitutional arrangements and bound by. I feel quite free to be able to get up and speak as freely as I need to speak, especially when it comes to matters like this where the Ministers feel one thing and His Excellency the Governor and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London have another differing view.

Section 55 is repulsive to say the least, and I would have to agree with my Leader and indeed the Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member from George Town in voicing outrage as to the inappropriateness of this section calling for the Governor, in his sole discretion, to approve in writing an interception of communications order.

You do not have to be too imaginative to understand with the wave of anti-terrorism sentiment that the outside world continues to see places like the Cayman Islands as a place that condones and encourages funds from all sorts of illicit purposes and funds that are aimed to further illicit purposes and undesirable purposes such as terrorism. The outside world still has those persons who believe that places like the Cayman Islands are fertile ground for that sort of behaviour. I believe that many of those persons are also in the United Kingdom. We believe, Madam Speaker, that we could easily see situations arising where interception communications orders could well be a very useful tool for being able to tap into and undermine one of the two pillars of our economy; the financial services industry.

This is a serious matter for the Cayman Islands. This is not just this current Legislative Assembly feeling as though one person should not be trusted with this responsibility. This is about us, understanding and recognising that we must at all material points and time, ensure that whatever we do and say supports and enhances what we have as a national identity and a national priority.

The development, enhancement and protection of our people and, by extension, our financial services industry are of paramount importance to the Members in this Legislative Assembly and I think I can safely say all Members of this Legislative Assembly, Government and the Opposition.

We only have to go to section 8 and section 38 of the present Constitution to recognise the type of power that is vested in whoever holds the office of Governor. I always find it so humorous whenever I hear the cry, "elected dictatorship" that those who are in opposition to us in this country, not just in this Legislative Assembly, but outside as well, often use. Because Madam Speaker, the truth be told, in a lot of instances when the rubber has to meet the road, we better understand that until we go down the road of seriously modernising our constitution, we are subject to a type of dictatorship that cannot be matched in most countries that actually have a dictator.

The irony of it is that we go to the polls every four years. At least those who live under a dictator, live under a dictator and they know they live under a dictator and that is their reality.

We understand that certainly there will always be constraints once we are an overseas territory of the United Kingdom Government. With every relationship such as this comes a price that has to be paid.

However, I think it is incumbent upon all of us here who continually recognise the limitations and the struggles that we operate under to ensure that we do something to try and rectify that wrong because that is a great wrong, Madam Speaker. That is the greatest wrong that any country including the Cayman Islands could be subjected to.

You know sometimes it is good to wait, to listen, because we on the Government Back Bench could easily have gotten up, all guns blazing about section 55(3), how far we believe 55(3) should go however we have learnt some valuable lessons over the last eighteen months and, as the Honourable Leader of Government Business has pointed out, we have, unfortunately, all too often noted that it seems as though when we go one way the Opposition seems to like to go another way. We go right, they go left, or the wrong way.

However, Madam Speaker, you see it is quite good to have had the opportunity to wait and to hear the Second Elected Member from George Town make an unequivocal commitment to the stance that we support. Then we knew that we had the type of support we needed and the type of voice and the type of message we needed to send to this country in regard to this House on this particular issue at this particular time—at any time actually.

What is of equal importance is that Her Majesty's representative here, the Governor, understands how this House feels. What is also of critical importance is that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office understands how we feel. It is important Madam Speaker, that right up to Mr. Blair, the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, should understand how we feel about this particular issue.

You see, we have to draw a clear line about what we believe to be right and wrong and when it is wrong we say it is wrong, but more importantly, let us not all just sit down and cry about it being wrong and let us not all kick back now and thump our chests and feel good about this particular battle because there is a much bigger picture.

As has been said, the Governor can either change it before he assents to it, or the United Kingdom Government can change it via an Order in Council. However, Madam Speaker, I heard a call for unity. We have been calling for unity in this country for a year now on a matter of critical importance, that is, constitutional modernization; the ability to start moving our constitution forward so that we do not have to continue to operate under the shackles of a 1972 Constitution.

Now, I would like to hear the Opposition get up and talk about that and talk about ways in which they are going to meet us and that we can walk down the road, because this is not about who becomes Chief Minister first. This is about making sure the framework is modernised as far as we can take it, that allows us to pass on to our children and our grandchildren a constitution that allows them the possibility to truly be masters of their own destiny.

We have been saying this and saying this but I am confident that despite the furore of last year, the great majority of the people in this country understands who has the vision and understands who is willing to take this country forward in the right and appropriate manner and put it in the constitutional position that it should be in.

It would be remiss of me if I were to sit before I am forced to deal with a comment that was made, bound by decency, honesty, and integrity to do so. I was saddened, very saddened because the truth is I intended to simply get up and say that we were in a position where all of us agreed to thank you and to take by seat.

However, it seems as though, despite the fact that we do enjoy cordial relationships outside the Chamber, the Second Elected Member for George Town and myself can never seem to get it right in here.

I go back to my former profession. In accounting, a client can tell you what they want, a client can try to account for a transaction the way they want to, but we have what is called a substance versus form test. You see, the Second Elected Member for George Town gave the word "solidarity" and us being one on this matter therefore the form of what he was saying was solidarity.

As I use my professional judgment on what else was said in his contribution, I could not agree that the substance of what he was saying was solidarity because if he wanted solidarity, why would he have to get up and talk about the Leader of Government Business always railing and complaining, although he did qualify that by saying and rightly so, I give him that credit.

However, you see, Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town believes that solidarity is achieved by walking up to a person, punching them in the face and then saying, "Let us be friends." That is not how you get solidarity. You cannot get solidarity in a house, how can you get solidarity in a house if you were to walk up to your husband, to your child then slap them and box them around and then say, "Oh, let us be a happy family."

I believe that the call by the Second Elected Member for George Town does not meet the substance test when it comes to solidarity, I do not believe that is to be the case. You see, if the Second Elected Member for George Town truly wanted solidarity, then he would have been a goodly gentleman and have come and talked to us.

He had this green Bill; he could have talked about that and we would have had no issue with telling him exactly how we felt. He said he did. However, he did not speak to me. Nor did he speak to my colleague, the Deputy Speaker, nor did he speak to my colleague, the Third Elected Member for West Bay, because we made it clear to our Ministers that we could not support this particular provision.

We, if need be, intend to bring a Motion to this House (not to anticipate business), to deal with the change that was made in the ICTA Law because I think all of us in this country know that my colleague, the Deputy Speaker, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay is indeed not only an expert in telecommunications, but played close and keen attention to the passage of that particular piece of legislation and he along with the Minister has made it abundantly clear that this situation is not good enough.

I must also speak to the point made by the Leader of the Opposition saying they must, they must they must understand. I look at it slightly differently. We must tell them. They are under no obligation to "must" understand until we in this Legislative Assembly are willing to put petty politics behind us and move forward along the lines that were pointed out yesterday by the Leader of Government Business, to move down the road of constitutional modernisation.

Until we start to change the fundamental instrument upon which the Cabinet of this country operates, then we can say they must, they must, they must, because they are over there. Who are we to believe that the United Kingdom Members of Parliament and persons in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are not also saying the same thing of us? They are over there also saying and saying to the Governor, they must, they in Cayman must understand and, Madam Speaker, the truth is they say to us, "You must understand" and they are the ones that give us our constitution.

How ironic it is that the United Democratic Party would be willing to meet the Opposition on so many points that were supposedly of national concern and of critical importance to the country during the constitutional debate and the visit to London. Yet, when we said to them, let us get implementation as early as possible, let us not leave anything to chance, because, who are we to, all of a sudden, believe that we are the only ones that are electable in this country? Who are we to believe that all of us might not be gone in 2004? Who are we to believe that?

However, that is what the United Democratic Party (UDP) was saying. Look, let us not be so bold as to assume it has to be either the UDP or the People's Progressive Movement (PPM). It may be some other entity that takes a majority control of this Legislative Assembly. However, if we were to have adopted the constitution before the next election, we would have greatly reduced the possibility of us not getting some of the changes that we need so desperately in this country to effectively be able to run a Cabinet. To effectively be able to say that we are representatives of the people who have the ability to effect positive change and the ability to protect and fight on the people's behalf when the colonising power does things or wants to do things that we do not believe is in our or the people's best interest.

I will say to this country, here and now, the only reason we do not have a modernized constitution is because the People's Progressive Movement refused to talk about doing that because they said we did not have a mandate.

I believe, with every fibre of my being and I believe that they also believe at this point in time that the people want it. We are all Caymanians, we know how Caymanians are, and we know how we are. We are not going to have Caymanians stick to a particular issue the way they do in other countries. We are not going to have Caymanians currently able to focus and continue to hammer in and say we want this. They will say it. There will be that period of furore and then it will quietly die away. I think that is evident from the response they had at their public meetings when they went back to discuss the constitution.

I think they would agree that the attendance at the public meetings were basically non-existent. It was poor, to say the least, because the people now look at us as the representatives who need to now go ahead and do the job, do the work. That is how our people are. I will get off that particular topic.

It is of critical relevance that we in this Legislative Assembly debating this Terrorism Bill 2003 send a clear unequivocal message to the Governor and to Her Majesty's Government that we do not support section 55, which gives the Governor in his sole discretion the ability to authorize interception of communications orders.

I had to stray off into those other topics because it is of critical importance during this educational process that our people clearly understand that there is a price to pay, and the price to pay for not changing our constitution is becoming more and more grave to us in the Cayman Islands and the potential impact it has on our economy is starting to come through in ways that we never imagined.

Much was said about the EuroBank fiasco and, Madam Speaker, that is the one that we know about. That is the particular episode that actually came to light.

Now, I hear the Second Elected Member for George Town saying it happened on our shift. Hence now, I am going to have to go on a little longer than I wanted to because I was about to sit down.

I think that the Second Elected Member for George Town also needs to be reminded that when the Government went out strongly and opposed the actions that were revealed in the Chief Justice's Report and Ruling on this case that they were nowhere to be seen.

I remember, in his own district, on the steps of the Legislative Assembly, we had a Public Meeting with hundreds of people and how disappointing it was to not see the People's Progressive Movement, the elected representatives, there because they should have been there. Then they came here and accused us of British-bashing. The East End Member got up and talked about blood-letting. Anyway, let me not go back to that whole fiasco and that whole episode of the debate on the sensor Motion.

I will be the first to stand up here and say that when the United Kingdom Government decides that they are going to spy on us, it matters not who is the Leader of Government Business, it matters not who is on the Opposition because at the end of the day they are going to do it on all our shifts. What is important is knowing that it could happen on all our shifts, is how you react to the situation and we reacted with what has characterized the United Democratic Party Government; clear, decisive leadership and willingness to take on even the colonising power that gives us our own constitution.

We believe that right is right and wrong is wrong and the United Democratic Party Government is for right. Those who oppose us are for wrong and that is my opinion and the country is much better off that it happened on our watch.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for West Bay, would you please rope your arguments back to the Terrorism Bill?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I must tell you, you do help a young (Member of the Legislative Assembly) MLA who sometimes may stray off the topic a tad. However, it only goes to show how fair you are, because you know there are those who sometimes try to question your integrity however that shows how fair you are.

Therefore I will now conclude by saying that the United Democratic Party Government has already made their position in terms of the Ministers and Members of Cabinet and the Elected Back Bench supporting Members make it quite clear that we will not support this Bill with section 55 as it currently stands.

We believe that the proposed or the first draft of the Bill that has been read twice now into the records, and the amendment that has been circulated, more adequately deals with this section as we all believe it should. Madam Speaker, I thank you and I thank Honourable Members.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, before asking the Honourable Second Official Member to exercise his right of reply we will take a brief afternoon break and re-convene, hopefully within the next fifteen minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 3.48 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.18 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I recognise the Honourable Second Official Member exercising his right of reply.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am hoping to be very brief in my response. I am constrained however, to respond to a couple of points made by the Second Elected Member for George Town, for clarification really.

The Honourable Member enquired, or wondered aloud, why it took Government so long to bring this piece of legislation and what had been happening during this period. The legislation, as I mentioned, is a sort of an amalgam of several pieces of legislation and it clearly took a while for it to be all collated and pulled together and it took some time. In the interim it was not that there was a lacuna as such because the UK Overseas Territories order was in place and that, in a way, helped to bridge the gap during that period.

The Honourable Member also remarked about the positive duty under the Bill to make disclosures and he did say that the general position is that a person is not required to make disclosure. He is correct, however I just wish to point out to him that under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law there is in fact a positive duty now to make disclosures in instances where there is reason to believe that there is money laundering activities.

He also wondered aloud whether it would not be appropriate to amend the legislation to provide for disclosures to be made to a trusted person and he used the example of ministers of religion. There is some merit in that suggestion and I would really wish to have an opportunity to examine it in more detail and, if possible, to bring an amendment at a later stage. However, I have to bear in mind the whole issue of priest-penitence privilege and maybe the reticence of some Members to get involved in these things. I give him the undertaking that I will have a look at the suggestion with a view to incorporating it, if necessary, at a later stage.

He also mentioned the issue of the counter-terrorism convention being adopted or deemed to be part of our Laws, once the UK has entered into such an arrangement. The principle in the Bill is not entirely different from the status quo at the moment. We really do not have our own extradition legislation. What we have is the UK Extradition Act, 1989 and also the convention that has been extended to us.

As I was saying, the Honourable Member queried the wisdom of having the counter-terrorism convention being deemed to have been extended to us in circumstances where the UK enters into new arrangements. I am saying to him that it is not entirely different from the position as currently obtains in that we, the Cayman Islands, do not have our stand-alone extradition arrangement. We have the UK Extradition Act 1989 and the European Convention on Extradition. Once there is an amendment in the United Kingdom it is invariably extended to us by way of some order, thus the position in this current Bill is not entirely different.

In any event, I can assure my learned friend and colleague across the floor that it would be subject to the usual safeguards because the extradition arrangements would have to be canvassed or adjudicated in court if there is a request for extradition. Therefore, it would be subject to the usual judicial safeguards in those circumstances.

He mentioned also, well he wondered, whether the provision in the Law was seeking to abridge the long-established and enshrined doctrine of legal-professional privilege. I can assure him that what is in the Bill is a general codification of the common law principle, as we understand it.

I would also go on to mention that in any rules there are exceptions and an exception, as he well knows, to legal-professional privilege is that where the advice is sought or received for the purpose of guiding the client to either commit an offence or having committed an offence, they are not covered by privilege. There is also no privilege where the attorney is a party to the crime. Those are two exceptions to the general common law principle.

In any event, the provision in this Bill merely mirrors the existing provision in section 27 of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law and I can assure him that there is no attempt to abridge or in any way water down the long-established and enshrined principle of attorney-client privilege.

It is only left for me to thank Honourable Members for their support of this Bill as amended, or as it is hoped will be amended. The debate itself was of the usual high standard, very insightful and indeed extremely engaging. I would also wish to thank Senior Legislative Counsel, Ms. Neblett, for her long hours devoted to this piece of legislation. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member.

The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Terrorism Bill, 2003 be given a second reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Terrorism Bill 2003 given a second reading.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government, is it the intention to conclude at our interruption or is it the intention to go on to the next Bill?

[Pause]

May I have a motion, then, for the suspension of Standing 10(2), seeing that we have reached the hour of interruption?

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order to do business after 4.30 pm. We will do the Passport Bill.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow the House to commence and conclude the Second Reading of the Passport (Amendment) Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue beyond 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: I now recognise the Honourable First Official Member.

The Passport (Amendment) Bill, 2003

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I move the Second Reading of the Bill entitled The Passport (Amendment) Bill, 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable First Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, Madam Speaker. Thank you.

The Speaker: Please proceed accordingly.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, the House is no doubt aware that the passport office is continuing to move forward with upgrading and improving its service to the Public.

Machine-readable passports came into effect in the passport office in June 2001 and one of the latest changes relates to digitized passports which, as scheduled, came into effect on Monday 2nd June this year. This change involved an amendment to the Passport Regulations which gave the authorization needed to revise the passport application forms for both adults and minors and the passport application forms have now been revised.

This short amending Bill seeks to bring in line the fees with the costs of producing passports, waivers, and so on. It also provides for the production of documents in one business day.

The reference to this is a Super Express Service, something that members of the public have asked about for a long time — getting a passport produced at short notice, as opposed to the standard ten working days—and there will be a fee of sixty dollars for doing this. This fee will be in addition to the cost of the document. There is also an Express Service, between two days and one week, for which there is a forty dollar charge.

The other fees largely bring the cost of producing these documents in line with the times and there is a call-out fee for the emergency opening of the passport office; that is a fifty dollar charge. The other costs are really just bringing in line with the times the charges for the production of these documents.

In the interests of time, I am not going to read the entire schedule but suffice it to say that this is primarily an opportunity to offer the public the super express service and the express service for the production of passports and other documents. Accordingly, I ask for the support of all Honourable Members with this short amending Bill.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I would merely thank all Honourable Members for their tacit support and to commend this Bill to the House.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Passport (Amendment) Bill, 2003 be given a second reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Passport (Amendment) Law 2003 has been given a second reading.

The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I would like to move for the Second Reading of a Bill entitled A Law to Amend the Judicature Law (2002 Revision); and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Madam Speaker, thank you. In 1995 when the Grand Court Rules came into effect, they vested the management and investment of court funds in the Accountant General. These are non-governmental revenue funds, such as maintenance and affiliation payments, compensation and funds paid in civil matters.

As part of the financial management initiative, the government treasury department will cease to be the central controller of various government receipts and funds. These responsibilities are being de-centralised to the agency responsible for levying and collecting those funds.

Before 1995 the courts office was responsible for collecting and administering these funds and as the judicial department already has a cashier and revenue collection function, this transfer of responsibility for the collection of court funds will be an extension of existing activity rather than something new.

It will also make it much easier for members of the public who have had to be moving back and forth between the government administration building and the court house when making payments.

The actual transfer of the collection of these funds took place on July 1, 2003. Indeed a member of staff has already been transferred from the government administration building to the court house to carry out these activities.

That is essentially the purpose of this fairly simple amendment and I seek Honourable Members support in having the Bill passed.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, does the Second Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Just to thank Honourable Members for their support of this amendment to The Judicature (Amendment) Bill. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2003 be given a second reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Judicature (Amendment) Bill, 2003 given a second reading.

The Immigration (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Immigration (Amendment) Bill, 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the mover wish to speak thereon?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. This short amendment deals with the procedure for the Immigration Appeals Tribunal. Honourable Members of the House will recall that we brought an amendment to the Immigration Law last year that allowed for an Immigration Appeals Tribunal to deal with matters from the Immigration Board rather than for them coming to Executive Council.

This short Bill is intended to bring out the point that appeals to the Tribunal shall be by way of rehearing, thus making it clear that the Tribunal is not empowered to remit matters back to the Board for re-consideration.

In addition, it is also intended to make clear that when the Immigration Board deals with Caymanian status applications, and the quota is exhausted, the Tribunal does not or cannot deal with Cayman status appeals since there is no quota. Therefore the public will not go through the application to the Immigration Appeals Tribunal and the Tribunal is therefore bound by the quota for Caymanian status which is set on an annual basis.

I ask for the support of all Honourable Members in this short amending Bill.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any Member wish to speak? Does any Member wish to speak? Last Call. Does any Member wish to speak?

If not, I will call on the First Official Member to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you Madam Speaker, I just again want to thank all Honourable Members for supporting this short amending Bill and I commend it to the House.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Immigration (Amendment) Bill, 2003 be given a second reading.

All those in favour, please say, Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Immigration (Amendment) Bill, 2003 given a second reading.

The Speaker: I now recognize the Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, we propose to adjourn this Honourable House until Friday 18 July, at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that the Honourable House do now adjourn until—

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. Madam Speaker, you reminded me during the course of my debate this morning that if I wanted to raise an issue relating to questions, I should do so at the adjournment. I now do so, Madam Speaker, and simply wish to register the concern of the Opposition that we are not having a timely response to Parliamentary Questions.

There are over one hundred Parliamentary Questions that are outstanding at this point and there were none on today's Order Paper and I do not know whether or not that is going to be the case tomorrow. Without making too much of it, I wish to register our concern that Parliamentary Questions ought to be answered.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I agree that parliamentary questions that are ready should be answered. Not every time a Member puts a parliamentary question can that question be answered immediately. Nevertheless, I understand the Member's concern.

We have given the Clerk—and the Member knows this—permission to contact each Ministry to determine what questions are ready and for those questions to be put on the Order Paper in the amount each Member required and sometimes even more so that we can get as many answered as possible.

I have no more to report than that, we have asked them and the questions are being put on the Order Paper. Then, Madam Speaker, questions are not ready. I know I asked my staff about my questions this morning and they said that two Members were going to be away that would have asked me questions and therefore those questions were not able to be placed on the Order Paper. I can say that about mine. I think I have two. I think two Ministers are away and perhaps many of the questions are asked of them.

As I said, we did give the Clerk permission and I think that if they were ready, or if there were not some other circumstances, then they would be on the Order Paper.

The Speaker: The question is that the Honourable House does stand adjourned until tomorrow 10 am.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.45 pm the House stood adjourned until Friday, 18 July 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT

11.07
Fifteenth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11: 10am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received notice for apologies from the Honourable Second Official Member, the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, the Honourable Minister of Education, the Member for East End, the Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and the Second Elected Member for West Bay will be arriving later this morning.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

Vesting of Crown Land Block 4C, Parcels 86 and 87 to the National Housing Trust

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you Madam Speaker. I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, a Report on Crown Properties that has been prepared in accordance with the requirements of the Governor Vesting of Land's Law (1998 Revision).

I confirm that, as required by the Law, the details of this land matter have been published in the Cayman Islands Gazette Issue No. 13 of 2003 dated 30 June 2003 and a local newspaper, namely the Cayman Net News Weekend Edition dated 13 - 15 June 2003.

Also, as required by Law, three valuations have been carried out on the subject property. Each valuation report forms part of the overall Report and provides a general indication of the value of the properties that Government now proposes to vest.

The Report deals with facilitating the vesting of Block 4C Parcels 86 and 87 to the National Housing Trust. This property is located in Registration Section West Bay North West, off Captains Joe and Osbert Road. Therefore, after careful analysis and consideration on 20 May 2003 Executive Council (EXCO) Paper 2429 of 2003 says that the Governor in Council, now known as the Governor in Cabinet, determines that it is in the best interest of the Cayman Islands to vest both parcels to the National Housing Trust for annual consideration.

The valuation of the subject parcels estimate the open market value for the combined properties to be in the region of $500,000 to $700,000 (CI - Cayman Islands) dollars. I now ask permission to lay this Report. Thank you.

The Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Deputy Leader have further comments to make thereon?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: No, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I am not in receipt of any notice for statements this morning.

The Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you. Madam Speaker I beg to move a Bill for a Law to amend the Health Insurance Law 1997; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Members of this Honourable House are reminded that by Private Member's Motion 9/01 a Select Committee of the entire Legislative Assembly was appointed to look at problems being experienced with the workings of the Health Insurance Law, 1997 and the Health Insurance Regulations and to make recommendations for their review.

The Select Committee has met nine times, the last being 26 May 2003, and during these Meetings it received oral and written representations on the Law and Regulations and considered the Report of the Health Insurance and Health Fees Advisory Committee; a Committee appointed by the Governor in Council dated 6 September 2001, and the Report of the KPMG Consultants review of Health Insurance Law and Regulations dated July 2002.

Instructions were issued by the Select Committee for amendments to the Health Insurance Law and Regulations and these amendments have been made available for comment to various stakeholder organisations and the public in general. I recently met twice with Members of the Cayman Islands Insurance Association and discussed various points. While we reached certain understanding on some of them, which will be the subject of some amendments, it was made clear that the Government could clearly not support others, which would be going forward as they were originally drafted.

Regarding the proposed amendments to the Health Insurance Law, I will explain how the relevant sections have been amended. Clause 1 provides the short title.

“Clause 2 amends the interpretation section-

- (a) by inserting the definition of “Commission”. The commission referred to in this Clause is the Health Insurance Commission which the Ministry of Health intends to establish under the Health Insurance Commission Law. The Commission will be an advisor to the Government on health insurance and will also be an inspectorate and assume most of the duties of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority under the existing Health Insurance Law, 1997 and regulations;
- (b) by changing “approved provider” to “approved insurer”;
- (c) by clarifying the definition of “standard health insurance contract”;
- (d) by changing the definition of “seaman” to “a Caymanian (as defined in the Immigration Law (2001 Revision)) who resides in the Islands and who-
  - (a) is over the age of fifty-five;
  - (b) is a member of either the Veterans' and Seamen's Society of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman or of the Cayman Islands Seafarer's Association;”

I might say that the term “Seafarer's Association” is a new name adopted by what was formally the Cayman Islands Seaman Association here in Grand Cayman;

- (c) “first went to sea before 1st January, 1985; and
- (d) was at sea for a period of three years or more.”;
- (e) by inserting a definition of “veteran” which is as follows-“veteran” means a person who resides in the Islands, served in any armed force before 1973 and was a Caymanian at the date of service.”

This changes an anomaly which existed in this Law where persons of any nationality joined these associations; there were instances that these persons were receiving free medical care or they were receiving medical care at the expense of the Cayman Islands people and this has been changed to clarify that; (f) “by inserting a definition of “spouse” to include common law spouse.

“Clause 3 amends section 3, Subsection (3) is amended to provide that Government may affect health insurance coverage for each elected Member of the Legislative Assembly and, where the Speaker is not a Member of the Legislative Assembly, the Speaker; for each past elected Member of the Legislative Assembly who is a public office pensioner; and the unemployed spouse and children of such persons. Subsection (4) is repealed in order to clarify that Government may take out health insurance for seamen and veterans and their unemployed spouses and children where they do not already have health insurance.

"Clause 3 also makes minor amendments to subsections (8) and (9) and inserts subsections (6a), (10a) and (12a).

"Subsection (6a) provides that where an employee and his spouse are employed by different employers, each employee may, subject to his employer's agreement, elect which employer shall insure both of them or whether they shall be insured separately by each employer.

"Subsection (10a) provides that the employer who is liable in accordance with subsection (10) to provide health insurance for the children of an employee shall provide health insurance for children born after such health insurance has been provided and such insurance shall cover post-natal care for a period of not less than one month after birth.

"Subsection (12a) provides that where after the date of the commencement of this new Law an employee applies for health insurance for his spouse as defined in paragraph (b) of the definition under this new Law, he shall provide to his employer an affidavit stating that his spouse falls within the definition.

"Clause 4 makes a minor amendment to section 5.

"Clause 5 amends section 7 in order to increase penalties under that section.

"Clause 6 repeals and replaces section 9 which deals with the recovery of damages from an employer in default in providing information on health insurance coverage to an employee.

"Clause 7 makes minor amendments to section 10 including substituting the word "Commission" for the word "Authority".

"Clause 8 amends section 11 to provide that voluntary health insurance contracts may be extended to cover a retired employee, his employed spouse and children.

"Clause 9 inserts section 11A which provides that the Commission, in order to effectively monitor the performance of the health insurance industry in the Islands, may at least every quarter of each year by notice in writing request from approved insurers, specified information or information of a specified description and to produce specified documents or documents of a specified description relating to -

- a) the volume of insured health benefits in the Islands;
- b) the prices of such health benefits;

- c) the premiums paid for health insurance; and
- d) the financial performance and status of the approved insurer."

This information would serve as statistical information to place the Government in a position to better know what is happening in the insurance industry.

One of the major problems in the Cayman Islands is that we do not have the necessary statistical information for insurance companies to cost plans and so on accurately, or, for that matter, for the Government to really know what diseases are prevalent in the country, what the average cost is of paying for these. This information is to serve management purposes for that sort of information.

An approved insurer who fails or refuses to provide the information commits a procedural offence and, subject to a right of appeal to a summary court, may pay to the commission a fine not exceeding $5,000 and may pay a further fine not exceeding $100 for each day or part of a day during which the contravention has continued. Fines collected by the Commission shall be paid into the revenue of the Islands.

"Section 11A also provides that the commission shall submit the information received under this Section to the Governor in Cabinet once a year and at such other times as the Minister may direct.

"Clause 10 amends Section 12 which deals with the termination of a contract of insurance.

"Clause 11 inserts Section 14A which provides that every health care facility and registered practitioner shall file with the Commission annually and not later than one month after any adjustment, the maximum fee charged for each health benefit provided by such health care facility and registered practitioner. Such fees shall be published in the Gazette."

Just to add to what I have said in regard to that clause; it is common practice, particularly in the United States, to follow what is called a Common Practice Terminology (CPT) Code. This is a description of every known procedure that doctors perform and they are costed so people know, at any one time, if they want to have an appendectomy or whatever, the cost for it. I have learnt since this process has started that the Cayman Islands Medical and Dental Association has actually created a CPT Code and they have listed all of the various procedures, a few thousand of them, and the costs attached to them.

I am not saying that these should be accepted by a patient as being reasonable, or whatever the case may be, however they do know what these costs are, hence there is no doubt on the side of the doctors what they intend to charge and there should be no doubt on the side of the patient what the costs are going to be.

This is where we are striving to get to where it is absolutely clear on both sides and there is no doubt or finagling, which we hear goes on, in regard to charges that are made and costs which patients pay.

“Clause 11 also inserts Clause 14B which provides that the Governor in Cabinet, after consultation with the Commission, shall cause to be published in the Gazette the maximum fee an approved insurer shall be liable to pay under a standard health insurance contract for a health care benefit provided by a compulsorily insured person.”

This is also an attempt to make it clear on behalf of the insurance companies and on behalf of the person insured, that the Commission will require an insurer to pay a certain amount. Let us say it is $800 for a particular procedure; the insurance companies will be required to pay that; the person who is insured will know that the insurer will pay that amount under the basic standard contract therefore there is no doubt there. If his or her doctor decides that their fee is $1,200 then the insured person understands their insurance will only cover $800 and if they choose to go with that doctor who charges more than the average, they will have to pay the $400. This is what this is attempting to cover.

“Clause 12 amends section 15 which deals with the recovery of payment by the provider of a health benefit.

“Clause 13 amends section 16 by inserting a subsection (3) which provides that in respect of any health care benefit provided by a compulsorily insured person an approved insurer shall be liable only to pay the fee or that part of the fee (as the case may be) filed and published in accordance with section 14A.

“Clauses 14 and 15 amend sections 17 and 18 respectively by substituting the word “Commission” for the word “Authority”.

“Clause 16 amends section 19 to provide that regulations may provide for more than one standard contract.”

This is one of the things that has been recommended by our consultants and one which has been discussed at length with the Cayman Islands Insurers Association.

The basic reason for this is that it has become known, or understood, by the Ministry that the Insurance Companies offer various types of coverage or contracts and each one chooses what their contract will be or how it will be or whatever. This way they can include or exclude certain things and do it in such a manner that satisfies them and for that they charge a particular price.

The idea of having a standard contract will mean, for the public and for the country, that whichever one of these contracts you choose, Contract 2 for example, it will be the identical contract with any insurer. If that insurer offers it, it has to have the same inclusions and the same exclusions, the only difference is that each one will have the right to cost it as they see fit and compete with one another. It will clarify the situation for the consumer and for the insurer. It will also provide perfect data in terms of costings by the various suppliers or health insurance providers.

Therefore to achieve this: “Clause 16 amends Section 19 to provide that Regulations may provide for more than one standard contract. Clause 17 is a transitional clause.”

This Law has been longstanding, it came into effect in 1998 and it was a brand new experience for the Cayman Islands. We have learnt from it and over the years it has become clear that certain changes were necessary. It is said that nothing happens before time and perhaps now this is the time to correct and improve certain things in this Law.

I must say that up until the last time we, as Members, met on this issue there appeared to me to be a general consensus and desire that certain changes needed to be made. I am not here to say that the proposed changes are perfect however they are as close as we can get to offering certain recommendations for amendment at this time based on the information which is available to us, hearing from our constituents, insurance providers, doctors and, generally, ourselves having an idea of how the law has functioned to date.

Having said that I recommend the Bill to Members of this Honourable House and solicit their support.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. From this side, we have spent a lot of time with the Honourable Minister and I must take my hat off to him once again for finally getting this piece of amending legislation. As he indicated it was brought back in 1997 when I was the Minister of Health and came into force in 1998.

As with any legislation there have been some problems however we have been able to identify a number of these, which will make the Bill more functional and beneficial to employees here in the Cayman Islands.

One of the concerns that I would share with the Minister, and I am sure he is aware, is that once the Commission is set up and going, there are still some companies not providing health insurance coverage for their employees and, as we all know, there was not a lot of support staff for the health insurance gentleman at the Monetary Authority, who, I think, tried to run that show by himself. As we go along and observe these situations I am hoping that these will be dealt with.

Another area that I have been told about is when people apply for work permits, the employer indicates that they have insurance coverage however just after the approval for the work permit is given, they cancel it. This is unfortunate. From the inception of health insurance in the Cayman Islands, even before 1992, the Islands felt that this was a very important piece of legislation. There are those of us who have experienced catastrophic claims and this is why I have always been a supporter of health insurance. None of us can deal with this if there is serious trauma or one has to go overseas. It can easily take away any financial stability that a person has.

This is why I have taken significant criticism about this piece of legislation; however I am convinced that this is very important. To me it is an investment because there are very few of us that can afford to deal with serious injuries or having to go overseas for trauma or anything like that.

As I said, on behalf of the Opposition, we support this legislation and as with anything else there will be opportunity in the future, if it is not working, to look at this once again and I offer our support from this side.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. This is really just a short point. Mr. Eden has, essentially, spoken on behalf of the Opposition and, as the Honourable Minister knows, the Opposition has given him support by attendance at the Select Committee Meetings and through our discussions with him about the problems that we have encountered or that have been reported to us by our respective constituents.

There has been a litany of complaints, over the years, about health insurance coverage generally, and, particularly in relation to the payment of claims and to the issue of whether or not certain persons could or should or should continue to be covered after they have had to make a substantial claim.

I do not intend to go into any detail because I think the Honourable Minister has done an able job in that regard. We had an opportunity, during the Select Committee process, to air the concerns we had and the areas that we felt needed to be addressed, and I think by and large, the concerns which we articulated from this side are reflected by the proposed amendments.

There is just really one technical point I would make to the Honourable Minister in the definition section. Under Clause 2 (d) that subsection says that the law will be amended by changing the definition of "seaman" to a: "Caymanian (as defined in the Immigration Law (2001 Revision)) who resides in the Islands and who- (a) is over the age of fifty-five;".

The problem I see with that is, if the definition is left that way, it would permit a person who was not a Caymanian at the time that he was a seaman and who subsequently becomes a Caymanian to be covered under that section or subsection. I do not believe that that was the intention, because if the provision of this health coverage is being given for of the service that an individual has provided as a Caymanian — that is, being a seaman — it would seem to me to be a bit anomalous for a person, who was not a Caymanian at the time he was a seaman, but who subsequently becomes a Caymanian, to enjoy the benefit of that subsection.

I note in relation to a veteran, that particular loop hole has been closed because "veteran" means, under this proposed definition: "a person who resides in the Islands, served in the armed force before 1973 and was a Caymanian at the date of service."

I believe that a similar provision should be made in relation to seamen as well; that they should have to have that Caymanian qualification at the time they actually went to sea.

I just wanted to make that one point to the Honourable Minister and I am sure he will deal with it as he deems appropriate. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. This contribution will be quite short as Mr. Eden and Mr. McLaughlin have previously pointed out some concerns of the Opposition.

I am happy this morning, to read the definition of "spouse" under this new Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill and where it says: "spouse", in relation to a person, means-

- (a) the legal husband and wife of that person; or
- (b) a person who, although not legally married to that person, lives with such person in the same household, under the same domestic arrangements as a legal husband or wife and has been so living with that person for a continuous period of five years or more immediately prior to the commencement of the former Law,".

I am extremely happy this morning as, for some time now, I have been fighting the cause of those women who live in a relationship, and the men are on a job, yet because they are not known as legally married those women, unless they are working themselves, could not get health insurance. Now, the way the law has been amended, if the gentleman is working the woman will be covered. I am very happy for that amendment this morning.

I think we have also removed from that definition of children which has given me serious concern for a number of years; children born within wedlock and children born outside wedlock.

When I look at a child, whether born within wedlock or outside, all I see is a child. I know I may get many knocks on the outside from the support of these two amendments however I think it is time that this country faces reality. The situations exist, therefore the country must look after these people.

My other comment, and last comment, is for the Honourable Minister. I do not know where the words "Governor in Cabinet" appear in section 11 of the Bill or whether we need to put a definition in the Bill itself, saying that it means exactly what Executive Council did because the interpretation Law still speaks about Governor in Council. I am just throwing that out to the Minister; whether we need to put that definition at the front of the Bill or not. It is just a technical point for him to look at and see if it is necessary and I commend the Honourable Minister for bringing in this amendment this morning. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Honourable Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, thank you. I would just like to thank the Honourable Members who spoke on this Bill and offered their support, and for the other Honourable Members who have offered their tacit support, to the Bill.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town is quite right, as it is also my understanding, that the person who served as Superintendent of Insurance in the Monetary Authority was a one-man-show. This did not really provide the opportunity of offering inspections and supervision in the field and such like, as envisioned by the Superintendent of Insurance, and what that person will be doing in the service of the Health Insurance Commission.

This is something that has been looked at and while there has been a person appointed to Superintendent of Health Insurance, they will have to be staffed to carry out inspections and to do the day to day work required in terms of receiving information and dealing with complaints. Where complaints have to be dealt with, in terms of mitigating between employer and employee, it will have to be extended to include a cost factor. This has been taken into account and the point is well taken, and it will be adopted and regularised to provide full authority in coverage in this regard.

The Ministry has also heard of various instances, cited by the same Honourable Member, where applicants for work permits take out insurance coverage and as soon as the work permit has been approved, they then cancel the insurance. However, in the regulations there is a requirement that this be reported by the insurance companies when it happens. We expect that, having a Superintendent of Insurance and the Commission, this will be a matter that will be addressed in the way that it should be, since obviously the people who do that are in breach of the Law.

Also where complaints have to be dealt with, in terms of mitigating between employer and employee, it will have to be extended and include a cost factor. This has been taken into account, however the point is well taken, and it will be adopted and regularised to provide full authority and coverage in this regard.

Certainly, I think we all understand that Health Insurance is not really there to pay for every aspirin or Phensic that we need. It is there as a safety net to help when we fall in some catastrophic illness. There is no question about it, particularly if one has to go overseas for medical care, in a week's time at some of the health care facilities, one's life savings can be wiped out irrespective of how wealthy you might be.

That is really what health insurance is to cover. That is the major idea behind health insurance and perhaps this is something which we need to get across to our average citizen; that every time they may have to go for some small medication, they should not expect insurance to pay for it. If they expect insurance to pay for it and where insurance will pay for it, this would be very extensive coverage and they would certainly pay extra dollars for that extra coverage.

However, this basic plan is to provide that safety net. One of these days the likelihood is that we will become seriously ill and it will be very costly however that money, which is paid each month, is supposed to place us in a position that the insurance then trips in and covers those large costs which otherwise would simply devastate one's finances.

The Second Elected Member for George Town spoke of the payment of claims. That is a major problem. I am sure that the Honourable Member and all of us in here have had complaints about that and that is one of the biggest problems in this country. In too many instances, a person pays every month, or every week, as the case may be, an insurance premium and when they go to a health care provider they are told, "No, I do not take your card, you pay me. You pay me cash". Whatever amount that is they then go to their insurance company and collect. It has never ever been the intention, from the day that this law came into effect, that this should be the case.

It is against the whole concept of insurance coverage. The insurance company must pay when it is called upon to pay within a reasonable time and health care providers must also accept the coverage, the card or whatever, that says this person is an insured person and they then collect from the insurance company and in the regulations, we are mandating that settlement must occur within 30 days which is the normal standard process. Therefore, that has to change because it is unconscionable to think that a person, let us say, is paying $500 a month for coverage for themselves and their two kids and then the child becomes sick. It costs them $3,000 and the person must find $3,000 to pay the doctor and then they go and claim the $3,000 back from the insurer. That cannot be right and the whole concept is that you pay in small bits so when the big amount comes about the insurance company does what it is supposed to do.

This is one of the things that has been given serious consideration as the Member knows and it is something certainly which the Ministry intends to see change.

These are the things which the insurance companies, the doctors and hospitals and the insured person need to understand and accept; that by them paying their premiums regularly and on time they get these services when they need them.

I also take the point made by the Member about the definition for veteran being in some way different from what is covered in the part dealing with the seamen and I will take some legal advice between now and this Bill reaching the Committee stage on this and if so I shall seek to request an amendment as might be appropriate.

I think that we all here generally share the point raised by the Honourable Member for North Side with regard to spouses. That sentiment is right and, whether one wants to be a moralist or not or say that it is right or it is wrong, it is a reality in society and it cannot be fair for this person, who is a spouse for all intents and practical living purposes, to be excluded simply because the law did not name that person a spouse. It does not follow, Madam Speaker, hence I am glad to know that I have assisted in that regard by having this included in the Bill and that we have achieved this position.

On the question of Governor in Cabinet, it is a new term because the name Cabinet has just come about by an Order in Council and I am not absolutely sure on this. It is something which I will have to check to see whether in that Order it made reference to it being the equivalent of Governor in Council because constitutionally and otherwise in all the Laws it states Governor in Council, therefore perhaps it will be necessary to make some clarification in that regard.

Having commented thus, I would just like to thank Members for their support of this Bill and I look forward to seeing it implemented and bringing about the improvements which we hope it will achieve. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is the set of Bills shortly entitled the Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill 2003 be given a Second Reading.

All those in favour, please say, Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill 2003 has been given a Second Reading.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. Madam Speaker, could we have a division, please?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

DIVISION No. 4/03

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Mr. Cline A. Glidden
Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin
Mr. V. Arden McLean

The Speaker: The result of the division is as follows: eight Ayes; nine absentees.

Agreed by majority: The Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2003, given a Second Reading.

The Health Insurance Commission Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I beg to move a Bill for a Law to provide for the Establishment of a Health Insurance Commission; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The background to the drafting of this Bill was based on the fact that, as noted just a short while ago, the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority had one individual in it who dealt with matters of Health Insurance under the Health Insurance Law. This was clearly insufficient because of the complaints and the problems which arose under the Law.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Health, may I have the indulgence and ask for a five minute break? We will take a suspension at this time.

Proceedings suspended at 12.08 pm

Proceedings resumed at 12.24 pm

Standing Orders 42(1) and (2) and 43(1) to (5)

The Speaker: Please be seated. Before calling on the Honourable Minister of Health to continue his debate, I beg indulgence of the House to deal with a specific matter which is dealt with under Standing Order 42, more specifically Standing Order 43(1), (2), (3), (4) and (5).

I should preface that subject by advising the House that it would be applicable for future votings, as we have already gone through this procedure. However, I think that out of an abundance of caution I need to bring it to the attention of Members.

I called for the suspension because at the time I motioned to my Clerk to assist with reading however she was busy at the time and could not so I took the suspension to refresh my memory as I knew it was somewhere within the Standing Orders.

I have now had an opportunity to do and I should so read: "42.(1) Save as otherwise provided in the Constitution or in these Standing Orders all questions proposed for the decision in the House or in any Committee shall be decided by a majority of the votes of those present and voting.

"(2), the Presiding Officer shall not vote unless, on any question, the votes are equally divided in which case he shall have and exercise a casting vote".

And, in particular, Standing Order 43 (1) and the following subsections: "43.(1) At the conclusion of a debate upon any question, the Presiding Officer shall put the question for the decision of the House, and shall collect the votes of the ayes and the noes after which no further debate may take place thereupon.

"(2) The result shall be declared by the Presiding Officer stating, "I think the ayes have it" or "I think the noes have it" as the case may be, but any Member may challenge the opinion of the Chair by claiming a division.

"(3) A division shall be taken by the Clerk calling each Member's name and recording the vote given. The Clerk shall then announce the number of those who have voted for and against the proposal and the Presiding Officer shall declare the result of the division.

"(4) Every Member present shall express his vote either for the ayes or the noes or state his wish to abstain. The Clerk shall enter in the minutes of the proceedings the records of each Member's vote, and shall add a statement of the names of the Members who abstained.

"(5) If a Member states that he voted in error or that his vote has been counted wrongly, he may claim to have his vote altered, provided that such claim is made as soon as the Clerk has announced the numbers and before the Chair has declared the results of the division. Upon such claim being made the Presiding Officer, at his sole discretion, shall either direct the Clerk to alter the Member's vote or direct that a fresh division be held."

The Chair did hear two Noes from the Opposition—one from the Member for North Side and one from the Second Elected Member for George Town. Hence my decision to accept the challenge to call for a division.

In future, if there are no Noes the Chair will not call for a division, and if there are Noes, and if a Member wishes subsequent to that to change the negative to an affirmative vote, they must concur with 43(5). Thank you.

The Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. When we took the brief suspension, I was explaining the situation, which brought about the Health Insurance Commission, was that it was considered necessary to create an entity to give it greater strength and ability to supervise and see that the Insurance Law and Regulations were carried out in the way they should have been and that prior to that this was something which was done by one individual in the Monetary Authority.

The matter of health insurance in the Cayman Islands is a major subject; something that impacts the lives of everyone thus it was seen as necessary to make a bigger and stronger entity to deal with the enforcement and administration of the Law and the Regulations.

The Bill before this Honourable House provides for the establishment of a Health Insurance Commission.

Clause 1 provides for the short title as well as the commencement provision and I would just like to read that because it is important to know that subsection (2) states: "This Law shall come into force on such date as maybe appointed by order made by the Governor in Council and different dates may be appointed for different provisions of this Law and in relation to different matters."

This is important as it relates back to our point raised, by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, about the necessary size and numbers of staff and such like. While the Law itself could come into effect, different requirements can be brought in, over a period of time, to allow sufficient time to get "all our ducks in a row", as the saying goes. Thus, this provision provides for that ability.

Clause 2 is the interpretation clause.

Clause 3 establishes the Health Insurance Commission.

Clause 4 deals with the constitution of the Commission and provides that: "(1) The Commission shall consist of the following Members-

- (a) the Permanent Secretary of the Ministry responsible for health insurance;
- (b) the Chief Medical Officer;

- (c) not less than four nor more than six other members appointed by the Governor from among persons experienced in the area of health, health insurance, finance (including accounting) and regulation of insurance; and
- (d) one Member of the Public who is not experienced in any of the areas defined in paragraph (c)."

One might say, "Well, why would one want to do that?" It has been represented to me that to have somebody, perhaps a pastor for example, would bring an element into the Committee or the Board which would give it some balance it may not have had otherwise if we had only technical people involved.

Clause 5 deals with the Meetings of the Commission.

Clause 6 provides for the appointment of the: "...Superintendent of Health Insurance who shall be the chief executive officer of the Commission."

It also provides that: "(2) The Governor shall appoint such other officers of the Commission as the Governor considers necessary for the due performance of the function of the Commission and such officers of the Commission shall be under the supervision of the Superintendent of Health Insurance."

We have appointed a Superintendent of Health Insurance in the person of Mr. Mervyn Connolly.

Clause 7 sets out the functions of the Commission which shall be the following: "(a) to manage the segregated insurance fund..." That is the fund where monies come in from. Each Insurance Contract of the $5, and $10 amount, the fund will be so managed by the Commission;

- "(b) to advise the Minister generally on any matter relating to health insurance including advice on the premium rates charged by approved insurers;
- "(c) monitoring the conduct of approved insurers in order to ensure they are conforming with the requirements of the Health Insurance Law, 1997 and Regulations made thereunder;
- "(d) to provide such information relating to the exercise of its functions as the Minister may require;
- "(e) to give effect to any directions given by the Minister under section 10; and
- "(f) such other functions as may be prescribed by regulation or any other Law."

Clause 8 provides for "...the segregated insurance fund into which there shall be paid the payments specified under regulation 5 of the Health Insurance Regulations (2002 Revision) and such other payments out of the revenue of the Islands as may be approved from time to time by the Legislative Assembly."

This refers to the point I made earlier, that it will be a cost for it to be up and functioning the way that it should be and it might well require funds from the Legislative Assembly. Therefore, provision is made whereby this can be done. All claims arising in connection with the treatment of indigent persons shall be paid out of the segregated insurance fund.

Clause 9 provides that "The Commission shall cause to be established one or more custody accounts into which the assets of the segregated insurance fund shall be deposited and held."

This confirms, in the largest part, the Public Management and Finance Law, which is more specific as to how finances are held and what the specific purposes are for which they are used.

Clause 10 provides that: "The Minister may, after consultation with the Commission, give such general directions as to the exercise and performance by the Commission of its functions as appear to the Minister to be necessary in the public interest."

Clause 11 provides that: "(1) The Commission shall cause proper accounts relating to the segregated insurance fund to be prepared and maintained on an accrual accounting basis and in accordance with generally accepted accounting practice."

(2) The commission shall, as soon as practicable after the end of each financial year, forward to the Governor in Council-

- (a) a report on the operations of the Commission during that year; and
- (b) a copy of the accounts of the segregated insurance fund for that year certified by the Auditor General.

(3) The Minister shall cause copies of the report of the Commission and the accounts of the segregated insurance fund forwarded to the Governor in Council ... to be laid before the Legislative Assembly."

This again is in keeping with the concept and objective of the Public Management Finance Law and the transparency in financial dealings, that ultimately it comes to the Legislative Assembly, which, at least, is initially most likely to be called upon to provide some amount of funding for this to start and get on its way.

Clause 12 provides for the auditing of accounts of the Commission by the Auditor General who shall:

- (a) conduct audits of the segregated insurance fund;
- (b) for the purposes of carrying out an audit or an investigation be given the right of access to all relevant information held by the Commission and the right of access to all premises occupied by the Commission;
- (c) have the right to take copies of any information referred to under this section; and

(d) have the right to require explanations from members and the public officers of the Commission.

Clause 13 (1) provides that: "On the coming into force of this Law, and at such other times thereafter as it deems appropriate, but in no event later than the three-year anniversary of the latest review, the Commission shall cause a review to be carried out to assess and evaluate the assets and liabilities the segregated insurance fund."

This again deals with prudent financial management as it should be exercised, because of the significant amount of money that is spent by the Cayman Islands Government which has been ongoing for years in providing health care for the people of this country.

Clause 14 provides that: "The Governor in Council may make regulations generally for carrying into effect any of the provisions of this Law."

This Bill, in the largest part, sets up an entity with certain powers to see that the Insurance Law and the Insurance Regulations are carried out in the appropriate manner, and to be the body which investigates and deals with problems arising there from in a manner consistent with good and prudent management.

Again, the question of Governor in Council is one which I think needs to be looked at legally to see whether that should read Governor in Cabinet or whether a definition should be made in it to clarify this situation. I would hope to do this at the Committee stage.

I recommend this Bill to Honourable Members and solicit their support.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Very briefly to support this supporting legislation for amendments which the Honourable Minister brought earlier on to the Health Insurance Law. As he indicated there are a number of places where Governor in Council appears, however I am sure that will be tidied up at committee stage to reflect changes made earlier on in regard to Cabinet.

With those few words, Madam Speaker, I would also like to congratulate our own Caymanian, Superintendent of Health Insurance, Mr. Mervyn Connolly, and I wish him every success in this venture.

I can assure him it will be trying however if we all work together this is something for the benefit of all the residents of the Cayman Islands. This will make health care provision and dealing with insurance and care providers, the doctors and other institutions such that we can finally come to a happy ground on this and so many people will not be suffering as they have done in the past. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak. Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, I will call upon the Honourable Minister of Health to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I would just like to thank Honourable Members for their support of this Bill and for the Member who spoke for the stated support for this Bill. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Health Insurance Commission Bill, 2003 be given a Second Reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Health Insurance Commission Bill, 2003 given a Second Reading.

The Speaker: We now take the luncheon break and re-convene at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.42 pm.

Proceedings resumed at 2.48 pm

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

House in Committee at 2.49 pm

The Chairman: I am going to Committee to consider the various Bills.

Please be seated.

With the leave of the House, may I assume that, as usual, we would authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and as such?

Will the Clerk please state each Bill and read its Clauses?

Health Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2003

Clause 1

The Clerk: Clause 1 Short Title.

The Speaker: I believe, Honourable Minister, there are not any amendments. Minister, I beg your pardon. We will deal with clause 1 and then we will go on. Sorry. The question is that clause 1 stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 1 passed.

Clause 2

The Clerk: Clause 2 Amendment of section 2 of the Health Insurance Law, 1997 – interpretation

The Chairman: Honourable Minister, I believe you have an amendment for clause 2.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Chairman, I beg to move that clause 2 be amended as shown in the amendments circulated:

- (i) in paragraph (b) of the definition of “spouse” by inserting after the word “person” where it first appears, the words “of the opposite sex”; and
- (ii) in paragraph (b), by repealing the words “approved insurer” where they first appear and by substituting the words “approved provider”; and
- (iii) in paragraph (c) by repealing the definition of “seaman” and substituting the following: “seaman” means a person who resides in the Islands and who –
  - (a) is a member of either the Veterans’ and Seamen’s Society of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman or of the Cayman Islands Seafarer’s Association;
  - (b) first went to sea before 1 January 1985; and
  - (c) was a Caymanian during the period of time when he was at sea.

The Chairman: Thank you. The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak to the amendment? If not, I shall put the question that the amendment stand part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendment passed.

The Chairman: I shall put the question that clause 2 stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 2 as amended passed.

Clause 3

The Clerk: Clause 3 Amendment of section 3 – compulsory health insurance.

The Chairman: Honourable Minister. Madam Speaker, I beg to move an amendment to clause 3 and that it be amended as follows:

(a) by inserting the following as paragraph (g) and renumbering the paragraphs of the clause accordingly-

“(g) in subsection (10), by inserting after the word “employees” where it first appears the words “and who are employed by different employers”; and

(b) by deleting the present paragraph (g) which is now to be renumbered (h) and substituting the following -

“(h) by inserting after subsection (10) the following subsection -

“(10a) The employer who is liable in accordance with subsection (10) to provide health insurance for the children of an employee shall provide health insurance for children born after such health insurance has been provided and the insurance shall cover post-natal care for a period of not less than one month after the birth in those cases where the children are Caymanian (as defined in the Immigration Law (2001 Revision)) or where the children are entitled to reside in the Islands in accordance with the Immigration Law (2001 Revision).”

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak? If not, I will put the question that the amendment stand part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendment passed.

The Chairman: I will now put the question that the clause as amended stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 3 as amended passed.

Clauses 4 through 7

The Clerk:

Clause 4 Amendment of section 5 - payment of premium.

Clause 5 Amendment of section 7 - unlawful deductions by employer.

Clause 6 Repeal of section 9 and substitution - recovery of damages from employer in default.

Clause 7 Amendment of section 10 - recovery of damages from employer in default.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 4 through 7 stand part of the Bill.

If there is no debate, I will put the question that clauses— Sorry, The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Chair, in section 5 that clause 10 be deleted and the following substituted through you to the Minister; (b) (2)

Are we dealing with the Health Insurance Amendment Bill? Yes, and we are dealing with page two of the Committee stage amendments or are we across that? I thought you said 4, 5, 6 and 7. I am on number 5. I am looking at the amendment.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: I think that the clause that the Honourable Member is referring to is in clause 10.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That clause 10 be deleted and the following substituted.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: I think we have not reached there in the amendments, as yet. Is that correct?

The Chairman: We are on clauses 4, 5, 6 and 7.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: My apologies.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 4 to 7 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 4 through 7 stand part of the Bill.

Clause 8

The Clerk: Clause 8 Amendment of section 11 - voluntary health insurance.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Chairman, I beg to move the amendment that clause 8 be deleted.

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to debate? The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, only to ask the reasoning for the proposed deletion of that clause.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Chairman, I am advised that it adds nothing to the Law in that if it is voluntary it is really not enforceable or a requirement of the Law.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I wonder if the Chairman could say then that if such a provision were not in the law then would those Contracts still be subject to regulation under the Law.

I think the concern was to ensure that there would be some regulation and oversight of those contracts as well. Certainly, that is the view we had on this side therefore if the Minister could perhaps expand a little bit on the thinking and indicate whether or not my reasoning is flawed, because it might well be.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Chairman, thank you. I was consulting with Legal Counsel. It has been pointed out to me that this is voluntary insurance and what the Law tries to capture is that of compulsory insurance. Indeed, this was something which was raised by the Select Committee which has not yet completed its deliberation and as such if it is a voluntary insurance then it is just that. It is voluntary and it would not be compulsorily enforced.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I understand what the Honourable Minister is saying, however it seems to me that if the logic is that section 11 as it stands is necessary and prudent, I do not quite follow why we would not want to include the provisions or those sentences which are contained in section 8 of the amending Bill as an addition to that for the sake of clarity. I do not think that section 11 takes the position any further, it simply states out of an abundance of caution and for reasons of clarity that contracts of health insurance can provide for greater benefit than those in the Standard Health Contract. Therefore, it can cover situations after the employee has retired. I do not think it is in any way offensive or repulsive to the section. I am somewhat at a loss to understand why we would want to take those sentences out or that phrase out.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Chairman, to continue while the Minister is conferring because I am sure he can hear. If we look at what is proposed in the green Bill, before we speak to the Members, I know it is him that I have to speak to but I know he is hearing me. What was proposed in the green Bill to read after the original section 11 ended, that is, after the word “contract” in the substantive Law itself, it says, “and such contract may provide.”

Thus, while we accept that it is voluntary, as the Second Elected Member for George Town stated, all it does is make it clear that such a contract can do so, and we are saying that while we respect that it is not mandatory and it is voluntary, then while it may not tell somebody what they have to do, it certainly will highlight what they can do. From my layman’s perspective, I cannot see any reasoning why it does not do anything, but then it does not do any harm. I think it just brings a little bit of clarity to it.

Withdrawal of amendment to clause 8

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Chairman, I take the point made by the Member and I agree that as he says, it does not detract, if anything it further explains and if you would guide me in this regard, I would then withdraw the proposed amendment to clause 8 and beg that as the way it stands it should remain.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to clause 8 be withdrawn.

If there is no debate, all those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendment to Clause 8 withdrawn.

The Clerk: Accordingly, Madam Clerk will have to put clause 8 as originally positioned.

The Clerk: Clause 8 Amendment of section 11 - voluntary health insurance.

The Chairman: The question is that clause 8 stands part of the Bill. If there is no debate, I will put the Question.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 8 passed.

Clause 9

The Clerk: Clause 9 Amendment of the principal law - insertion of section 11A.

The Chairman: Honourable Minister, there is an amendment.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Chairman, I beg to move an amendment that clause 9 be amended by deleting subclause (1) and substituting the following –

- (1) “The Commission in order to effectively monitor the performance of the health insurance industry in the Islands, shall at such times each year as it may determine, by notice in writing, request from approved insurers, specified information or information of a specified description and shall request such approved insurers to produce specified documents or documents of a specified description relating to -
- (a) the number of insured persons in the Islands;
  - (b) the premiums paid for health insurance; and
  - (c) the financial performance and status of the approved insurers, and the approved insurers shall provide such information.”

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak to the amendment? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Chairman, I recall during the Select Committee discussions that there were some Honourable Members who urged the point that a Report on a quarterly basis would give us a better picture of what was actually transpiring in the industry, and that by simply leaving it until the end of the year might permit too much time to go by before concerns were addressed. I suspect that this amendment is the result of representations made by the insurance companies and perhaps the Minister could benefit the Committee with what those representations were; if that is the case or, if not, he could indicate the reasoning behind the proposed amendment.

The other point is that the items (a), (b), (c) and (d) which were in the amending Bill and which it is now proposed to substitute or to have substituted in section 11A (1): “(a) the volume of insured health benefits in the Islands; and “(b) the price of such health benefits;”.”

Those two are being changed respectively to “(a) the number of insured persons in the Islands; and (b) the premiums paid for health insurance.”

I wonder if the Honourable Minister can (not that we have any fundamental objections to this) explain the rationale for the change.

The Chairman: Thank you. The Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Chairman, the recommended amendments here are as a result of discussions with the insurance providers.

In subclause (1) it was brought to the attention of the Ministry that there is a certain reporting function done to the Monetary Authority and that they could at the same time provide that information to the Commission.

They convinced us that to do so in intervals of three months would incur considerable costs, with: “(a) the volume of insured health benefits in the Islands; and

“(b) the prices of such health benefits.””

The way that the insurance industry provides information was pretty much meaningless as to how the insurance function is performed. The number of insured persons that each one might have and the premiums paid rather than the prices of such health benefits, would be the correct description. Then (c) would continue as the financial performance and status of the approved insurers.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I take the Minister’s point in relation to the latter part of his response and I am not trying to question his judgment in relation to the first part, whereby the Reporting requirement should be annual instead of quarterly.

Quite frankly, I do not buy the submission of the industry that it is going to be disproportionately expensive for them to produce and provide this information on a quarterly basis. It seems to me that if things are properly organised it should be simply a matter of pressing a key on a PC and the system spits out the Report, providing the data has been inputted in the first place. Whether it is a quarterly basis or annual basis, it should be a similar function however I am not going to make a federal case about that. I am just expressing my view about it.

The Chairman: Honourable Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Chairman, I take the point made by the Member. I tend towards keeping it more regular myself, but it is something which I can say that I would certainly keep in view and so recommend to the Commission. I tend towards that thinking however after considerable discussion with the consultants it was decided that we would bring it forward in this amended way.

The Chairman: If there is no further debate, I will put the question that the amendment stands part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendment passed.

The Chairman: I will now put the question that the clause as amended, stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 9 as amended passed.

Clause 10

The Clerk: Clause 10 Amendment of section 12 - termination of contract

The Chairman: I think it is your intention, Honourable Minister, to amend clause 10.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Madam Chairman, I move that clause 10 be amended and the following substituted.

I would just like to point out that a missing part to this fifth amendment is that it should state: "the principal Law is amended in section 12 as follows:"

and then it would read: "That clause 10 be deleted and the following substituted –

"10. The principal Law is amended in section 12 as follows- (a) in (1)(a) by inserting after the word "arrears" the words, "in which case the contract shall terminate on the last day of the month for which premiums are fully paid";

(b) by repealing subsection (2) and substituting the following -

"(2) A standard health insurance contract terminates on the first day of the month next following the date of termination of employment of an employee; but if that employee does not become compulsorily insured with any other employer, cover under the contract shall continue for a period of three months from the date of termination of employment or until he becomes employed, whichever is earlier."

(c) by inserting after subsection (3) the following subsection -

"(4) An employer who, having been notified by his former employee that he is not employed and that he is not compulsorily insured, fails or refuses to extend the cover under the contract as provided in subsection (2) commits an offence and is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding $5,000."

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Chair, in what is proposed to amend the clause 10 or rather that clause 10 be deleted and the following substituted. In subsection (b) (2) that is proposed, it says: "...by repealing subsection (2) and substituting the following-".

This is where I have a question. It reads, as the Minister has just said, "A standard health insurance contract terminates on the first day of the month next following the date of termination of an employee, but if that employee does not become compulsorily insured with another employer, cover under the contract shall continue for a period of three months from the date of termination of employment or until he becomes employed, whichever is earlier".

My question is, if someone leaves the employment of someone else, and there is not another job lined up to start work immediately, what is there to make it absolutely clear? Although I read the whole thing, what causes the trigger to say to the former employer, "Look, this thing has to continue"? When does somebody tell him that?

Is it that once the person does not have a job lined up to start immediately and there is coverage right away, does it mean then that the person should advise the employer and the employer then is under obligation to continue it? I am saying that I can imagine how it works, but I am saying when I read this it does not tell me exactly how it must happen. That is all I am saying.

Now someone else might say it is crystal clear, but it is not to me and I read it three or four times and it is not crystal clear to me now. If everybody else is content and they understand it and they do not think it is a problem it can move right along, but it does not tell me what I know it wants to say. That is me. I read the whole thing and went over into the other page too.

The Chairman: Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Chairman. I have heard what the Member has said and I think in subclause (4) where: “An employer who, having been notified by his former employee that he is not employed and he is not compulsorily insured, fails or refuses to extend the cover under the contract as provided in subsection (2) commits an offence...”.

I would think that once notice is given to the employer then the employer would have an obligation to extend the insurance to the employee.

The Chairman: Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I may, I read that and I understand what it says. Therefore, we are to assume that where an employee is not leaving one job, going straight to another job and having insurance coverage arranged then that employee has an obligation to let the employer know that he must continue that coverage, and by law he has ninety days in which to find other coverage at which time the former employer can terminate the coverage.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Chairman, that is my understanding of the intention of the—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So, the original onus is on the employee to advise the employer.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: That is my understanding of the intention, Madam Chairman. I would just add that it is the understanding also that the employee, for it to continue, would have to contribute their half of the contract.

The Chairman: Is there any further debate?

I will put the question that the amendment stand part of the Clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendment passed.

The Chairman: I will put the question that the clause as amended stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 10 as amended passed.

Clauses 11 through 17

The Clerk:

Clause 11	Amendment of the principal Law – insertion of sections 14A and 14B
Clause 12	Amendment of section 15 – recovery of payment by provider of a health benefit
Clause 13	Amendment of section 16 – fees
Clause 14	Amendment of section 17 – disputes
Clause 15	Amendment of section 18 – appeals
Clause 16	Amendment of section 19 – regulation
Clause 17	Transitional

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 11 through 17 stand part of the Bill.

If there is no debate, I will put the question that clauses 11 through 17 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clauses 11 through 17 passed.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Health Insurance Law, 1997; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Title passed.

The Health Insurance Commission Bill, 2003

Clauses 1 through 5

The Clerk:

Clause 1	Short title and commencement.
Clause 2	Interpretation
Clause 3	Health Insurance Commission established
Clause 4	Constitution of Commission
Clause 5	Meetings of Commission

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 1 through 5 stand part of the Bill.

If there is no debate, I will put the question that clauses 1 through 5 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clauses 1 through 5 passed.

Clauses 6 through 10

The Clerk:

Clause 6	Superintendent of Health Insurance and other officers
Clause 7	Functions of Commission
Clause 8	Segregated insurance fund
Clause 9	Custody of fund assets
Clause 10	Minister may give general directions to Commission

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 6 through 10 stand part of the Bill.

If there is no debate, I will put the question that Clauses 6 through 10 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clauses 6 through 10 passed.

Clauses 11 through 14

The Clerk:

Clause 11	Accounts
Clause 12	Audit of Accounts
Clause 13	Actuarial review
Clause 14	Governor in Council may make regulations

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 11 through 14 stand part of the Bill.

If no debate, Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Chairman, I have taken advice on the question of Governor in Council and I understand that due to the interim constitutional order, Governor in Cabinet would be correct and that that it has been so interpreted, including as it would apply in the Constitution; the term Governor in Cabinet would be the correct terminology.

The Chairman: If there is no objection from the House, can we take that as a consequential amendment? Thank you.

The question is that clauses 11 through 14 stand part of the Bill.

If no debate, I will put the question that clauses 11 through 14 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clauses 11 through 14 passed.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to provide for the Establishment of a Health Insurance Commission; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes

The Chairman: The question is that the Title stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Title passed.

The Chairman: That concludes the proceedings in Committee and the question is that the Bills be now reported to the House. I am reminded that I must put the question.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Bills to be reported to the House.

House resumed at 3.35 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. The House is resumed.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
21 JULY 2003
10.26 AM
Sixteenth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to grace us with prayers.

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable Minister of Health and the Second Elected Member for West Bay for late attendance.

PRAYERS

Mr. Lyndon Martin: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together. Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.29 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, are there papers for presentation this morning as indicated on Friday?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I believe that the Honourable Minister of Education has papers for presentation. I would ask for that to be deferred because I think he is running late.

The Speaker: The question is that the presentation of Papers by the Honourable Minister of Education be deferred for later on in today's sitting.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Presentation of Papers and of Reports deferred until later in the Sitting.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

Suspension of Standing Order 23(6)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader.

Honourable W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, in order to allow more than three questions appearing in the name of the same Member to be taken today we ask for the suspension of Standing Order 23(6).

The Speaker: I put the question that Standing Order 23(6) be suspended.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 23(6) suspended to allow more than three questions appearing in the name of the same Member to be taken.

Question No. 43

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

No. 43: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Minister responsible for Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology, to give an update on efforts made by Government to attract e-business since November 2001.

The Speaker: The Minister of Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, in early 2002 my Ministry awarded a Contract to the Brac Informatics Centre in conjunction with 411 Communicator—an international marketing and communications company headquartered in Chicago—to review the outline marketing plan produced by the Marketing Sub-committee of the e-business Advisory Board, and to develop detailed local and international marketing plans.

In August 2002, the Brac Informatics Centre (BIC) made their first report to the Ministry and the Board. They strongly recommended the development of an overall Cayman brand, incorporating financial services, tourism and e-business. Within this overall strategy, the company recommended the development of specific e-business products.

The development of an overall Cayman brand and marketing strategy was already being examined by Government in an initiative being led by the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Our efforts have, therefore, been incorporated into, and are now a full part of, that initiative. We have also identified a number of niche areas in the e-business sector where we believe we can develop competitive products that are complimentary to those being offered in the financial sector. These include the enhancement of our legislation on intellectual property rights and data protection.

Our plan is for these concepts to be investigated and developed in conjunction with the private sector.

Of course, the majority of our resources over the periods have been committed to the liberalisation of telecommunications which we see as an essential prerequisite to the launching of any major international e-business marketing campaign.

I will say, just for added information, now that the liberalisation process has been completed; much of our efforts will now be directed in the development of e-business and e-commerce in the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: Are there any further Supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 44

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

No. 44: Mr. Lyndon L. Martin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports, what is the policy towards the provision of low cost housing on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. The Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the Ministry's policy on providing affordable housing is based on various reports and studies done on the social problems faced by the people living in the Cayman Islands, which include Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. It was evident from these reports that the lack of affordable housing was one major contributor to many of the social ills faced by our people.

As the Minister responsible for Housing, I wanted to ensure that the provisions of homes was based on the areas with the greatest need. Therefore, I requested a report by the Department of Social Services on Housing, which was submitted on 11 April 2002.

This report highlighted the fact that data provided in the 1999 census showed that the majority of Caymanians who are in the work force (6,244 of 10,630) earned between $12,000 and $23,900 per annum. This puts the majority of working Caymanians at a disadvantage as far as being able to compete to acquire property or safe adequate housing at current market prices.

We also know from the census data that there were some 7,598 children between the ages of zero to 14 years, 5,998 of which were Caymanians. From data provided in the 1999 census on the number of households by district and tenure, identified that there were:

4,994 were renting and 534 needed major repairs in the district of George Town,
1,250 were renting and 222 needed major repairs in the district of West Bay,
613 were renting and 114 needed major repairs in the district of Bodden Town,
218 were renting and three needed major repairs in Cayman Brac,
80 were renting and 34 needed major repairs in the district of East End,
68 were renting and 39 needed major repairs in the district of North Side, 42 were renting and three needed major repairs in Little Cayman.

The Social Services Department has observed over the years, in particular in George Town area, the ever-expanding development of commercial properties encroaching into former family residential areas such as Rock Hole, Mary Street and Central. This has resulted in instances where the very poor persons who own no property and previously had access to add a room onto a family member's house have now been displaced.

It must be noted that even in cases where a family member disposed of that property that individual might have no claim to monies obtained from the sale. The district of George Town has, therefore, been identified as having the most urgent need for Government's intervention in the housing market.

Based on the above the Ministry will be providing housing first in the district of George Town and West Bay. As the present homes will take some 14 months to complete we will not be providing homes in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman this coming year. However, we do recognise the needs of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and will look at the feasibility of providing affordable housing in the Sister Islands in the future phases of the affordable housing initiative.

We welcome the input from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and look forward to working with him in the future on addressing the housing needs of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? If not we will move on to the next Question.

Question No. 45

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

No. 45: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister of Community Services if the Learn to Swim Programme at the Lions Pool is available to all primary school children.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. The Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, there are two types of learn to swim programmes for children of primary school age. Given the limited size of the Lions Pool (25 metres) and the student/teacher ratio required for safety teaching children to swim, we are limited in the number of available slots for the Learn to Swim Programme.

In addition, to the Learn to Swim, the following programmes are offered: School, Masters (adult learning) and Special.

The first is the after-school and Saturday Learn to Swim programme which is available to all children of the Cayman Islands on a space available basis. Currently, children are enrolled from all districts of Grand Cayman. There are 30 slots per week.

The second Learn to Swim programme is for the schools and 24 slots are available. Typically, classes for primary school age children are offered in the fall and summer terms with priority for filling the 16 to 19 slots given to Government schools. This is to allow classes to be conducted in the warmest weather. Up to 18 weekly primary school classes of 20 to 35 children have been conducted in a single term.

Most Government primary schools have arranged to send classes. Past and regular primary school classes have included Bodden Town, George Town, Savannah, Red Bay and John A. Cumber. Additionally, a slot is always ensured every term for the Lighthouse School.

Bodden Town typically requests the first period time slots to allow for transport during their home room period and return during break to minimise disruption of the school day. In fact, it has been the experience of Bodden Town that they typically make it back after swimming with enough time to still have the entire 15 minute break period upon arrival. The same priority has been extended to North Side and East End primary schools.

The Lions Pool staff has in the past also offered to run combined classes of North Side and Bodden Town or East End and Bodden Town classes, if that helped to facilitate transport. All George Hicks High School students also receive swimming instructions at the Lions Pool.

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say where he refers in his answer that "The Lions Pool staff has in the past also offered to run combined classes of North Side and Bodden Town or East End and Bodden Town classes, if that helped to facilitate transport", if the North Side primary school has taken up this offer.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, it is obvious the North Side primary school did not take up the offer.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable Minister is in a position to say why not.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: I am not in a position to say why not, perhaps the Member can say.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I am not the Minister responsible for offering these children the Learn to Swim programme. I wonder if the Honourable Minister will undertake to give a reply in writing to that supplementary question.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I will undertake to find out whether or not the Department of Sports is aware of the reasons why the North Side primary school did not accept the offer. However, I am not in the position, nor are the members of the Sports Department, to know why the North Side primary school did not accept the offer.

Thus, the reason why I suggested that perhaps, since the Member is asking the question, she could enlighten the House as to why North Side primary school did not accept the offer. I certainly have no problem in enquiring if we have that knowledge available to us in the department.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we shall move on to the next question.

Question No. 46

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

No. 46: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Minister responsible for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports if the juvenile facility at Northward Prison would be able to accommodate both male and female prisoners?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the juvenile facility at Northward Prison will not be able to accommodate both male and female.

There has been no change in the previously announced plan to hold male juveniles only in the separate Chapter Houser facility at Northward. The very different problems faced by young girls require a different regime to the one based on physical activity and education that is planned for the boys.

The very few female juveniles—only four girls in the last two and a half years, one at present—who required this level of security, will continue to be held at Her Majesty's Prison (HMP) Fairbanks. In 2001 and 2002 female juveniles were held for only three out of 24 months.

The medium term Plan is to incorporate the building adjacent to Fairbanks into the female complex. This building is currently being used as specialist storage for the affordable housing initiative. It is expected that the requirement for this will end on or around June 2004. The building will then undergo some minimum conversion to allow the classroom and small activities rooms in Fairbanks to be moved across. This will not only enable an expansion of these activities particularly in tailoring but also free up accommodation in the main building to enable the development of a small dormitory specifically dedicated to female juveniles.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Could the Minister state if, at present, there is only one female juvenile being housed at HMP Fairbanks? Are there any types of educational programmes being offered to that individual or to any others that have been held previously?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I am sorry that this information was read by me. I am aware that there are no females being held at HMP Fairbanks at the moment. It is simply that this particular statement was prepared by the Ministry at the time when a female juvenile was being held. That female juvenile is now at Tranquillity Bay in Jamaica. There are no female juveniles being held at the moment.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker, going back to my original supplementary. If and when female juveniles are held, are there any educational programmes afforded to them?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the policy of the Ministry is to make sure that juveniles are not held unless it is required as part of the procedure needed to ensure the safety of the public or the safety of the juveniles, or unless the courts feel that there can be no other alternatives explored with regard to female juveniles.

We have stated that a small amount has been held in the past and the idea is to avoid the incarceration of juveniles in particular. Consequently, there is no specific educational programme simply because we have not been dealing with a specific female juvenile problem. However, as I said in my main statement, we intend to go through the remodelling of the facilities at Fairbanks to allow us to be able to accommodate female juveniles when the time comes and at that time we will also make sure that an educational component is introduced.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am wondering if the Minister can tell us if and when female juveniles are held at HMP Fairbanks, how we will ensure separation from the main population there.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, with all due respect, I do not believe that the supplementary is now part of the main question. The Member is now asking us for our future plans and at this particular time I would prefer to leave that answer for a later date.

The Speaker: Member for East End, would you be so kind as to repeat your question for me please?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, my question was, if and when female juveniles are held at HMP Fairbanks how would we ensure separation. Madam Speaker, I heard the Minister saying that the supplementary is not valid at this time. However I draw the House's attention to the third paragraph and I think it is. "The very few female juveniles, only four girls in the last two and a half years, one at present [He says this is not so because this was prepared prior to her going to Tranquillity Bay] who required this level of security will continue to be held at HMP Fairbanks. In 2001 and 2002 female juveniles were held for only three out of 24 months."

Perhaps I can reword it and ask when they were held how did we ensure separation? In the future (which this indicates if there are ever females being held there) how will we ensure separation?

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member.

As it relates to your question it is a composite question that entails two parts. The first part I will allow because it was based on the substantive answer on an already existing set of circumstances.

I find fault with the second part within Standing Order 22(g) and will not allow it in that format. However, if you wish to rephrase it to bring it outside that scope then I will reconsider.

The Honourable Minister of Community Services, please respond to the first part of the question.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Would you have him clearly repeat the first part of the question, Madam Speaker?

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The first part of the question, Madam Speaker, asks the Minister to inform this Honourable House how, in the past when we had juvenile females being held at HMP Fairbanks, separation was ensured.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, perhaps he needs to ask his colleague, who was the Minister responsible (before I took over) for at least a year, since I have no knowledge of what took place at the time when she was there. Perhaps she can tell us how the separation was achieved.

However, in answer it is not the policy of the department to encourage the isolation of female juveniles because it is considered to be dangerous. Therefore, if we have one female we do not isolate that one female totally from the general population. I have as part of my supplementary that girls have a higher risk of becoming suicidal if kept in solitary confinement. They very much need to be able to interact with others. Offending girls are also more likely to run away if strict security measures are not in place. When that happens they become more vulnerable to being victimized and abused by putting themselves in negative and sometimes dangerous situations as a result of running away.

That is part of the rationale for actually having to put offending juvenile females in the Fairbanks environment because there needs to be, at that particular time, a secure environment. However, the security should not come to the point where they are totally isolated in some kind of solitary confinement because that in itself could produce more negative results.

I would also like to add that we are working with this problem, one that I inherited and the Member for North Side can testify to that because she was obviously responsible for that Ministry then. We are working to find solutions to this particular issue.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I do not think it is my place to ask the Member for North Side because the Minister became a minister on the 8 November 2001 and he spoke here of 2002. Therefore, between 2001 and 2003 he is responsible.

The Speaker: Please turn it into a question.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Minister in his reply spoke of solitary confinement. I wonder if he can, first of all, enlighten us as to the definition of solitary confinement with regard to female juveniles.

The Speaker: Before calling on the Honourable Minister I would recognise the Deputy Leader for a motion to suspend Standing Order 23(7) and (8) to allow questions to continue beyond 11am.

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) to allow for Question Time to continue beyond 11am.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be duly suspended.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I have paid attention to answering the question and now it seems like the Member for East End is going to again go back into his fantasy of being an attorney and try to create this line of questioning which I think is going no place.

Section 12(d) of the Prison Law states that: “Juveniles shall be kept segregated from all other prisoners.”

However, that section is qualified with the following: “Provided that nothing in this section shall require a prisoner to be unduly deprived of the society of other prisoners except as directed by the law or by an order of the court.”

The number of female juveniles means that if they were kept segregated they would effectively be in solitary confinement.

The Speaker: The Member for East End. I will allow one more supplementary after this one.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I certainly do not want to be a lawyer nor a sociologist. My question to the Minister is, if the Law requires that juveniles be separated, why is that we are making juveniles come in contact with hardened criminals at our prison?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, my answer is, section 12(d) of the Prison Law states that: “Juveniles shall be kept segregated from all other prisoners.”

That section is qualified, however, with the words: “Provided that nothing in this section shall require a prisoner to be unduly deprived of the society of other prisoners, except as directed by the Law or by an order of the court.”

The number of female juveniles means that if they were kept segregated they would effectively be in solitary confinement. We also said there are higher risks of suicidal incidences if female juveniles were kept in solitary confinement.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In the second paragraph of the substantive answer, the Honourable Minister said that there are very different problems faced by young girls ‘requiring’ . . . I believe it means, a different regime to the one based on physical activity and education that is planned for the boys. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say what the plan is in relation to boys, particularly in relation to education at the Chapter House facility at Northward.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, it is not a part of the substantive question. It is here merely to show why we do not have the plan to integrate females into the Chapter House; why we are looking at a totally separate facility.

However, I would like to give an answer to the substantive question of Chapter House because it deserves an answer that will not confuse but enlighten not only the Members of this House but the members of the public with regard to Government policies at Chapter House.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I allowed the question from the Second Elected Member for George Town because it was asked based on verbatim statement of fact on paragraph two of your reply. If you are not in a position to answer this morning perhaps you may wish to do it at a later stage.

The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, if you insist that the Second Elected Member for George Town is right in saying that because I included information dealing with Chapter House then Chapter House is a part of the substantive question, I will be quite willing to submit an answer to this House at a later date.

The Speaker: Thank you.

I said one more supplementary. I caught the eye of the Member for North Side and the Member for George Town at the same time; therefore I will allow the Member from North Side to ask the final Supplementary.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Honourable Minister, in his reply to a supplementary, stated quite clearly that the question be asked to me because I was the Minister and he has had no female juveniles being held at Fairbanks. I wonder if he is in a position to say —

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I never said that we have had no female juveniles held at Fairbanks while I have been Minister. I never said that, Madam Speaker.

[Inaudible interjections]

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: I did not say that Madam Speaker, nor did I infer that and if we would like to refer to the Hansard then we should do that because when I answered the question I spoke of a female being held at Fairbanks and I corrected myself by saying that was because the answer was prepared by the office earlier. However, in the meantime, that female juvenile had been transferred to Tranquillity Bay, Jamaica. That is what I said, Madam Speaker. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.
The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I recall those words, yes. However, when the Member for East End asked a specific question on the separation of female juveniles and the main prisoners at Northward Prison, the Honourable Minister said that he must ask his colleague because he had no juveniles held there. I recall that specifically. If he is now saying that he did have juveniles held there, I will not have a supplementary question to ask.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

In that event, we will take a short suspension and ask for the Hansard to peruse them for myself. We should break for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 11.33 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.37 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

We are still awaiting the typed Hansard Report of this morning. In light of the fact it is now lunch time, we are going to take the luncheon suspension and we will be back at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.38 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.15 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

When we took the break it was for the occasion for me to request and peruse the Hansard. I have now had the opportunity to receive it and I apologise on behalf of the Hansard Clerk as it did take an inordinate amount of time, but when it comes to the credibility of what one says, I believe that time is not the most important factor to be considered. I should first proceed to read what led up to the discrepancy and follow that with what was actually said.

I believe that the Honourable Minister of Community Services and the Member for North Side should be in possession of the unedited verbatim of the document to which I shall so refer.

Firstly, the Member for North Side [said], and I quote: "Thank you Madam Speaker, the Honourable Minister, in his reply to a supplementary, stated quite clearly that the question be asked to me because I was the Minister and he has had no female juveniles being held at Fairbanks. I wonder if he is in a position to say—"

She was interrupted by the Honourable Minister, Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: "Madam Speaker, I never said that we had no female juveniles held at Fairbanks while I have been Minister. I never said that, Madam Speaker."

The Minister continued by saying: "I did not say that, Madam Speaker, nor did I infer that and if we would like to refer to the Hansard then we should do that because I mentioned that when I answered the question I spoke of a female being held at Fairbanks and I corrected myself by saying that was because the answer was prepared by the officer earlier. However, in the meantime, that female juvenile had been transferred to Tranquillity Bay, Jamaica. That is what I said, Madam Speaker. Thank you."

The Member for North Side: "Madam Speaker, I recall those words, yes. However, when the Member for East End asked a specific question on the separation of female juveniles and the main prisoners from Northward Prison, the Honourable Minister said that he must ask his colleague because he had no juveniles held there. I recall that specifically. If he is now saying that he did have juveniles held there, I will not have a supplementary question to ask."

That concludes the discrepancy and the response would be found on page two where the Member for East End asked the question: "The first part of the question, Madam Speaker asks the Minister, if he could inform this Honourable House how, in the past when we had juvenile females being held at HMP Fairbanks, separation was ensued."

I recognised the Honourable Minister of Community Services, who responded: "Madam Speaker, maybe he needs to ask his colleague, who was the Minister responsible (before I took over) for a least a year, since I have no knowledge of what took place at the time when she was there. Perhaps she can tell us how the separation was achieved."

He continued on by saying, at the top of the page: "Madam Speaker, I would also like to add that we are working with this problem, one that I inherited, and the Member can testify to that because she obviously was responsible for that Ministry then. We are working to find solutions in this particular issue.”

Having read and had the opportunity to compare what was actually presented in the Hansard, I find that the Honourable Minister of Community Services did not, in this forum, say the words as stated by the Member.

The Speaker: Are there any more supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 47

The Speaker: I recognise the Member for North Side.

No.47: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Minister of Community Services, Gender Affairs Youth and Sports if a decision has been taken as to which properties will be utilised for the Affordable Housing Initiative.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports,

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, it had been decided to use three Crown-owned properties for development as the Affordable Housing Initiative: two in George Town, and one in West Bay. A fourth property, also located in Windsor Park, has been identified as being suitable for acquisition as a site for affordable housing development. Other properties will be identified in future phases of the Affordable Housing Initiative.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In correspondence sometime ago, Mr. Andrew Gibb, project manager for the Affordable Housing Initiative, indicated to Mr. Paul Bodden that there were some problems identified by the Ministry in relation to those properties just referred to and that is why the bidding process was going to be re-thought.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say what process was gone through and if he is now satisfied that those same properties—which had been previously thought unsuitable—are now satisfactory for the Affordable Housing Initiative.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. The Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, just let me be clear with my words so that they are not misread or misinterpreted. I know of no correspondence which identifies these sites as unsuitable for our Affordable Housing Initiative and therefore, Madam Speaker, I cannot reply to the supplementary.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, if you will give me a moment, I will locate the correspondence and read it to the Honourable Minister.

The Speaker: Is it a confidential piece of correspondence, Member for George Town?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Madam Speaker, it is part of that compendium of correspondence that was laid on the Table of this Honourable House during my debate on the Budget Address.

[Pause.]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I have located it.

It is a fax from Mr. Gibb to Paul A. Bodden Heavy Equipment Services Limited, dated 1 February, 2003. It reads: “Dear Sir, Tender AH1/03/002 Affordable Housing Initiative Phase 1, Site Clear Fill and Compact Work Decline Acceptance of Bid”.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, may I just interrupt you briefly?

Before you proceed to read the contents of the letter, could you perhaps just guide me as to how you intend to make it relevant to the substantive question? Thank you.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, the question asks about which sites had been identified in relation to Affordable Housing Initiative. The Honourable Minister responded to that in the substantive answer and I asked him in my supplementary whether he recalled correspondence to the effect that these sites had been indicated to be under review or as unsatisfactory. He responded to my supplementary by saying that he was not aware of any such correspondence.

The Speaker: All right, I am satisfied. Please continue.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I said I was not aware of any such correspondence which deemed these sites to be unsuitable for our Affordable Housing scheme.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

This is the fax from Andrew Gibb to Paul A. Bodden Heavy Equipment. It reads:

"I refer to a letter to you from the Central Tenders Committee dated 21 January 2003 and in the above regard.

"Following a Meeting held on 21 January 2003 with the Honourable Minister and the Permanent Secretary, it was decided not to make an award to you or any other bidder for this work as some of the sites identified for the initiative are now under review and a further value engineering of the initiative as a whole needs to be undertaken as a matter of urgency.

"In light of the above, I have been instructed to decline acceptance of the tender as submitted by Paul A. Bodden Heavy Equipment Ltd. or any tender submitted in terms of Clause 8 of the notes and instructions to bidders dated 13 January 2003 and as issued to and accepted by you. Yours sincerely, Andrew Gibb."

Therefore, Madam Speaker, my question to the Honourable Member is: Has this review taken place and have these sites now been determined as satisfactory for the Initiative as a whole, and can we have some details as to the review process that took place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, we are getting back to this same situation again. I cannot see in there where it is said that these sites were deemed to be unsuitable for the Affordable Housing Initiative.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: May I, then, use language which perhaps the Honourable Minister will find less objectionable? Let me use the language in the fax, Madam Speaker. It was: "... some of the sites identified for the initiative are now under review and further value engineering of the initiative as a whole needs to be undertaken as a matter of urgency."

May I respectfully ask the Minister whether this particular review has taken place and, in addition, has the further value engineering of the initiative as a whole, taken place, and, if so, can he give us the details of it?

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: My knowledge is that the value engineering is an ongoing process. It did take place with regards to these sites. We had the site in West Bay which I recall many people said could not be filled as it would cost more to fill than it was worth. There were all kinds of issues about the West Bay site that were carried on, on the radio and elsewhere.

We had been given quotations with regard to that site, in the first instance from the Public Works Department, that were out of sync with the reality that they did not accurately reflect the amount of fill that the land in West Bay would take and therefore the cost to the Affordable Housing Initiative. That can be shown in documentation, should the House require it.

The site in the Windsor Park area went from extreme cliff to extreme swamp. It was thought, once the site was examined, that perhaps it would be very, very difficult and costly to fill.

The question of value engineering is not something that I do myself, Madam Speaker. It is something that was done by the consultant, Mr. Andrew Gibb, as he carried out the process, and continues to carry out the process, of evaluating the cost to the Affordable Housing scheme for everything that is done and the value engineering was, in this particular instance, an attempt to reduce the cost of filling and compacting the lands. That was carried out and it was deemed possible to use this for the Affordable Housing scheme. When it comes to a particular price for the land, if it costs too much, it makes it unaffordable for the Government to build and recoup its cost.

Therefore, since the Government is not really subsidising to the point where people would be getting something for free—people are actually paying for these houses—thus, when we are actually preparing land and building these houses, we must make sure that the cost of the preparation of the land and the cost of erection does not go beyond what we want to sell the houses for on the market.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. We know what has transpired even though we do not know the details of the cost. We know in relation to the site at Windsor Park that the property has been filled and construction is taking place there.

Now, there was a recommendation by the Central Tenders Committee of the award of an overall contract to fill all three sites of just over $1 million, almost $1,100,000. That was back on January 21, 2003. We know what is happening with Windsor Park.

The Speaker: Member, can you please turn it into a question?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Yes, Madam Speaker, I am coming to that, but I need to set out the background in order that the Honourable Minister will understand where I am coming from.

In relation to the other two properties, the one behind Cox Lumber and the one in West Bay, can the Honourable Minister say whether contracts have been awarded in relation to these two sites? If so, what is the process to clear and fill those sites, and what is the value of both contracts and what process has been followed in the award of those contracts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I certainly did not come here today to make that information available to this Honourable House. However, I have no objection to giving that information to this Honourable House at a later date and in writing.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 48

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

No. 48: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Minister of Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports, how does a person qualify to purchase one of the homes being built under the Government's Affordable Housing Initiative?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the Government of the Cayman Islands has realised that there is a need to have a vehicle responsible for the management and sale, or letting, of the affordable housing units.

In this regard, a National Housing and Community Development Trust (NHCDT) is being set up to develop and manage affordable housing.

The Government's affordable housing units will be sold or rented or co-owned with low income families. The NHCDT will develop criteria that will ensure that the targeted population will be able to own, co-own or rent their own homes.

As the NHCDT is in its nascent stages, I am unable to give details on the specifics of how a person will qualify to purchase one of the homes being built under the Government's Affordable Housing Initiative. I can say, however, that the NHCDT (which will be comprised of capable, committed, competent, caring Caymanian professionals) will ensure that attributes such as income levels, debt-service ratios, residence and nationality requirements, all combine to form objective qualification criteria to ensure that those people with the most acute need for safe, secure and affordable homes are able to obtain them.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Elected Member for East End.

Supplementaries

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Minister can tell us when it is expected that these criteria will be ready.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, as soon as we get a little bit of rest from the Opposition trying to sabotage the project, I think we will be able to accomplish setting some criteria and perhaps the Opposition will be sympathetic enough to discontinue so that we can get going on that.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, the Minister has not answered my question and I would like the question answered. Therefore, I repeat the same question.

The Speaker: Member for East End, you may say that the Member did not answer the question as you expected. However I do not think that you can accurately say that he did not answer your question. Perhaps you may want to re-frame your question.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I asked the Minister if he could please give a timeframe as to when these criteria will be set.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, we are looking at having an Open House at the Windsor Park site sometime around 21 August, or thereafter, where persons will be able to come and view the models as they are totally completed and be able to pick up application forms and to be able to have questions answered by the Ministry with regard to what the specific criteria will be.

Hence, we are looking at a date towards the end of August when we should at least be at the point where people will have a concrete view of the product and that they will be acquainted with the criteria that will allow them to purchase these homes.

Again, Madam Speaker, this is all being achieved in spite of the fact that the People's Progressive Movement (PPM) Members continue to try to degrade this project.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I would like to thank the Honourable Minister for that response. Do we then have his undertaking that by the 21st August he will be sufficiently versed in the facts relating to this initiative that he can reply to parliamentary questions in this Honourable House?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I would not bother to answer that Honourable gentleman with that kind of question, because I have responded to the parliamentary questions.

What he needs to do, is to do something for the poor people who are being flooded every time it rains and the other poor people in this country who need housing. All he does is think about Paul Bodden!

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I will allow one more after this one, Sir.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, if my memory serves me right, I believe sometime ago I heard the Honourable Minister speak to the fact that there were supposed to be 208 of these houses.

The Minister is saying no, but the last amount that I heard the Minister state was that there were going to be 208 of these houses built. I am not suggesting that after that 208 no more would be built, however, my understanding was that with regard to the Contract that was signed it was dealing with 208 houses.

Is the Minister in a position, with regard to the four pieces of property he identified in his substantive answer, to refer to what sort of quantities would be proportioned out within these properties, out of those 208 houses?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I do not remember using the number 208. I think I have consistently talked about 200 affordable housing units.

The properties that I have talked about would be West Bay, and I am not speaking from any notes here and I am not the day-to-day manager of this, therefore it does not necessarily stay in my head.

However the numbers, I think for the West Bay site are something like 64 housing units. There are also some two-bedrooms and there are some two-bedrooms and dens.

The Eastern Avenue site could be somewhere around 30-34, and we are hoping to fit around 30 in the Windsor Park site, and as I have said, we have been in the process of trying to identify or to acquire a site for the balance of the homes.

The 64 homes will be in West Bay and the remainder of the 200 houses will be in the District of George Town. If the land can be found to build those houses here and, as we have said, it is because of the urgent need and because we want people to be able to afford the homes which means we need them to be able to work and therefore that is the situation with regards to work being in this district. We are talking with regard to the first phase only.

Question No. 54

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

No. 54: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs what are Government's plans to replace or repair the Police Station in East End?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, a decision has been taken to repair the Police Station in East End. There is currently no approved Government funding for it although it is hoped that with community support the work can be carried out this year.

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? The Member for East End.

Supplementaries

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Please excuse me, but I am wondering if the First Official Member can explain to this Honourable House what he means by community support.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

It is my understanding that the Commissioner hopes to get the support of the community and make the work a community Government partnership in carrying out the repairs.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

It appears like we have to sing the theme song for the West Indies, "Rally round the West Indies". Well, I am now appealing to the country to rally round the people of East End so that they can have a suitable police station.

Can the First Official Member ascertain if the Commissioner of Police would accept my help from the district to get the community together to do this project

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I thank that Honourable Member for volunteering. In fact, I had intended to call on him to help. As, he so very generously has agreed, I am very pleased, on behalf of the Commissioner, to accept his offer and I should say that it is our hope in the long term to replace the Police Station at East End with a more centrally located facility.

However, in the short term, I look forward to the Member's assisting in getting the necessary renovations done.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I can assure the First Official Member of this House and all this country that I shall commence forthwith!

The Speaker: I caught the eye of the Member for North Side. Will she give way to the Honourable Leader?

The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable First Official Member is in a position to give the total estimated cost of the repair to the East End Police Station.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I am not in a position to give that this afternoon. The individual who is here does not have that figure, although I am sure that can be made available as soon as we can obtain it.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side, did you have a follow up?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. My original supplementary was just about the same question as the Member's for North Side.

The other question that I wanted to ask the Honourable First Official Member with regard to this initiative is, Is it planned that the Government would provide the materials, and the idea would be for the community to assist with labour, or, is there any specific methodology with regard to how that would be achieved?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I do not have the specifics of it, although I have been told there is some sponsorship (if not committed, shall I say indicated), and by that I take it that materials or some material will be forthcoming and with the help of the Member from East End rallying people around, we hope to get it.

Of course, if the Member for North Side wishes to offer some help, we will not turn that down either.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In light of what has transpired here, I am wondering if the First Official Member can say if Government is prepared to make available the services of Public Works, with, say, architectural drawings and the like.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Yes, it is my understanding that will be made available.

The Speaker: Last supplementary. The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the First Official Member can tell us what specific reason was in place. Why did Government not fund the full repairs?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I am not in a position to answer that question. I have given the information that I received.

The Speaker: Next question. The Member for North Side.

Question No. 55

No. 55: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economics if he would give the names of the insurance companies and the local bank involved in the "bond issue".

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Finance and Economics.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, the note issue that Government finalised on 8 April 2003 for US$163.2 million dollars is held by the following entities in the following amounts:

Pacific Life Insurance Company	US$43,200,000
The Lincoln National Life Insurance Company	US$35,000,000
First Penn Pacific Life Insurance Company	US$5,000,000
Hartford Life Insurance Company	US$25,000,000
Hartford Casualty Insurance Company	US$10,000,000
All State Life Insurance Company	US$25,000,000
Bank of Butterfield International (Cayman) Limited	US$20,000,000
Total size of the note issue	US$163,200,000

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Third Official Member can tell us if there is any reason why only one Cayman entity was involved in this issue.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, the note issue in its entirety was offered to all local clearing banks. Our feedback was that all banks wanted to participate in the note issue although, sadly, only one bank was able to meet the deadline set by the Government.

It was important that the Government set a deadline in order to achieve a pricing for its note issue before the outbreak of the most recent Gulf war.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Third Official Member then tell us how much time was given for reply?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, a week and a half was allowed because there was a rate that was quoted by the insurance companies in the United States and through the Bank of Butterfield. In order for the Government to benefit from that rate, there was a specific time line that had to be observed, hence this was the period that was also allowed to the local financial institutions.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. We have heard, because of the length of time, almost a year, to finalise this issue, this is the reason why we had $19 million or so to put on general reserves.

Were the Cayman institutions given the opportunity from that time to also subscribe to this issue?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, the Honourable Member for East End should recognise that from the inception of the bond issue, there were various administrative activities that were involved in it. There were various proposals that were made by financial institutions in the Cayman Islands and outside of the Cayman Islands.

Those who indicated a willingness to meet with the Government to put forward a proposal had them received by the Government.

Finally, once the decision was taken in terms of dealing with the Bank of Butterfield, the documentation had to be developed (and I am setting out the terms and conditions) and the likely participants were indicated to Government.

It could only be then that the local financial community could be advised that the Government had now finalised arrangements or was in the process of finalising arrangements and of what the terms were, what the lock-in rate we were trying to achieve was and that this then would be available.

That meant that everyone would have to act very quickly because I do not think the other financial institutions were given any greater notice than the local institutions.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Third Official Member said he does not think that the other financial institutions were given any greater notice. Can he give us a definite answer as to whether or not they were?

The Speaker: Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I can confirm that there was equal treatment. The Royal Bank of Scotland acted as the agents and they were the ones who brought together the subscribers. The Bank of Butterfield who acted as the local agents also insisted that the bond issue should be advised to the local market.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, when the Government Motion came to the House, if I remember correctly the terminology that was used was, "Securities Issue".

The substantive question speaks to "bond issue". The answer speaks to a "note issue". The Honourable Third Official Member has just used the terminology "bond issue" again. Can the Honourable Third Official Member clearly state so that there is no ambiguity of misunderstanding exactly what this was?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, in this instance, "bond issue" and "note issue" are being used interchangeably. This is a note issue. Bond issue is what is applicable to the public market. Note issue to the private placement market.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I will ask a question, Madam Speaker, but I think I am going to need to explain to the Honourable Third Official Member where I am coming from. It will not take long. I am going to turn it into a question.

The Speaker: Providing your explanation is not longer than your question.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Providing the explanation is not longer than the question!

[Laughter]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I heard what the Honourable Third Official Member just answered however my understanding of this amount, the US$163.2 million, is that it is being paid on a half-yearly basis, principal and interest.

I asked my original question because I wanted clarity in it. Does the fact that it is being paid, principal and interest, on a half-yearly basis make it different from what is normally termed as a bond issue and does it just make it simply into a loan?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, this is a note issue. The repayment arrangements were arrived at, at the specific request of the Cayman Islands Government. The Government had the option of reserving the right to make interest payments during the interval, or for the duration, and make a balloon payment at the end.

The principal would remain constant and the interest on an annual basis would remain constant. If that had been done, the Government would have paid out over $63.2 million more than what this arrangement called for.

We have to bear in mind that had we gone that route, arrangements would have to be made where sums would have to be budgeted for annually, and the money placed into a sinking fund.

Therefore, if the money was placed into a sinking fund and for it to accrue to a level equalling $163 million that would have been borrowed; rather than putting it into the sinking fund, it is much better for that money to be paid out during the interval. By so doing, it has the benefit of reducing the interest cost during the life. Therefore, at the end of the 15-year period, the balance then becomes zero.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker, I am well aware of what the Honourable Third Official Member has just explained because he has explained it before and we understand that.

My question is not based on any reasoning to suggest that it should not have been done how it was done. I am simply trying to determine what the correct terminology is, because I have heard all different kinds of terminologies, all I am trying to determine is what the correct terminology is. That is all I am asking.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, the correct terminology is that of a "note issue" and this is what is set out in the Offering Memorandum.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 56

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

No. 56: Mr. Lyndon A. Martin asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs how many police vehicles are in use on Cayman Brac and what provisions are made for a vehicle to launch the police boat?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, there are two police vehicles in use on Cayman Brac.

Presently, there is not a police vehicle to launch the Cayman Brac police boat. However, arrangements are in place for the police officer assigned to the boat to receive an allowance for transporting the vehicle to and from launches, using his truck.

The police boat is infrequently used as the Cayman Brac police; customs and the marine enforcement often work together using the customs and the marine enforcement vessels. It is expected that this temporary arrangement will be in place until funding can be approved for the purchase of a replacement truck.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? If there are no supplementaries, that concludes question time.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Public/private partnership with the Dart Foundation to construct community parks

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, Honourable Ministers and Members of the Legislative Assembly are aware that in 2001 Government joined in a public/private partnership with the Dart Foundation to construct community parks.

In this agreement, Government provides the property and the Dart Foundation constructs the parks. All of the District parks will be completed by December 2003 and the Dart Foundation will continue to maintain the landscaping until December 2006, after which time Government will take over complete maintenance of the parks.

In this venture, the Scholars Park in West Bay has been completed and has proven to be a welcome resource to the residents of that community as well as those who travel from outside the community to use the park.

The next park scheduled for completion is the East End Park which will be named the Captain George Dixon Park and will open on the 30 August, 2003.

The Hutland Park, named the Gerald Smith Park, will open in late August and the George Town Park is expected to open in late October 2003.

The Ministry has identified land in Bodden Town, Block 44B Parcel 165 REM1 and 170 for that District park, which is the final phase of this project. The restrooms, which are a new addition to the East End and Hutland Parks, and are now being completed, stem from a community meeting held in East End.

The late Captain George Dixon, who lived in the heart of East End, was a veteran seaman, navigator and captain. He mastered and sailed his own ship for many years, as late as the 1920s and early 1930s. He served on the crew of an English three-mast square-rigged schooner which travelled from Grand Cayman to Jamaica, to Australia, to England and back to Cayman over a nine-month period. He was owner of the barometer, that when checked and found to be falling, gave residents of East End one week's advantage before the arrival of the 1932 Hurricane.

The naming of these Parks was done to support the Quincentennial efforts to keep our past alive; by honouring persons who made a significant contribution/impact in their communities.

Mr. Gerald Smith, as we are aware, is an outstanding citizen of our country and is a retired pastor in the District of North Side. Mr. Gerald, as he is fondly known, assisted with the building of the Pilgrim Holiness Church in North Side before going to Pilgrim Holiness Bible School in Jamaica where he spent three years. Mr. Gerald was married to the late Dorothy Elizabeth Carmena Glidden of West Bay.

The Government is grateful to the Dart Foundation for the generous donation of the parks to the Caymanian community. While these parks, I am sure, will be enjoyed by everyone, I am especially contented that they will provide one more positive venue for the young people of our community.

The park project, which has as its theme, "Growing Communities", has really been effective in bringing our communities together. I must say a special thank you to all the persons in the communities who have been involved in these projects: especially the school children, the community development officers, the staff of my Ministry and the Department of Youth, Sports and Community Development, the District groups, persons who have assisted the Dart Foundation by giving their input into the design of the Parks and the Members of the Legislative Assembly (MLAs).

We are, indeed, appreciative of their involvement and assistance and I would encourage these groups to continue their assistance in the future by helping to protect the parks for not only our children, but our children's children. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Madam Clerk.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

The Cadet Corps Bill, 2003

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Cadet Corps Bill 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Very briefly, Madam Speaker, to say that Honourable Members and Ministers are aware that the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture has established a Cadet Corps in the Cayman Islands and this Bill makes provision for the constitution, organisation, training and discipline of the Corps.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The next item appearing is the Bill, however if it is the intention of the House to stop at 4.30 pm, may I have an indication whether or not Members wish to commence this Bill or to . . . ?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I know that you have a question on the Floor, however I wanted to bring to your attention that in this written statement it says 30 July, but I read the 30 August which is the correct version, and Members have the 30 July for the opening of the Captain George Dixon Park in East End. It is actually 30 August.

Suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, can I get a motion for the suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2)?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2).

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) be suspended.

All those in favour, please say, Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) suspended.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

FIRST READING

The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for its Second Reading.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Suspension of Standing Order 46(4)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 46(4) in order to take the Second Reading of the Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill 2003.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 46(4) be suspended.

All those in favour, please say, Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 46(4) suspended.

SECOND READING

The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to move for the Second Reading of a Bill entitled A Bill for a Law to amend the Criminal Procedure Code (1995 Revision): and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Madam Speaker, briefly. Thank you.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you. Madam Speaker, there have been some concerns about the growing practise of accused persons who are awaiting trial before the Grand Court and who has the right to elect whether to be tried by judge or jury. Those persons, Madam Speaker, wait until the actual morning of the trial to make an election whether to be tried by judge alone. The problem, or the inconvenience, this is causing is that jurors are summoned to attend Court and actually turn up on the morning of the trial, wait until the matter is called, only to be told at that stage the accused person has elected to be tried by judge alone. That results in great inconvenience to the trial judge and the potential jurors, and expenses.

The way to deal with that is to amend the Criminal Procedure Code, section 127, to require that an accused person who wishes to be tried by judge alone, as opposed to a judge and jury, should give advance notice of that position and the Bill before this Honourable House seeks to amend the Criminal Procedure Code to require an accused person to provide adequate advance notice when they intend to elect to be tried by judge alone.

I commend the Bill to the Honourable Members of this House and seek their support.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I rise to indicate the support of the Opposition in relation to this Bill. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other member wish to speak? If not, I will call upon the Honourable Second Official Member, if he so wishes, to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. May I express my thanks to the Honourable Members of this House for their support of this Bill?

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill 2003 be given a second reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those Against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Criminal Procedure Code (Amendment) Bill 2003 given a second reading.

The Speaker: Can I have a Motion for Adjournment?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, before I move the adjournment, may I remind all members of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (CPA) Annual General Meeting to be held here in the temporary Chambers on Tuesday 22nd July, 2003 at 4pm.

Having said that, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Wednesday 23rd July, 2003 at 10 am.

The House stood adjourned until Wednesday, 23 July 2003, 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
23 JULY 2003
10.52 AM
Seventeenth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite The Member for North Side to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.55 am

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business who is off the Island.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

Cayman Islands Public Service Pensions Board

- Actuarial Valuation of Public Service Pensions as of 1st January, 2002
- Actuarial Valuation of Parliamentarians Pension Plan as of 1st January, 2002
- Actuarial Valuation of the Judicial Pension Plan as of 1st January, 2002

Deferred

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I would like to seek the indulgence of yourself and this Honourable House to delay the tabling of these pensions plans as read until a subsequent meeting. This is to allow for certain observations, which have been brought to my attention, to be addressed.

The Speaker: The question is that the presentation of Papers and Report for the Cayman Islands Public Service Pensions Board be delayed for a further meeting.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Papers deferred to a subsequent Meeting.

Drafting Instructions – Employment Law 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Drafting Instructions for the Employment Law 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereon?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Yes, Madam Speaker. Thank you.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Madam Speaker, I could be tongue and cheek by saying that this exercise has had the gestation period of the elephant, and that is good because it goes some way towards assuring all parties affected by this proposed legislation that their input has been taken into consideration. I realise that this is still a very challenging task, and I am reminded of the advice given by Niccolo Machiavelli, advisor to princes and kings in the 16th century, when he said that there is nothing more difficult to carry out, nor more doubtful of success, nor more dangerous to handle, than to initiate a new order of things.

This proposed legislation, as Honourable Ministers and Members are aware, emanates from Private Members' Motion 3/01, which called for a review of the 1987 Labour Law to bring it in line with current developments in Caymanian society. This Motion was accepted on 12 July, 2001, hence, we are two years and a few days past the time that this was accepted.

The new Ministry responsible for Labour undertook the examination of this Law in late 2001. After a thorough review of the 1987 Labour Law, with its attendant revisions, amendments and regulations, it was determined that the body of the current Labour Law was deficient in both substance and enforceability and could not, therefore, accommodate international standards nor trends in the local labour market.

During the review of the current Labour Law it was concluded that a simple revision of that Law would have been inadequate to address noted deficiencies thus a review of all labour related legislation was undertaken. As part of this comprehensive examination, it was discovered that the Workmen's Compensation Law, the National Pensions Law, the Trade Union Law and the Trade and Business Licensing Law were all in need of changes. These changes were necessary to make all labour related legislation work together in order to address deficiencies and fill in noted gaps in the various pieces of legislation.

The White Paper published by the Ministry in March, 2002 addressed all these laws and proposed changes to each, some more comprehensively than others. As a result, the Ministry responsible for Labour, in consultation with the public and the newly established employment forum, set about to create a new labour law called the Employment Law 2003 and to revise the other labour related legislation in order to address the noted deficiencies.

The process involved the preparation of the White Paper entitled "Proposal for Establishing New Employment Relations in the Cayman Islands". This document was circulated to the public for a period of over four months. By the end of this period the Ministry had received a number of responses and comments regarding its contents. The responses received were all from employers and employers' organisations. The Ministry received no input from employees.

The employment forum was established to ensure input from a tripartite representation of the public. The body was established in October 2001 made up of employers, employees and employees' representatives and the government. One of its functions was to review the proposals in the White Paper and offer input and comments regarding each.

Consensus was reached by the employment forum on each of the proposals in the White Paper before it was made public in April 2002.

After considering all the input received from the public regarding the proposals set forth in the White Paper the Ministry prepared a document entitled "Ministry's response to comments on the White Paper". This document was published in September, 2002 and incorporated the responses and comments made by the public and the Ministry's response to those comments. From the beginning, the Ministry responsible for Labour made it clear that any changes to the labour related legislation would only be made after consultation with the public and consideration of input from all factions; employers, employees and government.

The response document represents some concessions to the public input and represents, as well, the Ministry's commitment to maintain a firm stance on other issues, particularly those protecting human rights consistent with the Cayman Islands international obligations. A significant concession of the Ministry, at this time, is to carry forward only the new Employment Law and to plan for the phasing in, over a period of time, of the revised Pensions Law, Workmen's Compensation Law, Trade Union Law and the Trade and Business Licensing Law.

The drafting instructions for the new Employment Law are appended hereto and contain the following significant changes:

1. Most importantly this piece of legislation brings the civil service under its auspices. The Ministry is firm in its belief that there should be only one law applicable to both the civil service and the private sector.

2. The opting out of overtime clause was particularly onerous, in that it required an employee and employer to go before an employment tribunal for a decision as to whether an individual employee would be allowed to opt out of overtime. This system proved to be burdensome on the tribunals and delayed employers and employees in reaching a decision regarding the possibility of working overtime hours for regular pay.

The Ministry has chosen to remove the opting out provision and replace it with a provision for a possible increased standard workweek to 48 hours. This option will be at the discretion of the employer who will be allowed to contract with the majority of his or her employees on the basis of an extended standard workweek. The provision cannot be used to discriminate against any employee and must be applied to the majority of employers/employees. This suggestion was made to the Ministry by an employer and should address the concerns of those employers who voiced the opinion that if opting out of overtime was not a possibility they would have to hire other employees to meet their labour needs. Employers also argued that employees would have to take extra jobs to make up for loss of income that would result if they were not allowed to work overtime hours for regular pay. The Ministry believes that contracting for an extended standard workweek will address both these concerns in a fair and equitable manner.

3. All employees will be placed under written contracts with their employers. In support of this change the argument is that when all parties are aware of their rights and responsibilities in an employment situation there is much less room for conflict between and among them. The Ministry is convinced that this change will greatly reduce the number of complaints being filed with the Department of Employment Relations, as all aspects of the employment relationship will be addressed in writing in the agreed contract of employment.

4. A shared employee provision has been created to protect those employees who do not have a primary employer responsible for their pay and benefits such as pension and health insurance. This provision will be effected by contract between the secondary employers and the primary employers, providing that the secondary employers will pay an amount certain to the primary employer for the wages or salary and a pro rata share of the employee's benefits for the time employed by the secondary employer. The primary employer will be responsible to the employee for the provision of his or her wages and all benefits. It will be an offence for any employer to reduce the pay or wages of a shared employee below the amount paid for wages by a secondary employer for the shared employee's services. The shared employee provision to any industry utilising shared employees and to agencies providing temporary workers to other employees will be the norm. The right to benefits inclusive of but not limited to pensions, workers compensation provision and health insurance vest immediately under employees employment and regardless of the length of his or her employment.

5. Maternity benefits have been changed slightly and paternity benefits have been created. Please note, if an employee gives birth within a 12 month period from having last given birth her leave and benefits remain the same as under the current Law. The change in benefits comes into effect if an employee gives birth within 24 months of having last given birth. Her benefits will be increased from 20 days at full pay and 20 days at half pay to 40 days at full pay and 20 days at no pay. This amounts to only one half month's increase to the employer. Paternity benefits will be offered to employees once in each 12 month period. The remuneration will be one week at regular pay and one week at no pay. This leave is not mandatory and is not remunerable if not taken.

6. This Law establishes a minimum wage advisory committee. The current law provides that the Governor in Council has the authority to establish a minimum wage advisory committee by regulations. Although this provision will not immediately establish a minimum wage it will create a body to begin consideration and research on this important issue.

7. Pay statements will be required for all employees with each pay day. The current Law pay statements are only required for employers with more than 10 employees. These pay statements must include:

- (a) name, address and contact number of employer,
- (b) name and designation number of the employee,
- (c) gross earnings for the period,
- (d) all deductions and reasons therefore,
- (e) net pay after deductions,
- (f) dates for which the pay is tendered.

The effect of these statements will be to reduce conflicts among employers and employees regarding the work time the pay represents, the amount of remuneration for each pay period and any deductions made from that pay and the reasons the deductions were made.

8. Work accounts will be required in addition to pay statements for each employee. These must be produced by the employer on demand of the director or his officers and on the request of the employee. These must include the employee's name and designation number, the time worked by pay periods, any leave taken by type, all monies earned in each pay period and all deductions and reasons therefore. Again, work accounts are essential for the reduction of conflicts regarding pay. The statute of limitations for debts in the Cayman Islands is six years and as a result all records will be required to be maintained for that period of time. .

9. The new legislation seeks to address the issue of gratuities, which was the former labour department's most significant and embarrassing problem , by making the following changes:

- (a) a specific plan must be filed by each service employer who charges, to, or collects from, his or her patrons, a gratuity amount over and above the patrons bill for service. The required contents of this plan are stated in the law,
- (b) a monthly report must be produced regarding the distribution of gratuities collected over the period of a month and must be available to the director or his staff on demand. The required contents of the monthly report are also stated in the body of the Law,

- (c) A gratuity pay statement in the format provided by the Law must accompany each gratuity payment.

10. Severance pay is still limited to only 12 weeks maximum, another concession by the Ministry to employers, but will be calculated at the higher of either the latest basic pay or the highest basic pay over the last 12 months.

I can tell you this is still causing my conscience grave problems because I will go to my grave believing that it is only right and fair for employers to pay to their conscientious, honest and hardworking employees one week severance pay for every year in which they have worked. I have had people come to me working in establishments for 30 years and yet they are only leaving with 12 weeks pay. Madam Speaker, any employer who is content at only doing that, the gates of hell are waiting to receive him or her, believe you me.

For those in agriculture and construction work instead of six months of temporary separation before severance pay becomes due the time is reduced to 90 days.

11. Retirement and resignation pay was established in the current law, to protect older employees who did not qualify for pension participation under the National Pensions Law, to provide a small amount of additional pay when they retire or resign from their jobs. The maximum amount is equal to severance pay on termination by an employer, to a weeks pay. This Ministry has agreed to permit any employer, who has allowed his or her employees not qualifying under the Pensions Law, to participate in the employer's pension plan to offset the contributions made by the employer to the employee's pensions plan against any retirement or resignation pay due.

12. The new legislation provides that the employment tribunals have extended powers to handle any employment related complaint, whereas, under the current Law, the tribunals only hear unfair dismissal complaints, severance pay cases and overtime opt-out requests. The employment tribunals are also being given the authority to levy penalties on repeat offenders. For example, a penalty can be levied on employers who have, within the last two years, been found liable for a number of unfair dismissals, or for a number of severance pay abuses. These decisions will be based on consideration of all the circumstance surrounding the case and the two-year history of the employer.

The composition of the employment tribunals under the new legislation will include a qualified attorney as the chairman, with the other two members being representatives of both employers and employees. The composition of the appeals tribunal under the new legislation will require all members to be qualified attorneys. This is particularly important as the only right of appeal is to the Grand Court after a decision of the appeals tribunal based on a point of law.

The new legislation requires that workers compensation provision be made for all employees. Pension provisions must also be made for all employees, regardless of their length of employment.

13. The definition of discrimination has been changed to include race, colour, sex, age, disability, religion, political belief, social origin, national extraction, pregnancy and the possibility thereof or any other established human right recognised under this or any other law. Discrimination prohibitions have been extended to advertisements for jobs, interviews for jobs, equal pay for equal work issues and harassment in any form, including sexual harassment that we have heard a lot about recently. This expected legislation takes precedence over other labour related legislation where it conflicts with provisions in the other laws. The Ministry's decision to introduce only the new Employment Labour Law at this time and to delay the introduction of other related employment laws has necessitated this provision.

We have noticed that in the proposed new Gender Policy statement some sections are not exactly in tandem with the Labour Law. At the appropriate time, I propose to amend the relevant sections of the Labour Law so that they merge exactly with the Gender Policy. As Minister I am minded to include in this proposed law public disclosure protection. In the United States this is called the Whistle Blowers Act. I believe it is essential to do this because there are several instances where employees have approached me reporting fraudulent practices, shoddy practices and dishonesty among their employers. However, we could not pursue the matter because these people did not have the protection they were expecting in our current Law. I believe that we have to make provisions for such conscientious employees so that they are able to report these and other particularly serious matters.

I know that despite attempts, to be unbiased, democratic and to allow for the longest and the widest consultation period, there will be no shortage of those entities who will seize the opportunity to drum up sentiments against the Minister; describing him in all manner of unflattering terms, because, I am aware, that there are those in the society who, for their own selfish reasons, would not wish to have parity, fairness and respect meted out to some employees. I would remind them of the philosopher's claim that it is one of the seven cardinal sins to rob a poor man of an honest day's labour. That is a sin listed in the category of the other deadly sins; wilful murder, rape, sodomy, greed, sloth. Therefore, I would warn them that they risk incurring the wrath of heaven.

I am often given to reading, and in politics, one of the persons I am most fond of is Walter Lippman. He was an American-Jewish journalist—and every politician should read his works. I end this presentation from one of his books where he says, "the moral goodness of those who fight for truth, justice, equality and acceptance of the less fortunate are found to be repugnant, misunderstood and threatening to those at the other end of the moral spectrum.”

I am sure that there will be those who would curse these efforts and say that they are skewed in favour of undeserving persons. However, Madam Speaker, I am confident that those with a social conscience will laud these efforts and will welcome them with open and accepting arms.

I hope that the criticisms offered to these draft proposals are done in the most constructive manner and with the greatest sincerity. I commend them to this Honourable House and the wider public as the efforts of a Ministry which is conscientious in its attempts to bring fairness and parity to the labour industry in the Cayman Islands which, by the way, has been described as one of the most democratising forces in Caribbean society. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister.
The Leader of Government Business.

Change in Order of Business Standing Order 14(4)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 14(4) I move to change the order of business to allow item 3(iii) to be taken before item 3(iv) and to allow Government Motion No. 2/03 to be taken after item 3(iii).

The Speaker: The question is that in accordance with Standing Order 14(4) that the order of today's business be changed.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. That, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 14(4), the order of business be changed to allow Item 3(iv) to be taken before Item 3(iii) and to allow Government Motion No. 2/03 to be taken after Item 3(iii).

Review of the Health Insurance Law and Regulations prepared by KPMG LLP 10 July 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Review of Health Insurance Law and Regulations prepared by KPMG 10 July 2002, the report thereof.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, Members of this Honourable House will remember that Private Members' Motion No. 9/01 set up a Select Committee of the entire Legislative Assembly to investigate the problems being experienced with the workings of the Health Insurance Law 1997 and the Health Insurance Regulations and to make recommendations for their review.

Having spent a significant amount of time examining the Health Insurance Law and Regulations, and listening to numerous complaints from persons insured, health care providers and health insurers, I am sure that Members of this Honourable House are aware that the health insurance industry is a very complex and multifarious business. I also think we all agree that, although improvements were necessary, the 1997 Health Insurance Law and Regulations provided a framework for ensuring that Cayman Islands' residents had access to a minimum level of health insurance.

After assuming responsibility for the Ministry of Health Services I hired an accounting firm to assess the impact of health fees increases on health insurance premiums and to advise on revisions to the Health Insurance Law and Regulations 1997. Hence, the Ministry entered into a contract with KPMG to conduct a study, the Report of which I have just tabled in this Honourable House.

The KPMG Report served as one source of information for the Select Committee of the entire Legislative Assembly appointed to carry out the review of the Health Insurance Law and Regulations. In conducting its study KPMG interviewed individuals and representatives of the following organisations:

- The Cayman Islands Association of Health Insurance Providers (CAYHIP),
- The Cayman Islands Monetary Authority,
- The Cayman Islands Health Services,
- physicians,
- pharmacists; and other professionals.

The KPMG study examined the Health Insurance Law and Regulations and other related aspects of the provision of Health Insurance in the Cayman Islands. The study revealed six areas that needed to be examined and the report contains recommendations for addressing these issues by making changes to the Health Insurance Law and Regulations.

The six areas are:-

- (a) portability
- (b) premium rating
- (c) facility and physician reimbursement

- (d) utilisation management
  - (e) standardisation of benefit
  - (f) informational filings
- I propose to speak on each of the areas.

(a) Portability

Portability refers to the ability of members of a health insurance plan to retain coverage when they change employers or when the employer changes a health insurer. Based on the consultant's recommendation it was considered necessary to make changes to the Law to increase portability.

The study revealed that there was at least one insurer who would not underwrite the members of a group which was transferring coverage from another insurer and would not apply the pre-existing conditions requirements to illnesses that emerged within the group after it became insured with the other insurer.

In order to close this gap the new regulations, section 7(6), require that a person who has been continuously insured under the Law only be required to submit to medical underwriting once, that is, when the person first becomes insured. Similarly, the pre-existing condition clause section 22(d) would only apply to medical conditions that commenced 24 months prior to the initial date of insurance coverage.

(b) Premium Rating

Under the original law Standard health insurance contract (SHIC), premium rates were to be filed with the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority. However, the law did not require premium rates to be guaranteed for any period of time or that changes in rates be justified. The Law permitted rate increases to be filed and changed at the insurer's discretion. This limited an employer's ability to budget for health insurance cost. In addition, the regulations also permitted an increased premium to be charged to a high-risk person up a maximum of 200 per cent above the standard premium. Some insurers interpreted this provision as allowing them to set premium rates up to the maximum of 200 per cent over the standard premium for small groups or individuals. As a result, some individuals, who were initially provided unrestricted coverage at standard premium rates, found their premium rate increasing as claims were made, and, in many cases, could not obtain insurance coverage when they needed it most.

The amendments of the Health Insurance Law, 1997 and Regulations and the new Health Insurance Commission Law require every health care facility and registered health practitioner in the Cayman Islands to file with the Commission annually, and at every adjustment, the maximum fee charged for each health benefit they provide.

The Governor in Cabinet, after consultation with the Commission, shall determine the maximum fee and approved insurer shall be liable to pay for a standard health insurance benefit. The Commission shall publish the fees in the Gazette.

(c) Facility and Physician Reimbursement

Currently private health care facilities and physicians are free to establish their scale of fees at whatever level they believe to be appropriate. Insurers are also free to establish their own limits as to the maximum levels of fees they believe are appropriate to be paid for medical benefits. Both insurers and physicians have expressed concerns that some physician fees are too high. Alternatively, physicians and health care facilities are concerned about inconsistencies in the maximum fee limits established by insurers and the levels of reimbursement. The insured persons are caught in the middle of this crossfire between health practitioners and insurance companies. An insured person often does not know what a physician will charge or how much of that charge will be accepted as reasonable by his or her insurer. This has led to a situation where the insured person is called upon to pay the physician or hospital and then collect from the insurer, even though the insured person has been regularly paying their insurance premiums. Madam Speaker, this type of condition was never intended to be and defeats the whole concept of the provision of health insurance coverage.

The Health Insurance Law, 1997 and Regulations were therefore amended to establish a system of fees for health insurance purposes. Under this system, the Health Insurance Commission will obtain input from hospitals, physicians and insurers to establish a set of maximum covered fees for use by the insurers and insured persons. The insurers would be required to accept hospital and physician fees to such maximum level as reasonable and customary and would be prohibited from reducing fees below this level for benefit payment purposes.

The revised Law requires hospitals and physicians to inform patients whether they accept fees less than or equal to the maximum covered fees as payment in full. Under this system hospitals and physicians would still be allowed to establish their fees at any level they believe is appropriate. However, patients would know in advance whether their insurer would deny paying a portion of the physician or facility fee and would then have an opportunity to make an informed decision as to which practitioner or facility they chose to utilise for their medical care. They would also know what portion of the cost they would have to pay themselves if they chose a practitioner who charged more than the maximum fee covered by the insurer.

To make such a system work the Law and Regulations have provided for the use of codes, which are now generally accepted by health care providers and insurers in North America, to be used for identifying treatments provided to patients. The codes to be used in the Cayman Islands include International Classification of Diseases (ICD) and Current Procedural Terminology (CPT) and any other relevant codes as necessary.

The Cayman Islands Medical and Dental Society (CIMDS) recently provided me with a copy of their CPT codes document which they prepared. The Ministry is currently reviewing this document and is pleased that the CIMDS has chosen to keep pace with modern practices by utilising the codes aforementioned.

(d) Utilisation Management

Insurers, facilities and doctors have all expressed concern about the apparent unnecessary utilisation of medical services. Some doctors also express concerns about patient expectations. They stated that some patients with health insurance believed that they should go and see a doctor for any medical condition regardless of severity or real need for medical care and that they should not have to pay for any portion of the cost for their visit to the doctor. On the other hand, insurers complained about the high fees for services such as a visit to a specialist and when a patient required hospitalisation.

The data reviewed by the KPMG consultants indicated that there is excessive utilisation. For example, emergency room utilisation is about two times higher than levels of utilisation observed in areas with similar population demographics in the United States. Similarly, it appears that in-patient hospital utilisation is approximately 20 percent to 30 percent higher than levels observed in the United States. It is recommended that insurers establish a common utilisation management organisation to perform functions such as pre-certification of hospital admissions and other utilisation management functions.

The recent amendment to the Health Insurance Law, section 6, seeks to put some control over the ever-increasing fees for medical services, in that it requires every health care facility and registered practitioner to file with the health insurance commission annually, and, not later than one month after any adjustment, the maximum fee charged for each health benefit. Indeed, Madam Speaker, the Commission will publish the fees in the Gazette for all to see. This will bring a level of openness and transparency to the fees being charged by health care providers.

Insurance cards should not be utilised like credit cards however, when an insured person requires medical attention, he or she should feel confident that their medical care will be provided by a competent health care practitioner without all of the current frustrations experienced by some patients because the doctor will not accept their insurance card or the insurance company not pay their doctor for the services provided.

(e) Standardisation of Benefit Options

Under the original Law and Regulations, the benefits of the Standard Health Insurance Contract were designed to provide basic coverage for insured persons, primarily to cover hospitalisation. It is obviously desirable for persons to have coverage that is greater than, or in excess of, the Standard Health Insurance Contract.

The common practice appears to be that most insured persons obtain coverage, which is greater than the Standard Health Insurance Contract levels. However, there are a number of issues associated with providing coverage in excess of the Standard Health Insurance Contract under the original Law and Regulations. These include:-

(i) Potential for significant benefit variations

There are currently at least six health insurance companies and each one is free to implement alternative benefit designs that vary in terms of covered services, benefit limits and cost sharing features such as co-insurance, deductibles and co-payment. This clearly makes it difficult for facilities and physicians to keep track of the benefits that their patients have and complicates procedures for billing patients for non-covered portions of the costs. It also complicates the comparison of benefits and costs by employers, employees and health care providers.

(ii) Unregulated premium rates

Under the original law and regulations, the combination of the Standard Health Insurance Contract plans, plus various supplemental benefits, led to the situation where the combined premium rates were largely unregulated and subject to constant change. The revised law and regulation now provides for four standard health insurance contracts including the basic contract.

Contracts II to IV will come into force on a date determined by the Governor in Cabinet and published by notice in the Gazette. All standard contracts would be subject to premium rating, underwriting and other requirements of the insurer. The four options will give insured persons the opportunity of choice with the ability to clearly see what the differences are between the contracts relating to coverage, co-payment deductibles and the cost of the premium.

In addition, the four options complement the proposal for electronic verification of benefits, which is currently being required by MEDICARE in the United States of America, and which I am strongly encouraging insurers and health care providers to utilise in the Cayman Islands. This system will allow the immediate verification of an insured person's health care benefit at the time that the person is registering with the health practitioner to receive care. It will also inform the health practitioner regarding what level of insurance coverage the patient has and how much will be paid by the insurance company and if any co-payment is necessary from the patient.

To the extent that the Ministry has responsibilities related to the Health Insurance Law and Regulations, the Ministry and the Health Insurance Commission require timely information from insurers to fulfil their responsibilities under the Law. The Monetary Authority currently receives premium rate filings and financial statements from insurance companies. However, the Monetary Authority considers this information confidential and will only release it to a third party on an aggregated basis, or on a blinded basis where the names of health insurance providers are withheld. The Ministry and the Health Insurance Commission must be provided with more and better information to ensure that it understands the volume of insured health care services used by residents, the price of those services, the premiums paid for insurance coverage, the financial performance and status of the insurers. Without this information, it will not be possible to effectively monitor the performance of the health insurance industry and where necessary work pro-actively to improve performance deficiencies.

The amendment to the Law, section 11(a), requires health insurers to provide appropriate information on their operations on a regular basis, including the volume of insured lives in the Islands, the premium paid for health insurance, and the financial performance and status of all approved insurers.

In conclusion, the KPMG Report sets out the context for substantial changes made to the Health Insurance Law and Regulations 1997. Issues relating to portability, premium rating, facility and physician reimbursement, utilisation management, standardisation of benefit, and information filings have all been addressed. One will never be able to satisfy the wishes of all parties involved. However, as is clearly stated in this Report, some amendments were necessary to strike a balance between the ideal as perceived by each one according to their individual needs and with what is possible and reasonable for all concerned.

I thank Honourable Members for their attention and recommend the KPMG Report for their information and consideration.

The Speaker: Thank you. Madam Clerk.

The Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2003

To supersede the Regulations laid on the Table 16 July 2003

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Health Insurance Law, 1997 and the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak on the said paper?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, the proposed amendments to the Health Insurance Regulations are designed to:

1. Better protect the insured person and to ensure greater access to health insurance by the uninsured.
2. Prevent excessive or frivolous claims on the provider of health insurance.
3. Standardise and simplify the process for the making and payment of health insurance claims.
4. Ensure that the Health Insurance Law and Regulations are enforced; and
5. Strengthen the means by which employers in default of the Health Insurance Law will become known to the authorities and provide penalties for non-compliance.

I have previously given the background to the proposed amendments and I wish to speak about those amendments, which have been made.

I would also bring to the attention of this Honourable House that, since the amendments were first produced, I have held consultations with licensed insurers and other interested persons to discuss the various amendments. Various suggestions were made, some of which were accepted, others not, and Cabinet, on the 22nd July approved the present amendments to the health insurance regulations.

Having the benefit of the KPMG Report and witnesses who appeared before it, and through internal deliberations, the Select Committee issued certain instructions, which I took into account when these amendments were being prepared. Detailed comments were received from the following entities –

- Dr. Steve Tomlinson, Chrissie Tomlinson Memorial
- The Cayman Pharmacist Association
- The Cayman Islands Medical and Dental Society
- The Cayman Islands Insurance Association

As a result of these submissions, some amendments are necessary in order for the legislation to be as fair as possible to the insured persons, employers, approved insurer and health care providers. I believe that we must strive for a balance between the ideal as perceived by each one according to their individual circumstances and with what is possible and reasonable for all concerned.

I have been told emphatically and repeatedly by health insurance providers that restricting their ability to increase health insurance premiums at their free will, providing for a portability of health insurance when the insured person changes jobs or the employer changes health insurer, to just give two examples, will negatively impact their ability to obtain re-insurance cover.

I am also informed that given the approximately 30,000 population not covered by a government plan; the five or six insurers have an extremely small number of lives within each portfolio, which limits the health risks that they are able to take on.

However, I believe that for compulsory health insurance to succeed in the Cayman Islands it must not do so at the expense of the insured person. That has been the case for too long given that for those who are able to get health insurance, the premiums are ever-increasing or, conversely, the benefits are ever-reducing. In addition, when they take their health insurance cards to many health practitioners the cards are not accepted. They must then, in addition to the monthly health insurance premium, pay for health care, submit a claim to the insurer and wait for months in some cases to have the claim paid, denied or receive only partial payment. This, Madam Speaker, has to stop.

I shall now detail the proposed amendments as set out in the Health Insurance Regulations 2003, which are presently before this Honourable House.

Regulation 3 – a significant element of standardising the insurance coverage to be provided is the addition of other standard health insurance contracts II to IV. They are not compulsory but, unlike the present situation where the insurers are able to write numerous varieties of contracts to the confusion of the insured person and the health care provider, the standard contracts, II to IV, provide additional benefits but are readily understood because the benefits are now clearly described and can be publicised. The standard contracts, which will give greater choice of benefits, are at a higher cost and they are optional. The Law only requires the insured person to be covered by the minimum present standard health insurance contract.

Under regulation 3(b) an approved insurer must now authorise overseas treatment for a compulsorily insured person.

Regulation 4 – the approved insurer may decline to provide insurance for a high-risk person and shall concurrently advise the Commission that it has declined such a person.

This is one of the amendments made after meeting with the insurers and two KPMG consultants, who have worked on the KPMG Report as it would be unreasonable to think that an insurance company could not deny insurance for a high-risk person. The compromise was reached that they would also, concurrently, have to advise the Commission that coverage had been denied to a person. This places the Commission in a position to investigate and to gather data regarding denied coverages and if needs be the Law, could be further reviewed and amended to deal with the situation. The fact is, if insurance companies, presently operating in the Cayman Islands, have unfettered rights to not cover people in this country (when they are legally required to do so) ) it creates a serious problem, which places the Government in a position where it will have to assist where these persons who might be financially indigent. If it is not the case that a person is initially financially indigent it means that their savings or earnings will be exceptionally highly taxed in paying for health care. Thus, it continues to be a major problem.

I am currently working with the KPMG consultants to find a way to offer insurance coverage to persons who have been refused by the insurance companies and this will include persons already being paid for by government. I would like to assure Members and the persons, many of whom have written directly to me about their difficulties in obtaining insurance because of age—not necessarily even sickness—that the Government will be the one to find some means of dealing with this situation.

In Regulation 6, the approved insurer must have the consent of Governor in Cabinet for its standard premium, prior to its first effecting a standard health insurance contract, and the approved insurer shall not increase its standard premium without then prior written consent of the Governor in Cabinet.

For those who are affected by the high cost of insurance premiums and who have coverage above the standard health insurance contract, they are paying premiums which are fixed at total discretion of the insurance companies. If they are increased they are increased by the insurance companies.

The Law only requires compulsory insurance to the level of the standard health insurance contract and it is that premium cost that the insurance commission and the Governor in Cabinet will set, so that everyone will know what that cost is and that it cannot be increased. This does not stop the insurance companies from increasing fees in all of the other contracts that they are offering.

In fact, I regret to say that the insurance companies in some instances have informed their clients that they have had to increase it again in anticipation. I think the people who are getting that kind of pressure ought to speak out against this situation. Fees at the hospital have been fixed since last year and doctors are not necessarily increasing their fees on a daily basis therefore I really do not follow the insurance companies' argument as to why they must increase their premiums.

I should also say that the KPMG consultants enlightened me considerably, and I think all of us, following the meeting, by bringing to our attention that when one speaks of re-insurance it refers to the cover taken on catastrophic illnesses which amount to hundreds of thousands of people. It is not intended for every company, and it is not common practice anywhere, to try to go a re-insurer to have them cover them for a claim that might be a $10,000 claim. A company which is operating in any country has to bear a certain amount of risk. It must be capitalised to the extent that it can meet the regular run-of-the -mill claims that are made on it.

However, if you have a situation where insurance companies try to get re-insurance for every bit of cost then the re-insurers take the position, "Look, if you want us to cover you for every little bit of cost this is what it is going to cost you.". Of course, in such instances the premiums shoot up for the people who are insured. I simply make that point, Madam Speaker, as I found it very enlightening and I think it should be valuable information for all of us.

Regulation 7(1) – "...the minimum period of coverage provided under any standard health insurance contract shall be three months."

This was amended because we were informed that normally a contract is issued for an average minimum period of 90 days Under this section of the Law, coverage is also required to be continued three months after the person leaves the job however, the insured person would have to pay the premium to the employer. The employer is accommodating them by keeping them under their contract.

Regulation 7(6) – Where an employee changes his employer or an employer changes his approved insurer, the employee shall be covered under his employer's contract of insurance under terms and conditions which are no less favourable than those he had previously.

Regulation 7(7) – "An approved insurer shall not refuse to renew a contract of insurance on the grounds that a compulsorily insured person has contacted an illness."

Regulation 7(8) – provides all health insurance claims shall be made in the new forms which are set out in the second schedule and shall be submitted no later than one hundred and eighty days after the receipt of a prescribed health care benefit by that person.

We have been told that the claims sent by the hospital and the doctors and so on, are in a format with which the insurance companies are, in some instances, unfamiliar, so it takes more time. The form, which is now in the schedule in the Regulation, is a standard form, which is used in the industry, therefore that excuse should be removed.

Regulation 9(1), (2) & (5) where a compulsorily insured person has submitted a claim form and any document required by the approved insurer under Regulation 8 and there is no dispute as to the claim made, an approved insurer shall process and respond or pay the claim not later than thirty working days after receiving the claim.

This had to be brought into the Law because what was happening in terms of claim settlement was really absurd. It was only the insured person who was seriously paying the price – some of the practitioners as well – when they made claim for fees.

The claim forms to be used shall include the CPT (current procedural terminology) and ICD (international classification of diseases) codes and such other approved diagnosis and treatment codes where applicable. Where a compulsorily insured person has submitted a claim form later than 180 days after the receipt of a prescribed care benefit, the approved insurer shall not be obligated to deal with such claim, as it is expected that in a six month period people would make their claims.

We should not be misled in believing that CPT coding can only done on a computer as it can be done manually too. There is what is called a "super bill", which is a legal size sheet of paper with all the codes down the side of it with their descriptions and any doctor or any hospital can fill in the amount of money they want to charge on the right hand side. There are forms set up with the CPT coding and the ICD.

Regulation 9(6) – where an approved insurer fails to pay a claim within the prescribed time limit and there is no dispute to that claim from the 31st day after the claim is submitted the approved insurer shall be liable to pay interest on that claim to whomever the payment is due.

Regulation 16(1) – the Governor in Council may appoint officers of the Health Commission to be inspectors for the purposes of the Law.

Regulation 19A(1) – "An approved insurer, with whom an employer has effected a contract of health insurance, shall report to the [Health Insurance] Commission any failure on the part of the employer to pay the required premiums on the date such premiums were due and the approved provider shall make the report no later than 45 days after such due date".

Under the First Schedule, Part 3, 22(d) a definition of pre-existing condition has been added. It states that "pre-existing condition' means a medical condition known to the compulsorily insured person prior to the date of a health insurance contract or a medical condition for which treatment was given or recommended or drugs taken or prescribed or of which symptoms were or had been manifested during the period of 48 months prior to the date of the health insurance contract and of which the compulsorily insured person should have been aware."

I wish to have this changed to "24 months" as it is, I believe in the view of the Ministry, a more reasonable time.

Under the First Schedule, Part 4, 3., a compulsorily insured person shall be required to pay for any benefit received under Part 1, twenty per cent of that benefit subject to a limit of $2500 after which the approved insurer shall pay 100 per cent subject to the annual limit of $100,000.

Again, I wish to emphasise we are talking about the basic contract for the country. The other standard contracts, the benefits and so on are much higher.

Under the First Schedule, Part 2., out-patient benefits and approved insurers shall be liable to pay 80 per cent of the published fee for the benefits specified under paragraphs 1 and 4, up to the maximum of the costs for such benefits specified in those paragraphs. This is $100 each calendar year for a visit to a registered medical practitioner, anti-natal service at a health care facility in the Islands subject to a maximum of $500 per year pregnancy. One visit and the coverage is expended.

However, this basic package is more to cover hospitalisation and the higher item costs. If a person wants coverage above that they can have it, which could cover more money for out-patients costs but could also create an excuse for the insurance industry to further increase the costs.

Save for the standard contracts II to IV which are detailed under the First Schedule, Part 4, this covers and concludes the proposed amendments to the Health Insurance Regulation. Thank you, Madam Speaker and Members of this Honourable House for your attention.

Suspension of Standing Order 24(5)

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader for the suspension of Standing Order 24(5).

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I move for the suspension of Standing Order 24(5).

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 24(5) be suspended to allow the Honourable Minister of Health to bring the Government Motion No. 2/03.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 24(5) suspended to allow Government Motion No. 2/03 to be taken.

The Speaker: Is it the will of the House to take the luncheon break at this time? In light of the fact that it is the desire of many Members, if not all, to expedite the business to either conclude today or tomorrow, I propose that we reconvene at 1.15 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.35 pm

Proceedings resumed at 1.48 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION 2/03

The Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2003

Change in Order of Business – Standing Order 14(1) and (4)

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, we will be taking those matters tomorrow so under Standing Order 14(1) and (4) we propose to go back to the agenda.

The Speaker: The question is that in accordance with Standing Order 14(1) and (4) that the Order Paper be changed to allow Questions to be taken at this time as is set out on the agenda.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 14(1) and (4), the House revert to the Order Paper.

The Speaker: Since it is past the hour of 11am I recognise the Leader to move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8).

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. We move for the suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) to take questions after 11am.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

Question No. 57

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: What is the size and the projected cost of the properties making up the Barkers National Park in the district of West Bay?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker.
As Honourable Members of this House are aware, a number of public meetings were conducted by the Ministry and Department of Environment to discuss this project. The properties within the boundary of the proposed National Park at Barkers will be acquired on a phased acquisition basis.

Phase 1 will include the acquisition of 7 Parcels.

Phase 2 will include the acquisition of 9 Parcels.

Phase 3 will include the acquisition of 13 Parcels.

The approximate cost of the land acquisitions is currently being determined.

Funding for the acquisition of these properties and the development of the Barkers National Park will be sourced from the Environmental Protection Fund. However, the timetable for the acquisitions and development of the Park is not yet finalised.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Questions Nos. 58 & 59 (Deferred)

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town has tendered apologies for absence therefore I will ask for a Member to allow for it come at a late time either today, if not tomorrow.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I propose that the questions for the Member be taken tomorrow morning.

The Speaker: Is that the will of the House or would you wish me to put it to a question? Alright. Madam Clerk, please make note.

Question No. 60

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: What is the current status of the Cayman Islands Investment Board, including the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Islands' Agency?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, this question relates to the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau. The Members of the Growth Management Board of the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau were appointed by the Executive Council on 25 March 2003. The Board comprises the following members -

Mr Naul Bodden	Chairman
Mr Richard Hew	Member Telecommunications
Mr Burnard Tibbetts	Member Rep Cayman Brac and Little Cayman
Mr Linburgh Martin	Member Finance
Ms Pilar Bush	Member Tourism
Mr Bruce Blake	Member E-Commerce
Director of Planning	Member
Collector of Customs	Member
Director of Environment	Member
Mrs Karin Thompson	Member Legal
Mr Orrett Connor	Member Immigration
Ms Juliet Dufeu	Member Human Resources
Ms Patricia Ulett	Secretary

The Cayman Islands Investment Bureau currently has offices in London and New York and the Grand Cayman office is slated for official opening in September this year. The Bureau will employ a Cayman Brac and Little Cayman representative in the near future. Someone, I should say, has been identified.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

East End Police Station

The Speaker: I recognise the Leader of Government.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, thank you very much.

I took note of the question on Monday in regard to the East End Police Station. I checked with the Honourable Financial Secretary to ascertain whether or not any request was made to him or the Budget and Management Unit by the Police, or if any was made to the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs for renovations to be carried out on the East End Police Station. None was made. The police station confirmed that no request was made for funding for this to the Government.

As we are now aware of the situation I have asked that any works needed for the East End Police Station be done through the normal and appropriate channels. The Cabinet agreed and the Minister for Public Works started to expedite the process.

This Government continues to support any reasonable request that is made to us on as timely a basis as is possible. There are long-term plans to upgrade this and other police stations. In the meantime, the necessary repair works for the East End Police Station will be done.

The Speaker: Do you have another statement? Please proceed.

Social Development Direct - Report to "Realise Human Rights in the UK's Overseas Territories"

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I make this statement on the Report of the Social Development direct field visits to the Cayman Islands on 31 October to the 3 November 2001 and 4 March to 11 March 2002.

I would caution that any interpretation of the report must be weighed against the limited time in which it was conducted by the group from the United Kingdom. The authors themselves have made mention of this and, frankly, this does not significantly detract from the strength of the report, which is to inform us on where we stand in regard to human rights. It should be crystal clear that the United Democratic Party supports human rights. The tabling of this report by the social development direct re-affirms this position. Madam Speaker, I think the Report should have been brought to the House. If not, they will be made available to the Honourable House but I do want to lay this copy on the Table.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: May I have a motion for the adjournment?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker . . .

The Speaker: Member for East End.

Short Questions Standing Order 30(2)

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I did not get the chance between the Minister's two statements and I am wondering if, with your permission, under Standing Order 30(2), I could ask the Minister a short question on his first statement.

The Speaker: The timing for that, Member for East End, has gone but I will put it to the Leader of Government who can exercise the discretion to a response.

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: I will allow the question. Please proceed.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I tried catching your eye at the time but I could not. I do apologise for that.

The Speaker: That is alright.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Minister can say if this means that my services to now spearhead the community; assisting with the police station, are no longer needed.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, a representative's first duty is to see a need in his community and bring that need to the Government. If the Government does not respond then pressure is applied through this House by a Motion or by questions. If the Member so desires to assist Government that is his duty, he is the elected Member for the area. However, the appropriate channels are that Public Works will initiate the work and that is what we did yesterday in Cabinet. Not only with that, but, as I said, with West Bay. Other police stations are slated for long-term development as is East End's Police Station.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Just for the sake of clarification, I have discussed the repairs of the police station on this Honourable Floor and in Finance Committee on a number of occasions. However, my next question to the Minister is if he can tell us when they expect to commence the repairs?

The Speaker: Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, as I said the Minister was asked to expedite the process and that is what will be done in the very near future. I do not know about any request the Member made, if he did make any.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Can I have a motion for the adjournment, please?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, as Members have quite a bit of work that is ongoing and somewhat disruptive of the timetable of the House, we propose to come back tomorrow morning at 9 am, when we will take the Terrorism Bill and other matters on today's order paper.

Having said that, we have agreed to adjourn the Honourable House until tomorrow morning at 9 am.

The Speaker: The question is that the Honourable House be adjourned until Thursday, 24 July 2003 at 9 am.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it

At 2.10 pm the House stood adjourned until Thursday, 24 July 2003, at 9 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
24 JULY 2003
10 AM
Eighteenth Sitting

[Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: I will invite the Third Honourable Official Member to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.03 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS
OR AFFIRMATIONS

Oath of Allegiance

By Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks, MBE

Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I, Donovan W. F. Ebanks, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to Law, so help me God.

The Speaker: On behalf of this Honourable House I welcome the Honourable Temporary First Official Member. I invite you to take your seat.
Please be seated.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable Speaker, who is away this morning on official business, and from the Minister responsible for Communications and Planning who is also off the Island.

I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Change in the Order of Business
Standing Order 14(1) and (4)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, in accordance with the provision of Standing Order 14(1) and (4) I beg to move that the order of business be changed to allow committee stage and all the Bills to be taken at this time.

The Speaker: The question is that there has been change, in accordance with Standing Orders 14(1) and (4), the order of business of the day to allow the committee stages of the Bills to be passed.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 14(1) and (4) the Order of Business is changed.

The Speaker: I would like to ask the Clerk to move us to committee stage.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

House in Committee at 10.07am

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: Please be seated.

The House is in committee.

With the leave of the House may I assume that, as usual, we should authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to correct minor errors and such like in these Bills?

Will the Clerk state the Bill and read the clauses?

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 1 passed.

The Clerk: Clause 2 Definition

The Chairman: I recognise the Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52(1) and (2) I, the Second Official Member, give notice that I intend to move the following committee stage amendments to the Terrorism Bill 2003; that clause 2 be amended in the definition of "regulated sector" –

- (a) by inserting after paragraph (g) the following paragraph – "(h) the Securities Investment Business Law 2001;" and
- (b) by renumbering the present paragraph (h) as paragraph (i).

The Chairman: Can I just confirm that everyone has a copy of the amendments that were circulated?

I notice that some Members are saying that they do not have it. The Clerk is saying that they were circulated from the 16th July. We are getting some copies done.

[Pause]

The Chairman: Honourable Members, since we now have the copies circulated, an amendment has been moved.

Does any Member wish to speak thereto? If no Member wishes to speak, I will now put the question that the amendment as proposed stands part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Aye.

Clause 55

The Clerk: Clause 55 Power to intercept communications and the admissibility of intercepted communications.

The Chairman: I recognise the Leader of Government Business who had made notice of an amendment.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, in accordance with the provision of Standing Orders 52(1) and (2) I, the Minister of Tourism, Environment and Commerce, Leader of Government Business give notice that I intend the move the following further committee stage amendment to the Terrorism Bill 2003. By deleting clause 55 and substituting the following – “Power to intercept Communications and admissibility of intercepted communications.”

“55. (1) Subject to subsection (2), a constable who is of at least the rank of inspector may, for the purposes of obtaining evidence of the commission of an offence under this Law, apply ex parte to a judge of the court for an interception of communications order.

“(2) The constable may make an application under subsection (1) only with the prior written consent of the Attorney General.

“(3) A judge to whom an application is made under subsection (1) may make an order requiring a service provider to intercept and retain a specified communication or communications of a specified description received or transmitted or about to be received or transmitted by that service provider if the judge is satisfied that the written consent of the Attorney General has been obtained as required by subsection (2) and that there are reasonable grounds to believe that material information relating to -

- (a) the commission of an offence under this Law; or
- (b) the whereabouts of the person suspected by the constable to have committed the offence is contained in that communication or communications of that description.

“(4) Any information contained in a communication -

- (a) intercepted and retained pursuant to an order under subsection (3); or
- (b) intercepted and retained in a foreign state in accordance with the law of that foreign state and certified by a judge of that foreign state to have been so intercepted and retained shall be admissible in proceedings for an offence under this Law, as evidence of the truth of its contents notwithstanding the fact that it contains hearsay.”

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister moving the Motion has given notice and I recognise in him in speaking to the amendment.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, we have enjoyed over a long period of time, and it is my hope that we will continue to enjoy, a mutual beneficial working relationship with the United Kingdom Government. This relationship has respected the rule of law, human rights and the separation of the powers of the state and its citizens and the maintenance of the privacy of citizens, unless there are compelling circumstances which dictate that these basic tenets, which are imperative to any democracy, should be breached for the interest of the public at large.

When this occurs there has to be a process in place to ensure that these unusual powers are not abused. The best way to ensure that and to protect the people is to have an impartial tribunal, that is, a judge or a court to examine the circumstances under which citizens normal rights are being removed by the state.

In most democracies, including the United Kingdom, this power is not vested in the Prime Minister, the Mayor, the Queen, a Member of Parliament or any politically appointed person. It is vested in the court. Our people do not deserve any less protection and it is the duty of this Government to protect our people from any potential abuse, real or perceived.

For those reasons I believe that the power to tape people's private conversations for whatever reason should be vested in a member of our judiciary, not in the Governor who is appointed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in the United Kingdom. The Government of the United Kingdom has trumpeted these principles in the European Union throughout the United Kingdom and has been promoting them in its partnership for progress and prosperity millennium programme. We have difficulty in understanding its change of principle on this issue and I hope it is not because we are an Overseas Territory that the United Kingdom Government regards our citizens as less entitled than those in the European Union and elsewhere.

It appears, Mr. Chairman, that there are some in this House who believe that, for the sake of good relationships with certain sections of the United Kingdom Government, they should sacrifice the rights of our people. They should clearly explain this to the voting public and not to seek to muddy the waters for cheap and misleading political gain. In the spirit of transparency, the rule of law, the maintenance of our democracy and the protection of our people, this amendment must be passed today.

I should report to this Honourable Committee that His Excellency the Governor has charged the Chief Secretary, who will be acting Governor from Saturday, with the passage of the Bill as the Governor wants it.

Therefore, Honourable Members, what we do here today, in all good conscience and for the best interest of our people, we recognise because of our weak constitutional order which gives no protection against the intrusion of the United Kingdom Government into people's basic human rights to privacy. As we are the people's duly elected representatives we can do no more than what we are doing and that is to say "No" to the Governor's order in Cabinet, and thus the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's order to him.

I believe that makes the Government's position crystal clear, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Does any other Member wish to speak? I recognise the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. On behalf of the Opposition I would just like to say that we are relieved that the Government has taken this step.

We had grave concerns that a Bill was brought to this Honourable House which contained a provision which would vest that draconian power and authority in the Governor of the Cayman Islands, that is, the power to intercept communications. We were disturbed to receive a Bill that contained such a provision, particularly in light of all that transpired during the Euro Bank trial.

We were disturbed to receive a Bill which contained such a provision. We are glad that the Government has accepted the submissions of the Opposition, in relation to this matter, and that, indeed, in the spirit of unity and in the overall best interest of the Cayman Islands we have presented, and we hope that we will continue to present, a unified front to the Governor and to the United Kingdom on this fundamentally important matter.

I spoke for the best part of two hours in relation to this Bill therefore I am not proposing to repeat what I said during the debate on the Bill however I simply continue to indicate our position and to thank the Government for accepting our submissions in that regard.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, I indicated quite clearly for all to hear and to try to let them understand, however it sometimes seems that there are those who are forever willing to try to aggravate a situation and to take credit, where indeed some credit should be given, but not to lay blame on the Government; the Opposition has a good way of doing that.

I explained quite clearly for all to hear that we took a Bill to the Executive Council which contained the very provision that I am proposing today. That provision was removed by the Governor by orders from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and that communication or memorandum was tabled in this Honourable House.

Therefore, when the Member says that they have had problems with why the Bill was brought to this Honourable House he should understand, if he understands the Constitution, as far as the Government accepting their position, we are happy that they took that position because whenever the Governor comes with a position, (whether we are going right) they are determined to go the other way. Thus, we are happy they took the position they did because we intended to move the Motion that I have now moved.

The Chairman: Does any other Member now wish to speak? If no other Member wishes to speak, I now put the question that the amendment stands part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendment to Clause 55 passed.

The Chairman: The question is that the clause as amended stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: Just for clarity, we did the "amendment stands part of the clause" and now we are doing that the clause stands part of the Bill, alright. Therefore, the question is that clause 55 as amended stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 55, as amended, passed.

Clauses 56 through 63

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Schedules 1 to 3 passed.

Schedule 4

The Clerk: Schedule 4 Account monitoring orders

The Chairman: I recognise the Second Official Member who has given notice of an amendment.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In accordance with the provision of Standing Order 52(1) and (2) I, the Second Official Member, give notice that I intend to move the following committee stage amendment to the Terrorism Bill 2003: By amending Schedule 4 in paragraph 1(1) by deleting sub-paragraph (d).

The Chairman: Does any Member wish to speak?

If no Member wishes to speak I will now put the question that Schedule 4 be amended and that the amendment stands part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendment to Schedule 4 passed.

The Chairman: The question is the Schedule 4 as amended stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Schedule 4 as amended passed.

Schedules 5 and 6

- Clause 3 Amendment of the First Schedule - court funds
- Clause 4 Amendment of the Second Schedule - attachment of earnings orders
- Clause 5 Transitional

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 1 through 5 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clause 1 through 5 passed.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Judicature Law (2002 Revision); and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title stands part of the Bill.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Health Insurance Law 1997, the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2003 Revised.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Standing Order 14(1) and (4)

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, seeing that the amendments just laid are the consolidated amendments that are now complete, I would beg to move, under Standing Order 14(1) and (4), that the Order of Business be changed to allow Government Motion 2/03 to be taken at this time.

The Speaker: The question is that the Order of Business be changed to allow Government Motion 2/03 to be taken.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Order of Business changed to allow Government Motions No. 2/03 to be taken at this time (Standing Order 14(1) and (4)).

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION 2/03

The Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move Government Motion 2/03 Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2003, which reads:

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT THE Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2003, having been laid on the Table of this Honourable House, be now affirmed by the Legislative Assembly pursuant to section 19 of the Health Insurance Law 1997.”

The Speaker: The question is that the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2003, having been laid on the Table of this Honourable House, be now affirmed by the Legislative Assembly pursuant to section 19 of the Health Insurance Law 1997.

The Motion is open for debate. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, on two different occasions yesterday I spoke extensively on the amendments contained in the Regulations and, at this time, I do not propose to speak further on the various amendments. I would be prepared to reply to any matters that other Members may choose to raise.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

We do not expect to speak long on this Motion either, but would just ask the Minister to give some type of indication—with regard to the schedules that are attached to the various standard contracts, and so on—as to what type of comparisons, with the amounts placed in here, there would be regarding consultations with the providers?

Is there general satisfaction or are there any specific problems? What is the position that the Government has taken in regard to the amounts, understanding clearly that this would be with the advice of the consultants?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

If no other Member wishes to speak, does the Honourable Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In reply to the Honourable Leader of Opposition when he refers to the schedules, I take it that he refers to the various other health insurance contracts.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

For purposes of clarity perhaps 'schedule' is not the right word. Let me begin by referring to the bottom of page 11 which goes on to page 12 – Standard Contract II. I am not referring to the very last attachments. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thanks for that clarification. The Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Honourable Member will notice that at the end it is stated in section 21, "The provisions of the First Schedule relating to the standard contracts II to IV shall come into force on a date to be determined by the Governor in Cabinet and published by a notice in the Gazette; and until such date an employer shall be obligated only to offer the standard contract I and regulation 3(2) shall be construed accordingly."

I can say to this Honourable House that the matter of these other three contracts was discussed at considerable length with representatives of the health insurance industry.

It all centred around the fact that they offered various insurance coverages however, they now have the ability to put in or to take out any coverage, or exclude any particular benefit, and cost it again according to what they choose to do. The main objection to this was that—and I am generally summarising what was said—the insurance companies would have to compete on the basis of how each of these particular benefits was costed.

I would refer to what one person said which was that they wanted to compete with each other in other areas other than cost. I am not quite sure what that was supposed to mean, however from the point of view of the consumer I would think that the consumer would be looking to see who would offer this standard contract at the best price.

The whole idea of these standard contracts is that the consumer would know which one of the contracts they are buying, the insurance company would know what they have to sell and the doctors or the hospital or whomever, would know exactly what the contract covered.

Due to the extended discussion that we had, I thought it would be best to give all the other amendments time to be dealt with and to be better understood and so on, and to bring these in at a point in time when perhaps it might be better done. These contracts will set a level playing field for everyone. At least that is the understanding that I had from the consultants and from everyone else. The general feeling was they did not want to compete with one another only on price. Therefore, if they can cherry-pick and add or take away or whatever, that is how they will price their product.

That is the best answer I could give. This has been designed by the consultants, and I am told that these are reasonably designed plans. Of course, number 4 would be like the platinum or gold contract, whatever one might term it, and indeed if a company sold that, then this is what they would be selling.

I would say that I do not think these amendments will be the perfect answer for our insurance industry, or health insurance coverage under the Law, however I think they go a long way to correcting a number of practices which are wrong.

Just before I take my seat, I would like to say that only this morning I heard of two stories, which involve health insurance and they relate to persons within this Honourable House. One was in regard to a lady of 68 years of age who has hypertension although I understand she never misses a day work and the other one involved an 18-year-old.

The 18-year-old's story was the most fascinating to me. This young lady's parent changed jobs—high executive jobs—from one company to another and the other company where her mother took up employment had a different insurer from the one where she originally worked. On the form it asked whether there was any eminent treatment. Consequently, the parent put that the young lady may have to have a wisdom tooth removed. She was refused coverage. She is 18 years old and for all practical purposes in this instance she became uninsurable. What the parent was required to do was to go to the dentist to get a letter stating that she did not have any scheduled appointment to have it removed; it was merely a medical consideration. This young lady is on an athletic scholarship in the United States and even as I speak is currently representing the Cayman Islands at a pre-Olympic competition.

These are the types of ridiculous things that are happening with insurances and health insurance coverage in the Cayman Islands. I want to appeal to all of us here because I think we understand the situation. We hear complaints from our constituents and this is one thing that I believe we can all co-operate on to see this product changed and bettered. When we get flak and resistance from the companies who are not prepared to play fair we should stand together on this particular issue. However, just this morning these facts were told to me. Yes, there are many other cases like that that we do not hear about.

I think that the present amendments will help and I would recommend them to this Honourable House.

The Speaker: The question is that the Health Insurance (Amendment) Regulations 2003, having been laid on the Table of this Honourable House, be now affirmed by the Legislative Assembly pursuant to section 19 of the Health Insurance Law 1997.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Government Motion No. 2/03 passed.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

Question No. 58 (Deferred 23 July, 2003)

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

No. 58: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce what is the present number of members of the Land and Sea Co-operative, and what privileges and benefits do members enjoy?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The Land and Sea Co-operative presently has one hundred and seventy nine (179) members. In addition to the obvious benefit of receiving pre-booked tours by virtue of their membership, the members are also afforded benefits and privileges such as liability insurance coverage for the tour boats and vehicles used as taxis. Staff members participate in a contributory health insurance scheme.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thanks also to the Honourable Minister for that response. I wonder if he could tell us what criteria is employed in determining whether or not a person is eligible for membership in the Land and Sea Co-operative.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, membership criteria is that an application is made – obviously, they are Caymanians – if they have the necessary equipment, that is, vehicles or boats, and pay their membership fees and are in good standing with the courts. They are then entered as a member.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say how the pre-booked tours are distributed among the membership.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I understand they have a rotation system.

The Speaker: The Second Elected for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I wonder, from his very terse response can I ask the Honourable Minister, if it means all members of the Land and Sea Co-operative have an opportunity during this rotation to have access to all, or the same number of, the pre-booked tours. I am trying to ascertain what the system is.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism.

[Pause]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry, I was taking information from the Permanent Secretary. Some days there are not sufficient tours for all members. We are still working with the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association on providing more people for the tours. Of course, members must be present.

The Speaker: Second Elected for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say whether or not there is a maximum carrying capacity for the vehicles and vessels used by the members of the Land and Sea Co-operative. If so, what is that capacity?

Could he also explain how the numbers of visitors are divided in instances when one bus can carry 40 whilst other buses can only carry 15? Similarly, how are visitors divided in relation to vessels? In other words, are the visitors distributed proportionately, in relation to the capacity of the various vehicles and/or vessels, or is it simply a case, if booked for a tour, a bus or vessel can be filled to its carrying capacity, and beyond?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we can say that there is a maximum capacity. There is an approximate number for each boat and they are distributed proportionately. I think the Member should know, while we give a grant, we do not operate the Co-operative.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps the Honourable Minister did not note that part of my question in his response, however, I asked if he could advise us of what the maximum capacity is in relation to vessels and buses.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I do not know that number.

The Speaker: If there are no further Supplementaries, we will move on to the next question.

Honourable Members, we have now reached the hour of 11am. Is there a Motion for the suspension of Standing Orders 23(7) and (8)?

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move for the suspension of Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) so that questions can be taken after 11am.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11am.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11am.

Question No. 59 (Deferred 23 July, 2003)

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

No. 59: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Minister of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce with regard to the reconstruction at the Cayman Islands Turtle Farm:

- a. What is the cost of the completed phases of the project;

- b. What is the projected cost of outstanding phases;
- c. How is the project being funded; and
- d. What is the anticipated date for completion of the entire project?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, before I answer the question I should say to the Honourable Member that if he has any questions he feels needs answering that he may not have thought of in regard to the Land and Sea Cooperation he could submit them in writing. Also, if he has suggestions regarding how improvement could be done or how it should be run then I would ask him to submit that in writing too and we would be glad to take it on board.

The answer, Mr Speaker. Before answering the substantive question I would like to give some background information, which will put into context the redevelopment plans for the Cayman Turtle Farm and the associated contractual and financing arrangements.

Cayman Turtle Farm (1983) Limited (Ltd.) and United Contractors Ltd. signed a contract for the construction works associated with Phase 2 of the farm's Redevelopment Plan on 16th July 2002. This phase included the following works:

- The construction of a new breeding pond that will replace the one destroyed by Hurricane Michelle in November 2001.
- The civil works associated with the salt water supply and discharge system to the new breeding pond and associated tanks.
- The construction of a new seawall on the southward portion of the farm's coastal property.

I would like to take this opportunity to highlight the facts that have resulted in the awarding of that contract to United Contractors Ltd.

After the damage sustained by the farm as a result of Hurricane Michelle the decision was taken by the Government and the farm's Board of Directors to relocate the farm's operations to the landside of the farm's property.

The conceptual development plan was prepared with the priorities being identified based on the requirement to re-establish the complete programme that was in place prior to Hurricane Michelle. The breeding pond was identified as the most urgently required, as it was needed to house the remaining breeders in an acceptable environment.

Upon the completion of more detailed drawings it was agreed that Phase 1 should be the excavation of the new breeding pond. This was completed under the supervision of the farm's Operational Department with technical assistance being provided by a local engineering consultant.

In relation to the construction works associated with Phase 2, the Government was desirous to provide an opportunity for smaller local contractors to carry out these works. A number of established smaller contractors were identified as potential candidates for inclusion in a group of contractors with whom a negotiated contract could be established. Subsequently, a number of these smaller local construction companies combined their resources and formed the locally registered company, United Contractors Ltd.

The Cayman Turtle Farm's Board of Directors agreed upon the following resolution in relation to these negotiations after much consideration:

"The Board of Cayman Turtle Farm (1983) Ltd. (hereinafter known as CTFL) HEREBY RESOLVES to enter into a negotiated contract with preferred local contractor(s) for the construction of Phase 2 of CTFL's redevelopment plan.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the contract price will be established after the preferred contractor(s) have priced the Bill of Quantities which will be compared to estimates of two (2) independent cost consultants using the same Bill of Quantities.

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Board awards the construction contract, using the foregoing methodology, and subject to all other necessary professional advice and services."

The Managing Director was then given the responsibility for executing the resolution on behalf of the Board with the following actions being taken in relation to this matter:

The service of BCQS Ltd. was retained to prepare a Bill of Quantities for the Phase #2 works that would form the basis of the pricing exercise that would be undertaken by both the preferred contractor and the farm. After the Bill of Quantities had been prepared, they were then priced by the preferred contractors (this work was carried out on their behalf by Deloitte & Touche Property Management). The farm also had the same document priced on their behalf by BCQS Ltd. and Trinjam Ltd. for the purpose of ensuring that a competitive price was obtained from the preferred contractor.

Once the three entities had submitted their proposed contract price to the farm's management, a review was carried out with a presentation being made to the Board of Directors. As a result of this presentation, the Board of Directors of Cayman Turtle Farm unanimously agreed upon the contract price and the contract was subsequently awarded to United Contractors Ltd.

I will now answer the substantive question.

a. The completion of Phase 1 included the excavation of the new breeding pond at a cost of CI$139,677.37. Phase 2 included the construction of the breeding pond, civil works related to the salt water supply and discharge system to the new breeding ponds and tanks and the construction of a new sea-wall on the southward (coastal) portion of the property at a cost of CI$2,288,432.93. I should add this came in under the budget contract.

b. The outstanding phases of the Cayman Turtle Farm's Master Redevelopment Plans are:

1) Phase 3 - with a projected estimated budget of CI$9,463,526.00 and include the turtle discovery area, commercial turtle area, entry building, aviary/nature walk, car parking and enabling mechanical, electrical and plumbing (MEP) works.

2) Phase 4 - has a projected estimated budget of CI$18,840,460 and will include the marine attractions, snorkel lagoon ancillary building and enabling MEP works.

c. The project is being funded through a bond lease issue by private placement in the United States (US) debt capital market using the Credit Tenant Lease Financing Programme.

d. The anticipated date for completion of the entire project is December 2005.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In his substantive response the Honourable Minister has referred to four phases in relation to the reconstruction of the Turtle Farm. He said Phase 1 cost roughly $139,677, Phase 2, roughly $2.2 million and then Phase 3, roughly $9.5 million.

I am just seeking to clarify something. In the budget address it was stated that the first phase of this project is worth $13 million and will start during the next financial year. The way that the Minister has described it in his answer Phase 1 was a relatively small exercise. Therefore, am I correct in assuming that Phase 1 in the budget address is actually a combination of Phases 1, 2 and 3 in his answer?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I would think that is correct, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Phase 3 refers to the development of a turtle discovery area, commercial turtle area, entry building, aviary/nature walk, car parking and enabling MEP works, then Phase 4 will include the marine attractions, snorkel lagoon ancillary building and enabling MEP works.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say whether or not it is contemplated that as part of these marine attractions, referred to in this answer, that this would also include the creation of a dolphin attraction at the Cayman Turtle Farm.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I named what will be part and parcel of the development. I did not mention anything about dolphins; however I can tell him that these costs do not include any works for a dolphin area.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am not quite sure I understood the answer properly. Is the Minister saying that it is not contemplated that there will a dolphin attraction at the Turtle Farm?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I certainly did not say that. What I said was in answer to his question, which did not ask about it first of all, and when I named the items and various attractions certainly none was included. I did say no dolphinarium cost is included in the estimates given here.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I was not asking about cost in that supplementary question. I am seeking to ascertain, and the Minister is skilfully evading a direct answer, whether the marine attractions, which are contemplated as part of the redevelopment of the Turtle Farm, include a contemplated dolphin attraction at the Turtle Farm.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, that is the first compliment I have received from that Member in two-and-a-half years, probably the last, however I should say that I am very specific in what I have said.

The question which he has in writing in front of him said, "... will include the marine attractions, snorkel lagoon ancillary building and enabling MEP works." I have said nothing about a dolphinarium. In fact, I said that it does not include it.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am very well aware that this substantive answer does not include any such statement. I am asking him, with the greatest of respect, to answer the question. Will there be a dolphin attraction at the Cayman Islands Turtle Farm?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, that is a separate and total question from what he has been asking and he will have to put that one in writing. I did not come prepared for that. I have said that it is not included in this work because that was his first question.

However, I have said to this country that we support such a facility in this country and the reasons why we support it. Once all the scientific research, and all the work, has been done and has complied with all the requests of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of wild Fauna and Flora (CITES), then I have no problem in supporting it. I believe it is a good thing for our tourism product. Practically all of our major competitors in the region, and even those that are not, have dolphin programmes. I do not see any reason why this country should not have one once all the scientific work has been done.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town. I will allow one...

[Pause]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I would really beg your indulgence because the Honourable Minister danced so much with that set of supplementaries that I was really asking the same thing over and over again. Therefore, I am begging you for your indulgence in order that I can ask a few more supplementaries.

In his response the Honourable Minister has said that the project is being funded through a bond lease issue by a private placement in the US capital market using the Credit Tenant Lease Financing Programme. In the budget address it was stated that the funding for this project will not come from the Government nor will the Government have to provide a guarantee. I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if the Honourable Minister could provide us with a bit more detail in relation to this Credit Tenant Lease Financing Programme. What does it involve? How is it structured? Does it mean that, essentially, the control of the Turtle Farm is going to vest in the hands of some outside entity and who, in particular, is this entity?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, let me try to answer some of that because I cannot answer all of it. I will make a statement in September once we have completed certain negotiations.

The farm reviewed local options for financing the project however could not get the funding without a Government guarantee. Government's role in the financing programme is that the Government does not have to give a guarantee nor will it be carried on the Government's balance sheet. It will be a fixed cost amortising lease contract. The business plan presently accommodates the lease payment with significant margins. Mr. Speaker, I cannot say anymore about it because negotiations are not complete. When the negotiations have been completed we will bring it to the public as I have always done.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am even more puzzled now. The Honourable Minister has referred in his answer to a Credit Tenant Lease Financing Programme. To the best of my knowledge the Turtle Farm is owned by a company which is wholly owned by the Cayman Islands Government. Again to the best of my knowledge, all of the assets of the Turtle Farm, including the site, are owned by this company which in turn is owned by the Cayman Islands Government. I am therefore very interested to learn what sort of Credit Tenant Lease Financing Programme we are talking about.

Is it proposed that the farm and its assets be leased to some company who will then sub-lease it to us? How are the lease payments going to be paid and what are they going to be paid for? We already own the Turtle Farm, as far as I am able to ascertain. I really do hope that the Minister can go some way to explain this new terminology. We have heard about Private Financing Initiative (PFI) and we know what that means now but this, Credit Tenant Lease Financing Programme, is a brand new creature and I wonder if the Honourable Minister could educate us about it.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, he is correct, the Turtle Farm is owned by a company and that is the reason why we can go into this new arrangement which is part and parcel of the PFI. It has been explained in this House over and over again.

As to the question how lease payments will be made; they will be made by making money, and when the money is made the lease will be paid. Mr. Speaker, I have no more information at this time to give. When we have concluded negotiations I intend to make a full open statement on all. I am not going to delve further into it because they are presently in negotiations.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I do not want the Minister to become alarmed. I am not trying to delve into the details of the negotiations; I am trying to understand the structure of the financing arrangement. The Minister has given us a little glimpse into it by saying it is a form of Private Financing Initiative (PFI). That causes me to ask another question because PFI has been explained to us by the Honourable Minister of Communications and Works in the past.

As we understood it, Private Financing Initiative works because Government does not actually own the asset hence the risks involved in the development of the project vest in the PFI contractor, whoever that entity or individual is. That is what is being proposed regarding the two new Government buildings. However, what I find difficult to understand about this is that to the best of my knowledge — and indeed this has been confirmed by the Honourable Minister just now — the property and the assets at the Turtle Farm are owned by the company, Cayman Islands Turtle Farm Limited. Therefore, what is it that this PFI contractor or Credit Tenant Lease Financing contractor is going to lease to us since we already own the property? That is what I am having difficulty understanding.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, we have gone deep into that. If we insist on using up the supplementary questions on the same item, understand that we will have a limited number of Supplementaries. I will allow the Minister to answer this one and I will allow one further supplementary.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I have said it is not yet completed and I can offer no other information at this time. A good Opposition will understand that. They have asked a question, I have given as much information as I can. Albeit they have asked in a roundabout way and as I said, when the matter is completed I will be open, as usual, with the matter.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Just one last supplementary, Mr. Speaker. I wonder then if the Honourable Minister can confirm that the Private Financing Initiative contractor involved in this case is a company called Prospect Ventures out of Canada.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, the financial institution providing the required funding for the project is William Blair and Company and Quad Capital both out of Chicago, I think. There is a Caymanian owned entity which acts as agent and is a Cayman Islands registered company.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

Question No. 61

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

No. 61: Mr. Lyndon L. Martin asked the Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce if there is provision in the current budget for the acquisition of a second K-9 dog and handler for Cayman Brac?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, there is no provision in the current budget to acquire a second K-9 dog for the Cayman Brac police, but the use of police K-9 dogs on Grand Cayman is flexible enough to allow deployment as and when needed on Cayman Brac.

In the meantime there is a dog under the control of customs in Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Supplementaries

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to ask the Temporary First Official Member for an undertaking that during periods of leave for the dog handler in Cayman Brac, be it annual leave or sickness, that a dog and handler could be provided from Grand Cayman given the flexibility noted in this substantive answer to ensure coverage.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, certainly we can liaise with Customs, who have control of the dog that is currently there, and try to come up with an arrangement where there is information passed on in terms of scheduled leave or any extended leave or other unforeseen reasons.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, can the Honourable Member state how many K-9 dogs and accompanying dog handlers we have in total?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I am advised that Royal Cayman Islands Police (RCIP) has seven dogs and seven handlers. I am also aware that Customs has a number of dogs at Northward although I cannot, unfortunately, give you a number for either one of those agencies.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker. Is it that it is one dog per handler, or a pool of dogs? I know there is this personal relationship thing where it is one dog per handler. Thus, any deployment would mean a dog and a handler.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Yes, Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Member is correct in his assumption on the relationship with the dog and the handler.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the Official Member said there were some seven or eight dogs in the police force and he was unaware of the number in Customs, but they certainly have a few. Why is it we need all these dogs in Grand Cayman? Can't one of these K-9s plus the handler be deployed to Cayman Brac in the meantime, until they receive one for Cayman Brac?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, there is a dog assigned to Customs over there and there are dogs here that, when an operation is scheduled or when there is a need, are deployed over there.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to add some information that I have just learned from the Customs officer. The budget does have a provision for adding a new dog to the Brac although it is under Customs and not Police.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 62

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

No. 62: Mr. Lyndon L. Martin asked the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman if all law enforcement officers are required to register all outside interests.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, in accordance with section 13(a) of the Police Law (1995 Revision), no police officer shall engage in any trade, business, employment or office whatsoever, or take part in any commercial undertaking outside the scope of his duties under this law, except with the authority of the commissioner. The commissioner of police has granted permission to some RCIP officers to engage in some of the above undertakings.

Other law enforcement officers are governed by General Orders.

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? If not, Madam Clerk, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 63

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

No. 63: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable First Official responsible for Internal and External Affairs if any students from St. Matthew's University have ever been arrested for drug related offences?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, four students from the St. Matthews University have been arrested for drug related offences. This arose from the same incident on 2nd November, 2002.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Here we go. My question is, have those students been charged with an offence?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, the four individuals were not charged; they were dealt with by way of formal caution.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, can the First Official Member tell us what Government's policy is with regard to drug use?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, Government's policy is reflected in the legislation that we have in place and there are various matters that constitute offences and there are various provisions for how those pieces of legislation are enforced. Therefore, when the Member asked what Government's policy in relation to drug offences is, I think he is quite familiar with the relevant legislation.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What I was looking for is whether there is a percentage of tolerance that is allowed before prosecutions are implemented, or someone is reprimanded with a slap on the wrist and allowed to leave the station.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I think in any situation where a law enforcement officer comes into contact with a situation where an offence has been potentially committed, or has been committed, for example, stopping someone driving down the road for doing more than the speed limit, the officer makes some judgement whether to prosecute, to caution or take some other course.

I do not think there is any written policy that if you find people of a certain age, of a certain nationality with a certain quantity of a certain drug, that you will caution rather than prosecute. Nevertheless, that is not the only situation where police have used caution in circumstances they felt warranted it.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, am I hearing the First Official Member say that in issues relating to drugs the police have in the authority to caution people and allow them to move on? Is it not the country's policy that there is zero tolerance on drugs? Is it that we are hearing that the police have the authority to remove that policy? What about Vision 2008? Is that not the Government's policy on drugs?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I hear the Member's question and I hear his passion. I could ask him, have we not, with equal passion as a community, said we wanted to stop killing young people in car accidents and would he be as vehement, or alarmed, if he heard that police were cautioning someone who was doing 41 miles per hour rather than 40 miles per hour? There is an element of discretion that law enforcement officers have and I can assure him that in the case of drug matters it is not exercised liberally; however I will be honest with him when I say that is not the only incident when that route has been used.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the First Official Member can now tell us why was it exercised so liberally in this instance.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, whether liberally or not, I can tell him why it was exercised. The individuals were people who were, certainly from our records, of previous good character and they were in their final year of studies and the officer felt that under the circumstances the caution was appropriate. They were persons who would have been, in any case, leaving the Island in the foreseeable future.

The Speaker: Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I have seen in my country, these Cayman Islands, where we too have caught students in our schools with drugs before graduation and who were charged under the Misuse of Drugs Law. I would like to know why it is that someone who is a resident in this country, albeit he or she is a student, cannot be charged and is not charged only because they are in their final year of college. Has it ever been that the Government of this country has had to negotiate with other countries about our students committing an offence there, having them reprimanded and released? I cannot think of many, however, I am wondering about that question.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: I am not aware of any situation where the Government has had to negotiate with any foreign government in relation to any Caymanian student resident in a foreign country. I do not exactly know what the Member is pointing at however I am not aware of any such situation.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, can the First Official Member tell us the rank of the officer and possibly the name of the officer who made such a decision? If not the name, the rank.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, the rank of the officer was that of the Detective Chief Superintendent.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, can the First Official Member tell us what section of the police force was this Chief Inspector working in. Is he head of the Drug Task Force? Is he head of the Special Forces?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, at the time of the incident the officer was head of the Drugs Task Force.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Back to square one. We got him again. I am wondering if the First Official Member can tell the country and this Honourable House if Mr. Derek Haines was the arresting officer or did he intervene in the case.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, it is my information that the Detective Chief Superintendent was not the arresting officer although the officers who were arresting were officers under his command and as such were responsible to him.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for your indulgence. Can the First Official Member tell us what the charges were? Possession? Use? Distribution? Importation?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

[Pause]

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, as I understand, there were no charges filed. As such, my only answer to the Member in terms of what the charges were is that there were no charges.

I can tell him that the circumstances of the incident, as I understand it, were that the police officer was called to a home occupied by these four persons on an unrelated matter. The officer smelled what he thought was ganja, requested a search and as a result he found four separate amounts of vegetable matter which together totalled 5g or ¼ oz. All four persons were arrested, three of the individuals' urine samples showed positive for ganja use.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, can the First Official Member tell us on suspicion of what; whether it was distribution, importation, possession, consumption. Which of those charges were they suspected of?

The Speaker: First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I would expect that having found something that the arrest would have been on the suspicion of possession and consumption.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End, I will allow one additional supplementary after this one.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a sad day in our country, but such is life. We will have to get over this one too like these same individuals have created in our country. I guess time will heal all. These people come here and use the Law to their advantage, and we do nothing about it.

However, I am wondering if the First Official Member can tell us, if circumstances were reversed and there were Caymanians in a home with 5g or ¼ oz of marijuana . . . has there ever been a time that they were slapped on their wrists and released? And how many times it has happened?

[Inaudible interjections]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry about that, they sabotaged my microphone too. Could the First Official Member respond please?

The Speaker: Honourable Member, in accordance with Standing Order 22(g), “A question shall not solicit an expression of opinion or the solution of an abstract legal question or be hypothetical”.

However, if the Honourable First Official Member would like to make some comment on the question, I would allow it.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, it is difficult to say whether, inherently, that quantity would attract a different response in a different set of circumstances. As I mentioned earlier, it is not an avenue of caution which is something that officers have used exclusively in relation to non-Caymanians.

One of the examples that I was given was one of 17-year-old Caymanian student who was caught with a small quantity prior to leaving for college in the US, and who was similarly formally cautioned.

As I said, there is an element of discretion that officers exercise and any of us can have our judgments as to how it is exercised, and I hear the Member's sentiments and I do not take them lightly. However, I will try to answer the question in terms of the reality of what pertains out on the street, as it were.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you. Mr. Speaker. Would this information have been shared with the head of the college, or would this not have happened?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I am advised that it would have been.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, you can move on to the next question?

Question No. 64

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

No. 64: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked what steps are being taken by Government to address the recent increase of criminal activity and, in particular, violent crime in these Islands, aside from increasing the number of Police patrols?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I was hoping that after last week's press conference on the subject the Member might have all the information he needed. The answer is:

1. The RCIP have designed and put in place a number of strategies and tactics to address the level of offences that are both covert and overt and mirrors the overall strategic policing plan of the RCIP: community policing, targeted policing and responsive policing.

2. The overt policing strategies include, inter alia, high visibility policing, including “joined-up” uniform and plain clothes police officers that patrol by marked vehicles, police equipped bicycles and on foot.

3. In addition, the Commissioner of Police at the request of Cabinet met and briefed the Honourable Ministers on the policing plans and resources required to meet the increased activities and demands placed on the service. In consequence of cabinet's expression of support and finance committee's provision of funding:-

(a) Recruiting is now being conducted in the UK, Canada and within the Caribbean region for 20 experienced police officers to bolster the RCIP response to the increase in violent crime. In the meantime, overtime payments are being made to officers undertaking additional counter crime duties.

- (b) A new computer fingerprinting system is already in place and is being loaded with the RCIP fingerprint collection.
- (c) Ballistic and stab proof vests, required to ensure the safety and confidence of police officers' performing their duties at this difficult time, are being attained.
- (d) A specially equipped vehicle for Uniformed Support Group (USG) use is being procured.
- (e) Additional police radios have been purchased and are already in use.

4. Other measures include working with the other law enforcement agencies (customs, immigration and prisons) on information gathering and intelligence sharing and, in some instances, joint operations that targets both domestic and foreign persons suspected of criminal activities.

5. As part of the continued restructuring of the RCIP, the community policing programme will be restructured and community beat officers will be placed in each constituency and under the direct command of the police district commanders (GTPS, WBPS and BTPS/outstations), they will work closely with their community development counterparts in each constituency and other community leaders and residents in solving problems at the grassroots level.

6. The implementation of crime prevention initiatives, including the recent publication of a crime prevention handbook. Other crime prevention initiatives will follow and an experienced officer that was responsible for spearheading the crime prevention handbook has been appointed to develop other crime prevention initiatives, including revitalising the neighbourhood watch scheme.

7. Re-deployment of traffic officers to district police stations (GT, WB and BT/outstations) to provide a planned approach to policing and patrols and to give district police commanders additional resources to address problems at the district level.

8. Two UK firearms and tactical experts recently conducted a four-week, intensive, advanced tactical firearms training of USG officers, as well as firearms incident and tactical commanders training for police senior managers and were joined by two senior customs officers. These officers are highly trained and six officers have attended specialised training in the UK. They are available 24-hours. In addition, a police armoury vehicle is on duty 24-hours and can provide a rapid response to any firearms incident.

9. Four police officers have already attended the gang identification and investigations training in the USA and will be attending the advanced gang identification and investigations training shortly. On their return, they will further develop the RCIP's gang strategies and tactics. They will also conduct further training of local officers and will be available to give presentations in the schools to students, teachers and parents and any other interested persons/groups.

10. Regarding the covert aspect of the policing strategies due to the sensitive nature of these operations and the need to preserve the integrity of on-going investigations the commissioner would be happy to provide the members with a private briefing, including an intelligence briefing/presentation along with other key personnel and answer directly any questions or concerns that the Honourable Members might have.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Honourable Member has provided a comprehensive response which demonstrates how Government is going to react to the increase in violent crime in these Islands.

However, I wonder if the Honourable Member can say what is being done to study and treat the underlying sociological reasons for this increase in crime other than by demonstrating superior force.

I wonder if Government's social engineers have been tasked with the responsibility of delving into this to try to identify why this increase in crime is manifesting itself. What are they doing about the tremendous amount of work that was done two years ago dealing with youth violence, as there is a report on that?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

[Pause]

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I made a comment outside of the answer on an event that took place last week and it was reported by the media at the time the press conference was given by His Excellency the Governor and the Leader of Government Business, Chief Secretary, and the Commissioner of Police. It was announced, at that time, that a high level committee involving the Chief Secretary, the Commissioner of Police, the Director of Social Services and a few others were being appointed to look at the subject of crime. I am unable to say specifically what the committee's terms of reference are and what timescale they propose to report to whom in. However, there certainly is this higher level initiative that is also underway.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Member would agree with me when I say that it does not appear that seeking to identify and deal with underlying problems is high on Government's list of priorities because we have been provided with a four page comprehensive response and nothing has been said about how Government is seeking to address the question of gangs or why it is that our society is becoming increasingly more violent? Nothing is being said about the root causes that are requiring us to react by over-policing.

I think, at this point, the Honourable Member should perhaps indicate what the complement of the Cayman Islands Police force is and how that relates to other similar countries in terms of ratio to population. My belief is that we must be on the high end of the scale. Therefore, I wonder if the Honourable Member can give some indication in that regard.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I also find it necessary to draw attention to Standing Order 22(f)(xii) which limits the raising: "of questions of policy too large to be dealt with within the limits of an answer; . . ." We are talking about policy across, possibly various, Ministries nevertheless I would allow the question in terms of the number of police officers.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, the current complement is in the vicinity of 230 with 20 positions vacant, which we are now trying to fill. On a per capita basis that ratio may seem high. Obviously, when you are a jurisdiction of this size you have no other resource to draw on for any of the services, in fact, we provide the full complement. Any comparisons I think would have to be with jurisdictions of some other socio-economic and geographic parity.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Temporary First Official Member could say what specialised training these community beat officers from the police service are given prior to them taking up these positions in the districts.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I am advised that officers are generally given training in community policing on an annual basis. It is hoped to run those courses more frequently as some of the complement is, or the vacancies are, filled up to better staffing levels in this programme.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would like to thank the Honourable Temporary First Official Member for that reply and I look forward to seeing the improvement in these community beat officers as the training goes on.

My second question is, will this restructuring ensure that community beat officers will be in the districts and not taken out to do other jobs but will always be in that district doing community work; not taking up prisoners to town because the person who is supposed to do it is not there, and being totally out of the district at most times, as mine in North Side?

The Speaker: The First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, it is perhaps best to say that the filling of the vacancies I mentioned earlier will be the most curative treatment for the problem the Member was alluding to. That is more than an actual restructuring however I am aware of her concerns and as we are able to fill those vacancies I would expect that she see less of that disruption.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Are you bringing supplementary finance appropriation to put them in?

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have taken note in the substantive answer that we are currently conducting a recruitment drive in the UK, Canada and within the Caribbean for experienced officers to bolster the RCIP responses in increase in crime. My first question is, why all the way to UK?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I think for a number of reasons, the police model system here is UK based. Our community here is very much a metropolitan and diverse one and we have always tried to ensure that the Force was reasonably reflective of the community that it policed. Finally, I do not think we would want to be seen to be drawing too many officers from any one particular jurisdiction.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I cannot understand that answer however we will leave that one as it is anyway. I just wonder if vacancies are being advertised locally which, I know would not fill experienced posts, would certainly change the makeup of the police force or assist with changing the makeup in order that more Caymanians could be there as well. Is it anticipated that, in conjunction with this, young Caymanians will be given the opportunity to also join the police force.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, certainly the RCIP has been active and, I would suggest, has been quite successful in the last few years in terms of attracting young Caymanians into the police service. I have attended a couple of graduation events and the last one I went to a few months ago, out of a group of about 13, there must have been at least eight or nine Caymanians. Another group of recruits have just commenced classes and although I do not have an exact number, I think it is substantially Caymanian as well. Every effort is being made to attract Caymanians into the service. I think the majority of these people who are being recruited, as the substantive answer indicated, were for positions that required more experience.

What I am saying is we are actively recruiting and training. We had a graduating class about three months ago and a new class of recruits that have started training already and those efforts are ongoing. Certainly, the percentage of recruits coming in, is substantially Caymanian, I would think 75 to 85 per cent, which is where it should be and where it would have been nice to have been many years earlier.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was hoping the Honourable Member could provide the House with any information, directly pertaining to this sister Islands of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, of any efforts in that jurisdiction to curtail the rise in crime, especially related to drugs and domestic violence.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, the RCIP is aware of the problems in both categories that the Member alluded to and I am advised that there are currently initiatives underway aimed at both target groups of offences.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In an answer to an earlier question, the need has been recognised for additional training for the community policing officers. I would like to go on record and ask the First Official Member to express gratitude to the Royal Cayman Islands Police force for Mr. David Ashurst, the community police officer for Cayman Brac, who has been recognised by all of the schools and the community as doing an outstanding job in Cayman Brac.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for the Member's sentiments and I will certainly pass them on to the RCIP.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, can we have the next question?

Question No. 65

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

No. 65: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs to give the total number of Caymanian Status granted since November 2001 by:

- (a) Grant;
- (b) Marriage;
- (c) Descent; and
- (d) Executive Council

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, the total number of persons granted Caymanian Status from November 2001 to May 2003 broken down by category is as follows:-

(a) Grant	-	986
(b) Marriage	-	248
(c) Descent	-	61
(d) Executive Council	-	3

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps I should repeat my question as it appears on the Order Paper and on the reply.

"To give the total number of Caymanian Status granted since November, 2001 by:

- a. Grant;
- b. Marriage;
- c. Descent; and
- d. Executive Council"

My question makes no mention as to May 2003, therefore I would assume that my answer should have been up to the time that the reply has come back to Parliament and that is the question I need answered, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, it is true that the question makes no reference to May; however the question was tabled on 10 June. It is normal practice for answers to be prepared within a week to ten days, or two weeks, to the question, which was within June and the timescale that the question was worded in was in months.

In other words “from November”—and not in a specific date in November—and the answer that is given basically covers November to the previous month. I can understand that the Member may have been expecting more, and it is obviously now July. Nevertheless, the answer was ready and I apologise, however that is the period that it covers.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Temporary First Official Member could then give this Honourable House the number of Caymanian status grants by Executive Council since May 2003 to the present time.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker—

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Although, sometimes ignorance is good.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: That is why I can smile and look at the Honourable Member and tell her that I honestly cannot answer the question.

Mr. Speaker, I honestly do not know the number. I know there have been some grants, I think the Leader of Government Business earlier in this Sitting mentioned the fact that there were some grants related to the Quincentennial initiative. However, I do not know the number of grants that have been given by Council up to the present time.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Member would give this Honourable House an undertaking to provide forthwith—in writing or otherwise—the number of persons to whom Caymanian status has been granted between May 2003 and today 24 July.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I will be more than willing to look to update element (d) of the answer. I understood that was the element the Member wanted more current numbers on. I will do so. I do not know about the forthwith dimension, however, I will certainly do so as soon as possible.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Just do not forget, which is the normal procedure for Council—to forget Supplementaries to bring back.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we could move on to the next question.

Question No. 66

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

No. 66 Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member to give an update on the implementation stage of the Financial Management Initiative with regard to the now “assented to” Public Management and Finance Law.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, as Honourable Members will recall, the Financial Management Initiative (FMI) was planned to be implemented in three phases over five years.

Phase 1: Involves Output budgeting and reporting, on a cash accounting basis and new budget documentation being completed by 2002/3.

Phase 2: Involves accrual budgeting and reporting, and output budgeting on an accruals basis being completed by 2004/5.

Phase 3: Involves decentralisation of financial inputs controls, being completed by 2005/6.

I am happy to report that the implementation is on schedule.

I would like to provide Members with more details about each of the phases and what we have achieved to date and, what we are planning to do.

The implementation of Phase 1 is almost complete. As members are aware the move to strategic output budgeting has been completed. Members have received the new budget documentation for the 2003 half-year and the 2003/4 fiscal budget year. Members have also received the Strategic Policy Statement for the 2003 half-year and the 2003/4 fiscal budget year.

The appropriations are also on the new basis and, as a result, Ministries and Portfolios have been given greater freedom to move money between input categories. Internal monitoring processes have also been developed to ensure expenditure is controlled within appropriation limits.

A new Supplementary Budget process has also been designed and members received the first Supplementary Annual Plan and Estimates and passed the Supplementary Appropriation Bill at the end of June. This is in line with the requirements of the Public Management and Finance Law, and replaced the old Finance Committee process.

The next major step in Phase 1 was quarterly reporting. The report, on actual performance for the first three months in the 2003 half-year compared to the performance specified in the budget documents, was presented to this House in June 2003. This was an important development as this is the other side of the budget coin. Members should note that these reports were prepared on a cash basis. The annual report for the 2003 half-year is currently being compiled by Ministries and Portfolios.

Phase 2 of the implementation is concerned with moving to accrual based budgeting, accounting and reporting. This phase is currently underway.

All departmental and section finance officers have undergone introductory accrual accounting training and all departmental finance officers have also undergone more advanced training. In addition, persons with Certified Public Accountant (CPA) or equivalent qualifications have been recruited as Chief Financial Officers for each ministry and portfolio.

The Government's Financial Management System, IRIS, has been adapted to run on an accruals and multi organizational basis and has been rolled-out to each ministry and portfolio. As the rollout takes place, practice accrual accounts will be developed.

Work is also well advanced in preparing an opening balance sheet for the financial year commencing 1st July 2004. Fixed asset registers are nearly complete, as is the valuation of assets.

In August 2003 work will begin on preparing the first ever consolidated accrual forecast financial statements and these will be completed in time to inform the Strategic Phase for the 2004/5 budget process. The 2004/5 Strategic Policy Statement, which will be prepared on an accruals basis, will be tabled in the House in November 2003.

The consolidated accrual statements will include the financials of all statutory authorities and Government owned companies.

The 2004/5 budget will also involve the implementation of the remaining elements of the new budget system, namely inter-agency charging, three-year base line budgets and the capital charge regime.

Phase 3 is concerned with development of Ministry and Portfolio management systems and capability and the consequential delegation of input controls to Ministries and Portfolios. This is a key part of the implementation strategy because the new management system will require civil servants to change from being administrators who are required to apply centrally defined rules, to managers who are responsible for the efficient and innovative management of their ministries and portfolios. Achieving this transition this transition is the principal aim of phase 3.

Considerable work has already been undertaken as part of this phase over the last 2 years. This has focused on developing output specification, output costing, budgeting and reporting capability.

During the next 18 months the focus will shift to developing systems and capability in five new areas namely:

- Strategic Planning
- Managing output and ownership performance (including production management)
- Staff Performance Management
- Input acquisition and management
- Financial management and controls

A Management Support Unit has been set up under my Portfolio to assist the transition process.

Therefore, in summary, Mr Speaker, the implementation of the Financial Management Initiative (FMI) is on track to comply with the requirements of the Public Management and Finance Law that will come into effect from the 2004/5 financial year.

I would like to say in conclusion that a public reform initiative of this magnitude does not happen overnight. It requires committed people in the organisation that have a vision for doing things a better way; it requires careful sequencing to avoid reform overload being experienced by the civil service, that is why we have developed a five year implementation plan.

It also requires the understanding of legislators that we will make mistakes along the way, and I would like to thank Members of this Honourable House for their support, patience and forbearance as we have implemented the various phases of these changes.

I would also like to thank the Civil Service, Mr. Speaker, because they have been very co-operative.

I intend to hold an informal briefing session for Honourable Members on FMI and the way forward in the not too distant future.

Honourable Members will recall there was a request put forward for us to review the Public Management and Finance Law (Provisions) and this exercise will be undertaken quite soon.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to express my sincere gratitude to the Honourable Third Official Member for such a comprehensive answer. That response was certainly very much in line with his prayer this morning.

On page two of the substantive answer, third paragraph from the bottom, the Honourable Third Official Member says, "Work is also well advanced in preparing an opening balance sheet for the financial year commencing 1st July 2004. Fixed asset registers are nearly complete, as is the valuation of assets."

We have had discussions on this previously and I know that in itself was a very extensive exercise. What I would like to ask the Honourable Third Official Member in regard to the fixed asset registers is how he envisages this working with Private Finance Initiative (PFI).

I will explain quickly in order that the Member fully understands what I am saying. At some point in time, with introduction of PFI, some of Government's assets are going to be leased to certain entities and there is going to be, in my view, the possibility of some kind of mix. I am not quite clear how that is going to work. I wonder if the Member could relate to what I am speaking about to bring some clarity to that issue.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the concept of PFI is in its infancy and it is being explored as a financing arrangement. No final position has been taken on the PFI mechanism as yet and I will not run the risk and attempt to give an answer to the Honourable Member as to how the treatment of assets will be dealt with.

One of the things I can say is that under section 9 of the Public Audit and Finance Law, and that remains in force until the Public Management and Finance Law comes fully into force, there is a provision that any form of a guarantee to be issued by the Government in respect of a stream of payments, whether it be lease payments or any form of commitment, to an entity to procure services, over a period of time, can only be allowed by this Honourable House. It says that, unless it is approved by the House or approved in Finance Committee, it is not a valid undertaking that is given and then it becomes a personal obligation of the officer who gives such a guarantee.

This a roundabout way of addressing the question, however I will say that, in order to get to that stage, whoever is putting forward a PFI proposal will have to bring that proposal to this Honourable House's Finance Committee and at that time we trust that the specific accounting treatment will also be explained to this Honourable House and to the country as a whole. However, at present I would not run the risk and attempt to give a specific response to the Honourable Member because I am not in a position to do so.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I am certain that the Member will remember the discussion, nothing more at this time. I am going to turn that thought into a question although it seems it will not be answered I think it warrants raising the issue here also.

As of 1 July, 2004 Government companies and the like, are going to be brought into the picture in some form or fashion when we are capturing the entire debt service ratio, and so forth. Therefore, I want to ask the Member to give an undertaking, when moving forward with all of those things, that these thoughts are borne in mind so that it does not create a situation that becomes very difficult and unwieldy to deal with. I am certain there are answers available as to methodology to be employed to keep the Public Management and Finance Law in line and to keep the Government not being ultra vires. I think that it is worth mentioning at this point in time therefore I am asking the Honourable Member to give a commitment to make sure that those things are borne in mind as the move is made forward.

The Speaker: Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I can give a commitment to the Honourable Member, however if he will recall there was a request, at the last meeting of Finance Committee, that a session be held with Members of the Legislature to go through the specific provisions of the Public Management and Finance Law. We do trust that as we go through we will look, in terms of the financial arrangements that will need to be put in place for the specific entities of Government, at what the expectations are under the Law and if there any amendments or adjustments to be made. Whatever considerations are to be given will be addressed at that time as we roll forward. It is not going to be just a broad brush exercise. I envision this exercise taking place where we will be going through paragraph by paragraph because it is not a question to be addressed by a specific Government. We are talking about the accounting framework for the country as a whole. We do trust that by the end of that exercise there will be a very clear understanding in terms of what treatment will be to given to all of these issues in terms of PFI, how assets will be treated, how lease arrangements will be addressed and all transactions that are likely to arise under the legislation.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I thank the Member for that. In his answer when the Honourable Third Official Member referred to Phase 3 of implementation he mentioned that this concerns the development of management systems and capability and consequential delegation of input controls to Ministries and Portfolios. This is a key part of the implementation strategy because the new management system will require civil servants to change from being administrators to managers responsible for the efficient and innovative management their Ministries and Portfolios.

Can the Honourable Third Official Member state, while everything is on target, whether the necessary amending legislation, or rules, or whatever form of policy documents, are also on target with any changes that have to be made? As there are going to be specific changes which will have to be dealt with, regarding personnel and the human capital involved? Under what auspices they will function? Can the Member refer to that issue with regard to where we are with that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I can confirm to the Honourable Member that initiatives are underway to address the personal aspects of the administration of Government. To this extent, the Chief Secretary is overseeing the development of a new Public Service Legislation Law together with accompanying regulations to give effect to the personnel reform. The design for the reform was developed and agreed by the Government last year. The design is consistent with the financial management reform and is based on the same philosophy of centralising responsibility to chief officers. The personnel reform is once again a Cayman model and includes appropriate safeguards and employment arrangements suitable to these Islands. Work on drafting the new legislation is progressing well and the Government expects to introduce the legislation during this current year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Finally, Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Honourable Member might think that this goes outside the ambit however I am hoping that he will be able to stretch his arm out and take the catch. In line with what he just spoke about, there is going to be an issue with regard to personnel and the ability of managers to deal with personnel issues, which changes the present structure.

Legislation that may be forthcoming would certainly dedicate the methodology to be employed however there is also a constitutional issue, which may not have any effect at present although perhaps will come. Can the Member state if these safeguards he refers to and the other issues involved are all being thought about to ensure that we are not spread-eagled without the ability to stand when we have to work with all of the various aspects in order for the well-oiled machine to function in the future?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I cannot give the Honourable Member the specifics. However, I can say to him that the legislation is being developed in the context of the revised proposed Constitution and this is the track that it is on.

The Speaker: If no further Supplementaries we will move on the next question.

Question No. 67

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

No. 67: Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member to give an update on the proposed new computer programme for the Customs Department which will allow for proper records to be kept on the various categories of dutiable items that are imported annually.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, in early 2002, consideration was given to the possibility of introducing ASYCUDA (Automated System for Customs Data) to the Cayman Islands. In July 2002, the Regional Technical Adviser for ASYCUDA visited the Cayman Islands, at no cost to Government, and delivered a two and a half hour presentation on ASYCUDA to Customs personnel and representatives from other key Government agencies such as the Treasury, Computer Services, Statistics and Economics Research Unit. The Financial Secretary was also in attendance.

Computer Services obtained the World Customs Organisation's Harmonised Tariff System on a compact disc and, in September 2002, demonstrated that its coding structure could be loaded into Customs Department's existing computerised system, the Customs Tariff Support System (CTSS).

The coding and classification structure contained in the Harmonised Tariff System will give a greater level of precision as to the value of individual items imported into the Islands each year, that is, a greater level of precision when compared to the present coding and classification contained in the Customs Tariff Law (2002 Revision). In late September 2002, Customs Department agreed to partner with Computer Services for continued use and modification of our existing CTSS system because it could achieve the same end result of producing better quality information at a cost that is less than acquiring ASYCUDA.

It was also recognised that before the Harmonised Tariff System's codes could actually be used in CTSS, the Customs Tariff Law required changing to become consistent with the coding structure in the Harmonised Tariff System and, a Business Needs Survey, addressing both current and future requirements for the Customs Department and all other interested parties including major importers and traders, needed to be carried out.

A high-level "business needs survey" was completed by the Customs Automation Committee and their findings were submitted to Computer Services at the end of April 2003.

A team, comprised of staff from Customs, the Statistics Office and the Portfolio of Finance, has been established to make the necessary changes to the Customs Tariff Law. The team is tasked with adopting and modifying, in certain instances to suit our local needs, the coding structure in the Harmonised Tariff System and, changing the coding structure in the Customs Tariff Law accordingly. It is envisaged that this task will be completed by 30th November, 2003.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Supplementaries

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Third Official Member state, for the benefit of the Members of the House and the public at large, what are the true benefits to Government of the Customs Department being able to have proper records kept in the various categories of dutiable items that are imported?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The true benefit, Mr. Speaker, will be the availability of detailed information necessary for proper decision-making to take place. For example, the Honourable Member will recall (and this was done with the best intentions in the world) that a couple of years ago Government decided to remove customs import duty from bakery products. The view was based on the limited information that the impact on revenue within the Customs Department would have been negligible. It turned out that up until now, it has not been accurately quantified. However, during that time the Government lost over an estimated $7 million per annum. When members of the budget review committee took that decision the view was that perhaps it was just bread, bullas and buns and a few other items. Nevertheless, it impacted over two long shelves in most supermarkets.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: No, not the Customs Department, I am not putting blame... I said the budget review committee.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I will leave it there.

There is a budget review committee that deals with the budget, Mr. Speaker. Therefore, this will allow the Government to find out what the impact will be within a narrow category rather than just within a broad band area; this information will be available.

In addition, this allows for the public at large, especially the importers themselves, to get a sense in terms of trends, and to see by way of statistical information, in terms of quantity, goods that are arriving in the country. If the Government has to take decisions and also guide discussion with segments of the community as a whole, in terms of the quantity of items arriving, whether it relates to customs import duty or other factors under consideration, this information will be available.

At this point the bands are very broad. If, for example, the Government decides that it is going to vary the duty on a specific item it cannot say that under item x (x being a part of a field) if the duty is, say, reduced by 10 per cent what the impact will be because of the fact that the banding was so broad. As a result, decisions cannot be properly taken by the buying community or the Government as a whole.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you very much. I wish to thank the Honourable Third Official Member again for highlighting the importance of the exercise that we are discussing. Having explained the importance of it, he says in the very last sentence of his answer that, "...it is envisaged that this task will be completed by 30th November 2003."

I understand the task to relate directly to the changes in the existing Customs Tariff Law. If that is correct, can the Minister then state if there is a proposed timeline—understanding the cost constraints that have been looked at—for the Customs Department to be in a position to give the information that it cannot currently give, by being properly equipped to do so?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the Computer Services Department will be working very closely with the Customs Department in the development of the system. It will require retraining of staff however we would expect that once the software has been developed by Computer Services it will not pose a difficulty for the system to commence generating the information. As mentioned earlier, in terms of the Harmonise System that is being used by the world community, it has already been demonstrated that this can be loaded on top of the existing customs system.

I am aware of the fact that the senior management or the customs administration is also very knowledgeable of what that system entails. What it does is that, with most wholesalers within the world community, especially in the United States, the goods that are being bought there fall within a certain category. Rather than these goods being brought to Cayman and having then to be reclassified, they would come with a standard coding and once the agreement of the importers has been secured then that becomes a basis on which duty would be assessed.

Therefore, rather than having to sit down and bulk ten or twelve items together into the 20 per cent category we do trust that, everything being so high-tech these days and computerised, this information could be provided by way of floppy disk or other means by which processing can take place. We are trusting that this information can be accessed on line by the Statistics office, the Economic Division and broadly available to all of the users that need that information. Hence, I do not envision that once this system has been developed that there will be a time-lag before it becomes operational within the Customs Department.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

My final question. First of all, just to say to the Honourable Third Official Member that I can tell him that the information he refers to is available because in the global village it does not suit anyone to want to withhold it because of the vicious circle that never ends. It does not suit one entity for the other entity not to be able to perform in the same fashion. It is available and I know that.

While the Honourable Member has not given me the timeline that I asked for, I am hoping he will give me an answer to the next question. This is a matter that has been discussed now for several years. I respect the fact that this answer gives something more tangible than I have ever known before besides just talking about it. It is an important issue and I would ask the Member to give an undertaking that—since it seems like the cost restrictions are not hurdles that cannot be overcome any more—he will keep abreast of the matter and push it forward?

For more reasons than the obvious revenue and budget ones it is important that Government has these records and the longer we take to create them the longer we will be disadvantaged for not having access to them. These reasons can, in the future, become very important to the Government of this country.

The Speaker: Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I can give an undertaking to the Honourable Leader of Opposition that the Government will keep abreast of this matter because everyone recognises the importance of this. It is not that I want to be evasive in terms of not agreeing a timeline because the steering committee was established in order to guide this process has decided on the 30 November.

There is a view for completion of this exercise and I sat on that steering committee meeting. The view was to have the consultation done with the importers and all of the interested parties and also for all of the administrative work activities to be gone into with a view that amending legislation could be brought to this House. I know it is a close call in September of this year and for this activity to be operational by November. I have been told that November is a bit ambitious however I always believe that it is important to set a timeline because the foreseeable future and the near future can be tomorrow as well as the next five years. I believe if we say the 30 November and it cannot be done then we can say by the 15 or 19 December. Nevertheless, I am anticipating that this will be in operation and information available and flowing by the latest 31 December of this year.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I know the Third Official Member spoke of the major importers, merchants and their involvement. I am wondering if he can tell us if these people are signed on and understand their role in supporting this programme such as providing information in electronic form as opposed to hard copies, and the like. Are they all supporting Government on the introduction of this system?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Member has asked a very good question. I cannot say to him at this time that importers and all interested parties have signed on although this is what we are anticipating will take place once the advantages have been pointed out to them; that this information is not being collected for the Government's use as such, it also for them. We trust that with the consultation process in terms of meeting with the importers and all interested parties we will be able to secure their willingness to co-operate in this process.

Information has just been passed on to me that the Customs Department has given the assurance that the importers are willing to work with the Government. There is co-operation there.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, if there are no further Supplementaries, we will conclude Question Time. I now propose that we take the luncheon break and resume at 2.30pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.15 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.02 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have not received any notice of statements.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 1/03

Survey Of Flood Prone Areas And Disaster Response

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, before I move the Motion I would seek some guidance.

There is an amendment that has been circulated and in order to expedite the process I would seek leave to read the amendment and perhaps if you would allow the debate on both rather than debate the amendments separately.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I beg to move Private Members' Motion No. 1/03 entitled Survey of Flood Prone Areas And Disaster Response. The Motion reads –

“WHEREAS there are various areas in the Cayman Islands that are prone to flooding during sustained rainfall;

“AND WHEREAS virtually every year some residents of these Islands suffer damage to their homes and personal belongings as a result of storm water run-off;

“AND WHEREAS the exceptionally heavy rainfall as a result of a cold front in January of this year caused major flooding in some areas of George Town, in particular the communities of Scranton and the East, the Washington Boulevard area, Rock Hole, School House Road and Windsor Park;

“AND WHEREAS the January flood caused major loss, damage and inconvenience to many residents of George Town;

“AND WHEREAS residents in the flood prone areas of these Islands will continue to have to endure flooding during heavy rains unless a means can be found divert and dispose of the storm water run-off;

“AND WHEREAS there exists a National Hurricane Committee which is responsible for national hurricane preparedness and response in the event of tropical storm or hurricane conditions in the Cayman Islands;

“AND WHEREAS there is no governmental agency with similar responsibility in the event of major flooding.

“BE IT NOW RESOLVED THAT Government do give consideration to commissioning a survey of the flood prone areas of the Cayman Islands, particularly those in George Town, to determine the most effective means of alleviating flooding in these areas ;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that, following the said survey, a report of the findings be laid on the Table of this Honourable House [I will, therefore, just read the amended version thereafter rather than read the initial last resolved section. However, as a matter of clarity I will read it and then move the amending section. The last resolved section originally read:]

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the National Hurricane Committee be renamed the National Hurricane and Disaster Committee and that the said Committee be charged with responsibility for coordinating effective response to disasters such as flooding.”

The Speaker: Is there a Seconder?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second that Motion.

Amendment to Substantive Motion

The Speaker: The Motion has been moved and seconded. In the interests of time I am wondering if the Member would now bring the amendment.

All right.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, there will be the question put to the Motion, certainly, and I will speak to the Motion however I wish, at this point in time, to give notice of an amendment to Private Members' Motion No. 1/03.

In accordance with the provision of Standing Order 25(1) and (2) I give notice of my intent to move the following amendment to Private Members Motion No. 1/03 entitled, Survey of Flood Prone Areas and Disaster Response. By deleting the last resolved section and substituting the following, the proposed amendment is as follows:-

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the newly formed Stormwater Management Committee be charged with responsibility for coordinating effective response to all severe weather disasters including flooding both from rainfall and storm surge.”

The Speaker: Can I have a Seconder for the amendment please?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second that Motion.

The Speaker: The question is that Government do given consideration to commissioning a Survey of the Flood Prone Areas of the Cayman Islands particularly those in George Town to determine the most effective means of alleviating flooding in these areas,

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT following the said survey a report of the findings be laid on the Table of this Honourable House.

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the National Hurricane Committee be charged with responsibility for coordinating effective response to all national disasters, including flooding, both from rainfall and storm surge.”

Private Member's Motion No. 1/03

As Amended

The Speaker: The Motion is open for debate. Does the Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am grateful to you for allowing me open the debate on the Motion dealing with the amended version.

Just to make sure that I am doing the correct thing as the question been put on the original Motion and has it also been put on the amendment?

The Speaker: When I put the question I included the amended portion in order that the Private Member's Motion as amended is the Motion that you are debating.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: We are all seeking the same objective, Mr. Speaker. I was just making it absolutely clear that I was doing it right. Again I thank you very much for allowing the debate to take place on the amended version.

I thought that rather than take the Motion in each WHEREAS clause one by one and put forward my arguments in that manner I would simply try to give a synopsis of the situation and move forward with it, saying from the beginning that this amendment, along with the original Motion, is as a result of discussions with the Minister for Communications and Works, who would normally have been replying to this Motion however is off Island. Hence, another Minister will reply to it. Having had those informal discussions we have come to agreement with regard to the last resolved section of the Motion.

Needless to say, this Motion has been hanging around for quite a while and I am very pleased to know that we are able to debate it this afternoon, hopefully, with a view to move forward and see some tangible results in the near future.

Storm water drainage has always, as far back as I can remember, been a major issue in Grand Cayman. It has escalated over the years for reasons which I will put forward in my debate however the underlying reason from the onset is simply because the Island is flat and low-lying.

For many years people simply avoided the flood prone areas and developers left these locations in their virgin state. Traditionally, our storm water management system has consisted of vertical wells, known as deep wells, drilled in low spots where water is known to settle. These drain wells, especially the deeper ones with a larger diameter, are effective with moderate rainfall if they are maintained and kept clean. It sounds simple when we refer to maintenance and keeping clean, however, if this is not done, the difference when water is not being taken in by those deep wells would amaze you.

Over the past two decades we have experienced a very rapid pace of development; perhaps a little longer than two decades but especially over the last two decades and the majority of this development has taken place in small concentrated areas: commercial, industrial and residential zones, which have seen unprecedented activity.

This has been real good for the economy and at first glance we can easily boast a wind-fall that perhaps very few countries have ever experienced, especially given our comparatively small land mass and population. However, events during the recent and not so recent past beg the question, “At what price are we able to make this boast?”

The social landscape could be examined and debated for weeks on end and still the observations would not be totally exhausted. For now though, let us just focus our view on the topography and the impacts of the development which the country has experienced over this period. It is a fact, I submit, that rapid and indiscriminate development has been the culprit which continues to increase the storm water drainage dilemma which we face today.

Many of the naturally occurring drainage catchment areas have either been filled in or the natural drainage path to them has been blocked off. Storm water run-off either evaporates, seeps into the ground, sinks into the ground via natural ponds or deep wells.

As an area develops, roofs, parking lots, and other impervious surfaces replace the previous ground and this results in a very significant reduction in the amount of run-off that can seep into the ground.

Consequently, where used to be virgin land, you now have a building and a parking lot that is paved; water cannot penetrate and seep through.

It is almost like the woes of a rain forest with development; as development continues to take place there is less and less area in which the animals or the natives can survive.

Our planning laws and our regulations are stringent in their requirements and one of the standard conditions for any type of before any construction can take place development is that the ground be brought to at least four feet above mean sea level. This is to ensure that the developed area does not itself experience flooding. However, the mere fact that not all of the raw land is being developed simultaneously explains why so many residents, and the country, continue to experience more frequent and devastating flooding. Even what might be considered to be very slight changes in the topography as a result of land reclamation can and certainly will result in drastic changes to drainage patterns.

Since water seeks its lowest level land reclamation can have devastating effects on properties literally miles away. Whenever weather patterns cause storm water run-off on land it is ironic that those who suffer most are, in most cases, the least equipped to deal with the resulting economic and social consequences.

Whilst George Town faces the brunt of the problem, and many find they are unable to cope at times, flooding does not only occur in George Town. It also occurs in the other districts including Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. It is always heart-wrenching to see entire communities devastated, with families having to stand by and watch their houses and their belongings either being destroyed or damaged, unable to do anything but watch and pray for it to end sooner rather than later. We have had several recent examples of that.

I remember we used to expect it once a year and you would almost brace up when it came around that time. You would expect it unless there was a hurricane or something like that occurring. For example, within six months this year we had two shots of it and the third one came that close. Another hour or two of continuous rain and we would have been faced with a similar situation again.

The Public Works Department, the Fire Department, the Department of Social Services and all of the other relevant agencies all do their very best when these situations occur. Consider the damage to homes, buildings, personal effects and businesses too. Besides the physical damage to structures, many man hours are lost due to having to close down for repairs before they can get back up and running again. Continuous flooding also causes tremendous damage to roads and it dramatically shortens their life span. Although I am not trying to compare human beings to roads I mention these things to try to get a clear picture of the difficult kinds of costs we are looking at when, on many occasions, flooding occurs.

We look at schools having to close for days and finding it almost impossible to catch up during the course of the year. Children move from one school to the next not having had the benefit of completing a curricula. Again, it is difficult to attach cost to that but it is real damage that inevitably, some of which, cannot be fixed.

When we moved this Motion originally, in February, it was not a knee-jerk reaction. The real truth of the matter is we accept fully that, as time has gone on, the situation has become more acute because of development.

Also, if attention is paid to our weather patterns, and if we speak to the older folks, we realise that those weather patterns that were constant and consistent for many years have been changing and rainy seasons are here nowadays that were never heard of ten or fifteen years ago because that was a different time. That is fact. I am not trying to explain all of that however I am saying it is a fact because it has happened and it continues to happen.

Thus, it is not like you can have a window and say, "Well, we are going to be okay for now and let us see if we can prepare during this small period of time and if we can get through that we will be okay". It does not work like that anymore. What we need to do is to find real solutions in order to be prepared all the time.

Unfortunately, the situation does not allow for each individual to be able to take care of his own situation in order to fix it. As I said earlier in the debate, the physical effects of one location can affect what will happen three or four miles away simply because of the topography of the land.

There are specific and individual situations which are difficult to arrive at solutions for. I remember a few years ago there was a similar situation continually occurring at Randyke Gardens and there had to have been, to the best of my memory, at least four or five occasions when the majority of those 40 plus houses flooded out. It caused much hardship, much pain to people, a lot of money, a lot of wrangling with insurance, trying to get repairs done and trying to put deep wells into areas where the water tables were so high that it hardly made any sense.

A solution was found with culverts that extend through a dyke going out into the sea. Once that was done it was figured out that if the water had an avenue by that method to go there, it was realised where the flooding was physically coming from. It was not just coming from what might have fallen out of the sky directly on to the ground in that location. It was coming through a dyke that kept overflowing because of the lay of the land and water seeking its lowest level through. Hence, when that discovery was made and culverts were put straight through into the sea there has been more severe flooding since then and they have been fine.

While the solutions may not all be easy I make the point to say that we need to find solutions that are real and we need scientific data to be able to arrive at those solutions. Some people may just pass it off and say, "Well, if you flood the place with deep wells it will be okay" however we all know the answer is not as easy as that because you have to have the space in the ground to take the water and if there is no space the water is not going to go in. That will help to a certain point although there will have to be other solutions and I am certain the answer will not be found with a single solution; it will inevitably be a multi-pronged approach which might bring meaningful solutions.

Many of us have witnessed situations where we have to find ways and means for that not to be a regular occurrence, because, as I said before, we will inevitably find that the majority of people this flooding affects are least equipped to be able to deal with it. These people continue to be frustrated and we must find some type of solution towards this end. It does not limit itself to those types of people as I already mentioned. It includes businesses and schools, and the rest.

I want to take just one little area to show why the answer is not easy. The area that is known down in the east; the very fringe of that area does not normally flood however there is a certain section where the majority of the homes are literally in the bottom of a basin. Development has taken place around it in different areas. Planning laws and regulations have mentioned before the land has to be brought up to a certain level. Therefore, the land around it in several different locations is a lot higher than the bottom of this basin. After a certain amount of rainfall the ground cannot take it anymore; the pumps and the drain wells can only do so much and the water seeks its lowest level. Consequently, it goes right down into the basin. The people there have tried their best by doing different things; they have raised their floors or put up small retaining walls in the front of and around the sides of their homes for the water not to come in, but even that does not work beyond a certain point.

Right in that area for instance, is where the new Government buildings are going to go. I am not quite sure of my direction, however I would think somewhere to the south east of that location. I am certain it is going to call for that ground to be elevated. There are plans for a multi-storey car park and sizeable structures which mean more impervious surfaces. No matter what type of on-site drainage is planned it is going to cause a problem because that land mass is not going to be there anymore to absorb the water that falls on it. That in itself is a problem.

One might say they were in a prime commercial area hence the value of their property should allow for them to be able to sell and relocate comfortably except it is nowhere near as easy as that. Individual parcels of many of those homes are much less than a normal house lot. While the per square foot value might seem to be fairly high, the net value is not that great and it does not stop there. You have generations of decent citizens who have been staying there as a close community and who do a lot of things together. You could take one yard and find that over the years, because of their ability to co-exist, four brothers and sisters are living on the same parcel of land, from three generations ago, and each of them has his or her own little location. You might have a two-storey structure and one brother and his family live downstairs, a sister or another brother and her family live upstairs. Consequently, if you speak about relocating four different families it is a problem. The answers are not as easy as we think. Besides, when it does not flood those people do not want to go anywhere from there. It is only when this problem arises that you hear them saying they want to move away because they cannot take it anymore. However, the moment it goes away and somehow they get things back to normal there is not much you can tell them to convince them to move from there, unless they have those vivid memories of their problems with flooding from a few days or weeks before. I only use that as an example and I am not saying that everywhere is like that. However, there are many situations where businesses and individual home owners face similar problems, "Who is going to buy my home that floods out and give me enough money to go somewhere and live that does not flood?"

By and large, I say relocation is by no means anywhere near an answer that will provide some type of solution. Therefore, we have to find solutions within the present circumstances.

It is my understanding that the Government has recently formed this Stormwater Management Committee and I would not venture to say what its charge is because I am not quite sure. However, I understand that this committee will consist of many of the technocrats that would be required to have a real look at the situation, together with the representatives from the various agencies required to coordinate an immediate response when emergencies occur.

What we need to happen and what the Motion is seeking is to be able to assess the problem that we face and to be able to arrive at meaningful and short, medium and long-term solutions to that problem. It also seeks to have a dedicated entity which is charged with the responsibility of being able to coordinate the type of response that is absolutely necessary whenever situations do occur. Even when you are able to provide solutions that will come about with rainfall there are other situations which will occur at the hands of nature and the elements which may be extreme. While God has blessed us for many years and we have not had the type of disaster that we have seen elsewhere, it is not impossible and we must be able to deal with whatever may come our way, if we are going to be the protectors of the citizens of this country.

It is apparent from my discussion with the Minister that the Government is minded to accept the Motion. There are other aspects of the Motion which I could discuss. I think I have laid the groundwork as to the intent of the Motion and I think that having done so we can now wait to hear what other Members have to say. I will then be able to respond accordingly in closing.

Suffice to say that all of the Members of the Parliamentary Opposition not only are in support of the Motion but would eagerly anticipate action on the part of the Government.

I would also like to say that the Members of the Parliamentary Opposition are quite willing, as we always are, to play whatever role we can play with regard to assisting in bringing about the very urgent solutions that are necessary in order to make some meaningful response to alleviate the problem with flooding that seems to be occurring almost on a regular basis now.

I certainly commend the Motion. As I said, I will wait to hear what other Members have to say and then, assuming safe passage, will be able to move forward with timelines to be able to see some tangible results. Those people who are most affected by the problem highlighted in the Motion can see some light at the end of the tunnel. It is not something that can be solved in a day however once it is known that there are pointed efforts in that direction it will give some comfort and the strength to wait until solutions can be found and implemented. Again, Mr. Speaker, I commend the Motion and I will wait to hear what other Members have to say. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I will give a response to Private Members' Motion No. 1/03 which is a response by the Honourable Linford A. Pierson, OBE, JP, Minister of Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology on the Survey of flood prone areas and disaster response.

Before I go on to make the comments on behalf of the Honourable Minister of Communications and Works, I would like to thank the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Government for the research he did, in terms of being able to present to this House a comprehensive view of the issues which are involved in this particular Motion, not only from the technical side but also from the social side.

In response, the Honourable Minister of Communications and Works states: "The Government is in support of this Motion though it is of my opinion that this Motion has been subsumed by Government's ongoing initiatives on crisis readiness and management strategies. I would like to point out that this Government and, indeed, past governments have been addressing the issue of storm water management for several years.

"While there are many problem areas still remaining there have been some significant improvements. Most notably of these is Randyke Gardens where a drainage system consisting of a dyke to the South Sound area and several drainage culverts on the South Sound road to the sea have practically eliminated the severe flooding previously experienced in that development.

"Under the Public Works Department (PWD) drainage improvement programme, over the past few years, numerous drainage wells have been installed in problem areas including almost 50 new deep wells in 2002. Also, in the current review of the development plan the infrastructure special issue committee addressed storm water management in great detail and made the following recommendations to the development plan review committee which has now been included in the proposed development plan 2003. [He quotes] 'Development is encouraged to implement state of the art techniques that manage storm water run-off through redesign streets, open spaces that take into account the natural drainage characteristics and overall designs which require less corrective measures in the long-term. When a site is developed the design should maintain drainage characteristics of the site as much as is feasible through innovative design and use of alternative construction techniques. Development should be designed so that post development storm water run-off is less than predevelopment run-off. For an island that is almost completely flat, topographically, low-lying storm water management has always been a major issue.'

"Storm water run-off generated during periods of rainfall can be managed in one of the following ways. It can:

- be collected and stored in some type of storage tanks and cistern,
- Percolate into the ground naturally or by installation of drainage wells;
- Remain as standing water for long periods until it evaporates;
- Flow to lower surrounding areas and/or ponds at times eventually to the sea.

Implementation of a properly designed drainage system may include one or more of the methods mentioned above.

“During the rapid development of the Islands over the past ten to fifteen years, although PWD and the Planning Department made efforts to require that developers implement drainage systems to manage storm water run-off generated on their sites, there has not been enough thought or attention given to the effect of new development on the surrounding areas.

“This is particularly true of the Linwood Street and Martin Drive areas off Shedden Road or Scranton and the East. These areas are naturally very low lying and are now surrounded by developments that have been built much higher. As a result, storm water run-off in the low-lying areas has become extremely difficult to manage since the ground level is very close to the water table, the ground becomes easily saturated and drainage wells do not work effectively.

“This situation exists in several locations on the Island, primarily in the densely developed areas of George Town. Government believes that there are two components to the drainage problem that must be addressed. They are:

- 1) corrective measures for those areas currently experiencing severe drainage problems; and
- 2) drainage systems designed to accommodate future development without negatively affecting existing areas.

“The Public Works roads divisions has already carried out preliminary investigations and made recommendations for several levels of actions to be taken in the Prospect Park area and are currently undertaking a similar exercise in the Scranton and East area. The result of these studies and costs to alleviate the flooding problem will be advised to this Honourable House when the exercise has been completed.

“I am pleased to report that during the recent heavy rains in late May, while there was significant flooding in certain areas in George Town, it was not necessary to evacuate the residents as control measures taken earlier by PWD caused the water to subside at an accelerated rate. The area of Rock Hole also experienced very little flooding, in part, as a result of the number of deep wells placed in the area.

“At this time I would like to publicly thank the crews of the Public Works Department who attended to the clearing of the drains during the rains and also to the Members of the Legislative Assembly and the public who assisted. The drains can only function as long as debris is kept clear and the residents help and community spirit is very much appreciated.

“The issue of storm water management will continue to be an issue of major importance as the Island continues to be developed. Part of my Ministry’s ongoing efforts to deal with this important issue will be the securing and purchase of key watershed property, which is a critical element in our long-term strategy to deal with flooding.

“Government has recently purchased one such parcel in George Town, off Walkers Road, which will be retained as a natural collector of storm water. These areas are also important as habitats for wild life. My Ministry has also formed the storm water management committee which will be chaired by the chief engineer, PWD and will have representatives from Public Works roads and buildings divisions, Water Authority, Lands and Survey, Mosquito Research and Control Unit, Department of Environmental Health, Social Service, the Planning Department as well as from the National Hurricane Committee to comprehensively review the issue of storm water management and related flooding and drainage issues. The committee has met and has made specific recommendations for action and implementation that are deemed appropriate to address this national issue.

“I would also like to point out that in the Government’s policy statement delivered by the Honourable W. McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP, Leader of Government Business, on the 17 June, 2003, he stressed the high priority and the strategic plans being made to pro-actively deal with a whole range of potential crises that could affect our Islands including natural disasters and events such as flooding and hurricanes. This implementation of the Cayman Islands crisis readiness programme is being pursued and will involve the comprehensive training of both private sector and public sector organisations to better prevent, prepared, respond and recover from these threats.

“I would again like to thank all of those involved in our efforts to mitigate and respond to the risks associated with flooding and to advise that Government will continue to place high emphasis on this issue. The storm water management committee is expected to report back to the Ministry within four months with specific recommendations. I intend to brief this Honourable House again following receipt of the report. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.”

I have just concluded reading the response of the Honourable Minister responsible for this particular issue and to state again he and the Government accept the private member’s motion as amended.

I would just like to restate that we thank the Opposition for the clarity of their presentation and the research they have done in order to include both the social and technical aspects involved in the issue.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will not be very long and I certainly will not belabour the point. I think that the Honourable Leader of Opposition has done an exceptionally good job, and I think that has been acknowledged, in outlining the reasons for the concern and the issues, both physical and social, involved in this complex matter. We are grateful to the Honourable Minister for Community Services, who responded on behalf of the Minister responsible for Communications and Works, for gracefully accepting the Motion and indeed going further than that and actually outlining what it is that the Government is doing and contemplating doing about this serious issue.

I know both Honourable Ministers, on that side of whom I have spoken, feel, as we do on this side, the sense of almost hopelessness and helplessness at times of major flooding, particularly in the district of George Town. It is really heart-breaking because there is little to do when it is actually happening except try to empathise with the people who are suffering the effects of this flooding.

In this past year all of us, both Ministers on that side, myself and the Honourable Leader of Opposition, have been in the midst of the torrent and have seen the tremendous damage it does, not just to the physical properties but also psychologically to the people who are affected by it, particularly the older people, who are literally displaced as a result of it.

The situation in January was something I never beheld in my entire years in Cayman, particularly in the area known as Rock Hole and down in the east. In this last flood I did my rounds, as I am sure we all do when these things are happening because many of our constituents call us as they have nowhere else to turn. There is not a great deal that can be done except to make some provision, as the Government has done, to evacuate them and put them up. There is not a great deal to do while it is actually happening. I was astounded at the depth of the water in some areas of Windsor Park. The water in some streets there was at least three feet deep. I would like to point this out to the Minister although I am sure he probably is aware of it.

In the area where the affordable housing project is going in, that area has been built up significantly and I was not able to see that there was any major flooding on that particular site because I went there during the flood. However, over the course of the following weekend, constituents from that area came to my house to complain about the fact that their properties had suffered some water damage, which had not been the case in the past, because this area had actually been built up.

As the Honourable Leader of Opposition has said, this is a common problem when surrounding areas are elevated to meet with planning requirements and the like, and buildings are subsequently placed on that property, impervious surfaces are increased and since this land is actually elevated and because water has the tendency to find its level somewhere else, it has the effect of displacing water that would have otherwise remained on that particular property with the resultant problems to adjacent properties.

I think we all acknowledge and understand the seriousness of the problem. Even in the Prospect Park area, where I live (which the Honourable Minister referred to), there is a significant problem, particularly on Marina Drive. This is going to be one of the challenges to address because it is not simply a matter of raising the road as the homes there do not flood. By and large, it is the road. The water not only creates serious damage to the road and creates a dangerous situation, in many instances, for extended periods of time, following the flood. However, if one were to try to raise the roads then almost inevitably it would cause flooding of the homes and properties adjacent to the streets. Thus, another means has to be found to dispose of the storm water run-off there. Perhaps that one can be resolved although it will be fairly expensive. Technically, I do not think it is as big a problem as some of the others, not that I am an engineer, however the sea is relatively close and the installation of culverts would probably resolve the problem in that area.

I have just highlighted a few of the areas and issues. As the Secunder of this Motion, and as a representative of the district of George Town where there is the most serious flooding on a regular basis in the country, I have spoken to at least some length about this critically important matter which impacts the community so significantly and, certainly on a personal level, often brings tears to my eyes when I see the suffering of the people who have to endure this now on a all too regular basis.

With those few words I will conclude my short submission speech in support of this Motion which I commend to all Honourable Members of this House. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer my support to this very important Motion.

I must say I was quite pleased at the level of debate that has taken place here this evening and the acceptance of both sides of the House on this very important Motion which affects all of our people no matter which district we are from.

I would like to highlight some of the areas in my electoral district of Bodden Town and this is not a complete list. Some of the areas really have a difficult time.

The first one I will speak about is the Savannah Gully. This is a unique phenomenon. From the time I can remember and, I am sure, from time immemorial in the Sandy Ground area, on the west side of Pedro Castle, it is known as a gully. Once the wind, especially from passing hurricanes, crosses by, within hours, you can see the water coming through that gully coming into the Savannah area behind the United Church, heading up the road, across the garage into the Savannah area. I was told by many of the older people that this was what happened in 1932. It then went up to the Lower Valley area, into the Newlands area, behind Lower Valley. As a matter of fact, the two seas actually met because that water was coming from the south side and it went over into the Newlands area.

Another area that is affected by this same phenomenon and flooding is Savannah Heights (where the Honourable Chief Secretary lives). It is just a matter of time for the water to start coming up through Savannah and heading to the Lower Valley area crossing over Hirst Road and going down into Newlands.

A number of deep wells have been put in the area however, my conviction on the deep wells is, when you have literally dozens of acres of land under water it is like spitting in the ocean because the area is flooded and there is no where for that water to go. What I am hoping for is that this storm water management committee will be able to identify ways to drain. I know that the conservationists have concerns about this water going back into the sea.

However, when I was in government a few years back, the development on the major problems in the Randyke Gardens area involved a struggle getting public works and others to deal with that. We put our idea forward, however, to get them to put the machinery in there to open up the dykes and the culverts ... and I need not say any more. The success that has been achieved by draining that water into the South Sound area ... we have to look at man or beast or whatever.

I travelled with my two colleagues from George Town, the Honourable Leader of Opposition and the Second Elected Member, and all of us here on the Back Bench, to the down east area and it really pained our hearts to see how these people suffered.

I remember a few years ago in the area of what used to be Kirk Plaza, they created a drainage system there that was probably two or three feet wide by I do not know how many hundred feet long. This type of drainage proved quite effective and I would urge the committee, when they are looking at ways to solving these flooding problems, to look at something like this. The great United States have these, and it is going to cost a few dollars. The drainage would go into the sea, but there are ways of filtering the heft of the sediment that goes into these drains that would eventually go into the sea.

I remember they finally raised that up down by Treasure Island a few years ago, thank God—although the Government that I was a part of caught a lot of hell for that—and it was very important because when your car passed there you literally floated across because of the mud or rainwater. Once again, as I said, this is hundred of acres of land under fresh water therefore the drain wells are not effective when this amount of rainfall comes to the Cayman Islands.

Back to my district of Bodden Town; the other area is the North Sound Estates and down in Cumber Avenue and Belford Estates. The people in Belford Estates have suffered a long time. For many years they had no roads, the whole area was flooded then the roads were developed and when the roads were raised their house lots were flooded. It is literally a no-win situation however I am hoping that one of these days, once a system is designed, proper drainage will alleviate those problems.

I found it quite interesting (a few mornings ago) as I listened to Captain Paul Hurlston on one of the talk shows, when he reminded us of how in the old days they had types of drainages in different parts of the Island. One of those drains at the top of South Sound (somewhere in the Crew Road area) proved very effective. However, development has destroyed those on the ground culverts. I would encourage that when the committee meets they invite or co-opt people, like Captain Paul and others, these old-time Caymanians, to give some ideas and share their experiences of what they have been through and what they have seen that benefited us here in the days when they were designing things.

I must say that, as the Honourable Minister of Community Services indicated, the Honourable Leader of Opposition did a very good job in putting forward the complete picture, not only from the physical structure but as we all, as representatives, witnessed—I know those representatives in George Town of recent times were hardest hit—in seeing the physical and mental trauma that the people went through. I look forward to this being dealt with in a bipartisan manner and we put whatever efforts and resources to bringing this to fruition.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will not be long and it does not make sense to belabour what has been adequately put forward and accepted by Government. However, I must draw the committee's attention to the district of East End because over the years we have witnessed the same problems, explained here earlier, of flooding as within the district of George Town. We all know that has been the one that has drawn the attention of the whole country, and rightly so, because of the devastation that George Town experienced during the flooding.

On the issue of the district of East End, while the country may not be knowledgeable of the flooding in East End, it does exist. If we picture East End topographically you have the beach ridge and a hill that runs the entire length of East End. However, between the beach and the hill there is an area that lies below both. That area is where all the residential dwellings are and as a result of many years of building we have sort of blocked both ends of that little depression. Over the years we have put in wells in those low areas, however, more and more residential development has caused the water to now reach the stage of flooding. It is increasing; it is not spreading out anymore in those areas. The wells in those days were only three or four inch wells—I think they were minimum three inches but the majority were four inches in diameter. They are not accommodating the water fast enough to prevent the rise that will create flooding in some homes.

Since 2000 we have put in a few more wells, which are not adequate either because we need more. While I have been asking Public Works and the Government on a number of occasions about the wells because of financial constraints they have not been forthcoming. I must admit that recently the Minister said to me that I should again address it with the Public Works Department upon my visit to the district. However, what we need now are larger diameter wells. The terrain is a little different from George Town in that the water table, the aquifer, is not as shallow in East End as it is in George Town. Therefore, I believe that wells have worked very efficiently in East End although now we need to increase the size and perhaps the number of wells too.

I am very glad that Government sees it necessary to address this issue in a most efficient manner because I too have witnessed, particularly, the people of George Town suffer in recent times. I have seen the water in East End rise to an unmanageable level as well. However, when we get the wells blown I have myself, since being elected to this Honourable House, put on my water boots and gone to assist with the blowing of the wells. I do not think it is trying to ridicule, or criticise, however I believe one of the problems that we have with the drainage wells in this country is that after they are installed there does not appear to be an efficient maintenance programme. We need to ensure that those wells are properly cleared by Public Works and all other agencies, whoever they may be, are given the proper equipment to get the wells cleared. I would appeal to the residents as well. It is in our best interests as ordinary citizens to take on the responsibility of ensuring that the drain wells are cleared of debris because at the end of the day it is going to affect our homes, even if Public Works forgot or they did not get to that one in time, it should be cleared.

We should also take the responsibility to call Public Works to get it blown out at least once a year. Then those on the streets can be left for Public Works to ensure they are cleared. We have a responsibility to ensure that we protect ourselves. We should not leave it to Public Works to remember to come and clear leaves out of a drain. My appeal to the people of the country is when we see a drain well with debris we should clear it out ourselves and call Public Works and remind them to blow it out. They are human beings too and they may have put the wells there ten years ago and forgotten about them. In many instances they are not easily visible because I know many of those in East End are in people's back yards.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I thank the Honourable Leader of Opposition again for being so thoughtful in bringing this timely Motion. His presentation as well, as was stated by the Minister for Community Services, was well researched. Very importantly I would also like to thank the Government and the Minister for Community Services because his constituency is the one that the emphasis is placed on in this area. I trust that he too will push his colleagues in Cabinet to ensure that we address it in a timely and efficient manner. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I too would like to lend my support to this Motion. Like the Member for East End explained, Cayman Brac suffers from the same type of topography of having a beach ridge and then the Bluff that creates a valley in the middle which our people inhabit.

Over the years it has become more frequent to have residents experiencing traumatic moments of flooding. It has been attempted to remedy the flooding throughout the Island of Cayman Brac by the normal methods of installing deep wells and through direct drainage into the ocean. However, there are still areas that need to be addressed therefore I welcome this Motion that calls for a survey of the various areas in the Cayman Islands.

I thank the Mover for making this Motion comprehensive of all districts throughout the Island and look forward to benefiting from the results of the survey and the implementation of this timely Motion. I lend my support and thank the Mover for bringing this Motion to the House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, first of all I would like to thank the Government for accepting the Motion and I have to say that tomorrow the Government and the Opposition will fight over another matter. That is the nature of this thing called politics. I am extremely grateful that when there are issues which we all know are not partisan issues, but which deal with the benefit of our entire population, that it is not difficult for us to band together to try to get some positive results.

I do not think that I have to make mention of any more specific issues with regards to the Motion. In the Minister's response, the Government has said that they are addressing certain issues as we speak and that they have plans to table a report with a timeline of approximately four months. I think that is what the Minister said and welcome that because so many times we have committees, and we have committees, and we have committees, and that is all we have – a committee. However, I believe that this is one of those real situations and I am confident that we will see some tangible results.

Again, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Opposition I wish to thank the Government, not just for accepting the Motion, as in their reply it seems fairly obvious that there will be specific and pointed efforts towards finding solutions to the problems that have been highlighted in the Motion. While the Motion itself does not bring about any solutions, the people of the country can look forward eagerly to hearing exactly what will be done, arising from whatever technical synopses that become available and whatever studies are done, in order to try to find some empirical data that could be used to derive some solutions.

I want to highlight one more point. My colleague, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, stated some of those older Caymanians are still around and have a very good knowledge of the terrain and the acts of nature and what has worked in the past. Even though there has been this tremendous amount of development that has taken place, I think whatever committee is formed would certainly welcome input from these kinds of persons; like Captain Paul from South Sound, and there will be others in other districts.

As representatives from most of the districts have said some districts will be affected more dramatically than others. However, I dare say that, there will probably not be anywhere that will not be affected in some way by flooding depending on the level of storm water drainage that we have. I would expect that Cayman Brac and Little Cayman would not be left out of any study that is done—separate Islands, but all one. Certainly, there would be support from our part to ensure that this is not something that is phased to do one then the other. Whatever is being done now, let us get it all done and out of the way. I do not think that is expecting too much because I do not think this is one of those things that is going to take a huge amount of dollars and cents initially to know what has to be done. If we arrive at the point where we know exactly what has to be done then we can plan and phase the implementation. At least we will know exactly how to prioritise that implementation.

I again commend the Motion and I am very grateful to all Members for the support that has been expressed for the Motion which again, is way beyond support, however the results might be forthcoming. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that Government give consideration to commissioning a survey of the flood prone areas of the Cayman Islands particularly those in George Town to determine the most effective means of alleviating flooding in these areas,

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, following the said survey, a report of the findings be laid on the Table of this Honourable House;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the National Hurricane Committee be charged with the responsibility for coordinating effective response to all national disasters, including flooding, both from rainfall and storm surge.”

Before I put that question, I think we have an error in the amendment.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may, I think perhaps that is where I was confused in the very beginning. The Motion itself calls for the original last resolve to be deleted therefore it would not have anything to do with the National Hurricane Committee. The last resolve would simply read:

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the newly formed Stormwater Management Committee ... ”. Am I clear?

In other words, the original Motion had as its last resolve: “AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the National Hurricane Committee be renamed the National Hurricane and Disaster Committee...” The amendment is asking for that resolve section to be deleted.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Opposition, you are right. However, the amendment that I have says: “AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the National Hurricane Committee be charged with responsibility...”. I do accept that in your reading initially your wording was different and the Motion that was debated did say that: “The newly formed Stormwater Management Committee be charged with ...” Therefore, the resolve that we—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I may, Mr. Speaker. I hear you and follow you clearly. However, what has happened is that this was the original amendment that you are reading but there is a subsequent amendment to that original amendment. It was signed and circulated. Members may not have it with them now because we have been at it for so long. Notice of Amendment No. 2 deletes the last resolve section—again substituting it with:

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the newly formed Stormwater Management Committee be charged with responsibility for coordinating effective response to all severe weather disasters, including flooding, both from rainfall and storm surge.”

Not to take up any time, Mr. Speaker, however, the reason I want to make sure that this is the amendment that is passed is because it would have an ongoing effect once the Motion is accepted and voted on with regard to where certain responsibilities lie.

The Speaker: Thanks for that clarification.

The last resolve will read: “AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the newly formed Stormwater Management Committee be charged with responsibility for coordinating effective response to all national disasters, including flooding, both from rainfall and storm surge.”

The Speaker: All those in favour —

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry Sir, we will get there; it is the last thing now. It is not “... to all national disaster...” it is “...to all severe weather disasters...”.

The Speaker: Just for clarity I will read the last resolve.

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the newly formed Stormwater Management Committee be charged with responsibility for coordinating effective response to all severe weather disasters, including flooding, both from rainfall and storm surge.”

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Private Member’s Motion No. 1/03, as amended, passed.

Private Member’s Motion No. 3/03

Small Business Act for the Cayman Islands Withdrawn

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would beg leave of the House under Standing Order 24(14) to withdraw this Motion at this time. You know as the Secunder of the Motion, the two of us have decided that we needed further consultation with certain private small businesses who desire to have that before the Motion came to this House and we would therefore bring it back in September.

The Speaker: The question is that Private Members’ Motion No. 3/03 be withdrawn to a later sitting of the House. Could I have a Secunder for the withdrawal?

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that private members motion No. 3/03 be withdrawn to the brought back at a later sitting.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. In accordance with Standing Order 24(14) Private Member’s Motion No. 3/03 withdrawn.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Since we have reached the end of the business can I have the Motion for the adjournment.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I move that this Honourable House be adjourned until Friday, 25 July 2003, at 10am.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until Friday 25 July 2003 at 10am.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.37 pm the House stood adjourned until Friday, 25 July 2003, at 10am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
25 JULY 2003
10.36 AM
Nineteenth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Second Elected Member for George Town to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.39 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: There are no announcements this morning. I wish to apologise for the unavoidable delay in starting this morning. Madam Clerk.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

Suspension of Standing Order 23(6)

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister of Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 23(6) to allow more than three questions appearing in the name of the same Member to be taken.

The Speaker: Thank you, Minister. The question is that Standing Order 23(6) be suspended to allow more than three questions to be taken by the same Member.

All those in favour please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 23(6) suspended to allow more than three questions appearing in the name of the same Member to be taken.

Question No. 68

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

No. 68:Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture if the Education Department prepares and delivers an annual deposit of statistics in order to assist with forward planning, performance assessment and target setting for improvement in the relevant areas.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, the preparation of annual statistics by the Education Department will be a requirement of the annual corporate plan due to be implemented this year. Presently, statistics on performance assessment in schools are produced annually by the curriculum and test assessment staff. Forward planning and target setting are critical areas in the newly restructured Education Department.

As quarterly reporting under the new Financial Management Initiative becomes more standardised, statistics will be collated on a quarterly basis as well as annually. This will assist more timely interpretation of information, although comprehensive forward planning, performance assessment and target setting are expected to continue on an annual basis.

Annual statistics are presented for the Economics and Statistics Unit as well as for the UNESCO project office.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. In the Minister's answer he says: "The preparation of annual statistics . . . will be a requirement of the annual corporate plan due to be implemented this year."

Can the Minister state when these statistics will be prepared and implemented on an ongoing basis as he prescribed in the answer?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, many of these statistics will be available through the system that we are currently implementing called Star Students and it is anticipated that we should have these statistics available later this year.

The Speaker: Any further supplementaries? Have you finished, Honourable Minister?

Hon. Roy Bodden: I just wanted to add that this system is part of the ITALIC (Improving Teaching and Learning in the Cayman Islands) programme, which we are in the process of phasing in now.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. With regard to the special education needs throughout the Cayman Islands at present — especially for the trained staff that are employed, and the numbers that are hired on an annual basis — what methodology is employed by the Department and/or the Ministry in order to know the number of qualified teachers in the various areas that are necessary for those children at various age levels with special needs?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, the following question is related to the special education needs policies. However, I wonder if the Honourable Member would consider—

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister is in a position to say if one requested statistics on the performance assessment in schools, how far back we would be able to have these statistics that are produced by the curriculum and test assessment staff. Would it be back one, two, three or four years?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, it is my information that these statistics will be available for about three years.

The Speaker: Are there any more supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 69

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

No. 69:Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture if there is a plan for the necessary development and implementation of special education needs' policies.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Yes, there is a plan for the development and implementation of the Special Education Needs (SEN) Policy.

A SEN Policy and Guidance document has existed since 1991. Following all reviews of Special Educational Needs (SEN) Services the document is usually revised and updated. It was revised in the 1995 Education Department Strategic Plan and again in 1997 following the Special Education audit of 1996. Currently as a result of the updated Education Department Strategic Plan 1999, the Vision 2008 Plan, the review of the Cayman Islands Education Department (2000) and findings from the Inspection reports (1997-2001) another update has been undertaken. This updated document highlights the following areas:

- A working definition of pupils with Special Educational Needs
- Philosophy Statement
- Education Department aims and provisions for Special Educational Needs and Services

The Updated Policy document has been in progress since April 2002 and is ongoing. It is used to provide guidelines for schools in identifying SEN and the provision of services to address these needs.

As will be noted, Special Education Needs is a dynamic service. New development in Government Education Policies, Educational Research and students' needs will result in accompanying evaluation and review of the policy document as deemed appropriate.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Supplementaries

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Where he speaks about the special education audit of 1996, could the Minister state, if he has the information available, what entity, conducted that audit?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education

Hon. Roy Boddén: Thank you, Madam Speaker. There was an internal review conducted by the schools' inspectorate.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker. In the answer, I do not see any specific reference to the assessment of the type, quality and quantity of human resources needed with regards to implementation of this policy; the various types of counsellors, teachers or whatever else. Can the Minister give some explanation as exactly what methodology is employed within the policy to assess the numbers? I think that was the supplementary from the last question.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, I believe that the Honourable Member is talking about the teachers. If that is the case, then these students are handled in a variety of ways. Each student will have what is called an Individual Education Plan (IEP) and they will have someone assigned to them to work with that plan. Or, it could be that students are grouped, in which case they will have a teacher responsible for instructing them.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education I will allow one more after this. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. To follow up on what the minister has just said. Can he say at present—understanding that the process of developing the special education needs policy is an ongoing one, not fully firmed up yet—how the numbers are, in the present system of these specially trained staff, decided upon?

I will quickly explain so the Minister will understand where I am coming from. Throughout the years there has been the statement that there are not enough of these teachers to go around to the various schools. I think it is very critical how that decision is made, besides whatever financial resources that may be available and the constraints that we may have.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Firstly, Madam Speaker, it is based on the needs, identification of the students, determination of the progress the students are making and then identification of staff needed to deliver the programmes.

The Speaker: Any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on the next question.

Question No. 70

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

No. 70:Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture if the Education Department has undertaken a staffing analysis in all of the public schools.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, each year the Education Department reviews staffing levels and needs with Principals to ensure optimum deployment of staff. The Education Department has undertaken a staffing analysis in all of the public schools by securing a list of all staff and especially those who are 50 years and over, so as to identify time of retirement and identifying persons especially young, aspiring Caymanians who will be able to fill these vacancies.

A list of all staff in all schools is available and is updated at regular intervals, that is, when staff has left the service and are replaced by new persons. This document includes the name of person employed, the title of their post, the school and telephone number. Returning Caymanian graduates are also placed in posts of their specialist areas.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the very beginning the Minister says: “Each year the Education Department reviews staffing levels and needs with Principals to ensure optimum deployment of staff”.

Can he state if, for this September, this exercise has been done? I do not know if the time is right or if this is something that happens between now and September. If it has been done, is it done specifically for George Hicks High school, especially since there are new levels of numbers of students who are going to be attending that school? Have the needs been identified and are they definitely going to be satisfied?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, the update has been done for that school and the George Hicks High school will be getting five new teachers in this up-coming year.

The Speaker: Any further supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker, I used the George Hicks High school as an example because I think that is the school with the largest number of students in the entire Cayman Islands. I am certain the same applies for other schools. Is the Minister satisfied, since he says that this exercise is completed, that all the required posts will be filled for the September term, including the special needs section?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Yes, Madam Speaker, I am satisfied. Any request from any one particular school has to be balanced against the requests from other schools. With regard to the George Hicks school we got the request in July, so we are dealing with that now. I am confident that we will be able to manage these requests in such a way that no school will be put out significantly. The monies for the July budget have been approved for the posts for the George Hicks school and we are dealing with those now.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Evidently, the Minister was replying to a question on staffing levels and it appears it was just teachers' staff levels. I would like to extend that and ask the Minister about the other staff levels, like teachers' aides, in particular, at the East End school. Some time ago the Education Department made a commitment to provide teachers' aides for the East End school. Can the Minister tell us if that has been done and if the staffing level in East End is adequate at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, there have been no new teachers' aides' posts. There have only been replacements. We have not been able to manage additional teachers' aides' posts.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Minister can tell us if that is because of unavailability of suitable people or the lack of funds.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Budgetary constraints, Madam Speaker. I regret to say that we are just trying to arrive at a position where we can meet all the needs now. It will take some time before we are over the period of budgetary constraints. There are twelve teachers' aides' posts for all of the schools and we are cognisant of the fact that these will have to be increased and I give the undertaking that it will be done as early as we can afford to do so.

The Speaker: Member for East End, did you have a follow up or will you give way to the Member for North Side.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I will give way, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister is in a position to say that the double classes being taught by one teacher in the North Side primary school, even without a petition, where one teacher is controlling two different age groups, has now come to an end and there will be sufficient staff for the North Side Primary school come September.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I am happy to assure the Honourable Member that that indeed is the case.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I would just like to thank the Honourable Minister for dealing with this matter finally, because I have been fighting for this for ten and a half years. Therefore, I would like to say thanks very much to the Minister for Education.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Following the reply to my supplementary earlier, I am wondering if the Minister can tell us when it is anticipated that he will be out of this financial drought that the Government seems to have been experiencing. They can build buildings but they cannot do schools. Can he indicate when he expects the end of this financial problem – the lack of monies?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I have to caution the Honourable Member for over-interpreting what I said. We have 12 teachers' aides' posts, and 27 support assistants. I think that the Government is doing well because we have managed to create a balance where no school is significantly under-staffed while, at the same time, initiating a $6 million information and communications technology project.

In addition to that, we have entered very concrete proposals to build three new schools. It would be good, and it would be my heart's delight, if I could cater to every individual need in education for the various public schools. Regrettably, we have to make priorities, and these are structured in such a way that when we come to serious financial constringency and austerity we do it in a way that no one school suffers more than the other. I hope the Honourable Member will take cognisance of that.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, next question.

Question No. 71

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

No. 71:Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture if a joint truancy action programme has been developed with the Police and the Department of Social Services.

Just to make it clear, that would mean with those two agencies and the Education Department.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, one of the recommendations coming out of the recent Millet Report 2000 (Education Department Review of Support Services) was the need for a multi-agency approach to help deal with the issue of truancy. The Education Department, in its action plans, has set out a series of actions to commence in the 2002-2003 school year, which will involve the Department of Social Services and RCIP/Family Support Unit in discussions on relevant findings towards the establishment of a joint national truancy action programme.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Supplementary

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker, seeing as the school year for 2002/2003 is now over, can the Minister then state what actually has been accomplished during that time?

Suspension of Standing Orders 23(7) and (8)

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, before you respond would you be so kind as to move the motion for suspension of Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) as we have passed the hour of 11am to allow questions to continue.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) so as to allow Question Time to proceed beyond 11am.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow Question Time to proceed beyond 11 am.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

The Speaker: Please proceed, Honourable Minister.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I would crave the indulgence of the Honourable Leader to provide the update on the information which he has sought because the two officers who would have knowledge of that are on leave at this time. I could, however, give him an idea of how the programme was set up, in that, firstly, we identified and collected available data, then there was an analysis and interpretation of this data, discussion of the findings of the RCIP family support unit and the Department of Social Studies, then the establishment of the national truancy programme and then the promotion of a joint policy statement.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 72

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition

No. 72:Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture if the Education Department has developed the national requirement for graduation, both at primary and secondary levels.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, proposed criteria for graduation from high school has been developed. Such criteria must now be presented to the Education Council, and if accepted, will come into effect two academic years later. The purpose of this delay is to acquaint all students with the criteria and give them every opportunity to meet them during their last two years of compulsory education.

I would like to add that we have also been discussing the development of a code of conduct, which will regulate the behaviour and the requirements, set standards and protocols for students, teachers and parents. We will produce that in a handbook, which will be available to every student and every parent in the government schools in the Cayman Islands.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I am almost certain that the proposed criteria for graduation from high school will include some type of academic standard to have been achieved. I am also certain that the Minister would be cognisant that if that becomes part of the criteria that some onus would be put on the Department to ensure that students are allowed to develop to that standard. At present, how is it dealt with—and the Minister would be quite aware of what I am talking about—with regards to students who the staff know full well are not tooled properly at the end of the compulsory school years?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: At present, Madam Speaker, these situations are dealt with on attendance, effort and conduct rather than academic performance. However, the Honourable Member is quite right; when the criteria are set great emphasis will be placed on academic performance and I can briefly lay out some criteria. The attendance rate will have to be at least 90 per cent, the students will have to maintain an effort grade at 3.0 or better, they will have to maintain a conduct grade of 3.0 or better and there will have to be less than 15 days of suspension.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. The Minister, I am sure again, will appreciate that this goes into a lot of other areas. Rather than wait until the end of the day to say to the student he will not be allowed to graduate because all of the criteria were not met, is there a staged process which will involve parents to give students a chance to make up for any deficiencies at certain periods and to ensure that they have every opportunity to graduate, so it is not just when it is all over an assessment is made and there is no chance to repair the situation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, with reference to the supplementary asked by the Honourable Member, the system, as it operates currently, is one in which parents are kept informed every ten weeks through term reports at high school level. It is also my understanding that students know of this criterion from the time they enter the high school in year 10. They are informed of the criterion and of the necessity to maintain standards. Therefore, if they fail, then it is anticipated that they are cognisant of what the sanctions will be and the system does not offer any recourse for those who have not met the standards.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I will try to wind down my supplementaries as quickly as I can, Madam Speaker. The question referred to primary and secondary levels and the answer refers only to the secondary level and I understand, without having heard an answer, that perhaps this is something that is being worked on.

My question to the Minister is that as the results of the primary years will have tremendous effect on what goes on during the secondary years, can the Minister state whether this is a priority? It seems to me that it is just as important to develop the primary one prior to the secondary one rather than vice versa.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, as I understand it, primary school students really do not graduate. At the primary level students must have completed six years of primary school education in order to enter the George Hicks High school. The Key Stage Two exam result is used as a guide to place students in sets for instruction. I would like to say—as an educator and having attended many of these functions—I am concerned that parents get taken up with this whole business of graduation even from pre-school, primary school. What is more important is to ensure that the children have managed to acquire the necessary skills and knowledge sets, which are appropriate for them at these various levels. While I am not putting a damper on any parent's enthusiasm, I would caution against going through all the expense. It is the performance that counts and perhaps there should be greater concentration on that, particularly as it will impact students at the high schools, and college and university level. It looks as we are turning the whole thing into an exercise where the focus is more on appearance rather than the business of substance and the knowledge and skills acquired by the students. That is why I like the American expression, commencement exercises, because they realise that you are just beginning.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, next question.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, if I may please. I had one last supplementary, I was winding down —

The Speaker: Please proceed with your last supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, very much. Having heard what the Minister has said, I still want to revisit the primary levels and even though they may not go through an actual graduation exercise, I am certain the Minister will agree with me that it does not bode well for a student exiting primary level and entering the secondary level who is barely literate. I am certain that the Minister knows that we have instances of that. I am just trying to determine if there is some type of assessment which can be developed, earlier rather than later, during the primary years to ensure that a child is not left so disadvantaged—whether he is partially or mostly responsible for it or not—when entering secondary school. Regardless of the sets that the children are being put in some do not even have basic reading skills —

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, could you please turn it into a question?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, I will do that, Madam Speaker. I am trying to ask the Minister if anything is physically being done to ensure that the numbers, which are received in the secondary schools similar to what I just described, are becoming less and less rather than more and more?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, the Honourable Member's concern is dealt with by the following: there are key stage tests at the end of years three, six and nine. Those students who do not do satisfactorily can be made to repeat. It is happening in some instances, rather infrequently because, of course, there are other concerns that come into play, however in extreme cases I can assure you that it is happening. You will appreciate that we will have to consider all the ramifications including the effect that such retardation will have on the child's self esteem.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

Question No. 73

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

No. 73:Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture if a plan has been formulated to bring on stream the recommendations made in the Millet Report in order to provide the Education Department with an effective strategy for improving its own performance and the performance of the schools it supports.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: A plan has been formulated in response to the recommendations of the Millett Report 2002. This plan is presently being circulated to all schools, the Education Department, the Ministry and the Personnel Department. This plan will provide an effective strategy for improving the Department's own performance as well as that of schools. School improvement forms a major thrust of the plans. The Education Department is working with the Schools' Inspectorate to respond to major issues raised in school inspection reports. This work has been ongoing for the past year with the training of "link" officers who will work with schools in specific areas. An example of a more general response involving all schools is the recent purchase of a new reading scheme and subsequent training in response to the issue of raising standards of literacy in primary schools.

The establishment of the Communication and Data post is in response to the Millett Report for improving communication links within the Department as well as with other agencies.

The Star Student programme, which will be in place in September, seeks to improve the performance of the entire system, especially in the area of record keeping and data retrieval.

I have a copy of the action plans arising out of the Millett Report recommendations.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I wonder if you could ask your staff to ensure that the last paragraph that you read is circulated to Members.

Are there any supplementaries?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker, in the Minister's answer I believe the most of it is concentrated on improving the performance of the schools. Could the Minister be a little bit more specific, if possible, in outlining the plans for the Education Department to improve its own performance?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, the Education Department, has done some staff restructuring, added the data communications officer, and have generally improved and sharpened the requirements and performances of other staff members. I am heartened that with these improvements we are bound to see the positive effects, not only in the Department but also in our schools.

The Speaker: Any supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Supplementaries

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. As the Minister has mentioned restructuring and in any other process that may have or is or will be taking place, can he state if, during any of these stages, there are any plans to have specific job descriptions, specific performance objectives and any other associated criteria attached to the specific posts within the Department?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I am happy to tell the Honourable Leader that this has been a requirement; it has been done and the Department now has job descriptions for all posts because this is also a requirement of the Public Service Commission.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Can the Minister then state if the performance appraisals are done annually? If not, how are they done and who does the appraisals and, ultimately, who is responsible for ensuring that the post holders' performance is in line with the job description?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, the appraisals are done annually and senior department personnel; the chief education officer, senior education officers, and a deputy chief education officer conduct them.

The Speaker: Do you have a follow up? Please proceed.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I wish for the Minister to know that I personally know of at least one case when a Member of staff was asked to perform his or her own appraisal and —

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, can you turn that statement into a question?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker, I am going to do that. I would ask the Minister to give an undertaking to ensure, regardless of the confidence placed in any member of staff, that this is not continued or becoming a habit.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, it is not uncommon in modern management practices to have staff members set their own performance objectives. Indeed, it is to be encouraged hence I do not find it unusual to ask a member to set their performance objectives and then to have these objectives reviewed, to see whether they have been achieved, by someone senior.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In the first part of the substantive answer the Minister says a plan has been formulated in response to the recommendation of the Millett Report 2002. This plan is presently being circulated to all schools, Education Department, the Ministry and the Personnel Department. I am wondering if the Minister can tell us the reason for circulating it. Is it for consultation or implementation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker. The reason for the circulation is for both consultation and implementation.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Minister can now tell us then when will we see a similar document for the Department of Education and its improvements, where it sets targets for its performance, specifically, with the staff and the likes, as required by the Millett Report.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, such information can be gleaned from the budget where the Department's outputs are listed but the schools have their own plans and the Department has its plan. So, we are equipped and ready.

The Speaker: We will move on to the next question.

Question No. 74

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

No. 74:Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture if the Independent Appeals Tribunal to hear and redress complaints relating to the work of the Education Department and the schools has been established.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker. No, This will be done in a later stage of the implementation of the Millett Report.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 75

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

No. 75:Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture if it is an agreed policy of the Government to retain the George Hicks High School and the John Gray High School in their present state, that is, with each school having enrolment of years seven, eight and nine and 10, 11, and 12 respectively.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: After extensive study it was decided to retain the two schools in their present form, and to concentrate on strengthening the curricula of both. Any changes to the structure of the schools would necessitate physical additions, which the government is not in a position to consider at this time.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I remember on one occasion hearing the Honourable Minister speak to the fact that a consultant had advised that all of the high schools would have to have the same curriculum, that is, including the proposed new one. Notwithstanding the answer that has been given, when this new high school comes on stream, will that be for the full six years of high school and if so, what will become of the two existing schools?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, it is proposed that the new high school will be a full six-year high school and the existing two schools will continue with the curriculum which they have. Cayman Brac High School now has six years also; we do not anticipate there will be any problems. One of the things that we have to be concerned with is to ensure that there is a proper balance and that there are no significant differences in the curriculum of the high schools so that we can ensure all of our students pass through the same curricula and are expected to achieve the same standards. This is why we have opted to be cautious in our approach.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I understand the Minister correctly, when it is all over the Cayman Brac High school and the new high school will be full fledged six-year high schools. The George Hicks will remain the first three years and the John Gray will remain the second three years. If that is the case, is there any consideration whatsoever being given to the simple basic difference of such larger numbers of the same years being concentrated in two schools and the other two schools experiencing the luxury of having much lesser numbers of each year and for those students to be able to be dealt with in a much more personalised manner?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, let me inform the Honourable House of the dilemma; the Honourable Leader of the Opposition knows that my predecessor said that we needed about $50 million of physical infrastructural work.

One of the problems we are going to have to deal with in the next little while is the redevelopment of the John Gray High school site, whose buildings are at the end of their natural life. Many of the buildings are termite ridden and they are breaking down because the maintenance, although we have been thankful for it, is not what it should have been. That being the case, we are going to have to undertake the redevelopment of that site. At the same time we are going to have to work out the challenges we have at the current George Hicks site. George Hicks and John Gray High schools will have less numbers when the Frank Sound High school comes on line and therefore we believe that we will be in a much better position to deal with the challenges of curriculum at those sites.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Following the reply from that supplementary, I am wondering if the Minister can tell us why additional floors are not added onto the buildings, that is, three floors, instead of the footprint of the school being so large. The redevelopment of the school could be done immediately while schools are in session. I am wondering why the Government has never looked into that, or if they have.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, these are the design decisions taken by previous political directorates and I would hope that the Honourable Member would not attempt to hold me responsible for that. I have always held the view based on experience in Canada that our schools should be built as he suggested. I can assure him that the schools, which are being designed and proposed to be built on my watch, will be just that way. The Spotts school and the proposed Frank Sound high schools will be storey buildings rather than sprawling campuses. In all fairness to past political directorates, I believe the reason for that was our schools at that time were not air-conditioned. Now they are air conditioned it makes it much easier to build storey buildings.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 76

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

No. 76: Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture what is Government's position concerning the implementation of a minimum wage after the acceptance of Private Member's Motion No. 1/01.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, both the present Labour Law and the proposed new Employment Law contain provisions for the establishment of a Minimum Wage Advisory Committee.

While the appointment of such a Committee remains a priority, the Ministry has concentrated its efforts over the past two and a half years on restructuring the old Labour Department into the Employment Relations Department and on revising the main Labour legislation. It is not anticipated that such a Committee will be established until the main legislation is approved.

However, when this is done I can assure Honourable Members and the public that full consultation, and the publishing of the Committee's report will be ensured, as I have done with all major reports of national interest commissioned by my Ministry.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 77

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

No. 77: Ms. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture have Government Primary Schools changed their reading programme, if so, when did this change take place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, all government primary schools have changed their reading programme. Their reading programme that has been adopted is the McGraw Hill Reading Programme. This change took place in September 2002. All schools adopted the programme at the same time and were supplied with the materials needed to successfully implement the programme. By October 31st 2002, all ten government primary schools received the required students' texts, teachers' manuals, teacher resource materials and technology support required for the successful implementation of the programme.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister is in a position to say if teachers were trained in this new programme. If so, where did this training take place, by whom, the length of time, and how many teachers were involved in the training?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, the programme was introduced using a six-step approach. To date, three of these steps have been successfully completed.

In June 2002, teachers were given an initial orientation to the programme where the philosophy, rationale and approaches were discussed. In addition, teachers were all supplied with their teaching manuals and other resource materials to facilitate planning during the summer.

In August 2002 all classroom teachers from years one through six were given in-depth training workshops by consultants of McGraw Hill. These sessions addressed teaching, managing, pacing, testing and other phases of the programme with the goal of achieving a level of comfort and efficiency while teaching the new reading programme.

In March 2003 all classroom teachers attended grade level follow up in-service workshops aimed at addressing any areas of concern. Based on a survey conducted by the education officer for Language Arts the consultant of McGraw Hill were able to address areas of concern raised by teachers.

At this end of this academic year, 2003, all schools will be asked to give a comprehensive report of student performance on the programme. Principals have all been provided with resource packets that will facilitate the monitoring of the programme in each primary school.

Step four will focus on parental involvement in the programme. This will be presented in the academic year of 2003 to 2004.

Step five will focus on continued workshops and professional talks for teachers.

Step six will focus on the provision of ongoing in-service to ensure smooth implementation for new teachers entering the teaching service in the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In the Honourable Minister's reply he said that all teachers were given the necessary resources for this new reading programme. My question to the Honourable Minister: Should a teacher test my child on this reading programme and that child fails, is the teacher in possession of the necessary resources to retest that child at a later date to see if he has achieved what is supposed to be achieved?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, it is my understanding that the tests are done at various levels. Yes, a teacher should be in possession of the necessary material. For example, if a child fails at a higher level that child can be tested at a lower level to ascertain exactly if it is a problem with the difficulty of the material being presented.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable Minister is in a position to tell the House how the Department is measuring the success of this new reading programme.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, I will reiterate; at the end of this academic year 2003, all schools will be asked to give a comprehensive report of student performance on the programme. Principals have all been provided with resource packets that will facilitate the monitoring of the programme in each primary school.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I understand the Honourable Minister's reply clearly but my concern is an entire year has passed. What measure does the teacher have that reports to the Education Department to let us know that these children are achieving what they are supposed to achieve since September 2002?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, the students are tested at the end of each unit thereby allowing the teacher to determine the progress of each child and to have those children who need special help arrange for special help.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I am still wondering if the Honourable Minister can say if the Education Department has any idea of the success rate of this reading programme in the past year in our primary schools.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, I give an undertaking to provide such information at a later date. It is not available now. I would also say that this is a new programme and I would caution against any over-interpretation of the success rate. I would think from my experience, that we would probably need about four or five years into this programme before we can definitively arrive at a decision as to its appropriateness and the success rate however, I will undertake to provide that information that the Lady Member requests subsequently.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side. I will allow two supplementaries after this one.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I thank the Honourable Minister for agreeing to undertake that and let me have the results. I would like to make a point to the Minister for the Education Department. I, personally, have had representation from teachers in primary schools who said that they are doing this programme by a trial and failure effort because they have no re-testing resources and the matter needs to be looked into as soon as possible.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, do you wish to respond?

Hon. Roy Boddén: Only to say that I have heard the Member's statement and I will discuss it with the Education Department.

The Speaker: Thank you. Are there any further supplementaries? The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Minister said that this is a new programme and we need time to determine the success rate and I support that. Albeit new I am wondering what monitoring mechanisms have been employed to follow this up to ensure the desired results are achieved, be it three years or so.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, the Education Officer for Language Arts has the responsibility of monitoring the progress and effectiveness of this programme. That officer visits the schools, speaks with the teachers, makes necessary assessments and then works with the students. I want to say this: I read between the lines of the questions of the Honourable Members that they may be getting some complaints. It is not unusual, Madam Speaker, that the introduction of any new system when it departs from what has been the accepted norm, is going to cause some feelings of apprehensiveness. I believe that, given time and an open mind, the teachers will get over that apprehensiveness. Perhaps their dissatisfaction comes from the fact that this new system replaced the old one with which they were familiar. I am confident that the new system is equally or more effective than the old one and if the teachers are conscientious they will come to find that out in due course.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, next question.

Question No. 78

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

No. 78:Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture to give an update on the expressed policy of providing a laptop for every child in the public schools.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: The Italic (Improving Teaching and Learning in the Cayman Islands) Programme includes giving each child in our school system the skill, the means and the access to the Internet. The first step in this process is training of the teachers. A laptop programme for teachers has begun.

At the present time we are about to pilot a system of laptop carts in two schools. Another school has had a laptop cart donated by its PTA.

Because technology is changing so fast, laptops are only one of the tools available for teaching and learning. No decision has been made to issue each child with his/her own individual laptop, as it maybe that when we are ready to provide individualized access new tools for either the student or the student's home are more appropriate.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. My first supplementary is, which two schools is the pilot project being employed at?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, Cayman Brac High school, John Gray High school. John A. Cumber High school in West Bay was the recipient of a laptop, courtesy of their Parent Teachers' Association.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I hear the Minister and particularly in the last paragraph of his substantive answer, that technology is changing so fast there may be other things that will come on line. I am wondering if the Minister can tell us then what time frame we can anticipate this will be in place. Is it 2005 or 2006?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, we have a contract with IBM who are our strategic partners in this exercise for five years. The contract is for $6 million over five years. We have just started to train the trainers, which are the teachers. When we get them trained we are going to begin. This is a far-reaching exercise, it has widespread ramifications and it is no under-statement to say that it is going to revolutionise the way we deliver instruction to our students in the schools. We are not only going to be in communication with the students but we are going to be in communication with the parents. To say exactly what year will depend upon the progress we make but I would anticipate in the next two years we should be reaching the maturation point.

The Speaker: The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. My last supplementary is that in the substantive answer the Minister said that the first step in the process is training the teachers—and he just spoke of training the trainers, which I suspect are the same people - therefore when will that first step be completed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, to date 86 teachers have been trained to do the Teacher Universe On Line course. It is anticipated that at least another 90 or so teachers will be trained by 28 August to access the teacher universe on line course. There are presently 16 certified teachers who are going to assist us with this training.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker, I have, on occasions when the programme was initially announced, heard individuals referring to how they consider it is going to work over an extended period of time when, in this age of information technology, such devices as laptop computers become obsolete in a matter of eighteen months. I am sorry if there was an answer and I was not in the Chamber. I wonder if the Minister could clear that up so it will be obvious to those wondering how it will work.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I made reference to that in the substantive answer. Over and beyond that we have, as a strategic partner, unquestionably the leader in information and communications technology, not only as it relates to education but the world over, in IBM. I am confident that we will get the best and the people we deal with are very cognisant of the rapid developments in the world of computers and information technology. We have already been introduced to the micro information processors thus we very well know that this is the case and we are familiar with the contingencies that we are up against.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Roy Bodden: No, no. Absolutely no.

The Speaker: The Member from East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am aware that in the primary schools we use Apple McIntosh and in the high schools we use Microsoft office. Now we are going to IBM, which is a different application again. I am wondering if IBM will be compatible with McIntosh at the primary level, in order that we do not have to make the current computer labs obsolete.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, this has been a challenge we are aware of and the training to which our teachers are subjected is equally applicable on the various systems. Eventually, we are going to standardise the system and we will be phasing out the Macintoshes. We are aware this is a sensitive matter and it has to be handled in such a way that we do not waste resources, particularly as many of these resources were gifts.

Question No. 79

The Speaker: The Honourable Member for East End.

No. 79: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture to give an update on the needed improvements to the East End Primary School.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: The list of needed improvements to the East End Primary School is as follows: the replacement of windows in Rooms three, four, five and six and the library, the installation of water coolers facing the hard court area, drainage of the courtyard in front of room two, as well as resurfacing of the car park. These projects have been listed in the minor works budget submissions for 2003.

Other capital needs are: to upgrade the playing fields and to construct a purpose built hall and canteen. These projects would require significant funding and it is not anticipated that either of these would be included in the present allocation of capital funds.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Minister can tell us when the capital improvements to the schools or additions, that is, the building of a hall and canteen, are anticipated to begin.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I am sure my Honourable friend will appreciate this bit of humour. When last I saw my gypsy I had more pressing matters than the East End primary school so I did not ask her about this but now that some pressure is easing on me about personal survival matters this would be for the next time.

[laughter]

Hon. Roy Bodden: I am cognisant of this need. The Honourable Member has been pressing me about it but the problem is that we are just getting to the point where our funds are allowing us to address some of these issues. I give the Honourable Member an undertaking, a politician's promise; this is going to be dealt with as expeditiously as the monies will allow us to do.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Perhaps I need the address of the gypsy too from the Member however I will talk to him afterwards.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End, Standing Order 22(1)(g) unfortunately will not allow you to go down the gypsy lane. It says: "The question shall not solicit expression of opinion or the solution of an abstract legal question or to be hypothetical."

Please proceed.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I was just asking for an address. I thank the Minister for his politician's commitment on the hall and the canteen—the major items, and East End school. I thank him most of all for saying that I have been pressing him for the last two and a half years. My question now is on the smaller matters such as the replacing of the windows in the library and in the classrooms. When can we expect these to be completed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, we already have the water coolers replaced and we will be painting the interior and exterior of the school in the next little while. I would hope that these repairs will be well in hand before school is set to reopen in September. I give the Member that undertaking.

The Speaker: Any further supplementaries? If not, we will move to the next question.

Question No. 80

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

No. 80:Mr. Lyndon L. Martin asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture who currently possesses the right to the National Song of the Cayman Islands and what would be required to have the wording altered to reflect the three Islands by substituting the "isle" with "isles".

The Speaker: The Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: The rights to the National Song written by Mrs Leila Ross-Shier are held by the estate of her late granddaughter Mrs. Marcia Bodden-Bush. The Coat of Arms, Flag and National Song Law which was enacted in 1993 does not give the government the right to make any changes to either the words or the music of this piece of work.

The Ministry has been advised that in order to change the word "Isle" to "Isles" there are two options: (a) to obtain the consent of the owners of the song to the change; (b) to prevail on the copyright owners to assign the rights to the original version to a third party, for example the National Archive. The new owners of the copyright could then change the words.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It is desirable to have the words changed to reflect the three Islands and I am seeking the Minister's commitment to pursue one of the two options outlined in order to have the wording changed.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I will explore the possibilities of having this done.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: I thank the Member for his commitment to explore but I too would like a politician's promise.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I will give him a promise from the gypsy that I will check it out. Madam Speaker, I will promise to do that.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister you have enticed the Chair and if we were not running late I would ask for clarification.

That concludes Question Time.
Madam Clerk.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have not received any notice for statements this morning so I will recognise the Minister responsible for District Administration to move the motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, the business for this session of the House has been completed and I would take the opportunity to thank you for ably presiding over this session of the House and today for The Honourable Minister of Education undertaking to answer a number of questions which he did to complete those as well. Also, the Opposition for the role they played and all Honourable Members indeed. I would like to move a motion that this Honourable House stand adjourned until a date to be named.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House stands adjourned sine die.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: There is a question regarding the questions that are still outstanding. It is my understanding that at least one Minister intends to give the answers in writing. For any others I would propose that they be carried over until the next session.

The Speaker: Thank you. Before I put the question I caught the eye of the Second Elected Member for George Town. Will you give way to the Leader of Opposition? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition, is it a matter of national concern?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: No, Madam Speaker, it is not a matter of national concern and I was not going to take up much of the House' time. I just wished to thank the Honourable Minister of Education for taking the time out to spend one morning to answer that many questions.

The Speaker: I was about to call on you. The reason I put that supposition is because I was going to invite you to also express your gratitude to any entities. If not, I will put the question that the Honourable House stands adjourned sine die.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it. From the Chair we should wish to thank the staff, the press and all other vested interested persons.

At 12.22 pm the House stood adjourned until a date to be determined.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
17 SEPTEMBER 2003
10.50 AM
First Sitting

The Speaker: I will now call upon the Elected Member for the district of North Side to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.53 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Mr. Denniston Fraser, BVI Clerk

The Speaker: I wish to welcome the new Clerk from the British Virgin Islands, Mr. Denniston Fraser, who is sitting in the gallery with us today. He is on attachment for the duration of one week with the Cayman Islands Parliament.

For the record, I also wish to make one short statement to all and sundry. As Speaker, and as a Cayman Islander—in particular, a Cayman Bracker, and more importantly a child of God—I would like those in the gallery as well as all Honourable Members to consider that a House divided shall not stand, and take the principle and apply it accordingly.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS
OR AFFIRMATIONS

The Speaker: Please come to the Clerk's dais.
All rise.

Oath Of Allegiance
Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks
(Administered by the Clerk)

Mr. Donovan Ebanks: I, Donovan Ebanks, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: Mr. Joel Walton.

Oath Of Allegiance
Mr. A. Joel Walton
(Administered by the Clerk)

Mr. Joel Walton: I, A. Joel Walton, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: On behalf of this Honourable House, I wish to welcome both Honourable Members. I ask them to kindly take their seats.
Please be seated.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Electricity Industry
In the Cayman Islands

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Recent events have made it both necessary and desirable that this Government make a statement to the Legislative Assembly about its policy, both in the short term and in the long term, regarding the future of the electricity industry in these Islands.

Before setting out the details of the Government's policy and intentions in this area, however, I need to explain why this Government feels that this is the opportune moment to make this public statement. Although for legal reasons we are unable to comment on the present dispute between Government and Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC) regarding CUC's most recent rate increase, one thing we intend to make clear is that we believe we are acting in the best interests of the consumer, both in the current CUC disagreement and from a wider policy perspective.

This Government is committed to ensuring that consumers pay no more than a fair and reasonable price for electricity consumption. One way of driving companies to supply their product at the lowest economic cost is by introducing competition into the marketplace. For this reason the Government is announcing today that amendments to the Electricity Law (2003 Revision) will shortly be brought to the Legislative Assembly. In future, no new licences for the generation or supply of electricity "to the public for reward" shall be granted on an exclusive basis.

In the near future, the Government will also be publishing a public invitation for expressions of interest in all aspects of the generation, supply, and distribution of electricity from interested and qualified parties, which will, of course, include the present incumbent. A fundamental provision of any licence granted in the future will be that CUC will be obliged to offer interconnect facilities to other generators or suppliers at reasonable cost.

Additionally, the Government will be bringing some marginal amendments to other sections of the Electricity Law (2003 Revision) to make it clear that neither CUC's present licence, nor the Law itself, prohibits any other business from generating electricity, provided it does not do so "to the public for reward."

The Government also intends to promote a special advisory campaign to emphasise that individuals and businesses are already free to generate electricity for their own consumption, and to bring home the need to conserve electricity as a means of reducing consumption and, thus, the cost of production.

We repeat that there is no vehicle available to the consumer faced with rate increases by a monopoly provider to challenge those increases. Government, however, can and will do whatever is necessary to ensure that such a valuable utility is provided to the consumer at the lowest possible cost and at a price that produces a reasonable and acceptable profit to the generators and suppliers.

We trust that our approach will receive not only the thanks of consumers, but also the unqualified support of all Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

I now recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

The Reduction of Incarcerated Juveniles and Young Offenders

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, contrary to what has recently been reported by the Leader of the Opposition, the Ministry responsible for Youth has seen a 37 percent reduction in the number of young offenders being incarcerated between 2001 and 2003.

The highest number of incarcerated youth occurred during the leadership of [the Member for North Side] in January of 2001. At that time, 32 young offenders and juveniles were behind bars. As of 12 September 2003, that number was halved, with only 16 young offenders and juveniles being held—a 50 percent reduction. The lowest number to be held during that time occurred in June of this year, with only 10 in custody. This represents a 68 percent reduction between the highest (32 in January 2001) and the lowest (10 in June 2003) number of incarcerated youth.

The Ministry responsible for Youth has adopted a comprehensive approach to find and address the root causes of criminal behaviour. We are using a multidisciplinary approach to reduce those causes and increase the possibility for young offenders to become productive members of our society. We remain committed to breaking the cycle for these young people and their families.

An example of a clear and decisive strategy being used to address these issues is the recent hiring of two youth drug counsellors at the Department of Substance Abuse Services. These counsellors will work with youths in various programmes throughout the country to address this extremely prevalent problem.

Two youth probation officers are being hired to work exclusively with young offenders. These officers will work with youths and their families to promote the acquisition of life skills that are lacking, and to increase protective factors to help break the cycle for these children and their families.

The recent decision to completely separate the upcoming secure youth rehabilitation facility (Chapter House) from the prison management is further evidence of this strategy. This new facility will not focus on incarceration as its ultimate purpose; it will focus on providing education, pro-social life skills, and family mediation. The staff will work with other agencies to enhance necessary services such as drug and alcohol counselling, and address behavioural health needs, the return to mainstream education, and the exploration of vocational opportunities. Much work has been conducted in this area.

We are continuing to increase our focus on children and families by incorporating preventative measures to further decrease the statistics. These are all very clear signs of a defined and coherent policy focusing on the reduction of incarcerated youth in this country.

Thank you, Madam Speaker. I hope that the Leader of Opposition will take a good look at the statistics.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister.

I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, we are going to suspend Standing Orders in order to allow debate on Private Members' Motions to take precedence this morning. I therefore move the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) to allow Other Business to take precedence over Government Business.

Suspension of Standing Order 14(2)

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(2) be duly suspended to allow Private Members' Motions to take precedence over the Government's Business this morning.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 14(2) suspended to allow Other Business to take precedence over Government Business.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/03

Grants of Caymanian Status by the Governor in Cabinet

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 4/03 entitled, Grants of Caymanian Status by the Governor in Cabinet.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I wish to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Motion has been duly moved and is now open for debate. Does the Honourable Leader of the Opposition wish to speak thereto?

Mr. Serjeant, could you accommodate the Honourable Leader of the Opposition with the speaking podium?

Honourable Leader of the Opposition, for the record, perhaps you could first proceed with reading the preamble and the resolution to your Motion. Thank you.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Private Member's Motion No. 4/03 reads as follows:

"WHEREAS in recent months the Governor in Cabinet of the Cayman Islands has granted Caymanian status to a large number of persons (more than 1,400);

"AND WHEREAS the Leader of Government has recently stated the intention of Government to revise the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) or to bring new immigration legislation enabling up to 6,000 persons to be granted Caymanian Status in one fell swoop;

"AND WHEREAS the Parliamentary Opposition has been inundated by a groundswell of apprehension and opposition to the recent actions and declared intentions of Government in relation to the process of granting of Caymanian Status;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Legislative Assembly does hereby condemn and censure the actions of the Governor in Cabinet in making the recent grants of Caymanian Status;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly acknowledges the far reaching implications of the unilateral and wholesale grant of Caymanian Status by the Governor in Cabinet to thousands of persons in one fell swoop;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly calls upon the Governor in Cabinet to forthwith cease making grants of Caymanian Status pending the holding of widespread consultation with and approval by the electorate of the course of action taken by the Governor in Cabinet in this matter;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT section 20 of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) be amended to restrict the ability of the Governor in Cabinet to grant Caymanian Status so as to limit such grants by the Governor in Cabinet to six per annum."

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Motion has been duly moved and is open for debate. Please proceed, Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, before proceeding with the debate, it is only right that I trace back a short bit of history so that everyone can gain perspective on the situation.

It has been recognised by many of us that, because there was no fixed policy in place for quotas, over the years the numbers of individuals and families living in the country have been steadily increasing as more people came to the Islands to live and work. As time has gone on, these periods of time have extended themselves.

Due to the fact that for some 11 years there was no quota under the section of the Law referring to residency, we ended up with a large number of people who had been living in the country for fairly long periods of time, varying periods, and there was no policy to afford them any real security of tenure.

Madam Speaker, in the Select Committee to review Immigration (I think that the last one was in 2000), we acquired some statistics from the Immigration Department which gave us some indication as to what the numbers were at that time. The statistics that were provided did not necessarily give us exact figures, but they provided a good indication of these. I personally have not had the benefit of any statistics since then, but if we extrapolate from those figures and add the years that have gone by, simply doing so in chronological order, we come to the conclusion that there were, perhaps, some 6,000 individuals living in this country who had been here over ten years. The period of time those individuals would have been here would vary—in most instances, between twenty and thirty years (that is, from ten to thirty years)—some even longer.

Having laid down that platform, I think that all of us in the country fully recognise and accept (or shall I say the vast majority of us fully recognise and accept) that this was not a situation that could simply continue without being addressed.

If we go a little further, Madam Speaker, in 2001, an Immigration Review Team was set up consisting of Members of the Legislative Assembly, the then Chairman of the Immigration Board, the Chief Immigration Officer, and a representative from the Legal Department. That Review Team was tasked with trying to get a grip on the situation and making recommendations based on a wide range of considerations as to what the way forward should be. The plan was to produce recommendations towards amending legislation that could address the situation in an orderly fashion.

Again, Madam Speaker, I believe that all Members in this Honourable Legislative Assembly are on the same page up to that point. Unfortunately, what has transpired since then is that we have not seen any legislation recommended to deal with the situation. I am reminded also that we have not seen the official reports that were completed by the Immigration Review Team.

Recently, I have heard the Leader of Government Business say publicly that there is legislation being drafted, and there seems to be a will to move it forward fairly quickly. To this point, we do not know exactly what the final recommendations were or what the draft legislation will contain. We have had some insight into the deliberations of the Immigration Review Team and, therefore, we have an idea of what those recommendations might have been; but as of now we really do not know anything else.

Madam Speaker, it is stated that the Governor in Cabinet of the Cayman Islands has, in recent months, been giving numbers of status grants. The Motion itself speaks of 1,400 or more. We understand that it is closer to 2,000 at this point in time. Again, we have not heard any official word, but that is the understanding around town.

We, on the Opposition side, have had a slew of representations from hundreds of individuals who have expressed concern—or, more appropriately, concerns. Many of them see some negative effects from these large numbers being granted in short periods of time. Depending on where individuals are placed in society, they see a different affect on themselves personally.

We have looked at the situation in the best way we know how. We have tried to make our own general assessment without the knowledge and benefit of certain statistical data and empirical evidence while considering all the concerns that have been raised.

Madam Speaker, we felt a duty and an obligation to use this avenue to bring this to the attention of the Government, with the hope that we could end up with some clear direction, with something that would be publicly known; something that could be accepted by the public as a way forward, and perhaps a policy that might put the situation to bed and create some light at the end of the tunnel for many individuals. At the same time, the Caymanian society would have to be willing to accept whatever that way forward might be. Therefore, here we are with the Motion.

Madam Speaker, when we examine the economy as it is today, and when we consider how many Caymanians are in the workforce, much of the concern has been from the point of view that large numbers of status grants are seen as a huge impediment to the upward mobility of many young Caymanians. Being fair and candid about the situation, the fact is that it needs to be examined very closely.

In a society such as ours, one must almost always accept that there will be, and in fact there should be, an orderly integration process. We will always (at least we have to this point, and perhaps we will for the foreseeable future) have a need for imported labour in certain sectors. We are simply not producing the individuals to supply the labour demands that are inherent in an economy such as ours. Whether the economy is booming or flat, it is still based on the gross rate that we have experienced. There has to be a certain level of imported labour.

There is a balancing act that must be looked at very carefully because we have a responsibility to every person who lives in the country. We also have an inherent responsibility to our own Caymanian population to ensure that they feel protected and that their opportunities will not dwindle in the future as they apply themselves or school themselves in certain skills.

There is another concern that has been raised. Again, some will hold the view that the concern is a no-brainer because it does not matter. With all that any one of us might say, we have not really taken the time to fully appreciate, nor are we in a position to anticipate the effect this might have on many of the core services provided by Government for its citizens. We speak of schools and health services and various other aspects within our society, Madam Speaker.

I may not be able to stand here and use cold hard facts to speak about those concerns, so that we all might appreciate what real level of concern is warranted. However, we cannot say that there should be no concern, or that all will be well. At this point in time, it seems absolutely uncertain what the numbers will be if we continue in the manner in which we have been going for the past couple of months.

There have to be some serious question marks when we look at the possible ramifications. In a society—and ours is no different from most others—if there are any sudden shocks where people see the slightest possibility of negative effects on their wellbeing or their ability to coexist in that society as they have been, then even their perceived fears (without any physical facts) are warranted. Fear plays the same trick on us. We cannot deny that.

When the Caymanian society is perturbed, there is only one way to satisfy that situation, and that is to use facts and say, 'This is what obtains; this is what we know. We know that we have to do something to relieve the situation. This is the direction in which we are going to go. This is how we are going to do it. These are the numbers we are going to deal with, within certain periods of time.' When you deal with it in this way, you satisfy both sides of the coin in the society. You find our population (and in our instance, our Caymanian population), with levels of acceptance and tolerance to the point where you are able to work sensibly without having to fight with them to get them to understand.

At the same time, you are doing what you should do as a matter of natural justice, if nothing else. You are offering people who have come into our society—who have contributed to society and who coexist with us, whose children have grown up with our children—the opportunity to feel secure in what they are doing in society and in life. Life can go on in a manner that is (as the term is commonly used) harmonious.

The Motion contends that what has been done thus far is not in line with the picture I have just painted, and that it has caused some serious problems in the minds of many. Enough time has not transpired for any of those perceived problems to manifest themselves so that people can say, 'See what I told you? You see if you had not done it that way?' We cannot wait until that time transpires to make the judgment calls, to say at that point in time, 'Well, the fears were unfounded,' or, 'Oh, Lord, if only we had done it differently.' We cannot do it like that. There lies the contention of the Motion.

I think we can all agree on what the problem is. Unfortunately, where we part ways is in how we should go about solving the problem. I think that that is the crux of the matter. When we get down to whatever methodology is employed, people can air their views, give their ideas, and try to find common ground that is acceptable and sensible so we can move forward. However, the way we have seen the situation evolve thus far has given no opportunity for that. The Government has the authority. The Opposition, like most other people, can only voice its opinion.

If the position is really to make genuine attempts to bring about a resolution to this problem—understanding that it is going to be an ongoing situation, and that we must find ways that can be sustained and accepted that will end up assisting the wellbeing of our society rather than putting it at risk—then, Madam Speaker, I contend that it is something that must be thought through very carefully.

However, we are not at the very beginning. There has been much debate. There has also been much talk among individuals, former parliamentarians, and some of us who are still here. I am not certain, but I would want to believe, Madam Speaker, that the same Immigration Review Team that has produced reports from its own research and discussions has had the benefit of other discussions in which you and I have participated over the years during various reviews.

Most of us will have a handle on what the situation is generally; but I come back to the Motion. If we wish to bring resolution to the problem, then some things have to be done differently. That is our contention.

We looked to the Motion specifically because we had no idea what was going on. We were not able to discern exactly how the course of events would unfold. The first resolve clause of the Motion reads: “BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Legislative Assembly does hereby condemn and censor the actions of the Governor in Cabinet in making the recent grants of Caymanian Status.”

Some may say that the words used in the Motion are a bit far reaching. However, Madam Speaker, the kind of representation we suddenly have warrants at least that we stop and think about how to proceed. Therefore, we have come to this point. We have the Motion and we will simply have to hear what comes after it. I want to lay the platform for the Motion so that it is crystal clear. This is not about us and the Government. Neither is it about who does what, who gets to do what, or who does not have an opportunity to do something. This is about the people and their concerns. I daresay that at this point in time we too represent the people.

Madam Speaker, I spoke a little about the possible implications to some core Government services, and I spoke generally about social pressures that might occur. There are some economic factors to take into consideration. Therefore, the second resolve clause of the Motion reads: “AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Legislative Assembly acknowledges the far reaching implications of the unilateral and wholesale grant of Caymanian Status by the Governor in Cabinet to thousands of persons in one fell swoop.”

There is a little more to say about that.

We have heard in recent times that these people are already here, so for them to acquire Caymanian status does not change the landscape at all. On close examination, however, that is absolutely not the case. It does not, on its own, tell us whether the numbers end there or whether there are a number of dependants or other family connections involved—spouses, for example. That, alone, needs to be dealt with immediately, Madam Speaker.

I have not had the benefit of going through the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) line by line, but section 22(7) caught my eye. With your permission, Madam Speaker . . .

The Speaker: Please proceed accordingly.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It reads: “22(7) Any person under the age of eighteen years who –

“(a) is an illegitimate child of a person who possesses Caymanian status; and

“(b) has been ordinarily resident in the Islands for a period of three years immediately preceding the application, may apply to the Board for the grant of Caymanian status.”

What that tells me is this: If a person is granted status and that person has any number of illegitimate children under the age of 18 years, those individuals will have to be resident in the country for three years before they are eligible to apply for Caymanian status. If we look at cause and effect (if that is appropriate), how, then, are we going to say to an individual who has been resident here for three years and who wishes for his or her children (who may not be living in the country at this point in time) to apply for Caymanian status, ‘We are not going to let your child come here?’ It is not going to work like that. That, in itself, could speak to numbers in a different way.

We are not simply talking about status, because that is only one issue. The Law does not say that they shall be granted status. It says that the person may apply to the Board for Caymanian status. I respect that. But for them to have the opportunity to apply, they will have to have been residing here for at least three years. The question about section 22(7) of the Immigration Law is: Are there any implications to people being allowed to bring their children here? If there are children under 18, the vast majority of them would be of school age. If they have left school but are under 18, we are talking about work permits if they are going to legally reside in the country before they can apply for status.

I raise this point simply to say that we cannot deal with the situation blindly without examining such circumstances as this.

I think there is another such situation in section 21.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, are you seeking the Chair's indulgence?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker, just for a second.

If we move again to the Immigration Law (2003 Revision), section 21(1) reads: “21(1) After the 15th October, 1992, any person under the age of eighteen years who is the legitimate child, step-child or adopted child of a person who possesses Caymanian status shall, for the purposes of this Law, himself possess Caymanian status and shall continue to possess such status unless and until he loses it under any other provision of this Law.”

There may be other provisions in the Law that speak of the individual having status until age 18 and then having to deal with the situation on his or her own. However, Madam Speaker, let us be practical. Once a child possesses Caymanian status he must automatically be permitted to reside in the Islands. There is no question there. If a child lives here from age five until age 18, no one can tell that child he has to leave the country. It is not going to happen.

When we examine that circumstance together with the one I mentioned from section 22(7), we see that these are real factors that must be considered as part of the whole sphere when we look at these grants.

One might choose to say that situations such as these will not be problematic, that they will sort themselves out. Madam Speaker, any right-thinking person understands that that is absolutely not the case, and would not be the case. It depends totally on the numbers with which you are dealing. If you do not have the data when you are dealing with these grants, then it is very difficult to say with real conviction that they will cause no effect on the way life is at present.

Some people will think that in delivering this Motion I am only looking for obstacles, or looking to create problems. That is not the case. In my view, it is much better for us to be aware of these situations and to arm ourselves with knowledge. We would be much better off making attempts to be sure as we move forward, because, obviously, there is no turning back. The situation, which has not been dealt with for several years, is going to have to be dealt with now and on an ongoing basis. The two factors I have mentioned, along with the ability of Government's core services to cope with additional numbers in various areas (depending on what the needs are), must be considered.

Of course, it is very difficult to speak of natural justice, to speak of what we know is inherently right to do, and at the same time look at what obtains within society and strike the balance to satisfy everyone. We accept that. We accept that that is a difficult proposition, but it is one that must be grappled with continually. It is only through discussion and information-gathering that we can make the best decisions when we look at the way forward.

Madam Speaker, the third resolve clause of the Motion reads: "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly calls on the Governor in Cabinet to forthwith cease making grants of Caymanian Status pending the holding of widespread consultation with and approval by the electorate of the course of action taken by the Governor in Cabinet in this matter."

Madam Speaker, we have all dealt with motions and participated at some level in the crafting and drafting of motions. When you deal with a motion of this nature, you try to pack it with as much as you can to make sure that its purpose stands the best chance of being served. It is as simple as that.

The third resolve looks at what the Opposition believes is the best way forward. Fair play comes into play here (pardon the pun). I am fairly certain that we all have heard in recent times some type of complaint from an individual stating his or her case: 'Why did this person get status, having only been here for a certain period of time? Why can I not get it, when I have been here so much longer?'

Most of the public statements that we have heard regarding this matter lean toward the fact that there are so many people who have been here for such extended periods of time. That is something I acknowledged from the very beginning when I started speaking to this Motion. I think it is safe to comment that it is something we all accept. If we recognise that specific situation, then any solution we seek to bring about must deal specifically with the tenure that is involved. One has to develop a methodology that caters to the ability of everyone to pass through whatever system exists so that everyone will be looked at comparatively—by length of stay, by tenure. That is not the be-all and end-all of any criteria, we know that. We know that one has to be very conscious of developing criteria to satisfy oneself that those who are being allowed to become the closest thing to what we could call citizens of this country are worthy of being allowed that privilege, but who are also, and who will continue to be, productive citizens and not impediments to society.

Madam Speaker, when we speak in the third resolve of ceasing these grants of status until such time as we have widespread consultation and approval by the electorate, we are saying that if there is legislation on the way—as the Leader of Government Business has said—we have to assume that such legislation would encompass the tools and the wherewithal to deal with the situation I just put forward.

If you simply deal with names, you cannot know whether an individual is 10th in line, 110th in line or 5,010th in line. That is the point I wish to make. If the grants, in most instances, were made on the grounds of residence (as I believe the case to be), then our contention is: Bring the legislation! Let us all debate it and thrash it out and come to some conclusion about that part of the process. There will be other situations, and we know that; but the majority of these grants will have been made on the grounds of residence.

At that point in time, we could all have the benefit of the real numbers involved, and of the potential situations that might occur (such as those about which I have just spoken) which the Law as it exists now would allow. We have to anticipate and deal with those. If we were able to deal with the situation in that fashion within the Law, if having obtained the statistics we knew the numbers with which we were dealing, we would be able to look consciously at what rate of entrance the society could reasonably stand by way of a type of quota on an annual basis.

Madam Speaker, I saw the first Draft Report from the Immigration Review Team. I believe there was a recommendation for an up-the-ladder situation. I cannot remember the date exactly, so I will speak in a hypothetical fashion. There was a type of recommendation that suggested, perhaps, between ten and fifteen years. Once that criterion was met (that is, length of stay), the person was to be granted permanent residence. Then, as soon as that time had passed, the person was able to move into a situation of acquiring Caymanian status. It would not necessarily be brought to the level of being a simple administrative affair, but the tenure of permanent residence would certainly dictate how easily the status was granted to that person once the time had passed.

In my view, there is absolutely no way that we can fail to consider the fact that the granting of status has to be staggered. You cannot even consider failing to stagger the situation simply because there has been so much inactivity in that area for such a long period of time. The numbers are simply too large, compared to our entire population.

Madam Speaker, if you or I were foreign nationals in the Cayman Islands—you, with your professional qualifications, and I, a hard-working person making a decent living and looking after my family—and we knew that once we had justified our existence in society, once we had been here for a certain period of time and contributed the way we normally would we would get some security, and after another period of time some extended security, we would not be uncomfortable. The uncertainty has been our biggest problem, in my view.

If we can get to the point where the legislation deals with that, we can look at the numbers and create reasonable quotas.

I have to pause here, Madam Speaker, because I heard a caller on the radio yesterday referring to a statement made by the Honourable Leader of Government Business. I cannot quote verbatim, but I am fairly certain I will not be out of sync with what was said.

The situation posed was that, even now, if there is a quota of 300 grants to be made annually by the Immigration Board, they may have more than 300 applications. At the same time, they are only granting 100 or 150. That was, in effect, what the Leader of Government Business said. Using that information, the person who called in said, "Well, if you look at the numbers, and if no matter how many people apply they are only granting 100 or 150 annually, it will take some people 40, 50, or 60 years to be granted status."

I am certain that that is not what the Leader of Government Business meant. I simply do not know how it could be the case that there is a possibility of 300 grants and they are only doing 150 for the year. I do not know whether this occurs at the Board with the applications they get. God knows it is hard to imagine that with all the applications they receive they would only find 150 deserving, but that would have to be considered as a possibility because I do not know any differently. Perhaps they physically do not get to deal with the process or bring it to completion within that period of time. I do not know exactly what the reasons might be.

If you have a fixed quota of 6,000 individuals (and I am using that same 6,000, whether that is the case or not), and if you accept that as each year goes by a certain number will be added, that means it is an ongoing process. Still, you have 6,000 fixed in the pasture—6,000 cows that you have to take care of.

Madam Speaker, I saw a surprised expression on your face. That was not what I meant.

The Speaker: I was just making sure that I heard "cows".

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes.

The Speaker: All right.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I was not making light of the situation. I was simply putting the picture together. That is all I was doing. I certainly do not look at people as cows—nothing like that.

I was only saying that you know you have a fixed number of people, and you have a record of their length of stay. Certainly, they could not all have come here on the same day; it simply does not work like that. They will have been here for certain lengths of time—say, over ten years. You will be able to categorise them by tenure, which would tell you when they would be eligible for status under whatever rules you set.

You could then choose a quota—that is, the number of these people that you know will be dealt with within a five-year period. In the meantime, there is another level of security of tenure with which they can feel satisfied. They know that once each year goes by, 'This is my turn; next year is the other one's turn.' In the meantime, the people who are coming on stream through their tenure would not bundle up to another 6,000.

If you have a quota, and state in your directives that the number of applications you have exceeds that quota; and if there is no real justification for a refusal (that is, a criminal record or something of that nature), then you must fill the quota. That is how those people would be taken care of. I do not profess that what I am proposing is perfect, but that is how I see it. After all of my thoughts and discussions about it, I would think this is the most acceptable way. Whatever the policies are, via the Law or policy directives, you will know how you are going to accommodate people coming into the country as other people come on stream, and how many you want to facilitate to create balance and a sense of direction.

That is, in general, what we think the way forward should be. If it is done like that, Madam Speaker, I believe that, although you will not satisfy everyone—and this is one of those circumstances that will certainly not satisfy everyone—you will find the most acceptable way to deal with it.

There is a very important thought here: What we cannot have in this country—because it is the perfect formula for disaster—is one set of people feeling that they should have more rights than another set of people, even though they are afforded the same rights. In order for that not to happen we have to accept that there will be an integration process. That is already happening around us, but it must be done in orderly fashion so that you do not have such friction all the time. It is our view that it can be done.

If we were to go about it in that way, no one would feel that someone slipped ahead of them in the queue and was dealt with in more fair a fashion. That is what I am saying.

Madam Speaker, the fourth resolve clause reads: "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT section 20 of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) be amended to restrict the ability of the Governor in Cabinet to grant Caymanian Status so as to limit such grants by the Governor in Cabinet to six per annum."

Accepting that we do not have an ideal situation at present, we are proposing a way forward that we believe the good people of the Cayman Islands will accept. This last resolve clause refers to the Immigration Law (2003 Revision), section 20(d)—Caymanian Status. It reads: “20. (d) A person shall, for purposes of this Law, possess Caymanian status if the Governor, in his opinion finding special reason for so doing, grants such status to him.”

If we look under the Definition section, the term “Governor” is defined as the “Governor in Council” (Cabinet), formerly Executive Council. Therefore, it is the Governor in Council (Cabinet) who would grant status to an individual, having found special reason for doing so. Madam Speaker, this is perhaps the most contentious point. We hold the view that the spirit of this section of the Law, and its intent, was to use a window from English common law, that in case any special circumstances occurred that any other section of the Law did not accommodate, then this was the way out. That is our opinion, not only after thinking it through ourselves but in speaking to . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, by virtue of Standing Order 32(6) you have now spoken for one hour and you have one hour remaining.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As I was saying, that section of the Law was put there so that, if no other section could accommodate a specific circumstance with which the Governor in Council (Cabinet) needed to deal, then this was to be the way out. I do not believe at all that the intent was to use that section in the manner in which it has been used in this instance.

Madam Speaker, this resolve clause speaks of limiting the number of grants. We would not want to go so far as to say strike it out so that it could not happen at all. The reason we chose the figure six was that, historically, it appears that no more than that number has ever been granted on an annual basis. In the past, we have heard of former attorneys general and governors being granted status by Cabinet. I think we may also have heard on the odd occasion of sports personalities who represent the country who have had problems travelling. Therefore, we hold the view that we should leave the window in place, but limit it to six. In doing so, we would make a commitment to the country that, from this time on, we are going to handle the situation in a different manner. It would send the clear message that we have attempted to bring resolution to the situation that exists now, and that it will be looked at on a continuing basis and not be left to get to this point again.

Perhaps the Law itself (whenever that comes) should contain a section calling for specific time periods for review of certain circumstances and for reports to be tabled in this Legislative Assembly. The country cannot afford to get to this point again. This has to be a lesson learned to ensure that it does not happen again. We could sit here today and call a slew of names and say whose fault it is, but this would not change the fact that we have to deal with it.

We have outlined the Motion, Madam Speaker. The fourth resolve clause speaks of six grants per annum.

I want to clarify something. There was a headline in the Caymanian Compass a few days ago based on a press release that we put out entitled, “PPM wants Status Grants Limited to Six.” People who had not read the article could have construed from the headline that when we said in the Motion that we wanted to limit the grants made by the Governor in Council (Cabinet) to six, that that statement applied to the entire number of grants on an annual basis—it did not.

The press release itself clarified the situation, so let it not be misunderstood. It would be ludicrous for us even to think of that number as an annual total! It would make absolutely no sense, because the numbers are huge. We know that it cannot be dealt with in that fashion for any sensible resolution to come about.

Madam Speaker, in presenting this Motion our purpose, our reasoning, and the way the Motion has been worded, has been explained. What I have said will leave room for any following debate as to the merits or demerits of the Motion. I will listen carefully to the debate so that when it is finished I can do my winding-up, and then we will take the vote.

Based on what the Motion calls for in its resolve clauses, I would not expect the Government to support it. Suffice it to say, that as representatives of the people, and for our purposes and intentions, we felt this vehicle necessary. We will hear how the debate goes and see what moves on from here. Even if what we propose is not agreed, what cannot be said is that we have not made serious attempts to provide an alternative that is acceptable and helpful, and that tries to find a way forward that is satisfactory to the people.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: At this time, I propose to take a morning break for ten minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 12.21 pm

Proceedings resumed at 12.39 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Is it the intention of the Honourable House to proceed with the debate, seeing what the hour is, or is it the wish of the House to take the luncheon break?

Is it to proceed?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Yes, Ma’am.

The Speaker: Thank you very much.

The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town. I should say, Honourable Member (so that you can gauge your comments), we would then take the luncheon break at 1.00 pm.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to speak on what is, perhaps, the most significant motion ever brought to this Honourable House—certainly the most significant one brought during the tenure of the current Legislative Assembly. The Motion is brought at a time when the majority of people in this country, and certainly all right-thinking people in this country, are outraged and gravely concerned about the future of these Islands and the implications—social and otherwise—that the reckless actions of the Government in the granting of Caymanian status to thousands of persons over the course of the past two months has had. Truly these have not even begun to be felt in this country.

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has said that he does not believe the Government is going to accede to the Motion. Perhaps because of my relative youth, I still have the hope that there are some on that side who have the courage to stand up for what they truly believe in. There are Members sitting across the Floor from me in this Honourable House who I know, from my discussions, interactions, and from working with them on the Immigration Review Team, understand full well the grave implications of this particular act.

I find it difficult to believe that the Second Elected Member for West Bay supports it. He is not here today, although he is a part of the supporting Back Bench of the Government. I know his concerns about the implications this sort of indiscriminate granting of status to thousands of persons is going to have for the upward mobility of young professionals like him.

I know that my good friend, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town (who is also a member of the Immigration Review Team), understands because we have discussed it.

It therefore boggles my mind that those two right-thinking members of the Government and its supporting Back Bench can accede to this mindless and reckless action on the part of the Government. I hope that one day (when we are all old and grey and have lived long enough) the dictates of political life no longer force us down a certain course of action and that we can talk about it. I hope there is still something to talk about, and that these beautiful and hitherto unspoiled rocks that we call the Cayman Islands—and that we love so dearly—are still around and in the kind of shape that will allow us the privilege of talking about these things.

Madam Speaker, it is my respectful submission that the actions of the Cabinet in conferring Caymanian status on a number of persons that has yet to be determined—but is certainly in the thousands—is unlawful. The Law and its policy, and the premise upon which it proceeds, is clear. The function of granting status in usual circumstances is one that belongs to the Immigration Board as established under the Immigration Law (2003 Revision). The function of Cabinet is to give directions to that Board and to prescribe a quota for the grants of status.

Section 20(d) of the Law (to which the Leader of the Opposition earlier referred) is there to deal with unusual circumstances, as he quite correctly said. The language is quite clear. It says that the Governor in Cabinet may grant status for special reasons—not any reason. There must a special reason. When Government seeks—and continues to seek (or so the Leader of Government Business says)—to confer grants of status indiscriminately on thousands of persons in this community, that is an unlawful act. Cabinet has exceeded its authority and its power under the Law. It has arrogated to itself the function of the Immigration Board, and that is unlawful.

I am here to tell all Honourable Members of this House, as well as the listening public, that someone is going to challenge that—someone who has been here for significant periods of time and who has not been granted status and who, in the ordinary course of events, would likely have got it had the proper procedure and process been followed. In my view, that sort of individual would constitute an aggrieved person. He or she would be entitled to stand before the local court to bring an action, and to prosecute it. This is going to happen! When it does happen, all these grants of status are going to come crumbling down. If we think we have a mess now in the line down by the police station over the course of the past four or five days, wait until it is determined that these grants were unlawful in the first place. What will this do to the worthy persons who did get the benefit of the grant?

I make it quite plain: There are many, many persons who have been granted status as a result of this exercise—unlawful though it has been, in my view. When you are thinking about whether or not to support this Motion, Honourable Members on the other side, this will be your last chance to do something that is right, to wash . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Member . . .

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Sorry, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Please address your comments through the Chair so that we can remove any element of personality conflict. I should be most grateful.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am trying my best to be respectful.

This is the last chance, Madam Speaker, for Honourable Members of this House to wash some of the blood of this country off their hands, and, if not to redeem themselves, perhaps to mitigate the damage that this has done and is going to do to the social harmony in this country—to the education system, the social system, and the health care system, just to name a few.

You know, Madam Speaker, I have listened to the Leader of Government Business castigate the Members of the Opposition, calling us hypocrites and worse over the airwaves. I cannot even say I listened with dismay, because I have come to accept that this is the norm coming from him. He says that we had the opportunity to involve ourselves in this process but did not do so. He says that behind the scenes we are egging people on and having our friends in the civil service and other operatives put names forward. He did say that.

Now, I cannot see into the minds and hearts of all Honourable Members here, but I know them well. I am not going to stand here and say that I know as a matter of fact that not one of them has engaged in any of this; but I can tell you that it would blow my mind because we have discussed this at length. I need this Honourable House and the listening public to understand that the Leader of Government Business approached the Leader of the Opposition and said (and he was speaking, in that instance, only to the two of us) that we should put forward 30 names from the district of George Town to be considered as part of the special dispensation.

Again, I do not know where the special dispensation comes from. I know I am digressing for a moment, but I have searched this Law inside out and it does not confer on Cabinet, or anyone else, the right to special dispensation. For this "special dispensation" he said we should put forward 30 names for the district of George Town and he could virtually guarantee that those 30 persons would be granted Caymanian status.

Madam Speaker, we represent 20,000 in George Town. We take the view that we do not represent only those who are able to vote. When one is elected, one represents the constituency. Who has made me God, that I can decide which of the many, many deserving residents in George Town who do not yet have Caymanian status should be preferred as part of this "special dispensation" process? That is the question that the Leader of the Opposition and I asked each other. How do we determine that? What happens to all the others who have been here for long periods as well who are equally or in some instances more deserving? For that reason—and that reason alone—we quickly determined that we were going to have no part in this process.

When we later met with the rest of the parliamentary Opposition to go through the whole thing, we came to the same view collectively. That is what is inherently wrong with what has been done: There have been no published criteria. There is no basis put forward as to why John Brown gets status, but not Mary Smith.

What is the basis on which people are conferred status? I am not asking this question. I know this as a matter of fact: There are operatives. I have not seen any since this week started, I must say, but there are operatives going around collecting names. I can tell you as a matter of fact that not only are there persons who have been granted Caymanian status in this most recent dispensation who no longer live here, there are persons who have never visited these Islands who have been given Caymanian status in this last lot!

There is a Jamaican lady who visits my helper, who came there this morning. Her husband lives in Jamaica with the children, and her children—who have never even visited the Cayman Islands—received status in this last lot. There are persons—and if anyone challenges me I will publish the names because I have them right here—who have been granted Caymanian status, and one, at least, was in jail at the time in our prison here. There is at least one individual, whose name I have, who has been declared persona non grata. He no longer resides here, obviously. He has resided in the Turks and Caicos Islands for the last five years, but his name is on the list. There are persons who used to work here whose work permits were refused, and who moved off these Islands. One individual currently lives in Miami and has been there for the last two years. He has been granted Caymanian status.

The Leader of Government Business comes on the radio and the television and talks about the blatant lies of the Opposition and says that no one with criminal convictions has been granted Caymanian status. If that is the case, he should publish the list. I do not mean a sanitised one, or one on which he has performed cosmetic surgery—I mean the real McCoy!

In my respectful view, such a list will never be forthcoming. This country will never know the true number of persons to whom Caymanian status has been granted. At this stage, I am not referring to those to whom the Honourable Leader of the Opposition referred, who will be entitled to status as a matter of course under sections 21 and 22 of the Immigration Law.

To add insult to injury, last Sunday I attended (in the company of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the Honourable Member for East End) a large church service held by the United Church, at which their moderator was present (a moderator's communion service). There must have been 600 persons there. When the Honourable Leader of Government Business was called upon to accept, on behalf of the people of the Cayman Islands, a mahogany lectern and a Bible for display in the Honourable Legislative Assembly, he chose that occasion to tell the United Church that, regardless of what people might say, the grants of status by Cabinet were right and were going to continue.

Not only do we not know how many people have been granted status, we now know that more grants are going to happen, unless the attitude has changed since Sunday.

Madam Speaker, I take this occasion to call upon the Government to produce an unaltered, unredacted list—one that has not undergone cosmetic surgery—and to do so forthwith. The people of this country deserve to know who their new fellow Caymanians are, at least.

Point of Order

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services, please state your point of order.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, the Member has been saying that persons who are in prison, persons who are criminals, and persons who are not in the Islands have been granted Caymanian status. Since he is calling for the Government to publish a list, I think it is his responsibility to table such a list. It would be good for this Honourable House and for the country as a whole, and he should do so.

Madam Speaker, when one charges the Cabinet—which is the highest body in the Land—and implies that it has knowingly done such a thing as he is saying, it is indeed very serious. Therefore, he should produce a list.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister.

Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town, are you in a position to substantiate your allegations made thus far? Or would you wish for the luncheon break to be able to do so?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Madam Speaker. When I stand up here to say something, I know what I am saying.

Let me deal with one point the Honourable Minister made which is untrue. I never suggested that the Government knowingly did this. That is an important part of my whole argument—it has been indiscriminately done.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you may so do, but if you are in a position to do so at present, could you make the requisite request for laying upon the Table and then move on to the next point so we are not dealing with two points?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I do not have a list. The Government has granted the status. I have the names of a number of . . .

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Order!

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: . . . persons in the categories I described earlier. If they want me to call those names on the Floor of this Legislative Assembly, I will do so right now:

- Status granted while in prison: Jonathan Karl Campbell.
- Person who has been declared persona non grata, and who currently resides in Turks and Caicos Islands: Alfred Pink.
- Person who has been granted Caymanian status following the refusal of his work permit two years ago and who no longer resides in the Island: Albert Chin.

By no means do I pretend to have a comprehensive list. I have examples of real people.

I hope that satisfies the Honourable Minister.

The Speaker: Thank you, Second Elected Member for George Town.

It is 1.02 pm. We will take a luncheon break and reconvene at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.02 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.06 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town, the Member speaking, has made serious allegations involving the Cabinet. We are having that matter checked and clarified by the Cabinet Secretary.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, is this a point of order or not?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I am going to ask you to . . .

The Speaker: Order! One Member should speak at a time.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I am on my feet and speaking at this point. If the Honourable Leader of Government Business wishes to interrupt, he must raise a point of order; otherwise he is not entitled to speak.

The Speaker: As I understood it, Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town, when I caught his eye, the Leader of Government Business was rising on a point of procedure and clarification. It is in that vein that I am entertaining his submission.

Please proceed Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As I was saying, the Member who just interrupted has made serious allegations against the Cabinet involving His Excellency the Governor, the Attorney General, the Chief Secretary, the Honourable Financial Secretary and, of course, the Elected Ministers. We are having those allegations checked, and this will probably take 20 more minutes. I ask you to suspend proceedings until the Cabinet Secretary arrives. We have asked him to clarify this matter.

The Speaker: I am entirely at the wish of the House.

The Second Elected Member for George Town, do you have a point of order?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, that is entirely out of order. They can check as much as they want, but I have the right to speak in this Honourable House.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, I shall put the question.

All those in favour of an adjournment for 20 minutes only, please say Aye. Those against, please say No.

Ayes and one No.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.

Agreed: That a 20-minute suspension be taken to clarify a matter that has arisen in the records of this Honourable House.

The Speaker: I should say that I expect to be back in the Chamber with a quorum in 20 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 3.08 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.56 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

I recognise the Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, when we took the break, I had asked for a suspension of the House in order to address a serious allegation made by the Second Elected Member for George Town. He has made a very serious and damaging statement on the Floor of this Honourable House, one to the effect that the Cabinet of this country granted Caymanian status to a person in prison, namely, Jonathan Karl Campbell.

The Cabinet Secretary, Mr. Connor, has confirmed that there is no such person who has been granted Caymanian status. I have a letter that I am going to read into the records and lay upon the Table of this Honourable House. It is a statement from the Cabinet Secretary, and it reads: “This statement serves as confirmation that the Cabinet Office is in possession of the names of those persons who were granted Caymanian status by the Cabinet between June 17, 2003, and September 2, 2003. I, Orrett L. Connor, Cabinet Secretary, confirm that I have checked such list and have been unable to find the name, Jonathan Karl Campbell on this list.”

It is dated 17 September 2003.

I lay this, for the record, upon the Table of this Honourable House.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Can the Serjeant ensure that all Members have the appropriate copies for their perusal?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, the next person he named was one Mr. Alfred Pink. It is not true that Mr. Pink was deported. Mr. Pink has no criminal convictions against him. In June 2000, an investigation was conducted and he was arrested on suspicion of working outside of the terms and conditions contained in his work permit. The month after the Immigration Enforcement Section completed its investigation, he was issued with a warning letter. No charges were laid before the court; therefore, he was never convicted by Immigration.

He was advised by the Deputy Chief Immigration Officer at the time, Mr. Franz Manderson, to depart the Island, and that he could not return until a work permit was approved for him. He was a resident of the Cayman Islands for 15 years. On 4 June 2000, he departed the Cayman Islands. A work permit was approved for him from 23 May 2001, valid until May 2003, for GEK Construction.

Mr. Albert Chin and Mrs. Sharaine Chin have been residents in these Islands for 11 years. They own a home and qualify for Caymanian status. These are the facts.

Madam Speaker, as far as we are concerned, the Member has impugned the conduct and the character of the Cabinet. He should withdraw his allegations.

The Speaker: I have listened to the position of the Government after research done by the Cabinet Secretary. I now call upon the Second Elected Member for George Town to, first of all reply, and then to substantiate his allegations before I so rule.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

We have called upon the Government since 24 July to publish the list of all persons to whom Caymanian status has been granted by Cabinet.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, please make a statement within the realm of the response I gave you.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I am seeking to do that, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thus far you have failed. Thank you.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, without sight of a certified copy of the list, published and certified by His Excellency the Governor . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town, one minute please.

Out of an abundance of caution, please let me repeat my statement.

You made allegations earlier today, which you had every right to do. The Government has now responded after researching and acting on the advice of the Cabinet Secretary. The Chair is giving you, via the process of natural justice, an opportunity to respond to the allegation. There will be ample opportunity in the remaining one hour and 39 minutes if you wish to introduce new evidence. At this stage, I am asking you to respond to what the Government has said and for you to substantiate your allegations. Please proceed accordingly.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I am seeking to reply, but every time I start you interrupt me.

With the greatest of respect, the Honourable Minister stood there and said what he had to say without a whimper from anyone. I am trying to respond, but each time I try to do so, the Chair—with the greatest of respect—interrupts me. It is not fair.

Madam Speaker, I am going to start over.

We have called for the Government to publish the list time and time again. I do not believe, nor is this House entitled to believe . . .

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the Member . . .

The Speaker: Please state your point of order. Only one Member can . . .

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: [Addressing the Hon. Leader of Government Business] You cannot rise on a point of order during the course of a point of order. You should know that by now. Sit down!

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I will have order in this House from both sides! I shall not repeat that.

I am going to ask the Leader of Government Business and the Second Elected Member for the district of George Town to meet me in my office. I ask all other Members to stay here. This is an Honourable House of Parliament, and it shall so be conducted.

Proceeding suspended at 4.05 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.15 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. The House is resumed. I recognise the Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the short adjournment, I was seeking, on your invitation, to respond to what the Honourable Leader of Government Business had said in relation to these three names. I am going to be brief and say that in the absence of a published list, Members on this side of this Honourable House have to rely on information given to us from sources we regard as reliable. That is what I did.

I will stand by what I have said until the day I see a published list, and His Excellency the Governor has certified that it is the original list, unredacted and unaltered, cosmetically or otherwise.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town.

As a final point of clarity, are you saying that based on the information supplied from what are, in your opinion, reliable sources, you have come to a conclusion with the three names that are now on record? Is that a correct interpretation?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I have related the information that I was given.

The Speaker: Thank you. I am obliged.

You still have one hour and 39 minutes remaining in your . . .

Honourable Leader of Government Business?

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, on a point of order. I see that the Member is forcing a fight. He has made a very serious allegation, which, as I said, we believe impugns our conduct. In fact, he claimed that what he said was a fact. Now he is saying that he was reliably informed.

The Member wants a fight here. I am not going to accede to that. I know what he wants. I have the right to call for that withdrawal, because he did not lay any proof. As a lawyer, he knows that. We have given him a statement from a constitutional person in this country dismissing his claim.

Madam Speaker, if we call on the Member to withdraw and he does not, and you put that question, it will cause another fight. Members of the Opposition will then go on the warpath and the country will be that much less settled again. We can substantiate our case. It has been substantiated thus far, and I promised the country a list, by way of a statement. That is what I am going to do later in this Meeting, when it has been compiled.

As I said, we do not want to reach a place where the Member is suspended; we want them facing us.

Perhaps we should leave things alone and let him continue to hang himself with the reliable sources he claims he has.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, one hour and 39 minutes remain in which to continue your debate on the Motion presently on the Floor of this Honourable House.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, what was the point of order?

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you know full well that if you are going to ask that question, it has to be done in the duration of the presentation. Please proceed.

Would you wish a few minutes? How many, Honourable Member?

[Pause]

The Speaker: All right.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, before we took the luncheon adjournment, the Honourable Minister of Health Services stood on a point of order and insisted that I produce the names that have caused this small controversy this evening. The Honourable Leader of Government Business has now sought to throw doubt on the veracity of statements I made in relation to those three names.

I have reflected on the audacity of the Honourable Minister for Health Services in raising that issue, because this now relates to a matter about which I personally know. I have a brother-in-law who happens to be a doctor at the hospital. He has been married to my sister for some seven years, but he has not been here quite two years yet. He received a personal phone call from the Honourable Minister of Health Services, who congratulated him on being a new Caymanian—having first enquired about his correct name, because he did not even know that. They can talk about whether my information is good, reliable or misleading . . .

Point of Order

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order, Honourable Minister of Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, the Member is not telling the whole truth. I called his brother-in-law to ask him if he would be interested in my putting his name forward to be considered for the grant of Caymanian status. This was done in other instances. I believed that it was serving a public cause, since his specialisation is obstetrics and gynaecology, an area of medicine that is very much needed. I knew he was married to the sister of the Second Elected Member for George Town, who is a Caymanian as far as I know. I knew they had a family and I wanted to know whether I could assist that family by giving his brother-in-law the comfort and the reassurance that we wanted him around here.

If that is a sin, Madam Speaker, then indeed I am condemned; but that is the truth of it. When Cabinet accepted that recommendation, I called to tell him that Cabinet had favourably considered the proposal. It did not have anything to do with the length of time he has been here.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I am grateful to the Honourable Minister for that clarification. It has saved me having to say what I said, but it does not for one moment alter the principle that I have been seeking to enunciate for some two or three weeks about this whole process. Perhaps I may be forgiven for not regarding the act as being quite as benevolently motivated as the Honourable Minister has sought to persuade us it is. That is just me, Madam Speaker.

You see, persons like my dear brother-in-law, whom I love like a brother, are good and able people. In due course, if they do their time and pay their dues in this country, they should come to be entitled to Caymanian status. However, you do not—brother-in-law of mine or not—walk off a plane eighteen months ago and ensconce yourself in a job in Cayman and find yourself handed Caymanian status. Must I applaud that? No, Madam Speaker, it is fundamentally wrong!

We are at a point now, I believe, where all Caymanians—the indigenous ones as well as those who have come to be Caymanian through a grant of status—are bound to feel that the closest thing to citizenship any person in this country can enjoy has been trivialised, debased, and devalued. It has nothing to do anymore with how much time you spend here, or what kind of contribution you have made to this community. It has nothing to do with those fundamental things that guided the Immigration Board when it performed the function of determining whether someone should be granted Caymanian status or not. That point seems to have eluded the Honourable Members of Cabinet.

Earlier in my debate, I referred to what I considered to be the usurpation by Cabinet of a principal function of the Immigration Board by using or abusing . . .

Point of Order

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs, please state your point of order.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the accusation that the Cabinet is usurping the powers of the Immigration Board, which is empowered by the Immigration Law, is, again, a very serious charge. If he refers to section 20(d) of the Law, the Member, being a lawyer, will note that the Governor . . .

The Speaker: Are you referring to the Immigration Law (2003 Revision)?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: The Immigration Law (2003 Revision), section 20(d).

The Speaker: Thank you.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: It says: “A person shall, for purposes of this Law, possess Caymanian Status if the Governor, in his opinion finding special reason for so doing, grants such status to him.”

Again, Madam Speaker, it says, “the Governor, in his opinion.” It does not say the opinion of the Member or the opinion of the Opposition, but His opinion, “finding special reason.” For the Member now to suggest that the Cabinet has usurped the functions of the Immigration Board or the Law, is to mislead this House, since that Member is aware of the Law.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, thank you. Perhaps you may wish to refer to the interpretive section of the Immigration Law, which gives the definition of “Governor,” in order to make the point clear for all and sundry.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, may I assist, because I really do not want . . .

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order!

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I am going to make a concession, Madam Speaker, which will probably resolve the problem.

The Speaker: One second, please—I have asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services (who has a copy of the statute in his hand) to refer to it. I would hope that having reached this level of his career he would have no difficulty in so doing.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: I hope not.

[Laughter]

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I would like to bring a little humour to the atmosphere, as the learned Second Elected Member for the district of George Town has done. Now that he has played the trick—and it has backfired—he thinks that humour will dissipate the serious charges he has made, which he must now withdraw.

“‘Governor’ means ‘Governor in Council’”, and in this particular case it means Governor in Cabinet. It means the whole Cabinet. Therefore, I would ask that the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town withdraw his remarks that the Cabinet has usurped the powers of the Immigration Board or the Immigration Law.

Again, Madam Speaker, the special reasons have nothing to do with residency requirements.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister of Community Services.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, the Honourable Minister is going to law school now.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order!

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I am prepared to make the concession that in my view, my submission, or my opinion, section 20(d) does not entitle the Government to do what it has done. That is my view, and I am entitled to hold that view. He might not agree. I do not expect him to.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, we have reached the hour of adjournment. May I have a motion for the adjournment under the appropriate Standing Order?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I suppose this will be the only thing that we agree on.

Before moving the adjournment, I would like to alert Honourable Members that it is the intention to carry on business until 7.00 pm tomorrow, God willing.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: They really test my patience, you know.

I beg to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until tomorrow, Thursday, 18 September 2003, at 10:00 am.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that this Honourable House do stand adjourned until Thursday, 18 September 2003, at 10am.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.

At 4.34 pm the House stood adjourned until Thursday, 18 September 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
18 SEPTEMBER 2003
10.30 AM
Second Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of the Cayman Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together. Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever, Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make his face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.33 am

The Speaker: Please be seated.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: I have not received any notice of apologies for this morning.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

The Agriculture and Industrial Development Board Financial Statements for the two months ended
28 February 2002

Housing Development Corporation Financial Statements for the two months ended
28 February 2002

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

I wish to table the closing Financial Statements for the two former statutory financial institutions, the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board and the Housing Development Corporation, for the two-month and eight-month periods, respectively, that ended 28 February 2002.

There was no activity under the Housing Development Corporation (HDC) since that portfolio was sold. However, the Corporation assumed responsibility for the Government Guaranteed Home Mortgage scheme on 1 February 2002.

The Accountancy Investigation and Discipline Board (AIDB) which was effectively in operation for a two-month period granted only five student loans amounting to $104,000. In addition, the Board continued to administer the Government Guaranteed Student Loan Scheme, as well as the administration of the government scholarship funds.

With the closure of these institutions in February 2002, the Cayman Islands Development Bank, the Islands' first development bank, became operational on 1 March 2002. The powers and functions, as well as the assets and liabilities of the former AIDB and HDC, were transferred and vested in the Cayman Islands Development Bank. Madam Speaker, as you will recall, the principal function of the Cayman Islands Development Bank, as stated in the Law, is to mobilise and provide finance for; and promote and facilitate the expansion and strengthening of the economic development of the Islands, the particular reference to the Industrial Tourism and Housing sectors, as well as the development of the Human Resources.

During its first eighteen months of operation the Bank strove to fulfil this mandate by building on the foundations of the former statutory financial institutions.

A number of strategic objectives were put in place and were attained, including the enlargement of the Bank's loan portfolio, the increase in its operational efficiencies, the relocation to a more accessible and attractive site, as well as a site or offices that are condoned for the easement and happiness of staff, and of course, the development of a plan to achieve self-sufficiency within the short-term. Madam Speaker, this is a good time for this information to come since the Opposition has been saying that the Government has done nothing for Caymanians, particularly the lambasting that I, as the Minister for Tourism, took during the inauguration of the People's Progressive Movement (PPM).

As at the end of August 2003, the total assets of the Bank stood at $6.4 million with a loan portfolio of over $5.4 million. Total approval of 133 loans with a value of over $5.39 million as at 12 September 2003, were recorded. Of the total number approved 43 per cent were for student loans (human resources); something they said we were not doing.

Twenty-six per cent was for small businesses, all Caymanians, no status holders either. So they cannot complain about that. I figure that would get some sort of response from the Member from East End who does not know when to keep his mouth shut.

Thirty-one per cent for mortgage financing – another need for Caymanians who they said we were not helping. Student loans received were some 58 at $1.2 million. Small businesses, such as buses, taxis for tours, and various other business opportunities for young, and otherwise, Caymanians – something they said was not happening.

Mortgage loans, $43 million, in addition to other consolidated loans which totals $5.3 million. So, Madam Speaker, in spite of the rhetoric and unfounded accusations of the PPM at their inauguration, the facts again bear that they cannot tell the truth.

A Report of the Cayman Islands Development Bank's activities during its first ten months of operations will be tabled shortly. At that time I will further outline the goals and objectives which are in keeping with the Bank's vision to become an efficient, successful and profitable lending institution. The community will be enhanced by optimising the use of scarce resources through the implementation of meaningful development programmes and projects for the benefit of all its stake holders and all our Caymanian people.

Madam Speaker, I lay these Reports on the Table of this Honourable House. Thank you.

The Speaker: So ordered.

The Honourable Second Official Member.

The Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) (Amendment) Bill, 2003 - White Paper

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House a Discussion Draft Bill for a Law to Amend the Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) Law (2000 Revision) to enhance the ability of the Cayman Islands to offer international cooperation in criminal matters.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, just to briefly introduce by saying that the purpose of the proposed law is to enhance the ability of the Cayman Islands to provide assistance in criminal matters to overseas authorities.

In all criminal matters the Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) Law, as it currently stands, only allows for assistance in drug trafficking matters. The objective is that when this Law is so amended by this Honourable House it will cover all crimes and not just drug matters. Most importantly, it will allow the Cayman Islands to be able to provide assistance at the very early stage, that is, when investigations are ongoing.

As it is now, we are somewhat impotent, for want of a better word, to provide assistance at the very early stage. In the past that was what attracted criticisms of these Islands and other jurisdictions. So, I am hoping that we will agree to the passage of this Bill in this Honourable House since it will alleviate that problem.

I intend to speak in more detail when the Bill comes up for debate at a later stage.

Thanks, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member, have you already tabled it? The Clerk does not seem to be in possession of it.

Thank you.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS

The Speaker: I recognise the Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Question No. 81

No. 81:Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration when will a Bill be brought to the Legislative Assembly to amend the Succession Law in accordance with Private Member's Motion No. 7/01 passed by the Legislative Assembly on 15 March 2001.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, subsequent to the passage of the above-mentioned Motion, the Legislative Drafting Department set about attempting to draft the relevant amendment to the Succession Law. However, it was soon realised that it was not practicable to amend the Succession Law to the required extent in order to give effect to the spirit of the Motion.

Accordingly, the Department, after consultation with the Attorney General and the Ministry of Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs, has drafted a stand alone piece of legislation, a Bill to create a "Status of Children Law" which will reflect the spirit and intent of the Motion.

It will, inter alia, address the issue of succession of an illegitimate child to the estate of the father. It will also make provisions for paternity of an illegitimate child to be proved in a number of ways, including by the consent of the father.

The Bill will be taken to Cabinet shortly, thereafter, it will be sent to the Legislative Assembly to be debated.

The Speaker: Are there any Supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 82

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

No. 82: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration what steps have been taken to restructure the Financial Reporting Unit (FRU) as undertaken by the Governor earlier this year?

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel Bulgin: Madam Speaker, since the announcement by His Excellency the Governor there have been several meetings of the Anti-Money Laundering Steering Group (AMLSG) which has been working on an amendment to the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (PCCL) to restructure the Financial Reporting Unit (FRU).

The AMLSG is comprised of His Excellency the Governor, as Chairman, the Financial Secretary, the Attorney General, the Commissioner of Police, the Collector of Customs, the Managing Director of the Monetary Authority and the Assistant Financial Secretary 1.

A draft Bill for the restructuring has been approved by Cabinet and is currently at the Legislative Assembly where it will be debated in this Meeting.

Honourable Members should be aware that as part of its deliberations and restructuring of the AMLSG consulted extensively with representatives of the private sector associations. At the time of the presentation of the Bill I will provide more details on its contents.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member, for the purpose of the record could you clarify whether it is the Assistant Financial Secretary or the Assistant Financial Secretary 1, as stated in the express format of your response?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Assistant Financial Secretary 1.

The Speaker: Thank you. Are there any Supplementaries?

The Second Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Supplementaries

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

There are many Supplementaries but the Honourable Member said that the Bill is coming in this Meeting of the House so I will reserve my questions for the substantive debate on the matter.

The Speaker: Thank you. Are there any other Supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next item of business.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Update on the Improving Teaching and Learning in the Cayman Islands (ITALIC) Project

The Speaker: I have received notice of a statement by the Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Roy Boddin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

On August 27 of this year, all government school teachers in the Cayman Islands received an update on the ITALIC Project. They also had the opportunity to hear from Dr. John Conyers from a school district in Chicago as to a similar project being implemented in the schools under his jurisdiction.

Dr. Conyers' visit was sponsored by IBM and I thank our strategic partner for their continuing support. It gives me great pleasure today to provide this Honourable House with an update on this very exciting project which was launched in November of 2002. Part of the Ministry's Five Point Platform School improvement through the ITALIC, the acronym for Improving Teaching and Learning in the Cayman Islands is considered a major part of the Ministry's commitment to modernising education and promoting our mission.

The creation of dynamic learning environments for all our students is finally becoming a reality. To date, 173 teachers have been trained in the Teacher Universe Programme. This programme involves training our teachers in the use of technology tools to deliver an integrated curriculum. Included in the 173 teachers are 35 teacher trainers who have been certified to train the remaining 50 per cent of the teaching service.

Every government school in Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac has at least one certified trainer. By June of 2004 all teachers, school inspectors and education officers will have been trained in the Teacher Universe Technology Integration course.

I must single out Mr. Herbert Crawford, Senior Education Officer with responsibility for School Improvement and Training, who has been particularly instrumental in ensuring that the training is organised, scheduled and delivered. He has taken on a primary role in the ongoing professional development of our educators and has himself become a certified Teacher/ Universe Trainer.

Through the ITALIC infrastructure project our schools are being equipped with wireless technology in every classroom in every school to allow access to online education resources and the Internet.

Our Cayman Islands learning village portal is being developed as teachers and Education Department personnel add resources, activities and lesson plans to be shared across our schools. In the near future Internet and Intranet access will allow schools, the Education Department, the schools inspectorate and the Ministry of Education to communicate with all stake holders in our Islands.

The Record Management System known as Star Student is being revised and re-developed to provide up-to-the minute information on the student body and to deliver access to timely and accurate statistics for planning and other purposes.

The Advocate Team, a dedicated group of senior experienced educators, meet every month to review progress and make decisions. They are now reviewing the Draft Information and Communications Technology Policy Document for schools, which includes the Internet use policy currently being used now, although it is in the draft stages.

We expect that a project manager who will be answerable to the advocate team will be appointed this week. When we began this project we emphasised that it had three parts: -

- o Training
- o Software; and
- o Hardware.

The training is well under way. A software advisory group will shortly be drawn from teaching and advisory staff with policies and procedures which will give teachers the maximum assistance in the use of support materials. Some hardware has been purchased, some labs have been upgraded but we are attempting to maximise the use of existing computers in our schools. Our overall commitment is that every student has access to a computer and the Internet.

The key to the success of this programme is our teachers. They are investing their personal time, energy and ideas into creating exciting and new ways to teach and motivate our students. I applaud them in their efforts and thank them for their continued dedication.

As Mark Vandoren said, "The art of teaching is the art of assisting discovery." Our teachers are demonstrating that they are all artists. The ITALIC programme must be sustained until all schools and all of our students, teachers and administrators are model users of technology. ITALIC must be extended to our Community College and also to the broader community so that all of our people will get the opportunity to upgrade their skills and prepare themselves for the 21st century.

Finally, Madam Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to extend to you and all the Honourable Members of this House an informal invitation to the ground breaking for the Prospect Primary school which will be held on Friday, 3 October at 10 am. I have instructed my Ministry to send formal invitations to you all.

I thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister.
The Member for North Side.

Short Questions—Standing Order 30(2)

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Under Standing Order 30(2), at your discretion may I ask the Honourable Minister one question?

The Speaker: Permission granted.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister is in a position to say if all staff members in the Education Department who will be involved in the ITALIC programme have been trained and if they have all been equipped with the wireless equipment.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, those who were conscientiously listening to my statement would have heard when I said—and I repeat—to date 173 teachers have been trained in the Teacher Universe Programme. I also went on to say it is recognised that every member is not trained so training is still continuing. We still have a significant number including about 173 more teachers left to be trained. To date, all personnel have not been trained and all of them have not been issued wireless equipment because the project, Madam Speaker, is a five- to six-year project and we just started in 2002.

I thank you.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Sir.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/03

Grants of Caymanian Status by the Governor in Cabinet

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town continuing with a remaining time of one hour 30 minutes.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker and good morning.

The Speaker: Good morning.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, when we took the evening adjournment, I was developing one of the submissions I made in my opening. The grants of Caymanian status in the present circumstances by Cabinet to a yet undetermined but clearly significant number of persons was unlawful and is unlawful. It continues because they have exceeded their authority under section 20(d) of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision), and they have usurped unto themselves the principal function of the Immigration Board. Madam Speaker, in the first part of my submission this morning, I will seek to demonstrate why I am of that view.

The Honourable Minister for Community Services made a very useful intervention yesterday afternoon because he caused my mind to focus on yet another aspect of this matter. Further, to add another plank to my argument that this action of Cabinet is not contemplated by the Law runs against the fundamental premise on which the Law proceeds and is, therefore, unlawful.

The point the Honourable Minister made—and he is absolutely right about that—is that when the Cabinet proceeds to grant status under section 20(d), having found, in their opinion, that there is a special reason for so doing, they need not have regard to the usual considerations which the Immigration Board is bound by Law and by the Directions to have regard to. He is absolutely right about that. However, Madam Speaker, that then brings into stark relief the reason why Cabinet is not entitled to use the power and authority which it has been accorded under section 20(d) of the Law in the indiscriminate and significant way in which it has done so.

You see, Madam Speaker, the Immigration Board, when considering whether or not to grant status to an individual, or a set of individuals, is required under Direction 24 to have regard to 11 different matters in determining whether or not to confer status. All of those Directions are aimed at one thing and that is to ensure that the grant of status to an individual(s) is in the overall best of the Cayman Islands, bearing in mind the social and economic and other considerations.

When Cabinet exercises that function of granting status they are not required by the Law or by the Directions to have regard to those matters. Therefore, it must follow that reasoning, in addition to others, that the ability and the exercise of that authority under section 20(d) is severely restricted and circumscribed.

The Law never contemplated what Cabinet has done, for if it had it would have said, and it is bound to have said that Cabinet must have regard to certain matters in deciding whether or not to grant status. Because the underlying premise of the Law—and it is not just the provision relating to the grant of status—is the protection and promotion of the interest of Caymanians. The whole Law is developed on that fundamental platform and that principal premise even in relation to the grant of work permits. Before you grant the permit to a foreigner you must be certain that some worthy and able Caymanian is not being prevented from getting that particular job. That is a fundamental premise on which this Law proceeds.

There is a provision which says that the Governor in Cabinet may grant status, if in his opinion the Cabinet finds special reasons for so doing. So, it is clear that provision is there for an unusual circumstance where there is a special reason. It is not there to give Cabinet the authority to make wholesale grants of status in the number of thousands. There is another reason, but before I go on let me indicate in a little more detail what matters the Immigration Board is bound by the Law and the Directions it takes into account in determining whether persons are granted Caymanian status. As a matter of Law, persons granted Caymanian status on the basis of long time residents must be here for 10 years.

Secondly, Direction 24 says: “24. The policy for the grant of Caymanian status shall include—

- (a) “that the grant of Caymanian status to any person shall not imply any obligations to permit the entry on temporary or permanent terms of servants, gardeners, etc., even if such persons may be in short supply within the Islands. . .”

Well, I am not going to press that one. It is not terribly relevant to the current circumstances.

- (b) “that persons seeking Caymanian status must be able to satisfy the Board that they have sufficient financial resources to support adequately the applicant and any dependents;”

I pause here to say that the lack of regard to that particular provision in the exercise of Cabinet recently is going to come to haunt us in ways that I fear even to contemplate.

- (c) “that Caymanian status shall not be granted to a person who has more than a spouse and three children under the age of eighteen years except in exceptional circumstances and at the Board’s discretion;”

The lack of regard for that provision is going to cause us major grief.

- (d) “the economic situation of these Islands and the due protection of persons already engaged in similar gainful occupation;”

In other words, be careful to ensure that when you grant status to this person or these individuals you are not displacing some Caymanian in the process.

- (e) “the advantage which the continued residence of the applicant or his family may afford to these Islands;”

- (f) “that there are no reasonable grounds for suspecting that the applicant uses or has been or is involved in illegal drugs;”

A police report should be received before consideration of the application. We really think that Cabinet had regard to police records before they made those grants of status.

- (g) “that the applicant has not had a background of subversive political activity, or of organising such activity, or is organising, causing or promoting racialism or any other illegal activities;”

- (h) “that the applicant has not been involved in financial problems, including bankruptcy or liquidations of companies or entities especially where creditors have not been repaid the whole of their debts;”

- (i) “that the Board receives directly and not through the applicant at least three good character references from respectable persons of Caymanian status as well as a bank reference;”

We really believe that any such references were provided to Cabinet when they granted these 2,000 or thereabout persons, status? If so, I would like them to say so when they get up to speak.

- (j) “that the Board . . .”

Well, that is the bit about putting a photograph in the paper. They clearly did not do that.

- (k) “the Board shall take account of the desirability of granting Caymanian status to applicants with different backgrounds and from different geographical areas, to maintain a suitable balance in the social and economic life of the country.”

Madam Speaker, the most ironic thing about these policy Directions . . . I know you know where they are derived from. They were derived from Cabinet. These are the policy Directions that Cabinet sends to the Immigration Board to say, “Listen guys, you need to take these important matters into account when you are deciding whether or not a person is worthy of being given Caymanian status. You also need to make sure that the implications to existing Caymanians are not the wrong kinds of implications”. So the Immigration Board is bound to consider these but Cabinet is not, and Cabinet has not, in the exercise of its authority under section 20 (d), had regard to those. That is my submission and I am waiting with bated breath to hear the response from the other side on how they seek to demonstrate that they have had regard to these matters when conferring these recent grants.

Madam Speaker, my second argument is that this exercise by Cabinet of their purported authority is unlawful. That is all to do with the precise language of section 20 (d) which says: “A person shall, for the purposes of this Law, possess Caymanian status if—

- (d) the Governor in Cabinet, in his opinion find special reason for so doing, grants such status to him,”

The operative and critically important words, as far as my submission is concerned are, “special reason for so doing.” In the past this section has been used to confer status on former Attorneys General, Governors, Commissioners of Police, certain sports persons who wished to represent the country and had performed capably but did not meet the other criteria - in any event, a very small number of persons. One can see why we would want to allow the Cabinet of the country to have the ability to exercise a certain discretion in circumstances, which the Law either does not contemplate or permit persons to get status. The reasons are principally that people would not meet the financial requirements set by the Board or they might not have been here for quite the 10 years. However, there are some good reasons why you would want to confer status on them. That is why the Motion itself does not seek to shut out the ability of Cabinet to grant status altogether but to limit it to six per year.

Madam Speaker, if we examine, "special reason" perhaps it is possible that there might be a special reason to contemplate granting status to persons in a certain category. If the numbers were not unduly large one could even say that if Cabinet had said that persons who have been here for periods exceeding 10 years who meet certain other requirements; good character, significant enough investment in the country, then special reason would have to be that they made a significant contribution to the country. There is some good reason why the Immigration Board cannot do this, which is going to be hard for me to think of. One could possibly contemplate those kinds of circumstances but that is not what transpired here.

We have persons who have been here for long periods of time who have gotten status but we also have persons who have been here for as little as 14 months. They themselves have told me that they have gotten status. I will not say that there are persons who have been here for less than a year who have gotten status because I do not know. So, my submission is that special reason cannot be made out by the Government because the grants have been indiscriminate. There have been no established criteria; there is no benchmark against which any of these grants can be, and no rationale put forward as to why certain persons have been granted status.

In my respectful submission, they cannot lump all of them—given the wide range of circumstances which all of them have—and say the special reason is that they are under pressure from the United Kingdom. Perhaps that is not a good enough reason. It is a special dispensation because of the Quincentennial anniversary, and I am waiting yet to hear what the other special reason is.

In my respectful submission, special reason cannot be stretched to cover the wide range of persons and circumstances under which the authority invested in Cabinet under section 20 (d) of the Law. So, Madam Speaker, for those reasons I submit that these grants have been made unlawfully. Therefore, the Motion seeks to have this Honourable House condemn and censure the actions of Cabinet in that regard; and further to have this Honourable House acknowledge the serious, negative implications of that unlawful exercise of authority by Cabinet; and further to seek to prevent that sort of reckless behaviour from occurring again by restricting by law the ability of Cabinet to confer such grants to six per year. That, in summary, is the objective and the purpose of the Private Member's Motion.

That brings me to the question of the social and economic implications of these grants. The framers of this legislation (the Immigration Law) clearly understood that there were serious implications when conferring status on persons. Those implications in many instances are positive but if careful regard is not paid to the local circumstances and the plight of the Caymanian in the process the implications can be grave. That is why the Directions set out in such detail what the Board must have regard for when contemplating whether or not to confer Caymanian status on persons. That is clearly not what Cabinet has regard for in their recent little exercise.

The Speaker: I take it Honourable Member that that is still your opinion.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Entirely my opinion, Madam Speaker. Carefully considered and very much a conviction, but it is simply my opinion and my submission.

We have just recently been told that the Honourable Minister for Education has imported a number of pre-fabricated, so-called temporary class rooms to accommodate the ever burgeoning number of students in the education system of these Islands.

One set of these classrooms has been placed at the Bodden Town Primary School and the other set is at the George Hicks High School. We need not look any further for evidence that the physical plan of the education system of these Islands is not only under stress but it is incapable of accommodating the number of students that are coming into the system.

Bear in mind also the submissions made by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition with regard to the impact and effect of sections 21 and 22 of the Immigration Law, which do two things: 1) It gives to all legitimate children of persons who have Caymanian status, Caymanian status at least until they reach the age of 18; and 2) It gives to illegitimate children of persons who have Caymanian status the right to apply for Caymanian status after being resident here for three years.

You might ask yourself whether or not the persons who have been here on work permits were able to bring their dependents to this country but their level of income did not allow them to do so. Because, again, under the policy guidelines set out by Cabinet the Immigration Board determined that they did not have the financial means to support those dependents. But now if the children are legitimate, Immigration Board cannot tell them anything. They are entitled as new Caymanians to have their children here.

We have two factors operating now: We have persons whom we have previously determined did not have the financial means to support dependents in this country and, therefore, were prohibited or prevented from bringing them here. Now they can bring them but they are still earning the same money. So how are they going to support these dependents?

Secondly, these children are now Caymanian children and are not only entitled but are also required to attend school here. You can be certain that if their parents did not have the financial means to support them here, they certainly do not have the means to send them to an expensive private school, and the government schools are filled to capacity. But do you know when the harsh reality of this matter is going to hit us squarely in the face? It is not now; we are just starting to feel the waves of it coming through but by the start of the next school year we are going to be faced with a crisis of enormous proportions.

We cannot build schools fast enough. I suppose you will have to import more temporary classrooms. This is not speculating; this is simply the exercise of logic. I can tell you as I stand here this morning that the implications of this have already hit the Social Services Department. I am not asking anyone, I have made enquiries there and the number of applications from persons who have sought assistance since these grants of status has increased significantly. In a number of instances they are persons . . .

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: . . . who were previously on work permits and who were therefore unable to seek assistance from Social Services. Now that they have been made Caymanian they are seeking the benefit of that Department.

So, we have only begun to feel the impact of this wholesale and indiscriminate grant of status to persons who otherwise would not have qualified. The Government can sit over there and mumble and say ridiculous things as much as they want, but we are all going to come to understand the truth and seriousness of the statements I have made.

I go back to the question of why this way and why now. The Honourable Leader of Government Business is all too fond of accusing the Leader of the Opposition of taking too long to do things and not doing enough in the short year that he was the Leader of Government Business. But I can say that one of the things that the Leader of Opposition did do was to establish an Immigration Review Team. He gave it a mandate to carry out an enquiry into the need for Immigration Reform to develop a policy and to make recommendations for draft legislation. He appointed to that team, Mrs. Sherri Cowan, the then Chairman of the Immigration Board, Mr. Orrett Connor, the then Chief Immigration Officer, Mr. Patrick Schmid, the then Deputy Chairman of the Immigration Board. Mrs. Sheena Westerborg-Frederick, who was the Government Crown Counsel principally dealt with Immigration matters.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have 58 minutes remaining.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Leader of Government Business is complaining that that is too long.

He also appointed to that Immigration Review Team the Honourable Minister for Health, Mr. Gilbert McLean, Mr. Rolston Anglin, Second Elected Member for West Bay who is my good friend, and, myself. While the Leader of Government Business has just said that all he did was appoint the Team, the Team certainly did its work and we produced our first report on the eve of the unceremonious ejection of the new Leader of Opposition, and the Elected Member for North Side from Cabinet. That was the week of 1 November 2001. I am asking no one whether that is correct because I personally delivered the reports to the Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

For almost two years the Leader of Government Business has been sitting on a report from the Immigration Review Team doing absolutely nothing about it and then comes to the country and says that because of pressure from the United Kingdom Government Cabinet is required to dispense Caymanian status to 2000 or thereabouts persons. Madam Speaker that is absolute nonsense.

The reports—because two have now been delivered—from the Immigration Review Team proposed a comprehensive Immigration Policy; it looked at the history of immigration in this country; it looked at the recent census and indeed at the pace at which the population had increased; it talked about and understood the implications to this society of absorbing huge numbers of persons over such a short period of time; it acknowledged the need to address the concerns and the rights of long-term residents; and it recommended a course.

One of the things that it acknowledged in its policy was the fact that the country could not absorb two many persons in any one given period without having serious adverse implications. It was also critically important that we stagger the absorption of new persons, not into the society, but as Caymanians or persons possessing Caymanian status, into the society.

So the Government cannot say that they have not been told the correct course to take. They may say it but they have not yet said that they have rejected the recommendations of the Immigration Review Team. If they so do, they reject recommendations which were made by a team that comprised one sitting Minister of Government and one supporting Back Bench Member. In my respectful view, they would be foolhardy to reject those recommendations because they reflected a tremendous amount of work and research and insight. Persons on the Team had played a part in administering the Immigration regime in this country for many years, and I am not talking about myself in this instance, I am talking about people like Mrs. Sherri Cowan, Mr. Orrett Connor and Mrs. Sheena Westerborg-Frederick. They were intimately involved with administering the Immigration regime in this country and I have heard . . . I know when I sit down some of them will get up and assert that those on this side do not want to see long-term residents get their true rights and the fruits of their labour, and that line of argument.

I am one of the few Members who was eventually elected to this Legislative Assembly this time around; who was bold enough to stand on platforms throughout George Town and say that we could not allow the rot to continue. We could not deal with the immigration system by not dealing with it, which had been the way the game had been played for many years. We had to acknowledge the rights and the importance of giving security of tenure to long-term residents but we had to balance that with the rights of existing Caymanians and the impact any such grants would have on their businesses and their abilities for upward mobility and success in their businesses. That is easy to say, but difficult to do. The proposals of the Immigration Review Team sought to do that.

As I say, we are at 18 September 2003, and the Leader of Government Business has had the benefit of this report since November 2001. Where is the immigration legislation? We still have not seen it. We keep hearing about it.

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Yes, election is coming, and soon too.

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, that is not the end of the matter because even if the Government has not had the benefit of that report and those recommendations on which to act we still have an Immigration Law, defective though it may be. If indeed a dictate had come down from Her Majesty's Government that we had to address this as a matter of urgency, which quite frankly is again absolute nonsense, the Leader of Government Business received no such order or dictate and he cannot stand on the floor of this honourable House and tell . . .

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, the Member knows that he is misleading the House one more time. They cannot find anywhere that I said that we have received any order from the United Kingdom. What I said was that the United Kingdom keeps putting pressure on us, telling us that we need to do this thing and they had sent consultants here to put pressure on us and exposed us to the international world of the atrocious . . . he is wrong in saying so and he should withdraw it because I did not say that. What I had said was the explanation I just gave. The UK has been asking us to do something about the situation.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, do you have with you express evidence for the statement, which you just made?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Madam Speaker, I am so grateful to the Honourable Minister for having clarified the matter.

[Interjection: No, no]

The Speaker: Honourable . . .

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I will do anything you want, Madam Speaker, because what I wanted was an express statement from the Minister. He is very good at skating around the issue and leaving a certain impression.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I am glad you had a condition precedent that you will do anything the Chair wants because the Chair now requests you to withdraw the remark which you are not in a position to substantiate.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, which remark? I will tell you what I said and I am happy to withdraw it. I said the Leader of Government Business cannot stand on the floor of this House and say that he has had any dictates, and if you want me to withdraw that I will.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, there were other statements that you made which went much further than that saying the Leader of Government had directions for a mandate and that he could not say that. I can easily get the words because I would not want to put any words in your mouth but . . . Is that what you want? I can easily get it.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Madam Speaker, I do not want to blow this out of proportion, I want to carry on with my debate. I am most happy at the explanation that the Honourable Minister has given. I will withdraw any remark that offended him or anyone else in relation to what I said which provoked that remark, because it is a remark that I am happy about. I withdraw whatever it is, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member from George Town, although the Chair is most grateful for your consideration that we be most efficient in saving time, I am not in a position to accept a general withdrawal. I will take a morning break to see the exact words so that it can be taken out correctly and there will be no room for any further speculation.

Proceedings suspended at 11.44 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.10 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

We took the short break because I wanted to clarify within my own mind the exact wording in which the Second Elected Member for George Town did say. I am most happy that I did take that break because a picture is worth a thousand words. I have had an opportunity to listen to the tape, as well as to read the Hansard, unedited though it be. The Chair is persuaded that the format in which the Second Elected Member for George Town presented it was in a hypothetical position and did not comprise of a statement of fact. Hence, the Chair will not ask him to withdraw it as the statement now stands.

Please continue Second Elected Member.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I was saying that while I did not believe that there was any dictate from Her Majesty's Government—based on Human Rights issues, causing the Government to act in the way they did in making these grants of status—even if there were, the proper course for a well intentioned Government would be to use the vehicle and the mechanism that has existed in this country for over 30 years to award grants of status to long time residents. That is the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) that we currently have.

Even if there were the need for some urgency—which I do not buy, particularly given the fact that the Leader of Government Business has had the report of the Immigration Review Team since November 2001—the proper course would be for Cabinet to carry out that function it was given under the Immigration Law. Further, a prescribed quota could have been given to the Immigration Board saying that in this Quincentennial year—since that is one of the reasons that has been put forward as a basis for this grant—we would like to make 500 grants of status to the most deserving persons in the Cayman Islands. Having prescribed the quota, the Immigration Board would proceed to do as it has done since the Law was passed, to make public the fact that there is a quota. And the process would go on in an orderly manner prescribed by the Law. In that way status would have been awarded on a competitive basis whether it was 500 or 2000. So we would wind up having the longest serving, most contributing persons in the country getting status and they would have had to meet the 10-year residency requirement.

Therefore, we would not be in the situation that currently obtains where persons who have been here for barely a year having gotten status while persons who have been here for twenty or more years, have not. I am not using this as an example because I come from the legal profession so I know a bit more than other areas of the economy and industry. Just yesterday it was brought to my attention that lawyers who have been here for more than twenty years, who are outstanding advocates in some instances, were not even considered this time around. There is at least one lawyer—and I hope I am not forced today to call another name, but I can—who has been here for fourteen months and has been given Caymanian status. That is a fact.

When you adopt a process where there is no set criteria, where the basis for determining who is considered is by gathering a list by operatives in the society who simply go around and say "Yes, I think he would be a good person for status, yes . . . no man, he is not no good, this is a good man," you are departing from an established procedure by throwing the Law away.

There is a good reason for Government—and the bureaucracy that it entails, as troublesome as it can be—to ensure due process, to ensure that the rule of law obtains; to avoid arbitrary and wrong decision-making. Any country that allows its system to operate other than in accordance with the rule of law is a country that is doomed to disaster and anarchy.

If the Immigration Board had been allowed to do its job to carry out one of its principal functions under the Immigration Law, even if the quota had been 2000, we would not have had this uproar in the society about this matter. There would have been some people who lamented two thousand persons getting Caymanian status. I am not saying that there would not have been some complaint but we would not have had the kind of uproar that we have now.

While many worthy persons have gotten status—and for them we are all happy—the process should have had the Law contemplated with a prescribed quota every year. Because of the indiscriminate way in which this process has been allowed to proceed, a whole lot of persons who are unqualified and ineligible under the Law have been granted status. That is what has caused great concern to all of us. The scrutiny which is available, and a necessary part of the undertakings of the Immigration Board, when considering who should be granted status, never occurred.

Police records are required to have been sought after the fact. We are talking about the closest thing that this country has to citizenship. It is supposed to be a prized possession. You are supposed to be proud to have been granted Caymanian status. But as I said yesterday, this process has trivialised Caymanian status; it has debased it; it has devalued it, particularly in the eyes of long time residents who earned it the old fashioned way. I am not speculating about that because a number of them have said to me, "I was here fifteen years, I was in the Rotary Club, I did this, I did that, I did the other, I had to build a house, I had to invest, I had to show that I had a commitment to this place.” When we have situations, as have been reported to us, where persons who have never even been here got their names put on the list and got status, what does that do for the process and what does that do for the value which we ascribe to Caymanian status?

You know, Madam Speaker, I really do not think that the Government meant to do this. I really do not. I think that this is a situation that has taken on a life of its own and has gotten completely out of hand. As I said yesterday at least the two Members who were on the Immigration Review Team—unless they have done a complete right-about turn philosophically—would be, in ordinary circumstances, vehemently opposed to what transpired. I know the Honourable Minister for Health and the Second Elected Member for West Bay care deeply and value greatly being Caymanian and the importance of Caymanian status.

I really cannot expect the Honourable Minister for Health to act or to say anything other than in accordance with the policy of his Government. He is bound by collective responsibility. However, I am hoping that a principled individual like the Second Elected Member for West Bay will be prepared to stand up and take his distance from these reckless and dangerous acts of his Cabinet.

Madam Speaker, I know that when I sit down there is going to be a barrage of assertions, allegations or accusations that I, and the other Honourable Members on this side, particularly the Leader of Opposition, do not want to see worthy persons get their just due in this society, and that we want to keep long serving and long time residents out of Caymanian status and have them relegated to the sidelines of society, and that sort of argument.

As I said a while ago, I have been an advocate of immigration reform from long before I even contemplated standing for election to this Honourable House. My record stands for itself. I believe that the people of this country, and not just those in George Town, know that when there is a matter, particularly an immigration matter which needs attention, they turn to me or the Leader of the Opposition. I know that I have personally battled and pleaded and cajoled members of the Immigration administration, even the Chairman of the Immigration Board on occasions when I thought a matter had not been given the proper attention. When I thought a decision had been wrong, I sought—and I still do—their advice and advocated and continue to advocate on the part of persons who are here on permits and persons who do not have permanent residence or Caymanian status. We must be a just and fair society and that means regardless of where one comes from, regardless of their lack of ability to vote we must ensure that their rights—nothing more than that—are observed and protected. So they can lodge any accusation they wish about me in that regard. I know that the people whom I represent and the people, whom the Leader of the Opposition and the other Members of the Opposition represent, understand that much about us.

Madam Speaker, when we talk about one’s underlying philosophy in relation to matters such as these, particularly immigration reform and the attitude that we should have in relation to persons who have lived and worked here for long periods of time . . . I had occasion during my preparation for this debate to do a little research about the attitude of Members of this Honourable House to immigration reform in the past, particularly to the vexed issue of Caymanian status. I must say, having looked at the Fifth and Final Report from the Select Committee of the whole House on immigration legislation . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town, if I could have your indulgence, it is approaching 12.30 and you are starting a new point. I made arrangements to be somewhere else, so with the wish of the House if we could take the luncheon break at this time and reconvene at 2.15 pm I would be most grateful.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, how much time do I have left?

The Speaker: There are 26 minutes remaining.

Proceedings suspended at 12. 29 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.32 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I should wish for the Honourable House to note that the Third Official Member will be absent for the purposes of official travels until 19 September.

I recognise the Second Elected Member for George Town continuing his debate with a total remaining time of 26 minutes.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the luncheon break I started to talk about the philosophies of respective Members of this Honourable House in relation to immigration issues, particularly the vexed issue of Caymanian status. I come now to say how significantly the views of certain Members of this Honourable House have been altered given the passage of time and perhaps the circumstances in which they find themselves.

Some insight into this is provided in the Fifth and Final Report from the Select Committee of the whole House on Immigration Legislation Sessions 1989 through 1992. I ask your leave Madam Speaker to refer to it.

The Speaker: Certainly, Honourable Member. Would you be in a position to have copies because I have been unable to get a copy on my desk thus far?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I am quite happy to have it photocopied and I can even wait until it has been done, if that is what you want.

The Speaker: No, please proceed with your debate. I can get it shortly thereafter.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I am referring to page 4 of the Minutes of the Select Committee, twenty second meeting, held Wednesday 15 January 1992, dealing with Clause 15 (that is, of the then Caymanian Protection Law) Acquisition of Caymanian status by grant. I quote: "The Chairman sought Members' views as to whether or not there should be a moratorium in respect of Clause 15 (1)." That is, whether there should be a moratorium in relation to the grant of Caymanian status.

"Mr. McKeeva Bush noted that in 1988 he moved a Motion in the House proposing security of tenure as an alternate for status. He noted that his views remained unchanged and recommended the abolishment of status by grant.

"Mr. Roy Bodden recommended that status by grant should cease and desist. He noted that many persons are content with permanent residency with a right to work and vote and recommended the abolishment of status by grant.

"Mr. Gilbert McLean did not agree to a moratorium because of the stalling effect that the 5-year period would bring about. He recommended that Government should look at the current claims and determine whether any or all applications should be granted status."

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Members, please pass comments to the Chair.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: "He recommended that any persons not granted status should be formally advised that they should, in the future, seek repatriation. He recommended that grants of status by the Governor should cease".

I will read that one again, Madam Speaker. "He recommended that the grants of status by the Governor [meaning the Governor in Cabinet now] should cease. He noted though, that if a person is considered worthy of status that the Board should have the right to grant it."

I could not agree any more with the then Honourable Minister. Absolutely reasonable and rational—his usual position in most matters. So time and circumstance change us all, or at least causes us to change positions. I thought that it was useful to remind Honourable Members of this House who might have perhaps been persuaded to stray from their philosophical moorings of what they said ten or eleven years ago in relation to this matter.

If I might have a moment, Madam Speaker.
[Pause]

Madam Speaker, I want to move on to deal with the finality, and therefore the gravity, of these grants of status by the Government in Cabinet. You see, what may not have occurred to the Honourable Members of Cabinet is that grants of status conferred by Cabinet under section 20(d) are irrevocable. I repeat, Madam Speaker: Grants of status conferred by Cabinet under section 20(d) are irrevocable. What that means (for those who might not fully understand the implications) is that those persons who have been conferred status by Cabinet are with us for life. No matter what they do; no matter what heinous criminal act they perpetrate, neither Cabinet nor the Court has any recourse. That is separate and distinct from status conferred by the Immigration Board. I will demonstrate by reference to sections 25 and 26 of the Immigration Law, if I might have your permission, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Certainly, please proceed.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Section 25(1) reads: "Any person who possesses Caymanian status shall cease to possess or enjoy that status where— (a) having acquired Caymanian status by grant as mentioned in section 22 [That is not the section that Cabinet confers grants; that is the section that the Board confers grants] by reason of the grant of a certificate of Caymanian status by the Board or by reason of such a grant under section 18 of the repealed law [That is the previous Law which is the same section but the numbers change] he has subsequently been ordinarily resident outside the Islands continuously for a period of five years or acquires a domicile other than a domicile in the Islands;"

In other words, if you were granted Caymanian status under either section 18 of the old Law or section 22 of the current Law, and you decided after having received that grant to go and live somewhere else for five years by operation of Law, your Caymanian status ceased. That does not apply to status granted under section 20 by the Governor in Cabinet. That is one.

"(b) being a person having acquired Caymanian status as mentioned in section 22(5) by virtue of being married to a spouse who possesses Caymanian status or by reason of section 14(2) or (3) of the previously repealed law or section 18 5) of the repealed law—

- I. The spouse ceases to possess Caymanian status
- II. within ten years from the date that he is deemed to possess Caymanian status—
  - a) he commences to live apart from the spouse under a decree of competent court or under a deed of separation;

- b) he is living apart from the spouse in circumstances where, an opinion of the Board, the marriage is irretrievably broken down; or
- c) he ceases to be married to the spouse by reason of the dissolution or annulment of the marriage.”

That section is all about status granted to persons on the basis of their marriage to a Caymanian. Again, in those circumstances as set out in these provisions, status would cease by operation of law if certain occurrences came about. I do not want to belabour this point.

There is another sub-section that deals with persons who acquire status by virtue of being a widower or widow of a person who had Caymanian status, and again, in certain circumstances by operation of Law, status ceases.

- “d) being deemed to possess and enjoy Caymanian status as mentioned in section 21(1) (or section 14(2) of the repealed law) by virtue only of being a legitimate child, step-child or adopted child of a person who possesses Caymanian status—”

That person ceases to have status if his parents, step parents or adopted parents cease to have status themselves while they are still a minor, or he is adopted in circumstances that he has no parent who possess Caymanian status. That is, if someone who does not have Caymanian status adopts that child, or he had not been ordinarily resident in the Islands for a period of seven years immediately before he reaches the age of 18 years.

The section that the Honourable Leader of Opposition referred to, which conferred on a child the right to Caymanian status if their parent had it, up until the age of 18, in circumstances where that child had resided here for less than seven years before they reached the age of 18, the status would cease. That does not apply in circumstances where the grant of status is conferred by Cabinet. Perhaps, and most importantly of all, for the purposes of my submission, section 26 says: “Where any grantee of Caymanian status under section 22 or section 18 of the repealed or previously repealed law, is convicted by any Court of an offence—

- a) for which he is sentenced an immediate term of imprisonment of twelve months or more, other than for non-payment of a fine; or
- b) which, in the opinion of the Board, was made possible by, facilitated by or connected with the Caymanian status of the offender, the Board may revoke his status on its own Motion.”

Again, those provisions apply only to grants made under section 22 by the Immigration Board.

They have no application, whatsoever, to grants made by the Governor in Cabinet under section 20(d).

The Speaker: Honourable Second Elected Member, you have 13 minutes remaining.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

If they have not already understood the grave implications of their actions, I want the Governor in Cabinet to reflect on the irrevocability, the finality and the lack of recourse in relation to these persons if they do anything to contravene the laws of this land. They are with us, as I said before, for life.

While it is already done, I want them to bear in mind when they contemplate making more of these grants, as the Leader of Government Business has stated they intend to do.

The final point I want to make, Madam Speaker, is to address the question of whether these persons will be permitted to vote in the upcoming elections in November 2004. The Leader of Government Business has said on the radio, and I heard him with my own ears, that this issue is simply one that is a figment of the Opposition's imagination and one which they have postulated simply to stir up the people. I want him to understand, if he has not, that our concern about that has its genesis in a statement made by the Honourable Minister of Education at the re-dedication of the Bodden Town MLA office last month. I would ask the Honourable Leader of Government Business to listen to the tape of that meeting before he gets up and says that this is something that we have made up.

During the course of that meeting the Honourable Minister of Education made it plain that the intention was that these persons would have the right to vote in the next general election. The significance is that for that to happen in the majority of instances, it will require an amendment to the Elections Law. I do not have time to go line-by-line through the Constitution as to the requirements or the qualifications necessary in order to be added to the voters list. Time does not permit me, but I can tell you from careful memory that they require Caymanian status and the possession of British Overseas Territories citizenship, otherwise known as naturalisation.

There are some persons who had been naturalised prior to having been granted Caymanian status by Cabinet. Those persons will qualify to be added to the voters list. I do not have any big argument with that. If the Honourable Minister for Education was speaking for the Government's position when he spoke . . . for the majority of those who are not naturalised, to be added to the electoral register will require an amendment to the Elections Law. I am speaking in layman's terms now. To qualify for naturalisation you need to be, by virtue of the British Nationality Act, which is an English Act, free of immigration control, except in special circumstances, for one year. Free of immigration control means that you are not subject to work permits, regulations or laws. Therefore, when one bears in mind that the final date for registration on the electoral register for the next election is 20 June 2004, one quickly comes to understand that there is insufficient time between when the very first grants were made. The only way to permit the majority of persons to acquire the tenure to be naturalised in the ordinary course of events, and then added to the register, would be to extend the time for registration, which requires an amendment to the Elections Law.

I am here to say that nothing short of an undertaking by the Government, when they speak that no attempt will be made to do that, is going to satisfy the Opposition or the right thinking members of this community. To seek to perpetrate such an act, in my respectful submission, stops just short of elections fraud. I can tell you, Madam Speaker, all Honourable Members of this House and the listening public that if the Members of the People's Progressive Movement, the Parliamentary Opposition, believe that the Government has the audacity to bring a Bill to this Honourable House to amend the Elections Law, this country will witness a demonstration it never before even believed was possible. We shall not permit it to happen, not on our watch.

During the course of my debate—

The Speaker: Sorry to interrupt again, but I am told by the Clerk you have five minutes remaining, Second Elected Member.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: That will suffice. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

During the course of my debate, when I was prodded to call names in relation to some of the examples of the types of persons who had been granted status, the Honourable Leader of Government Business rose some time after on a point of order. The House was then adjourned while the list was being searched.

I am not sure whether it is a certificate or statement, but it was presented to us by the Cabinet Secretary, saying that one of the names which I had called in relation to having a criminal conviction and having been granted Caymanian status did not appear on the list.

I tell the Cabinet to be very, very careful. Be very careful. The statement is worded very carefully. It says: “This statement serves as confirmation that the Cabinet office is in possession of the names of those persons who were granted Caymanian status by the Cabinet between June 17, 2003 and September 2, 2003. I, Orrett L. Connor, Cabinet Secretary, confirm that I have checked such list and have been unable to find the name Jonathan Karl Campbell on this list.”

It is a very carefully worded statement and I ask them to be very careful, for I am informed that there are a number of such lists floating around, some which have been doctored and some, perhaps, that have not. So I ask them to be very, very careful.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, a point of order.

The Speaker: May I have a moment please?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Certainly.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, I am cognisant of the fact that perhaps you have not concluded what you started to say, and in that event I would give you this opportunity to do so before I make some comments.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I am saying that I am informed that there are a number of such lists floating around and that, in fact, some have been doctored. I said earlier in my debate that I believe that we will never know the true nature and number of persons who have been granted status and that we will never see an authentic list.

The Speaker: Thank you, Second Elected Member for George Town. I wanted to give you the opportunity in the interest of natural justice to preface what you had received, reliable or unreliable, to bring it to a point where you could formulate it into your opinion or your view. Obviously, it remains as a statement of the fact and unless . . .

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: . . . all right . . . let me finish, please.

Again, unless you are in possession of evidence which would substantiate that, the House cannot entertain the last allegation as a statement of fact unless it is qualified as your opinion, in which you will then hold the consequences.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I am quite happy to formulate it as my opinion. But, I can tell you that I have done some checks. The Honourable Leader of Government Business assured this House that Mr. Alfred Pink has a work permit. He did not mislead in that respect, but the individual has never taken up his work permit and he has not been in these Islands for more than two and a half years.

Secondly, Madam Speaker, in relation to Mr. Albert Chen, he has not resided in these Islands for more than two years either.

The Speaker: Is that also your opinion, Second Elected Member?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: That, Madam Speaker, is the information I have received and I hold it as my opinion.

So I come to the end of my contribution . . .

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Praise God.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: . . . to this important Motion which seeks to have this Honourable House condemn and censure the irresponsible, reckless actions of Cabinet in granting status . . .

The Speaker: Second Elected Member, time is up but I will permit you to conclude the statement, which you are making so that you will not conclude in mid stream.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I am grateful to you, Madam Speaker . . . which seeks to condemn and censure Cabinet in respect of the irresponsible and reckless actions of granting Caymanian status indiscriminately to what is now thousands of persons, and seeks also to have this Honourable House acknowledge the far-reaching implications of the unilateral and wholesale grant of Caymanian status by the Governor in Cabinet to so many people in one fell swoop.

Finally, it seeks to amend section 20(d) of the Immigration Law 2003 to restrict the ability of Cabinet to grant Caymanian status in such circumstances to a maximum of six persons per annum.

I thank you for your indulgence.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Health Services.

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Order.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to speak on Private Member's Motion No. 4/03 which is titled "Grants of Caymanian Status by the Governor in Cabinet."

I am impressed by the fact that the last speaker has made it quite clear that this Motion is a censure Motion. It is a censure Motion of Government. It is a Motion which is always treated seriously by any good government in Parliament. In fact, it is the Motion which most Parliaments acting properly will set aside other business to deal with and have it dispatched. That is what this Government has done. It started yesterday which is a day that Government Business is dealt with. However, that was set aside to deal with this, and the debate has gone on today, Thursday, which is normally Private Members' Motions day.

Madam Speaker, the second Whereas clause says: "AND WHEREAS the Leader of Government Business has recently stated the intention of Government to revise the Immigration Law (2003 Revi- sion) or to bring new Immigration legislation enabling up to 6,000 persons to be granted Caymanian status in one fell swoop;"

Madam Speaker, I challenge that as a statement of fact and that statement has at no time, to the best of my knowledge and belief, been made by the Leader of Government Business. I am one of the Members of Government, and I have been unaware of it. I therefore challenge that statement in the Whereas clause.

In the third Whereas clause it speaks of the ". . . Parliamentary Opposition . . ." that it "has been inundated by a ground swell of apprehension and opposition." So very often I hear the Opposition talk about apprehension and fear and all of the things that supposedly are now being vested on these Islands by the Government of the day. They are experts in this field. If it is one thing that the Opposition can do is create an alarm, and I am alarmed at how many followers they can get.

Madam Speaker, all of the apprehension in this country to date, since the time that the Governor in Cabinet has decided to grant status to certain persons, has been created by the Opposition. They had lost steam after the situation with the Referendum and the Constitution, and now they have seized on this as enabling them to create apprehension and fear.

Madam Speaker, if there is one thing that I have very great concern and alarm about it is the fact that the Opposition consistently and deliberately go out of their way to try to frighten this country. They make all sorts of frightening statements; "indiscriminate use of power", "arbitrary," "mindless" are the types of adjectives they use. They must be speaking personally for certainly they are not speaking of the Government of the day.

In this Motion the Resolve clause is asking that the "Legislative Assembly does hereby condemn and censure the actions of the Governor in Cabinet . . .". It is also asking in the Resolve ". . . That the Legislative Assembly acknowledges the far reaching implications of the unilateral and wholesale grant of Caymanian status by the Governor in Cabinet to thousands of persons in one fell swoop;". I do not know anything about that either and I am one of the Ministers of Cabinet.

The Resolve clause ". . . calls upon the Governor in Cabinet to forthwith cease making grants of Caymanian status pending the holding of widespread consultation with and approval by the electorate of the course of action taken by the Governor in Cabinet in this matter;".

That one really puzzles me, Madam Speaker. The Opposition is asking this House, in effect, to do what it cannot do; to stop the Cabinet from being the executive that it is and taking such actions that are lawful and is considered necessary for the good governance of the country. One must assume that they will go out to the electorate to get approval for what the Cabinet should do and then the Governor in Cabinet can proceed thereafter.

Madam Speaker, I have brought numerous motions, including censure motions, to this House, but I have never seen one like that before. My colleague from Bodden Town has brought about three, but I have never seen one asking for so mighty an action.

The other resolve clause is that the Immigration Law be amended to restrict the ability of the Governor in Cabinet to grant Caymanian status more than six per annum.

I have been around the legislative landscape for quite a few years and I have seen governments come and go. Indeed, I have seen certain legislators come and go. I have come and gone myself, and have come back. The question of Immigration has been one continuing sore that no government has ever had the guts to deal with. Madam Speaker, it has been talked about, and if talking could kill the issue it would have been dead a long time ago. But it is not dead; it continues to be one of the most important areas of consideration for this Government, or any government before it.

I have heard the Governor's comment about our immigration situation. My friend and I, the First Elected Member from Bodden Town, on two occasions paid our way to London to talk with officials and FCO, and on both occasions they asked us what we thought should be done about immigration and what they wanted to be done about it.

England also has a problem with immigration, and the way they keep their population in control is by allowing a person work for five years and then it is cut off. If you stay beyond five years you become a British citizen for all practical purposes; you can vote and do everything else. They told us in the Legislative Assembly about three or so years ago that we should have cut-off periods for people on work permits and then we would not have a problem of people in our country on work permits for 20, 35 or 40 years. They told us that. All of us were there.

Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town quoted from a 1989 Hansard on a report of the Select Committee. That was one of the most comprehensive that has ever been carried out. I can say today that if the Government had, at that time, continued in office, there was going to be what was called at that time, "a sweep up". Once and for all the people who had been in the Cayman Islands long-term would have been incorporated into this society by the grant of Caymanian status or permanent residence. That was the reason why my two colleagues—Ministers at that time, namely the Minister for Tourism and the Minister for Education—said that status by residence should be done away with because we would start after that with people who had family connections or by marriage and so on. That was the fundamental principle that many Members were advocating at that time.

Madam Speaker, I wish to quote from the Hansard, more recent than that one, which was the 7 September 2001. It was a statement made by the then Leader of Government Business on immigration issues. I quote the Honourable D. Kurt Tibbetts: "I do not believe that a day passes . . ."

The Speaker: Sorry, Honourable Minister, do I have a copy or could arrangements be made for me to have one after you refer to it?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker, I would be happy to. I do not have a second one at this time but I will have one.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you.

"Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that a day passes any more without each Honourable Member of this House being reminded in some way, of at least one of the issues related to immigration that face these Islands.

"The inaction of the past several years has resulted in these issues forming something of a cloud looming over us. I believe that each of us who sought office has no doubt given his or her constituents some commitment to try to move this cloud.

"Most certainly, the Government is fully aware of the need to develop and implement immigration policies that will address the many issues existing. More importantly, the Government fully appreciates that whatever policies it ultimately proposes will not meet with the approval of every Member of this House, and that whatever this House gives its approval to will not necessarily satisfy every member of the community. [Truer words could not be spoken.] However, Mr. Speaker, the Government cannot and will not be deterred by these inescapable facts. [2001 Official Hansard Report, page 1035]

[Laughter]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, it goes on to say:

"Late last year, and obviously very soon after taking up office, the Government took the decision that it wished for Executive Council to be relieved of the role of serving as the appellate body in respect of decisions of the Immigration Board and the Trade & Business Licensing Board. The Government considered serving in this capacity to be fundamentally inconsistent with good judicial practice and good governance."

Madam Speaker, I absolutely agree with the then Minister. Let me say that this Government, the United Democratic Party, has changed the Law and brought new legislation. Cabinet no longer deals with appeals; it is dealt with by a completely new appellate Board. I would believe that the Leader of Opposition would be glad to know that what he started has been carried out. It was not being talked about, it has been completed.

Madam Speaker, the then Leader of Government made very much sense when he said, “More importantly, the Government fully appreciates that whatever policies it ultimately proposes will not meet with the approval of every member of this House [It is obviously not meeting with the approval of the Opposition] and that whatever this House gives its approval to will not necessarily satisfy every member of the community.”

I was not at the meeting last night in George Town but I heard about it. The people who came out to the meeting and heard their side of things, obviously did not meet with the approval of a certain number of the community.

Madam Speaker, another significant part of what he said is: “More recently, as Honourable Members and the public will know, the Government [meaning his government] took the decision to issue a quota for 2001 for the grant of Caymanian status under various sections of the Immigration Law that are subject to such a quota. This is not an annual quota, Mr. Speaker; it is intended to merely address the result of the inaction in this area over the past 10 or 11 years.”

There has still been inaction since 2001 until now. All the things that the Member said here I agree with because they are true.

Madam Speaker, I would like at this time to mention a few things in terms of non-Caymanians living in Cayman. We have a spectrum of people that are from all over the earth. This little Island of Grand Cayman—which is 97 square miles, altogether would be 100—has people from all over the earth living here. Just to give an idea of a few: Australia, Belgium, Denmark, Garner, Hungary, Lebanon, Liberia, Portugal, Slovenia, South Africa. I have on the list here all the people from the various countries. Altogether, the total number of persons living in this society for over ten years is 6620. And these numbers are old. Out of a population of 44,000 . . . do the math . . . and that is just those that are living here over ten years, it did not figure in those that were living here for one year up to ten years who are on work permits. That is what this is talking about.

Madam Speaker, I think a few other statistics should advise us well. Earlier this year persons living here from:

Period of time	No. of persons
1 - 5 years	2055
6 -10 years	3791
11 - 15 years	4802
16 - 20 years	920
21 - 25 years	455
26 - 30 years	135

31 - 40 years	59
40 - Upwards	3

Madam Speaker, when the Opposition talks about apprehension and fear, we should be afraid of those numbers. We should be afraid that successive governments have foolishly allowed people to come to this country on work permits for 40 odd years and believe they can work them for another 40 years without giving them any sort of residence security. That is what they should be afraid of.

Madam Speaker, in 1988 when I was first elected to the House—and I remember it so well—I asked the question (and no one has ever answered it): who are we developing for? There are those who say develop irrespective because it is good for the country. One thing is certain, if we develop in a way that creates the need for jobs or for labour, we know absolutely well that we cannot fulfil that need. So, from that perspective we are obviously not developing for ourselves.

I make that statement believing same to be true and quite irrefutable. If we continue to develop and need labour, the only way we can control it so we do not have people on a work permits for 40 years is to make it clear from day one that they are coming to the Cayman Islands to work only for four or seven years, as the case may be, and after that time they will move on. If we continue to need labour for that particular job we will hire new labour. Madam Speaker, that is the only way we can arrest the situation.

There is more than 60 per cent of foreign labour force here, and each day they are in these Islands, the time of their residence is growing. I do not care which corporation; which business; which loud mouth came here and got rich; what individual; accountant; lawyer; or whatever says, “Oh, if you start rolling over people nobody is going to come.” It is strange how they keep coming. I do not buy that story nor do I cater to that. I do not think that this or any other government should cater to that. The problem is that there have been so many gutless governments that have not acted in the best interest of the country to do what they should have done. And there is only one answer to it: to limit the time that a person comes to stay here and work.

The employee who comes knows how long they can work; the employer knows how long they can work, so then what is the problem? Everyone is in the know. Everyone plans his life and does what he has to do within the time that has been allotted by Law. That would certainly be my recommendation.

Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town pointed out the fact that the former Leader of Government Business appointed an Immigration Review Team. That is a fact, and indeed, I was a member. I did not want to serve because I was an Opposition Member and I saw it as a way of tying me into whatever the results might be. However, I thought about it and I have always been outspoken about the issue of immigration and what should be done about it. I thought it was worth me being a part of it because I would have gotten to say my piece, although I would have said my piece one way or the other. So, I accepted the invitation to be a Member.

I want to say to the Second Elected Member for George Town that he should never believe for one moment that, as I grow older, my views will go into any change mode. If anything, they are becoming stronger because I dare say the numbers are growing and they are overwhelming me. I am in less of a position to be able to fight them off, so I simply stayed with my opinions as they have been.

I quote again from what the former Leader of Government Business said, “Mr. Speaker, the Government is committed to clearing this cloud I mentioned at the beginning. It must be done, and, God willing, it will be done.”

Again, I could not agree with him more. Madam Speaker, the problem is that anyone can talk about it, but not everyone is willing to do something about it.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I am accounting a little bit of the history. As I said, I have been around at various instances with this matter of immigration. One time Truman Bodden and Company had a Law—The Caymanian Protection Law 1984 (Law 24 of 1984). The descriptions of “Eligible Person” means, and I quote:

- A. Any British citizen or a citizen of the Republic of Ireland
- B. Any British dependent territories citizen
- C. Any citizen of Australia, Bahamas, Barbados, Belize, Canada, Jamaica, New Zealand or Trinidad and Tobago; and
- D. Any United States citizen.

They were the only people in the whole wide world that could get Caymanian status. I remember attacking this in that same Select Committee that the Second Elected Member from George Town spoke about. When I heard what was one of the most ridiculous statements that Truman Bodden had made to cover what he had done—he said it was to try to avoid getting people with communistic ideas coming to Cayman.

[Laughter]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: So, Madam Speaker, this thing goes years back. It was ludicrous. There were people, for example, who were married to Honduran women and they could never get Caymanian status. To be naturalised they had to have status. Twelve months after they got it they could then apply for naturalisation. Yet how could you apply for it when, in the first instance, you are excluded by your nationality? Thank God that part was changed in the Law which followed in 1991, if I remember correctly.

Madam Speaker, when we look at this matter of Caymanian status . . . let me not talk about Caymanian status at this point . . . what we need to do about the thousands of foreign nationals who are living in the Cayman Islands is manage population growth. We cannot continue to go through the route that we have been going before.

Firstly, there has to be definite periods of time in which a person comes to the Cayman Islands to work and then they leave.

Secondly, we cannot just kick the people who have been here 15, 18, 22, 25, 41 years into the streets. They have now made this largely their home. The report that was done made certain recommendations that took into account certain considerations on term limits. That report, which is in three parts as I recall, has not yet come to the end and there has not yet been any legislation produced.

Madam Speaker, I wish to refer to section 20 of the Immigration Law 2003 Revision, under which status grants have been made. The marginal note reads: “General Provisions Regarding Possession of Caymanian Status.”

“20. A person shall, for purposes of this Law, possess Caymanian status if –

“(d) the Governor, in his opinion finding special reason for so doing, grant such status to him, and he shall continue to possess and enjoy Caymanian status unless and until he loses it under section 25.”

Madam Speaker, if we go to the definitions of “Governor” it means the Governor in Council. So I suggest that it does not mean the Governor himself, but it means the Governor, and all of his Cabinet Ministers and Members, arriving at a decision which, in their opinion, there is special reason for the granting of Caymanian status. It is separate and apart from the sections 21 to 22 and so on, as has been cited by the Second Elected Member for George Town. They are different. If there were conditions related to those sections, then they would not apply to the case of the Governor in Cabinet granting them. It is a separate section altogether where, for special reason, the Governor in Cabinet chooses to grant Caymanian status.

Madam Speaker, this year is the Quincentennial year and various things that have never happened in the Cayman Islands before have taken place. Certain structures have been erected, various things have been done, which I think has been the mark of forward thinking; we are a people who have reached 500 years in our history and we should celebrate it.

When the Government first took the position that it would be good to approve status grants to certain people, it was on the basis to show the Government's intention to deal with this situation, as the former Leader of Government Business said, ". . . to remove the cloud."

Madam Speaker, the process started and as usual the Opposition saw every evil in the world because they were not the ones doing it. From my own perspective, there is one thing that is very important about what has taken place so far and that is: the Cabinet has acted in its opinion that there have been various special reasons where status grants have been made to people. Like the Member for George Town correctly said, some have been here for just over a year. It is a special reason why that person was granted status. Some people have been here for a very long period of time who were not necessarily granted status based on that period of time. One reason may have been that their contribution was visible and they deserved it for special reasons.

One thing that really bothers me is what I perceive happening in my beloved country, and it is not that I am now seeing it or becoming accustomed to it. I have been on planet earth for quite a few years and I am a fairly observant person. I have always known that in this society there have always been well-defined strata of classes. There is a class that I would term, for my purposes right now, as the "ruling class" and then there is the "serving class". I believe that there has always been a problem in my country of a master-and-slave mentality. It has always bothered me. From the time I was a child I began to perceive it. There were certain families back then, and they have grown just like myself and have gone through various changes and so on, but it is still present here.

Of course, Madam Speaker, I think some of the greatest reactionaries—indeed they are reactionaries—believe "Listen here, you are alright to be in Cayman here for 20 years as long as you are here working for me, and in effect, I got you into a certain bondage and if you mess with me I will send you out of here." But they have a problem with freeing that individual from the bondage and say: "Look, you have been here so long by heavens, you are part of me and I am part of you, it is time now that the bondage is ended."

Madam Speaker, in the 1800s that came to an end, but there are some here in my country who believe that is still in place. I know my colleague, the Minister for Education and Labour has major problems with it too . . . no one has to tell me I know . . . it has become a problem with the Minister for Tourism to deal with the numerous complaints and the advantage that is being taken of people who work 14 and 15 hours a day. It happens. "You do not do exactly as I say, for the small wage you are earning I am going to cut you loose and get another work permit." It has happened here and it continues to happen.

Madam Speaker, I want to make it absolutely clear that . . .

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Order.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: . . . the people who are in this country on work permits are here, almost in every single instance, because their labour is needed. And for those who may not believe that and who do not want them around, then go home this evening and tell that helper of yours that she is gone tomorrow. Go home and tell the yard boy he is gone tomorrow. Go on the construction sites and say to the mason and the carpenters that they are gone as of tomorrow and then see tomorrow what happens in Cayman. We have to stop being fools. We have to be sensible people. Generally we are, but I believe that the biggest part of this holler and cry comes as a result of prejudice, discrimination and a desire by a certain number of people in this society to keep the ruling class in place and keep the working class in their place.

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Order.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, something I know which bothers some people is those Jamaicans. Well, plenty of those Jamaicans are cooking the food that thousands of Caymanians are going home to eat this evening. They are cleaning their babies' diapers during the day, laying the blocks, doing the carpenter work, all of that stuff. Now, let me just say this, Madam Speaker, to make clear my position: I am someone who does my best to try to live with all people, but when it comes to nationalities the one that I know most is Jamaican.

When I was growing up as a boy there was no such thing . . . I mean poverty made sure that you did not get anyone to do the work for you, you would have to get out there and slave for yourself. After Mrs. Theoline McCoy taught me, my teachers were Jamaicans: Ms. Plunket and Ms. Mitchell. I was a sickly child and it was Nurse Blair and the rest of them who dealt with it. The doctors that attended to me were Jamaican doctors. When I went to Mico College it was Jamaicans who were teaching me. I went to the University of the West Indies and it was Jamaicans that were teaching me. So I have quite a respect for Jamaicans, and I have many friends that are Jamaicans. I want to make it very clear that in any kind of instance where we are considering persons for the grant of Caymanian status, Jamaicans must definitely have their considerations too. I want to make that absolutely clear. However, like many Caymanians who I believe should be in jail, I think there may be Jamaicans in the society who should be in jail too. I simply balance my view on it so no one believes I am a "run-away train" in any one direction.

Madam Speaker, one of the things that really gets me is this thing about status and this "reckless and detrimental thing that is happening here". I look at this People's Progressive Movement insert that was in the Caymanian Compass, dated 6 September and I see some faces here . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, once you are finished, can you undertake to supply the Chair with a copy please?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, may I request the Minister to lay a copy of it on the Table of this Honourable House?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker, it is so pretty and nice in colour. Definitely I will lay it on the Table, have no fear. In fact, I will go and buy a copy of this newspaper and make sure I get the one in colour.

When I look at some faces . . . I see Mario Ebanks, Mr. Rupert Moxam, Mr. Colin Charles Adams and Mr. Anthony Duckworth. I wonder if any of these got Caymanian status.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: No.

[Laughter]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: So these are the only ones who should get Caymanian status? Are they the only people who are proper to get Caymanian status? That is the point I make; I believe that is the opinion of the Opposition, and I am telling you that you are solely wrong. This country belongs to more than accountants or lawyers or rich people; it needs both. That is where this Government stands on it and that is where I stand.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Tell them, Minister! Tell them!

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: I want to know, if we were so hard on giving status and if it was such a terrible thing, how come they come.

Madam Speaker, referring back to when I was a young man going to college in Jamaica, I know what it is to live in a society where there are strong, racial overtones. When I was in university they used to hiss their teeth at me and call me a red man or yellow man. I would go to the bank on campus and the first thing they said before saying good morning . . . in fact, they did not say good morning; they hissed their teeth. A red man had come in front of them. I do not want to see that ever in this country, and it is not going to happen as long as I have any ability to see that it stops.

Hon. Roy Bodden: There are those who want it to happen that way here. If they had their way it would.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: This business that “it is good for me but it is not good for you” is a problem. Madam Speaker, the papers have helped . . . “The Gold Rush” . . . the headlines have simply been wonderful in promoting what the Opposition has been saying.

“The rush down by the police station has been a result of what the Leader of Opposition and his other colleagues have said.”

I quote from the 12 September Caymanian Compass.

“Some in the line by the police station referred to the Compass front page story on Wednesday’s paper in which PPM Leader, Mr. Kurt Tibbetts, had “busted the news” that the UDP Government was planning to give possible status to about 6,000 people before the end of the year and the only criteria needed was to be alive and a police record, people in higher places and some other procedure which they did not know about.” That is what started the stampede in “the gold rush.” It is on the front page of the newspaper. That is what started “the gold rush”.

Madam Speaker, I would like to table a copy of this so it is also in the records of the House.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Let us not talk about what the Government is doing and that we did not know what we were doing, which is a run away. It is a run away because the Opposition made it a run away. They and some other persons who were misinformed told people that Government was “giving away status.” How are you going to give it away when you do not have it to give away? It is granted in special circumstances.

Madam Speaker, I can say that I know that within the number of persons that have been granted status there are some poor individuals in the very low income brackets, and some, I am told, in the very rich income brackets. Unfortunately, I am not closely associated with them; I am just told that they fall in those categories. I tend to know more the average citizens, nothing against either side.

Madam Speaker, one thing that we need to make sure of is that we do not create social disharmony in this country. What the Opposition needs to take into account (when they are talking about who is getting status and parading certain people in their papers, et cetera) is that they are not sending a message that we do not want to send in this society, and that has never been here until now.

It would be remiss of me if I did not refer to something that was raised yesterday by the Second Elected Member for George Town. In his zeal to show a wrong doing and particularly to direct that wrong doing at me, he went into a situation regarding his brother-in-law. Now, Madam Speaker, my mother – bless her soul – who is 80 years old now, often says to me, “You know you sit around and keep your tongue in your mouth [as if it would be any place else] and you do not say anything when people criticise you or whatever the case may be." I only do that certain times, and on a certain level then I respond.

The impression was given that I did some particular evil, in that the Second Elected Member's brother-in-law was one of the grantees of Caymanian status. I think it is necessary just to pause a moment to explain to this House the circumstances surrounding it. I have been around now for about 17 months or so since I have assumed one of the offices of Minister in the Cabinet. The Second Elected Member's sister is a doctor and she wanted to come back to her country to apply for a job. The situation that I was faced with by certain people in management at the Hospital . . . thank heavens I had gotten it changed from a Department into a Health Service Authority where I did have a little more authority to demand that certain things be done.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, you have one hour remaining.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The application from one of our doctors was not getting consideration because for her to be employed it might threaten doctor so and so who was there in a certain section. I made it extremely clear, as I can sometimes, that she was going to be employed and if it was going to create a threat to 'Doctor X' then 'Doctor X' had to get out so it was no threat. I am glad that she came and she is a member of the Hospital staff. I did not know, I was told by a staff of the Ministry that she was also married to a doctor. That made it ever greater, oh wonderful, particularly in a specialisation: Obstetrician/Gynaecologist, something in the medical field that is in high demand within the Hospital. I was glad to know he was here.

I want to clarify what I did because two different people from the Brac called me last night and it was reported on the radio said this, that and the other.

I had occasion to meet the Second Elected Member's for George Town brother-in-law and found him to be a very pleasant, soft spoken, respectful, cool kind of person. I called him and informed him that the Cabinet was considering certain persons in special circumstances for Caymanian status. I asked him if he had Caymanian status and he said no. I said to him that I wanted to know if I could put his name forward and if he would object and he said no. He said he considers here his home; his family is here and so on. I said, "Fine I will put your name forward." I did call him when the Cabinet accepted the recommendation. If he is not special to the Second Elected Member for George Town, as far as I am concerned, he is special to me and I think he is special to the country. I leave that story right there.

Madam Speaker, I would like to add that I do not know but I believe the doctor lives in my district and I know he would not be able to vote for me. I just thought that I should add that little appendix to it.

Madam Speaker, we have now heard from the Opposition about the impact of persons here who have been on work permits for 40-odd years. All of a sudden, that is going to have an impact. It did not have it before, but it is going to have an impact now. That is another scare tactic.

Well, I know the Honourable Minister for Education is building two schools; one is about to start soon. It will actually be three because one is supposed to be in West Bay later on as well. So, he is aware that there will be need for more schools. At present, there is need for schools for placements and so on. I am not trying to disagree that if a person is granted Caymanian status, and they have legitimate children, that they may apply for them eventually to come to Cayman. There might be a kind of a situation where the number might be greatly lessened by the very word "legitimate" as things go, but that is a possibility.

The people who have been granted Caymanian status are now living in Cayman. I do not know if there are any, like the Second Elected Member for George Town says, who are not living here. If they are not living here, well, they do not make any impact. As far as I am concerned, they should be living here if they have Caymanian status. However, there is going to be no more impact on the Health Services than there were before because it is the same contribution to health insurance where they are working now. It might impact if they reach a point which most people are reaching in this country; 60 plus and so on, and the insurance companies refuse to cover them. All of them have fallen victim and have to be covered by Government. Even in instances where people have money and are willing to pay their premiums, the insurance companies are making them indigent. So, I do not see any great alarm, fear or whatever in that regard.

Madam Speaker, it is alarm that is unfounded and it is but an effort of the Opposition Members to create a situation to scare some people who they can scare. It is not leaving a very good feeling in the minds of many people who have been fortunate to be granted Caymanian status. They are now seeing a side of the people they thought they knew and they now are becoming concerned in a kind of scenario; behold thy enemy.

[Laughter]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I wish to make it very clear that I think there needs to be a law. As other Members of the Cabinet have said for almost a year—certainly more than nine months—I can personally say also, a law was supposed to be produced to be brought to this Legislative Assembly based on the findings of the Immigration Review Team (IRT) and it has not come. I, for one, am advocating that. I know the things that are in it because it came to the Cabinet, and I wish to assure the Second Elected Member for George Town that I have not changed my view on what is in that legislation. In the meantime, the Government had to do something. "This Government had the gumption, the guts . . . ". What did he say?

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: This Government had the "audacity" to do something for the first time and not talk about things. We did it instead of talking about it. I personally believe that it will have to change now once and for all because the Government has had the "gumption" to act for the first time. It cannot remain the way it is anymore, it has to change. So, everyone who was gutless and afraid before can now get on the bandwagon and blame us while it takes place.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, as for it being unlawful, if that was the case the Second Elected Member—and I do not know what he would have to file—would have filed that long ago if he thought that it was unlawful. He is talking to hear himself talk.

[Laughter]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, there have been grants of status and perhaps may have been granted to persons who seemingly would not qualify by virtue of having criminal records. I do not know about those and I want to make it absolutely clear that the Second Elected Member for George Town could never begin to dream to be patriotic or nationalistic than I am. I take what I do dead serious and any criminal that may have been given status I think something has to be done about that.

That brings me to a point of why things like that may have happened? I am not saying something here that I have not said to His Excellency the Governor, but it is because, in large part, the Civil Service has become a sieve. Generally speaking, it seems there is no such thing as confidential anymore. I do not know about now but it is supposed to be the way it was when I was a civil servant. I signed what was called The Official Secret Act, and there are certain things that were confidential to me that I have to take to my grave. If I talked about them anytime in my life, I could be prosecuted if the Government felt I was divulging information that was contrary to the best interest of the state.

I certainly believe that something has to be done about the Civil Service to educate everyone that there is something called "confidentiality". You cannot know public business and divulge it to the embarrassment or the detriment of someone. Why is government different, Madam Speaker? I used to be the government's training officer. I used to teach these things. Why is it so different? Any bank may believe it is so great and powerful, any accounting firm, any law firm, but they are all just individual components that make up the great world of that organisation called government, and it must find a way to deal fairly with all of them, balancing and helping to keep them regulated. That is like the leaks from the Health Services Authority.

I want to say on this note of confidentiality: if I find out who is leaking information out of the Health Services Authority, as sure as I am standing here I will take that information and pass it to the Attorney General's office and ask that they be prosecuted to the full extent of the Law. I believe in the principle of confidentiality and particularly for another reason: if they are going to talk the private business about someone's finances, those same stupid people might talk the business about someone's confidential medical condition if they have access to it. I want to make that clear. That is how I stand on that issue. That is what I believe and no one should ever doubt that I will do it.

I think on a whole the Government needs to stop-up the sieve because that is the only way that certain information can be known to the public – leaks from people that are being paid from the government purse to do the government job and to keep confidential the business of the government. That is why I have the question that I do now from a Member of the Opposition, namely, the Member from East End, to tell him who was hired since last year May and how much they are earning.

Point of Order

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order, Member from East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Minister is saying that it is because of leaks in the Health Services Authority why I have asked this question.

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Order.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: That is not the case, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Member from East End, are you seeking a point of elucidation?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker. He is misleading the House if he says that that is the reason why he has a question from me.

The Speaker: Member from East End, I believe I am correct in saying that Standing Order 34 says, “A Member shall not interrupt another Member except-

- (a) by rising on a point of order, when the Member speaking shall resume his seat and the Member interrupting shall direct attention to the point which he wishes to submit to the Presiding Officer for decision;
- (b) to elucidate some matter raised by the Member in the course of his speech, if the Member speaking is willing to give way and resumes his seat and if the Member wishing to interrupt is called by the Presiding Officer;”

Subsection (c) does not apply in these circumstances.

When one looks at May’s one will see that there is not an option. That is what I asked in the beginning. You either can rise on a point of order, which I will have to rule on, or you will have to rise on elucidation, but you cannot rise on a combination.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, on a point of order. The Minister is misleading the House if he is saying that it is as a result of leaks from the Health Services Authority that I have subsequently submitted a question to him.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: You just come here and you think you know it all.

The Speaker: Order.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Members, please pass comments through the Chair.

Member from East End, I appreciate the fact that you have chosen one of the two rather than combining it. The Chair still needs to be satisfied with the utilisation of the terminology “if” it does not put it into that category yet. I am giving you an opportunity to get it right, Member.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I have changed the “if” to “when he says that as a result of leaks I have submitted the question.”

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Honourable Minister for Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, it is as a result of a leak. Clearly, this is coming out of the boardroom or the highest levels of management in the HSA that people can get on the government radio station and read off word-for-word things which were done in boardroom. They are leaks, and I wonder if the Member was prompted by that information that he wanted it verified in the form of a question in the House, or did he just have an inspiration that he wanted to ask that question.

The Speaker: Member from East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When I have inspiration it is not about those things. The Minister must also recognise that the Net News had a headline concerning salaries of the executives of the Health Services Authority. Therefore, it was not that I had any direct information from any member of the board. He is correct in saying that as a result of the media I submitted a question for him to answer. Thank you.

The Speaker: One moment, Honourable Minister.

I am grateful to the Member from East End for that clarification. I should also wish to draw to the Member’s, and all Members’, attention Standing Order 22(1) (b). I would not have been in a position to say this until I have just heard what the Member from East End said, hence the reason that I am making comment now.

“(b) If a question contains a statement of fact, the Member asking it shall make himself responsible for the accuracy of the statement, and no question shall be based upon a newspaper report or upon an unofficial publication;”

Having said that, I wish to see the Member with the Clerk on this particular question, once today’s proceedings are concluded.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I could not, at the time of approving it, read your mind. Based on your own evidence in this record, you have confirmed that it was submitted not on inspiration, but as a result of your reading it in a newspaper.

Honourable Minister for Health.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, the leaks that I speak about that are in the newspapers, and information that I hear read on Radio Cayman are clearly coming from the boardroom. However, Madam Speaker, if I should later have evidence of anyone running around with documents or information which is privy to the HSA, I will be passing that on to the authorities and request that they deal with it accordingly.

When the Opposition talks about the freedom of speech and not being able to speak, the government radio station gives two hours, four days a week of airtime for all and sundry to vent their spleen about everything. Usually 98 per cent criticise everything the Government does, but they cannot truthfully say that it is not freedom of speech. There may be too much but they cannot say there is none.

Madam Speaker, because I am part of the Cabinet and have participated in the decision to make grants of Caymanian Status, it has not put any blood on my hands. Therefore, I do not have to wash any from my hands. I think what I participated in is good for this country and that is an indication.

Instead of talking for all these decades, this Cabinet—the first one ever—has taken the step to say to a cross-section of people in this country, “Look we recognise you, we see you as part of us. We believe you have played a special role and we would like to integrate you and instead of talking, do something that you can concretely feel a part of us.” That is what I believe has happened.

I would also say that I know that people have been snuck on the list by people associated with the People’s Progressive Movement. They do it through a third party: “Put this name on.”

I know also that people involved and connected with their executive have gone to the Glass House to collect letters and take them out to people and say, “Here, this is your letter. You know the Government passed it but we took care of it. Remember how we are going to vote.”

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member from the district of George Town, do you have a point of order?

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please proceed accordingly.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: The Honourable Minister is misleading the House with that outrageous statement. If he knows of any Member of the Parliamentary Opposition or any member of the PPM executive who has done that, he must say so. Otherwise, he must withdraw the remark.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Health, are you in a position to so say?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I am saying that that is my opinion and that is the information that was given to me . . . just like the Second Elected Member for George Town has his sources. I did not say him or any of the Members of this House. I figure his party . . . they say it is 700 people . . . oh, 1000 . . . so it is a thousand chances then . . .

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, in closing I note, I am unaware of any changes being made to the Elections Law to allow any new persons who have been granted status to vote, nor do I know of any changes to the British Nationality Act to allow them to vote within a month or two. Maybe these things are hidden somewhere from me, but I am unaware of them.

Now, Madam Speaker, I would like to refer to the Motion before I take my seat.

The Speaker: You have 31 minutes remaining.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. This Motion is incorrect, in that there is no move known to me by the Government to make status grants of 6,000 to anyone in one fell swoop. I do not know who the hawk is swooping down to do it. Anyhow, I do not believe that there is any inundation; the groundswell of apprehension except that which the PPM is creating in the society. I do not condemn the Governor in Cabinet and censure the Government, but I condemn and I censure the PPM.

[Laughter]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: The far-reaching implications that the grants of status have had is for the good of this country, and I am glad that I participated in it.

[Members: Hear! Hear!]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Also, I would imagine that the Opposition had all the time in the world for holding widespread consultations just as, I think, all the Members of Government have had, meaning the full group of people who form the majority.

Madam Speaker, I will not support any change to the section that allows only six grants per year. I am glad to see that this Government has also broken that chain that only Attorneys General and Governors could be granted status. When you really think about it, it is Governors granting themselves. I am glad that that chain has been broken.

Madam Speaker, I will close on the note of what President Theodore Roosevelt once said. I quote: “It is not the critic who counts, not the man who points out how the strong man stumbled, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena; whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs and comes short again and again; who knows the great enthusiasms, the great devotions, and spends himself in a worthy cause; who, at best, knows in the end the triumph of high achievement; and who, at the worse, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat.”

Hour of Interruption—4.30 pm

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of 4.30 pm. I recognise the Leader of Government to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to allow the House to go on until 7 pm.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, yesterday we indicated to Members that we would continue business until 7 o'clock this evening. Therefore, under Standing Order 86 we move to suspend Standing Order 10(2).

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow the Honourable House to continue its business until the hour of 7 pm.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow the business of the House to continue beyond 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: We will now take the afternoon break for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 4.33 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.59 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

I recognise the Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: I rise to give my contribution to the Motion presently before the House. Madam Speaker, I want to begin by saying that I recognise that this is an emotional matter. This is a matter that will draw from Members' feelings which run to their very souls.

During the suspension I had an incident which greatly perturbed me, and I want to share it with you, Madam Speaker, because I am not certain yet as to how I am going to deal with the matter other than, as far as I am concerned, the matter is not closed. When someone trespasses on my honour—the clan from which I come—it is a serious matter.

I was approached by two young men and I was rather surprised that one of them, namely, Mr.

Christopher Wight, said to me, “Roy, when you sell status for vote. . .” I said, “Excuse me?” He proceeded to repeat it in the close confines of where I was standing in the Chamber. I was coming up the stairs.

Madam Speaker, you can hear by my voice that I am upset. As far as I am concerned, the matter is not over.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, can you indicate whether that person who brought on the altercation is still within the precincts of this Honourable Chamber?

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, one was Mr. Christopher Wight. I note that his brother tried, after he realised the seriousness of the statement, to mediate and to get him to understand. There is also another person who tried to mediate who is in the gallery, namely, Ms. Lucille Seymour.

I am grossly insulted and very upset and I want it to be recorded that if this is the kind of supporter that the PPM has, it is no wonder that this country is being polarised to the brink of civil war.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I would wish to thank you for bringing this most serious matter to the attention of the Chair, and I would direct the Serjeant with the assistance of the Police Inspector . . .

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker . . .

The Speaker: Yes, please, if that person is still within the precinct, have him escorted away.

Please continue, Honourable Minister.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Thank you, Madam Speaker. You will understand there is still the matter of how I personally choose to deal with it.

The Chairman: Certainly, Honourable Minister, but I felt it was very necessary for the Chair to deal with a matter such as this swiftly, as all and sundry would realise that this Speaker has no intention of being intimidated by anyone.

It is my duty as the Speaker to protect both the Members of the Opposition, the Members of the Government, my staff and all others who enter within these hollowed Chambers. I will not tolerate such altercations and adulterations of precedence, which has existed for many decades, within the hollowed Chambers of the Parliament.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Madam Speaker, during my time here I have seen three attempts to solve the problem of immigration in this country. All of these attempts, in my opinion, were marred by an unwillingness and inability, and perhaps, importantly too, an unintentionality to solve the immigration problem.

Madam Speaker, it was my understanding that when this political directorate of which the now

Leader of Opposition was the head came to power, this was one of the challenges we were going to approach with a view to putting some finality to it. It is true that every Honourable Member to a man mentioned this in their campaign as one of the challenges that the country needed to come to grips with in order that we could move into the 21st century.

Madam Speaker, earlier on in the political directorate the members of the Cabinet drew up a charter. It had about 14 clauses and it was signed by the then Governor as an indication of his acceptance of the direction in which we thought necessary to take the country. One of those clauses read: "We pledge to promote human rights and a call for increased social responsibility while emphasising that strong rights presume strong responsibilities."

Another clause read, "We pledge to promote public interest without denying the legitimate interest of the various groups which make up the Cayman Islands."

Madam Speaker, it is inferred from both of those pledges that we recognise that there was a need to deal with some persons in the Cayman Islands who were outside of the immigration mainstream. I grant that the Opposition has a democratic right to object, but I have told them before that what I do not like about them is that they are too quick to be duplicitous; too eager to adopt double standards. It was their interest then so why is it not their interest now?

The ridiculousness as to propose that we could solve this outstanding immigration problem by making six grants per year is simply ludicrous and irresponsible, coming from an entity which should seek to promote responsibility, fairness and a just society. I take note too. I call it inflamed language, mindless. These are inflamed words, inciteful (I do not mean "insightful") loaded; polarising the community, inflaming the passions.

I am a historian and I take note too of the following not an insignificant observation and there is a rising tide of reaction in this country that alarms persons like myself because I know where some people would like to lead this country. However, I stand for fairness and I am happy that I am a part of a Cabinet which recognises that we have to clear this matter up because it has the potential of overwhelming us.

The Minister of Health made reference to the fact that we made two visits to the UK, firstly, in 1995 and the second visit was in 1996. Madam Speaker, we were told by officials of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in no uncertain terms on one occasion, and this is how it was expressed to us: "There is one regret we have and that is that we put you in charge of your own immigration policies for we are tired of receiving complaints through letters of long-term residents in the Cayman Islands who cannot attain Caymanian status."

It is a situation that we view with the utmost gravity. Madam Speaker, we know that when this political directorate reinstated the quota we were just a little ahead of the courts because there was a challenge.

I heard the Second Elected Member for George Town talking about those people who will issue legal challenges now because they were not considered. Well, there are also those who threatened to issue it before because an unreasonable quota was imposed. We have done the right thing and I am happy that there are persons within the Government who are not timid or afraid to make decisions. I am also alarmed that the Motion could be crafted to censure the Government on such flimsy and unreasonable terms. It is the democratic right, I suppose, of the Opposition to craft censure Motions, but the substance of this one is not even worth the paper that it is written on.

Madam Speaker, the Opposition has called their numbers, they have swelled their ranks, according to them, by those people who are aggrieved. What I would like to know is the numbers of those people who are relieved that there is at last an attempt to recognise that they are appreciated. As I look across on the Opposition—I will not call any names—I see at least one Member who has three close members of their families who are expatriates. I wonder how they are feeling. I wonder if among the six that the Opposition would give if three would be their family members, and who the other three would be.

You see, Madam Speaker, such hypocrisy does not belong in a forum or a society which claims that it is just. Or, perhaps there is such ignorance that it is not realised that these kinds of observations are being made. No entity achieves greatness by shrinking, none. You do not have to be a master of physics to understand that. Greatness usually comes with expansion, be it in physics, business, or ordinary life. So, I do not know how the Cayman Islands could prosper by shrinking the population base to a few that will be favoured by the PPM. I would hope that there is some genius out there, when I have sat down, who can explain that to me.

I do not know how the Members of the PPM can get up and say that they have good conscience and realise that there are people who have been here for as long as 50 years and are nowhereans. I pose the question: if these people are good enough to cook our food; if they are good enough to raise our children; if they are good enough to come in the most private recesses of our houses, explain it to me logically and clearly how are they not good enough for us to accept them as fellow citizens. Is it, Madam Speaker, that they want to go back to the old days where we were classified by skin colour or wealth? What is it? In a society which claims Christian heritage how can we be so unthinking? How can we be so uncharitable? How can we be so callous?

Madam Speaker, while it is fresh I want to address the comment made by the Second Elected Member for George Town. According to him they have a tape recorder . . . well, I did not want to interrupt the proceedings of the House because I have due regard for the Member's turn to speak and I have regard for time. The statement I made was that many of these persons, by a quirk in the various pieces of legislation we have, have the right to vote already because some of them are naturalised but they have no status. I did not say that the Government (because I was not speaking for the Government) was going to bring a law to ensure that they could all vote. I know of no Honourable Member on this side who is that desperate for votes because everyone over here won by a significant majority.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Except me.

[Laughter]

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I do not know of anyone who is that desperate over here who would have to do that. So, I just put that down as sophistry and rhetoric.

Madam Speaker, I hear some howls like the stones are hitting people.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Roy Bodden: You know, Madam Speaker, it would be foolhardy to really expect that any entity in the Cayman Islands would—"in one fell swoop," I believe is the language of the Second Elected Member for George Town, the architect of this Motion and the legal mind over there—make 6,000 citizens. As big-hearted as we are we have not taken leave of our senses. We are just trying to be fair. What has been done is not illegal according to the Law because the Law allows for the grant under special reason.

I know what the problem is because when former Governors and Attorneys General got it no outcry was made. Now that these grants cover the full spectrum, including some of the humble, dispossessed and disenfranchised, some people are alarmed. Some elements are so begrudging that they are not prepared to acknowledge the existence of cooks, housekeepers and nannies.

Madam Speaker, there are elements in this Honourable House who have a social conscience; who realise that if this country is to progress there must be a new social contract. There are elements in this House who are emboldened by democratic ideals and by the necessity to broaden the population base of this country because we have a moral obligation to so do and we are not hypocritical. We have not forgotten . . .

I did not go around in the highways and byways promising people that if I got in I would see that they became citizens, but I know some people who did it and they are not on this side, at least not all of them. I leave that right where it is. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

Madam Speaker, I know the feeling because I have been there. When you have a crowd egging you on it is easy to get carried away and play to the gallery. It is significantly more difficult to be restrained and sober. I listen to the PPM, and the problem I have with them is that their debates do not illuminate and inform; do not lift anyone up; do not educate anyone. It inflames them and impassions them and polarises. Is it that they do not have the ability or is it that that is the kind of game they want to play? It is the responsibility of a representative of the people to elevate them; to lift them up; to inform them so they can make the correct choices; not to take advantage of them by inflaming them and using the emotive language that they can latch onto and get carried away with?

It is my objective that every time I rise here and sit back down the people who listen to me must have learned at least one thing. Perhaps that is the schoolteacher in me. When I am given to sophistry I practice that in the solitude of the jungle where I live, not over the microphone with a national audience or my colleagues in the Parliament. I say that this gesture cannot be as faulty as the Opposition would have people believe it is.

I question; given the circumstances, if roles were reversed would they not have done the same thing? Are they telling me that they are so disobliging, uncharitable and unchristian that they would continue to be satisfied with dispensing six when there are 6,000? It would take a millennium, assuming there were no additions to the list for any reason at all.

Now how in the "creation of crabs" could anyone expect that to be acceptable? How? Tell me! It seems that we need to remind ourselves of how many people are related to Caymanians through blood; through marriage, and then how many have the interest of close friends. Or, do we want to make this an insular and exclusive society as it was in history? No, Madam Speaker, not all.

There is a distant and echoing bugle sounding the charge, but the charge is to advance, not retreat. The Cayman Islands must move forward and not go back into time. There must be progressive leadership and not recidivist and regressive persons. Is there a social cost? Of course there has to be but many of these people, by the very fact that they have been here labouring honestly, have already made a down payment.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Please pass comments through the Chair.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I do not know but I can say that some thought was taken, questions were raised. The political directorate has an obligation only to honour the legitimate offspring. I do not believe that because people are settled in their arrangement now that there is going to be any necessary exodus or mass movement. We know in any case that additional classrooms have to be built. I would suspect that some people are going to exercise their option, but I also have faith in the rationality of human beings.

While there may be cases of persons wishing to benefit from a certain gift, I do not believe that there is going to be any great run. If there is, it is the responsibility of the Government to cope. That is why the Government has responsible Ministers like me. They will have to find practical, creative and affordable ways of coping, which brings me to the point of temporary classrooms. That is the problem which I inherited and dealt with.

The temporary classrooms which were imported are no less aesthetically pleasing or practical than the permanent ones. I have already made efforts to build the three schools that are needed and, if more beyond that will be needed, then we will make efforts to build them too. So, I do not see anything frightening or insurmountable by the challenge that we have sought to deal with. The coin has two sides.

These persons who have been endowed and are securing their tenure are now going to participate more deeply in the society by investing in houses, apartments and in businesses. I do not necessarily subscribe to the argument that established Caymanians are going to be disadvantaged from competition from these elements. They are already here. These people are already working, they are already entrenched in the society, so I do not see where any unregulated; any dearth of competition from them is going to detrimentally affect Caymanians. I will tell you what the solution is to the survival and the continued prosperity of Caymanians: ensure that they are properly trained and educated to compete in a global world.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Roy Bodden: This Government is ensuring that the interest of Caymanians and others who are here legally are protected by enforcing strong labour laws which are fair; not short-sighted, protectionist policies it seems the Opposition is leaning towards.

I outlined this morning in a statement I made to the House that the Government is already well on its way as far as education is concerned.

The five-year, $6 million, Information and Communications Technology project with IBM is how we are going to guarantee that Caymanians are able to continue offering excellent services and have marketable skills. I do not want to frighten people away, nor do I want to contribute to the notion that the Government had done this without thinking of the major consequences. That is not to say that there are not going to be an uneven surface on the playfield, but I believe that we can meet the challenges that are going to confront us as a result of this.

Already people who have benefited have said, "Now that we have been bestowed this privilege, here is what we are going to do . . ."

Madam Speaker, I will say something else: has anyone made an attempt to find out how much money leaves this country every week or every month by persons who make remittances overseas because they live in an uncertainty; not sure whether their work permit is going to be renewed or whether their tenure is going to be abruptly cut off and told they are not needed anymore? That is not to say that remittances will not continue to be made, but I bet they will not be so significant an urgency now.

Some of that money will remain in the jurisdiction because those people will now have interest and reason to put it to use here. I am not hearing the Opposition talking about that; I am not hearing them talking about the drain on foreign exchange.

We have 6,000 people here who do not know whether there is going to be a knock on the door tomorrow. I do not hear them talking about those things. Is it that they are so shallow that they cannot conceive of these things? Is it that they can only spread fear and try to smear the Government and talk about divisiveness and that certain measures are close to fraud? Madam Speaker, is it because these words are legally loaded that they use them? "Treasonous," "close to fraud." Are they intended to intimidate, frighten, drive fear, to make the populace believe that the Government is an ogre?

Was there any attempt to sit down conscientiously to see if there are any pros to what the Government is doing? No, there was no attempt to do that; there was a rush to try to indict the Government with a censure Motion. Censure Motion, Madam Speaker? Me? I participated in three. The Minister of Health and I were the architects. Sometimes it was just he and I alone because when the now Leader of the Opposition was with us, if he thought that too many licks were going to fly he sought his little four-inch fence.

[Laughter]

Hon. Roy Bodden: I do not know how someone with his derriere could be comfortable on a four inch fence!

Madam Speaker, I still believe that there are people who do not deserve status. When I come across them I write, particularly if I believe in the world of employment that they are not treating Caymanians as they deserve to be treated . . . my pen still has ink – this Minister. However, I do not know of anyone on this list who was in that category. I know that there are geniuses who know more about me than I know about myself, even at 57. I thought that the mother who brought me into the world had deceased.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: You might need another one.

The Speaker: Order!

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, this is a serious business. The Government has addressed it in the correct way and the Opposition has sought to make political hay out of it. That is the business of the Opposition and I respect that. However, what I do not respect is that those who are supposed to be responsible have not realised that the language they use runs the risk of inflaming passions, polarising the country and driving a wedge between elements which should have some semblance of coherence and togetherness. Madam Speaker, it is a path on which they should tread with the greatest of care. That is why the Government has chosen to debate this matter in Parliament.

I want to say something in all seriousness: there is another side to this debate and there are established Caymanians in droves who believe that what the Government has done is right. We did not bring them in the streets to any meetings because we did not wish to. We recognise the emotion and the fever pitch that this gesture is capable of igniting. We did not encourage our supporters to come to the gallery.

Do you know how many of our supporters wanted us to have a meeting? [They] castigated us for not having a meeting because they wanted to show that they are significant enough numbers behind us to be counted also. The Government is judicious and wise and there will come a time when we will call upon you to do that, but that time is not now. We believe that the matter should not be inflamed and impassioned. Matters such as this will drive brother against brother. That is not what we want to do and we know that we can achieve our objective without resorting to that. By the same token, neither is the Government going to accept this nonsense because, if anything, we deserve an award and not a censure.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: That is right.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: That is all you can think about.

The Speaker: Order!

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: The day that comes you are going to get a flogging that you never thought you would get in George Town though. The flogging that Anton Bodden put on you was not enough. . .

The Speaker: Order, Members.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, reactionaries may choose to thumb their noses at what we have done. However, realists, and those with a social conscience, will praise us because they will realise that we have sought to fulfil a long needed move and a glaring and inconsistent situation.

I listened to the Honourable Leader of Opposition and he, in his usual, eloquent ability, said the whole world and then at the end of the day said nothing. Echoing like a false god . . .

An Hon. Member: Sweet nothing.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I was reminded that that Honourable Member and I were so close that I drove him around for three years. I know his sentiments on this because we discussed it many times. There are not many people closer to you than your driver. I know how my honourable friend feels because this was one of the things he used to defeat the former Minister of Education. No . . . the fairness, granting of status . . . hear the trouble maker, hear the agent provocateur . . . how he so quickly twisted it.

[Laughter]

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, in order for me to determine whether the last statements are of relevance, perhaps I may ask you to oblige the House with an interpretation.

[Laughter]

Hon. Roy Bodden: Yes, Madam Speaker, "agent provocateur" in French is the trouble maker.

[Laughter]

An Hon. Member: There is another one called dirty trouble maker.

The Speaker: Sorry for the interruption. Please continue.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I know how the Honourable Leader felt about people who were here for so long . . . disenfranchised . . . and I know the battles that we fought against the forces who sought to perpetuate these kinds of injustices. So, I know that his heart . . . well, he did not say anything too detrimental anyway. That was for the Second Elected Member for George Town.

I know that is his style and that is his role; he is a sweeper. That is what he does. The leader comes out like a leader, he does not want to get dirty or do any dirty work. But he is flanked by his younger, more robust colleague who says "Leave it to me because I have the advantage of knowing the law."

Madam Speaker, to our detriment, he is even learning the gift of the gab. I am frightened because bit-by-bit he is shedding his docility and sometimes he comes close to even shedding civility because he can punch.

[Laughter]

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, they have crafted this Motion in an attempt to embarrass us, in an attempt to hound us from office, but it shall not happen. We believe in the rightness of this cause, but I am alarmed because I had two incidences. I will not repeat the first one but both really alarmed me because I have never been accosted like this. I mean, people curse at me all the time. I have no great fear of that. I tell them sometimes that I would rather get the curses than the licks with sticks and stones because curses do not break any bones.

I want the Opposition to realise and to be responsible in their approach. I would like to believe they are cognisant of what this can do. I know they are still coming off the euphoria of their inaugural meeting when they launched it, but they will soon sober up and come down to the reality. They need to realise that what was done was within the Law.

I do not know anything about any criminal who was deliberately given status. I do not know anything about anyone who was knowingly outside the jurisdiction or not in residence here who was deliberately and knowingly given status. What was dispensed was done so with the best of intentions. Of course, in any exercise of this magnitude some will fall through the cracks. It happens in the most sophisticated jurisdictions and societies, but what was done was legally done.

I resist with all my soul any attempt to smear me or the Government of which I am a part with any illegality. Any suggestion that what was done was treasonous . . . oh, Madam Speaker . . . it was raining the night when they had the meeting over there . . . "treasonous." That is a powerful word. That is perhaps the only charge on the statute books for which a man can be hung. You cannot use that word lightly and you mean to tell me that the Opposition is so reactionary that they would make bestowing of citizenship on deserving persons treasonous. Lord help us if they get in power.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, what do we think they would do?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I wonder if it was treasonous to get all those people to sign those signatures that they brought in those wheelbarrows and dumped at the foot of the Leader of Government Business. Further, when the investigation was made it was found out that they were "on ya" but they were not "of ya." I wonder if it is not treasonous to say, You can join our party if you just . . . Listen to this one now: You can join the party if you are resident in the Cayman Islands. They are castigating us to say well, really, we would like Caymanian citizens in our party. So, you see the duplicity. They are speaking from both sides of the mouth and playing to the gallery.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Oh yes, they are good for that in George Town, them two . . .

Hon. Roy Bodden: Citizenship is not a game. It should not be used to play to the gallery. I am glad they recognise the folly of their ways, Madam Speaker. I hope they repent.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order!

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, we have to ask ourselves when the chickens come home to roost, as they surely will, whether (by keeping people out, untenured, excluded, disenfranchised and outcast) we are not creating a greater problem for ourselves than we are doing when we seek to be charitable, inclusive and accommodating. Are we being indiscriminate? Madam Speaker, I do not know of being indiscriminate, but I believe from the statements I have read attributed to the Opposition and from listening to their debates that they would be discriminating. I believe that they would be willing to deprive some people of what is the natural human right. I see clearly by their behaviour that they have favourites they would want by the admission that they would reduce the quota to six.

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order, Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: The Honourable Minister is misleading the House. I have listened to him say it three times, and I decided to let it go, but the Motion speaks specifically to restricting the ability of Cabinet to grant status to six per annum. That is not what it says. It does not make a general provision about the grants of status.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: That was what you said on the courthouse steps.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: It was not, Madam Speaker, anything, such as the Leader of Government Business is suggesting. I ask the Honourable Minister to rephrase what he has said in relation to what the Motion proposes and what we have been saying. I can read it because it seems there is some . . .

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education . . .

Second Elected Member for George Town, you have made your point of order. The last resolve reads as follows: "BE IT RESOLVED THAT section 20 of the Immigration Law 2003 Revision be amended to restrict the ability of the Governor in Cabinet to grant Caymanian status so as to limit such grants . . .”

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Members, order! “. . . so as to limit such grants by the Governor in Cabinet to six per annum.”

I would ask the Honourable Minister for Education to keep his contribution within the ambit of that intent unless he otherwise has further proof to the contrary.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, the travesty is the fact that they would suggest that entity limits the grant to six. That is the travesty. Why only six? Which six? On what criterion would they be considered? That is what stings them because they know that that will only be acceptable among their ranks. They understand that the rank and file will never accept or be content with so stingy a number. I have proven that they are exclusionary, that they are for favourites. I am not condemning them; they condemn themselves. I am only repeating their proposal and I did not say that it was six overall.

The Second Elected Member was stung so much that he did not even allow me to conclude because I was going to point out that they said six by Cabinet. However, six by Cabinet or six by the party, or six by any methodology, is insufficient, inconsiderate, inhumane, and does not demonstrate any ability to be generous. I would have to say that it is downright disgraceful.

What kind of social contract does the PPM want to create for this country? I want them to tell me because I see in their propaganda what they have said. They have not yet said what kind of social contract they want to see in this society other than they want to obliterate the UDP, which they cannot do. I heard them say they have a thousand members. They could have ten thousand.

Madam Speaker, I do not even want to take the Second Elected Member seriously because he was my pupil at school, he is not in my class, he is not in my league. I taught him; not him teach me

[Laughter]

Hon. Roy Bodden: I was scratching my head to recall . . . well . . .

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Roy Bodden: No, I do not believe you went to school.

[Laughter]

The Speaker: Order.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, what is it the Opposition is trying to prove? Are they trying to prove that they are a credible Opposition? Are they trying to say that they agree with what the Government has done but are concerned because they were not in a position to do it? Are they trying to say that they can bring a frivolous Motion and get us all excited? I heard a voice from across the Floor saying all of them. I believe that strongly because knowing that lady and those gentlemen I do not believe that any of them over there who believes sincerely in their hearts that this Motion should stand. I believe that they brought this to try to test the strength of the Government. They have no hope, not even the most forlorn hope that this will pass, but they are just trying to shake us up prior to going into a debate on the Constitution. They are wasting their time. It is futile. It is nothing but a glorified waste of time because we do not do anything which we do not believe in. We do not do anything which we have not held wide consultations about.

Madam Speaker, I like that when I speak I hear groans and aches because that is when I know I am reaching the very soul. If I had known they were going to be so close, it seems like I should have called the priest because before I am finished it looks like we are going to have to offer some rights of absolution.

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Leader of the Opposition, please pass your comments through the Chair.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: He is trying to throw you off now. Roy, just do this now and flog them properly.

[Laughter]

The Speaker: I should say at this juncture that the Leader of Opposition has given notice that he had a prior engagement and would have to leave at 6 pm.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I did not know we got from debating immigration to now motherhood.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have one hour remaining and I think this is an appropriate time for a water break.

[Laughter]

Proceedings suspended at 6.01 pm

Proceedings resumed at 6.24 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Continuing the debate, the Honourable Minister responsible for Education with one hour remaining.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I do not know whether I am going to use the full hour. I have come to the point now that when I think that I have said my piece I will sit down whether that is ten minutes or all the time allotted to me.

I want to spend some time on the Motion to try to draw out the serious implications it has and to juxtapose the clauses in it against what we have done and what we have tried to achieve by so doing.

I want to preface what I have to say by saying that the time has come in the Cayman Islands to put a stop to individual indulgences and the indulgences of self-interested groups and to work for what is best for the community as a whole. I sense that in the Cayman Islands there are those who would wish to prosper simply by taking advantage of persons who are not in the position to fend for themselves as they should. I see it every working day by the experiences that are related to me at the Ministry level, particularly in the employment world. I am chagrined at the number of people who complain that they are being taken advantage of and sometimes hopelessly and futilely so because there seems to be no one willing to take up their cause. I worry about this society which I label as a frontier society.

People who are making it are so insensitive and have so little time and so little disposition to share and to deal with those who they think are lesser mortals than themselves. That is why I believe that this attempt by the Government—to enfranchise and to accommodate a greater number of people, some of whom have applied numerous times to get acknowledgement of Caymanian status and have been denied—is so important, sensitive and appropriate at this time.

We do not want to create a culture of defeat, a culture of alienation and disenchantment, a culture where people believe they have no vested interest in the society other than as mercenaries who work, make money and then have to remit it outside of the country. No matter how long they stay they will have no acknowledgement as an equal in the country to which they find themselves.

Madam Speaker, I say this with a deep sense of feeling and commitment. Caymanians cannot be expected to take in everyone, and quite naturally so because we are a small jurisdiction. However, Caymanians, and other people like me with a conscience, should be the last persons in the world to be uncharitable to anti-immigrants; to be against people who come here and work.

You know what, Madam Speaker? It hits close to home. Many times my paternal grandfather left here and emigrated to the United States and we, his progeny, were the beneficiaries of that. I too exercised my option so I know the coin from both sides. I cannot be prejudiced because my exposure teaches me that I cannot be that way.

I want to hit on a more serious point. When I confront challenges like these, particularly as they have to do with legislation . . . I am a great believer in Edmond Burke. He has left a legacy of advice for representatives, politicians and committed parliamentarians, that is suitable for any and all occasions.

I read this clause in the Motion: “AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly calls upon the Governor in Cabinet to forthwith cease making grants of Caymanian status pending the holding of widespread consultation with and the approval by the electorate on the course of action taken by the Governor in Cabinet in this matter.”

Madam Speaker, imagine how chaotic it would be if we had a system here that every time the Government wanted to make a decision they had to have widespread consultations with the electorate. What kind of system would that be? Democracy, even in its most ideal form, does not call for that. Furthermore, the reason why people elect representatives is to spare them the effort of making decisions themselves. Perhaps, most importantly, the reason why representatives are elected is because the people have a choice to elect those persons as representatives whom they believe are most capable of making these kinds of decisions of exigency. So, if we go back and say to them “We want to know . . . we are your representatives, you elected us to the Legislative Assembly but you tell us how many and whom should we give Caymanian status,” what a ridiculous situation that would be. I ask the question, how long would such a consultation be expected to last. Sensible people would say “You know what you do. I have put you there to make the decision. Go and make it.”

I substantiate that with this quote from Edmond Burke. It is a direct response to this resolution and I quote: “Your representative owes you, not his industry only, but his judgement; and he betrays, instead of serving you, if he sacrifices it to your opinion.”

Madam Speaker, it is unfair and it is a betrayal for us, having been placed in a position where we have to make these kinds of decisions, to throw it back into the laps of the people who sent us here to make them. So, that dismisses that resolution.

The other resolution says: “. . . Parliamentary Opposition has been inundated by a groundswell of apprehension and opposition to the recent actions and declared intentions of Government in relation to the process of the granting of Caymanian status.”

I can say that the balance to that is the numbers of people who are willing to queue up in the hot, broiling mid-day sun to get police records in order that they could submit their applications. Perhaps those numbers were just as great or greater. More than that, what about the silent majority who never had to do that but recognise that a moral and grave injustice is being rectified and called, encouraged and commended the Government for doing what is right? Let us not be frightened by that resolution either.

As to the resolution that the Legislative Assembly condemn and censure the actions of the Governor in Cabinet in making recent grants of Caymanian status, it would only have to be the PPM to expect that a man would expect vote for his own execution.

Madam Speaker, there is no reason for the Cabinet to censure itself on this matter. What was done was democratic, legal, appropriate, and above all, it was moral. So, why should the Legislative Assembly vote to censure the Cabinet for an act of morality? As for the resolution that says: “. . . the Legislative Assembly acknowledges the far reaching implications of the unilateral and wholesale grant of Caymanian status by the Governor in Council to thousands of persons in one fell swoop.”

Well, school is out as to the number. What I can say, however, is that it will be far less than the 6,000, as was reported that the PPM said is going to be granted. I do not see any need for that resolution either.

Madam Speaker, I want to turn to challenges that confront us, challenges which we must all, if we are honest, find solutions for. Perhaps this is the major one. Not only is it the responsibility of the Government to deal with this, it is also the responsibility of the Opposition to engage themselves constructively in order to meet this challenge and to find a solution. However, can that solution be constructively engaged by promoting fear, polarising the community, by accusative and inflaming language, by filling the gallery with persons, some of whom accost Members of this Honourable House and are rude to them? They are out of order. Can that challenge be met by the Second Elected Member for George Town threatening to put thousands in the street to vote with their feet? When you invite people to come to the street there is an inherent risk in that. I wonder if the Honourable Member has considered that. I wonder if the Opposition can constructively meet the challenge by drawing reference and using language like “blood” – confrontational language suggesting that they will stop nothing short of war. I wonder if that is the way the Opposition is meeting a constructive challenge. I wonder if there was any attempt by the Opposition to engage the Government in a constructive debate before hitting the streets to inflame the passions of the masses. No, there was none.

We have an advantage, let us cease it. What were their objectives? Is it to see that the country smoothly absorbs these people and that there is some sense of justice and fairness and parity and equality? Or, is it to polarise and rent asunder and split? On one side, we have the haves and on the other side we have the have nots. Is that the objective? Is it the objective to accentuate our differences or is it the objective to let us recognise our similarities? And who in here can say that he or she is independent and has ever been independent of these very people that they would seek to deny equality from them? Are they not some of our helpers? Are they not our in-laws? Are they not our friends? Are they not our associates? I do not get it, Madam Speaker. Why the double standard? Why the duplicity? Is it only because the Government beat them to the draw? Is that the reason? Or are they genuinely saying the Cayman Islands should be so exclusive that only the six people that we say, if we were the Government, should get the citizenship? I would like them to ponder on those things.

I can say, in all good conscience, that what has been done is right and just and it does not have to take any philosopher to understand that. I see people against the granting of Caymanian status who are Caymanian status holders themselves. Now, how in the world can that be? I see two brothers, famous scribes . . . the hypocrisy of it all. It stinks to the high heaven . . . I can get it but you, no, no. No more should be given. Madam Speaker, you know what they call themselves? Educated. I wonder if they do not believe that people are seeing through that. It could never be that those kinds of persons are going to posture themselves for election to public office.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Oh, yes . . .

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I would take pleasure in disrobing them publicly.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, the great historian Tacitus says: “The task of history is to hold out for reprobation every evil word indeed and to hold out for praise every good and noble word indeed.”

When the chickens have come home to roost we will see who was morally right; we will see who was correct and just; we will see who was considerate. I can only hope that the Opposition comes to their senses and cultivate a social conscience, which is obviously lacking at this point. I hold no brief against anyone over there. Heaven knows all of them are treated with respect by this speaker, but I am concerned that they are wayward; they have lost their way and it seems that there is no one capable of helping them to find the right direction. Would to heaven that they would come a little closer to this side before it is too late.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Make an alter call.

Hon. Roy Bodden: They are lost. How can you lead a country with no social conscience? How can you lead a country with no concept of a social contract? How can you lead a country with such a narrow sense of community spirit that you would make citizenship exclusionary?

It would be most remiss of me if I would leave without giving a history lesson. In ancient societies do you know what was resorted to sometimes? They would go out and capture people and bring them in to make them citizens if they thought the population was too small. Madam Speaker, I laugh at people . . .

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Roy Bodden: That is the next move . . . that is as shallow as their commonsense is, so you cannot help them. The Honourable Member does not understand the significance of what I was saying. I will spell it to him in simple terms for the feeble minded.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Say it more slowly.

The Speaker: Order.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, it means that growth was so important that when it was not derived by natural means in order for the sustenance and the continuation of the society other means were resorted to. The Cayman Islands, if it is to remain a viable and vibrant society and not a stagnant society, must grow. I know the Honourable Member knows but he is trying to be mischievous.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: He does not know, Roy. Leave it at that.

Hon. Roy Bodden: So, Madam Speaker, what has been done is done for all the right reasons. I have come to the conclusion that this Motion was brought because this is the Opposition's way of saying "Since we did not get to do this and could not do this ourselves, by virtue of the fact that we are not the Government we are going to try to drag down and make you look bad."

The Motion has been a negative reflection on their part and shows that they have no solutions for the challenges. Therefore, they are relegated to be a continuous Opposition. I hope that when it is all over—and they will have the last say—they will have learned their lesson and realise that the Cayman Islands is bigger than all of us and that it behooves us to have a charitable spirit. As for me, Madam Speaker, my job like that of Sisyphus is to offer continuous enlightenment to people like that. I would not want them to labour for too many more years in the darkness which they seem to be in.

I rest my case.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister.

[The Second Elected Member for George Town rose]

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, are you going to debate again?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: No, Madam Speaker. I would like to, but I do not have that right.

I had promised to provide this Honourable House with an excerpt from the Fifth and Final Report of the Select Committee of the whole House on Immigration Legislation, and to have it laid on the Table. With your permission I now so do.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak? If no other Member wishes to speak . . .

The Leader of Opposition is not here to exercise his right of reply. He gave notice before he left so we would recognise the Leader of the Government.

[Pause]

[The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town rose]

The Speaker: One minute, Member for Bodden Town. I just recognised the Leader of Government and I am waiting for a response.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I believe that Members want to speak. If you are going to close the debate to await the arrival of the Leader of Opposition who is out of the House with apology, then I would suggest that you do not do that but give Members an opportunity to speak.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I have asked three times, which is my custom. Since it seems that many persons are now anxious to speak I will ask one more time. Does any other Honourable Member wish to speak?

[The Hon. Minister for Community Services rose]

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Services, could I have one minute?

The Member for Bodden Town was rising. Was it on a point of order?

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: No, Madam Speaker, I was just going to suggest, seeing the lateness of the hour, that we take the adjournment at this time. But I see the Government is going to continue.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I am a little bit tired at this point, but I think that it is interesting to observe the tension that has been brought on by the filing and debate of this Motion. Division and fear have been brought to surface, and at the end of the day Members make jokes and exchange conversations that have nothing to do with the seriousness of the situation.

Sometimes we say things when we are upset, we write it down, we file it with the Clerk's office, we let it go the Speaker to be examined and we bring it before this Honourable House to be debated, knowing that at the end of the day it is not a true reflection of our nature as Caymanians. It is not a reflection of that special Caymanian humanity; it does not reflect our caring and sharing Christian culture and that is the reason why most Members begin to giggle in this Legislative Assembly like a bunch of school boys and girls.

We cannot absorb the heat of the moment; it is just too much for us to contemplate the suggestions that have been made with this Motion. It is too much for the Opposition to contemplate the seriousness of the suggestions in this Motion. Again, using all of these inflammatory words like "treason", "Members with blood on their hands", as was said by the Minister for Education, and at the end of the day we still talk to each other.

This debate must take place between different persons and not something that is going up in the air and going here and there and nowhere. It has to be a conversation that Members of the Opposition are having with the Members of the Government. It is a serious conversation that the Opposition has chosen to have with the Government and the Opposition should treat it seriously when they listen to what the Government has to say.

When the Minister for Education talks about the lack of social conscience that is suggested by this Motion the Opposition needs to listen. I do not think that we can be "funny funny" about it because it is a serious accusation that the Government is now making against the Opposition, just like the Opposition made these accusations against the Government.

Madam Speaker, it is said that sometimes when you write things it helps you to get them off your chest. If we would sit down sometimes and write things down we would not go any further because writing seems to capture the absurdity of so many of our thoughts and how we formulate and present them. As I look at the script here I begin to realise that if the Opposition had kept this for one or two more days they would not have filed this as a Motion.

Madam Speaker, I am beginning to think, after hearing the Leader of Opposition speak, knowing a bit about his nature I cannot believe that this represents his humanity. I also listened to what he had to say about the granting of Caymanian status by the Cabinet to many deserving individuals. Then, I listened to what was said by the Second Elected Member for George Town. I watched his demeanour change from what I assume was temperamental and angry to one that resembled very much the demeanour and posture of his leader. It goes to show again that the words contained in this Motion do not truly represent that special humanity that is Caymanian. It does not reflect the true feelings of the Opposition. I believe that it is more as a result of a reaction to circumstances where persons might have had input to try to convince persons in the Opposition that this was the time to seize; rally the troops; recruit membership; start the campaign for 2004. Let us hear the rhetoric; let us rock and roll; let us develop fear and division rather than maintain a balance to stay sturdy and project that special Caymanian humanity of caring and sharing.

Madam Speaker, the course set by the PPM is not progressive, it is reactionary. The fact that I made a point of order that suggested to the Second Elected Member for George Town that the Cabinet was not in contravention of any law in the grants of status, he has tried to make the case that it is not the granting of status but it is the way in which it was done. He has done that partly because he does not want the people who have gotten status to think that he is against them getting it. So, he has, in his argumentation, tried as much as possible to always maintain the position that it is not the granting of status that he is against but it is the way in which it was done. At the same time they have to play to those persons in our society who, for one reason or the other, feel threatened. Rather than explaining to these people why they should not feel threatened they are telling them that they should feel threatened by these grants, and that they should see the action of the Government as betrayal. Yet they are saying to the people who have received status "We want you on our side." Obviously, if they cannot vote in 2004 they might be able to vote in 2008. The Second Elected Member for George Town knows, as much as the Leader of Opposition, that they have to be very careful. They are trying to play these two bases; they are trying to serve all of these purposes. So, he then tries to develop a legal perspective on it rather than going into a social, economic or moral argument as was done by the Minister for Education.

The Minister [Hon. Roy Boddin] delivered an incredible magnificent speech that will go down in the history of this country as one of the most persuasive speeches made on the point of the whole concept of that special Caymanian humanity of sharing and caring. The Second Elected Member for George Town comes with his legal jargon and tries to argue that the Directives which Government gives to the Immigration Board to carry out a mandate means that the Government, in making grants, is subjected to the same Directives.

In other words, an employer is subjected under the same conditions he has set for his employee in terms of making decisions.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, we have reached the hour of 7 pm. Are you going on to a new point or would you wish to continue with that thought?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I would like to finish that thought.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: For instance, if as chairman of a corporation I employ sub-managers for the different departments to carry out the directives and to see how they perform those duties, it does not mean that I have to . . .

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker—

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town.

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: On a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I am sure the Minister is not deliberately doing it but he is misleading. What he is claiming is not what I said at all.

I am not trying to get into a fight with him, I just want him to understand that I have never suggested that Executive Council is subject to the Directives that they send. That was the point of my argument in that regard. What I said was because they were not required to take into account these implications and considerations that is why they do not have the authority to make huge numbers of grants, except in very circumscribe and special circumstances. What I understand from him is that he has understood what I said to mean that Executive Council is subject to the Directions 24. He is misleading but I am sure he is not doing it deliberately.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, are you saying that it was not your position that Cabinet was not bound by the Directives 24?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, my position is that they are not bound.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, that is exactly what I was indicating and I am happy that the Member has assisted my argument or my clarification of his presentation. I will quote from the Directives which he read: "The grant of Caymanian status to any person shall not imply any obligation to permit the entry or temporary or permanent terms of servants, gardeners."

He read that in order to give us the feeling that the Cabinet acted in contradiction in all of these Directives. So, the point he would have mentioned would be to say that the Cabinet itself should have been observing these particular Directives. If he was not saying that then I am happy to know that.

Going back to my original point, all sorts of suggestions were being made and their Motion included words like, "the Government should be censured," "the Government acted in a way that was reckless." But I am happy that I can rest the point and that the Member now accepts that when we say the Governor in Cabinet can, in his opinion, find special reason . . . section 20(e) of the Immigration Law 2003 Revision says, and I quote again: "The Governor, in his opinion finding special reason . . ." Now, I see people dealing with the "special reasons" but not dealing with the sentence as it is written; ". . . in his opinion finding special reason for so doing, grants such right to him". We are using singular because it is always singular rather than plural and it uses the male rather than the female gender. So it is "him" rather than "her." Further, it is "one" rather than "many."

There is nothing in the Law that would say that the Governor, in his opinion, finding special reason for so doing could not grant one, two, three, four, five or six in terms of the special reason. I just wanted to bring that back again because when we are convincing the population that their Government is subversive and has usurped the powers of the Immigration Board and disregarded the Immigration Law that is a very serious charge.

I still contend that the Member is familiar enough with the Law to know that there is nothing in it that prohibits grants to be extended to more individuals than he thinks. Furthermore, there is a new group of people who think differently about humanity and sharing and caring. He thinks it should be extended to six but the moratoriums that have been placed on it and the discussions that have taken place may be seen as special circumstances. This Government thinks differently about it and therefore we are trying to clear up the backlog and give people some security. That is a political decision and it does not mean that we have had disregard for the Law.

Madam Speaker, I am quite willing to stop at this point, but I just wanted to make this very important point that the Opposition formulated this Motion in haste. If they had waited to consult widely with some people who would obviously give them information they would not have come here to charge this Government with having usurped the powers of the Immigration Board or having disregard for the Immigration Law.

Madam Speaker, I am a little tired now so I will continue tomorrow.

The Speaker: Thank you.

I recognise the Leader of Government for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, we move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Friday

19 September 2003 at 10 am. We will complete business at 4.30 tomorrow afternoon.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do adjourn until Friday 19 September 2003 at 10 am.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.

At 7.12 pm the House stood adjourned until Friday, 19 September 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
19 SEPTEMBER 2003
10.45 AM
Third Sitting

The Speaker: I invite the Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town to grace us with Prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.48 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for the non-attendance of the Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and District Administration; and the Honourable Third Official Member. I have also received apologies for the late arrival of the Honourable Second Official Member.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: No notice of statements has been given for today's meeting.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/03

Grants of Caymanian Status by the Governor in Cabinet

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I was hoping that the Leader of the Opposition would be present this morning, since I was watching him on television last night on Enterprise Forum. He seemed to be suggesting that what should transpire at this particular time is that we need to go forward. In other words, we need to cool the tempers, heal the wounds, patch up the situation and move forward. As is typical of the Leader of the Opposition, it also means putting on the brakes. One of the interviewing hosts said that we need to put the brakes on the situation, and the Leader of the Opposition agreed that was what he meant. He means that moving forward is putting on the brakes, and putting on the brakes is moving forward. He is still acting like All-to-All in the Kingdom of Everything, where everything is nothing, nothing is everything, and the chicken moans.

Madam Speaker, the leader of the Opposition is having a very difficult time deciding exactly what his position is in regard to the Cabinet's granting Caymanian status to a large number of deserving immigrants in our community.

The reason for this, and it is my opinion, that the Leader of the Opposition is aware that once these persons become Caymanian, these community members will eventually have the right to vote like everyone else, if not in 2004, then most certainly in 2008. The Leader of the Opposition who is an Elected Member for the district of George Town, where 50 per cent of the population of the Cayman Islands resides know that he cannot afford to alienate himself from these potential voters. At the same time, he wants to benefit from inflaming the passions of Caymanians, in order to have them vote for him also, and to have a monopoly on their votes. He wants to pretend that he represents their rights, and that he is protecting their privilege.

While the Elected Member for North Side talks about birthrights, the Leader of the Opposition is able to talk to people in secret about what a bad job the Government is doing in dealing with the status issue. In secret, he speaks to the Caymanians in one tone, and to the foreigners in another. When he comes out in public, where he has to speak to both groups, he speaks from both sides of his mouth. He becomes the typical All-to-All in the Kingdom of Everything, where everything is nothing and nothing is everything, and where going forward is the same as putting on the brakes.

This Government has been criticised for the way in which it has handled immigration issues in this country. At least this Government can be criticised for handling the immigration issue; most Governments have not handled it. If we are getting a little more heat for handling the immigration issue, it is simply because we are doing something, and not sitting like Buddha, taking up most of the space on the seat, but not observing what is going on around him. That is very important to bear in mind.

We have attempted to deal with the issue. What can the Opposition do? The Opposition can go to Caymanians and say: 'This will represent the end of the rights and the safety that you have enjoyed in your country over the years'. That is what they are doing. At the same time, they are going to foreigners who have been here for ten years or more and saying, 'Look, they have included that name, and that name, but they have not included yours'. They are agitating those persons who have not gotten status, but who are entitled somehow, if not by law, then by moral reasons, to apply. They are trying to agitate them as well, and to say, 'Look who got status, while you did not.'

The Speaker: Honourable Minister I take it that that is your opinion?

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, it is not my opinion; it is fact. I have seen it in the papers, and I heard it last night on television. I heard one lady call in, and I heard Mr. Kurt Tibbetts speak to her and she said that she has been here 20 years. I know who the woman is too; I recognised her accent and I know who she is. There are people out there who are complaining because they did not get status. These people are telling the Opposition that they are more deserving than the people to whom we have given it. That is fact, and not an opinion.

The Speaker: The Chair is grateful for your clarification.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I want to say that this kind of politics by the Opposition, to divide even those persons of immigrant origins in this country who should be coming together now to say, 'Although you got status today, tomorrow will be my day'.

What the Government has done has not closed the gates, or closed hope; it has opened the gates and the possibility of hope for all those persons who have come, and laboured, and produced for this country. However, All-to-All in the Kingdom of Everything must have a different approach to this.

The action of the Cabinet does not exclude the possibility of persons who have been here longer than 10 years applying for, and being considered for, Caymanian status. It seems that the Leader of the Opposition agrees, at least out of one side of his mouth, that the Parliament should make considerations for these people to apply and be considered for the grant of Caymanian status in the near future.

What the Leader of the Opposition and his future Cabinet Members seem to disagree with is the fact that the Cabinet made the decisions, rather than the Immigration Board. Is that it? Is it because they disagree that the Cabinet made the decision in granting the status rather than the Immigration Board, or do they disagree with the granting of status to these persons? Do they make their argument based upon the exception to the rules rather than the rules themselves? Do they look at cases where they think people might say that a person should not have gotten status, rather than looking at all the people who deserve and have gotten it? Is that the case?

What is the position of the Opposition as it goes forward and puts its brakes on at the same time?

Madam Speaker, the issue of immigration is a vexing issue in this country, charged with all kinds of racial and social implications. That has been so from the day the Caymanian Protection Law 1971 was brought into force by the merchant and elite classes in this country, who needed to bring poor black people from other parts of the Caribbean here to exploit, and exclude them from having a right to a family and a social life.

What is the Opposition saying that the Cabinet has done which is so secretive and so wrong? The fact is that the Immigration Board, as it has been designed, is one of the most secretive institutions in the world—except that like the Government, it has many sieves.

Madam Speaker, people can put their pictures in the papers and apply for Caymanian status, but anybody can write a letter of objection to the Immigration Board. It will be taken in confidence, and the Immigration Board will make the decision to reject a permit or an application for status based upon some of that information. At least, we believe that is the case; otherwise, it would not suggest that people should be entitled to make their personal objections in secret.

Do the people who apply for grants of status and work permits have the opportunity to answer their accusers? Is this what you call transparency?

To say that the members of the Immigration Board do not use their business interests, their personal convictions or their feelings in making grants of Caymanian status is nonsense. To accuse the Cabinet of doing this because we are a Cabinet is even further from the truth. It is nonsense, Madam Speaker.

There are flaws in our Immigration Law. It is not even an Immigration Law. Although we are an immigrant society, and are dependent upon immigrants, it is really a social control law—a law designed to control the mobility of people once they come to the Cayman Islands. It is not a law about how to integrate immigrants, or how emigrants migrate. It is basically a law designed to control those persons socially, economically and politically, and the Immigration Board is only a reflection of that desire to control. It is not perfect, and the Opposition knows that, otherwise, they would not be calling for us to review the laws or debate changes in the laws.

Is the Government obligated to wait until the laws are changed, if it has special powers to act on its own under special circumstances? Is the Executive Branch of Government always subjected to the legislature's will, or are there certain circumstances in which the Executive Branch of Government is placed in a row to make executive decisions, independent of the legislature? The legislature can criticise and critique, but the Executive Branch of Government has the right to make decisions on its own, without using bodies to do it for them. This is what I am saying.

If we come up against a situation during the year of Jubilee, the Quincentennial year; 500 years since Columbus discovered these tiny Islands, when the population is still below 40,000; Why? It is because most Caribbean Islands have been settled by immigrants—forced immigrants from Africa; voluntary immigrants and some indentured servants from Europe; and by some forced immigrants from China and India. The populations of the Caribbean did not naturally grow to the levels they are at today. They were the result of immigration policies that were controlled by the rich, by the planters, and by those persons who had economic, social and political power over the small persons in the society.

The population of the entire Caribbean is the results of immigration. Many trickled from one island to the next. Barbados was one of the first sugar islands, and its population trickled to other islands. That was the way it was.

Jamaica was settled first, and the population trickled here from Jamaica. It is close, so when land was more or less used up there, people started to move over here. I am saying this to say that whether or not it may happen because of the interests of one particular class, which has need for labour, or because there are persons who believe that there can be a much better planned society if people are given the right to emigrate and move within the society to the jobs for which they feel they are suited, or for which their employers think they are qualified. It may be done through trying to control labour for a specific class of people. That seems to be the question. However, immigration is obviously something that has been with us a long time. It has always resulted in the cultural and social change of our societies.

If you go to Trinidad, Guyana, St. Lucia, or wherever you go, you see those islands being impacted and affected by the immigrants who have built those societies. The Cayman Islands are no different. Our immigration came much later, simply because there were not the "pull factors" here, as we call them. There were not the economic incentives, earlier on, to bring immigrants here in the numbers that might have gone to other places. We do not have the East Indians here to the extent that they have in other islands, because we did not have the sugar plantations functioning at that particular point in 1834 when slavery was abolished in the Caribbean territories. However, when we started to develop this place commercially, one of the first things the merchant people realised is that there was insufficient labour, as well as a lack of expert labour, so they began to encourage people to come here. Therefore, there are not only the push factors in the other countries, but also the pull factors that are pulling people here as well.

As a result of that, we have a predicament. I did not create it, because my parents were not those types of merchants. It was created first of all by those individuals who wanted to make a profit on somebody's labour, toil or expertise.

We have a situation where many people in the country are gardeners and domestics, and many of us could not live without those domestics. How would some women provide for their households, in these times when you need at least two salaries, if there was not a domestic to assist them with duties in the household and in rearing children? How would our society function without that immigration, and that inward movement of people to the Cayman Islands?

The question we have never asked ourselves is this: How do we balance those economic needs with social requirements—not only our own, but those of others, who are also human beings and have a right to family, community and security of tenure? We have never asked those questions because the class of people that has written immigration laws and controlled immigration bodies has always been a class that was only interested in robbing people of their productive wealth. When their productive years are over, it disregards them. Those are the people represented by the People's Progressive Movement, in my opinion.

Madam Speaker, this is a moral dilemma, and it rests in the hearts of all Caymanian people. We will all have to answer our own conscience in terms of how we deal with this dilemma. It has faced each one of us at certain times. Each one of us has gone to the powerful Immigration Board to beg a favour for someone we love, like or need. Each one of us has had to bow to the hypocrisy of our own laws; each one of us has felt the blunt end of the hypocrisy of laws that were made by that class of people in society that had one economic interest, and no social interest.

In January 2000, I wrote in the New Vision an article called Towards a New Jerusalem. I am not going to apologise for the fact that I have participated in some of the most liberal movements in this society. We want to liberalise telecommunications and power, but we do not want to liberalise labour to the point where it can move freely from one job to the next, if it so desires.

Who says that labour will be cheaper? Labour will become more expensive. They do not know economics. They do not know that Caymanians have low wages today because the foreigners are kept on chains. When those chains are broken, it gives the Caymanian worker the opportunity to join in solidarity with his Jamaican working partner to ask for better working conditions.

Who are they fooling by talking from both sides of their mouths, saying that going forward is the same as putting on the brakes, and that all is the same as nothing?

Madam Speaker, this is no longer a debate about the actions of the Government. It is a debate about the actions of all of us in this country, and our actions over the years.

I am as selfish as anyone else, and I know that when someone does something wrong to me, I call them all kinds of names, and I dislike them—maybe not for long, perhaps, but I know that I have those human weaknesses too. We always have to balance our human weakness with our human potential.

Although I might see the Jamaicans or the English as threats, as a human being, I have to balance that with my reason. I have to balance it with the knowledge that to give people freedoms to produce will make this more of a community. To make people equal is not just an international human rights mandate. It was mandated by the Good Book long before the human rights people got to it.

Human rights! We are talking about universal rights. We are talking of the rights of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and the oneness of our families. We are talking about the fact that we are of the same seed, and the same tree.

We have all suffered the dilemma of having to live under laws that require less of us than our churches and Christian communities do. We have been made worse people for having lived under laws which say that a 13-year-old girl should stay in Jamaica alone, that the boy who belongs to the Caymanian father should stay in the Cayman Islands, but the Jamaican woman should part with one child and support the other. Every one of us has suffered, and will suffer, from living under laws that have supported this inhuman type of behaviour.

I know of a case where a little girl was sent home in the hope that she could be brought back. Her mother is married to a Caymanian, and has a child by the Caymanian. That child is here, but the mother's child is in Jamaica.

We are not solving all of these problems by our actions—not now. However, our actions are an indication that we realise that there is a need for us to proceed with a process; regardless of whether we start at the beginning, the middle, or the end we have to start a process. We have to start at a point that suggests to everybody that individuals in this Government will no longer carry out the mandates of persons who designed a situation only to enrich and benefit the class that had the businesses to exploit these people.

Madam Speaker, we are not solving all of the problems by granting status to certain individuals by Cabinet decree. However, sometimes I feel a little confused about what I am doing. Sometimes tears come to my eyes when I see and feel the joy that certain people express in having that security of tenure, and when I see the tears that have come to certain persons' eyes. Although I might not have righted the world, I have done one, two, three, four, or perhaps five acts that make me a better human being than those of the People's Progressive Movement (PPM), who sit and try to devalue the integrity of those who seriously feel about other people.

I have spoken all of my life about justice and equality. I cannot be a hypocrite because I would not be well served to be one. At the end of the day, when my reign in this world is over, I want to say that I have done at least one good thing in leading a charge in the right direction, rather than the leading it the wrong way, or thinking that going forward and putting your brakes on are the same.

Madam Speaker, if this is the end of my political career, then it was well served and it will be the end of other things, such as injustices perpetuated by laws conceived to keep people in servile positions, under the auspices that it was protecting Caymanian workers. How could it have been protecting Caymanian workers, when employers in this country have been able, over the years, to bring in every single person they wanted to bring into this country, to use them, to separate them from their children, families, churches and communities, and to deny them a community here?

If this is the end of my political career, then I am happy that I always had a vision, and a dream. I am happy that I always knew God would give me the opportunity to act towards the building of a new Jerusalem. If this is the end, Madam Speaker, I would like to say to the PPM's Maoist movement that there need not be blood and threats. What we need to do is exactly what I thought their leader was doing last night on the Enterprise Forum, saying: 'we need to look at the future'.

I believe that this situation is one of divine intervention. I know that the Second Elected Member for George Town has made a case about the positions of the Minister of Health, the Minister of Education and Human Resources, and the Leader of Government Business. I do not think he called my name.

Madam Speaker, I see that you have the extract there. I have it also. That would have been from the fifth and final report from the Select Committee of the Legislative Assembly on Immigration Legislation. This was the session from 1989 through 1992. If the Minister of Education, with all his reading and all the things to which he has been exposed to, so far, if he could not have changed his position in a positive direction in eleven years, then I would not give him any credit at all. He has evolved his position, and I am happy about that. The Leader of Government Business seems to have evolved his position, and I am happy about that.

The Second Elected Member for George Town is trying to make a point of the positions people had on immigration ten years ago, when we have had at least two reviews by Select Committees on Immigration since then, one of which I participated in. Again, people do change.

When we are living in a world where we know, it is a most difficult thing for the dominant group to offer humanity to those we control. We had that question back in 1834 in this country, when we had slavery, and slavery was abolished. It was not easy for the people who had control to accept that it would be more positive. I hear the Opposition talking about how negative this will be; that is exactly what the pro-slavery people said.

The pro-slavery argument was that it would not only hurt the planters, it would hurt the poor Negroes as well. It would hurt the poor Negroes, who would not know how to deal with this new-found freedom. It would hurt the social and political stability of the Cayman Islands. We had those arguments here. Now we are being told that liberalising labour will hurt the country, though liberalising telecommunications will not—that will help everyone. Liberalising power will help everyone, but liberalising labour? We cannot have that!

The Opposition needs to know that this Government is composed of people who can think, and who bear great souls and hearts; who feel somehow destined and led to do what they do; and who have suffered to be able to do what they do—in spite of the fact that the Elected Member for North Side will try to remind me of a special parrot.

I know exactly how much I have suffered in this society. I do not need to be reminded of that by the Elected Members for East End, North Side or anyplace. I know exactly why I put myself to suffer.

Point of Order

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order, Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Minister is misleading the House. I did not remind him of any such parrot. I do not know what he is taking about. He needs to withdraw it.

The Speaker: Order. I understood the Honourable Minister of Community Affairs saying that he did not need anyone (and he named Members, including you) to remind him. He did not say that you indicated, or intimated, that he had a parrot. He said he did not need anyone to do it. Until he reaches the point where he is directly alleging that you did, I am unable to say that he is misleading. Please continue.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I would like to thank my good friend, the Elected Member for East End, for giving me a break to get some water and reflect a little more upon how deeply I do miss that parrot. If I were white, he probably would not complain about me having had a parrot, but since I am a little darker than he is, perhaps it looks odd for me to have a parrot.

These people try to bring this whole thing back on the PPM side. I am going to deal with some of their accusations about my incompetence and other things.

Madam Speaker, I came back to this country after having studied in the United States, Great Britain and Germany, at a fairly progressive university. Some people say that I was a communist, and a leftist. However, I did come back here and go to work. I did have things I believed in, but I did not try to stay in the civil service to protect myself. I fought for what I believed and I am willing to do that now. If I need my parrot to help me through, I will get another one.

I want to say to those persons that I am the man I am today—I am as big, as bold, as brave and as courageous as I am today, and feel for people as I do feel—because of my experiences. 'I ain't ashamed of a little parrot'. As a matter of fact, if you look at the book 'Time Longer Dan Rope', which was published by the Cultural Foundation, and at 'Down Side Up', you will see the little bird flying out of the cage. Take a look at it cou's'.

Madam Speaker, I will get back to what I was saying. It was time something was done about this vexing immigration issue. Everybody has sat down and contemplated ways of dealing with it, yet nothing was ever done that significantly impacted the whole issue of how to integrate persons into our society.

The only acceptable way seems to have been to marry in. Some of us have married foreigners. I am one of those, but there are more than me, and if they have not done it themselves, their children have done it. That is acceptable, but we have not worked out other ways. We have not worked out how we can actually have someone come into our society, be equal to us, be represented, and do good things for the society. That is because the ideology and the thoughts have sprung from the class of people that believes that the only way to control people is to create servile relationships.

Gordon Barlow is correct, in my opinion, about many things he says. I may not say it the way he says it, and I think that he tries to throw it in our faces. None of us likes to see the truth, but sometimes one has to exaggerate the truth for some people to see it.

The labour that has come here is indentured in a way. It is tied to the employer. If the person feels offended by the employer, the person cannot go and get another employer. The person has to go away. The employer chastises the person, the person goes away, and they bring in a new labourer.

Some of those labourers have gotten status today. It does not necessarily mean that they must leave their employers. The argument of pro-slavery people was also that once we freed the slaves, they were all going to leave the plantation and set up businesses and farms for themselves. These arguments from reactionaries are the same through the ages.

If I have someone who works for me and I pay him well, then there is no one else out there to pay him more, because I am paying as much as he can get out of the market. Where is he going to go? He is in the job because he needs the job. If there is no way that he can get more money, then he will stay with me.

Madam Speaker, economics will determine those things. To say that because these people get status they will take jobs from Caymanians is to forget that they were allowed to come here in the first place to take jobs from Caymanians—if that is what they are doing. It was not us who brought them here; it was the merchants and the people who have employed these persons who brought them here.

It is the Government's job to look after the general good, and it is the Government's conviction, at this particular time, that looking after the general good means integrating the social fabric and the social structure. We have a very weak social fabric and social structure. Too many of the people who live here do not have a stake in the society. We wonder why people do not get involved in fighting crime. We expect the police to do that by themselves. We wonder why we cannot enlist the community more. Perhaps if a person had a stake in the society, that person would become a very useful social control agent, as well.

We believe that what we have to build is a total community; a holistic approach is necessary. It simply is not possible to bring people in here and work them, and not allow them to be a part of the community.

Madam Speaker, I have spoken to the point. The Opposition seems to want to say that we have dug our political graves; that we have committed political suicide by granting these grants of status to people who have been here, in the majority of cases, for a significant time, and have proven that they have made significant contributions to the Cayman Islands. This was not done by application, but by being in a situation where we knew something about them, or knew someone who knew something about them. They say that we have dug our political graves.

The Speaker: You have 56 minutes remaining.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

They intend to bury us in 2004, if not before. The point is: Are they going to bury us with the Caymanians they think they are fooling, or are they going to bury us with the foreigners who have now gotten the opportunity to be represented, because they are now Caymanians? How is it that they are going to bury us?

I do not believe that they can continue to convince Caymanians that this is the worst thing for young Caymanians, or that it will impede the upward mobility of Caymanians. The educational system is going to function for those Caymanians who are willing to take advantage of the opportunities. I believe that a Caymanian has as much right to compete as much as anyone else. This society will create more jobs, and more possibilities, rather than fewer possibilities. All of economics tells us that. Economics tells us that our population base has been very small, and that when people realise that their population base is too small, they go out and get new people. In older times, they would even enslave people, and put chains on them, to get them to come in and be part of their society involuntarily.

This is not a unique predicament, from the point of view—or the fact—that our society can deal with more people. There are people who want to continue to invest here. There is the diversification of the economy, which we have been thinking about for a very long time, but have never been able to achieve. We do not have enough people to farm; we do not have enough people to do this, and we do not have enough people to do the arts. We do not even have enough people to do the sports that we all want to do, and to win at.

We have a population crisis on our hands, and we do not even want to admit it. All of us want to be greater, and to be greater means to expand, as the good Minister of Education said. I hear them say, "I want my football team, my basketball team and my volleyball team to win; I am tired of Caymanians losing". Most countries bring people in to help them win.

America brought the Germans in to help them win the war. They had just been fighting them, but they brought them in to help them win the war against the Japanese by developing the atomic bomb. American science is as it is today because they are bringing people in. They are bringing in people from India to boost their technologies.

We call it brain drain when we are adversely affected by it in the Caribbean. Thank God the Cayman Islands do not have to talk about brain drain, because more people want to come here than want to leave. We have a good pull factor.

Madam Speaker, I could get into some serious economic debates with these people about whether immigration is good or bad. I believe that most people think Immigration is good, at least for the Cayman Islands. What they are disagreeing with is the fact that freedom is good for all of us. They are saying, "Freedom is good for the Caymanian, but not for the expatriate". That is all that I can hear people saying. What else are we saying? If the expatriates have been here for all of this time, then there must be some need for them. Our society has prospered economically. It has been built, and we are not making it less by giving those persons that have been here for long periods of time security of tenure.

Again, the argument seems to be that what went wrong is that the people who should have gotten it did not get it. That is a weak argument; it is the propaganda of the Opposition. The Opposition needs to come in here and say, "What we need to do is make sure that all deserving people get it". That is how the Motion should have read. The Motion should have read, "We are supporting the Government in opening up Caymanian status to deserving people, and we want to make sure that all the people who deserve status get it". That is what the Motion should have read, not, "We come here to censure Government, and Government did this badly".

Madam Speaker, when I started yesterday, I said that it was hot-headedness on the part of the Second Elected Member for George Town more than on the part of the Leader of the Opposition, who I believe is more tranquil. This is it: The Motion should say that this is a vexing problem that has been created by government after government, and that they applaud this Government for attempting to deal with it. The Opposition could still have said that they would not have done it this way. They would have had their own way to do it, but at least we have started it; let us finish the job. That is what the Opposition could have said—but no, they want to say we are building a political party; we are building the Progressive People's Movement and want to make sure that we spend our time recruiting people to our conviction.

They are not interested in the immigrants; they are not interested in solving the issues of the social and moral conflict that has been created in this country as a result of immigration. They have not been interested. As a matter of fact, they have behaved more like Maoists, in my opinion, by rattle-rousing.

Point of Order

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, I wanted to ask you if "Maoist" is something that is allowed in the Parliament.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, would you care to expand a bit for me please?

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: There is a list indicating certain words that are [not] allowed in Parliament. I remember seeing this on one of those lists.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town, I am not in possession of the list, and neither is my Clerk. Out of an abundance of caution, I am going to ask the Honourable Minister of Community Affairs to refrain from using that term until we get an opportunity to take a break, so I can look at it.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: That is not a problem, Mr. Speaker.

On page 7 of the Caymanian Compass, 19 September, it says: "Mr. Alden McLaughlin continued, 'The battle will continue on the Floor of the Legislative Assembly.'"

This was at his most recent public meeting, which was on 16 September. It says here that Ms. Edna Moyle, the Elected Member for North Side, opened the meeting by saying: "We are talking about the birthright of our children."

When people get so nationalistic about birthrights and all of that, they should not marry foreigners. It is a total contradiction to say that the birthright is so sacred. I studied in Germany, and I know that there are certain Germans who actually believe in the supremacy of the Arian people. They believe that, but they do not mix with people who believe that. They do not deviate; they believe that. When you start mixing with people, you should be a little bit more courteous to them.

I am going to the Caymanian Compass of Thursday 18 September. It gives two members of the Opposition a stand again. I am still trying to find out where the Compass stands on this issue, whether or not they are standing like everyone else, feeling that they are the only ones who should get status and that if anybody else get status it means competition for them. It is this privileged system; it reminds me of an organisation that I am in, too.

Madam Speaker, it says here: “Actions of the Cabinet in confirming Caymanian status are unlawful. While they were conferred on an as yet undetermined number, it was certainly thousands,” Opposition MLA Arden McLean said in the House when it resumed yesterday.”

The Compass is saying that he said it was unlawful, and I took him to point on that. I thought I did so yesterday. I thought he said that it was not unlawful. I hope that the Compass will print the fact that he cannot say it was an unlawful act, and that it is misleading the country to say that it was unlawful. There are many Caymanians who have come to believe that it is unlawful because they said so.

It goes on to say: “If the procedure was followed some aggrieved individuals would bring legal action, such as a disgruntled resident who had been in Cayman for many years and is yet to receive status.”

Individuals will bring legal actions based upon what?

“When that happens it would jeopardise all the status grants by Cabinet in the last two months,” predicted Mr. McLaughlin in the House when it resumed yesterday” Mr. McLaughlin could not substantiate that yesterday; he could not get up and say to me that this was the case. Why is he getting this foul-mouthed propaganda going? Then there is something here saying, “The PPM Slams Government at Party Rally”. This is also Thursday 18 September 2003, and it says: “In what at times took on the tone of the launch of the PPM’s 2004 election campaign, 12 of the party’s top brass took turns at the podium outside the Court House to address a crowd that hovered.”

It goes from 500 to 800. I do not know where the Compass gets its evaluation of numbers, but that is not the point. The point is the particular way in which they have spread this propaganda about us and this Government, and the fact that most of the statements made by the PPM cannot and should not be believed.

Madam Speaker, I would like to take a little time to say that when I made a statement here, I was replying in regard to the juvenile statistics, which I notice that the paper has not found space or time to print. If some juveniles had done something wrong, the Caymanian Compass would have found many front pages to put that on.

Contrary to what has recently been reported by the Leader of the Opposition, the Ministry responsible for Youth has seen a 37 per cent reduction in the number of young offenders being incarcerated between 2002 and 2003. The highest number of incarcerated youth occurred in January 2001, during the leadership of the Elected Member for North Side.

Point of Order

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Elected Member from North Side, do you have a point of order?

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, in my opinion, the Honourable Minister is misleading this House when he states that there were 32 juveniles incarcerated in January 2001. I only took over the Ministry in November 2000, so they must have been incarcerated before I reached there.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services, would you be so kind as to repeat what you said?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, the Member is only doing that to try to make a point she cannot make.

Madam Speaker, I am answering a point made by the Leader of the Opposition on 6 September 2003. The Leader of Opposition said: “The current Minister responsible for Youth speaks in abstract terms about youth and youth-related issues. While his claim to fame so far is the incarceration of an unprecedented number of young men in particular, there is still no clearly defined or coherent policy on the incarceration of young people in the nation building.”

Madam Speaker, I would like to table statistics provided by the Director of Prisons. Here it says that at that particular time in 2001, they did not include youngsters who were in the West Bay lock-up. Northward Prison did not begin to hold these juveniles until April 2002. Therefore, there would have been even more juveniles incarcerated at the time when the Elected Member for North Side was in charge. If she wants to dispute this with the Director of Prisons, she can do so, but I think he has access to the statistics. Unless she can prove that he is a liar and misleading, I think that we should accept these statistics, more than her opinion.

The Speaker: Are you saying, Honourable Minister, that this number of persons incarcerated was incarcerated under the reign of her responsibility? Are you attributing her to blame for their incarceration, or are you stating the statistics during her tenure?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I am aware that the Minister would not have been responsible for the incarceration of anyone, just as I am not responsible for the incarceration of anyone.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Elected Member for North Side, does that clarification deal with your point?

Please proceed.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, my point of order is that the Honourable Minister says that 32 juveniles, or young offenders, were behind bars during the year that I held responsibility for the Ministry. This statement that he made says that in January 2001, 32 juveniles were incarcerated. Can he prove to this House that those 32 were incarcerated between November (when I took the Ministry) and January 2001? That is what I am saying he is misleading the House on.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, what he is saying is that you were there and you did not do anything.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: McKeeva, please, for God's sake shut up.

The Speaker: Order, Members!

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Why don't you go home if you want to behave like that? You have been here too long.

The Speaker: Members!

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: You have not done anything.

The Speaker: As the House is not quorate and Members seem to be having some difficulty containing themselves, I think it is an appropriate time for a morning break.

Proceedings suspended at 11.53 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.19 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Before we took the break, there was a point that I requested some time to deal with, which was raised by the Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town. I have considered the matter very carefully. Although the Honourable Minister of Community Affairs skirted very close to using the direct terminology of "Communist", he stopped just short of that. Therefore, I do not find the word to be unparliamentarily. However, I would wish to make two additional short comments for the benefit of Members.

Firstly, in order to guard against all appearances of personality in debate, no Member should refer to another by name. Secondly, good temper and moderation are the characteristics of parliamentary language. References in debate, either now or in the future, must be courteous. Abusive language and imputations of falsehood uttered by Members will not be lightly tolerated.

In regard to the point of order from the Elected Member for North Side, I have asked the Clerk to request a copy from Hansard so that I can review it over the luncheon break and make a more informed decision, as I was not in a position to recall, verbatim, both sides of the allegation and the rebuttal.

Honourable Minister of Community Affairs, I am informed by the Clerk that you have 40 minutes remaining. Please continue with your debate. Thank you.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I was making an attempt to show that Members of the PPM, and, in particular the Leader of the PPM, indulge in misleading the public. I tried to demonstrate that by showing that he had made a statement that my claim to fame was that I had incarcerated young men. Before I go, I would like to read that again, so that we have it clear.

He said: "The current Minister responsible for Youth speaks in abstract terms about youth and youth-related issues. While his claim to fame so far is the incarceration of an unprecedented number of young men in particular . . ."

What I have tried to do, Madam Speaker, is to show the statistics in order to defend myself, and to prove that, in fact, the Leader of the Opposition is either misleading or does not have the big picture, about which he talks, in view. I showed that the lowest number of young people incarcerated was 10, and that was on 10 June 2003.

I am aware that I am not the person who decides whether or not a young person is incarcerated. For the Leader of the Opposition to say that this is my claim to fame, he is actually trying to convince the public that I am directly responsible. Therefore, when I made mention of the Elected Member for North Side, I made it because she is one of his future Ministers. I wanted to make it clear that if he was to attribute this to me, then he can only say that for the time that I am responsible. I said what the statistics were during the time when she was responsible, and I showed what they were when I was responsible.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I am sorry for the interruption. Perhaps you could move on to another point. Since I have to make a ruling on that, we will leave that point of order as it is. Once I come back in, I will make a ruling. Obviously, if there are aspects of it that you need to use to develop your debate, you are free to do that within the rules of the Standing Orders.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I was actually going over it again to develop my debate.

The next point I would like to show is in regard to housing. In my opinion, the Leader of the Opposition is misleading the public, unless he can prove otherwise within 24 hours. He says that the PPM is saying empathically and categorically that a bigger, better and more structurally sound house, with a brighter finish, can be built here in the Cayman Islands for half the money this Government is gouging from the pockets of the very people it says cannot afford the $60,000 it is asking.

Madam Speaker, the National Housing and Community Development Trust (NHCDT) is building two-bedroom, one-bath homes and selling them, at this particular point, for $49,999—below $50,000. For the three-bedroom, two-bath, it is $62,000. This includes land.

The CI Precast homes, with two bedrooms and one bath are, I understand, to be priced at $68,500. This does not include land. Their three-bedroom, two-bath homes are $73,900 or $84,900, which does not include land.

Madam Speaker, if we are to propose mortgages over a twenty year period, which we might do at 7 per cent, the monthly payment for a house costing $49,999 would be $388 per month. People are paying that amount of money for one room at the moment. The three-bedroom homes would be $482 per month. If we did it over a 30-year period the payments for the two-bedroom home would be $333 per month, and the larger, three-bedroom homes would be $414 per month. We are still working with our systems here.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I take it that very shortly, you are going make the arguments relating to housing relevant to the Motion before us, and show how labour relates to that.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, if you give me the opportunity I certainly will do that for you. I wanted to come to the point of how the Leader of the Opposition misleads, and how he has been misleading in regard to this particular issue of the Cabinet granting status to persons who are well-deserving.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: According to Mr. Desmond Seales, in the editorial of his newspaper, the Cayman Net News, today, 19 September 2003: “The Leader of the Opposition may not have been too far off the mark when he said recently that the only criterion seems to be that the person is alive.”

Madam Speaker, we have heard a quotation from a gentleman in line to get a police record, who said that he had heard that the Leader of the Opposition had said this particular thing. This was reported in the Caymanian Compass, and so many people went there believing that all they had to do was to get a police record, and at the end of the day they would be dealt with.

Many people have called from different parts of the world, believing that the Government did not use valid criteria to determine who should have been granted status by Cabinet. In his attempt to make trivia out of what we have done, and to mislead people, the Leader of the Opposition has left the country in a situation whereby people are still unsure whether one can qualify for status after having been here for two, three or four years.

That is how he dealt with the so-called “metal houses”, as they refer to them in their PPM propaganda. I am talking about the credibility of the witness. He is presenting evidence to this Honourable House that suggests that the Government’s action should be censured. He has brought evidence and I am saying that the very person who brings the evidence has given so-called evidence in regard to other things that the Government is doing, to show that he is not objective, but subjective, at the least. Although it might be his opinion, it is misleading because it is not based on fact. The fact that these are not metal houses is one example. He figured that the use of the word would imply something derogatory.

Why is it that he is trying to do the same thing to the poor working people of this country, who might now have a chance for better and improved working conditions? Now, their bothers and sisters who are working next to them are no longer tied as servile labour to their employers in the merchant classes—which, in my opinion, he represents.

Madam Speaker, when slavery was being abolished in America, the argument put to the poor whites was that they would be worse off, and that the free Negroes would be competing with them, taking their jobs and taking their homes. The arguments sound very familiar. The argument is the same: the Caymanians will be worse off now, because the free Jamaican labourers will compete with them. That is the fear with which they have been dealing. They have frightened people into believing that their Government is doing something terribly wrong, to the point where some of us are even fearful. Why? Is his intention any different from our intention? As I said, I heard him speak on television last night. I saw him sit between two persons, and I know he does not share their convictions in regard to these immigration issues.

Madam Speaker, the best thing that could happen is for us to recognise that having free labour does not necessarily mean that people who are willing to work and improve their skills and knowledge base will be automatically at a disadvantage.

The other point is that the labour we are freeing has been here, in most instances, for a very long time. The society has indicated a dependence on those numbers—on those labourers; on their qualifications; on their characters; and on their qualities. It is not as though the Government has granted status to persons from abroad. It is not as though the Government has made a policy that anyone who wants to come here can come. The Government is not bringing people in; it is talking about regularising and making free the labour and skills of those persons to be employed here in the Cayman Islands.

However, we know that freedom only takes you so far. At the end of the day, the man is still going to own the capital. He is still going to employ you; if he does not employ you, you do not work. The mere fact that I am free to sell my labour does not necessarily mean that I am free. I still have to sell it to someone, and that will have its own restrictions.

I do not see how poor Jamaican workers are negatively impacting our Caymanians. I do not see it, regardless of what might come out of the mouth of the Leader of the Opposition. He has been successful in convincing many Caymanians that this is the most awful thing that has ever happened to this country. There are many members of his team who continue to speak in that particular tone, and with that particular rhetoric. In regard to the immigration issue, he is the most moderate of his people. He knows that. He has one Elected Member for East End and one Elected Member for North Side. These communities have not experienced the same degree of immigration and assimilation that George Town has experienced. The Leader's position must be different from the positions of those in communities that have not experienced the same amount.

I still say that he needs to seriously consider withdrawing this Motion. He and his colleague, the Second Elected Member for George Town, have failed to present to this Honourable House with any reasons why the actions of the Government in Cabinet could be considered unlawful, or subversive of the powers of the Immigration Board or the Immigration Law. Further, he has failed to present to this Honourable House and to society any coherent reasons why the country should be worse off for these grants. He and his team of people have failed, so far, to present to this Honourable House any evidence to prove that it will adversely affect the upward mobility of ambitious young Caymanians who are willing to take the opportunities being offered to them by their Government. He has failed to suggest how this could have been done, and he has failed to give sufficient credit to the Government for starting the process, which he can now become a part of, if he wants to champion the cause of these persons in our society.

Madam Speaker, he could have come to this Honourable House with a Motion calling for the laying upon the Table of the Report of the Select Committee on Immigration, or the Immigration Review Team. He could have come to ask that the Government move as speedily as possible to develop the Immigration Laws which are necessary in a modern and humane Caymanian society. He could have come to the Government and said that although it might have acted in granting status to more persons than were granted when Mr. Truman Bodden was in power, it did not subvert the laws of this country any more than Mr.

Truman Bodden and his people did when they were granting status. The only difference is that we applied it to more people than he did. We can understand that, because his mentality is a little different from ours. We believe in the folks, and he believed in the few. Therefore, we understand why that was so.

The Leader of the Opposition was a very good opponent of that good gentleman. He knows that he has been successful in his political journey so far because he was assisted by many persons who do not call themselves Caymanians, and do not have the right of tenure, but nevertheless, have the right to vote.

We do not know exactly what the numbers are in George Town, but we know that significant numbers came here before the merchants decided to limit the ability of those persons to participate in the political process. They have continued to enjoy the right to vote in the Cayman Islands, and they have always asked that we have a much more liberal approach to immigration.

I am happy that from the time I started my political career in 1996, I said that I would be willing to do something about the immigration issue in this country. I am happy, therefore, to stand here at this particular point and say that under section 20(d) of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision), I, as a Member of the Cabinet, saw that in my opinion, there were special reasons for granting status to several individuals whom I suggested. One of those individuals happens to be a person who has a criminal conviction. I would like to take responsibility for this act, and absolve my other colleagues, if that is necessary. I shall own this act until the day I die, and I believe that it was a responsible act.

Madam Speaker, there was an individual who I felt should have some security of tenure in the Cayman Islands. That individual has been in the Cayman Islands for 38 years, and has been married to a Caymanian for 37 of those 38 years. That individual has produced daughters, who have produced sons and daughters for this country. That individual is the descendant of a Caymanian, and has helped to create the so-called indigenous Caymanian population that the Opposition is so anxious to protect. However, when the Immigration Board and its officers dealt with that individual, they found that he had no access back to his family, or his grandchildren.

Subsection 22(5) of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) says: " Any person who—

- (a) is a spouse of a person who possesses Caymanian status;
- (b) is not living apart from their spouse under a decree of a competent court or under a deed of separation;
- (c) has not lived apart from his spouse for an aggregate period of twelve months out of the five years immediately preceding the application;

- (d) has been ordinary resident in the Islands for the period of three years immediately preceding his application;
- (e) has not in any country been convicted of an offence for which a sentence of imprisonment of or exceeding twelve months has been passed other than for non-payment of a fine unless –
  - i. such conviction has been quashed on appeal or has been the subject of a free pardon”.

Madam Speaker, forgetting the authority of the Cabinet, the Law itself does not say that a person cannot be given Caymanian status if he or she has a criminal conviction. It has to do with the period of sentence, which the law is always very specific, not the criminal conviction.

The individual with whom I am dealing has had one sentence of six months imprisonment, suspended for two years. The person was fined $600, or two months. I say this to bring it to the attention of the Members who have lambasted us in regard to the issue of criminal conviction that this is the only individual of whom I am aware who has one.

If that is what is getting them heated up about this whole thing, this individual has done his time in the Cayman Islands. If he is an undesirable person, then he is our undesirable person. He has a family. He has a right to his family, and I implore us to deal with this situation in a humane way. That is what I know about this thing.

In regard to people who have not been here for a 10-year period, but were granted status, I say again that the Cabinet does not grant status based upon residency. The Cabinet grants status based upon what the Cabinet believes to be special reasons. All the Opposition has been saying is that those particular persons who have not been here for the 10-year period, such as the brother-in-law of the Second Elected Member for George Town, should not have been granted status, and that they have taken positions from other persons. Had they applied to the Immigration Board, they might not have been granted status, because the Immigration Board would not have had that flexibility. The Law is given to them, so they must dispense with the Law as it is given to them. Since we are the givers of that Law, we are not always bound by the letter of the law. We can use our discretion. We can be a little like Solomon once in a while. We can use our humanity and our common sense to make decisions, as in the case of the brother-in-law of the Second Elected Member for George Town, and as in the case of the special person who I will not name. However, I am quite sure that the Opposition is aware of who he is.

Madam Speaker—

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, are you moving on to a new point? You have 12 minutes remaining. If you are going on to a new point, is this an opportune time for the lunch break, or would you wish to conclude?

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, if the House will bear with me, I think I could sum up in the 12 minutes I have left.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, there is much that I could say; perhaps I will say it in a different forum. I would like to say that about the possible social and economic consequences of the Government's movement.

Obviously, the Government's movement cannot stop here. The Government must be encouraged to continue with this process—not as it is presently doing, but ensuring that within as short a period as possible, all persons who qualify according to the 10-year status residency requirement and other blood requirements and family connections are given the opportunity to settle in the Cayman Islands. I believe that our society can afford it, and will be better off for it. I believe that the economic potential of our society will be that of a Venice, that its social fabric will be more knitted together, and that the real possibility of the development of a Caymanian identity and nationalism will be possible because of it.

Other societies, including ours, have been able to take immigrants from very diverse backgrounds and make one thing. If they could take them from Africa and Europe, and make Caymanians out of them, then I am quite sure that at this particular point, if we mix some from England and a few from Jamaica and other places, we can make Caymanians out of them too.

I would like to ensure that our sons and daughters for the future have choices that are broad, and not narrow; that they live in a society that is expanding, and not decreasing; and that they live in a society where there are more opportunities—opportunities that are not the result of holding one person's leg and saying they are doing well in competing, but the result of free people interacting and productively producing economic, social and spiritual benefits.

I believe from the heart, and from the deepest depths of my soul, that this has been a very difficult road to walk in taking the first steps to create as much free labour and as many free people as possible in the Cayman Islands, and in moving from a population where we have 12,000 people who can vote, although we have 40,000. These are things that are being reported by Social Development Direct (SDD), which is an organisation that came here from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) to look at the human rights issue. I believe that giving a person the opportunity to say who their representatives will be, and what policy the country will pursue, will not diminish the intent of what is Caymanian.

Madam Speaker, what is Caymanian has been changing through the years, and will continue to evolve. It is only that thing that changes that will live, because when it stagnates and stays put, it will die. That is why some people have made choices that have not necessarily been very "Caymanian" to some people. However, at the end of the day, we live in a more pluralistic society, where we can share our differences and see how those differences can increase our similarities.

I believe that if I had come here today and had any fear that what I had done was wrong, I would have spoken differently. However, Madam Speaker, I am convinced that the journey towards the freedom of labour in the Cayman Islands had to begin someplace. The journey towards equality between old and new Caymanians had to start somewhere. Madam Speaker, it has started as a result of the United Democratic Party Government's initiative. Our initiatives are not by themselves completely correct in all ways, but there was no correct way to approach this immigration mountain. No one had showed us the way; we had to work in the dark. The Opposition is in a very good position to criticise us, because no one had done anything before that was significant in terms of reducing the numbers.

The Government reacted, first of all, by setting a quota that was much larger than quotas that had been set before. However, even this was not decreasing the numbers in dealing with the issue at the pace at which the United Democratic Government felt it had to be dealt with. Therefore, the Government used another tool that it had at its disposal, which was its power in Cabinet to make as many grants of status as it could. At the same time, it contemplated, and awaiting the arrival of a new piece of legislation that will reflect the intentions of the Caymanian people to integrate those persons who have been living among us for so long, and who have been contributing their very sweat, their very blood and their very lives.

The Speaker: You have five minutes remaining, Honourable Minister.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I am waiting for the Leader of the Opposition to get up and withdraw this Motion, simply because there are no grounds for this Legislative Assembly to censure the Executive for exercising the power it has. If they want to change the Constitution, and have a constitution where there is no division between the Executive and Legislative Branches of Government, then they should be doing and saying that. As long as we have a division between the functions of the Legislative and Executive Branches, and as long as we have an Executive with the power to appoint boards to carry out its directives the Executive Branch of Government retains the power to make decisions on its own behalf, in spite of the fact that it may empower a body to carry out those directives.

Therefore, to continue to call this act unlawful, as the Second Elected Member for George Town has done at certain times (though at other times he said "No") and to continue to enjoy the criticisms Caymanians have against the Government for doing it, while at the same time trying to placate the new Caymanian, is being All-to-All in the Kingdom of Everything, where everything is nothing and nothing is everything; where going forward is putting on your brakes, and putting on your brakes is going forward. It is talking from both sides of the mouth, and that is necessary when we have one private conversation with one person, and another private conversation with another person. When we get them all together, we can only have one conversation. Therefore, it is very good that we have two sides of the mouth and that nothing can be everything and everything can be nothing.

The Speaker: We will now take the luncheon break and reconvene at 2.30 pm.

Proceeding suspended at 12.58 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.36 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs.

ADJOURNMENT

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, due to the sudden downpour of rain and other issues, I beg to move for the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday at 10 am, using the relevant Standing Orders.

I would also like to say that it is the intention of the Government to encourage Members to work until the Motion is completed on Monday evening.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Minister.

The question is that this Honourable House do adjourn until Monday 22 September 2003 at 10 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 2.38 pm the House stood adjourned until Monday, 22 September 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
22 SEPTEMBER 2003
11.20 AM
Fourth Sitting

[Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: I will ask the Honourable Temporary First Official Member to grace us with Prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen

Proceedings resumed at 11.23 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for the absence of the Honourable Minister of Education and the Honourable Minister of Health, who are both off the Island on official Government Business. Also for the Honourable Speaker, who has notified us that she will be attending later on today; and for the Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for George Town, who expressed their intention of arriving a little later this morning.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS
OF THE GOVERNMENT

The Speaker: I have received no notice of statements.

Suspension of Standing Order 14(2)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) so that Private Members' Motions can take precedence over Government Business.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(2) be waived. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 14(2) suspended to allow Other Business to take precedence over Government Business.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/03

Grants of Caymanian Status by the Governor in Cabinet

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

First of all, I would like to say that I am saddened to hear about the accident in Cayman Brac over the weekend. I do trust that everything will go well for those who were involved in that accident.

Mr. Speaker, there is one observation I would like to make before we continue with the debate on the Motion, and that is the significant presence of police on the premises. Perhaps at some time, someone will make a statement. In my 11 years here I have seen them occasionally, but not for the duration that I have seen here. Yes, Mr. Speaker, they have been here before, but I wonder about the length of time and the reason and why they are here.

Point of Clarification

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I have listened to what the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town had to say. When the debate started, Madam Speaker put police officers in here. There were many threats, not for the first time, and there were also unruly people. You saw that we had to eject one supporter of the People's Progressive Movement (PPM) who was misbehaving, as usual. Therefore, it should not seem strange to the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town. I think that they could sit there and hear for themselves some of the things that were being said.

That is the answer. The Speaker put them in here, as she has the authority to do, because of various threats and, of course, ensuing misbehavior.

The Speaker: Thank you for that clarification. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, please continue.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I, personally, was not aware of threats of that magnitude. As a representative, I have never yet seen that type of unusual behavior, but as some people would say, prevention is better than cure. So be it. The decision has been made. I simply brought the observation. The Honourable Leader of Government Business has pointed out that the Speaker requested it. So, that is what it is all about.

The Motion before the House is a very emotive subject. My concern, along with the Opposition, is the process by which this has been done. Personally speaking, I have no problems with those who are entitled and have served their time being granted Caymanian status. This has been done for a long period of time. Our concern is the process by which it was being done.

To my knowledge, never before in the legislative history of these Islands has this number of status grants been made in such a short period of time. I spent six years in Executive Council, along with the present Leader of Government Business, and there were not that many people to whom we granted Caymanian status for special reasons, using that section of the Law.

I remember a few short years ago, when I was in Cabinet, an attempt was made to give status to a handful of athletes. Much concern and objection was raised at that time. In our Motion, we suggested that Cabinet give status to six people a year under this section of the Law. This was questioned, Mr. Speaker, but we put that section in there because of a historical precedent over the many years that Cabinet has been there, including times when it was known as Executive Council.

Mr. Speaker, I know, and we on this side understand, that Cabinet is all-powerful. Under the Constitution, that is how it works. However, it is my feeling that when the Immigration Law was designed, it was never designed to give Cabinet the power to issue status in the numbers in which it has done. I would ask: What is the use of having the Immigration Board?

We talk of transparency, Mr. Speaker. Many of these concerns and problems could have been alleviated if Cabinet had decided on a certain number of people and gave that quota to Immigration. Let them do their due diligence and check on the backgrounds of these people. We have been made to understand, and it has been brought out in this Honourable House, that there were a handful of people about whom questions have been raised. This would have protected the Cabinet from these concerns.

Once again, I raise the point—and I will mention this throughout. My concern is the process by which Caymanian status has been issued. It is my feeling that if it had gone a different route, we would not be facing what we are facing today. I would urge the Government to listen to what the people are saying out there, in the letters that are being written in the paper. This is not the Opposition, Mr. Speaker. These are normal citizens. With your permission, I would like to read one short letter that was in the Caymanian Compass last Tuesday.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, this letter reflects the feelings of those of us on this side, and thousands of other residents on these Islands. It was captioned, "Status was a Privilege".

It reads: "I have some close ex-pat friends who obtained their well-deserved status some twenty years ago. They have lived amongst us for over a decade and kept their noses clean. At that time it was an honor and privilege to be amongst the chosen few to receive a Cayman passport and voted privileges in our country. That was also a time when blunders, mistakes and stupid decisions made by our politicians fell into the category of funny or charming. What's going on today in my country is downright scary."

Mr. Speaker, this is what I would urge the Government to listen to. Even if they ignore what we are saying on this side, they should listen to the other residents. Since this process has started, I do not recall one individual coming to me to say that he or she supported the process by which this is being done. They have concerns, and if we believe that this will not come back and give us problems down the line, then we are not facing reality.

Mr. Speaker, one problem that has been brought to my attention by young Caymanians is that of upward mobility. People have been in positions within the financial sector, working under people who have been here on work permits, with the knowledge and the hope that they could aspire to those positions one day. Yes, these people have contributed to the development of these Islands, but we pay them for that. Some of these young Caymanians are very concerned that that possibility will not materialise.

It has been suggested that we, on this side, are protectionists. No, Mr. Speaker; we are echoing what people have said. Those who attended the massive meeting on the steps of the courthouse the other evening will see. Not in a long time have I seen that kind of turnout by people from all walks of life—not only Caymanians and Caymanian residents, but also people who have Caymanian status.

Over the weekend, a young lady came to me. She had gone through the process in years gone by. She had been here for over seventeen years, and it was not easy for her to get status. It was two or three times before it went to the Board, even though she had Caymanian connections. She says that what is happening now hurts to the core, knowing what she had to go through.

Mr. Speaker, I know of no other territory in the world that utilises this process of granting status by Cabinet. Many of us are familiar with the United States. You have to be there for a period of time, and initially you are granted permanent residence. You have to sit exams, and know the history of the country. A comparison was drawn with the number of people that are incorporated into the United States, and then invited to be citizens. Those numbers occur in a population of approximately 300 million people. If we compare that with the percentage of status grants being issued at present in the Cayman Islands, it would not happen.

Mr. Speaker, as we know, the grant of Caymanian status is the closest thing we have to citizenship. It is a sacred step to take. It is something that should not be handled lightly.

Illustrations have been given of people who appeared to have been given Caymanian status recently. One of the persons mentioned here was here on a work permit, and I am made to understand that the complaints on his file at the Immigration Department are close to an inch thick. I am hoping that this will be looked into, because it is my understanding that he gave many Caymanians a hard time.

This is what I am saying. We need to look at the process. We need to be sure of the background of these people, and we need to know what else it entails. Over the weekend, someone told me that there was an individual living here who had received Caymanian status, and back home, wherever the country is, there are five or six children who will now be entitled to get status at some stage.

There is concern out there among our Caymanians, and we need to listen to it. There is no rush to put this through all at one time. It was suggested that the onslaught that was started a couple of weeks ago could be blamed on the People's Progressive Movement. I would liken this to someone out in the yard burning up some leaves, who goes inside for a drink of water, comes out to find that the place is on fire, and blames his neighbour for not doing something about it. I honestly believe that when this started originally, it was started with good intentions. It probably still is. However, it seems like it has gotten out of hand.

Mr. Speaker, I continue to raise my concerns and express the feelings of Caymanians. Down the road, we may reflect on this time; let us hope it is not too late. I feel very strongly about this, almost to the point of resigning my seat if it reflects the wishes of the Caymanian people and residents.

We have urged the Governor to look at this process of giving such a huge number of people Caymanian status in such a short period of time, to see what can be done. As I said, when I started to speak, I have no problem with those who qualify and have put in their time. My problem is with the process of Cabinet. We talk about transparency, and this is what transparency is all about.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would reflect on what the Honourable Leader of Government Business said back in 1988. He moved a motion in the House proposing security of tenure as an alternative for status. He noted that his views remained unchanged, and recommended the abolishment of status by grant. What has happened, Mr. Speaker? If we wanted to give security of tenure, why would we not have looked at permanent residence also?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? This is the final call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister of Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I was hoping that someone else would have got up, as I have been having a problem with my throat this weekend; however, I believe it will hold out.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot truly say that I am pleased to debate the Motion now before this Honourable House, as I regard it as unnecessary and a colossal waste of time. In my opinion, it is frivolous, mischievous, and without merit. It is further my opinion that it reeks of political opportunism, and that it is designed to embarrass the Governor and all Honourable Members and Ministers of Cabinet, as well as members of the United Democratic Party.

The recent grant of Caymanian status by Cabinet was approved in accordance with section 20(d) of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision), to which I will later refer as the Law. It states: “20. A person shall, for purposes of this Law, possess Caymanian status if- . . . the Governor, in his opinion finding special reason for so doing, grants such status to him”.

In this respect, it is generic—him or her. Under the definitions and interpretation section of the Law, “Governor” means the Governor in Council”, now Governor in Cabinet. As I mentioned earlier, whenever I refer to the Law during the course of my debate, it shall be in reference to the Immigration Law (2003 Revision).

My first question to those individuals who brought this Motion, and to their supporters, is: Why was this Motion brought in the first place? It is my opinion that it was brought by the Opposition for the sole purpose of misleading the public into believing that the Members of Cabinet have committed a grave offence, and acted ultra vires their authority under the Law. Mr. Speaker, nothing could be further from the truth.

The legal and moral basis for the recent granting of status by Cabinet are in accordance with the Law and the good conscience of the right-thinking Caymanian people and other residents.

I can say, without fear of successful contradiction, that the Opposition has thus far not found a solid factual basis for their unjustified and vitriolic attack on the Government, nor will they find any basis for the reckless, irrational and misleading statements they have made against the Government. This is just another attempt to grab the limelight and public attention. In my opinion, we have wasted the precious time of this House debating a motion that should not have been brought in the first place. There are a number of important issues that need attention, yet we are spending days and days debating this one.

The next question I would put forward is: Were the recent grants by Cabinet, made under section 20(d) of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision), lawful. The simple answer is, “Yes, the grants were lawful”. They were in accordance with the section 20(d) of the Law, which as I mentioned earlier, states:

“20. A person shall, for purposes of this Law, possess Caymanian status if- . . . (d) the Governor, (meaning Governor in council) in his opinion finding special reason for so doing, grants such status to him”.

Mr. Speaker, it does not take a rocket scientist to understand and interpret what this means. Neither does it take any particular legal talent, yet it seems that the Opposition’s legal advisor was unable to understand what this section means.

In his debate, the Second Elected Member for George Town mentioned several times that the actions of the Governor in Cabinet were unlawful. Not only was this statement incorrect, but unfortunately, there are certain members of the public who are naïve enough to believe what he and his colleagues have said, not only in this Honourable House but also at their various public meetings, and in other forums—so much so that some are threatening to disrupt the stability of these Islands. I am not saying that to try to put fear in anybody’s heart, but because I have actual proof of it. There have been calls for marches, and certain acts of civil disobedience, such as boycotting the workplace.

Last Friday, 19 September 2003, one of my secretaries received 31 calls, with messages to be delivered to me actually stating that certain individuals were going to call a national boycott at their workplaces, and that I should try to stop it. This is one of the results of this furore.

Mr. Speaker, rather than misinforming the public to the degree that some are threatening to take the law into their own hands, the Opposition would do well, even at this late stage, to tell the truth about the grants of status: that it was not, in fact, done unlawfully. If any Member can show me in the Law why it was done unlawfully, I will gladly give way. If they cannot do so, Mr. Speaker, I suggest that this is the right time for them to desist from inflaming the passions of our people, and polarising them through deliberate misinformation. In my opinion, the behaviour of the Opposition is irresponsible, to say the least.

The bottom line is that the actions of Cabinet and the recent grants of Caymanian status were done in accordance with the Law. I feel much more comfortable having our learned Attorney General advising Cabinet on legal matters, rather than the legal advisor for the Opposition.

I do not understand why such behaviour is occurring in this Honourable House. I can only put it down to the inexperience and youthful exuberance of some of our Members.

Mr. Speaker, pursuant to section 20(d) of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision), the Cabinet formed the opinion that there were special reasons to justify the granting of status to deserving and worthy individuals in commemoration of this, our Quincentennial year. Some Members have said that this was unprecedented, but I myself cannot recall many of us ever celebrating 500 years of our existence before. Much that has occurred in this year has been unprecedented. It was unprecedented for us to give 500 Caymanians recognition on the wall of honour. Perhaps this is unprecedented, but as unprecedented as it may seem, it is not unlawful. I would like to underscore that. What we did in Cabinet was legal and in accordance with the Law. As unprecedented as they may say it was, they should not mix that up by following on to say that it was unlawful.

Mr. Speaker, certain Members will not understand, so I expect that they will be passing remarks as I speak.

I also wish to point out that under section 20(d) of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision), there are no minimum residency requirements as there are for the acquisition of Caymanian status by grant, which procedure is contained in section 22 of the Law. Under section 20(d) of the Law, the Governor, meaning the Governor in Cabinet, can grant status to any deserving or worthy individual if, in his opinion (and by extension, in the opinions of the Members of Cabinet), he finds special reason for so doing, and grants such status to him or her. It has nothing to do with whether one has spent ten or more years here, although I should quickly say that in 95 per cent of the cases, if not more, the people considered have spent upwards of ten years in the Islands. We have seen cases in which people had been here for 25, 30, and up to 40 years and more, and had not been considered. Hopefully those people have now been considered.

Rather than attempting to censure the actions of the Governor in Cabinet, the Opposition should have proposed a vote of confidence in the Government for the happiness and joy we have brought into the lives of so many deserving and worthy individuals.

I agree with the Leader of the Opposition when he says that some worthy individuals received status. I agree with that. However, neither he nor the Second Elected Member for George Town has been able successfully to substantiate the list of those individuals who, they claim, are unworthy of the grants. I have heard read out here the names of persons who were said to have received status, but when we checked them, we found that this was not the case.

I do not know why there is such a fuss about one or two individuals falling through the cracks. In the best regulated committees—the Immigration Board included—these things happen. What is important is that when and if they happen, they are corrected immediately. I say now, and I will say again, that if any member of the Opposition can prove that any criminals received Caymanian status through the recent grants by Cabinet, I would like them to table those names in this House. I can assure them that I will be the first to have those grants of status revoked.

Mr. Speaker, having listened to the debates of the Opposition thus far, it is quite clear to me that they are confused as to the proper interpretation of section 20(d) of the Law. For this reason, I will say again that unlike section 22 of the Law, which deals with the granting of Caymanian status based on a minimum residency period of 10 years, section 20(d) is left to the discretion of the Governor in Cabinet, on the basis of the recipient's contribution or potential contribution to these Islands. Such consideration should extend not only to former British Governors and British attorneys and others, but should also apply to anyone the Governor in Cabinet considers to be so deserving.

This territory should hang its head in shame to have had so many individuals residing in these Islands for upward of 25, 30, and 40 years or more without receiving status. Anyone who understands the proper interpretation of section 20(d) of the Law will also understand that the actions of Cabinet were lawful, morally based and long overdue.

Mr. Speaker, I and my colleagues on this side of the House have pointed out that the actions of Cabinet were lawful and morally based; what, then, is the real objective of the Opposition in bringing this Motion?

The Second Elected Member for George Town has already correctly stated that it could not be for votes in the 2004 General Elections, unless the recipients had already obtained naturalisation. Under the British Nationality Act 1981, an individual has to be free from immigration controls and restrictions for a minimum period of 12 months before he or she can apply for naturalisation. Under the current circumstances, this would mean that the majority of the individuals who have been granted Caymanian status would not be able to register to vote in the 2004 General Elections. Mr. Speaker, I will come to the point where it was eluded to that Honourable Members of Executive Council were considering amending the Law to make that possible.

I have clearly shown that there was no legal basis for the Second Elected Member for George Town, describing the grant of status as unlawful. I have also pointed out that the objective of the grants given, were not for Government to benefit politically from this exercise and I can speak very frankly for my motives and myself. Why then is the Opposition causing so much turmoil and unrest in these Islands, in my opinion, by deliberately attempting to mislead the public on this issue?

It is, in my opinion, the Opposition and their supporters, not the Government that should thoroughly be ashamed of their actions. They should, in my opinion, apologise to Cabinet for their dangerous and vindictive behaviour and indeed for the misinformation they have disseminated amongst our people. Such behaviour is inflammatory and leads to the polarisation of our people. The Opposition, in my opinion, should hold another public meeting for the sole purpose of apologising to the public for misleading them on this very important issue.

The Opposition have also stated that they are not anti-foreigners, but that statement, in my opinion, would have been more credible if they had qualified it by saying that they were not anti some foreigners. Having covered the lack of the legal and the moral aspects of their arguments it seems to me that their only objection must logically now point to the backgrounds and nationalities of these individuals, in my opinion. My question is: Would we be embroiled in these long and often heated exchanges on this matter in this House if the Jamaicans and certain other nationalities were not included in this exercise? Or could it be that in the thinking of some Opposition Members, and their supporters that it is all right for the Jamaicans and others to work in their homes, cook their food, look after their children, do the menial work that they do not want to do, but that it is not good enough for them to enjoy living in our midst as Caymanians?

The Opposition had the temerity to expect that these same individuals and their families will continue to give them the same political support they have received in the past. Even as I have said probably 90% of these recipients will not be able to vote in the next election, and this was not the reason that they got it. They got it because they should have gotten it long ago and because they are deserving and worthy of it. However, a lot of them have families here and those families will not forget what is now being said in this House and in public meetings. You cannot talk out of both sides of your mouth. You cannot say on one hand that they are my friends and on the other hand you say, 'no they should not get status because they should not live amongst us as equals.' They are not our equals—is that what we are saying Mr. Speaker? I have a major problem with that kind of thinking—I do.

Having weighed the pros and the cons of the Opposition's arguments so far, it is my considered opinion, that the furore that has been caused, that has been created by the Opposition is racially motivated and I will say why I think so. That is one subject us Caymanians do not even want to talk about. It is amongst us. I am 62 years old (I know I do not look it but I am) and from the time I can remember it has been amongst us. From the time I was going to school I remember one of my teachers saying to me: "oh you are not going to make anything, you are trying to grab too high". Mr. Speaker, I remember in the 1984 General Elections when I won, it was told to me from a very reliable source how someone on the other side had made a remark by saying that if the George Towners wanted to elect me over a certain individual, then they could have the 'black so and so'.

Mr. Speaker, even in my professional life I came back to this country as the first qualified accountant for the Cayman Islands, the second being Mr. Naul Bodden. I know he often boasts to be the first accountant who got a US qualification, a CPA (certified public accountant), but I was the first. I expected that the public would have accepted me with open arms as has been done in other countries; how mistaken I was. I remember once saying to a businessman in town that I would like to do his books after hours because I was working somewhere else, and his remarks to me was that I should go and ask Patterson to do his books. I never forgot those remarks and they have been indelibly imprinted on my mind. Mr. Speaker, if it had not been for my partnership with a group out of Nassau and Canada I would have starved to death trying to practice my profession here; and yet I am being told that nothing like that happens in the country.

Even in my political life I have heard very nasty racial remarks made about me and that certain individual candidates should not run with me. However, I put all of that behind because when I go out of these doors; when I travel around, I do not see a man for the colour of his skin. If you are a white man and you are ignorant you go into that category; if you are a black man and you are ignorant you go into that category. A man should be accepted (and when I say a man I mean a woman also) for the content of his heart; for who he is; not the pigmentation of his skin.

Mr. Speaker, we have been accused of selling Caymanian status for votes. I hope that I have put that to bed. However, I have no doubt it will be brought up again, and I would comment on this by saying that not only is this an insult to the Members of Cabinet, but also it shows how little those individuals who said that, think of the people of these Islands; the people they so claim to love and respect. Such accusations and statements are disrespectful. My further view is that the Opposition should now stand up in this House and withdraw this Motion—not because it is a Censure Motion; I have had Censure Motions on me before. If you have worked in this House as long as I have you would have had them too, but it is because I have not seen one that has caused me as much concern as this special one.

Mr. Speaker, the Cabinet of the Cayman Islands is comprised of very knowledgeable individuals through academic and experience. We are very fortunate to have Backbench support that is very knowledgeable and professional. In this connection a number of our Ministers of Government have had the added and useful experience of having served in very senior positions in the civil service. From a personal perspective, not only have I served in Executive Council, as it was then called, on the official side of the House, as Acting Financial Secretary, but I have also had the honour to serve on the opposite side of the House, the political side of Executive Council or Cabinet, as a Minister. Mr. Speaker, I did not come to politics as a green horn. When I came into politics I knew the working and the intricacies of Government. I therefore have to ask, what then makes the Opposition feel that they are better able and qualified to run the affairs of these Islands, or to make more sound judgements than the present Cabinet?

Let it not be misunderstood that when the Opposition gets up in this House or any other public forum and criticises the Members of the United Democratic Party and the Cabinet, that it is an attack personally on me because I am a founding Member of the UDP (United Democratic Party) and I am a Minister of our Cabinet. It is not good enough, Mr. Speaker, for anybody to say to me that they have not called my name because even though it may not be directly mentioned, indirectly I am included. If any Member of the Opposition feels that there is something worthwhile saying about me in this House, they should feel free to do so.

I believe that my record speaks for itself. I have had an impeccable record, not only in the civil service, but, from what I am told, also as a Minister of Government and I believe, as an Opposition in the House. That is why I have long not regarded myself as an ordinary, cut of the mill politician, and not that I think too highly of myself. I have long regarded myself as a statesman in this country and that is why I try to behave the way I do. However, respect begets respect. I respect everybody that I come in contact with, but I expect the same respect from them.

Mr. Speaker, there is no Member of this House who can embarrass me because I have always lived under the philosophy that somebody can only embarrass you if you allow them to do so. I have heard all kinds of rumours around the place, but as I said to somebody on the phone this morning, I have no time for that, I am too busy. Let the rumour mill continue; let the marl road gossip continue; I feel that I am above it and I will not get involved in it. If there is something substantive that can be brought in this House or otherwise, I say please feel free to do it. You have a duty to do it.

We in the Cayman Islands must start respecting each other for our abilities; each other for who we are and not where we came from or the pigmentation of our skins, but for who we are. I have had people look at me and say, "How can you afford the car you drive?" I can afford the car that I drive because I was the first qualified accountant in this country; I can afford the car I drive because my wife and I work together. Why should it seem so strange that because I might be a black person that I should not have the same privileges and material wealth as some of my other colleagues who are of a different pigmentation? Is this something that only a certain class of people has a right to receive? I have a problem with that. Before we start getting so pious with each other and calling ourselves Christians we should seriously look at this issue and see how much we love one another in this country. How many of us that tap our maid on the back would ever want to see her receive Caymanian status? It is all right to look at my family and me, but never aspire to get something that is beyond you. That is hypocrisy, Mr. Speaker.

I will not allow any frivolous and baseless attacks to embarrass me. I can assure you— especially those of my colleagues that call me after 9 o'clock in the night—that they know I have no problem sleeping because I am usually asleep after that. Even though I must add very quickly that I am also up early; there are very few mornings that I am not up by 5.30.

Mr. Speaker, had it not been for those individuals who might be tempted to believe the misleading statements that have been made outside and inside of this House by the Opposition, I would have treated this Motion before the House with the contempt that I think that it deserves by not speaking to it. However, I feel that it is my duty to clear up some of this misinformation. I said to my colleagues on Friday that I was not sure I was going to speak on this. Even this morning I am still having a problem with my throat and I was not going to speak on this, but I felt that it was a duty for me to get up and give my views on this Motion. This is not to say that I dislike one Member of this House because they all know and the public know that there is not one Member of this House that I do not have a good relationship with and that I can talk to. I heard my cousin say "except him", but I know he knows better than that.

The Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for George Town both admitted not to having any cold and hard facts for some of the accusations because I recall them saying "in my opinion". When one says "in his opinion" that is a qualification to what he is really saying; that it may or may not be exactly as he is saying it, but it is none the less his opinion.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, as we saw in this Honourable House when the Second Elected Member for George Town was challenged to substantiate his wild and misleading accusations about unworthy individuals having recently received Caymanian status from the Cabinet, he was unable to do so. I do not believe that that Member is deliberately trying to mislead because I have known him from the time he was a child, but this was the information that he had. Nonetheless it was wrong.

Mr. Speaker, the Opposition goes on to say that there are many members of the public who are perturbed by the recent grants of status. Had I not known better, I would be perturbed and that is why it is incumbent upon us as representatives to tell our people the truth about these issues. Whether we like it or whether we do not, as a Government, just say the truth. I recall once a politician was accused of giving his Opposition hell. The politician got up and said: "I don't give them hell, I only tell the truth and it sounds like hell". That is all that we want. I know that some of us sometimes get carried away with the sound of our voice, but we have to know that there are people out there that believe in us and we have a duty to give them the exact facts as we know them.

What was sad was when I saw a number of individuals, some of whom I have the highest respect for, sitting in the gallery under the impression that this Government had done a major injustice and all that the Opposition could say about it was that it is unprecedented - not that it is illegal; not that it is unlawful because I have covered that. There is nothing unlawful except it is in that Member's mind about what we did. However, I prefer to take the advice of the Attorney General who is the legal advisor to Council than the advice of the Second Elected Member for George Town.

I know when I saw some of the people who were attending in the gallery, that many of them did not have the facts on this matter, otherwise they would not have been sitting in the gallery when they could have been looking after their children and grandchildren. This is just a ploy to work the people up because it is drawing near to elections next year; "let's work them up and we will get them to support us". That is what it is about. I have been in this business a long time and I know the signs when I see them.

I have read the Report of the People's Progressive Movement's Inaugural Conference and I saw a few statements that caused me major concern. I did not hear a tape of the meeting of the 9th but I understand that similar expressions were made.

[Interjections]

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, as far as I am concerned in November 2004 the people of this country will do what they have done in past elections. They will look around regardless of how many parties we have, and see who is best able to run the country. Let them make that decision. The time will come for that. I have served on the opposite side of the House and I have served as Minister. Let the people decide. I lost the election in 1992 and those individuals in the sound of my voice will be the first to tell you, had it not been for the principle on which I stand, I would no doubt have topped the polls in George Town. However, I would rather have gone down with the ship than walk out on my colleagues in Executive Council; that is the type of person I am. When I am with you, I am with you.

I have also brought Motions in this House that were really intended to move the people. I have not always been as low key as I am today. When I was younger in this House I had my share of speaking up and expressing my opinions, but what has recently happened with this Motion is wrong, wrong, wrong, and there is no way of making it right. It has given the wrong impression that what was done under section 20(d) of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) was unlawful. I heard the Second Elected Member for George Town repeat that several times. I know that young man is very bright. I have got to say that because deep down in my heart I like him, but he knows better because he has been a lawyer for me; that is how highly I think of him, but his politics... There is nothing wrong with what was done. I agree that it was unprecedented, but being unprecedented does not make it legally wrong or unlawful.

In my opinion, the whole Motion is flawed through the inaccuracies and hype that it has caused. The Opposition has also made feeble and unsubstantiated attempts to show certain negative economics that will occur. It sounds to me more like voodoo economics because there are always two sides; a negative side and the positive side. However, when we go and give the public only the worst aspects—and I am not going to go into the pros and cons because time will not permit—but there are two sides to bringing people into your community. The only side the Opposition wants to tell us about is how it is going to be a major strain on the schools, not the fact that people who have been working on permits for forty years may now decide to build their homes in this country and they may decide that the funds they were sending home will now remain in this country. There are two sides.

I, too, look forward to a new Immigration Law and I must give credit where credit is due. It was during the leadership of the Leader of the Opposition, when he was Leader of Government Business that the Immigration Review Team was set up. That is why the Bible states that, "He that knows better shall be beaten with many stripes". Unlike the Opposition, I will not blame past administrations for not correcting this problem. Past administrations did what they could and we in the House today should build upon the foundation laid by all the past politicians: Mr. Jim Bodden, Mr. Haig Bodden, Mr. Truman Bodden (whether we like him or not), Mr. Benson Ebanks, Mr. Norman Bodden and others. It might not have always been perfect, but they did their best and I have the highest regard for them.

Mr. Speaker, I know that some of our Members hardly even talk to each other, but you know one of the things that I enjoyed most in this House? It was the relationship that I saw between Mr. Benson Ebanks and Mr. Haig Bodden—Mr. Haig Bodden now a blessed memory. I could see them in here fighting each other, but Mr. Benson Ebanks would never go to Rotary without taking Mr. Haig along, and Mr. Haig without taking Mr. Benson. They knew where to draw the line and we need to do the same thing in this Honourable House. There are times when we stopped not wanting to eat, have coffee or talk with each other. The Opposition has as much duty in maintaining good governance as the Government because without a good Opposition to keep the Government accountable, the Government would not function as well. Therefore, they have a duty.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, if you are moving on to another point, would now be an opportune time for the lunch break? Honourable Members, we will now have the luncheon suspension and return at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 11.45 am

Proceedings resumed at 2.50 pm

[Madam Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I recognise the Honourable Deputy Leader with a continuation of his debate with a time remaining of 1 hour 1 minute.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Unfortunately, I am not going to be able to take the full time as my voice is leaving me, so during the break I had to mark out about six pages of my notes that I had planned to speak on. Nonetheless, Madam Speaker, there are one or two other points that I wish to emphasise.

At the break I had been pointing out that Government is already looking at new legislation and considering the Report from the Immigration Review Team (IRT). However, what amazes me is the number of times the Opposition will state that they do not know the answers to certain problems or perceived problems, but yet in the next breath they proceed to eloquently expound upon the best way to deal with those perceived problems. Problems on which they initially said they had no knowledge.

Madam Speaker, what is also of major concern to me is the amount of emotive language that has been used by the Opposition during the debate of this Motion and indeed during their public meetings. The word fraud was one of the words they used to describe the action of the Cabinet. I do not want to misquote the Leader of the Opposition so I have taken the pain to write down precisely what he said about the grant of status. I quote: “What is particularly sinister is that I understand that the Government also intends to amend the Elections Law to extend the time for registration of voters to enable all new status holders to be naturalised and added to the voters list in time for the next General Elections.”

He went on to say, “This, if true, is nothing short of elections fraud.”

Madam Speaker, whilst he has qualified his statement, I think the effect that the statement might have had is that the Cabinet was contemplating or involved in elections fraud. Another very unfortunate term used by the PPM in describing the actions of the Governor in Cabinet in granting statuses (and I stress again, to deserving and worthy individuals) was the word “treason.”

Madam Speaker, I took the time to look up the definition of treason in my dictionary and it is described as follows: “violation of allegiance toward ones country of sovereign especially the betrayal of ones country by waging war against it by purposely aiding its enemies et cetera”. It is important to note that the one offence under our laws that still provides for the death penalty is treason. I can only hope that the PPM and the Opposition would not want to see any Member of the Cabinet put to death because of granting status to deserving and worthy residents in our country. I believe that the Leader of the Opposition would, on reflection, be the first to admit that his choice of words was somewhat unfortunate.

As I said earlier, listening to him and to a previous Member of Executive Council speak on this issue, it seems to them that it is alright for the British Governors and British Attorney Generals and others to be granted status under section 20(d) of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision). However, in their view, it is not all right for some other rank and file within our community to get this same privilege, especially those of colour.

Madam Speaker, many times I have heard the phrase made across the floor (and I think it is done in good gesture) referring to me as “Lennie this and Lennie the other”. I like that because I like to be on good terms with the Opposition. Even though I might not agree with them politically, I think it is somewhat immature and childish for us not to want to speak to each other. That sort of language, whilst I like to hear it, does not change my position one bit. If there is something wrong, I am going to call a spade a spade. That has always been my position; that has always been my modus operandi and I am not going to change my position at this late stage in my life.

As mentioned earlier, it seems that I might have to start closing on my debate because my throat seems to be getting worse, but I will get another opportunity hopefully to speak more fully on this subject.

Before I take my seat today, I would like to admonish, especially my legislative colleagues on both sides of the House, to remember that words we throw at each other can come back to haunt us. I have been in politics long enough to know that there is absolutely nothing wrong in the Opposition engaging the Government of the day in good, firm and robust debate. This is the role of the Opposition: to hold the Government to accountability.

As I said earlier, I am a veteran in this House; I have served very ably on both sides of the House, but my concern is that we should not allow our political opposition to each other to turn into hatred and result in personal attacks on each other. That is wrong and there is no way that we can say that such actions are right whether done from this side of the House or from the Opposition. I repeat that regardless of what side of the House we find ourselves on, our objective should be to provide the very best we are able to provide in way of representation for our people. Our people should always be paramount in whatever we do. When I have taken my leave of this House, whenever that is, I would like to be remembered as a politician, as a statesman that did a lot of good for his country, not as one who constantly made personal attacks on his colleagues.

Madam Speaker, I feel that it is the duty of the Government to reply to any statements made that are incorrect or that would put the Government of the day unjustly in a bad light and thus the reason why I am speaking on this matter today. We are all here in this House to provide our country, our people with the best possible representation that we can provide, even if it means the Opposition assisting the Government of the day. This is why we have Opposition in the House otherwise why would we elect them and appoint them to some of the high and important committees in the House: the Public Accounts Committee, the Business Committee of the House? The Opposition plays a useful role in many important committees, as it should be.

I am known as an individual who has attempted to provide the very best representation possible, whether I was on the Opposition or in Government. I can recall in the 1996 to 2000 term, I was in the Opposition and I was requested by the then Government of the day to assist them in negotiations on international issues such as OECD, FATF and others. I gladly assisted them. I can say that one of the things that I respected with that group at the time was that they never questioned my politics and I made it quite clear from the time that I started that I did not want any discussion in that direction because I knew where I stood. However, my motives and actions were misunderstood and I was criticised for playing up to the Government at the time. Therefore, I know what it is to be on both sides of the House. However, regardless of the experience that I have just quoted, I feel that this country will be a stronger country if the Opposition and the Government can try to work a little closer together on issues that are paramount to the success of these Islands.

Madam Speaker, there is not one Member of the Opposition with whom I am unable to amicably communicate, but that does not mean that if I have to get up here and deal firmly and robustly with an issue that I will not do so. That is my role as a Minister, as it is the role of the Opposition, to debate the issues over which they have a concern.

In closing, Madam Speaker, I wish to briefly summarise my views on the Motion now under discussion. I stated in my opening remarks, that in my opinion, Private Member's Motion 04/03 is unnecessary and, in my opinion, designed to garner political support. Madam Speaker, it is not intended, in my opinion, to assist the majority of our people, but instead to satisfy the wishes of a small minority of selfish individuals, some of whom have never wanted some of the individuals in this country, such as the Jamaicans and others I mentioned earlier, to become citizens of these Islands. Madam Speaker, I qualify it again by saying that is in my opinion.

As one who is proud of his Jamaican roots - both of my grandfathers, my mother's father and my father's father were Jamaicans, and as such, I warmly welcome all the Jamaicans, English and Canadians. Regardless of where they are from, I welcome them into these Islands. When you look at the background of most Caymanians, most of our ancestors came from overseas. They were either British pirates or slaves or from other connections with the Islands, so none of us can really say that we are indigenous to these Islands. The indigenous people to these Islands died long ago. As such, Madam Speaker, I trust that we will treat this issue with the seriousness and with the sensitivity that it deserves. Let us not play politics with it. The lives of people are too serious and too precious for political manoeuvrings.

It is a sad indictment on this country when we would allow the old planter slave mentality to creep back in to our society. That is a sad, sad indictment on this country. We are said to be one of the most socially stable countries in the region, in the world. Let us retain that good record, even though in our hearts we know that we have a problem amongst us, as I spoke on this morning. That is not to say that it has not got much better. It was much worse, Madam Speaker. I believe that as our young people go abroad and are educated (we see around us today many young educated people) that we will also be able to destroy that cancer that is still lingering in our society.

We can do without a two-tier society—us and them, the have and the have-nots. There is too much of that occurring today. We call ourselves a very Christian country with Christian heritage, but yet when it comes to our brother whom the Bible has told us should be treated like ourselves we act in a much different manner. It is alright for them to work for us, but they must keep in their place. How dare they want to be on the same level as we are! That is the problem that I see.

One writer has said that to speak ill of others is a dishonest way of praising ourselves. Madam Speaker, I do not want to fall in that category. I want to call a spade a spade and tell the truth come what may. I have heard you before, Madam Speaker, make a remark that a house divided against itself cannot stand, so my admonition today to this Honourable House is to let us love one another. We do not have to go to the person's house every weekend or spend time. Love does not mean that you have to be going out partying with them. Love means that you treat people with the same respect that you would wish them to treat you with; you do unto others as you would have them do unto you. That is what it is all about.

We should be able to get up in this Honourable House and say as I am saying. I hate no man. I might disagree with him, but then I disagree with the person I love most in this world (my wife). That does not mean I do not love her. It is a sad day when we find everything the other person does to be acceptable, but because of our disagreement, it does not mean that we cannot still get on, that we cannot still meet in the Common Room, and drink tea together and eat together. That is the kind of dichotomy we have created amongst ourselves: we cannot communicate, we cannot even eat together. Madam Speaker, there is no wonder that this is going beyond this House because, as I said earlier, "as a man thinketh in his heart so is he". If we are thinking of these things, we have to act them. Sooner or later we will have to act them.

Madam Speaker, finally may God continue to bless these beautiful Islands we call the Cayman Islands. May God continue to bless Caymanians and all the residents of these Islands. May all of us Elected and Official Members alike continue to do our very best in providing the best possible representation and service to our people. God bless the Cayman Islands and all of our residents. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Final call, does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Before I get into my debate, I think I am in a position to speak on behalf of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and also the Members of this Parliament to wish you and your family all of our prayers as you go through the crisis with your nephew, our hearts are with you. The community of Cayman Brac demonstrated our support for you and your family as we turned out in large numbers at the Airport to see you and your nephew off to Miami and we continue to pray with you, Madam Speaker.

The Motion before the House is one that is quite troublesome to me also. The Members of the Opposition have called on the supporting Back Bench to, in the terms of the Second Elected Member for the district of George Town, "wash the blood from our hands of this Motion" by standing in this Parliament and voicing our concern over this Motion and, consequently, voting against this Motion.

In particular, I noted with interest they called upon two of my colleagues who serves upon the Immigration Law Review Team, namely the Second Elected Member for West Bay and the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. However, I noted with interest that they did not call upon me with any expectation that I would stand and in his terms, "wash the blood from my hands". Madam Speaker, none of us has blood to wash from our hands. We have been part of the greatest opportunity that this country has had to move our economy, our community into the next plateau, and the next level of development.

We have heard great doom preached from the Opposition as we have heard so often, especially from the Second Elected Member for George Town. We will remember his predictions that the banks would all flee from our shores, that the budget would never balance, but we are here, the banks are still here, our economy is on recovery, so his prediction has no credibility when it comes to issues in this Parliament and the records will bear that out. When the Opposition speaks the doom, they must look at the one greatest threat that this country has. The single greatest threat, in my opinion, is that we do not have a viable alternative Government.

It is a great responsibility of a Government to always ensure that the Parliament has great balance on both sides. We would like to know that we have an Opposition who is coming forward with constructive ideas and alternatives, but I have not seen any alternative proposals. I have only seen opposition for the sake of opposing. I served one year in that position, as an Opposition Member, however, I felt that it was a responsibility that we come up with alternatives and from my time as an Opposition Member I looked at the liberalisation of what has historically been in this country, a very protective regime.

The liberalisation of Immigration policies; the records will show that I brought a Motion although it did not reach the floor, that sought to remedy some of the immigration problems of this country. Madam Speaker, I have listened with great concern as the Opposition stood and the only thing that they can say about the greatest opportunity this country has encountered to remedy the immigration problems, is that the process is wrong. I did not hear of any actions that they have in place. I just heard that how the Government is doing it is wrong.

Madam Speaker, I would like to remind this country that when we evaluate our standing as a nation we must always remember that we are a British Overseas Territory. We have evaluated over the years, and continue as both the United Kingdom and the Cayman Islands evolve and develop. We have evaluated the pros and cons of remaining a British Overseas Territory and maintaining our relationship with the mother country, and have concluded to this point, that there still remains greater advantage in maintaining the relationship with the mother country. However, there are certain downsides that we do not have complete autonomy.

We live within an international arena and we must understand that as a British Overseas Territory the Labour Government who has demonstrated a more liberal immigration policy and as they continue to tighten the relationship with the European Union there will be changes that are expected of its Dependent Territories. If we are going to maintain our relationship we must ensure that the various conventions that they sign on our behalf when dealing with human rights and nationality, that we do not become an embarrassment to the Mother country on the international arena because of violation of various treaties; of various conventions that they have signed on our behalf.

This effort made by the Government is one small effort to mitigate, to ensure that a year from now, six, maybe three months from now, that the United Kingdom itself through its powers do not attempt to remedy this situation and a blanket format. The Government felt it was more prudent for us, for the country, for our own statesmen to make these decisions rather than to have it implemented by an outside body.

Madam Speaker, we must be conscious of the ever-changing environment that we live in. We do not live in isolation any more. We are part of an international body; we are part of a whole international regime on human rights and we cannot ignore our responsibility. My colleagues as well as I and the United Democratic Party are very cognisant of the need to ensure that Caymanians are able, equipped and allowed to succeed within our country. For those who preach the doom of this liberalisation of Immigration study, there is history of many countries that have remedied their economic problems through a more liberal Immigration Policy. What we will deliver is an economy that is stronger for our Caymanians; an economy that is more acceptable, accepting to outside cultures; an economy that can support upward mobility because an economy that is viable that is vibrant. A vibrant economy is what will be the result of this liberalisation of Immigration policy.

Madam Speaker, we must look back and study our history and understand that our economic model that we live on is one in which we never owned the capital, we never had the funds as an indigenous population to build our country up. We relied from early days on foreign investment. Our hope as a country, as an economy, that once this development occurred we would have a trickle down effect through wages paid to our people. However because our Immigration policies have not evolved along with the times we have a model that without immediate fixing is doomed to fail. A model that is reliant on transient workers coming, supplying the labour, earning the wages but without any security of tenure that the money they earn within our country; the Cayman Islands, a little dot on the map has become major players in the economy of many neighbouring countries.

It is imperative that we stabilise our labour force; that we create a labour market that is sustainable; that is stable; that has a security of tenure; that it is insured once they work here that they can live, invest and put their children in school here. Otherwise, for those migrant workers who have children living elsewhere they are supporting them in those foreign countries through money earned in our economy. Because of this a wider, greater, more diverse stable labour pool will allow our economic model to work since the only growing business on our district is money transfer. I am sure that is the same case in Grand Cayman. I cannot say the only growing business but it is a significant part of the growth of the private enterprise is money transfer agencies.

Madam Speaker, I see the queues on pay days lined up to send money out of the countries, to maintain these same children that the Opposition is saying is going to flood our school system but this money is leaving our little rock of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, it is supporting families, schools and medical facilities overseas. What we are proposing to stabilise is to have a larger pool of workers because the facts are the facts. Indigenous population growth is not significant to sustain the level of economic activity that we have grown accustomed to.

Within our case of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, last year we had eight births and fifteen deaths. We are not growing indigenously so we need to go through the population that we have here. Those whom we have tested, proven, and have shown their worth to our economy, community and churches, we need to stabilize them by making them part of us.

Madam Speaker, it is not always tenure. Tenure is a great component because it allows us to examine them and normally those with great tenure has proven their worth and that is why they were kept on. However, we know the shortfalls in our labour force; we know the need of doctors; we know the need of specialists and mechanics; we know the need for greater engineers; we know what we need in the labour force. So, in building our labour force and our community we have a great opportunity. The United Democratic Party (UDP) leadership has provided this opportunity to build our population through people who we have proven are great assets to this community and possess great specialist skills necessary for us to move this economy forward, allowing our Caymanian children to prosper and the community to build itself. In an ideal world we hope that we could provide this through local birth rates but it is not happening, so we must look carefully—and I want to make this as a point of emphasis—all of us on this side are as nationalistic and proud of being Caymanians as anyone else. We are Caymanian to the bone. We have children who we are also concerned about and because of our concern we are not just sitting down and talking, we are delivering. We are going to deliver a new economy to our people, to our children.

I have great confidence in the Minister of Education and in our ability as Caymanian people to compete head to head with the world. We hear talk about young professionals; we hear great talk about how they are going to lack upward mobility but, Madam Speaker, not to toot my horn or the horn of anyone else on this side, but we have young professionals here interacting with other young professional Caymanians on a daily basis. I am confident to say that my Caymanian people; my young Caymanian professionals can compete head to head with the world and because of our confidence in our people we want to show that we do not have to give a protective layer between them and the outside world, that we can compete head to head.

Madam Speaker, when it happens that one of our Caymanians get a promotion to a senior manager; to a managing partner, I do not want him to feel that he got that position because of some protection that was given to him to get there. He must feel proud of his achievements because he was able to compete head to head with anyone else. It is only on the basis of such confidence in our people that we are now at a level that we can say let us liberalise our market, let us open our labour market to ensure that we have a sufficient labour market to meet the demands of our economy.

The very same economic model that I spoke of relies heavily on foreign investment. It relies on individuals who are not our own, to come from outside and invest in our country for the betterment of our children. It is unfair to expect that these individuals are going to come and invest but not be around to see the benefits of their investment. It is imperative that those individuals who have proven their commitment to this country, through putting their money where others have just put their mouth, by investing and helping us to provide the infrastructure we need as a population, that they too must be provided some security of tenure. We must evaluate their contribution, not just financial, but to the churches, the community clubs; we must evaluate how they assist us in our growth—those two groups together; the foreign investors who make our economy happen as well as those who labour to make our economy work. Labour is not only directly into the economic instruments such as our banking and our tourism industry, but those who take care of our homes to allow us to go out and labour.

In building our economy and our community one must take concern and look cautiously at the mix of individuals that we put together to make this community work; to make this community one that is an idol to others.

Madam Speaker, the body of individuals that are appointed to the Immigration Board are individuals sought from your generous populous. Up until recently decisions made by that Board could be appealed to a higher body the Executive Council, now the Cabinet. Madam Speaker, Immigration will always be one that generates a lot of emotion; it does to me. Some of my colleagues and myself spoke over lunch and we talked about how we have evolved with time to see the need but to simply say that this mixing, this generation of a new population; of a new community; of a new labour force is one that is going to be evaluated strictly on tenure, is not fair and would not yield the best results for our people.

There are special circumstances that must be looked at for our sake. We look at Cayman Brac's community; at what we need. We look at the fact that we need doctors, preachers who are going to be around, teachers, domestic workers, labourers, and contractors who are going to bring down the cost of construction in the Brac for our people; for our very same people who we are seeking to help and that we have been duly elected to help; we need them. We need the investor to seek to put the money in the economy to make it work. It is true that the provisions in our Immigration Law that allows the highest decision making body, that same body that was allowed to appeal decisions of the Immigration Board before, to make objective decisions with no consideration of other affiliations. Simply look at what is needed to make this community work. Tenure is one but all of the other considerations that we look into such as the skills that we need, these special circumstances that we need.

I cannot understand the argument that the Cabinet should not be making this decision. Are we questioning the same body who make laws, pass regulations, listen to appeals, appoints the very Immigration Board and gives the directives to the Board, as not being equipped to make decisions on immigration matters and on status issues? Madam Speaker, the very law that we are talking about, the Immigration Law, is one that the Executive Council/Cabinet can make proposals for amendments if necessary, and we are telling them that they cannot make decisions? At this point, I want to make an emphasis that too much has been said that this initiative to liberalise immigration is one dreamed up by the Leader of Government Business. That is the furthest thing from the truth because one of my greatest characteristics of the Leader of Government Business is how he involves everyone. I can speak for myself and all of my colleagues to say that this is a decision and an initiative of the United Democratic Party and one that all of us have participated in, and we are proud of being a part of it!

The Cabinet of this country, the highest decision making body, the Elected and the Official Members are people who I put confidence in to make a decision of one that is going to impact the lives of every citizen of this country!

There are those in here who can accurately proclaim to be more closely affiliated with the Bible than I am but there is one basic principle that all of us can agree on and that is one of basic humanity. That is basic as the Deputy Leader of Government said, 'one in which we love our fellow brothers'. Every single member of this community, irrespective of nationality or origin has come to this country on our invitation. They do not come and take out permits; we take out permits for them. We bring them here, we keep them here and we tacitly support them remaining here year after year and make this their home and then we say that it is not acceptable to allow them to be part of us? I have to agree with the Deputy Leader that there must be other considerations that I cannot understand when people are coming to these opinions.

I would like to talk a little bit more about our particular situation in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The section of the Law that the Government is using is section 20(d) and we have heard a lot about this section. We have heard the Second Elected Member for George Town beat his chest and call it an unlawful act of Government but section 20(d) “A person shall, for purposes of this Law, possess Caymanian status if- the Governor, in his opinion finding special reason for so doing, grants such status to him.” Special reason, Madam Speaker, we have looked at our economy over and over. We have had the cries of our people at our doorsteps for a stronger more stable community, a more stable economy that can sustain our people so that our Cayman Brackers do not have to leave. The Government appointed an ad hoc committee to review methods of sustainable economic development for Cayman Brac, and throughout that Report, which has been tabled in this House, you will see recommendations that talk of encouraging a larger population.

Every candidate in Cayman Brac that has ever ran since the 1980's have talked about bringing the economy around, of generating more people, of creating security of tenure but you and I have delivered. We have come and have formed part of a Government that is enlightened enough to see the need, to see the special reason as allowed in the law to assist us to build the population of Cayman Brac. If we believe that we are going to build an economy by having people come 6 months, 1 year or 2 years to earn their money, save it and wire transfer it out of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and expect that that itself will build the economy, 'no, that will not happen'.

So, you and I have been part of a process, part of an initiative that has seen some relief to this problem. We have witnessed individuals who have been recipients of status, who have rented for up to 25 years go out and look for property to buy and to build a home. So, when we talk of the down side; when we talk of having our schools swamped, Madam Speaker, we could use children in Cayman Brac. We had to amalgamate two schools in September because of the low numbers. Do not try to convince me from that other side that I should be over concerned about having more people. We need more people! Our economy, our commerce cannot sustain itself on 1500 people of which 400 are transient workers.

We need a stable population base. Much of our initiatives, dreams and visions we have rely heavily on having a larger labour force; one we know that when they go to work and get paid Friday or month end, that they are not going directly to Quick Cash or Money-gram. We know that they are going to buy groceries, put gas in their car and pay their mortgage at Cayman National Bank in Cayman Brac so that the money which stays in the bank can be loaned out again. They are going to save their money because they know they are going to be there next year. It is not fair for us to expect someone who do not know their future; do not know if they are going to be there year after year to invest in our economy, but if we give and make them part of us then the chances are much greater that they will participate in our economy.

So, when we look at the section of the Law of special reasons, I can give you one very special reason and one that I am very grateful to the Government for. That special reason is that Cayman Brac economy needs people and the Government has delivered! Madam Speaker, another special reason is that our population here in Grand Cayman is not adequate to sustain the economy so we need a larger labour force; one we know will be here and able to serve our service industries. Let us not forget that our economy is centered around service. Let me give an example of what is a part of service. When I come to a hotel this year and I return next year I feel good if I see the same faces that I saw last year. When I call my bank this year I feel very good if next year when I call I am dealing with the same person who has learnt my peculiarities; that person who has learnt what I like and do not like.

When I go to my family practitioner and take my kids I want them to be able to remember his name. I want my kids to be able to call their doctor by his first name this year and next year, and the year after, but our economy to date has not allowed that! We have brought the people in and tell them to give us their service for one year, pack your money and your things up and go. Madam Speaker, we need to understand that these are special, special, special reasons allowed by Law for the Cabinet of the country to grant status to fulfil these special reasons, that ultimately result in a better quality of life for you and I, my kids and your kids.

Our little economy is very little but very special to us; our very special economy, the thing that drives it most is once we can get construction recovered, once we get people building we immediately feel the impact. We immediately feel it and in a time in which we are down and talking that our economy needs an extra push, is it not good reason to give our people security of tenure so that they can take out a mortgage, build a home and create construction activity so that our people can be put to work? Very special reasons!

Madam Speaker, the People's Progressive Movement slogan is 'For love of country' and the United Democratic Party slogan is 'For all the people'. I think the authors of these slogans have been very wise people because these were developed at very early stages in our political development as parties but have come so truly to represent what we all stand for. The United Democratic Party stands for all the people irrespective of colour of skin; irrespective of whether you have nappy hair or not. Madam Speaker, 'for love of country', by its very slogan talks of being very nationalistic and about being very protective, but the United Democratic Party is for all of the people.

For those who see our composition, look at our general members. You will see that we represent all walks of life; those on the street who do not even work, that are not interested in working but more interested in sitting down and observing the social developments of the country to those who are in the business class and those who are the presidents of our banks. We have all stretched for all of the people.

Madam Speaker, we have agreed as a Party that we want to give this particular Motion a fair hearing. We have heard at least three Members of the Opposition—their Leader, their general secretary and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. However, I have to say that I have not heard any convincing argument, not even slightly convincing of why anyone should support this Motion! Of what is the merit of this Motion? I heard a lot of anger coming from the Second Elected Member for George Town. I hope that he is a lot more effective of convincing a jury than he is of convincing me.

I am sure that my good friend (I hesitated in saying that) the Elected Member for East End, once he rises will once more attempt to provide some justification for bringing a motion. I hope that when he presents his case that he does not do as the others have and try to twist it by saying, I really, really support all of you people getting what you deserve, however, I do not support this whole thing at all.

Throughout the debate I had to look to my colleague to my left, the Third Elected Member for George Town, The Minister of Community Development, and ask what the Leader of the Opposition was saying during his debate. Is he saying he supports this initiative or is he saying he does not? This is becoming a very typical strategy of the Opposition to say a lot without saying anything.

I would like an opportunity to reiterate my concern about the level of Opposition that we have in this country and the calibre of Opposition. I would like the Opposition to come forward with an economic development plan for this country; come forward with something to say about how they will take this country forward. How will they propose to bring the Cayman Islands back on solid foundation? Because they can see the evidence is there and the cards have been read that the United Democratic Party is well on its way of bringing this country back to stable footing. Yet they can just oppose us, they oppose and oppose. Come with an alternative; that is my challenge to the People's Progressive Movement, those in the House and those out of the House.

The Second Elected Member for George Town in his debate referred to this action, to this initiative as one that was trivialising, devaluing the grant of Caymanian status. I wonder if he ask those who have received if they value receiving it? I had the good fortune of witnessing someone at the gas station two days ago in Cayman Brac—one of the recipients—who came over with joy, with tears in her eyes because she had been granted Caymanian status. This individual is one who has been on our Island, contributed to our Island, but applied to the Immigration Board last year and did not receive. She would not be eligible to apply this year because of the provision in the Law of waiting two years and has now been granted Caymanian status as she deserves. Today she is teaching our children in our schools. I hope that she is able to hear my words tonight because she will remember the conversation. She said to me, 'I just feel different now, I feel so different; I feel that I belong here; that I am a part of this community'.

So, when that person has received what the Second Elected Member for George Town called a trivialised, devalued status, no, Madam Speaker, she has received the ticket that has made her more committed to educating our children. It has put her in the classroom with greater zeal and vigour than she did the day before she had status because she now understands that she is here for the long-term. She is concerned that these children when they come out of her classroom leave with something that is going to build our community stronger, more vibrant because she is going to be a part of it.

If the Second Elected Member for George Town can refer to this initiative as devaluing, as trivialising status, I am very, very concerned about him and all who are affiliated with him. We have an obligation to all of our people that elected us. All of our people who are out there relying on us to lead, not to follow, because the crowd says no; not to follow because a few people may hold a placard, a few letters might go in the press. Madam Speaker, we got elected in Cayman Brac in November of 2000, we got elected by significant margins we have not seen resistance from our people on this initiative. Our people understand that what we are doing is making decisions on their behalf that will ultimately improve life for them.

When we talk of special reasons for granting of Caymanian status let us not trivialise that process. Our Cabinet including the Official Members and the Elected Members have given great, great thought to this process. A lot of work has gone into it. To talk of wholesale granting of status . . . nothing could be further from the truth. Not wholesale granting, but selective building of our population on those who have proven their worth to our country. It is not a situation that was quoted in the Cayman Compass where the criteria were stated as "being alive" and "having a police record." No Madam Speaker, great thought has gone in.

Our Government, the United Democratic Party, has also been accused of using this for political advantage. We have very experienced and wise politicians on our side of the bench. If we wanted to use this for political advantage we would have done it in February where these people would have been able to vote in 2004 because their one-year for naturalisation would have been February of 2004. Let us be responsible when we get out there and talk, let us understand that when we get up as politicians, as representatives of the people, and say something it carries weight. So be cautious with what you say! We must understand the power of our words so when we get up there and accuse the Government of taking political advantage of the population by granting status with the intention of getting elected in 2004 through these votes, where is the validity in that statement? If we wanted to do that we would have done it in February, easy.

The Government should be commended for its resolve, should be commended that it took an initiative of this magnitude, which we understood from the start would generate great emotions in the Caymanian people. However, we took this initiative on at a time that we knew that these individuals would not be able to vote in the 2004 General Elections.

So, Madam Speaker, I am urging all Members to understand the importance of what we are doing to understand the role of a more liberal Immigration Policy into our whole economic model. Once you understand that, I am then pleading on all Members of this Honourable House and the general public to let us be responsible. Let us be responsible and do not go out just on a political platform and attempt to make the Government look bad by saying that this is all politics when we know that is not the case! We know it is not the case!

The Caymanian Compass was very accurate when they termed the public meeting held recently in George Town as something that appeared to be the "launch of the People's Progressive Movement 2004 campaign." That is very accurate.

Let us not use initiatives such as this that we all can understand because we are all reasonably intelligent people who understand the role of Immigration in this country. Rather than using the power of our voice to educate our people on the importance of this initiative the People's Progressive Movement launched a campaign for 2004 that was initiated on an anti-Immigration Policy.

As my voice will be indicating to all, I am suffering as a result of getting a bit wet on Friday and I have to say that I really thank the concern from my new re-found friend from the district of North Side for me catching a cold on Friday and I have to say that she was accurate. I am so happy that I have found one thing that they have been accurate on.

Madam Speaker, in closing I would like to go back to the district that we represent. The good people of Cayman Brac deserve every chance—and this is something that I know the Member from East End will agree with because we talk about it more than often. My people are proud people. We want an economy that can sustain itself. We do not want an economy that we can be accused of having to be subsidised by Grand Cayman. We do not want an economy where we cannot maintain our own children and we have to send our children overseas—not necessarily out of country, but Grand Cayman, Miami, or wherever else.

Madam Speaker, the only way that we will build proper domestic commerce within Cayman Brac, is with a larger population base. We cannot build our economy without more people to participate in that economy. I am proud that we have been a part of a process that has resulted in significant grants of Caymanian status to the people of Cayman Brac who are very deserving and do not in any way consider it as trivial or devalue.

I thank the Honourable Leader of Government Business, the Deputy Leader and all of the Ministers who have been so brave and bold to take on the issue that everyone has just ran from year, after year.

I can assure Members of the Opposition that when it comes to a vote on this Motion, I will be voting a strong no.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Final call, does any other Member wish to speak? In order to ensure that Members are taking—

The Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

I have listened with interest, sometimes in total amazement, to what has been said in regard to the Motion before the House. I have listened here, I have read in the newspapers, listened on the radio, television and listened to the public meeting the other night and I will deal with some of it. It is so much of it that I cannot deal with all of it but the Opposition has tabled their Motion and with their usual deceit, came into this House with a Motion which should not really be here in its form because it is not true. I thought about objecting when the Mover moved it, but I said let us keep the peace and I will deal with my objections in my contribution to the Motion.

It should not be here because it is a hypocritical Motion. It is a Motion that has lies and innuendo as its basis. It is a Motion, which some Opposition Members have used to divide the community and as they have said to try to take any means to stop. They claim we are looking votes; they accuse us of giving status to criminals in prison and they accuse me of wanting to give six thousand statuses. All a bunch of rot, total lies.

I think Members on this side have clearly put the Government's position forward in regard to the matter of votes. I do not know how many of these people can vote, I do believe that a vast majority of them cannot simply because under the process they would have to apply for naturalisation first and that naturalisation cannot take place until after a year. The naturalisation cannot be granted by any law in this country because it is all predicated upon the British Nationality Act controlled by Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Madam Speaker, I do not know where the Opposition Leader got his information from. He did not say in his Motion, I am still waiting for him to say where he got this information that I was going to grant six thousand statuses. Maybe he will say on that matter what he said in regard to his statements, that anyone can get it, all they needed was a police record. His excuse for that one was that it was inflamed journalism (or words to that effect) on the television morning show when he was interviewed and he was quizzed by Mr. Glidden. He said that what he said there was sensational journalism (I believe was the words he used) and maybe that is what he will say in regards to this matter of six thousand statuses, which he has put his name to and which he has tabled for debate here as truth! It is not true and the Member knows that. I have listened to them, and if all they said in this House is true (that is, how much they want to give status—that is, the three Opposition Members including the Leader who spoke thus far—how much they want to give status) what they are saying then in spite of all the dirt they threw at me in their public meeting and otherwise . . . is that the Opposition is doing all of this—these lies that we have told, these allegations we have made is all because we are not in your place to give these grants. That could be one scenario or answer to what they have said about how they want to give statuses.

The other one that could be made is that they are vindictive and against these deserving individuals obtaining status. However, I know that the Leader of the Opposition will never admit that. Since they were loosing the battle and could not stop us they had to scare monger and frighten Caymanians about what was happening, which gave them another dirty opportunity to make all kinds of allegations against myself and the United Democratic Party, and the Cabinet, as they did at their public meeting.

Madam Speaker, be not afraid. The predictions, the prognostications of the Opposition are not sometimes worthy of reply. When we had to charge more fees in this country and when listening to them, as far as they were concerned the whole world was going to collapse around the Islands, less we forget what they said. Remember that all five of them picked up their bags and (as one old man said) hauled it—[they] left the room.

Now as I said, that did not happen and on every occasion the People's Progressive Movement, the PPM geniuses have tried to put dirt on everything that we have done. I listened closely because I do believe that when someone is telling me something for good I should listen, and if it is something good that I can do then I try to do it. I have listened but you do not hear any solutions from them. I hear a lot about elections and about what they are going to do, but the people are not stupid. I have people against me today and I have always had them against me, but those who know McKeeva know that I try to do what is good. Those who are honest, those who say that they are Christians and real genuine Christians know that they cannot point any finger at me when it comes to representation of the people of this country. All you can hear from the Opposition is: 'wait until November next year'. Well if you wait until November next year before doing anything you will starve to death, 'dog eat your supper'.

Let me tell the Second Elected Member for George Town, and the rest of the geniuses on that side, that I am not scared of either of them. I have seen their kind come and go. I have seen their kind before. I have had to deal with them; the same dirt; the same put downs; the same story about McKeeva cannot read and write, McKeeva has no education. I have heard those people in West Bay say to them 'go home you have not done us any good'. I have heard them make those nasty remarks about where people come from, but the people of West Bay I represent answered loud and clear to those would-be geniuses and so-called upper class in that district. Go home!

So, I am not concerned, Madam Speaker, about elections. I do my work; work hard and leave it to my people to make their choice. The people will do what they have always done; elect those that they feel that will work together in the future as they have done in the past and those that have accomplished something for the people of these Islands. That is what the people will do.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, talked about the process in which he said it was being done, the grant of statuses. He said they gave a few, yes he gave a few now only suggesting six when the new law comes in or to change the Law. He made the point that when the Law was designed it was not to give Executive Council power to grant status. Well what did he do when he was there? He did not say how many. He did not say for what reasons. He said it can be done and that it is legal. He urged me to listen to people.

Madam Speaker, I listen to people and he knows that. I listen to people who can give me good advice, unbiased advice so that I can make reasoned decisions. I will tell him what I am not going to do, I am not going to listen to people who have been misled about the truth or people who are telling outright lies about what has taken place. I am not going to listen to a person who is seeking a seat in this Honourable House only because he lost his job (for his dirt, that is) that does not qualify him to be elected. I am not going to listen to anyone who is prejudice and would give the Governor, would give the Attorney General, would give some other favoured few, as they use to do in the 1970's and the 1980's in this country. I am not going to listen to people who would do that, refusing to give people who are here under ten years. That seems to be a big human cry 'oh they gave all of these people who are under ten years while they left off all these people who were here longer'. How do they know that?

They refused to give people under ten years, but we gave them—pastors, teachers, policemen, prison officers, people who. . . (there goes the great communicator-lawyer). We can name several. People who are connected to Cayman through a family or a marriage or who have shown interest enough to build a house or those few who have invested in the Islands and are wealthy enough to be strictly independent of any need of Government but can help us build. That is the people under the ten; nothing to hide, nothing to hide.

So, I say to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, I have seen big crowds at meetings before. This is my fifth term, going on twenty years, and I have been around politics a long time and I have seen that kind over there come and go and the noise that they make; I have seen them and the big crowds at meetings.

I remember those against the Cadastral Survey—some of their protégés are still around. When all kinds of stories were being told about Caymanians loosing their houses, I remember what a bad system it was going to be, and all it did was to stop those people who use to go at night and move people's fence posts and take their land. That is what Cadastral did for us but they marched against the Government. They got out there from district to district. Even my poor mother left West Bay, and I said, 'Mom where are you going?' She said, 'I am going to sign that petition in town because I cannot have them take my house and little piece of land.' They misled her! She was not the only one. They misled her and today some of the protégé are still misleading.

So, I have seen the crowds. That does not scare me when I know that I am doing good and it might take five or ten years to see it, but history will record that we have done the right thing.

The same sort of emotional behaviour was shown at other times in this country against the Dock, against the Hospital (the very first hospital we had). I remember the marches. I have seen the crowds, crowds bigger than that one. They did not see anything. They are talking about crowd out there? They did not see any crowd. I saw them back in the 1970's and the 1980's, I have seen them and I remember all of this was going to kill us and destroy us; we had come to the end of our rope; we were not going to go anywhere; people were going to starve to death; there was going to be no more education for the children; there was going to be nothing for us. Look how far we have come.

So, I will listen Mr. Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, I will listen to people who can see a bit further; I will listen to those that can show something to me in the future, but I am not going to listen to those managed letters that I know are being sent out there. I am not going to listen to letters by people who I know are misled, nor am I going to listen to that bunch that I saw lined up on the Court House step the other night—one who would not even register to vote but knows everything about everything. I will listen but I am going to be careful that I am listening to somebody who can tell me something.

Why, Madam Speaker, would we want to give people who do not deserve? For God's sake can anybody tell me that? Here we are, all of us in Cabinet who are Members of the Cabinet, Elected and Official, all of us are parents, some of us grandparents and have children. I want to ask either one of those over there, Madam Speaker, can anyone of them point a finger at me and say I have treated my children better than others, unlike some past Ministers? Can anyone of them point any finger at me and make any such charge? I have put my two children through school—university by the sweat of our brows and proud of it. That was not the case that I heard of some of them running around writing letters and pushing the PPM 'go get McKeeva; that is who you have to get. Get him then everything is going to be all right'. I would not even make my children get in the public's eye because I know how evil some people are. I challenge any one of them on the other side, or those at that public meeting the other night, to put their accomplishments for the people of these Islands against mine and see what they have accomplished for our people.

How can any of them who have not done anything say that McKeeva did not do anything for the people? I am proud to say that the good deeds that I have done for my people throughout these Islands, not just West Bay, and the good that is being accomplished today in various sectors of my Ministry and other Ministers work will not be matched by that group.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: Honourable Leader we have reached the hour of interruption, may I have a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 10(2).

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I so move the suspension and for us to be reminded that we will finish the work of this Motion tonight.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be hereby suspended to allow the completion of the Motion now on the floor of the House. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue until the conclusion of debate on the Motion.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader I acknowledge you for the continuation of your debate.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, they cannot match the good deeds that I have accomplished here. They will not match my perseverance, my ability, or my good common sense, which they cannot take away from me.

Now, I do not know what the Opposition is going to say after I sit down, but I know that there is not going to be any reluctance on their part to get up.

Madam Speaker, the territory of a country or a nation is its body. The people who inhabit its territory are its soul, its spirit and its life. The enhancement of the quality of life of a country's people is the first and legitimate object of good government. No person on that side can successfully challenge my love of country, my work to preserve heritage and to do good. It is the achievement of this objective that the United Democratic Party Government by its policies, the relentless work of its Ministers, Elected Members, supporters, together with the hard-working civil servants and people of this country have been toiling towards day and night.

Progress has been made regardless of what has been said. In difficult and economic times such as we have faced, our policies have been put in place the foundation to rebuild the devastating damage which was done to our country and our people by poor policy management.

A lively debate is the essence of a strong democracy. The United Democratic Party looks forward to and welcomes such debates. This provides an opportunity to elaborate on the accomplishments which the United Democratic Party Government, together with the support of the right-thinking people of these Islands has made. Continued plans will be placed before this Honourable House for the betterment of our people. Better still, it allows the Opposition today in the form of the People's Progressive Movement to place on record their thoughts, their criticisms and their ideas—although they have been bereft of them. This is democracy at work. As much as you hear them make false allegations about dictatorships, which dictatorships? If I was a dictator I could get a whole lot more done!

Poor policy management has demonstrated in many countries (some close to us and some afar) that poor policy management culminates in producing poorer masses. There are examples all around us. When the United Democratic Party came in power in November 2001 after the dominos had been slammed so hard on the people's table it was clear that Cayman was no longer in the game, the country faced an extremely serious crisis. All the essential economic arms of our country; our social arm and our international standing were in a disastrous condition. The evidence revealed the following.

1. There was no money in the Treasury, the Government before had borrowed $55 million (that was one in which the Leader of the Opposition was leading and I was Deputy).

2. The Government owed substantial sums of money.

3. There existed no plan at the time for tourism over a long-term basis. Air arrivals were statistically down and cruise ships were bypassing or threatening to bypass the Island. The marketing plans which take twelve to eighteen months to prepare and to be placed in the Market so that potential tourist may take advantage of them were nonexistent. There were none when we took over. Incorrect data of arrivals existed. I cannot believe that those two hardback men would put forward wrong statistics including everybody who worked here to say tourism is 500,000. Lies! Being dishonest! That is what it was all about.

4. The financial industry was in a state of confusion. That 'have pen will sign policy' had resulted in business dissipation. Companies had moved and others were planning to do so to other territories. Thousand of jobs were threatened. International pressure was being asserted on the Islands to accept policies, which were designed to impinge the growth of the financial industry on which policies were not being put in place by those seeking to impose the same upon the country.

Yet, you will hear them say: 'McKeever, he don't know what he is doing—you don't see that he wants to fight the United Kingdom now?' I will stand against their policy of intrusion on our financial industry until the people kick me out. Because they say one thing out of one corner of their mouth and do another thing! They forced us into what? This 'know your customer', where me, you and everybody had to go and do what? Carry every piece of documentation to the bank which we had been dealing with for years to say 'this is who I am'. Only to be told by the United Kingdom that they are not going to do the same thing because it is just too much trouble for them and it is going to cost them too much.

So, you want me to roll over for them? Well you can do that, but not me. If you want to say that I am dealing rough with them you have not seen anything yet, because there is more to come if they are going to continue down that road.

Poor policy management, you know what that stands for?—PPM. Poor policy management has caused investment in the construction industry to all but dry up. More jobs have been lost than ever before in the history of this country and thousands were threatened. Small and large businesses who supplied various services to the construction industry and housing market were in a serious financial condition, so too were shopkeepers, small hotels, restaurants, merchants and importers. This is the mess we found.

Our education system was in disarray. Not only was it threatened by a lack of money; our children were not being prepared to compete adequately and to meet the challenges which faced them in the 21st century.

I heard the Leader of the Opposition berate the Minister of Education. They talk about temporary classrooms, school roofs were falling in! Teachers were not prepared for the computer although our children needed computers in all classes. You are going to get three new schools, and the Opposition knows that. However, Madam Speaker, communists have one thing—they keep saying something over and over and then people believe it and even when it happens differently they still believe what they were told. That is what the Opposition is hoping for.

I am good at telling the truth! (Madam Speaker, he would not know a list if he saw one) I am good at telling what is right and correct! The list will come in due course.

Imports into the Islands through air and sea, a simple measure of whether the economy is declining or remaining stable, had deteriorated to such a point that the intake, instead of assisting Government's revenues could barely pay those who work in the Port Department. Organised sporting activities for schools with young children were in existence but needed improvement. Our children are competing well now (still a lot of room for improvement).

Poor policy management (PPM) produced a disastrous confusing Immigration and Trade Business Licence regime which affected the ability of our people to earn a living and mete out justice to those who contribute to our society. The main moving company on the Island reported that there was a backlog of customers who wished their personal belongings to be picked up, packed up and shipped out of the Island, as they were leaving. That is the condition we were in.

Persons in charge of key elements of our economic engine were busy instituting policies designed to remove business from the Cayman Islands to other jurisdictions with better policy management and more friendly Immigration and regulatory regimes. The effect on the overall financial engines of our country and the hardships that this was likely to cause on our people, our children and future generations, is unimaginable. Jobs were being lost at an unprecedented rate. Future financial planning for products normally introduced in the Cayman Islands was being redirected to other jurisdictions. Cayman Airways was in disarray and in deeper financial trouble than it ever was before.

Let us not forget that there were some amongst us whose advice, guidance and intentions were not in our best interest. They had to be removed! Despite threats, predictions of gloom, doom, warships and other ridiculous policy proposals, your Secretary General's friend, the one he offered special advice to, the one he said we should have allowed . . . to do what? Allowed him to go off, retire with his reputation intact. That is what the Secretary General of the PPM had to say about that Attorney General who was wrecking and spying on us. Is that the kind of leadership you think I am going to agree with? Is that the advice you want me to listen to? Madam Speaker, they can listen to it because 'birds of a feather flock together'; they are all part of it. They were there when we were debating the Motion against the Attorney General at the time; they would not come to our public meeting (if you wanted to see people you should have come to that one).

The United Democratic Party Government, by standing up for what was right, by standing up for what was in the best interest of our people and our country despite the pressure, was able to solve these problems to the benefit of our people by instituting our good policies and carefully thought out plans.

Ridiculous allegations! Look at what was heaped on me by the Second Elected Member for George Town during the debate on the Motion to take out, or remove, the former Attorney General. Look at the things that were said and what has happened since moving him. We have gotten our own, a good man who is no problem. He is no problem and he cannot be any problem, Mr. Leader of the Opposition, because it was this Government that supported it. We did not put him there, that is the Governor's job. If we had not stood firm against what your Secretary General was trying to accomplish we would not be as far today as we are.

All of this comes at a time when the leading economies of the GM and those close to the GM were in a state of economic downturn and recession never seen before since the 1940s. The same persons who in this debate represent the PPM had poor policy management and were well on the way to more PPM (producing poorer masses). That leadership today, when you check the records of everything they have done since we have been elected, they have not done anything that is concrete good for the people of these Islands—not one of those five over there!

Madam Speaker, everything that we have done is for the good—trying to move the Attorney General. They criticized us. We could not borrow any more money because the United Kingdom said 'No' at the time. We put up the fees and then we heard 'oh the country is going down' The Leader of the Opposition said that he could guarantee us shiny and brighter houses for half of $30,000. You have yet, Mr. Leader of the Opposition, to put your plan on the table, and I dare say until you have a plan on the table, you have none! You never had any, and you do not have any now!

The policies of the PPM Leaders produced poor policy management and poor people masses, and, if continued, would have made the recent crisis in Argentina and Venezuela look like child's play.

Let us not forget, Madam Speaker, without foreign investment, the engines of our economy—the financial industry, the tourism industry, the construction industry and all the service industries which exist by reason of the activity generated through those industries—would be shut down. We should realise that without hard currency (that is, US dollars) the Government and our people could not purchase oil, gas, food or medicine.

We were heading back to the days when our men (young, middle aged and advanced) had to go abroad to find jobs and send money back home; back to the days of swatting mosquitoes with shamrock tree limbs; back to the days when we could not afford for our children an educational system which would prepare them for the future; back to the days in which we could not afford the latest in medicine and medical technology; back to the days when our shops and supermarkets did not have the items which you see on the shelves today and take for granted. Say what you will, I do not want to go back to those days, and I am not preparing this country for those days!

I am pro-investment, and as one of our Members already said, we cannot build this country on a small population. Yes we must take time and move those that are here long-term in amongst us and that is all that we are doing. Do not talk about six thousand in one fell swoop. That is a lie! That is a lie!

The United Democratic Party took up the mantle, bore the yolk and worked day and night to turn around the situation that we were in. Unemployment was up around close to 10 per cent. It is down now, people are working and more opportunity exists. I hear they are even preparing acres and acres for development, yet they say that there is no opportunity; that Caymanians do not have opportunity.

The United Democratic Party had to turn around an economy at a time of global declining economic conditions knowing that the Cayman Islands depended on the economies of the countries in severe decline for its very existence. The threat of terrorism and the terrible and unfortunate events of September 11th added to the worldwide slowdown in tourism, now estimated to have caused decline in spending by tourists in the region of over US$9 Billion. Trillions (not Millions, Madam Speaker, but Trillions) of US dollars of wealth had been lost by the decline in the United States stock market alone, not to speak of the losses in other major markets on a worldwide basis.

Madam Speaker, the task the United Democratic Party faced was a task which no other Government in this country has faced before. The UDP was determined not allow our people, no matter of which political persuasion, which party or where they came from, to suffer much longer. We produced new policies and plans designed to put the country and our people, children and grandchildren, on a path which would lead to improving living standards; would lead to creating hope instead of despair, and to put money in their pockets, jobs in their path and food on their tables, and above all, to provide continuing opportunities for those that come after us.

If you, Mr. Leader of the Opposition, believe that we can just cut off the cruise industry and that is best for us then you have another guess coming!

I do not know who designed that speech for him at his inauguration but you can believe I am going to challenge it, hopefully tomorrow morning because the truth must be told. We cannot be giving $26 million and then the people of this country are running around in a circle by them not telling the truth. I cannot allow that to happen! We are not paying one red cent for the $26 million, but as I said I am going to deal with that hopefully Thursday morning, God willing.

We were determined to save jobs, create new jobs and the people on the Dock that you all complained about when I was opening it (breaking ground) wondered why I did not leave them alone to have their little party up at the Community College. Can you believe that those five hardback people over there believe that we have, on this side, to take a position where our every move is predicated upon what they do?

Are you mad?

They have gone crazy.

Madam Speaker, the country's business must move forward regardless of PPM or no PPM! It must move forward regardless of their inauguration! They have had about three of them now, why should I sit down and wait to break ground, to have another one? I was wondering when one of them was going to repeat that because I heard them mumbling over there, but they have traversed the world and some of the things they have been saying, I am setting the stage for what I believe is the grants that we have made.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business until the Chair calls for relevancy, you can deem that what you are saying is relevant to the debate.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

We were determined to save jobs, create new jobs and restore the engines of our economy. At the Dock there were a few that could get and others could not get. Today when you look at it everybody wants to get a new bus or a bigger one (if they got a 14 seating capacity bus they want one with 29 seats). If that is not progress, then you tell me what it is. The only thing is that everybody cannot get on. I must chase the cruise ship people away? He can chase them away.

You can chase them away, but not me!

The financial industry, the tourist industry, the construction industry, other parts of the service business to encourage foreign investment to return to the Island to increase construction: to create affordable housing for our people; to resurrect Cayman Airways; to resurrect the Hospital so that it could provide first class medical care for our people; assist in the growth of our economy and fix Immigration policies, thereby having a more inclusive and productive society.

We have not done anything?

I heard them say that a few days ago. It is well known and documented that productivity is the key to the success to any society. If productivity is increased from 1-3 it is well known and documented that the standard of living of the people in that society will double every 10 years. That is what economists tell me.

Madam Speaker, we work hard as a Government, sometimes 18-20 hours a day. I am not just talking about the Elected, I am talking about our Official Members because I know when I leave the Glass House late at night the Attorney General, the Financial Secretary and other Official Members are there because you can see the light on in their offices where they are working. Although sometimes when we work and we say something, not too long afterwards the news carriers got it outside . . . did not even give time for the ink to dry on the paper.

We prayed hard for the will, courage and guidance to match our commitments to our people and that our policies would restore a spirit of community, a sense that we are all in this together. Madam Speaker, the sense of community is essential to the resurrection of economic wellbeing. It is well known that without it larger communities and countries have failed. We prayed hard that our policies would never let us be afraid of unpleasant facts; never let us be afraid of new ideas; never let us be afraid of competitive values of an open and free market. Madam Speaker, these are the only markets which have proven to sustain themselves and build great countries, successful businesses and prosperity for the people.

The truth is, the People's Progressive Movement is suffering from a loss of short-term memory.

Madam Speaker, if they think that we are not going to have a hard and difficult time they are making a big mistake. This is a good time—I wondered when I would produce this letter to let some of them out there who do not seem to understand that there is a time when they need to quiet the rhetoric. They need to look at what the country is facing and what a Government or those in charge at the top have to go through.

This is a Memorandum from the Governor to the Honourable Leader of Government Business, carbon copied to the Speaker, the Honourable Attorney General and the Deputy Head of Overseas Dependent Territories (ODT) and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO).

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, sorry for the interruption, but before you commence reading can you confirm whether or not the document states without prejudice or confidential?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, it does not say that, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you kindly.

It is dealing with the Terrorism Law 2003. I quote, "The Honourable Attorney General has submitted to me with the Legal Report the Terrorism Law 2003, Law 14/03 as passed by the Legislative Assembly 24 July 2003. It should be no surprise to you after discussions earlier in July that after further consultation with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office I am returning this Law to the Legislative Assembly without my assent pursuant to section 40 of the Constitution and all other powers enabling. I recommend that section 55 of the Law be amended so as to provide for an interception of communication order to be made by the Governor in his discretion rather than by a judge of the court.

"I should again emphasise that the Governor's responsibility for internal security matters under section 7 of the Constitution means that there are sound reasons why the power to authorise interception must remain with him.

"I hope that the Legislative Assembly will agree to return to the wording used in the version of the draft Bill submitted to it after approval by the Cabinet. In the event that the Legislative Assembly is unwilling to do this you will be aware that section 38 of the Constitution enables the Governor to exercise reserved legislative powers but the United Kingdom Government would of course hope that a way would be found to prevent such action becoming necessary. Bruce H. Dinwiddy CMG."

We are here, Madam Speaker, rowing, cursing, making accusations, saying all manner of evil about a few people who got status under 10 years, no matter whether they were connected or what.

We are here talking about the Cabinet giving people who have lived here and put their worth here in spirit and otherwise. We are here talking about this while I have to be faced with this and all of the Cabinet Members as well.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business you have 1 hour remaining, perhaps this is a convenient time for the afternoon break?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Proceedings suspended at 5.05 pm*Proceedings resumed at 5.46 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated, proceedings are resumed.

Continuation of debate by the Honourable Leader of Government Business with one hour remaining.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I was reminded by my good friend, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, about a Motion I took to the Legislature in 1988. The Motion was dealt with on 9 September 1988, and it reads: "I resolve that consideration should be given to revising the Caymanian Protection Law 1984 in order to-

1. Limit the acquisition of Caymanian status while defining the word Caymanian."

I should say, Madam Speaker, that is what the new legislation today will be doing. And the next resolve section would be to provide another form of residential status to assure security of tenure for non-Caymanians. As I said, that is what this legislation will be doing.

Madam Speaker, this is some of what I said in that debate, and I want to quote it because it is relevant today.

I quote from the Hansard of Thursday, 8 September 1988. "That brings me to the question that is now posed by our Opposition. These people are asking why the rush to limit Cayman status. They say let us have more time. Well, Mr. President, let me explain to this Honourable House and to the general public the reason for tabling this resolution today.

"I believe those same candidates who are questioning this resolution today will change their course as they have changed their stand on so many issues since they began and have been elected as representatives.

"The reasons, Mr. President, for this resolution today is-

"1. I knew that I would get opposition. I am now getting no matter what time I brought it;

"2. I knew the type of people that would be offering themselves as candidates. [At least, I knew some. Boy, don't that hold true today?]

"3. This being an election year this is the last meeting of this Honourable House and the heat would be on.

"4. The people of these Islands would be in a better position to see who is for or against the Motion.

"As it were, Mr. President, to separate the wheat from the chaff. In other words between now and November 16 the spotlight would be on every candidate including all incumbents from this Honourable House. There would be no time for any person to walk around this country and say to the foreigner that the Government was against them and then go to the Caymanian and say the Government is not for Caymanians. This has been the tactic of the Opposition all along. Now is the time, Mr. President, in this there can be no sometimes yes, and sometimes no, there is only the middle ground."

Madam Speaker, I think I am talking to some of the same people today.

I further quote: "There are foreigners who have lived here for eight to fifteen years and over who came here to work and make a home. I find it hard to say go when at least some of them have made a contribution. Today they are very unsure of their position in this country and I believe that the situation has to be dealt with in a fair and equitable manner bearing in mind that a particular situation, the wishes of the Caymanian people must be carried, which is to stop the granting of status with all of its privileges.

"However, Mr. President, we are bound still by principle to organise another form of security for people in the category of eight, fifteen or eighteen years and that is what I seek to do. People who came here in 1970 and 1971 will have to be looked at more favourably. I know that there are many sound, honest law abiding people who have come to this country and set up their homes and raised a family and having a difficult time today simply because of this Cayman status thing."

What the Motion was seeking to do was to put some finality to the situation and up until today it still has not been done. That is what I was seeking to do.

I had a chance to go through to look at the record for the same date and lo and behold what should I find? There was a Motion there by Mr. Miller and me to review the profit margin guaranteed in the present franchise with a view to the reduction of Caribbean Utilities. That was in 1988, and that is what the Government is more or less doing today.

Further to that, for them who had not said anything, I found another Motion which agreed that persons who were awarded the Queens Badge and Certificate of Honour, would properly indicate that honour in writing after their name, to commission and publish a full and proper documentation of the History of the Cayman Islands. This would provide a more comprehensive syllabus on the history of the Cayman Islands in all schools and create a special scholarship to be known as the Cayman Scholarship and for the recipients to be known as the Cayman Scholar.

These are some of the good things that I have done, although you have some of them who just came here on the PPM platform saying that I did not do anything. Where were they all of this time?

Anyway, Madam Speaker, in regard to this matter of Immigration and the grant of Caymanian status, as far back as I can remember, successive Governments and administrations in this country have been promising to address the difficult issues of Immigration and, as I said, they never do it. As I said in 1988, in election time politicians will run to the foreigners and say: 'We are going to give you status; see what we are doing?' Then they run to the Caymanians and say: 'I know one thing they are not going to get any status if I have to give it to them'. Now, Madam Speaker, they cannot do that because we have taken the bull by the horn and granted quite a few. We have not done it all, but we are setting the mechanism in place where this sometimes 'yes' and sometimes 'no' cannot exist any longer and the hypocrisy must stop.

Madam Speaker, our country is one of the smallest in the world and it has a very small population. There are companies whose employees are 10 times the population of Cayman. Everyone in this country can trace their ancestry to some other country. I heard about the Deputy Leader of Government, which was something I did not know, although I knew both of his dear parents I did not know of that connection. The Member from North Side said she came from all over the place. That is why she is with the PPM, because they are all over the place!

If you trace us back everyone had a connection with some other place, and I like to tell them when they say anything to me, 'mine came across the Atlantic too, they made it across, thank God they made it across.' Some of them were slaves others were in a different bracket but I am proud of it. I have nothing to hide when it comes to ancestry. Our ancestors came from many countries and through their hard work, dedication, help and assistance of others our country was able in a relatively short time to become one of the world's leading financial centres. They have produced for its people a higher standard of living than most countries in the Caribbean and in other parts of the world.

Our free market economy; the policies of many of our farsighted people have produced an economic marvel. There are many, many people in our society who have worked and have contributed in many different ways to achieve this remarkable result.

There are many of those who looked after our children, our most precious gift from Almighty God—the future of our country—those who work in our construction, medical, tourism and financial industries; those who worked in shops, restaurants, social service sectors, and, in particular, there we have a few, not a lot. However, I am proud to say that I have helped to assist them in this way because they are the only ones—you cannot get a Caymanian to go and take care of our elderly and lift them up, clean them and put on their pampers. Some of them were smart enough after being here for eighteen to twenty years to build a home, have two children, and now for Immigration to tell them that they have to take their children back home—home to where? How can we continue to do that? unless Almighty God visits something on us that we would regret.

I believe, Madam Speaker, whatever you do, you should treat people good. Vexation may come and go, but always treat people good! I find that is something which is far distancing in this country today. Everyone must beat up on someone; everyone must be cursing someone; and everyone must be talking about someone. Madam Speaker, I believe we need to look at our inner self a little bit more.

There are those who taught and gave advice and those who work for Government, never mind if one or two of them have been here for three years—so what? They perhaps saved the Government millions of dollars in those three years. Someone said that does not say that they must get Cayman status. Well some people thought that they should. Is that so wrong if they are not going to be a burden on the country, but will continue to help? I make no special case. Some people say, 'oh you do not understand McKeeva—they are going to compete with us in our business'. Well, how did some of them get into business in the first instance? Some of them are descendants who are from overseas. How did they go in business? They went into competition with someone.

By the way, Madam Speaker, there are many, many real estate agents or people who have gained status in this issue. That is the only business that I am in and have been in for a long time. Am I going to cry about that? No, what I am going to do is sharpen my skills for my business, to prepare it for my children, just in case the PPM should kick me out. I will be as competitive as I can be.

Madam Speaker, they say it is going to ruin us. I heard what the Leader of the Opposition said. I do not believe that he meant that at all, not him that ran up and down in Jamaica hills. You said: 'what is going on is not good for us'. You will come to regret words to that effect. I do not think that he meant it at all—listening to that General Secretary of his.

"Large rally hears warning with a principle position", he says.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader would you please state the date of that issue?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thursday, 18 September, Caymanian Compass. "He charged that the recent granting of status began as a sneaky move that backfired."

Backfired where?

It went on to say that "the fact is they did not think it through; they did not know what they were doing from the beginning; they did not know it was going to be like this when they did the few status grants they wanted at the beginning. People started hearing and long-term residents started to complain. They decided that they had to do something about them."

That is not true! It is a figment of your imagination, and whoever gave you that information you should go back and flog them.

"Everyone is going to suffer" . . . that is what he said but I do not believe that he meant it. Good political rhetoric that he is not used to.

I do not believe that it is going to have that kind of effect. I checked on some of these things myself and all this nonsense about people running to the Social Services. What I can say is that is no overburdening of the Social Services today. Wait to see what the Law says before making any sort of charges. He is not here, but I want to say this: If that young man does not change that old carnality in his heart, that hatred, he is going to kill himself; it is going to destroy him!

When you come to a Legislative Assembly and stand here as a legally trained person making an accusation, you should have the proof the same way you would go into a courthouse. If this was a courthouse, Madam Speaker, he would have been charged with perjury for telling lies. The only thing I did not want to happen was for him to stand there in defiance of the rules of this Honourable House when he made those lying charges and prove him wrong. I did not want him to get into a fight with the Speaker and then the Speaker would have to rule to throw him out, giving him cause to have a big cry again and run to the newspapers carrying on with 'ya ya this and ya ya that'. I did not want that to happen, so I left it alone. However, Madam Speaker, before I sit down I must call to question his actions.

All of these persons that we have granted status to and all who have come to live here, it is time that it be said because for too long many of us perpetuated it because we wanted it to be kept small, and we were fearful for our own; fearful of things that might happen. All of these persons are part of the spirit and soul of the Cayman Islands, and for us to have a harmonious society we need to say that. They have dedicated themselves, as I said, from the washerwoman in the home to that one caretaker in the Social Services Department where we cannot get a Caymanian to take care of the elderly.

They are talking about the grand Island we have and how much we love our heritage, when we cannot get one so soul to go and take care of the people in the Golden Age Home. Jamaicans have to do it! Who else is going to do it? Go to the Pines—who else is going to do it?

You hear the remarks that some of them make when they come to see me and I say: 'We can get you a job—how about doing this?'

'Me? You want me to go and do that?'

They are our people, we represent them, but I am telling the facts here today.

They are a part of the spirit and soul of the Cayman Islands. That is our heritage, our elderly people! Yet, you cannot get one of them to go and help clean them. They have dedicated themselves and their lives to the betterment of our country. Their children who are born here know of no other land; have no other friends except those that they have developed and lived with in and are married to in these Islands. A country that is without people has no hope of achieving any kind of success, particularly economic success.

Madam Speaker, a prime example of what can be achieved by having a diverse and unified population is the United States of America. In comparison to the world, it still occupies a small area of the globe, has a very small population compared to total world population (in excess of 6 billion people), and look how they have grown; what they have done for just being 200 and odd years old.

We can say: 'McKeever, we are not America', but in this instance I can say that there is no greater nation in the world than America. I also say that what we are trying to do here is create a just society; a society where we can live together and help one another. The Member for Cayman Brac (and other Ministers who spoke before him) put it very clear: you cannot build a country otherwise. When you consider the amount of Caymanians who want to start businesses (I am talking about our own children—they sit down and talk to us, and they have ambition) where are the people going to come from to service their businesses? Where?

You may take that as a joke but listen to me. It is a fact! You cannot build businesses unless you have people, and if everybody is going to start a clothing shop, everybody is going to start a bus service, who is going to purchase? Are you going to run to my store, and am I going to run to your store and buy, or do we need people to do that?

As a God-fearing country with Christian values, and as the Deputy Leader said earlier, we should strive to treat people as we would wish them to treat us. We should not forget that not too long ago many of our people were forced to leave the Cayman Islands to work. Yesterday was a wonderful day with the seamen. The Leader of the Opposition and I were there, and that is a good example. They competed against others from all around the world for jobs on vessels, and not only did they succeed in winning that competition, but they excelled from small cabin boys to controlling some of the biggest ships in the world, as long as two football fields together. Of this I am extremely proud because they are responsible for putting the Cayman Islands on the world map.

As their spokesman, Captain Owen Farrington, said: 'he does not know where we are going' because when they went abroad they were treated with goodness. Yes, they had some rough times; it was not easy, but by and large they were treated good. Now we have people and you do not want to treat them good?

There is hardly a port existing today which has not seen a Caymanian seaman. No sea exists in the world (that I know about) that has not been navigated on a vessel with one of our seamen aboard. Many of our people returned home and left, some to live in other countries. Many Caymanians who chose to live in the United States of America competed and became extremely successful businessmen.

Look at the opportunity that was given to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town in the United States. I do not know what the system was then because he came from Savannah and that was not such a bad place. I can tell you that in West Bay it was not too easy when you had to deal with the bunch of pharaoh's who were giving the scholarships to their children and were looking at me saying, 'you come from that side of the road, stay over there'.

Do you think that I can forget that? No! The United States offered him an opportunity and it probably made him a better man.

Madam Speaker, what would have happened to our people who stayed overseas, if no one gave them a job and a home? We have people in New York (some still there—I still have relatives there) who would not have made a good thing at home but who went over there and are still there, and have made it good. Some went and made it good and came back. What would have happened if they were afraid to compete?

Money earned in a country, when invested in that country by people who have a vested interest therein, assists in the growth of that country. Persons who have a sense of belonging will encourage business to come here; will participate to a greater extent in our community and development, and all of our people in the entire country will benefit.

The United Democratic Party has repeatedly said that parties with policies were intended to remedy the past injustices which were meted out to persons who had participated in our economy, and who chose to remain in Cayman to assist in our growth. Let us not forget that despite numerous promises since the 1980s, no government adequately addressed this problem. Between 1991 and the year 2001, when the United Democratic Government announced its new policies, no status quotas were set or given to the Immigration Board. That was the root cause that resulted in an accumulation of a huge problem.

The United Democratic Party believes that our diversity is part of our strength. As small as we are and in keeping with its policies protecting and promoting economic growth, addressing the injustices of the past and preventing future injustices, we addressed this problem.

You say that you do not like it. No, you do not like it because you want to create more strife about what we have done; not that it is wrong or illegal. Do not say that we are not giving long-term because you do not know what you are talking about.

The United Democratic Government, in addition to increasing quotas significantly to the Immigration Department, began addressing the problem by making grants of status through the Cabinet. Do not say that you did not know because I made a statement here in July that this was what we were doing. I alerted the Opposition, although he said it was thirty—I thought I had said three hundred, but let us say that it was thirty. I am not saying that Member was wrong but I know this. . .

The Speaker: Honourable Member you have thirty minutes remaining.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes.

I know this, Madam Speaker, although the Secretary General is gone (because he is another great communicator) when I wrote to the Member on 21 July, I said this to him: “Dear Mr. Tibbetts, please be advised that the Cayman Islands Cabinet has authorised a special dispensation of Caymanian status to persons who have made a contribution to the island.

“Further to our conversation this morning I formally request that you and your colleagues make recommendation of persons you deem worthy of Caymanian status. Please forward your list to my office by latest 10 a.m. Tuesday, 22 July 2003.

“I look forward to your prompt response.

“Respectfully yours, [signed] W. McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP. Leader of Government Business.”

I did not tell him in that letter that there were thirty. Further to that, when I called him the next morning he said, 'we do not have enough time, and horse fat, and cow dead' and all of those stories they carried in the press. However, I wrote to him the next morning after having a telephone discussion with him, on July 22.

“Dear Mr. Tibbetts, you will recall that on Monday, 21 July, I wrote to you concerning a submission of names by you and your colleagues of deserving individuals for the grant of Caymanian status through a special dispensation order of the Cabinet.

“In the morning of 22 July we had a telephone conversation in which you said that you and your colleagues had not enough time to make any submission, I then said to you that you should try to submit names by 19 August 2003.

“This letter serves to confirm that conversation and request. Thanks.

“Respectfully, [signed] W. McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP. Leader of Government Business.”

So, the Opposition cannot say that we were limiting them to any special number. They cannot say that because the correspondence does not bear that out! On that first day, even though it was something of the Cabinet, not of the Opposition, we felt that we should ask them, and I agreed.

They could not get names in that time, but I gave them from the 22 July until 19 August (a few days short of being a month) to submit names to all of the people that Mr. Kurt, the Leader of the Opposition knew in George Town. So, do not use that as an excuse. They have slipped from using that as an excuse to the whole gamut of what they have been doing today. It is a shame because I believe (and they have come here now and said it) they want to give statuses but the Cabinet giving it is not right. If that is wrong, then flog me as you will.

You cannot come here and say that you want to give statuses, and then on the other hand say that Caymanians are going to be overrun—no upward mobility, no training—because if you want to give statuses, as we are doing, your decision would have the same effect that ours would be having. Do not come with this thing about giving people who are in prison. I took the greatest objection to that because that was a bunch of lies about McKeeva Bush giving people status while in prison. We have proven that it is a bunch of lies!

As I said, if the Secretary General of the People's Progressive Movement was in a court of law he would have been tried for perjury because that is what it is when you tell a lie in court. If you make a charge and you do not have the evidence—and one as serious as saying that the Attorney General, the chief legal man in the country; the Financial Secretary; the person who was in charge of immigration (then); the person who is in charge of Prisons; the Governor and the rest of us responsible gave this man in prison . . . proving that the man is in prison, but has no Caymanian status and is not going to get any . . . What a thing. [He] has none and is not going to get any!

Madam Speaker, I am going to lay these copies on the Table of the House if I did not do so before. I would ask the Serjeant to make copies, and make sure that the Press gets a copy of it.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The other claim, Madam Speaker, is that they are playing politics. West Bay has the least of the immigrants in this country. George Town, on the other hand, is loaded with them. How else do you think you have a population of 20 thousand people? On what basis did you believe that the Commissioners gave you six seats in George Town? That is where the population is if anybody stands to gain anything out of it, if there is going to be any political gain out of it. There is a very small few who have naturalisation. . .

No, Kurt and Alden.

Sorry about that, Madam Speaker, I was just answering the Opposition.

The rest of districts, no, but the truth is we have them all over because they have been here for years. And, as I said, they are in every phase of life in the country, but there can be no politics in it.

I recall that I sent out a letter last year and the truth is that I did not remember it until the Lady Member from North Side showed it to me (I have more copies). I sent out a letter to some of those who were granted that we knew, and I believe we said that there is a political organisation that they could join if they so desired. However, they had already been granted status by the Immigration Board; this is not something done this year.

Madam Speaker, is that any worse than them sending their invitations out and telling people to join their party, some of the same people? The invitation did not say join the political party, the invitation said come to the inaugural conference, but the information said that you can join the PPM, and where to be picked up, and who was going to pick them up; they were not all Caymanians.

The worst thing of all is for the bunch of them to be complaining about status, politics, and who got it and who do not deserve it, when their party chairman just got it under the quota that we gave. The biggest troublemaker that ever hit this country is that man, but he got it. It was not through the Cabinet it was done through the Immigration Board. There is no political gain. In fact, that would be years down the road (if it ever happens) because they cannot get now.

Let us not forget that no quotas were set up to be given by the Immigration Board and that was the root cause of and resulted in the accumulation of a huge problem.

The United Democratic Party Government, in addition to increasing quotas significant to the Immigration Board, addressed the problem by making grants of status through the Cabinet. They have been given to people of all walks of life through our society and not just the Governor, Attorney General, Anton Duckworth, and those kinds of persons. Seems to me that they are satisfied with them getting it, but not to the poor old washer woman, or the one who teaches the children, or the one that cleans the old people, or cooks for us. No, no, they are going to cause a vast amount of damage. You think that they have any money like Anton Duckworth to start a business? They will be too glad to get a little home.

Do not come with that. They are not the kind we have to be concerned about. Busha is the one that we must be concerned about, and not McKeeva Bush—mark what I said. Look at your history. That is who you have to be concerned about. Where he is? He is cocked up on your platform, the chairman of your Party.

How many Caymanians, if they were living abroad, would invest in a home and invest in that country if they were subject to being sent home each year? The PPM says, 'but they can get a house'. Sure they can get a house, but you want them to get a house and then at some point to tell them, 'you go home, we do not want you. Go back to where you came from'. You cannot do that to people! You make them invest and give them some security of tenure and that is the situation right now. They would have to leave even though they have been here over ten years and own their own home if we did not give them security of tenure. That is a possibility. They can get kicked out; lose their permit, and be told 'I do not need you, go home'—after twenty years. Some of the pharaohs in this country did it to our own people! Give them a little old wristwatch after forty years and say 'here—go'. What do you think they are going to do, somebody on a work permit, after thirty-five years?

You cannot treat people that way. That is all that I am saying. How would the children of our people feel if, after years in a country, they were rooted up and taken away from their friends and the land which they knew and bought? How many people would a person lend money to for investing in a house, or otherwise, repayable over twenty or thirty years, if the lender knew that such a person was subject to leaving the country at any moment? How do we expect financial institutions to conduct their lending business on a long-term basis when the majority of borrowers may not be in that country tomorrow? How long before the global community sanctions Cayman for these types of policies?

One stammering person on the PPM platform the other night asked, 'How come McKeeva can tell the United Kingdom what to do, but he cannot tell them what to do in this instance?' The fact is that there are only certain things that we can do. We fought hard and bitter to stop it and said, 'We do not want this and the homosexuals Law passed onto us here', but the United Kingdom said, 'You do not want it? I am putting it through. Stop me if you can'. There are only certain things that the Cabinet or I can complain about which we can be successful in. We cannot fight them, particularly when it comes to those human rights issues, and the right of abode is such that we are going to lose the battle and they have already told us that. The signs are there! Do not forget it and I will tell you why you must not forget it.

The Speaker: You have 15 minutes remaining Honourable Minister.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I have to do some speed thinking and reading here.

Anyway, let us not forget that the previous Governor, in his own personal right, started giving whom he wanted to give naturalisation. Did we forget that? Peter Smith, the previous Governor—he started it—picking out who he wanted and gave them naturalisation. Yet you have the audacity and the forgetfulness to come here and tell me that we must not do what we are doing because the United Kingdom is not going to do us anything and they are not pushing us.

You think that they are not pushing us? I hope that you all listened to what I said just now in that letter I read from the Governor. Do not forget that he started giving the naturalisation out himself. He took it away from the Chief Secretary; came in the Cabinet and said: 'I am going to do this because the Foreign and Commonwealth Office allows me to do it.'

Madam Speaker, we have a right to be doing what we are doing. The PPM has organised marches before and I hear that they are going to organise another one. I would ask them to rethink that because the country cannot take it at this time. I will ask them not to do it; they are not going to stop Government from what we have done and what we have to do.

I am asking you, if you are thinking about stirring up a march, to forget it. We have too many international problems to deal with that are going to take all of our time. The only persons who are going to suffer will be our people.

A good example of the PPM—poor people manipulation—program is the announcement that anyone with a police clearance certificate can obtain status. The Leader of the Opposition did this; he caused it. That line of people you saw out there said it, and now he said it was pure speculation (or whatever the word he used about the press), but he said it. It was in writing and this PPM—pure propaganda move—has caused numerous persons to be misled; to have false hope which resulted in our Police and other departments being overwhelmed by applications for Police clearance to people who cannot get it. They cannot because they would not qualify under some of the things that we were using for them.

A crueler act could not have been done. This propaganda is the kind that spreads false and malicious rumours generating panic among our population. Poor principle movement.

Madam Speaker, other wild and unfounded allegations have been made against the UDP Government. The granting of statuses by the Cabinet to persons of all walks of life, from religious backgrounds and from political persuasions, is the just, correct and proper thing to have been done.

The United Democratic Party and this Government intends to deliver on its previous commitment, to revise and improve the concept of immigration in the Cayman Islands. Our goal is to create a clear, fair and transparent immigration policy within internationally acceptable standards, having regard to the treatment of foreign nationals residing in our Islands. To this end, we have reviewed the deliberations of the Select Committee of the whole House on Immigration 1997-2000, the relevant sections of the Cayman Islands National Strategic Plan—Vision 2008, and the Reports of the Immigration Review Team appointed last year to make recommendations for the development of a new Immigration Law.

Without a doubt, the unprecedented increase in the [number] of residents who have settled here over the past 30 years has contributed greatly to Cayman's economic success. In order to remain competitive internationally we must ensure that we continue to attract and retain the resources of persons within the Islands to service our industries and maintain our high standards of living.

Madam Speaker, we believe that it is fundamental to the future development of the Islands if we continue to attract individuals with specialised skills and expertise. Such persons are critical to Cayman's success as an offshore financial centre and tourist destination. Many become directly responsible for the training of Caymanians in areas where there is presently a severe shortage of such resources within our own Caymanian workforce.

At the same time, we must accept that non-Caymanians who remain here for significant periods of time will begin to develop and demand greater security of tenure than that presently offered through our work permit system. As a result, we must either accept that Caymanians will continue to be a declining percentage of the country's permanent population, or we must develop and implement a policy designed to identify the residents we need to integrate as long-term members of our community, and those who may not qualify for long-term residence or who do not wish to remain long-term for one reason or another.

One thing we are certain of, we cannot afford the present situation to continue for the future. Bearing this in mind, we propose to create a comprehensive and integrated system of time-frames within which all non-Caymanians will be eligible to apply for the grant of work permits, permanent residence, citizenship under the British Nationality Act, and Caymanian citizenship.

This new framework has been designed so as to ensure that persons seeking to reside and remain in the Cayman Islands will have to fulfill the following criteria:

(i) For new applicants coming to the Islands in the future, emphasis will be placed upon the availability of the applicant's skills within the current labour market of the Island, as well as the proposed employer's record of training and promoting Caymanians within their field of business. (So that takes care of the upward mobility and training of Caymanians.)

(ii) Companies will be closely scrutinized through the use of a revised and improved business plan system which will allow employers to produce staffing plans for their business. Such plans will cover three- to five-year periods and must contain full details of all training, scholarship and succession planning offered by the businesses to ensure that Caymanians are being given the first and best opportunities of career advancement.

(iii) For businesses with satisfactory business plans, all assistance will be given to ensure that the work permits needed by them to employ foreign workers with specialised expertise not available or in short supply within the Islands are processed within a fair, fast and efficient manner.

Secondly, for long-term work permit holders opportunity will be given to qualify as permanent residents of the Cayman Islands. Qualifying criteria will be based upon a point system, details of which will be made available to all members of the public. Points will be allocated based upon the applicants occupation, education, experience, special skills, ability to support themselves financially; connection with the Islands; integration in the Islands; knowledge of our history, traditions and customs and, if relevant, any close Caymanian connection.

As a result of this wide ranging and diverse criteria, we will be able to identify our future permanent residents, not only from among chief executive officers, or from the Governor or Attorney-General, or someone else who ... a few out of the six, but professionals and managers from among our technical skilled tradesmen, administrative, domestics and clerical workers as well.

Madam Speaker, in creating such a clear and transparent path, every work permit holder will know, even before taking up residence in the Cayman Islands, the criteria by which he or she will be assessed should they chose to remain in the Islands on a longer term basis.

Madam Speaker, it will be open to permanent residents to apply for a grant of citizenship under the British National Act, under the criteria set by the United Kingdom to achieve such citizenship. So, remember it is for the United Kingdom to grant citizenship by virtue of the British National Act, but it is the right of the Cayman Islands Government to decide who should be permitted, although we are pressured by Britain's agreement within the European Union.

We propose to bring new legislation—which I will Table on Wednesday, but I will speak to it tomorrow at the Chamber of Commerce. We propose to bring new legislation, which is in the final stage of being drafted, before the Legislative Assembly. It will be laid on the Table on Wednesday for public consumption and then debated and passed in November with the hope that it will come into effect in January 2004, God willing.

This new Law will be fair, it will be clear, and it will be concise in its terms. It will set out in detail what is expected of the employers and employees as well as create a graduated system of rights for non-Caymanians.

Madam Speaker, it has already been recognised that we have many non-Caymanian residents in the Islands, a large majority of whom have been residing here for the long term. And before a new system can be adopted, we must ensure that we deal fairly with these people who are already here and are a part of our community. Not all such persons will be entitled to status.

In addition to a new framework for work permit holders and long term residents, provisions will also be made to encourage wealthy retirees and entrepreneurs to invest and reside in the Islands together with their important support staff and/or dependents. We have started that initiative already by granting status to a few.

Provisions will also be made for children who have been born in or resided in the Islands during their minority years, as well as the spouses of Caymanians whom it is proposed will be granted the right to reside and work in these Islands. However, it is also proposed that those persons granted status who have children—minor or not—who are not living here will not be granted status automatically, but will have to go through the Immigration Board via an application process.

In conclusion, Madam Speaker, for many years successive Governments have promised immigration reform and nothing has been accomplished. We cannot continue to ignore the problems that are being created by our previous lack of commitment to act. We are aware that no immigration policy can be all-encompassing or all inclusive. Immigration, by definition, is subjective. It will never suit or please everyone, but we need to be decisive and proactive in creating a new policy that will generate a gradual and selective increase in Cayman's permanent population base for the benefit of our social, economic and cultural growth for many generations to come.

All persons will know before they choose to come to these Islands what the system is, how it works, and will be aware that there are limits to the numbers of persons our geographic area can accommodate. The Law will strengthen provisions to ensure upward mobility for Caymanians and fairness in employment practices.

Caymanians who are able and willing must, and will, be given the first opportunity for all jobs, and will be protected from unfair practices. No more are we going to have people here 15, 35, 53 and 70 years without security of tenure. This is fair. It is equitable. It is just, it is transparent; and it is another example of good governance policies that have been carefully thought out by the UDP Government.

Madam Speaker, in closing, we—the UDP Government—have never shirked our responsibility to make difficult decisions, whether they be to include people, innumerate their rights or relate to hard and unpopular matters that are for the benefit of our country and our people. We will make mistakes. We are all human. We will correct those mistakes and move on. We are a Government that seeks to include everyone, irrespective of affiliations, movements, parties; those who support us, those who do not; those who are old, those who are young and those who are coming into the world. We will always strive to do our best for all.

The PPM has sought to censure the good government policies of the UDP which related to an effective, prudent Government and prudent results. This is a desperate move by the party.

Hon Speaker: Honourable Leader, your time is up. I will allow you to complete your last sentence.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you.

I was just saying, Madam Speaker, that they have sought to move a vote of censure against the Government. It will not succeed. The move is desperate and it is poor, policy management driven to producing a propaganda movement. Even today they have not learned that their policies as set forth would again produce poorer masses.

Madam Speaker, thank you very much for the time. I do not believe we have done the wrong thing. I believe we are on the right course. The Law will be tabled here on Wednesday. Tomorrow I will speak to it at the Chamber of Commerce and I will also make a statement on the Grant of Caymanian Status on Wednesday or Thursday morning, God willing.

Thank you. Thank you very much for your indulgence.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Final call.

The Member from the district of North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The debate on this Motion to deal with the recent granting of Caymanian status has covered the People's Progressive Movement inaugural conference. It has covered racism, which, in my opinion, is a very serious point to be brought into any discussion in these Islands.

[Interjections]

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I would appreciate if you would ask the Minister of Community Services to keep quiet until I am finished, unless he has a point of order.

The Speaker: Standing Order 39(c) says maintain silence while other Members are speaking, and not interrupt except in accordance with the Standing Orders. And that goes for both sides.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In my humble opinion the recent action taken by the Governor in Cabinet for the grant of 1400-plus Caymanian statuses is one of the most far-reaching actions that any Government has ever taken in these Islands.

I would like to make it extremely clear that there are many long-term residents in these Islands deserving of Caymanian status. I would like to make it clear these should have been dealt with many years ago and we would not be in this position. However, it boggles the mind as to how the present Government chose the 1400-plus persons for the grant of Caymanian status.

Section 20(d) states that the Governor may grant status for special reason. Madam Speaker, in my opinion if the Government had granted these 1400-plus statuses (or maybe I should say 2000) based on special reason, the reply from the Government on this Private Member's Motion No.04 today should have been a list of the persons granted, the special reason why they were granted, and the length of stay in these Islands.

I would like someone to tell me how a young lawyer who arrived in these Islands to work with the Legal Department of the Government has been granted status after being here for merely fourteen months. I would like to know how this person has qualified for the grant of status under special reason.

Now my very good friend, the Honourable Minister for Works, Communications, and Information Technology, said that maybe this was based on judging what their potential contribution would be, if I understood him correctly. Now, certainly, the Government is not in a position to guess what a person's potential contribution is going to be to these Islands, to grant these people status.

I would like to know, particularity in the Legal Department of the Cayman Islands Government, where I think we have one or two young Caymanians still in that Department, what are the chances of those young Caymanians moving up the ladder? What is the special reason for persons who have been in these Islands for less than seven years, less than ten years being granted status? Tell me, what is the special reason for persons whose permits would not be renewed by the Immigration Board who then left this Island and were then granted status? Madam Speaker, it seems as though the Government's interpretation of the words 'special reason' is totally different from that of the people of these Islands.

I say that the process which has taken place with the granting of status to these large numbers of persons is wrong! It is wrong! Can the Government tell the country what criteria were used for granting these numbers of status? It could not have been as the Government claims—long-term residents and their contribution to these Islands.

The Opposition can base their reply to Government on no more than rumours, because the Government has not come forward to tell this country, who, what country, how long and the special reason.

We have been told there are persons that were here on visitor's visas that have been granted status. We have been told that people arrived here on 7 November 2000 spent ten days, went back home, came back in July 2003 and were landed as a Cayman status holder. Madam Speaker, that process has to be wrong! It cannot be right!

I have no gripe with those persons who have been granted status, my gripe is with the Government and the way the Government went about granting status. I want to make it clear, I do not think any were granted in my district, but I say the process was wrong, is wrong, and if it continues to be done by Cabinet, the process will continue to be wrong.

You know, Madam Speaker, we have covered juveniles in this debate, and I will deal with that a little later on because I am going to tell this country and this House the truth on the numbers. The country is asking because every Member inside this Chamber campaigned on open and transparent Government. Where is the openness in the granting of these statuses and the transparency? I see none. The process is wrong! There were no criteria.

I do not believe that the Government took the time to research this granting of status. The Opposition has grave concerns as to the far-reaching implications of the granting of status to some 2000 plus.

The questions I ask—what effect will this have on our already overcrowded schools? What effect will it have on the upward mobility of young Caymanians in the workplace who have been understudying people in the private sector who have now been granted status? What will happen to those young professional Caymanians? What effect will it have on our welfare system? What effect will it have on the Health Services? How will it affect our people in business? These are the questions that the Government needs to answer for the people of these Islands.

I do not believe that they went into this—

[Inaudible interjection]

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, the Cadastral Survey was before my time. I am not going there.

I am dealing with the issue that is before me now, as I see it, on how it will affect my people at this time.

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Order.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I am sure that we will be told that the children of these people who have been granted status will not be granted status, or they will not be allowed to come to the Island. I hope that is not so because once you give a mother status in your country you can no longer not allow her children to be with her.

We talk about human rights, and the European Convention, and the United Kingdom and the pressure—that they are saying that we must grant these statuses by Cabinet.

The Minister of Education, in particular, should have been in a position when he came to this House to debate this particular issue. He should have said: 'as the Minister of Education I have researched these numbers of statuses that we are granting; I am assured that this is not going to further overcrowd the schools in these Islands and everything will be okay'. I know for a fact that the number of children who are in our schools now do not have the proper resources, so can you imagine when more are added. These are the questions that the people want answered and are entitled to have answered.

The Minister of Education should have told this country that he ensured that the proper process was followed. Yet he stood up and talked about freeing the slaves. I have no time for racism in my country. I do not look at the man by the colour of his skin. I happen to be the great-granddaughter of a slave also. However, this country does not owe me a living because of the colour of my skin. I must ensure that I make that living and make life better for me.

We have heard mention of the Jamaicans and they are saying that the People's Progressive Movement is polarising the people of the Islands. Nothing will polarise us more than racism and naming particular nationalities.

I wonder if the five elected Ministers on Executive Council could stand up today and tell the people of these Islands that they know each and every one of those persons who they have granted status to; that they know them and can assure us that they are above the law; no police record and no health problems. I will say without fear of contradiction it is totally impossible for the five elected Ministers of Executive Council to say that they know those people. They know some, but they do not know all.

Madam Speaker, I believe that when this started in July it could have been a genuine exercise of the Quincentennial celebration—we are going to grant X-number of statuses, all well and good, no problem. I personally believe that if the Government had taken a policy decision at Cabinet level and said for the Quincentennial celebration we would like to grant 1000 Caymanian statuses, if they had taken their policy decision and sent it to the Immigration Board saying: 'here is the criteria for the granting of these statuses: Persons must be resident over ten years, with a clean police clearance certificate, clean medical certificates', and the people of these Islands would not have said a word. It is the process that has been followed by the Cabinet in granting these statuses that the Caymanian people are concerned about.

Now, Madam Speaker, I would like to stop here and deal with the Minister of Community Services, who has a serious problem with me, not because I am Edna but because I am a woman.

The Speaker: Is that your opinion Honourable Member?

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: That is my opinion, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs.

Point of Elucidation

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Madam Speaker, I object to the manner in which the Member for North Side continues to try to label me as having a problem with her as a woman. If that is her opinion, I would like her to substantiate that opinion by saying exactly why she thinks that I, as the Minister responsible for Gender Affairs, have a problem with her because she is a woman.

The Speaker: I take it Honourable Minister that is a point of elucidation?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Member for the district of North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I will deal with the situation of the juveniles. The Honourable Minister of Community Services got up in here and made a statement. I raised a point of order on it, and I am still awaiting your ruling. However, he brings it back into the debate on a Motion to deal with Caymanian status. The Government has paid for an advertisement in the newspaper. If you will bear with me, Madam Speaker, until I can find his statement.

It reads, "The highest number of incarcerated youth occurred during Mrs. Moyle's leadership in January of 2001.

"At that time 32 young offenders and juveniles were behind bars. As of the 12 September 2003 that number was cut in half with only 16 young offenders and juveniles being held, a 50% reduction. The lowest number to be held during the time occurred in June of this year with only 10 in custody. This represents a 68% reduction between the highest, 32 in January 2001 and the lowest 10 in June 2003."

Madam Speaker, it is so conspicuous that the year 2002 appears nowhere in this statement that the Honourable Minister made—that was his year. Certainly if there were 32 juveniles being held in January of 2001 those juveniles had to have been incarcerated from 2000.

You know, Madam Speaker, I have people that like me too. The statistics from the Prison are: 2001—6 male juveniles; 2002—15 juveniles (13 male and 2 female); 2003 correctly, as he says, as of now—10 (7 males, 3 females).

All I am saying is, let us speak the truth. The Honourable Minister for Communication and Works stressed it today. We are all representatives and should speak the truth; speak it ever, cost it what it will. I have no time to tell lies.

We all know the situation with the Cayman Islands Marine Institute back in 2001. But, Madam Speaker, it is a Motion on Caymanian status. The Minister's statement says January 2001—I do not know who prepared it. In the advertisement in the paper we said 32 persons on 16th and 17th January. Somebody is being dishonest and all I am saying, Madam Speaker, let us be honest, be fair and speak the truth.

Madam Speaker, there are many persons who I know quite well that have been granted status in this 1400 plus. They, too, have told me that they disagree with the way in which it was handled because they have many friends who are long-term residents in this country.

When I have people meet me at the door in this building who have worked with me over the years (because I do not have a helper now) have just come back to bring their applications to get status. Is this fair? Is this process right? I say no, and the people of this country say no!

The truth is that the initiative by Cabinet to recognise the contribution for a few outstanding souls who have contributed to these Islands for the Quincentennial, as I have said before, I could have accepted it, no problem! However, when we see what has taken place it is no way that this country can accept a blanket grant of people who have been in this country on visitors permits, less than 5 years, 3 years, less than 7 or 14 months, it cannot be right!

I go back to the Minister of Education and the Minister of Community Services. When we talk about racism—do not tell me that they do not mean racism. I have a good education too, and my father paid plenty of money for me to go Jamaica. So, I have a good education too and there is nobody searching all over the world to make sure that I have a university degree; I do not have one, but I have common sense. To dig into racism in this country will destroy the future of our people; it will destroy this country quicker than anything else. If these statuses were granted not for political reason, do not polarise the people of this country to say that they are Jamaicans who we do not want because we want the white merchant class.

Madam Speaker, I am trying to find the letter from the United Democratic Party when the status was granted by the Immigration Board in 2002 to whoever (I do not know who sent it to me, they inked out their name): “Dear Mr. . . . congratulations we are extremely pleased that you have received Caymanian status, you have proven beyond a shadow of doubt that you are an intricate part of our society and your contributions have certainly helped us to become one of the gems of the Caribbean.”

“Where we have been is legacy to your contribution and where we are going is certainly going to need your participation. May I give you an open invitation to join the United Democratic Party.”

“Please come and learn more about the vision for our country and our children.”

[Signed] “Honourable McKeeva Bush, Leader of Government Business, [and] Billy Reid, Chairman of the United Democratic Party.”

I have seen these written on Government stationery.

So, Madam Speaker, if this is not a political issue let us hope that we do not see any more letters like this. I stand to wonder if the Chairman of the People's Progressive Movement, who was just lambasted by the Leader of Government Business, got one of these. But he decided to go with PPM.

Madam Speaker, this is to my new found friend, the Second Elected Member from the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. As you recall in his debate he said that because he got wet yesterday he has a new-found friend in the Member for North Side. I pose a question to the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac. In his debate he tells the country that [his] district needs people. I could not agree more, but I wonder, what guarantee the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac has of those people who have been granted status in [his] district, which says that they are going to remain in [his] district. I would much prefer to have heard him stand on the floor of this House and say that the Government is seeking better ways and means to get the people who have left Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to return home. There is no guarantee that once these people receive status the population of those two Islands will be increased.

I would like to call on the Government to issue immediately to the people of these Islands a list of every single person who has received Caymanian status, nationality, length of stay in these Islands so that we can put this issue to rest. The reply from the Government on this Private Member's Motion should have been a list with the reasons for each person; length of stay and, Madam Speaker, I call on the Government to do this immediately.

The Leader of Government Business called on the People's Progressive Movement to rethink the march. Madam Speaker, I, as a Member of the Opposition, now call on the Government, and ask that no more status be granted by Cabinet, but through the right course, the Immigration Board.

We heard much about the PPM, the policy this and the policy that. UDP grant of status to UDP—United Democratic Party grant of status to undeserving people.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Final call— does any other Member wish to speak?

Second Elected Member for West Bay do you wish to speak?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, the elected Member for East End and I seemed to have been passing messages by pointing fingers at each other. I was heading to Business Committee, but if he is not going to speak I guess that I will speak at this point.

The Motion before us calls for a number of resolutions. But I must say that the Motion, in my humble opinion, obviously seeks to try to continue to inflame the passions of Caymanians over an issue that many Caymanians get excited about, and that is the grant of Caymanian status.

Madam Speaker, this Motion calls for the “. . . Legislative Assembly to condemn and censure the actions of the Governor in Cabinet in making the recent grants of Caymanian Status;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly acknowledges the far reaching implications of the unilateral and wholesale grant of Caymanian Status by the Governor in Cabinet to thousands of persons in one fell swoop;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Legislative Assembly calls upon the Governor in Cabinet to forthwith cease making grant of Caymanian status pending the holding of wide-spread consultation with and approval of the electorate of the course of action taken by the Governor in Cabinet in this matter;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT section 20 of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) be amended to restrict the ability of the Governor in Cabinet to grant Caymanian Status so as to limit such grants by the Governor in Cabinet to six per annum.”

Madam Speaker, in looking at what has transpired in regard to the Cabinet grant of status, one has to look at a number of things in conjunction with the grants.

As a younger Member of our community, I think it is fair to say that over the years we have all falsely believed somehow that all we have to do is continue the moratorium on the grant of status and that was going to solve all of our immigration problems; just sit back and do not worry about a thing, the moratorium is in place so that is going to protect our Caymanian society.

On the converse side of that, during the economic boom from the late 1980s to the mid 1990s this country saw an unprecedented number of immigrants who located to the Cayman Islands to take up residency to work. That went on and everyone continued to talk about the influx of people. But the truth is, Madam Speaker, there was too much at stake economically for any brave soul to raise his head up and say that should have stopped. There was no brave soul, as I recall.

During the early to mid 1990s I was away at university studying, but I did a fairly decent job at following what was going on at home by receiving the Caymanian Compass by mail through family members. I do not recall any brave soul getting up and saying, ‘You know what? We need to stop this influx of immigrants’. There was no brave soul who got up and said to businesses who were obviously building a business to accommodate the new levels of population ‘You know what? Do not do it. Do not build your supermarkets so large; do not build your clothing stores for plenty inventory; do not build so many apartments.’

Madam Speaker, the one thing that is human nature and Caymanians do not have any monopoly on this, is that the people of this world like to have their cake and eat it too. We believe that we can simply do as we please. But there is a real world that we live in and, as a small community, one that has been relatively unsophisticated at the local level. A lot of people have a tough time now grappling with the real world that the Cayman Islands finds itself having to operate in. A lot of people also have a tough time grappling with the fact that the United Kingdom Government makes it quite clear to us that when we create policies and pass legislation that we should have regard for her international treaties and obligations.

We believe that we are still in the shoot-‘em-up days of cowboys and Indians where we can do as we please; we do not have to worry about anything and then when reality hits, everyone gets real excited. When having to deal with the realities of the day, crisis is created in the minds of so many people.

Madam Speaker, the immigration issue in Cayman is one that for the last few years has been the focal point of politicians and more and more people in the community; that was clearly borne out in the Vision 2008 Report. What is interesting, though, is the general feel that you get out there when you talk to Caymanians, and that is citizens and business owners, about this situation.

For the most part, it is my opinion that you find a lot of Caymanian employers who believe that they should have the privilege, irrespective of the impact on indigenous Caymanians’ ability to find a job, that they should have the privilege to employ as many foreign nationals as they want; on the terms they want and keep them here forever and a day. It would seem as though once life is over for these people, the plan must have been that they would then pack up and leave once their usefulness would have been utilised.

It is us, the Caymanian people, who have sat around and allowed the immigration situation to become a national embarrassment. Here we are with over 6600 people in our community who have lived and worked among us for better than ten years. What is even more amazing is when you talk to people about what happens when they run an advertisement—the number of applicants who are non-Caymanians and live in this country, especially people who have entry level jobs in the hospitality or construction business. When asked, ‘why are you looking for a job from me, are you looking to change jobs?’ The answer is ‘no, I want you to share a permit for me’ and then a further probe would be ‘why do I need to share a permit with another employer for you?’ The answer is ‘well I do not have enough work with my current employer to be able to keep me busy for a full work week’.

You see, Madam Speaker, we have a real neat little habit in Cayman—everything is the foreigner’s fault. We are not responsible for anything in this country. I am convinced of that, at least not anything bad. The bad stuff is not our fault and I challenge any of us to go to the Trade and Business Licensing Board and see who the majority of companies are owned by, because there is a requirement under our Law that the companies have to be owned 60 per cent by Caymanians. So, when we hear of these situations and come to the realisation of what this situation has been allowed to become—it has been allowed to become this way because we have made it become this sort of situation.

I believe, and I think most reasonable members of our community believe, that persons who have made a significant contribution in our community do deserve the opportunity to reside and remain here and become permanent members of our community. That is a very subjective thing, though, because for some people what is significant often corresponds directly to the length of time someone has been within these shores. So, some people believe if a person has been here over twenty/twenty-five years that is a significant contribution. I would think that most people would agree that if someone has worked and lived in your community for a period of time it would be a significant contribution. However, there is so much more that can go into the analysis of what a significant contribution is.

What is that definition? If all of us were to apply our minds to that question we would come up with a myriad of possible answers, almost endless.

So, Madam Speaker, whilst I understand why you would have Caymanians get excited when status is granted to persons who have been in Cayman for less than ten years (which is the accepted period in law that you can apply for status on the grounds of residency) there is still so much more that goes into significant contributions. More importantly, what is the potential contribution going to be of that particular person once they are allowed to become a permanent Member of the community?

I think if you look at the Members of the Legislative Assembly, going back to the 2000 Election Campaign and the Chamber of Commerce meetings in the various districts whereby all of us participated—one of the questions asked was on this whole issue of immigration. If we look at what a lot of people’s responses were we might find it very interesting at how people perceive a problem, especially people who have never been elected before and never got to understand and appreciate the magnitude of the immigration issue. I would be the first to admit that in my wildest dreams I did not imagine that we had the type of situation that we had.

What has made Caymanians and many countries great is the ability to deal with the situations that are at hand. There is not a whole lot of use for people to run around at this late stage in the game and complain about the number of people we have in Cayman, and the length of time that they have been here, because there is no wonderful time machine. I believe, that at this point in time we, as Caymanians, have to ensure that we utilise this situation with the people who has been amongst us for these significant periods of time and who have made and continue to make significant contributions in our community to build.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for West Bay, I believe that I am getting a cue that the recorder needs a chance to change the tapes.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for West Bay you may now continue.

Order! Members.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, thank you.

As I was saying we have within our country an opportunity to build a more dynamic, deeply qualified type of society.

Now, Madam Speaker, there are people out there who will say ‘yes, but we needed to wait’. If we look at the birth rate of Caymanians and at how slow our (what we commonly refer to as indigenous) population is growing . . . I use my former profession alone; we have some 400 qualified accountants in this country of which some 60 are Caymanians. That sector is growing. When is it that we are going to catch up and be able to fill the types of jobs that we need to fill with Caymanians?

We need to understand that people are continuing to work and time does not stop so people are going to be retiring, getting out of the profession and going through life naturally. That is with accounting and all professions. I used that one as an example. So, I believe that we have the opportunity now to build the type of dynamic society that is going to bode well for the future in the Cayman Islands.

I heard Members of the Opposition ask, if we grant status to these long-term residents, what about the upward mobility of Caymanians. I am asking those Members why are they making these stark realisations in 2003? I ask them why is it in 2003 that they now realise this? when, in fact, the partners and senior partners in many firms and other types of businesses who do not have Caymanian status have been in this country 15, 16, 20-plus years. What are we going to do now, Madam Speaker?

I use my old firm as an example—what are we going to do? There a few of the partners there who do not possess Caymanian status, but I believe almost all of them, if not all, have been in the Cayman Islands well over ten years. There are some young Caymanians who are now coming through, one is a senior manager, one is a manager and I think a couple of them are senior accountants. And there is one currently in New York.

Madam Speaker, these people are the people who toiled and made that business; those are the people who worked and put in the hours, who came to the Cayman Islands to build that practice. So what are we going to do now? The two current senior partners would have status but the person who has been named as the new senior partner to take over next year does not have status currently. What are we now going to say to him? 'Oh you have been here in this country for all of these years; you have built up this practice; you have given scholarships to the worthy Caymanians, but we believe that there is a younger Caymanian coming up behind you who is probably about 8-10 years less than you. So, you cannot get Caymanian status because we believe that the day he is ready to be senior partner you potentially could still be here and that is not right'.

Madam Speaker, it is really funny. As a young professional and a person who has come through the firm system, it is so funny to hear people who have been around so long allow the situation to get where it is, yet at the eleventh hour we are going to start talking about upward mobility of Caymanians, and if you grant someone status what effect that is going to have. At the end of the day we have to deal with the reality of what is before us.

I, for example, always take keen interest when I hear Caymanians start off their conversation talking about how their foreign supervisor, boss, or whatever word you want to use, does not treat them fairly; does not give them any opportunity. I am not going to stand here and say that does not happen in the Cayman Islands, for it happens here and it certainly happens in many other countries in terms of the people that you work under, and whether or not they are fair to you. However, one of the things you do not hear a lot of people talking about is the opportunities that have been provided in this country.

I am not so shallow as to forget that I was given a scholarship by a 100 per cent foreign owned, in terms of people who were indigenous Caymanians. None of the partners at the firm at the time were inigenous Caymanians but they gave me a scholarship; paid for my university education; paid for me to sit the Certified Public Accountant (CPA) exam; paid for me to go to New York to get experience and nobody needs to say they did it because I am Rolston Anglin. Because who is Rolston Anglin? My mother worked in many well-to-do Caymanian's homes when she was a young girl and then she went on to clean condominiums. My father painted homes for a living.

So you see, Madam Speaker, one of the things that is very obvious about all of this is that I get back to that human nature. Caymanians want to have their cake and eat it too. They want to say: 'We have reached this level of development and the persons who were not born in the Cayman Islands and came here to work have worked hard and contributed to the society. Now we have a problem because there is too many and if you give too many status at any one time then that is going to cause a real problem for the rest of the Caymanians, as we are going to become over-run.' However, they are already working in our country and taking up those jobs; those work permits are not going anywhere. Those work permits are as good as being granted for life. We have over 6600 residents who have been in this country for greater than ten years.

I believe that we have an opportunity to move the country forward and continue moving the country forward.

I am convinced that the average Caymanian, once all the persons who have been granted status by Cabinet becomes known, are going to look at the list, see ten people they like and they will say, 'yes, good people, glad that they got status'. They will see ten that they do not like and they will say, 'bad people—why did they get status?' and then they will think in their minds of ten other people that they believe deserved it more than anybody on the list. That is how ridiculous this whole situation has become and has been allowed to become over these years.

When I sat here and listened to the Honourable Leader of Government Business read what he said in 1988 upon moving the Motion that was brought up earlier on, and here we are 15 years later, same debate, same thing being said. The problem is that nothing substantial was done in those last 15 years.

We have amongst us in Cayman not only long-term residents who have been here on work permits, but we have a good number of them who already have been naturalised; have a Caymanian passport; they can vote but they do not have Caymanian status. We also have many people who all in this community looked at and thought were Caymanian. In our minds we know that they come from a Caymanian family and we just assumed that they are Caymanian. What else are they? We have always seen them; we know who their people are, so they are Caymanian, but due to some quirk in the Immigration Law they do not have Caymanian status and a lot have refused to apply for Caymanian status out of a point of principle. They themselves have said to the world 'look I am Caymanian and I am not going to apply for Caymanian status because I do not need any paper to tell me who I am'.

Madam Speaker, we also have many people who all of us know are not necessarily of Caymanian descent but have been in Cayman so long that we presume they must have Caymanian status. I think all of us would admit that every time, for the last three years of a quota being issued, we have seen those pictures in the Compass. We see people and say to ourselves: 'What are they doing applying for Caymanian status?' Because they have been in Cayman forever. I just said that because I think it is important to look at the situation for what it is and for what the country currently has.

Madam Speaker, I believe that the Cabinet has taken on a task that nobody else dared touch; would not dare touch immigration because—'Oh! If I touch immigration then I am going to lose my seat because Caymanians do not want us to grant statuses to anybody' and we continued that practice year after year.

The Cabinet has utilised a section under the Law that allows them to grant Caymanian status. There are varying reasons why the Cabinet should have done this. In fact I refer to what my good friend (as he called me, so I will call him) the Second Elected Member for George Town had to say.

I quote: "Section 20(d) of the Law (to which the Leader of the Opposition earlier referred) is there to deal with unusual circumstances, as he quite correctly said. The language is quite clear. It says that the Governor in Cabinet may grant status for special reasons—not any reason. There must a special reason. When Government seeks—and continues to seek (or so the Leader of Government Business says)—to confer grants of status indiscriminately on thousands of persons in this community, that is an unlawful act. Cabinet has exceeded its authority and its power under the Law. It has arrogated to itself the function of the Immigration Board, and that is unlawful." [2003 Official Hansard Report, p. 617]

Madam Speaker, I do not agree with the assessment, but I beg to say that if all of us in the Chamber, all of us in the Gallery, and all of us as Caymanians, do not believe that having over 6600 people living in our country for over ten years creates a special type of situation then that means I am way off cue. Because how can we say that there is no special circumstance or situation here? We have a national embarrassment. And as far as I am concerned, that is more of a reason than any reason that we have to deal with in our immigration problems and situation. I believe that right-thinking people will look at this situation and say, 'yes, this is a situation that has to be dealt with'. We must now deal with this situation.

The Opposition has now said the real problem is the way in which Cabinet has done it. Not a problem with giving persons for a special reason but the way in which it was done by Cabinet. They cannot agree with the way in which it was done by Cabinet. Whether or not Cabinet started the clean-up exercise, or whether or not it was the Immigration Board, other than God coming down and looking into the heart and soul of every long-term resident and other residents in this country and deciding that these were the people who have all the perfect legitimate motives and should be granted Caymanian status, Caymanians are still going to be upset.

Immigration is a loser when it comes to politics, not just in Cayman, but worldwide. Ask any politician. Immigration is a loser. It is one of those things that is just there and you do not want to deal with it; you do not want to touch it because once you touch immigration, whoever is a part of the indigenous population at that moment is going to be concerned and is going to feel threatened irrespective of how it is done.

Madam Speaker, I say that the Government has gone down the road of starting the process of cleaning up this national embarrassment that we Caymanians have allowed to be created. It is up to us to realise that in this whole situation we now have an opportunity to build a stronger Cayman Islands because a lot of people have this notion that if we do not have X-number of generations of Caymanians in our blood then we cannot really love Cayman.

I cannot say how many people in this country love it as much as me, but I can certainly say with confidence there is no man or woman on the face of this Island or anywhere in this world who loves the Cayman Islands more than me. I would die for my country! That is how strongly I feel about being a Caymanian. 'Anglin' is not an old Caymanian name. Anglin is a relatively new Caymanian name, because alive today are still two children of the original 'Anglin' who came here. So how can it be a real old Caymanian name if there are still two children alive of the original Anglin who came to these shores?

We have to recognise that out of pure human decency there are many people in this country who deserve and should be granted security of tenure. There is a whole range of difference in terms of people's opinion as to what criteria should be used to determine that, whether it is residency (should it be five years, ten years, fifteen years, twenty years, or one hundred years?), when there is more subjective criteria like one's profession. Should it be doctors, teachers, or preachers? Madam Speaker, we are not going to be able to create any form of consensus as to what those people are who should be granted security of tenure.

I believe that the Cabinet with all its Members, five elected Ministers and three Official Members of Government (all of whom I know love this country as much as I love it) . . . I am convinced that in the great majority of cases, when revealed, the majority of the people will be people whom the majority of us, who are reasonable, are going to look at and say 'yes, this is a deserving person who has been granted Caymanian status.' You cannot have 100 per cent agreement because there will be some people who do not like this one because of this reason and they do not like that one because of that reason. Again, like I said, when people see it they are going to see ten that they really like; they are going to see ten that they do not like; and they are going to have ten more in mind who should have gotten because they were better than all of them who had gotten, and that is irrespective of the time period here.

Madam Speaker, we have all (and I know that the Opposition is the same) been inundated with calls from Caymanians—not foreigners—who want this one and that one to get status. It has been across the board, not just people who are saying that they are professionals or people who want common labourers; it has been across the board and it has come across the board in terms of the Caymanian society. You find people who believe people deserve to have status, not just because they have been here ten years. The truth is there are some people who have been here for a lot less period of time than ten years who have contributed more than people who have been here for more than thirty years. That is how life is!

Madam Speaker, I think the majority of Caymanians do look at the situation and agree that there is one category which needs to be dealt with, and that is the long-term resident. That is, persons who have been here over X number of years. Again, in general terms I would have to say from what I have heard over the last few months on this issue, the majority of Caymanians who I have spoken to seem to revert back to the Law and look at ten years as what they consider long term. That is not surprising, because if we had a law that said ten years was the criteria to achieve before one could apply for residency, then that must have been somehow related and correlated to the general feel of people in the society in terms of what they consider long term.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for West Bay it is now 8 o'clock is this an appropriate time for a night break?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I am hearing everyone saying 'yes', so, yes.

Proceedings suspended at 8.00 pm

Proceedings resumed at 8.34 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Continuing his debate, the Second Elected Member for West Bay with one hour and seventeen minutes remaining.

Mr. Rolston Anglin: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

I only have a few other quick points to make and I would not think of keeping the House nearly so long as another hour plus.

I see the issue before us as one that I believe, we, as Caymanians, are going to be able to utilise. Quite frankly with the number of people who have been in our country for so long we are going to have to utilise, because I believe that most fair-minded people in our community do agree that there are people who deserve the ability to be fully integrated into the social, political, and economic life of our country. As I said, that not only goes for those who have been here for a very long period of time, but I also believe that there are special types of people who we will want to purposely keep around in our community because of the special traits and skills, whatever it may be, that those people offer; for example, doctors.

A lot of people feel very strongly about their family doctor, and the doctor who they go to when they become ill. There are a lot of people who want that type of person to be permanent in the community. There are a lot of people who feel that way about teachers and pastors in their particular church.

I would like to offer Members and the listening public a quick perspective of the genesis of the new legislation which the Honourable Leader of Government Business spoke about, which is being readied for presentation to the Legislative Assembly in this sitting.

Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town questioned why it has taken so long for Government to have a bill before the House. I have double-checked that. The first report of the Immigration Review Team was submitted on 18 December 2001; the second report was submitted on 11 September 2002; the third and final report is currently being finalised, but that report deals more with administration of entry and landing. So, the principle components of the new immigration regime are contained in those first two reports.

I cannot say why it has taken since last September to get to this position now where we actually have something drafted and before us. What I can say is that I asked the former Attorney General on more than one occasion what the status of that particular piece of legislation was. As a Member of that team, quite frankly I was very disappointed that it was taking (in my opinion) so long to have the legislation drafted and to be in a position to have the Chairman of the Immigration Review Team meet and go over the actual draft legislation. I cannot say that I was ever given a clear reason as to why that was the case.

The point was raised earlier in the debate by the Second Elected Member for George Town . . . and I just wanted to make it clear for the country to understand that nobody on the political end has been dragging their feet and keeping this away. I think it is fair to say that all of us—not only Government, but the Opposition as well—want to get this legislation here as quickly as possible. In speaking to the leader of the Immigration Review Team (it was not this past weekend but the weekend before) Friday (which I think would have been 12 September of this year) would have been the first time that she saw an actual draft of the proposed Bill. So, Madam Speaker, she did not see a first draft until twelve months later and they have worked diligently to get it in shape. My understanding is, as the Leader of Government Business has pointed out, it is going to be tabled in this sitting of the House.

That legislation is going to be as any piece of Immigration legislation is going to be. That Legislation is not going to be a piece of legislation, in my opinion, that is going to get this Government or the Opposition any great political mileage because it is immigration and, in my opinion, you do not win with immigration. It is all about doing what you believe is right and just, and the best thing that you can possibly do for the country.

So, there are going to be people who are going to be upset, I am convinced of that. And there are going to be those who will like what they see. That is the case with a lot of pieces of legislation but, Madam Speaker, I truly believe it is going to be more so with immigration just because of the nature of the beast.

I do believe, that in looking at this Motion before us and in looking at the history of the problem, my honest and true opinion is, it is a national embarrassment. Immigration has been allowed to become an absolute national embarrassment. We are going to have those who will say, 'well it should have been dealt with this way', and you are going to have those who will say 'no it should have been dealt with that way'. However, I do not care which way it is dealt with. I do not care who granted these statuses because at the end of the day you are going to have Caymanians who are upset.

A lot of people have been led to believe that we had immigration solved; we had a moratorium on the grant of status and that was it. That is all that we had to do and we were going to be able to keep the Caymanian population as an exclusive type population that was growing from within. There were some marriages into the community and some grants of statuses using that route, but for the most part no statuses were granted on the grounds of residency and naturalisation, and we were okay—just keep the moratorium in place.

Irrespective of how the clean-up exercise started it was going to be many people in the public who were going to be upset, and I will repeat it again:

I am still convinced that when the average person sees it he is going to see ten people he agrees with, ten people he disagrees with, that should not have gotten it, and then he is going to think of ten others that he thinks should have gotten it above everybody else.

I would also like to reiterate some of the things that the Leader of Government Business said because I think some of those points may have potentially been missed.

When we speak to special circumstances he not only pointed out that people were granted status based on the category type of employment that the person had (that is, doctors, teachers and preachers), but also certain other categories were looked at. These categories were persons who have Caymanian connections; persons who were married to Caymanians and, yes, you have people who will say, 'wrong way, it should not have been done way, it should have been given to the Board, it should have been given to this one and that one to solve'. At the end of the day we needed to start down this road of cleaning up this national embarrassment and getting the stage set for a new immigration regime in this country and to be able to incorporate some people into the community.

Madam Speaker, I believe that there is going to be a new wave of opportunity in this country. This is going to make the Cayman Islands stronger. It is easy to spread fear when it comes to the grant of status, but I know that there are a lot of people who have been here a very long time and were granted status. A lot of those people are either retired or very close to being retired.

So, again, people continually look at this and say that is a job that a Caymanian could have taken up, but it is now being given away to a foreigner. That is not entirely the case. Like I said, a lot of these people have been here a long period of time and by default that means that they are getting up in age and close to retirement and a lot of these people take up professions that Caymanians will not do. It is as the Leader of Government Business pointed out about the cleaners and the persons who take care of old people and that sort of thing. Look at preachers—I do not see a lot of Caymanians pushing their sons and daughters to become preachers. I know that there are quite a few preachers who got status. There are quite a few teachers who have gotten status also, so I really believe that this situation is being painted that this is doom and gloom; this is it for Caymanians; this is going to totally displace thousands and thousands of Caymanians and be so negative an impact on the community. At the end of the day we need to build a strong society and continue to build a strong society.

History finds us where we are with a lot of talented people within our midst, some of whom have been here for longer periods than others. They are here amongst us and I am convinced that in the great majority of instances they are good, hard working honest people. As I said, it is going to surprise us how many of them we think are Caymanians anyway.

When it comes to this magical ten year cut-off, I am not going to get too excited about that because from the people who called me, for example two persons who called me—one was here for just under ten years and one was here for slightly over seven years—both of those people have connections from both sides of their parents; their grandparents were all full-blooded born Caymanians and they have now returned to the Cayman Islands.

So, it is my humble submission that as we go about trying to build up our community and build our society, when we can find people who have close Caymanian blood, those are the people we need to embrace because they are people that are very close to us. Yes, they moved away and their parents moved away, but whose parents did not move away? Some people just happen to come home a little earlier than others because I think 90 per cent of us had at least a father who went to sea and went somewhere else. Some just happened to settle somewhere for a little longer than others and now some of those children are coming home. I would say that all of us should do whatever we can to be able to get Caymanians who are living abroad to come back home because we need to build our society.

If we believe that this economic miracle we have in Cayman is something that can be sustained with such small numbers, we are going to find that is not the case. As life continues on and we are now off that high, that is probably one in every twenty years, we are going to find that we need a base population that supports good economic activity.

Madam Speaker, I believe, and I think most of us in this Chamber (in fact I would say all of us) believe that at the end of the day immigration has become a national embarrassment to this country but it is no sense dwelling on that. We now have to dwell on the way forward and correcting the problem. I think it is very important that we also have at this time, a piece of legislation that is going to be coming before us which is going to help address and try to ensure that this problem does not get to this type of situation again in the future.

I would like to say that whilst there is some excitement out there in the community, I knew that this would happen even if we had not granted status and just brought the new legislation. As the Second Elected Member for George Town knows, there are transitional provisions in that legislation, so any way you slice it or dice it there is going to be a furore because we were touching immigration. However, this problem has to be put to bed and put behind us.

Madam Speaker, I cannot support this censure Motion, but I am glad for the opportunity to speak a few brief words on the immigration issue, and I look forward to us moving forward as a country. We have to move forward as a country. All persons who are Caymanian as of this day and who hear our debate need to understand that we must continue to be competitive in this world; that we must continue to work hard and make wherever it is that we reach in life be as a result of the effort that we put in. We must build this country forward.

All of us either have children or grandchildren. There are quite a few of us on this side who are relatively young and have very young families and we are not here to support anything that we believe is going to cause them to look at us and say, 'you did us an injustice'. I do not believe that is what has happened.

We must move on and build. We are a new generation in Cayman. As they said, there were iron men who sailed wooden ships. We must now be strong, determined people who are going to continue to build a strong community. A lot of us are going to be surprised how quickly people integrate in the community and become what all of us call "Caymanian." As I said earlier, I do not have to look too far back to be able to find the genesis of "Anglin" in the Cayman Islands, and I do not believe as you search my family that you are going to find anyone that is more nationalistic and cares, and loves this country more than us. I am but a fifth generation.

I thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Final call, does any other Member wish to speak?

The Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I take note that the Second Elected Member for West Bay brought the podium over for me. Starting on what he finished with about building our country (so true). You have to build it. But, certainly, it has to be done in a manner that is in keeping with what we as Caymanians are use to.

Madam Speaker, obviously I rise to make my contributions to this Motion which I have seconded, therefore I rise in support of this Motion.

I, like many Caymanians, am concerned as to why the Government went about issuing status in the manner in which they did. Please allow me to explain what I mean.

Two years ago (in 2001) on the brink of a judicial review, this country was faced with one of two things—getting a judicial review against it on immigration or lifting the moratorium on Caymanian status. The Cabinet (or Executive Council at the time) made the decision to lift it quickly. I believe there were 200 to 300 persons who would receive status if it was applied retroactively or the quota was set at that to ensure that those who were entitled (the twelve per year) would have applied for the past eleven years or thereabouts and more were added on.

When that quota was set in late 2001, early 2002, many deserving people applied to become Caymanians. I would bet anyone that all of those applicants (those 200 to 300 grants) had tenure for over ten years because the Law requires it. They respected the Laws of this country so much so that those who were below ten years of tenure did not even bother to apply.

While I understand the Immigration Law and the provisions of 20(d) I see no reason why the Cabinet had any reason to go in and grant people statuses that were below ten years. I am going to show why. Madam Speaker, just so it is not misunderstood, I hear many of the Ministers (and at least one of the supporting Backbench) talk about not liking this one or that one. And I am going to return to that in a bit. However, there is no reason whatsoever to grant status to people who have been here less than ten years.

The Honourable Minister for Health in his debate outlined the amount of persons in this country over and above ten years. He said 11 to 15 years there were 4,802 people in this country; 16 to 20 years – 920; 21 to 25 years – 455; 26 to 30 years – 135; 31 to 40 years – 59; and 40 plus years – 3. That is over 6,000 people who have, according to the Law, qualified to apply for Caymanian status. It does not mean that they can get it, but they can apply.

The Government is yet to explain (other than special reasons or circumstances) why status in what they call “special dispensation” has been given to people who have been here under 10 years. Madam Speaker, in 6,000 there is much room. They gave 2,000 (or thereabouts) and over 6,300 are over 11 years in this country. I am not against granting Caymanian status to people who have spent their time in this country.

Let me look at my life first and foremost. I have travelled as much (and in most instances more) than many Members of this Honourable House. I have been to more countries than many of them will ever live to go to. It has always been as a visitor. I also spent almost ten years abroad as a seaman and I started from the bottom too as a galley man and rose to an engineer position. Madam Speaker, not once during my travels did I ever expect as a visitor to receive citizenship in any country.

When the Government talks about what the Opposition is purporting to be facts in here, let me just make it clear that it is what the people of this country have told us. I can make this promise to the Government—especially the Leader of Government Business and the Minister of Health—when they get up in here and talk about leaks in the civil service they had better be thankful for the civil service. If I had gotten the list the Minister of Government Business would not have the chance to publish it, I would have published it a long time ago! I would have put it in the media and paid full page! There is something sinister about not producing this list.

The Speaker: Is that your opinion, Member for East End?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker.

Any time the Government is ready to ask me to call names they can get up on their feet. There are people in this country given status who only came here as visitors in this recent dispensation.

Madam Speaker, it is my understanding that a woman went to the Immigration Department some time in August (I do not know the exact date) to apply for an extension on to a visitor’s permit and the staff for whatever reason refused it. It is my understanding that the woman went on so ridiculous, so much so, that the Police were summoned to have her removed from the premises. Her parting blow was (I am giving it as I got it) that she was going to pray and fast on the Cayman Islands for forty days and forty nights. One week later she went back to the Immigration Department to have her passport stamped with Caymanian status. Madam Speaker, that is not good!

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, the Member is making some allegation that I believe he needs to put the proof to this House. He needs to tell us who this person is; he needs to substantiate what he is saying. There are too many of these things that are being done and they cannot substantiate it. If they can, then we need to know.

[Interjections]

The Speaker: Order!

Member for East End as you stated it as a matter of fact, I would ask if you are in possession of the supporting documentation of this circumstantial evidence you would so lay at the appropriate time. If not please qualify it as your opinion.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, with all due respect, I prefaced what I was saying about this particular case with what I have, which is not fact, it is hearing from people. If I had a fact, such as a list, I would have disclosed it. It is what I heard and it did not come out of the civil service either.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, on a point of order!

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, maybe the Leader of Government Business needs to sit down until I am finished.

The Speaker: Members, Members, order!

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Well, I am not sitting until he sits down. He needs to sit down until I am finished.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I am rising on a point of order.

The Speaker: If it is point of order then the Member has to sit. If it is elucidation the Member has a right to give way.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I am trying to explain to you what you asked me to explain.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, can I address the Chair?

The Speaker: Both Members please sit for a minute.

The Member for East End is in the mode of explanation. In the process of that it is obvious that the Leader of Government Business has a point of order. If it is a point order I will hear the point of order and if it is elucidation then I will rule at that time. Leader of Government Business please proceed.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: If the Member is addressing your request then I will sit and wait until that is completed. If he is not going to answer then my point of order is he has misled this Honourable House and he needs to provide the information. He needs to substantiate his allegation.

The Speaker: Member for East End, what I was trying to convey to you earlier on is that if you were in a position to substantiate it then you need to lay those documents (if it is in an expressed form) on the Table for the record of the House. If your assertion is that you received, what I should term as hearsay evidence, the fact that you have come to a conclusion that it is relevant or significant enough to repeat in these hallowed chambers, then I think there is a rebuttal presumption that you too have concurred with what you have heard. If that is the case then you have to equate it to your opinion, otherwise you would have to back it up, as a request of other Members, with sufficient evidence. So, please proceed.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I made the Leader of Government Business a promise that before this debate was over we would get some more names and he would have to do some more research. I am going to give him the name that I heard and he can go tonight and get another statement and bring that back too. The name that I got was Lovell Fay Reid, or Marriott (maiden name, Reid; or Marriott as the married name). Now I would like to know the special reason for giving this individual Caymanian status? Is the special reason because she lives in West Bay or something? I do not know.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Yes Honourable Leader.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: On a point of order. This Member is not going to stand up here and make these kinds of accusations about people living in West Bay. If they think that they are going to get away with this then they are making a big mistake. They have already told a number of lies that they cannot substantiate and his mentioning West Bay is imputing improper motives here.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: How can he? If he says that this is such a dirty move, then what would that be?

The Speaker: Members please pass comments through the Chair.

Member for East End, I have been listening extremely carefully. It is obvious that you have received information from a number of sources; I have come to that conclusion. I would take it, being the Honourable Member you are, that one of the questions you would have been interested in, following the line of debate from yourself and your colleagues, would be from whence the person came. If you are in a position to say that then I would ask you to cease from passing innuendos but to be specific as to the district if you are in the possession of that information.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I do not know where this person lives. I merely asked if it is West Bay, George Town, where is it?

Is that the special circumstance? I do not know.

The Speaker: Order!

Are you saying, Member for East End, that when you posed the question—is she or he from West Bay—that it was in the singular but it was intended to mean the plural encompassing any of the six districts?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker, I do not know where the person lives, I just asked a question.

The Speaker: Please proceed then.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I would like to clear up all of these one time and be done so that we can get the points of order.

We hear of the Government ensuring that my good friend the Second Elected Member for George Town is embarrassed because of what has transpired when he called some names (they know he cannot reply).

There is the situation where a gentleman by the name of Albert Chin was called in here as having received Cayman status. Now I did not solicit any information on this gentleman; I was called by one of the young professionals that this man had a negative impact on in the workplace, so much so, that this young Caymanian—up and coming brilliant young man—had to leave the workplace because of this individual. This young professional Caymanian in all rights wrote a letter to the Immigration Board complaining about the anti-Caymanian way this man conducted himself. (Oh, I was just waiting for the point of order).

Madam Speaker, it is probably other Caymanians who have written in against this man. What are we telling these Caymanians? That their opposition to someone in their country is not valid? Is that what we are telling them when we turn around and give these individuals Caymanian status? I heard that in here too. Let me make sure I attribute it to the right person so I beg your indulgence for one minute here. However, I do believe . . . and if I am wrong I will withdraw that, but I do believe it was the Minister of Community Affairs (he seems to have gone too, he needs to come back) who said that Caymanians like writing to the Board in secret and the person does not have the opportunity to reply, but this is how those persons are replying now, saying: 'the UDP Government is really fixing those young Caymanians who wrote'. That is what is going on in our country.

I want to make it straight and if I did not do so before I will now. I am not against people coming to my country and living, behaving themselves and becoming one of us. That is fine by me, Madam Speaker. They must stop talking about Jamaicans because not too many of them in here can claim that they have a Jamaican girlfriend—I can! She is a good and pretty woman too, and she is not white either. This race card that they come up with, we are coming to that. (Yeah like you).

The Speaker: Order!

Mr. V. Arden McLean: They must stop this! The country cannot afford this. The same young professionals that the UDP claim they are attracting into their ranks, they are talking through both sides of their mouths. I am going to borrow one of the phrases from the Minister of Education when he told us that our 'hypocrisy reeks of cheap perfume'; that is what is happening with the UDP. They must stop talking out of both sides of their mouths—especially the Leader of Government Business.

The Minister for Communications spits the green on one side and the yellow the other side. Then they talk about how they are so patriotic to their country, like no one else is, and the Opposition must say nothing. What is wrong with me? Am I not patriotic too, Madam Speaker?

I am too!

It is my right to say what I want with respect, in my country. The Leader of Government Business (as big as he is) will never stop me! He has no right to stop me, and while he is up I respect him, while I am up I expect likewise. Simple.

He talks about telling the truth, if the truth was knocking him down he would not know it.

The Speaker: Order Members.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Yes, Honourable Leader.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I rise to challenge that statement in this debate, and there is a standing order that deals with it. I want it dealt with because I am tired of them making wild allegations without anything to substantiate it. If he finds anything that I said in this debate is a lie, then prove it.

You have the standing order, Madam Speaker, there is one that deals with it—I challenge it.

The Speaker: Member for East End, Standing Order 35(3) says that it is out of order to use offensive or insulting language about other Members. Let us endeavour, as far as possible, to be as civil in these debates. I would ask you to withdraw the section which you referred to about the Leader seeing the truth and not knowing it, and continue with your debate thereafter.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I will bow to your ruling and withdraw whatever offended the Minister. However, I trust that when I call and say that the UDP is full of lies like the Minister did on a number of occasions in his debate, that nothing will be brought up.

The Speaker: Thank you Member for East End. Please proceed.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, the Leader of Government Business went to this country and told the country that he was going to make a statement in this Honourable House when it opened on the 17th. Now, Madam Speaker—

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please state your order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the Member is misleading the House. I never said that I was going to make it on the 17th. I said that I would make a statement during the course of the coming meeting of the Honourable House, which began on the 17th. I never stated that, and I say today that it is either going to be Wednesday or Thursday.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Minister is jumping up and would not let me finish. I was going on to say that I did not know whether that meant the day of the 17th or it meant during this sitting. He jumped up and now you are faced with making a decision, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for East End the decision is quite easy to make. You qualified what you were about to say so I take it that you are not in fact saying that the Leader of Government specifically said that it would be on the 17th. That being the case I would ask you to continue and be very specific when you make these innuendoes or allegations, especially at this time of the night.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker, I know we are all tired, but we are going to be here a little longer unless the Leader of Government Business decides that we adjourn.

Madam Speaker, I am saying that if the UDP Government really and honestly wanted to do something and give this country the true facts on who was given Caymanian status, the Minister would have come here on the 17th and would have told the people of this country. He would have given us the list—the un-doctored list—the initial list from Cabinet giving all the names of the people who were given Caymanian status.

The Speaker: Member for East End, one minute, please. Are you indicating that there are a doctored list and an un-doctored list?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: No, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: I am just seeking clarification. Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, knowing the Minister, anytime there is anything that he believes he has done good for this country he comes out flying with it, and rightly so, that is up to him. But that is the way he operates. What is so wrong with this list?

I have nothing against the granting of Cayman status to people who have been here a long time—so much so that I would venture to say that in my short adult life (not as short as the Second Elected Member for West Bay, but, nevertheless) I would venture to say that I have written dozens of recommendations for people. In most instances the people did not even ask me to do it.

Most recently I saw an advertisement in the Caymanian Compass about a nice quiet gentleman who I know from Nicaragua—not any bosom friend of mine. I know this man came here many years ago and he was the one who was instrumental in getting softball and baseball started in this country. That man was Mr. Garson Henriquez. I took it upon myself to use the people's letterhead, which represents my office, and write a recommendation for this man and went and delivered it to him. He was not even on the Island when I went there—he did not ask me.

I have very good friends, people I know on the reverse side of that, Madam Speaker. There is a gentleman in East End, who we all know, Mr. Dick (Richard) Christiansen. I have known this gentleman 20 years. When this gentleman was applying for Caymanian status in early 2001 (I think it was in April), on looking through the paper that morning I saw his picture and I picked up the phone and called him and said, 'you would not even tell me you were applying for Caymanian status', and he said that he had intended telling me but he did not remember. I wrote a recommendation for that gentleman addressed to the Secretary of the Immigration Board.

Madam Speaker, I have no regrets for anything I do. If I do, then I will apologise, but in those circumstances I have none. So, when the Government, especially the Ministers, come into this Honourable House and start talking about how people do not like Jamaicans because of the colour of their skin . . . no Madam Speaker, we need to get away from that in this country. That has never been an issue in this country, or if it has been it has been kept in secret.

We remember in the 1950s and 1960s when the black power thing came about and we remember all too well who the proponents of that were. But they got shot down 'quick o'clock'. Now it appears like this ugly thing is now raising its head again, unfortunately.

As leaders of this country I implore everyone to stop it. The Government is saying that we are polarising the community with getting out there and talking about how Caymanian status has been granted. I submit that worse than that has been done in this Honourable Chamber over the last week. We will polarise this society when we start talking about black and white and classes. That is what will polarise this community!

Madam Speaker, there are so many things that these people will talk about. You know who tried polarising this community? I am sure the country will remember when the Honourable Leader of Government Business years ago talked about 'cluttering up the infrastructure with foreigners'. Are they not the same foreigners now that they were then? That is polarising the community, but, obviously, he has changed his mind so that is fine as long as he respects that other people will have a position at some stage in their life also.

Madam Speaker, it would have been easier for the Government to support their position to come to this Honourable House and ask us, the Opposition, to assist them with suspending the section of the Law which prevented those people from reapplying. It would have been much easier. Section 23(6) [is] where the Board ordered that those who had applied in 2001 could not reapply for two years. I would have supported that.

Cabinet has no business in this wholesale grant of status in our country. Give it to the Board and let it do its job. Give the Board the quota. If they had come with 1,000 for the quota I would not have had a problem, but it had to be ten years and above.

Madam Speaker, all of those people who applied in 2001 and 2002, only 200 or 300 were granted status. Many qualified, but the Immigration Board only had a certain amount. Why is it that Cabinet could not go to the Immigration Department and the Board, and look at those who were left and start at the top? We are going to give visitors and we are going to give people here less than two years, and I think that the Second Elected Member for West Bay said in some circumstances, people who have been here less than the ten years have contributed more. I totally agree with him, but that does not mean that they have to be given Caymanian status.

Many people come to our country. When I was a marine engineer, we were allowed to send home only 75 to 80 per cent of our basic salary. The rest we had to retain on the ship, including overtime as well; we could not send it home. If it was left to me I would have sent all of it home for my mother to save for me. I am sure there are people in this country who think the same way now. They are sending it back to their country, and there is nothing wrong with that but that is an indication, like it was an indication from me, that they do not want to stay. Nevertheless, the Government is going 'eenie meenie miney mo' and giving somebody status. The whole process has been cheapened.

I really feel sorry for some people because there are some who have been here over ten years and got this status and some who did not get but have also been here for over ten years. Because those people have stayed, worked and tried to integrate with us and have done everything possible. In the service clubs they have done this and that, and in most instances they want to live here. Now all of a sudden we are giving people who come in here on a visitor's permit and people who have not assisted young professionals to train, the same people who demoralise our young professionals and do not even live on the Island now. No one can tell me that it is right!

The Government has come up with a feeble excuse for doing it. Who are they talking to? One of them said that this was done with consultation. I would like to know who they consulted with. I am sure that it was not the Executive body. The Minister for Education had wide consultation on it. I am sure that they did not get full approval from their full Executive body of the UDP.

Madam Speaker, I know that there are Members of the UDP who have never supported this type of wholesale granting of status. I do not know what made them change their minds to now give Cabinet approval to do it. I would have to hear from their mouths that they have changed their minds, because people like Mr. Ezzard Miller (from the time he was a Minister, before that, and since then) and I have argued on this left, right, centre, up and down. I have never won him over and he has never won me over. He has always believed that Caymanian status should be reserved for spouses of Caymanian and those who are descendents of Caymanians. He has always believed that we owe nothing to anyone. They get a work permit for one or two years and that is it. I have argued with him that we have allowed those people to stay here. We have a responsibility to them whether it is a one year permit or whatever, we could have said at any time you have to go. That is our responsibility.

So, I do not know who they consulted, but I know that it would have to change his mind big time to approve it. It would be interesting (when this vote is taken) if the Minister of Education and the Minister of Health were here to see where they go.

In 2001, the Minister of Education in his contribution on the Throne Speech and Budget Address (on 12 April 2001) said . . . and with your permission, Madam Speaker, I would read two sections of the [2001] Official Hansard Report, page 439

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. He says: "I noted yesterday that, conspicuous by its absence, was a corpus of people whom I read about so often in the papers who cry out for citizenship. They want to belong, yet their absence was noticeable. It speaks with a loud and obscene call.

"I want to ask them if they think they can get Caymanian citizenship without earning it. However, it is not their problem—it is a native thing, or maybe even a "black" thing. That was in reference to the Thousand Man March that was held here in Cayman.

The Minister of Education went on to say, "You cannot be a Caymanian unless you know what deprivation means; unless you know what destitution means; unless you can identify with these mothers who have five children sometimes and no source of steady male support. You cannot understand what it means for a young man 13 or 14 years old to never have seen his father, except when he comes to slap him up and tell him, “Boy, you ain’t no good.” “Yesterday I changed my mind. I will not be so liberal in granting them citizenship.

“No, Mr. Speaker! If you are just talking the talk and not walking the walk, we do not want you. If you are not part of the solution, then you must be part of the problem and we do not need any more problems.”

That was said by the Minister of Education on 12 April 2001.

He went on to say (and this one is classic): “At the heart of our society is a crisis. I am not anti-anyone. I am just pro-Caymanian. We had a history of solving our problems before. If push comes to shove, we can solve them again. I still say that we can build an ideal society, but we do not want people who are only coming to milk the cow after she is tied up and who do not want to get all sweaty running her down.”

How quickly can we change?

I noted that in his debate he was not here with the resolve that he usually has in his debate. He was shooting some bullets across the bow. Madam Speaker, any right-thinking person, like the Minister of Education, would condemn the actions of Government.

Many people deserving were given status and there may be some of those under ten years who were given status that are as deserving. One position that I have always taken, is that no Governor, Attorney General, Judge or none of those. They get paid! I took that position a long time ago, Madam Speaker, and especially that former one that we had here. I hope the UDP administration and Government is not giving him anything other than persona non grata (talk about Alden representing anybody).

The Speaker: Members, Members order!

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, when the moratorium was put on status was it not Cabinet? The Honourable McKeever Bush, the current Leader of Government Business—

The Speaker: Member for East End, do try your best at this hour to refer to the Members properly.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker, I do apologise for that, I am not disrespectful, it is just that sometimes it slips out. I do apologise.

[Laughter]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, when you are enraged about these things it really gets to you. Because these five Honourable Ministers—Members of Cabinet—can come to this Honourable House and come up with some feeble reason why they are giving these people status who are undeserving.

It is not fair to the other Caymanians and the other long-term residents of this country. I hear that too, the same way the Second Elected Member for West Bay and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman say that they have had calls from people who want status and those who have been given status.

Let us take a look at teachers. I have always believed and supported the position that teachers must have longevity in our society, so I do not have a problem with it. The same teachers who taught me should now be teaching my children. Hopefully that is the way it will work in our country because the teacher already knows me and she or he knows how to deal with my children. Unfortunately we roll them over like we roll turtles on the beach and they just go, and there is no continuity in our country. So, when the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac speaks about teachers being granted status who have been here for long periods of time . . . Madam Speaker, I do not have a problem with it. It is the manner in which this has been done and if they wanted to give those long-term residents then do it in a different manner; get away from this under ten years. People who have been here under 14 months!

I would like to know what someone has contributed to this country in 14 months. You cannot even settle into your job in 14 months much less contribute.

The Speaker: Is that your opinion as well?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker.

We know that when changing a job it takes a long time to really settle in on your job. I am not trying to pick on any one individual; it is a general statement. It is difficult.

I would like to know what these people have contributed. I understand that they are giving status for writing legislation and supporting liberalisation and begin there as a lawyer and all of that kind of stuff. That is the job; that is what you are being paid for. Is that some special reason?

I know of a lady (I guess we will see if this one is on the list too) whom I spoke to and who worked at the hospital. This is a lady who I respect professionally. I do not have any real friendship with this woman, but professionally I respect her. I had an appointment with this lady and when I called to confirm my appointment somebody else was in her position. Of course, when I went there I was told that the lady does not work there anymore. That is fine by me, maybe she is somewhere in the hospital. I went to my appointment and it was not mentioned because it was not my business. A few weeks later I saw this lady at the hospital so naturally I thought she was somewhere else in the hospital. She and I got into a conversation and she told me that she had received her status on 24 July 2003 and got fired on 6 August 2003.

I do not know what we are doing; she has been here 18 months. Where is the country going to? What are we doing? I love my country too and I want to see it succeed. That is why I am here, not because I expect to get something out of it. I suspect that is why all of us are here—we want to make a contribution to our country.

Madam Speaker, the UDP Government is not doing this country any favours. The Leader of Government Business can get up here and spout off his mouth about how much he has done for this country, as much as he wants to. Then the Minister for Communications said that they should be applauded, commended. Commended for what? For giving people status who are here on a visitor's permit?

I may not have done much for my country but I have done it with the best information I have available to me and I did it without any reservation and thinking about getting anything back. I have never tried to hold anybody for ransom. I have never made people feel like they were obligated to me. I do not know what the Leader of Government Business was doing at the church hall last Sunday when he brought it up in church but that was not a good place to bring it up (about the deafening silence from the church).

The Speaker: Order!

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, no one is supposed to say anything about the Government—well they have a surprise coming because I am going to say. They had their say and they said that the Government will have its way, so the Opposition must have its say. They are not going to have mine, and I have two hours.

I want to briefly touch on something that the Second Elected Member for West Bay briefly touched on. I really appreciated his debate. He briefly touched on Caymanians being accommodating. Now, Madam Speaker, anyone who says Caymanians are not accommodating is not telling the truth. What I would like is for everyone to compare us to any country in the western hemisphere, or anywhere else for that matter. We have been more accommodating to outsiders than most countries and we are not that selective either—94 nationalities in this country.

The Leader of Government Business talked about the great America. We are no different; we are much smaller than the great America and we cannot accommodate as much as the great America. We speak of 94 nationalities and then we have over 6000 above 11 years. Our voting list last election was approximately 11,500—it was not 12,000 so I can afford to say those people who are over and above 11 years and qualify to apply for Caymanian status are more than 50 per cent of the voting population in this country. Now, Madam Speaker, America has close to 300 million Americans. Why do we not take 150 million immigrants and drop them in America? Then we will see what happens. You talk about the Civil War in America? It will be plenty civil war; that one would last forever.

Madam Speaker, Caymanians do not get out there and create problems among the foreigners. You may hear a few people talking here and there. All of a sudden the UDP Government's actions have caused these animosities to rise to the surface. I know I do not expect the five Government Ministers to censure themselves (it looks like they are deserted now), but you have the Official Members who can abstain and the four Backbench supporters. I know at least two have decided they are not voting for it. There are two left and we will hear what they have to say.

The Speaker: You have 1 hour and 8 minutes remaining.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: As I was saying about Caymanians being accommodating—I hear people talk about Caymanians not wanting them to live amongst them. I think they need to really look at how accommodating we are and look at it in those terms. You do not see us sending people back at the airport unless they have some criminal record, or whatever the case may be. We do not get into situations like America where their Coast Guard and Air Force are sent out to stop Haitians from coming there, and this is America that can accommodate these people. These people have to understand that this country cannot accommodate everyone. Cayman is not for everyone and we have to be selective in whom we allow to stay here. While I do not have a problem with people staying here, we have to be selective.

We cannot just bring any and every body into our country and if I cannot decide who comes into my country then it is no use of me being here. We cannot just indiscriminately allow everybody to come in, even people on visitor's permits—I think the Government needs to check that one. Then we see people who have been here for short periods of time. We question how these people are given Caymanian status; we hear and we question, while we do not have the list which Government is yet to give to the people of this country.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I think there is a standing order which deals with repetition. The Member has traversed this ground over and over and it is very tedious; it is repetitious.

The Speaker: Member for East End I am sure that you are well aware of standing order 36 and I think that it is clear to all and sundry that you are desperately requiring a list, so if you would refrain from repeating that I think you can continue on and help expedite the process because it is abundantly clear that you would like to see a list.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: So, Madam Speaker, am I to understand that I cannot mention the list if I am referring to another thing that will come as a result of the list being made available?

The Speaker: No, Member for East End. I am not saying that. I am referring to where you keep requesting a list and I think that all Members that are here—certainly a majority from the Government who would be responsible to supplying the list—it is certainly clear to the Chair that you are requesting a list and that is what I am specifically referring to. There is no need to continue requesting the same list unless there is more than one list. That is all I am saying.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I did not think that it was repetitious because I was going on to deal with another thing, but nevertheless.

The main reason why I am seconding this Motion brought to this Honourable House is to stop a runaway train that the Government is on, and to stop them and other Governments forever from this abuse of the power afforded them under 20(d) of the Law.

Madam Speaker, no one, not even in the Government, can say that the granting of some 2000 Caymanian statuses under that particular section of the Law is right. I am sure the architects of this Law did not intend for EXCO or Cabinet to just arbitrarily give out Caymanian status. And, like I said before, I have always been against giving it to Governors who have been here for only two or three years. Certainly, I do not believe that it was intended to give 2000 status within 2 months.

We talk of how Government Cabinet will set the quota for the amount of status per year and it also gives the Immigration Board directives. The Cabinet can give these directives and tell the Immigration Board what the criteria is for granting of status and how many they can per year. However, Madam Speaker, they are not exercising any of those directives that they sent down to them. While they do not necessarily have to go by them, you would think that they would try to exercise their actions or their actions would be in line with some of the directives that they give.

The Government talks about how they ensured that an Appellant Board was set up so it does not have to come to EXCO. Are they jealous now that they gave those powers away? Madam Speaker, the Government must not come here and talk about how they are going to be the best thing this country has ever seen.

Another thing I want to turn to is what has been spoken by most of those who have spoken. I know the Leader of Government Business and the Minister for Health spoke of the gold rush of getting police records at the Police Station. The headlines of 12 September talked about that gold rush and how that came about—that the Leader of the Opposition said at the PPM's inaugural conference that all you needed was to be alive and get a police record. Madam Speaker, that is what it seemed like then and today even more so. It seems as though all you needed was a beating heart and you would get it. That is how far it has gone.

They talk about how this is the first Government that had the gumption to deal with it. At least two of the Members of the current Government were in previous Governments. The current Minister for Communications cannot run away from it. In 1988 he went into Executive Council until 1992. I suspect that he went in there to sleep because he could have done it then. All of a sudden they have done some big favour for this country in the year 2003 and must now blame previous administrations. He was one of those so we have to stop blaming the previous administration. Yes we have allowed this thing to just sit there and nothing has ever happened with it. Whoever is to blame we must stop blaming. The Minister for Community Services constantly talks about previous administrations. He is with Members of those previous administrations who did not do anything then. So, they must stop blaming previous administrations.

Madam Speaker, one last thing I want to discuss is the Leader of Government Business outlining what the Law will contain.

If we have a Bill coming to this Honourable House in this meeting with the intent to be debated in November, hopefully to be in place by January, as per the Leader of Government Business, I would like to know why the rush? I would really like to know why the rush now to give out so many status? January is four months away. Why are we rushing it now? Do we have to regularise some of these people now or is it that the Government really wanted to do it with the hope that these people would vote in the 2004 General Election and they really got derailed on it? They got derailed that is why they now have to come back with a different position. That is my position. That is the only reason that they could be doing it now.

These people could have been granted status, or residency, whatever the case may be, in January of next year. If the Government was not interested in them voting in 2004 why bring it now? There is no need. It got derailed—that is exactly what happened. And it is my position, my opinion, that is what happened now that the electors' list will be closed off sometime in June next year. It is impossible for people to get naturalised, unless of course they amend the Election Law and put it to September, then go in Hero's Park and do one of those things that they do in America. That is what I expected the Government to do, but now they have been derailed so they have to come from a different direction.

All of those who got Caymanian status that have been here for long periods of time I welcome them into the Cayman Islands; they are deserving of it and I do not want to take it from them. All those who have not been here for ten years, I do not know what to say about that.

Madam Speaker, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay said it does not matter what I say about it, it is done. The Leader of Government Business said no matter what the Opposition does they are going to continue. I am calling tonight on the Governor to give to this country a list certified by him stating the persons who received status. I am also calling on the Governor to stop Cabinet from issuing or granting status. He has a responsibility for the good governance of this country; that is why I am calling on the Governor to do it. The Governor is head of Cabinet. I trust that the Leader of Government Business does not have him intimidated now either, I hope not, but the Governor has a responsibility to the people of this country on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, and the people are upset.

People are not upset about giving long-term residents status. I have never heard that. They are upset about the process and the number of people who fell below the ten years. They are concerned about it. I think it was the Minister for Community Services who said, 'if one or two fell through the cracks'—the Minister for Communication said that too. If it was one or two it would not be so bad. It is either that he has missed the zeros behind that one or two or he missed all the fives in front of it. It is more than one or two and they must stop trying to make the country believe that there were a few mistakes made. That amount cannot be mistakes. If it is a mistake then it is a deliberate mistake.

The Leader of Government Business spoke about how diverse America is. Of course America is diverse. I hope that he understands that by letting in people that they do not know is what brought America to its knees recently. I trust we have done due diligence on all of these people who have received status and not only those. I do not believe due diligence has been completed on these people. There is no way that you can approve 1,400 people in EXCO in one day and tell me that you know exactly the position of those people. It is not the Cabinet that has the information, it is the Immigration Department. It is impossible to do. Unless it went through the proper process it is impossible.

I notice that we are all getting tired. In the interest of time tonight I will give the remaining time to speak before the clock strikes midnight.

Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Fourth Elected Member for the district of West Bay

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As I rise to make my short contribution to this Motion, I want to say that I am cognisant of the late hour. I will try to be as brief as possible. For a while, I thought I would not find it necessary to make a contribution since this Motion has elicited such widespread debate. As I come to the tail end there is not much for me to say, and I noticed that even in the case of the speaker before me, there was a concern for tedious repetition. I will try not to go over the points already made.

Madam Speaker, having listened to the debate, I am concerned. As a young Member of this Honourable House, I find it disappointing to have been faced with a task such as this, something that has been ignored by previous administrations. For a long time everyone has been cognisant of the problems we were facing with immigration, but no one wanted to deal with the issue. When I heard the Leader of the Opposition, as he opened his debate, I thought he did a clear job of explaining that this is an acknowledged problem. There was even reference made to a statement on immigration issues that he himself made, when he was Leader of Government Business.

I will quote from the Hansard of 7 September 2001, with your permission.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: The Honourable D. Kurt Tibbetts said: "Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that a day passes any more without each Honourable Member of this House being reminded in some way, of at least one of the issues related to immigration that face these Islands.

"The inaction of the past several years has resulted in these issues forming something of a cloud looming over us. I believe that each of us who sought office has no doubt given his or her constituents some commitment to try to move this cloud.

"Most certainly, the Government is fully aware of the need to develop and implement immigration policies that will address the many issues existing. More importantly, the Government fully appreciates that whatever policies it ultimately proposes will not meet with the approval of every Member of this House, and that whatever this House gives its approval to will not necessarily satisfy every member of the community. However, Mr. Speaker, the Government cannot and will not be deterred by these inescapable facts." [2001 Official Hansard Report, page 1035]

Now, Madam Speaker, with all the important issues that we have going on, in opening this Motion he went through a short bit of history so everyone could gain some perspective on the situation which obtains. He acknowledged that this situation was one that could not continue. He said, and I quote from the Hansard, Wednesday, 17 September 2003: “Having laid down that platform, I think that all of us in the country fully recognise and accept (or shall I say the vast majority of us fully recognise and accept) that this was not a situation that could simply continue without being addressed.” [2003 Official Hansard Report, page 608]

Madam Speaker, hearing that these were the feelings of the Leader of the Opposition, I would have assumed that instead of this censure Motion we would have a Motion offering some solution. If he and the Opposition recognise that this situation is one that could not have continued along the same path, then I have to question the motives for this Motion. What the Opposition is asking for does nothing to solve the problem they acknowledged.

Throughout the debate given by the Members on that side of the House, I heard them all acknowledge that this is a problem. They all said that it had to be dealt with and their issue was not with the granting of status, or with the fact that we have some 6000 people who are long-term residents of the country and need some security of tenure, but it was with the method used to do it.

Madam Speaker, whether this is a deliberate attempt to mislead or just a bit of confusion, I am not really sure. If we acknowledge that these long-term residents must be accepted and integrated . . . reference was made that it should have been done by the Immigration Board. If the Opposition's only problem was with the way in which this was done, then any process used would have resulted in a large number of people being integrated, whether the Immigration Board or the Cabinet had been the one to act. All the concerns—the scare tactics and the gloom and doom I have heard preached—about the strains on the infrastructure, the education system and the upward mobility for young Caymanians are baffling. I cannot understand how the methodology used would have changed those concerns. I do not understand how the Opposition Members could recognise that this had to be done and we would end up with large numbers of long-term residents given security of tenure, but think that whether it was done by Cabinet or by the Immigration Board would make a difference in how it affected the lives of indigenous Caymanians.

That is why I asked whether it is genuinely a matter of confusion on their part, or an attempt to mislead the House. I cannot see why, if they are genuine in their concerns, they question the way it was done. We arrived at the same result.

Their Motion said more than 1,400 grants of status were made. If we had over 1,400 persons and whether that number received status from Cabinet or the Immigration Board, if their concern is the number of people being integrated, then those concerns should be genuine either way.

I noticed that one of the words used was “hypocrisy.” I am cautious to use that word because, again, it may simply be a matter of confusion or something I am not sure about. However, if that is what they are saying, then I would have to agree that if it is truly because they are only having a problem with the method used then they cannot, on one hand, say that there is a concern about the long-term effects and then say that they are supportive.

Going back in history, if we look at the Hansards, everyone has acknowledged that this is a problem. Everyone has said, “Yes, immigration is an issue; we have to do something about it.”

I want to pick up on the point made by the Honourable Member for East End when he spoke about side-lined or derailed, and that this was genuinely an attempt to gain political mileage. I think the Government deserves credit as far as the timing is concerned. I think the timing can be very easily justified. As the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac said earlier, if the Government wanted to do this, and there was an attempt to get votes from the political aspect, they could have done it in February. That would have given individuals enough time to get Caymanian status, be without Immigration control for the required time, and then become naturalised so they could vote in 2004.

If the Government had waited until January or February 2004 to do this, then all of us on this side who made campaign promises would have been seen as “just doing it in an election year.” I think it is a credit to the Government that they did not wait until an election year to get up and say that they have decided to do something about immigration. It shows that the Government of the day is not only concerned about getting votes, but they are worried about doing what they feel is best for the country—at whatever time it becomes suitable. Whenever there is something right to be done, the Government is able to go and do it.

Madam Speaker, we talk about polarising the community. As representatives, obviously we have had plenty of representation concerning the grants of Caymanian status by Cabinet. I am able to say very clearly that the majority of this representation has been from people who see it as a blessing from God. They are saying, ‘After so many years of being here, and not having had an opportunity, how can I go about getting included to be considered for the grant?’ That has been the majority of my representation.

However, I have also heard from some people who have been misled and the reason for that, it appears (again, giving everyone the benefit of the doubt) that the Opposition has been misled as well, either intentionally or otherwise.

Many of the concerns that people have expressed to me are similar to the concerns and allegations made by responsible Honourable Members of this House. People were saying, 'I heard that someone in prison was given status and someone who was persona non grata was given status'. Those are the same arguments I heard here on the floor of the House. They said they were informed of this at meetings and from people who told them these things. If an elected Member of Parliament makes a statement about what he knows, and there is no one to challenge that then if I had heard those same remarks from someone I elected as my representative, I would find it hard to believe that person was intentionally misleading me.

Besides hearing it out on the streets, we came into this Honourable House on the first day of debate and a Member of the Opposition, the Second Elected Member for George Town, got up on the floor of this House and said that he knew as "a matter of fact," not "as I heard..."

[Inaudible interjections]

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, there seems to be some questioning.

In case there is a recollection, I have the Hansard if I need to quote. Since I am not actually getting a challenge I will not. I have the unedited Hansard of Wednesday 17 September 2003. With your permission, Madam Speaker, I will quote from it.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: It reads: "I can tell you as a matter of fact that not only are there persons who have been granted Caymanian status in this most recent dispensation who no longer live here, there are persons who have never visited these Islands who have been given Caymanian status in this last lot!

"There are persons—and if anyone challenges me I will publish the names because I have them right here—who have been granted Caymanian status, and one, at least, was in jail at the time in our prison here. There is at least one individual, whose name I have, who has been declared persona non grata."

Madam Speaker, knowing that this was such a serious statement, in your good and honourable fashion, you gave him the option of at least bringing it into question. You said: "Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town, are you in a position to substantiate your allegations made thus far? Or would you wish for the luncheon break to be able to do so?"

That was very kind of you, Madam Speaker, in your usual way. He was so confident that he said,

"No, Madam Speaker. When I stand up here and say something, I know what I am saying."

Madam Speaker, I can understand the concerns people have had. If we have an elected Member who the people of George Town placed such confidence in that they elected him to represent them, one who stands in this Honourable House and states, "as a matter of fact," something that later on, when challenged, he is unable to prove, then I understand why we have such concern in the general public. With that kind of misinformation—for the man on the street I can understand the concerns.

I think it is a real travesty that we have come to this stage in time, and we have made people so upset by intentionally or unintentionally misleading them. I think that as responsible representatives—not as he was proving, but as he said—when we stand here and make allegations we should be able to back those allegations up. If that was the case, and if the Member was speaking from a matter of fact and all those allegations he made were true, then I understand why [members] of the general public are as upset as they are. However, we were able to find out that not only was it not a matter of fact, but there was no indication of that. According to the Cabinet and a statement given, there was no such list.

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order, Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay is misleading. I am sure he does not mean to, but he is. Because the Government says it is so, does not make it so any more than me saying it is so. For him to purport that what the Government said is a matter of fact, is simply not so and is misleading.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order!

Second Elected Member for George Town, I have listened. . .

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order!

I listened to your point of order. The Chair takes a distinct diversion in the assessment, in that it was not the Government per se, but a constitutional office—that of the Cabinet Secretary. We will move on.

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker—

[The Second Elected Member for George Town rose]

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, do you have another point of order, sir?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Madam Speaker, it is not a point of order. I just want to make the point that, insofar as there was a letter or a statement from the Cabinet Secretary, that statement only related to one individual. The Honourable Member for West Bay is speaking to three names. And the other assertions were made purely . . .

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order!

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: . . . were made purely by the Leader of Government Business on the basis of nothing but the Cabinet's own submission, and that, in my respectful view, has no more weight than what I said.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Sure it has more weight.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Until they publish a certified list, it has absolutely no more weight.

The Speaker: Thank you.

As far as it relates to—I believe his name was Jonathan Karl Campbell—I think that the Chair will have no difficulty in ruling that that, in fact, did come from a properly constituted officer in the person of the Cabinet Secretary. I take your point as it relates to other persons.

The Fourth Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I appreciate your ruling.

I do not know if we need to go through all of them, but, obviously, what he purported to be a statement of fact cannot be proven. If he is making those allegations then it is his responsibility to prove them. Having said that, if he did make statements which cannot be proven about one individual, then in the best of cases I can only assume that his credibility in the other cases would be questionable.

Madam Speaker, it is very sad for our constituents when we have intentional or unintentional misleading statements and allegations being made, especially on such a serious issue as the granting of Caymanian status. I can say that if those allegations were true, even as a Member I would have been disappointed, but I think the Government recognised and expressed to the Opposition the fact that there were possibilities that mistakes could have been made. If it were true that they had been able to find someone who had slipped through the process, then it was their responsibility, not to criticise but to bring it to the attention of the Government so that remedial action could have been taken. However, I am very happy to see that our process was stringent enough that none of that did occur.

Madam Speaker, I heard someone on the radio saying that they agreed we should give Caymanian status to people, but it should be based on the period of time they have been here, and more importantly, on whether they have bought a house, land, or if they have enough money in the bank to support themselves and not be a burden on the Government. I want to say that this goes a long way towards showing the misunderstandings that are there.

Those kinds of provisions are given. We have people who are permanent residents with independent means who do not need to be working here and so on. The grant of status was not supposed to be discriminatory in any way; it was not supposed to be made because the person was rich or poor. We were not supposed to discriminate for racial reasons, and we were not supposed to discriminate for religious reasons. If the Cabinet was satisfied, by means of the criteria that a person was deserving of it and is making a valuable contribution to the country, then Cabinet had the power to grant status.

Madam Speaker, this is why I say with the utmost respect that I am not sure whether there has been some confusion. In all fairness, when the Leader of the Opposition does his winding up I will not be surprised if he decides to withdraw this Motion. It seems to have gone around in such circles—I will use a quick example. The Second Elected Member for George Town referred to the fact that the Leader of Government Business gave them the opportunity to pick 30 people. They represent 20,000 people and he asked the question of how they were supposed to be God and choose which 30 should get status with all of those people. He said that for that reason, and for that reason alone, they decided that they did not want to be part of this process.

Madam Speaker, the Member spent close to two hours saying that this process was illegal. On one hand, they are saying the reason they did not want to be a part of it was because they could not choose which 30 they would play God and give. On the other hand, he is saying that the whole process was illegal. If it was illegal then his reason should clearly have been that it was an illegal process, not that it was only 30 people. If they were so confused they could simply have come across and asked for some clarification and we could have saved all of this time. We did not have to go through all of this debate just to enlighten the elected Members of Parliament on a situation about which they seem to have been confused. We have gone back and forth over the issue of whether these people were deserving people. They keep saying that they do not have a problem with those deserving persons having received status; it is with the persons who are not deserving of it.

They keep referring to a list. Obviously, they have been searching for that list and have only been able to come up with three or four names. When I say three names, one of those names is the brother-in-law of the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Yes, Member for George Town. Do you have a point of order?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The hour is late, I know, and the Honourable Member is obviously tired, but he is misleading this Honourable House again by saying that we have a list for which we are searching. We have made it quite clear that everything we have said is based on information that has been given to us. It is misleading of him to suggest that we have a list that we are scrutinising and we can only find three names. I would respectfully submit that he should withdraw that remark.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, the Second Elected Member for George Town is stating categorically that they do not have in their possession a list, and that the contribution thus far has been based on indirect evidence. So, if you would be so kind as to withdraw that specific statement that they do have a list . . .

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I would be happy to withdraw, but I would like to have clarification from the Member. Is the Member now saying that the statement of fact he earlier referred to is no longer a statement of fact? Is he retracting that? Also, when I referred to the list, he had four names. That can be considered a list and that is the list to which I was referring. He used four names, which compiled a list. I did not say it was a conclusive list, but it was a list. However, if you want me to withdraw...

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, two points have arisen. By implication, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay has sat down and I read that to mean he is giving way for you to elucidate your position. He has clarified that he is not referring to an all-encompassing list, but the list which you referred to. Do you care to take him up on his offer of elucidation?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, as I said, the hour is late, and I really do not want to get into crosstalk. However, the Honourable Member is not being quite as forthright as he would seem to be, because he talks about scrutinising a list. How could I scrutinise a list of four people? I did not even refer to four people—I referred to three people. I really do not want this to degenerate into a battle between him and me. You have asked him to withdraw and I am quite happy for him to withdraw the remark. Let him get on with his debate and let us all go home.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, the position, I believe, would be much clearer if you withdraw the specific remark to an all-encompassing list. I am satisfied with your explanation but to make it abundantly clear I think we can proceed on that for now.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Yes, Madam Speaker. I will simply make it clear that the list to which I am referring to is the list that was provided and referred to by the Second Elected Member for George Town and the names that he compiled as a list, however he received them, but that was the list to which I referred to.

Madam Speaker, in fairness to those Members who have been asking for a list, it is amazing for me to believe those three names that have been questioned popped out of the sky somewhere. They were not a part of any list that was available for scrutiny, but the first three names that came to them were names about which they had questions. Perhaps as the luck of the draw would have it they just happened to come upon those three names in some roundabout way, with which they did have a problem. That just begs and allows the point to be more readily made.

If those three names were the only names that came out of whatever method was used to come up with such names, then instead of a censure Motion, we should be having a Motion of confidence in the Government for doing such a fine job. If those three names came forward and the Government was able to account for those three names very clearly, then, once again, I am proud to be part of a government that is so diligent in their work. Although I give credence to the potential that the Opposition Members were themselves misled, one of the points I saw was that hatred or vexation, because all along in the debate there was an attempt made to lay all the blame—

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Yes, Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I am not sure whether to say that the Member is misleading the House.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Is it a point of order?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: It is a point of order . . . or whether . . .

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Where is the point of order?

The Speaker: Order, Members.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, if the Leader of Government Business would go back to sleep the House would be more peaceful.

The Speaker: Member for George Town, please refrain from being insulting and continue with your point of order.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Members, it is late enough already. The more we have crosstalk, the longer we are going to be here.

Order!

Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, the Honourable Member is suggesting hatred on the part of the Members of the Opposition. I am not sure whether to say he is misleading the House or whether he is implying some improper motive on our part. I simply wish he would get on with the debate and stop causing me to stand up on points of order over nonsense like this.

There is no hatred on the part of Members of the Opposition and the Honourable Fourth Elected Member for West Bay should not suggest that there is.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, I think that I can accept you having the capacity to speak on your own behalf, but I think you are stretching it a bit to speak on behalf of the others. I would ask the Member to continue without directing it towards oneself.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I heard what you just said correctly, then I have to raise a point of order, because if the Member for West Bay . . .

Point of Order

The Speaker: You heard correctly, Member.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If the Member for West Bay, by any remote possibility, is referring to me, then he is not only misleading this House but he is imputing improper motives. However, I do not live like that; I do not speak like that. The Member and the rest of them all know that even to infer it is misleading and untrue.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, please continue with your debate without making any imputations whatsoever. If we continue in this way we will be almost to the point to which we were being directed by the Deputy Leader, and that is one of love.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I want to say that as for the Leader of the Opposition in his debate, I will not be surprised if after the justifications have been given by this side and the process has been laid, he decides to withdraw the whole Motion. I can honestly say that as far as the debate was going when he was leading off there were no ill feelings or any malice at all. I can categorically say that I was not making reference to his contribution. When I used that terminology, I was searching for an expression to mean "a very strong feeling of difference," not necessarily as strong as the words that may have been used.

The point I was making was that during the debate it appeared that the plan by some Members of the Opposition was to pin the blame for the granting of status on the Leader of Government Business, wholly and solely. It was so evident that when the Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and District Administration challenged the statement of fact that the Second Elected Member for George Town could not substantiate, the Member said that he could not believe that the Minister of Health would have had the audacity to challenge him on the point of order, but seeing that he had, he would have to bring up a point with which the Minister for Health was personally familiar. What that indicates to me is that if the Minister of Health had sat quietly and allowed the Second Elected Member to mislead, and not challenge him, he would not have had any need to bring up the issue he thought was personal to the Minister of Health. If it was such a bad thing that the Minister of Health had done, why would he have to wait until he felt challenged in some way by that Minister to bring it forward?

That is why, when I used the word "hateful," it might have been meant as "spiteful." It was spiteful to say, 'Now you have caught me; you have shown me up and shown the public that my statement of fact is not really a statement of fact, since I cannot substantiate that statement. I would have preferred to stand here and lead the public and this Honourable House to believe that it was a statement of fact, but since you had the audacity to embarrass me and show that my statement of fact really was not, now I am going to have to tell on you'.

Madam Speaker, those little games go back to childhood days—'You caught me so now I am going to tell on you'. We are here at this time of the night debating this type of Motion after the Opposition has stood up and said, 'We support the grant of status to long-term residents; we have gone through and so far it appears that there are very few people who have been granted status that we do not agree with.' Was it necessary to go through these last days and days with this Motion?

I am glad to hear that the Members on that side have acknowledged the people who have been here for a long time. I thought I would have to remind the Members that only a few short months ago there was an argument for all those people to be recognised, and to have a say in the direction of the country when we were getting the petition on the Constitution. Madam Speaker, we went around and basically they are residents here, so they should have a say in the direction in which the country should go. However, now that we are talking about granting them Caymanian status, this is a bad thing; we are giving away the country and are going to have all these negative effects, these far-reaching implications.

Even more recently, at the inauguration ceremony of the People's Progressive Movement, I was surprised to hear that references were made to the effect that, "The United Democratic Party requires you to have status to be a member, but all we require is for you to be resident here for five years." Now, the party structure is a new concept to Cayman, but we all recognise in this Honourable House that we are expecting to have parties and members of the party will steer the direction of the country. The policies and the direction should come from the members of the party. So, we are saying to those members: 'Listen, once you have been a resident here for five years, you should be able to have a say in the direction in which our country is going. After seven, ten years, we want you to have a say in where the country is going, but we do not want you to be equal to us; we do not want you to have status.' Madam Speaker . . .

Point of Order

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition, please state your point of order.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, in public forum or in this forum not one Member of the Opposition has made any such statement—that we do not want anyone to have status. The Member just said that. I heard him with my own ears saying that on the one hand we say that residents need only have been here permanently for five years to be members of the People's Progressive Movement, but on the other they are not good enough to have status, or to be equal to us. That is what he just said, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, could you repeat what you just said, please.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I was saying . . .

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order!

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: . . . I was saying that I was glad to hear from that side of the House that they appreciated and acknowledged those people as being long-term residents. I thought I was going to have to question how they could say that on one hand and say this on the other hand. I said that after hearing that contribution, I am happy that those Members are recognising and supporting those people who have been long-term residents.

The Speaker: I have not heard. . .

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, if I may.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I can only assimilate the information from one Member rising to speak at a time.

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rose on a point of order due to what I heard the Member say. He has just explained what he intended to say and that is fine.

The Speaker: From my recollection, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay put his contribution in supposition. If Members wish to have a complete verbatim review, there is a method to do that, but from what I can recall he did not put it as a statement of fact. He commenced in a speculative mode; hence, I did not receive it as a statement of fact.

So, Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, if you would please continue; unless the Honourable Leader would wish to refresh his memory in verbatim position.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I think everyone is satisfied. I do not think we need to do that. We can simply say that we have reached what I feel is a compromise position. I feel that the Opposition and previous administrations have acknowledged the need to deal with the immigration problem. The only difference is that the Government of the day has not only acknowledged the problem but decided to act and to start fixing the problem.

In my opinion, the only real concern that the Opposition would have is that, once again, in the past number of elections, immigration has been a major issue. There has always been the ability to promise people saying: 'Elect me and I will do something about this immigration issue.' Now, however, something has been done, so in next year's election we will not have that as a promise. It will not be any more elect me because you need me to take care of this problem.

We have to be careful in criticising, because we are going to expect—not necessarily in the 2004 election, but later on—the support of these people. Therefore, we do not want to say, 'No, you should not have received Caymanian status.' We are going to say, 'Yes, we are glad you got it but we did not like the way that you got it.'

We started talking about status being trivialised, and that people are unappreciative. What amazes me is that all of those people who do not appreciate how they got status still have to go to Immigration to pay the $500 fee if they want it. If they do not appreciate it and really did not want it, then they should not take it. If we have that many people who feel that the way this was done was wrong, and who do not appreciate getting status in this way, then they can go on living life as it was. That, to me, would be the most significant statement of how unappreciative they are of the way it was done—if we saw masses of them not exercising their right to go and get it. All I have heard is, 'Thanks so much; I am so happy that a government has finally done something.' Perhaps a large part of this problem will go away. If what the Opposition is saying is true, many people do not appreciate the Government giving status in this way; therefore, what we can expect is that many will not exercise the right to go down and pay for it.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay said what an embarrassment it was, as far as the country was concerned, that we have 6,600 people qualified for Caymanian status who, through a lack of action, have never been given the opportunity. Today I heard the Minister for Planning, Communications, Works and Information Technology make reference to 95 or 98 per cent. If we use the 5 per cent figure, we are talking about 100 people, including people who are married to Caymanians, who are preachers, doctors and teachers, who have been here, possibly, less than 10 years. Overall, we have moved in the right direction.

I know some of the difficulties with which the Opposition is dealing. It is hard for them to accept that this was done because the Government felt it was the right thing to do. I heard the Elected Member for East End asking that if it was not done for political reasons, and if it was not done for votes, then why was it done? Madam Speaker, the motivation is that we have a good, sensitive, caring Government that acknowledged the problem and decided to act. It scares me to believe that an elected Member of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands would have to question that motivation. It is as though he is not familiar with anything done simply for the right reasons; there always has to be an ulterior, sinister motive. It cannot be simply that we acknowledged that something was wrong, and have now done something about it. We hear: 'They did it expecting to get the votes and if it was not for that, what was the motivation?'

Madam Speaker, in this day and age when we have had so many years of inaction, as far as immigration is concerned, what the Member should be doing is standing up and applauding the Government, saying, 'Good job. You have tackled a difficult decision; you have moved forward and we want to give the Government credit.' Instead, we get a Motion for a censure of the Government. Is it so hard to acknowledge when people are doing good? Why is it that we did not have this Motion for the year that some of those Members were in the Government? We acknowledged that there was a problem; we set up a review team and now we have action going forward. We have the grant by Cabinet and we have a new Law coming that should clear up this long-standing problem.

I would have been much happier to be here accepting a Motion that said, 'Listen, Government, we acknowledge that you are doing something about the grant of status. We are not happy with the way you are doing it so our Motion is now coming forward with a recommendation as to how we feel you should deal with it.' If that were the case, then it could be a bit more appreciated when Members say, 'We acknowledge there is a problem; we acknowledge that long-term residents should get some recognition and should be granted security of tenure, but we do not agree with the way you are doing it, so let us do it a different way.'

This Motion contains no options that appear to be better for the Caymanian people or the long-term residents here; all this Motion is asking is that we stop granting status the way it is being done now.

Madam Speaker, if the Opposition had all the information and recommendations and they were genuine about this, then why, for the last eighteen months—even before Cabinet started making these grants—has there not been a private member's motion proposing a way to deal with grants of status?

It is late, but one of the issues that I want to clarify—one of the scare tactics used—is the talk about an influx of dependants. Madam Speaker, the accountant on the team is the Second Elected Member for West Bay, but it is very simple addition. If we stick with a 10-year period during which people had to be here in Cayman to be considered for status, and we say that dependants are children under the age of 18, then a child accompanying a person leaving home to come and work in the Cayman Islands would have to have been less than eight years old when the family left their country of residence. Now, if a child were less than eight, there is also a requirement stating that the child must be a resident for three years, prior to the 18th birthday in order to apply for Caymanian status. Therefore, the child would have to have been less than five when the individual left home.

I am not saying that we will not have cases where children under the age of eighteen have been left overseas and would now become eligible to come to be with their family. However, this will not occur in any 'wholesale' way with masses of people coming. We have to acknowledge that in many of those cases, when people have been working here for 20 and 25 years, some of those children were born while their parents were working here in Cayman. Some of them were born here in Cayman and we are going to have to acknowledge and integrate them into our society.

Madam Speaker, the good thing about the timing of this grant is that we are still at a point where we can integrate the 2000 people who have been here for more than 10 years. The country can still use those people; they are not going to displace Caymanians. The point that seems to have been missed in all of this is that all of these people about whom we are talking were living and working in the Cayman Islands. These persons are not new people being imported now.

The Member for East End questioned the method and the criteria used, and whether all immigration controls were used and police records, et cetera, were done. The truth of the matter is that all of these people have satisfied the criteria of the Immigration Department to remain in the Cayman Islands under their control. They all have clean police and medical records; they have all proven that there is not a Caymanian who can replace them and have justified the need for their work permits. If all criteria have been met, then why are we concerned that they are displacing Caymanians? If they are here on work permits and we place our confidence in the Immigration Board—

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, the Honourable Member is again misleading this House. He is stating as a fact that all persons who have been granted status were on work permits and were residents here. By Government's own admission, that is simply not the case. I would therefore ask that the Honourable Member qualify what he says; otherwise, he is misleading this Honourable House.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, perhaps I am wrong, but I do not remember any of the Members saying that these are new people we are importing. My understanding is that these are all residents. Even when the challenge was made by this individual, we showed that those people had been resident here or were issued valid work permits here. So, they will need to show that someone on this side, or the Government, has said that these people are new.

All I can say is that, once again, this Member is saying that that is not the case; but on the other hand he is saying he does not have a list from which he can prove those facts. If he cannot prove that they were not here on work permits, then I do not see how he can raise a point of order or challenge my statement. Madam Speaker, I am saying that the information I have received will show that all the people who are here have been working in the Islands with valid work permits. To have valid work permits requires them to have satisfied the criteria of having clean police and medical records, and to have satisfied Immigration that it was necessary for them to be on the Islands performing work that could not be performed by Caymanians. If the Members want to challenge—

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, I do not find that you are misleading the House. Please continue.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you so much, Madam Speaker. Those rulings are so sober at this late hour.

I want to wind up by saying that I am happy to be a part of a proactive Government, which, even in light of a controversial issue such as immigration, has decided not to shy away from their responsibility as a Government and as elected Members. As the Second Elected Member for West Bay said, this is not necessarily popular, but I have confidence in the Caymanian people. The representation that I have had is that now that it has been made clear that they were misled into believing that this was done in the absence of any criteria—being given to anybody or, as it is called in the Motion "wholesale grant"—and now that they understand that the Government never said they were planning to give 6,000 people status by the end of the year, and that it is not possible to get Caymanian status just by being alive—

The Speaker: Member, you have spoken now for 53 minutes.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Now that it has been made clear to them that the grant by Cabinet was lawfully executed, those who were concerned seem to be satisfied now.

Whether it was intended or not—and if it was intended, it was in a very indirect way—the Opposition, by bringing this Motion prior to the statement promised by the Leader of Government Business, has forced the Government of the day to justify its actions in the responsible way it has done by giving the grant of status to deserving individuals. I think it would be a good sign to show solidarity when we talk about not wanting to polarise the different sectors of the community.

The Opposition has said they knew from the beginning that this Motion was being moved, and that they did not expect that the Motion would pass, but it was brought anyway. Now we have spent a great deal of time on it. In the interest of the country, instead of carrying on with all of the negative aspects of the Motion, for which there is really no basis, we could just get away by saying we have had a good debate, and that we have enjoyed spending time with each other until late in the night. Now let us withdraw this Motion and move on.

Madam Speaker, the truth of the matter is that the Motion really has no chance of passing. We have heard from many Members on this side, and in case the Member for East End needs to know, I definitely cannot support the Motion. Even though the Opposition Member tried to play on the supposed goodness of the two Members on this side who seem to have had equal intelligence to him, hoping that they would go along with supporting the Motion, we now know that that is not the case. We now know that the Members on this side are fully in support of the decision that was made.

Madam Speaker, I was happy to make my contribution and I look forward to not having to vote 'No' to this Motion, and to moving forward with the other important business of this Honourable House. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Does any other Member wish to Speak?
The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I, too, being mindful of the late hour would like to make a short contribution to the Motion brought by the Opposition against the United Democratic Government.

If I recall correctly, a previous speaker read from the Hansard where the Leader of the Opposition said that he supported the granting of status by Cabinet for special reasons. I submit that doing something about the backlog of residents living here for long periods of time, which avoided the United Kingdom from stepping in and making an order in council that would force us to give status to the 6,600 plus residents all at once, is a very special reason.

The granting of status by Cabinet was brought about because the United Democratic Party refused to sit back, like previous administrations for the past 11 or 12 years. After being told by the United Kingdom—in no uncertain terms—that if we did not do something about the backlog of residents who were living here for more than 10 years, then they would do something about it for us. In my opinion, the United Kingdom would have done what they did when we objected to the high heavens against the gay rights legislation, which was being forced on us. The United Kingdom simply made an order in council and now we, like other European countries, have to live with the gay rights legislation.

Now is it not better to integrate into our community the 6,600-plus deserving residents over a period of years rather than have the United Kingdom grant them all at once? I am sure the society and the community can more readily accept a few thousand over a period of years. I maintain, Madam Speaker, that it is a lot more acceptable to integrate those persons into our community in a gradual process rather than one fell swoop.

It is my opinion that the Opposition is not upset that the statuses were granted, but I believe they are upset because the United Democratic Party was proactive and did what was needed to be done, rather than sit by like past administrations and complain and not do something. Now the Opposition, in my opinion, is trying to make the public believe that the Government has done something illegal by granting these statuses to the deserving persons. We cannot expect to let persons live and work in this country for most of their adult lives, make their contributions in building our society and then kick them out without giving them anything. This is totally inhumane; it is unjust and it is wrong!

Madam Speaker, in return for their contributions persons who have lived here for 10, 15, 20, up to 30 or 40 years deserve some security of tenure. These persons consider this their home. They have raised their families here; they have schooled their children and grandchildren as well. This is their home and these persons, in my opinion, are deserving of status. I support the granting of status by the Cabinet of the United Democratic Party, to those deserving persons.

I thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Is this the appropriate time to take the 10 minute break?

Proceedings suspended at 11.35 pm

Proceedings resumed at 11.49 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

I recognise the Honourable Leader of Opposition, if he wishes to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It is late in the day. Someone just mentioned it will soon be early in the morning.

I have listened carefully to the debate on the Private Members' Motion regarding grants of Caymanian status by the Government in Cabinet. I listened as carefully as I could, making some notes, and there are certainly some issues which need to be cleared up. I am going to reiterate the Opposition's position on the matter. I will not quote the Motion or any of its sections at this point, but perhaps it is suitable to lay the platform for that position by referring to a statement which I made on 7 September 2001, in this Honourable House, when I was still Leader of Government Business.

Madam Speaker, on more than one occasion, quotes have been taken from this statement in debate on the Motion. The statement is not a long one, but it is important. And I crave your indulgence, Madam Speaker, to read it into the Hansard, for this debate gives a clear picture, as obviously the reference to that statement by Members was to allude to the position I had at that time. I can assure you that it will bear relevance to the position that I have today.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As I said, this statement was made on 7 September 2001, and it was a statement on immigration issues. I quote from the Hansard: "Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that a day passes any more when each Honourable Member of this House is not reminded in some way of at least one of the issues related to immigration that face these Islands.

"The inaction of the past several years has resulted in these issues forming something of a cloud looming over us. I believe that each of us who sought office has no doubt given our constituents some commitment to try to move this cloud.

"Most certainly, the Government is fully aware of the need to develop and implement immigration policies that will address the many issues that exist. More importantly, the Government fully appreciates that whatever policies it ultimately proposes will not meet with the approval of every Member of this House, and that whatever this House gives its approval to will not necessarily satisfy every member of the community. But, Mr. Speaker, the Government cannot and will not be deterred by these inescapable facts.

"I am happy to inform this Honourable House and the listening public this morning of the current state-of-play and the game plan to reach our goal.

"Late last year, and obviously very soon after taking up office, the Government took the decision that it wished for Executive Council to be relieved of the role of serving as the appellate body in respect of decisions of the Immigration Board and the Trade & Business Licensing Board. The Government considered serving in this capacity to be fundamentally inconsistent with good judicial practice and good governance.

"I am pleased to advise that the necessary legislative amendments are now being finalised and a Bill to give effect to them will be brought to the next meeting of this House. Subject to legislative support for this change, it is intended that Executive Council will hand over its appellate role to a statutory appellate body very early in 2002. This action will not only address the fundamental inconsistencies mentioned earlier, Mr. Speaker, it will also allow Executive Council to utilise the time spent on such matters on the many other issues that fall to it for consideration and decision.

"More recently, as Honourable Members and the public will know, the Government took the decision to issue a quota for 2001 for the grant of Caymanian status under various sections of the Immigration Law that are subject to such a quota. This is not an annual quota, Mr. Speaker; it is intended to merely address the result of the inaction in this area over the past 10 or 11 years."

So, Madam Speaker, from then there was the beginning of a sense of direction.

I went on to say, and I continue to quote: "Let me turn now to the Government's game plan to achieve the development and implementation of appropriate policies to address the broad range of immigration issues that these Islands face.

"Firstly, the Government is cognisant of the substantial public input that went into the development of the Vision 2008 National Strategic Plan, and the strategies and actions proposed in that document in respect of immigration. We are also naturally aware of the even more substantial public input taken by the Select Committee of this Honourable House on immigration during its tenure from 1997 to 2000.

"That Committee not only received written submissions, but also afforded audiences to individuals and representatives of interested bodies who presented themselves. Mr. Speaker, the Government firmly believes that the public has said all that it needs to say for policy considerations to be made. The Government also appreciates that to give effect to any changes in current policies will require the support of this Honourable House in agreeing to corresponding legislative changes.

“While such legislative changes are clearly and unequivocally the ambit of this Honourable House, the Government is of the view that it can most expeditiously arrive at a position where it is able to propose new policies and legislative changes to this House if it utilises a small group of carefully selected individuals to provide advice on appropriate policy.

“I am pleased to announce that the Government has decided to appoint an Immigration Review Team that will be charged with making recommendations to the Government as to appropriate immigration policies to address the current issues.

“That Team will be comprised of: Mrs. Sherrie Bodden-Cowan, Mr. Patrick Schmid, Mr. Rolston Anglin, MLA Member, Mr. Orrett Connor, Chief Immigration Officer; Mrs. Sheena Frederick-Westerborg, Crown Counsel, Legal Dept.; Mr. Alden McLaughlin, MLA; and Mr. Gilbert McLean, MLA.

“The Government is extremely grateful to each of these individuals for having agreed to be a member of this team and to give the time that this initiative calls for.

“The Terms of Reference of this Team will be to review the public input of the two major initiatives that I referred to earlier—The Cayman Islands National Strategic Plan 1999-2008 (Vision 2008), and the records of the Select Committee of this House, and produce recommendations as to appropriate immigration policies by early in November (2001).

“In working towards this, the Team will be required to provide two interim reports to the Government and these will be shared in confidence with all Honourable Members of this House who, in turn, will be afforded the opportunity to give their feedback to the Team.

“I wish to acknowledge that obviously the availability of the records of the Select Committee will be dependent on the approval of this Honourable House. To this end, the Government will be bringing a motion today to seek the approval of the House to lay those records on the Table.

“Without wishing in any way appear to be pre-empting the decision of any Honourable Member, I would simply wish to take the opportunity to express my appreciation for the support that I believe the motion will receive.

“The Team will also be required to produce a document for public distribution explaining in clear terms its policy recommendations. This document is to be distributed to the public before the end of November. This will enable the public to have a full and clear understanding of the direction that the Government will consider taking on immigration.

“By mid-December, the Government will take the decision as to the recommendations that it wishes to accept, and will initiate the process of developing the necessary legislative changes to give effect to its desired policies. The Government will present these proposed policies to this Honourable House during the first meeting of 2002, and seek the approval of the House of any legislative amendments necessary to give effect to these new policies.

“The Government is committed to clearing this cloud I mentioned at the beginning. It must be done, and, God willing, it will be done.

“In closing, Mr. Speaker, I wish to first express the Government’s appreciation to the public for the patience that has been shown so far in understanding that everything cannot happen at the same time. And to all my colleagues in this House, I would merely urge each one to avail themselves of the opportunities for input that will be afforded, keeping in mind at all times the paramount importance of bringing this matter of immigration to a timely conclusion. I thank you Mr. Speaker.” [2001 Official Hansard Report, page 1035]

Now, Madam Speaker, clearly this statement set out a timeline. The process included the technocrats with the technical knowledge; it included those who were directly involved with the process at the time (namely, the chairman and deputy chairman of the Immigration Board); and it included three Members of the Legislative Assembly, including one at the time who was a Member of the opposing team. It called for a process that would include input from everyone in the Legislative Assembly before the policies were articulated by proposed amending legislation. Fortunately for me, that was September and within two months I was no longer Leader of Government Business. However, there was a clear plan of action and it was publicly articulated and had the support of the Government.

So, Madam Speaker, when anyone gets up in this Legislative Assembly to speak to ‘if you cannot talk the talk (I cannot do it like the Member from East End) you have to walk the walk.’ Because of what I just read I can say that, had I still been the Leader of Government Business by early in 2002, we would have had amending legislation. At that time there was no reference by anyone to me to suggest that we should do any wholesale grants via Council. In fact, as a matter of policy Executive Council had decided at that time that they were not going to participate in any status grants and that the first set of amending legislation that came about would address that issue. That was not by me forcing my thoughts on anyone and telling them they had to agree with me. Obviously, from what happened after that I did not wield any such power or influence for that matter.

That platform has not changed. It involved a specific process. It recognised the difficulties that we faced. I spoke to the inactivity over several years, and I mentioned in it that we had set quotas in certain sections allowed by the Law to start the process going, but every movement forward was allowing for the process to take place with due diligence. However it was done, what it also allowed was that all of those who were eligible had the same opportunity in applying for a grant, whichever section had a quota. That is where the fundamental difference lies and I want to talk about that for just a minute.

We have heard several Members from the Government side, in their natural response to motions, speak to the fact that Government had taken the initiative to do these status grants. In fact, one Member went so far as to say that we should be congratulating them for so doing. Madam Speaker, it is convenient here to bring in what the Leader of Government Business said in the last part of this contribution to this debate when he spoke.

I want to refer to an unedited Hansard of his earlier contribution. He said: “Of one thing we are certain, we cannot afford the present situation to continue for the future. Bearing this in mind we propose to create a comprehensive and integrated system of timeframes within which all non-Caymanians will be eligible to apply for the grant of work permits, permanent residence, citizenship under the British Nationality Act and the Caymanian citizenship.”

I trust when he refers to ‘Caymanian citizenship’ he means Caymanian status.

He also said: “... for long-term work permit holders opportunity will be given to qualify as permanent residents of the Cayman Islands.”

“This new Law will be fair, it will be clear and it will be concise in its terms. It will set out in detail what is expected of the employers and employees, as well as create a graduated system of rights for non-Caymanians.”

“All persons will know before they choose to come to these Islands what the system is, how it works, and will be aware that there are limits to the numbers of persons our geographic area can accommodate.”

I repeat, Madam Speaker, “... will be aware that there are limits to the numbers of persons our geographic area can accommodate.”

“The Law will strengthen provisions to ensure upward mobility for Caymanians and fairness in employment practices”.

Madam Speaker, having read what I said on 7 September 2001, having listened to all of the debate and having heard what the Leader of Government Business spoke to this evening, albeit not with as much clarity as I would have liked, at least there seems to be some sense of direction. That was September 2001 with proposed action by first quarter 2002.

I do not have any Hansard to quote from, but I know I can safely say that on at least two subsequent occasions the Leader of Government Business promised this proposed legislation to the House in short order—long before now. I honestly believe that his very first statement about it also spoke to it coming in March 2002, but I could not state that to be a fact because I did not have time to search the Hansard or anything like that. However, I believe that is what was said. Suffice it to say that on at least two occasions he spoke to this legislation.

There is a Member across the floor who asked in his debate why bring a Motion of this nature, why did we not bring a private member’s motion about the legislation. The Leader of Government Business, on at least two occasions, spoke to this Honourable Legislative Assembly and to the country saying that the legislation was coming forward. Now, they have said to us that we keep saying we do not have any problems with the grant of Caymanian status; we are questioning the process. They have also said why do we not wait for legislation to be brought, debated, and agreed upon, and utilise that process, and they counter that by saying whether it was by legislation or not there would have to be fairly large amounts dealt with.

Madam Speaker, I am prepared to stand here in this early morning to say that I am not naïve or daft to even attempt to say that if we are going to make any meaningful stride in that direction that that same fact would have to be a consideration, whether it is legislation or not. So, he is not telling me any new stories, I knew that from 2001.

In fact, I fully realised and accepted it from 2000 (during 1997 to 2000) when the Select Committee was reviewing Immigration. It was during those deliberations that I really got to know some of the horror stories of people who have been living here for extended periods. It was also during those deliberations that the glaring numbers stared me in the face.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay spoke earlier of how shocked he was at the numbers. Madam Speaker, it has been known for quite some time that the numbers were huge and the longer any delay, the larger those numbers were going to be. So, it was not anything new. It was nothing new to me, hence the reason I made the statement and was able to put forward a way to deal with it within a given time-frame.

That process was anticipated to have been completed in March 2002, and here we are in September 2003. However, the process of choice has been for Cabinet to do the grants and then bring the law and that is where the Government and their Backbench supporters part ways with the Opposition. So, when they put forward the argument that we knew all of these numbers existed, the fact that they are prepared to do it in the manner that they have and then deal with it via legislation afterwards, is not justification for it—not for a minute.

Let me explain something, because I know that we are on opposite sides of the fence with that part of the process. It does not matter if we are speaking of the grant of two persons, two hundred or two thousand persons, or whatever number, but there are two situations that must exist for the process to seem to be fair. They have chosen to do it under section 20 (d) of the Immigration Law which speaks to the Governor in Cabinet for special reasons doing such grants. Those special reasons can be all encompassing as one may wish. Madam Speaker, when we speak to fairness we hold the view that while that section in its speaking to special reason does not clearly define any parameters, the mere fact that such large numbers were granted under that section was unfair to many people because not every person who was eligible under the Law (not that section but any other section under the Law) was able to be considered.

Madam Speaker, a government must be seen to be fair in its deliberations. Our point is not the only point, but this point is that the mere fact that this process did not allow all of those people who, under the other sections of the Law, were eligible to be considered, therefore, it could not have been fair. They can say what they wish about it, but there is absolutely no denying that fact because that is a fact, not an opinion!

How can we, in our first bite at saying that we are solving the problem, decide to use this section to make grants in large numbers? As to the length of stay of an individual, while certainly not the only criteria (but in fairness should have had a large part to play in the consideration), was basically not only cast aside but not thought of at all. The process that was begun, as has been spoken by more than one Government Member, was one whereby they actually supposedly sent out to individuals and institutions.

The Leader of Government Business mentioned the churches and other places and they asked them to send names as to whom they thought were deserving persons. So, whereas they may have thought, as the process went on, that they were giving every one a fair shake, they could not have. So, that is the argument now on this side, Madam Speaker, because it has been said by them that there are some 6,600 individuals residing in the Cayman Islands over ten years. The Honourable Minister for Health quoted some figures during his debate, so did the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

The Leader of Government Business, when he was speaking, readily laid the platform to make it clear when he said: “all persons will know before they choose to come to these Islands what the system is and how it works and will be aware that there are limits to the numbers of persons our geographical area can accommodate.”

For those people who have been here for over ten years I am going to state the Opposition's position crystal clear right now! None of us (because that has happened) can do anything but respect that tenure in this country and find a way for an orderly integration of those individuals for those who wish to remain in the Cayman Islands. I am hearing the 'ohs' and the 'yous' and whatever over there, Madam Speaker. We have never said any different! That has been our position, but we have never not accepted that the process has to be one which is orderly and is able to be accommodated by the society and one in which every single soul—those who are Caymanians, those who are status holders, and those residents, all of them—understand very clearly what the process is going to be, how it will unfold and how that integration will take place in an orderly fashion. That is all we have been saying, and there is no quote that they can come with to say different.

Madam Speaker, here is as good a time, because I notice more than one of the speakers on the opposite side of the House tried to go to great lengths to make people believe that what we proposed was that the total number of grants on an annual basis would be six. At no time did we ever say such a thing, not even when the newspapers had their headline, which would have given that impression. The content of the article said different. Our position on that is very simple. Some of us individuals had strong views that Cabinet should not have the ability to grant status at all. Some of us took the view that it is not impossible that you might find some special circumstance that you may need to grant status to someone.

For the love of me, Madam Speaker, I have to tell you my personal truth, I could not find one that I could think of that was a potential situation. However, when we talked about it among ourselves we said rather than close that window totally then perhaps do it in that manner, but if we set a fixed figure then there would be no risk of that said section ever being used in this fashion again. Simple! So, that is the reason why that resolve section is in the Motion.

Madam Speaker, those who spoke went to great lengths to try to make it sound as though our considered position was that the total number should be six on an annual basis. They all speak to lies and untruths. They know better. Of course they know better. So, perhaps when they speak to these lies and untruths they should best examine themselves and make sure that they are not accusing themselves of something.

In the Motion it is crystal clear regarding this six. When we speak about numbers there is also something that I have to reply to.

The Leader of Government Business, when he spoke to me about this special dispensation and I publicly stated that he had spoken to me and the Second Elected Member for George Town, giving thirty names for the district of George Town . . . Madam Speaker, I know what thirty is and I know what three hundred is, any way you put it, whether you write it down or whether you tell me and it does not sound nowhere near alike to make that kind of mistake. The Leader of Government Business when he was making his contribution said he did not know what he had said.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The Member knows that he is not telling the truth this time of the morning. He is misleading the House. He knows that I did not say that. What I said was . . . perhaps I said thirty but I thought I had said three hundred. Maybe he said thirty . . . maybe that is what he heard, but I said I thought three hundred. Nevertheless, went I wrote to him I did not give any figure whatsoever and I read the letters to prove that.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I have the letters and I am going to read the letters. I also know a young man by the name of 'He-heard' and you know him too.

Madam Speaker, the Minister has just challenged what I said, and he has just said what he said. Regardless of his challenge, what he just said that he said is not what he said. We are going to have to get the Hansard.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the Opposition has been playing for a long time. I am not giving them any more time. They have to continue to debate. I will withdraw what I said because I know what I wrote in the letter to him.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I raised that issue because the Leader of Government Business, when he was debating, gave the impression that there was no clarity in his mind as to whether he had said thirty individuals or three hundred. Then he chose to go on to read two letters he wrote. We have referred, on more than one occasion, to those letters, but also we have referred to our letters. When he laid the two letters that he wrote to me on the Table, he made no reference to the replies, and it is absolutely necessary that the replies be read into the record so that everyone can understand what was happening during the process and the sequence of events.

The way he put it forth, it was as if when he wrote the two letters to me I simply disregarded it and did not want anything to do with that process without explaining the reasons why. When he wrote the first letter on the 21 July I replied to him on the very same day and I said to him: "Dear Sir, Re Grants of Caymanian Status.

"I refer to your letter of 21 July 2003, received by me at 3.40 pm this afternoon.

"Your letter advised that the Cayman Islands Cabinet has authorized special dispensation of Caymanian status to persons who have made a contribution to the Cayman Islands.

"You formally requested that my colleagues and I make recommendations of persons we deem worthy of Caymanian status and that we forward our list to your office, by latest 10.00 am Tuesday, 22 July 2003.

"I must tell you that the timeframe you have permitted for consideration of a matter of this importance is wholly unrealistic. The provision of less than 24 hours notice on a matter of such gravity is entirely unacceptable and appears to be little more than an afterthought.

"In the circumstances I must advise you that the Parliamentary Opposition cannot provide you with a list as requested."

Now the reason why no specific numbers were put into that first letter was because of what the Leader of Government Business said to me. He said that George Town, being the biggest district and having two representatives from the Opposition, we should provide him a list of three hundred and for the other thirty, Members of the Opposition. . . Thirty—sorry, my apologies—a list of 30. Let me repeat that again. The Leader of Government Business is playing mind games, Madam Speaker. He always tells people to stop crosstalk and so do you. I would appreciate it if he would.

This list of 30, he said along with that included the other three Members, each one being a representative of a separate constituency. He did not give me any specific numbers with that, he said they could provide a proportionate number, which was obviously less than 30, because each of those three districts which they represent is smaller than George Town and each of them has only one representative.

So, I do not know how we would put the calculations into that because if George Town has close to 4,400 on the voters' list (and we are not talking about voters now, we are talking about residents) it is used and thrown about wildly in here that we have 20,000 residents in George Town and he is asking us to provide a list of 30. With districts like East End and North Side, I do not know what portion they would be able to provide.

Anyway, I went on to say in my letter that aside from the unreasonable timeframe permitted for consideration of this matter, other concerns arise. We have grave reservations regarding the Cabinet's circumvention of the Immigration Board in the wholesale grant of Caymanian status to hundreds of persons. That is not to say that we object in principle to worthy persons being granted status. Indeed, we acknowledge that there are a great many persons in this society who are deserving of status.

It is our position, however, that the proper course is for the Cabinet to fix suitable quotas and to permit the Immigration Board to perform its statutory function of scrutinizing applications and making grants where appropriate. The usurpation by Cabinet of this critical role of the Immigration Board is not transparent, and [is] open to flagrant abuse.

The first letter that we wrote to him stated that position (and that was on the 21 July). He wrote me back on the 22nd.

The Speaker: Order!

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: . . . where he says: “you will recall that on Monday 21 July 2003 [and this is his letter to me, Madam Speaker] I wrote to you concerning a submission of names by you and your colleagues of deserving individuals for the grant of Caymanian status through a special dispensation Order of the Cabinet. On the morning of 22 July, we had a telephone conversation in which you said that you and your colleagues had not enough time to make any submission. I then said to you that you should try to submit names by 19 August. This letter serves to confirm that conversation and request.”

The reply to him, Madam Speaker on the 22 July again: “Dear Sir, Re. Grants of Caymanian Status.

“I refer to your letter of 21 July 2003 to my response of the same date and to your letter of 22 July 2003. By your letters, you have advised the Parliamentary Opposition that your Cabinet has authorized special dispensation of Caymanian status to persons who have made a contribution to the Cayman Islands and invited us to submit a list of names to be considered by 10 am on July 22, 2003. For reasons explained in my earlier letter, we are unable to submit such a list.

“While you have made no public statement to this effect, your letters appear to confirm widespread rumors that your Cabinet has directly granted Caymanian status to a significant number of persons over the course of the past few weeks and that this process is continuing.

“My earlier letter to you registers the concern of the Opposition to what appears to be the circumvention of the Immigration Board and the grant of Caymanian status by Ministers of Government. This we regard with alarm and view as a corruption of the statutory process and the usurpation of the function of the Immigration Board.

“The Immigration Law (2003 Revision), the Law, that is, sets out the process and the authority for the grant of Caymanian status. It is clear that the Immigration Board is the entity under the Law that is charged with the serious duty and respon- sibility to scrutinise applications for Caymanian status and to decide subject to quotas to whom it should be granted.

“Although the Law does confer on Cabinet the authority to grant Caymanian status if it finds special reason for doing, it does not authorize Cabinet to usurp the function of the Immigration Board in the manner that your Government appears to be doing.

“Special reason for so doing does not include the secret and wholesale grant of status to hundreds of persons without the benefit of scrutiny by either the Caymanian public or the Immigration Board.”

The position is crystal clear, Madam Speaker. No deviation. It has been consistent from day one until now. No changes, with all that they have said from the other side. Caymanian status is the nearest thing to citizenship that the people of this country enjoy and its grant ought to be considered as sacred.

“Regrettably, the course being followed by your Cabinet has reduced the conferral of this single honour to little more than the dispensation of political favour.

“As I said in my earlier letter, we recognise and acknowledge that there are a significant number of persons in this country who are worthy of being granted status. However, the process by which status is granted ought to be open, transparent and available to all these persons. [Madam Speaker, I just spoke about that a few minutes ago, and that has been our position from then.] Under the ad hoc system that your Cabinet appears to be following, a great many deserving persons may never be considered and even if considered, may not be granted status for reasons which have nothing to do with their suitability other than their perceived or anticipated political affiliation.

“There are approximately, 5,000 persons resident in this country who have lived here for more than 10 years. [That was our best guess at that time, Madam Speaker, because we did not have any statistics available to us as to who do not possess Caymanian status.] Is your Cabinet proposing to grant status to all of these individuals? If not, how is your Cabinet determining which of these should be granted Caymanian status? In the absence of published criteria, on what basis is status being granted?”

Now Madam Speaker, say what they like, but if that is not consistent then they best invent another word.

“In the past, status has been granted by the Immigration Board on a competitive basis pursuant to a quota determined and published by Cabinet. This, we submit, is the only fair way to deal with this important matter. To do otherwise, perpetrates a grave injustice against the many deserving persons in this community who are ex- cluded from the process of the course being followed by your cabinet.”

Consistency again!

“The position of the entire Parliamentary Opposition has always been that significant Immigration reform is necessary. Indeed, in September of 2001, when I was Leader of Government Business and you were Deputy Leader, Executive Council appointed an Immigration Review Team [the same Immigration Review Team I referred to and who I spoke about in the statement which I made on September 7, 2001 in the Legislative Assembly].

“The IRT was chaired by Mrs. Sherry Cowan who was then Chairman of the Immigration Board; Mr. Orrett Connor, then Chief Immigration Officer; Mrs. Sheena Frederick-Westerburg, then Crown Counsel; Honourable Gilbert McLean, Minister of Health, Agriculture, Aviation and District Administration who was then the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town; Rolston Anglin, MLA and Alden McLaughlin, MLA.

“The IRT has produced two reports which were submitted to your Cabinet more than a year ago, and which recommended comprehensive changes to the Law. However, despite numerous pronouncements by you in the Legislative Assembly and elsewhere regarding proposed new Immigration Legislation, to date, nothing has been forthcoming. The state of the Immigration Legislation in this country has been cause for major concern for many years. Unless it is addressed in a comprehensive manner it will continue to be a source of great dissatisfaction for Caymanians and long-term residents alike.

“The ill considered and shortsighted approach of your Cabinet now only fails to address this issue at its heart, but is bound to generate even more grievances among the thousands of persons who will not benefit from the largess of your Cabinet this time around.

“The grant of status has widespread ramifications and invests significant rights in those of whom it is conferred including, ultimately, the right to vote. For this reason alone, its dispensation must be fair and transparent. It will be a travesty if some deserving persons are denied this important right while others who are less so, are permitted to enjoy its benefits as a result of a process that is fundamentally flawed and inherently unjust.

“In closing, I would request that you forthwith advise the Parliamentary Opposition and the public of the following matters:

“1. What is the criteria being employed by your Cabinet in considering the grant of Caymanian status to persons who have “made a contribution to the Cayman Islands”.

“2. Is the process competitive?

“3. How many applications for grant of status have been received by your Cabinet?

“4. How many grants of status will be made by your Cabinet during this exercise

“5. Has Government accepted the recommendations of the IRT and, if so, does Government intend to bring an Immigration Bill to the Legislative Assembly to amend the Law in accordance with these recommendations.

“I look forward to your urgent response.”

That was the 23rd day of July.

The Speaker: You have 1 hour and 4 minutes remaining.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, thank you.

The second letter, especially, clearly outlined the concerns we had and it explained the position taken from them.

Now, when we hear all of the various arguments that have come forth from the Government itself and its Backbench, Madam Speaker, most of the arguments, spurious as they may be, try to paint a picture that we do not know whether we are coming or going. However, the words that have been said, the letters that have been written and the press releases that we have done, all state the very same position. One of the fundamental positions that we have stated from day one has not changed, and this letter from 23 July . . . not only has it not been replied to, but it clearly stated that concern. We respect the fact that there is this growing number of individuals who have been long term residents in this country and deserve security of tenure.

Whatever the Leader or any one of his Ministers or otherwise wants to say about trying, Madam Speaker, let me say this: There is a position that rang throughout several of the Members’ contributions to this debate, and you know I had to keep thinking to myself that I really would have loved at some point in time to have had an opportunity to hear them altogether discussing that strategy. I really would have liked to hear, just to know whether they really believe that it is true or whether it is the best strategy to use. It’s a winner because you cannot go with anything else.

I want to say something quite clear. I speak on behalf of the Opposition—inclusive—but particularly to myself with what I am going to say. I resent any attempt by any of them trying to paint a picture that I, or any one of my colleagues, for whatever reason they may think, do not like (that is the kindest way I can say it) people who are foreign nationals, because they have tried to paint that picture.

I am telling you, them, and this country that I really do not have a problem with the back and forth, because I have been around long enough in the political arena to understand that everybody is going to grab for their ground. However, when you go to that level, especially when you know it is not true, then I really have to question all the good things that come out of some of their mouths, such as how we should love one another and all those kinds of things.

Listen. Hear me now, Madam Speaker. There are times when I will react to things because I consider it really below the belt. It might happen again. Especially the Leader of Government Business knows full well when something like that happens, no matter what he says otherwise; he knows why that happens. He knows why, because he knows me and he knows me well, so I say that in this Legislative Assembly because we speak to polarize and divide this country . . . that is part of a tactic that is being used and then they say that we are the ones creating the excitement.

They speak about speaking from both sides of your mouth? Well, what is that? Our position, as I have articulated clearly in my wind up, is clear—crystal clear—and it has nothing to do with any personal thoughts.

Let me just tell everybody something. Every year there is a lady who comes to visit me and my family. When I was 10 years old, going to school in Jamaica, she used to work with us. She came to Cayman and she worked with us, but her children were in New York. She is now 66 years old and spends her time taking care of her grandchildren in New York. We speak to each other quite regularly, and she comes as often as she can, depending on whether some other member of her family can come, because she is a part of my family and has been a part of my family for nearly 40 years.

Now the Leader of Government Business just hollered when he was walking outside, about give her status. It seems to me that is how lightly he takes it.

The point I make with that is to show that this issue we are debating now has no bearing on the likes and dislikes of other people.

Let me tell the Minister for Community Affairs something. I would never say or do the things that he says and does, and he knows that. I would not do that even when he purports of the things that I say and do, which I know I do not. I still am not going to do that and even when he finishes with his vexation I know they will call me a fool. But me? I am still going to be the same way, because I do not want to feel no old bad something up inside of me. I am not accustomed to that, therefore I do not want that. I do not want to feel any anger with him or anyone else. I do not want it. I mean that! So, he does not have to continue to find ways.

I know that we represent the same district and that it is only natural we will compete, but whether he believes me or not (because history proves that he probably will not), I have every respect for his existence. I mean that! However, we will see as time goes on. I draw reference to that point because we have had several members in here speaking about polarizing and how we should be towards one another, especially in this issue we should be united in the country to build the nation together and so on.

As a matter of principle, when we speak about all of those things . . . let me tell you something: We are not divided in those areas, and whether they are willing to admit it one-on-one or altogether, some of the biggest parts of the problem that this same issue will bring about is when each one of us sits down alone or talks to others, and tries to figure where any advantage is.

I have heard more than one of them over there speak to “let it not be that thought”. The Opposition has a role in this Legislative Assembly (whoever that is, and it so happens now that we are the Opposition and they will never admit it). I can guarantee you and this entire country that even when they find their other ways to come back and do what they wish or say what they want to say, the arguments that we have put forward on this same issue have assisted with wherever we go from here and that is how it is supposed to be.

If the roles were reversed, that would be the case also. The only thing that I can disagree with categorically is when any of them says, either on the floor of the House or under his breath, words to the effect that I am, or any one of us is, jealous because it is not us granting status. We clearly have articulated the process that we believe should be the case.

I want to speak a little bit now regarding the Motion itself. Can you tell me how much time I have left, please? Not counting the question I just asked.

The Speaker: I am reliably informed that you have 49 minutes remaining.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I am just going back to the Motion for a minute to the ‘Whereas and Resolve’ sections. I will speak for a minute to the third ‘Whereas’ section which speaks to: ‘Whereas the Parliamentary Opposition has been inundated by a groundswell of apprehension and opposition to the recent actions and declared intentions of government in relation to the process of granting of Caymanian status.’ It relates directly to what I said earlier on about our responsibility in the democratic process in this Parliament. Some of the speakers on the Motion have mentioned the fact that regardless of what is done you are going to get certain types of negative responses. That statement in itself is not an unfair statement, and arguments are put forth to show why you almost have to accept that that is what is going to happen.

However, you have to have the fortitude and knowledge to know what people are thinking because their apprehension and fear is literally unfounded and it will not be like how those fears are. I do not want to even go into whether that is a fact or not, but I want to look at governance for a minute, a term that is used quite often . . . and we speak to good governance. If there are so many people (as I know there are) who have these fears and apprehension . . . and these are not people who are just looking to complain; looking for strife; looking to blackguard people and looking to talk about people; these are not the kind of people that I am talking about. I am talking about people who have come here as young children and are now Caymanians and have two or three children of their own, and some of them are what are loosely called 'indigenous Caymanians.' They have these fears that they are expressing, and the unfortunate programme we are living with is that when anyone gets a sudden shock and you know nothing about it before, even if your fears end up unfounded, once it happens in that manner, it is almost no convincing you otherwise, until enough time has passed for one to be able to use that time span as the benchmark to say 'yea' or 'nay'.

The Government can choose to find all kinds of little ways to speak to what I just spoke about because that is not a fancy scientific way of explaining things. In instances like this perception is reality to those people, and it has its way of taking on its own life, because they talk to one another.

I just heard the Leader of Government Business making reference to what he has put forward on more than one occasion, 'that it makes matters worse when we stir them up'. Let me tell you something, and I am referring to you personally, Madam Speaker. However, let me say this: the Government must realise that if the Opposition gets representation we have a duty to express and articulate any concerns we receive via that representation to the Government.

If the Government is a sensitive Government, the Government would then respect the fears and apprehension of those people and respond to it in such a way that at least they are not left wondering two thousand thoughts without having any clear sense of direction. So, when we hear stories about all they have heard . . . are people calling to tell them that this is the best thing they ever did in their lives? Then I wonder! I wonder!

Now, this brings me to a point whereby we could challenge each other as to who has the most logical and best thought out viewpoint to a clear sense of direction. Let me say this: a Government even if it is in its considered opinion and supposedly well thought out in their minds, this is the course of action they should take, has a sworn duty to advise its constituents, not only of that intended course of action but as to all of the reasons why that is the intended course of action. And in this instance that was not forthcoming. The first we heard of any possible sense of direction was what the Leader of Government Business said in his delivery just before he finished speaking. As I said earlier, even that was not very clear, we understand that draft legislation is coming in a day or two to the Legislative Assembly and we also understand that he intends to make a statement.

Now, tell me please, that draft legislation would not have popped up in a second. Obviously, I could not expect that the Leader of Government Business would have said two weeks or three weeks ago a specific date because it was in the process. However, if you want to quell the fears of your own public and you have a course of action, and the Opposition writes to you asking you to advise us of this . . . because Opposition or no Opposition, if you advise us of what your intended course of action is then even if we are mischievous we certainly would have to tell people who ask us the question that this is what the Government has said they are doing.

There was no information forthcoming; there was no position being taken—except that this is the Government's prerogative and we are going ahead and doing these status grants.

The Speaker: Order!

Mr, D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Leader of Government Business has just said on the quiet that I wanted to stir up the people to get back in the limelight. Now, if that Minister were to really say it like it is, he would know that that is not something I crave. That is exactly what I am doing. I am coming on now. The flimsy excuses that are put forward publicly, privately and where very few can hear regarding why we take the position we take to sidetrack the public from the issue at hand, if a usual tactic, it is not a today tactic. That is nothing new at all.

A prime and perfect example is when he says to me immediately, "Yeah, but you do not have to do the same thing." That, in itself, is an admission that it is what he does. So, point proven! I will move on.

The Motion, as I mentioned earlier, brings to light some sections in the Law which give rise to concern and those sections were pointed out. I heard the Leader of Government Business . . . and the truth is that he said so much today that was not on the floor of the House, as much as he said on the floor of the House, that I was not so sure what I was going to say he said while on the floor of the House or while he was sitting down. However, he made mention of one of those sections in the Law specifically.

I am pretty sure now it was on the floor of the House when he spoke about a certain section which would allow the children of those being granted status, to have certain conditions which would allow them to apply and that it would not be a situation that had to be. I think that is what he said.

When we speak to this issue at hand, and the Government rebuts the Opposition's position on certain things, our whole line of thought and our job that we consider almost sacred (even when we have the in between's among us of the one-upmanship) . . . the fact of the matter is that when the Government is considering a course of action (and in this case, the way forward with these status grants and whatever else there is to do with the legislation) we must articulate these things so that they can be considered. Sometimes that is used in a debate and one might think that it appears like you are attempting to show up an individual or the Government or whatever. Never mind how it is done, everybody has their own style. The fact is that it is our job.

With regard to the whereas clauses in the Motion, the resolve section, and the Government's desire for us to withdraw, with some of them even going as far as to say we should congratulate them for what they do—no chance! Absolutely no chance!

The Speaker: You have thirty minutes remaining.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: As frivolous as the Motion is (as said by the Government Bench), the fact of the matter is, as I outlined earlier on, that deep down we really did not expect passage. However, I can promise everyone that the course of this debate, while giving individuals their opportunities to vent their frustrations and all that kind of stuff, whether it is personal or otherwise, the fact is that the Hansard transcripts from this debate will assist tremendously in the way forward. Of that I am absolutely sure.

So, that being the fact, how can they expect us to withdraw the Motion? Absolutely no way!

Now, when it comes to one of them expecting us to congratulate the Government, the real truth of the matter is, the Government should congratulate us for being so conscientious. Yes! I can promise you this much: if any one of them expects us to congratulate the Government for their actions, then I have every right to expect them to congratulate us for being so conscientious.

I was getting to one of the points in the existing Law where we thought there might have very likely been a problem with regard to the offspring. I think it is section 22 subsection (7) where it says that “any person under the age of 18 who is an illegitimate child of a person who possesses Caymanian status and has been ordinarily resident in the Islands for a period of three years immediately preceding the application, may apply to the Board for the grant of Caymanian status.” I am pretty sure that was the section that the Leader was referring to. The truth of the matter is that we have to be extremely careful. That is the way it is in our best interest, to take all of these factors into consideration before we speak to a defined course of action.

I do not want to go into that for an extremely long period of time, but I just wish to make a point Madam Speaker. It is perhaps true to say also, that with the best of intentions and perhaps even with the legal minds who have drafted the legislation, one thing I can say is good, which the Government is doing, is that they have brought the draft so that it can be perused properly. If there are any points or issues which come to hand, well that is their intention so that people will have an opportunity to make representation with regard to their views.

Now, the other point that I think has to seriously be considered in any amending legislation is in section 25 and section 26 of the Immigration Law, which speaks to revocation. This really needs to be looked at very seriously. Both of those sections speak to any reason that a person's grant of Caymanian status can be revoked, but none of the subsections within sections 25 and 26 make any reference whatsoever to section 20 (d).

It means that under section 20 subsection (d) that says: “Where a person shall for purposes of this Law possess Caymanian status if the Governor in his opinion finding special reasons for so doing, grants such status to him.” As we understand it (and no one has been able to show us different to this point) the Law that obtains now literally says that when someone is granted status under section 20 subsection (d) it is irrevocable.

Now I heard earlier on this morning when names were being thrown out, one Minister said: “let us know, and if it is true, we are going to revoke it”. I claim no great expertise, but I will gladly give way right now if somebody could explain that I am wrong. That is troublesome!

It is troublesome, so that is something that definitely has to be considered very carefully. Regardless of the numbers we speak to that would be granted in the future under that section, certainly you do not want that to be granted under section 20 subsection (d) because whoever that individual is, the grant is irrevocable, regardless of what. If that is the position, then throw away 25 and 26 and any grant is irrevocable in my view.

Section 20—subsection (d) . . . let me make it absolutely clear why we take the position we have taken. After it reads where the Governor, in his opinion, finding special reasons for so doing, grants such status to them, it says right after, that “he shall continue to possess and enjoy Caymanian status unless and until he loses it under section 25.”

When we go to section 25, section 25 says “at no time during its entirety any reference to section 20 (d)”, so there is nothing under the revocation section of the Law which allows for status to be revoked if it is granted under section 20 (d). That is brought out and spoken to again to ensure that there is consideration in any new proposed legislation for that matter to be cleared up.

It is late, I know, and the Opposition is with clear conviction that the Motion was necessary because we had, and still have, much concern with regard to the direction in which we go from here. Having argued the point and not agreeing with the Government in their position to grant such large numbers of status under that section, there is still much to be done. What we do and how we do it from here on in, is of absolute and critical importance also, and we would sincerely hope that when the Leader of Government Business speaks to this issue that there will be clarity in the direction. Once what he says manifests itself, we know that we will see the legislation soon and will have time to peruse it.

We made a press statement this afternoon because our people had great concerns. They still have great concerns, and they, too, are seeking the position of the Government to understand clearly the direction that we go to from here. The people of this country are not by any means with a mind to simply create disturbance. But this issue has been one that is highly emotive; it is the nature of the topic and it is understandable how people react when they do not know what is going to happen next. That has been the problem, when they do not know what is going to happen next.

So, let us get it clear as to exactly what the direction is and how things will be handled. I want to say before I close that it is a great pity these individuals who are directly involved in the status grants, have to find themselves embroiled in the middle of this debate, because I can speak for the other Members of the Opposition, I certainly cannot speak for the Government. However, I say this very clearly: many of them have rubbed shoulders with us; many of their children are growing up with our own children; many of us trade places with visitations of the children and the families, and we will get a way forward with this and we will get back to normal. I have confidence in that. The Government keeps saying, sure the Government is going to do it. Therefore, the Government needs to come forward with a clear way forward so that one and all can understand.

They have to give assurances to the public that the way forward is not going to be what has obtained in recent times because the public has, in my view, sent clear messages to the Government that they are not satisfied with the handling of this situation in that manner.

So, the Leader of Government Business has just said that I cannot go and tell the people now that I gave them the status. I would never attempt to do such a thing. It may seem that I am wasting time to answer him, but I just want him to know that he is not going to rattle me (although I do admit that I am wasting time to answer him).

I therefore ask you to tell him to stop, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Is that your point of Order, Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: I should ask all Members to cease and desist from crosstalk.

You have order. Honourable Member of the Opposition you have approximately 10 minutes remaining.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I see the sighs of relief on the Government side of the House, but little do they know how much they punished us, if that is what they consider this to be. I certainly have never aspired . . . and I will never remember it the right way, but it is something about "all to all in the kingdom of everything," where everything is nothing and nothing is everything. What a void!

I would like to read this press statement that was issued this evening and I will close with that.

The press statement reads: "The PPM Parliamentary Opposition has today forewarned His Excellency the Governor that any further grants of status by the UDP Cabinet will be met with the campaign of sustained protest and a mass demonstration. In a release today Leader of the Opposition and Political Leader of the PPM, Honourable Kurt Tibbetts, JP, stated that following an emergency meeting of the PPM Executive held earlier today, he had been authorized to publicly issue an ultimatum to the UDP Cabinet that if the Governor in Cabinet proceeds to issue further grants of Caymanian status, the PPM will embark on a campaign of sustained protests commencing with a public demonstration and a march on the Government Administration Building.

"The release noted that, as a courtesy, His Excellency the Governor had been given prior notice of this intent. It is clear that neither public sanction nor common sense is going to dissuade the UDP Cabinet from this ill advised and potentially disastrous course. 'The Cabinet has been contemptuous of all previous efforts of the PPM and others to stop this madness and it is now apparent that further action is called for,' said Mr. Tibbetts."

"The Leader of the Opposition said that this course of action has been decided upon because despite the huge public outcry and condemnation of the UDP Cabinet in the unilateral wholesale and indiscriminate grants of status to thousands of persons, the UDP Cabinet appears bound and determined to continue with the process which is both morally wrong and unlawful.

"The release also noted that the PPM recognizes that a significant number of worthy individuals have been granted status in this exercise by Cabinet and also acknowledges that Immigration reform is necessary but it states that the PPM cannot endorse the UDP Cabinets usurpation of the function of the Immigration Board and the grant of status to thousands of persons, many of whom do not qualify in one fell swoop.

"'Such a process' said the PPM Leader 'is bound to have grave social implications for this country including the adverse impact on the education, health and social services systems as well as the prospects of advancement and upward mobility of many young Caymanians.”

The reason I read that press release is simply to say that we have put forward our case as to where we thought, or think, the process went wrong and how we see the process going forward.

The Government knows full well that if they are mindful of the thoughts expressed that there will be no movement on our part to prevent the process from moving forward. I have clearly stated what the Opposition's position is. I have clearly stated what my personal position has been for a long time, and while the Government expects us to respect their position, certainly there is logic to the position that we have taken, and it does not impede the orderly process to allow for this vexing issue to be dealt with.

We would urge the Government to move forward with the process, allow the public of this country to have clear understanding as to what that way forward is, and certainly (whether they wish to even believe the statement that I am going to make), if it is done in an orderly fashion, then not only will we play our role to help to educate the people of this country regarding that process, but we will assist.

The Minister for Tourism has on occasion in the past had to deal with life like this. The difference in the whole affair is that after all is said and done, the Government still has the opportunity to make this right. We will now wait and see. We will hear what the statement is coming from the Government; we will on Wednesday see what the proposed legislation calls for, the draft legislation that we will have to peruse, and we will take it one step at a time.

I want to thank you very much, even though it is late in the night—or, rather, early in the morning—and perhaps we will see our goodly selves here again on Wednesday morning continuing the business of the Legislature.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that the “Legislative Assembly does hereby condemn and censure the actions of the Governor in Cabinet in making the recent grants of Caymanian status;

“And that the Legislative Assembly acknowledge the far reaching implications of the unilateral and wholesale grant of Caymanian status by the Governor in Cabinet to thousands of persons in one fell swoop;

“And that the Legislative Assembly calls upon the Governor in Cabinet to forthwith cease making grants of Caymanian status pending the holding of widespread consultation with and approval by the electorate of the course of action taken by the Governor in Cabinet in this matter;

“And that section 20 of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) be amended to restrict the ability of the Governor in Cabinet to grant Caymanian status so as to limit such grants by the Governor in Cabinet to six per annum.”

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

The Speaker: I believe the Noes have it.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Division, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Leader of the Government has called for a Division, Madam Clerk.

Division No. 5/03

Ayes: 5

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Mr. A. M. McLaughlin, Jr.
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Ms. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Noes: 9

Hon. Linford A. Pierson
Hon. W. McKeever Bush
Dr. the Hon. Frank McField
Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks
Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

Absent: 3

Hon. Roy Bodden
Hon. Gilbert A. McLean
Hon. George A. McCarthy

The Speaker: Five Ayes, nine Noes, three absent, with apologies. Accordingly, Private Member's Motion No. 4/03 has not passed.

Private Member's Motion No. 4/03 Negatived by Majority.

The Speaker: May I have a Motion for the adjournment?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, it is late and we move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Wednesday at 10 am.

The Speaker: The Question is that the Honourable House do adjourn until Wednesday at 10 am. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The House now stands adjourned until Wednesday 10 am.

At 1.46 am (23 September 2003) the House stood adjourned until Wednesday, 24 September 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
24 SEPTEMBER 2003
11.02 AM
Fifth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Member for the district of East End to grace us with prayers.

tion and the Honourable Minister responsible for Health.

PRAYERS

Speaker's Ruling on Point of Order Raised 19 September 2003

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

The Speaker: Before moving on to item 3, I wish to deal with one remaining Point of Order which was brought to the attention of the Chair by the Member for the district of North Side as it relates to the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs.

In so doing I shall do a refresher platform and read as follows from the unedited Hansard of [19 September 2003]. I will refer to the names for this specific purpose. Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: "The highest number of incarcerated youth occurred during the leadership of the lady Member for North Side which was in January 2001."

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

[Ms. Edna M. Moyle:] "Madam Speaker, in my opinion the Honourable Minister is misleading this House when he states there were 32 juveniles incarcerated in January 2001. I only took over the Ministry in November 2000 so they must have been incarcerated before I reached there."

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

[Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField:] "Madam Speaker, the Member knows that she is just doing that to try to make a point that she cannot make."

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

"I would like to table this from the Director of Prisons who has provided these statistics. Here it says that in 2001 at that particular time they did not include youngsters that were at the West Bay lockup because Northward did not begin to hold these juveniles until April 2002. So there would have even been more juveniles incarcerated at that time when the lady Member from North Side was in charge. Now, if she wants to dispute this with the Director of Prisons she can do so but I think he has access to the statistics unless she can prove that he is a liar and misleading, I think that we should accept these more so than her opinion."

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.05 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

[The Speaker:] "Are you saying, Honourable Minister, that the number of persons incarcerated were incarcerated under the rein of her responsibility or were they incarcerated from the . . . are you attributing the blame to the incarceration or are you stating the statistics during her tenure?"

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received continuing apologies from the Honourable Minister responsible for Educa-

[Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField:] "Madam Speaker, I am aware of the fact that the Minister would not have been responsible for the incarceration of anyone just like I am not responsible for the incarceration of anyone.”

[The Speaker:] “Thank you.

“Lady Member from North Side does that clarification deal with your point or was . . . Please proceed. Go ahead.”

[Ms. Edna M. Moyle:] “Madam Speaker, my point of order is that the Honourable Minister says that the 32 juveniles, young offenders were behind bars during the year that I held responsibility for the Ministry. I am saying that this statement that he made says that in January 2001, 32 juveniles were incarcerated. Can he prove to this House that those 32 were incarcerated between November when I took the Ministry in January 2001. That is what I am saying he is misleading the House on.”

I have read this, Honourable Members, firstly to refresh my own memory and secondly for it to be re-entered into the record to put into perspective what I am now about to rule.

The Chair is convinced that there was a technicality: I am unable to say whether it was direct or indirect as far as it relates to ‘misleading’. The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, although it was clarified, is not in a position technically to say that in January there were 32 juveniles because it gives rise to the irrefutable presumption that those juveniles were only incarcerated at that time.

The Chair is also satisfied that when the Honourable Minister responded he made a valid attempt to clarify by saying that he was aware of the fact that the present lady [Member for North Side who was Minister at that time] would not have been responsible for the incarceration, or anyone else—just like how he (Minister for Community Affairs) would not be responsible for the statistics quoted by the People’s Progressive Movement (PPM) relating to the incarceration: hence my ruling.

I acknowledge the Honourable Minister for Community Affairs.

Point of Elucidation

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, just to offer a point: I would ask if we could hear the definition of “incarceration” if you have a dictionary available at this time. I think it would lend some clarity to the situation.

The Speaker: I have already ruled on the point of order and I will not entertain debate on the point of order per se if the Honourable Minister is asking for elucidation I shall be happy to ask the Clerk to provide a dictionary to him and I will pause for a moment for an opportunity to so look.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, the problem that we have with the word ‘incarceration’ is that it refers both to the situation of being imprisoned, and perhaps it could be an active verb as well as in the sense that it is suggesting that the process of incarceration is . . . I am only saying this to say that to use the word “incarceration”, which is the noun, means that it refers to the state of being imprisoned. The fact of being in a prison, does not refer to the fact of the active verb of imprisoning someone.

So, incarceration in this particular sense refers to the state of being incarcerated. It does not mean that it is an active thing happening at the particular time; it refers mainly to the noun “incarcerate.” That young man is incarcerated, that means that he is in prison. If we use the word imprisoned it makes it a little clearer. I just wanted, on a point of elucidation, to make that clear to Members here that the play on the words and the technicality from the point of view here needs to be borne in mind. I understand, Madam Speaker, that you have already made your ruling and it seems to me like “six of one and half of a dozen of the other one” in terms of the ruling, but, as I said, I just wanted to make that clear.

Point of Clarification

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, if I may.

The Speaker: Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, and I will not prolong this. I bow to your ruling, but I want to make it very clear that I know the definition of the word incarcerated. That is not what I am dealing with. I am dealing with the numbers because my sources at the Prison have told me that 30 of those were from the year 2000.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Minister of Community Affairs and then we will move on.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I am happy that she is dealing with the numbers and not with the terminology. If she is dealing with the numbers, then I challenge her to bring the official statistics on the numbers at that particular time and table them here in this House. Until she has done that, I still insist that I have done exactly that by offering the statistics which the Director of Prison provided to us.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

Public Service Pensions Board Annual Report 1999

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Public Service Pensions Board Annual Report 1999.

The Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Just to offer a few brief comments, Madam Speaker. Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly should note that the Auditor General's Report in summary is incorporated in the certificate immediately preceding the financial statements on page 18 of the Report that has just been tabled. The Report as such is being tabled this morning in accordance with section 12(6) of the Public Service Pensions Law 1999.

The Public Service Pensions Board agreed with the Auditor General that the Special Report referred to in his certificate not be included, as that Report has been submitted to this Honourable House by the Auditor General under separate cover.

Section 12(6) of the Public Service Pensions Law requires that the annual report to the Board be laid by the Financial Secretary on the Table of the Legislative Assembly for 21 days as soon as practicable after he has received it and such report of the Board shall be gazetted.

A few highlights in regards to the figures: The Public Service Pensions Fund as at 31 December 1999 stood at $56,032,007 including accrued interest. In 1999 a total of $13,774,302 in employer/employee contributions were paid over to the Fund while the investment income amounted to $7,593,396. Administrative expenses over the course of the year were borne by the Central Government. There were no calls on the Fund for refunds but with effect from April 1999 payment of benefits from the fund in 1999 totalled $5,500,059 representing Public Service Pensions only.

Parliamentary and ex gratia pensions were prepaid into the Fund and disbursements administered by the Board separately.

Contributions and interest thereon received from judges of the Grand Court were segregated under this statement of net assets available for benefits and were not included in the contributions received by the Fund. The contingent liability for the public service pensions of $115,365,551 as established by the actuarial valuation as at 1 January 1999 is reflected in the 1999 accounts of the Central Government.

This liability has since been updated as at 1 January 2002 and the first update as at 1 July 2003, is expected later this year.

Madam Speaker, you and Honourable Members may be wondering why we are just tabling the accounts for 1999. The Pensions Board had to deal with quite a number of issues in terms of getting the accounting system set up. However, taking into account the gap between that time and now, I had a discussion yesterday with the Director of the Pensions Board and the Financial Controller and we have set down certain markers by way of dates for which the accounts are to be brought up to date.

The accounts for the year 2000 are currently being audited by the Auditor General. The accounts for the period ending 31 December 2001 are to be completed and available for audit by the latest March 2004.

For the period 1 January 2002, to June 2003, which is an 18 month stretch, the accounts are to be finalised by July 2004 (next year). As at June, the accounts ending for the period 1 July 2003, to 30 June 2004, are to be completed by September/October 2004. We have set down these dates as markers by which the accounts are to be finalised, available for audit and for the audit exercise to be completed and for the accounts to be available to you and Honourable Members of this House.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member.

I have received notice for two statements. Firstly, I will recognise the Leader of Government Business, and following him the Deputy Leader of Government Business.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Recent Grants of Caymanian Status

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The recent grants of Caymanian status by Governor in Cabinet were approved in accordance with section 20(d) of the Immigration Law (2003 Revision).

Section 20 of the Law states: “(20) A person shall, for purposes of this Law, possess Caymanian status if – (d) the Governor, in his opinion finding special reason for so doing, grants such status to him.”

Under the "Definitions and Interpretation" clause of this Law, "Governor" means Governor in Council (now Cabinet) which means all of Cabinet.

It was pursuant to the provision in the Law, that Cabinet, having formed the opinion that there were special reasons, agreed for the grant of status to deserving individuals in commemoration of this our Quincentennial year.

1. Of the 1895 persons granted status, the vast majority of persons were residents of these Islands for periods in excess of ten years; in some instances between twenty and twenty-five years, and in at least one instance in excess of seventy years.

2. Further, in some cases where persons may not have been here for in excess of ten years, there are other considerations which justify the granting of status to them. Cabinet took the view that because of their profession, their particular expertise et cetera they should be encouraged to remain in these Islands and thereby make their skills/services available to the people of these Islands.

3. In this category you will find persons such as doctors, attorneys, persons in the financial industry, teachers, persons in the Health Services and law enforcement.

4. Similarly, there are persons who may not have been here for ten years but who have very strong family connections to these Islands such as one parent, grandparent, indeed persons who themselves were born here, grew up here but had no security of tenure because of conflicting provisions in the British Nationality Act and the Immigration Law or its predecessor the Caymanian Protection Law. Indeed, these were persons who were able to possess Caymanian passports but were otherwise stateless. These were also persons who had been given permanent residence and went on to be naturalised.

5. Additionally, Cabinet is minded that the Grand Court ruled recently, in the Ana-Louisa Warren case that the moratorium imposed in 1992 was illegal. Because of this illegality, over the years a large amount of persons who would have been granted status were denied the opportunity of even applying. Cabinet took the view that this was a major injustice and therefore there was a moral obligation on the part of Cabinet to address such injustice.

6. As regard the cases of the three individuals whose names were mentioned in the debate in the Legislative Assembly by the Second Elected Member for George Town, Cabinet reconfirmed that Jonathan Carl Campbell has not been granted Caymanian status. Additionally, Albert Chin has resided in the Cayman Islands for over 12 years, Alfred P

7. ink, the third person mentioned, had resided in the Cayman Islands for 12 years before departing in 2000 and was given a work permit in May 2001. He was also married to a Caymanian. I understand that that marriage was dissolved.

8. Cabinet reaffirms its position and what has been done is not only appropriate for the special circumstances of the Quincentennial year but was also within the ambit of the Immigration Law.

Madam Speaker, I should say for the benefit of Members and the public at large that the list that is so much talked about will be gazetted and made public when all of the recipients have received the certificates. The certificates are being distributed in alphabetical order by surname.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Cayman Islands Government Office Accommodation Project

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wish to take this opportunity to provide an update on the status of Government's Office Accommodation Project. Specifically I would like to address the following points-

- The need for improved Government office accommodations;
- Background and information that has prompted Government to pursue this project;
- The various options considered to address Government's office accommodation needs;
- The reasons for choosing a Private Financing Initiative/Public Private Partnership (PFI/PPP) form of procurement; and
- The project timetable to date and an overview of the next steps in the process.

Madam Speaker, we have known for some time that office accommodation and facilities for Government employees and/or customers to the general public have been inadequate.

Government services continue to expand, resulting in an ongoing need to properly accommodate our civil service and customers.

The challenge has been to find a solution, which provides suitable office accommodation to meet the present and future needs of Government in a cost effective manner.

Background

Madam Speaker, by way of background, Members will be aware that Government's finance and administrative functions are currently spread throughout George Town in various locations, including the Tower Building, the Government Administration Building (Glass House as it is commonly called) and several private sector rented properties. Both the Tower Building and Glass House fall well below the acceptable standard for overcrowding levels and provide inadequate supply facility for storage, reception and security.

In addition these buildings were not constructed to resist hurricanes leaving the Government in an extremely vulnerable position if a major storm were ever to strike these Islands. Just to illustrate this point, I can confirm that an engineer survey verified that there are fundamental problems with the Tower Building's cladding.

Furthermore a private quantity surveyor provided estimates confirming that it would be as costly to renovate the Tower Building as to rebuild such a facility. In response to these very alarming reports, Cabinet has directed that the Tower Building be slated for demolition in July 2006.

Regarding our other major building the Glass House, the prognosis is not good. The Building is nearly thirty years old and in need of major refurbishment. The Glass House does not comply with the current building code, does not meet hurricane resistance standards and does not have adequate mechanical and electrical services. Energy bills are excessive and the interior requires total refurbishment and upgrading.

Madam Speaker, I hasten to add that this unacceptable and substandard situation is complicated by the obvious need to relocate employees during any period of refurbishment and/or new construction.

Having been fully briefed on the condition of Crown-owned office buildings and the extent of private lease accommodations, Government considered three different options to solve its office accommodation problem as follows:

Option 1: Do minimum. Continue to rent space from the private sector.

Option 2: Traditional construction and delivery.

Option 3: Private financing initiative/public private partnership (PFI/PPP).

Option 1 – Do Minimum – Continue to Rent Space from the Private Sector

The first option considered by the Government was to refurbish the Glass House through traditional procurement and financing means and continue to lease a considerable amount of privately owned rental accommodations as and when necessary. This essentially represented a "do minimum" option. Supplementing the Crown estate with private sector accommodation with the associated fit-out costs is an expensive and inefficient short-term solution to the space shortage. Furthermore, it is often difficult to secure suitable rented space in convenient locations, of appropriate size, with adequate parking facilities and security arrangements.

We currently spend over $2 million per year on private sector rents. With the demolition of the Tower Building and the commencement of the refurbishment of the Glass House, private sector rents are projected to peak at almost $15 million in 2006 and 2007 (including approximately $9 million in fit-out costs).

Taking into consideration rental cost increases of almost 3% per annum and the assumed growth in civil service numbers, Government's financial advisors estimate that the Cayman Islands Government would be paying almost $10 million per year for private sector rented office accommodation. Clearly, Madam Speaker, this "do minimum" option is not cost effective or efficient in terms of service delivery.

Option 2 – Traditional Construction and Delivery

The second option, Madam Speaker, considered was construction of new office accommodation facilities under traditional construction and procurement methods. The new buildings would be hurricane resistance and house more than 1000 civil servants. In addition, the Government Administration Building (Glass House) would be refurbished and a new multi-storey car park for approximately 800 cars would be built. An area of the car park would also function as a hurricane shelter. As part of this development the Government would also undertake a number of road improvement and widening works in the surrounding area.

A detailed study was carried out to estimate the cost of delivering this project under traditional construction and delivery methods. The Public Works Department prepared plans for costing by a private quantity surveying company. Under this option the Government would have financed the development through loans from local banking institutions. However, given the 10% debt service ceiling on borrowing imposed on the Government as contained in the Public Management and Finance Law, in addition to the borrowing guidelines imposed by the United Kingdom through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, this would have limited Government's future ability to execute other important capital projects in the Public Sector Investment Programme.

Option 3 – Private Financing Initiative/Public Private Partnership (PFI/PPP)

The third option that Government explored was to enter into a partnership with a private sector partner for the provision of the new office accommodation facilities, plus refurbishment of the Glass House (if considered value for money), comprehensive car parking facilities, and associated site improvements. Under such public/private partnerships, private sector companies compete to design, build, finance and operate the new facilities for a period of 25 or 30 years. Public/private partnerships are attractive since Government is able to transfer many of the risks to the private sector through all phases of the project including design, development, construction, completion, finance and technology risks.

The private sector partner assumes such risks as design risk, completion risk, finance risk, technology and construction risk. Given the propensity for publicly procured projects through traditional procurement methods to encounter construction cost and time overruns, this transfer risk makes this PFI/PPP projects particularly attractive.

The private sector partner is compensated by way of monthly payments which may be adjusted for poor service and/or inadequate facilities.

Madam Speaker, under a PFI/PPP project, Government would agree to an annual service payment or "unitary charge" payable on a monthly basis to the private sector partner. These payments would cover the total estimated construction cost of the new building and an 800-place car park as well as the refurbishment cost of the Glass House, again I will stress if this is deemed value for money. Also built into the unitary charge would be cost for ongoing maintenance and upkeep of the facilities to a high standard. I would add, Madam Speaker, that proactive and scheduled maintenance would represent a significant improvement in Government's approach to maintenance which is presently limited to reactive emergency repairs.

The unitary charge would also cover comprehensive facilities, management, services for the new enhanced facilities including janitorial, landscaping and pest control services as well as the provision of totally new services to be provided under the arrangement, such as a young children's day care nursery, gymnasium and restaurant facilities.

Deciding on the Best Options Available to Government

Government examined all three available options and came to the following conclusions:

Option 1 was the "do minimum" alternative. It would be an expensive short-term solution to the office accommodation dilemma faced by the Government;

Option 2 is the traditional construction and delivery method; and Option 3 is the private financing initiative/public private partnership.

Under Options 2 and 3, Government would realise annual savings of $1.3 million compared with the current cost of private sector rented office accommodation.

Madam Speaker, I will read that last sentence over. Under both of these options (2 and 3) Government would realise annual savings of $1.3 million per annum compared with the current cost of private sector rented office accommodation. Both Options 2 and 3 would see the consolidation of the major Government financial and administrative facilities in a secure and central location on Elgin Avenue ending the unsatisfactory disjointed nature of the provision of this first office space throughout George Town. Both Options 2 and 3 would also improve the efficiency of public service delivery.

The final point of comparison regarding Options 2 and 3 was project costs. Considering the risks that would be mitigated under a partnership with the private sector it was established that Option 3 PFI/PPP represented better value for Option 2. In addition the PFI/PPP can be structured in such a way that it would not affect Government borrowing ratios; therefore, Government would be in a better position to proceed with other much needed capital investment projects such as schools which could be funded under traditional methods without exceeding borrowing ratios.

In addition, Madam Speaker, at the end of the concession period the PFI/PPP option offers Government the flexibility to-

- (a) enter into another partnership for the private sector for the future provision for the same office accommodation or;
- (b) assume ownership of these office accommodation facilities.

The cost of Option 3 the private financing initiative/public private partnership (PFI/PPP)

Madam Speaker, the estimated annual unitary charge in the first year of the concession would be between CI$8 million and $8.5 million. The unitary charge would then increase by Consumer Price Index (CPI) each year of the 25 or 30 year concession period.

Our financial consultants Ernst and Young out of the United Kingdom and locally, undertook a comparison which is called a public sector comparator of the "do minimum" option and the PFI option over the concession period and found that the PFI/PPP option would cost the Government a total of CI$4 million to CI$6 million less in today's terms than continuing to rely on the private sector rental market to satisfy Government's office accommodation requirements.

Benefits of Private Financing Initiative/Public Private Partnership (PFI/PPP).

Madam Speaker, I would now like to speak on the benefits of Private Financing Initiative/Public Private Partnership (PFI/PPP).

One of the key features of PFI/PPP is that the private sector would use its skills and resources to deliver to Government, not just a one time construction project, but serviced office accommodation including facilities, buildings, maintenance services and furnishings over a 25 – 30 year period.

This would enable Government to concentrate its human and financial resources on the efficient provision of first class public services. In addition PFI/PPP is the most appropriate method of delivering the new office accommodation facilities because it offers value for money to Government. Furthermore Government employees would enjoy an improved working environment with the opportunity to make use of a day care nursery for their young children, gymnasium and restaurant facilities.

Time Table

Madam Speaker, Government is pleased with the progress to date on the project and it is hoped that following a robust competition and selection of the best private sector partner, construction of the new office accommodation would commence in June 2004 and be completed by June 2006.

The refurbishment of the Glass House would commence in July 2006 and be completed 13 months later. The majority of civil servants would be housed in new or refurbished accommodation by 2007 with just a few departments continuing to occupy suitable private sector rental accommodations.

Next Steps

In the next step, invitations to tender documents were distributed on the 5 September 2003 to the four short listed proponents. Government is expecting completed tenders to be submitted for evaluation, no later than 28 November 2003.

At this time, Madam Speaker, we are hopeful that potential private sector partners will present innovative and value for money solution to address Government's future accommodation requirements as well as providing a safe and attractive working environment for Government employees. Such a solution will result in greater effectiveness and efficiency of Government operations, thereby realising savings in Government expenditures.

Closing Remarks

Madam Speaker, in closing I would note that for too long Government employees have had to tolerate cramped and substandard office accommodations and conditions. The Civil Service and indeed the public will benefit from a greatly enhanced working environment for the Service, incorporating innovative design, high performance and low maintenance and low facilities. A new multi-storey car park would provide convenient access for employees travelling to work and also importantly for members of the public who visit the offices.

New facilities would provide Government with hurricane resistant buildings that would be designed to ensure continuity of Government services during and after severe storms. An area of the car park will also function as a hurricane shelter and of course the project will provide a much needed boost to the country's economy.

Madam Speaker, in considering the available options to provide improved office accommodations I am satisfied that a private financing imitative/public private partnership (PFI/PPP) is the most cost effective method of procurement.

I look forward to receiving proposals from our potential private sector partners and in due course I will be happy to report back to this Honourable House on the progress of the new Government's Office Accommodation Project.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Chair proposes to take a short five-minute break at this time.

Proceedings suspended at 11.50 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.09 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READING

The Complaints Commissioner Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am privileged and pleased to present to this Honourable House, The Complaints Commissioner Bill, 2003 on behalf of the Government.

I would like to move the Second Reading for a Bill for a Law to Provide for the Appointment and Functions of a Complaints Commissioner for the investigation of administrative action taken by the Government entities and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader. The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Leader wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I am very pleased to present this Bill on behalf of Government. For many, many years we have talked about having such an ombudsman in this country and I am pleased that the United Democratic Party has seen fit to bring such legislation for the appointment of such a person.

Madam Speaker and fellow Members of this Honourable House, as you may be aware, "Section 49N of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1972 provides for the enactment of a law relating to the office, functions, jurisdiction and powers of a Complaints Commissioner. The section enables the Governor, after consultation with the Cabinet, to appoint a Complaints Commissioner".

In light of Government's continued commitment to open government, and to give people more opportunity to air their grievances, accusations and fault-finding, it is felt that this is an appropriate time for the appointment of such an independent officer whose function would be to ascertain whether injustice has been caused by the improper, unreasonable or inadequate administrative conduct of a Government entity.

The Bill defines a "government entity" as including "a government Ministry, government company, government department, government portfolio, statutory board or authority".

The Complaints Commissioner is authorised under the Bill to receive complaints from aggrieved persons. In accordance with clause 2 of the Bill "a "person aggrieved" means a person who claims or is alleged to have sustained an injustice in consequence of maladministration in connection with any action taken by any Government entity".

Madam Speaker, please note that it is my intention to present a Committee Stage amendment which has already been circulated which will define "maladministration" as being "inefficient, bad or improper administration . . . which includes -

- (a) unreasonable conduct including delay;
- (b) abuse of any power (including any discretionary power) or authority including any action which -
  - (i) is unreasonable, unjust, oppressive or improperly discriminatory or which is in accordance with a practice which is or may be unreasonable, unjust, oppressive or improperly discriminatory; or
  - (ii) was based wholly or partly on a mistake of law or fact; and
- (c) unreasonable, unjust, oppressive or improperly discriminatory procedures;"

Madam Speaker, "In the exercise of his functions, the Commissioner would not be subject to the direction or control of any other person." In order to ensure this, the Bill provides that "the salary and emoluments of the Commissioner shall not be altered to his disadvantage during the period of his appointment." So there could be no pressure laid there, Madam Speaker.

It is proposed that "the matters specified in Schedule 2 to the Bill would not be subject to investigation, however, nor would the Commissioner have authority to investigate a case where the complainant has a right of appeal in a court of law or other tribunal."

Examples of matters which the Commissioner will have no power to investigate are as follows:

"1. Action taken in matters certified by the Governor to affect relations or dealings between the Government of the Islands and any other Govern- ment or any international organisation of States or Governments.

"2. Action taken in matters certified by the Governor to affect defence, external affairs or internal security.

"3. Action taken by or with the authority of the Attorney General, the Commissioner of Police, the Chief Immigration Officer or the Collector of Customs for the purposes of investigating crime or of protecting the security of the Islands, including action so taken with respect to passports.

"4. Action taken by the Attorney General in connection with the exercise or possible exercise of his power under the Constitution to institute, undertake, take over, continue or discontinue criminal proceedings before any court of law in the Islands; and

"5. The commencement or conduct of civil or criminal proceedings before any court of law in the Islands or indeed any judicial function."

Madam Speaker, I am of the opinion that the Bill does not make it clear that the Commissioner will have no power to investigate policy matters and I will therefore bring a Committee Stage Amendment to this effect which I believe has already been circulated.

"The person making the complaint would have to be resident in the Islands, or the complaint would have to relate to an action taken in relation to the complainant while present in the Islands. Moreover, the complaint would not be entertained if made more than twelve months after the day on which the person aggrieved first had notice of the matters alleged in the complaint.

"In determining whether to initiate, continue or discontinue the investigation of a complaint, the Commissioner would act in accordance with his own discretion (that is to say, under the proposed Law, the Commissioner would be required to consider each complaint and to decide whether an investigation should be initiated - he would not be compelled to investigate). The investigation itself would be conducted in private."

Madam Speaker, after the Bill was submitted, the provisions of the 2003 Complaints Commissioner Act of the British Virgin Islands was brought to the attention of the Attorney General and his staff. That act provides among other things for mediation where the Commissioner is of the opinion that a complaint relates only to minor maladministration. I will bring further amendments relating to mediation at Committee Stage. Such amendments will provide that the Commissioner shall not participate in any mediation and that participation in the mediation by the complainant and the relevant Government entity is voluntary and any party may withdraw at any time.

Where an attempt to deal with a complaint by mediation under this section is unsuccessful the complainant is to be treated as if the mediation had not taken place and the mediator will be excluded from participating as an investigating officer in any subsequent investigation of the complaint.

"In respect of the attendance and examination of witnesses the Commissioner would have the same powers as those exercisable by a Judge of the Grand Court including the administration of oaths and the production of documents. It would also be able to pay witnesses' expenses and compensate them for loss of their time. The proposal is for the Commissioner to be authorised to obtain information from whomever he wants and in whatever manner he wants, and for him to be empowered to make such inquiries as he thinks fit. The Commissioner would not, however, be empowered to summon the Governor to appear before him nor would he be empowered to summon a witness to produce any Cabinet papers."

Madam Speaker, in our Colonial make-up we have to do this, but it is kind of bad that we could not bring the Governor before the Commissioner. I am in agreement that the power to summon a witness to produce any Cabinet papers is not there because it is the Cabinet and it deals with all sorts of issues. However, I let it go in the spirit of corporation and in the spirit of getting this kind of Ombudsman.

After an investigation has been conducted, the Commissioner ". . . would be required to forward, to the complainant, a report of the investigation. He would also have to forward, to the principal officer of the relevant Government entity and to the person complained against, the results of the investigation. The conduct of the investigation would not however, affect the power of the relevant government entity to take further action with respect to the matters investigated.

"It is intended that, in cases where injustice has been caused in consequence of maladministration and the injustice has not been remedied, the Complaints Commissioner would be empowered to lay a special report before the Legislative Assembly and the Governor - it is not proposed that the Commissioner should have the power to make a legally binding award such as an order for compensation.

"For the purpose of preserving confidentiality, information obtained by the Complaints Commissioner would only be disclosed in specific circumstances (for example, for the purposes of the relevant report). Further the Commissioner would not be called upon to give evidence of matters coming to his knowledge in the course of an investigation; however, in order that the Commissioner's functions may be subject to regular scru- tiny, he would be required under the proposed legislation to annually lay before the Legislative Assembly a general report on the performance of his functions.”

Madam Speaker, I intend to bring a Committee Stage amendment which will provide that no proceedings of the Commissioner may be held back for want of form. Except on the ground of lack of jurisdiction, no proceedings or decision of the Commissioner conducted or taken in good faith is liable to be challenged, reviewed, quashed or called in question in any court.

As Leader of Government Business and Leader of the United Democratic Party I am indeed proud to pilot this legislation today. It has been long in coming promised by many governments and talked about for probably ever since I have been in this Legislative Assembly and I am the longest serving Member.

This is a milestone in the platform of our administration. Over my near 20 years in Government and even before that, I have known about complaints that never get looked at, heard or addressed. This fundamental piece of legislation, Madam Speaker, will give the public and everybody an avenue to have their complaints investigated and the facts laid before the world.

I am glad that this is here today. When a person is making a complaint it cannot be frivolous but should be of a serious nature. Be assured, Madam Speaker, that while this Bill will give the public much scope to have their grievances checked and aired about Government, it will also give a needed avenue for Elected Members and Cabinet persons and other civil servants (this is the side that I like about it) that when allegations are made they can be aired by an independent source.

When a Minister is accused of making somebody lose his job from any public platform, this Ombudsman will check it, air it and say to the world what has happened. When lies are told it will also bring out the truth. This is a good piece of legislation. It is not perfect because I believe that the Colonial administration is somehow protected. However, as I said, to keep peace, to get this milestone and fundamental piece of legislation before this Legislature, I certainly am glad that it is here; I am glad to be piloting it and glad that my government saw fit to bring it.

I want to thank the Attorney General, his office, the Chief Secretary's office, the Deputy who is standing in here today, and the Draftsmen, for getting it here. We will probably find areas where we would prefer to see something else, but I say to all 'Let us get someone in place' because as far as I am concerned there are far too many people willing to accuse, to make allegations and to destroy public servants' names and destroy elected officials' names by merely getting up and making accusations that the whole world in their own heart of hearts know could not be so. I am really proud after being elected here from 1984 to know that finally we are going to have somebody in place to do that.

Personally, in my time I have borne the brunt of many accusations and allegations that are not true. There are people and even Members within these hallowed Chambers far too willing to perpetuate those kinds of allegations. The Ombudsman will take care of that. I am indeed proud that in spite of all the chat and the clack made by Opposition at times about there being no openness, transparency, and fairness, if they make those kinds of allegations when this man is in place . . . and I am going to urge the Governor to have him in place before the end of this year.

(An Hon. Member's inaudible comment)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, when I say 'man', it means man or woman . . . gender. The kind of allegations just being made by the Second Elected Member for George Town "that it is already decided" will be checked on too so that again he can be proved, or perhaps be taken up for perjury and making unsubstantiated allegations and carrying on like bad boys.

Madam Speaker, I know that the other side is going to agree because they know what I am saying is true. If they were the Government, they would want this kind of avenue. I know that they would want this kind of avenue to be available in this country.

So, as the Leader of Government Business, I am indeed proud that today we are here and we can pass this legislation. Hopefully, as I said, I am going to urge the Governor to appoint someone before the end of the year is out.

Madam Speaker, I have tabled some amendments and probably there are some consequential amendments that need to be had and will be dealt with at Committee Stage.

Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. I recognise the Leader of the Opposition.

Is it the wish of Members to take the luncheon break – or is it their wish to hear from the delegated Member of the Opposition?

I recognise the Member for the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

A generous gesture from the Leader of Government Business!

I rise in support of this Bill for the establishment of a Complaints Commissioner office. This has been around for a very long time as I recall. A long time before I came to the forefront of politics the Minister of Education advocated having a Complaints Commissioner, Ombudsman or whatever we want to call it.

Madam Speaker, I support the office of a Complaints Commissioner and endorse some of the things that the Leader of Government Business has said in presenting this Bill. He said that the time has come for all of these accusations being made and for all of these actions in secret to be aired in our country—particularly when it comes to this Honourable House and its Members, be it now or in the future.

In the past we have heard so many rumours about politicians doing this and that and the time has come for this country to do something about it. I agree with the Leader of Government Business and the Minister of Education that all and sundry needs to be investigated if there is an aggrieved person who complains. It needs to be done.

Madam Speaker, while I support the Bill, there are a few things that I would like to draw to the attention of the Government and maybe the Draftsman; perhaps provisions have already been made for these but I did not see them. The first one is in section 11(4) where it says, “A complainant shall not be entertained under this Law unless the person aggrieved is ordinarily resident in the Islands”. Somehow in the interpretation I believe under section 2 ‘ordinarily resident’ in the Islands should be defined because when we look at section 2 I do not see ‘ordinarily resident’ defined. I say that because when we then look at section 12(5) where it says, “The conduct of an investigation under this Law shall not effect any action taken by the government entity concerned, or any power or duty of that government entity, to take further action with respect to any matters subject to the investigation; but where the person aggrieved has been removed from the Islands under the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) or other enabling legislation he shall, if the Commissioner so directs, be permitted to re-enter and remain in the Islands, subject to such conditions as the Governor may direct, for the purposes of that investigation.”

Now, Madam Speaker, when I read those two and compared them, there is a classic example that occurred many years ago. It was when the band leader of Third World was “refused entry into the Islands” and his only recourse was— I think, he made a complaint to the United Nations, or one of those international bodies, and that was a big thing in the Islands. I wonder if provisions should not be defined so that it all of these situations are covered. Certainly our Immigration legislation on entry into this country is not like CARICOM states where they were trying to do the free movement, so to speak, where Immigration Officers are required to give each person 6 months. It is up to their discretion and certain other things laid out for them like the amount of money the persons entering have.

I am wondering if ‘ordinary resident’ should not be defined to encompass these people. For too long we have heard complaints of the inhumane manner in which people— and it is complaints I am saying. I am not saying that they have been visited upon the people but we have heard rumours of people complaining of how they were treated inhumanely when they arrived at our ports of entry. I wonder if the Draftsman, or if the Leader of Government Business, in his response could touch on that.

The other section that I would like to speak about, Madam Speaker, is section 16(3) and it reads, “(3) Where the Commissioner has made a recommendation under subsection (1) and within the time specified or a reasonable time thereafter, he is of the opinion that no adequate action has been taken to remedy the injustice, he shall lay before the Legislative Assembly a special report on the case.”

Madam Speaker, I am wondering if there should not be something stating the purpose of laying it (the report) before the Legislative Assembly. When the report is laid will it be debated or will there be some resolve to it? I trust that whatever the case may be, it will be defined in the Law.

Madam Speaker, I know the Minister spoke briefly on Schedule 2, paragraph 3, “Action taken by or with the authority of the Attorney-General, the Commissioner of Police, the Chief Immigration Officer or the Collector of Customs for the purposes of investigating crime or of protecting the security of the Islands, including action so taken with respect to passports.” These are not subject to investigation by the Complaints Commissioner. I understand that this is an extremely ticklish area and that it could swing one way or the other. I wonder if it is not a little too broad, God forbid.

Madam Speaker, let us look at the scenario: Maybe someone needs to complain about a Police/Customs officer who in the execution of his duties, deals with a person who complains of having been abused. I respect that there is a process currently in place through the Police complaints process. I am not questioning the integrity of that process. However, I am wondering if this, encompassing so broad a matter, should not be pulled in a little tighter to allow an independent body such as the Complaints Commissioner to be able to investigate .

I am asking the Government to address that area. Sometimes ‘Caesar unto Caesar’ is kind of difficult to justify even though we have evidence of the conduct of those complaints that are conducted properly. Here is a perfect opportunity for us to spread that out there and ensure that there is an independent body available, if needs be, to look at these complaints from the people as ordinary citizens.

Madam Speaker, I noted that the Minister spoke on another section – the amendments to come – which he went through in detail. I realise that we should not be discussing this until Committee Stage, but, if I may, with your permission. I noted in part of those amendments on page 2 that in investigating any matter leading to, or resulting from, or connected to a decision of a Minister, the Commissioner shall not enquire into or question the policy of the Minister in accordance with which the decision was made. I am wondering if it should not be the policy of Cabinet, under which the Minister is making those decisions. However, we will have to discuss that in Committee Stage.

Madam Speaker, as I said when I stood up to speak, I know that the Opposition supports this Bill; the Leader of the Opposition will come later with his presentation. I am glad to be able to support a Bill for the establishment of a Complaints Commissioner. However, like the Leader of Government Business says, "nothing is perfect." I am sure in the not too distant future we will have to make some amendments, or whatever, but the fact that we have it, it is here, I have to support it. I have to agree that we urgently and desperately and for many years needed something. Once we get something in place we can always adjust it to fit the situation.

I want to see it all encompassing because in other jurisdictions and in my research, I learnt that for instance in Jamaica you have two different ombudsmen — one for the public service and one who deals with political complaints.

Madam Speaker, I understand now that the Attorney General is three, one for the utilities too. Never-the-less some may say that is a good way of getting one of your friends into a job — but I would like to see this one covering the whole ambit of Government — politics straight down to the bottom. I trust that is what will happen here. I trust that we will have someone that the public can complain to whatever the reason, and then that person acting with total independence can review that complaint and decide whether it is frivolous or if there is reason to investigate it and make it be known.

We need to have some kind of redress for the public. People become disillusioned when the Government leaves something on the road and they run into it and something happens or whatever the case may be.

Madam Speaker, I support the Bill and I would like if the Government in its response could address those issues that I brought forward. I will be satisfied once they are addressed and at committee stage we can discuss them.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Elected Member for East End. I wonder whether I could seek an element of clarification as far as the Chair is concerned before we take the luncheon break. At the conclusion of the Government presentation I did call on the Leader of the Opposition to be given an opportunity to respond. Did I hear you correctly in your presentation as saying that the Leader of the Opposition will follow? If so, could I get some direction from the Opposition as to the way that they wish to proceed now that there is an official Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I would just like to clarify what you are asking. Normally I would have spoken, but the Member had done some research on the matter and he had some situations that he wanted clarified himself. Since it is not within the ambit of the debate that I am going to present, I told him to go ahead and make his question. It was not very long so it is not that the format will change from what you are expecting. It is just that in this specific instance that is how it was done and I was not aware that I needed to refer it to you but if it happens in the future I certainly will.

The Speaker: Thank you for the clarification, the Chair is grateful. We will now take our luncheon break and we will reconvene at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.52 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.55 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? I recognise the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As has been said before by my colleague, the Elected Member for East End, the Opposition is certainly in support of this Bill. However, I think perhaps in support of the Bill there may be some other areas which are directly affected that we might need to draw some attention to. I will be quoting from a few different documents so I am just letting you know in advance and asking your indulgence to ensure that I am able to do so. It is only a matter of information that ties in with my debate.

This "Bill for a Law to Provide for the Appointment and Functions of a Complaints Commissioner for the Investigation of Administrative Action Taken by Government Entities; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes" is a Bill that, looking at the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, it was felt that this is an appropriate time for the appointment of an independent officer. His function would be to ascertain whether injustice has been caused by the improper, unreasonable or inadequate administrative conduct of a government entity which is defined as: including a government ministry, government company, government department, government portfolio, statutory board or authority. Madam Speaker, when we look at the wide ambit under which this Complaints Commissioner or Ombudsman would operate, we see as I just said that this includes government companies, government departments, government portfolios, statutory boards or statutory authorities.

So, Madam Speaker, that as I understand it, would include entities such as Cayman Airways, perhaps the Port Authority, the Water Authority, the Cayman Turtle Farm and such other agencies. When we speak to someone functioning in that manner, and we look to the wide purview, it gives some cause to wonder about the variations of rules and regulations under which the staff of these various entities operate. You simply have to think, "How do you maintain consistency when it comes to the rationale that an Ombudsman would use in making assessments of any complaints from the various entities?"

The point that I am making, Madam Speaker, is not to try to say that there is something wrong but only to raise the issue to find out whether we need to determine some basic ground rules that would encompass all of these entities. That is a question, Madam Speaker, because certainly it is obvious that some of those entities would operate with different personnel rules and regulations than others. This leads me into furthering the point we speak to—the Civil Service itself, at present being ruled by General Orders and Public Service Commission Regulations. However, those General Orders and the Public Service Commission Regulations certainly do not apply to all of the entities that I referred to and I think drawing the parallel makes the point that I wish to make.

There is absolutely no question in my mind that, first of all, the Complaints Commissioner (as is said in the very first paragraph of the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons) in the exercise of his functions he would not be subject to the direction or control of any other person. That is exactly how I think it should be; there is no question in my mind about that. However, if that individual is to retain the autonomy that is absolutely necessary for him to be able to perform his functions effectively, then, Madam Speaker, there are certain required basic rules and guidelines that have to be the platform of his operation.

In saying all of this, Madam Speaker, one might say that the simple answer is that whatever rules and regulations are attached to each of these entities, an Ombudsman would use the requisite ones for any complaints regarding which ever entity that is. If we look in practice, I believe, that there may well be questions that might rise in its actual workings, where one set of rules says it is right for a certain entity, and a certain action by a member of staff of that entity, you might compare it to what is said of another entity and the actions of staff and it is wrong for them. It is very possible, because certainly the General Orders and the Public Service Commission Regulations are (without me wishing to give them the description that I really believe they deserve), first of all, they are archaic to say the least, if nothing more than that, although there is a lot more that can be said. There must be some inhibitions with what obtains at present.

The point I am making in my contribution is that while we support and believe that there should be the office of a Complaints Commissioner and that it should be put into effect as soon as possible, we are also saying that there are other aspects of his operations down line which need to be looked at.

It brings me, as I mentioned to the General Orders and the Public Service Commission Regulations, to speak to them generally for a minute because we know that Government has been implementing a programme of public management reform for some time now; I think, perhaps as far back as 1999. The move began for the first major component of that reform which was the financial management initiative which culminated in legislation being passed, namely the Public Management and Finance Law in 2001. While that Law in its operation calls for certain time-lines of certain sections coming into effect, at least there is a road map through the Law itself, with regards to the Financial Management Initiative.

We also know that there is a second major component which is coming online and that is personnel reform in the shape of a draft Public Service Bill which is being examined now relating to the overview of the new personnel management system.

As I understand it, Madam Speaker, the new Public Service Law, whenever that is brought to the Legislative Assembly and approved, will provide the legislative basis for the new arrangements and they will replace existing General Orders and Public Service Commission Law and Regulations.

So, Madam Speaker, there is light at the end of the tunnel in that regard, in that when this Public Service Law is put into effect, it will give clearer definition for the workings of the Civil Service and the various Government departments, which will give clarity that does not exist now to what civil servants can, and cannot do, and how they perform their daily functions in providing service to the public of this country.

As it stands now, both the General Orders and the Public Service Commissions Law and Regulations are, in my view, overly protective of the Crown, if I may say it like that—

[Inaudible interruption]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I said "the Crown" and it is very simple what "the Crown" means. I would like to continue my debate please.

The reason I say that, and I will make it clear, is that stemming from colonial regulations where the order of the day was to protect the Crown, that is still the basis of these General Orders. What that really does is to limit the ability of the Civil Service to function in a more up-to-date fashion that is acceptable to all and sundry at this point in time. Daily, I am certain both civil servants and the public have difficulty in their interactions because of these General Orders and the regulations.

The point that I raised about that, is that even though it appears like the Public Service Bill, which is in discussion right now, might be a year or two away, at least there is some light at the end of the tunnel. However, I dare say that if we do get the office being created, and the appointment of an Ombudsman, before much of this is done that individual is going to have a difficult time in performing his functions. One might say that it is easy once you go by the rules and regulations, but the fact of the matter is that people are not going to be satisfied with many of the decisions because it is for those same reasons that they will be aggrieved from the beginning.

The point that I make with that, is that we need to work with purpose on insuring that these other pieces of legislation and also the other areas which I will refer to in a very short time, are also being dealt with.

Madam Speaker, the Complaints Commissioner will be authorised under this Bill to receive from any individual or body of persons complaints which allege improper, unreasonable, or inadequate administrative conduct, by a government entity. So you see, immediately the job description highlights the difficulty that the individual will have at present because as it says in the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, the definition of improper unreasonable, or inadequate administrative conduct of a government entity is not something that this Law will outline and set the parameters for. Therefore, the Complaints Commissioner would have to refer to whatever existing rules and regulations there are. However, if it is considered by most from within and without that those existing rules and regulations are already in some instances unreasonable, improper, and inadequate in their own right, and civil servants have to follow that, then in many instances it would be viewed by an aggrieved party that their actions which they are following certain rules and regulations by, would end up being improper, unreasonable, or inadequate.

Madam Speaker, the point that I wish to make, is that it is fine when we speak to creating this post, but we have to look clearly at how it would actually function and what tentacles will spread to, which will decide on how it functions.

There is another aspect which we have to consider and that is freedom of information legislation. In the past there have been several attempts made and I am certain that it is in the forefront of the minds of many: perhaps I go as far even as to say, the Government. Here we go again, Madam Speaker! In the absence of freedom of information legislation which would clearly outline the parameters of what information can be made available to the public; in what shape or form it should be made available to the public; within what timelines are acceptable for such information to be made to the public; and also legislation which protects the rights of individuals when it comes to disseminating information which might be of a personal nature and such the like.

Those are very real areas that have to be examined because there are certain aspects of information gathering, and information dissemination, which when it affects individuals you cannot simply make judgment calls to decide how far you can go; what information you can give; or what right do you have to give out that information; or where do you decide that you are not going to do it.

Let us look at how an Ombudsman's office would function (I use the word Ombudsman because it is one and the same as Complaints Commissioner): For example, you have an aggrieved party who complains of having a need for a certain bit of information and the relevant government agency not being willing to pass on that information. The person might not want it for a personal reason but the information might contain bits and pieces that are personal to somebody or bodies. That in itself would create a difficulty in anyone who occupies that post being able to make a judgment call as to what is right and what is wrong and how much of the information should be given and how much of it should not.

Now the reason for the office is to be able to sit in the middle, comparable to a court where a judge will make a ruling when he hears the arguments of both sides. The Complaints Commissioner will perform generally that same type of function. However, if we make the parallel and their functions and we look to see how they both would function, while a judge will rule he has specific laws from which he rules. He rules based on that law and he himself is not authorised to go outside of those laws making rulings unless those laws do not cover certain areas; at that point in time he has to use his own discretion. Certainly it makes no sense for such an office to be able to function without having a certain degree of defined parameters under which it operates, and under which guidance the decisions are made.

So, I think that point is made. It is simply to say that while an ombudsman can function, certainly the move and the effort must be made as quickly as is physically possible to deal with such legislation as freedom of information; this must be done in order for that office to be truly effective.

The person who occupies the post should be able to operate in a manner that would be seen as satisfactory not only by a supposed aggrieved party and whoever is being complained of, but by the public in general understanding and accepting the validity of the office and its functions.

Madam Speaker, I believe that perhaps one of the best functions of the office of the Complaints Commissioner is its very existence. The fact that it does not exist now, causes, for instance, government agencies, the civil servants, and those employed in the other agencies, not to pay close attention to the fact that there may be individuals from time to time who are aggrieved and dissatisfied with whatever interaction they may have had because there is no real recourse at this point in time besides general complaints.

While there are always two, three or four sides to every story, there needs to be redress and the ability to have that redress in a defined position. Therefore the existence of the post of Ombudsman will clearly send the message to those people who are operating within not just the Civil Service, but the other Government agencies, that they need to pay very close attention to the way they deal with the public. To put it in layman's terms, customer satisfaction is of utmost importance.

At the same time, while the office will create this atmosphere by its existence, it will also clearly define the fact that someone cannot just simply up and make judgments of his own as to what is wrong with the way the Civil Service, for instance, is operating. The Civil Service can clearly say, well these are the rules under which we operate and hence this is why I can or cannot do that. So it will clearly define itself.

That can be done right now when we speak about General Orders and the Public Service Commission Law and Regulations. However, as I said, it is generally accepted from within and without that such pieces of legislation and rules and regulations are archaic and certainly leaning in one direction more than it should when it comes to protection.

So, Madam Speaker, the Government has brought the Bill and I am simply saying that it is not just its functions (that is the functions of the Complaints Commissioner) which will actually cause good, but its very existence will change the atmosphere and I believe for the better all round.

Madam Speaker, I am not quite clear about a couple of things I read in the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons. In the fourth paragraph it says, ". . . however, nor would the Commissioner have authority to investigate a case where the complainant has a remedy or right of appeal in a court of law or other tribunal." If we look at the Queen's English that statement is supposed to be self explanatory. However, if you take what one might understand on the surface, that this is saying, and you apply it to real life, I am not so sure how it works because where it says, ". . . nor would the Commissioner have authority to investigate a case where the complainant has a remedy or right of appeal in a court of law".

Madam Speaker, certainly (and I am no lawyer) there are a myriad of situations that one could imagine where one could go to a lawyer and dig up within the statutes almost anyone, or more than one set of statutes that one could use to bring some type of action in court.

The point that I make with this is, How far is that statement meant to go? Even if the legislation has within the body of it defined parameters, the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons clearly state the intent and I am not quite sure what that intent is. Perhaps we need to get that cleared up. There may well be situations at hand where a person feels genuinely dissatisfied and aggrieved, but a court of law, while that might be an option, it might not really be an option for that individual for more reasons than one. It might just be a matter of cost, or there may be other reasons.

So the way I understand this wording is, if there is redress in a court of law the person need not even think of complaining to the Commissioner or his/her goodly office. I do not believe that the legislation would have been intended in that matter so I ask that question and perhaps we will get a reply to that when the Leader of Government Business is doing his winding up.

There is another question which might well be reasonable in the sight of many but again seeking some clarity. It also says in the fifth paragraph of the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, "Moreover, the complaint would not be entertained if made more than twelve months after the day on which the person aggrieved first had notice of the matters alleged in the complaint." I would want to believe that perhaps one of the reasons those words are in there is to ensure that if a person is aggrieved, that the person acts within a reasonable time frame. However, Madam Speaker, speaking hypothetically there may well be specific circumstances which might not allow an individual to be able to proceed with such complaint within that time frame.

One might have been gathering some information to ensure that his complaint in his mind is a valid one and one might take sick perhaps not very likely in many instances but certainly possible in some instances. The question is: If there is a genuine situation that can be proven to be a genuine situation, is there any ability for the Complaints Commissioner to make exceptions? I do not know that and I think we need to look at that.

In the next paragraph it speaks to the fact that the investigation itself would be conducted in private. That is any investigation which a complaints commissioner decides to act on. He would conduct the investigation in private, but it also speaks to the fact that it is intended that in cases where injustice has been caused in consequence of maladministration and the injustice has not been remedied, the Complaints Commissioner would be empowered to lay a special report before the Legislative Assembly and the Governor. It is not proposed that the Commissioner should have the power to make a legally binding award such as an order for compensation.

That is understandable, but the question of privacy and who should know how much of what, within the investigation, and how much is the Commissioner able to make public information-wise, is one which I think perhaps we might bring a little more clarity to.

In the last paragraph relating to that it says, “For the purpose of preserving confidentially, information obtained by the Complaints Commissioner would only be disclosed in specific circumstances [for example, for the purposes of the relevant report].”

Again, while this may define certain parameters I think we might just want to speak to it in a little more robust fashion so that it is clear as to exactly how the Complaints Commissioner would function within the area of secrecy or disclosure.

Madam Speaker, I would like to go back for a short time because as I was speaking, the question marks kept coming into my mind. I think about the Government agencies which the Complaints Commissioner would be able to accept complaints about, and how they all function in such a different fashion. Not having had the benefit of vast experience in how that office actually functions, I think it would really behoove us if we could have some clarity on that because I can see potentially much difficulty in some of those areas for a Complaints Commissioner being able to perform his duties.

I certainly do not have the answers to that question at this point in time; perhaps the answers are fairly simple. However, I think there is some potential difficulty in that and maybe we could get some thoughts of the Government in this matter whenever the wind up is being done.

On a whole we certainly believe that it will be good to have this office created but we want to impress the other aspects that need to be looked at in tandem, the other pieces of legislation that are going to be necessary to fill out the puzzle.

It is important that we either begin, or continue, depending at what stage we are at in those various processes, to look closely at these other pieces of legislation as to trying to bring them forward as quickly as possible so that the functions of this Ombudsman can be dealt with as effectively as possible.

Madam Speaker, a Complaints Commissioner is truly vital in the democratic process. There is a situation that has been forever. Forever, we have had people complaining about inadequacies and malfunctions of certain Government agencies and it is very difficult on occasion to make judgments as to whether those people are correct, or whether they misconstrue the functions, they misunderstand what those functions should be. Certainly this post and its existence will bring a lot of clarity to that. We see the good in it happening, but freedom of information, the Public Service Bill, the good riddance to General Orders, are things that we hope will happen not just in due course but as quickly as possible.

As we work towards that, Madam Speaker, I think we will see much better results when it comes to the manner in which the Civil Service and other Government agencies function and interact with the public while providing the many vital services that they do.

Madam Speaker, on balance I think this piece of legislation should not be looked at as anything that would make the life of a civil servant more difficult. It should be looked at both in the eyes of the public and in the eyes of Government employees that it will bring clarity to a lot of muddy water that exists where I believe very few are comfortable having to swim in. So I think it should be looked at in that light. Certainly, the Members of the Opposition welcome this legislation and with all of the other bits and pieces that need to happen, we certainly look forward to playing our role in contributing to the forward movement of the process.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? I recognise the Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to give my support to the Bill for a Law to Provide for the Appointment and Functions of a Complaints Commissioner for the Investigation of Administrative Action Taken by Government Entities; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes. I will try to be brief as what I will attempt to do is to address some of the concerns and queries raised by Honourable Members in their very helpful contribution to this important piece of legislation.

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Member for East End, this morning, queried whether it would be desirable to have the expression ‘ordinarily resident’ defined in the legislation. Quite a valid observation I may add. However, Madam Speaker, my research has shown that although the expression has been used quite widely in the Immigration Law, it has not been defined. I think the reason for that is that the common law definition has always been used and the definition at any given time depends on the factual circumstances of a particular case. For example, it is defined in some courts as to be ordinarily resident a person has to be habitually or normally resident within the jurisdiction apart from temporary or occasional absence of long or short duration. In addition the residence may be voluntarily adopted and there must be a degree of settled purpose be it specific or general.

Our Grand Court in the Cayman Islands has made the observation that the expression ‘ordinarily resident’ was to be given its ordinary meaning unless the legislative context requires otherwise. As I mentioned before, it all depends on the factual situation at any case at any given time. I think it would be more appropriate to leave it as a common law expression rather than try to define it in the law and run the risk of being ‘boxed in’ for want of a better word.

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Member gave as an example of his concerns – the case of a gentleman who was attempting to enter the Cayman Islands and was prevented. That case can be distinguished on the basis that (if I understand him correctly) the person was neither present nor resident in the Islands. He was not allowed to land and in those circumstances if he is alleging that it was some transgression then he would have been entitled to seek his common law redress in the Courts; he would not be prevented from doing so. He does not have to be present in the jurisdiction to file an action.

The other point raised by the Honourable Member was that the Law should stipulate why the Report is being laid before the Legislative Assembly. My understanding of the thinking is that the Report is being laid for public information and to point out that there was some investigation carried out and that there was a failure to act. Of course once it is disseminated publicly, then clearly it may well be that the department or the officer is embarrassed.

In the usual tradition of things, Madam Speaker, I can tell you where an Ombudsman makes a recommendation Government always acts on the recommendation. It is similar to a declaration made by the Grand Court, where in itself it is made against Government it does not carry much force. However, Government in the true spirit of things always acts on the declaration – especially if it is the right of some other person that is involved.

The Honourable Member also questioned whether the section dealing with the inability to investigate certain actions by the Commissioner of Police, the Attorney General, the Collector of Customs and the Chief Immigration Officer are not too broad. Again, Madam Speaker, nothing in this Law is intended to prevent a person who is aggrieved by an action/some excesses on the part of these Government agencies from pursuing the ordinary common law remedy. I give an example: If there is an allegation of false imprisonment, malicious prosecution, an assault or invasion of privacy on behalf of some agent of the state, Collector of Customs, the Commissioner of Police, or someone, the aggrieved person is entitled to bring an action in the Civil Court to seek redress.

So what is intended by this piece of legislation is that where persons are vested with certain constitutional and/or other statutory remit to do certain things, not every shift in impulse can be investigated by another agency and which would have the effect of fettering the discretion and/or the actions of those individuals. However, as I said before, the legislation was crafted in such a way to ensure that a person's civil liberty and civil remedies are always protected and can be enforced if it becomes necessary.

Madam Speaker, he also wondered whether in the proposed committee stage amendment the word "Cabinet" should not be substituted for "Minister" and the policies of the Minister. My simple response to that is invariably what a Minister does is he takes a particular policy to Cabinet to ensure that there is collective responsibility in the event it is called into question. The policy invariably emanates from a particular Minister or Ministry. It is really taken to Cabinet for endorsement, support where necessary, and approval; however, it remains the policy of a particular Minister or Ministry.

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition also has some queries about the legislation itself. He says that the Public Service Commission Regulation and General Orders do not really apply to all Government agents and/or bodies. I understand that there are some inconsistencies in terms of the rules that govern each of these agencies. He suggests that it would be best if there is some sort of uniformity so that whatever investigation is undertaken by the Complaints Commissioner, he would be able to sort of deal with issues in a common way, rather than having to look at what obtains elsewhere and extrapolate from that and investigate based on the restrictions and/or whatever it is that governs each: clearly, that would be desirable, Madam Speaker.

I am confident that in the fullness of time when the other pieces of legislations are in place, pursuant to the new Constitution, whenever that is, that there will be some sort of uniformity and consistency in terms of how most of these agencies are governed, with sort of a regulatory framework in place for public officers and for the conduct of business in these departments.

Suffice it to say, that the absence of some of these uniform courts will not in any way seriously detract from the workings of the proposed Complaints Commissioner's office. It will clearly take some getting used to, but I am confident, Madam Speaker, that it will be addressed not too long from now.

Madam Speaker, I must also point out that notwithstanding the difference in terms of how these agencies are governed, there are some clear protocols in each of them. For example, if you look at Civil Aviation, or Cayman Airways, and compare what happens in the Government department you will see that there are clear protocols governing each of these agencies. Therefore, it will be possible for the Complaints Commissioner to work with the existing protocols in place to determine whether there was in fact maladministration as alleged by a complainant.

One of the concerns that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has, is whether (because of these inadequacies and/or inconsistencies in the way business is conducted or the guidelines governing these agencies), it would not be unfair to a particular public officer to be investigated and for it to be eventually found out that the public officer was incapacitated or impotent because of not being able to access certain information.

I think clause 16(5) of the Bill states, "The Commissioner shall not, in any report under sub- section (3), comment adversely on any person unless he has given that person an opportunity to be heard.” Madam Speaker, that is very important because if it turns out after a complaint has been lodged and investigated that the particular public officer was not able to act because of some sort of inability to access information, or he was not capable because of his particular rank in the public service to access certain things then that public servant will have an opportunity to state his side of the story to the Commissioner and which clearly has to be factored into any report that is going to be laid in the Legislative Assembly.

So, it has to be made quite clear that the public servant was called upon to explain why he did not act in a particular way and that explanation will find itself in the report that is going to be laid in the Legislative Assembly, if it gets to that stage.

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Leader (of the Opposition) also observed that it would have been appropriate to be able to juxtapose and present simultaneously the Complaints Commissioner Bill with the Freedom of Information Law. Madam Speaker, it would be desirable, but again that is something that will be addressed eventually.

What I can say is that where a complainant complains of maladministration and is denied the ability to access that information to substantiate that complaint; clause 13 of that Bill gives the Commissioner wide powers to access such information. He has wide remit not only to require or request records, but to also request the attendance of persons to be examined and so the issue can be ventilated, notwithstanding.

I must also add that there is a reinforcement provision in Clause 15 where the Commissioner attempts to get information and is obstructed by anyone. That in itself is contempt so there is enforcement mechanism within the Bill itself to deal with any obstruction to access information.

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition also queried the thinking in the language used in paragraph 4 of the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons in particular he says, “. . . nor would the Commissioner have authority to investigate a case where the complainant has a remedy or right of appeal in a court of Law or other tribunal.”

Madam Speaker, there is good reason for that because you really do not want to have duplicitous proceedings taking place at the same time and it is analogous to a person who claims that their constitutional right has been infringed. The Law always requires that before you can bring an action for breach of a constitutional right, you have to demonstrate that you either have no alternative remedy or you have exhausted all other remedies and this is not dissimilar to that thinking.

However, Madam Speaker, it does not end there. The Law in itself thus provides some sort of a caveat and remedy. Clause 10(3) says, “(3) Notwithstanding subsection (2), the Commissioner may conduct an investigation notwithstanding that the person aggrieved has or had such a right or remedy if satisfied that in the particular circumstances it is not reasonable to expect him to resort or have resorted to it.” So there are some safeguards to deal with that there.

Madam Speaker, he also made some observations about the 12-month limitation period. I would also make the same observation, but I would add as a precursor that it is not appropriate or desirable that a person who is aggrieved and who is alleging that he has a remedy or a right, sits on it. My learned friend sitting across the table would appreciate the expression “laches” and Madam Speaker, of course you. If you sit on your right for an undue period then you would lose it. If you have a right then you must pursue it expeditiously.

The limitation period is really put in there, firstly, because it is standard in quite a few legislation around the place and I also make the point that in the normal course of things, for example, where a person has committed or alleged to have committed a summary offence, the prosecution has to be brought within 6 months, otherwise it is statute barred. It is to ensure that matters are dealt with alacrity and expeditiously. However, again I must point out that the Bill in its wisdom has ensured that the person is not entirely shut out. So, the limitation period is not absolute.

If you look at clause 11(3) “A complaint shall not be entertained under this Law unless it is properly made not later than 12 months from the day on which the person aggrieved first had notice of the matters alleged in the complaint; but the Commissioner may conduct an investigation pursuant to a complaint not made within that period if he considers that there are special circumstances which make it proper to do so.” So, the person is not entirely shut out. He can demonstrate that there are special circumstances why he never acted within the 12 month period. The Commissioner in his discretion may still entertain the complaint.

I think, Madam Speaker, the other section that he had some observation on was clause 14 which says that, “14. (1) Information obtained by the Commissioner or his officers in the course of or for the purposes of an investigation under this Law shall not be disclosed except” the purposes are enumerated in the relevant subsections.

I think he said that required some clarity. My understanding of the particular provision, Madam Speaker, was that persons who are making complaints are to be afforded the assurance that whatever is being done is being done with a degree of confidentiality. There should not be any unauthorised or unnecessary disclosure which clearly might result in some sort of recrimination against such a person.

The Complaints Commissioner is therefore not authorised to make any disclosure about what has been alleged unless it is with a view to having the issue ventilated and obviously resolving favour of the person making the complaint. I do not think that there is any particular other mischief that provision is aimed at. I think it is really just to ensure that the person can be encouraged in knowing that whatever complaint is made that it will be dealt with appropriately and in the spirit of confidentiality, unless of course disclosures are necessary with a view to determine the complaints made.

Madam Speaker, I hope I have not missed out anything; I think it is a very useful piece of legislation as the Honourable Leader of Government Business pointed out. It is very timely and like previous speakers I too commend it to this Honourable House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to offer my support to the Complaints Commissioner Bill 2003. A lot of the good things, the positive outcomes, have been raised by the Leader of Government Business in moving this Bill and other speakers that have followed him and so my task is rather easy. I will not ask the House to indulge in my tedious repetition on a lot of those points. I want to offer a few comments on the reason for our support and why this Bill is indeed one that is important to the people of the Cayman Islands.

I think it is fair to say that all of us who are representatives of the people have had instances of constituents coming to us and basically putting us in the position of having to almost behave like a Complaint's Commissioner. At the end of the day when the public has a negative experience with the public service and with any Government-owned company or statutory authority they usually seek redress by coming to one of us. In some instances I have seen people write letters to the Governor, copy them to Cabinet, copy them to us as Elected Members.

I am not saying that this will necessarily go away. However, now with the creation of the post, via this enabling legislation, it certainly provides the public with a much more formidable office to act on its behalf when it feels as though it has been aggrieved or not been treated fairly and there just seems to be no other practical or reasonable manner in which they would be able to have any sort of resolution to the particular matter.

Madam Speaker, certainly the entire public service and the way in which Government and Government entities operate in the Cayman Islands is in a state of change. The Financial side, the Financial Management Initiative has taken root with the new Public Management and Finance Law and we know that the new personnel legislation is currently being created for us.

Madam Speaker, even with all of that, at the end of the day what is going to make this legislation and this position most useful is the fact that the public now has an official office to go to – a powerful office to go to. This will work if whoever is appointed as Complaints Commissioner deals seriously with the matters that are brought before him and the Governor, and indeed the Government, where applicable, acting upon the recommendations of the Complaints Commissioner.

Since I have been elected, these short almost three years, I have had instances where sometimes one sort of scratches his head and asks himself: Why is this sort of behaviour allowed at this point in time? Madam Speaker, just having this post, I see it as a very useful supplement to the Auditor General's office because the office of the Auditor General deals more with the financial side, the value for money side from within the service, and it goes about its duties in a very predictable manner.

I think all of us here would agree that if officers did not believe or know that the Audit Office could come by and look into matters and investigate matters and produce reports that come here to the Legislative Assembly that have to go before the Public Accounts Committee, that behaviour would be very different.

Madam Speaker, I am convinced that this legislation will cause people to think twice. This legislation will cause people to behave in a more appropriate fashion because there is that feeling amongst people in the service that politicians come and go. They are there for four years, and could be gone in four years, while the officers are there for life.

In my opinion, they behave in ways which show clearly that people are very comfortable and entrenched with where they are and do not necessarily feel as though they need to look at the situation, as to say to themselves, "I am a public servant; I have taken up and I am appointed to a very important position of trust in the community. I am a public servant; I am here to serve the public; I am here to carry out functions that are useful to serving the public, not useful to oneself."

Madam Speaker, all of the questions that I had were covered by the Honourable Second Official Member, but it is very important to note once again that in section 13 the strong powers conferred upon the office of Complaints Commissioner in regards to gathering evidence; in being able to get information that allows the office to carry out its investigation. It is also very useful that section 15 creates a mechanism in which the information will be forthcoming.

On the flipside it is also very useful that in section 12(1) under the procedure and respect of investigations the Commissioner where he proposes to conduct an investigation that he shall afford the principal officer, or the Government entity concerned, the opportunity to comment on the allegations contained in the complaint. Madam Speaker, it is very important that the process is fair on both sides.

It is also very useful that in 16(5) getting out of the procedure of the investigation, we are talking about more dealing with the end result that the Commissioner shall not issue a report or comment adversely on persons before they have had the opportunity to be heard.

Madam Speaker, that principle is so important that it is contained, in slightly different ways twice in the legislation. I believe that the public of this country will be served well by this legislation, but at the end of the day the good results of this legislation will come with the recommendations being followed through. Madam Speaker, as is currently the case, at least, with the administration of public service structured the way it is, it is going to be extremely important that the information that is passed on especially to the Governor, is acted upon, because it makes no sense and it serves no real useful purpose, or certainly not the purpose that is intended.

If you have the Complaints Commissioner, you have the office with wide powers. It has to have investigations that could, and will, uncover actions that should not be perpetrated by entities and officers within the public service, but not to have that follow-through mechanism making sure that people are therefore going to be accountable because they see that there is going to be a real consequence because of their action or, in some instances, inaction.

Madam Speaker, I am also pleased to see the way in which the legislation calls for reports having to come to the Legislative Assembly. Again, Madam Speaker, this legislation continues to move us toward the operative phrase that so many of us used when we were seeking election and that is, 'open, accountable, transparent' government.

Certainly it was brought to my attention (and I think most of us know) that there is ongoing work in regards to freedom of information legislation. Other Members have spoken quite correctly pointing out that it will be an integral part of ensuring the process we all seek to have available to the public: The ability to have an office that can act independently and on the public's behalf. That piece of legislation is going to be crucial also to ensuring this process works as effectively and efficiently as possible.

So, Madam Speaker, with those brief comments I would just like to say that I am very happy to see that the day has come when we have this piece of legislation. It was not too long ago that we saw Justice Carr come and speak to us about the importance of this office. I too offer my support and commend it to all other Honourable Members.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call, does any other Member wish to speak? If not I will call on the mover, the Leader of Government Business to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I do not have much time left for the day. I am going to try to be brief as the points that were made by the Opposition which needed answering were mostly answered by the Legal person in the Cabinet, who is responsible for Legal administration and I do want to thank him for the part he has played here.

I listened to the Opposition, Madam Speaker, and I had to say that the day the Opposition have nothing to say— "on the one hand this, and the next hand that," will be the day when they do it all themselves and that is a long time in coming. I listened as closely as I could to the Leader of the Opposition who strained all afternoon to find a case, but all that he could bring was mere supposition, "suppose this or suppose that." If Moses had done that when he came to the Red Sea, he would never have gotten over it. If we have to wait so that everything is as clear as the Opposition want it in this Legislation, I do not believe that we would get an Ombudsman.

The complaint he made about the 12-month time frame given for a person to make a complaint the Attorney General addressed it. However, I would just like to say that the person making a complaint must be sure what he is complaining about. I believe that anyone who has a genuine complaint should be able to demonstrate to the Ombudsman in 12 months, one whole year, what he is after, what his grievance is.

However, if the Opposition Member had really read the Bill, rather than being so willing to nit pick and being so tedious with each step, he would have found out that his concern was addressed. Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member over there is crying about charitable they do not know anything about charity and the truth is they cannot come up here and claim something is not in the Bill or Government's work, when in fact what he is complaining about is addressed in what is before the House.

I would have preferred if the Opposition Member had not referred to "the Crown"; I refer to Colonial Administration but sometimes in the parlance used in this country, Crown is taken to mean those in Executive Council and that is not so. Especially when people want to wrap everybody together they would say "the Crown" but in the real sense of course, "the Crown" is Her Majesty's representative, the Governor.

Mention was made of the Freedom of Information and the new Public Service Law. These two pieces of legislation are long overdue and have been talked about for years. This administration, I am proud to say, is doing something about it. I would like for the Leader of the Opposition to be here, but they know when to duck. Those pieces of legislation will come in our time just as the Complaints Commissioner Bill is before us today, not too long from now, I hope.

Freedom of information is needed in the country and I look forward to the day when certain important boards' deliberations for instance, can be made public. I really believe that is necessary if we are going to be open and transparent and held accountable for our actions. It should extend to boards for those people that are appointed by Cabinet that has always been my opinion. Important boards like the Planning Board should be open for public hearing and there could be others, but I would go on to say that not every board could be open for the public to listen to.

The Second Elected Member for George Town is clacking over there as usual, but I thought that he had gotten enough beating on the Status issue and that he would not want to draw that into this debate; however, I will speak to that in a few minutes.

Madam Speaker, public service management reform is certainly necessary and the program has begun. In 2002 a group of senior civil servants and other stakeholders began the design work for the Personnel Management System. In June this year, the Strategic Coordination Group and the Cabinet, approved for consultation a draft Public Service Bill and once that is enacted, the Public Service Law will provide the legislative mandate for the personnel reform.

So, Madam Speaker, they really have no gripe we are well on the way in doing those things and I believe that once we get where we feel that everyone concerned is satisfied (all civil servants are in agreement) we can bring the legislation.

Hour of Interruption—4.30 pm

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: Honourable Leader we have reached the hour of interruption would you have a short remark to conclude, or do we need to suspend Standing Order 10(2) to go on beyond 4.30 pm?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Out of the abundance of caution let me move that Standing Order. I will be very brief thereafter, but I would like to take the vote on this Bill so that we can get to the other one tomorrow morning early.

I have moved the Standing Order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be hereby suspended to allow the House to complete the business before the House as it relates to the Complaints Commissioner Bill, 2003, Second Reading.

All those in favour please say Aye, those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow the conclusion of the Second Reading of the Bill.

The Speaker: Please continue Honourable Leader.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I thank the House for their indulgence.

A booklet has been prepared which is an overview of the new Personnel Management System and the Draft Public Service Bill. So, the Opposition cannot go out now and spread that we are passing one piece of legislation without giving thought to the other one. I know that he (Opposition Leader) has complained that the two should come together, but why should we wait on these pieces of legislation to give people a chance to air their grievances? I do not understand that. In a time when so many accusations are being made I believe that people should be given that opportunity as quickly as possible, rather than for them to be blabbering accusations at public meetings or on radio as the Opposition has recently done.

Madam Speaker, seeing that the Opposition are in good form this afternoon, let me ask them if they feel that the presence of this Ombudsman would make their case for scaremongering and rabble-rousing less effective? Is that the problem that they have? And are they feeling that with the presence of the Ombudsman the outlandish allegations made recently to throw doubt on the newly appointed Cabinet Secretary could not be effective? What do they want? Do they really know? I do not think so, Madam Speaker. You can hear by the clack over there that they do not.

Madam Speaker, the United Democratic Party is endeavouring to have a more open, transparent, accountable government. Madam Speaker, this is taking some time to do because we live in a territory that has always been real confidential, independent individually and one that believes that they can make allegations against anybody and that is the end of it; all they have to do is say it and that is it.

In the times ahead we are trying to build a new society – an all inclusive community. To do so, I think this kind of legislation is absolutely necessary. We believe that this Complaints Commissioner will work towards that end – to a more democratic country and better governance. I am happy that the Bill has been brought. Again I thank the Deputy Chief Secretary and the Attorney General and their staff.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition only mouthed what the Second Member for George Town had written for him and therefore I pay no attention to what was said other than what was cleared up. I thank the House very much for their indulgence.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Complaints Commissioner Bill, 2003, be given a Second Reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Complaints Commissioner Bill, 2003, given a second reading.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: I recognise the Leader of Government Business for the motion for adjournment.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, the Opposition sounds in a better mood; just now they were clacking and now they are crowing.

I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until tomorrow, Thursday, at 10 am.

The Speaker: I see Members are quite anxious to leave. The question is that the Honourable House be adjourned until 10 am tomorrow. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.37 pm the House stood adjourned until Thursday, 25 September 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
25 SEPTEMBER 2003
10.40 AM
Sixth Sitting

[Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable Leader of Opposition to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.43 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable Minister of Health, the Honourable Minister of Education and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, who are off Island on official business. I have also received notice from the Speaker, who will be attending later today.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Proposed Immigration Bill (white)

The Speaker: I acknowledge the Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I promised the country that I would lay upon the Table of this Honourable House a new draft Immigration Law for public information and input. Mr. Speaker, I will lay upon the Table of this House the draft of a Bill for a Law to Repeal the Immigration Law (2003 Revision); The Immigration (Amendment) Law No. 11 of 2003, the Immigration Regulations (2003 Revision); the Immigration Directions (2001 Revision); to Make Alternative Provision for Matters Pertaining to Immigration; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

Since November 2001, the Government has made certain amendments to the Law, including the regulation of the Immigration Appeals Tribunal, as recommended in Vision 2008.

We have also received, and carefully considered, over 100 pages of detailed reports from the Immigration Review Team since December 2001. This Review Team consists of the former chairman of the Immigration Board, Mrs. Sherri Boddin-Cowan; the Chairman of the Immigration Committee for Vision 2008, Mr. Patrick Schmid; the Chief Immigration Officer, Mr. Orrett Connor (who is now the Cabinet Secretary); and the Crown Council for the Government's Legal Department, Mrs. Sheena Frederick Westerbrough. It also included three Back Bench MLAs: Mr. Rolston Mr. Anglin, Mr. Gilbert McLean (who was replaced by Mr. Lyndon Martin), and Mr. Alden McLaughlin of the People's Progress Movement (PPM).

Mr. Speaker, the First Interim Report, dealing with an overall structure for immigration and work permits, was received in mid-December 2001. The Second Interim Report, dealing with Caymanian status and permanent residency, was received by Cabinet in September 2002.

This year, the Cabinet has instructed the Attorney General to refer both the First and Second Interim Reports to the legal draftsman, for drafting the final Third Report on Administration, Entry and Landing, which is currently being worked on. We have been criticised for dragging our feet in bringing new legislation to the House. This accusation is totally without merit. In less than two years, we have done more to ensure that the present situation is resolved, and a new Law brought into force, than any other Government.

Generally, Mr. Speaker, the new Law would cover and circumscribe the methods by which a person may become Caymanian.

Clause 21 defines "Caymanian as of right".

Clause 22 identifies the categories of persons who may apply to the Board for the grant of the right to be Caymanian, and the conditions that must exist as a prerequisite for eligibility to apply. It goes on to address the status of the illegitimate children of Caymanian fathers.

Clause 23 prescribes the considerations that the Board is required to take into account in processing an application for the right to be Caymanian.

Clause 24 identifies the procedure to be observed by the Board in processing applications for the grant of the right to be Caymanian.

Clause 25 requires a record of every application for, and every grant of, the right to be Caymanian to be recorded by the Secretary, and authorises the issue of a prescribed certificate to every successful applicant, by the Chairman or the Governor.

Clause 26 details the circumstances under which the grant of the right to be Caymanian may be lost.

Clause 27 provides for the revocation of the grant upon the holder being convicted of an offence of a certain gravity.

Clause 28 identifies the categories of persons who may apply to the Board for the grant of permanent residence.

Clause 29 deals with the conditions under which long-term residents—that is, persons residing in the Islands for at least eight years—may apply for the grant of permanent residence, and the matters that the Board must take into consideration in deciding the outcome of the application.

Clause 30 enables the spouse of a Caymanian to apply to the Board for a seven-year Residency and Employment Rights Certificate, and goes on to set out the rights and obligations attaching to the certificate.

Clause 31 makes provision for the dependants of the holder of a Residency and Employment Rights Certificate, who were declared on the original application for the certificate.

Clause 32 outlines the conditions under which a Residency and Employment Rights Certificate shall be lost.

Clause 33 makes provision for the grant by the Board of a Residential Certificate for Retirees to persons of mature age and independent means.

Clause 34 speaks to the circumstances under which a Residential Certificate for Retirees may be forfeited.

Clause 35 makes provision for the grant by the Board of a Residential Certificate for Entrepreneurs and Investors to persons of good character and business reputation who have invested a substantial sum of money in an employment-generating business in the Islands. It goes on to make provision for his spouse to be granted a Residential Holder's (Dependant's) Certificate, and for his child to be given the right to reside in the Islands during that child's minority, or beyond, when the child is enrolled in a tertiary education programme.

Clause 36 outlines the circumstances that would lead to the revocation of the Residential Certificate for Entrepreneurs and Investors.

Clause 37 sets out general provisions relating to the loss of permanent residency, including—

- (a) engagement in subversive political or racist activity;
- (b) fraudulent concealment of material facts in the original application;
- (c) conviction for an offence under the Immigration Law or other laws;
- (d) destitution;
- (e) serious mental or other medical unfitness;
- (f) involvement in prostitution or other undesirable pre-occupation.

Clause 38 lists the categories of persons entitled, under the Law, to exemption from the general rule that every expatriate employee must possess a work permit.

Clause 39 identifies the categories of persons who may be gainfully employed in the Islands.

Clause 40 sets out the procedure for applying for a work permit.

Clause 41 provides that sections 43, 46, 51, 53 and 54, which contain provisions mainly of an administrative nature, shall, subject to the necessary modifications, be construed as applying also to the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Immigration Board.

Clause 42 enumerates the matters that the Board shall take into account in its consideration of an application for a work permit, both in relation to an employer and an employee.

Clause 43 provides for the submission to the Board of a Business Staffing Plan by certain employers of work permit holders.

Clause 44 stipulates that in considering an application for a professional employee, the Board shall consult with the body or other entity charged with the responsibility for regulating the particular profession.

Clause 45 provides for special consideration to be given to certain employers.

Clause 46, among other things, empowers the Board-

- (a) to grant or refuse an application for a work permit;
- (b) to issue a work permit for up to five years to certain categories of employees; and
- (c) to modify the terms of a work permit or to revoke it altogether.

Clause 47 prohibits the promotion of a work permit holder to the position of partner of a firm without the prior approval of the Board.

Clause 48 prohibits the change of employer or occupation without the prior approval of the Board.

Clause 49 restricts the promotion or re-designation of a work permit holder by requiring the Board to ensure the existence of certain prerequisites.

Clause 50 introduces the concept of term limits into the Law, whereby a person's tenure as a work permit holder will generally be limited to seven years, but in exceptional circumstances, may be extended to nine years. Current work permit holders will fall into four categories, namely those who, at the commencement of this Law, would have held work permits for an aggregate period, inclusive of the term of the current work permit, of –

- (a) between five and six years;
- (b) between six and seven years;
- (c) more than seven but less than eight years;
- (d) between eight and 15 years; and
- (e) in excess of 15 years.

Different rules will apply to each category, and special consideration will be given to those persons whom the Board acknowledges to be "key" personnel.

Clause 51 authorises the Chief Immigration Officer, or the Chairman of the Immigration Board, to approve applications for the issue of temporary work permits to visitors for a period of up to 90 days.

Clause 52 allows certain business enterprises that employ expatriates on a temporary basis to make a single application in each calendar year for the issue of one or more business visitors' permits, each of which is for 14 days duration.

Clause 53 deals with work permit fees.

Clause 54 creates the offence of engaging in gainful occupation in contravention of Part V.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to thank all members of the Immigration Review Team for their hard work, especially Mrs. Sherri Boddan-Cowan, who is the Chairman. If it were not for the contributions and commitment of Mrs. Boddan-Cowan, we would not have the legislation before us today. She has a thorough understanding of the issues the country faces in regard to the matters covered by the Law, and it is due to her ability that a Law is finally being presented to tackle this issue.

I also wish to thank the legal draftsman for his perseverance on this matter, in getting it to the point where it is today and working with Mrs. Boddan-Cowan, as he has done over the last several weeks. I would also like to thank all of his staff in that Department.

I also wish to thank the new Cabinet Secretary and former Chief Immigration Officer, Mr. Connor, for his professionalism in tackling contentious issues, and for his extensive expertise of immigration matters.

Of course, we thank all Members who gave their time to this review process.

I also wish to thank members of the public for demonstrating a keen interest in this vital subject. The Government is presenting these documents now for public information and feedback. In November, the Government intends to debate and pass a new Immigration Bill. I encourage all members of the public to read the contents of this Bill themselves before forming any opinions. I encourage constructive input on its provisions, because as a country, we owe it to ourselves and to our children to ensure that we put forward the best possible Immigration Law—a Law that addresses long outstanding matters, that is based upon clear and fair policies, and that serves the people of these Islands well, both now and in the future.

As I said, Mr. Speaker, the Government intends to bring the Bill before the legislature in November 2003.

[Pause]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was consulting with other Members of Cabinet.

There is some tidying up to do on the Bill as yet, but we thought it necessary to bring it forward so that we could start getting input, in order to have the final Bill before the legislature in November, God willing.

Mr. Speaker, I do thank you for the time. I thank Members for their kind indulgence.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Elected Member for the district of North Side.

Short Questions—Standing Order 30(2)

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, would you allow me to ask the Honourable Leader of Government Business a question?

The Speaker: Yes, you may.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Would the Honourable Leader of Government Business say whether it is the intention of the Government to lay the Report of the Immigration Review Team (IRT) upon the Table?

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, when I took those few seconds to talk to Cabinet, we were considering that. When we bring the final Bill in November, we will lay the Reports upon the Table for public consumption.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, is it your intention to lay the Bill upon the Table?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Mr. Speaker, the Bill is now before the House.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Change in Orders of the Day Standing Order 14(4)

The Speaker: I have been given notice that the Government, in accordance with Standing Order 14(4), would like to change the order of business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As you and Members would note, the Complaints Commissioner Bill, 2003 is down for Committee Stage and all its reporting stages, along with the Cayman Islands Development Bank (Amendment) Bill, 2003. However, we wish to move forward immediately with item 5, which is the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) Bill 2003, and I therefore ask the House to agree in accordance with the relevant Standing Order.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, since it is in accordance with Standing Order 14(4), I would direct the Clerk to move on to item 5. Honourable Members, it is not a suspension. Standing Order 14(4) says: “Subject to paragraphs (1) and (2), Members of the Government may place notices of motions and orders of the day on the Order Paper in any order they please.”

Therefore, since the Government has requested a change, we are going in accordance with that.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READINGS

The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill for a Law to Amend the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision) to Replace the Reporting Authority With a Financial Intelligence Unit to be Called the Financial Reporting Authority; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Thank you.

[Pause]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: It is a matter of public knowledge that last year, and indeed, early this year, the Financial Reporting Unit (FRU) came under intense scrutiny as the result of the recently concluded Euro Bank trial. With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I would like to quote from a recent editorial in the Caymanian Compass, 22 September 2003.

The Speaker: You may.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: It says: “Since the FRU was discredited last year owing to revelations stemming from the Euro Bank trial these isles have been awaiting its replacement with a trustworthy statutory organisation to investigate allegations of financial misdeeds”.

Mr. Speaker, in the wake of the fallout from the Euro Bank case, there was a groundswell of requests that the FRU be restructured, to make it more transparent and accountable, among other things. The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) Bill, 2003 seeks to create a successor to the Financial Reporting Unit and to put it on a broader statutory footing, as opposed to the previous, largely administrative, footing. The successor is to be known as the Financial Reporting Authority (FRA).

Mr. Speaker, the reshaping of the FRA has benefited from extensive consultations internally and with the private sector, both at the conceptual stage and on the details of the Bill itself. I should pause here to observe that following these consultations, we were not able to agree on everything. By and large, however, there was a consensus that it needed to be restructured. Issues were raised by the private sector, many of which were taken on board in fashioning this Bill. Some other matters simply could not be reflected in the Bill.

The consultation to which I referred earlier took into account domestic requirements as well as relevant international standards and obligations. The Government considers it of vital importance to promote clarity, confidence and credibility in the new Financial Reporting Authority, both domestically and internationally. The legislation seeks to reflect this. Among other things, the Bill is aimed at making the Financial Reporting Authority more transparent and accountable. Indeed, we recognise that there have been some difficulties with the Unit that were, perhaps, worthy of highlighting. Accordingly, Mr.

Speaker, confronting these issues openly and frankly provides a clarity that facilitates solutions.

Mr. Speaker, the informing conceptual basis for the new FRA is that it is to be a Financial Intelligence Unit, as already defined in the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision). It will be responsible for receiving, analysing and disseminating disclosures of financial information concerning proceeds of criminal conduct, money laundering and, now, terrorist financing also.

Mr. Speaker, unlike the old FRU, it will therefore have no police officers and very limited investigative powers. The wide investigative powers previously exercisable by the FRU are to be transferred back to the Royal Cayman Islands Police, who will have dedicated officers for financial investigations within the RCIP Financial Crimes Unit. I am sure that the Commissioner of Police would not mind my saying that this police unit is, in essence, the commercial crime branch and the investigative role of the former FRU combined. It will be under the command and superintendency of a Commissioner of Police, as is contemplated by the Police Law.

Mr. Speaker, you will recall that in previous years, there have always been questions as to lines of reporting and accountability. The FRU was staffed primarily by police officers, and there was an issue as to who they should report to and whether reporting to the Attorney General would be ultra vires the Police Law and all the constitutional implications. The purpose of this bit of legislation is to address all those issues.

Mr. Speaker, clause 4 of the Bill establishes the Financial Reporting Authority as a Financial Intelligence Unit, and delineates its staffing structure. Staff members are appointed by the Governor in consultation with the Steering Group, about which I shall speak in more detail shortly. I pause here, Sir, to point out that an amendment to clause 4 has been proposed. It was circulated on 24 September. The purpose of that is to include in clause 4(b) the words "the Governor acting in his discretion".

Mr. Speaker, clause 5 of the Bill is perhaps the key clause. It defines the powers, functions, and duties of the FRA, and establishes in the Steering Group a high-level oversight body for this Authority. As previously noted, the core functions of the FRA are those of a Financial Intelligence Unit, and therefore, 21(A)(1) of clause 5 repeats the existing definition for such a unit, in specifying the functions of the FRA. Section 21(A)(2) of clause 5, (b) through to (g), goes on to specify the ancillary powers and duties of the FRA.

With your leave, Mr. Speaker, I would also mention that there is a proposed amendment to clause 5 of the Bill, which is also being circulated. This is on page 12, so that Members can bear it in mind when the debate is taking place. This amendment to clause 5 is a tidying-up exercise, if I might put it that way. As it currently stands, the Bill says: "21A (5) An aggrieved person may, upon notice to the Attorney-General, reply to a judge in chambers to discharge an order made by the Grand Court under subsection (3), but such order shall remain in full force and effect until the judge in chambers determines otherwise."

As presently worded, it is not quite clear what will happen if a judge in chambers does not order that the freezing order stay in place. The proposed amendment is to make it clear that if there is no judge's order to the contrary, then the freezing order will fall away after 21 days. That is the purpose of that amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I should like specifically to note two of the matters in clause 5. Firstly, the power in item (21)(2)(b) enables the FRA to freeze a person's bank account for not more than 21 days if there is reasonable cause to believe that the account relates to proceeds of criminal conduct, money laundering or the financing of terrorism. It is important to note that this power is exercisable only when permitted by order of the Grand Court under 21A(3). It is our view that this provides sufficient safeguards for all parties concerned to prevent against any possible abuse, by any one individual or entity, in immobilising a person's account. The power is intended to enable the FRA to respond to real-world situations in which there is a danger that suspect funds, as reported in a domestic Suspicious Activity Report or by an overseas Financial Intelligence Unit, may be dissipated before the relevant authorities have the chance to institute formal proceedings. It is, therefore, different from the restrained powers in section 10 of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision), which are exercisable only in the context of formal criminal proceedings.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, the power in item 21A(2)(c) enables the FRA to seek amplification or clarification of information disclosed to it in a Suspicious Activity Report, so that it can properly analyse such information to determine if it should be further disseminated in accordance with the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision), and be otherwise investigated. Mr. Speaker, this is of some importance. Quite understandably, one of private sector's concerns was that this particular provision was aimed at vesting in the FRA wide investigative powers, which properly belong to the police. They were quite uncomfortable with any such proposal.

In the legislation, we made it quite clear that the investigative powers are very restricted; they are only exercisable in instances in which the FRA requires additional information to clarify an existing Suspicious Activity Report. That makes good sense, because if they were only empowered to receive a Report, file it, or disclose it, we would not need an elaborate unit. We would only need a fax machine and a clerical officer, because it would simply be a post box. This particular provision is to safeguard against instances in which a Suspicious Activity Report is made to the Authority, and it turns out that there is nothing criminal about what has been disclosed.

In such cases, it will be filed away, or, if there are intelligence reasons why it should be disclosed further, it will be disclosed. However, it will not be automatically sent to the police, so that the names and information of persons who are innocent will not end up in police data. That is the purpose of that provision.

Mr. Speaker, following from that, the FRA will be able to exercise a necessary screening role in respect of Suspicious Activity Reports, ensuring that only those that reveal prima facie criminal conduct are disseminated.

Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned earlier, one of the main concerns that this amendment and consequential restructuring seeks to address is the need for accountability in the realm of disclosure of financial information. Accordingly, in view of the powers to be conferred on the Reporting Authority, it is imperative that the work of the Authority be subject to scrutiny by an objective body.

Clause 5 at 21B provides for the Governor in Cabinet to formally appoint the Anti Money-laundering Steering Group. This group would provide, among other things, a high-level accountability structure for the operations of the FRA. Given the administrative role of the Portfolio of Legal Affairs, which includes the Attorney General and the Chief Officer (who will be the Solicitor General), the Steering Group will have responsibility for the general oversight of the anti money-laundering policy of the Government, among other things. It will be responsible for determining the policy and the general administration of the business of the FRA. It will also oversee and inspect the work of the FRA, and monitor interaction and cooperation with overseas Financial Intelligence Units.

For completeness, I should point out that the Steering Group is comprised of His Excellency the Governor, the Attorney General, the Financial Secretary, the Commissioner of Police, the Collector of Customs, the Managing Director of the Monetary Authority and the Chief Officer in the Portfolio of Legal Affairs, who will be the Solicitor General.

Mr. Speaker, under 21C of clause 5, policy directions and matters of public interest may be given to the Authority by the Governor after consultation with the Steering Group. Indeed, 21D of clause 5 stipulates that information in the position of the FRA cannot be disseminated except in accordance with the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision) or an order of the Grand Court. Further, 21G of clause 5 makes it an offence for an employee or agent of the FRA to disclose FRA information otherwise than permitted by law or an order of the Grand Court.

Mr. Speaker, this is important, and I will repeat it for emphasis. Section 21G of clause 5 makes it an offence for any employee or agent of FRA to be disclose information otherwise than permitted by law or by an order of the Grand Court.

Mr. Speaker, I need not remind Honourable Members that there are certain things we cannot legislate. We cannot legislate for conduct; we can punish conduct. If the Law stipulates how the information ought to be disseminated, and it is done in contravention of the Law, the only recourse is to punish. In some instances in the past, there were problems with individuals, rather than problems in the system. What we need to do is to set the necessary underpinning in the legislation, and ensure that we have the right person in the right place. By doing so we can mitigate problems, if not necessarily prevent them.

Mr. Speaker, 21F of clause 5 protects a person who discloses information to the FRA concerning the proceeds of criminal conduct, money laundering or the financing of terrorism from being treated as having breached any restriction in law. It also protects such persons from civil liability.

Similarly, 21E of clause 5 provides that the FRA will not be liable in damages for anything done in the discharge of its function under the Law, unless it can be shown that the act was done in bad faith or it constituted wilful misconduct or negligence.

Mr. Speaker, clauses 6 and 7 of the Bill take the opportunity to clarify the onward disclosure regime in sections 22 and 23 of the new Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law. There is also a proposed Committee Stage amendment to deal with this issue. Neither the Law nor the Bill itself, as currently drafted, makes it quite clear—at least to some people—under what circumstances the consent of the Attorney General is required for onward disclosure. The private sector had some concerns about the wording of this. I think they describe it as internally inconsistent and confusing. Therefore, it was considered necessary to tidy up the wording to make it clear that whenever a Suspicious Activity Report discloses criminal conduct locally, the FRA has a duty, and the authority, to disclose that information to the police. In instances when a disclosure is going to be made to an agency abroad, the Reporting Authority requires the consent of the Attorney General before it can disclose that information onward. The practice now is that consent has to be obtained in writing before it can be done. That is the purpose of the proposed amendment to sections 22 and 23.

As I said, the clarification in clauses 6 and 7, as it relates to sections 22 and 23 of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision), provides that in the case of prima facie evidence of criminal conduct or suspected criminal conduct, the FRA is required to disclose such conduct directly to the Cayman Islands law enforcement authorities. In the case of information relating to criminal conduct received by the FRA, the FRA has the discretion as to whether to disclose it to the Monetary Authority or to such other Cayman entities as may be designated by the Steering Group. This is a new provision intended to facilitate the effective regulation of the financial services industry, which is reflected by the addition of that purpose in part 4. I repeat: In the case of information relating to criminal conduct received by the FRA, the FRA has the discretion as to whether or not to disclose it to an overseas financial intelligence unit, which is the current position. However, it is important to remind Honourable Members that if we look at (6) of section 22, this means that the FRA can only do so after written consent from the Attorney General.

Mr. Speaker, I have attempted to provide a summary of the main purposes and provisions of the amendment Bill. I am of the opinion that it puts the new FRA on a strong, clear and principled statutory footing, as is necessary for this critical component of Cayman's anti money-laundering system. I think that we have managed to put together a sensible piece of legislation. The restructuring of the Unit will be achieved in a manner that reflects the Cayman Islands continued commitment in the fight against money laundering in all forms. The restructuring will enable the Islands to maintain that delicate but important balance between honouring our international obligations as they relate to combating money laundering and terrorism (including the financing of terrorists) and allowing our financial industry to be regulated along recognised international standards, while remaining competitive. Indeed, the restructured FRA will allow for the smooth exchange of financial intelligence information, and will foster better communications within the Egmont Group of Financial Intelligence Units.

Before I take my seat, Sir, I would like to make one observation: the Caymanian Compass editorial dated 22 September, to which I referred earlier, inadvertently pointed out that there was no functioning FRU. It spoke about the proposal to restructure the FRA, and mentioned the recent case that was concluded in the court. It went on to say this happened in the absence of a functioning FRU. This was sheer inadvertence. The fact is that the FRU has been functioning. We have had a number of directors since February. In the first instance, Mr. Chris Rowland was an acting director, who was subsequently replaced by Detective Chief Inspector Raymond Christian. More recently, there was a press release from His Excellency the Governor stating that Mr. David Thursfield has been appointed Director of the FRA. In fact, there has always been a Financial Reporting Authority.

Mr. Speaker, I would commend the Bill to this Honourable House for support during its passage. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member from the district of George Town.

[Pause]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer my contribution to the debate on this very important Bill entitled, A Bill for a Law to Amend the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision), to Replace the Reporting Authority with a Financial Intelligence Unit to be Called the Financial Reporting Authority; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes. I think there is probably an error in that title, because as far as I am aware, we do not have a Financial Reporting Authority as yet. I believe it is called the Financial Reporting Unit in the current legislation.

The Honourable Second Official Member asked whether I had said that supported this Bill. I did not say that. I said that I rose to offer my contribution. I wish to make that very clear from the outset.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill comes before this Honourable House in the wake of the revelations that resulted in the collapse of the Eurobank trial, and the tremendous controversy and acrimony that resulted from that. I think it is important that we all understand what the objective of this legislation should be, because the Eurobank trial, and its aftermath, has done real damage to this country's reputation, particularly the reputation of the financial industry and the integrity of the prosecution system. In my view, any proposed legislation that falls short of addressing the concerns of both the local industry and the international players simply will not do.

In my respectful submission, the objective of this legislation should be, firstly, to seek to restore public confidence in the institution and the operations of a reporting authority established by law. Mr. Speaker, the requirement of an effective, fair and robust anti money-laundering regime is of critical importance to a jurisdiction such as the Cayman Islands, which relies heavily on its financial industry as a principal generator of revenue, not only for Government, but also for the economy as a whole. Therefore, I acknowledge up front the necessity of a properly functioning reporting authority. However, it must be one in which the entire world can have confidence. What transpired with the Eurobank matter destroyed public confidence in the Reporting Authority that existed up until that point. Until now, I do not believe that much has been done by the Government to seek to restore confidence in the Reporting Authority.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, it is necessary to create a statutory foundation for the operations of an efficient Financial Reporting Authority, as opposed to the investigative arm. The function of investigation should be properly and solely vested in the Royal Cayman Islands Police. The lack of that separation of functions played an important part in the disaster known as the Eurobank trial.

Thirdly, the legislation should provide for the accountability of the Reporting Authority and transparency both in its methods and its control structure. I submit that the amendments being proposed today fall significantly short of the mark in all three of those instances.

In the wake of the Eurobank fiasco, the Government was extremely heavy on rhetoric, but distressingly light on action to prevent a recurrence of those events. I am distressed that eight months after those events, the Government would be prepared to come to this Legislative Assembly and promote a Bill that not only fails to address the fundamental concerns about the structure, organisation and accountability of the Financial Reporting Authority, but does more. It invests this Authority with increased powers, and further, it gives even more control over the functions of that Authority to His Excellency the Governor, who is a representative of Her Majesty's Government—almost to the complete exclusion of the elected arm of Government. I will go into the specifics in due course, but that is the fundamental concern that underpins the submissions I am going to make on behalf of the parliamentary Opposition.

Mr. Speaker, that concern screams at all of us, but in particular, it screams at the Government. For over a year, the parliamentary Opposition asked question upon question to the then Honourable Second Official Member, Mr. David Ballantyne, about what appeared to us to be major organisational problems with the Financial Reporting Unit—what appeared to us to be turf wars between himself and the then Commissioner of Police, Mr. David Thursfield, over who was in charge of this unit, and to whom they reported. We asked so many questions, and created so much pressure, that eventually the Governor caused a certain protocol to be drawn up, which would set out with some clarity what the lines of reporting were. We actually understood what the lines of authority were, but our concerns were heightened by the fact that the Director of the FRU—as it was known then and is still known at this particular moment—reported to the Attorney General, who then ultimately reported to the Governor.

The concerns of the parliamentary Opposition about the structure of this have been known for a long time. As events transpired, those concerns were well placed.

We get to late December of last year, and early January this year, when the bombshell was dropped, and it was revealed that Mr. Brian Gibbs, the then Director of the FRU, had in fact been working as an agent of MI6 in these Islands since 1991. There were findings of fact that critical evidence had been redacted, to use a fancy word. I will not say “tampered with”. Information had been obtained by way of telephone tapping and by the use of wonderful agents, such as “Warlock”. It read like some sort of John Grisham novel.

To add insult to injury, in fact, most if not all of this was known to the Attorney General, who is appointed under the Constitution by the Governor—another point of major aggravation to the parliamentary Opposition.

When these revelations are made, when the Government, and the whole country, is calling for the resignation of the then Attorney General, and calling for the head of Bryan Gibbs, Mr. Gibbs gets on a plane and flies away—with the approval of the Governor, it must be presumed. Then, to really make it clear how much regard Her Majesty's Government has for the Cayman Islands and its institutions, the Governor issues a statement. With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I would like to read the statement, dated 29 January 2003. I quote: “The functions of the Financial Reporting Unit (FRU), in monitoring compliance with Cayman's financial legislation and in investigating suspicions of money-laundering and other financial crime, are important for the proper regulation of the Cayman Islands' financial sector.”

I could not agree with him more.

“There are, however, implications arising out of the ending of the Euro Bank trial that need to be addressed. There is already a commitment to bring legislation to establish the position of the FRU as a statutory body. I believe nevertheless that it is now right to look again at Cayman's governmental machinery in this area, including the FRU, and I shall discuss this with interested parties in the near future.”

So far, he has done all right.

“The Director of the FRU, Mr. Brian Gibbs, is no longer in the Cayman Islands because of a potential risk to his personal safety. This has caused considerable distress to him and his family. He knows that it is impossible for him to return in the circumstances and continue in his job. He is conscious that the effective functioning of the FRU is a vital underpinning to the Cayman Islands' reputation for financial probity.”

He is conscious of that?

“Mr. Gibbs has therefore tendered his resignation with effect from 27 January 2003 and I have accepted it. I have appointed Mr. Chris Rowland to serve as acting head of the reporting authority, the composition of which now needs to be redefined to ensure clear lines of responsibility, pending the outcome of my discussions about the future exercise of the FRU's functions.”

Then, of course, we move to the paragraph that seeks to sanctify Mr. Gibbs.

“I appreciate the spirit of public service that has prompted Mr. Gibbs' resignation. I make no comment about the circumstances that led to the ending of the trial or Mr. Gibbs' involvement in this. He has had a long and honourable career in public service in the UK and in the Cayman Islands.”

This is the same man who has been operating in my country as an agent of MI6.

“He has had a long and honourable career in the public service . . .”

Perhaps he has, in the UK, but in the Cayman Islands? In other places, Mr. Speaker, that would be treason.

“The FRU has done much to enhance the reputation of the Cayman Islands' regulatory mechanisms by making clear through his work the commitment of these islands to the fight against serious international crime, financial fraud and the illegal trade in narcotics. Money laundering and other serious financial crime could threaten the livelihood of people in these Islands."

I could not agree more.

"Mr. Gibbs and his colleagues in the FRU have worked tirelessly against this threat. For this, they deserve the Cayman Islands' appreciation."

Concocting evidence and presenting it to the Grand Court of the Cayman Islands as though it were real—for this "they deserve the Cayman Islands' appreciation".

"British Government Ministers have lent their support to the decisions of the Cayman Islands' authorities to bring the Euro Bank case to trial [Now we are getting to the real crux of the matter] and have determined that the UK government authorities concerned acted properly. Notwithstanding the outcome, the trial has showed a determination on the part of the Cayman authorities with support from the UK to pursue charges of money-laundering and other financial crime robustly. We should continue to be seen to do so".

Mr. Speaker, I did not read that simply for drama. I read it so that we will understand what it is we are doing when we agree to continue to vest all decision-making, policy-making and reporting in the hands of His Excellency the Governor, as Her Majesty's Government representative in these Islands. When Her Majesty's Government representative, armed with the judgment of the Chief Justice and knowledge of the conduct of Mr. Bryan Gibbs and the former Honourable Attorney General, Mr. David Balantyne, can issue a statement to the people of this country, which is carried in the national press, lauding the achievements and long service of Mr. Gibbs and confirming that Her Majesty's Government is satisfied that its authorities, here and in the UK, acted properly in connection with the Eurobank case, then we should come to understand what it is we are really doing.

The Trojan horse that we have called the FRU is now being improved and enhanced with new bells and whistles and with more authority and power to do the dirty on the financial industry of these Islands. Mr. Speaker, we cannot view this other than in the context of the way the United Kingdom Government has treated, and continues to treat, this jurisdiction in relation to matters that affect our financial industry. Most of what the United Kingdom Government has done, and continues to do, under the guise of ensuring that the industry is reputable and in compliance with generally accepted international standards, is an effort aimed at undermining our competitiveness in the international world of finance, in which they are a major player.

Mr. Speaker, I am fully cognisant that if the United Kingdom Government decides to ride roughshod over us, then, we mere mortals here, who operate under the delegated legislation as local representatives, can do nothing but what I am doing now:

scream and shout about. However, I will not be party to the wrong that is being perpetrated on these Islands and its people, and neither will any member of the parliamentary Opposition. If they want to impose their imperial will on us, let them do so.

The Leader of Government Business indicated just two days ago that His Excellency has said that he is not going to assent to the Terrorism Bill, 2003, which was before this Honourable House some months ago, and which would again give to Her Majesty's Government representative the ability to tap the phones of the unsuspecting people of this country. We all stood up the last time and said, "No, if you want to do it, do it. However, you will not do it with our agreement and compliance".

Mr. Speaker, this is even more far-reaching, and the fact that that announcement comes just prior to this I regard it as both ominous and sinister. It is all part and package of the United Kingdom's intention to ensure that they exercise as much control over what happens in the financial industry of these Islands as they possibly can.

I must say this: I have a lot of regard for those two individuals. Our concern is only barely mitigated by the fact that we have two individuals for whom the parliamentary Opposition has tremendous respect in those two critical roles: as Attorney General and as Director of the Financial Reporting Authority. I say "barely mitigated" because one cannot fashion legislation based on the individuals who are currently in those positions. None of us has any control over how long we live, let alone anything else.

Therefore, I want everyone to understand that what I am saying has nothing to do with my trust or confidence in the abilities of the current holders of the posts of Attorney General and Director of the Financial Reporting Authority. However, they are appointed by His Excellency the Governor, and they hold office at his pleasure. They have their jobs to do, even if they are unhappy with what is being proposed. I recognise that as well.

Mr. Speaker, with that brief opening, I am now going to turn to the legislation itself, to examine the provisions which give rise to those concerns.

How much time do I have left, Sir?

[Pause]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, Members are indicating that they might want a break.

The Speaker: I am at the will of the House. If that is all right, we will take a 15-minute break at this time.

Proceedings suspended at 12.02 pm

Proceedings resumed at 12.40 pm

The Speaker: I recognise the Second Elected Member for the district of George Town, continuing his debate.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we took the short suspension, I had just concluded what I termed my opening. I think that is something of a carryover from a former life.

I was about to go into the individual sections of the Law to point out what I term the defects or omissions that give rise to the Opposition's concern about the fundamental premise on which the draft legislation proceeds. It gives almost complete authority for the ultimate decision-making of the authority to the Governor.

At the outset, Mr. Speaker, I referred to the objectives that this amending legislation should seek to achieve in the aftermath of Eurobank. Principal among these is the necessity to restore public confidence in the institution and operations of the Authority, to provide for the accountability of the Reporting Authority and to ensure transparency in its methods and its control structure.

In order to restore public confidence, we must show that the lessons from the failure of the Eurobank trial have been learned, and that the structure and organisation of the Financial Reporting Authority will not allow a recurrence of those circumstances.

Also, Mr. Speaker, it is important that there be no perception that those involved in the original decision-making are the same people who are invested with the responsibility to review the process, without any representation independent of those particular authorities. In its current form, the Bill falls significantly short of those objectives.

I will seek to outline the structure, Mr. Speaker. The amendment proposes by an amendment to section 21 of the Principal Law that: "(2)

There is established a financial intelligence unit to be called the Financial Reporting Authority, consisting of the following persons –

- (a) the Director of the Financial Reporting Authority;
- (b) an attorney-at-law;
- (c) an accountant; and
- (d) such other persons, having suitable qualifications and experience, as may be necessary to provide services to the Reporting Authority."

That is the statutory creation of the Authority, and some detail as to the persons who will staff the Authority.

The persons specified in paragraphs (a), (b), (c) and (d) of subsection (2), which I just read, shall be appointed by the Governor, acting in his discretion after consultation with the Steering Group, for such period of time and subject to such terms and conditions as he may see fit.

The Law establishes the authority, sets out what the principal offices are, and then invests the Governor with absolute authority to make the appointments, albeit in consultation with the Steering Group. Ultimately, however, it is his decision, so the Steering Group can say what they want, and make as many submissions as they want, but he can choose to ignore them and place in these positions any person or persons whom he deems fit. Therefore, the power is all his. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that that is fundamentally wrong. I am not sure what gives the Governor any unique qualifications to determine who is best suited for those respective offices. I submit that we would be far further ahead if we had a Financial Reporting Authority Board that made those appointments.

It would give to those in the industry, locally and elsewhere, a certain confidence that persons were not being appointed based more on their allegiance to Her Majesty's Government than particular skills, abilities and qualifications. That is all part of what we, on this side, say is necessary to restore public confidence in the Financial Reporting Authority.

I referred to the Steering Group, which is mentioned in section 21B (1) of the amending Bill. This provides that: "The Governor in Council shall appoint a body to be called the Anti Money-laundering Steering Group."

If we do not read any further than that, Mr. Speaker, it does not sound too bad. You might say, "The Governor in Council (Cabinet), as the elected arm of Government, is going to have some input and influence over this". However, when you read on, you come to realise that this is simply a formality, or a rubber stamping exercise. It says: "21B (1) The Governor in Council shall appoint a body to be called the Anti money-laundering Steering Group consisting of –

- (a) the Governor acting in his discretion who shall be the Chairman;
- (b) the Attorney-General, who shall be a deputy chairman;
- (c) the Financial Secretary, who shall be a deputy chairman;
- (d) the Commissioner of Police;
- (e) the Collector of Customs;
- (f) the Managing Director of the Monetary Authority; and
- (g) the Solicitor General, if we include the proposed Committee Stage amendment."

Therefore, all we have is a rubber-stamping exercise carried out by Cabinet. They have to actually sign off on these appointments, but the Law has already specified who these persons on the Anti money-laundering Steering Group are going to be.

Mr. Speaker, all of those persons will ultimately owe the continued enjoyment of their offices to His Excellency the Governor. Arguably, the Managing Director of the Monetary Authority may be an exception, since that is a statutory authority. However, the statutory authorities are ultimately subject to Government control and influence. We can stand on technicalities if we wish, and I will make that concession, if it prevents an argument about this. However, the reality is that all of these persons on the Anti money-laundering Steering Group are public servants, or quasi-public servants. If they do not toe the line, we all know what the ultimate result will be.

If we are truly going to try to change the image, if not the reality, of the Financial Reporting Authority, and if we are truly going to try to create an organisational structure that those on the outside can regard as independent, fair, unbiased—not overly subject to, or influenced by, the policy of Her Majesty's Government, pursued in the interests of the United Kingdom and contrary to the interests of the Cayman Islands—then we are going to have to appoint independent persons to that Anti Money-laundering Steering Group.

Many of the people who are involved in the financial industry in these Islands have significantly more experience in these matters than the persons who are holders of the offices set out in this subsection. Why should some of them not be appointed to this Anti money-laundering Steering Group as well? Why is it a closed circle involving only public officers or quasi-public officers, who are ultimately responsible to His Excellency the Governor in any event?

I am satisfied, Mr. Speaker, that that is carefully thought through. There is no way Her Majesty's Government wants a situation in which there are persons there from under whose feet they cannot ultimately pull the rug, if they do not toe the policy line of Her Majesty's Government.

This also brings into stark relief a point I made when I resumed a few minutes ago. It is important that those who are carrying out various functions under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law are not placed in a position where they are required to review what they have done or not done.

When the Attorney General and/or the Director of the Financial Reporting Unit does or does not do something, which is either wrong or a grave omission, who is going to scrutinise what they have done—this Anti money-laundering Steering Group, of which they are members? Let us use the recent example. Do we really think that in that scenario, Mr. Gibbs, as Director, and Mr. Ballantyne, as Attorney General, would be asked to sit in judgment on the findings of fact in relation to the Eurobank trial? That is the scenario we are setting up here. The jury is made up of defendants, or potential defendants. If this is going to have any credibility whatsoever, and if it is not going to place the Cayman Islands, its anti money-laundering measures, and ultimately, the authority in more disrepute than we currently bear, this Anti Money-Laundering Steering Group has got to have independent persons on it—persons who have no vested interest in protecting their jobs and covering their mistakes.

What we have set up here is a very neat and cozy arrangement that permits wonderful protection from the public eye and from public scrutiny to measures that are taken by the various holders of these offices, which are all part and parcel of, and necessary to, the proper functioning of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law. It even protected the Commissioner of Police. He is in there too, as is the Financial Secretary. It is a nice, cozy little arrangement, but it is not what is necessary. It does absolutely nothing to bolster public confidence in this Financial Reporting Authority that is to be newly constituted.

I come now to probably the most fundamental of all objections to this. It seems almost unimaginable to me that at this point in Cayman's development, when we are supposedly the fifth largest financial centre in the world, with some of the most sophisticated regimes to prevent money-laundering and international crime generally, and when we know that that industry, which is so critical to our very existence, is under international threat, and in particular, threat from Her Majesty's Government, the Government is prepared to come down to this Legislative Assembly and propose a Bill that excludes the elected arm of Government from any involvement in the creation of policy as far as the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, and in particular, the Financial Reporting Authority are concerned. They are excluded at a point when, on the basis of the delegated authority under the Constitution, we have an elected arm of Government which has responsibility for virtually everything else, and is held accountable.

When I stand up here and beat the Minister of Education because he is not dealing with the Education system the way I think he should, he has to take responsibility for it. It is the same in relation to any other aspect. When I give the Leader of Government Business so much grief over the immigration issue, he has to stand up and take responsibility for it, and he does.

Mr. Speaker, how can we be at a stage where the elected arm of Government is entirely excluded from the policy-making process in something so fundamentally important to our very existence—that is, the continued viability of the financial industry and matters that affect it?

I know one thing: If I were sitting over there, and the Governor or anybody else sought to have me bring this down here, they would have my resignation.

An Honourable Member: That is not a hint, sir.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, I am not talking about the Honourable Attorney General; I know the constraints under which he operates. I am talking about the elected arm of Government.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the reality is this: The policy that drives this legislation, and the policy under which the Financial Reporting Authority is going to operate, is a policy determined by Her Majesty's Government to the exclusion of the elected Government of the Cayman Islands. I must tell you, Mr. Speaker, that this absolutely boggles my mind. I am going to listen to what the elected arm of Government is going to say about why they felt compelled to bring this legislation down here in this form.

Mr. Speaker, section 21C of the amending Bill says that the Governor in his discretion may, after consultation with the Steering Group—who are all his boys, in any event—can disregard their sage advice, because it is in his discretion. Ultimately, therefore, Governor makes the policy, and we all know who the Governor works for.

“The Governor in his discretion may, after consultation with the Steering Group, give to the Reporting Authority directions of a general character as to the policy to be followed in the exercise and performance of its functions in relation to matters appearing to the Governor to concern the public interest.”

“Public interest” is a wonderful, wonderful phrase, which the UK Government loves to employ. Who determines what the public interest is? Is it the public interest of the Cayman Islands, the public interest of the United Kingdom, or the public interest of the European Union?

It goes on: “. . . and the Reporting Authority shall give general effect to any such directions.”

This is a very carefully thought out approach, giving the Governor ultimate power to decide everything from the creation of policy to the appointments of the staff and the members of the Anti money-laundering Steering Group—complete, total and unfettered control. Given the history of the Eurobank fiasco—and it is not even history, it was only yesterday—and given the United Kingdom's acknowledged responsibility for what transpired there, this legislation ought to repose confidence in the Financial Reporting Authority, for the discerning investor and player in the financial industry.

It gets worse. Under the proposed legislation, this Authority has even more power than the Financial Reporting Unit had previously, under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision). I am going to come to that in a moment. Now, therefore, we have put it on a statutory basis, of which we all approve. That is what needed to be done. It sets out clear lines of responsibility—fine, but look where the responsibility rests. Ultimately, it rests with Her Majesty's Government. If I were in another environment, I would put it differently, but it scares the bejesus out of me.

In our view, one of the objectives that this legislation ought to have met is the separation of the investigative and reporting functions. I acknowledge that in that respect, the draft before us is considerably better than some of the earlier ones, which I had sight of. However, there is still some confusion over what the true function of the Financial Reporting Authority ought to be. I am of the view that its function ought to be limited to taking reports, and that other, more draconian powers, such as the ability to freeze accounts, ought to remain vested in the investigative arm. I note that there is an attempt to mitigate that concern by means of a provision in the draft legislation. Section 21A (3) says: “(3) The power conferred by subsection 2(b) is not exercisable unless the Grand Court, upon application by the Reporting Authority, makes an order under this subsection permitting the exercise of that power.”

Mr. Speaker, that provision is mere window-dressing, for reasons I will seek to articulate shortly. I am trying not to read the irrelevant bits of section 21A (2)(b), if you will bear with me, Mr. Speaker. In my view, the offensive provision is that the Reporting Authority: “. . . may, subject to subsection 3 —

- ii. where information is disclosed to the Reporting Authority under section 22(3) or 23(5); or
- iii. upon receipt of a request from an overseas financial intelligence unit,

“order any person to refrain from dealing with a person's bank account for a period not exceeding twenty-one days if satisfied that there is reasonable cause to believe that the information or the request, as the case may be, relates to proceeds of criminal conduct, suspected proceeds of criminal conduct, money laundering, suspected money laundering, terrorism or the financing of terrorism.”

In my respectful submission, Mr. Speaker, if the Reporting Authority receives information that it believes warrants suspicion that there are, or may be, the proceeds of criminal conduct in an account, that information should be passed to the appropriate investigative authority, who can then act under the already existing provisions in the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision). If they have sufficient basis, the court will make the appropriate restraining order or grant the appropriate injunction. It should not be a function of the Reporting Authority to exercise this particular power. That should be sufficient objection, on principle, to warrant the deletion of that particular subsection.

I am sure it will be said that this power is only exercisable with the sanction of the court, and therefore, one does not have to worry too much about due process, or about persons not having an opportunity to make representations, and all of those things. Mr. Speaker, the court is going to have limited information on any of these applications, and since the applications are bound to be made ex parte, one can hardly think of a circumstance in which the court would not be prepared to sanction the exercise of such a power.

When we are talking about dealing with information from an overseas financial intelligence unit, it is difficult to perceive how the court will be able to judge the credibility of whatever is submitted. We are talking about an overseas financial intelligence unit, which in turn, is probably simply acting on the basis of information that it has received, which is also untested.

If this section is going to work at all, the standards of establishing, at the least, a sort of prima facie basis for the making of the order will have to be very low. If the threshold is even what we consider to be the reasonable standard, the exercise of this power would not be sanctioned, in most instances.

The practical result is that if this is going to work at all, the court is going to have to rely heavily on whatever submissions are made. Inevitably, in my submission, the court is going to do little more than actually rubber-stamp any request for the exercise of this power, which I believe to be fundamentally wrong. I think that section ought to be removed. Of course, my concern about that is bolstered by the fact that Her Majesty's Government is in control of this whole operation from start to finish.

I have some other concerns, Mr. Speaker, about this piece of legislation. If I can simply summarise that last submission in a few lines, the function of the Financial Reporting Authority ought to be to receive reports, to analyse them, and to disseminate them. Giving them the additional power to freeze accounts, as drafted in the Bill, is unnecessary, unsuited to their expressed function and purpose, and draconian in nature.

There is also a provision that gives me some alarm, particularly considered against the backdrop of the Eurobank trial and the constitution of the Anti money-laundering Steering Group, which is supposed to be the group responsible for the oversight of the policy of the Financial Reporting Authority. That provision provides for the immunity of the Reporting Authority. That section needs to go, Mr. Speaker. Section 21E says: "Neither the Reporting Authority, the Director, nor any officer, employee or agent of the Reporting Authority, shall be liable in damages for anything done or omitted in the discharge or purported discharge of their respective functions under this Law unless it is shown that the act or omission was in bad faith or constituted willful misconduct or negligence."

You get immunity not only if you discharge your function, but if you purport to discharge it

Those are nice-sounding words, but laurels were heaped upon Mr. Gibbs and Mr. Ballantyne, even in the House of Commons. Mr. Ballantyne was quick to indicate that in debates, the House of Commons had determined that what he did was in the best interests of the Cayman Islands, and in pursuit of the mandate he had from Her Majesty's Government.

If the conduct of Mr. Ballantyne and Mr. Gibbs in the Eurobank trial—which is not speculation, but the result of findings of fact by the Chief Justice of these Islands—did not constitute bad faith, willful misconduct or negligence, if those findings of fact were met by Her Majesty's Government with a condemnation of what had gone on here as far as outrage from our people, and if we cannot look to Her Majesty's Government to deal fairly and objectively with these things when instances such as the Eurobank trial occur, then we should delete provisions in the legislation that give immunity against suit to the Reporting Authority. Wrongs should have a redress, whether you are the Attorney General or the Director of the Financial Reporting Unit. Whether you are Caymanian or British, wrongs should have a redress. Immunity should not be conferred simply because what you are doing is in the exercise of a mandate or dictate from Her Majesty's Government.

That brings me, Mr. Speaker, to another point. This is an omission from this Law. Before I move on, I should say that no similar provision appears in the Police Law (1995 Revision). If police officers conduct themselves in a way that is improper, they are liable in damages. Their Law provides them with no similar immunity. Many disciplinary procedures are set out in the Police Law (1995 Revision). There is a process by which any inappropriate behaviour or misconduct on the part of any police officer is investigated. If a sufficient basis is found for a charge, a charge is laid, heard and determined.

Why should the Reporting Authority be exempt from any such process? We go an additional step, and confer immunity. It is wrong, wrong, wrong. It is all part of a plot to ensure that those who act in furtherance of this legislation, and who are bound by the dictate of Her Majesty's Government, are protected and insulated from any form of redress by those whom they hurt, damage, and, in some cases, destroy.

That brings me conveniently to this point, Mr. Speaker: There is a complete absence, in this legislation, of any form of complaints procedure. In my respectful view, there must be a provision in the Law by which persons who are affected by the actions of the Reporting Authority may make a complaint, have that complaint investigated, and where appropriate, obtain redress. In the past, concerns about the former FRU included the lack of transparency, and the lack of clear lines of responsibility and accountability. In the financial community, it was felt that by and large, the FRU was a law unto itself. The only persons who knew what was really going on were the Governor, the Attorney General and the Director of the FRU. We did not know about MI6 at that point.

Mr. Speaker, the arrangement that is proposed here has addressed some of those concerns. There is now a clear line of responsibility; you know who is where, and what their functions are. However, it does not address the most fundamental of them, which is that Her Majesty's Government is still firmly and solely in charge.

Secondly, while it creates the appearance of a consultative body, the body is made up entirely of public officers or quasi-public officers. Therefore, there is no transparency. There is no basis upon which one can challenge any of the decisions are taken. There is no procedure whereby any complaints can be heard and determined. There is no process for a review, by any independent authority or agency, of matters that have arisen as a result of the conduct of any of the members of Anti money-laundering Steering Group, all of whom, or most of whom, have critical roles to play in the discharge of functions under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision).

Mr. Speaker, if I might have one moment to check my notes to make sure I have covered them, I am almost at the end.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for your indulgence. The parliamentary Opposition supports the concept of the FRU becoming a statutory authority with clearly stated objectives, authority and functions. We recognise that the functions performed by a properly operated FRA (as it is going to be called) are of critical importance to the reputation of these Islands as a well-regulated jurisdiction that provides world class financial services to major international players.

Unless that happens—and happens quickly, in order that the FRU can shed its present disreputable image—we are in trouble. The proposed legislation does not even begin to address the fundamental problems about a lack of confidence in the integrity, independence and fairness of the Financial Reporting Authority. What it does is to confirm, and give legislative sanction to, a situation whereby Her Majesty's Government creates the policy, appoints the officers and determines exactly what the Financial Reporting Authority does or does not do. That, Mr. Speaker, does not inspire confidence.

Mr. Speaker, we need to take this particular piece of legislation that has come here, and burn it. The Financial Reporting Authority needs to be restructured in a way that makes it accountable to the Government of the Cayman Islands and not an agency of Her Majesty's Government, subject to the UK's control and influence. That is what needs to happen.

In this day and age, and in light of all that has transpired, we cannot cut the elected arm of Government entirely out of the loop in determining policy matters in relation to something as important as our financial industry. That is what this does.

Mr. Speaker, I am not dreaming up some novel arrangement. What I am urging is an arrangement similar to that of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority, in which the FRA would have operational independence in the same way that the Monetary Authority does now, but would be ultimately accountable to Cabinet for the performance of its duties, and would look to Cabinet for the creation of policy, and for the direction it should take. That is not at all novel. We had a battle to get the Monetary Authority to that stage, because the UK did not want that either. However, we have gotten it there, and thus far, I have not heard many complaints. That is the way the FRA needs to function. Anything less than that, Mr. Speaker, and the FRA, by whatever name, is going to continue to be viewed as an extension of MI6, which plays by its own set of rules and has no regard for the laws and judicial authorities in these Islands. If we permit the current perception of this important agency to continue, and if we give it legislative sanction—which is what is being proposed—we are going to further seriously undermine the continued viability of our financial industry.

I urge the Government to do what they did with the Terrorism Bill, 2003, which sought legislative sanction to eavesdrop on the telephone conversations of the people of this country. I urge them to do what they did with that: to stand with the Opposition against this kind of imperialistic behavior and attitude on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

We must resist, with every sinew, this sort of neocolonialism. That is what this is. I am calling on the Government to do as I said, and to do as they have done before. They have shown that they have the courage to stand with the Opposition on a point of principle. If Her Majesty's Government insists on imposing this sort of draconian legislation upon us, let them do it, but let us sleep with the clear conscience that we have stood against this sort of wrong.

We have joined hands across the divide that usually obtains in this Honourable House on the Terrorism Bill, 2003. We stretch forth our hands to the Government again today, and say, that we will stand with you. There is solidarity on this one. We cannot, and we will not, give legislative sanction to this type of imperialistic legislation.

We will not be party to improving the Trojan horse, which Her Majesty's Government has already had in place to allow them to infiltrate our financial industry, causing it, and our very existence, further damage. I am going to sit down now, and wait with bated breath to hear what the Government has to say. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Clarification on Statement made in regard to the Proposed Immigration Bill (white)

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Member. I have been given notice, and I recognise the Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What the Government has to say is out of an abundance of caution. Out of abundance of caution, I should say, in regard to the Immigration Bill I laid upon the Table this morning, that the effective date of the new Law will be 1 January 2004. We intend to pass the Bill in November.

The Bill contains clean-up provisions for all long-term residents who are in the Islands when the Law comes into effect. These persons will have an opportunity to apply for Caymanian status or permanent residence, depending on the length of time they have been here. As I said, out of abundance of caution, I thought it necessary to point that out before moving the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday morning, 29 September 2003 at 10 am.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until Monday 29 September 2003 at 10 am.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 1.37 pm the House stood adjourned until Monday, 29 September 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
29 SEPTEMBER 2003
11.23 AM
Seventh Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable Deputy Leader to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived, we beseech thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of thy name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands. Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety maybe established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together. Our father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be thy Name, thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil, for thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory for ever and ever, Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us, the Lord make his face shine upon us, and be gracious unto us. The Lord life up the light of his countenance upon us and give us peace now and always, Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.26 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for late attendance from the Second Elected Member for the District of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND MEMBERS
OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I am not in receipt of any notice for statements for this morning.

SECOND READING

The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment)
Bill 2003

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Final call. Does any other Member wish to speak? I recognize the Honourable Leader of Government.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, finally, a Bill is before this House for the restructuring of a Financial Reporting Unit (FRU). Since the introduction of that Motion we have been invited by the Opposition to join hands across the divide.

Madam Speaker, the history of the Bill has its genesis in the fallout of the Euro Bank debacle and the findings of the Honourable Chief Justice as to the misconduct of the former Attorney General and the person who ran that unit. At that time, the Opposition refused to join hands with the Government. It is a pity that the two leading Members of the Opposition, the Leader of the Opposition and the Secretary General, have vanished again. Instead of joining hands at that time with the Government, they stood resolutely in defence of the previous Attorney General.

All the Government was doing was setting the stage for the restructuring of the Financial Reporting Unit, something we could not do with the Attorney General then. That is the problem with the Opposition and why we in this country should be more than careful in listening to the rhetoric pouted by that Member. No matter how nice it sounds, or whether on this Bill or any other matter the reprobate and approbate at the same time difficult to do somehow they find that easy going.

Madam Speaker, the first priority of the Government is to preserve the existence the integrity and competitiveness of the financial industry. In the region, our competitors in the financial industry have gone the same route, and if we are going to remain a jurisdiction of choice then we cannot offer any less scrutiny than our competitors.

Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town, in his introduction of the Opposition's input into this matter, said that the Financial Reporting Authority (FRA) should be made up of private sector representatives.

I quote him from the Hansard [25 September 2003, page 776]: "I submit, Mr. Speaker, that that is fundamentally wrong. I am not sure what gives the Governor any unique qualifications to determine who is best suited for those respective offices. I submit that we would be far further ahead if we had a Financial Reporting Authority Board that made those appointments.

"It would give to those in the industry, locally and elsewhere, a certain confidence that persons were not being appointed based more on their allegiance to Her Majesty's Government than particular skills, abilities and qualifications."

I read further in the same Hansard from the same Speech: "Many of the people who are involved in the financial industry in these Islands have significantly more experience in these matters than the persons who are holders of the offices set out in this subsection. Why should some of them not be appointed to this Anti-Money Laundering Steering Group . . . ?"

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, may I interrupt? Will you please state again the date of the Hansard and the page because I did not get it?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Sorry, Madam Speaker, I was reading from page four of the unedited Hansard, dated 25 September 2003.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: "Why is it a closed circle involving only public officers or quasi-public officers, who are ultimately responsible to His Excellency the Governor in any event?

" . . . this Anti-money-laundering Steering Group has got to have independent persons on it—persons who have no vested interest in protecting their jobs and covering their mistakes."

Madam Speaker, the financial industry would not be independent. The Member is asking that the FRA be made up of private sector representatives but the FRA . . .

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker—

Point of Order

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, do you have a point of order?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. Yes, Madam Speaker, I am sure the Leader of Government Business is not intentionally misleading this House, but he said it twice now. Despite what he quoted from my transcript, I did not say that the FRA should be made up of independent persons. I said the constitution of the anti-money-laundering steering group should include independent persons, that is, persons other than public officers or quasi-public officers. The impression that I am getting from what he is saying is that I had suggested that it be made up entirely of members of the financial services industry, which is not the case at all. So I would like to clarify that, and I am sure that the Honourable Minister now, in light of that, will be able to withdraw what he said.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Honourable Leader, perhaps you will be so minded to repeat what you actually attributed to the Second Elected Member for George Town. I am not in possession of a copy of the Hansard. I have requested one for myself, and the Second Elected Member for George Town, but I have not yet received it.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I would have to read over what I said. I am reading from page 4 and this is the Second Elected Member for George Town who just interjected.

:"I submit, Mr. Speaker, that that is fundamentally wrong. I am not sure what gives the Governor any unique qualifications to determine who is best suited for those respective offices. I submit that we would be far further ahead if we had a Financial Reporting Authority Board that made those appointments.

"It would give to those in the industry, locally and elsewhere, a certain confidence that persons were not being appointed based more on their allegiance to Her Majesty's Government than particular skills, abilities and qualifications."

I further read another section "Many of the people who are involved in the financial industry in these Islands have significantly more experience in these matters than the persons who are holders of the offices set out in this subsection. Why should some of them not be appointed to this Anti-Money Laundering Steering Group . . . ?"

"Why is it a closed circle involving only public officers or quasi-public officers, who are ultimately responsible to His Excellency the Governor in any event?"

In another section, he said, " . . . this Anti-money-laundering Steering Group has got to have independent persons on it—persons who have no vested interest in protecting their jobs and covering their mistakes."

The Speaker: Did you make a concluding remark after that?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I did go on to say that the financial industry would not be independent in this instance, and I went on to say the Member is asking that the FRA be made up of private sector representatives, but he did ask that it be made up including private sector representatives. I think he is just playing with words. That is the same thing.

The Speaker: Thank you for the clarification.

Second Elected Member for George Town, are you satisfied with the clarification as it stands? I think it is now abundantly clear that your statement was not an all-encompassing or inclusive one but one which said that part without specifying minority or majority should be at least of those you so specified and you are not actually saying that it should be only private sector persons.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: You are entirely right, Madam Speaker, and I am grateful to the Honourable Minister for now clarifying that.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader of Government. Please continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, thank you very much.

The FRA (the new body) is a law enforcement agency which is supposed to police the financial industry. How, then, can we be expected to put people on this law enforcement agency to police themselves?

When I say "law enforcement agency" that is my understanding of what they do; they police the financial industry. That is what they were supposed to have been doing before, except they went awry with it. We have no problem with the Member's argument about what happened. Look at the lengths that we went to stop it and did not get much help from him in particular. He stood resolutely in defense of the Attorney General at that time.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker.

Point of Order

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. On a point of order.

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Minister seems intent on a battle with me this morning, but he is misleading this Honourable House. On no occasion have I defended the Honourable David Ballantyne in the execution of his duties. What I said over and over again is that the Government's bungling of the handling of that matter was largely responsible for the mess we were in. I stand by those remarks. We called on the Honourable Attorney General to retire, publicly. So the Honourable Minister must withdraw those remarks or produce a Hansard or some report that indicated that I or any other Member of the Opposition defended the Attorney General.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, this debate is not so much about the previous Attorney General, as it is about the conduct at the time and what led to the restructuring today. Whether we used that word or not, the Second Elected Member for George Town said, quoting from the Hansard dated 10 February: "The national interest requires that the impasse between the UDP Government and the United Kingdom Government in relation to the Attorney General be resolved quickly. That demands that through dialogue a means be found to permit the Attorney General to retire from office with some semblance of dignity and with his personal integrity in tact."

Madam Speaker, my argument is that regardless of what that Member said, that to me was the greatest form of defence. As a Government, at that time I moved a censure motion against him because of the loss—very early in the game—of both integrity and dignity. I just read that from the Hansard, and if he said that was not a defence, well, the Hansard says to me that that is what he was doing.

I know he went and talked to him [the former Attorney General] and I do not know what else he did. He said he went to see him in his professional capacity. Well, all those things are in the past, but I recall the debate. This is what he said, and he might have interjected a lot this morning but it is not about a battle with him. It is to show their inconsistencies and how they vacillate at times.

The Speaker: I have listened to the . . .

[The Second Elected Member for George Town rose]

The Speaker: Second Elected Member, did you have a point?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, if I might be permitted.

The Speaker: Is it a point of elucidation?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I believe that what the Honourable Member has said does warrant a response from me, but I am in your hands.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, every word that the Honourable Leader of Government Business has read from the transcript I said and I stand by. That, Madam Speaker, cannot possibly be interpreted—except by the most cynical of persons—as a defence of the Honourable Attorney General. The Honourable Leader of Government Business must withdraw those statements which he made in that regard. Certainly, it was not me or the Leader of the Opposition, or any other Member of the Opposition, who either agreed to or caused the Government to pay the last Attorney General $300,000 to have him go. That was the Leader of Government Business who did that.

The Speaker: I have listened to both sides more than once. I have listened extremely carefully to the Leader of Government read verbatim the Hansard, and I was listening to see whether he was going to conclude it to be a statement of fact or an opinion. On two occasions before he sat, he said “to me.” The Chair construes that as can only be tantamount to his personal opinion and will so accept it.

The Leader of Government, please continue with your contribution.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, thank you very much.

Cynicism or not, the fact is this is what the Member said. He might try to play with words today, but I do recall the heat and the cut and the thrust of that debate and the invective that was thrown at me by that Member in defence of the former Attorney General. If I am a little bit riled up this morning it is because I do remember the kind of debate that the Member gave at the time, and today he has a different hat on. That is what I am trying to show here, and before I am through I will show the reprobate and approbate at the same time.

Madam Speaker, from what I see here, the FRA is supposed to police the financial industry and we could not agree to put people on this law enforcement agency to police themselves. I have had contact with the financial industry and I know that some of them would have liked to have seen this, in particular the Secretary General or the Chairman of the People's Progressive Movement. He would like to have his paws in here, but that cannot be done. That is not something that the Government is willing to accede to at this time.

Everyone knows that this Government has offered the financial industry every protection and assistance, even as far as going to court in Europe. There should not be any doubt in any reasonable person's mind of how jealously this Government guards the industry. However, we must be practical and that is what I am talking about this morning.

Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town made much ado about the elected arm of Government not being involved in policy.

I read from page [777] of the Hansard [25 September 2003] where the Member says, “Mr. Speaker, how can we be at a stage where the elected arm of Government is entirely excluded from the policy-making process in something so fundamentally important to our very existence—that is, the continued viability of the financial industry and matters that affect it?”

“I know one thing: If I were sitting over there, and the Governor or anybody else sought to have me bring this down here, they would have my resignation.

“I am not talking about the Honourable Attorney General; I know the constraints under which he operates. I am talking about the elected arm of Government.”

What the Member is doing there, Madam Speaker, is trying to infer that the official arm of Government is out in left field or outside of this decision. Well, the Member has another guess coming. He better wait until the Attorney General winds up and then he will see whether the Attorney General is outside the scope of approval here or not. This is not . . . and we say this boldly: We do not put these Bills together, but we have a policy on anti-money-laundering . We, as an elected Government, do not have responsibility for that kind of policy. That is in the ambit of His Excellency the Governor.

Madam Speaker, when he goes on to talk about not being involved with policy, Government has an anti-money-laundering policy and part of the objective is to promote a clean jurisdiction and that is why we have the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law. How can that Member be so barefaced to talk about not being involved in policy when we put that there? Madam Speaker, the charge of elected Members not being directly involved I find most amusing, really amusing. Here is the Opposition being reprobate and approbate at the same time. We should not get involved in the Immigration Law—that is wrong, but we must be involved in . . .

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker. Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, do you have a point of order?

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Yes, Madam Speaker.

Again the Honourable Leader is misleading the House. He cannot make such wide and sweeping statements. The Opposition has never suggested that the Government should not be involved in the Immigration Law. In fact, we have been calling for them to produce it for months.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, he does not have a point of order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: If the Member is going to use that example he must speak specifically to where we have the difficulty with Government in relation to it, and it is certainly not in relation to policy. It is usurping the functions of the Immigration Board and that has been our point all along. The Member must be specific or he must withdraw the remark.

The Speaker: Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the Member can be like a jackrabbit as much as he wants this morning, but I am going to continue reading from both of his speeches in the Hansard of February this year and on Friday. The Member and his group seriously oppose . . .

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: She needs to rule on the point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I thought she asked me to continue to explain.

The Speaker: I did ask him to continue to so explain. I am not satisfied that the Member has continued, so please allow the Leader his time to respond and then I will rule on the point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, when I said that we should not get involved in the Immigration Law—we should not make status grants—that is a policy that the Government took to do and they were the ones who said . . . I find it most amusing that under a special section of the Immigration Law we have every clearance, legally and morally, to grant statuses. Now we should not do that but we must be involved in saying whether a person is a criminal or not. This is a good example of the Opposition talking out of both sides of their mouths. Madam Speaker, our first job is to preserve the existence and integrity and competitiveness of the financial industry.

The Speaker: Have you concluded your explanation? Please indicate when you so have.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, if you need to, rule at that point.

The Speaker: Thank you. I have listened to the point of order and to the Leader of Government. I find that there is no valid point of order and I would ask the Leader of Government to please continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I believe the Opposition is taking objection that I have said that the FRA is a law enforcement agency. They are going to police, what I call law enforcement agents, the fi-ancial industry. It is funny how that Member talks about our constitutional relationship. This is why the public cannot trust the Opposition.

The Speaker: Is that your opinion, Honourable Leader?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I am going to prove it. It is my opinion, but until I read this Hansard you will see the doubletalk in this country today. Our constitutional relationship gives the power to the Governor. I want to read from page 12 of the Hansard dated 10 February: “The national interest . . .

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Could only be you.

Madam Speaker, the Member is asking if it is him. It could only be the Second Elected Member for George Town. Well, I am not responsible for what the Opposition should have. If they come into this House to debate and say all manner of evil things, then they should have the debate.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order!

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I have been labouring this morning to try to make a few points. That Member carried on for nearly close to two hours on Friday and no one interrupted him, all right!

They are asking now why they do not have the Hansard of 10 February. The Hansard is there for everyone to get. Must I first go and tell them that that is what I am going to do? What kind of debate would that be? The lady Member from North Side should know better and keep herself quiet this morning.

[Addressing the Member for North Side] Yes, you stay out of it.

Let us see the doubletalk from what the Member said. I will read a few more choices so that you can clearly get what I am saying about their doubletalk. You heard me read where he said he would resign. I will read another part of the Hansard dated Thursday, 25 September [2003, page 778].

“ . . . [‘Public Interest’] is a wonderful, wonderful phrase, which the UK Government loves to employ. Who determines what the public interest is? Is it the public interest of the Cayman Islands, the public interest of the United Kingdom, or the public interest of the European Union?”

Madam Speaker, page 10 of the Hansard from February says,

“We have our feet rooted firmly in reality and we understand with all the noise and ya-ya that go on, there are constraints inherent . . .” Let me repeat that to this Honourable House: “. . . there are constraints inherent in the Constitutional relationship we enjoy with our Majesty’s Government and the United Kingdom. And we also understand that no matter how passionate and well meaning our intentions; no matter how angry we get at the injustice that we perceive has been done to us as a country and as a people, notwithstanding all of those things, we must act reasonably and we must operate within the constitutional constraints that are a part of the relationship which we have with the United Kingdom.”

I have already read what he said about the dignity and personal integrity intact for the previous Attorney General. I am also going to read what he said on page 9 of that same day but first I will go to page 12.

“The national interest also requires a constructive relationship with the United Kingdom Government and confidence in the Governor.” I will repeat that: “The national interest also requires a constructive relationship with the United Kingdom Government and confidence in the Governor, not because we are particularly fond of the United Kingdom but because pragmatism requires that the relationship be one of mutual respect and understanding.”

That is the same Governor that we have to work with today. He never changed. I saw him on Sunday and he is still the same person. The constitution relationship is still the same. How can the Opposition talk out of both corners of their mouth, even if there is an expanse of time between when he said one thing as against saying something else?

“I know one thing, if I was sitting over there if the Governor or anybody else sought to have me bring this down here, they would get my resignation.”

Now I reckon that that is understanding and cooperation. Madam Speaker that was page 12 and now I read page 9 of February 10th, which pertains to the Motion to move the [then] Attorney General at least to start the ball rolling.

Madam Speaker, listen to him now: “Certainly inflammatory anti-British remarks which have been made and continue to be made will not foster good relations and will not provide the kind of atmosphere that is conducive to the resolution of this matter.”

Here him again, Madam Speaker, “Nothing else is going to work, not censure motions, not threats, not derogatory remarks and certainly not anti-British rhetoric. We have urged the Government in the past, we do so again this morning. Cool the rhetoric and lower the temperature of the House. Feelings run high in matters such as this, we know. We feel the sense of injustice, just as any other right thinking resident of these Islands do. We must not allow our emotions to override reason.”

That was the same Member who was going to resign and who was cursing the UK, blaming the European Union for interfering with us. You see, the Opposition cannot always have their cake and eat it too. While all kinds of invectives were hurled at me on that day, in particular my style of leadership by the Second Member for George Town, this is the difference between me and that group. When I take a position and have to battle with the UK, it is because we have a just cause and one in which we know we are fundamentally and legally correct.

The Euro Bank case for which the former Attorney General was responsible, the one that we had to face down the UK on, the case and the debacle that the People’s Progressive Movement came here to this Honourable House and beat me and my colleagues and berated us in the defence of the Attorney General . . . this same Member came here a few days ago with his same existing duty to uphold the Constitution with his cap on, only this time back and front, singing a different tune, being the bad boy.

Everything that the People’s Progressive Movement does or says is suited to whatever the occasion is. Never mind the facts.

Madam Speaker, our constitutional relationship with the UK remains the same today as it was in February. We believe that the FRU needs restructuring. We believe that a great disservice was done to this country and we said so before. I am not saying that the legislation is all that I would like it to be, because there is no more nationalistic person in this Honourable House than me. However, we have to be pragmatic; we have to be realistic about the whole thing.

I had a discussion with the Governor and he will be removed as he agreed completely from the set-up. The Attorney General is going to respond and I will leave the balance to him.

I would only like to close my remarks in saying that the financial industry today is in better shape because this Government has taken the stand that we have in fighting off the European Tax Savings Directive and various other initiatives. Indeed, we have not signed everything that has been pushed on the Financial Secretary’s lap or the Government’s lap, but only agreements that would sense.

We have to reorganise the FRA, and people outside the industry need to give the Government a chance, including those who are in the industry. Changes can be made as we go along but first we have taken a long time to get here, but let it not be said that this was the fault of the Government. We have been having discussions with the industry and that is why it took that length of time to get here. We cannot agree on everything with them but I believe we have, by and large, a law that they will appreciate and will work with.

So, Madam Speaker, I close with the remarks on page 9 of the Hansard, dated 10 February 2003. “Certainly inflammatory anti-British remarks which have been made and continue to be made will not foster good relations and . . .”

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, sorry for the interruption. You did start off by saying the remarks. But, for clarity, would you specify whose remarks?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I want to close my remarks by reading the unedited Hansard of 10 February 2003, page 9. These are the Second Member's for George Town remarks. I quote: "Certainly inflammatory anti-British remarks which have been and continue to be made will not foster good relations and will not provide the kind of atmosphere that is conducive to resolution."

I read further: "Nothing else is going to work, not censure motions, not threats, not derogatory remarks and certainly not anti-British rhetoric. Cool the rhetoric and lower the temperature of the water. Feelings run high in matters such as this. We know; we feel the sense of injustice just as any other right thinking resident of these Islands do. For those who may think otherwise as leaders and representatives we must not allow our emotions to override reason."

End of my remarks. Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Final call. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Before I commence my debate, I would seek some direction. There is a committee stage amendment that has been passed out to us and I just want to . . .

The Speaker: Are you referring to number 3 amendment?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker. I just want to ensure whether I can or cannot use it or refer to it in my debate.

The Speaker: As I understand it, Honourable Leader of the Opposition, you can make general remarks to it. The specific comments will have to be referred to in the Committee.

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I have just had a look at the number 3 amendment myself, and although it has been approved and circulated, I have just spoken to the drafting personnel and there seems to be one other aspect of it that needs to be tidied up. So, I am not sure whether the Honourable Member wants to speak to it as it is, or he would need to know exactly where we are planning to go with the additional amendment. However, I would prefer to have this withdrawn and have the one that we really intend to put forward so that he can speak to the spirit of it.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Second Official Member. The Chair will seek some clarification in that you said you have now had an opportunity to look at it and would express some concern that it has been circulated before your perusal.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: No, that is not what I am saying, not at all. I forwarded it to be approved. I am just saying that, having had a look at it again, there are aspects of it that, in my view, need to be tidied up so that it can be reconciled with the Bill.

The Speaker: Perhaps the clearer procedure would be to withdraw it. We will take a break for a luncheon at this time and come back at 1.30 pm.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Obligated.

The Speaker: Before we go, I recognise the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, to see if he had another point separate and apart from that.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is fine.

The Speaker: All right. I think perhaps that would expedite the matter and have a bit more clarity when we come back in.

Proceedings suspended at 11.33 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.28 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Continuation of the debate.

Before we took the break, I recognised the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to give some additional comments to this very important piece of legislation that is before us.

First of all, let me begin my line of argument by stating that as far as my understanding is there are three very important points which would give rise to this piece of legislation: (1) public confidence in a financial Reporting Authority and its operations should and must be restored; (2) the statutory foundation of an efficient financial Reporting Authority provides that it is divorced from an investigative role; and (3) not anywhere less important than the other two is that there is accountability and transparency in its methods and its control structure.

Madam Speaker, in order to restore public confidence, we believe that it must be shown (as has been pointed out by my colleague, the Second Elected Member for George Town) that the lessons of the failure of the Euro Bank trial have been learned and that the structure and organisation of this new FRA would not allow the same circumstances to happen again any time in the future. I believe that all of us here are in agreement with that objective.

It is also important that there be no perception that those involved in the original decision-making are those same posts—not necessarily individuals—and officers with the responsibility to review the process without any representation independent of the various authorities. Madam Speaker, there have been arguments put back and forth, and I will do my best not to be repetitive. However, it is, in my view, absolutely important that we first of all appreciate what the objective of this amending piece of legislation to The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law should be.

I am not going to belabour the point to where I get lost in it and I have to remind myself of that. From the onset of my contribution, it has to be understood very clearly where the obvious difference lies in what obtains and what is proposed in the legislation and what we understand to be the primary objective. So, Madam Speaker, we come back to the point of the separation of the investigative and the reporting functions. I think that is where the crux of an argument lies because this situation relates to a constitutional arrangement and it also relates to what obtains in practice.

When we speak of the investigative and reporting functions, and we look at the original Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, which has in the definition section . . . and I will quote with your permission, Madam Speaker. It says, “financial intelligence unit’ means a central, public body responsible for receiving (and, as permitted, requesting), analysing and disseminating disclosures of financial information-

- (a) concerning proceeds of crime or suspected proceeds of crime or
- (b) required by any law in order to counter money laundering.”

It also goes on to say “and ‘financial intelligence unit’ includes a law enforcement agency.” So that is your original definition in the Law and then we have the amendments or the amending Bill.

As the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons states this Bill seeks to amend the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision) to replace the Reporting Authority with a Financial Intelligence Unit to be called the Financial Reporting Authority.

The first question that we have to ask is based on the initial definition in the PCCL and based on the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons of the amending legislation, the FRA. Once this law is passed, and there is to be a law enforcement agency or not, if that is the intention, then we can understand clearly where we differ. Our concept of a financial Reporting Authority does not lend to such an authority being a law enforcement agency and that seems to be where the big difference lies.

There have been some amendments to the previous law, which on the surface seem to make a lot of difference. However, this whole argument that I am bringing now which hinges on the constitutional responsibility of His Excellency the Governor has to be clearly determined as to what the objective is. It would seem that based on the proposed amendments (even the Committee stage amendment), and based on what is proposed in the amending legislation where it speaks to section 21(c) . . . I quote from the green Bill. “The Governor in his discretion may after consultation with the steering group give to the Reporting Authority directions of a general character as to the policy to be followed in the exercise and performance of its functions, in relation to matters appearing to the Governor to concern the public interest and the Reporting Authority shall give general effect to any such directions.”

In synopsis, what that basically says is that the Governor, acting in his own discretion after consulting with the steering group (which I shall address in a minute) has the ability to instruct the Financial Reporting Authority as to—while it speaks to directions of a general character—whatever policy he wishes to be implemented. Of course, his Excellency the Governor is Her Majesty’s representative here in the Cayman Islands.

Here we are, faced with the question of what the constitutional arrangement is and if the Reporting Authority is simply a Reporting Authority not dealing with being a law enforcement agency. Should it really be the case that the Governor acts in his own discretion? I leave that platform to try to clearly determine, and it is going to be absolutely important that we clearly understand and determine that. If that is the intention that this is a law enforcement agency, then we speak of a horse of a different colour.

There are other arguments that one needs to put forth as to whether that, in our view, should be the case or not. However, listening to all that has been said, both from the Honourable Second Official Member and the Leader of Government Business (although the Leader of Government Business said, as he understands it, is a policing agency), I am not so sure that this Financial Reporting Authority is meant to be a law enforcement agency. Madam Speaker, we need to understand absolutely clearly whether that is the case or not.

I drew the definition from the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law which speaks to the initial Financial Intelligence Unit. However, this new amendment refers in its Memorandum of Objects and Reasons to a financial intelligence unit which naturally is the Financial Reporting Authority that we speak of. And if I draw from the earlier definition, then it is a law enforcement agency. If it is a law enforcement agency then I cannot argue why it should not be the “Governor in his discretion”, but then I have to change the argument to say why it should not be a law enforcement agency. Unfortunately for me, as I stand here I am not sure which is which, so I have to brush both and I will do my best to not seem to be meandering.

I am just explaining where we see our position in proffering any arguments for or against the amending legislation.

Madam Speaker, unfortunately we are on the receiving end again and when this is over we might hear that we speak from both sides of our mouths. However, in trying to address what we get, we have to. If it is a law enforcement agency, then in truth and in fact what are we creating? I ask the question without delving into the history. That has been a huge part of the to-ing and fro-ing and all of the arguments surrounding not just the Euro Bank trial but prior to that trial, when several of my colleagues were continually asking for clear lines of definitions with regard to whom the Financial Intelligence Unit was reporting.

I daresay (without asking for any comments) that even those directly involved in the process, like the Commissioner of Police, had problems with it; not personality problems but problems with clearly defined parameters under which it was operating and who was responsible for what. We are now saying in the amendments that we are clearly defining who is responsible for what, but I do not know yet whether it is a law enforcement agency.

As I asked, if it is a law enforcement agency, are we doing anything different than it was before if we look at it in this context? The financial industry is regulated and over regulated. We ourselves admit that as it is, if we compare to what the other international agencies are dealing with and the expectations elsewhere of other jurisdictions.

We know that after all is said and done many things that we did in good faith we come to find out now that places such as London are not prepared to do the same because they say it is not cost-effective; that is just by the way.

Madam Speaker, I used that reference to speak to the regulations of the financial industry and I spoke of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority and its regulatory functions. I also speak of this same Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law without going into a lot of detail. However, I am certain the Honourable Second Official Member will concur that it gives the police ample powers to deal with any and all issues which might involve money laundering, freezing of accounts, et cetera, included in this new piece of legislation.

Madam Speaker, if all of those statutes exist, then my question again is: why are we creating another arm which sets itself over and above everything else that exists to perform the same functions, or some of the same functions? Let me draw some examples.

In the amending legislation, where it speaks to being able to freeze accounts, section 21 (3) shows a clear picture because it tells of the conditions where the Authority can order any person to refrain from dealing with a person's bank account for a period not exceeding 21 days, et cetera. However, conditional to all of that is that the power conferred by that subsection is not exercisable unless the Grand Court, upon application by the Reporting Authority, makes an order under this section. So for that purpose, Madam Speaker, the Financial Reporting Authority still has to exercise its functions by going in front of a Grand Court Judge and making a request for freezing of accounts or seizing assets or whatever.

As far as I understand it, the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, as it exists, allows for that to happen in any case under similar procedures, but of course, done by another law enforcement agency; namely, an arm of the Royal Cayman Islands Police. My question is (if I understand it correctly): what is the new function which enables the old function to work better?

[Pause]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, just to use that one example, we have to ask the question in the creation of this Financial Reporting Authority where it seems like there is some duplication of authority, what is the real purpose of that? I know that prior to this there was a situation where I believe 72 hours came into play, and now we have a situation of 21 days. If we have a Financial Reporting Authority that is performing the functions of a law-enforcement agency, if that is a separate entity unto itself from what obtains with the other law enforcement agencies, we ask the question again: why are we creating it to perform that function?

As I understand it, the reporting functions (as explained in the amending Bill, section 5) . . . the principal Law is amended by inserting after section 21 the following sections . . . the marginal notes speak to powers, functions and duties of the Reporting Authority. It says, “The Reporting Authority shall be responsible for receiving and as permitted requesting, analysing and disseminating disclosures of financial information -

(a) concerning proceeds of criminal conduct or suspected proceeds of criminal conduct; or

(b) required by any law in order to counter money laundering.”

It goes on to speak in subsection (2): “without limiting the foregoing and notwithstanding any other law to the contrary the Reporting Authority shall receive all disclosures of information including information from any overseas financial intelligence units which . . .” which I do not have to read.

So, it concentrates its efforts on the fact that the Financial Reporting Authority shall receive all disclosures of information, including information from any overseas financial intelligence unit or forwarding any information to another financial intelligence unit upon request. Once an assessment is made, then that information will be disseminated to the relevant agency in order for any criminal proceedings to take place.

The Financial Reporting Authority, as I understand it, if it is a law enforcement agency, serves the same purpose as the Police because if it is a law-enforcement agency and not just an information-gathering and disseminating agency, then it exercises certain powers to decide whether you should go at this one or the next one or this entity or the other entity. If it is designed for that then I have to conclude that it is being created in a manner that the process is not transparent because the process, otherwise, is. If the Governor, whether in his discretion or in Cabinet's, is of the view that there needs to be an agency of this nature which can deal with matters and the rest of the world not knows about it, then they must come out and say that.

The same arguments we had prior to this from the Euro Bank case bring back those same horrific memories. I have heard many Members in this Legislative Assembly publicly state that we accept that certain types of covert activities are necessary in this world in this day and age because of the nature of the beasts that we deal with. That poses the other question: in accepting that, how do you create an authority that still falls short of allowing a Euro Bank situation to happen again? That is where the question is.

No one is disputing the necessity of the reporting agency. The question is: is it crafted and is legislation in place in such a manner that this can happen again? No one wants it to happen again, so the Government has to convince us how this thing is done. It cannot happen again, and I am not convinced, Madam Speaker.

I must admit that I am not 100 per cent clear as to what the constitutional arrangement is with the Cayman Islands and the United Kingdom in understanding the authority under our Constitution which is vested with His Excellency the Governor. The big question is: I would have thought that in the creation of a Financial Reporting Authority it would have been created in such a manner that no one could possibly think (with the best intentions in the world of everyone concerned) that this situation could occur again. However, what is presented before us today, even with the amendments that are proposed, does not allay those fears because at the end of the day, section 21(c) speaks to the Governor in his discretion regarding general character as to the policy to be followed in the exercise and performance of the functions of this authority.

Now, we could stand around and perhaps argue at length about what position who took when, who said this and who said that. But I am going to avoid that because I do not want to cloud my arguments. I would truly like for the Honourable Second Official Member, in winding up, to clarify the position and to answer the questions that I have posed.

If we again run back quickly to the situation with the Euro Bank, what occurred with the then head of the FRU and his actions, and, by extension, the actions of the then Attorney General, it is clear from the results that there was no legislation in place—neither to prevent it or to punish it. If there were, who reneged their duty? We cannot create legislation that will permit that. They could bend it and twist it until the good Lord comes, no one can tell me that that is what we want. As to how we argue it and to what powers His Excellency should have or what powers should be delegated could well be thought of as another matter, but it boils down to that and that is a very important point.

I daresay that that is a point that bears some heavy reflection, in fact, I think it bears repetition. The actions of those two goodly gentlemen, regardless of intentions or circumstances, obviously were not covered by legislation which could have prevented it from happening. If it did, someone did not do their duty and I would like for the Honourable Second Official Member to pointedly answer those two questions. Was there any legislation which covered those actions, and if there was, why was no action taken?

However, regardless of the two and what the answers are, the point in hand is that any piece of legislation that is forthcoming now must be able to prevent that from happening and not roll the red carpet out and say we do not think it will happen because there are different players in the game.

My colleague made a very important point here and regardless of what the Leader of Government Business or any one of them thinks, it was an absolutely important point. You cannot create legislation for any one. The good Lord promised us three score and ten maybe, sometimes more, sometimes less. None of us live forever and I simply say that to say you cannot craft legislation because everyone in the corner is good and you trust them. You cannot do it, it is wrong.

We cannot allow passage of this legislation which leaves in doubt the transparency of the functions of the Financial Reporting Authority from here on in. That is the bottom line. I do not want to go into the same constitutional arrangements that I referred to earlier on. We could speak to section 7(1) and talk about internal security and we come back to the same argument; is it a Reporting Authority or is it a law enforcement agency? If it is a law enforcement agency, then it has to be "the Governor in his discretion." Is the purpose of the exercise to create a law enforcement agency or a reporting agency? Is it to restore confidence in the industry or is it going to be just one of these things that seem like you simply have painted the same boat in a different colour but it is going in the same direction?

Madam Speaker, my arguments are not based on what is or what obtains; my arguments are based on what should be. The question is: is what I say should be or is it what the Government is saying should be? If the Government is saying that what I say should be is what they say should be then they cannot tell me that there should not be some differences in what is proposed.

So the Government will clarify whether we have a law-enforcement-agency-come-reporting agency, or whether we have a reporting agency whose functions will determine further actions one way or the other by other agencies.

There was a comment made earlier on and the temptation is too great to resist. The comment was, "If it is simply a reporting agency then all we need is a secretary and a fax machine." Madam Speaker, as a reporting agency the personnel that are part and parcel of this agency, which is called for under the amending legislation where it says, "the principal law is amended in section 21 by repealing subsection (2) and substituting the following subsection (2). Where there is established a financial intelligence unit [same Financial Reporting Authority] to be called the Financial Reporting Authority consisting of the following persons:

- (a) the director of the Financial Reporting Authority;
- (b) an attorney-at-Law;
- (c) an accountant, and;
- (d) such other persons having suitable qualifications and experience as may be necessary to provide services to the Reporting Authority."

So, Madam Speaker, there are certain qualified individuals who constitute this authority. As I understand the purpose and function of their job description, when the information is going one way or the other their skills are called upon to make a decision on the next step. This means making assessments because the FRA, while charged with its responsibility of discovery and information gathering . . . I do not perceive the Financial Reporting Authority to simply be sitting down and be a vat of collected information with a fax machine and a young lady sitting there and just say here, take it as it comes. That is not the exercise. This information has to be gathered or disseminated in such a manner that both parties concerned are dealt with fairly because you are playing with people's lives in these instances. You can decide someone's future or not. I know I am right and I agree that if they deserve to be put away then they must be put away. However, at the same time, the reason why there are qualified personnel in this Financial Reporting Authority, in my view, is also to ensure that you are not being irresponsible with the gathering or disseminating of information and that you know what your laws are, also the laws of other territories and what would obtain as an illegal act here and in other territories.

Even if it is only a Reporting Authority and not a law enforcement agency, there would be no diminishing of the staff that is needed to the point of a young lady and a fax machine. Madam Speaker, if we have heard the discussions about these issues prior to this, there have been instances where irresponsible reporting has occurred. It has caused innocent people much harm; sometimes irreparable damage, not just to their characters but also expense. I am not standing up defending anyone, but I am painting the picture as I see the responsibility of the Reporting Authority.

Madam Speaker, at the end of the day if we are moving away from the concept of the Reporting Authority being more than a Reporting Authority and also encompassing a law enforcement agency, I hold the view that we are just changing the names and the people involved and the functions can be the same. We are going a little bit further now because we are putting it all into legislation and saying that is how it should be. Madam Speaker, let it be clearly understood I make no apologies and I am not suggesting that that is the intention; I am clearly pointing out that if that is what it is then that is the net-end result.

I will move on to a few sections of the proposed legislation and make a few short comments on it. I want to use the proposed legislation to go back to the original argument where I said that it is not clear to us whether the intent is just to the Reporting Authority or whether it also includes a law enforcement agency. We want to look at the anti-money-laundering steering group. I must admit, at least that amendment eases the heart just a bit, not too much.

The original section 21(b) (1) of the Bill reads, "The Governor in Cabinet shall appoint a body to be called the Anti-Money Laundering Steering Group consisting of:

- "(a) the Governor acting in his discretion who shall be the Chairman [and this was the section my colleague had a problem with originally];
- "(b) the Attorney General who shall be the Deputy Financial Secretary shall also be a Deputy Commissioner of Police, Collector of Customs, Managing Director of the Monetary Authority and the Deputy Financial Secretary."

Madam Speaker, the committee stage amendment speaks to the fact that the Governor in Cabinet shall appoint a body to be called the Anti-money-laundering Steering Group which consists of:

- "(a) the Attorney General who shall be the Chairman;
- (b) the Financial Secretary who shall be the Deputy Chairman;
- (c) the Commissioner of Police;
- (d) the Collector of Customs;
- (e) the Managing Director of the Monetary Authority; and
- (f) the Solicitor General."

Madam Speaker, immediately after that we have section 21(c) which says that although—and I am not quoting it—there is a concession in the Anti-Money Laundering Steering Group that the Attorney General is now chairing, it outlines the functions of that group. After it does all of those things it comes back and it says we will tell you all of those functions; after the Attorney General cheers this group, and after this group has its functions clearly outlined to it, do not get the wrong impression, the Governor is still going to call you all and tell you what to do. So I ask the question: what is the purpose?

We come back to the question again, and I am so glad that no one has called me thus far for tedious repetition. I can smell it coming soon but that is alright. It is very important. If that is the case, we are defeating the purpose of the piece of legislation. The perception continues that what happened before could happen again because of how it is structured. That is the whole point.

It is not about taking the authority from the Governor when it comes to internal security. If constitutionally we accept that, then let it be what it is supposed to be: a Reporting Authority. Let it perform its functions without delving into a situation which cause constitutionally for the Governor to act in his discretion with that body. Then, there would be no argument and it cannot be said that this Reporting Authority cannot function without what obtains in the proposed legislation. That is what we are faced with now. Here is the decision.

If the United Kingdom does not want it to be like that, then they must come out and say that also. I will not agree with it, but at least we will know. How this is, we do not know all of that. Madam Speaker, we can take this legislation, look at it and sift through the various parts and understand what it is saying, but we can still say that it should not be like that. So the question of the constitutional arrangement does not come into play. The question is: what do we want it to be?

Any arguments coming forth to outline the constitutional arrangement; please do not bother because we understand the constitutional arrangement. What we are saying is that if we all understand that, then maybe the discussion never came up, maybe the argument needs to be put forward, maybe we need to hear yes or no. Perhaps the Honourable Second Official Member can answer that. Have they been asked, point blank, whether it can be like so or so, or has it just been taken that it has to be like this? That is another question.

I will not make attempts to get into the legal jargon and argue with the words themselves, but I believe that I have conceptualised what we, the Opposition, perceive the Financial Reporting Authority should be. I also believe that I have given just a tad of assistance from my colleague who, despite the ranting and raving of the Leader of Government Business, was very clear in his delivery as to the shortcomings of the legislation.

Madam Speaker, there are some specific questions which the Honourable Second Official Member should answer, and if he cannot then he should say so. At least we will know that he cannot answer. We are arguing, as they have argued from time to time, that in policy decisions, first of all, the elected arm of Government should have a say. Secondly, if we agree they should have a say then this Financial Reporting Authority should not be framed by the legislation that is in front of us in such a manner that, constitutionally, it does not allow that to happen. Therefore, whatever else is anticipated to be the functions of this Financial Reporting Authority, let it rest elsewhere. Are they saying that they do not have confidence in the other law enforcement agencies to perform these functions? I hope not. I certainly know one good gentleman who just jumped out of the frying pan into the fire, for one reason or another.

If everyone is well intended and we and London understand what the objective is, then ask them if the Reporting Authority can be left to perform its functions as it is in section 21(c). It says, "The Governor in his discretion may, after consultation with the steering group give to the Reporting Authority directions." Let that read, "The Governor in Cabinet." That is what we are saying. That will restore the confidence, Madam Speaker.

The Government must understand—while they may talk about how the Opposition talked from two sides of the mouth—that this has nothing to do with the Opposition or the Government. What we are speaking about is good governance and, as is important, we have to be seen with every resource available to us including legislation to be making pointed efforts in restoring the confidence of other jurisdictions and individuals in our financial industry and how it functions and how it is regulated. There is no denying that.

The rank and file throughout this whole episode these months ago came down to the fact that certain things were allowed to happen because of the arrangement and we had no control. Madam Speaker, this piece of legislation, in my view, makes it worse because there was no specific legislation dealing with those issues. Now we are making it specific and telling them yes, they can do it. They can twist it all they wish as to what the arguments are, but it comes down to what I said before. Knowing the Honourable Second Official Member, he will have made his notes, as I saw him, and he will specifically answer all of these questions unless we need to adjourn, Madam Speaker, so they can go and ask the Governor a certain question before he comes back to tell us.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, my Clerk informs me that you have 1 hour remaining.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I certainly am not going to use up all of that. I am just about finished now.

I am really trying to impress that with all of our arguments . . . and I heard the Leader of Government Business refer to my colleague's offer about us all joining hands to deal with this issue. We need to do that because let us remember that it will never change, that would be it.

Now I do not know who that suits, but it does not suit me and it does not suit my colleagues either. That has nothing to do with the constitutional arrangement; it is all to do with the objective of the establishment of this new authority and what it hopes to achieve. Anything else is by-the-way. What is the objective and whose objective is it? Madam Speaker, I would think, before we speak to anyone else, it is our objective that is the most important one. It is our Cayman Islands. It is our financial industry, and the whole world has to understand that.

There are, perhaps, other points that could be made, but I believe that the Mover of the Bill and the Government understands the last few points that have been made since I got up. I know also that they understand what my colleague, who delivered the main response, has spoken to. This is not something we have not talked about. It is only when legislation comes and we do not have enough time to talk about it that we do not, but we talked about this. Just like everything else, I am not afraid to say it.

Madam Speaker, this is one of those things that has its own life and if we had another day, I could probably use up that hour sensibly too. Nevertheless, that is how it is, but I believe that we have made a case and the argument is not the constitutional arrangements, the argument is what we want to have as a Financial Reporting Authority at the end of the day, and that is what it all depends on.

If what is proposed is the objective, we do not agree with it. It is not going to restore public confidence, absolutely not. It will give to a few some slight impression of concessions, but it should not be about concessions, it should be about what we want and how we want it. There are other agencies under which the constitutional arrangement can work but would not prevent the functioning of this in a manner that people would say that at least what happened before cannot happen again because of the way it is structured now. This does not do the trick, and I hope the Government can do something to make it do that.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak? If not we will take a short afternoon break, at which time I will call on the Honourable Second Official Member to exercise his right of reply.

Proceedings suspended at 3.33 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.49 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

I recognise the Honourable Second Official Member to exercise his right of reply.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I have listened to a very robust and, I dare say, insightful debate and this piece of legislation so far.

Madam Speaker, we can have as much fire in our belly as we want, we can be as flamboyant as we would like, we can be passionate as much as we want, but at the end of the day, there are certain reality checks that we have to bear in mind. We cannot have it both ways.

We are all, as we stand here, creatures of the Constitution. Although the Honourable Leader of the Opposition does not want to hear what the Constitution says, the fact is that we are caught by the spirit, the letter of that Constitution, and until we have advancement, then there are certain things we have to bear in mind.

I think the Second Elected Member for George Town, in his debate, started out by making a passing reference to the fact that the title of the Bill is incorrect. In fact, the title of the Bill is correct. Many people referred to the unit as a Financial Reporting Unit, but if you look at section 21(2) it says that “there shall be a Reporting Authority . . .”. That is what the Law says so the title of the Bill itself is correct. Nothing is wrong with it. I will come back to this later.

Madam Speaker, may I also remind this Honourable House that as we stand here today, the Reporting Authority is staffed by one civilian, which is Mr. Thursfield, along with five or six police officers. It has not changed its nature; it is a law enforcement agency. The fact that we are trying to restructure in such a way that it becomes civil and nice does not change that. If it is a law enforcement agency there are certain constraints constitutionally which we have to bear in mind.

Madam Speaker, while there are questions about the structure and the organisation of the FRU—and clearly there is room for improvement and we all in this Honourable House are seeking to find ways to improve the structure and the function among other things—I did mention in my presentation in introducing the Bill that you can only legislate so much and no more. You cannot legislate morality. You can legislate to punish certain conduct, but you cannot prevent certain conduct. You can craft the legislation in such a way that you prevent or mitigate abuse, but at the end of the day, unless you have the right person in the right place, there is always the possibility for abuse.

It does not matter how watertight the legislation is. Unless someone is going to stand up over those who are charged, with the responsibility of giving the effect of the legislature on a daily basis and check everything that is done, there is absolutely no way that you can prevent certain things from happening. You can hope that it does not happen; you can legislate to punish it if it happens but you have to trust people. That is what it boils down to at the end of the day.

The Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town argued passionately about the fact that there should be a board of directors and that it is wrong to have members of the Reporting Authority appointed by the Governor. He also argued that it is wrong to vest certain powers in the Governor, albeit after consultation with the anti-money-laundering steering group.

Madam Speaker, if I might just point out to Honourable Members where we are coming from. The Reporting Authority is appointed pursuant to section 21 of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law. As a piece of law enforcement, crime-fighting legislation, its object, among other things, is to prevent and, where it occurs, punish for money laundering offences. So, if it is accepted that this piece of legislation is what it is, it does not matter what label we might want to put on it. At the end of the day we have to admit that it is a piece of law enforcement legislation, and the bodies appointed pursuant to this are law enforcement. It is a law enforcement agency.

The definition alluded to by the previous speakers talked about the Financial Intelligence Unit, which include law enforcement agency. Madam Speaker, for those of us who understand how it operates, my understanding of it is that all, or probably most, of the Financial Intelligence Units that are members of the Egmont Group, 94 or so, are law enforcement agencies. Our Financial Reporting Unit deals on a daily basis with law enforcement agencies all over the world. The United States (FINSEN) Egmont Group has a dedicated, secure Website of financial intelligence unit where information is disseminated in a confidential way.

Later on in my winding up, Madam Speaker, I will articulate the wisdom in trying to make it albeit a law enforcement, a notch (for the want of a better word) down from the regular police force. I will point that out.

Madam Speaker, reference is made to the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority (CIMA). May I just say for Honourable Members that there is really no analogy to be drawn with CIMA. It is a regulatory body, and not a law enforcement agency. Although it works closely with law enforcement bodies, its primary function has nothing to do with law enforcement. That is not the Monetary Authority. It has nothing to do with law enforcement, so there is no analogy to be drawn about the board of directors.

While I am on the issue of the board of directors, the Honourable Member pointed out that it would be desirable to have members of the private sector on the Anti-Money-Laundering Steering Group. There is absolutely nothing wrong with that if it were possible and not one single member, as I understand it, of the Anti-Money-Laundering Steering Group had any objection to it. It was canvassed, it was debated passionately and it was thought about. At the end of the day we all concluded that because of the fact that there is a law enforcement body, it was not possible.

It is like calling upon the board of directors to police the police. It is not possible. So that is why they are not there. It has nothing to do with their integrity or their competence or anything. We all find ways to make sure that this piece of legislation was as workable and as user friendly as possible. This is what we could come up with.

Madam Speaker, at one of the discussions it was even said that the amendment was crafted by the United Kingdom. Suffice it to say that they probably just need to have a look at Ms. Myrtle's hard drive under legislative drafting and they will see several, probably twenty or more, drafts that came out of there. It has nothing to do with the United Kingdom, whatsoever, absolutely nothing.

Madam Speaker, let us be practical. Assuming that we have members of the private sector or members of the public on the Anti-Money-Laundering Steering Group, there are certain suspicious activity reports that come in from financial institutions or other institutions that are bodies or agencies to which these members of the private sector belong. Would they be asked to give general policy direction as to how to deal with these suspicious activity reports, or would they be asked to re-choose themselves each time? It makes no sense to me. They could also go on record that they are conflicted out, but they would like to adjudicate or give directions, policy or otherwise, to deal with these reports. These are some of the things that we took into account.

Madam Speaker, may I just remind Honourable Members of this House that the concept of a law enforcement agency and a Reporting Authority are not mutually exclusive. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition made reference to that. We have a Reporting Authority which is a law-enforcement body. There is no difference because they are not mutually exclusive. I mentioned the fact that it is appointed pursuant to this piece of legislation, which is a crime-fighting piece of legislation.

The Second Elected Member for George Town also observed that the Anti-Money-Laundering Steering Group is comprised of all public officers. Indeed, he described it as close circle. I think he referred to us as "all the Governor's boys" involving all public officers and quasi officers who are ultimately responsible to His Excellency in any event. I spoke about the constitutional checks. It does not matter what label we want to call ourselves, the fact of the matter is that at the end of the day we are public officers.

The Constitution says all public officers are appointed at the Governor's pleasure and that Constitution has nothing to do with this particular Governor, this particular elected arm of Government or anyone. It is something that predates all of us. That is what the Constitution says, and we have to operate within that framework. Madam Speaker, he went on to say that it is carefully sought out because there is no way Her Majesty's Government wants the situation where there are those who cannot ultimately pull the rug out from under their feet if they do not tow Her Majesty's Government's policy line.

As I said before, he ran head-on into the crux of the matter when he, quite properly, observed, and I quote him: "And also Mr. Speaker this brings into stark relief an earlier point which I made when I resumed a few minutes ago and which is the importance of those who are carrying out various functions under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, not being placed in a position where they are referred to or required to be reviewed in terms of what they have done or might not have done." Madam Speaker, the operative words in that quote was when he said, "those who are carrying out various functions under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law", but I think in order to illustrate the point I need to make a further reference.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, the Honourable Member, by his utterances in my view, has demonstrated an appreciation for the fact that the functions to be carried out are those of crime fighting. As I mentioned before, it is really a law-enforcement function.

Having read the legislation and having understood its purpose, he knows that it is not a nice and cozy little arrangement. He knows that it fits nice and cozy into the spirit and the language of this Constitution.

Madam Speaker, in his debate the Honourable Member spoke passionately about certain objectionable provisions. I will be quoting from page [777] of the Hansard. He said, "I come now to probably the most fundamental of all objections to this. It seems almost unimaginable to me that at this point in Cayman's development, when we are supposedly the fifth largest financial centre in the world, with some of the most sophisticated regimes [and these are the operative words, Madam Speaker] to prevent money-laundering and international crime, generally. In a situation where we know that industry which is so critical to our very existence is under international threat, but in particular by Her Majesty's Government. The Government is prepared to come down to this Legislative Assembly and propose a Bill which excludes the elected arm of Government from any involvement in a creation of policy as far as the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law and in particular the Financial Reporting Authority is concerned."

Madam Speaker, at the top of the quote he has just observed that it is all about preventing money laundering and international crime. It has never been the practice in the Cayman Islands, as far as I know, that the elected arm of Government gets involved in such matters. The Constitution does not allow for that. So the very Constitution that he spoke about, acts as a barrier and he knows that. The Constitution in section 9 says "Subject to any instructions given to him by Her Majesty through the Secretary of State, the Governor acting in his discretion shall to the extent that he deems appropriate charge members of the Executive Council with responsibility for any business of the Government other than a matter mentioned in section 7(1) (c) of this Constitution or any department of the Government."

Section 7(1) (c) speaks to the Governor's power in relation to matters of defense, external affairs, internal security, the police or the appointment, including the appointment and promotion or transfer, appointment on contract and appointment to act in an office of any person to any public office.

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition in his contribution makes the observation he read that the Reporting Authority was a public office. If it is, we are caught by the provisions in the Constitution. The Governor makes the appointment and it is one of the things that he is not allowed to delegate. We can speak as much as we like to say, well, the Members of the Reporting Authority and all these people appointed by Cabinet, but the fact of the matter is that constitutionally it is not possible.

Madam Speaker, the last time I checked, there is an old piece of legislation in the Colonial's Law Validity Act which makes it quite clear that any legislation passed by this House that is inconsistent with the provision of this Constitution is absolutely of no effect. It is null and void to the extent of the inconsistency, and he knows that. So we can legislate as much as we like but if it is ultra vires, as the language of the Constitution, it would not be worth the paper it is written on.

[Pause]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, although the language of the Constitution speaks to what can and cannot be delegated, I think that after very long, passionate debates in the Anti-Money-Laundering Steering Group meetings there have been some useful changes to the way we do business. Let me just preface this comment by saying that, in fairness to His Excellency the Governor during these discussions about the amendment, he has never once sought to impose his will and the language. Discussions were held among members of the private sector who were present at any given time. We have never had any communiqué from the United Kingdom about anything to put in the legislation. Where it was possible, concessions were made.

If you look at the specific area of the appointment of the Authority, I need to point out that in the past, as section 21 in the current law demonstrates, it was done by the Governor in his discretion, without any reference to anyone, whatsoever. We know from previous experience that that was how the appointments were made.

What this Law is proposing is that before appointments are made there will be consultation with the Anti-Money-Laundering Steering group. May I just remind this Honourable House of who the members are of that group: the Attorney General, Financial Secretary, Collector of Customs, Managing Director of Monetary Authority, Commissioner of Police and the Solicitor General who will be the chief officer in the Portfolio. His appointment is necessary in order to bring the MSLG in line with the contemplation of the Public Management and Finance Law because the Reporting Authority, administratively, will be under the Portfolio of Legal Affairs. So, for budgetary purposes, the Chief Officer is a member.

Madam Speaker, I have just circulated a most recent amendment which now says that the appointments that would be made by His Excellency the Governor will also be made after consultation with Cabinet. However, again, we have to bear in mind that ultimately, constitutionally, it is a matter with the Governor as to who is appointed to a public office. So I think that on any reading of what we have here, it is a vast improvement on what was obtained previously.

All appointments will be subject to consultations. Additionally, the Governor in Cabinet will have some degree of control by virtue of being able to make regulations to give effect to certain matters under the Law. Page 9 of the green Bill in the final paragraph says, “The Governor in Council may make regulations to give effect to the provisions of sub sections (2) and 2(a) and 21(a) to 21(i).” Those sections are involved in a number of matters and I have them listed here-

- The issue of appointment of officers to the unit.
- The administrative functions of the unit.
- The issue of certain policy directions.
- The Governor in Council or Cabinet will also make regulations to give effect to the matters such as restrictions of the Authority from providing information elsewhere or to any unauthorized persons.
- The Cabinet will also be involved in making regulations to deal with the issue of the immunity of these officers; and
- The issue of the protection upon disclosure of information to other reporting authorities.

Madam Speaker, very importantly clause 21 (g):

- The issue of confidentiality of employees of the Authority. The Governor in cabinet will have an opportunity to make regulations to deal with that.

I will come back to that section later on because it bears some significance in light of the events earlier this year, and I think I need to deal with that in a bit more detail.

[Pause]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, clause 21 is of fundamental importance. In fact, the Governor in Cabinet can make regulations to deal with the guidelines as to the workings of the Authority. In my view, that smacks of some kind of control.

Madam Speaker, by so doing, it sounds to me like the Governor in Cabinet can set certain parameters by being able to make certain regulations. That is an effective way, notwithstanding the constitutional constraint, to exercise some degree of control and to ensure some accountability at least to the Cabinet. Similarly, by being able to make these regulations, the Cabinet can ensure the highest degree of transparency of the operations of the Unit. They are in a position to do so.

We spoke about transparency—the amendment before this House makes it mandatory that the guidelines issued pursuant to clause 21(i) shall be made available without charge for inspection at the office of the Reporting Authority. Members of the public can walk in and look at the guidelines that are there.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Please pass comments through the Chair.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town also spoke about the fact that the Authority will have power to impose a 21-day freeze if satisfied that there is reasonable cause to believe that there are proceeds of criminal conduct. He made the remark that he thinks that should go because that is an extension of the power. I mentioned in my presentation that that particular provision was left in because, among other things, it was considered that the reference to the Grand Court, before any freeze can be put in place, provides, in our opinion, adequate safeguards against potential abuse. I do not agree with the Honourable Member that the Grand Court will not be able to examine a request and make an independent judgment on the request, but instead will be merely rubber stamping what is presented to it. Madam Speaker, the history of our Grand Court speaks otherwise. Not our Grand Court.

The Member also made reference to the fact that the 21-day freeze is an extension of the investigative powers of the Reporting Authority. Madam Speaker, it is not. What is contemplated there is that where a report is made to the Authority and required to be analyzed—it takes some time to gather information from abroad—the Authority has the power, with the consent of the Grand Court, to preserve potential evidence should it become necessary to ultimately refer the matter to the police. That is why it is necessary. If at the end of 21 days, or before for that matter, having analyzed the Report it turns out that there was nothing criminal about it, two things will happen: (1) the freeze will go; and (2) the person’s information would not have found itself into police blotters. So, it is a necessary provision. However, Madam Speaker, this is not a provision that is unique to the Cayman Islands.

The Bahamas legislation reads: “. . . an act to provide for the establishment of a body to be known as the Financial Intelligence Unit, the functions and powers and body and connected purposes enacted by the Parliament of the Bahamas 29 December 2000.”

Madam Speaker, with your permission I would like to read section 4(2) (b). It speaks about the powers of the Financial Intelligence Unit of the Bahamas. “Without limiting the foregoing and notwithstanding any other law to the contrary, the Financial Intelligence Unit shall,

(a) receive all disclosures of information such as are required to be made pursuant to the Proceeds of Crime Act which are relevant to its function including information from any foreign financial intelligence unit.”

This is the operative provision—

“(b) may upon receipt of such disclosure as are referred to in paragraph (a) order in writing any person to refrain from completing any transactions for a period not exceeding 72 hours.”

Madam Speaker, this is even worse because they do not have to go to Court. At least we say that you must go and get the consent of the Court before you can do that. This piece of legislation for the Bahamas is even worse and more draconian (using my learned friend's word).

Hour of Interruption—4.30 pm

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member, we have reached the hour of interruption. Are you nearing conclusion or should I acknowledge the Leader of Government for the adjournment?

Honourable Leader of Government.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, although we did not give the Opposition notice, I think they understand that this is important enough for the Second Official Member to complete his contribution. I am wondering whether the House will agree for that to happen.

If that is all right then I would move that we allow the Second Official Member to complete his contribution.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, does he have an indication as to how long he will go?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: At least half an hour.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Could I then put the Question that all those in favour of suspending Standing Order 10(2) to allow the Honourable Second Official Member to conclude his reply on the Bill now before the Floor.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow the Honourable Second Official Member to conclude his reply.

The Speaker: Please continue, Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, may I thank the Chair and Honourable Members of this House for their kind indulgence.

Madam Speaker, I was making reference to the Bahamas Legislation and I said that the provision in our amending Law is not unique to the Cayman Islands. We tried to fashion the legislation in such a way that it reflects international standards and norms while, in the same breath, it allows our financial industry to remain competitive.

The Bahamas legislation, Madam Speaker, goes on that the Unit may, upon receipt of a request from a foreign intelligence unit, including the Commissioner of Police of the Bahamas, order any person to freeze a person's bank account for a period not exceeding five days, if satisfied that the request relates to the proceeds of any of the offences specified in the Second Schedule.

Madam Speaker, I made the point that, unlike the Cayman Islands, they are not even required to go to Court to get the Court's consent. We, at least, in our legislation, try to build a bit of safeguard in it and to provide some checks and balances to prevent abuse by requiring that it must be cleared with the Courts before it can be done. If we are going to create a unit, we need to create a unit that is consistent with international standards; otherwise, we are going to run the risk of having condemnation being heaped up on us and we should strive to avoid that where possible.

Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town also in his debate described as alarming the provision which gives immunity to the director or other officers of the Reporting Authority in discharge or purports to discharge of their functions under the Law. He made reference to, among other things, the conduct of the former director, Mr. Gibbs. Clause 21(e) of the Bill, Immunity of Reporting Authority, says, “Neither the Reporting Authority, the Director nor any officer, employee or agent of the Reporting Authority shall be liable in damages for anything done or omitted in the discharge or pur- ported discharge of their respective functions under this Law unless, it is shown that the act or omission was in bad faith or constituted willful misconduct or negligence.”

Madam Speaker, I mentioned that he made reference to the conduct of the former director.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: You are correct.

[Laughter]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, by way of example, the issue of the destruction of evidence by the former director is a criminal offence covered under the Penal Code—Destruction of Evidence. It does not matter by whom or for what purpose. If it was meant to defeat the course of justice or pervert it, it is a criminal offense already covered by the Penal Code. Accordingly, I go further. It would have been willful conduct. So the language in this Bill would not cover him at all. He would have been caught. He would not enjoy any immunity under this piece of legislation as before the House.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Members, please pass comments through the Chair. We agreed to half an hour. It is going to take much more unless we so conduct ourselves.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, I would just say “as the Attorney General at the time.” I was not the Attorney General at the time.

[Laughter]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Accordingly, Madam Speaker, the provision is necessary to allow for the proper functioning of the officers of the Authority, but it provides no comfort where there is evidence of bad behaviour or abuse.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member, if we may have a moment for exchange.

[Pause]

[Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Second Official Member, please continue.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I must remember that the gender has changed.

Mr. Speaker, the provision that provides immunity has nothing to do, as the Second Elected Member for George Town says, with protecting those who are carrying out the dictates of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Speaker, a similar provision finds itself in the Bahamas legislation. With your permission, may I just read Section 7 from the Bahamas Law? It says, “No action shall lie against the Minister, Director, Officers or Personnel of the Financial Intelligence Unit or any person acting under the direction or the director for anything done or omitted to be done in good faith and in the administration or discharge of any functions, duties or powers under this act.”

Mr. Speaker, it is not a provision that is unique to the Cayman Islands. It is put there so that people can carry out their functions without having to look over their shoulders. As I said before, we just have to ensure that you have the right person in the right place and be able to trust them. There are certain things that you cannot just legislate against; you can only legislate to punish it.

Mr. Speaker, I must make this observation because the Second Elected Member spoke very passionately about creating a board of directors to oversee the operation of the Unit. If there were a board of directors overseeing that Unit, do you know what would be one of the first things they would require before they take their seat? It is a Deed of Immunity. They would ask for that, Sir. That is how members of the private sector operate. Nothing is wrong with that, they are just trying to make sure that they ring fence their assets – immunity.

If you look at the boards of directors of Cayman Airways, the Health Services Authority and the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority, before they pull up their chair they ask that they be provided with this document. They would never function without it. And that is the nature of business.

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Member also spoke to the issue of the absence of disciplinary or complaints procedure for the officers of the FRA. I mentioned earlier, Sir, that the officers are public officers appointed by the Governor. Being public officers they would be subject to the usual disciplinary proceedings for public officers including, where necessary, dismissal. That is ultimately what will happen and that will be made quite clear in their letters of employment or their contract; that they will be subject to all of these disciplinary procedures. I go further because if there are allegations of excesses or abuse on the part of these public officers, the law always provides that their conduct can be judicially reviewed by the Grand Court. There are means by which their conduct can be called into question.

Mr. Speaker, the money laundering and the financing of terrorism are economic crimes which both rely mainly on the already existing range of financial and business practices to hide the proceeds of criminal conduct. Consequently, the countering, detecting and investigation of these matters may touch all law enforcement agencies within any jurisdiction. One single and all encompassing unit is therefore unlikely to enjoy all the range of skills and powers necessary to deal with all of these things.

Many jurisdictions, Mr. Speaker, have recognized the reluctance on the part of financial services providers to disclose to traditional law enforcement agencies such activities which, whilst are suspicious, fall short of clearly indicating that funds are proceeds of crime.

I repeat for the benefit of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition: Many jurisdictions have recognised the reluctance on the part of financial services providers to disclose to traditional law enforcement agencies such activities which, whilst are suspicious, fall short of clearly indicating that funds are proceeds of crime. Indeed, Mr. Speaker this is the dilemma for many financial service providers developing their business between confidentiality and prudence.

Mr. Speaker, some jurisdictions have appreciated the benefits of the Financial Reporting Authority serving as an honest broker between the financial services provider and the traditional law enforcement agencies, resolving the confidentiality and prudence dilemma. For example, because funds may be moved quickly, the pre-investigative stage may warrant a virtually immediate response. Yet it may not be appropriate for information about an innocent individual and business transaction to inevitably find its way into the police records. That is why you need an honest broker. Such an arrangement has illustrated greater trust in the counter money laundering system and promoted financial service providers. The FRA is working much more closely together with a common understanding and aim.

In brief, Mr. Speaker, the Financial Reporting Authority, as defined in this Bill before this Honourable House, meets the internationally accepted definition of a Financial Reporting Authority in every respect. In its entirety, it reflects the sensitivity and confidentiality of financial services provisions in these islands. That is what we aim to achieve.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, the FRA is of helpful and accommodating style by seeking to filter confidential information which ought not to appear in the police systems as a matter of course. While, after all, this is a law enforcement function, it has been given the minimum powers sufficient to accomplish the task that the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law sets it to do.

Mr. Speaker, when I presented the Bill to this Honourable House I made the observation that the restructuring of the Unit will be achieved in a manner that reflects the Cayman Islands' continuing commitment in the fight against money laundering in all forms. I also observed that the restructuring will enable the Islands to maintain that delicate but important balance of honouring our international obligations as they relate to combating money laundering and the financing of terrorism, at the same time, allowing our financial industry to be regulated along recognised international standards but remain competitive. While the events earlier this year were an eye opener, we have to keep our heads about us. We cannot throw out the baby with the bath water.

Mr. Speaker, before I take my seat I would just like to touch on one other issue that I think I mentioned earlier on. At one of the meetings with some of the members with the private sector, I mentioned that there was an observation to the effect that the amendment to the PCCL was being drafted by the UK Government. The short response to that observation is that it is incorrect. The legislation, that is, the Bill, was conceptualised right here in the Cayman Islands. It was drafted at the Legislative Drafting Department and was developed after several meetings by members of the Anti-Money-Laundering Steering Group, including meetings with some members of the private sector. It is as indigenous as you can hope for. It has nothing to do with the wishes of Her Majesty's Government. It instead reflects a national effort guided by our current constitutional reality, our own sense of the need to remain a regulated and competitive jurisdiction while at the same time recognising that the Cayman Islands is part of the global community and, therefore, subject to international standards.

Indeed, as I speak, the IMF review team is on the ground and, among other things, they are looking at the structure of the Financial Reporting Unit (honoured institutions) to see whether we are in compliance with their international standards.

Mr. Speaker, criteria 17 to 24 of the IMF Methodology is dedicated exclusively to dealing with the functions, powers and structure of the Financial Intelligence Unit. This is what the Anti-Money-Laundering Steering Group has to bear in mind when we seek to craft amendment to restructure the Unit.

Mr. Speaker, it remains for me to thank all Honourable Members of this House for their helpful contribution to the Debate. I wish also to thank Members of the Anti-Money-Laundering Steering Group, the private sector, the Legislative Drafting Department and the newly appointed Director of the Reporting Authority.

I thank you very much.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member. I will now put the question that a Bill shortly entitled The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) Bill, 2003 be given a Second Reading.

All those in favour please say, Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I think the Ayes have it.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Can we have a division, please?

The Speaker: Certainly.

Madam Clerk, can we have a division, please?

Division No. 6/03

Ayes: 9

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush
Hon. Linford A. Pierson
Hon. Gilbert A. McLean
Hon. Donovan W.F. Ebanks
Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin
Hon. George A. McCarthy
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
Hon. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

Noes: 5

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Mrs. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Absent: 2

Hon. Roy Bodden
Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField

The Speaker: Honourable Members, the results of the Division is 9 Ayes, 5 Noes and 2 Absentees. Therefore, the Ayes have it.

Agreed by Majority: The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) Bill, 2003 given a Second Reading.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: I will now ask for the motion for the adjournment.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until next Wednesday at 10.00 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until Wednesday 1 October at 10 am.

Will all those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker. The Ayes have it.

At 4.57 pm the House stood adjourned until Wednesday, 1 October 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
1 OCTOBER 2003
11.00 AM
Eighth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Second Elected Member for West Bay to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Let us all bow our heads and hearts as we pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.03 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture. I have also received apologies for the Second Elected Member for the district of George Town, and apologies for arriving late this morning from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS
OF THE CABINET

Suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) and (8)

The Speaker: I recognise the Leader of Government Business for the suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) to allow question time to begin and continue beyond the hour of 11 am.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, in order to take questions after the hour of 11 am, we move for the suspension of the relevant Standing Order.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

The Speaker: I now recognise the First Elected Member for George Town, in the person of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, for his question.

Question No. 83
(withdrawn)

No. 83: Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce what are the plans for the redevelopment of the property located at SafeHaven which was recently vested with the Port Authority.

Madam Speaker, although I have read the question, a recent article in the newspaper clearly outlined any answers that I would be seeking. Therefore, the answer has been made public and is available to us all. I will seek leave of the House simply to withdraw the question.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that Question No. 83, as appearing in today's Order Paper, be hereby withdrawn.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Question No. 83 withdrawn.

Question No. 84

The Speaker: The Elected Member for the district of East End.

No. 84: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports if the Government is seeking to borrow $25 million for affordable housing, and how many affordable houses this will provide.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: The Government is in negotiation with various financial institutions to borrow funds for the National Housing and Community Development Trust (NHCDT). The NHCDT is a government owned company, which can acquire, develop, sell and manage property. It will be responsible for the management and sale or letting (on simple lease/purchase terms) of the affordable housing developments.

Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly are aware that we are presently constructing 200 affordable homes. It is anticipated that approximately half of these homes (100) will be completed by January 2004, and the other half (100) by the end of May 2004.

Honourable Ministers are also reminded that in July 2003, Finance Committee approved the funds advanced by the Government for the Affordable Housing Initiative. The $25 million that we are presently seeking is to allow the NHCDT to pay for these 200 homes and to provide an additional 200 homes. These funds will be drawn down in tranches in order to ensure that the Government and the NHCDT are able to recoup their investment in a timely manner. It should be noted that as soon as this is feasible, the Government would make arrangements to recoup the advanced money from the NHCDT. Currently, over 800 people have expressed an interest in purchasing these homes.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Thank you. Are there any supplementaries? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am wondering if the Minister can tell us whether this $25 million includes property development and purchase.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I am not in a position to discuss the entire finances or the different management strategies of the National Housing and Community Development Trust at the moment. I have merely said that this $25 million will be made available to produce a total of 400 houses. At the end of the day, this money will be made available to the NHCDT.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Question No. 85

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

No. 85: Mr. V. Arden McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Gender Affairs, Youth and Sports if any eligibility criteria have been developed for the affordable housing mortgages.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: No eligibility criteria have been developed for the affordable housing mortgages.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there further supplementaries? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The answer is short, so we can remember it. I am wondering if the Minister can give us an indication as to when the criteria will be developed.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, there have been no criteria developed for the affordable housing mortgages, as this task is one of the mandates of the National Housing Community Development Trust.

The NHCDDT is a government owned company, which can which can acquire, develop, sell and manage property. It will be responsible for the management and sale or letting (on simple lease/purchase terms) the affordable housing developments.

It is expected that the NHCDDT will be fully functioning by the end of October 2003.

The Board of the NHCDDT will formulate the criteria for mortgages, and will inform the public via the media or this House.

The Speaker: Any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to the next question.

Questions Nos. 86 to 93
(deferred)

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for the district of West Bay, have you been deputed under Standing Order 23(3)?

Hon. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, whose questions are Nos. 86 to 93, I seek the leave of the House to have those questions withdrawn.

[Pause]

Hon. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, out of an abundance of caution, could I ask that these questions be deferred until the arrival of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

The Speaker: The question is that Questions Nos. 86 to 93 be herewith deferred until the arrival of the Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. All those in favour please say, Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Questions Nos. 86 to 93 be deferred until the arrival of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

No. 86: What were the tourism arrival figures for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for the past five years.

No. 87: With air lift being commonly accepted as being one of the contributing factors to the economic difficulties faced in Cayman Brac, what are the future plans for improved air service by Cayman Airways Ltd. to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

No. 88: What is the status of the implementation of a Motion, accepted by Government, to reduce the number of years to be fully vested for firemen in the Cayman Islands.

No. 89: If the Ministry has pursued the introduction of a day trip to Cayman Brac as an added attraction to the many cruise tourists.

No. 90: If there is a formal policy on the promotion of cliff climbing as an added attraction on Cayman Brac.

No. 91: What is the Government's policy on the future extension of Cemetery Pier, its designation as an alternative cargo dock, and the shifting of the existing replenishment zone to avoid the inclusion of the Pier.

No. 92: If the National Beautification Committee and/or Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Beautification Committee has convened any meetings to date and is there a budget to support these programmes?

No. 93: If the Committee on the introduction of a national lottery has reported on its findings and, if so, what were they?

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Correction of Inaccurate Statements and False Accusations with Respect to Government Policies

The Speaker: I have received notice for a statement to be made this morning by the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

As the Leader of Government Business and the Minister of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, it is my duty to correct inaccurate statements and false accusations with respect to Government policies.

In recent weeks, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has proffered false accusations and misleading statements pertaining to the policies of the United Democratic Party (UDP) Government. I will address these issues now, so that our country is aware of the facts and not left to labour under the misinformation campaign hailing from the People's Progressive Movement (PPM), and in particular, from their party conference.

Having said that, Madam Speaker, I intend to be selective about the issues to which I choose to respond. I refuse to get drawn into a tit-for-tat rebuttal of every false statement uttered by the Leader of the Opposition and his PPM. However, I do feel that it is my obligation to provide the facts when they have been misrepresented by others—in this case, by the People's Progressive Movement.

TOURISM

Madam Speaker, with regard to tourism, I will need to address a number of broad topics. Before doing that, however, I will recap the situation I found the Department of Tourism in when I assumed responsibility for Tourism in November 2000.

In November 2000, the Department was faced with a number of organisational issues. The private sector lacked confidence in the Department's leadership, direction and strategies—so much so that the Governor, at the time, removed the leadership of that Department and ordered significant changes.

In order to effect positive change in the tourism industry, we had to first concentrate on restructuring and refocusing the Department, on creating an atmosphere of trust and teamwork between the private sector and the Department, and on increasing public awareness of the Cayman Islands in all our critical markets.

Madam Speaker, we made a number of significant changes in the Department's staffing, and charged the new Director and Deputy Director with the task of rebuilding the relationship with the private sector. Then we started to build the Cayman Islands' brand again, and to focus on increasing public awareness by securing funding for the first Cayman Islands television campaign to run in North America in many years.

Today, we continue to work closely with the private sector, and we have a fully integrated marketing plan that is developed in consultation with the private sector.

Madam Speaker, all of these things—reorganisation, restructuring, team-building, brand-building and creating new campaigns—were taking place with an intense period of global conditions as the backdrop. First, there were the terrorist attacks on 11 September 2001. Then, there was the US-led war against Iraq, which was followed by the outbreak of Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS). Occurring concurrently with these events was the slowing of the United States economy, our number one source market for tourism. The combined effect of these events was to produce what could be referred to as Tourism's "Perfect Storm"—a storm that no one could have ever anticipated or planned for. As the world struggled to recover from this storm, tourism, the world, over was responding with increased funds for the marketing of tourism, and with incredible package pricing for vacations.

As we are all well aware, tourism is an area of our economy that was hard hit by the unfortunate terrorist event and by a severe downturn in world economic conditions. Estimates of spending in the tourist industry worldwide indicate that such spending has been reduced by in excess of US$9 billion. An extraordinary amount of planning has been put into place for the implementation of new marketing plans. New offices have been opened, new staff hired and every effort is being made to encourage travel to, and overnight stay in, the various properties in all three of these Islands.

Madam Speaker, marketing for the tourist industry must be planned well in advance, as a lag occurs between the launch of an advertising campaign and people actually booking and taking vacations as a result of those promotions. Advertisements must be placed now to have any effect next November. The preparation of marketing programmes, and the placing of advertisements in various media sources, is not an overnight process. The United Democratic Party Government has been diligently at work putting in place the various plans that are necessary to encourage tourists to come to these Islands.

Hotels, condominiums, and other places of residence for tourists have been encouraged to upgrade their products and reduce their rates, and airfares charged by Cayman Airways have been cut to encourage further travel. All of these plans are showing increased signs of success. Bookings for the Christmas season and the winter in general are showing steady increases week by week. Encouraging various parts of the industry to hold major seminars in the Cayman Islands, including the seminar by the cruise ship industry, will provide significant exposure and business.

CRUISE TOURISM

Madam Speaker, new negotiations with the cruise representatives have resulted in more ships coming to these Islands instead of bypassing us. This has taken up some of the slack in the overnight tourist industry; provided a welcome piece of business for all merchants, tour operators, water sports operators; and provided more exposure to the Cayman Islands from cruise ship visitors. The signing of an agreement to construct a new port financed by the cruise ship industry is one of the UDP's long-term planning measures, and will go a long way toward benefiting this country and its people for many years to come. These Islands, and many of its small merchants, tour operators, bus conductors and also larger shops, depend upon cruise tourism for a large proportion of their income. Without it, we would be faced with significant problems. The PPM has told many untruths in regard to the funding of the port by the Florida-Caribbean Cruise Association (FCCA).

Madam Speaker, regardless of what the PPM has propagated, we do not have to pay one red cent of the $26 million. I believe that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition understands this. However, it was only too good for him and the PPM to say that it was not good. Of course, there were no alternatives proposed by the Member.

Madam Speaker, the beautification of the George Town area, and the improvement of other facilities, has all been put into place. Further measures will be undertaken along with the port development programme.

Against that introduction, I will now deal more specifically with the issues raised by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, and his party, about the tourism industry. These are:

- National Tourism Management Policy
- Cayman Airways
- The Port Facility
- Cruise Facilities
- Visitors to the Sister Islands
- The Ritz-Carlton Resort
- Human Resources
- Relationship with the Private Sector

NATIONAL TOURISM MANAGEMENT POLICY

Madam Speaker, the main allegation with regard to the National Tourism Management Policy (NTMP) is that this Government has failed to heed the advice of the NTMP.

In this regard, the Member discussed The Ritz-Carlton project and the additional inventory of hotel rooms that will result from its completion. Although it is true that The Ritz-Carlton will add to the stock of rooms on Grand Cayman, I must remind you that planning permission for The Ritz was both sought and received prior to the publication of the NTMP. Nevertheless, I ask: Is this wrong?

Additionally Madam Speaker, The Ritz-Carlton is a cogent example that the target market is not mass tourism. I repeat that for emphasis, Madam Speaker, because I see that the Member is not listening, and this is all for his benefit. The Ritz-Carlton is a cogent example that the target market is not mass tourism, as he said. This is something of which I have been accused by the Leader of the Opposition. The Ritz-Carlton will appeal to the high-end guest who, up until now, has had limited full-service choices in Cayman. No one who understands the tourism industry can doubt the significant contribution that a product at the level of The Ritz-Carlton will make. Only those persons who are willing to mislead do not know. I do not know if the Leader of the Opposition knows. What I can say is that he does not like to fly, so he might not have been able to get around to a Ritz-Carlton resort. Good!

Madam Speaker, since the NTMP was approved, we have worked diligently towards the goal of implementation. A recommended set of committees, along with the recommended committee representatives, was proposed.

If the Honourable Leader of the Opposition had been paying attention, as he is not doing now, he would recall that I made a statement on this matter in this Honourable House not very long ago. The more than 70 items for action that were spelled out in the NTMP have been allocated to the proposed committees for action.

This preliminary proposal was circulated to the Cayman Islands Tourism Association (CITA), the Sister Islands Tourism Association (SITA), the Cayman Islands Chamber of Commerce and the North Coast Tourism Council. We have received most of their responses as of 1 September 2003. We are now in the process of incorporating their feedback so that we can begin making appointments, and then move on to the business of implementation. What the Member could have done, to be serious and generous at his party conference, was to have said that for five years or more, this country laboured without a tourism management policy. It was one that I had to put in place. From the time that we took over to the time we received the document was a matter of a year and a half. Therefore, to say that we are not moving fast enough is not really being kind. I did not expect kindness, but I do expect facts.

CRUISE VISITORS AND THE NEW CRUISE FACILITIES

Madam Speaker, it would appear that the PPM is targeting the cruise visitors as being mass tourism, and the new cruise facilities as being developed without due regard for environmental considerations. Later on, I will prove that the PPM disregards the truth and the facts.

I have brought before this Honourable House numerous pieces of legislation to help safeguard our fragile environment—legislation that previous governments would not touch. I will address this issue in greater detail later.

As I have said on so many occasions, the new cruise facilities are being developed to better manage existing cruise passengers, and to enhance their experience, thus increasing our opportunity to convert them to stay-over guests in the future. The new facilities will improve the Cayman Islands experience for cruise ship passengers and residents alike. Additionally, the improved facilities will enable our cruise guests to spend more time ashore, hence increasing the opportunity for greater on-island spending.

If the Member wants to look at mass tourism, he needs to go to Cuba, Santo Domingo, Cancun, Mexico, and a few other areas. There he will see mass tourism. That is not what we are about. Cruise tourism does not make mass tourism.

Madam Speaker, two million people spending $100 per year gives us, I would think, quite a large input into the gross domestic product of this country. I know that the Leader of the Opposition understands that. It is a good form of advertising.

However, I believe the country is hurt when people such as the Leader of the Opposition stand in a public forum to denigrate cruise tourism. I keep saying to him, to his People's Progressive Movement, and to the media that we are watched and listened to every hour of the day, internationally. If they believe that people are not paying attention to what they do and what they are saying, they are making a sad mistake, and it is only going to damage the future of this country. I ask them to heed that warning one more time.

PROPORTION OF VISITORS TO THE SISTER ISLANDS

Madam Speaker, in the last two years, the Ministry, and the Department of Tourism, has worked diligently to support the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman tourism product. In that regard, I will give some specific examples for the information of the public.

The Family Week Promotion: The Department of Tourism was an active team member in bringing this successful private initiative to fruition. The Department of Tourism (DoT) conducted visiting journalist trips to develop credible features on the programme, and assisted with a comprehensive promotion plan in the US market.

The Underwater Statue: The sinking of a dolphin statue entitled "Oceanic Voyagers" was the result of a combined public and private sector initiative that resulted in the statue's being sunk in the waters off Cayman Brac, thus creating an added dive attraction.

Nature Cayman: The DoT has actively worked to support and become involved in the successful Nature Cayman initiative spearheaded by the Sister Islands District Administration. We have supported it recently by:

- developing and printing a Little Cayman nature brochure;
- updating and reprinting the Cayman Brac nature brochure;
- committing to meet with those involved in the Grand Cayman nature product to create a progressive plan for preserving and promoting the Grand Cayman nature product.; and
- supporting the Sister Islands' Nature Cayman initiative by providing funding for interpretive signage associated with many of the observation platforms and trails.

I saw an editorial in a certain newspaper the other day, and I should say this: Just because the DoT is not handing out thousands of dollars to that editor, it is not a fact, as he says, that we are not doing anything to help Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

THE RITZ-CARLTON

Madam Speaker, although I made reference to The Ritz-Carlton project during my discussion of the National Tourism Management Policy (NTMP), I thought it appropriate to deal with some specific issues that were raised by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition in relation to this property.

Despite the timing issues with the commencement of the project, which resulted from regulatory issues and permits, the DoT has promoted The Ritz-Carlton Grand Cayman at every available opportunity, and continues to do so.

As the construction of The Ritz-Carlton continues to progress on schedule, plans are being developed for the DoT and The Ritz to jointly promote the new property in a number of big ways.

This Ministry and the DoT consider The Ritz-Carlton Grand Cayman to be the "jewel in the crown"—a property that will raise the bar for all room stock and services in the Cayman Islands.

It is real hypocrisy—which seems to be a long suit for anyone in the hierarchy of the PPM—to allege that I, and my Ministry, have given no support to The Ritz-Carlton. Look at the line-up; look at who sits on their platform, and who is in their hierarchy. If it had been up to that person, this prestigious development might never have been started. Up until today, that Member of the PPM (who, I understand does not even vote) is still bad-mouthing the project. That is the hypocrisy of the PPM.

I should tell the Elected Member for North Side that they should not refer to any Member on this side when it comes to that, because it is this Government that is giving them support. They should stop blaming the Minister. In the last several years, I have taken more stick than anyone else for the support of that resort. If I had had my way from the start, five or six years ago, the hotel would have been completed by now, and the Cayman Islands would have been enjoying the visitor support that The Ritz-Carlton can give us, which we so badly need today. The PPM, and their leader, should acknowledge the foresight in my support, and the Government's support, of The Ritz-Carlton, rather than trying to claim any credit at this late stage. That is what I saw sneaking in there.

HUMAN RESOURCE ISSUES

Madam Speaker, I am delighted to report that since January 2002, the DoT has hired 12 Caymanians, and has promoted another eight Caymanians into a variety of posts, including managerial positions. The staff composition in the DoT in Grand Cayman is approximately 80 per cent Caymanian and 20 per cent expatriate, with the percentage of Caymanian staff consistently on the rise. We know, they know, and in particular, the Leader of the Opposition knows that when we took over in 2000, the place was loaded with expatriate workers. Today, we have put in place more Caymanians than ever before. I had asked for the exact numbers, but I do not have them. They will be given to the House at a later stage.

As these numbers indicate, it has been a goal of mine to see that qualified Caymanians are hired and promoted from within whenever possible. I am encouraged that this is happening, and will continue to support these positive developments through the guidance of the Ministry.

As far as the private sector is concerned, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is well aware that we continue to encourage the hiring and promotion of Caymanians in the work force, and that we have plans to further facilitate this with the development of a Hospitality Services Training Centre, which we are almost ready to purchase. Knowing all of those things, why would the PPM deliberately mislead the public on this matter? Why? It is nothing more than political posturing by the PPM, plain and simple.

RELATIONSHIP WITH THE PRIVATE SECTOR

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has alleged that my Government has not maintained a good relationship with the private sector. Although I dealt with this issue earlier, I wish to bring to your attention a few other points. The Ministry of Tourism has worked hard to build a solid relationship with the private sector over the past 2.5 years, starting with the Tourism Action Committee in the summer of 2001, and then with the Tourism Economic Recovery Committee, immediately after 11 September 2001—both of which were made up primarily of our private sector partners.

We consider our relationship with the private sector to be vital to our collective success, so we are as consultative as possible. I meet with the Cayman Islands Tourism Association once per month here in Grand Cayman, and receive regular updates from the Sister Islands Tourism Association.

Madam Speaker to demonstrate what I have said, I will point out that I recently received a letter from the President of the Cayman Islands Tourism Association, Mr. Mark Bastis. I ask the Elected Member for North Side to take a note. He said, and I quote: “On behalf of the CITA, we appreciate our relationship with the Department of Tourism and especially our early involvement in the strategic development of the 2004 marketing plan. While we consult with each other on marketing and product development issues, we believe that our continued involvement is critical and we are confident that this mutually beneficial relationship will continue to strengthen in the future.”

Madam Speaker, there is still much work to be done in the tourism industry; there is no question about that. It is, after all, a rapidly changing industry that requires very creative thinking to remain competitive. However, if you consider where we have come from, the DoT now operates as a business in terms of financial management, marketing planning and human resource management. Many of the credibility issues of the past administration are almost behind us. We now have some of the most compelling offers in the market that we have ever seen. Now that we have the marketing and distribution expertise in place to ensure that the public is aware of these fantastic offers, now is the time for us to pull together to make this upcoming winter season as successful as possible. This is no time for civil disobedience or marches, when we are just beginning to manage the upcoming winter season. Therefore, the Opposition Members should behave themselves.

My Ministry believes that more than ever, now is the time to stay the course. These are unprecedented times, and there are no simple solutions. If there were, worldwide tourism would not still be in such a state of flux.

I wish the Leader of the Opposition were here. This Ministry and the DoT have been committed to building a credible marketing team, and a marketing plan based on appropriate skills, quantitative research and legitimate marketing strategies—something that the Leader of the Opposition says does not exist. I do not know where he is living.

We can no longer afford simply to respond to rhetoric or pure emotion. That is why I say to the Leader of the Opposition that when he stands to challenge the Government, he should do so based on fact, not on what someone tells him under some almond tree.

Neither the Director nor the Deputy Director of Tourism was asked by the People's Progressive Movement for input on current tourism initiatives or programmes, so I guess they had another advisor. If they had been consulted, the speech by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition at his PPM inaugural conference might have been different, or I hope that it would have been different.

The question, Madam Speaker, is whether the Leader of the Opposition was interested in presenting the facts on tourism in his inaugural speech, or simply political rhetoric to drum up support for the 2004 General Elections. The latter is the obvious answer.

I am satisfied that at the macro level, we have positioned ourselves to get the best possible results in our tourism industry, once we can recover from the several events that have plagued global tourism since September 2001, including the economic slowdown in our most significant market, the United States.

I pray diligently on a daily basis. I am not saying that I am the best Christian anywhere. What I am saying is that I pray at least once a night, hoping that we can see world peace, that hostilities will break down and that the international world can come together. That will be better for tourism and economic strategies around the world, and in particular, for developing countries such as the Cayman Islands.

CAYMAN AIRWAYS

A new board was appointed, cost-saving measures were introduced, fares were reduced and load factors have increased. Cayman Airways is a part of our identity and our national pride, and by bringing tourists to the Islands, we create significant financial gains for the country as a whole. Once we can afford it, once expenditure is carefully managed, and once we all support it, we should continue to be proud of our airline and its staff.

As a mandate from me, the Minister of Tourism in 2002, the Cayman Islands Department of Tourism and Cayman Airways (CAL) began rebuilding their relationships with, and commitment to, each other. Let us call a spade a spade: that was not the case. There was far too much bad blood, as there was far too much bad blood between the DoT and the private sector at the time. In 2002, the DoT and CAL developed a joint marketing plan that included newsprint, sale promotions, public relations, city promotions, trade and consumer shows, familiarisation trips for CAL's sales staff and television advertising. In 2002, the Cayman Islands returned to television advertising and featured CAL as the call to action in the Houston market.

Early in January and February of this year, the Cayman Islands Department of Tourism made presentations to the Board of Directors and the Ministry of Tourism, demonstrating US market opportunities for new routes, which were not being served by US carriers and presented viable commercial potential. The DoT drew on its statistical data and showed CAL the top ten US cities, recommending Chicago as the number one new route for consideration. The public knows about the Chicago promotion, as does the Leader of the Opposition, because they criticise that too.

The DoT continues to promote the national carrier with newsprint and television advertising, with trade and other shows, and with various promotions, including direct mail. In the first half of 2003 alone, the DoT has supported the national carrier with over $1.1 million in television and print advertising.

The partnership is being strengthened, and at the moment, the DoT is developing a comprehensive launch plan for the airline's new Chicago route. This plan is expected to include newsprint and television advertising, various shows, trips made by the sales agents, special events, and, of course, direct mail—all with a strong focus on exciting the Chicago area about the destination, especially consumers and the media.

Cayman Airways and the DoT will continue their close relationship. For the remainder of 2003, the DoT will assist CAL with its newsprint, radio and television advertising, with other promotional give-a-ways, with direct mail and with other promotions when promoting its existing routes.

The DoT will assist CAL with a comprehensive marketing plan to promote all routes for the first half of 2004. This comprehensive plan will include sales promotions, newsprint, radio and television advertising, and so on.

Madam Speaker, the DoT continues to look forward to helping the airline introduce the Chicago route and make it a success. We hope to continue to work closely with CAL and will support the national carrier, as it an important element of tourism.

For the sake of the future, let me call a spade a spade. Although we say we must change the way we do business—and that, I think, was part and parcel of his call—people need to understand that statement.

Tourism can no longer mean a hotel with beds and a boat. A real restaurant is what is demanded, with amenities. Real service is needed. Lower costs are also needed. Good entertainment is what visitors are looking for. I trust that the Opposition understands this. The Leader of the Opposition says we must balance it. Madam Speaker, what are we balancing? If we do not have a resort with all the things that people are expecting of a five-star resort today, and if people have to close up their entertainment centres at 12.00 at night, stop and think. Put yourself in my shoes and ask yourself, "What would I do?" You did not say that.

ENVIRONMENTAL ISSUES

I am turning now to environmental issues, Madam Speaker. Again, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition attacked my Government's record with respect to our environmental policies.

The following is a summary of the Ministry's achievements in the area of environmental protection. In 2001, legislation amending the Marine Conservation Law was introduced. These amendments gave effect to recommendations that, in some cases, had been made some six to seven years earlier by the Department of the Environment and the Marine Conservation Board. The amendments introduced reduced catch limits and extended closed seasons for conch and lobster, as well as new provisions for the protection of whelk, the Nassau grouper, jewfish and several species of ornamental fish. In addition, an 8-inch size limit was placed on all fish and a licensing provision for fish pots was introduced.

In addition, the Ministry has initiated a consultation process on the establishment of a special management area for the Sand Bar and its environs. The Marine Conservation Board, the Department of the Environment and the Cayman Islands Tourism Association are currently engaged in the development of recommendations for regulations and guidelines for the management of this critically important area.

Madam Speaker, in December of last year I presented to this Honourable House the Executive Summary and Final Report of the Aggregate and Fill Study, which was carried out on behalf of the Government by the consulting firm CH2M Hill. Government financed this study and has committed to implementing its recommendations because we understand that having an adequate supply of aggregate and fill to meet future demands is important to all Caymanians and visitors to the Islands. These types of materials are needed to allow continued improvements to roadways, schools, medical facilities, and housing. However, we also understand that improvements to the Islands' infrastructure must be made with an eye toward the prevention of unacceptable levels of environmental impact, which could be caused by the inadequately regulated excavation of marl, sand, and rock from upland or marine environments. Therefore, an interagency committee, with membership from all departments and agencies involved in the review and permitting of excavations and quarries, is currently in the final stages of developing guidelines for the implementation of many of the recommendations of that Report.

Madam Speaker, I would also like to remind Honourable Members that in May 2002, I tabled the Cayman Islands National Environment Policy. The country never had a policy before. This document, which is the first of its kind, was developed with reference to the commitments made in the Environmental Charter, which I signed with the United Kingdom Government in September 2001, as well as to our obligations under various multilateral environmental agreements that have been extended to the Cayman Islands by the UK. The policy also embraces this government's philosophy of balance, and a commitment to obtaining the maximum benefit from our development opportunities while ensuring the conservation of our natural environment and resources. Five broad goals, and eight key strategies, are outlined, with two of the agreed areas for priority action being (1) the enactment of national conservation legislation and (2) the establishment of a national system of protected areas, starting with the creation of the Barkers National Park, protecting some two hundred odd acres of wetlands and beaches.

Madam Speaker, I am sure that Members of this Honourable House will also recall that in March of 2002, I tabled a White Paper on the proposed National Conservation Law, which explained the need for new national conservation legislation, including the outlining of commitments under various multilateral agreements. Madam Speaker, it is still my intention to bring the Bill for the new National Conservation Law to this Honourable House during the November 2003 sitting. I hope that I will have the full support of the Opposition, and I trust that they are perusing that legislation, which has been on the Table since March.

Madam Speaker, in April 2002, I made a statement in the Honourable House regarding Government's plans to establish the Cayman Islands' first National Park in Barkers. That is moving along, with negotiations with the owners of various bits and pieces of properties.

Finally, Madam Speaker, I wish to remind the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and his People's Progressive Movement that the Report of the Beach Review and Assessment Committee established by my Ministry was tabled in May of this year. Although he is saying that we are not doing anything, the Government is committed to implementing the recommendations outlined in the Report and, as he should know, $750,000 has been allocated in the 2003/2004 Budget for the recommended nourishment exercises on the southern end of Seven Mile Beach. All this is happening, yet the Member says we are not doing anything to protect the environment. Where is that Member living?

In summary Madam Speaker, it is clear that the Leader of the Opposition has not been paying attention to developments in our country. Rather than cooking turtle meat, he should be well aware of the conservation efforts underway.

I refuse to believe that the Leader of the Opposition is unaware of these developments. I believe that he is aware, but that he has deliberately set out on a course to mislead the country for his party's political gain. I have demonstrated clearly that my Ministry has made major progress in the area of environmental protection over the past two years. Perhaps the environment, including the Turtle Farm, would be that much better if the turtles had been taken back, instead of being cooked.

THE FINANCIAL INDUSTRY

Madam Speaker, this is one that really galled me: the criticisms of the financial industry. I know, as I have had to learn, that that Member would not know much of what he was talking about. He was reading a speech that could only have come from the Chairman of that party. Some of the arguments were put to me directly by him; therefore, I know that the exact wording had to come from the Chairman.

The Leader of the Opposition had the audacity to criticise me for what he claims is a lack of support for the industry. They should hang their heads in shame for that statement, coming from a man that forgot to send an important letter on the European Union Tax Savings Directive. We have given support to the financial industry.

The new Monetary Authority Law (2003 Revision) was brought into force, and a number of highly qualified, internationally recognised persons were appointed to the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority Board of Directors to complement our local expertise. Although I cannot list all the achievements and qualifications of the foreign and local experts on the Board, they are well known.

Dr. Richard Rahn is a Ph.D. economist who served as an economic advisor to former President George Bush, among various other accomplishments.

Sir Alan Traill served as Lord Mayor of London and was one of Margaret Thatcher's economic advisors, among the many other agencies he served.

Dr. Warren Coats, a Ph.D. economist, served in numerous roles with the International Monetary Fund (IMF), including Senior Economist and Economist to the Central Banking Department.

Senator James F. Keheller, an attorney-at-law and a former trade minister for Canada, served on the Senate Banking Committee for fourteen years in Canada.

The Board, along with the hardworking members and staff of the Monetary Authority, are in the process of re-organising the Authority in order to meet its goal of being one of the most efficient, friendly, sensibly regulated, and business-orientated authorities in the Western Hemisphere.

The United Democratic Party (UDP) Government appointed a group of well known lobbyists, the Livingston Group, at a substantial cost to the Government, to guide the Government and the financial industry through the difficult times we were experiencing and restore good relationships with Washington D.C.

Madam Speaker, there are two forces that affect earth: one is gravity and the other is Washington D.C. Many will remember the Enron crisis and those who sought to implicate the Cayman Islands. Many will remember the numerous international initiatives aimed at financial centres, including the Cayman Islands. These advisors and lobbyists have worked diligently and relentlessly with many leaders of important congressional committees, both in the House and the Senate, to bring to their attention the true facts about the Cayman Islands. This has had an extremely beneficial effect on the relationship that the Cayman Islands now has with the leaders of the world's most powerful economy. They provided relevant documentation and facts in relation to the Cayman Islands in an effort to dispel false statements and rumours relative to our laws, our regulatory matters, and our good governance policies. Although these efforts may not always be visible in the press, they have had untold benefits for the people of these Islands. Can you dare say that we are not doing anything for the industry?

Regular visits to Washington were arranged by the Livingston Group and their hardworking staff, consisting both of Republicans and Democrats, to meet with Republican and Democratic Leaders in the House and Senate, to put our story, and the facts, plainly on the table. Even I, as big as I am, have traversed the Capitol Hill building from 7.30 in the morning to 8.30 at night, breaking only for a snack and a drink of water. The Attorney General, the Honourable Financial Secretary and members of his staff, other members of the private sector and I walked, ran and took trains to meetings on a non-stop basis. The Deputy Leader of Government was also in Washington to sign the Tax agreement with the United States.

For those who may not appreciate this kind of work, the Capitol Building in Washington D.C. houses staff whose number exceeds the entire population of the Cayman Islands. I am sure that we must have walked and ran the distance between Bodden Town and West Bay a number of times during that visit. Yet they say we did not do anything; we just like to go off on trips. A trip, they call it! At least I went, and we were successful. That is more than the PPM can say of their leader.

Madam Speaker, The Leader of Government Business, along with the Financial Secretary, the Honourable Attorney General, members of the Financial Secretary's staff and members of the private sector, and accompanied by the Livingston Group, also met with every important government agency, to build on our relationships, clarify issues and express our policies and strategies for the future. At each meeting, after our policies and strategies had been set forth, every single department, Treasury, State, Customs, Immigration, Justice and other official expressed appreciation for our visit and approval of our plans and policies.

One of the things that we are well on the way to accomplishing, after that visit, those meetings and that interaction with Washington, is immigration clearance. I am not saying that it is going to be immediate, but we are well on the way with discussions with the relevant authorities. The implementation of the tax convention write-off is also something that we are moving forward with now, with the private sector. We told the Chairman of the People's Progressive Movement, Mr. Duckworth, who was at the meetings where we informed the National Advisory Council and the Private Sector Consultative Committee (PSCC) on financial matters. They know all of this. Why do they seek to deceive? Why?

We have initiated new immigration policies to assist businesses to increase their personnel and products in the Cayman Islands, and introduced the CAYPass system for directors and business visitors, in order to ease the red tape and burdens of immigration.

We have hired additional representation with a reach throughout Europe to advise us on developments, and to take steps to assist us in dealing with these developments, before they fester into crises.

We enhanced our relationships with other British Overseas Territories on the advice of major international institutions and non-governmental organisations who wished British Overseas Territories and other financial centres in the Caribbean to come forth with one policy on major issues.

In keeping with our policies, we hired experts to advise us on the European Union Tax Savings Directive, and on the basis of that advice, we took action in the European Court of Justice to clarify our position relative to that initiative. Again, Madam Speaker, it was being done against the backdrop of a beating every day from the Opposition, and charges levelled at me as the Leader of Government Business.

All of this work is not done in seven-hour or five-hour days, Madam Speaker. It sometimes means burning the candle late at night. Although it was not popular with all, everyone has seen from the judgement, a ruling accorded with local expert opinion, that the benefit of taking the UK to court has been tremendous. I say again that the Leader of the Opposition should run and hide for his do-nothing approach. He, of all people, should be as quiet as a church mouse when it comes to the financial industry, and these matters.
