We enunciated our policy in relation to tax information agreements. If you check the records, and look at the tape (and I listened to every word of it), this is the area into which the PPM chooses really to delve. The policy was carefully designed after advice from local and international experts, and accords with international law and the position of the United States of America in relation to certain objectives of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) tax harmonisation initiative. I pray that the Opposition Members are listening. I hear them groaning, but I hope they are listening. They need to listen, Madam Speaker. Our position is that the Cayman Islands are willing to enter into tax information exchange agreements with various countries, provided that those agreements are beneficial to our economic well-being. We cannot, and will not, continue blindly to follow initiatives and enter into agreements that provide no benefit to the Cayman Islands, and no access for any of our financial products to foreign markets, when legislation exists that prohibits business being done with Cayman Islands companies and entities. There must be a fair and balanced agreement, not a one-way street designed to destroy or disadvantage our financial industry, and the financial service providers who serve therein.

Madam Speaker, on the one hand, I am baraged with invective about my style of governance, yet they are telling us that we should rush ahead and sign these things, that we should go ahead and set them up. We are doing that, but we are doing it on a timely and even-keeled basis. Everyone should clearly understand that international law provides that a country's taxation regime should not extend beyond its territorial boundaries unless there are adequate treaty arrangements for the enforcement thereof outside of those territorial boundaries. This principle is recognised, and has been followed from time immemorial. Perhaps Anton Duckworth understands this, but it seems that as Chairman of the People's Progressive Movement, he chooses to say otherwise.

While the Opposition was choosing to mislead this country, and to be insensitive to our troubles with international pressures, we have been working. As I said, we did not rush forward. There were steps for us to take. We sought permission from the United Kingdom to negotiate bilateral tax information agreements. The Cayman Islands is not a sovereign jurisdiction, and in order to enter into these agreements, it is necessary to have the requisite consent of the United Kingdom, which is in charge of our external affairs.

Madam Speaker, we have already enunciated a policy that all of these negotiations will be carried out by a joint team of local persons who, acting with foreign experts on the laws of the country in which the negotiation is going to take place (for instance, Italy), will carry out the task. We have told them this. There will be no more signing of agreements without understanding their full implications and without significant benefits.

A good example is the "know-your-customer" arrangement. They said, "As a jurisdiction, you need to have this". Cayman's financial industry went to great lengths, and great expense, to sign, to have all of that done, and to put you and me, and other citizens of this country, through various hassles in getting our bank accounts straightened and useful to us. The UK came back to say that they were not going to do so, because it was too costly for them and their public, while we complied with best practice and standards. Therefore, there will be no more signing of agreements, and you can tell Anton Duckworth and every member of the People's Progressive Movement that I said that. I will not agree. If I only have one more year, then whatever government comes after may choose to do differently—so be it. However, you can believe this: It will not be me. I am not going to agree to do anything that will endanger the financial industry of these Islands.

Madam Speaker, all of the above, and much more that time does not permit me to mention specifically, is beginning to have the desired effect. There has been all of this work, and they say that we have not done anything. There has been all of this hard work, time and energy spent by us—not only by civil servants, and not only by elected Members, but by civil servants and the elected Cabinet working together in a unified move.

Reports from the financial industry indicate that business is beginning to increase in a number of important areas. I take my hat off to the Honourable Financial Secretary. There are constant changes in the international arena, and constant challenges. These changes and challenges are being met by the hardworking and dedicated staff at the Monetary Authority.

Of course, there is more to be done. We know that, but no one can point a finger right now to say that Cayman is not well-regulated, or that we do not have a Monetary Authority that is trying to do its job. Yes, we have a young Caymanian lady in charge, and I am proud of that. She is doing a sterling job, and the industry needs to work with her.

The industry, the Opposition, and even the Government has to recognise that it is no longer business as usual in this world. Rather than posturing on a political platform, they should offer support. It is their job to come forward with new products; it is not the job of the Monetary Authority. It is the Monetary Authority's job to scrutinise the products, and see that these products are what we need and can stand behind. Anton Duckworth and his gang should understand that.

It is essential that Cayman stay on the leading edge of international developments. It is essential that the Monetary Authority provide a fast, efficient and competitive service that is recognised by the international financial community as the best service in the Caribbean, if not in the Western Hemisphere. This is our aim, and we will not rest until that goal has been achieved.

Madam Speaker, this brings me to another matter. Certain criticisms have been levelled at the Government recently in relation to the additional tax information exchange agreements. I have explained some of that already. We have now got that permission. The Government sought permission from the United Kingdom to begin such negotiations, and we all know that the United Kingdom has been subjected to pressures of the international financial recession, such as the Iraqi war, and other internal problems. However, I am happy to report that our patience and persistence has paid off, and that such permission is in hand. They have given us the permission to negotiate for ourselves and that, Madam Speaker, is a significant milestone for this country.

Madam Speaker, it is obvious to me that the People's Progressive Movement is swimming against the currents of good policy and good business practice. These kinds of irresponsible pronouncements, designed to mislead the press and the public, can be best described as a pure propaganda movement emanating from the poor principal management policies enunciated by the People's Progressive Movement.

INTERNATIONAL INITIATIVES AFFECTING THE FINANCIAL SERVICES INDUSTRY

Madam Speaker, I also received criticism about the handling of those international initiatives, but I can say, and the world can say, that we have fought a good fight, and we are still successful. When you check the meetings that I have had to attend in Brussels, Washington and the Caribbean, Madam Speaker, the Cayman Islands have been well represented politically from this side. Of course, the civil service arm has backed me, or I have backed them, whichever way you want to put it. I think we have fought a good fight for the Cayman Islands, and we will continue to do that.

In a few weeks' time, I will be off to Ottawa, Canada with the Financial Secretary and some others, to attend the OECD meeting, where we will tell them again about the level playing field. That is what is necessary for us.

With all of that travel—for which they have berated me, of course—the Leader of the Opposition cannot convince me that he was not aware of these developments and the work that I was doing. We kept the public and this Honourable House informed every step of the way. I have no doubt that the public remembers the events, and so does the Leader of the Opposition. However, he was determined to mislead the public during his party's conference in an effort to polarise the public for the upcoming General Elections next year.

I say this to him, as I said earlier: He should remember that the Caymanian public does not forget easily. They can see right through political posturing. Let me remind him again that I will not sit idly by and listen to them mislead the public, especially when it comes to major national issues. As I said before, I will not allow him and his cohorts to drag me into an argument on every issue. However, he is now put on notice that he can count on me to respond to him on major national issues—issues on which he and the propaganda movement have a propensity to deliberately mislead the public.

THE CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY

The building of homes, office buildings, hotels and industrial complexes is on the rise. Planning approvals, and applications for the same, have increased significantly over the last six to eight months. I congratulate the Deputy Leader of Government and Minister of Planning. This industry creates jobs in all walks of life and supports many families.

Revenue from imports is essential to support social services, schools and medical care; to pay civil servants; to build roads and to improve the standard of living of all persons in this country.

I listened to the Leader of the Opposition ask, in that statement, "For whom are we developing?" Madam Speaker, where are we going to get the money if we do not have inward investment? If we do not bring people here to invest, where is the money going to come from? Where—from taxation? Even if we do not have inward investment, but introduce taxation, where is the money going to come from to pay for that?

I have often said that if the public of this country should ever choose that group, in the direction they are going, then dog eat their supper. The previous style did not get anywhere in this country. We know that, no matter how much they criticise me about my style of leadership.

To stimulate the industry, the UDP Government cut stamp duty, building fees and red tape, and improved services to the public, thereby stimulating growth. This has resulted in increased collections. Look at the figures; they are concrete proof of the good policies, and the results of good policies, put in place by the UDP Government. Recently, even the editorial of the one newspaper that had recently taken to criticising everything the Government has done had to say that the Government is on target, and that a good job is being done. Whether it was yesterday or today, I am not sure.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I know. That is why he has been giving you so many headlines recently.

“And now the Good News.” It was today’s paper. Therefore, even those who were lauding the Opposition are saying what a good job we are doing. What sayest thou?

EDUCATION

Our education system was not preparing our children adequately for the challenges they faced in the 21st Century. Without an adequate education system, our children faced doom and gloom in the job market, whether in the Cayman Islands or elsewhere, and well-paying jobs would not be available to them. The Minister of Education has received much criticism. Things might not have moved as fast as I would have liked to see, but he has worked diligently and relentlessly to initiate new systems, new programmes and new teacher participation in the planning of programmes. Although the new schools are not yet online, what is important is that even if a school class has to take five or ten more children, they have new programmes before them today. We are pursuing an opportunity for every child in primary school to have a computer, and first, in this 21st Century, we had to train the teachers.

Therefore, Madam Speaker, the Opposition should understand that, yes, there is a lack of classrooms, but that did not start today. In my district, there are plans to build a new school. There are temporary classrooms, but what is wrong with temporary classrooms? At least we had the wherewithal to do it. We certainly would have appreciated having permanent classrooms, but it is more important right now to get programmes in place, and we are continuing. In fact, on Friday morning, we will break ground for the next primary school at Poindexter Road. That will be followed by a high school and by the West Bay Primary School later on. The Member says, “The school in the swamp”. Madam Speaker, I will be kind to him, and say that he should go back to wherever he can find a school.

The Minister of Education has worked, and the criticisms are not fair. They are not founded on fact, either. The IBM distance learning system introduced by the Minister is one of the most sophisticated learning systems, and is available only to a few schools in North America. Our teachers are being introduced to the system, and when full implementation takes place, all children in our schools will have access to a computer. The only place I saw that was in Singapore, when I visited a primary school there.

New higher education programmes have been introduced, and more are planned. The Minister of Education is now in Canada looking at how we are going to introduce the university. Think of that, Madam Speaker. This little island, with approximately 43 thousand people, is going to have a university. I am almost 48 years old, and I thought I would never see this. I so longed to have that opportunity, but my parents could not do that. I did not have that chance. You say that our children do not have opportunity? A lot of opportunities exist, and what the People’s Progressive Movement should do is to say that to the people. If they would help to educate the people, then the people would learn. However, if we divide, they will go one way. They will say, “There is nothing, because that is what my representative is saying. There is nothing happening. I do not have any opportunity”.

A medical university with approximately 300 students has been licensed. The benefits of that university to our economy alone are in excess of $100 million per annum. People from our country—from these Islands—are attending the university on scholarships. Hopefully, after completing a comprehensive training period, they will return to assist with medical care in these Islands.

MEDICAL CARE

Our people, our children, our visitors, our guests and our residents deserve the best medical care that we can afford. This is essential to the growth and prosperity of our country, and all our industries. Without good medical care, we cannot have a good tourism industry either. Bear that in mind. Every company and business, and every resident who wishes to come to the Cayman Islands, enquires about the standard of medical care in these Islands.

The UDP is committed to providing first-class medical treatment that is affordable. In order to do so, the hospital and the various clinics must have efficient management and management systems. We cannot continue doing today what we were doing in the 1960’s. Medical care is expensive, and growing more expensive each day. For our hospital to produce the type of care that the UDP Government is committed to delivering to all the people of these Islands, it must be able to produce income, and it must have proper management systems.

If the hospital cannot pay for itself, or at least for a large portion of the cost, then what is going to happen? You say, "Do not raise fees?" Then where will the money come from? That is what we have tried to do, not to tax our people—especially those who can least afford it. The Minister of Health has been working overtime to fix a system that was in serious decline, costing the Government over $30 million per annum. This is something that the Leader of the Opposition should have said.

The Government is committed to employing the best available and the most experienced administration, highly qualified to run and operate the hospital. Recently, an extremely highly qualified and senior medical management executive, who spent years with the University of Miami, a leading medical university, has just taken up that post. Many complain about the cost of good personnel, and there are many who seek to sabotage the Government's plan for providing good medical care to our people. We are committed to providing the funding to employ the necessary people. Nothing is as important to our people as their medical health, that of their children, and that of future generations.

Significant sums of money are committed to development in all other areas of government, and experts are employed when necessary. For too long, our health services and our hospital have been denied the services of the best experts available.

Let us call a spade a spade, Madam Speaker. The Livingston Group is one of the best groups that we could find to protect us in Washington. The group in London, DLA Upstream, is one of the best groups that we could find to lobby and talk for us in London. However, it is not costing us $10,000. It is costing real money, but this is the price that we have to pay to get good people. Why is there such an alarm when we have to hire expertise in the medical system? If he does not do what we want, and what the programme calls for, then it is easy: he goes.

A new Cerner medical system, for the collection of data and the better management of our health system, is due to start being installed in early October. This will greatly enhance the ability of the hardworking and dedicated staff at the hospital to provide better care, and better-managed care, to all our people. If anyone opposes this UDP policy, let him stand up and be counted. However, to try to smear someone because he is paid a good salary is not right. It is not even good politics; it is shameful politics.

Madam Speaker, the UDP Government understands that all these things take time, and that change is not acceptable to those who want to continue in the old ways. However, we are committed. We will follow through with our commitment to provide the people of these Islands with first-class medical care. Where skills are not available locally, we will employ, and continue to employ, highly qualified people to assist us in the implementation of this policy.

AVIATION

Madam Speaker, new persons have been appointed to the Civil Aviation Board, and plans are well underway for the implementation of additional works at the airport, to meet new international standards.

We all know that the new security measures necessary due to the threat of terrorism have occupied most agencies in the United States of America. These matters have to be addressed urgently, and constantly, prior to opening offices of this nature—meaning the establishment of US Customs and Immigration here. All that can be done. As I said, however, we have to address the matter of the airport's meeting international standards.

Madam Speaker, this is good long-term policy planning for the benefit of our people and our children. Nothing ventured, nothing gained.

HOUSING

Housing is another matter that took a beating. The Leader of the Opposition challenged me, the Leader of Government Business, and the Minister of Housing, saying that he could get better and shinier houses for $30,000. The day that he can do that, I will say to him, "Quick, come and run to the Glass House. Do not stop; run and bring them to us". Let us know, Madam Speaker, when he has that alternative. We will gladly take up his project.

SPORTS

This is another success for the Minister of Sports. I believe that we are improving when I see the number of medals, the kind of competition, and the effort that is made by our sportsmen and sportswomen—our athletes. Sometimes medals do not mean everything. I congratulate the hard work of the Minister of Community Affairs.

TELECOMMUNICATION

Madam Speaker, despite the pessimism of most that it could never be done, our Minister responsible for Telecommunications, the Deputy Leader, has carried out long, arduous and difficult negotiations for the liberalisation of our telecommunications industry. I should say that he was ably assisted by my colleague, the Fourth Elected Member for the good district of West Bay, Mr. Glidden. A new Information and Communications Technology Authority (ICTA) has been established, with professional staff and a qualified, hardworking Board. As everyone knows, there has been a recent announcement that many applicants have been qualified for the granting of licenses, and by February 2004, our telecommunication industry will be served by more than one person.

I hear the Opposition threatening the UDP while they are being lobbied by the Caribbean Utilities Company (CUC). The Government will nonetheless move forward in its efforts to bring about lower electrical costs to the people and businesses of these Islands. CUC can spend as much money as they want, and buy as many drinks in as many bars in George Town, or this country, as they want, but our work will go ahead. The only thing they will do is face competition, because we are going to put that in place. We are determined to do so, no matter how much money they put up against the United Democratic Party, and no matter how many drinks they buy.

This will bring a reduced price to local persons and businesses, and will encourage new businesses to be established in the Cayman Islands, where competitive rates will be available. That is what is needed—not what the PPM suggested about the pricing. Competition will bring the price down. May the good survive, just as has happened with the liberalisation of Cable and Wireless and our telecommunications services.

And let me say in defence of the Minister regardless of what rebuke that they might want to say on the front page. Caymanians and Opposition pay attention to where that is coming from! Ask who own that company; ask the background of that company. That will not deter the Government.

The immediate benefits of this kind of policy have already been felt in the pockets of all people who have to pay a monthly telephone bill. Our policy is competition. The costs are already going down and this is only the beginning.

ROADS

New roads and roundabouts have been completed, they have complained about that but over time they will drive on it and will not mutter; they will not even know that a new road was there. But it is moving traffic and that is what is important. Traffic congestion is being eased and plans are on the way for future roads. This can only improve the quality of life for all, including the PPM, encourage investment and provide extra valuable time for families to spend together.

So, Madam Speaker, I congratulate the Minister responsible for these works, the Deputy Leader. Not all the time we agree but he works and that is the way it has to be. At the end of the day we are unified and doing what is good for the people of this country.

DEBT REDUCTION AND REVENUE GENERATION

Madam Speaker, the recent bond issue is another topic for that blessed platform. The recent bond issue in the international capital markets, a first ever, raised money to repay high interest debt and for some capital projects. Nearly all countries use this method of financing. It saved us about Sixty Million Dollars and came about by good government policies of the UDP Government. I thank the Honourable Financial Secretary and his team for their hard work.

The PPM also made the claim generally that we were neglecting our people. We know that is not so, especially when we lay reports on the Table of this Honourable House which shows our Development Bank giving small business loans, education loans and housing loans in the past two years of over $5 million. Of course, the PPM said it could not work. How can they be so hypocritical to say nothing is happening - the economy is down - and people are suffering - how? Ask the Leader he is the good investor, he is a good Caymanian when it comes to that and if he sees an investment that is good he is going to take an opportunity at it as well as I would do or you or the next man would do. But you cannot make investments yourself if things are bad in the country. And I would say, tell the truth, tell the people the truth at all times and then people would understand. Even if they do not like it they will understand.

Madam Speaker, in closing I thank you and this House for this time. Today should be another day when we celebrate what we continue to accomplish together. We are creating new jobs and opportunities for Caymanians and all who live here, giving our children a chance to succeed in the 21st Century with 21st century tools, breaking a telephone monopoly to lower rates and trying to bring lower electrical rates, and putting our energy behind all these good things. And equally important, by standing as tall as a ship's mast, we continue to strive to protect one of the biggest and better financial centers in the world, right here at home.

But today, in our Legislative Assembly, I am appalled by an opposition, which has no shame and no honor. By those who spend nights behind closed doors figuring out how they can advance themselves by tearing us down.

Pretty incredible, when you consider this same group stands guilty of the very things they accuse of others. They charge others and me with playing Caribbean politics, that is another one that hurts because I am a Caribbean man, music, culture everything but I do not hide that. But they in near secret bring in those very same people to help them set up their party, their organization, their meetings, their strategy in the districts, even tell them how to vote, even their ideas they bring them in. Like inviting talk of independence from regional leaders, the Honourable Prime Minister of St. Lucia. Now maybe that's okay if you're living like other regional countries, but it is not for us in the Cayman Islands. Then, driven by desperation and anger, these same people engage in the kind of gutter politics that shame them and, in the eyes of the world, all of us.

You know who you are, and now our Island does as well.

Madam Speaker, I thank you for your indulgence.

The Speaker: It is now fast approaching the hour of 1 pm. We will now take the luncheon break and reconvene at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.59 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.04 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

The House will now go into Committee to consider these two Bills.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

House in Committee at 3.05 pm

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House may I assume as usual that we would authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and of such like as these.

Would the Clerk please state each Bill and read its respective clauses.

The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) Bill 2003

Clauses 1 to 3

The Clerk:

Clause 1	Short title and commencement.
Clause 2	Amendment of section 2 of the Proceeds and Criminal conduct Law (2001 Revision) definitions and interpretations.
Clause 3	Insertion of section 3(a), definition of terrorism.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 to 3 stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate I will put the question that clauses 1 to 3 stand part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 1 to 3 passed.

Clause 4

The Clerk: Clause 4: Amendment of section 21. Code of practice and Reporting Authority.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In accordance with the provisions of Standing Orders 52(1) and (2), I the Honourable Second Official Member give notice to move the following amendments to The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Amendment Bill 2003, that the Bill be amended as follows: That there be a withdrawal of Clause 4(a) as proposed in the amendment and that amendment No. 2 be substituted therefor which will include a new clause 4(b) which reads as follows— “(b) by inserting after subsection (2) the following subsection –

“(2A) The persons specified in paragraphs (a), (b), (c) and (d) of subsection (2) shall each be appointed in writing by the Governor acting in his discretion, after consultation with the Steering Group and the Cabinet, for such period of time and subject to such terms and conditions as he may see fit.”; and”.

I am also asking that clause 4 be amended by deleting clause 4(c) and substituting the following -

“(c) by repealing subsection (3) and substituting the following subsection –

“(3) The Governor in Cabinet may make regulations to give effect to the provisions of subsections (2) and (2A) and sections 21A to 21 I.”;

The Chairman: Thank you. The amendment has been duly moved, does any Member wish to speak thereto? [Pause] If there is no debate—

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, just for completeness of the record, I think I said that I “gave notice.” What I am actually doing is moving the amendment.

The Chairman: Thank you for that clarification. I put the question that the amendment stands part of the clause. All those in favour say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment to Clause 4 passed.

The Chairman: I now put the question that the clause, as amended, stand part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 4 as amended passed.

Clause 5

The Clerk: Clause 5: Insertions of sections 21A to 21(i). Additional provisions relating to Reporting Authority.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

After having giving notice in accordance with the provision of Standing Order 52(1) and (2), I the Honourable Second Official Member move the following amendment to The Proceeds of Criminal Conduct (Amendment) Bill 2003 in Clause 5 – by deleting the new section 21A(5) proposed for insertion in the principal Law, and substituting the following –

“(5) An aggrieved person may, upon notice to the Attorney-General, apply to a judge in chambers to discharge an order made by the Grand Court under subsection (3), but such order shall remain in full force and effect until–

- (a) the judge in chambers determines otherwise; or
- (b) the expiration of the period during which a person is required, by an order made under subsection (2)(b), to refrain from dealing with another person’s bank account, whichever is sooner.”;

I am further moving that it be amended to add subparagraph 2 in the new section 21A(8) proposed for insertion in the principal Law:

By deleting “paragraph (a), (b)” and substituting “paragraph (b)”;

By deleting the new section 21B(1) proposed for insertion in the principal Law and substituting the following –

“21B. (1) The Governor in Cabinet shall appoint a body to be called the Anti-Money Laundering Steering Group, consisting of –

- (c) the Attorney-General, who shall be the chairman;
- (d) the Financial Secretary, who shall be the deputy chairman;
- (e) the Commissioner of Police;
- (f) the Collector of Customs;
- (g) the Managing Director of the Monetary Authority established under section 5 of the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority Law (2003 Revision); and
- (h) the Solicitor General.”;

And by deleting the new section 21B(2)(b) proposed for insertion in the principal Law, and substituting the following -

“(b) determining the general administration of the business of the Reporting Authority;”;

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak to it? If not I will put the question that the amendment stand part of the clause. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendments to Clause passed.

The Chairman: I will put the question that the clause as amended stands part of the Bill. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 5 as amended passed.

Clause 6

The Clerk: Clause 6: Amendment of section 22. Assisting another to retain the benefit of criminal conduct.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

[Pause]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52(1) and (2), I the Honourable Second Official Member move the following amendment to the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Amendment Bill 2003 in clause 6—by deleting clause 6 and substituting the following clauses: “Amendment of section 22 – assisting another to retain the benefit of criminal conduct.”

“6. Section 22 of the principal Law is amended by repealing subsection (8) and substituting the following subsection -

“(8) The Reporting Authority -

- (a) without having to obtain the consent of the Attorney-General, shall disclose to any law enforcement agency in the Islands any information received under this section, where there is prima fa-

- cie evidence of criminal conduct or where the Reporting Authority has cause to suspect criminal conduct;
- (b) without having to obtain the consent of the Attorney-General, may disclose any information received under this section in relation to criminal conduct, to the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority established by section 5 of the Monetary Authority Law (2003 Revision), or to such other institutions or persons in the Islands as may be designated in writing by the Steering Group; and
- (c) subject to subsection (6), may disclose any information received under this section in relation to conduct defined in paragraph 3(1)(b) of the Schedule, to any overseas financial intelligence unit, in order to-

- (i) report the possible commission of an offence;
- (ii) initiate a criminal investigation respecting the matter disclosed;
- (iii) assist with any investigation or criminal proceedings respecting the matter disclosed;
- (iv) facilitate the effective regulation of the financial services industry; or
- (v) generally give effect to the purposes of this Law.”

Madam Speaker, further Section 23 of the principal Law is amended by repealing subsection (9) and substituting the following subsection –

- “(9) The Reporting Authority -
- (a) without having to obtain the consent of the Attorney-General, shall disclose to any law enforcement agency in the Islands any information received under this section, where there is prima facie evidence of criminal conduct or where the Reporting Authority has cause to suspect criminal conduct;
- (b) without having to obtain the consent of the Attorney-General, may disclose any information received under this section in relation to criminal conduct, to the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority established by section 5 of the Monetary Authority Law (2003 Revision), or to such other institutions or persons in the Islands as may be designated in writing by the Steering Group; and
- (c) subject to subsection (7), may disclose any information received under this section in relation to conduct defined in paragraph 3(1)(b) of the Schedule, to any overseas financial intelligence unit, in order to -

- (i) report the possible commission of an offence;
- (ii) initiate a criminal investigation respecting the matter disclosed;
- (iii) assist with any investigation or criminal proceedings respecting the matter disclosed;
- (iv) facilitate the effective regulation of the financial services industry; or
- (v) generally give effect to the purposes of this Law.”

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Chairman. If I may just for purposes of clarity: there are two instances in the proposed committee stage amendments, which speaks to certain types of evidence of criminal conduct. I am wondering where each of the amendments begin in the subsection where it speaks to without having to refer to the Attorney General. How then will it be established that this evidence of criminal conduct is prima facie? What I am really trying to determine is, does the Reporting Authority itself have the ability to establish that just on its own, and if so, how does it establish that?

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I may make it absolutely clear . . . and I am certain the Honourable Attorney General can deal with it in this manner. What is the benchmark where you establish that evidence is prima facie?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you. Madam Chairman, the expression prima facie means “on the face of it.” If I may describe it as a subjective objective criteria or test, what usually happens is if the person who is in receipt of this information, having read it—in this case where they are empowered to require additional information to amplify any aspect of the report—and having conducted that exercise on the face of what is in front of them they took the view that it is a potential criminal conduct, then at that stage, in the case of overseas seeking the consent of the Attorney General to disclose it onwardly or locally, without having to get the consent of the Attorney General, may refer it to the relevant body.

In direct answer to the Honourable Member it is a subjective objective exercise by the person who is charged with analyzing the suspicious activity report that is sent in to the Authority.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I understand what the Honourable Second Official Member is saying but I need to ask him if it is considered—bearing in mind the possible nature of some of these disclosures—a safe enough method for onward disclosure, understanding that if it is to overseas agencies it would have to go through the Attorney General. Even with the local agencies – is that liberty for a special reason and why not? The amendment specifically now states without having to refer to the Attorney General. What is the purpose of that? Why not be safe by using the good offices of the Attorney General or his delegated staff to make that decision rather than take the chance of that not being the case and disclosure being extended to other agencies, when in fact if it was really not so it not have gone any further.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Chairman, two things:

Firstly, the amendments proposed to sections 22 and 23, especially paragraphs A and B, were to clarify the language in the principal Law as it currently stands. The reason for that is there have been ongoing debate, for example 22(8) of the Law, whether it makes it clear that the Attorney General's consent is not required for disclosures locally. You can understand why and with your indulgencies I will make reference to it. Section 22(6) says: "Where information is disclosed to the Reporting Authority under subsection (3), the Reporting Authority shall not further disclose the information without the consent of the Attorney-General . . ."

Then subsection (7) says: "Subsection (6) does not apply to information received by the Reporting Authority which it discloses to any institutions or person in the Islands."

However, Madam Chairman, this thing is compounded further because subsection (8) then says: "Subject to subsections (6) and (7), the Reporting Authority may disclose any information received under this section—"

It is extremely convoluted so it was thought necessary to break it down and basically reproduce the same language but in a different format so that it can be quite clear.

In respect of why there is no consent for local disclosures it was always the intention that where on the face of it a report discloses that there is a criminal conduct, then there should be no impediment, no discretion. It should be referred to the Police for further investigation. That is why it is not required for local disclosures.

Secondly, if the suspicious activity report discloses, for example some sort of bad behaviour on the part of a professional body and it is thought that it should be required for disciplinary reasons, it should be sent to the Monetary Authority to be dealt with. And that is why there is really no such veto powers required by the Attorney General. However, I must say that the private sector, in their dossier that was sent to us, which was signed off by three Members, Messrs Tim, Quinn and McGraw, took the view to the extent that the language was not quite clear and needed to be tidied up. They were also of the view that there should be no need for the Attorney General to authorise onward disclosure locally.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Chairman.

Just so that the Honourable Second Official Member can understand clearly; when I ask questions of that nature . . . I have no contact with those names you just called so I am not acting on their behalf. I was not suggesting you were inferring that but it is absolutely necessary for me to make that clear.

While I understand what the Honourable Attorney General has said and what these other people have said about making it clear . . . but first of all that means in this case the Financial Reporting Authority is not acting as a law enforcement agency but as a Reporting Authority. Otherwise they would not necessarily have to refer right away to another law enforcement agency but that is another matter that should, perhaps in retrospect, have been dealt with in debate on the Floor of the House.

Having said that I go back to this question: what type of consideration is there? If such a disclosure is done, as the case has been put forward by the Honourable Attorney General, that no impediment should be there if it is referred to any other law enforcement agency—and in the case of disciplinary action to the Monetary Authority—will not that law enforcement agency at some point in time still have to refer to a legal authority to question whether there is a case to be answered or not? That is my first question. There seems to be a puzzled expression . . . alright, he understands me. Sorry.

The Chairman: Are you putting the one question?
The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Chairman, the purpose of the referral would be for further investigations to be undertaken. And even at that stage once that investigation is taken if there is a charge or criminal prosecution to be executed, it would still have to go through another litmus test—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is exactly my point.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: —which mean that it would have to go to the Attorney General or the Legal Department for ruling. And thereafter if charges are laid there is still another litmus test because it has to pass the prima facie case test at the court. So there are several tiers.

The Chairman: Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I wish to thank the Honourable Attorney General but he has just made the point that I have been trying to make. I accept and understand that there are several tiers so if a legal department is better equipped to make a judgment call on whether there is evidence of criminal conduct and that a prima facie case has been established, why not let them be the first ones to say yes or no? If they decide that there is not, based on their expertise then there would not be that waste of time or exposure. If they decide that there is the same litmus test that the Honourable Attorney General speaks to would take place – and if he is going to answer me by coming back with how convoluted everything was and this is the easiest way to make sure if something needs to happen it would happen then – my counter to that is, why allow the possibility of anyone being exposed when at the end of the day that same Attorney General's office and any delegated authority will make the judgment whether it should go any further or not? I am saying that it is entirely possible in any given instance, whether those instances be in the minority or the majority or one in a million, that a legal department might be much better equipped to decide if something is worth investigating more so than the snoopy dogs.

I wish to not make any comparisons but I believe that there is a case for that. What I would love is if the Honourable Attorney General could convince my thoughts not to lean in that direction and that I am really not making any sense so just leave it alone. But he has not done that thus far.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I think I need to begin my response by saying that we have to understand and appreciate that there is "role clarity" and different people perform different functions and there are several law enforcement agencies that perform different law enforcement functions. The Reporting Authority and a law enforcement agency are not mutually exclusive; it is a Reporting Authority which is a law enforcement agency. I am not sure whether he would regard the Legal Department as a law enforcement agency. We do but that is another matter.

Madam Chairman, let me also say that I mentioned in my response that while the Reporting Authority is a law enforcement agency the purpose of the legislation is to vest it with the minimum amount of power in order for it to exercise its function. The purpose for that is to have an "honest broker" where, if on the face of it something turns out not to be a criminal conduct, that person's data information will not have found itself in the Police blotters.

Let me explain what happens normally: when a person's report is made to the Police it can be disseminated throughout the Police Station's network within one minute, be it George Town, East End and North Side as intelligence . . .

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is my point.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: So, if it is that it turns out that there was nothing criminal about it then what you would have had, Madam Chairman, is that person's information/data being all over the Police Stations and in the Police blotter, only to find out at some stage the whole information has to be scrubbed. So, the purpose of the Reporting Authority is to act as a filter in those circumstances, and having analysed the information, takes the view that it is something that has to be referred to the Police who then investigate.

The point is that the Legal Department does not get involved in the investigations unless at some stage during the investigation the Police require guidance on a particular matter. We, the Legal Department, kick in after the Police have done their information, fact finding and evidence-gathering exercise. Thereafter the file is turned over to us as a complete file, and based on the totality of what appears in that file the Legal Department will advise the Police whether charges should be brought or not.

So, there are different roles to be played at different levels in the pyramid.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Chairman. I know that the Honourable Second Official Member is not going to agree with me but I could not have made my case any better than the words he just said. I understand now with clarity the different roles but my question was: the same way he said if something gets to the investigative stage where it goes through the Police blotters and the information is disseminated all over the place then there is complete exposure at that point in time, comparatively speaking. It was for that very reason I asked him the question on the gathering of this information; why not the Reporting Authority, instead of taking it on their own to establish the prima facie case or not. Why not refer it to the Legal Department or the Attorney General's chambers for him to decide on who or what method should be used to look at it.

I understand what he is saying about the role the Attorney General's Office and the Legal Department would play after all the evidence is gathered. However, my point is that if there is any concern that in the case of innocence there is unnecessary exposure, is he saying that the Financial Reporting Authority (FRA), based on the initial gathering of evidence, is better equipped than the Legal Department to decide whether a prima facie case has been established? If that is what he is saying then I will accept it because he is the Attorney General and he must know which office is better prepared. But if that is not what he is saying then he has not told me why it should not be the Attorney General's chambers who decide on whether further investigations need to be continued. That is my whole point.

I do understand the roles of the various agencies that he speaks to but it has not changed the view that I have put forward; that if you are intending to protect the innocent you need to do so in a manner using all of the resources available to you. And if the Attorney General's Chamber has a resource and it is less of a resource than the FRA then I will accept it coming from the Honourable Attorney General. However, I do not think that he can say that; God forbids that that is really the case.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Chairman. The Legal Department is staffed with extremely competent lawyers. However, the Law before this Honourable House contemplates that the Reporting Authority is going to have its own legal advisor. That is what the Law says. It says it is going to be staffed by the director, an accountant and an attorney-at-law – all competent people – who will make that sort of initial assessment themselves. So, there is equal competence around the place.

Madam Chairman, let me go on for clarification: the usual suspicious activity report is a one paragraph in most instances. For instance, someone walks off a cruise ship, walks into my bank and attempts to deposit $50,000 or $500,000, as the case may be, and he has some difficulty explaining the source and refusing the business . . .

The Chairman: Honourable Second Official Member, is this a hypothetical situation?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Madam Chairman. I am just setting the stage to explain to the Honourable Member what happened but it is clearly hypothetical. In this case it can be either but what I am getting to is that on the face of it that in itself seems suspicious.

The question is whether there is an underlying criminal conduct and what will happen is that the Reporting Authority would conduct an exercise to determine that. This also is a hypothetical example: it might very well turn out that you have a gentleman who is going through divorce proceedings in the United States and is trying to hide his assets from his wife and that is the only reason why he turns up in the Cayman Islands with it. So when you dig into it there is really no underlying criminal conduct but on the face of it, it seems suspicious. And if that is all that happens you do not want to send that information in to the Police blotters and have it sent to Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FINCEN) and all over the place. It would have defeated the entire purpose of confidentiality. And so that is why we have that honest broker where the Reporting Authority acts as a filter in those circumstances.

The Chairman: I will allow one more supplementary Honourable Member.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Chairman, just a comment. I am not going to pursue it any further, all I can say is I have heard exactly what the Honourable Attorney General has said and understand clearly what his point is. As I told him a while ago and will tell him again: with the story he just hypothetically painted, I could not have said it better to prove my case but if they are satisfied that that is who it is and it should not be them then that is how it is. But it is not that they have showed me why.

The Chairman: If there is no further debate I will put the question that the amendment stand part of the clause as it relates to clause 6. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

- “12 (i) The Commissioner may decide to deal with a complaint by mediation under this Section if he is of the opinion having regard to all the circumstances of the case that the subject matter of the complaint involves only minor mal administration;
- (ii) the Administrator shall appoint in accordance with Section 8 such person as he thinks fit to be a mediator in any mediation;

- (iii) the Commissioner shall not participate in any mediation;
- (iv) participation in mediation by the complainant and the relevant Government entity is voluntary and the party may withdraw at any time;
- (v) the mediator may terminate the mediation at any time;
- (vi) where an attempt to deal with a complaint by mediation under this section is unsuccessful:
  - (a) the complainant is to be treated as if the mediation had not taken place and
  - (b) the mediator is excluded from participating as an investigating officer in any subsequent investigation of the complaint.
- (vii) Anything said or admitted during mediation and any document prepared for the purpose of such mediation shall not be admissible in evidence;
  - (a) in any subsequent investigation of the complaint concerned unless the person who said or admitted the thing or to whom the document relates consents to its admission or;
  - (b) against any person in any court or at any inquiry or in any other proceedings and no evidence in respect of the mediation may be given against any person, nothing in this section prevents a complaint from being dealt with otherwise in accordance with this section."

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for second reading.

SECOND READING

The Cayman Islands Development Bank (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to move [the second reading of] a Bill for a Law to amend The Cayman Islands Development Bank Law 2001 and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Leader of Government wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Cayman Islands Development Bank Law, Law 34 of 2001 was enacted in the Legislative Assembly on 5 December 2001 and assented to by His Excellency the Governor on 4 February 2002.

Following the passage of the Law, several practicalities needed to be put in place to ensure that the CIDB Law is in sync with the ongoing public management and finance reform and in compliance with the recommendations of the Monetary Authority.

A number of minor amendments to the Law is therefore being proposed and are embodied in the draft Bill, which has been circulated to Members of this Honourable House. Primarily, the Bill seeks amendments to sections 21 and 24 of the Law to change the CIDB fiscal year end from December 31 to June 30, which would bring it in line with the Public Management and Finance Law that specifies a new fiscal year end of June 30 for the entire Public Service. Also, to provide for the Monetary Authority to make recommendations to the Governor in Council in regards to a change in Director or Officer of the Bank.

Madam Speaker, as you will have realised these are just minor amendments and do not militate against the central operations of this financial institution.

I, therefore, wish to table the Bill for a Law to amend the Cayman Islands Development Bank Law (2001) and ask that it be passed.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak? If not I will recognise the Honourable Leader to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, just to thank Members for their support and we will have a short amendment when we get to committee stage. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Cayman Islands Development Bank (Amendment) Bill, 2003 be given a Second Reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Cayman Islands Development Bank (Amendment) Bill 2003, given a Second Reading.

The Information and Communications Technology Authority (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I beg to move that a Bill for a Law to amend the Information and Communication Technology Authority Law 2002 and for incidental and connected purposes [be given a second reading]

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, just to make a short contribution as the Bill is fairly straight forward. This Bill amends the Information and Communication Technology Authority Law 2002 in order to provide against anti-competitive practices in the provision of Information and Communications Technology (ICT) Services and ICT Networks in the Islands.

The Bill also seeks to give power to the Authority to impose administrative fines. Other miscellaneous amendments are included in the Bill. Clauses 1 to 14 are fairly straight forward and some of those amendments are consequential changes.

Clause 15 inserts part 3 (a) which provides, again, anti-competitive practices. This part of the Bill is based on the Competition Act 1998 of the UK which complies with Articles 81 and 82 of the European Commission Treaty of Rome. Madam Speaker, just to expand on this Clause—

“The Agreements by or between licences or between one or more licences any other person decision by licences are concerted practices which

- "a) may affect trade in the Islands and
- "b) have as their object or effect the prevention restriction or distortion of competition relating to any ICT Service or ICT Networks subject to this law are prohibited.”

Section 2. subsection (1) applies in particular to agreements, decisions or practices which

- "a) directly or indirectly fix purchase or selling prices or any other trading conditions
- "b) limit or control production, markets technical developments or investments
- "c) share markets or sources of supply
- "d) apply the similar conditions to equivalent transactions with other parties thereby placing them at a competitive disadvantage
- "e) make the conclusion of contract subject to acceptance by the other parties of supplementary obligations which by their nature or according to commercial usage have no connection with the subject of such contract.”

Madam Speaker, section 3(1) applies only if the Agreement, decision or practice is or is intended to be implemented in the Islands or is, or is intended to be implemented in such other manner as will affect the operation of any ICT Network or ICT Service in the Island.

Section 4. “Any agreement or decision which is prohibited by subsection (1) is void. Madam Speaker, subsection (5), a provision of this part which is expressed or applied to, or in relation to an agreement is to be read as applying equally to, or in relation to a decision by a licensee or concerted practice by which any necessary modification unless the context otherwise requires.”

In subsection (6) the Islands means “in relation to an Agreement which operates or is intended to operate only in part of the Islands that part.”

Part 3 (a) seeks to outlaw agreements, business practices and conduct that may damage competition in the Islands. Section 34(b) which is called the Prohibition applies to both informal and formal agreements whether or not they are in writing. So an informal understanding where companies (a) and (b) agree to match the prices of company (c) will be caught in the same way as a formal agreement between competitors to set prices.

Section 34 (f). Prohibition covers the abuse by one or more businesses of a dominant position in the market. Section 34 (f) (ii) gives examples of specific types of conduct that are particularly likely to be considered as abuse of a dominant position. These include:

- (a) imposing unfair purchase or selling prices;
- (b) limiting production markets or technical development to the prejudice of customer consumers;
- (c) applying different trading conditions to equivalent transactions thereby placing certain parties at a competitive disadvantage; and
- (d) attaching unrelated supplementary conditions to contracts

Madam Speaker, sections 34 (g), 34 (h), 34 (i) and 34 (j) deal with the investigatory powers of the Authority in relation to licences and undertakings which infringe the prohibition set out in section 34 (b) and 34 (f). And the Authority will have the power to enter premises pursuant to a warrant to search premises and take possession of relevant documents.

Section 34 (k) is very important. It states that “a person shall not be required under any provisions of this part to produce or disclose privileged communications.” This deals with privileged communication.

Privileged communication means the communication:

- "a) between a professional legal advisor and his client or,
- "b) made in connection with or in contemplation of legal proceedings and for the purposes of those proceedings which in proceedings in the Court would be protected from disclosure on grounds of legal professional privilege.”

Madam Speaker, I would like to move on to another very important section: 34 (t). This applies to any period of time prior to any person entering into an agreement where that person is of the opinion that the agreement may infringe the section 34 (b) prohibition and he has notified the Authority of the intended agreement and has requested a decision as to whether an exemption can be granted with respect to the intended agreement.

Madam Speaker, clause 17 of this Bill repeals and replaces section 38 (1) in order to clarify that the Authority may but is not obligated to set up the Universal Service Fund. This is found on page 26. It reads:

"The principal Law is amended" in section 38 "by repealing subsection (1) and substituting the following subsection which reads as follows: "The Authority for the purposes set out in section 39 may establish a fund to be known as the Universal Service Fund and such fund if established shall be managed by the Authority in accordance with regulations made by the Governor in Cabinet after consultation with the Authority."

Clause 20 amends section 48 which deals with infrastructure sharing. This is most important. The new subsection (2) of section 48 will provide that -

"A licensee shall not deny another licensee access to its infrastructure or infrastructure arrangement except

"a) where there is insufficient capacity taking into account reasonably anticipated requirements;

"b) there are reasons of safety or security; or

"c) there are technical and engineering matters which would make such access difficult or impossible."

Madam Speaker, clause 21 inserts section 48 (a), which provides that a licensee shall not divulge confidential information of another licensee except in certain limited circumstances. They are perhaps some of the most important amendments being sought to the Information Communication Technology Authority Law. However, in addition to that, I intend to move in committee stage an amendment to the Law which will have the effect of amending section 53 (2) by repealing the words "in obedience to warrant or order issued by the Governor" and substituting "the Governor" with "a Judge of the Grand Court." It is my intention to go into further details of this in committee stage.

Madam Speaker, I would like to say here that when the original Bill was being prepared and brought to Executive Council the then Governor had that section replaced where it referred to a Judge in the Grand Court. I have every reason to believe after discussing this with the present Governor that he might also have a problem with this amendment. However, it is the view of the Government that it is appropriate that any interception of a telephone line should be done on the order of a Judge of the Grand Court for various reasons that have already been mentioned during previous debates. I will not go into those again.

Madam Speaker, I would ask all Honourable Members to give their support to these amendments. Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member from the district of East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to make my contribution to the Law to amend the Information and Communication Technology Authority Law 2002 that is currently before us.

Maybe I should start off with the amendment that the Minister introduced by saying that when this Bill initially came to the House in 2002, I spoke out very passionately against the Governor having the authority to tap phones, intercept conversations and telecommunications in this country. At that time I asked that it be changed. I understand that the Government was under certain restrictions by the former Governor and his rulings and it was not changed. I must now applaud the bravery of the Minister for bringing it back and I commend him accordingly.

There are a number of issues I see in the amendment to this Bill and I have some concerns with them, but very importantly is the area of giving so much sweeping powers to the Authority; being able to enter premises.

Hour of Interruption—4.30 pm

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption. I recognise the Leader of Government Business for the motion of adjournment or for the suspension of Standing Orders 10(2) to allow the House to continue.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, we had agreed to continue until 5 pm so I will move the suspension of the relevant Standing Order to continue until that time.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be duly suspended to allow the House to carry on its proceedings until 5 pm today. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue until 5 pm.

The Speaker: Please continue Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. As I was saying there seems to be a number of areas in this amendment to the ICTA Law that I am a little concerned about; when it starts giving powers to an Authority where they can enter premises and get involved in the management of these companies. I hold no brief for anyone but I do have some concerns when it appears that the micro management . . . and I understand what the Government is trying to do, it is trying to prevent unfair competition in the industry. However, when we start to get into requiring that the Authority can issue warrants to take equipment from premises and the likes where there is reason to believe that someone has infringed on the law, I find that quite unfortunate that we have to go to that length in order that companies stay in line. I then looked at the exemptions under section 34 (c). The Authority may grant an exemption from section 34 (b) with respect to a particular agreement. Now 34 (b) (i) reads: "Agreements by or between licensees or between one or more licensees and any other person decisions by licensees or concerted practises which

- "a) may affect trade in the Islands; and
- "b) have as their object or effect in the prevention, restriction or distortion of competition relating to any ICT Service or ICT Network subject to this Law or prohibited."

Subsection (2) says: "Subsection (1) applies in particular to agreements, decisions or practises which -

- "a) directly or indirectly fixed purchase or selling prices or any other trading conditions;
- "b) limit or control production markets, technical development or investment;
- "c) share markets or sources of supply;
- "d) apply dissimilar conditions to equivalent transactions with other parties thereby placing them at a competitive disadvantage; and
- "e) make the conclusion of contract subject to acceptance by the other parties of supplementary obligations which by their nature or according to commercial usage have no connections with the subject of such contracts."

Madam Speaker, my concern is: why would we want to exempt any company from such things. If it is in the best interest of the country that an agreement on direct or indirect fixed purchase or selling prices of any or other trading conditions and share markets or sources of supply -

- "e) make the conclusion of contracts subject to acceptance by other parties of supplementary obligations."

Madam Speaker, I do not understand why we would want to exempt anyone from ensuring that they live up to these requirements. When we look at these five conditions, it is quite obvious that these would be in the best interest of this country and the consumer. I see no reason why there should be a need for exemption from them. Are we saying that the Board should have the authority to exempt some companies from living up to these in order that competition stays alive? So what about the other companies? Would it not be unfair to them? That is why I said it appears that we are getting into the micro management of the competition.

Madam Speaker, another area that I was concerned about with the micro management is . . . and maybe I will just go on to another section Madam Speaker.

Section 20, under amendment of section 48, Infrastructure Sharing. While I appreciate that the Law currently has provisions in it for infrastructure sharing this section seems to, in a little more definite way, clarify the infrastructure sharing. The reason I say that is because we heard recently that some nine or six providers were given licences. I personally know that there are a number of antennas that are being applied for through the Planning Authority.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of Government Business is saying that I should stop objecting to them. Well, I am going to take the objection that I just made to the extent of the Law.

In areas where there is infrastructure currently in place there should be no need to, within the same proximity, add additional infrastructure. I appreciate when the amendment requires that infrastructure be shared. Where there is sufficient capacity taken into account, reasonable anticipated requirements, there are reasons of safety or security or there are technical and engineering matters which would make such access difficult or impossible are the only reasons where it should not be shared.

Madam Speaker, we see the erection of so many antennas over the last few years strategically placed around the country and while I personally do not want to be standing in the way of competition and what is good for the country, I believe that the proliferation of these antennas is not in the best interest of aesthetics, safety and the likes. I have had personal experience with it and I really do not want to oppose these things just for opposition sake. The Leader of Government Business can groan as much as he wants but if he owned 8 acres of property and they had an antenna on one side of it and they tried to put another one between it and the road, he would not be groaning, he would be out there opposing too. That is what I am talking about: objection without really wanting to object. I think there are other areas within the country that can accommodate these antennas and regardless it matters not to me who these companies are. These are some of the things that the Authority needs to take into consideration.

I welcome and implore them to look at the sharing of infrastructure in this country in the telecommunication industry. It is absolutely necessary. No one should be allowed to prevent the sharing for frivolous reasons like restrictions on height; that they cannot get their antennas to the required height. The other provider who needs an antenna will have the expense anyway of putting the entire infrastructure in. Why is it that those cannot share by building on to the current infrastructure, whichever company that is for? Certainly I agree that there will be areas where there are no antennas currently and someone is going to have to put them down. However, in some instances I believe there should be a particular requirement that they all share in those locations as well if they so desire. There should not be many restrictions on height but the residential areas should have sufficient lands to contain the antenna if it happens to fall in the event of hurricanes or the likes. So, I welcome that section of the Law and I look forward to hearing that all these providers will be sharing infrastructure, particularly in the area of antennas.

Madam Speaker, section 22 of the amendment speaks to an amendment in section 49 (1) which says: "By repealing the words 'Governor in Council' and substituting the word 'Authority.'"

Madam Speaker, the principal Law says, "The Authority shall establish and manage a national plan for the allocation of telephone numbers among licensees in accordance with the regulations made in that respect under this Law by the Governor in Council."

If we apply the amendment to it, it would say, "The Authority shall establish and manage a national plan for the allocation of telephone numbers among licensees in accordance with the regulation made in that respect under this Law by the Authority."

Madam Speaker, maybe I am way off track here but perhaps the Minister can let us know what regulations we are talking about. We are taking that authority to make regulations in this respect away from Cabinet and giving it to an Authority. There may be some reasons for doing that, I have not seen them but I am sure the Minister will be able to assist us in that regard.

Again, my concern is the level of micro management; how far does the ICT Authority should be allowed to go? I understand the Minister when he says that much of these amendments are keeping in line with the European Committee regulations of Rome, I think she said (something to that effect).

Madam Speaker, while I appreciate our hopes and dreams to get the telecommunication in the country regulated, we cannot, in its entirety, give full authority to the Authority, in that, not only this Authority (the current board) but there will be other boards. I am not trying to make any aspirations or allegations against any one but this is a very competitive business and there has to be some control exercised by Cabinet. This amendment is giving the Authority some very sweeping responsibilities and authority and I am extremely concerned that maybe we should keep the control that this amendment proposes to give to the Authority.

With those few words I sit down, but in essence we agree and maybe the Minister can clarify some of the few areas that I briefly spoke on in his reply.

I thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Final call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

If no other Member wishes to speak, I will recognise the Honourable Deputy Leader if he wishes to exercise his right of reply. If not, I recognise the Leader of Government.

[Inaudible]

The Speaker: Sorry.

Honourable Leader . . . [Completion of statement inaudible.]

[Pause]

The Clerk: Question Time Recommitted.

[Pause]

The Speaker: I recognise the Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTER AND OFFICIAL MEMBERS OF THE CABINET (Recommitted)

The Speaker: I recognise the Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Questions Nos. 86 to 93 standing in my name are put to the Minister of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce. Although there is no specific Standing Order, I am hoping to withdraw these questions. Is it necessary for me to read each one into the record?

Questions Nos. 86 to 93 (Withdrawn)

No. 86: What were the tourism arrival figures for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for the past five years?

No. 87: With air lift being commonly accepted as being one of the contributing factors to the economic difficulties faced in Cayman Brac, what are the future plans for improved air service by Cayman Airways Ltd. to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

No. 88: What is the status of the implementation of a Motion, accepted by Government, to reduce the number of years to be fully vested for firemen in the Cayman Islands?

No. 89: If the Ministry has pursued the introduction of a day trip to Cayman Brac as an added attraction to the many cruise tourists.

No. 90: If there is a formal policy on the promotion of cliff climbing as an added attraction on Cayman Brac.

No. 91: What is the Government's policy on the future extension of Cemetery Pier, its designation as an alternative cargo dock, and the shifting of the existing replenishment zone to avoid the inclusion of the Pier?

No. 92: If the National Beautification Committee and/or Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Beautification Committee has convened any meetings to date and is there a budget to support these programs?

No. 93: If the Committee on the introduction of a national lottery has reported on its findings and, if so, what were they?

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

Hon. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I beg to second that motion, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that questions 86 to 93 be withdrawn. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.
Agreed. Questions Nos. 86 to 93 withdrawn.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Suspension of Standing Order 24(5)

The Speaker: The Deputy Leader of Government.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker, I wish to make a motion to suspend Standing Order 24(5) to allow me to bring Government Motions during the current meeting. That Standing Order, as most Members are aware, deals with the five-day notice that is required prior to the commencement of a meeting.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 24(5) be suspended. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 24(5) suspended.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: May I now have the motion for the adjournment by the Honourable Leader of Government Business?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am tomorrow morning.

The Speaker: The question is that the Honourable House do adjourn until 10 am tomorrow morning. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: I believe the Ayes have it.

At 4.58 pm the Honourable House stood adjourned until Thursday, 2 October 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
2 OCTOBER 2003
11.12 AM
Ninth Sitting

The Speaker: I invite the Honourable Third Official Member to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Let us pray.

Eternal Father, in whose presence our souls find the light: We beseech Thee to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11:15 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received notice of apologies for late attendance from the Honourable Minister responsible for Health.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

Report of the Standing Finance Committee on the New Prospect Primary School

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay upon the Table of this Honourable House the Report of the Standing Finance Committee on the New Prospect Primary School, for the meeting held on 12th August 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered. Does the Honourable Member wish to speak to it?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, as the deliberations of the meeting were publicly aired, I don't think it will be necessary to give further details at this time. All other Honourable Members have been apprised as to the details in support of that project.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS
OF THE CABINET

Statement on the Report of the Cayman Islands
Electoral Boundary Commission 2003

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I rise to make a statement on the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003, which has been received by all Members of this Legislative Assembly, and is slated to be laid upon the Table of this Legislature by the Acting First Official Member tomorrow, Friday.

Madam Speaker, by way of background information, the Electoral Boundary Commission was established under section 28A of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) (Amendment) Order 2003. The Commission consists of a Chairman, appointed by the Governor, acting in his discretion; one member appointed by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Leader of Government Business; and one member appointed by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Leader of the Opposition.

The following persons were appointed: Mr Carl Dundas, Chairman; Mr Eddinton Powell (appointed on the advice of the Leader of Government Business); Ms. Adrienne E. Webb (appointed on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition).

The mandate of the Electoral Boundary Commission was: “to submit a report to the Governor, as soon as practicable after its appointment, recommending the boundaries of 17 electoral constituencies into which the Cayman Islands should be divided with a view to each such constituency returning one member to the Legislative Assembly.”

The Commission has submitted its report within the allotted time frame, and I am informed that they worked diligently to provide a comprehensive report. Madam Speaker, I regret to advise that the United Democratic Party is unable to accept the Report of the Electoral Boundary Commission 2003, and will not be supporting the single member constituencies—that is, the concept of one-man-one-vote—for the upcoming general elections in 2004.

It should be noted that one of the methods employed by the Commission to seek public input was an invitation for submissions. The Commission received a total of eight submissions from individuals, groups of individuals or organisations. Additionally, district public meetings were held and were poorly attended. In Grand Cayman, public meetings were held in each of the five electoral districts. Thirty-seven people attended in the district West Bay. In the district of George Town, 15 persons attended. In Bodden Town, 16 persons attended. In North Side, seven persons attended. In East End, three persons attended. In Cayman Brac, 11 persons attended, and in Little Cayman, no one attended the meeting.

Madam Speaker, we cannot, therefore, conclude that there is widespread public support, at this time, for the concept of 17 single member constituencies—for one-man-one-vote—in the Cayman Islands.

Madam Speaker, on Tuesday last, we informed his Excellency the Governor of the decision of the United Democratic Party not to support one-man-one-vote. Yesterday, I asked the Leader of the Opposition for a short meeting in the morning; he agreed to have one in the afternoon. We—that is, all the Elected Members (with the exception of the Deputy Leader of Government, with whom we had held discussions together as a party; the Second Elected Member for George Town, who was absent for the entire sitting; and the Minister of Education, who is, of course, off the Island on Government business—met after the adjournment yesterday.

At that meeting yesterday, Madam Speaker, we informed all Members of our decision not to support one-man-one-vote, and shared with each Member a communiqué from his Excellency the Governor. After reading that communiqué, the Leader of the Opposition said he needed time to respond. He has issued a very detailed and, sadly, a most erroneous statement this morning, to which I will later reply.

Proposed Draft Constitution

Hon. W McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I also wish to lay upon the Table of this Honourable House a copy of the draft Constitution, which is proposed to come into force—with new amendments—in 2004, on the results of the General Elections.

Notice of Motion to debate the Draft Constitution

Hon. W McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, we have been having discussions with our people about this draft. I here and now give notice of a motion, which I will move in the November meeting, to debate the draft Constitution. Although we have had discussions with our constituents on the proposed Constitution, we will continue to discuss the proposals. I can also say that we have asked the Chamber of Commerce to chair a bipartisan committee for further discussions on the Constitution, as proposed by the UK. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader of Government Business. I have also received notice for a statement to be made this morning by the Honourable Deputy Leader.

New Government Policy-sharing of Communication Towers with ICT Licensees

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. A number of new Information and Communications Technology (ICT) Licences are about to be finalised by the ICT authority, as part of my mandate to liberalise the telecommunications market. The new licensees will be constructing their networks over the next several months, and are expected to offer services shortly thereafter.

Due to the nature of wireless communications, some of the new licensees must install a number of communication towers in order to provide adequate services to their customers. However, to prevent a proliferation of towers across the landscape of these Islands, the ICTA has established guidelines encouraging the co-location of ICT network equipment on existing communication towers, where such an arrangement is technically feasible. Some of the ICT licensees have already approached my Ministry, enquiring as to whether they may utilise existing government-owned communication towers in order to support their company's new wireless equipment.

These towers were originally constructed to support the various antennae and cables for the Government paging and radio communications systems, as well as Radio Cayman. They have been installed at strategic locations throughout these Islands, and are self-supporting structures, designed to withstand hurricane force winds in excess of 150mph. These towers are built on specially engineered, reinforced foundations, so they do not require guide wires to maintain their integrity. In accordance with the established guidelines by the ICTA, the Government has adopted a new policy that applies to its own towers that makes space available for ICT licensees' antennae and cables at government owned facilities.

Accommodating some of these new wireless networks at government tower sites will provide a new source of revenue. They are mutual benefits of permitting the ICT licensees to utilise the communication towers that have access capacity. This would allow Government to obtain additional revenue estimated at $2000 - $4000 per tower per month, through leasing agreements with ICT licensees. By locating private sector ICT network equipment on existing government towers, this may help to reduce the total number of new towers that will need to be constructed. This new policy is another example of how public-private sector partnerships can be beneficial to all parties involved. The Government looks forward to concluding agreements that the new ICT licensees in our continuing efforts of working together in the best interests of the Cayman Islands.

Thank you, Madame Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Minister. I have asked the Deputy to deputise for me. At this time we will do the change over.

[Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

Can we have the motion for the suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2)?

Suspension of Standing Orders 45, 46(1) and (2)

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of the relevant standing order.

The Speaker: The question is Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) be suspended. All those in favour please say Aye.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) are suspended.

Agreed: Standing Orders 45, 46(1) and (2) are suspended.

[Inaudible]

The Speaker: Honourable Member, we have no notice of any Private Members motions so we have no need for that.

FIRST READINGS

The Loan (No. 2) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read the first time and is set down for the second reading.

The Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill 2003 (Withdrawn)

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, thank you. In accordance of Standing Orders 58 or other relevant Standing Orders, I beg to withdraw the Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill 2003, and for the amended Bill to be brought back at a subsequent sitting or meeting of this Honourable House, quite likely in November. The reason being, Mr. Speaker, is that the substantive law that is now being amended has certain gaps in it; there are certain omissions of previous amendments, and as a consequence the amending bill is not lining up with the current law. I am proposing that it be withdrawn.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Member.

SECOND READINGS

The Information and Communications Technology Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: I recognise the Deputy Leader of Government.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I should like to begin by thanking my good friend, the Elected Member for East End, for his valuable contribution and in particular for his support, or hopefully for his support, for my committee stage amendment. I would also like to acknowledge his consistent opposition to provisions giving the Governor the power to authorise the interception of messages. I also note his concern about wide-ranging powers delegated to the ICT authority, but as I will demonstrate in what follows, I believe that what is proposed in these amendments is both appropriate and necessary. Moreover, we have not blindly incorporated legislation from the UK or Europe but rather have modified it to include checks and balances that are appropriate for the Cayman Islands.

In the Honourable Member's first substantive point on the Bill itself, he remarked that he had concerns about giving the Authority the power to issue warrants to remove equipment and other material from a company's premises. Mr. Speaker, were this the case, I would share his concern. In fact, the new 34I that this Bill proposes, on page 16, states only that: "the Authority may apply to the Court for a warrant and that a judge may issue that warrant only if he is satisfied", let me repeat that: it states that a judge may issue the warrant, not the Authority: "a) where he is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting there are on any premises documents-

i) the production of which has been required under section 34G".

Just before continuing, to refresh Members' minds, I would just like to read 34G of the Bill. 34G states: "Without limiting the generality of section 9 (3) (c)" and that is of the Principle Law, "the Authority may conduct an investigation under this Part, on application by any party or on its own initiative if there are reasonable grounds for suspecting- a) that the section 34B prohibition has been infringed; or b) that the section 34F prohibition has been infringed."

Just for clarity, Mr. Speaker, section 9 (3) (c) of the substantive or principle law, that is The Information and Communications Technology Authority Law 2002 states "Without prejudice to the generality of subsections (1) and (2), the principal functions of the Authority are- c) to investigate and resolve complaints from consumers and service providers concerning the provision of ICT services and ICT networks;" This is a most important point that the Member raised and I believe that for clarity and to explain this further I will read certain sections from the amending bill itself. 34I states "On an application made by the Authority to the court in accordance with rules of court, a judge may issue a warrant if he is satisfied that- a) there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that there are on any premises documents-

i) the production of which has been required under section 34G" as I have mentioned already and ii) which have not been produced as required;

b) there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that- i) there are on any premised documents which the Authority has power under section 34G to require to be produced; and ii) if the documents were required to be produced, they would not be produced but would be concealed, removed, tampered with or destroyed.

(2) A warrant under this section shall authorise a named officer of the Authority, and any other officers of the Authority whose assistance the inves- tigating officer considers necessary in the circumstance-

a) to enter the premises specified in the warrant, using such force as is reasonably necessary for the purpose;

b) to search the premises and take copies of, or extracts from, any document appearing to be of a kind in respect of which the application under subsection (1) was granted ("the relevant kind");

c) to take possession of any documents appearing to be of the relevant kind if –
i) such action appears to be necessary for preserving the documents or preventing interference with them;"

and Mr. Speaker, I trust that the Honourable Member is listening to the points I am making because they are for his benefit .... or

"ii) it is not reasonably practicable to take copies of the documents on the premises;

d) to take any other steps which appear to be necessary for the purpose mentioned in paragraph (c) (i);

e) to require any person to provide an explanation of any document appearing to be of the relevant kind or to state, to the best of his knowledge and belief, where it may be found;

f) to require any information which is held in a computer and is accessible from the premises and which the named officer considers relates to any matter relevant to the investigation, to be produced in a form in which it can be taken away, and in which it is visible and legible."

Mr. Speaker, the Bill goes on to discuss this issue of the power to enter premises under warrant, but the major point to make is that it is on the application by the Authority to the court, in accordance with the rules of the court, that a judge may issue a warrant. Such a warrant would not be issued through the Authority neither would the Authority be able to enter premises unless that authority was given. You will notice that only judges not the Authority may issue a warrant. Secondly, such a warrant can only be issued in clearly specified circumstances and thirdly, the provision speaks only to documents not equipment or other material.

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Member may have been referring to subsection 4 of this section, where it reads "Any person entering premises by virtue of a warrant under this section may take with him such equipment and materials as appears to him to be necessary." If this indeed what the Honourable Member was referring to, he has misunderstood the provision. It speaks to what the officer, that is the officer carrying out the investigation, may take with him into the building: it could be perhaps a torch, a flashlight, or a laptop computer; but not equipment that he could remove from the building. This section is clearly restricted to documents. I should also note that many other countries do not require the Regulator to obtain a warrant from a judge. Again, this is an example of the checks and balances that we have introduced into the Cayman Islands legislation.

In his next point the Honourable Member made reference to objectives of 34B as matters being in the best interest of Cayman Islands and consumers. I agree with his assessment. However, the Honourable Member went on to call into question the justification to the exemptions from 34B which are found in 34C. Section 34C states: “(1) The Authority may grant an exemption from section 34B with respect to a particular agreement if

- a) a request for an exemption has been made to the Authority by a party to the agreement; and
- b) the agreement is one to which section 34D applies.

“(2) The exemption referred to in subsection (1) may be granted-

- a) subject to such conditions or obligations; and
- b) shall have effect for such period, as the Authority considers appropriate.”

Section 34D provides as follows: “The Authority may declare provisions of 34B inapplicable in the case of any agreement which –

- a) contributes to-
  - i) improving production or distribution, or
  - ii) promoting technical or economic progress, while allowing subscribers a fair share of the resulting benefit; but
- b) does not-
  - i) impose on the parties to the agreement restrictions which are not indispensable to the attainment of those objectives; or
  - ii) afford the parties concerned the possibility of eliminating competition in respect of a substantial part of the products in question.”

Mr. Speaker, it can be seen that section 34D gives the Authority the ability to grant exemption in very particular circumstances. These relate to agreements that contribute to improving production or distribution or promote technical or economic progress while also allowing a fair share of the benefits to be received by subscribers. At the same time such agreements must not impose on parties to the agreement on reasonable restrictions nor raise the possibility of eliminating competition in respect of a substantial part of a product.

It is my view that very few agreements will meet the high standard required to qualify for exemption. However, if any do so qualify it is only appropriate that the Authority has the ability to grant them exemption from the rules. If as a result subscribers receive a fair share of the benefit and in some way production or economic progress is also promoted the beneficiaries will be the Cayman Islands and its people.

I should also point out section 34E permits the Authority to cancel or vary any exempted agreement. I therefore submit the safeguards are reasonable and the provision is in the best interest in the people of these islands.

As the previous two points have been dealing with the anti-competitive practices section of the Bill, all Honourable Members may wish to know that in almost all other jurisdictions in which an Authority is required to regulate the competitive communications or ICT sector, there exists standalone legislation on the subject together with a body of case law. For example, the UK has the Competition Act 1998, Canada has the Competition Act 1985, and Jamaica has the Fair Competition Act 1993. No such laws are on the Cayman Island statute book. It is for this reason we are proposing to incorporate these provisions in the ICTA Law.

Moving on to the Member's next point, I am very grateful for his strong support for the provisions on infrastructure sharing and in particular the sharing of towers. The Member mentioned a number of issues some of which are the responsibility of the Authority whilst others are properly dealt with by the Planning Department – both units falling within my ministry, so it is my direct responsibility. To ensure that nothing falls between the cracks, these two bodies are closely cooperating. For example, no applications for towers are being considered by Planning until the ICT Authority ensures them that infrastructure sharing provisions are being met. A joint policy has been developed and notified to both the incumbent and new entrants.

This policy states that planning permission will be granted in the following order of priority: 1) additions to existing towers; 2) new towers where firm contracts are in place for the tower to be shared by three or more parties 3) new towers where firm contracts are in place for the tower to be shared by two or more parties and 4) new towers where no sharing will take place.

In addition, the Authority and Planning will examine the locations of all towers to ensure that even shared towers are not approved for locations of close proximity if this is technically avoidable. As suppliers are very keen to offer their services as quickly as possible and because tower sharing is financially beneficial to them, we believe that the companies have a strong incentive to ensure that their applications fall within categories 1 and 2 above.

Moreover, Mr. Speaker, Planning and the ICTA last week jointly facilitated a meeting between existing tower owners and the new entrants in order to promote cooperation between them. This meeting was attended by over 40 representatives of the companies together with my Permanent Secretary and Government's Telecommunication Officer and the meeting was most productive. Honourable Members will also wish to know that Cabinet recently made a policy decision that I read into the Hansard earlier today that all government owned towers should be included in the infrastructure sharing programme. As stated Mr. Speaker, not only will this assist in reducing the impact upon the environment but potentially will be a useful new source of government revenue. Suppliers will be able to approach my ministry and the telecommunications office to enter into tower sharing agreements that will help them to meet the infrastructure sharing requirements outlined above.

The Honourable Member for East End also mentioned that we need to ensure that the land upon which the towers are built is large enough to deal with the possible collapse of a tower. This is a Planning consideration and is built into the Planning regulations. The size of land required is dependant upon a number of factors such as the height of the tower and the type of construction for example whether it is free-standing or uses guide wires.

Finally, the Honourable Member referred to proposed amendment to section 49 (1) of the ICTA Law. This amendment gives the responsibility for issuing of regulations governing the national plans for the allocation of telephone numbers to the Authority rather than to the Governor in Cabinet. In fact, this is not a new provision but rather the removal of an anomaly of the Law. If members would refer to section 70 (3) of the principal Law they will see that it says in subsection 3 "The Authority may, in accordance with this Law, make regulations relating to

- a) Licence fees
- b) Infrastructure sharing" and most importantly to this discussion-
- c) the numbering system; and
- d) the quality standards under section 50 (3) and the Authority shall consult with the Minister before making such regulation."

Just for ease of reference I would refer anyone interested in reading section 70 (3) of the ICTA Law 2002 to look on page 39 and section 70 is under part IX-General.

The view taken by this Honourable House at this time, at the time that this principal Law was passed in 2002, was that these matters which are largely technical in nature would be best dealt with directly by the Authority and that the requirement to consult with the Minister was sufficient safeguard. That is still my view, Mr. Speaker. The proposed amendments may remove the current conflict between the provisions of section 49 and section 70 of the Law.

In closing, I would ask for the support of this Honourable House for this Bill which is necessary to progress Governments' commitment to the liberalisation of telecommunication in these islands. Thank you Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Member.

The question is that the Information and Communications Technology Authority Amendment Bill 2003 be given a second reading. All those in favour please say Aye.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Information and Communication Technology Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003 has been given a second reading.

Agreed: The Information and Communication Technology Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003 has been given a second reading.

The Speaker: Honourable Members it has been brought to my attention that I may have made an error in procedure a few minutes ago when the Third Official Member actually moved for the withdrawal of the Bill, but I have been informed that the word was not actually taken, so at this time I would like to take the question on the withdrawal. The question is for the Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill 2003 to be withdrawn. All those in favour please say Aye.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it, the Bill has been withdrawn.

Agreed: The Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Bill 2003 withdrawn.

The Dangerous Substance Handling and Storage Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I beg to move the second reading of a Bill for a Law to provide for the handling, storage and transportation of dangerous substances; and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, this Bill seeks to reform the Law relating to the handling, storage and transportation of more than 250 gallons of dangerous substances in the Islands. This proposed law will replace the existing Petroleum Storage and Handling Law (1996 Revision), which deals with petroleum products in volumes exceeding 100 gallons. The proposed law has an expanded scope with a comprehensive definition of dangerous substances.

For the purpose of this Law, dangerous substances are defined as petroleum, petroleum products, flammable gas, flammable liquid, combustible liquid, compressed gas, highly volatile liquid and hazardous industrial gases. Volumes less than 250 gallons are exempt and are not covered by this Law. It is proposed to use this volume as the benchmark for the proposed Law to ensure the Inspectorate is able to effectively administer the provisions of this Law. Using this minimum volume will exclude smaller liquid propane gas installations for stoves, barbeque grills etc. The handling and storage of other hazardous substances not governed by this proposed Law are covered by the Fire Code.

Mr. Speaker, Clause 1 provides the title which is cited as "The Dangerous Substances Handling and Storage Law 2003". The title has been changed from Petroleum Handling and Storage 1996 Law as a result of the inclusion of compressed gases as well as flammable liquids.

Clause 2 is the definition section. The following definitions should be noted: 'concession' allows the Governor in Cabinet to grant the right to import, sell or deal with dangerous substances under certain extreme conditions such as the withdrawal of the major oil companies from the Islands

As one Member had asked my opinion on what the concession was all about, I will reread that: concession allows the Governor in Cabinet to grant the right to import, sell or deal with dangerous substances under certain extreme conditions such as the withdrawal of the major oil companies from the Islands.

"'Workplace' means any premises in which dangerous substances of a quantity of more than 250 gallons are handled, stored or transported and includes any storage terminal, retail outlet, commercial bulk storage facility, hospital or factory and a private residential home." A minimum of 250 gallons was placed on the tankage in order to exclude smaller liquid propane gas installations such as stoves and barbeque grills.

Clause 3 deals with concessions to trade in the importation and delivery of dangerous substances. This clause provides the Governor in Cabinet may under certain extreme conditions grant a concession to a person they feel is qualified. Extreme conditions may include the withdrawal of exclusive supplier that results in the complete loss of supply. A concession is granted with immediate effect with the expectation that the normal permit application procedure will follow.

Under Clause 4 it provides " 1) The operator of a workplace shall not operate or occupy or cause such workplace to be operated or occupied without a valid operating permit." The operating permit which replaces the current business licence will be issued by the Dangerous Substance Handling and Storage Board. The permits will not only be necessary for companies such as ESSO, Texaco and Home Gas, but also for smaller tanks that are currently unregulated and scattered throughout the three Islands.

Clause 5 establishes the Dangerous Substances Handling and Storage Board. The clause gives details of the members, how they are appointed, and their positions.

Clause 6 specifies the function of the Board is to "issue operating permits for workplaces and permitted vehicles that are subject to this Law and regulations under this Law."

Clause 7 sets out the basic procedures relating to Board meetings, such as the frequency of meetings, rules of absenteeism, procedures and exclusions for voting.

Clause 8 states that all Board decisions shall be confidential.

Clause 9 provides for the remuneration determined by the Governor in Cabinet of Board members who are not Public Officers.

Clause 10 provides for the appointment of a Chief Petroleum Inspector and other inspectors Clause 11 provides that the Chief Petroleum Inspector and other inspectors shall be issued with identification cards.

Clause 12 provides for the avoidance of pollution and the safe conduct of activities in the workplace. This places the onus on the owner of the workplace internally and anyone externally to operate as safely as possible and to see that others are prevented from causing spills, explosions, theft and damages to property. This clause provides for the safe disposal of dangerous substances such as residual tank sludge from gasoline and diesel tanks. This clause also makes allowance for fines of $20,000 for persons circumventing this clause of the Law unless they can prove that they were not responsible.

Clause 13 provides that "the operator of a workplace shall report any accidental release or spillage of any dangerous substances to the emergency services in the Islands as soon as is practicable but no later than 24 hours after release or spillage." Emergency services will then "report the spill to the Chief Petroleum Inspector who shall take such action as is necessary in the circumstances". Subsection 5 of this clause includes a penalty for not reporting spills.

Clause 14 deals with the inspection of workplaces by the Chief Petroleum Inspector. It gives him the authority after giving at least 24 hours notice in writing to enter any work place and inspect, take samples and seize any dangerous substances and documents if there is a belief that the Law has been contravened.

Clause 15 sets out the general powers and duties of the Chief Petroleum Inspector

Clause 16 provides for the issue of remedial notices by the Chief Petroleum Inspector where he is of the opinion that steps are required to be taken by an operator to ensure compliance with this Law or any of the regulations made under this Law. A remedial notice states the requirement of this Law or regulation; gives direction for remedial and the time to remedy which may require stopping an operation, vacating a workplace, altering a workplace or vehicle or introducing temporary measures until permanent measures are in place.

Clause 17 provides for appeals within a period of 14 days to the summary court for the removal of a remedial notice.

Clause 18 gives the Chief Petroleum Inspector the authority to request assistance from any constable or officer of the fire brigade “to assist him in the execution of any of his powers or functions.”

Clause 19 deals with the liability for accidents at a workplace. If a formal investigation of an accident, or a coroner’s inquest suggests that “this Law or any regulation made hereunder were not complied with at or before the time of the accident, summary proceedings against any person liable to be proceeded against must commence within six months” of the findings. “A copy of every report with respect to and in consequence of any accident in the workplace made by any authority shall be sent to the Chief Petroleum Inspector.”

Clause 20 deals with alterations at the workplace. If an agreement between the lessor and lessee prevents one or other from making alterations which are necessary to conform with any requirements or standards imposed by the Law, either party may be in an action joining the other after a hearing, issue an order setting aside or modifying the agreement to permit making the modifications. The apportioning of the expenses of any alteration must also be done in a like manner. If a spill or explosion occurs, the operator is required to “obtain the approval of the Chief Petroleum Inspector before commencing reconstruction work or repairs.”

Clause 21 makes it an offence to engage in activities under this Law without an operating permit. Anyone operating without a permit can be fined up to $50,000 or imprisoned for a term up to five years. The court can also make an order to forfeit any equipment and grant an order restraining the accused from continuing to engage in similar activities.

Clause 22 sets out other offences against the Law and the associated penalties.

Clause 23 deals with orders for payment of compensation for persons convicted of an offence. “Under this Law the court may an order for compensation to any person for any damage caused by the offence.” If the claimant is not satisfied with the amount of the compensation they have a right to a civil remedy.

Clause 24 provides for the making of regulations by the Governor in Cabinet.

Clause 25 deals with the cost of seizures made under the Law.

Clause 26 gives the Chief Petroleum Inspector emergency powers to require any person to adopt measures to prevent or avert the danger of the release or spillage of dangerous substances.

Clause 27 is an immunity clause that prevents damages from being brought the Chief Petroleum Inspector or anyone acting under his orders when they are carrying out duty under this Law.

Clause 28 repeals the Petroleum Handling and Storage Law (1996 Revision).

Clause 29 is a saving clause. It prevents the infringement or overlapping of powers of the Chief Fire Officer, the Director of Labour or any officer of these departments.

Clause 30 is the transitional clause. All existing licences and concessions shall remain in full force until the expiration date of that licence or concession. After the expiration date they become subject to this Law.

Mr. Speaker, it is my intention to bring an amendment to Clause 21 (1) of the Bill by deleting the words “on conviction on indictment” and substituting the words ‘on summary conviction’ during the Committees stage of this Bill. And I would ask for all Honourable Members support on for the passage of this most important piece of legislation. Thank you Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? I recognise the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you Mr. Speaker. The Opposition welcome this Bill to this Honourable House and as I listened carefully to the Ministers presentation and explanation of the various sections, the only justice here to the Bill would be certain questions that we have, and certainly the Minister can address those in his winding up.

Mr. Speaker, as the Minister stated in his introduction, the Bill seeks to reform the previous law which related to the handling, storage and transportation of natural gas, petroleum, petroleum products, hazardous industrial gases and other substances. The Minister mentioned early in his delivery the fact that this Bill relates to storage of 250 gallons or upwards of any these dangerous substances. He went on to say storage of such substances in smaller quantities would be dealt with under, if I remember correctly, the Fire Brigade Law. I just want to speak just a few minutes about that issue.

I did have a big question mark in my mind in when going through the Bill as to how it would have been possible, feasible and practical to be able to carry out regular inspections of not just the premises but a lot of those containers which are obviously of less holding capacity than 250 gallons, for instance dive tanks and other containers of such nature and the Minister spoke about smaller containers for barbecue grills etcetera. Although I understand what he was saying, I believe there are commercial ventures that utilise fair quantities of such containers which hold less than 250 gallons, and even though that may not directly concern this Bill which refers to containers having a capacity of more than 250 gallons, I wonder, seriously if it is practical and if it is done, how does the Fire Service actually handle that?

The Ministry has told us that we have had a few accidents in the past, although our safety records are pretty high in the Islands, but in looking at it I was just wanting to make sure that this in fact is able to be done so that the problem that we concentrate on the larger containers, which is a similar problem with the smaller containers, is also dealt with effectively, although I accept that they do not directly relate to this Law, I sincerely hope that the Chief Fire Officer or his designate is going to be on this Board and that there is a relationship involved which ensures that proper inspections are carried out, because I do believe that many of the same premises which have some of the larger containers there, will also have the smaller ones. We do not want to have a level of inspection for the over 250 gallon containers and then a lesser level of inspection or monitoring for the smaller containers. I think that is the point there even though the Law does not directly relate to it.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister earlier in his presentation referred to section 3 of the Bill which speaks to concessions. This section says “The Governor in Cabinet may grant concessions under this Law to import or to otherwise deal with dangerous substances in the Islands and such concessions shall be under subject to such terms and conditions as the Governor in Cabinet considers necessary.” When we go over to the definition section and see the definition of the word concession – “‘Concession’ includes any instrument whereby the Governor in Cabinet grants a right or privilege enabling a person, exclusively or subject to restriction, to import petroleum and petroleum products in the Islands or the territorial waters thereof or both upon and subject to such terms and conditions as may be expressed or implied in such instrument or provided for under this or any other law;”.

Mr. Speaker, I heard the Minister’s explanation but I must admit that the definition of the word concession still leaves me with a bit of worry. If the example that the Minister used such as the existing wholesale providers of gasoline and diesel for instance, in other words the oil companies, and if there was either some disagreement or it no longer made sense to them from a commercial point of view and they simply pulled out of the country, and the Government had a need to encourage someone else, I really cannot subscribe that there could be any concession that is exclusive, regardless of the term, because Mr. Speaker, here we are now going the opposite route with several other providers for reasons that are obvious and totally related to the benefit of the consumer. I hear what is being said but I still believe that a concession could be granted with whatever conditions that are necessary but without it being with exclusive conditions. I cannot see this country being held over the barrel by, and that is important words when I say held over the barrel, by any entity which will wholesale these types of products, and the nature of competition being what it is, the volume that is here does not warrant somebody competing for the business. I know there have been problems in the past with those who supply because of certain things they want to do.

I think all of us remember the arguments with the Trade and Business Licensing Board and whether they were wholesalers or retailers, or whether they could own the stations or whether individuals had to own them, and I hear all of those arguments, but regardless of what they say I am with absolute certainty that they are not here because they like us – profit has to be involved somewhere along the line. So, I make this point to ask the Minister to hear the argument and see if it is possible to reconsider that specific position. I understand the need for the Governor in Cabinet to be with an ability by law to grant certain types of concessions given certain extreme circumstances, but I do not believe that it has to go as far as to speak to exclusivity.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister read out the list of substances that are considered dangerous substances, and as he mentioned this law will extend a bit further than the one that is being repealed and replaced by this Law, and I think that is a good thing. Without going into all of the history of previous attempts to get this Law here and other constraints that were involved, I have to say that we on this side are in support of this forward move to come to grips with having proper inspections and an inspectorate and also ensuring that the providers now know that there will be an inspectorate with a statute and that there are specific conditions that they will have to meet.

In saying that, let me refer to a couple of instances in the Bill itself where we speak to operating permits. I wonder where we immediately saw the separation of containers with a holding capacity of 250 gallons or more, and containers of less than that capacity and refer to the two different laws. The Law defines the workplace which as “any premises in which dangerous substances of a quantity of more than 250 gallons are handled, stored or transported and includes any storage terminal, retail outlet, commercial bulk storage facility, hospital or factory and a private residential home” so the definition is pretty wide, and I am wondering now first of all how do we relate to one container which has a capacity of more than 250 gallons or 20 containers which have an accumulated capacity exceeding 250 gallons. I think we need to be clear whether this storage capacity of 250 gallons or more includes accumulated small containers, or whether it only speaks to one holding capacity. I suspect that I might know what I think the answer should be but I will not venture there and perhaps the Minister will clear that up.

I bring the point up simply because if there is any ambiguity in the Law now is the time to deal with it. Once we know what the intention is then we will know how to bring clarity to it. If it is not intended to include that then we know where we are at.

But that leads to the other point again which is if does not include that (accumulative capacity) then does the other Law which deals with that go as far as to speak to an operating permit? There is a question there because if we speak to safety measures and the purpose of an inspectorate being a preventive measure, in other words to ensure that individuals or entities have proper safety precautions, then the real truth of the matter is it does not matter whether it is one big container or whether it is 20 small ones, it is all about the same thing. So, we are going to be in difficulties especially if the two different types are on the same premises. We are going to be in difficulties of having to have an operating permit for one but not having to have an operating permit for the other. I wish to subscribe to the belief that if we are going one way we need to cover both. I am not suggesting that it has to be in this Law, but I am saying that if it is not intended that this Law covers those instances, then we have to ensure that the other Law parallels this one with regards to what the requirements are.

I think it is important that we look along those lines and as I mentioned earlier Mr. Speaker, it is good to know that the Law itself establishes a relationship between the inspector and the Fire Service because we all realise that in many instances both entities will have to work hand in hand. So that is fine and there is no question of intention. I just think we have to ensure – because we could get caught quite readily where one inspector has the ability to enforce certain things in certain ways and on the very same premises with like risks another inspector can not do likewise, and that certainly would cause a problem.

So those are questions simply because in reading this I am not absolutely clear what it deals with and what it does not deal with; and not having the benefit of knowing either, not so much what the other Law reads, but how those inspections are carried out and what authority those people have by law, hence the questions.

Mr. Speaker, let me move on to subsection 9 of section 4 in the Bill: “ the operator of a workplace which is in operation or is occupied without an operating permit and the operator of a permitted vehicle which is being operated without an operating permit at the date of the commencement of this Law shall apply for an operating permit within three months of the date of the commencement of this Law.” I am presuming by this that because we do not have this Law now and the old Law perhaps did not call for operating permits as extensively as this new Law will, that when this Law comes into force there will be people who operate in a manner in which the old Law did not capture but this new one will so they are going to get some time to rectify the situation. That is how I would read that.

I make mention of the time, not to say for a minute that it is unreasonable either way or that it is too long or too short a period of time, but what I want to say is that if we do not have an inspectorate that exists now and we are creating that inspectorate, I just to ensure that there is a methodology that will be employed to ensure that just after that three month period that there is, for want of a better word, a wholesale inspection which is sweeping, so that everybody falls in line and it is not just left like that.

Lots of times when new situations come into force like this we find that it is said in the Law but a year later someone claims ignorance. Then you are caught in a situation where you are not so sure what to do because you have not actually made contact with that entity except this being the first time, so you are hard pressed to penalise. But at the same time during that interim you do not know whether they are operating with the right level of safety, you do not know whether the education process has worked or whether the persons involved are actually aware of what they should be doing when it comes to the handling and storage of these types of dangerous substances. The question about the three month period is just to ensure that there is a plan once the Law comes into effect and the period is up for the necessary inspections take place. I am not again suggesting that when this follow-up is done right after the 90 days that the purpose of it is to lever penalties but rather it is an awareness that I speak to, which brings me to the next point that I wish to raise.

It is obvious that the larger operators will be quite aware, even to this point, of the legislation that is coming into place, because discussions might have taken place with them to get input, which is fine, but there are going to be many small operators who are not very familiar or who may not at this point in time even know that the old Law is being repealed and that there is a new Law coming into force. While I am confident that the thought has been held in mind I want to suggest to the Honourable Minister that he ensures that a proper public relation programme is engaged with the public so they are totally aware of and understand the 90 day period and that they must feel free to seek the advice of the Inspector and his team so that they can know what they have to do to bring them up to scratch.

I believe that if it is handled in that manner then, by and large, everyone will feel more compelled to co-operate because if you go through the process in that manner there perhaps will be less resistance even if in some instances it might involve a little more cost—not necessarily on an on-going basis but initially to bring the equipment and the safety up to the desired levels. I believe that also is something that is important.

Subsection (10) of section 4 addresses the regulations. In discussions with the Inspector I am with understanding that the regulations are being worked on. I dare say that I just raise this point again to say that once this Law is in force and there is this 90 day period, it is going to be absolutely important that the regulations are put in place as quickly as possible because enforcement is going to need the regulations. The Law will only be addressing specific items, some of which have been mentioned by the Minister, but the regulations will get down into the meat of the matter, if I may put it like that, and will specify exactly what the conditions are under which the operators have to live by and what standards have to be met. The Law will have some application, speaking generally, but the regulations will speak to all of the specifics—like when we refer to compressed air, containers and inspections. Mr. Speaker, it is not with great authority that I speak but just doing some research into the matter and in consultation with my colleagues, industry standards world-wide dictate certain levels which, I dare say, many of the operators in these Islands are not familiar with.

If we are going to put a law and regulations in place and if we are going to expect them to have the desired effect, then not only will there be need for this educational process and a PR programme that I have mentioned, but we need to have the regulations in place with the specific requirements and standards that have to be met so that people can become familiar with these. Otherwise it is going to be very frustrating for both sides of the coin – for those who have to uphold the Law and those who have to live by it. I just make the point and perhaps the Minister will simply reassure us of the timing with the regulations and such the like.

I want to offer some comments on section 5 and perhaps when the Minister hears the logic, we will see whether he thinks that it should remain how it is or whether there may be some consideration for what I am going to put forward. Section 5 speaks to “the establishment of a Dangerous Substances Handling and Storage Board which will consist of – a) the Permanent Secretary of the ministry responsible for the operation of this Law; [which is fine] b) the Permanent Secretary of the ministry responsible for the Environment or his nominee; [which is finer] c) the Chief Fire Officer or his nominee; [which is finer yet] and “d) two other members appoints by the Governor.” So what we have is a chairman and four other members if I count correctly. Then section 7 (4) speaks to a quorum: “The Board shall reach its decisions by a majority of the votes of the members present and voting at any meeting. The chairman or presiding member shall have no original but only a casting vote. Three members of the Board present at any meeting shall form a quorum.”

How I understand that where it says “Three members of the Board present at any meeting shall form a quorum” I understand that to include the chairman. So if that includes the chairman but immediately it takes away one of the votes because the chairman’s vote is only a casting vote, and if three forms a quorum then you are leaving the possibility of many occasions the casting vote having to trip in to be able to make a decision. Now that is not to say that every time that Board meets that there will only be three people, but what it is saying that there is a quorum if only three people attend.

I am not for a minute trying to pre-empt the membership of the Board and how that will operate, and whether once people are satisfied that three members are going to be there the rest don’t feel the need to turn up – I am not suggesting anything like that. All I make reference to is this is going to be the Law and it is going to tell under which conditions the Board can operate and what makes a quorum and how it is able to function. I want to suggest to the Minister that perhaps there can be a re-think about that so that the risk of the chairman’s casting vote coming in to play more often than we would want to be necessary can be lessened.

Now there may be several permutations that you could work on: whether you are going to add one more number to the Board or whether you are going to change the number that creates a quorum, I am not necessarily wanting to be specific with the suggestion but I am certain that there are ways without it affecting negatively the operations of the Board that it could be looked at. The crafters may have different ideas, but in me reading it and looking at it, that is how it comes to me. The Minister can address that and I am certain that he will be looking at what I am saying. There may be a different logic that I have not seen yet, but I am sure we will hear from him.

When we move on to –

The Speaker: Honourable Member if you are moving on to a new item, would now be a convenient time for the luncheon break?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, that is fine.

The Speaker: We will now take the luncheon suspension and resume at 2:30 pm

Proceedings suspended at 12:45 pm

Proceeding resumed at 3:50 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I recognise the Honourable Leader of the Opposition with the continuation of his debate.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you Mr. Speaker. When we broke for lunch I had just completed making my point with regards to the Dangerous Substances Handling and Storage Board and how it was constituted the numbers to cause for a quorum, and I have already made that point and I was going to move on to section 8 but before I get there, section 6 and section 7 refers to the responsibility of the Board with regards the issuing of operating permits for workplaces and permitted vehicles.

Section 7 goes on to say that “the Board shall meet quarterly”. I am glad that there is the proviso in there “and upon such other occasions as, in the opinion of the chairman, is necessary to conduct business related to the issuing of operating permits.” It is obvious that both workplaces and permitted vehicles may well have need for these applications for the permits to be dealt with in-between the regular quarterly meeting. A vehicle might arrive on the Island two days after a previous meeting so there needs to be the ability to deal with something like that rather than let the vehicle remain unused until for nigh on three months. I am assuming that that proviso in section 7 is put there for the same reason that I refer to, and I just want to make sure that in setting the frequency of the meetings by Law that all of this is taken into consideration. If by chance that is not the case then I believe that consideration needs to be taken for such events. Not just vehicles but perhaps a new building coming on line and being granted a certificate of occupancy at a certain period of time that is close to a meeting that has just occurred and not having to wait that long period of time.

Section 8 addresses the duty of confidentiality and all I really wish to do with section 8, Mr. Speaker, is to pose a question. I do appreciate the fact that section 8 (1) states “The fact and any particulars of, or relating to, any matter falling for consideration by, or the decision of, the Board shall be treated as confidential by each member of the Board, and he shall not disclose any such fact or particular otherwise than in the proper performance of his duties under this Law or in compliance with the order of a court of competent jurisdiction.”

When we look at the Law, and perhaps there is a section that deals with what I am saying but I am not quite sure of that, I want to point out to the Honourable Minister that if there is an application and the result of that application causes someone to be, I think the legal jargon is, aggrieved – the person is not satisfied with the results of that application, we need to ensure that there is recourse or redress whether it be a court of law.

I know that it mentioned it in section 8 (1) with “the order of a court of competent jurisdiction”, but I do not think that one would simply let that be the only recourse if one is not satisfied. The confidentiality aspect mentioned in section 8 (1) does not relate clearly that if I were to make an application to the Board, for instance, (I do not know whether the results of the application will be passed on to me in writing), and if the application were to be denied, would the contents of the letter explain the reasons for the refusal? Would it also explain what I would have to do to be able for a new application to be successful?

I am not suggesting that would not be the case. I just want to make sure that that is the thought process with regards to how this will be dealt with. I appreciate the confidentiality that members of this Board will be charged with and I am not suggesting that it should be different in the Law. I am only going a bit further to speak to someone who might make an application and if the application is not successful, then what happens after that? Is that person advised of the shortcomings and what to do so that they may reapply and be successful, or how is it dealt with? That is the kind of question that I have to raise about that.

Mr. Speaker, in section 10 (5); “In carrying out his functions under this Law the Chief Petroleum Inspector shall be guided by the Building Code Regulations (1998 Revision) and by the Fire Code 1997 and such other legislation including international codes and standards as the ministry considers relevant.” This relates to the point made earlier on. “The other legislation including international codes and standards as the ministry considers relevant.” I am assuming that this is a floater meaning that today there may be one international code or a standard, tomorrow another might crop up, and the ministry may well upon becoming aware of this take it on board; that it is in everyone’s best interest to use that code or that standard which is internationally accepted as one of the standards or codes to be looked at.

That being the case, if that is what this section is telling me, that it is not just a one time shot but that the Ministry will have the ability from time to time to update, by way of research or whatever correspondence comes to them or such the like, then the point that I made earlier on about making sure that all and sundry were aware of where they stood, especially those in the industry, the proprietors of the workplaces or the owners of the vehicles or the containers, it is of absolute importance that be a focus at all times so that the information be disseminated to these people if the bar is changed in any point of time and where it is at and what it is. I also assume in this same section, when we refer to the Building Code Regulations (1998 Revision) and the Fire Code 1997, that any revisions to both pieces of regulations would simply fall into this category also.

Section 13 (1) requires “the operator of a workplace shall report any accidental release or spillage of any dangerous substances to the emergency services in the Islands as soon as is practicable but no later than 24 hours after the release or spillage” I am not really questioning the 24 hour period but I am wondering even though the Law says “as soon as is practicable but no later than 24 hours after” I am trying to think that perhaps this might be because a location might be closed on a weekend and maybe nobody is aware of it. You certainly do not want to penalise someone so that they have to live on the premises and be looking at it all the time, I hear all of that, but I am wondering if there is no other way to say it - to really impress on these individuals or entities the importance of reporting it.

I think of the odd case where this may occur. Although there are safeguards in the legislation that protects the proprietor if they have given instructions and something happens and the instructions were not followed, they need not necessarily be penalised for things that go wrong. There are other sections in the Law which covers that., But I am just thinking perhaps an employer or employee, either one – whichever one feels the onerous responsibility of what may have happened, if something goes wrong and somebody says to themselves ‘I can not make this happen just like this because I am going to be held responsible but I have 24 hours so let me try to fix whatever it is that is wrong before I make any report and then I will report it’, I know that it creates some difficulty for a Law to capture but I just raise the point to wonder if there is some other wording that might be able to be crafted and again there may just be no other way but just looking at that you just never know Mr. Speaker.

Moving on to section 14 (1) it reads “The Chief Petroleum Inspector shall investigate complaints of violations of this Law and, on a regular basis, make routine checks of workplaces to ensure compliance therewith and for that purpose he (or an inspector authorised by him) shall – a) visit any workplace, after giving at least 24 hours notice in writing ....” I do not need to read the rest of it. This 24 hour business is not the same point as I just spoke to, but it raises certain questions again.

If everyone knows that they have a 24 hour period of notice that is mandatory then it is very possible, in my view, that certain types of activities which people know are unacceptable via this Law or any regulations which come under this Law (for example it is either in their view a cost saving on their part or perhaps it is something that they can pay less staff for or rotate their staff because there is no need for that many people but I am really talking about cost saving) will be corrected by the time the inspector comes, and then the moment the inspector goes they revert back to the situation. Now that is hypothetical but certainly possible. One would like to think that in the normal run of events everyone is doing everything to the best of their ability to keep everything ship-shape, so therefore it is only courteous to give them notice. So everybody dresses up proper for the following morning and everybody comes in and shakes hands and then walk through the motions and everything is fine. But it raises the question in my mind about the notice. Perhaps there is a reason, and I am certain the Minister will address that when he is winding up, but I bring that point out because it raised questions in my mind when I was reading through it.

Section 15 (2) “The Chief Petroleum Inspector’s duties and responsibilities also include - d) as a condition of condition of obtaining an operational permit, annually inspecting all permitted workplaces to cover- i) the integrity of container, pipelines and permitted vehicles;” etcetera. Again Mr. Speaker, I am not totally familiar with operations of this nature except for what I see on the surface, but I do not know whether regulations will clearly outline how these inspections will take place.

I want to say that I think it is reasonable to speak to an annual inspection like most other things, but of course I would also like to believe that the Inspector should have the ability to inspect at any time. For instance, as the Law would speak to it, if there is a complaint or something like that, there is an annual inspection I think that should not necessarily be the only inspection. The real question is when we speak to the integrity of containers, pipelines and permitted vehicles (my point earlier on as to whether the Law will refer to one container that holds 250 gallons of any of these dangerous substances or 10 containers with an accumulative storage of 250 gallons or more) we make sure that all of the containers have the same regime under which they are inspected and same penalties and that kind of stuff.

If, as I do take the view, we have to do the inspections of all of these items then there may be a dive shop that has 150 tanks and I am not 100 percent sure what methodology would be in place to ensure that this is done in a matter that is satisfactory. While it is not my job in debating the Bill to bring the issue up to question how it will be done to make certain that in pointing this whole office together, that matters such as this are taken into consideration, I simply raise the question because I believe that it seriously needs to be considered: whether it is really the most prudent thing to do to have two different entities doing these types of inspections.

I do not know if there is some way that people from another agency can be seconded and be trained to make sure that they understand the standards that are expected and the methods of inspecting these tanks. It is my understanding that there is actually some type of x-ray that is used at times with some of these tanks that looks at pressure and integrity of the metal in these tanks. Although we have not had many serious accidents we have had a few and in fact I think one of them was fatal and regardless of what happened, this metal literally blew up. I am only just thinking of all of these things to try to ensure that no matter how it is done, it is done in a manner where everyone is satisfied that this is the best way. It is quite likely that in raising this question that both the Minister and his competent staff will be looking to ensure that this happens in the right manner, but because of the way the Law is crafted some discussion needed to take place to ensure that we are thinking along those lines.

This same section 15 (2) reads “The Chief Petroleum Inspector’s duties also include – (l) annually reporting to the chief officer of the ministry on the storage and handling of dangerous substances in the Islands with respect to progress made, significant lapses and future plans; and (m) any other responsibility or duty imposed on him by the Law or by the regulations under this Law”.

Again, Mr. Speaker, just simply going by what the Law calls for, I would want to assume that this reporting procedure would be more often than annually. The Law might well just say annually but in actual fact there may be a policy which dictates earlier reporting. I am only going by what I read from the Law but I wonder whether an annual report is in keeping with the dynamics of such an inspectorate. I cannot say much more about it because I am not physically in tune with exactly how the Inspectorate is going to function and its reporting duties to the Chief Officer, but I thought that point needed to be raised.

It is good to see in section 21 the penalties involved from the onset of the Law show that Government means business. I think it is absolutely important that this message be sent. Certainly even if some of the fines appear to be high I would like to say that the handling and usage of these types of substances be managed properly Mr. Speaker, especially if the public is involved and there is the possibility of harm coming, then it is absolutely important that people recognise by the sanctions they must do what is necessary to ensure that they have taken every precaution with regards to safety.

Section 22 (6) is giving guidance to instances where an operating permit is not required and for practical purposes it makes all the sense in the world to speak to the instances that are referred here. Section 22 (6) “An operating permit is not required – a) in relation to fuel carried by ships and aircraft for purposes of their own propulsion;” – the cruise ships coming into the harbour will not need a licence for the fuel they are carrying on board to leave here to go to Kingston or leave Kingston to come to here. That is clear and we understand that. But it is not clear in my mind section 22 (6) (f) “by mains engineers acting under the Electricity Law (2003 Revision) and persons under his control when so acting;” I have to ask a question here, for the truth is I am not 100 percent sure exactly what that means, and perhaps the ministers citing an example would just make it clear to me. I just wondered whether we could get that specific subsection cleared up.

Section 24 refers to the regulations and as I mentioned earlier on that in discussion with the Petroleum Inspector work is being done on them as we speak. I was just trying to get some feel as to how the timing will be with regards to those regulations because it is going to be important that the regulations come on line as quickly as possible.

When we look down on section 24 (1) i) the establishment of a Compensation Assessment Tribunal for assessment of compensation claims arising from the handling, storage or transportation of dangerous substances; j) provision for appeals against the decisions of the Compensation Assessment Tribunal; k) enabling the Attorney-General on behalf of the public to claim damages for pollution or other injury to public amenities arising from the handling, storage or transporta- tion of dangerous substances;” section 24 (1) (k) is pretty clear.

However, with point (i) “the establishment of a Compensation Assessment Tribunal” I am not so sure whether I am to assume this Tribunal would take claims arising from the public who may have been injured or have damaged property or such the like. This is to do with the regulations just so that I can get it clear rather than it sounding confusing. Section 24(1) “the Governor in Cabinet may make such regulations as are required for the effective implementation of this Law including regulations dealing with –” all of those things we have talked about and more.

If we have a Compensation Assessment Tribunal and this is their job – somebody makes a complaint and they bring the evidence and they hear it and that kind of stuff, and the regulations will also deal with the provisions for an appeal against the decision of the Compensation Assessment Tribunal – I assume that appeal could come from either direction because it says “j) provision for appeals against the decisions of the Compensation Assessment Tribunal”. As I would understand it, and if I am wrong then I am quite willing to hear where the difficulty is, but you will have somebody who will complain and that person will be complaining against somebody else—there have to be two entities whichever way and I am just wanting for clarity how these regulations will deal with that. If that could be cleared up so we can understand exactly how that functions.

Tied into this, when we move on to section 27 which you could call the Indemnity Clause meaning it is specifically states “No action for damages may be brought against- a) the Chief Petroleum Inspector; b) any inspector; c) any member of the public acting at the request of the Chief Inspector or any inspector; d) any person or constable acting under the direction of the Chief Petroleum Inspector; and e) the Crown, in respect of death, injury or loss incurred by any person occasioned in the course of carrying out duty under this Law relating to any fire or explosion or any release or spillage involving dangerous substances.”

If I understand what this is saying, and I am not sure because I do not profess to be a lawyer, it means that if I am hired by the Inspectorate and while I am carrying out my duty there is a fire or explosion or some release of spillage and it causes me to lose my life, then this Law prevents any of my heirs or successors from seeking any damages against the “the Chief Petroleum Inspector, any inspector, any member of the public acting at the request of the Chief Inspector or any inspector; any person or constable acting under the direction of the Chief Petroleum Inspector; and the Crown.” What this Law is saying is that absolutely no way any one of these individuals or the Crown may have any responsibility whatsoever. That is my understanding of what it is saying. And if that is the case then I would expect that any action brought against any entity would be perhaps the workplace or location or proprietor of any location where it occurred, but again I am not so sure that whilst this is telling you who the action may not be brought against, exactly what can happen and what redress anyone can have. So if we could just have some clarity to that then perhaps we might feel a little more satisfied.

[Pause]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if you could permit me one minute please.

[Pause]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the next point that I would like to raise, and this goes back a little bit, the definition section under dangerous substances number “(g) is compressed gas” and further down “‘gallon’ means an imperial gallon” and “‘workplace’ means any premises in which dangerous substances of a quantity of more than 250 gallons are handled, stored or transported and includes any storage terminal, retail outlet, commercial bulk storage facility, hospital or factory and a private residential home.”

Mr. Speaker, I just gave those three definitions because this Law, or this Bill when it becomes Law, is going to deal directly with any premises in which dangerous substances of a quantity of more than 250 gallons are handled. That means from the definitions more than 250 imperial gallons and of course gallons is a liquid measurement. Unfortunately dangerous substances include compressed gas. Now the point that I wish to make with that is that the volume for compressed gas or compressed air can not be measured in imperial gallons. So I believe that there needs to be some other equation put forward in this Law which would speak to compressed gas otherwise the Law in itself will be impotent with regards to the Inspectorate being able to apply it to any workplace that stores such a substance. I believe that when we talk about compressed gas volume is calculated in cubic metres or cubic feet, I think, so I am sure you see where the dilemma is. I am not suggesting for a minute that compressed gas should not be treated as a dangerous substance – far from it. I am only saying that in order to be able to have the Law be effective in that area then we have to find a way to be able to say what volume of compressed gas we are dealing with, because certainly we can not say 250 imperial gallons.

Finally, section 30 speaks to “Any licence or concession issued or granted to any person to store, handle, transport or otherwise deal with any dangerous substance in the Islands and which is valid immediately before the commencement of this Law shall continue to remain in full force and effect until the expiration date set out in the li- cence or concession.” Mr. Speaker, I understand that a law must be fair and appear to be fair. While this may seem to be the only sensible way to effect the transition (because until the Law is put into effect these entities are operating under the 1996 Law), the only problem I have with this Law, and I have not really checked with the previous Law by the way, but I see the licences in this Law shall be for three years so once again my problem is the timing factor.

Let us assume this Law is assented to and comes into force within 30 days, for arguments sake, so we are looking at the month of November. There may well be licences which have a couple of years before they need to be renewed. The standards this Law will set are tremendously different from the 1996 Law, without a shadow of a doubt, and there is no question in my mind that you have to be fair. If you are really going to be fair and the licences are in some instances for three years and some people have two years or more before a renewal date comes up, for all of our new licences how are we going to deal with the fact that a new operator or proprietor of a workplace will have to deal with these standards for two years and the other one will not?

Now if it is simply accepted this is the price of the transition and we just have to go with it that way and live with it, then perhaps I can not say anything more either. But I had to bring the thought out because I am wondering if there is no way of giving a specified time line for compliance with the new Law.

For instance, and I think of this as I am on my feet, when it speaks to any licence or concession issued or granted which is valid immediately before the commencement of this Law, whatever period of time left on it, I am wondering whether instead of saying “shall continue to remain in full force and effect until the expiration date set out in the licence or concession” whether there could not be a specified time period which would not only allow the person or entity ample time within a comfortable time frame to comply with the new Law but also not seem to be onerous. So, I am making that suggestion and I am not going to put forward a specific time line. I do not know what exactly the thoughts were behind this Law or whether from a point of legal practice once they have a licence you can not do anything about the licence, but I bring the practical outlook on it and I am certain the Minister will address it.

I have raised these points Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Opposition after we looked at this and conferred only in support of the Bill but taking some perspective to see if the suggestions we are making can cause for immediate improvements before the Bill actually takes safe passage. So I am confident that the Minister will appreciate the spirit of the contribution and certainly we look forward to being able to go through the committee stage and dealing with whatever amendments are necessary and then at the end of the day having His Excellency’s assent and look forward to the inspectorate coming into operation.

Thank you

The Speaker: Thank you Honourable Member. Since we have reached the hour of adjournment if I could get the motion.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we propose to adjourn at this time and to meet again tomorrow at 11:30am.

Members, I think we are invited to the groundbreaking ceremony for the school at Poindexter Road and I would ask Members to please, if they are coming, to be on time so that we can get started there on time to get back here for 11:30am. Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 11:30am Friday 3rd October 2003.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 11:30am tomorrow Friday 3rd October 2003. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4:39 pm the House stood adjourned until Friday, 3 October 2003, at 11:30 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
3 OCTOBER 2003
11.51 AM
Tenth Sitting

[Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Deputy Speaker: I will invite the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Deputy Speaker: I have received notice for the late arrival of the Honourable Speaker and the Minister for Community Affairs.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

Report of the Cayman Islands
Electoral Boundary Commission (2003)

The Deputy Speaker: I recognise the Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of the House a Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Leader of Government Business spoke yesterday about the background to this report and acknowledged various individuals who had worked most diligently to see it to timely fruition. I simply would wish to speak a little as to the availability of the report.

The report is available on the Government web site in its entirety and I would urge the public who are able to avail themselves of that form of access to do so. It is a document that is supported by some maps as one would expect. The document itself contains in the schedule a detailed description of the proposed boundaries. Copies of the map of the Island showing the various proposed electoral boundaries will be made available for viewing at district post offices and major buildings here in George Town, which are, the Administration Building and the Tower Building.

Persons who wish to have their own personal copies of those maps can contact the Elections Office in the Tower Building and obtain a copy, perhaps for some charge. However, I would urge the public to avail themselves of the report and familiarise themselves with it.

The Deputy Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, we want to give Notice that I will move a Motion in the November meeting for the report to be debated.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Little Cayman Airport Master Plan
(Deferred)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Minister for Health Services is absent and we would just ask that it be deferred until he arrives.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that the tabling of a Report for the Little Cayman Airport be deferred until the arrival of the Minister. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it. The paper is deferred.

Agreed. Paper deferred in the absence of the Honourable Minister for Health.

The Deputy Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister of Planning, the Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Report and Recommendation of the Minister Responsible for Lands on the Vesting of Crown Land Block 14E, Parcel 329 to the National Housing Trust

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House a Report on the vesting of Crown Land Block 14E Parcel 329 to the National Housing Trust.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.
Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.
Mr. Speaker, just to say that I confirm that as required by the Law the details of this land matter have been published in the Cayman Islands Gazette Issue No. 15 of 2003 (dated 20 July 2003), and a local newspaper, namely, the Cayman Net News, dated 16 July 2003.

Further, as required by the Law, three valuations have been carried out on the subject property. Each valuation report forms part of the overall Report and provides a general indication of the value of the property that Government now proposes to vest.

The report deals with facilitating the vesting of Block 14E Parcel 329 to the National Housing and Community Development Trust. This property is located in Registration Section George Town South, off Morton Road in the Windsor Park subdivision. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, after careful analysis and consideration, on 20 May 2003 the Governor in Council (now Cabinet) determined that it would vest a parcel to the National Housing and Community Development Trust for nil consideration.

The open market value of the subject parcels is estimated to be in the region of $290,000 to $333,000.
Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: I recognise the Minister of Planning.

Report and Recommendation of the Minister Responsible for Lands on the Vesting of Crown Land Block 13E, Parcel 166 to the National Housing Trust

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House a Report for Lands on the vesting of Crown Land Block 13E Parcel 166 to the National Housing Trust.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.
Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.
I confirm that, as required by law, the details of this land matter have been published in the Cayman Islands Gazette Issue No. 15 of 2003 (dated 20 July 2003) and a local newspaper, namely, the Cayman Net News (dated 16 July 2003).

Further, as required by law, three valuations have been carried out on the subject property. Each valuation report forms part of the overall report and provides a general indication of the value of the property that Government now proposes to vest.

The report deals with facilitating the vesting of Block 13E Parcel 166 to the National Housing and Community Development Trust. This property is located in Registration Section George Town Central, off Courts Road. Therefore, after careful analysis and consideration, on 20 May 2003 the Governor in Council (now Cabinet) determined that it would vest the parcel to the National Housing and Community Development Trust for nil consideration.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Planning.

Report and Recommendation of the Minister Responsible for Lands on the Vesting of Crown Land Block 13D, Parcel 303 (Part) to Rosworth McLaughlin

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House a Report for lands on the vesting of Crown Land Block 13D Parcel 303 (Part) to Mr. Rosworth McLaughlin.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.
Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I confirm that as required by the Law the details of this land matter have been published in the Cayman Islands Gazette Issue No. 19 of 2003 (dated 22 September 2003) and a local newspaper, namely, the Cayman Net News (dated 16 July 2003).

Further, as required by law, three valuations have been carried out on the subject property. Each valuation report forms part of the overall report and provides a general indication of the value of the property that Government now proposes to vest.

The report deals with the disposition of a portion of Block 13D Parcel 303 to Mr. Rosworth McLaughlin. This property comprises the North Eastern Section of Block 13D Parcel 303, which is bisected by the Esterley Tibbetts Highway. The subject land is remainder lands from the Esterley Tibbetts Highway project for which compensation was paid.

The Governor in Council (now Cabinet) has determined that these lands are not required for any further road works or other public projects. Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, the property is to be sold to Mr. Rosworth McLaughlin who plans to use the property for the purposes of his existing business, Mac & Son Trucking, which is located on parcel 324 across Greenwood Drive from the subject parcel. Therefore, after careful analysis and consideration, on 20 May 2003 the Governor in Council (now Cabinet) determined it should sell this portion of the parcel to Mr. Rosworth McLaughlin for CI$30,000.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MEMBERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CABINET

Response to statements made by the Leader of the Opposition, Leader of the People's Progressive Movement, regarding the United Democratic Party's decision not to support the implementation of single member constituencies and one man, one vote

The Deputy Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I rise this morning in response to the grossly erroneous statements made by the Leader of the Opposition, Leader of the People's Progressive Movement, regarding the United Democratic Party's decision not to support the implementation of single member constituencies and one man, one vote at this time.

The Leader of the Opposition accuses me of taking it upon myself to act without consulting the people of these Islands on this matter. For him to say this, is to be nothing more than disingenuous and it is clearly an attempt by him to create political mischief. Here are the facts.

Mr. Speaker, we must remember that the matter of 17 single member constituencies and one man, one vote was a recommendation from the constitutional commissioners, some of whom that Member (when he was Leader of the Government) assisted the Governor at the time in appointing. The People's Progressive Movement insisted that this matter should be the subject of a referendum.

The United Democratic Party throughout its several consultative public meetings found that the recommendation of the constitutional commissioners did not enjoy the widespread support of the people, and on that basis the party did not originally support it. However, in the interest of a peaceful conclusion to the proposed changes to the constitution, we supported the Leader of the Opposition and the People's Progressive Movement on this issue of the bi-partisan meeting in London with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office last December.

It must also be remembered that when we did this the People's Progressive Movement no longer pressed for a people's referendum on the matter. If it was most important for the country to have a referendum in the first place, as the People's Progressive Movement had indicated, why accept the constitution with one man, one vote, without the referendum? Perhaps, in their hypocritical state, this was the way they choose to go.

The United Democratic Party has continued over the past several months to seek public feedback on the proposed constitutional changes and has received ongoing comments from its constituents reflecting grave reservations on the implementation of single member constituencies and one man, one vote.

We have just received the Report of the Boundary Commission, which was tabled in this Honourable House today. The Leader of the Opposition and I received this report at the same time. We recognised that there was missing information and asked for this to be corrected before being sent to Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly. I am sure that when the Leader of the Opposition was writing his statement he must have remembered that discussion in the Governor's office—with his Excellency the Governor, with himself (the Leader of the Opposition) the Cabinet Secretary, and me—when the Governor gave us that report.

He must have remembered that. Why say different? What kind of people are we dealing with who are so blatantly economical with the truth? Why?

It is unjustified that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition now charges that the Government has not made the report public even when he knew that the corrections to the Report would have to be made before being tabled in the House.

The assertion by the Leader of the Opposition, that the Government has determined that there will be no public consultation on the issue, is patently false. Yesterday, I requested a meeting with him—which should have been on Wednesday, not Thursday—to which he agreed and we met following the adjournment of the House. This meeting included all elected Members with the exception of the Honourable Minister of Education and the Honourable Minister of Planning with whom we had discussed it as a Party, and the Second Elected Member for George Town who was absent for the Sitting. I then informed all Members of the decision by the United Democratic Party not to support one man, one vote and showed each Member a communiqué from His Excellency the Governor.

The reaction of the Leader of the Opposition was that he needed time to respond. That response has now turned out to be a statement filled with baseless accusations—as is usual—and personal attacks which ignore the year-long public and bipartisan consultations on matters regarding single member constituencies and, indeed, the entire constitutional debate.

While it is regrettable that the Leader of the Opposition has chosen to do this, it is not surprising. The Opposition has been caught in many lies before. Indeed, only at the last Sitting of the House, the facts presented by the Cabinet Secretary revealed their vicious lies and their consistent attempt to smear me. However, we are not prepared to be deterred from carrying out our duty to this country by his misrepresentation of the facts and his personal attacks.

The fact is that the United Democratic Party has had its own extensive consultations and the public feedback coming to us is that the introduction of single member constituencies is not being supported at this time. Just last week over 150 persons attended our meeting in Cayman Brac at the Administration Building where this issue was brought forward and vetoed.

Moreover, it is clear from the Report of the Boundary Commission that the Commissioners received very little public input and, although they asked for submissions on the matter, only eight were received. Meetings held by the Commission were also poorly attended.

In my district, where we have some 2,900 persons on the electoral roll and a population of about 9,000 people, 37 people attended that meeting. We must also remember that the People's Progressive Movement has had its own meetings following the receipt of the draft constitution and these were met with public apathy and lack of support. What has been clearly demonstrated, therefore, is that there is still no widespread support for bringing in single member constituencies at this time.

We believe (through our own public consultations) the findings of the Boundary Commission, and the overwhelming lack of support for the process, that we are duty-bound as a responsible Government to take into account the people's position and act accordingly. This is what we have done. This is not a decision taken by me as Leader of Government Business, or as Leader of the United Democratic Party; it is a considered position reached by the Members of the United Democratic Party based on public feedback and the Report of the Boundary Commission.

The United Democratic Party stands by this position and supports the wishes of the people of the Cayman Islands. We will not support one man, one vote at the next election.

Mr. Speaker, I must ask the Leader of the Opposition and the People's Progressive Movement to stop the vindictive, dirty, lying campaign. Furthermore, at the end of the statement made by the Leader of the Opposition he makes accusations about where the country is headed in regards to dictatorial rule. I am warning them that the first opportunity that I have publicly in regards to their accusations on this, they will answer in a court of law, because I am tired of the Leader of the Opposition reading somebody else's statement in regards to things attributed to me when they are, in fact, a pack of lies, and he knows it!

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Members, I have been given Notice of a Statement by the Honourable Minister of Health Services, and since he is not here, we would like to continue on and deal with the Statement some time after his arrival later on in the day.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READING

The Dangerous Substances Handling and Storage Bill, 2003

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I should begin by thanking the Honourable Leader of the Opposition for his valuable contribution during this debate on the Dangerous Substances Handling and Storage Bill, 2003. His wide-ranging debate covered most sections of the Bill, though it seemed that his greatest concern was in regard to the storage of dangerous substances at the workplace. This is a valid concern.

During my reply, Mr. Speaker, I will deal with what I regard as the most important and crucial points raised by that Honourable Member. As a general statement, I wish to point out that all dangerous substances, regardless of the quantity or measurement, are covered under the Cayman Islands Standard Fire Prevention Code. Some measurements are in imperial gallons, some in cubic feet and cubic inches, and others in pounds per square inch (psi), et cetera.

These are all comprehensively covered in the Standard Fire Prevention Code which, as can be seen from the Bill and committee stage amendments, are cross-referenced from the Bill to the Standard Fire Prevention Code. Therefore, where necessary, the Bill is complemented in comprehensive details by the Standard Fire Prevention Code.

The Dangerous Substances Handling and Storage Bill was prepared in full consultation with the relevant government agencies, including the Fire Department, the Department of Environment and the Water Authority.

During the committee stage of this Bill, I proposed to have Clause 2 of the Bill amended as follows: in the definition of "concession" by deleting the words "exclusively or."

Whilst Clause 3, which deals with the grant of concession by the Governor in Cabinet, does not contain the word "exclusively", it was contained within Clause 2, the interpretation and definition clause. I will, therefore, seek to have it removed and I wish to thank the Honourable Member for bringing this to my attention. Further, Mr. Speaker, the word "exclusive" should be removed from this and any other legislation, especially in this era of liberalization.

It is also proposed that Clause 2 be amended by deleting the definition of "flammable liquid gas" and substituting the following definition, "'flammable gas' has the meaning assigned by the Standard Fire Prevention Code."

Also, by deleting the definition of "highly volatile liquid" and substituting the following definition, "highly volatile liquid has the meaning assigned by the Standard Fire Prevention Code"; by deleting the definition of "workplace" and substituting the following definition, "'workplace' means any premises in which the following are stored (a) dangerous substances of an aggregate quantity of 250 gallons or more or (b) in the case where the dangerous substance is compressed gas, compressed gas of an aggregate quantity of 250 cubic feet or more stored at a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch or more and such premises shall include any storage terminal, retail outlet, commercial bulk storage facility, hospital or factory and a private residential home."

Mr. Speaker, as alluded to by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition during his debate, the Governor in Cabinet may make such regulations as are required for the effective implementation of this Law. These regulations deal with:

- (a) Safety standards and precautions in relation to the handling, storage and transportation of dangerous substances;
- (b) Safeguards against pollution by dangerous substances;
- (c) Procedures to be followed in handling storage and transportation of dangerous substances;

- (d) Further responsibilities, powers and administration of the Chief Petroleum Inspectors and Members of the Board;
- (e) The minimum standards for containers, permitted vehicles and underground pipes;
- (f) Rates of compensation for damage to third parties or the general public arising from the handling or transportation of dangerous substances;
- (g) The establishment, management and payment of compensation for way leaves;
- (h) A written guarantee to the Government or compulsory insurance cover to be taken out by persons engaged in the handling, storage or transportation of dangerous substances against claims for damages by third parties or the general public;
- (i) The establishment of a comprehensive assessment tribunal for assessment of compensation claims arising from the handling, storage or transportation of dangerous substances;
- (j) Provision for appeals against the decision of the Compensation Assessment Tribunal.
- (k) Enabling of the Attorney-General on behalf of the public to claim damages for pollution or other injury to public amenities arising from the handling, storage or transportation of dangerous substances.
- (l) Penalties for contravention of such regulations; and
- (m) any other matters required by this Law to be prescribed.

I have taken the time to highlight the various issues that are contemplated for inclusion in the regulations and to point out that, where the Law that is primary legislation may be silent on any important issues relating to the handling and storage of dangerous substances, these may be provided for under secondary legislation.

In addition to the regulations, I have already pointed out that the Bill cross-references the Standard Fire Prevention Code.

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Member also referred to certain of the general duties of the Chief Petroleum Inspector, but as these are all comprehensively outlined in Clause 15 of the Bill, I will not now read through this fairly long list of duties and powers. I would instead invite all Honourable Members to read these, which can be found on pages 16 and 17 of the Bill. However, I am proposing a committee stage amendment to Section 15 sub-section 2 (d) as follows:

That Clause 15 2(d) be amended: (a) by deleting the words "condition of" where they appear for the second time; and (b) by deleting the word "annually" and substituting the words, "at regular intervals during the period of such permit."

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Member also raised certain important observations relating to Clause 27 which deals with immunity under the Law. This Clause currently states that: "No action for damages may be brought against –

"(a) the Chief Petroleum Inspector;

"(b) any Inspector;

"(c) any member of the public acting at the request of the Chief Inspector or any Inspector;

"(d) any person or constable acting under the direction of the Chief Petroleum Inspector; and

"(e) the Crown,

"in respect of death, injury or loss incurred by any person occasioned in the course of carrying out duty under this Law relating to any fire or explosion or any release or spillage involving dangerous substances."

Mr. Speaker, in consultation with the Honourable Second Official Member (the Honourable Attorney General), it was agreed that the following committee stage amendments should be made to expand the scope of this Clause, so that Clause 27 would be amended by inserting before the word "duty" the word "any"; and by inserting at the end of the Clause the following words, "unless it can be established that there was negligence in carrying out such duty."

I wish to now go back to Clause 4 (9) and comment on the point raised by the Member. Clause 4 (9) reads as follows: "The operator of a workplace which is in operation or is occupied without an operating permit and the operator of a permitted vehicle which is being operated without an operating permit at the date of the commencement of this Law shall apply for an operating permit within three months of the date of commencement of this Law."

The concern of the Member of the dangers of the smaller type of operators not complying within the three month time frame was valid. However, it is the intention of the Ministry to launch a public relations programme or campaign to inform the public, including both the large and small operators, of this provision and the penalty for non-compliance.

Clause 21 of the Bill provides for the penalties in respect of an operator who engages in activities under this Law without an operating permit as follows: "Clause 21(1) Where-

"(a) the operator of a workplace operates or occupies or causes such workplace to be operated or occupied without a valid operating permit; or

"(b) the operator of a permitted vehicle operates or causes such vehicle to be operated without a valid operating permit,

"he commits an offence and shall be liable, on conviction on indictment, to a fine not exceeding $50,000 or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 5 years or both and if the offence is a continuing one to a further fine not exceeding $10,000 for every day or part of a day during which the offence has continued."

Sub-section (2) reads: "The Court may also on application-

"(a) make an order for forfeiture of any equipment used for the commission of the offence; and

"(b) grant an order restraining the accused from continuing to engage in similar activities."

The seriousness and gravity of this offence where an operator engages in activities under this Law without an operating permit is adequately reflected in the very high fines contained in this section.

Mr. Speaker, the last point on which I wish to comment, which was raised by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, deals with Clause 7 (4) of the Bill, which reads as follows: "The Board shall reach its decision by a majority of the votes of members present and voting at any meeting. The chairman or presiding member shall have no original but only a casting vote. Three members of the Board present at any meeting shall form a quorum."

Mr. Speaker, a three-member quorum will form a simple majority of our five-member board. There is nothing unusual about this provision. Such wording is fairly standard in legislation and in the complements of committees and boards. Regardless of the size of a committee or board where the simple majority forms the quorum, the chairman, where necessary, may have to exercise his casting vote if no provision is made for an original vote.

Again, in closing, I wish to thank the Honourable Member, the Leader of the Opposition, for the useful contribution which he made during his debate on the Bill and I trust that the Bill will receive the support of all Honourable Members of this House.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the Dangerous Substances Handling and Storage Bill, 2003, be given a Second Reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Dangerous Substances Handling and Storage Bill, 2003, given a Second Reading.

The Deputy Speaker: I now recognise the Honourable Minister for Aviation for the tabling of his report.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

Little Cayman Airport Master Plan

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Little Cayman Airport - Airport Master Plan.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

This Honourable House will recall that on March 19, 2003, in response to a Parliamentary Question by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, I expressed my intention to seek Cabinet approval of the Master Plan for a new airport facility in Little Cayman.

For quite some time it has been acknowledged that the Edward Bodden Airfield is inadequate and requires immediate attention. It is also known that the facility does not uphold the standards and recommended practices of the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO).

In providing some background, please allow me to explain the Cayman Islands relationship with ICAO. The United Kingdom Government has the ultimate responsibility for ensuring that the aviation services in the overseas territories are provided in accordance with the standards set by the International Civil Aviation Organisation. Therefore, the Ministry of Aviation and the Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands (CAA) must ensure that civil aviation services on all three islands are compliant with the ICAO standards.

As a result, consultants Snyder & Associates were contracted by the CAA to draft a Master Plan for the construction of a new airport in Little Cayman. More importantly, these plans were drafted in accordance with ICAO standards. However, before I discuss the plans for the proposed facility, let me highlight some of the existing conditions at the Edward Bodden Airfield that are of great concern.

Edward Bodden Airfield is located on the southwest side of Little Cayman on land which is not owned by the Crown or the CAA, but owned by private individuals. The airport operates a single runway which is 3,000 feet in length and 100 feet in width, and consists of a combination of gravel and turf surface. More critically, the runway is not demarcated and is not equipped with edge lights and edge identifiers. This situation does not permit emergency medical evacuation at night.

Although the turf and gravel runway has been accommodated, the gravel component of the runway is not acceptable for aircraft operations. Loose gravel has a tendency to dislodge from propeller blasts causing foreign object damage, which is a safety hazard to aircraft and passengers. Another safety issue affecting the airport is the runway's close proximity to the main road, power lines south of the runway, vegetation growth north and west of the airport and, finally, development east of the airport. These obstructions are hazardous to aircraft operations.

The building used to process commercial passengers is small and inadequate. This building accommodates an office of sorts, occupied by Island Air (where commercial passengers are processed), the Fire Department personnel and operations, plus the Post Office. Edward Bodden Airfield also lacks facilities for aircraft storage and maintenance and it does not have fuel facilities for aircraft operations.

Improving the present facility was considered. However, due to the runway's proximity to the road and other noted obstructions, such as power lines and buildings, it was thought to be impractical and uneconomical to make upgrades to the existing airport. Furthermore, as I have stated before, the airport site is privately owned land and not owned by the Government or the CAA.

I know this Honourable House will agree that the Edward Bodden Airfield facility is extremely deficient. The contracted consultants' assessment of the airport reaffirms the need for a new facility, as upgrading the Edward Bodden Airfield is not a viable option. A new facility is proposed for construction on Crown lands located at Little Cayman West Block 80A Parcels 88 and 98, and Block 82A Parcel 4. I will now briefly outline some of the improved features the proposed facility will have.

The proposed runway is to be 4,000 feet long by 100 feet wide for safe use by the types of aircraft to be expected. Currently, the Twin Otter, Britten-Norman Islander, and the Navajo Chieftain, are the only aircraft using the airport. Unlike the Edward Bodden Airfield turf and gravel runway, the new runway will have a paved surface. It will also have edge lights and identifiers which will ensure the runway could be used during periods of darkness and low visibility.

An automatic weather observing station will be installed at the new airport. Currently, the airport in Cayman Brac provides weather information for Edward Bodden Airfield. Airport terminal facilities will provide a lobby area, snack and retail space, check-in counters, departure baggage storage and security screening, restroom facilities, airport manager's office, and other related facilities. A separate building for the fire department will be constructed on site. Accommodation for fire department and civil aviation personnel will also be provided on site. A proper parking facility is also proposed to accommodate employees and visitors and an access road to the terminal area will be developed.

This plan also ensures that the new airport will be constructed responsibly; mitigating any negative effect the development will have on the Red-footed Booby nesting site, nearby, which is also a Ramsar site of international importance. This is important as we must take an active role in protecting our environment even as we seek to improve our infrastructure as a natural consequence of our development.

As we all know, apart from our safety concerns, image is important and our airports are the first point of reference for many of our visitors to these Islands. It was estimated in 2001 that there were 3,990 aircraft movements in Little Cayman. This is a significant number and it may surprise many that over 37,000 passengers flew into Little Cayman last year. It was forecasted that aircraft movements will remain stable in the short term and will increase in the future, especially once airport facilities improve in Little Cayman.

These projections would seem accurate considering the Government's efforts towards promoting development and economic growth in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. A proper airport facility on all Islands is a necessary component to facilitate these efforts. We must, therefore, make certain that our airports present the right image and support the future economic growth of these Islands.

Although improving the image of our airports is important, I believe safeguarding all passengers in the aircraft that use our facilities is imperative. We are now all aware that the present airport operation in Little Cayman compromises the safety of aircraft and passengers. The construction of a new airport in Little Cayman is necessary. The proposed airport will not only uphold the standards of the International Civil Aviation Organization to which the CAA is bound, but it will also offer a safe and efficient facility for all its users.

We have a responsibility to the people of the Cayman Islands to provide an airport facility that maintains the highest standards of safety and comfort, and I am confident that this plan will meet these objectives. The Cabinet has authorised the Civil Aviation Authority to investigate possible sources of funding for the recommended works and what works may be started in the immediate phase. Consideration is being given to this matter at present and preliminary works will commence in a few weeks.

I thank Honourable Members of this House for their attention and consideration and look forward to their support in this proposal.

I also have a statement. I would ask your directions as to when I should make it.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, you may go ahead and continue on and make your statement at this time as well.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Ongoing Litigation Between the Civil Aviation Authority and Island Air

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you.

I wish to inform this Honourable House about the progress with regard to the ongoing litigation between the Civil Aviation Authority and Island Air. This Honourable House is undoubtedly aware of the outstanding debt of Island Air to the Civil Aviation Authority for landing and parking fees. This debt has gone uncollected since 23 January 1995, and continues to accumulate until 1 October 2003.

It is acknowledged that Island Air has provided a well used for-profit domestic air service to these Islands since 1993. However, as of January 1995, their non-payment of parking and landing fees has put unquestionable strain on the financial operations of the Civil Aviation Authority and Government.

Although Civil Aviation has repeatedly requested payment of their dues, Island Air has refused payment. Island Air has contended that they had an agreement with the past Government allowing their landing and parking fees to be waived. However, it was determined by the Court that the issue of the debt to CAA is still outstanding and there is a triable issue.

I believe that it is imperative and simply good governance to resolve this outstanding issue. This Honourable House will recall on 21 March 2003, that I stated my intentions to resolve this matter within the year.

In keeping with my undertaking, the Ministry gave careful consideration to this matter, reviewed all the related documentation between the related parties, and decided to proceed with initial steps taken by the previous Government, which is to continue legal proceedings against Island Air to enforce payment of their debt to the Civil Aviation Authority— which up to August 30, stood at $1.134 million.

The preliminary Court hearing into the Civil Aviation Authority versus Island Air Ltd. concluded with the Chief Justice ruling in favour of the Civil Aviation Authority. This now clears the way for the matter to go to trial unless Island Air comes up with a settlement proposal acceptable to Government. In order to arrest the further accrual of the outstanding debt, Island Air Ltd. has been directed by the Director of the Civil Aviation Authority (DCA) to commence payment for all ongoing operations as of October 1, 2003. This means that Island Air is now required to pay on a daily basis all landing and parking fees. My information is that Island Air has been honouring this instruction from the DCA so far.

Should Island Air decide to cease operations, this Ministry has contingency plans in place to guarantee that local air services between Grand Cayman, Cay-man Brac, and Little Cayman will remain available to the public. We are currently in discussions with Cayman Airways and the Air Transport Licensing Authority is in the process of reviewing proposals from companies who have expressed an interest in providing domestic air services.

It has come to my attention that Island Air has sent an e-mail to its industry partners and customers advising them of a letter from the DCA to the effect, and I quote, "effective immediately [going forward] Island Air must pay all Landing Fees within the Cayman Islands for the schedule service", and claims that, as a result, Island Air has had to increase their fees.

This Honourable House needs to note that not only does this e-mail convey a false impression, it is intended to deliberately mislead the public. The letter from the DCA is not requiring Island Air to pay any new fees, but, instead, is seeking to have Island Air honour its long outstanding obligation. Therefore to state that Government would slap yet another tax on the people of the Sister Islands is downright false and misleading.

I would like to inform this Honourable House that Island Air is not authorised to raise its airfare without seeking approval from the Air Transport Licensing Authority (ATLA). Section 14 of the Air Transport Licensing Authority (Licensing of Air Service) Regulations, 1977 states, "the holder of the license shall obtain permission from the Authority before introducing any charges, types of aircraft or frequency other than those in effect when the license was issued."

The Air Transport Licensing Authority will issue a letter to Island Air to notify them that the ATLA will make an application to the Grand Court restraining an unlawful increase if they do not retract their statement to raise the airfare and forward the appropriate application to ATLA for consideration.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to emphasise that any concern or anxiety caused to the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is directly attributable to the false and misleading information issued by Island Air to the public at large.

I will continue to keep this Honourable House and the public informed about matters pertaining to this case.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: I will call on the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled the Loan (No. 2) Bill, 2003.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, I have been advised that we need to have Standing Order 46 (4) suspended, since I think it was done without the Gazetting of this Bill.

Suspension of Standing Order 46 (4)

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I so move, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 46 (4) be suspended. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Order 46 (4) is thereby suspended.

Agreed. Standing Order 46(4) suspended.

The Deputy Speaker: If the Member would (out of an abundance of caution) do the movement again, please.

SECOND READING

The Loan (No. 2) Bill, 2003

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Loan (No. 2) Bill, 2003.

The Deputy Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Bill before this Honourable House seeks approval for Government to borrow $15 million. If that approval is granted the Government intends to use $10 million to build the Prospect Primary School and the remaining $5 million to carry out an extension to the National Archive.

The planned new Prospect Primary School is well known to Honourable Members of this House. In fact, yesterday morning I tabled the Report of Finance Committee discussion on this Bill. On 12 August, Finance Committee resolved that it supported the Financial Secretary seeking loan proposals for an amount not exceeding $10 million to build a new primary school in Prospect by September 2004.

Finance Committee further resolved that the requested Loan Bill should be forwarded to the Legislative Assembly during its current meeting. This explains the presence of the Bill in this Honourable House. Government is fulfilling the wishes of Finance Committee, and I should mention that this morning there was groundbreaking for the commencement of construction of that school.

Turning to the extension of the National Archive, I would like to outline why there is a need for an extension.

In 1988 the Government committed itself to records management and established a National Archive to carry out this programme. By 1994 the programme had proved itself and was sought after by departments who could see its benefits. As space at the Records Office at the National Archive ran out in 1997, the programme began to plateau. During the next six years, up to 2003, the programme declined. Currently, the record centre's main function is storage of some records belonging to some departments, but this is not what records management is meant to be.

The present difficulty has occurred because the record centre is full. The effects arising from this are numerous and could be unfavourable. Government does not know all the records it holds and it exposes Government to unacceptable and unnecessary liabilities. Files for more and more departments are now being stored in warehouses where they are exposed to heat, flooding and vermin, and are unprotected from hurricanes, flooding, fire or burglary.

The present lack of space at records management will become acute and more apparent when the proposed new Private Finance Initiative funded administration buildings are completed. The project architects for the new administration buildings have allocated office space on the correct assumption that departments should not need to keep records in their offices that are more than three years old. This means that ministries and departments moving into new buildings will be forced to surround themselves with records because they cannot be stored at the National Archive or have them stored in sub-standard or unacceptable locations.

It is abundantly clear that unless the National Archive extension is constructed soon, departments will be lumbered with the unwelcome task of moving their records into the proposed new administration building where space will be insufficient for that purpose or will continue with the unsuitable alternative arrangements involving the use of warehouses.

A third dimension to this situation (which is, sadly, all the more glaring as we celebrate the Cayman Quincentennial Year) is the long-term impact of records management on our history. When the new history of the Cayman Islands is launched shortly, it will demonstrate this truth.

The vast majority of historical data for the first 450 years after 1503 did not come from our local archives. They came from Jamaica and the United Kingdom, because those countries kept good records on Cayman's behalf. The National Archive has been able to copy these records and, as a consequence, Cayman has an authentic historical record for those years.

A century from now the picture will become completely different. When the grandchildren and great-grandchildren of today's Caymanians sit down to write the history of the Cayman Islands in the 21st Century they will not have Jamaican or English records to rely on. They will depend on records that the Cayman Islands have, or have not managed and secured. The Cayman Islands has now reached a point where it must decide if it truly wants a National Archive. If it does, then it must make a fresh investment in the physical resources required. This investment would enable the Archive to prepare Government for the move to the new buildings, to solve the current situation in records management and tackle complex challenges of electronic records which do not provide any magic solution for the problems described.

The present design plans for the extension to the National Archive will meet the needs of the Islands for the next 25 years and will probably do so for much longer. Significant preparation of the site has already been done so that work can begin almost immediately, provided this Honourable House approves this financing.

Honourable Members will quite rightly ask what impact this additional $15 million borrowing will have on Government's public debt ratio or the debt service ratio. The Government obtained approval from the Legislative Assembly earlier this year to borrow $8 million to finance most of the capital development expenditure outlined in the 2003/2004 Annual Planning Estimates. Even when we add the proposed $15 million borrowing now before this Honourable House to the $8 million borrowing already approved by the Legislative Assembly to the Government's existing public debt and financing loan obligations, the debt service ratio is only expected to be 6.4 percent as at 30 June 2004, which is well below the limit of 10 percent stated in the Public Management and Finance Law 2001.

Turning to the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons for the Bill, it is a Bill for a law to be entitled the Loan (No. 2) Law 2003 (which is now before this Honourable House). Its Memorandum of Objects and Reasons and three Clauses are consistent with the remarks that I have just made. I therefore invite Honourable Members to support this Bill.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member.

Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Thank you, kindly.

Since the Ministry for which I hold constitutional responsibility is the Ministry under which this loan, I suppose, proposes to serve, I should have some comments to offer to the Honourable House.

I wish to begin by saying that there is an acknowledged peculiarity in the dynamics of political relations because when I was more closely associated with some Members of the Opposition, it seemed that I was their darling. Now that there is the divide necessitated by the Westminster system, the efforts I put forward are often open, not only to criticism—because I expect that that is par for the course—but derision and mockery to the point where, when the issue of temporary classrooms was introduced, the Opposition had no end of negative commentary to make. Yet, when I was associated with them they knew that we were facing this problem, and that was an acknowledged approach to the problem until we could find a more permanent solution. That notwithstanding, I am not necessarily adversarial. I only wish to say that there is a big difference between myself and the Members of the Opposition because I am a professional educator and so the decisions that I take are always taken with that in mind. The Opposition does not necessarily operate from such a vantage point, so I have to give and take.

I am happy to say that we were able this morning to have the ground-breaking for the proposed new school in Prospect which is the subject of this Bill. I am also happy to see that the Opposition turned out in numbers to support that ground-breaking, because I know that their minds are with education. I expressed my appreciation to them in the abbreviated ceremony that we held this morning.

Mr. Speaker, I hear some crosstalk across the road. We are not dealing with numbers; we are dealing with substance, so perhaps it would take all of them and still not necessitate all of us.

Education for the Cayman Islands must be as Napoleon said the conscript army was for France—the vitality of the nation. The UDP Government recognises this, hence the strides we are making. I believe these strides are constructive, but the needs that we are facing are not needs which suddenly came about in the tenure of the UDP Government. Many of them, regrettably, are needs which existed prior to the tenure of the UDP that were not addressed. I am not in the business of pointing fingers and laying blame as can be seen. I am an action man. I am in the business of addressing the needs as they exist and as I have the ability to address them. Hence, we are getting off to this start now.

I believe with all my heart that this is the correct move. This school is a long-awaited school. However, I want to offer some critical commentary on what happened in the past. It cannot be in the best interests of development that we could just build a school a few years ago and already the school is full to capacity. I am talking about the Red Bay School. When we embark on planning and development projects in this society, we have to be visionary and build them so that within three or four years they are not up to capacity and over capacity. There is no way (if the matter was done right) that that school should have been up to its capacity already. That should not have happened, probably for ten years. If it did, the school should have been constructed so that additional modules could have been easily added on. These are the things that we have tried to make contingencies for in the new Prospect Primary School, the contract which we have awarded to Hadsphaltic and for which the ground-breaking took place this morning.

I believe that all Honourable Members of this House are interested in the education and the provision of education to the Caymanian children, because they realise that is where the future lies, other philosophical differences notwithstanding. Therefore, I am sure that they will support the Bill. I am asking them to support the Bill for this school and the Bill for the extension of the Archive. I will talk about the Archive later, however, it is crucial that we get this school on line, and the other schools that we propose will come in time, I hope, as promised with respect to the UDP itinerary and programmes.

I want to say and caution that I hear plenty of unlicensed education ministers, on the radio and otherwise, trying to poke fun at huts and hovels—drawing reference to the temporary classrooms. Let me say something about those temporary classrooms. I visited the exact same model of temporary classrooms in Georgia on two occasions. I satisfied myself that these were aesthetically acceptable, safe and functional for our children. Not only that, before these classrooms landed here (and prior to the conclusion of the purchase), I sent up the Senior Assistant Secretary in the Ministry of Education to ensure that these were of the quality we had agreed to purchase. They were not purchased out of any crisis. It was planned.

Anyone who has seen them, and knows of the problems that confronted us in terms of numbers, knows that is the best methodology that we could adopt at this point. The Middle School is bursting to its seams, and there are other schools in a similar situation. Bodden Town School is growing beyond any means. We had to get these. It is not the end of the world, and I do not plan to fall on my sword because it is a situation of abject failure. I am not doing that at all because it was not any battle which I consider lost.

What is important is that within two years of its tenure, the United Democratic Party can come here debating a Loan Bill, offering a contract for the construction of a new school—one of three, which we need—a feat that was not achieved in a decade or more. Our children are certainly not disadvantaged by being temporarily housed in these classrooms. I resent what is trying to be done by unbridled and unlicensed mouths, Mr. Speaker. I am usually very civil, but anybody who knows me knows that I am a battler. I had to be! I tell people that I grew up on the streets.

Therefore, I have to say in defence of the Government (and, of course, my own defence) that the Caymanian children are not disadvantaged. The Opposition is irresponsible because they are spreading this too, and their supporters are even more irresponsible because the Leader of the Opposition knows that this is what we had to resort to. He and I were best buddies when we were in the Opposition. He knows that this is a situation which we are facing. I understand the politics of it. I am just telling them that they must be careful because I am a good counterpuncher.

Mr. Speaker, the Bill for the school is timely. It is not burdening the country any more. What could be more necessary? What could we borrow money for that would be a more meaningful and discrete project than for the construction of a new modern school for our children? I would just like to say something about the school for those Honourable Members who may not know: The location is at Pointdexter Road at Spotts. Access will be from Pointdexter Road, although plans are underway for a future east-west highway which will incorporate a proposed roundabout with an arm providing direct access to the school.

The acreage is 13.5 acres and the school will have a fenced compound which covers approximately seven acres. The size of the school is 33,530 square feet in a single-storey building with a total capacity of 300, with expansion up to 350 plus 25 staff. Planning approval has already been granted and the school is supposed to open for the 2004/2005 school year. I have been assured by the contractor (Hadsphaltic) that it will be open for that time. The number of classrooms will be 12, with 25 students per classroom plus two additional rooms to be used for art and science, which can, if circumstances necessitate, be adopted as standard classrooms. There will also be a room for special education needs.

Other facilities will be a combined auditorium/cafeteria/physical fitness area (which we labelled a "Cafetorium"); a music room; a learning resource centre; library; counselling room; computer room; medical room; sick bay (including dental facilities) in fully air-conditioned surroundings. Further, in keeping with our ITALIC project, the school will be completely wireless or wired, for our ongoing Information and Communications Technology project.

Therefore, with the granting of this Loan Bill, which I am asking all Honourable Members to support, we will then have two schools left to build. The most pressing one will be the proposed high school in Frank Sound and then there will be the school which we plan to build in West Bay to supplement the John A. Cumber Primary School.

Mr. Speaker, I have just returned from two weeks in Canada where I conducted some educational meetings with regard to the proposed project converting our Community College into a degree-granting university college. I am very familiar with the Canadian system of education because that is where I got my post-graduate training in educational administration. It is heartening for us also to learn that in Cayman we are not the worst off, because our population gives us the ability to service the needs of each one of our students to a more acute and specialised level than do jurisdictions like Canada. They are doing the same thing that we are doing in Information and Communications Technology.

Much of their curriculum and educational objectives are the same, except that one particular school district that I went in has 60,000 students in the state system. We have about 6,000. So it is much easier, even in these times of soft finance for us to do what we are doing than for them to do what they are doing. I am heartened by the fact that they hold no significant advantage over us in terms of achievement, in terms of school equipment, in terms of teacher training, in terms of the ability of our students. However, we have to continuously upgrade our facilities if we are to remain a jurisdiction of excellence; if we are to give our children the best that they deserve. It is all right for education to be political, but education cannot get bogged down in cheap politics because it serves no one any good when that happens. It certainly does not serve the constituency and the cohorts of our students any good when we talk nonsense, and the criticism is not constructive.

Mr. Speaker, I am confident that we are on the right path. I am sure the Opposition knows that and I am relying on them to support the Loan Bill.

With regard to the Archive, Mr. Speaker, the Archives also fall under the Ministry for which I hold constitutional responsibility. I have said from the time that I came in that we are running the risk of serious embarrassment because we have now to resort to storage of important documents—court documents, probate documents, important financial documents—in facilities other than specifically designed facilities. If these documents are needed, even after a short time of storage in other than custom built facilities, we are going to be embarrassed and may even be in legal trouble.

Many of them are stored in warehouses which are not temperature controlled, so the paper deteriorates; some of them are subject to vermin and natural predators on the papers. We have to do better than this. It is a question of contingencies. It is a question of what is important. I would hope that we can get these facilities because the Archive Director is frustrated, and he and his staff are doing an excellent job for which I, on behalf of the Government, commend them.

However, they are handcuffed and frustrated. I feel for them because now it is up to capacity. We are talking about building a new administrative centre for the Government already. The Ministry which I occupy would be a fire hazard if it were anywhere else but in the Cayman Islands, because I am surrounded by paper! It is an island which is surrounded by paper, and that is not a good safety and security issue. These documents should be stored in a purpose-built facility. That is not only common to the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture, it is common to other ministries as well. I say this to impress upon Honourable Members that it is absolutely essential that we get this money so that we can have a more efficient, more effective and better run system.

I would like to say to the Opposition that I know they are charitable. I will leave it to their conscience and I ask them to be a little more responsible in their criticism, particularly in the criticism levelled at education. I know that the Education Ministry is so important that all five of the Opposition Members would like to be education ministers, and that is all right. However, they must temper their criticism to what is real, true and fair. They know me. They know that I am quite capable of being an Oxford Scholar or being a raging, raving backwards Baptist preacher—the real old southern hand-clapper-chorus-singing type! I leave it to them to decide which Roy they would like to see come to the Legislative Assembly.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member.

At this time we will take the luncheon break and we will return at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.28 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.15 pm

[Hon. Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

Final call: Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, I will recognise the Honourable Third Official Member to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you.

I would like to say thanks to Honourable Members for their support of this Bill that is before this Honourable House. I have been made to understand that there are just a few questions that Members have got in regard to the likely flooding that could occur to the extension of the archive site. According to information provided by the Director, the extension to be constructed will be situated at about four feet above the normal land level as it now stands—that is four feet above the ground level of the present facility. In addition, within the first floor of the new facility the strong rooms will be raised an additional three feet. Therefore, when the four feet (which is the height of the foundation elevation) is added on to the three feet (which will be for the height at which the strong rooms will be raised) it would require water flooding to the extent of about seven feet in order to effect damage to the records that would be kept at the ground floor level.

In addition, the ground floor of the extension, and presumably the existing facility, will not be used for record storage, only for the management of records that will be processed by the Archive. All historical or valuable records will be stored or kept in storage on the second floor. Therefore, based on what I have just outlined in terms of the thoughts that have gone into the construction of this extension and also to avoid likely damage that could occur from flooding, every effort is being made to make sure that this facility will be a world-class facility.

I understand that even the top floor will be constructed out of concrete and there will be what appears to be a normal roof over that. This means that the facility will have the ability to stand up to hurricanes or strong wind damage. Therefore, for the monies that are being sought today, the Cayman Islands can be assured that the facility that will be provided is one which will guarantee safekeeping of records as best as possible.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the Loans (No. 2) Bill, 2003, be given a Second Reading and passed. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Accordingly, the Loans (No. 2) Bill, 2003,, has been given a second reading.

Agreed. The Loan (No. 2) Bill, 2003, given a Second Reading.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider the various Bills.

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

House in Committee at 3.20 pm

The Chairman: The House is now in Committee.

With the leave of the House, may I assume that as usual we will authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and such like?

Will the Clerk state each Bill and read its respective Clauses.

The information and Communications Technology authority (Amendment) Bill, 2003

Clauses 1 to 14

The Clerk:

- Clause 1. Short Title.
- Clause 2. Amendment of the Information and Communications Technology Authority Law, 2002.
- Clause 3. Amendment of section 2 - definitions.
- Clause 4. Amendment of section 4 - board of directors.
- Clause 5. Amendment of section 6 - managing director of the Authority.
- Clause 6. Amendment of section 9 - powers and functions of the Authority.
- Clause 7. Amendment of section 14 - financial procedure.
- Clause 8. Amendment of section 17 - repayment of advances.
- Clause 9. Amendment of section 18 - reserve fund.

- Clause 10. Amendment of section 25 - shares of licensee not to be issued or transferred without approval of the Authority.
- Clause 11. Amendment of section 26 - procedure for the grant of a licence.
- Clause 12. Amendment of section 30 - licence fees.
- Clause 13. Amendment of section 31 - modification of licence.
- Clause 14. Amendment of section 32 - suspension of licence.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 to 14 stand part of the Bill. Is there a debate?

The Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Chairman. Just a query on Clause 10 where it reads: “the principal Law is amended in section 25 (6) by inserting after the word ‘company’ where it appears for the second time the words ‘or registrar’.”

Madam Chairman, I wonder if we could get some clarity on this “registrar”, as there is no definition in the Law of “registrar”, and I do not know if it means the Registrar of Companies, or it is not a terminology that is used in the Cayman Islands.

The Chairman: Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Chairman, I have taken the point raised by the Honourable Elected Member for North Side, and I would like this Section to read in the last line, “‘company’ where it appears for the second time the words ‘secretary or registrar’.”

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Chairman, if I could help the Honourable Minister—without him thinking I am being rude—the original Law speaks of the secretary of the company, and this is where we are going to insert “or registrar”. In the original Law it already speaks to the secretary of the company and then “or registrar” will be inserted after that company. My question is some clarification on “registrar” . . . or do we have a definition for “registrar”?

The Chairman: Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Chairman, I take the suggestion by the Member, but what I am suggesting is that after the word “secretary” it should be followed by “or registrar”. “Registrar” is an accepted and known title within the Company Law and therefore we would move that this remain.

The Chairman: Did you have a follow up, Member for North Side?

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Chairman, just to get it clear in my mind, I have never seen this used, “registrar”, “secretary” or “registrar of the company”. It does not mean the Registrar of Companies. Does it mean the registered office of the company?

I have never heard “registrar” used in the Cayman Islands legislation of a company other than as the Registrar of Companies.

The Chairman: Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business, do you care to respond?

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Just to say that I am reliably informed legally that this word is quite commonly used in companies, not necessarily to apply to the Registrar of Companies, so I am prepared to leave it. If I find out later on that there is a problem, I can bring an amendment to this section.

The Chairman: I just wonder if we could have the indulgence of Honourable Members.

I do not see the recording chap at the back and I would ask the Serjeant to make sure that proceedings are being recorded.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Chairman.

The Chairman: Please proceed, Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: On Clause 10, I would like to move a motion that we correct the second line of this by it reading (and I will read the full clause): “The principal Law is amended in section 25 (6) by inserting after the word ‘secretary’ the words ‘or registrar.’”

This was a printing error, so I would like to have this corrected.

The Chairman: The Amendment has been duly moved.

Does any other Member wish to add to it?

If not, I will put the question that the Amendment stands part of the Clause. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. The Amendment stands part of the Clause.

Agreed. Amendment to Clause 10 passed.

The Chairman: I will put the question that the Clause as amended stands part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: Accordingly, Clause 10 as amended stands part of the Bill.

Agreed: Clause 10, as amended, passed.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 to 9 stand part of the Bill. If no debate, I will put the question. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: Clauses 1 to 9 stand part of the Bill.

Agreed: Clauses 1 to 9 passed.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 11 to 14 stand part of the Bill. If no debate, I put the question. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clauses 11 to 14 now stand part of the Bill.

Agreed: Clauses 11 to 14 passed.

Clause 15

The Clerk: Clause 15. Insertion of Part IIIA – Anti-Competitive Practices.

The Chairman: Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business, I believe you have an amendment.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Chairman, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52 (1) and (2) I give notice that I intend to move the following committee stage amendments to the Information and Communications Technology Authority (Amendment) Bill, 2003,: that Clause 15 be amended by inserting for the new Section 34Q a marginal note entitled, "Penalty for infringing Section 34B or 34F prohibitions."

The Chairman: Thank you.

The Amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak to it?

If not I will put the question that the amendment stands part of the Clause. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. The Amendment stands part of the Clause.

Agreed: Amendment to Clause 15 passed.

The Chairman: I will put the question that the Clause as amended now stands part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 15 as amended stands part of the Bill.

Agreed: Clause 15, as amended, passed.

Clause 16

The Clerk: Clause 16. Insertion of a New Part 4 (a) Administrative Fines.

The Chairman: Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Chairman, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52 (1) and (2) I give notice that I intend to move the following Committee Stage Amendment to the Information and Communications Technology Authority (Amendment) Bill, 2003: that Clause 16 be amended in the new Section 37A proposed for insertion in the principal Law as follows:

- (a) In subsection 7 by deleting the words "subsection (2)" and substituting the words "subsection (3)"; and
- (b) In subsection 13 by deleting the words "subsection (11)" and substituting the words "subsection (12)".

The Chairman: The Amendment has been duly moved. Does anyone wish to speak to it?

I will put the question that the Amendment stands part of the Clause. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. The Amendment stands part of the Clause.

Agreed: Amendment to Clause 16 passed.

The Chairman: I will put the question that the Clause as amended stands part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 16 as amended now stands part of the Bill.

Agreed: Clause 16, as amended, passed.

Clauses 17 to 23

The Clerk:

Clause 17. Amendment of section 38 - universal service fund.

Clause 18. Amendment of section 45 - interconnection agreements.

- Clause 19. Amendment of section 46 - pre-contract disputes.
 Clause 20. Amendment of section 48 - infrastructure sharing.
 Clause 21. Insertion of section 48A - licensee confidential information.
 Clause 22. Amendment of section 49 – numbering.
 Clause 23. Amendment of section 50 - quality of service.

The Chairman: Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business, I think you have an amendment to Clause 23.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Chairman, I move that the Bill be amended by inserting the following Clauses after Clause 23 . . . No, that will be at the end.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 17 to 23 stand part of the Bill.

If there is no debate, I will put the question that Clauses 17 to 23 stand part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clauses 17 to 23 stand part of the Bill.

Agreed: Clauses 17 to 23 passed.

Clauses 24 to 28

The Clerk:

- Clause 24. Amendment of Section 55 - review of administrative decisions by the Authority.
 Clause 25. Insertion of Section 55A - third party appeals under Part IIIA.
 Clause 26. Amendment of Section 56 - appeals to the court.
 Clause 27. Insertion of Section 68A to 68C.
 Clause 28. Amendment of the First Schedule - procedure of the Board.

The Chairman: I put the question that Clauses 24 to 28 stand part of the Bill. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: Clauses 24 to 28 stand part of the Bill.

Agreed: Clause 24 to 28 passed.

New Clause 24

The Clerk: New Clause 24. Amendment of Section 53 - Insertion of Messages Prohibited

The Chairman: The question is that this Clause has been deemed to have been read a second time. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: New Clause 24 given a second reading.

The Chairman: The question is that this Clause be added to the Bill as Clause No. 24 and that the subsequent Clauses be renumbered accordingly. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: New Clause 24 added to the Bill as Clause No. 24 and the subsequent Clauses be renumbered accordingly.

New Clause 25

The Clerk: New Clause 25. Insertion of section 53A - Lawful Interception of Messages.

Eleventh Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay to now grace us with prayers.

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Honourable Minister responsible for Education who is currently off the Island on official business.

PRAYERS

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived : We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of the Cayman Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who are in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.23 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

Message from the Speaker

Honourable Members, in accordance with today's Order Paper, eleventh sitting, Friday 10 October 2003, and by virtue of Number 2, namely, Reading of Messages and Announcements, I now rise to read the following message from myself to this Honourable House, and to proceed to make a very important announcement.

Honourable Members, as I pondered and as I prayed about what message I would like to leave with you all here today, I decided to pose the following question: What is your purpose here on earth? In other words, ask yourself what on earth am I doing here on earth? I believe that God has a purpose for each one of us here. There is a purpose for each of our respective lives. Our job is to find that purpose, but it does not end there. When we find our divine purpose in life we must persevere and stand. The purpose for your life and for my life has all to do with what God has designed for us, and there is nothing, absolutely nothing, far greater than God's purpose. God's purpose is not limited to space or time. If you look for God, you will find him and he will show you what your purpose in life is.

Generally speaking, His purpose is for us to tell the world about Jesus. You are full of promise and potential. God has a process to accomplish his purpose in you. This purpose is not an easy one. Paul called it a fight, indeed he called it warfare; but we can and we will be victorious. Just remember that everyday life takes us through, Jesus has gone there before. We will see this in Romans 12:1-2 that we must seek to find God's will.

Isaiah 52:1-2 also tells us you must also separate yourself. 2 Timothy 2:5 says you must study to show yourself approved. James 4:7-8 says you must submit to the process. Hebrews 12:3-6 says when you submit to God it will cause you to have patience. You will need patience to carry out and wait on God's will. In Romans 12:1-2 we see the will of God is originating in God. It is a perfect will. You will have to search to find His will.

I again say: when you begin, do not quit or back up. Keep God's will before your eyes. It is not a time thing. Some people find God's will in their lives sooner than others. Do not let the devil use this deferral to deter you; your job is still to find it.

John 3:30 says, "He [referring to Jesus] must increase but I must decrease." The same holds true for me today, Honourable Members. Jesus knows God's will because he sought it in Luke 22:42. He said: "Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done". This is the type of commitment God is still looking for even today. Is it easy? No. Is it possible? A resounding yes, Honourable Members. Remember how Moses said that he came from the back side of the desert? Well, it does not matter where you have come from or who your parents are or what colour you are, or what size you are. What really matters is if you are in the full will of God, what God has for you no man can take from you. What God has for your life is bigger than what any man or woman may say.

Some people are, by their very nature, inter-ferers. Peter the Apostle was like that. Remember when John was leaning on Jesus and getting up real close to him? Peter asked, "What is John's purpose?" But Jesus said, "Mind your own purpose, John's purpose is John's purpose". Regardless of who goes, you go and find God's purpose for your life. When you start to find God's purpose stick with it, stay in the way of God, separate yourself to find the will of God, be still and know that God is God.

1 Samuel 7:3 tells us that there are, in my respectful submission, three important things that we must do here while we are on earth. We must put away; secondly, we must put off; thirdly, we must put on. That is, come out from among them and find God. I do not know who the "them" is in your lives, Honourable Members, only you and Almighty God know that. However, I know that if we are all honest here today I am sure that the Holy Spirit is telling you right here and now who the "them" is in your life that you must separate yourself from in order to find God's divine will for your life.

2 Corinthians 6:17-18 tell us that Jesus is still everything. You cannot hold on to anyone else but Him, and I can tell you He will not fail you. The words "separate yourself" are action words. That is, disconnect, go a different way, go forward, sever. You will never be satisfied until you find God's will away from this world. When you move out, you will find God's will. Mary moved out to find Jesus and we saw in Matthew 28:9 that she found Him and Jesus greeted her and I quote, "All hail". In other words, Jesus excitedly received and greeted her.

If you find God's purpose you will not wander around. If you do not find God's will you will end up in a spiritual graveyard. It is much better to be alive and resurrected, exercising discretion of choice. Mary went back to the tomb to see the grave and the tomb, but instead the angels told her, "He is not here. He is alive".

Do not go back, Honourable Members, to the tomb any more, that is, the tomb of unforgiveness, the tomb of bitterness, the tomb of hatred. You will get so poisoned in your hearts and your minds that it will sicken everything about you and everyone around you. Jesus is still saying "Come unto me". How do we find God's purpose? Study to show yourselves approved. There is nothing more embarrassing when we do not. Be prepared and study.

The Holy Spirit has been my guide and continues to be my guide. Likewise he will guide you and give you continued wisdom. Forget about ourselves and listen intently to hear for the heart of God, for a nation without a vision shall surely perish. Find the unadulterated word of God and take our beloved Cayman Islands forward. Spend more time before God. Trust me, we all need it.

What does this mean? Just that: separate yourselves, come up to the next level and find God. Separate yourself to find God's will, prepare your minds, prepare your intellect. Get ready for real genuine fellowship with God. Submit yourselves; do not be pompous and hard-headed or proud. Your soul still is the most important asset which you possess. Submit yourself to God. When you separate yourself, there will be pain; make no mistake, there will be pain. However, remember that Paul said, "It is not only I that lives but Christ lives in me". If they talk about you—and yes, they will—or if they pass you by, do not worry. Just look to Jesus.

Remember that our character is like a fence; it cannot be strengthened by whitewashing it. Isaiah 41:10 says, "Fear not; for I am with you: be not dismayed; for I am your God: I will strengthen you; I will help you; I will uphold you with my victorious right hand".

Honourable Members, I believe that there certainly is a process in accomplishing God's will. In this will be fear. You may say, "Lord, I want to win this struggle," as I have said. "I want the people to see Jesus in me," as I have also said. Lord help me to win the war but may you put the fear of the past behind all our people. Do not let our past now come to paralyse us. Your heart may be broken by a relationship gone bad; by disobedient children; by the death of a loved one, but those of you, Honourable Members, who have pledged to serve God, may I, in my departing message, implore you not to ever look back but to continue on with your fervent pledge. Release your problem to God, do not bring reproach to the name of God and He will take care of you.

When Mary got to the tomb there was an earthquake. Remember? Things were dark and uncertain. You too will have to go through such a process, but Jesus is able to take you through as He has taken me through over my now 42 years of life. The earthquake came before the Angel of the Lord came and rolled back the stone. Once you go through the process, the Angel of the Lord still remains encamped round about you and you will get your prize. When God sees fit He will place you exactly where He wants you to be. But in all your doing find God's purpose for your life, if you do not find God's purpose, you will only be spinning wheels.

Learn to press against depressing issues; learn to be in the spirit of prayer and cultivate a prayerful attitude. When you get sick, your purpose will be challenged; when you do not have any money, again, your purpose will be challenged; when you are around carnal persons, your purpose will be challenged; when you have carnal children, your purpose will also be challenged. Satan will try to use your very children to bring you down, those closest to you, perhaps. Look at the story of Job. He did not give up; he held on to God and so will I. Your judgmental friends will challenge your purpose. The Psalmist said, "I was wounded in the House of my friends". When your community forsakes you, your purpose will once again be challenged.

How do you fulfil your purpose in all this? Persevere, persevere in prayer. Sometimes you feel that you cannot find God; sometimes you feel there is not one single friend to encourage you. Still stay in prayer and stick to God's purpose. In order to continue your purpose you must learn to forgive and you must expect deliverance. Do not allow your circumstances to change your purpose. Do not let a crisis in your life change your purpose. Having done all, stand!

What is the most precious thing to you? Does this thing stand between you and your God? It is a question I too had to ask myself. Is it the House? Is it the power? Is it the job? Is it the children? Whatever it is put God first. Our service to God and our people is a reasonable sacrifice.

In conclusion, I say, what on earth are we doing here on earth in the year 2003? Only you and God, Honourable Members, can answer that question. However, whether or not we answered it here today, there is coming a day—and I truly believe that—when we will be called upon by Almighty God himself to give an account of word, thought and deed. Until then, let us find God's purpose for all of our lives.

Announcement of Resignation of the Speaker Honourable Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly

Now for my announcement. First, in accordance with the Cayman Islands Constitution I, Juliana O'Connor-Connolly, Speaker of this Honourable House of the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly, hereby now give verbal and written notice of my resignation as Speaker of this Legislative Assembly to the said Clerk and all Honourable Members present here today. I have chosen that my resignation as Speaker will take effect immediately upon my handing the said letter of resignation as Speaker to the Clerk of this House and instructing her to lay the said resignation letter on the Table of this Honourable House so that in the interest of transparency it may then be made available to any member of the press and any member of the public who may wish to have a copy of the same.

For the record, and out of the abundance of caution, I should also state that for any of the spin doctors that may or may not be around, I am resigning this morning because I, Julianna O'Connor-Connolly, want to resign as Speaker and yes, the UDP has never mentioned that they want to fire me. They have confidence in their Speaker. I truly believe that this is what God's purpose for my life is at this time.

I wish now to thank all Honourable Members in this Honourable House for the respect and the support that you have afforded me during my tenure as Speaker. I wish also to record my gratitude to Madam Clerk, the Serjeant, and all of the other most valuable staff here at the Legislative Assembly. I have had their full cooperation and their full assistance and they have become like family to me. My prayers and love will always be with you and yours.

To the people of the Cayman Islands, especially my people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, thank you for your prayers; thank you for your support; thank you for your confidence in me. I would also ask for your continued prayers and support for my family and me. Thanks also to His Excellency, the Governor, who, from very early on in his tenure, was willing to come out publicly and unsolicited to offer his support to me as Speaker. I would also like to thank the Royal Cayman Islands Police for whom I have the utmost respect and admiration for their professionalism and support throughout these past months. Thanks to the press for the role that they have played during my tenure in helping to shape my character.

Last, but by no means least, I wish to thank my children and other members of my family and close friends for their love and support. I wish to thank Almighty God for now showing me what His divine will is and for the obedience which will now follow.

I thank you all sincerely, Honourable Members. May God bless you and continue to bless my beloved Cayman Islands.

I now present my letter of resignation to Madam Clerk and would ask her to forthwith this morning place it on the Table of this House.

I now will take a short suspension and ask the Members of the House to stay here, but before doing so, as a last bit of in-housekeeping, I will call on my very good friend and my supporter in so many ways during the times of having the Chair, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, to deputise as the Deputy and new Acting Speaker.

Proceedings suspended at 10.45 am

Proceedings resumed at 10.52 am

[Deputy Speaker in the Chair]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Resignation of the Minister of Cabinet for Planning, Communication, Works and Information Technology

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I rise to announce my resignation as a Minister of Cabinet and with your permission to read into the record a letter which I wrote to His Excellency the Governor advising of this resignation and, with your permission, to lay this on the Table of the House.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, the letter was dated yesterday 9th October 2003 to His Excellency the Governor, Mr. Bruce Dinwiddy, CMG, Governor of the Cayman Islands, Government Administration Building, Grand Cayman.

“Cabinet Reshuffle 2003

“Further to our meeting on Tuesday, 7th October 2003 regarding the above subject, at which the Honourable Juliana O’Connor-Connolly, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly and the Honourable Gilbert McLean, Minister for Health, Agriculture, Aviation and District Administration were present, this is to confirm my decision to resign as a Minister of Cabinet, effective Friday, 10th October 2003.

“As I indicated to you, after serious consideration and soul searching, I have decided that I will not be contesting the 2004 General Elections. Following this decision, I recommended to the Leader of Government Business and my other United Democratic Party colleagues that they consider a proposal from the Honourable Juliana O’Connor-Connolly, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, and me that we be allowed to exchange official positions. It is proposed that, subject to the approval of the Legislative Assembly, that the Honourable Juliana O’Connor-Connolly would replace me as Minister and I would assume the Speakership of the Legislative Assembly. As further advised, this decision is being made with the best interest of the country and the United Democratic Party in mind as it will provide for an easier preparation for the Legislative Members of the Party who will be contesting the 2004 General Elections. All members of the United Democratic Party Legislative Caucus unanimously agreed to this proposal.

“It has been an honour to have served as a Minister of Executive Council/Cabinet, and I am particularly pleased to have served with you. Whilst I am saddened to be demitting the office of Minister of Cabinet prematurely, I am nonetheless looking forward to taking up my position as Speaker of the Legislative Assembly.

“Yours truly,
[signed] Hon. Linford A. Pierson, OBE, JP”.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

NOMINATIONS FOR THE ELECTION OF THE SPEAKER OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

The Speaker: I now open the Floor for nominations for the Speaker. I recognise the First Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Nominations

Mrs. Juliana O’Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, it is my pleasure and distinct honour to move the nomination of my friend and colleague, the Honourable Linford Pierson, OBE, JP.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder for that nomination?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the nomination.

The Speaker: Are there any further nominations?

I would like to ask the Fourth Elected Member for the district of George Town whether he would accept the nomination that was put forward.

Acceptance of Nomination

Hon. Linford A. Pierson: I do, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I now ask for a motion for the closure of nominations. I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Closure of Nominations

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move the closure for nominations at this time.

The Speaker: The question is that nominations for the position of Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands now be closed. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that nominations be closed.

Declaration of Speaker

The Speaker: There being no further nominations at this time it gives me great pleasure in declaring the Honourable Linford A. Pierson, Fourth Elected Member for George Town, to be the Honourable Speaker of the House.

[Applause]

At this time we will take a short suspension so that the new Speaker can return. I also ask the Members that they stay in their seats for the short suspension.

Proceedings suspended at 10.59 am

Proceedings resumed at 11.21 am

[His Excellency, Mr. Bruce H. Dinwiddy, CMG, Governor of the Cayman Islands arrived in the VIP Gallery.]

[The Honourable Speaker entered the Chamber at 11.21 am (having taken the Oath of Allegiance in the Speaker's Office, administered by His Excellency, Mr. Bruce H. Dinwiddy, CMG, Governor of the Cayman Islands) and took the Chair.]

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Please be seated.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I wish to take this opportunity to express my sincere thanks and gratitude to each one of you for electing me to the position of Speaker of this Honourable House. My grateful thanks are also extended to my constituents of George Town, whom I have had the honour and privilege to represent over the past 15 years. Next year will be 16 years of active service as a representative for the district of George Town and an aggregate of 24 years since I entered politics in 1980. This, in addition to my 16 years in the civil service, gives me a grand total of 30 plus years of active and dedicated service to the people of these Islands.

I have thus far had a very satisfying career in serving both in the civil service and as a political representative of my people. This dual service provided me with the distinct opportunity of having served on both sides of Executive Council, now Cabinet: firstly, as an Acting Official Member in the position of Acting Financial Secretary and secondly, for a total of seven years, as a Minister of Executive Council/Cabinet; the first term being from 1988 to 1992 and the second term which commenced following the 2000 General Elections.

My preferment today to the high office of Speaker of this Honourable House is but another example of God's blessing and guidance in my life. For this honour and all of my other accomplishments, I express my sincere gratitude to my Heavenly Father. I have always approached life in the knowledge and assurance that I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me.

Honourable Members, Your Excellency, my fellow Caymanians and all residents of these beautiful Islands, I accept the position of Speaker of this Honourable House with gratitude and humility. However, the responsibility that has been thrust upon me and entrusted to me is one that I approach with unapologetic dependence upon the spirit of God to give the heart of a servant wisdom for the difficult decisions I will face at times, the courage to stand by my convictions and the humility to recognise and acknowledge my shortcomings.

I have during my political career endeavoured to extend to my fellow political colleagues on both sides of this Honourable House due respect at all times, even in the occasional throes of adversarial politics. I have always felt that respect is essential in human relations and I will continue to exhibit this quality. I promise this Honourable House that I will carry out my duties as Speaker with fairness, honour and integrity. Also, as most of you are aware, I believe in the efficient use of time and, accordingly, I will expect each one of us to work together in using the time of this Honourable House as efficiently as possible.

Honourable Members, time is our most valuable asset, and how well we use it has a key bearing on our performance. We owe it to our people, our constituents, to be as productive as possible in the performance of our duties in this Honourable House. Only by so doing will each one of us provide the effective leadership expected from us, - whether in an official or elected position.

In assuming this high office, I am conscious of the complexities and potential difficult decisions that may have to be made from time to time. Whilst giving you the assurance that I will at all times endeavour to make my rulings fair, firmly and with impartiality, I am also calling upon each one of you to do your part in acting within the provisions of our Constitution and Standing Orders, thus making my job as Speaker easier. For example, I would ask each Member to thoroughly acquaint themselves with the Standing Orders of this Honourable House. I would, in particular, respectfully request all Honourable Members to acquaint themselves with the section of Erskine May, Parliamentary Practice, which deals with "fraudulent points of order".

I will also expect all Honourable Members to maintain proper decorum during all meetings of the House and that we all discipline ourselves to comply with the time limits given for lunch breaks, coffee breaks, et cetera. The Serjeant-at-Arms should not have to beg and beseech Members to re-assemble in the House after the time limit has expired for such breaks. We owe the duty to this House and the people we serve to utilise our time as efficiently and as effectively as possible.

Honourable Members, my fellow Caymanians, and all residents of these Islands, I am committed by God's Grace to provide you with the best service possible in my role as Speaker of this Honourable House, and as I continue to represent my people as an MLA for the district of George Town.

For the record, I would repeat that it is not my intention to contest the 2004 General Elections, thus the reason for the changing roles between the former Speaker, the Honourable Juliana O'Connor-Connolly and myself. I had for some time indicated to my Cabinet and other colleagues that, for personal reasons, I was unsure as to whether or not I would contest the next elections. I have therefore effectively given 13 months advance notice before the November 2004 General Elections.

Following this decision, I recommended to the Leader of Government Business and my fellow party colleagues at our caucus meeting held on Sunday, 5 October 2003 that they consider a proposal from the former Speaker, Honourable Juliana O'Connor-Connolly, now First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and me, that we be allowed to exchange official positions, subject to the approval of the Legislative Assembly through the formal Constitutional process, whereby the former Speaker would replace me as a Minister of Cabinet, and I would assume the Speakership of this Honourable House.

All Members of the Party's Legislative Caucus present and the Executive Committee of the United Democratic Party agreed to this proposal. I have also given notice that effective today I am resigning as a Member of the Standing Business Committee.

I wish to take this opportunity to publicly, once more express my sincere thanks to my constituents for the confidence which they have reposed in me during the tenure of my political career to date, and for making it possible for me to serve in a Ministerial position for a second four-year term. Further, as mentioned earlier, I will continue to serve my constituents to the best of my ability as an MLA for George Town to the end of this term in November next year.

I also wish to thank my Permanent Secretary, Mr. Kearney Gomez, MBE, JP and the other hard-working staff within my former Ministry and the departments, units and sections thereunder for their support and loyalty over the years. Finally, my sincere thanks to my family as well as to the chairman and members of my George Town Committee who have given me their unwavering support throughout these years.

Before closing, I wish to express my sincere appreciation and thanks to the Hon. McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP, Leader of Government Business, for his effective leadership since he took over the reins on 8 November 2001. Whatever certain quarters may say about the leadership of the Honourable McKeeva Bush, no one can deny that he has accomplished much under his leadership.

I have given my undertaking to him and my legislative colleagues that I will assist the new Minister, who is about to take over my former Ministry, in any way that I can. However, I would quickly say that knowing her and her ability, I doubt that she will be needing much of my assistance in that regard.

Further, I wish to point out that the recent reshuffle within our Cabinet is not uncommon in a democracy. As a matter of fact, I saw on the news this morning where the UK is considering a reshuffling of their Cabinet very soon.

May God bless each one of us as we endeavour to provide our people with the best service possible.

I thank you, Honourable Members, for the confidence which you have shown in me by electing me to the high position as Speaker of this Honourable House, and by the grace of God, I will not disappoint you.

May God continue to bless these beautiful Islands we all have the privilege of calling home.

I thank you, Honourable Members.

[Applause]

Congratulatory remarks to the Honourable Speaker

The Speaker: I now call upon the Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for the opportunity to give these few congratulatory remarks.

I take note and welcome His Excellency, the Governor who is here in the Legislative Assembly today; also a former Speaker, the first Speaker of the House and our National Hero, the Honourable Mrs. (Sybil) McLaughlin who is also here with us; and it is a privilege also to have with us so many civil servants and other distinguished citizens of these Islands in the gallery.

It is a signal honour and a privilege to offer congratulations to you on being elected Speaker of this Honourable Legislative Assembly. You are the fourth as such being elected to this high post. This honour conferred upon you by your elected colleagues says much for the trust and confidence we have in your ability.

Your elevation to the high position of Honourable Speaker in these Islands crowns, as you said earlier, a good career of public service, first as a civil servant and then as the elected representative for the electoral district of George Town for four terms and member of Executive Council and Minister of the first Cabinet of the Cayman Islands. This means a total of 16 years involvement in the political life of these Islands.

I am sure, honourable colleague, that when you examine your service, you will find satisfaction in your labour and handiworks. I am sure too you would say there is work yet to be done. To both of these I concur.

I thank you for the comradeship we shared, the good will fostered and the advice given. Rest assured, work will continue and your work will be finalised, for all of us in the United Democratic Party are workers.

You will be missed, Mr. Speaker, from the cut and thrust of the political life we endure but only you can say, "I have done my part; it is time to lay down my plough in this part of the vineyard" and so you have.

Much can be said about projects and needs. You are aware that we can only do so much as a country in a short time and you, with your background as an accountant, understand well that a country can only spend what we have and when we trespass further, we endanger the present and posterity will not be kind to us for endangering its future.

Mr. Speaker, I look forward to the continued relationship. I look forward to your continued advice as we build up party politics in these Islands. We have much to do, but I pray that party politics will not so separate us that we lose our way. If that is the way, then I am prepared to walk away from party politics. However, it is a good tradition which I will speak to later on. At this time, I only wish to thank you and, as you move from the Front Bench as the Minister of Planning and the Deputy Leader of Government Business to the higher seat and as you move away from electoral politics, may the Divine Creator be with you and give you good health and good strength and may you live a long life with your good wife and your family.

I thank you.

[Members' applause]

The Speaker: Honourable Members, before calling on the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I would like to take this opportunity to officially recognise His Excellency, the Governor who has taken time from his busy schedule to be here with us today.

Welcome, Your Excellency.

Also to our first Speaker and National Hero Mrs. McLaughlin. I have already told her that I will be visiting her to pull on her knowledge as a Speaker. It is good to see you, Honourable Mrs. McLaughlin.

The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you for making the moment light, Mr. Speaker.

I, too, wish to recognise the presence of His Excellency the Governor and our only living National Hero, the Honourable Sybil McLaughlin and I think it is appropriate at this time for the Opposition to say a few words.

First of all, lest the Opposition be misunderstood and I be accused of speaking through both sides of my mouth again, while it is clear our position has been that we would wish to see a Speaker from outside of the Legislative Assembly, the constitutional arrangements and the Standing Orders under which we operate certainly allow for the Speaker to be appointed through an election process from within and that is exactly what took place this morning.

Although our position is that we would wish for future speakers to come from outside of the Legislative Assembly we nevertheless accept the process. I listened to you very keenly as you made your comments. I, too, remember us being on the same side and I, too, remember us being on opposite sides and I, too, remember that whichever side we found ourselves on we were able to conduct ourselves in a manner that even when tempers flared, we were able to reconcile. For that I personally am grateful because that is how it should be.

Speaking on behalf of the Opposition and hearing your timely intervention when you spoke to the efficient use of time in the House and other matters, I give you our assurance that the role that we have to play, we will do as we have done in the past, in a manner that will coincide with your desires.

As I listened and remembered the years being a representative of the district of George Town that you have represented, it is only fitting for me to say that throughout those years you have been a good representative of your people. I do not say that grudgingly, Mr. Speaker, because you know me; I take advice from many and I watch others and I try to learn how to better my productivity as a representative.

Speaking on behalf of the Opposition, let me congratulate you personally and collectively to the post that you have now taken over. I can assure you that, as long as you are in the post and we are here, we will conduct ourselves and do our job in such a manner that you perhaps will not have a desire to leave the chair. As the Leader of Government Business said two minutes ago, if party politics as is coming to this Legislative Assembly gets to the point where we lose ourselves in the process, not only is it not worth it to us as individuals, but it is not worth it for the country and I, too, respect that fact. I give you my personal assurance that while we deal with the cut and thrust of the politics, as is normally said, my personal assurance to you is, as the former Speaker mentioned earlier, I go to my God. I have learnt patience—I know that you know that and you will find that we will be able to manage the process as representatives in a manner that we can move forward as a country.

Once again, congratulations. I look forward to working with you. Thank you.

[Applause]

The Speaker: Are there any other Members that wish to comment?

If not, I would like to thank everybody, those who spoke and those who did not, but in particular, the Leader of Government Business and the Leader of the Opposition for their very kind words and good wishes. As I said earlier, I will do my very best to be a fair, sometimes firm but impartial Speaker of this House. I am sure that with the assurances that I have heard from the Leader of Government Business and the Leader of the Opposition that my job as Speaker will be made that much easier.

ELECTION OF NEW MINISTER OF CABINET

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Nomination

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

It is with great honour that for the second time in my three year political career, I have the privilege of nominating my friend, my relative and my colleague, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, Mrs. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly for the ministerial position now available.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, it gives me great privilege to second the nomination.

The Speaker: Do we have any other nominations?

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has been duly nominated and seconded. I would like to ask again, do we have any other nominations? Do we have any other nominations?

If not, I would ask the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman if she accepts the nomination.

Acceptance of Nomination

Mrs. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, I am indeed humbled to accept such a nomination, may it please you.

The Speaker: I now ask for a motion for the closure of nominations. I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Closure of Nominations

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move the closure for nominations at this time.

The Speaker: The question is that nominations for the position of Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands now be closed. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that nominations be closed.

Declaration of Minister of Cabinet

The Speaker: Since there are no other nominations to this post, it is my pleasure to declare the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to be the new Minister of Cabinet.

[Applause]

Congratulatory remarks to new Minister of Cabinet

The Speaker: I now call upon the Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, thank you.

I wish to first offer congratulations to the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman on being re-elected as a Member of the Cabinet.

Many challenges await her as we move forward in doing the country's business. I thank her for the stalwart service she has given as Speaker for the past two years. I recognise that it was taxing for her at times as Members tried her patience but I can say that she always ruled firmly, impartially and with dignity. I know that the good people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman wish me to record their thanks, appreciation and hope for the Member.

I thank her for the gracious and powerful message she left. I thank her for her Christian fortitude and I welcome her as a full and working Member of the United Democratic Party. Her advice will be invaluable.

Mr. Speaker, the Member took no direct part in the political process of the United Democratic Party. She gave advice as her legal education allowed her and I thank her for her ability to remain above the cut and thrust of the debate even though at times it was said otherwise. However, I know that she believes in the good Lord above and the truth is the truth. Nothing can sway that and so we welcome her to the Cabinet.

Announcement of New Deputy Leader of Government Business

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, the new Deputy Leader of Government Business is the Honourable Minister of Health, the Second Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town, and I would invite him now to take his seat on the Front Bench.

[Applause]

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Minister of Health, and now the Deputy Leader of Government Business, already knows that a great amount of work awaits us. He will be given added responsibility by His Excellency the Governor but too he is no novice in the work. I have long said that his administrative ability and background lends well to the running of our work and will prove invaluable. He will remain in the cut and thrust of political life and we expect him to do just that. I know that our colleague the elected Minister of Education is at a conference that he could not miss in Guyana but he wishes me to convey his best wishes to his long time colleague and I thought it fitting so to do. It is good for friends to remain friends.

These are challenging times; sometimes it tries our very souls. Each of us, Mr. Speaker, owes it to ourselves and to these Islands to continue to set an example of democratic decency and good will. We cannot afford to make any mistakes. The whole world is watching us, as I say so often, and our people need us to succeed.

Honourable Members, let us not forget that in a comparatively short time both sides—all of us—have worked together to build up the two party tradition in these Islands. It is a tradition of which we may be justly proud or we can regret.

I again entreat us all to endeavour, as much as lies in our power, to keep our deliberations free from hatred and malice; to tell the truth about one another at all times. It is the application of deep and sensible concentration, and most times including now, it has to be sensible concentration upon practical issues in this House that will continue as a flaming torch to lighten the pathway for our people whom we serve.

It cannot be forgotten that this great future to which we look with hope can only be of our own making and so, Mr. Speaker, I welcome you to the Chair and the Deputy Leader of Government Business to that post. I should say that it is not a constitutional position, but we intend to recommend to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office that the Deputy Leader of Government Business must be a constitutional position as much as the Deputy Leader of the Opposition. However, that is for another time.

I welcome the Member to the Cabinet and ask and pray that Almighty God continue to rest upon our Council.

Mr. Speaker, the song of the United Democratic Party is "Blessed be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love; the fellowship of kindred hearts is like to that above". On now then, Honourable Members, to the work that is before us.

The Speaker: I now call on the Leader of the Opposition if he has any comments.

The Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Vote of thanks by the new Deputy Leader of Government Business

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

May I first congratulate you upon your assuming the office of Speaker of this Legislative Assembly? You are the fourth Speaker and I notice that it has gone in the sequence of a woman to a man, woman to a man and I wonder who will be the next woman along the line that may be taking up the position.

Mr. Speaker, you are someone who is more than capable of filling this high office and I am sure you will with ability and dignity.

I share your view and the words you have said about taking seriously the business of the Legislative Assembly, among which is paying serious attention to time. I would encourage you to insist upon that because we can all utilize time better in the Legislative Assembly and I think we will all agree to that particular view.

Mr. Speaker, all that I would ask and look forward to is for you to do as you have said, and I am sure that you will, to be firm and fair. I am sure that you will not hesitate to rule whether it be a Member of the United Democratic Party or a Member of the People's Progressive Movement when you have to, in a way that is firm, fair and unbiased.

Mr. Speaker, I have been approved by my colleagues in the United Democratic Party to fill the role of Deputy Leader of Government Business. Such a post does not exist constitutionally but it has always been the view of the United Democratic Party that there should be such a post. The new draft constitution provides for the post of Deputy Leader of Government Business and Deputy Leader of the Opposition, as in my opinion it should be and it seems to have been an oversight that it was missed in terms of the Leader of Government Business. However, since 2000, following the General Elections, it was recognised by His Excellency the Governor and it has been embraced since that time until now. Therefore, I shall do what I understand a Deputy would do within an organisation - that is I shall support, advise, I suppose sometimes I shall disagree, and work towards the goals of the United Democratic Party.

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that this Party has undertaken challenges that no Government before has ever done and we have succeeded with many. There have never been the challenges before that this Government has had to face, so therefore no Government before could have done them.

I wish to say that in management the chief and most important part of managing is in decision making and I can truthfully say that the Leader of Government Business possesses that ability. I admire that and you can be assured that I shall support him as he goes forward on behalf of the Party in working towards our objectives.

I wish also to congratulate the new Minister of Cabinet in the person of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, Mrs. Julianna Y. O'Connor-Connolly. I know she brings knowledge and experience to the job and I feel sure that she will carry on the many projects that you have left in place to be accomplished. May I also take this opportunity to say that I have always admired your ability as the Minister for Works on both occasions as Minister and the things which you have accomplished in that role? I think you will certainly be remembered by your works rather than your words. I think the former is the better way to be remembered.

I would like to thank my colleagues in the United Democratic Party for having the trust in me to approve my position as Deputy Leader of Government Business and I shall try to do no less than you did in this role and to carry on the work which is ahead of us.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Member of Cabinet.

Vote of thanks by the new Minister of Cabinet

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Seeing that I have usurped most of the time of the Honourable House this morning with a message which I thought was important to have as a departing note, it would also be remiss of me not to make a few brief remarks.

I should first of all thank the Honourable Leader of Government Business, Mr. Speaker, and other Members of the United Democratic Party for the confidence which they have displayed in me once again. I pledge with the help of Almighty God to carry out my duties on behalf of all of the people of the Cayman Islands in the new ministerial capacity. I trust that at the end of the tenure it will be one in which it will be said, "Well done".

I am also grateful that you had, and still have as a colleague, the Third Elected Member, the Honourable Minister of Community Affairs to be with you in George Town. Knowing the gentleman as I do, I am sure, as you would have already assessed in coming to your decision, that you have left a very able representative together with the two other colleagues from George Town to take care of the needs in the district of George Town.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that is further evidence of maturity that the United Democratic Party had manifested in this move. I trust now that we will move on with the business of the country, reconcile our differences and take as paramount consideration the need to move forward all elements of our Cayman stratification as it relates to our community.

Thank you. May God bless you.

The Speaker: Thank you very much.

Nominations for Member to Fill the Vacancy of the Standing Business Committee

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I call for nominations for the Member to fill the vacancy on the Standing Business Committee.

The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I would like to nominate the Elected Member for North Side to fill that vacant post.

The Speaker: We have heard the nomination of the Elected Member for North Side. Do we have a seconder?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I wish to second the nomination.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I move that the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the Member of Cabinet be a Member of the Business Committee.

The Speaker: We have heard the nomination by the Leader of Government Business of the Honourable Minister of Cabinet. Do we have a seconder?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the nomination.

Closure of Nominations

The Speaker: Do we have any other nominations? If not—

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move that nominations be closed.

The Speaker: It has been moved that nominations be closed. Do we have a seconder?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, I am happy to second that motion.

The Speaker: All in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that nominations be closed.

Acceptance of Nomination

The Speaker: I would now ask the Member for North Side if she would accept the nomination?

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I accept the nomination with pleasure.

The Speaker: I would also ask the new Minister of Cabinet, Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly if she would accept the nomination.

Mrs. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, I will gladly accept the nomination.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I will now suspend the House for a short period for the ballot papers to be prepared.

Proceedings suspended at 12.14 pm

Proceedings resumed at 12.24 pm

Secret Ballot

The Speaker: I now call on the Serjeant to distribute the means of ballot.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Have all Members voted as they so desire? If so, I would ask the Serjeant to collect the means of ballot.

[Brief pause]

The Speaker: I would also call upon the Temporary First Official Member and the Second Official Member to act as scrutineers.

[Pause]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Just to bring to your attention that there are two ballot papers with the Official Members who are not voting that should not have been distributed.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member for East End. I will ask the Serjeant or the Clerk to collect those papers.

Temporary First Official Member and Second Official Member, would you come forward and count the ballots please?

[Pause]

Results of the Ballot

The Speaker: My thanks to the scrutineers.

The results: Ms. Edna M Moyle, 5; Mrs. Juliana Y O' Connor Connolly, 8

Declaration of Member to the Standing Business Committee

The Speaker: It is my pleasure to declare the Honourable Lady Minister of Cabinet to be the new Member of the Standing Business Committee.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are 14 Members of this Honourable House and there are only 13 ballots counted.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, it was announced at the beginning of the Sitting that the Honourable Minister for Education is off the Island. You are an Elected Member and you are in the Chair. Two from 15 equals 13. There are eight for the Honourable new Minister and there are five for the Member for North Side. Thirteen plus two equals 15 Elected Members. Once again the United Democratic Party has the right math and the People's Progressive Movement has the wrong maths.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The reason I brought it to your attention, Sir, is that it has to be recorded in the Hansard of the House that there is one absent.

The Speaker: Thank you very much. I think we will move ahead.

The new Minister of Cabinet, the Honourable Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly has been declared to be the new Member of the Standing Business Committee. I want to congratulate both Members for putting their names forward as candidates for this Committee.

The Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, this has been another historical day for these Islands. We have a good country. What is left is for all of us to recognise that there is a Government and there is an Opposition and there cannot exist anything else except that we can live together to make the country work.

Having said that, I am pleased to move the adjournment of this Honourable House to a date to be fixed.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House be adjourned to a date to be fixed.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 12.37 pm the House stood adjourned to a date to be fixed.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
17 NOVEMBER 2003
10.45 AM
First Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Elected Member for North Side to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign, Lady Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of the Cayman Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together. Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever, Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make his face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.45 am

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have an apology from Dr. the Honourable Frank McField, who is off the Island on official business.

Circulars

Honourable Members, since assuming the position of Speaker, I have sent out two circulars to all Members on the following subjects:

- Parliamentary points of order; and
- Parliamentary procedures relating to debates in this House.

In addition, I sent to each one of you a copy of a paper entitled, "Guidelines for a Code of Conduct for Members of the Legislative Assembly", which was tabled in this Honourable House on 27 September 1996. Any Member who has not received a copy of the two mentioned circulars or the "Guidelines for a Code of Conduct" may contact the Clerk accordingly.

Having spent a considerable period of time in this Honourable House myself, I am the first to admit how important it is to be reminded, periodically, of proper parliamentary rules and procedures. I therefore trust that all Honourable Members will take the time to read these circulars and to advise of any specific parliamentary or other relevant issues that they would wish to have addressed by me as Speaker. It is in our joint interest not only to maintain a disciplined Parliament, but more importantly, to make our legislature one of the best in the Commonwealth.

Since my election as Speaker, I have received several queries from interested members of the public, primarily on the question of discipline—or the lack thereof—in this House. Two of the major concerns raised by them are whether it is proper for a Member to interrupt another Member during his debate; and what rules apply to the contents of debates, and what constitutes proper debate.

Though the rules applying to debate are fairly complicated and involve the protection afforded to all Honourable Members under the Legislative Assembly (Immunities, Powers and Privileges) Law (1999 Revision), I have decided, at this time, to confine Circular 2, on debate, to the procedures required under our Legislative Assembly Standing Orders (1997 Revision).

The view was expressed by those members of the public who contacted me that, since the Legislative Assembly debates are broadcast primarily for the benefit of the listening public, something should be done to better educate the public, especially on: (1) the question of points of order; and (2) parliamentary procedures relating to debates. Accordingly, I now propose to read into the Hansard, and for the benefit of the listening public, the contents of the Circulars— 1 of 2003, and 2 of 2003—on the subject of points of order and debates, respectively.

Circular No. 1 of 2003—Points of Order

1. Most legislatures have always experienced great difficulty from the abuse of points of order for the interruption of a Member's speech, and a lack of a clear definition of the term.

2. Abraham and Hawtrey's Parliamentary Dictionary, in defining a point of order, says: "A Member who wishes to raise a Point of Order, that is, to call the attention of the Speaker or Chairman to what he believes is a breach of order and, if necessary, to ask his opinion thereon, may interrupt another Member's speech, for the purpose; the other Member must sit down. It is undeniable that this right is often abused in order to raise matters that have nothing to do with order; such attempts are quickly repressed by the occupant of the Chair with the words, 'That is not a point of order'."

3. A point of order must relate to the interpretation or enforcement of the rules that govern a Parliament, or provisions of the Constitution as regulate the business of the House, and shall raise a question that is within the cognisance of the Speaker.

4. A point of order may be raised in relation to the business before the House at the moment, but the Speaker may permit a Member to raise a point of order during the interval between the termination of one item of business and the commencement of another if it relates to the maintenance of order in, the arrangement of order in, or the arrangement of business before, the House. This is not a part of the Standing Orders of the Cayman Islands Legislature, but is normal practice in other Commonwealth Parliaments.

5. A Member may formulate a point of order, and the Speaker shall decide whether the point of order raised is a point of order, and if so, give decision thereon, which shall be final.

6. In an effort to maximise the usefulness of points of order, and because it forms the popular method whereby a Member in the full glow of delivery may be interrupted and harassed under the guise of legitimate procedure, abuse has attended the use to which points of order have been put. It is a particularly useful device ready to the hand of a Member who has already spoken on a topic, and thereby has exhausted his right to comment, particularly in what, for him, are compelling circumstances, while he sits and listens to his arguments being destroyed. In the heat, passion and the anxiety of such a personal catastrophe, it is understandable that a Member, human as he is, will recklessly cling to every straw.

These objections fall into two categories. On the one hand, there is the honest but very misguided objection raised by a Member who conscientiously believes that the Member on the floor is guilty of unbecoming conduct. He sees clearly his duty to champion the cause of rectitude by jumping to his feet—no matter how trivial the infraction, no matter how often his interruptions. On the other hand, there are the objections inspired by the motive to gain, deliberately, a debating advantage, either by destroying the concentration of the Member on the floor, or by surreptitiously proposing a new argument in rebuttal under the guise of a procedural objection, knowing full well that the sudden and well-calculated intervention can be rammed home before the Presiding Officer becomes aware of the impropriety and stops it.

7. Erskine May's Parliamentary Practice, Twenty-second Edition, page 397 describes examples of "fraudulent points of order" as follows: "On 1st July 1952 the Deputy Speaker deprecated a growing practice of interruptions of debate by Members who, 'when the hon Member who is speaking refuses to give way, think that the only way that they can get their word in is by raising a point of order'. He stated that in his opinion such interruptions constituted fraudulent points of order and should be stopped."

8. The Member rising on a point of order must prove one or more of the following:

- (i) That the Member speaking was travelling outside the scope of the question;
- (ii) That he was using unparliamentary language;
- (iii) That he was transgressing some rule of society; or
- (iv) That he was infringing the Standing Orders or acting contrary to the generally accepted parliamentary custom of debate.

A Member must be brief in putting a point of order. Brevity and directness are the soul of points of order. Speeches are tabooed.

9. A Member shall not raise a point of order:

- a) to ask for information; or
- b) to explain his position; or
- c) when a question on any motion is being put to the House; or
- d) that may be hypothetical.

10. a) It should be noted that a point of order is not a point of privilege (Standing Order 28 (1)).

b) Also, to elucidate some matter raised by a Member in the course of his speech is not a point of order and can only be done if the Member speaking is willing to give way and resumes his seat, and if the Member wishing to interrupt is called by the Presiding Officer.

11. The following are examples of points of order under our Standing Orders:

- (v) Reference to matters sub judice—Standing Order 35 (1)
- (vi) Attempting to revive in any debate a matter, or reconsider any specific question, upon which the House has come to a conclusion during the current session, except upon a substantive motion of rescission—Standing Order 35 (2)

- (vii) Use of offensive or insulting language about other Members—Standing Order 35 (3)
- (viii) Imputing improper motives to another Member—Standing Order 35 (4)
- (ix) Not referring to Members by Electoral Districts—Standing Order 35 (5)
- (x) Her Majesty's name not to be used to influence the House—Standing Order 35 (6)
- (xi) The conduct of Her Majesty, Members of the Royal Family, the Governor, the Presiding Officer, Members, Judges, etc. may not be raised or impugned except upon a substantive motion—Standing Order 35 (7)
- (xii) Debate shall be relevant to the last question proposed—Standing Order 36 (1)
- (xiii) It is out of order to anticipate a bill or motion—Standing Order 37(1), (2)
- (xiv) Rules for Members not speaking are contained in Standing Order 39: “Members present in the Chamber during a debate shall -
  - (a) enter and leave with decorum;
  - (b) not read books, newspapers, letters or other documents unless they relate to the business before the House;
  - (c) maintain silence while other Members are speaking, and not interrupt except in accordance with Standing Orders;
  - (d) in all other respects conduct themselves in a seemly manner.”

12. Although the foregoing may not be an exhaustive commentary on all the intricacies of parliamentary points of order, I do believe that if followed, the discipline and parliamentary procedures within the Legislative Assembly will be much enhanced.

That is Circular No. 1, which was sent out on 27 October 2003.

Circular No. 2 of 2003—Debates

Honourable Members, as you will recall, Circular No. 2 is on the subject of debates.

2. Generally speaking, there are two important debates by Members of the Legislative Assembly that take place during a Session of the House: 1) The debate on the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor at the opening of each Session of the Assembly, a speech used primarily to set forth the Government's policy; and 2) The debate on the Budget Address delivered by the Honourable Financial Secretary on the occasion of the Budget Meeting.

3. There are a number of basic rules and principles that govern all debates in the Assembly and that have been adopted, in the main, by other Parliaments of the Commonwealth.

(i) A Member must address the Speaker and not direct his speech to the House or to any party on either side of the House.

(ii) A Member wishing to speak must rise in his place (unless he is prevented from doing so by some infirmity and/or incapacity). A Member may only speak when there is a question before the House, unless he is moving or seconding a motion, or making a personal explanation. This rule is relaxed in favour of the mover of a substantive motion who has the right to reply, and a Member in charge of a Bill under consideration. Leave to speak a second time is usually granted to a Member wishing to clarify a misconception, a Member wishing to answer a personal attack upon his conduct or character, or a Member of Cabinet wishing to sum up for the Government at the end of a debate. A Member who has spoken on a question may speak when a new question has been proposed by the Speaker; for instance, on a proposed amendment or on a motion for an adjournment of the debate.

(iii) A Member is not permitted to read his speech, but he may refresh his memory by reference to notes. He may, however, read extracts and quotations, which should be reasonably short. The purpose of this rule is to maintain the cut and thrust of debate. The rule against reading speeches is, in any case, relaxed for opening speeches or whenever there is special reason for precision, or in important ministerial statements. Where quotations are used, it is the duty of each Member to provide to the Clerk at the Table a copy of same.

(iv) A Member may only speak when called upon to do so by the Speaker. When two or more Members rise to speak, the Speaker calls upon the Member who, rising in his place, is first observed by him; hence, the term “catching the Speaker's eye”. In actual fact, the choice lies within the discretion of the Speaker and his decision may not be challenged. Once in possession of the floor, a Member is entitled to be heard without interruption (except on a point of order), unless he is irrelevant, tediously repetitive, or out of order, in which case he is liable to be checked by the Speaker. He may consent to yield to an interruption for the purpose of explanation or elucidation, but he is entitled to refuse to give way.

(v) It is out of order for a Member to address another Member directly in the second person or to refer to him by name. If another Member is referred to in the course of a speech, it must be in the form of, for example, “the First Elected Member for George Town” or “the Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works”. Official Members are referred to as, for example, “the Honourable First Official Member”. The Speaker is referred to as “Mr. Speaker”, and when the House is in Committee, as “Mr. Chairman”. No Member may remain on his feet if the Speaker rises to intervene or to give a ruling.

(vi) Members who are not speaking are required to remain in their seats unless they wish to leave the Chamber. They must enter and leave the Chamber in a decorous manner and are expected to bow towards the Chair upon entering and leaving. They should not cross the floor between the Chair and the Member addressing the House, nor take another Member's seat. Reading, writing letters, and carrying on conversations are, strictly speaking, not allowed, but a certain latitude necessarily exists. A Member may, for instance, wish to read something bearing upon the debate, and where there might arise the need for a hurried consultation between a group of Members, there is provision for this in the lobby or in the Members' Common Room. Certain interjections, such as, "Hear, hear", are permissible, unless deliberately repeated for the purpose of distracting or obstructing a Member speaking. Clapping, hissing and cries of "shame" are not in order. Needless to say, any language normally considered improper would never be overlooked if used by a Member in this House.

(vii) All Members are responsible for keeping a strict accounting of the time utilised by them during their speeches, though the Speaker may periodically remind a Member of the time that he has remaining in which to speak.

(viii) Regarding the "scope of debate", except on a motion for the adjournment of the House, the debate shall be relevant to the matter of question before the House or Committee, and where more than one question has been proposed from the Chair, the debate shall be relevant to the last question so proposed until it has been disposed of. Members should refrain from irrelevance or constant or tedious repetition, either of their own arguments or of the arguments or points used by other Members in debate. If Members concur with the expression put forth by a Member, it would be so indicated when the time of voting arises. If, however, a Member has varying views and points to contribute to the debate, he may express them himself. The past habit of each Member continuing to rise and express agreement with previous speakers and repeating the same line of argument should be discouraged, as it does not lend itself to good debate.

(ix) It shall be out of order to reflect on any vote of the House in order to reconsider any specific matter on which the House has come to a conclusion during the current Session, except upon a substantive motion.

(x) It shall be in the discretion of the Speaker to order that any statements, which are required by him to be withdrawn by the Member making them, shall be expunged from the records of the House.

(xi) Members are also reminded to switch off their cellular telephones whilst in the Chamber during Meetings of the House, as well as in Committee meetings. Not only is the use of cellular telephones disruptive, but it also shows disrespect to the Chair and to other Members of the House.

I am sure that all Honourable Members can be relied upon to join with the Speaker in endeavouring to conduct meetings of the legislature in the best parliamentary manner possible. It must be borne in mind that the Speaker needs the support and goodwill of all Members. I know that I can count on your support in these matters.

Honourable Members, as I mentioned earlier, I wish now to read into the Hansard the contents of Circular No. 3 of 2003, which has not yet been circulated, but which I have prepared on parliamentary procedures and other general matters. Afterwards, I will invite the Serjeant-at-Arms to circulate Circular No. 3 to all Honourable Members.

Circular No. 3 of 2003—Parliamentary Procedures and Other General Matters

Circular No. 3 is a most important circular, and I would ask Members to pay close attention to it. For the information of all Members, I would like to set out the following points of procedure for guidance:

1. Absence of Members

1.1. In regard to the absence of Members, I would like to remind Members of the provision of Standing Order 6 of the Legislative Assembly Standing Orders (1997 Revision): "It is the duty of a Member who is unable to attend a Meeting of which he has had due notice, or a meeting that is adjourned to a later date, to inform the Clerk as early as possible of his inability to attend and, where necessary, whether he has obtained written leave of absence from the Governor under section 20(3)(b) of the Constitution." This also refers to Select and Standing Committees of the House.

1.2. Quite often, there are no indications from some Members that they find it impossible to attend Sittings of the House and of Committees. It would be appreciated if all Members could endeavour, in future, to notify the Clerk of any proposed absence. In the case of Honourable Members of Cabinet, a notification from their Permanent Secretaries or other responsible officer should be sufficient.

2. Respect for Parliament

The Speaker is not only impartial, but must be seen to be impartial. Each individual Member is entitled to expect the same consideration from him, but his overriding duty is to the House collectively. When the Speaker is called upon to make a ruling in the House, he speaks not because of his Office, but because of the confidence the Members have placed in him. It is important, therefore, that the very highest institutions of a territory, especially Parliament, should not only have the respect of their Members, but also the respect of the communities they serve and in which the institutions exist.

3. Hansard Production and Office Procedure

3.1 The Officers of the Legislative Assembly have always been anxious to produce, as accurately as possible, the transcript of the proceedings of the Legislative Assembly. Due to problems of limited staffing, there has been unavoidable delay in editing the Hansard. As a result of this delay, the most recent complete editing of the Hansard dates back to 2000. This problem is, however, now being actively addressed, with the hope that the editing will be brought up to date as soon as possible.

3.2 Hansard Terms of Reference: The Hansard Office of the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly is guided by the following terms of reference set out in Erskine May's Parliamentary Practice, Twenty-second Edition: "The Official Report is a full report, in the first person, of all speakers alike, a full report being defined as one 'which, though not strictly verbatim, is substantially the verbatim report, with repetitions and redundancies omitted and with obvious mistakes corrected, but which on the other hand leaves out nothing that adds to the meaning of the speech or illustrates the argument'."

The primary value of the Official Report lies in its authentic reporting of the speeches made by Members in the Legislative Assembly and its Committees. Therefore, it is Hansard's policy that the edited transcript of any speech should remain an accurate, and, as far as possible, an exact account of what was said. Although editorial corrections are allowed, no words may be added or subtracted to change the sense of what has been spoken, and care is taken to preserve each Member's distinctive speaking style. This is referred to as 'the verbatim rule'.

The Official Record may be revised only as much as is necessary to create a readable written text. Therefore, Hansard must limit corrections by Members to instances of misreporting. Hansard may not allow a Member to make any insertion as an afterthought, to strike out a passage that he or she regrets having uttered, or to substantially rewrite or reword a speech that has been recorded in the Assembly or its Committees.

3.3 The efficiency of certain Officers of the Department is being compromised by the number of requests received from certain Members to have typing undertaken for them. As all Elected Members have available to them the provision of a "Constituency Office Allowance", typing in respect of personal letters and references; preparation of motions and "blue" questions by Members; and issues related to their constituents should properly be provided through their respective MLA offices, or otherwise as necessary. Those Members responsible are therefore requested to discontinue this practice. Similarly, Members are requested to channel all requests for unedited extracts of the Hansard through the Senior Hansard Editor.

4. Use of Offices and Computers

4.1 Whilst appreciating the cramped temporary office accommodation in which we are all now working, I would nonetheless request that all Members avoid using the Speaker's Chambers for conducting meetings. In this connection, I would suggest that, when the Common (or Committee) Room is not available, arrangements may be made to use the Conference Room facilities at various Government office accommodations, such as the Government Administration Building (the "Glass House"), GIS headquarters, MLA Offices, etcetera. Your cooperation in this regard would be most appreciated.

4.2 A computer is now available in the Common (or Committee) Room for the use of Members, and a facsimile machine is currently available in the Procedural Office. The use of Officers' desks by Members should be avoided at all times.

4.3 Two computers have also been set up in the Chamber behind the Government Bench for use by Legislative Drafting Officers, who will find it necessary during Meetings of the House to prepare Committee Stage Amendments to Bills. This is a temporary arrangement and therefore proper decorum in the Chamber should at all times be maintained.

5. Manner of Asking and Answering Questions

Members are reminded to pay special attention to the provision of Standing Order 23 in relation to the scope, the contents, and the manner of asking and answering parliamentary questions. In this connection, I wish specifically to draw Members' attention to:

- Standing Order 23(4), which states, "A Member of the Government may decline to answer a question if an answer would, in the opinion of the Government, be contrary to the public interest."

- Standing Order 23(8), which states (subject to the suspension of Standing Orders), "Any question which has not received an oral answer by 11:00 am shall be postponed and placed upon the Order Paper for reply at some later sitting within the same meeting:

Provided that if all other business for the meeting has been disposed of, such postponed questions and all other questions listed on a Business Paper but not placed on the Order Paper shall be answered in writing by the Member of Government to whom the question was addressed, and copies of the answer shall be sent immediately thereafter to the Clerk, who shall send a copy to the Member in whose name the question stood and to all other Members."

6. Hours of Sitting

6.1 All Members are reminded of the contents of standing order 10, which provide directions for the hours of sitting in the Legislative Assembly:

- Standing Order 10 (1) states, "Every sitting shall, unless the Presiding Officer otherwise directs, begin at 10 a.m."

- Standing Order 10 (2) states, inter alia, that “at 4.30 pm the proceedings of any business under consideration shall be interrupted”. Circumstances may arise from time to time, however, when this Standing Order may have to be suspended to continue beyond the hour of 4.30 pm when the exigencies of the House so demand.

6.2 Members are therefore requested to assist in improving the discipline within the House in order to comply, where possible, with the directions under the above Standing Orders. For example, the following hours were spent in productive work during the first three Meetings of this 2003 session:

- During the First Meeting from the 7 through 27 March (nine days), the total productive time spent was 23.56 hours (on a simple average of 2.62 hours per day) with at least three days with less than two hours spent in the House.

- During the Second Meeting from 11 June through 25 July 2003 (19 days), the total number of hours spent in the House was 41.45 hours (on a simple average of 2.18 hours per day). Similarly there were a number of days with less than two hours spent in the House.

- The Third Meeting was held from 17 September through 10 October 2003, for a total of 11 days. The total time spent in the House during this period was 35.24 hours (on a simple average of 3.2 hours per day). This, on average, was a small improvement on the first two Meetings.

All Members are requested to make every effort to comply with Standing Order 10 in respect of the hours of sitting in the House, and to promptly reassemble in the House at the expiration of breaks taken for lunch, coffee, etcetera, in order that we may improve the productivity within the House.

I know that I can depend upon each one of you to assist in maintaining proper parliamentary procedure, and in other matters affecting the Legislative Assembly.

I thank you, Honourable Members.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Report on Meeting with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on Monday 10 November 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I wish to report to this Honourable House, and to the country in general, on my recent meeting with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office

(FCO) on Monday 10 November 2003. At that time, I met with the Minister responsible for the Overseas Territories, Mr. Bill Rammell. We discussed various issues in relation to the Cayman Islands, including borrowing guidelines (about which we are already engaged in discussion), constitutional modernisation, and the European Union’s Directive on Taxation of Savings.

In our discussions, I informed Mr. Rammell about recent local developments and the history of constitutional talks in the Cayman Islands, including the visit to London last year, about which he had been briefed. I also informed Mr. Rammell that the United Democratic Party’s Government had initially conceded certain points in an effort to reach a consensus with the Opposition, in the hopes that they would also be guided by a spirit of cooperation when considering recommendations from the Government. Of course, they were not inclined to cooperate. Still, we agreed with them initially, in the hopes of reaching a consensus.

After reviewing developments in Government, however, and after further polling the public by talking to people throughout the country in various forums and on a personal basis, we found that (as we had initially believed) there was no broad support in the districts for the introduction of “one-man, one-vote” at the present time. However, the Opposition was adamant that this should be implemented.

We told the United Kingdom Government that we would like to see included in the draft Constitution a reference, or provision, for the Deputy Leader of Government, and that we were supportive of a similar provision for a Deputy Leader of the Opposition, which was already included in the draft. Also, in keeping with the practical approach needed for a small country, we supported the continuation of the appointment procedure, which allows for the Speaker of the House to be chosen either from within, or from outside of, the body of elected representatives.

In these discussions, Mr. Rammell urged me to try to reach a consensus. He said that the issues of having a Deputy Leader, term limits, and the appointment of the Speaker, as well as the issue of “one-man, one-vote”, were local issues. He felt that these matters could be left for the local legislature to decide. In our discussions with Mr. Ian Hendry, the Constitutional Advisor, and Mr. Adam Huckle, who is the Deputy Head of the Overseas Territories Department, they also confirmed that these issues were local legislative matters and urged that we try to reach a consensus.

I told them that the Opposition had been informed that, while the Government intended to go along with the draft proposals otherwise, we had asked the Chamber of Commerce to appoint a bipartisan committee for the purpose of further investigating constitutional frameworks similar to that of Bermuda, which would serve the best interests of our Islands for many years to come.

In our discussions, however, Mr. Rammell informed me, in no uncertain terms, that the United Kingdom would never support another constitution that limited the powers of Her Majesty's representative, the Governor. He further undertook to write to me to confirm the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's position on this matter. Mr. Speaker, I have received this letter and will read it now for the information of all. This letter was written on the 12 November 2003. It reads:

"Dear Mr. McKeeva Bush,
"Overseas Territories: UN Decolonisation Committee

"I understand that the UK Government was criticised at the UN C24 Seminar on Anguilla in May (and has been since) for not informing Territory governments, as part of the constitutional review process, about the options for self-determination in UN General Assembly Resolution 1541 of 1960 i.e. independence, integration and free association.

"The UK did not vote for Resolution 1541 and is not bound by it. Nor does the UK Government accept that it exhausts all the options for de-listing. We intend to discuss such issues with the C24 when the new Chairman is appointed. In the meantime, I should set out where we stand in advance of the Overseas Territories Consultative Council (OTCC) scheduled for 8-10 December. As I explained in my letter and enclosure of early October, I envisage that a major part of this year's OTCC will be taken up with discussion of the constitutional relationship between the UK and the Territories and the role of Governors.

"The UK Government's position on self-determination is clear. It is for Territories to decide whether they want independence; if so, and provided that there is a broad majority in favour, we would not stand in the way. The exception to this is Gibraltar, given the terms of the Treaty of Utrecht. Integration, however, is not part of UK government policy and is not, therefore, on offer.

"At the Anguilla seminar, there was much interest in the concept of "free association". We welcome the fact that the Overseas Territories wish to retain their link with the UK and are proud that they remain British. We acknowledge too the aspirations in several territories for constitutional development, hence the various reviews currently under way. But the concept of free association as it is defined by the UN would cause us difficulty. This definition provides that a Territory "should have the right to determine its constitution free from outside interference." On the face of it, this would mean that Territories would be able to draw up their Constitutions without the involvement of the UK Government. This would leave us in an impossible position. The UK Government would be left with continuing responsibilities while being denied any ability to ensure good governance, fulfil our international obligations or protect the British government and taxpayer from significant contingent liabilities should things go wrong. You will understand why this is unacceptable. It is certainly not the partnership envisaged in the 1999 White Paper.

"The constitutional review discussions underway in several territories allow us to discuss the proper balance of responsibilities between us. Most territories already have considerable control over their domestic affairs: the issue really turns on the extent to which the UK Government needs to retain sufficient reserved powers to discharge its overall responsibility for the territories' good governance and compliance with international obligations (and to protect key values such as the independence of the judiciary, and the political impartiality of the public service, including the police). Different circumstances will apply to each territory: Constitutions will not necessarily be uniform. I shall look forward to talking these issues through with you at the OTCC Meeting in December.

"I am copying this letter for information to the Premier of Bermuda, the Chief Minister of Gibraltar and Councillors in the Falklands and St. Helena, and to the Secretariat of the C24 in New York.

"Yours sincerely, [signed] Bill Rammel."

Mr. Speaker, during our meeting last week, Mr. Rammel also discussed the European Union's Directive on Taxation of Savings. I had received a letter, while in London, from the PayMaster General in regards to new negotiations. I will read that letter, also, for the information of the House and that of the public. This letter was written on 31 October in regard to the European Union's Directive on Taxation of Savings.

"Dear McKeeva:
"EUROPEAN UNION: DIRECTIVE ON TAXATION OF SAVINGS

"I am conscious that our correspondence on the matter of the EU Savings Directive ended with your letter of 6 March 2003. In the light of recent renewed contacts at senior official level, I should like to reopen a dialogue on this issue.

"I am sure you would agree that it is in no one's interest that HMG should feel it necessary to use its reserved powers to legislate directly for the Cayman Islands in relation to this matter. It is not a decision that we would take lightly. But as the Chancellor of the Exchequer has made clear to our European partners, if we consider that we are left with no choice but to legislate then we will do so.

"But I hope that it will not come to that. Since our exchange at the end of 2002, and the beginning of this year, the EU Council of Ministers has discussed and adopted a final text of the Directive. An important new development arose from those discussions, in relation to the Crown Dependencies in the Caribbean Overseas Territories. The adopted text makes clear that the Directive will apply in Member States provided that the Crown Dependencies and the Caribbean Overseas Territories apply either automatic exchange of information from the outset (on the same basis as 12 of the Member States), or a transitional withholding tax before moving to automatic information exchange (on the same basis as Austria, Belgium and Luxembourg).

“HM Government has made it clear that it believes exchange of information is the best way of tackling cross-border tax evasion. However, it will not stand in the way of any of the UK’s Crown Dependencies and Caribbean Overseas Territories that decide to apply the transitional withholding tax. As you may know, Jersey, Guernsey and the Isle of Man have already decided to go down this route. At least one of the other four Caribbean Overseas Territories is seriously considering doing the same, as an alternative to the commitments that all four made to apply automatic exchange of information.

“I can confirm that our attitude will be the same for the Cayman Islands, and no doubt you will consider the opportunities presented by this alternative approach. I must stress however that there is no third way. The EU agreement is very clear that the Directive will only be applied if the relevant territories apply automatic exchange of information or a withholding tax on the same terms as Member States.

“I am aware that there are several issues of importance to the Cayman Islands that are unresolved—including the wish of the Cayman Islands Government to have its stock exchange formally recognised for tax purposes by the UK authorities, I hope that it will soon become possible for our respective governments also to resume a dialogue on these matters.

“I hope this letter is helpful to you, as you consider how best to proceed. I would be happy to discuss this matter with you in person the next time you are in London.

“I am copying this letter to Bill Rammell and to His Excellency the Governor of the Cayman Islands.

Yours ever, [signed] Dawn Primarolo, MP”

Mr. Speaker, thought having been given to that letter, a Meeting has been set in the interim between the Cayman Islands Government and the UK Treasury, on 1 December, to discuss this issue. I and the Honourable Financial Secretary will participate in a meeting with the Paymaster General.

Leading up to this Meeting, our technical professionals—both from the Cayman Islands Government and the UK Treasury—will meet and discuss certain proposals put forward by the Cayman Islands Government to the UK in May last year.

In the discussion with Mr. Rammell, I enforced the Government’s firm position that we will not support anything that will destroy our financial services industry. The United Kingdom Government, Mr. Speaker, should be ever mindful of its responsibility for contingent liabilities. We will hold them accountable for any direct loss of revenue and for any negative impacts to our economy and our people that may result from their policy proposals.

The Cayman Islands has struggled for a level playing field. The UK can hardly expect to take away legitimate business from the Cayman Islands, and then to prevent us from conducting business in the European Union, for instance.

This is one of the concessions that are back on the Table. However, Mr. Speaker, the Cayman Islands position remains the same. There must be a level playing field. The Cayman Islands leadership at the time was at fault in not moving quickly (or at all, in the case of the Government up to November 2000) on the Fiera Accord, which gave rise to the European Union’s Directive on Taxation of Savings. This Government is going to continue hard negotiations on this issue, to ensure that the best interests of the Cayman Islands are served.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: I will now call upon the Honourable Leader of Government Business to move the adjournment.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, as intimated to Honourable Members and to you, we intend to adjourn at this time and to resume at 10.00 am on Wednesday, God willing. We will begin the debate on the Constitution at that time. I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until on next Wednesday at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now stand adjourned until Wednesday 19 November 2003 at 10 am. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. This Honourable House is now adjourned until Wednesday 19 November 2003 at 10 am.

At 11.42 am the House stood adjourned until Wednesday, 19 November 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
19 NOVEMBER 2003
10.30 AM
Second Sitting

The Speaker: I will call on the Honourable Minister of Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology to say prayers.

Mr. A. Joel Walton: I, A. Joel Walton, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors, according to law so help me God.

PRAYERS

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 5/03

Debate on the Report of the Proposed New Draft Constitution

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move the following Motion:

BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House debates the proposed new draft Constitution laid on the Table of the Legislative Assembly on 2 October 2003;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, upon the completion of the debate, this Honourable House resolves itself into a Committee of the whole House to consider the proposed new draft Constitution and report to this House that the Committee has considered the paper;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House approves any proposals and/or amendments arising out of consideration by the Committee.

The Speaker: The question is that, BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House debates the proposed new draft Constitution laid on the Table of the Legislative Assembly on 2 October 2003;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, upon the completion of the debate, this Honourable House resolves itself into a Committee of the whole House to consider the proposed new draft Constitution and report to this House that the Committee has considered the paper;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House approves any proposals and/or amendments arising out of consideration by the Committee.

The Motion is open for debate. Does the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to speak?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As the Honourable House knows, the Governor appointed three Constitutional Commissioners, in 2001, to review our current Constitution and to propose a new constitution based on public feedback. The Commissioners made their report public on 7 March 2002. The report was made after the Commissioners held extensive consultations with persons, groups and associations in all districts throughout the three Islands. The Commissioners received verbal and written submissions from a wide cross-section of the community, on all aspects related to constitutional advancement. The Government and the Opposition held discussions in all the districts, with various persons, groups and associations, after the report was presented to the Legislative Assembly by His Excellency, the Governor.

A delegation consisting of the Government and the Opposition held talks in London, with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, from 9 – 11 December 2002. Prior to this trip to London, both sides held a summit on Friday 29 November 2002, to narrow our differences and create a united front on the many aspects related to our constitutional advancement that would subsequently be presented to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. At the summit, the Government agreed to four of the major demands that the Opposition considered important. The four items were: single-member constituencies, that is, “one-man, one-vote”; term limits of two consecutive terms for the Chief Minister; the choice of the Speaker from outside the Legislative Assembly; and the definition of what constitutes a Caymanian.

Mr. Speaker, the United Democratic Party would like to reiterate our position on the draft Constitution that was sent from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 12 February 2003. Our position is based on feedback from the public through various means, such as public meetings, personal representations, feedback at constituency MLA offices, discussions on a one-to-one basis with people throughout the country, and of course, our own judgement as elected representatives of the people. What I propose to do is to point out the precise sections and subsections that we feel should be changed, and the logic behind our taking a particular position. Any sections or subsections that I do not mention, we believe to be adequate. To leave no doubt I will repeat that: I will point out the precise sections and subsections that we feel should be changed, and the logic behind our taking a particular position. Any sections or subsections in the draft before us that I do not mention, we believe, as a party, to be adequate.

Section 32. The Cabinet. Mr. Speaker, this section begins by saying: “There shall be a Cabinet for the Cayman Islands, which shall consist of—” six other Members, one of whom would be the Deputy Chief Minister, appointed by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister, from among the Elected Members of the Legislative Assembly, along with the Deputy Governor and the Attorney General, ex officio. The United Democratic Party agreed on the basis of its being ex officio. We did not agree with subsection 4, and recommend the removal of that section.

Section 32 (6). “If occasion arises for making an appointment of any Minister between a dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the polling in the next following general election, a person who was an elected member of the Legislative Assembly immediately before the dissolution may be appointed as a Minister” by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister, as if he were still a Member of the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, these are the changes that the United Democratic Party are suggesting in regard to the functioning of the Cabinet. We believe that it is crucial to the proper functioning of Cabinet that there is a named Deputy Chief Minister. We also feel that democracy would be threatened if the Constitution dictated the public's choice as to who the Chief Minister would be. The public, through their support of a particular party and the membership of that party, should decide how long a person would serve as the Chief Minister.

Section 35. Performance of functions of Ministers in certain events. "If the Chief Minister is unable, due to illness or his absence from the Cayman Islands, to perform the functions of his office, the Governor may authorise—" and we would add, "the Deputy Chief Minister to perform those functions," followed by, "If both the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister are unable to perform, for the aforesaid reasons, the Governor may authorise some other Minister to perform those functions".

Mr. Speaker, it is critical to the efficient functioning of Government that the Deputy Chief Minister be named by the Governor.

Section 38 (3). Proceedings in and quorum of Cabinet. "No business shall be transacted at any meeting of the Cabinet if there are less than five members present, of whom four are voting members, in addition to the person presiding." Mr. Speaker, we believe that it is important to make this amendment, as there should, at all times, be at least a majority of the seven elected Ministers of Cabinet at a meeting, to bind other Ministers.

Section 39. Submission of questions to Cabinet. "No question shall be submitted to the Cabinet for its advice except by and with the approval of the Governor, acting in his discretion; but if the Governor declines to submit any question to the Cabinet when requested in writing by any Member of the Cabinet to do so, that member may require that there be recorded in the minutes his written application, together with the answer given thereto by the Governor."

We do not agree with this provision, Mr. Speaker. We recommend that the Governor should not have the right to refuse a question by a Minister of Cabinet. It is imperative that each Minister has the ability to bring forward his business to the Cabinet.

If this were allowed, the Governor would effectively be able to dictate policy with relative ease, as he simply would not allow certain business to come forward, as he saw fit.

At that point, we believe the Governor should stop business. He should allow the Member to come forward, and allow it to be recorded that he brought that business. At that point, the Governor could say, "I do not accept that this should go forward." However, the Minister should, at all times, have that prerogative to carry his business—the people's business—to the Cabinet of the country.

Section 41. Secretary to the Cabinet. "The Secretary of the Cabinet and the Cabinet Office shall also have general responsibility, under the authority of the Governor and the Chief Minister, for co-ordination and implementation of Government policy."

Mr. Speaker, this, we believe, is what the case should be, as the development of government policy is the duty of elected Ministers. Once those policies are established, it is the Cabinet Secretary who co-ordinates and implements them, but the development of government policy should be left to the Ministers. The Cabinet Secretary will coordinate the implementation of Government's policies.

Section 44. Qualifications for elected membership. We propose that we revert to section 18 of the current Constitution with one minor amendment. Section 18 would be amended, by the addition of a subsection 2, to read as follows: "For the purposes of sub-subsection 1(d) of this section, a qualified citizen is a British Dependent Territory citizen and has British citizenship by virtue of a connection with the Islands".

It would go on to say, "who either..." but I end there. Mr Speaker, we believe that the present Constitution has adequate provisions for the qualification of persons who can stand for election.

We propose that the provisions of section 31 (1) be retained from the current Constitution. It is the view of the United Democratic Party (UDP) that there should be a choice, in any elected legislature, as to where the Speaker should come from. Increased flexibility can never be underestimated. We believe that this is the method used by a majority of Parliaments in the Commonwealth, and in particular, some areas in this region, for good reason.

Section 51. Leader of the Opposition. We recommend that provision be made for a Deputy Leader of the Opposition. Obviously, in a modernised form of governance, it is critical that we have the proper constitutional protocols. This will foster greater political maturity and organisation among any opposition party. That is what we all want.

Section 58. Voting. We recommend retaining the provisions of section 35 of the present Constitution. The Government believes that the Speaker should have the ability to exercise a casting vote in case of a tie on an issue

Section 58 (2) says: "The Speaker shall not vote, and any other member presiding shall have an original but no casting vote." We are recommending the provision of Section 35 of the current Constitution, believing that the Speaker should have that right to cast that vote.

Section 62 (1). Assent to Bills. "A Bill shall not become a law until-

- a) the Governor has assented to it in Her Majesty's name and on Her Majesty's behalf and has signed it in token of his assent; or
- b) Her Majesty has given Her assent to it through a Secretary of State and the Governor has signified Her assent by Proclamation.

(2) When a Bill is presented to the Governor for his assent—”

Mr. Speaker: If the Honourable Minister would pause, I notice that we have a recommendation that section 52 should be amended to comply with section 35, but perhaps the Honourable Minister would also look at section 58 (3), to see if there would be a subsequent amendment on that.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Mr. Speaker. As I said, we did not mention it because we did not support it. However, we will deal with that at the Committee stage.

The Speaker: All right.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: It is proposed that it will be removed. For clarity, Mr. Speaker, section 58 (2) says that: “The Speaker shall not vote and any other member presiding shall have an original but no casting vote.” Section 58 (3) says that, “In the event of an equality of votes on any question the motion shall be lost.”

We feel that this should not be the case. The Speaker should have a casting vote.

I think I was at section 62 (2): “When a Bill is presented to the Governor for his assent, he shall, subject to the provisions of this Constitution and of any Instructions addressed to him under Her Majesty's Sign Manual and Signet or through a Secretary of State, declare that he assents or refuses to assent to it or that he reserves the Bill for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure:

Provided that, unless he has been authorised by a Secretary of State to assent thereto, the Governor shall reserve for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure any Bill which appears to him, acting in his discretion-

- (a) to be in any way repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the provisions of this Constitution;
- (b) to determine or regulate the privileges, immunities or powers of the Legislative Assembly or of its members”.

As we do not agree with section 62 (2) (c), we believe that it should be taken out. We do agree with section 62 (2) (d):

- (d) “to be likely to prejudice the Royal prerogative;

- (e) to affect any matter for which he is responsible under section 24(1)(c) of this Constitution”.

We believe that clarity is needed as to why such provisions are needed in the Constitution.

Section 70. Electoral Constituencies. We propose that the provision for 17 Members be maintained and that the two additional seats be assigned: one to George Town and one to West Bay. We also believe that there should be a phased implementation towards single-member constituencies. There seems to have been a clamour for single-member constituencies, which give rise to “one-person, one-vote”, in the district of George Town. We therefore recommend that, in the spirit of cooperation, the phasing-in of single-member constituencies and the resultant “one-person, one-vote” should begin in the district of George Town. The result would be that, at the polls in the 2004 General Elections, seven of the 17 seats would be contested on the basis of single-member constituencies, or “one-person, one-vote”. This compares favourably to the present situation, where only two of 15 seats are single-member constituencies, or “one-person, one-vote”. This demonstrates the UDP Government's commitment to being fair and reasonable in trying to work along with the Opposition.

Mr. Speaker, please permit me to add that under such a phasing-in process, there would be a commitment by the UDP Government to implement single-member constituencies, or “one-person, one-vote”, across the entire Islands by the 2008 General Elections. We feel that, if implemented, this proposal will be a pragmatic, logical approach to such a change.

Mr. Speaker, please also permit me to make special mention of the first schedule to the Constitution, which deals with the forms of Oaths and Affirmations—in particular Number 2: the Oath for due execution of office. Please permit me to read it into the record: “I . . . do swear that I will well and truly serve Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Second, Her Heirs and Successors, and the people of the Cayman Islands in the office of (here insert the description of the office). So help me God.”

Mr. Speaker, we are thrilled to have the people of the Cayman Islands mentioned now, in this important oath. This is an important point of principle for Caymanians. This represents the proposed suggestions of the UDP Government in regard to the draft Constitution, as prepared by Her Majesty's Government. We have no authority to change this draft Constitution, but as elected representatives of the people, we are duty-bound to make our feelings and opinions known at this particular point. Our reviews have been shaped by representation from all our people, by arguments we have heard articulated in the public domain over the past 28 months in particular, and of course, by our own judgement.

Mr. Speaker, we will cover the entire draft Constitution, section by section, once we go into Committee, and we will provide detailed comments, as all Members will have the opportunity to do, on the entire draft Constitution.

I would like to air one important aspect, and that is the issue of the Bill of Rights. We agreed that that would come into force in 2006—which is the same as what the United Kingdom intends to do—for various reasons, one being that people must be trained in the various sections. Also, sections of the Law will have to be changed because of that Bill of Rights. I would ask Members to give it careful consideration. Should the Bill of Rights be an Act separate and apart? Should we have a Bill of Rights Act, the way the United Kingdom does, or should we keep it in the Constitution?

I prefer to have it as a separate Act. That way, if changes have to be made over the years, we will not have to constantly go back to the Constitution to amend it in any shape or form.

I believe that the public would appreciate that from us, as I have had much representation on that aspect of the Bill. However, I will leave that up to Members when we get into Committee, and of course, Members who rise after me can make their opinions known.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your indulgence.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour and a privilege to finally debate the draft Constitution of these Islands this morning. This is a matter that has been mooted for quite some time, and a lot of water has gone under the bridge. Much acrimony, anxiety and debate has ensued since the report of the Commissioners was delivered to the former governor, Mr. Peter Smith, on 7 March 2002.

Mr. Speaker, I intend to spend some time discussing how we have managed to get where we are today. I am delivering the main presentation on behalf of the Opposition. We were hoping that we would have been able to avoid delving again, this morning, into some of those bitter memories of the past year and a half. Having attended what has been termed, 'The Summit', back on 29 November 2002, and having reached significant agreement on the contentious issues arising from the Commissioners' Report and the positions taken by the United Democratic Party Government in relation to that Report, and having then gone on to Lancaster House, in London, to meet for three long and arduous days to discuss the Report and the provisions of the draft Constitution, we believed that we had reached a significant level of agreement on the majority of the issues. Then, finally having received the draft Constitution from Her Majesty's Government in February of this year, which largely reflected the agreements reached both in Cayman with the United Democratic Party Government and the positions that were reaffirmed at the meeting in London in December, we felt that there was a significant degree of acceptance of—if not enthusiasm for—the draft Constitution, given the feedback we got from the public when the Report was returned.

We held further meetings in relation to the draft Constitution in every electoral district. For good measure, we held a meeting in Savannah as well, so that Bodden Town had the benefit of two meetings, at which we went through the draft Constitution.

There were a number of issues, which still remain. We had hoped that this opportunity today, when it ultimately came, would provide the basis for both sides of this Honourable House to make presentations and submissions on these few outstanding issues, and that we could have gone forward, in unison, to the United Kingdom, with the hope and expectation of there being ultimately created a Constitution for these Islands that reflected the wishes and aspirations—the hopes and dreams—of the nation.

However, as I stand here this morning, Mr. Speaker, we are back to square one. We are back to where we were before we met on 29 November 2002, because the United Democratic Party Government has gone back on virtually everything they agreed to, on 29 November last year, and subsequently in London over the period of 9 - 11 December 2002. Therefore, we begin again the whole debate—all the argument, acrimony and controversy about our Constitution.

It seems to us, on this side, that self-interest and the preservation of power have again overridden the national interest, as far as the United Democratic Party is concerned. As I pondered that idea over the course of this last week, Mr. Speaker, and as I contemplated what I would say here this morning, a quote from Edmund Burke, from whom the Minister of Education is so fond of quoting, resonated in my memory. I felt compelled to seek it out and remind myself again what that celebrated speaker and parliamentarian said, and to remind this Honourable House what our collective duty is in matters such as these. I fear that the Government has forgotten what the ultimate objective should be. They have forgotten what our principal function is; they have forgotten what it is we are sworn in to do, which is to further the national interest, and not the individual interest of ourselves and our respective parties.

We are seeking to create a national document, a Constitution that will govern this country. The positions we take in this important debate ought not to be based on what is best for us individually, or what we believe is going to result in our return to office. The position of the Opposition, and certainly my personal position, is that this seems to be the overriding consideration, the factor that determines most what position the Government takes in this critical debate.

Mr. Speaker, in his celebrated speech to the electors of Bristol in 1774, Edmund Burke said: “Parliament is not a congress of ambassadors from different hostile interests; which interests each must maintain, as an agent and advocate, against the other agents and advocates; Parliament is a deliberative assembly of one nation, with one interest, that of the whole, where, not local purposes, not local prejudices ought to guide, but the general good, resulting from the general reason of the whole.”

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, would you have a copy of that quotation so that we could have it tabled for the benefit of the House?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am quite happy to make this available to the Serjeant-at-Arms, from which to make copies. It is from a book.

The Speaker: Thank you very much.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to proceed with what I hope will be a brief but insightful oversight into this whole process, including how we have arrived where we have.

There was an important consideration to which the Honourable Leader of Government Business did not allude when he spoke. None of us in this Honourable House has a mandate for constitutional change. None of us is entitled to say, as we stand here today, or during the course of this debate, that that authority has been conferred upon us. We have the ability to speak on behalf of the people as to what it is that they want, if they want anything at all, in terms of constitutional modernisation. That is a critically important consideration, one that has been overlooked time and time again, in our respectful view, by the Government as they have proceeded with this process.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, it is a factor that we feel was overlooked by the former Governor, Mr. Peter Smith, in his handling of the process after having received the report. However, it is a factor that has been at the heart of the Opposition’s position from the very beginning. Whatever changes there are, they must have the support of the majority of the electorate. They must have the support of the population. The Constitution that we seek to craft must be a document of national consensus. Every position we have taken, and every step we have taken, has been with that idea in the forefront of our minds. Indeed, from the outset, the United Kingdom itself indicated that that was the sort of approach it wished us to take in relation to the constitutional review process. I will speak about that in more detail as I go through my submissions.

If one looks at the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist that was provided to the Overseas Territories Governments, this is a very important item on that list. Do the changes proposed have the approval of the majority of the population? If so, where is the evidence of that approval?

I have learnt clause 18 of the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist by heart. We have repeated it as a mantra for the better part of two years. Had the Government been paying attention, Mr. Speaker, we would not be here again today in this confrontational environment, discussing this matter. All we have ever asked for, on behalf of the people, was to give them the opportunity to say what it is they wanted; to give them, even now, the opportunity to say what it is they want to see in their Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, I come back to the process. This whole process of constitutional modernisation, or reform (whatever we wish to term it), was heralded by the United Kingdom in their White Paper—somewhat euphemistically entitled, “Partnership for Progress and Prosperity”, which was first promulgated, I believe, in March 1999. In it, the United Kingdom Government spoke about the need for a modernisation of the relationship between the Overseas Territories and the mother country, if I can say that these days. Part of that involved the modernisation of the structures and institutions of government. Principal among those attempts was a modernisation of the Territories’ constitutions, to ensure that they met modern standards and were able to meet the modern challenges of government; that they had modern provisions for the protection of human rights; and that they permitted the United Kingdom to be satisfied that it was complying with its international obligations in relation to various treaties, particularly those in relation to financial regulation and probity, and in relation to human rights.

The White Paper says time and time again that whether or not they want to remain British is a matter for the Overseas Territories to decide: self-determination is available. However, it appears to those of us on this side that, when it speaks of self-determination in the context of the White Paper, and in subsequent utterings, the UK is speaking about whether you maintain your current constitutional status or whether you move into independence. There does not appear to be any of the “middle ground” that has been the subject of much discussion in recent times. I am speaking particularly about the initiative of the Chamber of Commerce, in which the Leader of Government Business has participated, discussing the issue of self-determination, and the resolution of the United Nations, in the 1960s, dealing with the right of Dependent Territories—or colonies as they were then called—to self-determination.

Mr. Speaker, I will digress a little to say that I was surprised that the Leader of Government Business said nothing at all about that process in his presentation this morning. I am aware that he travelled to Anguilla in May of this year with the Chamber of Commerce, to attend meetings with representatives from the United Kingdom and other Overseas Territories in regard to this whole question of self-determination and the decolonisation process. Upon his return, he called publicly upon the United Kingdom to go back to the drawing board in relation to this draft Constitution, for it did not propose to confer upon the Cayman Islands a sufficient degree of autonomy.

Also, the agreements in relation to the draft constitution were reached in London, without the knowledge of the various options that Mr. Huntley, the UN Ambassador who visited these Islands and who has been the main proponent of these discussions in these parts, had made known to us. Therefore, we, on this side, are hoping that, when some of the other members of the Government get up to speak, they are going to tell us, and the country, what their position is now in relation to those important matters. It seems that the Government has now retreated from their earlier position that the United Kingdom should go back to the drawing board in relation to this draft Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, I would not want anyone to be left with the mistaken impression that we on this side do not believe that—if indeed those options are available to us—we should not seek to find out what is available, to explore the possibilities, to educate the population and ultimately to find out what it is our people want in terms of self-determination—not at all. My comment is in relation to the conspicuous absence of that issue from the presentation of the Honourable Leader of Government Business this morning. In light of his rather trenchant statements earlier in the course of this year, particularly, one is left to wonder what has happened to the initiative, and to Government's resolve to pursue it, and, indeed, to cause the United Kingdom to go back to the drawing board.

Mr. Speaker, I come back to the sequence of events leading up to the presentation this morning of this Motion to debate the draft Constitution. The first thing I would like to do, even though we have done it many times before, is to publicly commend the efforts of the Constitutional Commissioners. The Commission was ably chaired by Mr. Benson Ebanks, OBE, JP. He had with him, as Commissioners, two very able individuals in the persons of Mr. Arthur Hunter, OBE, and Mr. Leonard Ebanks, JP. They certainly made a tremendous effort both to educate, and to ascertain, from members of the populace, what their views were on the current Constitution, and what they viewed as necessary amendments or modernisation. I have not heard anyone publicly fault them for anything that they did, or did not do, in seeking to carry out their commission.

However, at the end of it, we came to the conclusion, having had attendance from approximately 600 registered voters out of a possible 11,500, that the participation by the population in the exercise was generally disappointing. This was mitigated, to a certain extent, by the level of participation by the Chamber of Commerce, which boasts some 700 corporate members, all of whom employ a significant number of persons. Even with that, Mr. Speaker, I do not think that anyone could conclude that the Commissioners had not done everything they possibly could do, and that, by and large, the population was fully aware of the process and what the ultimate objective would be—that is, a new Constitution.

The process went off the rails when the Commissioners' Report was delivered to the former Governor on 7 March. He proceeded to take the decision that the Report would not be made available to the population, generally, until the debate in the Legislative Assembly commenced. Honourable Members would not have had access to it until a week before that debate. That decision triggered such a public reaction that I do not know if the country has ever seen, in my lifetime, people so galvanised into opposition on any matter.

We did our very best, on this side, to persuade His Excellency, as he then was, to grant more time. At this stage, I am not going to go through each and every extension that was obtained, because I do not think that would further the discussion or my point. However, as a result of all of that, we eventually were given, at the postponement of the debate on the Report, until 19 June 2002. In the meantime, we, on this side, had done everything we could to get into the community, to ascertain what people's views were, and to do our part as best as we could to assist with the educational process. Wherever we went, however, we were met with a similar response: "There is not enough time; we need to have more time to understand and consider these important matters."

It was pointed out to us by more than one person along the way that none of us had a mandate for major constitutional change. None of us had been elected on the basis that we were going to propose, or support, significant changes to our Constitution. We all, I believe—certainly those of us on this side—made clear during the campaigns that the United Kingdom Government had mandated a course of constitutional modernisation. Therefore, the population at large was aware that that was going to transpire. However, precisely what form that was going to take—precisely what the final Constitution would look like—was not something for which any of us had, or have, a mandate.

The result of all this was that a cry for a referendum arose, which got stronger and stronger as the days went on. As we approached 19 June, which was the date set for the debate on the Report, that cry became a national clamour. As a result of the impressions we gained, and the recommendations we received, from the broadest possible cross-section of this community, the Opposition felt compelled to seek to move a private member's motion in this Honourable House for a referendum law to be passed calling for:

- 1) six of the controversial issues which we had distilled from the many submissions made to us to be matters of national importance;

2) a referendum to be held in relation to them to determine whether or not the country wanted these matters;

3) debate on the report be deferred pending the holding and outcome of that referendum.

For me, Mr Speaker, that is a particularly poignant situation, for ultimately that Motion, which was moved by the current Honourable Leader of the Opposition and Elected Member for North Side, was rejected by the then Speaker, on the basis that it was likely to impose a charge on the revenues or other funds of the country, in contravention of both the Standing Orders and the Constitution. Therefore, the Motion never did get before this Honourable House for debate.

As a result of the criticism that both I and the Honourable Leader of the Opposition made of that ruling, publicly, and because of our principled stand not to withdraw that criticism, we were both suspended from this Honourable Legislative Assembly for two weeks—from 5 June to 19 June 2002.

Therefore, Mr Speaker, things became even more heated. In the context of those suspensions, the House was cleared of all strangers, as a result of applause, or a seeming demonstration, in support of the position taken by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. As the tension grew, and as members of the public—many of whom were stalwarts of this society—became increasingly concerned, frustrated and upset, a spontaneous march on the Government Administration Building, the “Glass House”, took place. A small delegation of the demonstrators was allowed to see his Excellency, the Governor, to voice their concerns and their grievances.

The former Governor advised them as to what they should do in relation to their wish for a referendum, which was to write to the Government, setting it out, or to present a petition. Thus, the ‘People for Referendum’ was born.

Mr Speaker, what then transpired is nothing short of astounding, for over the course of the ensuing 10 days, a petition was formulated setting out the same controversial issues that had been set out in the Referendum Motion filed by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the Elected Member for North Side. Over the course of those 10 days, as I said, more than 7000 signatures were obtained.

I will come to what the controversial issues were in due course, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Is this a convenient time for the Member to take the morning break?

Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr.: I am in your hands.

The Speaker: If so, proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes. I would ask that all Honourable Members be back here at 11:55 am.

Proceedings suspended at 11:42 am

Proceedings resumed at 11:58 am

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When we took the suspension, I was dealing with the People for Referendum, and I had pointed out that the position papers that they ultimately delivered to the Leader of Government Business and his colleagues in Executive Council on 18 June 2002 sought a referendum on six issues. These six issues were those identified by the Leader of the Opposition and the Elected Member for North Side in the Referendum Motion, which was ultimately rejected on 4 June.

Those issues were:

1. Should the Cayman Islands adopt the proposal contained in the Report with respect to the concept of “one man, one vote” and the creation of 17 single-member constituencies?

2. Should the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly be chosen from outside of the elected membership of the Legislative Assembly?

3. Should the proposed changes to the Cayman Islands Constitution be implemented between the dissolution of the current Legislative Assembly and the next general election in 2004, as is proposed in the Report, or should the changes be made as soon as possible?

4. Should the Cayman Islands Constitution contain provisions to permit the electorate to initiate a referendum?

5. Should term limits be placed on the holder of the office of Chief Minister?

6. Should a person who holds a nationality in addition to British Overseas Territories Citizenship by virtue of a connection to the Cayman Islands, and British Citizenship, be permitted to be elected as a Member of the Legislative Assembly?

I have already stated, roughly, the number of persons who signed that petition—just over 7000. For the sake of completeness, I will say that that did not include the roughly 4500 persons who work for Government, in one capacity or another, and who were, and are, prevented by the provisions of the General Orders from participating in the process.

I am reminded that I should indicate the number of persons who were ultimately determined to be registered voters who signed that petition. On 27 June 2002, the Governor’s office announced that 3879 persons (or 55.22% of those who had signed the petition) had been determined to be registered voters. That figure represented 33.67% of all registered voters in the Cayman Islands. I repeat, Mr. Speaker: that figure represented 33.67% of all registered voters in the Cayman Islands.

I should also say that the Civil Service Association conducted a poll in relation to the following question: Prior to the submission of the Constitutional Commissioners' Report to Her Majesty's Government, should there be a referendum held to consider the proposed major changes to the Constitution? This poll was conducted over the course of four days, and despite that short period of time, 507 responses were received. Of these, 81.9 per cent, or 415 persons, said, "Yes"; 6.1 per cent, or 31 persons, said, "No"; 12 per cent, or 61 persons, said, "I do not know" and 77.7 per cent, or 394 persons, were registered voters.

Mr. Speaker, I am quite happy to lay a copy of the document issued by the Civil Service Association upon the Table of this Honourable House.

The Speaker: Thank you very much. So ordered.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, for the record, it is a release dated 9 July 2000 under the hand of the Cayman Islands Civil Service Association Management Council.

Mr. Speaker, I return now to the sequence of events following the presentation of the petition. The following day, 19 June 2002, debate commenced in the Legislative Assembly on the Report, but the debate was in the form of an amended Motion. It was not in the form of the Motion that is currently before this Honourable House, which seeks to approve a form of the draft Constitution that will ultimately be sent to London. It was in the form of a "Take Note Motion".

The Honourable Members of the Opposition did not participate in the actual debate, although we were there initially to state for the record why we took the position that we should not participate. Again, to remind all Honourable Members: the reason was that more than 7000 persons had said, by way of petition to the Government, that they wanted—

Point of Order

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Member state his point of order?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, under Standing Orders 36(1) we find the question of relevance which states: "Except on a motion for the adjournment of the House the debate shall be relevant to the matter of question before the House".

Mr. Speaker, all of us in the House know about the situation that occurred, about which the Member is now speaking—it is now history. I would suggest that it has nothing to do with the draft Constitution that is now before the House, which we are debating.

The Speaker: Thank you very much, Honourable Minister. I have been keeping very close notes of the debates thus far and I believe that the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town was giving background information on the circumstances leading to the Motion before the House now, though he strayed somewhat away from the subject before us.

However, I would ask that he address his comments more closely to the Motion before the House: that is, the resolutions before us. As rightly said by the Minister, the "Take Note Motion" and other issues have already been considered by this House—they are history. Nonetheless, they do give a background leading to the Motion before the House.

I would accordingly ask that the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town take note of these comments that I have made and continue along those lines.

Thank you very much.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will not test your patience in regard to that. I am going to leave that right where it was.

For the purposes of some of the more fundamental points that I wish to make, the history is important. The next matter that happened in the sequence of events, relevant to where we are today, was the invitation to London which was extended to the Opposition, before we took advantage of the 'summit', as it is termed, that was held at the Hyatt Hotel on 29 November 2002.

That is of critical importance because the correspondence that emanated from that meeting set out the position between the parties and the agreements that had been reached. Mr. Speaker, the positions now adopted by the Government are really not very new positions, by and large. They are the original positions taken in their Position Paper, which was laid upon the Table of this Honourable House 20 June 2002. I will not go through the entire Position Paper, but with your permission, Mr. Speaker, I am going to refer to those aspects of it that deal with the issues that have now emerged.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town, would you state which of the position papers you are specifically referring to?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, it is "The Position Paper of the United Democratic Party on the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review, Commissioners' 2002, and Draft Constitution for the Cayman Islands", signed on 12 June 2002.

The Speaker: Yes, I know which one you are talking about. You may continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: On the question of the qualifications for the Speaker, on page 5 of that Position Paper, item 9 is titled, "The Speaker and Deputy Speaker be chosen from outside the membership of the Legislative Assembly".

It reads: "We do not support this recommendation and propose that we retain the provi- sions of the current Constitution which state that the elected members of the Assembly should elect

- a) a Speaker from among elected members of the Assembly, or persons qualified to be elected members of the Assembly, other than members of Executive Council.
- b) a Deputy Speaker from among the elected members of the Assembly, other than members of Executive Council;”

That is the position that the Honourable Leader of Government Business reiterated this morning.

Item 10, page 6, is the recommendation of the Commissioners, entitled, “The introduction of 17 single-member constituencies for the Islands.” It reads: “Although we support the concept of modernising this area of the electoral system, we believe that the full introduction of single-member constituencies and the “one man one vote” which proposes to divide the Cayman Islands into 17 constituencies is, at this point in our development, premature. We believe that a better system would be to gradually phase in this concept.”

This was also the situation with the definition of ‘Caymanian’. Item 14, page 7 is entitled, “The Commissioners have given a narrow definition to ‘Caymanian’ in the Constitution which is separate and apart from ‘Caymanian Status’ ”.

Then there is a fairly long explanation of what that said, and the Party then make their conclusions and recommendations on the following definition of ‘Caymanian’. I quote: “A person who possesses British Overseas Territories Citizenship, British Citizenship, or citizenship by virtue of birth outside the Islands and who:

- a) at the date of his birth had at least one of his parents or grandparents who was Caymanian as herein defined and who was domiciled in the Islands at the date of such birth, or
- b) has Caymanian status.”

The question of term limits was not one that was recommended by the Commissioners in their Report. Therefore, that is not dealt with in the Position Paper of the United Democratic Party. However, Mr. Speaker, those were the positions on which we went to the summit.

As I suggested earlier, both parties were encouraged by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to meet, and to seek to narrow the issues between us in advance of the meeting in London scheduled for 9–11 December 2002. May I refer, Mr. Speaker, to a letter to the Governor’s staff officer, Mr. Kevin Mowbray, dated 22 November 2002, from Mr. Alan Huckle of the Overseas Territories Department?

The Speaker: Yes. Also, would the Honourable Member table the letter for the interest of all Members?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The letter reads:

“Dear Kevin,

CAYMAN ISLANDS: CONSTITUTIONAL REVIEW

1. I understand that there may be a meeting between the parties in Cayman on 29 November to consider their approach to the meeting in London that we have called for the 9 – 11 December to discuss the recommendations of the Constitutional Review Commissioners and associated submissions. We intend to write towards the end of next week to suggest ways in which we might proceed during these discussions – and my colleague, Colin Glass, is also in touch over the administrative details.”

This is the important bit, Mr. Speaker.

2. It may help, however, to set out some of the issues on which there would be advantage in parties coming to some form of agreement, if that were possible, in Cayman before coming to London. My purpose in doing so is not be presumptuous nor to interfere but to try to assist discussion so that our meeting in London can be as productive as possible.

3. Such issues include:

- the Review Commissioners’ recommendations for a Ministerial form of Government with a Chief Minister and six other Ministers (leaving aside the Attorney Generalship) in a legislature of 17 members;
- The office of Chief Minister: votes of no confidence, number of terms;
- The Review Commissioners’ recommendation for 17 single-member constituencies (and the need or not for a Boundaries Commission review);
- The offices of Speaker and Deputy Speaker (elected/appointed) and the impact on the size of the legislature if both are elected;
- the issue of who is a ‘Caymanian’ in terms of s. 42, 70(1)(b) and s. 107 of the Review Commissioners’ draft Constitution; and
- the timetable for implementation including the need or not for a referendum.

4. From HMG's perspective, there are a few instances when we shall wish to see amendments to the Review Commissioners' draft Constitution to preserve:

- HMG's overall responsibility for the good governance of the territory;
- the impartiality of the public service; and
- the independence of the judiciary.

5. I should be grateful if you would pass copies of this letter to the Hon McKeeva Bush and the Hon Kurt Tibbetts. I am also sending a copy to Jennifer Dilbert here."

Mr. Speaker, what is probably the most important document of all, in the context of my debate on this particular issue, is a letter dated 2 December 2002, on the letterhead of the United Democratic Party. It is addressed to Mr. Kurt Tibbetts, MLA, Leader of the Opposition, signed by the Honourable W. McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP, Party Leader. May I refer to that letter, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Yes.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The letter reads:

"Dear Mr. Tibbetts,

Re: Constitutional Modernization

On behalf of the United Democratic Party (UDP), I write to express our appreciation for your attendance and participation, and that of the other members of the People's Progressive Movement (PPM) at the meeting held on Friday, 29th November at the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

Our intention in arranging this meeting was to forge consensus on our differences, prior to attending the meeting in London on 9th – 11th December, which the Foreign & Commonwealth Office (FCO) has arranged and invited the UDP to bring five delegates, and an equal number from the PPM to attend.

The United Democratic Party is pleased at the very productive outcome of last Friday's meeting and at the progress that we have made in addressing those issues over which the public has expressed concern.

We now confirm the issues we discussed and the agreement reached at Friday's meeting.

1. Full Ministerial Form of Government

In keeping with the Constitutional Commissioners recommendation for a full ministerial form of government, with a Chief Minister and six other ministers (leaving aside the Attorney General) the meeting endorsed this recommendation.

It was further agreed that the nomenclature of Executive Council would be changed to Cabinet.

The following provisions for the office of Attorney General were also discussed and agreed:

- There shall be an Attorney General who shall be the Principal Legal Advisor to Government.
- The Attorney General shall be a person entitled to practise as an Attorney-at-Law in the Cayman Islands.
- The Attorney General shall be appointed by His Excellency, The Governor, in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister."

That is important, Mr. Speaker. It goes on:

- "The Attorney General shall not be either an elected member of the Legislative Assembly or a public officer.
- Provision shall be made for a temporary appointment of an Attorney General (e.g. to act in his absence).
- Prosecutorial functions should cease and should be vested in the officer of the Solicitor General.

2. Term Limits

It is agreed to place a limit of two consecutive terms on the post of Chief Minister, with a minimum break of one full term of office.

3. Vote of No Confidence

A vote of no confidence can only be brought against the entire government and shall require 11 votes (under the proposed membership of 17 elected members).

4. Office of the Speaker of the House

It was agreed that the Speaker of the House would be a non-elected member and the Deputy would be an elected Member.

5. Definition of Caymanian

There was an agreement on the definition of a Caymanian".

I might pause here, Mr. Speaker, to say that the definition of a 'Caymanian', that was agreed upon word for word, is that which appears in the draft Constitution.

The Speaker: I would ask the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town if he had, in fact, passed on to the Serjeant-at-Arms, for tabling, the copy of the letter he read, sent from Mr. Alan Huckle to Kevin Mowbray. Any other letter from which he reads could be passed on to the Serjeant-at-Arms for tabling, so that all Honourable Members will have copies for ease of reference when they are debating this Motion.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I am happy to do so, Mr. Speaker.

Point of Elucidation

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, on a point of elucidation. Would the Member give way, Sir?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Communications.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Member would be so kind as to repeat the last statement, because I would not wish to have him mislead the House. As I understood it, he said that the definition of a Caymanian was adopted as it was put forward. What I did not hear, Sir, which would be of importance for a reply, was, put forward by whom? Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Minister can deal with that when she rises to debate. She can get a copy of the Hansard. I do not have a written speech, and for me to attempt to repeat exactly what I said would be impossible. If I am misleading the House, she can rise on a point of order. If not, she can deal with it in her debate.

The Speaker: I would say that I would ask all Honourable Members to bear in mind whatever you say, in the event that you are stopped on a point of order. I would hate to have to disturb the proceedings in the House to check the Hansard every time something arises. Again, I would ask that in your debate, you make a note and remember precisely what you say in the event you are stopped—any Member, that is—on a point of order. This would enable us to deal with it promptly and we would not have to waste the time of the House to suspend just to check the records. Thank you.

The Minister of Communications.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, I am cognisant of the expediency with which you wish the House to proceed, but I wish simply to state, for clarity, that I was not saying he was misleading. He actually made a statement which I was not able to hear completely because of some murmurings. I just wanted him to repeat it, if he was in a position to do so, as I would like to have it accurately recorded. I know I can go to the Hansard, Sir, but it is such a waste of proceedings – if he would be so kind. I specifically said that, as it related to the definition, I understood him as saying it was a recommendation, but I did not understand by whom. That is what I was seeking clarification for. Thank you for your indulgence.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town did in fact say that he was not speaking from written notes at the time and cannot recall what he said. However, as I said earlier, it is very important that we do recall. We can check the Hansard to see what was said. I would ask that we look into this matter when we take the break, since it seems to be one of importance. We would hate to have any misquotation given in the House that would require clarification, where that clarification is not available. I do not know if, at this point in time, the Honourable Second Elected Member may have recalled the statement he made, to which the Honourable Minister is referring.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am at the point now where I am starting to regret having given way. The Honourable Minister had a point of order, but I am being placed in a position now where I am being asked to recall precisely what I said. I do not have a written speech and I am not going to traverse that ground, Sir.

The Speaker: All right, would the Second Elected Member for George Town continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.:

“6. Single-member constituencies

Agreement was reached for the introduction of 17 Single-member constituencies within the six electoral districts for the 2004 elections, which conforms to the universal concept of one-man, one-vote.

Having reached consensus on all the above issues, which represented our few differences in the Constitutional Commissioners Report, we are well on our way to full consensus on the modernized Constitution, prior to the meeting that the FCO has arranged in London.

We believe that we have addressed and agreed on HMG’s perspectives, which are:

1. HMG’s overall responsibility for the good governance of the territory
2. The impartiality of the public service, and
3. The independence of the judiciary

In discussion with HMG over the arranging of the upcoming meeting, it has been clear that HMG would like us to narrow our differences prior to the meeting, and that they are keen to have a modernized Cayman Islands constitution without delay.

Having eliminated our differences, we now invite you and your group to accept the only remaining issue – the implementation schedule – with the hope of reaching agreement on this issue prior to the meeting in London.

The United Democratic Party believes there are good reasons to support HMG's desire for early implementation of some sections of the modernized Constitution.

Some of these reasons are:

1. To ensure that political constitutional modernization keeps pace with the several administrative reforms already in place within the Civil Service.
2. To have a modern political framework to effectively address all external initiatives that will have a negative impact on our economy.
3. The need for a constitutionally authorized political leader (Chief Minister) to deal with the various external initiatives facing the Cayman Islands.
4. Everyone recognizes and agrees that the Cayman Islands needs a modernized constitution, and since we agree that a full ministerial form of government is essential for good governance, we must have an accountable, recognized political leader who is accountable to his/her party, the Legislative Assembly and the people of these Islands.
5. To allow the Boundaries Commission to prepare for the 17 single-member constituencies for the 2004 elections.
6. The urgent need for a Bill of Rights for the Caymanian people, which will require changes to existing legislation. Such changes are to be completed by 2005.

In order to reach consensus on this remaining issue, we propose a phased implementation of the modernized constitution, as follows:

Early 2003 (by 31st March, 2003)

- Full Ministerial system of government with Chief Minister
- One additional Minister in Executive Council
- Commence amending legislation for the Bill of Rights to come into effect by 2005
- Boundaries Commission

For 2004 Election

- Single-member constituencies

After 2004 Election

- Second additional Minister to Cabinet
- Speaker to be non-elected member"

To complete the process, I will give you the assurance that the modernized constitution will be the subject of a special meeting of the Legislative Assembly to allow full debate by all elected representatives.

Once again, we thank you and the People's Progressive Movement for attending last Friday's meeting and accepting the FCO's invitation to participate in the upcoming meeting in London.

The United Democratic Party has asked me to extend to you and your members our admiration for your commitment to this modernization process.

We trust that in continuing to work together, we can achieve the best results for the people we represent.

Yours in service,
Hon. W. McKeever Bush, OBE JP
Party Leader".

Then there is a manuscript: "Please note: we agreed on the position that referenda be included in the modernized constitution."

Mr. Speaker, it would be incomplete if I did not also read for the record the response of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, not to stop you unnecessarily, but I remind you: as you complete the reading of a letter, make it available to the Sergeant-at-Arms, so that it can be distributed. Please continue.

Mr Alden M McLaughlin, Jr: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

The following day, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the First Elected Member for George Town, Mr Kurt Tibbetts, responded to that letter in this way:

"Dear Sir,

Re: Constitutional Modernisation

Thank you for your letter of 2nd December, 2002.

While your letter accurately sets out our agreement on most of the points of contention between us, there are other fundamental issues which you have failed to mention. The omission of these matters from your letter, which you have now made public, is potentially misleading. The purpose of this letter is to address the misconceptions under which you appear to be labouring and the erroneous impression which your letter gives.

The People's Progressive Movement remains steadfast in its position that there should be no significant change to the Cayman Islands Constitution unless the people of these Islands, voting on a referendum or in General Elections, approve the proposed changes. This, of course, extends to the question of when the proposed new Constitution should be implemented. We have made this point repeatedly, both in the public forum and in discussions with you. We made it at the start of last Friday's meeting and had, we thought, made it clear that the position taken by us in the discussions on the proposed constitutional changes was subject to this critically important caveat. Regrettably your letter fails to acknowledge this fundamental premise upon which Friday's talks proceeded.

On the matter of implementation, you note that "The United Democratic Party believes there are good reasons to support HMG's desire for early implementation of some sections of the modernized Constitution." We are astounded by this statement as throughout the entire review process neither we nor the general public have been made aware by your government or Her Majesty's Government ("HMG") of "HMG's" desire for early implementation of some sections of the modernised Constitution." In fact, to the contrary, the Governor's Staff Officer has publicly stated that HMG has fixed no timeline for the completion of the process.

If in fact your assertion is correct, we are gravely concerned to learn at this late stage that HMG has fixed a timetable for the implementation of the proposed new Constitution and that this critical piece of information has been kept from the people of the Cayman Islands. This is a matter which we will immediately take up with His Excellency, the Governor and pursue with Mr Alan Huckle, Head of the Overseas Territories Department, prior to our meeting with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London on Monday of next week.

Notwithstanding your views, or indeed that of HMG, in relation to implementation of the proposed new Constitution, let me reiterate for the record the position of the People's Progressive Movement on this most fundamental of issues.

The Constitutional Review Commissioners have recommended that the proposed new Constitution should come into effect following the dissolution of the current Legislative Assembly and that the next General Elections should be conducted under the proposed new Constitution. From the outset we have endorsed this approach because we believe it would be undemocratic to do otherwise. It follows, therefore, that we cannot agree to your proposed timetable for implementation. We believe that to bring into effect the key elements of the proposed new Constitution prior to General Elections would be undemocratic in the extreme and will not have the support of the majority of the population.

Your proposal to add another minister to Executive Council and to create the office of Chief Minister without the benefit of General Elections are major changes which will radically alter the way ministers are appointed to Executive Council and the way government is administered. The creation of the office of Chief Minister is not merely a change in nomenclature. It is not simply a question of converting the title of Leader of Government Business to Chief Minister. What is contemplated is a fundamental change which will invest the holder of the office of Chief Minister with a role, authority and functions which no member of Executive Council currently enjoys. The Chief Minister will have tremendous authority to appoint and fire ministers as well as significant individual authority and autonomy under the proposed new Constitution. The holder of that Office will be an authoritative leader in a sense that is not currently the case.

Such a fundamental role and authority change cannot democratically occur without the benefit of General Elections in which the country as a whole is able to demonstrate their support for the Chief Minister by supporting the Party or team which he leads.

The current members of the Legislative Assembly were elected under the present Constitution in which no provision is made for a Chief Minister. Indeed, there were no parties in existence during the last elections and the electorate did not vote on any basis for a leader. There cannot, therefore, be any proper democratic basis for the appointment of a Chief Minister who will have significant powers which no member of Executive Council, including the Leader of Government Business, enjoys under the current Constitution.

I note that you have scribbled at the foot of your letter, as an apparent after thought, your agreement to the inclusion of provisions for referenda in the proposed new Constitution. You are no doubt quite aware that there is provision in the current Constitution for referenda to be held on questions of national importance. You are also aware that we have sought to have this important issue of constitutional change made the subject of a referendum but have thus far not succeeded in doing so because of your opposition and the subsequent refusal of the Speaker to approve the Referendum Motion filed by me.

I wish to remind you that your letter also fails to mention that we have insisted that the proposed new Constitution makes provision for people initiated referendum. Our position is consistent with Strategy 8 of Vision 2008 which, you are no doubt aware, is the Cayman Islands Country Plan, prepared by the people of these Islands and unaniously accepted by all members of the Legislative Assembly, including you.

It remains our position that there needs to be national consensus on the proposed changes to the Constitution. This position is reinforced if, as you have proposed, key elements of the proposed changes are to be implemented prior to the next General Elections.

We therefore renew our previous entreaties to you as Leader of Government Business and the United Democratic Party to agree to hold a referendum on the key elements of the proposed changes to the Cayman Islands Constitution. If the people of these Islands agree those changes, including early implementation, then the People's Progressive Movement will be content. In the absence of such evidence of public support, we will continue to vigorously oppose the early implementation of a proposed new Constitution or any section thereof, including the proposed undemocratic appointment of a Chief Minister."

Mr. Speaker, this is the final letter in the sequence and that was less than a week before we commenced the meetings at Lancaster House in London.

When we got to London, the United Kingdom Government was very much aware of what agreements had been reached. I believe that they were quite pleased that we had made such statesman-like progress; indeed, they said so.

The whole of those discussions proceeded on that premise, so that we were able to ventilate our concerns on some of the more fundamental issues in relation to the way the country is administered, leaving aside what the UK termed, in some of their correspondence, "the local issues". Mr. Speaker, there are really two sets of issues in relation to the constitutional debate, as far as the United Kingdom is concerned: (1) The local issues with which, whatever we want to decide as a people, they are quite happy to go along with, within reason (the question of whether the Speaker should be from inside the House or outside is one of those); and (2) The question of single-member constituencies.

However, there are other issues they regard as affecting their ability to administer the affairs of the country properly and, ultimately, to make whatever decisions they feel are necessary, if the local legislature and the Executive do not do as they wish—although until recent times, they have been slow to exercise that reserve power.

A tremendous amount of time was taken up in London in dealing with some of these other issues because, by and large, we felt we had sorted out the contentious local issues.

Mr. Speaker, when one considers the huge sums of money that have been spent in an effort to give effect to the agreement to implement single-member constituencies in time for the 2004 elections, it causes one to shudder. The Government paid for the following contingent: on this side of this Honourable House, there were four of us in London for one week; on the Government side, there were five Elected Members plus support staff, in addition to the Attorney General and His Excellency, the Governor. The Constitutional Advisor to the Foreign Commonwealth Office was there as well, but I am not sure who paid for him.

However, Mr. Speaker, because the draft Constitution has made provision for single-member constituencies on the basis that there was agreement between the parties, a whole new train of events was put in place. There is an Order in Council, which is the Fifth Amendment to the current Constitution, and which, among other things, created an Electoral Boundary Commission. The Chairman of that Commission was brought, I am sure, at some expense, because he is a specialist in that area.

From our side, we appointed a lawyer of more than 20 years standing, who spent the better part of two months working on this. On the Government side, they appointed a senior member of a major corporation in these Islands—a very able individual. We add to that all of those involved from the Elections Office and from the Lands and Survey Department, who have produced a magnificent set of maps, and on the part of the Electoral Boundary Commission, a very able and clear report.

Now, almost exactly a year after agreement was reached on this issue, on the eve of the debate on the draft Constitution, the Government changes its mind. What is this, Mr. Speaker? This is a leadership that is boasted of, and talked about, until I am sick of hearing about it. This is "decisive" leadership. Before my tenure is out—unless the good Lord calls me home earlier—I am going to ask a parliamentary question about what that whole exercise has cost this country, because it cannot be much under $1 million. What is the rationale now (for none has been proffered by the Honourable Leader of Government Business) as to why single-member constituencies can work in George Town, but nowhere else? Why has it taken a year to determine that it is not something the people of the Islands want? Where is the evidence of that?

Following the return of the draft Constitution here in February 2003, the People's Progressive Movement, led by the members of the Opposition, held a public meeting in every single electoral district—and for good measure, in Bodden Town too, to make sure we got Savannah—to get feedback on the draft Constitution and its provisions, particularly the whole question of single-member constituencies and how that sat with the people. Mr. Speaker, I would never try to say that the attendance of those meetings was overwhelming. I am not pretending that that gives us clear—and to use the Honourable Minister of Education's words—unequivocal or empirical—evidence about this. However, over the course of the debate on the Constitutional Commissioners' Report, the 12 or so public meetings we had about that, and the six additional meetings we had about this report, the impression we gained was that the country generally supported single-member constituencies. The notable exception was Cayman Brac. At all four meetings that we held in Cayman Brac, there were reservations about it, and indeed, even objections to it in some instances. Therefore, I am unsure, Mr. Speaker.

The Constitutional Commissioners have said in their Report of 7 March that: "Apart from the inclusion of a Bill of Rights if there is any other issue that received as much widespread support in our review process it is the introduction of single-member constituencies with each elector having one vote only."

That is the finding of the Commissioners, which is entirely consistent with our finding.

Mr. Speaker, the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission is somewhat different, although they acknowledge right up front—as did the Constitutional Commissioners—that the attendance at their meetings was meagre. They have dealt with single-member constituencies in this way, and I quote from page 14 of their Report: "The Commission's mandate requires it to divide the Cayman Islands into seventeen electoral constituencies, each of which will elect a member of the Legislative Assembly. This issue was clearly a controversial one at the public meetings held by the Commission. It appeared to cause unease to some who attended the public meetings of the Commission in Cayman Brac and West Bay, while George Town, North Side and East End were supportive of the single-member constituencies; Bodden Town audience had mixed views on the issue. The former Chairman of the Constitutional Review Commission told this Commission that the "one man one vote" issue was the most frequent one raised with his Commission, which felt that the best way of giving effect to that aspiration was the single member constituency system, and hence that Commission recommended that system."

Mr. Speaker, at the meeting here on 29 November between the United Democratic Party Elected Members and the People's Progressive Movement Members—the so-called "summit"—the Government changed their position, or made concessions, not only in relation to this issue but on the question of term limits for the Chief Minister.

Again, the position that we put forward on that was that it was a controversial issue, one worthy of being determined by way of a referendum. Therefore, it formed one of the six questions I read earlier, in the ill-fated Private Member's Motion brought by the Leader of the Opposition and the Honourable Member for North Side.

We received significant representation. Caymanians, being the cautious and conservative people they are by nature, have resisted until now the move to a full ministerial government and the creation of the office of Chief Minister. I do not think there is that much resistance, but there is still concern. In the present tense, they fear the creation of an autocratic and dynastic creature such as the one they already know haunts the corridors of power in most of the Overseas Territories and former Overseas Territories, where it is incarnated as a Prime Minister. To avoid the creation of this sort of dynasty, we came forward with the recommendation for term limits on that high office.

The Government agreed to that on 29 November and subsequently at the meeting from 9-11 December 2002. Why has it taken them until now, almost one year hence, to have felt the public pulse—and by what means I know not, for they have not said—and to decide to resile from that agreement?

As for the question of the Speaker, and whether we should continue to permit the Speaker to be someone who is an Elected Member, there was a huge controversy that raged over the course of last year about the ability of an Elected Member to be impartial in the kind of environment that has now evolved in this Honourable House. I am not going to rehash all of that, because everyone knows about it. However, that was a highly contentious issue. Therefore, it appeared in the Private Member's Motion to which I earlier referred, and ultimately, in the petition for referendum, which was signed by more than 7000 persons, as an issue suitable to be resolved by referendum.

The Government agreed that the Speaker should not be an Elected Member on the 29 November, and they agreed on the 9-11 December. It is in the draft Constitution. What has happened to change that position?

The issue of qualifications for Elected Members is one that, above all, I find surprising. In fact, we did not learn about that issue until this morning. The definition of "Caymanian" was also a point of major contention—one that we felt required determination by referendum. That is also one of the questions raised in the petition for referendum, and in the ill-fated Motion brought by the Leader of the Opposition and the Elected Member for North Side.

Mr. Speaker, the point we have made almost from the outset—and we have said it so many times that I believe people must be sick of us saying it—is that none of us has a mandate for constitutional change. When the draft Constitution came back, we took it around, and I have to concede, Mr. Speaker, that then, the clamour for referendum seemed to have abated. We were specifically asked in London whether or not, with the agreements that had been reached, we were prepared to abandon our position that a referendum needed to be held.

We told those goodly gentlemen that we could not do that, because it was not our decision. The wish for referendum is not a wish that was born in the hearts of the members of the Opposition. It is a wish that has been articulated to us by countless persons who wanted to have a say in the creation, the crafting, and the moulding of this critically important document.

Now we have gone right back to where we started, and the issues that were issues prior to the 29 November 2002 are issues again. It must logically follow that the People's Progressive Movement must renew the cry and the call for a referendum to be held before this country accepts any proposed constitution.

That is our position on that. I am going to come back—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, is this a convenient time for us to take the lunch break?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I would let you know that you have 27 minutes remaining.

Honourable Members, as had been advised to you previously, we intend to go on beyond the hour of 4.30 pm so that we can finish the business before the House as expeditiously as possible. Today and tomorrow we will be going until 6 pm and on Friday we intend to go until 8 pm.

The House is suspended until 2.30 pm for lunch break.

Proceedings suspended at 1.00 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.35 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. The Second Elected Member for George Town is speaking.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, when we took the luncheon adjournment, I was concluding my comments on the question of single-member constituencies, and the change of the position of Government that was recently announced. I need to clarify something, because the Honourable Leader of Government Business—and I am sad he is not in the Chamber at the moment—has said to me that I and the Leader of the Opposition have been advocating the position of single-member constituencies from the beginning, and that now that the Government is prepared to give it to us, we do not want it. I need to make something absolutely clear, because he said I would not win. Mr. Speaker, let me tell that Honourable Member, and everybody else within the sound of my voice, this: the position that the Opposition take, and in particular the position that I take, in relation to matters such as this, has nothing whatsoever to do with the pursuit of my own interest. We cannot come to decisions and take positions in relation to the draft Constitution based on what we think is going to promote us during the course of the next election.

What we are seeking to achieve is the best possible constitutional document that the country can muster—something about which we can all be proud, and something we can hold up in the national community and say, “On this document rests the sound administration and democratic enterprise called the Cayman Islands”.

If single- or multi-member constituencies mean that I am not elected, so be it. For all who may not know it, I have an office I can go back to, from whence I came. I will not prostitute my principles based on my desire to retain my seat. How, Mr. Speaker, can any competent and caring Government make such a ridiculous proposition: that the largest, most populous electoral district in these Islands should be the guinea pig for single-member constituencies, while the electoral district of West Bay (which is the stomping ground of the Leader of Government Business) retains the multi-member constituency, and he, in my view, is able to exercise his considerable influence and popularity and, by means of the coattail effect, bring into victory those who choose to run with him?

That is a matter of principle; we cannot craft our Constitution based on those sorts of considerations.

Mr. Speaker, I am conscious of the fact that I have limited time left and I really would like to deal with the whole issue of how the Attorney General is chosen.

From the very beginning, we have had concerns about this important office—long before the Euro Bank debacle and the revelations and ensuing controversy that, ultimately, resulted in the former holder of the office of Attorney General, Mr. David Ballantyne, demitting office and returning to Scotland. We indicated concerns about how that office was constituted, about the fact that it had so many functions, and about the fact that the holder of the office exercised far too much authority.

The way the situation stood, and still stands, in the Constitution under which we are operating, is that the Attorney General is the Government's principal legal advisor. He is also advisor to the Governor in a separate capacity. He is head of the Legal Department, the Chief Prosecutor, and also the individual with the ultimate responsibility for the operations of the Law School. Because of those concerns, the position we took from the very beginning was that some of those functions needed to be divested, and the office of the Solicitor General should have been constitutionally established. The holder of that office should be invested with the responsibility for public prosecutions.

That proposal was accepted by the United Democratic Party Government during the summit on the 29 November 2002. That was the position put forward in London by me, on behalf of the Opposition, and since the Government committed to it in writing, and did not demur, one can be satisfied that that was their position also, at that time. I believe that that is still their position. That is the position that has found itself into the draft Constitution, and for that we are grateful and happy.

Probably the more important aspects of the discussion about the Attorney General's office are the way in which that individual is chosen and to whom he owes ultimate responsibility. Varying positions have been taken, by both sides, over the course of this rather long discussion and debate, but at the meeting of 29 November 2002, consensus was reached. That consensus involved some aspects of the proposal that had been put forward by the People's Progressive Movement, and some aspects of what the United Democratic Party Government wished to see. It is outlined in the letter from the Honourable McKeeva Bush to the Honourable Kurt Tibbetts, dated 2 September, which I read at some length.

Essentially, what was proposed was that the Attorney General should not be a public officer or an Elected Member, but that he should be appointed by the Governor on the advice of Cabinet. In layman's terms, Mr. Speaker, that means that the Chief Minister essentially chooses who the Government's principal legal advisor will be. That is one of the main reasons why we proposed that the prosecutorial functions that are currently held by that office should be handed off to the Solicitor General. We cannot have someone who has a political appointment being ultimately responsible for prosecutions. That goes without saying, particularly in these troubled times when there are bound to be questions about loyalties. The situation with Mr. Ballantyne is a prime example.

I hasten to add that the fact that the current holder of the office of Attorney General is who he is—my good friend Mr. Samuel Bulgin—mitigates this problem, for the moment. That is why he is there.

One concern, held not only the members of the Opposition, but by the community at large, has to do with how the holder of this important office is appointed, and to whom he ultimately owes responsibility and loyalty. We are creating a constitution, and that constitution must not be personal to the holders of the various offices. It must be capable of standing on its own. Henceforth and hereafter, it must be that, because of the mechanism involved in his appointment, the country as a whole can put confidence in the holder of that office, knowing full well that his loyalty is to the Government, which appointed him in the first place.

That is a fundamental point, Mr. Speaker. It is one to which, I regret, the Honourable Leader of Government Business did not even allude in his presentation this morning. He has not said that his Government has now decided to resile from the agreement made back on 29 November in Cayman, and then in December in London. Therefore, I am not quite certain.

The point is, Mr. Speaker, that although they did not say much about it, the Government continued to agree with us on the position we put forward: that is, about the manner of appointment of the holder of this office. It was not accepted by London and does not appear in the draft Constitution. What is in the draft Constitution is that the Attorney General would be appointed by the Governor, in consultation with the Chief Minister, which is a far cry from “. . . on the advice of. . .”.

We maintain that if we are going to move to something approaching full ministerial government (and subject to what the people say about it, we on this side believe that the country needs to move towards it), Government must have the ability to appoint their principal legal advisor. I hasten to add that what is being proposed here is not full ministerial government—not as long as the Governor is responsible for the appointment of a Member of Cabinet.

In these times, when our interests and those of the United Kingdom Government no longer converge all of the time, we cannot continue to have a situation where we are debating, when we make any decisions, whether the advice we are receiving is the advice we should be receiving, or whether it is advice that is influenced by the position of the United Kingdom Government.

I say again, that concern is mitigated to a large extent because of the current holder of the office. However, I also say again that we cannot craft the Constitution based on who the holder of the office may be.

The other aspect I wish to discuss briefly, Mr. Speaker, is the whole question of whether, in fact, the document we are seeking to create really advances the cause of democracy—whether it really allows more participation by the average person in the affairs of Government, and whether it creates better lines of communication, accountability and transparency. All of these are wonderful words that everybody trots out during every debate; glibly they roll off the tongue.

Our view, Mr. Speaker, is that by and large, the draft Constitution falls far short of making those sorts of advances in the cause of democracy.

Mr. Speaker, may I have one moment?

The Speaker: I would remind the Honourable Member that he has 12 minutes left.

[Pause]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, many concerns have been expressed about the continued role that the Governor plays in the affairs of the Government under the Constitution, and we share them. Much effort has been (and continues to be) devoted to seeking to take some of that control away from the Governor, and investing it in the hands of the Elected Members of Government.

We have no great argument with that. Most of the points made by the Honourable Leader of Government Business, in relation to things like the agenda of Cabinet and lessening the control of the Governor in relation to that, are concerns that we share. We believe, as he does, that the Cabinet should be able to decide what matters go on the agenda, and should not be subject to the whims of the Governor in that regard.

Equally, however, there have been concerns expressed to us over and over again about ensuring that the appropriate checks and balances are in place to restrain the Executive, principally in the person of the Chief Minister under this proposed system, and the need to make Parliament a little more than it currently is in relation to the affairs of Government. We need to create better accountability of the Executive to Parliament. Parliament is becoming increasingly irrelevant, not just in these Islands but in the Westminster system generally.

If we are going to ensure that the Cayman Islands become the kind of democratic model that all of us would like to see, we need to ensure that Parliament plays an important role in the affairs and administration of the country. It needs to be more than a rubber stamp. It needs to be paid more regard. It needs to have more functions. Things such as appointments to government boards and statutory authorities should be subjected to debate and ratification in this Legislative Assembly. Awards of substantial contracts should be subject to similar scrutiny by Parliament; that is one issue that resonates substantially through the community.

Particularly in terms of accountability and the involvement of the people in the decision-making process, we need to ensure that our Constitution makes provision for referendums initiated by the people. That is part and parcel of Vision 2008; it is strategy 8 of 2008, which was approved by this Legislative Assembly as the country's plan. It is the work of over 3000 persons in this community. We need to carry through what this House agreed to those short years ago, and ensure that referendums initiated by the people are permitted under our proposed new draft Constitution.

We said that in London; we have said it countless times. People-initiated referendums provide an important check and restraint on executive power and authority, and the excesses that are often inherent in that. It has received the approval of this House in the past. We said so to London, and London's Checklist actually seems to suggest that they would welcome mechanisms such as referendums.

In relation to this draft constitutional review process, they have said they want to know whether what is being proposed has widespread support. What more effective way of determining whether or not this Constitution and the proposed changes to it have the agreement of the people of these Islands than by way of a referendum?

Mr. Speaker, there is much more that I could say, and in much more detail. However, I am constrained by the time allotted, which is two hours. The other members of the Opposition will continue to carry the torch on this critically important matter. I do not want us to forget, as we are debating this matter, that we have an overriding duty and responsibility to ensure that the document on which we put our stamp of approval here is one that has the support of the majority of the people in this country. In the view of the Opposition, what is being proposed now, by way of reversions by the Government, does not have that support. The Government has failed the critical test set out in clause 18 of the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist; they do not have the support of the majority of persons in these Islands.

We urge upon the Government, again, the need for a referendum on the Constitution. If Government is relying on the members of the Opposition to support what they put forward as the basis on which to say to London, "This is what we want the Constitution to look like", they will not get it.

Mr. Speaker, if we have to make another trip to London, accompanied or unaccompanied by the Government, it will be done, for we will not stand quietly and idly by and allow the Government to revert to the position they took at this time last year—a position that was vehemently opposed by a large sector of this community—and sneak it in under the wire in this manner. It will not be done with the approval of the Opposition. It will not get our blessing.

I regret very much having to say that, for we had hoped that, given all that has transpired, and given the draft Constitution in the formal form in which it arrived in Cayman, we could have made significant progress. Instead of debating and arguing these points, we would have been able to go forward as a Legislative Assembly from the Cayman Islands. We would have been able to go to London to say, "These are the aspects of the draft Constitution that we do not like. We want to have the ability to appoint our own Attorney General; we want the Bill of Rights to contain a provision for freedom of information and we want special protection in the Bill of Rights for the freedom of the press".

Those are the sorts of issues we could have been debating, and about which we could have put forward, to London, a unified position. Now we are back to where we were more than a year ago, arguing over what are essentially local issues, but critically important ones to the exercise of democracy and to the exercise of our various functions in this Parliament. That is regrettable, Mr. Speaker, but that is the position.

The Government has said what they have to say. I have said what the position of the Opposition is, and other Members on this side will say more. However, the Government should not labour under the misconception that we are going to agree to this Motion. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Minister of Health Services.

[Pause]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I apologise for the slight delay in rising, but as you know, the space here is excruciatingly limited.

Mr. Speaker, as was said by Shakespeare many years ago:

*“Friends, Romans, countrymen lend me your ears;
I come to bury Caesar not to praise him.
The evil that men do lives after them,
The good is oft interrèd with their bones.”*

Mr. Speaker, I will not be long in what I have to say today.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I know that most of us are acquainted with that quotation, so I do not suppose you would wish to lay it upon the Table, but if anyone would like to, I would be happy to have it done.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is certainly here in the text I just read.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the positions that have already been articulated by the Leader of Government Business, the Chairman, and the Leader of the United Democratic Party. However, before I go further, there are a few things that were raised by the last speaker on which I would like to comment. I will not go into the details of things that happened last year, or leading up to when we went to London to discuss the draft Constitution, because I want to bury that Caesar, not to praise it. The demonstrations, and everything else that happened, are history. We cannot relive that time ever again in our lives. We can reflect on it, but the truth is that we are here today to debate the draft Constitution, which was sent from the United Kingdom in February of this year.

If there is one thing that I wish were different, it would be that I wish this had been debated long before now. Mr. Speaker, I think time has slipped by. We are now in the month of November, in the last Session of this Honourable House. Many things have taken place; there have been numerous challenges from the outside via the European Union, the UK Government and the OECD, and all the opposing forces that we know so well. Many things have happened to hinder this debate's taking place, but I am glad that it is finally happening.

The last speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town, raised a number of questions, among which was this: Where do we get the authority to be dealing with the constitutional issue, and taking a position on it? That can be simply responded to by the fact that the United Kingdom Government appointed Commissioners to look at our existing Constitution and to make recommendations for its modernisation. This was done by the Governor. The Report was given to the Governor, and to all Elected Members of the Legislative Assembly. We took it into the various districts and debated it. That is where the authority for the commencement of the whole process comes from.

The record shows that the United Democratic Party took a position from day one on the issue, and indeed, we gave that position to the Caymanian public, so they could see what we had said and why we had said it. It was actually tabled in this Honourable House, and it was voted upon. A process took place in this House that also gave significance and authority to the ongoing process.

Mr. Speaker, we discovered that the points made by the United Democratic Party were very similar to those taken up by the People's Progressive Movement (PPM). We had agreement in most areas. The one difference was this: we made our position clear by means of our Position Paper, which we tabled in the House, and which was voted on. We did not know the position of the PPM until we received copies of it in London in December 2002—so you would recall, Mr. Speaker, as you were then a Minister of Government, and part of the team that went to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Speaker, I was not at the meeting between the leaders of the United Democratic Party and the People's Progressive Movement. I was actually in the United States for two days. When I came back, I learned that there had been a meeting, and that certain things had been agreed. When I learned of this, I stated to my colleagues that I certainly had differing views about some of the agreements that had been made. To the best of my understanding, the United Democratic Party had agreed with almost every single position put forward by the PPM. If we take them side by side and compare them, this will be found to be the case.

At least I did not go on television to disagree with my party. I made it known within that party that I thought we were wrong on certain issues and that we should not have agreed to them—one of these being the idea of the single-member constituencies. We had taken the position originally that this should be phased in, as is shown in the document. We accepted the concept, but thought it should be phased in. One of the things that was discussed, and apparently generally agreed to, was that there were going to be single-member constituencies. As has been stated by the Honourable Leader of Government Business, this position was taken because there was a wish to reach a consensus or an understanding, which was what the United Kingdom Government was asking be done. This is what I was told on my return.

Mr. Speaker, this is also history. When I truly believe in something, I take the position that I have a right to my opinion, and another person has the right to oppose my opinion. We can both be respectful, while taking opposing views. Therefore, it was not necessary that we reach agreement on all issues before we went to the United Kingdom to discuss them. When we went there, there were certain differing views that were held, and we had differing views when we left there.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to prove that by reading a statement, and I would ask your indulgence in tabling this after so doing.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon Gilbert A McLean: I have in my hand the draft press statement headed, "Cayman Constitutional Review Talks". This was drafted by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) at Lancaster House—or rather, by the people there—namely, Mr Ian Hendry and the others. This is what it says:

"CAYMAN CONSTITUTIONAL REVIEW TALKS

Representatives from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office met representatives from the Cayman Islands at Lancaster House 9 - 11 December to review proposals for amendments to the Cayman Islands Constitution. Cayman Islands delegates included the Leader of Government Business, Mr McKeeva Bush and Leader of the Opposition, Mr Kurt Tibbetts.

The review covered all chapters of the proposed Constitution: namely the Fundamental Rights and Freedoms of the Individual, the Governor, the Executive, the Legislature, the Judicature, the Public Service, Finance and provisions for a Complaints Commissioner and a Register of Interests."

This is the key sentence, Mr Speaker, on which I want to focus right now. It says: "A broad measure of agreement was reached, although some issues remain to be resolved.

The FCO will now produce a revised draft Constitution early in 2003 to send to the Cayman Islands for further public discussion and debate."

There ends the release, Mr. Speaker.

I read that document to make the point that it is never possible—not that I have ever heard about—for any Constitution in the world to be designed or devised so that there is total agreement on it. In a democracy, the majority is what stands.

That being said, the British Government was true to its word and they sent a draft Constitution to the Cayman Islands in February of this year. It has been here, and it has been discussed by both parties at various public meetings. Personally, I believe that the public is a bit tired of those of us who are elected as their representatives playing and fooling around and not bringing it to its ultimate conclusion.

Mr. Speaker, another question raised by the Second Elected Member for George Town was whether the Government had taken a different position as to what could be included in a new constitution—new for us, at least. I heard a lot of talk about that. I heard talk from the Chamber of Commerce to the effect that it was possible to get a constitution like Bermuda's. I know there were various groups that went to the United Nations to discuss the matter of our Constitution with the Special Committee of 24 on Decolonization, or C24 (The United Nations Special Committee on the Situation with Regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples). At least it was so reported.

Personally, I am very glad that such discussions took place, because as far as I am concerned (and in my own defence), I think history has absolved me. I have long held the position that the one friend we can have in any kind of evolution towards greater self-reliance and more responsibility is the United Nations. Most of us should know that, but seemingly the majority of people in the Cayman Islands are not aware of it. I would like to believe that I have always been aware of it.

There are few colonial powers in the world that have ever gone to the people they governed under colonial rule and said, "Well, hey, now it is time. We are going to give you independence and we are give greater self-reliance". It always comes through some sort of struggle, or disagreement, to whatever extent. History is filled with such examples.

I have never believed that we could move from childhood to adulthood in one step. Successive governments, and people in government, have kept these Islands in a state where, even now, we have very limited responsibility for our own affairs. I have railed against it for years, and because of that I have been accused of everything in the world besides being a good person. I have been "radical"; I want "independence". This type of foolishness has plagued me over the decades—close to three now.

Mr. Speaker, I am a father several times over, and I use, as an example, the act of teaching children how to sit at the table and eat. You teach them how to use a knife and fork because you want them to grow up and get beyond the point where you cut the food up for them and feed them. The same process takes place in a country, if that country is smart. If that country does not want to stay in an infantile state, then it has to grow beyond that.

I have always seen us as being a sensible people. Indeed the peculiar thing is that some of our forefathers, who were elected in the 50s and 60s, had a greater desire for being themselves, and having the right to run these Cayman Islands the way they should, than some of the modern-day persons have had, who have claimed over the years that we were doing so well.

Mr. Speaker, I am one who believes that we have got to do well, and not only financially. There is something called a "political economy". If we do not grow the political economy, then we are not growing mentally ourselves, or understanding that each person's greatest achievement in life is becoming a full and complete person who is responsible for his actions: what one does and what one says.

Mr. Speaker, I did not believe that the United Kingdom, the Master of Colonial Rule, was going to say, "Yes. All this generation past, since 1972, you folks told me you wanted to sit there and play dummies. You told me you did not want any responsibility. You told me that was a bad thing for you. How is it that you woke up last night and say you want to be Bermuda?" I had my doubts about that but, as I said, I am glad that the Chamber of Commerce made representations to the United Nations. I think it should be something that they continue to do, but I also believe that the most definite thing I have ever seen in writing is what has been sent by the Minister within the FCO who is responsible for Overseas Territories—a Mr. Bill Rammell—and which the Honourable Leader of Government Business read on Monday into the record.

The Second Elected Member for George Town asks what is being done about the position that we would seek to get as far as we possibly could constitutionally. Have we backed away from that? I do not think that the Government has backed away from it, Mr Speaker. The Government has been told just how far they may go.

We all have this letter, but I would like to quote a few sentences from it. Mr. Bill Rammell says: "I understand that the UK Government was criticised at the UN C24 seminar on Anguilla in May (and has been since) for not informing Territory governments, as part of the constitutional review process, about the options for self-determination in UN General Assembly Resolution 1541 of 1960".

He is admitting that there are options; he cites them, and I will quote: "independence, integration and free association." He is admitting them now that the United Nations Special Committee of 24 on Decolonization has exposed them. I do not think any of us knew there were options. I would like now to quote what Mr. Rammell says: "The UK did not vote for Resolution 1541 and is not bound by it." That is very clear, Mr. Speaker.

He goes on to say: "Nor does the UK Government accept that it exhausts all the options for de-listing." He goes on to say that he will be discussing constitutional matters with Ministers of the Overseas Territories at the Overseas Territories Consultative Council (OTCC) from 8-10 December 2003. He further says: "As I explained in my letter and enclosure of early October, I envisage that a major part of this year's OTCC will be taken up with discussion of the constitutional relationship between the UK and the Territories and the role of Governors."

Again, he says: "The UK Government's position on self-determination is clear. It is for Territories to decide whether they want independence; if so, and provided there is a board majority in favour, we would not stand in the way."

I would point out, Mr. Speaker, that he does not say anything about the other options in between. In other words, the way I read this—and I think any sensible person would—is that the United Kingdom Government is not agreeing to any other option. He makes that statement, and I quote:

"Integration, however, is not part of UK government policy and is not, therefore, on offer".

Mr. Speaker, does that make it clear where this Government, or for that matter the Opposition and the Chamber of Commerce, must stand? I think it does. That does not mean that this Government, the Opposition party or the Chamber of Commerce cannot continue agitation where the other three options are concerned. Do we stay in an infantile position with the existing Constitution for the next 30 years, trying to discuss the other three options, which England says are not on the table? Mr. Speaker, I think that would be very infantile.

Mr. Speaker, another quote from this letter is: "We acknowledge too the aspirations in several territories for constitutional development, hence the various reviews currently under way. But the concept of free association as it is defined by the UN would cause us difficulty. This definition provides that a territory "should have the right to determine its constitution free from outside interference." On the face of it, this would mean that Territories would be able to draw up their Constitutions without the involvement of the UK Government."

Here is the clincher: "This would leave us in an impossible position."

Mr. Speaker, I think that if the Opposition read this letter again, they would understand exactly where the Government of the day must stand in terms of the present draft Constitution that is before this House. As I have said, I have never seen it committed to paper as explicitly as this letter does, on the matter of Constitution. Of course, it goes on to speak further about the reserve powers of the Governor, and so on.

This is my opinion: were some territories in this Caribbean not doing so well as financial centres, the United Kingdom would have no burning desire to retain us, or indeed, to retain the power to decide what happens within these Islands. However, as some of these Islands do play a significant role on the financial world scene—the Cayman Islands, for example—they are not going to allow us any latitude that they do not have. I think it is clear to everyone now that the G8 nations, and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) nations, really want to see us out of the game, period. If they devolve too much authority and autonomy to us, it is more difficult to put us out of business, or to hinder us developing to the extent that we might.

In the world as it presently stands, whenever the authority of a state wishes to fix your business, they claim that you are in a position to be sponsoring or financing terrorism or money laundering. Those are the blanket statements that nations use as clubs against other nations and, in many instances, against their own people now. They do not have to prove it. It can be as simple as this: Earlier this year, there was a claim that a scientist in the United States might have been making anthrax. All it took to cook his goose was to say, “He is a person of interest”. We read it in the world press and saw it on television. We have to weigh and understand our position on the big world stage.

If, tomorrow, everyone in Cayman said they wanted to have independence (and I do not think it would happen), have we thought about the fact that it is the United Kingdom that would have to agree as to which constitution we had?

Mr. Speaker, I am grateful to the great Jehovah that I have some knowledge of history. I particularly like it, and I know that for every nation in the Caribbean, negotiating its final, independent Constitution was a major affair. Before the British gives a nation up, they want to see this or that in its Constitution. I can say that back in those days, islands such as Jamaica and Trinidad were not worrying about having any Bill of Rights in their constitutions, either. There were other things that they wanted—to make sure that British interest and investments in those countries were taken care of, for example. I live in a world of reality and I am aware of these things. In the same way, I do my best to stay in a world of reality here in the Cayman Islands. I understand that for us to accept the present draft Constitution is a major uplifting from the infantile position.

Mr. Speaker, we doodle, and talk about waiting to find out if it is what the people want. What else do the people have to tell us—the Elected Members? What else do they have to do? Do they have to chase us through the streets with whips, telling us we must come to the Legislative Assembly and deal with matter? I do not know, but for myself, I believe that the people of this country want us to get on with the business relating to the Constitution.

The last speaker asked if it has been authorised by the people. What kind of authorisation did he mean? What is it we are talking about? It is in Parliament. It came here; it was allowed by the Speaker; it was agreed by the Governor. It was requested by the United Kingdom. What else do we have to do? What we have to do is to get on with the debate on the matter, and send it back to them and get a change in the Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, the question as to holding a referendum, to find out whether this draft Constitution should come here for debate, is nothing short of ludicrous. The average citizen has no idea of what is in our present Constitution, to say nothing about this one. We came here, into this Legislative Assembly, as persons elected to speak on behalf of the people. We, ourselves, had to learn much about it, to have an understanding of its true workings. How can we accuse the average person of being in a better position than we are in to authorise it, notwithstanding that there is an unquestionable right to have an opinion. They have vested their opinion in us for four years.

Mr. Speaker, I will not try to answer, point for point, the issues raised by the Second Elected Member for George Town about the past history—about our getting to where we are not. We are here now, so we have to deal with the here and now.

We know that Mr. Benson Ebanks and the other Commissioners did a good job. They did as good a job as anyone could do in the Cayman Islands that we live in and love. People did not go out to listen to them—of course not. Make it be some other issue, and they have people turning out. What do the people know about the Constitution? They expect that someone of Mr. Ebanks' stature would know, and indeed he does, and has made his recommendations. It has reached, now, to this point in time.

Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier, the Government of the United Democratic Party have agreed almost every single point with the People's Progressive Movement, except for a few. I would like to refer to the points raised by the Honourable Leader of Government Business, and to offer a few comments on the point of disagreement. I would emphasise that, as was said in the release by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in December, there were matters that were not resolved after that meeting at Lancaster House. We are still in disagreement on certain of them. That is the way it is supposed to be. If we agreed on everything, then there could not be a Government or an Opposition. I prefer to know that we have the two sides, rather than, as my cousin in opposition in St. Kitts told me today, that everyone is the Government—so much so that they had to go out and shop for an Attorney General. Everyone was returned to the government party; there is no opposition. I prefer to know that there is one.

Mr. Speaker, we have published our position. What we are saying at this time is that, after coming back and having the opportunity to look at some of the situations, to take feedback, and hear what the people say on certain issues, we believe that it is right for us to revert to the position we originally took on these matters. It is in the best interests of the country and the people we represent.

This has been stated long before now, and indeed, Mr. Speaker, if I were to refer to section 32 of the Constitution which deals with Cabinet—

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, is this a convenient time for an afternoon break?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I would ask all Honourable Members to please be back in 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 3.44 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.07 pm

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, when we took the evening suspension, I was about to refer to the few areas of disagreement that the United Democratic Party has with the People's Progressive Movement, in regard to the Constitution, and to refer to section 32. This is really not a disagreement, but it is a recommendation that, where a provision is made in Cabinet for a Chief Minister, a provision also be made for a Deputy Chief Minister.

In a way, such is the present arrangement, and it has been since the year 2000, when there was a Leader of Government Business and a Deputy Leader of Government Business—the latter, of course, having no constitutional bearing whatsoever. It is a logical thing to do, and it is something that has been talked about long before now. In recent times, in the reshuffle, there has been a change of Minister in regard to the former Deputy Leader of Government Business and me. It is not as though something is being advocated here that is not in practice now.

From a historical point of view, it has been the practice in the United Kingdom's Parliament. If I remember correctly, Mr. Michael Heseltine, in the Thatcher era, was made Deputy Prime Minister—something that had never happened before, but which now seems to be followed in the United Kingdom as well.

I think it should be noted that one thing the two parties in Cayman did agree on was that there would be a change to having a Deputy Governor and an Attorney General, and that while these persons would sit in Cabinet, they would be ex officio, and would not have a vote. The British Government has sent that issue, and it is contained in the Constitution. It is something that both parties have agreed to and indeed, it has been done.

One of the things I have disagreed with from day one is the idea that one has to limit the term of a Chief Minister. Mr. Speaker, under our Westminster system, as it is practised in all of the various Commonwealth countries, it is no different from limiting the term of a Prime Minister, or a Premier, or whoever might be holding the head office.

I have a fundamental belief that one right that should not be taken away from the people—and I know that the Opposition like to speak about the people, and the peoples' right to vote and to choose and so forth—is the right of the people to elect any party that it may choose. If they elect that party forty times, the head of that party has a right to be head of that party, in the Cabinet, and in the Parliament.

Therefore, I certainly do not subscribe to the business that having a person heading a party is such a fearsome thing that you have to limit the term of that person to only two terms. That was a point that was discussed at Lancaster House at great length and, again, it was not a matter fully agreed.

The United Democratic Party put forward its position. The delegates of the People's Progressive Movement, and the representatives from the Chamber of Commerce and other associations, also put forward their views. If the Opposition is speaking about the people having their rights, then the people must have the right to elect any party they want, as often as they want, and to get rid of them—or not elect them—as they choose. They are the best judges.

We are attempting to take an American type of system and put it into our British one, and they are two different things. In the United States, they have varying intervals at which they vote for Governors, Senators, and Congressmen—the whole bit—and they vote for the President as a separate individual.

Perhaps they have the right—and they do, since that is the way that it is—but nobody votes for a Prime Minister under the British system. You vote for a party and the head of that party takes up whatever office or post may be designated. I have no compunction whatsoever in saying that I think that the insertion of that part about the limitations was outside of what was real, necessary or democratic. Therefore, I have no problem subscribing to the view that it should be removed, Mr. Speaker. That has been done in our position, at this time.

Section 32. The Cabinet. The current draft Constitution speaks, in section 32(6), of the appointment of a Minister “between a dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the polling in the next following general election”.

We believe that there should be the insertion of a phrase here, so that the Governor may appoint a Minister, but should have the advice of the Chief Minister. Under the British system, a Minister is appointed under a full ministerial system on the advice of the Chief Minister, whichever government is in power. If the Governor found it necessary to appoint someone as Minister, it would follow logically that he would ask for, and get, the advice of the Chief Minister.

Section 35. Performance of Functions of Ministers in certain events. Mr. Speaker, under section 35 of the draft Constitution, the following provision is made: “If the Chief Minister is unable, due to illness or his absence from the Cayman Islands, to perform the functions of his office, the Governor may authorise some other Minister to perform those functions.”

If it is accepted by the British Government that there should be a position of Deputy Chief Minister, then the Deputy Chief Minister would automatically be the one authorised to do so. If both the Chief Minister and Deputy Chief Minister were, for whatever reason, unable to perform their duties, then the Governor would appoint another Minister to carry out the duties of that office.

I can see nothing offensive in that. I think it follows proper organisational structure and I do not believe it should cause any problem where the Foreign and Commonwealth Office is concerned.

Section 38. Proceedings in and Quorum of Cabinet. Section 38(3) deals with proceedings in and the quorum of the Cabinet, which is very important in carrying out the day-to-day business of Government. When going through the Constitution, we thought that the insertion of a few words there would make it more explicit.

As you are aware, Mr. Speaker, having been a Minister of Cabinet, Cabinet functions on the basis that the presence of a certain number of Elected Members is required. Everyone feels more comfortable in that regard, and we have suggested the insertion of the phrase, “of which four are voting” where it says, “No business shall be transacted at any meeting of the Cabinet if there are less than five members present”. Having taken note of the fact that the draft Constitution provides for a Deputy Governor and an Attorney General, who do not vote, we suggest that it would be necessary to have four voting Members, which would be a simple majority of seven, to bind the other elected Ministers.

Mr. Speaker, another matter that was discussed at length in the United Kingdom, when the two delegations were there, was the question of the submission of questions to Cabinet. By questions, I simply mean business. It should not be at the sole discretion of the Governor, as it is now, whether you can bring a paper to Cabinet or not.

Mr. Speaker, this country is seriously hampered, and the Ministers and Elected Members of this country are seriously limited, by the fact that, with the best intentions in the world, a Minister—any Minister, at whatever point in time, no matter how burning an issue it is or how strongly that Minister feels about a matter that he or she believes should be taken to Cabinet—cannot bring an issue if the Governor says it does not go. If the Governor says it does not go, then it does not go. You do not even have the opportunity of deliberating it in the Cabinet.

What the United Democratic Party Government have suggested, and recommended, is that a Minister be given the right to bring a paper to the Cabinet. It still leaves the authority with the Governor as to whether he takes the advice of Cabinet, or whether the Minister can get support for the paper. He has the right not to take that advice, on that particular subject, but at least it would in some way balance the authority and play in the affair.

The Governor does not have to accept the advice of his Executive Council, but it would give a Minister the right to get something there, to discuss and hear it. Mr. Speaker, as we know, everything that goes to the Cabinet ultimately goes to the United Kingdom for them to see, so it would not be any great secret.

Section 41. Secretary to the Cabinet. We have just had the appointment of a Cabinet Officer, which, personally, I believe is very important and needs to be in the country. I dare say it should have been, for some time. The section dealing with this issue, section 41(4), says that: “The Secretary to the Cabinet and the Cabinet Office shall also have general responsibility, under the authority of the Governor and the Chief Minister, for the development and co-ordination of Government policy.”

It was our belief that the Government should develop the policy, and that the Cabinet Officer should coordinate it, from all of the different Ministries, and indeed, implement it. Therefore, we recommend that particular change: to put in, instead, that the Cabinet Secretary would coordinate and implement the policy.

Section 44. Qualifications for Elected Membership. Mr. Speaker, what has always been very important to these Islands is who qualifies to stand or sit in this Honourable House.

It has been something that I have heard talked about for as long as I can remember, from the days of Mr. Ormond Panton, Mr. Willie Farrington, and others. You always got the impression that these were people of standing, in terms of the respect and support they got from the populace. Indeed, that is what majority support is all about.

There is provided, in section 44 of the draft Constitution, a provision for qualifications for people who are eligible to be elected in the Legislative Assembly. We believe that what presently exists in our Constitution is sufficient and more desirable than what has been put into the draft Constitution. We have made such recommendations except that—and this refers to the existing Constitution, which refers to the question of eligibility in section 18—it would be slightly amended to say that for the purposes of subsection 1(d) of this section, “a qualified citizen is a British Dependent Territories Citizen, and has British Citizenship, by virtue of a connection with the Island”.

Simply, the United Kingdom has made it possible that we, as British Overseas Territories Citizens, can acquire British Citizenship, and many have. To add that (perhaps I should say, “British Citizenship”) would simply make sense.

Section 48. Speaker and Deputy Speaker. Mr. Speaker, as you will know, when we met for discussions in the United Kingdom, I, for one, made it very clear that I thought that this idea of having a Speaker only from outside the Assembly was imprac-licable, and did not make sense. I continue to feel that way, because the Cayman Islands are small islands. Out of 42,000 people, there are only 15,000 of us who have the honour and privilege of becoming Elected Members—15,000 out of 42,000. None of us, coming here—no matter how brilliant—knew what the processes and practices of this Honourable House were about, and it matters not, as far as I am concerned. The most learned jurist, who comes into Parliament to take up the seat of Speaker, cannot know the practices and processes of Parliament without having some knowledge or experience of it. That is not to say that he or she could not learn it quickly, but the practice and process in a court of law is a different affair from that of the Legislative Assembly. We cannot sensibly forget the fact that it is this body that makes the law, while the courts interpret it and carry it out.

Mr. Speaker, as clearly thinking elected representatives of the people, I do not think we would want to create the fourth highest job in the country, in precedence, and have someone who has never come near this Legislative Assembly take the office of Speaker—someone who has never faced the challenges at the polls or in an election campaign, and who has never been elected by the people. It is ridiculous.

If you want to be Speaker, if you want to be a Member of the House, pay your thousand dollars, go out and take the blows, kicks and licks as all of us in here have done. I do not support the creation of the fourth highest job in the Land for Mr. Somebody out in the public to come in here, who would be a pretender to such a position.

We have a provision now, in the Constitution, that it can be one or the other. We have had persons who have not been in the Legislative Assembly, who have been excellent Speakers, but guess what—they were here before and knew the rules, regulations, practices, traditions and procedures.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, under Standing Order 83, I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order for business to continue after 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 10(2) so that we can continue after the hour of 4.30, until 6 pm.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House will continue proceedings until 6 pm.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue until 6pm.

The Speaker: Please continue, Honourable Minister of Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr Speaker. The United Democratic Party and the Government of the day have recommended that we leave the situation of the Speaker-ship as it presently is, in that it can be someone from within or someone from without. It gives us a choice; we can have the forbidden fruit or we can leave it alone. I believe we should have a choice in that regard, simply because there may be those persons whose feelings may be hurt because the Speaker made a certain ruling, or who believe that the Speaker should have done it otherwise—tough stuff: that is what a Speaker is about. The referee blows the whistle and, whether or not you argue, if he gives you a yellow card or a red card, you have got that card. That is the same way it plays here.

Each Speaker's way will be different. Each may view a situation in a particular way, such as another one might not have done.

However, to have a situation where we are going to create a strange constitution by saying we have to have a Speaker from the outside, under the pretext that Speakers are biased, and so on, is not a very good or supportable argument. Therefore, Mr Speaker, I support the requirement for Speaker remaining the same as it presently is, in our Constitution.

Section 51. Leader of the Opposition. In this section there is a provision for the Leader of the Opposition. I absolutely agree with it. We know that it is now a position that has been created by an Order in Council, as is the position of the Leader of Government Business. We have also recommended that there should be a Deputy Leader of the Opposition, for the same reasons that it makes sense to have a Deputy Chief Minister. I would add to this part of it that the Deputy Leader of the Opposition should be someone appointed by the Governor on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition, in the same way that is recommended otherwise for the Deputy Chief Minister.

The fact is that what is envisaged in the Constitution is a stronger discipline and control. It should not be left to the Governor to choose who would be the Deputy Leader of the Opposition. That is the Opposition Members' business and it should be based on advice from the Leader of the Opposition, whoever that may be.

Section 58. Voting. In this section, we think that the provisions in our existing Constitution are in the better interests of the Cayman Islands than those which have been recommended in the draft Constitution.

It was suggested that the Speaker should be from outside the Legislative Assembly. If we look at Section 58(2), it says the Speaker, “. . . shall not vote, and any other member presiding will have an original but no casting vote”. The drafters of this draft Constitution had to take into account a very basic principle of parliamentary practice and procedure. We know that if a matter comes to a division that is equally divided, a Speaker has the right to have a casting vote. Normally, the Speaker would vote for the status quo; however, if it is the case that a Bill of serious significance is before the House, the Speaker should be empowered.

If, for example, it was something dealing with our security, then the Speaker, as the ultimate judge, and having heard all the deliberations and debate, could cast his vote to see the passage of such a Bill if he thought it would be in the best interests of the country. That is a principle that has existed for ages in the British form of parliamentary democracy. If, from the outset, a Speaker is so far-fetched that you cannot even give him, or her, a casting vote, this in turn highlights another situation of which we need to be mindful.

Anyone else who would go in the Chair would be able to vote, but then that person would not have any casting vote. If we look at the situation, this is requiring a person who is a Member to go there to vote. When the Speaker calls the vote, he would have to call a vote for himself. The Clerk would have to call the Speaker to vote. I do not see that as right or acceptable. This is the reason the Government made the recommendation it made about the Speaker, changing the situation to the way it is presently, where you may have a Speaker from within or without and that the Speaker has a casting vote—not an original vote. Why would we want a Speaker who was exercising an original vote, so that if it went to a division, the Clerk would have to say, “Mr Speaker.” and the Speaker would vote? It does not follow, so we have recommended otherwise.

Section 62. Assent to Bills. We know that there are two Bills to which the Governor has not assented, which have been passed by this Honourable House. Both relate to who will have the power to tap our telephones, and who will intercept calls. The Government, and every Member of the House, have unanimously voted to give such authority to the courts, whereas the British Government have taken the position that they want the Governor to be the one to decide whether phones can be tapped. Therefore, the Governor has not given his assent to these Bills.

I would suggest to all Members, including Opposition Members, that we need to look carefully at Section 62, which deals with the Assent to Bills, because of the way it is written in section 62 (2) which states: “When a bill is presented to the Governor for his assent, he shall, subject to the provisions of this Constitution and of any Instructions addressed to him under Her Majesty’s Sign Manual and Signet or through a Secretary of State, declare that he assents or refuses to assent to it or that he reserves for the Bill for the signification of Her Majesty’s pleasure:

Provided that, unless he has been authorised by a Secretary of State to assent thereto, the Governor shall reserve for the signification of Her Majesty’s pleasure any Bill which appears to him, acting in his discretion—

“(c) to be inconsistent with any obligation of Her Majesty or Her Majesty’s Government in the United Kingdom towards any other state or international organisation”.”

That, Mr Speaker, could mean the OECD or the European Union. Together with the other Members of the Government of the day, I am concerned that a piece of legislation, which might be good for us, might not be passed, simply because it did not suit the United Kingdom. Therefore, we believe that some of these clauses are not necessarily in the best interests of the Cayman Islands, and we have a recommendation on these as well. We, of course, absolutely agree with sub-subsection (2)(f): “to affect the integrity or independence of the public service or of the administration of justice”. Such a clause should definitely remain, but there are others we feel are not in our best interests. There are about two different instances in which we have made recommendations. We think that in sub-subsection (2) (e), clarity is needed as to why such a provision is needed in the Constitution. We were requested to consider this draft Constitution, and we have made recommendations in that regard.

Section 70. Electoral Constituencies. Now, we come to section 70, which deals with electoral constituencies and franchises. In setting the stage to make clear the reason for one of the things the Government has taken into consideration, I would go to page 14 of the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003. Section 15 says:

“The Commission’s mandate requires it to divide the Cayman Islands into seventeen electoral constituencies, each of which will elect a member of the Legislative Assembly. This issue was clearly a controversial one at the public meetings held by the Commission.”

Mr. Speaker, I will read that again. “This issue was clearly a controversial one at the public meetings held by the Commission.” This is of great significance. “It appeared to cause unease to some who attended the public meetings of the Commission in Cayman Brac and West Bay, while George Town, North Side and East End were supportive of the single-member constituencies; Bodden Town audience had mixed views on the issue.” That is a fact; I was there for all of the Meetings. “The former Chairman of the Constitutional Review Commission told this Commission that the “one man one vote” issue was the most frequent one raised with his Commission, which felt that the best way of giving effect to that aspiration was the single member constituency system, and hence that Commission recommended that system.”

Mr. Speaker, I do not think it could be put any clearer than what the Commissioners said: the districts that were supportive were George Town, North Side and East End. From the point of view of “one person, one vote”, we know that North Side and East End are districts: they each return one person. Therefore, it naturally follows that they would go that way; they understand that way and it is what they are comfortable with.

However, the area presently called George Town has the largest concentration of votes in any single district—a very significant number. Mr. Speaker, one has to understand that when you go to single-member constituencies, it is like we are setting up mini-districts. The person who runs in this one is held responsible for what happens in that one, and so on and so forth. With George Town unquestionably having the largest concentration of votes in the area, there would be no George Town district, as such, after single-member constituencies were set up. There would be individual electoral districts.

It is on that basis and for that reason that we are looking into this. The fact is that there are persons within the George Town district who have an interest in seeing George Town remain as the “big” cosmopolitan centre—big to us, anyway.

Mr. Speaker, if we look at the numbers there, and add the other two present single-member districts, we see that 50 per cent of the three Islands would then be in single-member constituencies. Although the British Government say that they do not really want, or are not mindful of, this issue, I would add here, from my dealings with them, that that is exactly what they want. There cannot be any doubt that the British Government wants to see two things in the Cayman Islands: (1) the Bill of Rights; and (2) single-member constituencies. From day one, the Government of the day took the position that we accept it, but feel we should phase it in instead of changing every one of them in one shot. That is the position we originally took, and that is the position to which we have reverted.

Mr. Speaker, the Leader of Government Business has set out, and I have commented on, some of the areas that, from my personal position, I feel strongly about, and for which I believe there are logical reasons.

The Speaker: Order!

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: I have shown a basis for such views. Let us also remember another thing: When we left the United Kingdom, after having discussed at length every item in the Commissioners’ Report from Mr. Benson Ebanks and the others, we left there not having agreement on every item. There is no difference now. However, if the public looks at what is in this draft Constitution, there are very few areas—three or four—on which we do not have agreement. In regard to “referendum”, it is in our present Constitution. If one wants to bring a Bill to have a referendum, it can be done.

Again, there was a ruling, to which the speaker for the Opposition referred when he spoke. The Opposition had brought a Bill to hold a referendum, and the former Speaker ruled that it had financial impact and did not allow it. At the request of the Opposition—and that good Member there is a lawyer; I am sure he has looked at that section and seen this—the British Government has indeed acceded to their requests, and by so doing, proved that the then speaker was right, by inserting Section 60, Introduction of Bills. In section 60(3)(b), it says that—

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, I am grateful that the Leader of the Opposition is assisting me. I appreciate that.

Section 60(3)(b) says, “. . . except in the case of a motion proposing a resolution under section 52(2) of this Constitution, proceed upon any motion (including any amendment to a motion) the effect of which, in the opinion of the person presiding in the Assembly, is that provision would be made for any of the purposes aforesaid”. It is speaking here of a referendum.

In this draft Constitution—at least in my interpretation, and we have legal persons here—if the Motion is brought, it would be allowed, because the presumption would be that money would be made available for it, and it could not be excluded or refused on that basis. I think it is important to take note of that.

Mr. Speaker, we have looked carefully at this draft Constitution, and I think the Opposition would have to strike against themselves, if they did not accept this, because the British Government has lifted major parts of their submission out to put into this draft Constitution. If they have looked at it carefully, they will see that. However, it would not be good to see in the Constitution everything that the Opposition put in their submission.

[Laughter]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: There has to be a little to balance it on the other side.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I support this draft Constitution with the amendments that have been cited by the Leader of Government Business, some of which I have spoken on, to some degree and in some detail.

If we do not accept this draft Constitution, if we keep playing around and playing games and asking, “Did the people authorise us? Did the Chamber of Commerce authorise us? Did this or that entity authorise us?" then we are going to continue the 30 years of infantile practice. I, personally, do not want to be a part of that. I never did, and certainly, having reached this stage in my life, I do not have any wish to begin at this time. However, Mr. Speaker, each person will have the opportunity to speak further, and in detail, when it goes to a Committee stage, as requested.

The last point that I wish to make is that we cannot change anything in this; this is the draft Constitution prepared by the British Government. We can only make recommendations for changes, and I think we should. Otherwise, in my opinion, there are things here that would not be in our best interests.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Last call. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for East End caught my eye.

[Laughter]

Mr. V Arden McLean: Mr, Speaker, I was just easing out of my chair—just easing my legs.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps I should start my contribution to this constitutional debate by reminding us all—and in particular, the Minister of Health—that when he says we should forget about what has transpired so far in regard to the Constitution, we should remember that those who forget history are doomed to repeat it. In his conclusion, he states that we can only make recommendations because it is not our Constitution. I think we all recognise that it is for Her Majesty's Government to write the Constitution of this country and then pass it on to Her Majesty for assent thereto.

However, I must also remind us all that we play an important role in making recommendations. If the people of this country do not want something, that has to be taken into consideration by Her Majesty's Government. I think that was made clear in the letter from which the Minister of Health quoted Mr. Rammell as saying that England would want the Territories to decide what they want. We do play an important role in it.

If we did not, we would not be at the stage the Second Elected Member for George Town explained in the history of this modernisation of our Constitution. If England did not see us playing a role in it, we would not have been involved in it, and we would have had a Constitution a long time ago. It is about the wishes and aspirations of the people of the Overseas Territories, and in particular, the people of the Cayman Islands.

Although I hope not to go over all that has been said about the history of our constitutional modernisation, I am sure I will touch on ground that has been covered before; I beg your indulgence before this happens.

One of my greatest concerns, at this stage of this constitutional debate, is the way the United Democratic Government has vacillated over the last year and a half. One minute we are saying one thing and the next minute we are saying another. At the eleventh hour, they are changing again.

The modernisation of our Constitution is neither about the United Democratic Party (UDP) nor the People's Progressive Movement (PPM); we are mere servants of the people, acting on their behalf. This is about ensuring that the people of this country get a Constitution that works; it governs their country, and in particular, it governs them. It is not about 15 Elected Members of Parliament. Although we are members of this community, we are also, at this time, representatives of the people, here to ensure that we act in their best interests. Yes, Mr. Speaker, we are elected by them to act and conduct ourselves in their best interests. It is not about what we can do to maintain our status as Elected Members of Parliament.

In 2002, when all the controversy over the Constitution started in the Cayman Islands, we heard that there were marches, that over 7,000 people signed a referendum petition and that many of those were registered voters. We also heard of the call to the Government to hold a referendum about certain issues relating to the Constitution—six issues in particular.

The Government then decided that instead of honouring that petition from the people of the Cayman Islands, they were going to hold a summit. At this late stage, we know that, as far as we were all concerned, we had resolved all the issues with the exception of the implementation of the Constitution and its timeframe. Therefore, I was satisfied that this was the way to go, or somewhere close to it, depending on what England wanted to put in their Constitution—as it is England's Constitution. We could certainly make some recommendations.

I, too, travelled to England with the hope that we were making these recommendations together on behalf of the people of this country. Little did I know, at the time, that from the UDP's perspective (in my opinion), I was merely a pawn at these meetings, and in particular, at the summit.

It appears that the UDP's reason for being there was to "trade horses". I say that because on 17 November 2003, the Leader of Government Business made a statement in this Honourable House, in which he said, and I quote: "I also informed Mr. Rammell that the United Democratic Party's Government had initially conceded certain points in an effort to reach a consensus with the Opposition, in the hopes that they would also be guided by a spirit of cooperation when considering recommendations from the Government.”

That is playing a serious, dangerous game with the constitution of any country; it makes no difference to me which constitution it is. On 17 November 2003, The Honourable Leader of Government Business went on to say, and I quote; “Of course, they were not inclined to cooperate. Still, we agreed with them initially, in the hopes of reaching consensus”.

I really thought we had reached consensus on those issues. In the minds of the UDP, there was evidently no consensus, because we are now back where we were then on at least four of these six or seven issues.

Mr. Speaker, like the people of this country, I feel betrayed, in that I went into those discussions with the good intentions of discussing the issues with the UDP Government and its Members, and came away feeling quite good about it. The last speaker on this issue talked about the press statement from England regarding the talks at Lancaster House between 9–11 December 2002. He said that even then, there were unresolved issues. I agree. However, I believe that these were, by and large, issues between the Cayman Islands and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

The only issues that I recall being unresolved were, firstly, that of the Attorney General (between the UDP and the PPM) and, secondly, implementation. We had agreed in Cayman about how we would propose that the Attorney General be appointed, and there was a little back-peddling in England from the UDP on that issue. Therefore, we came away with some understanding that there was not consensus on it, as a result of their changing their position somewhat.

When the draft Constitution came back to this country in February 2003, I believe it was the clear intent of England that prior to today's debate starting, both parties would have met again and tried to iron out any differences that they had seen in the draft Constitution. That was not to be. Whoever is to blame, let it be. I shall leave it up to the Leader of the Opposition to explain his understanding of how it was to be done.

Mr. Speaker, one moment please, if you will. [Pause] Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will deal with that at a later time, as I do not have a copy of that letter with me at present. I do know, however, that the intent was that talks would ensue between the leadership of the UDP and the leadership of the PPM. I understand that we have all been busy, and many other things have to be done, but certainly it was of great importance to have discussions on the Constitution. However, we went on and had talks throughout the country.

I am not here to say that we, the PPM—the Opposition—have full authority to say what the people of this country want in the form of a constitution. However, as a result of all the public consultations we have had, I can say that we can speak with a little more authority than the UDP government. I have no recollection of them having any particular meetings specifically to discuss the Constitution, throughout the country.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: State your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I think the Member is somewhat misleading, because Members have had meetings in various districts throughout the country, specifically dealing with these constitutions and the various matters connected to them.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, the point of order was this: the correction was being made that the UDP Government did have various meetings following receipt of the draft Constitution in various districts. I know that the Member for East End did say that that was his opinion. I would ask him to move away from that point, at this stage, and to continue his speech, since there is no indication that there is any factual basis for this view. I think he was saying, “...throughout the Islands”. We will move away from that particular point, since we have no factual basis as to which districts were visited or not. Therefore, I would request that he continue with his speech.

Mr V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I respect your ruling. However, I do know that this is factual. Since the draft Constitution arrived on 12 February 2003, I have not heard of any public meeting in the district of East End specifically on the Constitution, other than that which the PPM had. That is my position, Mr. Speaker, and that is fact.

I submit that in the absence of wide-spread consultation on the constitutional draft, there is no evidence anywhere to prove that the changes being proposed are those wanted by the people of this country—as per the Checklist that was sent to the Overseas Territories, including the Cayman Islands, by the UK, when they instructed their Overseas Territories to commence constitutional modernisation discussions.

In the absence of what would be considered reasonable education of the people, particularly on a constitution, I am laying blame at the feet of the country. Mr. Speaker, we are all to blame; however, the Opposition do not have the resources—though we did what we could. I contend that it is the responsibility of a government to educate the populace on any of its country's constitutional changes.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I can prove that by saying that in the last few months, we have been inundated with a media blitz—an education programme on the Immigration Law and what it contains. Now if the Immigration Law is that important—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: It surely is.

Mr V. Arden McLean: I totally agree with the Leader of Government Business, Mr. Speaker; it is important, but I submit that it is not more important than our Constitution. If we could spend monies educating our people about how to live with immigrants, about movement in their country, and about entry and exit, then we should have educated our people on what our draft Constitution contains. It is a small price to pay. Mr. Speaker, I have even seen an eight- to ten-page insert in the newspaper, the Caymanian Compass, on Immigration.

The time is going to come in this country when the people are going to understand and recognise how they are being treated. I fear that day. We are so fortunate; we all live in a country where the people are passive and, unfortunately, very few are concerned about what laws are passed in their country because they trust their politicians that much. I beg us not to become complacent with that trust; I beg us.

Mr. Speaker, as I have said many times, the Constitution is the most sacred document in this country: of that there is absolutely no doubt. I would like to turn briefly to some of the provisions in the draft Constitution that the UDP seem to have decided they are no longer supporting.

The first one I would like to turn to is the one on term limits. The UDP Government enjoys talking about the wishes of the people, as does the PPM. As a matter of fact, that is the basis upon which they are proposing these changes: their 180 degree turnabout.

I recognise that there are people who can, through their own charisma, control the electorate, and that should not be taken away from the people. If the people in any country decide they want that individual to run their country and that individual is doing a good job then, certainly.

When we proposed the term limits, it was not necessarily what I believed in; it was what the people said they wanted. I firmly believe that any person who has served eight years in that environment needs some rest.

[Laughter]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: You, yourself, Mr. Speaker, have served two or three years as Deputy Leader of Government Business. It is not a walk in the park. It is not a walk in the park! No one should be fooled about that. Anyone who has served eight years in that position should gracefully go home. If they can maintain the confidence of their people for eight years in a Chief Minister's position, they have served their country well.

The people in this country were concerned that we could have someone in that position for more than eight years who could become dogmatic. Not all people may have agreed with that person's going there, but that person is so charismatic that he or she can, at all times and on many occasions, find something to offer the Members to get back into that position. It might not necessarily be that this person is running the country that well. It could mean anything, and people were concerned with the possibility that we could get someone entrenched in the position of Chief Minister in this country, and the person could stay there forever because they might be able to manipulate the system. That was the big concern that I heard.

Another concern I heard was the possibility of corruption; they were afraid of it. I am not pointing my finger at anybody, but we are talking about our current Constitution, which has been in place for about 30 years. Therefore, when we look at this one, we have to make provisions for another 30 years. Hopefully, we should not have to be changing constitutions every five years, or every year, as we do with other laws. There are mitigating circumstances with other laws; for example, changing times, and omissions, which will require laws to be changed.

In the case of our Constitution, we must ensure that our country reaches consensus—not only between the two or three parties. The country must respect and understand how they are expected to be governed for another 30 years—or as long as the people want. Hopefully, there will only be a need for minor amendments. Alternatively, it may be that in the next five years, the people get up and want further modernisation of their Constitution, as we heard the Minister of Health say about self-determination. It is not for me to say; that is for them to say.

In the interests of trying to ensure that the people of this country do not fear the corruption of a leader, or a dictatorship—in the sense that it could be dictatorship in this country—I believe it is necessary that we put term limits on the position of Chief Minister. I am not adverse to three terms. If we move to three, then we move to three; however, I do believe there should be term limits.

Section 32. The Cabinet. Another area that the UDP have some concerns with is 32(6): “If occasion arises for making an appointment of any Minister between a dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the polling in the next following general election, a person who was an elected member of the Legislative Assembly immediately before the dissolution may be appointed as a Minister as if he were still a member of the Legislative Assembly.”

I believe the provisions exist so that the Governor has the power to appoint Ministers, because the Chief Minister is still around between dissolution and the general election. Therefore, the Governor has advice available to him, and new Ministers are appointed based on that advice anyway. I do not have a problem with seeing a provision put in there that says, "the Governor".

Section 35. Performance of functions of Ministers in certain events.

"(1) If the Chief Minister is unable, due to illness or his absence from the Cayman Islands, to perform the functions of his office, the Governor may authorise some other Minister to perform those functions."

Further on, the UDP has proposed a Deputy Chief Minister of Government and a Deputy Leader of the Opposition. In that regard, this certainly will be amended. I have always supported the Deputy Chief Minister and I believe that in any democratic country, parliament, or government, you cannot have the Chief Minister alone. There is a need for a Deputy, and in Parliament, there is a need for a Deputy Leader of the Opposition as well. Therefore, the advent of a Deputy in both places would certainly require that 35(1) be amended. It would be the Deputy acting in the absence of the Chief Minister, which would have to be an automatic provision. I do not have any problem with that.

Section 39. Submission of questions to Cabinet. I do not have a problem, either, with section 39. If England is concerned about the Overseas Territories, and in particular, the Cayman Islands, having more autonomy, why is it that the Governor has to control the agenda of Cabinet? Why is it that the Elected Members of Cabinet, the people's representatives, cannot put on the agenda, providing that the time for Cabinet will allow all the business of Cabinet? It is only fair that authority be given to the Elected Cabinet.

I would go on to Official Members of Cabinet too, under this new Constitution—and I will get to that later—to where the Government is proposing that we maintain the additional two Members to the Legislative Assembly. I agree that the Governor should not have the right to refuse an Elected Member putting a question, or any matter, on the agenda of Cabinet.

Contrary to what some of the UDP may believe, I am not conceding hope they will change back to where they were originally—as they did.

I recognise the need for the modernisation of our Constitution. In the last general election, when the Chamber of Commerce had their forums, I participated in the one in East End. I was one of those two candidates who supported the modernisation of the Constitution. I would venture to say that all of the Honourable Members in this House supported modernisation, including your good self, Mr. Speaker. I have no facts on that, but I would venture to say it, because we saw the need for it. I support anything that modernises our Constitution and makes us more accountable and more responsible for our own affairs.

Section 41: Secretary to Cabinet. Mr. Speaker, I also understand the reason why the UDP is proposing, under 41(4), that the Secretary to the Cabinet be responsible for the implementation, coordination and development of government policy. I always thought policy was to be proposed and developed by the Ministers, and then coordinated and implemented. I think the words need to be changed around. "Coordination" needs to be before "implementation".

Mr. Speaker, I do not have a problem with that. The only other areas in contention need to be debated. If we agreed with the other areas, why should we want to debate them? I am not prepared to go through this whole thing word for word, so I am only going to address the areas where I have a problem that the UDP have done a 180° turn in this draft Constitution.

Section 48. Speaker and Deputy Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, if there was anything in this draft Constitution that had a mandate from the people, it is the point of Speaker and Deputy Speaker—that the Speaker comes from outside the Legislative Assembly. I hear the argument that we have a small community and do not have that many members in our community who have the expertise and the qualifications—that is, who have been Members in here. I wish to object to that. I wish to differ. There are many people in our community who are former Members, and without doubt, in the future, there will be other former Members of the Legislative Assembly, through the process of attrition. Mr. Speaker, you, your good self, will no longer be running in the upcoming general election, so that adds one more to that qualified group that is out there.

Mr. Speaker, I speak of what I know. I have no way of reading your good mind, to say that you may change your mind, Sir, or what the future may hold. All I am trying to show is that there are qualified people in this community. None of us can make that transition today, from sitting here and debating in this Honourable House, and going to that Chair and immediately being the best Speaker the Commonwealth has ever seen. There is a learning curve for us all to get there. There is a learning curve for those who have been out of politics or who otherwise come into this Honourable Chamber and become Presiding Officer. I never supported a Deputy coming from the outside.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: You all put it up, though.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I have always supported a Deputy from the inside. In short order, when we need the Presiding Officer to be in the Chair, we do not need to have someone on a part-time basis; we need someone from the inside the legislature.

I support the Speaker coming from the outside.

Section 58. Voting. If I may turn to the provisions for voting, I would like to tie this in with the provisions for Speaker and Deputy Speaker. Section 58 says:

1) "Save as otherwise provided in this Constitution, all questions proposed for decision in the Legislative Assembly shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present and voting.

2) The Speaker shall not vote and any other member presiding shall have an original but no casting vote."

Mr. Speaker, if I may proffer my position on that, this is making provisions for a Speaker coming from outside the Legislative Assembly, and if he comes from the outside, he should not be able to vote in here. It is impossible. You cannot have a Speaker coming from the outside and voting on the provisions of a Bill. You cannot.

Now: "... and any other Member presiding shall have an original but no casting vote." This draft Constitution makes provisions for the Deputy Speaker coming from inside the Legislative Assembly, and in the absence of the Deputy Speaker, any other Member. That is exactly what that is saying. If any Member takes the Chair, he has just left a position of original vote; therefore, he should take it to the Chair. If that Member was on the Floor, he or she was going to vote on that Motion anyway, so why is it that that Member cannot have his or her original vote in the Chair?

Right now, we have a Deputy Speaker in the person of the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay. He is one quarter of the representation from the district of West Bay, and if we extrapolate on that basis, we say one quarter of West Bay. That Member sits in the Chair in your absence, Mr. Speaker, and he loses an original vote for the people of West Bay on issues. My concern is: Why is it that that vote cannot be extended to the Chair? We have to ensure that Members maintain their original vote.

Mr. Speaker, this would be good time, if you are so mindful, to adjourn.

The Speaker: Thank you very much.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we have now reached the hour of 6 pm. May I call on the Leader of Government Business for a motion for the adjournment?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Thursday, 20 November 2003 at 10 am. We are proposing to work until 6 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until Thursday 20 November 2003 at 10 am.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 6 pm the House stood adjourned until Thursday, 20 November 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
20 NOVEMBER 2003
10.40 AM
Third Sitting

The Speaker: I invite the Elected Member for East End to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.43 am

The Speaker: Proceedings are now resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies for Late Start of Sitting

The Speaker: Firstly, I would like to extend sincere apologies to the House for the late start this morning. This was occasioned by the tremendous traffic on the Eastern district roads, which delayed some Members, who were not able to get here on time. However, as I said in recent circulars, we would like to begin as near as possible to the hour of starting, which is 10 am.

I would also like all Members present in the precincts of the Parliament to try to come in to form a quorum whenever they are present, and called upon by the Sergeant to do so. For certain Members to sit and wait until the Government Members arrive, is really not in the best interests of proper parliamentary procedures. Therefore, I would ask them to try to cooperate with the Sergeant-at-Arms, so that we can start as soon as possible, especially when they are sitting in the Common Room waiting on other Members to arrive before they are prepared to come in to form a quorum.

Apologies

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable Third Official Member and also from the Honourable Minister of Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS
OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have had no notice of statements from any Honourable Members of Cabinet.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 5/03

Debate on the Report of the Proposed New Draft of the Constitution

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: I call on the Elected Member for East End for the continuation of his debate. I would like to remind the Honourable Member that he has one hour and three minutes remaining in his speech.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me be the first to apologise for my late arrival this morning, because of the traffic, as you mentioned earlier.

Mr. Speaker, when we adjourned yesterday, I was at a point in my contribution to the debate on the draft Constitution where I had reached that area concerning the Speaker and the Deputy Speaker, and the provisions for voting under section 58. I would like to move on from there and on to the section concerning the Attorney General.

Section 92. Attorney General. Prior to the debacle with Mr. Ballantyne, the People's Progressive Movement advocated that the Attorney General be appointed on advice from the Chief Minister. From the talks in London in December 2002, and the subsequent draft Constitution which we are debating now, it appears that England does not feel comfortable with a Chief Minister appointing the Attorney General. They want that responsibility and that authority to be left with them.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it is simple. I want to make it abundantly clear that it is not about the individuals who occupy the position; rather, it is about the position. Whatever I may say here is not intended to be an aspersion against the current or former holders of this office. It is simply that if I were going to have a legal advisor, there is no way I would get a lawyer who has been appointed by someone else. That is simple. That is the basis for our argument. If the Attorney General is the principal legal advisor to Government, then it should be someone that the Chief Minister has appointed. We cannot, in my humble submission, afford to have England appointing an Attorney General.

That same Attorney General needs to be a legal advisor to the Governor. There is absolutely nothing wrong for the Governor to have his own legal advice, but not in the person of the Attorney General. England must appoint a legal advisor to the Governor. The Attorney General is the legal advisor to the Government of the Cayman Islands. That is how it must be. In so doing, it must be made clear that the Attorney General is appointed by the Governor, but on the advice of the Chief Minister—not 'consultation'. Mr. Speaker, consultation is a far cry from advice. I am sure that no one in this country would kick against paying for a legal advisor to the Governor other than the Attorney General.

My good friend, the Second Elected Member for George Town, in his submission, reminded us of full ministerial government. A full ministerial system cannot be said to be a full ministerial system if the Governor is appointing a Minister. I agree that that is not a full ministerial system. For us to have a full ministerial system, the Attorney General must be appointed by the Chief Minister as a Minister to be in Cabinet. We argued this, and we continue to hold that position; I trust that England takes note of it.

Now, there is some deafening silence from the Government Bench as to what their position is on this particular subject. The Leader of Government Business, in his presentation, did not make any mention of the position of Attorney General. However, the United Democratic Party did agree with us that it should be on advice, and not consultation. England changed our recommendation to "consultation". That is another example of England holding on and having control over the people that they want to have control over—in particular, the Attorney General and other appointments.

Mr. Speaker, the UDP is proposing a Deputy Leader of the Opposition and a Deputy Chief Minister. We, on this side, have no problem with that. As I said, in any democracy, in any country, you need to have a Deputy Leader of the Opposition and a Deputy Chief Minister. We have no problems with that; we are in concert with them.

Section 62. Assent to Bills. Mr. Speaker, we also understand that under "Assent to Bills", the Government have some problems with section 62 (2) (c), where it says that the Governor shall not assent to the Bill if he finds it, acting in his own discretion, "to be inconsistent with any obligation of...Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom towards any other state or any international organization".

Although I share their concerns and fears about what this can do to this country, Mr. Speaker, the intent of the United Kingdom in this regard is obvious. In recent times, the United Kingdom had problems with us, in asking us to adhere to international obligations to implement certain laws, particularly the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) and Financial Action Task Force (FATF).

We all know how that has gone. However, Mr. Speaker, we know, as I have said before, that this country is England's. Until we make that bold step and are in a position where we can write our own Constitution, they are going to control it. There is no "perhaps". Mr. Speaker, in the interests of the people of this country, I would also like to see it deleted, in that over the years, we the people—and those before us—have always acted in the best interests of the people of this country, or I would like to think so.

However, it has always been approved (and it will always be approved) by England, until we make that bold step—yes, the Attorney General too. However, the Attorney General may be that much easier to negotiate with England, and to get, than this one. I would like to see it removed, or reworded, because I recall recently—sometime last year—when the Minister for the Overseas Territories came here. We talked about England forcing upon us conditions good for England, but that does not necessarily mean they are good for us. Also, the distance between us seems to be the factor that creates these differences. Many legislators in England have no knowledge of what our livelihood is, other than a few tidbits that they read. It is our responsibility as legislators to ensure that we make the necessary representation to England on behalf of the people in this country.

Another issue that we need to address with England on this Constitution is the one of referendums. Mr. Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town read the letter of 2 December 2002, to Mr. Kurt Tibbetts, MLA, from the Hon. McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP, which has been tabled. The footnote was: “Please note we agreed on the position that referendums be included in the modernized constitution.”

Now, I know that will probably be twisted somehow to say it is included, and we have provisions for referendums in the draft Constitution.

Although the provisions that have been put in the draft Constitution are an improvement on what is in the current Constitution, they are not provisions for a people-initiated referendum. This still requires that a law be made on a question declared by resolution in this Honourable House and adopted by a majority of the Elected Members of the Assembly. That prevents Speakers from rejecting a motion for a referendum law.

Mr. Speaker in any new, modern, civilized democracy, the people must have some kind of checks and balances on their elected representatives. Many of us in this country do not agree—in particular members of the UDP—that the people should become involved after they have elected them as their representatives. They believe—

The Speaker: I would ask the Honourable Member if that is his opinion, or does he have facts to back that up?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, the facts that I have are from merely from hearing certain Members say so. We cannot expect that once we are elected, we have been given a mandate to do as we please. We campaign on a platform of issues, be it as a party or as individuals, as a group or team—whatever we want to call it. Once the people of this country vote for us based on that platform, they expect that platform to be fulfilled. In instances when that platform is not being fulfilled, or when the Members of this Honourable House (and in particular, the Executive) have moved away, and are in the process of doing something that does not conform to the wishes of a particular percentage of the population, they should have the right to poll the entire country, to see if the country wishes for that particular thing to be done on their behalf.

The only reason one would be afraid of a referendum—which is the check and balance on an executive of a country—is if they are not doing what they are supposed to do. Then it also serves the purpose of letting the Executive know how their stewardship is, whether the people agree with what they are doing or not. Why are we afraid of it? England cannot say that they do not support referendum law. They have had referendums; they had one recently, about whether or not they should join the ECU (the Euro currency)—whether they should have the one currency for England and Europe. Therefore, it is not new to England. I do not understand why they did not include it in the draft Constitution. We called again for it to be included.

The Speaker: For clarity, I wonder if the Honourable Member could explain whether he is talking about a people-initiated referendum, or provision for a referendum law in the Constitution.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: It is for a provision for a people-initiated referendum to be included in the Constitution. When I say we called for it, Mr. Speaker, I am referring to the Opposition, and the People’s Progressive Movement. I cannot speak for the Members of the United Democratic Party, because, as I said before, many people in this country do not believe in it. They see a few individuals who believe in it and they are afraid that perhaps they will become the recipient of a referendum in short order. There is no need to worry about that. This draft Constitution is not going to come in place, if it does, until after the next General Election. Therefore, those of us who are afraid of it now need not fear for this tenure; they may have to worry about it in a different arena, but not this one.

Mr. Speaker, many have said that people-initiated referendums will be used for frivolous matters; I do not think so. There is no evidence to indicate that. Last year, over 7000 people signed a petition for a referendum on the Constitutional Commissioners’ Report. If there was ever reason for holding a referendum, that was it.

Mr. Speaker, in most countries, the rule of thumb is 10, 15, or 20 per cent of the population calling for a referendum. In our case, in 2002, we had 33 per cent of the electors in this country calling for a referendum—one third of the electors in this country. That was without civil servants, and they carry a big number in this country.

Mr. Speaker, the civil service received 507 responses, over a four-day period, when they did their poll on the issue. Their question was: “Prior to the submission of the Constitutional Commissioners’ Report to Her Majesty’s Government, should there be a referendum held to consider the proposed major changes to the Constitution?” There was a response of 81.9 per cent who said, “Yes”.

We may say that the response from 507 civil servants is a small number, compared with the two to three thousand people of which the civil service is made up. However, Mr. Speaker, we also have to look at the fact that it was a four-day period and we can fairly extrapolate from that.

I do not know how to do that. Someone else has that expertise. I do not know how to calculate and extrapolate based on the population of the civil service or the country. Twelve per cent said they did not know. 6.1 per cent said, “No”. Seventy-seven per cent were registered voters in the country.

Mr. Speaker, if that could be ignored by the United Democratic Party Government of the day, as it has been, it does not show a lot of respect for the wishes of the people. We understand why the Government is not supporting people-initiated referendums. We will one day give account for our stewardship.

I recall, prior to my being elected to this Honourable House, listening to many Members saying those same words on the radio: 'We will be held accountable for our stewardship'. Now those Members sit on the other side. Perhaps I am only reminding them of what they told others. We all will—all of us. The people of this country may not get involved between elections, but they do, in force, at elections. I am comforted by that.

Section 70. Electoral constituencies. I would like to move on to "Electoral constituencies and franchise". I recognise that I will have another shot at this one when the Boundary Commissioners' Report is debated. However, the Minister of Health raised certain things that are within that Report, and since it is already a public document, I shall refer to it for the purposes of debating this draft Constitution.

The United Democratic Party is proposing an additional Member for George Town, an additional Member for West Bay, and single-member constituencies for George Town. The rest of the country would stay as it is. Mr. Speaker, I cannot think that anyone would expect me to support such rubbish—because it is nothing but absolute rubbish. It questions the leadership of this country; it questions the type of leadership this country is currently operating under.

Since time began, with our current Constitution and before that, the people of East End and North Side have operated under the single-member constituency—the concept of "one man, one vote". I have always been against the two-tier system: East End, one vote; North Side, one vote; Cayman Brac, two; Bodden Town three; George Town four; and West Bay, four.

We talk about the leadership of our people and ensuring that democracy prevails. I would like to know where democracy is prevailing with this kind of proposal. What is the basis for using George Town as a guinea pig for single-member constituencies?

Mr. Speaker, the only reason I have heard from the United Democratic Party Government is on page 14 of the Boundary Commissioners' Report, when they say (and this is the same section the Minister of Health read): "It appeared to cause unease to some who attended the public meetings of the Commission in Cayman Brac and West Bay, while George Town, North Side and East End were supportive of the single member constituencies; Bodden Town audience had mixed views on the issue."

Is that the reason the United Democratic Party is giving for having single-member constituencies in George Town?

Mr. Speaker, what kind of leadership is this? I notice that there are some people saying, "They are the same people who wanted it". What about those same people, the representatives for Bodden Town, who spoke so passionately about the values of single-member constituencies in previous times?

I cannot believe that the Government, knowing the expense that this whole process has cost, would now want five Members in George Town. That means that we would have to go back to divide George Town into five. If we intend to go to full single-member constituencies in 2008, then we are going to divide up the rest of the country, and West Bay will be five constituencies. You can give to the people, but you cannot take away from them.

I want to know where the parity is in that, with West Bay, in 2003, having 2922 electors and then being divided into four. That is what is now being proposed. That will be close to 700 members, which falls in line with the rest of the country, up to Bodden Town. We always knew that North Side and East End would be an exception, and Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as well.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if we are going to put five in West Bay, there will be no parity amongst these three districts. Bodden Town is the fastest-growing one, so it is always going to be out of whack.

George Town, as of 2003, has 4490 electors: there again we are going to throw the whole system out of whack. All of the Boundary Commissioners' work will have been for nought.

There is no such thing as phasing in this thing. Either we go to single-member constituencies or we do not. Putting another seat, or representative, in West Bay, is akin, to me, to asking for an additional one in East End.

It is not fair to the people of this country. Why? I understand the UDP making some little electioneering tactic by saying, "Go and do it in George Town". However, is it an additional electioneering tactic to say, "Let us put an additional one in West Bay?" Why is it that we are putting another Member in West Bay? It is uncalled for. Split West Bay up into four, and then we will have accountability by our representatives. Split George Town up into the six, as the Boundary Commissioners said. Split Bodden Town up; split Cayman Brac up.

For too long, the people in East End and North Side have felt less than anybody else in the country, when it comes to their vote, and the power of their vote. The time has come to give them equality.

As I said yesterday, we have to stop thinking about ourselves; let the chips fall where they may. Let us see, who, in this Honourable House, is prepared to be a statesman. Let us see. All we ever think about is re-election. Let us do something for our people. Let us simply do one thing, so that if it costs us our political career, we can stand back and say it was well done. What is the basis for going outside this again? I cannot believe that the basis is that the people in George Town supported it at the Commissioners' meetings. That is no basis. Any democratic society requires some kind of parity. The time has come for us to show what we are made of. It is my humble submission that this is an attempt to manipulate the whole process and all the people of this country.

It is wrong. It started wrong and it is going to end wrong. I trust that England knows, and this country knows, that there will not be consensus on this one. Even if I am the lone wolf, out there in the desert, I will not support anything other than single-member constituencies. I will not, and if it costs me my political career, so be it. In this country I have grown up; in this country I will die and this country, I will defend.

Mr. Speaker, according to the way I feel, I am going to be around here a long time. I might not be in here but I am going to be a thorn for someone for a long time. If anyone does not believe that I will be around, tell them that they had better stick around, because I come from a family with a long, long life-span. I am depending on that, too. The same way the UDP is depending on putting one more seat in West Bay to maintain their power, I am depending on my long life, from my ancestors and God Almighty.

This is wrong. There is no excuse, and no reason that can be proffered from the other side is going to make it anything other than wrong. I know the Leader of Government Business; everybody knows him. He has had an extensive political career. If this were really as good as they say it is, we know that he would be on every soap box in this country talking about how good it was. We know that. Why is it that he, as the leader of that party—as the Leader of the Executive of this country—does not come out and explain to the people the reason, the real reason, for putting an additional seat in West Bay and using George Town as a guinea pig? There can be no reason for such rubbish. No, I submit that it is for the UDP to maintain their power.

Mr. Speaker, this is not how it is done. At the evening of our political lives, we will look back and understand that our stewardship was not as we hoped—or they will, because it is an absolute, deliberate manipulation of the process. I have no apologies to make—none. We must stop—the UDP must stop—fooling the people of this country and manipulating the process simply for their own benefits. Our country depends upon this.

We hear the excuse that if we split the country up into single-member constituencies, then Bodden Town, George Town, and West Bay will not be as we knew them. That is not true. The electoral boundaries have been considered as they are now, and are manifest in the proposals of the Commissioners: West Bay North, West Bay Central, West Bay East, West Bay South, George Town North, George Town Central, George Town West, George Town South, George Town East, and Prospect. When was the last time we heard of Prospect being called George Town? As I recall, it is a part of George Town and has always been, but we have always called it Prospect. No one has ever said, "You are going to George Town, Prospect".

Now when we say we are going to George Town, it means Central George Town. When have we ever heard that Savannah was called Bodden Town, Savannah? It has always been Savannah and Newlands, Bodden Town West, Bodden Town East, North Side, East End, Cayman Brac West, Cayman Brac East and Little Cayman. Tell me, have we lost the identity of the districts? We have not. It is a simple process of being more accountable to the people.

I submit that we cannot afford to have our people dragged along at our whim and fancy. We cannot do that. It is highly unfair to the people of this country. Mr. Speaker, I believe that one of the main reasons for the Government's not doing an educational programme on single-member constituencies, and the like, is that they were afraid of what the result would be. I submit that more people in this country—many more—understand what single-member constituencies will bring for them, and what the benefits are, than we think. The people in East End know exactly who their representative is; the people in North Side know exactly who theirs is. I know that you—your good self—have always advocated single-member constituencies.

It is the right thing to do, but using George Town as a guinea pig is the wrong thing to do. If we wanted to phase it in, I could understand the UDP proposing something like three constituencies in George Town with two representatives per constituency, and two in West Bay, with two representatives per constituency. Bodden Town would be left with three. Cayman Brac would be left with two and, in 2004, we could split it off again. There would be five constituencies in George Town, and one in West Bay, with five members. Bodden Town and Cayman Brac would remain as they are.

It is absolutely ridiculous. It is a farce, and if anyone wants to get up and say otherwise, that is going to be their business. It is a farce. I am reminded by the Second Elected Member for George Town of the word "gerrymandering." It must be the Jerry in Germany we are talking about. It is not the one in America, who created this 'gerrymandering'. It is worse. It must be called 'Russia-mandering' or 'Communism-mandering', although it may be closer to dictatorship.

The Speaker: I would remind the Honourable Member that he has five minutes remaining.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Other Members will come after me, from this side, and I am sure that we will hear more debate from the other side. In closing, I call on England to ensure that this Constitution is not put into place without the proper democratic processes in it.

Mr. Speaker, I call on England to ensure that the people of this country have a say on the final Constitution by having a referendum. We cannot say that there is not enough time, because the Government are proposing single-member constituencies in George Town. They may tell us that they want another four years, and that is an excuse, but I do not want to hear that there is not enough time, when we can do the biggest, most populated district in this country with single-member constituencies.

I call upon this country to get involved, to come out and tell the representatives what they want in order that it is communicated to England. It is our fault also. We have not gone out there with enough representation and taken the views of the people sufficiently. I call on the United Democratic Party Government, and the Opposition, to go out and poll the people of this country. First of all, we need to let those who do not understand single-member constituencies, learn the benefits thereof, in order that they can make an informed decision.

If they are saying that the people do not want it, it cannot be that they all understand it and do not want it. That is my position. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

READING BY HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: Honourable Members, before calling on the next speaker, I would like to apologise for not mentioning apologies for late arrival when I did the apologies for absence. I had earlier received apologies from the Honourable Leader of Government Business; I notice that he is here now, but he did send apologies earlier. I also received apologies from the Honourable Minister of Health Services, Agriculture, Aviation and Works and from the Honourable Minister of Planning, Communication, District Administration and Information Technology.

This is perhaps a suitable time for us to take a 15-minute break. I would like us to be back here by 12 noon.

Proceedings suspended at 11.47 am

Proceedings are resumed at 12.06 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

These are indeed new times in the Cayman Islands. Although the country believes, now, that it is legitimate and good for us as a people to have constitutional modernisation, we, in here, still seem to have a number of issues on which we do not fully agree. However, I would like to first set the stage by reminding the country, and the Opposition, that there are many important issues within this constitutional debate on which we all agree.

The Members who have spoken thus far, together with the Opposition Bench, need to take cognisance of the fact that, in this life and in this world, there will be differing views and differing perspectives. They also have to understand that, ultimately, there will probably not be a situation where everyone is going to agree on every single thing, unanimously.

I would like to touch on two issues briefly—firstly, the whole issue of a mandate for constitutional change. The Second Elected Member for George Town always jumps up and takes great pride in thumping his chest and claiming that there is no mandate for constitutional change. At the same time, his colleague, the Elected Member for East End, has told this House before that he ran in the district of East End and told the people that constitutional modernisation was needed, and that the 1992 draft Constitution was needed; however, we do not have a mandate, and none of us has run on the basis of constitutional change.

Mr. Speaker, if you look in the manifesto of the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government and the Minister of Education, you will see that they ran on the basis that there must be a Chief Minister. They ran on the basis that there should be fundamental change and, in fact, if you look at the bullet summary in their manifesto, you will see that it looks very similar to the 1992 proposed Constitution. They were elected. We have gone through constitutional debate after constitutional debate—two in a row now.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, is it a point of order?

Mr. Alden M McLaughlin, Jr.: A clarification, Mr. Speaker. I would like the Honourable Member to lay a copy of the manifesto upon the Table, because he put that forward as a statement of fact. I am not disputing what he said, but we would like to see the manifesto.

The Speaker: We had ruled earlier that any quotations made from any document would be laid upon the Table, so if the Honourable Second Elected Member for West Bay has a copy, or could provide it, in due course, during the sitting, I would certainly appreciate that.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you Mr. Speaker. I think the Second Elected Member for George Town knows me well enough to know that when I state something, I know what I am talking about—unlike the behaviour they employ, such as wondering and rumours and, “I wonder this; I wonder that”. Mr. Speaker, it will be provided to the House.

It is quite unfortunate that this process was started when the current Leader of the Opposition was the Leader of Government Business, and yet now we hear his colleague, the Second Elected Member for George Town, get up to say that the process was erroneous, and was bad from the time it was started. It was very unfortunate that it was started under the former Governor. I wonder why that is the case, and yet his colleague, the Leader of the Opposition, was the Leader of Government Business when this whole process was started?

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Would you state your point of order, please?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr: The Honourable Second Elected Member for West Bay is misleading this House. It is quite clear, and always has been very clear, that the Elected Members of Government had nothing to do with the process of constitutional modernisation. It is something that is mandated by the United Kingdom's Government, and the Governor has been firmly in charge of the process from the beginning.

Therefore, to infer that the Leader of the Opposition had something to do with the process that he said I described as erroneous—which I did not—is misleading in the extreme.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town, my knowledge of the process leads me to conclude also that both sides of the House were somewhat involved with the process, to a certain extent. We do not want to split hairs here as to who might have been more involved than the other, or whether, indeed, the draft Constitution of the Cayman Islands is a Caymanian Constitution or a UK Constitution. I think we want to get away from playing semantics with this whole thing. I do take the point made by the Second Elected Member for George Town, but I would not rule that it is a legitimate point of order. I would invite the Second Elected Member for West Bay to continue.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

They talk about leadership. The Opposition can talk, and talk, but when we get up and legitimately show the country their sins, they jump up on points of order. They are like little children; they cannot take it.

We start the process. I hear nothing from these esteemed leaders in the community about the need for a referendum to complete the process. I hear nothing from this political leadership to indicate how they see this moving forward. Nonetheless, they proffer themselves as legitimate leadership.

When you are the Opposition, and you have all that time on your hands simply to criticise, to attempt to stall what the Government are doing and to be regressive, rather than try to cooperate and move the country forward in the way that all of us know is in the best interests of the country, it is quite easy to get up on those soap boxes and offer all the theories that there are. However, I do not know where the theory was when the practice should have been there.

We start off a constitutional modernisation process, and this country cannot be given the way forward. Nevertheless, after the process starts, we get all the answers, because they are now the Opposition. Mr. Speaker, I clearly remember the meeting with all the current non-ministers—as part of the Commissioners' process. In that meeting, the issue of referendums came up. In fact, it was mentioned by the Second Elected Member for George Town, at that time, well into the process. He, too, will remember, and acknowledge, that the Commissioners—and particularly the Chairman of the Commissioners, Mr. Benson Ebanks—proffered the view that an issue as complex as a Constitution (especially the type we have, which goes into great detail to spell out all of the rights, duties and obligations of citizens), was an issue that was incapable of being settled by way of a referendum. A referendum should simply be a 'yes' or 'no' answer.

When we look at this draft Constitution, there will be a myriad of points to which the public will say "Yes" or "No". Some may say, "Yes, we want a Chief Minister, two additional seats, and two additional Members". Some may say, "No, we do not want single-member constituencies". Some may say, "Yes, we agree with the method by which the Attorney General is going to be selected, under this proposed new draft Constitution".

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, in regard to this issue of people-initiated referendums, this is a debate. The Opposition Members need to offer such strong arguments that we, on this side, will have to review our position and ask, is this particular point so credible, so impressive, that we should take it on board, in terms of how we feel. I would like to hear someone from the Opposition get up and explain to us how it is that people-initiated referendums are going to work, in practice. Can they tell us what percentage is going to be required, for the referendum to pass, and to be binding? Can they tell us whether the referendum initiated by the people will be binding on the Government? Can they tell us what will qualify an item to be brought to the attention—and how it will be brought to the attention—of the Government, so that a referendum would be called?

The other thing about this whole issue that needs to be clearly brought out to the public is that, at the end of the day, people-initiated referendums still require the Government to issue, cause and enact the procedures to hold the referendum. The Government have to provide polling officers, go through the register of electors, and go through the process as though it were an election. It is the same thing as an election, except you are going into the polls to say, "Yes" or "No" to a specific question. Therefore, what mechanisms are they proposing? How is this people-initiated referendum going to work? Do you need five people to say they want a people-initiated referendum? Do you need the five to be from all the districts? Do you need 10 people to come from all the districts? They get up and they argue these points, but they do not bring the solutions.

I return to another fundamental question that we had in London, December 2002, during the constitutional talks. Although I cannot include the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, his four elected colleagues could not tell us whether it was going to be a binding resolution on the Government, or an issue that the Government should take note of, based on the results

In looking back at the detailed notes that we took from those meetings, we see that when asked the fundamental question by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office as to what it was going to be called and whether it would be binding or absolute, the Opposition provided no tangible response.

We see once again how the Opposition—as was admitted by the Elected Member for East End, who said he is going to be the lone wolf crying in the desert over certain points—come forward with all their scare tactics, talking about corruption, and the leader being so charismatic that it would be, effectively, a dictatorship if the Chief Minister were allowed to serve more than two terms. What is it that these people, the Opposition, are telling Caymanians about themselves? Think carefully about this. The Elected Member for East End has the audacity to get up in this Legislative Assembly and say, on the one hand, that we need consensus on the Constitution. I wonder if he understands what the word "consensus" means. On the other hand, he says that if we had a charismatic leader, this person would be so charismatic, so God-like, that the people of this country would simply reelect the party that he is in year after year. His party members are going to be so scared of this person that they are going to sit back and say he will be the Chief Minister, whilst the country is run poorly. Is he saying that Caymanians do not have enough good sense, enough decency, to elect the Government they want?

Democracy is under threat in the Cayman Islands, and it is under threat in the name of the People's Progressive Movement. They refuse to leave the choice to the people. The people of this country have enough decency and good sense to elect a government that they think is doing a good job. If they decide that for ten terms, they want the same Chief Minister, let the people have it. Let the people have the choice.

The Speaker: Order! Order!

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: The people of this country should have the choice as to who their party is and who is going to lead the party. Let us think about this in practice. For two terms, a particular party wins the majority and one member, who is the acknowledged party leader, is the Leader of Government Business. That person continues to do a good job, and Caymanians go back to the polls on the third term and elect him again. However, that person is supposed to now pretend, "I am not really the party leader; I am not the one people have hope or belief in. Let me choose another Minister; let me prop him up and be Chief Minister. I am going to sit in the Cabinet and he is going to be the Chief Minister. I am not going to be the one who still has the influence and respect that is required to be the leader". That is what is going to happen to this person. This person is going to be in the Cabinet, but he is not going to be the leader.

Now that sounds like another smart proposal by the People's Progressive Movement. What progressive thinking we have on the Opposition Bench—just as progressive as it was when, in 2001, the process was started. Their leader could not get out and say, "Before anything else happens, we are going to have a referendum on this issue, because referendums are important". He is the same leader who played a critical role in the passage of a Private Member's Motion calling for a referendum law. He is the same leader who, for one year, forgot—

Point of Order

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the Member for West Bay is misleading the House when he intimates that I had a critical role in the process, when the Governor announced the constitutional modernisation. The fact of the matter is that the then Governor, Peter James Smith, simply advised me of the process, and did not ask me for any advice at any time.

I also hear him saying that I had something to do with the appointment of the members of the Commission; I was only advised by the Governor when he had decided on the three members, and who they were. I had nothing to do with who they were.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay, would you respond to that point of order?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, at the end of the day, they always jump when the truth hits them, because truth hurts. All I said was that it was at that time that the current Leader of the Opposition should have shone, and informed the public how he saw, from a political perspective, the process moving forward, in terms of this whole issue of a referendum. I did not say that he was in cahoots with the Governor as to who the Commissioners were going to be.

Mr. Speaker, let me clarify this, since it is clearly not reaching the other side. I said that the Leader of the Opposition, who was Leader of Government Business at the time, should have come to the public and said, "We are going through a constitutional modernisation process, but as long as I am Leader of this country, it is not going to be final until you, the public, have your say, and until you vote on it in a referendum".

The Speaker: I believe that the clarification given by the Second Elected Member for West Bay clears up the point raised by the Leader of the Opposition. If it has not, perhaps the Leader of the Opposition would wish to comment further. I think he is satisfied with that, so, Second Elected Member for West Bay, would you continue, please?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One thing that I have learnt, having been a father for approximately two years and five months now, is that children have toys for certain seasons. They like something one day, and not the next. You see, the flavour of the month, with the Opposition, is 'referendum'. The Opposition remember June last year, when they could go out and misled the public, the way they did, into believing that the Constitution was going to be rammed down their throats—that the Government were basically going to get on the phone, call up the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, and we were going to have a Constitution. Some people were concerned about that, and they held a public demonstration in the streets. That is good politics if you are the Opposition. Therefore, we get this call and cry again about a referendum.

Let me say categorically, here and now, that we are not proposing that the Constitution be brought in by force. The people are going to the polls. If the people do not like our constitutional stance, if they do not like our performance and our position on the Constitution, we will not be elected in November 2004. The Opposition, then, will have the majority, and they will be able to dictate what is in the Constitution.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that sounds like a good democratic process to me. The people are going to have their choice; the people are going to the polls next November, God willing, and they are going to say, "United Democratic Party, we like your position on the Constitution. We like the leadership you have shown the country; we are going to vote you in again". That will be our mandate, to which the Second Elected Member for George Town keeps referring, to change the Constitution.

That sounds to me, Mr. Speaker, as though we have a situation in which the public will have their say. Ultimately, that is who we answer to.

Mr. Speaker, the Constitutional Commissioners have said in their Report that in the districts of East End, North Side and George Town, there seemed to have been support for single-member constituencies. They then went on to say that in the district of—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, did you say the Constitutional Commissioners? It is the Electoral Boundary Commissioners. Thank you.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: There was the support, but there was uneasiness in the district of West Bay, which I represent. I can attest to that. When we held our meetings, we actually had a straw poll, and the people of West Bay overwhelmingly said, "No, no, no—no single-member constituencies". They did not want it.

Then we went to Cayman Brac, and, if I remember correctly, 69 people were at the meeting, and it was 69 to nothing—"No" to single-member constituencies. We have observed the same type of response that the Commissioners received, in their moving around the district.

I do not think this is a coincidence, yet the Opposition are saying that if that is our basis for suggesting that George Town be the first district to implement single-member constituencies, they are not going to support it. Mr. Speaker, it would seem to me as though we are listening to the people, yet the Opposition are saying, "No, do not listen to the people in this case—not in this format. Listen to the people the way we tell you to listen to them".

It is dictatorship from the Back Bench. It scares me to think what would happen to this country if those five individuals were able to form any part of a government, come November 2004. Democracy is under threat; people's rights are under threat by the People's Progressive Movement. They refuse to acknowledge the people's wishes if they do not jive with what they see as their political agenda.

This is shameless behaviour, and they have the audacity to get up here and talk passionately as though they are the only ones who have support out there. I might remind my good friend, the Second Elected Member for George Town, when he talks about coming in on coattails, that the Leader of the Opposition had the biggest coattail in the November 2000 election; he had more than 80 per cent of the popular vote in the district of George Town. Therefore, I might remind him that, boy, he had a big coattail to bob and weave behind as he got elected. He seems always to believe, somehow, that the Leader of Government Business has this big coattail that brought in three other Members.

He is talking about percentages. I think that Member knows full well how the district of West Bay's votes were split. We had 22 strong, legitimate candidates. I say no more; the Member knows. My good friend, the Second Elected Member for George Town, knows.

I might also tell the Member that I saw a nice constituency with my name written on it. I saw one with the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay written on it, and I saw one with the name of the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay written on it. The Member knows that wherever the Leader of Government Business runs in West Bay, he is going to win. Now, there is a fifth constituency, and I have a name for that too. I can tell that Member that if he wants to talk about dividing West Bay, when that time comes, I will feel very comfortable; however, I am not going against the wishes of my people. I am here to represent the people of the district of West Bay. I am here to represent their views and I am also here to represent the views of other districts.

If the Commissioners could go through their meetings and say that they found support in the district of George Town for single-member constituencies, what support are the Opposition going to put forward if there is no support for “one man, one vote” in George Town? That is now the question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Yes, they said that the job was done professionally, in terms of the Commissioners moving around. I do not know. It sounds as though we have some games being played. I am not going to accuse anyone, but it sounds like the “—mandering” has struck again, Mr. Speaker.

I would like to make a number of points on this whole issue of single-member constituencies and then I will be finished. I felt compelled to respond to some of the notions that were put forward by the Elected Member for East End when it comes to single-member constituencies. He seems to take issue with the size of West Bay, versus the size of George Town, and talks about how West Bay should not get a fifth seat. He also then started talking about paritive constituencies. I think you can search every country that has “one man, one vote”, and it is fair to say that constituencies in the more populated areas will inevitably be larger than the less densely populated areas. People congregate around certain towns, and certain cities. Usually this is based on economic opportunities, and it is logical that the constituencies in the capital would be larger than the constituency in East End, because East End is further out. It is a less densely populated district.

One of the things that I think the public of this country will want, once we get to full “one man, one vote”, is for their district boundaries to be honoured. People are going to want what is now West Bay to remain West Bay, and what is now George Town to remain George Town. They are going to want those established boundaries. You take the United States for example: Florida is Florida. It is split up into its single member constituencies for voting into the lower house. They do not take in a piece of Georgia, to try to make the constituencies in Florida equal with the constituencies in Georgia. District boundaries must be honoured.

The Elected Member for East End also asked, “Since when was Prospect, George Town?” I would like to proffer to him that if you are going to go along that thought process, there are many other areas of this country that have been distinct, and spoken of distinctively, over the years. There is Breakers, Pedro, Savannah, Newlands, Gun Bay, Red Bay, South Sound, but they are all in some district. It is the same thing in West Bay. We have North West Point, Boat-swain Bay, Birch Tree Hill, Mount Pleasant—those are distinct areas.

At the end of the day, I know the point that the Member was making. Whatever the district boundaries are, those are what people are going to expect as their district boundaries. I think that is proper. I think that is the right thing to do. The current districts should remain, and you should divide along the lines of the number of seats that you need within that geographical area that is currently the voting district of George Town, of Bodden Town, etcetera.

I would like to quote the Elected Member for East End from the Hansard of 22 February, 2002: “The Governor spoke on constitutional review. I would like, publicly, to congratulate the Commissioners. I look forward to their Report. I think that most of the country is looking forward to a modernised Constitution.”

The arguments from the Opposition are the arguments that suit them today, and suit their political agenda, in my humble submission. You see, they talk about there not being a mandate on the one hand, yet another Member could get up in this Honourable House and say that he thinks most of the country is looking forward to a modernised Constitution. If most of the country is looking forward to a modernised Constitution, why are we not giving them one?

They know everything about everything. There are four provisions here, which are logical provisions, very defensible provisions—and in my humble submission, provisions that they have not been able, through their debate, to prove any less worthy than their views. Because of those four provisions that the United Democratic Party (UDP) have, and our feelings on those provisions, they feel as though the country should not have this Constitution, because they are right about those issues. They know what is best for the country; we do not know what is best.

Those who are truly interested in constitutional debates and issues, those who sit down and listen to the arguments on both sides of these issues (on which we have differences), would, in the majority, agree with the position of the UDP Government.

Section 92. Attorney General. The last issue I would like to touch on is the whole issue of the Attorney General. I agree we should have as much autonomy as we can—not simply in selecting the Attorney General. The Elected Member for East End said that the provisions in the current draft Constitution call for the appointment of the Attorney General to be made after consultation with the Chief Minister, which is a far cry from their position that it should be made on the 'advice' of the Chief Minister.

It is debatable how far apart those two provisions are. However, I think we can all agree that, if we get a Constitution in this country that calls for the appointment of the Attorney General to be made on consultation with the Chief Minister, then that indeed is a far cry above what we currently have, and therefore it is modernising—it is moving forward in the right direction: giving us more autonomy.

However, Mr. Speaker, the United Kingdom Government are going to have a position on some of these points and I do not believe that we need to destroy the whole process because of small differences in certain areas. I fully believe that what is there now is a major concession. The Opposition may say—and I certainly would like the position to be—that we would go and tell the Governor who the Attorney General should be. At the end of the day, however, if we are at least going to get to the stage where he has to consult with us constitutionally, that is significant progress for the people of the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, when we look at the constitutional position that has been put forward by the Government, it is the right one. Unless we hear evidence to the contrary from the Opposition, it is one that is much more beneficial to the people of this country than the Opposition's view. All the other issues have been touched upon, and I am cognisant of your circulars; therefore, I am not going to touch on all the other areas, which have been adequately dealt with by other Members on the Government Bench. In summary, I believe that there is a justifiable position for the view of the United Democratic Party regarding the implementation of single-member constituencies and the concept of "one man, one vote". We believe that there is support in the district of George Town for it, and we believe, Mr. Speaker, that we should move forward with this in a phased process.

I draw the Members' attention to the fact that Bermuda took more than 30 years to implement theirs fully. That was a long, phased implementation. We believe that we should be able to sit down in Committee and go through this Constitution, section by section, and be able to do what is necessary to move forward.

The Speaker: I would simply remind the Honourable Member that he had undertaken to table a paper to which he had referred. I think it was the Manifesto of the Members for Bodden Town.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: It is extremely important for all of Government and Opposition Members here to remember that we, on this side, have listened to the people, the Commissioners, and the representatives.

At the end of the day, we have always maintained that there was distinct disquiet in our district, and there was significant resistance to the concept of "one man, one vote". Where that is the case, as in Cayman Brac, Little Cayman, and Bodden Town, we do need to take a little more time to inform the public and to give a working example, which they can then say has worked. However, we cannot use East End and North Side as an example, because the people of West Bay will simply say that is how it has always been.

They want to see it change, to see it move from multi-member to single-member and see it work. That, Mr. Speaker, is the way to go. I hear the Opposition saying, "Let us do it in West Bay". The Commissioners said in their Report that there was uneasiness in the district of West Bay. We have found the same thing, through the representation we have received from our people, at our public meetings, through personal contact and in our MLA office. Accordingly, we are not going to listen to the Opposition and do it in West Bay. We refuse to listen to the Opposition; we are not going to give the people of West Bay something with which they are not currently comfortable.

That is what good elected representatives do. We have a representative form of government, and we are supposed to represent the views of our people, not simply play politics to suit our own agenda. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I propose to take the luncheon break at this time, and would ask you to return at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.53 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.38 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to make my contribution to this Motion. I was hoping that this would not have taken the amount of time that it has. I was under the impression that what came back in the draft Constitution, and was tabled here was, to a certain degree, the consensus that was shared. This was alluded to by a number of speakers at the summit, as certain agreements have been supported here and also at Lancaster House, in London.

Interestingly enough, Mr. Speaker, when the mover of the Motion, introduced, on Monday, a number of other areas that the Government would not be supporting, I was surprised. However, it is a democratic place, and this is their right. The Minister of Health gave justifications for these decisions, but I sometimes wonder how the outside world looks at us when we take certain positions, and then change them.

Earlier speakers asked how we could bring in the 7000 'People for Referendum' signatures, which were gathered in a matter of days, but this is the very issue on which this whole debate on the draft Constitution hinges.

It is my opinion that we have not heard any huge cry of concern out there since the draft Constitution came back in February. Most of the concerns they had had been addressed, and were included in the draft Constitution. As was said earlier, by the last speaker, there are four basic provisions on which the two sides here do not agree. Here lies the crux of the whole matter. I say, you say, they say, we say: this can easily be resolved with a simple 'yes' or 'no' regarding those four provisions that we cannot seem to finalise. This can be put to the public, by referendum or another process, and it will be beyond the shadow of a doubt what the public wants to do in these specific areas. I have no problem doing that, and I would urge this be considered. As a matter of my own conviction, I cannot support this Motion's going on to a Committee stage, and being changed, without the public having their final say.

In the meetings that I have attended in the last year and a half, the understanding that I have gathered from the majority of the audiences was that they supported what was there, especially "one man, one vote".

If we are concerned, and are so sure that the people do not want this, let us find out once and for all; this is their right. We, as their representatives, can make decisions in here, broadly speaking, but when it comes to decisions on matters involved in the Constitution, we should have no fear of going back to the public, and seeing what they want done—what they want enshrined in their Constitution, which, historically, looks as though it could last for three decades.

The debate on the Report of the Cayman Islands Boundary Commission 2003 will come later, and this is another area that emanates from the single-member constituencies. It is my opinion that Her Majesty's Government will not support doing this piecemeal, giving one district the ability to have "one man, one vote" whilst the other districts maintain their status quo.

Another question that I had, regarding the negotiations, is why 10 to 12 people originally went to London, and the last time, it was only the Leader of Government Business who was negotiating in this area?

One of the areas into which we have not gone into detail—and a number of people have raised their concerns about—is human rights. I know the Leader of Government Business suggested this could be dealt with through the Human Rights Act.

A number of people, not necessarily from within the party, or our groups, have expressed grave concern about this going ahead, without the people—the judiciary and the prosecutors—having the training, as well as the far-reaching effect that this is going to have on the functions of the judiciary, and anything else that may happen in these Islands. I think we need to be sure of what we are getting into. I know that it is suggested that this will not come into force until 2006, but I would urge that we deal with this as promptly as possible, ensuring that whatever we need to deal with it is put into place, and that, whoever needs to be trained and brought up to date, this be done.

Most of the other areas on which I would talk have already been dealt with, but my feeling—and the feedback from the public—is that they want their final say on what goes into this. For once and for all, it is a very simple matter to put it behind us, so that we do not wonder what they want, but know, through a referendum.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a contribution to the matter that is before the House at this time. It is my understanding that, in the Westminster—or Whitehall—model, under which we operate, it was never the expectation that, on issues such as this, there would be complete agreement between Government and Opposition. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, the system is predicated upon a difference. That is why, in order to be the Government, the entity passing itself off as the Government must be in command, or control, of a majority at all times. Accordingly, while there is debate and difference, the Government must be able to exert its will, not only by commanding, but by producing its majority. That is especially the case when it comes to issues as fundamental as the Constitution.

Consequently, for anyone to purport that there should be total and complete agreement between Government and Opposition, on a matter like the Constitution, I think denotes a lack of understanding of the system under which we operate.

The Constitution, or the 'machinery', as it sometimes euphemistically referred to—is the instrument that denotes how the country, or the jurisdiction, is going to be run. Primarily, it is supposed to provide a basic understanding of how the Government functions, and guarantee that those functions are carried out, within certain moral lines: that is, freedom from corruption, freedom from unnecessary interference, a certain amount of transparency—but with the ability of the Government to perform effectively and authoritatively. That is basically the instrument about which we are talking.

We have arrived, in these Islands, at a position where we have had several attempts, over the years, to arrive at a fitting Constitution. From my recollection and experience; from my reading, delving and research, there has never been, on one of those occasions, any complete unanimity on every point.

There have been, from day one, fundamental differences. There have always been differences, and perhaps there will always be. I want to take it from the point of view of these differences: what the differences are, why they exist and why it is necessary and healthy to keep these differences, in debate, in context, in focus and in existence.

I first want to talk about the most fundamental of the differences, in my mind: this call for “one man, one vote”—for single-member constituencies. We have had, at least to a certain extent, two single-member constituencies in the Cayman Islands for many years, although under our system, we took it for granted, and no one saw fit to emphasise it. Now the United Kingdom wishes to have them on a broader perspective—applied throughout the whole jurisdiction.

People will have their fundamental differences. In truth, at the beginning, I thought it was a good idea. More recently, however, in researching, discoursing and discussing it, I have come to change my mind that it would be the most effective system—which is not to say that I am not supporting it. If my party goes along with it, then clearly, if I wish to stay in the party, I have to go along with it. I think that, like everything else, it has its positives and its negatives.

My concern is that, in a jurisdiction of this nature, to bring it in suddenly, when people have become accustomed to voting personalities, it would be rather difficult. We (meaning everyone involved, including the Constitutional Commissioners), did not do a good enough job of educating the people as to the merits and demerits of this. Therein lies the crux of this matter.

What we have proposed, by the Constitutional Commissioners, in this new Constitution, is a bit much to expect the electorate to digest and dissolve, in my mind—bringing in all of these sweeping changes at one time, rather suddenly. I remain to be convinced, judging by the numbers who attended the meetings, that there was a vast enough majority of the population for the understanding to have trickled down to all levels.

I will tell you something, Mr. Speaker, and I am not talking out of the top of my head: I went back to the archives and studied this whole business of constitutional development in the Cayman Islands, from the time we got the first Constitution in 1959. Traditionally, Caymanian people have never turned out in significant numbers. It seems they are not interested in constitutional developments. Why are they not interested in constitutional developments, Mr. Speaker? I put it to you that when people elect their representatives, they do not expect those representatives to come back to them, at the end of every day, to ask them what they should do the next day.

The election is made on the basis of the ability of the representatives to perform certain functions, and make certain decisions, without having to ask the constituents every time they need to blink their eye—which is not to say that the representatives should not keep in contact with their constituents. However, it certainly would be an inconvenience if, every time a decision was to be made, someone had to go back to his constituency, hold a public meeting, take a poll, find out the majority and then come back. As bad as our hours are here now, they would be worse in that occasion.

Therefore, there is, Mr. Speaker, a presupposed faith in ability on the part of the representatives, and their constituents, for them (the representatives) to carry out certain fundamental decisions, and then report back to the constituents as to why these decisions were taken. That is how I understand the Westminster, or Whitehall, system works. This is a good point to interject on the whole question of referendums.

Once, we went to the United Kingdom, and were discussing with them, and they told us that the instrument of a referendum is, strictly speaking, not a Westminster or Whitehall instrument. The Americans like that. This is not to say that we do not support referendums, but on certain occasions. What we consider to be the ultimate test is at the end of a person's tenure in Parliament, in the General Elections: whether someone is returned, or not returned. That is the ultimate test. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the question of referendums, while important, is not of seminal importance in this regard.

I have always supported referendums but I would not support for ‘referendum’ to be entrenched and implanted in the Constitution as an instrument. We should have a referendum law. There are questions we have to answer for ourselves, such as: Are the results of the referendum going to be binding? Who can call a referendum? Will it be called by a certain proportion of the population? When the referendum is called, who is going to pay for it? That is a significant element to consider. Referendums, as I understand it, are as expensive as elections. If you have a referendum, and there are two sides, the Government will naturally be defending their position—but what about the other people? Who will fund, subscribe, support and give them monies to carry on their campaign? Before we enter this whole question of referendum, we have to come to these kinds of decisions.

As to what we put in the Constitution, and what we accept as a final draft, I believe that that is the prerogative and responsibility of the Government to decide. If the people do not like that, then in November of 2004, they will promptly turn the Government out of office. Then it will be clear and unequivocal. The successors can then listen and apply what the people want, and they can get the kind of Constitution they wish.

I am not misleading anyone, because the British position is clear. I do not like it, but it is clear. They are saying, “We are giving you a document; these are the parameters of the document. We want you to debate this course and decide what you will accept." Mr. Speaker, we have a certain time limit in which to do that. If it is not done, it can be interpreted to mean that (a) we are not interested; (b) we are not capable; or (c) we are downright contemptuous, in which case, they will then impose upon us what they see fit. Let us not delude and detract ourselves.

Within those parameters, they will offer a certain amount of leeway. They will say, "You can have this as against that", or whatever the case may be—and I will come to some of those things.

However, Mr. Speaker, I believe that it is of critical importance that we get this debate over, and get this document decided by majority, because they are going to look at that. They will probably read the Hansard verbatim to see who said what. Above all, they are going to look at how the votes went on the critical issues and areas, and make their decision as to what the final document is going to say. They already know what the areas of major significance are, and the areas of little or no importance. Indeed, I would like to say that their minds are probably already made up. It is crystal clear that they are not going to give us a Constitution close to what Bermuda had. We have to take what we get. If not, we know what we have to do—and since we do not want to do that, we had better get on with our business.

I want to make a fundamental point. I believe it is the responsibility of the Government, and equally the responsibility of the Opposition, to be sensible, fair and reasonable; and to educate, inform, and illuminate the understanding of the general populace, as to what we are doing. I do not believe that this is the time to be irresponsible. I do not believe that this is the time to castigate people, to pass innuendos, to throw slurs or to make accusations, because it suits all of us to approach this conscientiously and assiduously. That is the responsibility.

I want to say something else. Many things can be said about me: I like to read and inform and educate myself. Edmund Burke, who was himself a Member of Parliament—probably a quintessential Member of Parliament—during his time, said: "Your representative owes you, not his industry only, but his judgment; and he betrays, instead of serving you, if he sacrifices it to your opinion."

Let me paraphrase that, Mr. Speaker. Edmund Burke is saying, "I do not only owe you my efforts in working, but I also owe you my advice—my guidance".

Therefore, it is incumbent upon me to tell you what I think should be in the Constitution, and to inform you how it is going to work, and how it will affect you. It could not work any other way. I could not go to 3000 constituents, with each of them saying a different thing. I could not even go to 300, because in Bodden Town, 300 did not come out. I do not know if 300 came out at anytime, anywhere. Many of them say, "That is why we put you there: you make the decision, and come and tell us. Then if we do not like it, we will know what to do."

We have to go and educate the people, give them the pros and cons and say, "Here is the direction we took, and this is why we took it." I do not want to fall into any guilt trip laid on by the Opposition. They are saying that the United Democratic Party (UDP) have a plan. Of course, the UDP have a plan: it would not be a UDP, if we did not have a plan. Our plan is for the best system for the vast majority. If the Opposition do not have that, it is not my responsibility.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, this is the position in which we find ourselves. No one, from either side, can lay blame on the other, because each is equally responsible to educate and inform the people. However, that is not what the Opposition were doing. I listened carefully to them; I see their pattern of behaviour. They are playing to the gallery: that is what we call it in football. When they get the ball, because they can dribble well, they dribble instead of passing it to the team-mate so that the team can score a goal. They are playing to the gallery. They have a couple of people saying, "Yeah! Yeah! That is what we need to hear. Tell us!" Instead of saying, "Ladies and gentlemen, here it is black and white—clear cut; if we go this way, this is going to be the result", they are castigating the Government. They are personalising.

I want to read a little bit from a book entitled, Winner Takes All: The Westminster Experience in the Caribbean, by a Trinidadian Sociologist called Selwyn Douglas Ryan. This is what Selwyn Douglas Ryan says about this kind of system.

On page 14, he is talking about the Westminster Party System, saying, specifically, that it has not served Jamaica as well as was initially hoped, because, he says: "Jamaican political parties, as are other parties in the Caribbean, are hardly ever the same when in power as they are in opposition. There seems to be a cycle, an inexorable law which regulates their behaviour. When in opposition, they comprehensively stigmatise and demonise those in power. They tell their supporters, and those whom they seek to convert that their rivals are venal, corrupt, and in the pay or control of the highest bidder, whether foreign or local. They also promise to bring affluence, efficiency, order, and transparency to the business of governance when they achieve office and to restore pride and dignity to a demoralised, pauperised and alienated people or sections thereof. When in opposition, parties also invariably seek to outbid their rivals. Some do it consciously and cynically, while others do it without making clear how difficult it is to effect the policy changes which they espouse."

Does that sound familiar, Mr. Speaker? Does it sound familiar? It sounds eerily, eerily, familiar. No responsibility—I know the system well. It is characteristic of what is going on. Instead of facing up to the challenges and the difficulty of the task, too much time is spent on castigating, stigmatising and demoralising, in the hope of getting enough people to form a majority.

What the Opposition are trying to do is to usher in a 'false dawn', because they know that it is not as easily done as that. It is of critical importance that we get this right, because this Constitution, this document, this machinery, is going to be the guarantor of how smoothly and effectively our system works. I believe that it is important, if the people wish to have "one man, one vote", to introduce it on a timely basis. I believe it is logical; I believe it is fair and I believe it is reasonable.

After all, we like to talk about Bermuda—that is what they did in Bermuda. Bermuda was at one stage for centuries, and when they wanted to broaden the enfranchisement to "one man, one vote"—single-member constituencies—they did it selectively, at first. I believe it is time that we let these things grow gradually upon our people, because remember, now—

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Member state his point of order?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am sure it is not intentional, but I do believe the Honourable Minister is misleading this House. He has stated as a fact that Bermuda brought in the single-member constituencies—"one man, one vote"—selectively. If he is making that as a statement or fact, I would ask him to back it up, because my reading of the most recent Report of the Constituency Boundaries Commission for Bermuda tells me that they moved to double-member constituencies, rather than a selective single-member constituency exercise as their transitional process—and then, from double-member constituencies, to single-member constituencies.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Member. Honourable Minister would you just expand on what you meant by—

Hon. Roy Bodden: That is exactly what I meant by "selectively". For years, Bermuda had double-member constituencies, and they kept these until they went to single-member constituencies in some areas. Therefore, I do not see how I am factually incorrect. It is a matter of semantics. That is why I said they did it selectively.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. I am satisfied that it was not an intentional attempt to mislead the House. Would you continue please?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I believe that it will be in our best interests; it will be a way of guaranteeing the elimination of any misunderstanding. I too, listen to what the people are saying. The Opposition do not have any monopoly on the opinions of the people. I know that many of them—and particularly the elderly, who vote conscientiously, and who are interested in their enfranchisement—have expressed dissatisfaction with the system. Mr. Speaker, I believe that it was not properly explained to them. I am not blaming anyone. The Constitutional Commissioners came: they listened to those who had opinions to offer—whether verbally or in writing or over e-mail—but there was no organised attempt. There was no one here doing what Eric Williams did in Trinidad with the University of Woodford Square, where for years, the people were prepared as to their responsibilities—as to the pros and cons of the system. We simply thrust it upon them every time—every one of us—at our convenience.

No attempt was made, save during political campaign time, to inform, or enlighten, as to the pros or cons. Now we give them this decision of exigency to make, as to whether it should be single-member constituencies or not. Some of the people are saying, "We don't understand." Some people have told me, "If I can't vote for the person I want to vote for, I am not going to vote." That is another matter we have to consider.

It is wise to introduce it, in this jurisdiction, in a timely manner. That happens to be the position of the UDP. However, I am surprised at the Opposition, because I thought they were some of the foremost proponents of the single-member constituency. I am also surprised at them now, with their disagreements, because Hansard shows that they got up in this House, after they returned from the UK, and said they had gotten everything they wanted, in the Constitution—so much so that I asked my people, "So you gave away the store? What did we get?" I am hearing them—the Opposition, the minority—saying that they got everything they wanted. 'What did you bring back for me?'

Now they are accusing the United Democratic Party (UDP) of running with the cake, when they had no mandate. They were just included out of decorum and good conscience.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am going to pretend that I do not hear that cross-talk.

I say we are going about it the correct way, and that the people understand that they have representatives, that they have a government. They understand that the Government are going to take decisions, and that they are going to be informed as to how those decisions affect them—many of them already know. I saw, in one of the Caymanian newspapers today, that the next election date is already set. The people know that, and they know that that is when they are going to have their referendum. I heard some people out there making some remarks about people 'having a date with their destiny'.

If there is anything wrong with me, it is the fact that I have always been a realist. My father, tragically, passed away when I was 17 years old. I remember that day as vividly as I am standing before you now. No one over there has to remind me about any day of reckoning. I faced plenty days of reckoning to get here, and to build up the miles. I am looking forward to a good fight; there is nothing I love better, trust me. Trust me. If that is said with the intention of scaring me, perhaps the energies would be better spent on some other strategy. They can say many things about Roy Bodden, but no one can say he is a 'flash in the pan'. When I am ready to fight, I am going to put my record on the line. Many people wish that I would just fade away. I know there is a day of reckoning, but I wonder how many other people are ready.

Mr. Speaker, the Opposition Members are wasting their energies, because they are concentrating on McKeeva. They can kill the messenger, but they cannot kill the message. They had better pray that it is not like the seven-headed hydra in the Greek legends: for every one cut off, seven more spring up.

I simply want to say (and I want it clearly noted) that from the outset, we put out a guide as to what we were going to do in 2000. Number 12, on what we call our 'Manifesto'—if I could be so ambitious—said that we would support a review of the Cayman Islands Constitution, along the lines as stated by His Excellency, the Governor, in April, on the Talk Today Show on Radio Cayman, to modernise legislation and formalise the positions of Ministers, whereby they are held responsible and answerable for the management of the subjects they are assigned, including the appointment of one of the Ministers as a Chief Minister, if this is found, through consultation with the public, to be their wishes.

Nobody can say that I did not support the constitutional review, leading up to the full ministerial system. I was elected, and so was my colleague, so we had our mandate to do this, to bring in this kind of Constitution, from the Bodden Town people. I do not know how many on the Opposition were as clear as this, but this is my legitimacy to do what I am doing. I am sure that the audiences to whom we spoke understood what they meant, so I have a clear mandate to go the route that I am going.

Now as for Bill of Rights: I have been one of the foremost advocates of a Bill of Rights. I am disappointed that the Bill of Rights is some way behind the Constitution. I understand the quandary that our Courts would face, if we had a Bill of Rights enshrined in the Constitution. I know what that would mean, Mr. Speaker. I know the significance of that. I only wish to state that I hope, when we get the Constitution, that the Bill of Rights is not too far removed—that it does not follow too far behind the Constitution. A Bill of Rights is an instrument that protects the citizens from the State, and this is particularly important, when we get sophisticated and far-reaching constitutions. I see a lot of areas now in which I sometimes wish we had a greater knowledge of our Bill of Rights—a more fundamental understanding—because I believe that many advantages are taken.

I would hope that, one of these days, we could get not only a Bill of Rights, but also a Human Rights Commission, with investigative powers. I believe that can only strengthen the democracy, so that even the greatest decisions can be challenged. As I walk the streets, I come across many Caymanians—some with limited enfranchisement—who do not have access to having wrongs righted, and who are being taken advantage of almost daily, because there is no organised system for them to access their rights. Therefore, I see this as being of extreme importance, as crucial to the functioning of our representative democracy. I believe that it is our responsibility, as representatives of the people, to ensure that that happens.

I want to comment on this: I do not like alarmists. I do not like those persons who go around threatening to summon masses, to bring mass demonstrations, and to put people in the street. In any democracy, dissent is healthy, but I do not think our system necessitates that kind of show. Above all, I want to say that I am not frightened by that; in the end, that might not mean as much as people think it might mean.

From time to time—and all too frequently, I might add—I hear members of the Opposition talking about 7,000 signatures on the petition. I suspect they are referring to a wheelbarrow full of petitions that were delivered, one day, up at the Government Administration Building, which had to do with some satellite issue to the one we are debating now. Mr. Speaker, that is not the first large petition in these Islands, and I am sure it will not be the last. What would be interesting is to see if there are still 7,000 people as committed as the Opposition claimed those people were—at this time. In spite of what we may think, and in spite of the grandiosity we may attach to ourselves, the fundamental interest of many of our people is day to day existence: the ability to hold a decent job, earn a decent wage and get along with their lives. I do not believe that we have a bunch of professional protesters in this country, and people's interests vary. I would suspect that if the Government wanted to, they could bring out a couple thousand people also. The last thing we want, in the Cayman Islands, is that kind of politics.

We do not want our differences to degenerate into that kind of political show of force, where the Government have their numbers, and the Opposition have their numbers, and they call them out. Our streets are not built for that. We can settle our differences in more 'civilised' ways, for want of a better word.

I want to say to the Opposition that I do not know who they are trying to intimidate, or if they are trying to intimidate anyone, but I certainly am not intimidated by that. To add a little humour to it, Mr.

Speaker, I remember one occasion when the Honourable Leader of Government Business and I were involved in a little passive resistance, when Mr. Peter Lloyd was the Governor here, and we gave him a petition with one thousand signatures. When we presented it, he said, "Listen, and understand this, gentlemen: a march? Ten thousand people march in Hyde Park every day." Then he said, "How do I know that the two of you did not stay up all night writing down these names that you have here on this petition?"

It is a democratic right of people to protest, and to protest in those ways, if they think it effective and possible. However, for the Opposition to suggest that, every time they do not like something, they can run around the corner and bring out 7,000 signatures is doing a disservice to this whole notion of responsible Opposition. I have to say, again, that it is a disservice, more than it is something constructive.

I suspect that we would have to deal with The Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003. As to how we disperse the suggested numbers, school is still out. However, I am sure that when that time comes, there will be healthy debate, and probably some disagreement. Again, we must approach it responsibly.

Mr. Speaker, the Opposition, as I understand it under the Westminster system, is a government-in-waiting. The Opposition should demonstrate that they are responsible, worthy and capable of becoming the Government.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Roy Bodden: No, no. I have already told you: if that happened, it would be a one-party state, and this is not Africa. Mr. Speaker, what is necessary is that they do their job: educating, informing and elevating the understanding of the people they want to follow them.

An Honourable Member: The Government will have to do the same.

Hon. Roy Bodden: The Government will have to do the same. Mr. Speaker, it is not a matter of how many meetings you have held. Since they have me at the stage now where I have to answer their cross-talk, holding meetings might not necessarily be the most effective way of informing and educating the people. Who comes out to public meetings, Mr. Speaker? Who comes out? According to what I heard about the Opposition, sometimes only seven people come out. If you call 100 meetings—

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are you rising on a point of order, Second Elected Member for George Town?

Mr. Alden M McLaughlin, Jr.: On a point of order, Sir. The Honourable Minister is misleading the House, and this time I believe he is doing it deliberately. He has stated as a fact that, from what he hears, the Opposition have meetings where seven people come out. The Honourable Minister knows full well that at the last meeting we had, there were roughly 1000 persons present. Unless he can say that what he has just said is a matter of his opinion, then he must withdraw his remark, because it is misleading in the extreme.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, do you wish to comment on that?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, could the Honourable Member explain why he had to cancel a meeting in one district?

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I believe that we are all getting a little weary. I do not really want to carry on the House simply by raising points of order for every matter that is said. Could the Minister of Education substantiate his statement that, at some meetings, there were as few as seven people attending?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I most respectfully heed what you say, Sir. However, in the future—so that I do not get challenged on this—I am going to ensure that the people I have available at my service hold a referendum when next they have a meeting, so I will know the numbers.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education, please continue.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I was about to move off the whole business of the Boundary Commission—

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order!

Hon. Roy Bodden: . . . of what the decision might be regarding the boundaries.

I want to turn now to the position of Speaker. I have long held the view that the Speaker of the House should be someone from inside the House, because I believe there is a certain advantage in that. Certainly, when we started, we got a Speaker from outside the House. In most Whitehall models, the Speaker is from inside. The Speaker does not necessarily have to be biased towards the party from which he or she came. Indeed, when they are appointed, they all but cut their party affiliations. I am not so sure that the best interests of the House can be served by recruiting someone from outside, whether that person is electable or not.

I also believe that we should have some say in the appointment of the Attorney General. I believe that the Attorney General should be the advisor to the Government.

Mr. Speaker, if the experience of the recent past is an indication—and I am not making any suggestions or casting any aspersions on any holder, present, past or future, of the post—we should ensure that the Attorney General's loyalties are in no way compromised or divided. That being the case, if the Leader of Government Business has—or some Government Members have—not only a consultative voice, but a decisive voice in his appointment, there would be a certain extrication of responsibility on the part of the Governor, when this person is appointed and runs afoul of the system, which would be quite unlike what transpired in the recent past. However, I understand, too, that there are certain advantages that Whitehall is going to be reluctant to give up, which is not to say that we should not ask for them.

We should try to refrain from, if not completely avoid, emotive or suggestive language when we are making these contributions and submissions. These matters with which we are attempting to come to grips are sobering matters, indeed. We need to approach the system with the greatest of maturity and sincerity.

With all due respect to the non-governmental organisations (NGOs), they have their place, but we have to exercise logic and good common sense. I was talking to some people who purport to be representatives of these organisations. Were we to follow them, it would mean getting into a protracted debate, and I do not know when finality would come to this whole business of the Constitution. Clearly, we have a deadline: this must be finished by April.

I think that credence has to be given to the dissenting and differing views. However, if you read Mr. Rammell's letter, which I have heard quoted here often, it is clear that there is not an unlimited time. We need to take decisions of exigency. Perhaps it is characteristic of the Opposition to dither, and they have a plan that calls for dithering, but I do not believe that the Government is of that mind, because we have a country to run. Therefore, I am happy that the UDP have a clear direction in which to go.

I am even happier to know that there is no total agreement. If there were total agreement on everything, I would be suspicious. We are the Government. It should come to a vote. If the Opposition have their way, and they get everything they want, then it would mean that the Government have capitulated, and have no opinion.

The Position Paper of the UDP is correct in this instance. I stand by it and I support it. Here is something else: I hear the members of the Opposition talk about transparency, but I wonder when their Position Paper was made public?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin: Instantly.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Instantly? I have not seen it to this day.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin: You were given a copy.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Given a copy? I suppose the Honourable Member is going to say that he gave me a copy.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Roy Bodden: I have not received it. Mr. Speaker, trust me: I have not.

The Speaker: Order, order. Stop the cross-talk. Just a minute, please. Would you all please sit for a minute? It does not help very much when we have a lot of cross-talk. The person speaking is hardly able to hear what he is saying, himself. It is not only a show of bad manners, but it is not fair to the listening public. Therefore, may I ask you again, let us maintain proper decorum in the House, and desist from the cross-talk. I have given a lot of latitude on this, but it is not only for the Speaker. It is for the people of these Islands that we try to provide the best representation we can. Gentlemen, and Ladies, Honourable Members, let us please desist from this cross-talk. Continue, Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am happy that you made that point, because while the Opposition were speaking, I never attempted to interrupt them, or try to belittle them, let alone challenge the veracity of what they were saying. I repeat, Mr. Speaker: I have concerns about when they made their Position Paper public. I saw my colleague, the Minister of Planning, with a copy, and my other colleague, the Minister of Health, told me that he has a copy. I never asked them where they got it from. I did not see any. I am led to believe that it was distributed in the UK.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker—

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin: Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I hope this is a genuine point of order now, because I have the floor to make a point.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: It is a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order, Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: He is misleading the House, Mr. Speaker. I cannot say when the Honourable Minister got it himself, but I can say this: At the meeting that we held on 29 November, we made copies of our Position Paper available. Indeed, they had to be photocopied by the Government. We had to adjourn the meeting while the Honourable Leader of Government Business made arrangements to have copies made. That is a fact.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, would you comment on that? It seems that the People's Progressive Movement (PPM) did, in fact, distribute their Position Paper, but I think the point, as I understood it, that you made, was that you were not in receipt of that Position Paper.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Sir. Mr. Speaker, may I request, through you, that a copy be laid upon the Table now, because I still do not have my own copy.

The Speaker: If I may, I will comment, please. I know that the decision taken in the UK was based on the Position Papers from both the United Democratic Party (UDP) and the PPM, so this was also a publicly documented paper. Please, one at a time. I am in receipt of copies of the Position Papers from both sides, and I will be very pleased to make these available to the House, if this will help us to continue our proceedings here today in an orderly manner. Continue, Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I drive this point home because I read of the PPM, when they think they have a captive audience, saying they are going to bring back transparency and morality, and this thing, and the next thing. Mr. Speaker, I did not know it was lost. When I have a document, and I want it passed to Members of the House, I lay it upon the Table—a document as important as that. The point that I was making, you, in your wisdom, succinctly brought out. I did not receive a copy, and I would have thought it proper not to give it to the Leader, but rather to lay it upon the Table. That is what the UDP do. I would have gotten my copy myself; I would not have had to wait until the Leader delivered a copy to me. That is what I am talking about.

What I am doing is making two points. I am saying that I did not receive the document and that there is doubletalk about bringing back transparency. It looks to me as though the physician needs to heal himself. I would still like a copy, and I will have to try to get one.

These are indeed serious times, and I reiterate that it is not the time for one-upmanship. It is time to be responsible, because we cannot expect to abrogate our responsibility, and think that things are going to work in the best interests of everyone.

I believe I have addressed the most important positions. All that is left to say is that I do not support a referendum to decide what kind of Constitution we should have at this point. It has no place, bearing, significance, finality or importance in this matter—we know. The Government of which I am part would be most ill-advised if they cajoled any one individual, or entity, into doing that. They would deserve to be flogged. Mr. Speaker, we know what we have to do. The Government have to move on. It is a democracy. The Opposition put their positions forward. They should be allowed to debate, to exercise their democratic right, to disagree and to record those disagreements, but the Government are the Government. They should exercise their majority, and their mandate, to move on with the business. I thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? This is my last call. Does any other Member wish to speak?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I certainly am going to speak. It might sound like a joke; however, I am asking (for a valid reason), whether it is possible to take the afternoon break, because of the timing. I have to do something for just a few minutes.

The Speaker: If it is the wish of the Members that we take the afternoon break now, I will be happy to comply with that.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Some of our Members have to go. We have been having trouble getting quorums from the Opposition side and we have to continue. Members have to leave. Mr. Speaker, two Members have to leave. If you do not want a quorum—

The Speaker: It seems, then, that the consensus is that we continue. I was intending to go until 4.15 anyway, and then take a break at that point. Hence, it is really a matter of 20 minutes. If there is consensus that we should continue until 4.15, then I would ask the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to continue for 20 minutes, if possible.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me start with the Motion itself. After looking through it and speaking to my colleagues about it on several occasions, I am still not absolutely clear what the last resolution is seeking. If it is as obvious as it seems to read, then it is fine, but I do not know if there is some other objective that it is seeking. It says: AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House approves any proposals and/or amendments arising out of consideration by the Committee.

My colleagues who have already spoken have stated that the Opposition will not be able to support the Motion. The obvious reason for that is that, as I read it, the last resolution in the Motion means that there are differences between the Government and the Opposition on certain positions. Hence, for the Opposition to vote for the Motion would mean that, even if there were differences, the Opposition would support whatever the Government's position is. That is the only conclusion I can come to, from the way the Motion itself reads, in that section.

As has been said from both sides, there is much that we have in agreement, and there are some disagreements with certain areas. The vast majority of the disagreement is with positions that have changed since the two meetings, one in November, and the visit to London in December. I would like to spend a few minutes, without trying to fall into the trap of repetition, to make very clear some of the areas about which others have already spoken, and to make our position very clear.

I want to start with the Bill of Rights. I listened carefully to the Leader of Government Business speaking about the Government's position on the Bill of Rights. I do not wish to misquote, but if I remember what the Leader of Government Business stated, it was not quite a position. It was as though we needed to discuss whether we should go to a Bill of Rights Act, or whether we leave the Bill of Rights enshrined in the Constitution—bearing in mind that the agreement that has been put forward thus far, between London and ourselves, is that the Bill of Rights would actually come into force in early 2006. The Leader of Government Business also mentioned—and perhaps there has been mention by others—that the legislation has to be changed to marry the Bill of Rights to the necessary training that would be involved. That type of training would involve the Judiciary and other areas. I think we are familiar with that.

However, there is a thought is being expressed from some quarters—and I do not have documentation to say that it is a fact, but I want to air it here today, because I think that it would certainly behave us all to ascertain what is factual and, if certain decisions are taken, what the ramifications are. There is a thought that if a Bill of Rights is enshrined in our Constitution, a court or a judge could rule against any of our domestic legislation, which might be at variance to what is enshrined in the Constitution. Accordingly, it could mean that there is a Constitution with a Bill of Rights and, years afterwards, a piece of legislation could be put in place that is deemed, by the representatives and by the Government of the day, to be valid and worthwhile. If it is tested against what is in the Constitution, a court of law could strike that legislation down. If that could happen, then we need to give it very serious consideration. We need to do whatever research has to be done. We need to find out what is factual, what is ascertainable, so that there is no speculation on the matter. Regardless of where we stand on the position of a Bill of Rights, however, we need to get that matter crystal clear before we move forward in that regard.

I grant that the Constitution would not be sent back to us today. I am not suggesting that the whole world must stop until we find that out. Nevertheless, I want this recorded in Hansard, so that not only are we aware of it, but London is apprised of it. That way, when next we discuss it, it will not be forgotten. We will make sure that we know where we stand.

I raise that point, first of all, to get it out of the way, Mr. Speaker, because I believe that if there is veracity, then certainly we must pay attention to it. We must be able to ascertain what the best way forward is, in regard to this. That is something of which non-governmental organisations are aware, and they would wish to ensure that we, at this level, are also aware of it. The point is raised, and we will have to see exactly what transpires from that.

My colleagues have discussed several of the points raised by the Government within the Constitution itself. I do not propose, immediately, to go through all of those points over again, but there are some that, I believe, require a bit more discussion.

Section 39. Submission of questions to Cabinet.

I listened to the Leader of Government Business, and his Deputy, when they were speaking on section 39 of the proposed new draft Constitution, regarding submission of questions to Cabinet. The Government is saying that His Excellency, the Governor should not have the right to prevent a question. We are going to keep the word 'question' in context; we will not call it a 'paper'. That is how the Constitution reads.

As it is now—and what is proposed in the draft Constitution—is that, whatever a Minister wishes to bring to Cabinet, His Excellency, the Governor, can decide, once the papers hit his desk, whether it goes on an agenda or not. What the Government are saying is that this should not be the case, but that, if a Minister is adamant that a matter be discussed in Cabinet, the Governor should not prevent that from happening, and should not prevent discussion from being ventilated. At the end of the day, however, the Governor still does not have to accept the advice of Cabinet.

I have difficulty understanding the process; we need to think it through very carefully. I can follow the argument up to a certain point, but if the Governor does not have to accept the advice of Cabinet, then I am not so sure how it works when it comes to the position of collective responsibility, and all of the ancillary matters that accompany one in Cabinet. This is not to say that I cannot follow the line of argument, when it comes to the Governor not having the ability, constitutionally, to prevent a paper from going to Council. However, what happens after that—what makes sense—is that perhaps in Committee, we might well have the ability to discuss the matter further. I air this now so that we can begin to think about it, to see if there is a way forward. Perhaps, constitutionally, this is a position for His Excellency, the Governor to retain the ability to decide which matters should be considered and which should not. I do not know if there is any middle road, or whether it is a situation in which London, through his Excellency, the Governor, might be satisfied with a certain way forward, but at the same time, the Government would not be encumbered in their ability to function within Cabinet.

The Government have stated their new position—or rather, the position to which they have reverted, in regard to the appointment of the Speaker. They have said that they are going back to their original position, which is what is contained in the present Constitution.

My colleagues have aired their views, and I listened especially to the Deputy Leader of Government Business, in regard to his position on the appointment or election of a Speaker. He said that, from his perspective, a Speaker—regardless of educational qualifications or experience—from outside of the Legislative Assembly, who had no experience whatsoever, might learn fairly quickly, but could not do the job of Speaker properly. Examples were brought: we had a Speaker who was from outside the Legislative Assembly, but was a former Clerk, so although not an elected representative, that Speaker had experience. The other example was a Speaker who was a former legislator, but who had also served in the Legislature at some point in time, and had that experience.

In all of the People's Progressive Movement's (PPM) public discussions, forums and meetings, we got a very clear message from the public that their preference was for a Speaker from outside. The arguments that have been put forward by the Government are not arguments that I can take on board personally, or as Leader of the PPM—or say that we agree with. Those arguments, although they may satisfy the beliefs of some individuals, certainly do not serve to change the position we have taken—not only because that was what we heard from almost all of the people to whom we talked. One of the reasons given is that it is a small country, and a small pool from which one might be able to choose a qualified and capable Speaker from outside of the Legislative Assembly. It is for the same reason—of it being such a small country—that we say the opposite.

It is not because of an inability to find a qualified and capable speaker, but what is in the proposed Constitution, bearing in mind certain other changes that would occur in the system of governance. If we are going to move to the ministerial system, if we are going to have parties and have the Government and the Opposition, as we do now, then the safest way is for the Speaker not to have any elected attachments within the Legislative Assembly. Then the Opposition, or those in the minority, would at no point feel that a decision or ruling that has been made by the Speaker was based on the fact that he or she is attached to the ruling party.

The other point, Mr. Speaker, that held us to the belief that a Speaker should be from outside the Legislative Assembly, is based on the premise that we are moving to single-member constituencies. In moving to single-member constituencies, we speak about the accountability of one Elected Member for a certain constituency. To have as the Speaker any one of those Elected Members who represent single constituencies would deprive his or her constituents of the day-to-day representation they should expect.

We want to make it absolutely clear why we stay with that position. We accept the position of Deputy Speaker. It is not a position that is used very often due to the absence of the Speaker; therefore it is practical to have a Deputy Speaker elected from within. We do not have any significant arguments with that.

There was some debate yesterday afternoon with regard to the way the Speaker would be able to vote.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, we have reached the time of 4.15 pm. If the Members are so inclined, I would like to take a 15-minute break. We will return at 4.30 pm promptly.

Proceedings suspended at 4:15 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4:35 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition is continuing.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we took the break, I was dealing with our position on the issue of the Speaker being elected from within or without. I have already stated that position, as have my colleagues. However, attached to that, in Section 58 of the proposed Constitution, is a position that the Government have taken with regard to how the Speaker should be elected, and voting.

Section 58. Voting. Section 58(2) of the proposed Constitution reads: “The Speaker shall not vote, and any other member presiding shall have an original but no casting vote.”

Subsection 58(3) reads: “In the event of an equality of vote on any question the motion shall be lost.”

These two subsections are based on a Speaker being elected from outside, and a Deputy Speaker being elected from within the elected membership.

Subsection 2, which hinges on subsection 3, says that the Speaker shall not vote. This does not make for a situation where a non-elected member sitting in the Chair would be able to vote, by casting vote or otherwise, on matters dealt with by Elected and Official Members. This is fair, so it does not cloud the issue. “Any other member presiding” is the Deputy Speaker, who would normally be able to vote, in any case. He “...shall have an original vote but no casting vote.” Assuming that this Deputy Speaker is a member of the ruling party, this means that a vote needed to assist the Government with the passage of a Bill or a Motion—or anything else requiring a vote—would not deny that individual who might be sitting in the Chair.

In Subsection 58(3) it says, “In the event of an equality of vote on any question the motion shall be lost.”

This means that if it is the Speaker—who is elected from outside—sitting in the Chair, and the Government cannot muster from within themselves the majority, then the Speaker cannot assist, either way, to prevent or to make it happen. Perhaps the Government takes that position because they are saying the Speaker may be elected from inside. If the Speaker were elected from inside, then these two subsections would not run sensibly.

However, the fact is that our position has not changed from the original position. We have to agree that Section 58(2) and (3) must remain. That is the position that we will have taken.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Honourable Member, if you would allow me. The Honourable Leader of Government Business, if you would, suspend Standing Order 10(2) so that we can continue beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move for the relevant suspension, to allow us to do business after 4.30 pm, until 6 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow us to continue until 6 pm. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue until 6 pm.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Moving away from that topic, I simply want to summarise: the Opposition remain the same. The Speaker should be elected from outside, the Deputy Speaker should be elected from within, and Section 58 (2) and (3) will remain the same.

Section 38. Proceedings in and quorum of Cabinet. I want to move back to section 38. The Government have suggested a slight amendment to what is proposed; we see all the sense in that amendment. Section 38(3) reads: “No Business shall be transacted at any meeting of the Cabinet if there are less than five members present, in addition to the person presiding.”

We are all working on the presumption that there will be seven Elected Members of Cabinet, and what the Government have suggested is: “No business shall be transacted at any meeting of the Cabinet if there are less than five Members present . . .”, and they want to add to that, “...of which four are voting members, in addition to the person presiding.”

To us, that would make all the sense in the world, to ensure that the majority of the Elected Cabinet forms part of the quorum. Therefore, if a vote is taken, it is taken by the majority of that Elected Cabinet. All else would work on the principle of collective responsibility, by way of a majority, not only of the Official Members, but of the Elected Members. Although one may say that that may not be necessary, the fact is that if it is done in this manner, no question can be raised on an issue, when voting takes place, with regard to the elected government.

Section 52. Power to make laws. The next issue on which I wish to speak is section 52. We have heard differing views offered on the issue of referendums. From the very beginning, we have taken the position (and we espoused that position in London) that, while the Constitution we have now, and the one that is proposed, allows for a law to be made via a resolution of the House for a referendum to be held, we wish to have added to that the ability for a people-initiated referendum to take place.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay asked the question. He referred to his copious notes when we spoke in London about people-initiated referendums. He asked the question, “How will it work?” He also asked, “Is it binding, or simply for Government to take note of?” He has said that we, the Opposition, are saying we want a people-initiated referendum, but that we have not been able to explain how it will work. Let me go through what we did say.

We said that we anticipated a provision, enshrined in the Constitution, that a law would be made outlining all the terms and conditions under which a people-initiated referendum could be held. However, if it were enshrined in the Constitution, the law would have to be made once the Constitution was in force. You would not load the Constitution down with one-liners and subsections, which should be in the legislation. The Constitution itself would simply say that there should be a law outlining terms and conditions under which a people-initiated referendum could be held.

He asked whether it would be binding. He can take that line, and say that we have not figured it all out, but still we want it to happen. Our position is quite clear. We are satisfied with the legislature’s sitting down and working that out, in whatever manner the majority would wish for it to happen.

He also asks what percentage there would have to be, from each constituency, or each district—and what percentage of the voting population, which we could say is 20 per cent. I do not believe that we need to argue that point right now. It is a principle of which we speak. Those ancillary matters can be sorted out long afterwards. We either agree to the principle of having enshrined in our Constitution the ability for a people-initiated referendum to be triggered, or not. Our position is the people should have that right.

As for how stringent the terms and conditions should be, everybody can have their suggestion as to what is sensible. We could look at existing legislation from other jurisdictions and craft our own.

In regard to whether it should be binding or not, I have a pretty good idea of what London's thoughts are on the matter. However, if we as a people so desire, then perhaps it would leave a lot of room for us to have that discussion. That position is clear, regardless of what anyone might say and how much strength they apply to the specifics of how it would work. As far as we are concerned at the present time, Mr. Speaker, the specifics are not the important aspect. It is whether or not we want it in the Constitution.

Therefore, the decision is not to argue whether it is 20 percent of the voting population, or 15, or 30; or whether it is binding or simply to be taken note of. It is whether we think that, in our Constitution, the people who can vote for us—the people who elect us—should have that right. That is the point at hand. We hold fast to the position that they should have that right. When we go through Committee—and in any future discussions we may have with representatives from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office—that will be our position again.

I know that after this, we will have an opportunity to deal with the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003 and the question of “one-person, one-vote” and single-member constituencies. However, there have been some arguments brought forward regarding the position. Originally, after discussions, we had agreed on single-member constituencies being the way forward—17 single-member constituencies to elect 17 representatives in the Legislative Assembly. The group that commanded the majority would form the Government, from which would emanate a Chief Minister and six other Ministers. That whole system is predicated on 17 Members being elected. Again, the way this proposed Constitution is crafted, that stems from single-member constituencies.

It would appear from what we have heard that the Government are still content to say that there should be 17 Elected Members, but not from 17 single-member constituencies. The proposal that I heard is that an additional Member be placed in the district of George Town, and another in the district of West Bay. I am making every attempt not to be repetitious, but there are some points that need to be clarified.

Mr. Speaker, we will get into the longer debate on single-member constituencies with the next Motion, but in our view, they are based on the accountability of the representative. That is one thing.

The second argument is based on equality within the voting population of the country. We have evolved, as time has gone on, to having 15 Elected Members within the six electoral districts. North Side and East End return one each; Cayman Brac and Little Cayman return two; Bodden Town returns three; George Town returns four; and West Bay returns four. Every time we have increased the membership, we have simply stuck them into various places. At one time, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman had one representative—they now have two. George Town had three, when you were first elected, Mr. Speaker. It was when they added the fourth one, in 1992, that I was allowed to squeeze in. I say this to simply make the point that as it has been deemed necessary to increase the number of representatives in our Legislative Assembly, we have simply looked at the larger populations and stuck them in.

Mr. Speaker, can we take ourselves away from the argument of the people, which districts want single-member constituencies and which do not—according to the small numbers with which we have all had to deal—and simply look at accountability? It is easy to convince voters that they are better off being able to elect four or five representatives than only one. However, as the Minister of Education said, the voting public of this country needs to be educated that the difference in that whole process is that, as you increase the numbers of representatives in your district, you have that many more individuals who can pass the buck. Accountability lessens as the number of representatives grows.

Mr. Speaker, I speak to a principle; it is about accountability. When we speak to the principle of “one person, one vote” and single-member constituencies, it is not specifically about having it in this district and not in that district—or in that district, and not in this one. It is about a system of governance, and it would have to be throughout the entire Cayman Islands. We seem to have gotten to agreement at one point in time, but now that has shifted back to the way it was originally. If there is division, as there obviously is right now, then the question cannot arise sensibly as to starting it, and shoving it into this district.

Mr. Speaker, I heard your parting words, but let us pretend that you were going to seek to be elected again, as you have been, in the district of George Town. You are trying to explain to your constituents the good sense of moving to single-member constituencies, and at the end of the day, the result is that other districts will not only vote for at least the same number of people they used to vote for, but what is proposed is that one of them (namely West Bay) will have another one that they can vote for. You have convinced your constituents, however, that they should only be able to vote for one, because of the good sense of going into the system—you come and you propose a bastardised system. How could you go back to your people and explain to them the good sense of the single-member constituency principle when their friend in West Bay is now voting for five—not only four, again, but one more!

I know you understand the point I am making, but you need not make any expressions—I do not expect that, and it is not your job. I raise that point because it is simply logical.

Now they can throw arguments about. I have heard the Leader of Government Business say, on several occasions, “Be careful what you wish for because you might get it”. This is not about wishing for the district of George Town—and solely the district of George Town—to have single-member constituencies. The argument is about the principle of moving forward to the ministerial system, in the manner in which we said we were going to, and about the principle of “one person, one vote”—single-member constituencies—applying as part and parcel of that process, to bring about accountability on the part of the representative and equality on the part of the voting public. That is what it is all about.

I spoke earlier about the evolution of the numbers in the House, and their just being stuck here and there. People have become used to voting for certain numbers: the people in East End and North Side only voting for one; Cayman Brac and Little Cayman only voting for two; Bodden Town having increased, in 1992, from two to three; and George Town and West Bay each increasing from three to four in 1992. Mr. Speaker, it is not about how many more representatives you get in your districts. I hear the arguments; I do not refute those arguments about trying to retain your district boundaries to the best of your ability. That is not something I wish to argue about. However, the principle of equality says simply that as far as is possible—understanding that in no situation will it be exact—each person who is elected as a representative can be voted in by close to the same number of persons as the next. That is a round-about way of saying it, but each constituency should have, as close as possible, the same number of voters. That is the principle on which the Electoral Boundary Commission conducted its work.

However, we find ourselves in a situation between the two largest districts, when it comes to how many end up in this district, and how many end up in that. We all know that, inevitably, this is going to raise concern on both sides as to how it works. If we can step away from that for a minute, and simply look to the principle, then it should not be difficult for us to conclude (and again, I agree with the Minister of Education) that our job is to educate the people as to why this is the way forward, as we believe it should be. I do believe that others had the job and did not really perform as well as they should have, but that does not give any excuse on our part.

We get into the argument, right after that—back and forth—as to what the wish of the people is. If we want to be fair to ourselves, and to the people, we can argue about it without having to beat one another. As is natural, many people who may have reservations about moving to the single-member constituency situation have not founded those reservations on any facts that they have. Those reservations are founded on fear, apprehension and the natural human instinct to resist change. If at the end of the day, you are satisfied that your population understands what is being proposed, and they say to you, “We do not want it,” then your job is done.

We have what we have today because we have gone one route. We have now reverted and we have differed again. The real truth of the matter is—and I am being as fair as I can—the members of the Opposition have tried hard, in our meetings, to speak to it—not ramming it down anyone’s throat, but explaining why that position was taken. It was based, all this time, on the premise that the Government were taking the same position. You keep moving that way because you think it is the right thing to do—to educate the people—and then all of a sudden, we have two different positions again. How can any of us, singly or collectively, truly say, right now, that we know what the people want? I raise that point to say this, Mr. Speaker: What we cannot do is to subject districts to the principle and expect the whole system to work. It physically cannot work like that.

Mr. Speaker, I have not had the chance to sit down and try to figure out how it would actually work. However, I venture to say that if, by some miracle, London agrees to it—and they are going to read Hansard, so they will not misunderstand—then I am certain that no one will have thought through how practical it is to work it. In short order, I know I will have the chance to ask enough questions to get to understand that, but I cannot figure that one out myself. I do not suspect that it is going to be something that you fix just like that, but that is a matter of logistics; that is not a question of whether it should or should not be.

Mr. Speaker, from the position of principle, I say this once more: Regardless of whether there are indications from people who attend meetings, within certain districts, that they are willing to move to single-member constituencies, they cannot be expected to do so while the rest of country stays as it is. If there are changes, you cannot expect to simply add numbers in the manner in which it exists. It cannot work like that.

I have to actually laugh when I hear the statement that, ‘in the spirit of cooperation’, this is what is being suggested. Mr. Speaker, that had to be a joke. I offer that point to explain our position, which is not that single-member constituencies should be in certain districts. Our position is that it should be in all the districts.

When we spoke to Cayman Brac, we tried to accommodate that situation, leaving the same principle of “one man, one vote”. What we said then was that, (even if it was attempted to accommodate that), if Cayman Brac and Little Cayman were to return two elected representatives, the voters would still be able to vote for only one person. Then it would be first and second past the post. That is what we suggested. Some people might think that that is not the most sensible of propositions. I brought that forward to say that it was consistent with the principle of "one man, one vote".

Mr. Speaker, we will have to see what London says when they hear about the debate. I simply wanted to raise those points. There are several others, as I have said, that we will deal with when we go to Committee, but most of the other speakers have already spoken to those points. There are a few other suggestions that have come from the Government side that are new, and those we are in agreement with also. As we go through each section, we will have to see exactly how we all agree, and on what issues.

Mr. Speaker, there is something that I believe that this debate needs to have in it. While the Government and the Opposition will disagree on certain points, there is another external situation with which I do not know whether anyone is going to deal. I certainly am, however. I crave your indulgence, because I have a little time left to quickly read a letter that was written to the editor of the Caymanian Compass, if you would allow me, Sir. It will not be difficult for you to see the relevance.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It is in today's paper, Thursday 20 November 2003, with the headline, "Parties can divide people". It reads:

"The Cayman Islands social, economic and political structure developed to great heights with teams and independent MLAs until recently.

"The MLAs represented Caymanians, not a political party and its members.

"Power struggles between political parties in Caribbean Islands have been violent at times. Parties can divide nations and its people as is becoming evident in the Cayman Islands since parties have been formed.

"Sufficient proper checks and balances do not exist in political parties in power to prevent wrong decisions which are promoted by the Leader of Government Business or a Chief Minister. Cayman's parties were formed after the general election without public input.

"Can you imagine what damage could be done to the Cayman Islands if the Constitution is changed to give a Chief Minister near-absolute power?

"The best way for the Cayman Islands people to get an experienced, well-educated, professional Leader of Government Business or Chief Minister with integrity is for an all-islands popular vote by all the people to appoint the Leader of Government Business or Chief Minister. However, the Chief Minister should not be given power to remove his Ministers; that power should remain with the Legislative Assembly.

"Under the party system the party, not the electorate, chooses the Leader of Government Business or Chief Minister and the deputy.

"Remember, as recently happened in Bermuda, the leader and deputy leader were changed by the party within weeks of the election. A new Premier and Deputy were put in to run the Government.

"A party system may be so powerful it can go against the wishes of the people.

"This cannot happen if the people in a general election vote in the people's Chief Minister or Leader of Government Business.

"This is a variation to the party-nominated Chief Minister but is more democratic because the people get the Chief Minister they vote for and not the one the party wants, who may not be the best person to lead the Government where integrity, professionalism and hard work, not a lot of talk, are necessary.

"There is a saying, "There is nothing more frightening than ignorance in action". Making the right decision is what is important, not just making any decision, and worse than that, making quick decisions which are wrong.

"Tom Jefferson

"John McLean

"Truman Bodden"

Mr. Speaker, I read this letter because its obvious intent is to revive from the grave certain individuals. The reason I have taken the time to deal with it is that all of us, in here, must feel accountable for our actions. We all know the history of politics, and we all know when and how these individuals were not re-elected in the last election. When they were not re-elected, one or two things happened: either the sensible voting public realised that they should elect other people, or, from their point of view, they are saying the voting public does not have any sense, because they did not vote them back in. It is one of two things that they are saying. Either way, it is not good for them.

When it comes to this argument, they draw this entire Legislative Assembly into it. There are some things in here that perhaps are factual: I am not going to deny that, but the principle that they are trying to tell John Public is to go back to how it was, to leave everything, and everything will be wonderful. It cannot work. We are dealing with this Constitution now, regardless of any disagreements we may have. Somehow or the other, after we are finished, there will be a little bit of acrimony and we will get over that. Thank God I have been around long enough that it rubs off quickly now. It does not stay long.

Regardless of the mistakes that are being made now—because I am not going to stand here and say that we are handling this perfectly; not only would it not be the truth, but it would be unfair to tell the public that—what I can say, with every ounce of conviction and belief in my being, is that while we make these mistakes, it must get better than what it was. I live that, Mr. Speaker.

Somewhere along the line, we are going to develop the accountability that we should. What was there had no accountability whatsoever—none. For that reason alone, I cannot say that we should do that. It made life easier, and if I speak personally, truthfully, life was easy for me as a representative. I felt good about myself, because I did all that I could do and genuinely felt that I was doing the best I could, but there was no shared vision. There was no one Government, and whether I was alone on the Opposition, whether there were two or three of us on the Opposition, or whether they were playing cat-and-mouse with each other in the Legislative Assembly, there were no clear objectives. There was no straight path that said, “This is what we are going to do”. I can say this with regard to policy: It was what you woke up the next morning to decide.

Mr. Speaker, we are still evolving. I can say that, having been in the middle of all kinds of things. What I am talking about today is not about going anywhere there. I do not want any of that, because that does not help any of us.

I want to say, however, that with the demands that are on the Cayman Islands today, for its Government to function in the best interests of the people calls for structured organisation, with clear vision, and policies that are articulated so that John Public can fairly decide which policies they want—which type of representation they want. They know when they make their choice that, if that choice becomes part of a majority, that is what they will get, and vice versa. That is what we need.

One might say that we had that before, up until election day, and there was no accountability. I always make this joke, and I have to laugh at it. It is not meant personally, or to castigate, but that was my eye-opener. When it was the ‘good’ budget, it was the Government’s budget. The one time they knew they were going to get a pound-up for it—and I must admit that I was part and parcel of the pound-up that was coming—it was quickly, “Oh, this is not our budget; this is the Financial Secretary’s budget.” We cannot have that. As representatives, we must be held accountable for our actions.

If we are going to be held accountable for our actions as the representatives of the people, there must be structure. We can argue about what we on the Opposition are doing right; the Government can speak to whatever they wish to say that we are doing wrong, and vice versa. That is the job. Mr. Speaker, deep down, if we are to be truly responsible, we know our jobs. The Government know that the Opposition have to keep riding them to death, as long as we do not cross the line and begin saying what is not factual. At the same time, the Government want to be returned, so they try to make us look as though we are not capable of replacing them. That is how life is.

However, if we act responsibly within those parameters, then there is nothing wrong with the structure of which I speak. As much as they can find wrong with what is happening now—and I defend no action in here by saying what I am saying, Mr. Speaker—the fact is that it cannot be said, as a matter of principle, that what we are evolving to, at this point in time, is the wrong way to go, and we must go back to the way it was, because the animal alone that is involved caused that not to work.

It is simple, and I do not mean that any other way than how it is; it is a fact. The days are long gone when you could expect a few people to be elected and get together while the rest sat back, already knowing who was supposed to sit up in Cabinet—argument done. It is not going to happen again, Mr. Speaker. It is not going to happen again. We can get into arguing with one another about it until the good Lord comes, as to who did this right and who did this wrong, but I say with a firm belief that it is not going to happen.

Mr. Speaker, I took the time out to say that what this letter is offering is no answer. It is absolutely no answer, because I have had my own experiences, too many of them, with the lack of accountability in this process. People tell you that they did not know when they signed the letter. No, Mr. Speaker, if at any point in time, the people in the district I represent wish to change me, then that is their right and their privilege—at any point in time. It is not going to be for me to try to tell them that how this is—or rather, how this was—is right. No, Sir.

Even today, by nature I am conservative. Even now, some would wish that I would say, “Yea” or “Nay” quicker than I do. Everybody has his own nature, Mr. Speaker, and I want to make sure that I understand something and that I think it through. I tell you what: I have thought this one through—what is being proposed in this letter. I have thought it through; I have lived it through; I have helped to kill it; and it must stay where it is. I am not saying that to declare any position about anything. I am not speaking to jump at the individuals, either. I am saying, of that way of governance, Mr. Speaker: never, ever again.

What we have to do, if we are going to be responsible with this Constitution and we are going to—

[Laughter]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I want to laugh, too, Mr. Speaker. If we are going to end up with what is best for the country, as we all say, then understanding clearly whatever we are offering as changes to what is being proposed must be in that best interest. Just as any member of the Government could, I can stand here today and say that the positions we have taken (on which we will expand when we go through to the Committee stage with this and with the other Motion), are positions that were derived from our gathering as much knowledge as we could about these various situations; discussing them with as many people as we could; and as far as possible, avoiding the temptation of looking to see where one or all of us might end up because of them.

Mr. Speaker, the truth is that, whatever might seem to obtain today, none of us, in any political circumstance in this country, can truthfully say that that position will still obtain tomorrow, or whenever we have a new Constitution. People are like that. That is why the safest thing to do, with this, is to do what is right—what we know is right. Things have a funny way of backfiring.

In this letter, there is a proposal for the national election of a Chief Minister, and that is something that a lot of the people might grab at initially. Let us put it into perspective. Before I put it into perspective, and while I have taken my position, let me make it absolutely clear that I am not with the intention of denying anyone the right to seek to be elected, under whatever guise. That is someone's right. I want to make it clear that in this proposed Constitution, under the definition section, the word "party", "as it appears in sections 32 and 51 of this Constitution shall mean a group of persons who have united to contest election for membership of the Legislative Assembly". That is what the word party means, in this Constitution, as proposed. Therefore, the National Team was a party, for the purposes of this Constitution.

Any group that runs on the same ticket in a national election (for want of a better explanation) is a party, for the purposes of this Constitution. I say that to make it clear that this business about separating 'parties' from 'teams' is different. Whatever your terminology may be—for instance, the People's Progressive Movement—is simply to differentiate us. We explain who we are, and what our structure is. I can do that any day of the week. For the purposes of this Constitution, and when we get a new Constitution, I do not think anyone is going to change that part, at least. Anyone who runs as a group is considered a party.

I want to make that very clear. They will speak about the party system, and that teams are not the party system. They try to bring about these subtle distinctions between the two. Mr. Speaker, I do not care what time has dictated. What I know to be a fact, that will never change, is that some system, under which accountability is obvious, has to be better than where there is none.

Therefore, it is for us, as much as we will differ, to ensure that what we end up with allows for any present or future government to function properly, to be held accountable, and to have a Constitution, a framework under which the entire population of the country lives, which is not only user-friendly, but which protects the citizens of the country, at every level, including (if I have to say it like this) protecting them from us—not protecting us from them, because they never jump up and say that they want to be elected. We tell them we want to be elected. We have to make sure, as part of our duty, that what we end up with as a Constitution causes us, and our actions, as their representatives—at whatever level—to be such that they can always call for us to be accountable. The system allows us to survive within that process of accountability, also. That is not that difficult to do, and that is what we have to achieve, Mr. Speaker.

The varying views on the issues about which the Government have changed their mind are views that are going to have to be looked at very seriously. Where I differ from the Minister of Education is, perhaps, when he says that, when the vote is taken on the various sections, the majority will carry in the Legislative Assembly, and that that, by inference, is how the Constitution will be. I do not agree with him on that. There are some basic positions that have been taken by the Government that I do not think are practical. That is my view. Obviously, they do not think the same; otherwise, they would not have brought their positions. We will see what happens after that. Our job is to state the positions with clarity and explain why we take them.

The matter from which I got sidetracked was about national elections for a Chief Minister. I have heard several people with this argument, because once one tells the other that it sounds good, it will gain traction, as one of my good friends would say. Apparently, that would seem to be something that would work well and be in the interest of the people. On the face of it, that would seem to be something that would work well, and would be in the interests of the people.

Practically, here is why you are not, with any reasoned thought behind it, able to safely say that it can work: You may have an individual seeking to be elected with a few more people in his or her team, group or party. You might have two more groups, or parties, seeking to be elected. You may have your elections for the individual representatives, whether or not you have a two-tier system where people vote for representatives and then for the Chief Minister. You may end up with a Chief Minister in that manner—not that his election would not be fair; there is no argument there. If the majority of the people did it, that is fine. The fact of the matter is, however, that he might end up with a very small minority of his group in there, and the majority of the individuals who are elected otherwise, by the people, may be of a wholly different perspective, a wholly different philosophy—a wholly different vision for the country. The mandate, at that point in time, is to get your Chief Minister to form a government and be able to articulate policies. How is that going to work? I simply ask the question to say that there is great difficulty in that.

It is much cleaner if people know that, if they elect this group, this is who will be their Leader of Government Business, this is who is going to be their Minister of So-and-So, and this is who will make up their Cabinet—and they have their choices otherwise.

Mr. Speaker, I am reminded that in the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners 2002, under the Executive Council, they said:

“There is widespread support for the Chief Minister to be chosen by the entire electorate in a separate ballot from the General Election from among those persons who have been elected to the Legislative Assembly. There are practical considerations why we do not recommend this method. The most obvious is that it could well result in the choice of an individual who does not enjoy the support of the majority of the elected members of the Legislative Assembly thereby immediately precipitating a vote of no confidence. The result would be that the wishes of the majority would immediately be frustrated by the actions of a small group of legislatures. The end result would be another general election.” That is another point.

The Speaker: Honourable Member that letter that you have—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It is a section from the Report of the Constitutional Modernisation Review Commissioners. It is page 7 of the Report. If you need me to table a copy, that is not a problem. Perhaps it might be easier for the Clerk.

The Speaker: If you would.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I read that because it is another logical argument that has been put forward. They too accept that, on the surface, it looks fine, and it is democratic but, practically, it is not something that can work. That was part of the argument in this letter.

You do not want to deny anybody their views in this process, and I say that very seriously. At the same time, we also have a responsibility. If we understand them better, we cannot leave the issues to cloud the minds of the electorate any more than their minds are already clouded. It is going to be a difficult process, Mr. Speaker. When we have finished this debate, as far as memory serves me, London is expecting us to sit and talk again. They will also, at some point in time, wish for us to narrow down our positions as closely as we can. We will have to work at that the best way we know how. Whatever we end up with, London will certainly have to make some decisions.

There is an argument that has been put forward by our Members about a referendum, and the Government have certainly not supported that argument. I am confident that London is going to require, as they have said in their Checklist, some sort of evidence that whatever is put forward reflects the wishes of the majority of the people. I do not know yet how we are going to be able to provide that evidence, if they are going to move forward with the Constitution with the timelines that we anticipated initially.

In general, we cannot support ‘piece-mealing’ the proposed Constitution as the way forward. If we are going to move to single-member constituencies, so be it. The Government have said that, in the spirit of cooperation, they are suggesting that the district of George Town get one additional Member and be divided into five single-member constituencies. They have said that this could be a pilot project for the rest of the country, to see how well it works. Then there is a commitment that, by the year 2008, we will have single-member constituencies throughout the Cayman Islands. For the love of me, I do not know what difference they are going to make between now and then. If it means that the Government consider that the people need a lot more time to get comfortable with it, then (while we do not offer that position), our answer would have to be, “If that is the way you want to go, then everybody will have to wait”. If it is equality we speak of, as part of the principle, then equality must happen at one time. That is the position that we will have to take.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Sometimes a little cross-talk is all right. I know. I heard what was said, and I can assure the Minister of Education that what I say is no dodge. He and others, including the Leader of Government Business, do not like the way I speak. They call it “out of both sides of your mouth” because I do not like to speak in a manner like, for example, the Leader of Government Business. He has his own style, and so do I. I do not like to jump at you or go all over you. It does not mean that I do not make my point. I am sure, Mr. Speaker, that if you did not understand anything I said today, you would ask me to clarify it, so I am absolutely sure that you did.

Therefore, the position that we have in regard to single-member constituencies is that if we are going to have them as part of the whole process that we envisage, then let us look for the whole situation. We cannot piece-meal it. We cannot come and say that we want the two extra Members so that we can have a Chief Minister and a ministerial system, stick one in George Town and one in West Bay, and then turn around and say you are going to have single-member constituencies in George Town. That is obviously the Government’s position, from what we have heard—although they did not spell it out in that manner. We cannot and will not support that position, because it cannot be the right way forward in the modernisation of our Constitution.

If there is fear, trepidation and apprehension in the minds of the Government Members about how the people think, and they are not confident that the people have knowledge of what is being proposed, then let us ask them. I have no problem with that. Some of them have said our job is to educate them, and I could not agree more. We have tried, and made every attempt we know how to make. His Excellency, the Governor cannot deny this fact. I spoke to him on two occasions, after we came back from London, and before the draft Constitution came in February. I said, "Your Excellency—" In fact, he does not mind my calling him H.E., so I said, and I was very honest with him, "H.E., if we had them, we would pump all kinds of resources into this situation, but one of the things that has to happen is that the people of this country have to be educated and understand clearly the system of "one man, one vote". On two occasions, I said that to him. I asked him to find out how Government could do it and to get it done. Nothing happened.

We were conscious of it from the very beginning. We have done what we could do, with our limited resources. However, there is a lot of water under the bridge. A lot of time has passed, when that education process could really have been pumped up well. Then, you would have been able to say, with clear conviction, that the answers you got from the people were answers that were given from an informed position. Now, we cannot be absolutely sure of it. Even members of the Government admit that many people do not quite understand it.

Our position will be that if there are differences—and we have a few—then they must be listed and there must be more discussion with London. There is also that position I spoke about regarding the Bill of Rights: we need to find out what, as the old person would say, the "true position is". We should not ask London to make a judgement call because there is divergence in opinions here. They thought they had smooth sailing after December, but I know they are not thinking that now. They must have in recent times that we are miles apart on some of it. The majority of it can be dealt with, and there are probably no questions about that. Wherever we end up, however, we have to ensure that we are truly satisfied that the majority of the people wish for a certain position. We have to go further than simply for them to wish it. We have to ensure that what they wish for, or do not wish for, they understand.

We would not wish for all the work and effort that has been put in by so many to go down the tubes. However, we are not going to participate in the process to the bitter end if it obvious that there is no guarantee that the end result will reflect the wishes and aspirations of the people. It is as simple as that. We would like the whole country to move on. We would like to get this behind us, and get on to all the other important matters, but not at the risk that, when it is all over, we have to live everyday with someone else telling you, "We should not have done it like this; we should not have done it like that". I say that without reference to any specific part of the Constitution.

That is our position. In closing, when we get into Committee, we will articulate specifically on each issue, so that Hansard will reflect both positions very clearly for London to inspect and to see where the differences are.

I want to repeat again, for the record: the Opposition expect more dialogue with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office—not by ourselves; that is not what we are saying, but we expect that there will be more dialogue before any final draft is completed. We will see what that entails, and how far we have to go with that. Certainly, though, we expect it.

During any interim, we also expect that we will all, on our own, try to ensure that we play our role in public education on the various issues that we have to deal with. Ultimately, the public is going to have to live with it too, not just us. We cannot create a Constitution that is a framework only for those of us who are here, or those who are to follow in our footsteps, in this Legislative Assembly.

I am certain more will be said but as we move into Committee, and on to Government Motion No. 6/03, we will all have our opportunity at that. The Opposition will continue to be responsible in our contributions. Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we have reached eight minutes before the time of adjournment. I do not know if any other Member would wish to speak at this time, or whether it is the will of the House that we should take the adjournment at this time? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, I will call on the Leader of Government Business to commence his winding-up.

Hon. W McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I would have liked to have had tonight to go over some matters. Be that as it may. I will try to finish in 10 minutes.

Members have had their say on this important subject, and I do not propose to be long. As for the debate of the Opposition, their problem, since becoming the Opposition, is that it must be their way or none at all. They have forgotten that they are not the Government anymore. They were never prepared to work with us, unless it was in their way. One thing I give them credit for is that they can come up with some excuses as to why we should go their way. Even when we are giving them what they have asked for, to keep the peace with them, they are still trying to start a war with us. You cannot satisfy the Opposition.

I listened to them and, as usual, one says one thing and the next says another. The Second Member for George Town, who is the General Secretary from that party says, "We do not have a mandate to do these things". Then, the Elected Member for East End says, "Everyone campaigned on modernisation". That is the problem, after the heady days of the end of 2001, when they tried to make people believe that the whole world was falling apart because poor old Kurt had been moved from Executive Council. Those two statements have caused people to really look at them, over the past two years, and judge them accordingly. The Elected Member for East End is right. They campaigned for modernisation, and they won the election under his watch—the Leader of the Opposition. When he was the Leader of Government, the Commissioners were appointed.

I asked the Governor why they had appointed three people—one who had just lost the election, another who sat on campaign parade party of the Leader of the Opposition, and another who was a known objector to McKeeva Bush, after I beat them so often at the polls. The Governor said that, at all material times, the Leader of the Government, at the time, knew who he was appointing. I know this. I did not make any choice, so we shall see.

I hear about this Report, which has come out so well. Simply look at it, Mr. Speaker, to see if they did what the people asked them to do. Look at the Report. I will probably take the time; if I am challenged a little more, I will do that.

I did not make any choices, but at that time, everything was still all right. Even when the Commissioners were talking to the people, the Leader of the Opposition did not say anything about referendums. They had made their Report. By that time, he was out of Council, and they took a different direction. They went on the warpath. All you could hear from them was, “McKeeva this and McKeeva that”. I know what was said when the forces against me railed, simply because I had beat them so often at the polls. They did their best to make this matter as difficult as possible, for our Government, while I was Leader of Government Business.

Since I was challenged, I am going to wait until tomorrow morning, because I can prove that the Commissioners did not go anywhere near where some of the people wanted to go, even when they had a majority of the people telling them to go in a certain direction.

Therefore, let them not grumble, over there, about what the process was. The process was good when they were in charge of Executive Council, but when the time came that the Backbenchers said, “You are not doing any good; you have to go”, everything was wrong. I listened to them, with their hypocrisy, speaking out of both corners of their mouths.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, we have now reached the hour of 6 pm. If this is a convenient spot for you to break, I would now call on you to move the Motion for adjournment

Hon. W McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Friday, 21 November 2003 at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until Friday 21 November 2003 at 10 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 6 pm the House stood adjourned until Friday, 21 November 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
21 NOVEMBER 2003
10.14 AM
Fourth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.17 am

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies for Absence and Late Attendance

The Speaker: I have apologies for absence from the Honourable Minister of Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology, as well as the Honourable Minister of Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs. Also, I have apologies for the late arrivals of the Elected Member for East End, the Honourable Second Official Member, the Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture, and the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS
OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have received no statements from Honourable Ministers or Members of the Cabinet.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 5/03

Debate on the Report of the Proposed New Draft
Constitution

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, and the Leader of Government Business continuing.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Yesterday afternoon, when we took the break, I had begun to deal with the bid that the Opposition proffered.

Mr. Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town, who seems most riled up about having to stand by himself now (or that is the proposal), said that this whole constitutional issue is a matter of self-interest for the United Democratic Party. I have to ask the question: what self-interest?

None of us in the United Democratic Party would have any more advantage in the end results with the current process—none of us. We go to the polls next year, God willing. The people of these Islands will make their choice and there will be a new government. What advantage will the United Democratic Party have over the Opposition Members, or anyone else, constitutionally? The Constitution will apply to the United Democratic Party; it will apply to independents; it will apply to any group—and it will apply to the People's Progressive Movement. There is no advantage, though they are trying to make people believe that we are doing something greatly wrong here.

The only advantage we will have is that people will judge the United Democratic Party according to our record, and others on theirs. The opposite party has done nothing but to waste time in this country.

In the debate yesterday, the Leader of the Opposition and his secretary general, the Second Elected Member for George Town, asked us where our mandate is. Well, Mr. Speaker, where is theirs? By what means, he asked, should we change our minds and make these proposals, after a year? Mr. Speaker, he has wondered why we took a year to decide. The members of the Opposition have said, "You have not informed the people". They would like the United Kingdom to believe that—that is why they are repeating it so often here. Mr. Speaker, we had to get to our people to find out what their views were. That is why it is taking this long. We have done that, and we know where we stand with the majority of the people in these Islands. According to them, they saw nothing to change in the draft Constitution. According to the Opposition, they have no mandate to change the Constitution, either. Why waste the time of this country and this legislature in this way?

They have no mandate to change the Constitution. Mr. Speaker, what were they going to do with the draft Constitution? I ask the Leader of the Opposition: What were they going to do with the draft Constitution if they had no mandate to change the Constitution? If they have no mandate, why are they making so many recommendations? Why are they supporting the idea that the Honourable Attorney General and the Honourable Chief Secretary be removed from the Legislative Assembly? Why are the Opposition Members supporting changes to the system—such as a Chief Minister—if they have no mandate?

Mr. Speaker, these changes—that the Attorney General and the Chief Secretary be removed from the Legislative Assembly—are fundamental. If they have no mandate, I ask again: What are they doing supporting these many changes to the present system? Why? They should stop being hypocrites, and stop wasting the time of this Honourable House and the people of this country.

Either we have a mandate and are genuinely making these changes, because the present system is not working in the modern day Cayman, or we are only making changes hoping we will be in those positions one day—next year, in fact. It can only be one of two things. The members of the Opposition have played politics with every aspect of business that comes to this Honourable House, not stopping to think of the consequences of what they say and do. As long as they say it, is right: that is their belief. The Second Elected Member for George Town is so unwilling to cooperate that he refuses, at times, to make up quorum in this Honourable House. He is so full of hate that it is more aggravating at times than a leaking radiator, and I am very much afraid he is going to self-destruct.

What they are doing is of no help to these Islands, and no help to the people they represent. They are only bickering and fault-finding when you try to do what they ask you to do—half-truth, untruth, and this thing of, 'Let us beat upon McKeever. He does not have any sense; he should not be Leader of Government Business. The Leader of the Opposition should be Leader of Government Business.' Of what good to these Islands has their tenure in these hallowed halls been, but to walk out on Budgets and try to disrupt every piece of business the Government brings—even when they ask the Government to bring it?

Mr. Speaker, the original proposal, from all of us, on both sides, was that the draft Constitution would go back to London as it stands. London would put it in place to come into effect at the time of the general elections in 2004. There was not going to be any referendum—not after they had gotten their way. After they got their way with everything they wanted (although they say now they had no mandate) the word referendum ran from them and you never heard quehey about it.

Mr. Speaker, the General Election will be the referendum: that is what we all say. The matter goes back to the people. That is still the position: nothing is going to be put into place until after the next general elections in November 2004.

The Opposition Members have complained. They say we cannot do this, because there has been no widespread consultation. We told as many people, and as many groups, in various ways, as they did—perhaps more. We had public meetings, and the Chamber discussed the constitutional provisions. The newspaper, and in particular the Caymanian Compass, published every aspect of the draft Constitution, for the education of the public. Every aspect was in the Caymanian Compass every day for many weeks.

What did they do, that they can say they had such great consultation? They knew nothing about West Bay before. They had one meeting in my district, when they brought in their friends and close supporters in a bus. They only had 52 people, after bringing in their busload. That did not leave room for many West Bayers, out of those 52 people. What they had down there was what they usually have, and what they will always have, as long as I am a representative and doing what is right. There are people down there who will always be against me. I know and accept that; that is democracy. No matter how much good I do, I will not please them—simply because they do not believe that someone from where I came from should be here. That is the problem, Mr. Speaker.

When we hold our meetings, there are 200 people, or three to four times that many, in the worst attendance. I know I do not bring people from other districts in a bus.

Mr. Speaker, there was consultation. They can make as many complaints as they want to dream up, and try to make the people believe them, and pol-ish up. I am not saying that as many people took the opportunity to learn more about what was being proposed as should have, but I cannot let anyone say that we did not do our part as representatives, or that the media did not do their part in getting out there and educating the public. I go to people's homes, and I sit and talk to them about what Government is proposing. I cannot sit down in my office in West Bay, as I used to, but I see people at my house; I see people at my office. I talk to people everywhere I go. I make time to go to people's yards and talk to them about what is happening. The Opposition Members believe that they are the only ones who are out there. They can go ahead and believe that, but I have always done my job and I will continue to do it.

Mr. Speaker, they talked about the Immigration Law. The fact is that we have had to go on an all-out educational campaign on the Immigration Law. I was not going to allow, in the first stages of this Immigration Law, what took place in the first stages of the Constitution.

The Constitution is important, and that has had its airing. Since they raised it, I want to speak briefly about this campaign on the Immigration Law. The Immigration Law is important. They had already begun to spread discord; they had already begun to cause division. After all these many years that I and other Members have been here in this House, after being involved these many years and hearing about Immigration and the need for reform, I suppose they would rather not have had that Law completed or discussed, so that they could stand up again next year and promise the Jamaican people, and other nationalities, "I am going to take care of you; do not worry", as they have done so many years.

They took care of them, all right. Nothing gave me more determination, Mr. Speaker, than the night they held their dirty meeting on the courthouse steps, and the lies I heard coming from that. I was discouraged with the way we have to work as a Government, with the system we have to work with sometimes, and the pounding you have to get from the United Kingdom. I said I was not going to run again. To me, that meeting said that people like me should not back out because of people like them. I was even more determined to put my best foot forward, to keep as many of them as were on that platform that night out of the Legislative Assembly. They are a bunch of hypocrites.

Let us talk about representative government. How dare they say that they have the majority, and that the United Democratic Party does not have the majority? When we formed the Government with the Leader of the Opposition, we had more support than he had, but we told him he could be the Leader of Government Business. I was not interested in that.

That was not my thing; my thing was to get something done about the inequities I saw existing in the country, which were continuing to build. You know it yourself, Mr. Speaker.

Let me put it a different way, which I think is the best way, and in the best parliamentary terms. The Third Elected Member for George Town at the time could well have been the Leader of Government Business, because he had 14 votes, but we did not go that route. We said, "Let us put the Member in as the Leader." Still, they carry on as though we have done them some great harm, when it was only our goodwill—and also theirs—to make up the Government and try to make it work. How dare they now say that they are the majority? Even internationally, people ask the question, "Really, what is the position?" We know that we have done it constitutionally, and they know that as well.

What is representative government? Representative government is what the United Democratic Party is about. We have 10 of the 15 Elected Members, which is 66.67 per cent of the membership. The People's Progressive Movement has five—and I am not too sure that they have five. We are going to have to wait and see what the three letter-writers will do with the Bodden Town Member on their side.

The People's Progressive Movement has five of the 15 Elected Members, Mr. Speaker, which represents 33.33 per cent. This is further evidence; the People's Progressive Movement was able, they said, to go out and get 33 per cent of the electorate to sign a petition in their favour, which, by extension, would mean that the remaining 66 per cent were not supportive. That is what we would have to believe. They went out to people in the stores, and in the shops. The tourists signed. The maids, to whom they refused to give status, signed—a couple of times. There was duplication after duplication of signature. Tourist after tourist signed it, because Cayman was going independent and was going to be destroyed. We had to keep that fool-fool McKeever out of the way. That is what they were telling people. I do not forget those things easily.

Their problem is that they have not yet accepted that they are a minority. They are the Opposition and they represent the minority. I accept that they represent a minority—that is democracy. The petition they brag about was done at a time when the emotions of people had been whipped up by exaggeration, misrepresentation and sometimes pure, unadulterated lies. Feelings had to be running high in the country. A very popular Member had been removed from the largest district, albeit we did it democratically, and the same Member and his colleague had been suspended for one day from the Legislative Assembly, for improper behaviour.

Do you believe the pomposity that I see existing in the Second Elected Member for George Town? Was he going to allow that to happen and just go? No, they had to cause trouble. Their supporters had to be upset about these happenings, and the Opposition used this opportunity to get them to sign a petition against the Government at the time.

Mr. Speaker, contrast that to where we are now. All is quiet. The Opposition have again tried to whip up public support for a referendum, and they have failed. They tried to cause civil disobedience in the country—they promised that, because of the status grants—and they have failed. The good people of the Cayman Islands have decided to allow their representatives to come in here and debate the Constitution. They trust us to appeal to the United Kingdom, and to give us what we, their elected representatives, are convinced is best for all the people in these Islands.

Mr. Speaker, what I cannot understand is their logic (and it is always skewed one way or another). On the one hand, they said there was not enough education, and that the reason people were not supporting the introduction of single-member constituencies throughout the Islands was that they were not educated on the merits of the system. That is what the Opposition said, but on the other hand, they are calling for a referendum—for those same uneducated people (as they claim) to make the decision. Now, that makes sense.

Why are the people not smart today, all of a sudden, when they were smart enough at the last General Election? Why? The Constitutional Commissioners did not take into account the wishes of the majority of the people when they said they wanted Parliamentary Secretaries, because in their opinion it was not in the best interests of the country. It was no longer what the majority of the people wanted; it was what they, in their wisdom, decided was best for the people.

Mr. Speaker, let me deal with that. I know who those Commissioners are. It still boils, to an extent. It could be said that that they were adamant that they were going to keep me from being Chief Minister. Oh, yes. It does not boil me that I am not the so-called "Chief Minister", because I have that authority by virtue of the party I lead and by the good support of the Members' majority in this House.

However, there are several areas where the people supported and recommended certain provisions to be put into the Constitution, yet the Commissioners thought it would be better not to include them. For the Opposition, it is okay for the Commissioners to reject the people's recommendations. That is okay for their Commissioners—his supporters—including the one that is running around on the platform talking about "one man, one vote."

That is why they were appointed. That is why the former governor could say that the Leader of the Government of the day knew, at all material times, who would be appointed as the Commissioners. They were not my supporters. They were not your supporters, Mr. Speaker, when the Fourth Elected Member for George Town was a Member of the Cabinet, or of Executive Council. They were not the supporters of the majority Government. They supported the Leader of the Opposition, who was the Leader of Government Business at the time.

For the Opposition, it is all right for the Commissioners to reject the people's recommendations, but we, who are elected by the people—and, if I use myself as an example, I have been elected five straight times by the largest majorities at any given point in history—must go along with ideas from those whom the people rejected. I must take up their ideas, even when the people say, "Do this." In their report, the Commissioners said that they had had a lot of representations, but they could not go along with it. It is all right for the Opposition, because the Commissioners were then, and still are, their supporters. That is the reason why they were appointed as the Commissioners.

Mr. Speaker, I am not like the saint who refused to do right because the devil prompted him—no. To me, if what we are doing, as a duly elected Government, is not democratic, then what the Commissioners have done is not democratic either, and the whole thing is a farce. We are the people's elected representatives; we are the majority, the Government—not the Commissioners.

The Commissioners did not take into account the wishes of the majority of the people in several instances. That is why they can go around the town bragging about what a hard time they have given McKeeva. They know who they are, when they say that.

There was much said by the Leader of the Opposition about accountability. He says that accountability is "one man, one vote." What is the difference, when you elect two, three or four people together? According to the Leader of the Opposition, the more people you have elected in a district, the less accountability there is. Why is that? If the people elect good, responsible people, they will get what they want. They will get what they elect.

He says that it is not about the number of representatives each district gets; it is the principle of equality. Mr. Speaker, is he saying that his principle of equality should be extended to each of the districts for Ministers as well, so that each district should have one Minister each? That would be real equality.

No it would not. Is he again talking out of both sides of his mouth about equality, or saying, perhaps, that George Town should get two or three Ministers? That would be real equality, I guess. Why did they not ask whether it is right for a representative to live in one district and run in another? Why did they not ask that question?

Principles, for some people, only come into play when it suits them, and not because they care for the matter of principles. In these matters, to be equal is all right when it is right, but not when it is wrong.

The Second Elected Member for George Town spoke about single-member constituencies and I will quote directly from the unedited Hansard of 19 November. I can also lay it on the Table.

"If single- or multi-member constituencies mean that I am not elected, so be it. For all who may not know it, I have an office I can go back to, from whence I came. I will not prostitute my principles based on my desire to retain my seat. How, Mr. Speaker, can any competent and caring Government make such a ridiculous proposition: that the largest, most populous electoral district in these Islands should be the guinea pig for single member constituencies, while the electoral district of West Bay [not any other district] (which is the stomping ground of the Leader of Government Business) [that is, where I live] retains the multi-member constituency, and he, in my view, is able to exercise his considerable influence and popularity and, by means of the coattail effect, bring into victory those who choose to run with him?"

That is the end of the quotation. I will lay it upon the Table once I finish.

Mr. Speaker, in the proposal of "one man, one vote", it is not important which district is larger, or in which I run—where I run has nothing to do with it. The Leader of the Opposition ran in George Town, and his coattail took in one of the most unpopular young people in the world, one of the most unpopular people in Cayman—the Second Elected Member for George Town. You can believe that. Still, he had the audacity to talk about who gets in on my coattail. It has nothing to do with that. I will get to the point of an explanation of why we are now at the stage of proposing that George Town be the trial area for "one man, one vote".

Let us look at where we stood on this matter in the past, and what others had to say when the matter of "one man, one vote" came to the forefront. We said we would support a "phased-in" approach to the matter. That is what we said in the beginning, and that is what we come back to today.

Mr. Speaker, we believe that that is the way we should go. We said that, and because the Opposition was causing so much disruption with marches and other threats, we began to get questions from overseas as to whether it was safe to come to the Cayman Islands. At the time, our offices had to answer questions from various areas of the United States, as to what was happening in regard to the marches and the threats. At the so-called summit, to keep the peace and try to pacify the Opposition, we said, "All right, we will support the matter of "one person, one vote" on a phased-in basis. We believe that is the best way to go."

The Opposition went on the march. They claimed that they had gone to all the districts to try to sell the idea of "one man, one vote". We said, "To keep the peace, let us take their idea up." They said that they had gone to every district, and they wanted "one man, one vote". "It must come," they said.

The Commissioners said that George Town supported it. If that is so, and it is the best thing in the world for people to have, let us do it. That is what we are proposing: a trial, and for the full matter of "one man, one vote" to come into effect in 2008.

Mr. Speaker, the Boundary Commission said very clearly that East End, North Side and George Town were supportive of "one man, one vote". We know that East End and North Side would support it, because historically, in the last 30-60 years, they have only had one representative. Therefore, it does not matter to them, but George Town joins that position.

Our position, to explain again from the beginning, was that we supported it, but we knew that West Bayers did not, because we had taken a poll and overwhelmingly, our people had voted against it. We had gone to Cayman Brac and overwhelmingly, the people there had rejected it. We spoke to Bodden Town, and overwhelmingly, the people there rejected it. The Opposition did not listen to us. They did not care that West Bayers said they did not want it, but when did any of them pay heed to what West Bayers wanted? They come now to have a meeting, but what did they ever do to help West Bayers? The people will not be fooled. They know who has cared, and is caring, for their benefit; they know who is genuine and who is not.

In any event, our people do not want it, and we have held many meetings to talk about it with them. Mr. Speaker, the Opposition has asked for the boundaries. The Opposition Members support "one man, one vote," and the Commissioners have said that George Town wants it. George Town's elected representatives, on our side, said, "It is a good idea. Let us try it." If we support "one man, one vote", let us try it. Let us do it.

The Minister of Community Services supports it. If the Minister of Community Services, on our side, is agreeable to "one man, one vote", and if the Opposition's elected representatives say they are fine with it, and they want it—if it is the best thing in the world, since hot-cakes, for their people—then in all fairness to them, let us try. If it does not work out properly, or there is not a liking for it, then in 2008 it can be a different thing. They will have to put the case to the public, if it does not work out.

Mr. Speaker, do they believe that the panacea to good representation (which to me is the essence of democracy) is "one man, one vote"? Are we sitting here telling the people today that good, or better, representation is "one man, one vote"? Is that what will give us good schools, better roads, a better economy, more houses, and a better standard of living? Will "one man, one vote" make it better for us with the European Union, if we elect the present Leader of the Opposition? No, I say! No. His record has shown us that he cannot deal with it, and whether he is elected by "one man, one vote," or in an open voting system, as we have now, it will not make one iota of difference, because performance is the lynchpin in representative government. As I say, good representation is the essence of democracy.

Is it equality or is it performance? I do not need four or five representatives in my district to perform and give good representation. I have done that these last 20 years in my political involvement in this House. I have accomplished much for my people, against great odds and many stumbling blocks, at times. No, that cannot be what it is all about, no matter how much the members of the Opposition holler and scream about what they do not want, no matter how much they try to make people believe that we are giving them something they do not want. They asked for it; the Commissioners say that they want it and now, Mr. Speaker, we are proposing to let this be the first area—the trial spot.

We will wait and see whether it happens or not.

Mr. Speaker, under section 92(2) of the draft Constitution, it is proposed that the Attorney General be appointed after consultation with the Chief Minister. This, Mr. Speaker, is a far cry from the current situation that obtains, where the Governor appoints whom-ever he feels is fit. I would agree that if the appointment were on the advice of the Chief Minister, this would provide us with more autonomy and a greater level of input into appointments to an important post. We asked for this, but we should see the great benefit of the draft Constitution. This is a step in the right direction.

Mr. Speaker, the Elected Member for East End outlined the Opposition's position that the Government should have one legal advisor, and that the Governor should have another placed here in the Cayman Islands. I am not convinced that this would work. The Governor could potentially get conflicting advice from the Attorney General and his own legal advisor. Whose opinion would prevail? In the current situation, and for the foreseeable future, it is clear that on certain matters the Governor deems appropriate, he will get separate advice from the legal advisor in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office anyway. That is what happens. We do not agree with, or support, the position of the Opposition that we should employ a separate legal advisor for His Excellency the Governor.

Much was said about referendums. I would like to read what was said in the Lancaster House meetings. Mr. Ian Hendry said that he understood that it was highly controversial and political. I quote from our minutes, and I can table that piece of what he said. I quote: "I entirely understand your position that you cannot make a decision now, but the United Kingdom will have to put together a package now that is generally acceptable. No draft will satisfy everybody. We have not ruled out whether there ought to be a referendum. For reasons you describe, there may be no need."

He was replying to what the Second Elected Member for George Town, Mr. Alden McLaughlin, had said.

"We have not ruled out whether there ought to be a referendum. For reasons you describe there may be no need. There must be a law, money, and personnel. Referendum is not a United Kingdom tradition, but when a matter is so strong, then Government can decide whether or not there needs to be a referendum. This is a matter of local politics."

Mr. Speaker, that is what they told me when I went back there two weeks ago. This is what was said to me. These things are local; they would like for us to get consensus on things such as "one man, one vote" and the Constitution. However, most of these issues are local politics. I will table what I just read.

At the Lancaster House meeting, Mr. Ian Hendry said further, and I quote: "By the second part of January, 2003, we will send out the Draft Constitution. Then the public will see the whole package and not part of it. By then we would have discussed and explained and had feedback."

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, do you have a point of order?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Mr. Speaker, I am simply going to ask you to ask the Honourable Member to lay the document upon the Table of this Honourable House, so that we may have the benefit of seeing it.

The Speaker: Yes, he did mention that he would be laying the document on the Table of the House, so I expect that that will be handed to the Serjeant-at-Arms shortly. Continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I will lay all of those parts that I read this morning on the Table of the House. I quote from our notes of what Mr. Henry said: "By the second part of January, 2003, we will send out the Draft Constitution. Then the public will see the whole package and not part of it. By then we would have discussed and explained and had feedback. We in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) wish to keep our minds open, except there needs to be further debate in the Legislative Assembly on the Draft from the United Kingdom."

That is what we are doing today.

"We hope that the debate would be a full and inclusive debate, even if we need to tweak things—we hope that there will be consensus. We have not closed our minds in regard to a referendum, but the United Kingdom should not tell you what to do locally."

[Pause]

The Speaker: Are both documents being laid upon the Table?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have given the Serjeant-at-Arms those sections that I read.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Do you have a point of order?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Mr. Speaker. It is in relation to the laying of this document that I wish to ask your view.

The Speaker: Continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: We would like to see the entire notes. The Honourable Member is not entitled, in my respectful submission, to take excerpts out—we do not know whether it is supposed to be a contemporaneous note. We would like to see the note. He should lay the whole of the notes on the Table of this Honourable House, if he is going to refer to them.

The Speaker: The House is entitled to see the reference that was read and the document containing that reference, but I do not think that they are entitled to have the whole document. Otherwise, yesterday when a quotation was made from a book, by extension, I would have had to have a photocopy of that whole book. Therefore, I would just ask that the photocopy be made of the quotation that was used, and that it be laid upon the Table of the House. I also know that the same document was made available to all Members who attended the meeting at Lancaster House, in the UK, in December 2002, though I know that all Members of this Honourable House were not present.

I rule that the document containing that specific quotation be laid upon the Table of the House; otherwise, we would be here all day trying to photocopy documents.

Continue, Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

I do not think that I should go much further with this matter. I think these matters have been aired properly.

The Leader of the Opposition made reference to one letter in the Caymanian Compass. I firmly believe that it is only two people writing those letters and not the person from East End. That is my humble belief.

They cannot write unless they try to denigrate somebody, and that letter is riddled with denigration. When they want to talk about integrity and who the Caymanian people can elect, I hope they are not talking about themselves, because the previous Minister of Tourism has yet to prove to the country where the $10 million for Pedro Castle has gone. We can find neither hide nor hair of it. The past Leader of Government Business—who is the foremost letter writer in the group—ought to hide his face and run when he wants to face the public, because he got away with more dirt in this country than anybody else.

Mr. Speaker, we are facing one serious situation now, with Island Air, which he did not do anything about.

One point that the Opposition Members tried to put forward was that parties were formed without public input. How can parties be formed without public input? Parties were not formed before the election, but that does not say that you could not form parties after the election. We can form parties anytime. We are going to have to run in the next election on that basis, but I can say this: the formation of the United Democratic Party was done up front, in such a way that Caymanian people could have protested against it, and so was the opposite party. That did not happen—why? The Caymanian people felt it was not hidden, and were somewhat at ease—enough to stand back and watch without fear.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I would not even take the time of this Honourable House to continue to refer to the Opposition. All I can say is: if they were so professional and educated, why are we in such a mess that there are things that will never be done for the next five or six years, whichever government gets in? It is because the past Leader of Government Business, up to 2000, did such a poor job with the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), and others, that we still cannot get out of the mess. If he had paid attention, as he was supposed to do, we would be in a better position today.

I say no more, Mr. Speaker. I think the Members have all cleared the air.

In closing, I want to reiterate that we are but here doing what the Opposition have asked us to do.

In regard to the appointments of the Constitutional Commissioners (and as I said, I am wrapping up here), when they were appointed, I was curious, even from then, about the one who had run in the last election. I was curious because he had just contested the General Election. I realised then, and it is confirmed now, that it was inappropriate to appoint that person at that time. Mr. Speaker, independence and the absence of favour to a particular political party must be conditions precedent for the appointment of Constitutional Commissioners. That is the argument to which I still hold. All three of them, I repeat, were connected. Given the circumstances, and seeing that one of them is on the platform today, it would have been impossible for that person to be an independent Commissioner.

I believe he has done himself great harm, as a Constitutional Commissioner, by his participation in the recent political debate on the matter. What is even more unfortunate, and more serious, is that his recent statement calls into question his contribution to the draft Constitution. By extension, it must also call into question the credibility of the whole process, and whether the draft Constitution truly reflects what the people desire in a new, modernised Constitution of the Cayman Islands.

I firmly believe that that is why, when the United Democratic Party held several district meetings and other consultations, we found that many people had fundamental disagreements with the draft Constitution. This is why the United Democratic Party would like to see the changes to the draft Constitution that we have now indicated. Clearly, if one considers that Commissioner's comments on the matter, and observes his interaction in the political furor and debate, one would certainly reach the irresistible conclusion that he was not, and is not, an independent Constitutional Commissioner, and should not have been appointed to serve on such an important commission, whose work will significantly influence the economic and political direction of our Isles for many years to come.

Clearly, Mr. Speaker, that Commissioner should have understood that he has a moral obligation to the country—as a Constitutional Commissioner if for no other reason—to stay out of the political debate on the draft Constitution. He is one of the authors of this draft Constitution. He, in particular, should stay out of the politics of it. If they went back and explained publicly, it would be a different matter, but they sit on a platform where I and other Members are being ridiculed, and say that the Government is only doing this because of our interests. If he were a candidate, Mr. Speaker, and he lost, and if they somehow thought that creating the “one man, one vote” would keep me out, and therefore keep out—as the Second Elected Member for George Town said—those who are with me, then it must be for their self-interest that they are there.

Mr. Speaker, as I have said, all Members have aired their feelings on this matter. I trust that when we come to vote, each Member will search his or her conscience. If, at this late stage, they want to say that they do not want what they asked for, then they ought to say that, but they asked for it. They asked for single-member constituencies. We said we would phase it in and we believe that the capital, George Town, is a good place to start that process.

If one of our Ministers says that he has nothing against “one man, one vote”, and that he would support it; if the Opposition say that they want—at least in principle—“one man, one vote”; and if the Boundary Commissioners say that the George Town district supported it, we say, “Let us try it.”

Mr. Speaker, we can make all the constituencies we want. No constitution can work unless the people elected to work with it can cooperate and work together.

It is not that the parties are going to give us greater democracy; to some extent they will give us better representation. It is the people who are elected, and on that basis, the country will judge us, as it will judge the Opposition's record.

I thank Members for their support. We look going forward to implementing the position where West Bay has one extra man, and George Town has one extra representative, and we try the system of “one man, one vote” now, in George Town.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, this brings us to the conclusion of the debate for the proposed new draft Constitution. The question is:

“BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House debates the proposed new draft Constitution laid on the Table of the Legislative Assembly on the 2 October 2003;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, upon the completion of the debate, this Honourable House resolves itself into a Committee of the whole House to consider the proposed new draft Constitution and report to this House, that the Committee has considered the paper;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House approves any proposals and/or amendments arising out of the consideration by the Committee.”

However, we have seen, on the Order Paper for today, that on the completion of the debate on Government Motion No. 05/03, which is titled, “Debate on the Report of the Proposed New Draft Constitution”, we move straight into the debate on the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003, on the basis that both are so very closely connected, and one relates to the other.

I will, indeed, put the question on this, but with the understanding that we will then move to the debate on the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003, after which we will move into Committee on the proposed new draft Constitution and on the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003.

However, before putting the question, we are due for a morning break, so we will take a 15-minute break and we will be back here by 11.45 am.

Proceedings suspended at 11.28 am

Proceedings resumed at 11.59 am

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Prior to taking the morning break, I had mentioned my intentions to move straight into the debate of Government Motion No. 6/03, entitled, “Debate on the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003”. However, I think it would be a much cleaner exercise if we followed the wording of Government Motion No. 5/03 itself, which states that we should go into Committee after the debate on the Motion. One member of the Opposition had initially mentioned this procedure, and we are now going to be in compliance with the Motion as it now reads. Therefore, we will be able to dispose of Motion No. 5/03, which is entitled, "The Debate on the Proposed New Draft Constitution", prior to moving into the debate on Government Motion No. 6/03, entitled, "Debate on the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Commission 2003".

After the debate on that Motion, we will move into Committee, as in the case of the Motion now before the House. Further, I propose to take the question on the Motion in two parts. Part one will be to vote on the First and Second Resolve of the Motion. The Third Resolve will be voted on separately. I should explain, however, that the Third Resolve is in compliance with Standing Order 19 (3), which states, "When such a paper contains proposals, [such as the draft Constitution we have before us] the Member of the Government who presented the paper may, following consideration in Committee, subsequently move that the House approve the proposals set out in the paper, without amendment or with such amendment as he may incorporate in the motion arising out of consideration in the Committee." It is therefore the intention that, before we meet in Committee, those details that were already given by the Honourable Leader of Government Business, in his presentation of the Motion, will be stated specifically under the Third Resolve, which will be moved in detail.

Therefore, the Third Resolve is just being voted now in principle, but the full Motion will be voted on after the Committee stage of this Government Motion.

I might say, before putting the question, that after the votes are taken on this, we will take a break for lunch and return at 2 pm.

The question is: "BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House debates the proposed new draft Constitution laid on the Table of the Legislative Assembly on the 2 October 2003;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, upon the completion of the debate, this Honourable House resolves itself into a Committee of the whole House to consider the proposed new draft Constitution and report to this House, that the Committee has considered the paper."

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Question Put on First and Second Resolves: Agreed. First and Second Resolves of Government Motion No. 5/03 passed.

The Speaker: The Third Resolve: "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House approves any proposals and/ or amendments arising out of consideration by the Committee."

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, can we have a division please?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

Division No. 7/03

Ayes: 6

Hon. W. McKeever Bush
Hon. Roy Bodden
Hon. Gilbert A. McLean
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Hon. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.
Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

Noes: 5

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.
Mr. Anthony S. Eden
Ms. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Absentees with apology: 3

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly
Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks

The Speaker: The results of the vote on the Third Resolve are 6 Ayes, 5 Noes and 3 Absentees.

Question Put on Third Resolve: Agreed. Third Resolve passed by majority.

The Speaker: I would like to explain for the record, and for clarity for the listening public, that since this is a Constitutional matter, the Official Members did not take part in this vote.

Honourable Members, I propose now to take the lunch break. I ask you all to be back here at 2.00 pm promptly.

Proceedings suspended at 12.08 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.34 pm

READING BY THE HONOURABLE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies for Absence and Late Attendance

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Second Official Member for the afternoon sitting of the House. Honourable Members, we will now move into the Committee of the House.

Standing Order 19(2)

The Chairman: Honourable Members, as mentioned before the break, I propose to deal with this draft Constitution in accordance with Standing Order 19. I would like to read through that so that all Honourable Members are fully acquainted with the procedures, even though I know each one of you has a copy of these Standing Orders.

Standing Order 19 states:

"(1) At any time after the presentation of a paper under Standing Order 18 (Presentation of papers), the Member of the Government who presented the paper may give notice of a motion that the House resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House to consider the paper. Debate upon that motion shall be confined to the general principles there set forth.

2) If a motion under paragraph (1) is agreed upon, the House shall resolve itself into Committee. Debate in Committee may extend to all the details of the paper which shall be discussed paragraph by paragraph unless otherwise decided by the Presiding Officer who shall have regard to the convenience of the House."

In view of the importance of this particular document dealing with the Constitution, I propose to discuss it paragraph by paragraph. Standing Order 19 (2) continues: "No question shall be put on, nor any amendment proposed to, any part of the paper and at the conclusion of the debate no question shall be put save that the Member who moved the motion under paragraph (1) shall report to the House that the Committee has considered the paper.

3) When such a paper contains proposals [as does this draft Constitution] the Member of the Government who presented the paper may, following consideration in Committee, subsequently move that the House approve the proposals set out in the paper, without amendment or with such amendment as he may incorporate in the motion arising out of consideration in the Committee".

I advised Members that at the end of the Committee sitting, the Honourable Leader of Government Business will, in fact, make such a motion as deemed necessary, with or without amendments.

It is also being recommended, procedurally, that, since we are dealing with the whole draft Constitution, we start from the very beginning of the Constitution, which will in fact cover the citation and commencement going forward. I will now pass that on to Madam Clerk.

House in Committee at 3.35 pm

COMMITTEE

Proposed New Draft Constitution

The Clerk: "The Cayman Islands Constitution Order 2003".

Clause 1

The Clerk: Clause 1 Citation and commencement

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, I do not think that there are any objections for these areas. I would propose that we move through them quickly until we get to the first sections on Part I, dealing with fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual. Some Members may think otherwise, but there was no such objection prior.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. There is only one question. Perhaps it can easily be answered. I am looking under Statutory Instruments at the beginning of the document, right after the letter from Baroness Amos. While we know it is a draft, we have "2003" repeated, I think, six times. Although it is in brackets, the question is: Is there any reason for us to question that, as it is fixed for 2003?

The Chairman: I think that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has put his finger on it. The fact that it is in brackets suggests that it was not a fixed date. That is why it is in brackets.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am looking under Citation, construction and commencement—No.1.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, I agree with you. When they did this, back in February, they might have wished that we would have finished. That might have been the hope, but I do not think there is anything material here to do. I suggest that we move forward, because we all recognise that it will not come into effect at this particular time.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I have one last question, Mr. Chairman. You said that I hit the nail on the head because it is in brackets, but under Citation, construction and commencement, it does read:

"1.—(1) This order may be cited as the Cayman Islands (Constitution) (Amendment) Order 2003." It also reads: "(2) The principal Order and this Order may be cited together as the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Orders 1972 to 2003." Again, that was part of the question."

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I may just complete—

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I understand. I want to make sure that the whole of those two sections also applies to all we have been saying for the last two to three minutes.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, to satisfy the Member, and out of an abundance of caution, let us say that we agree to change that to whatever date is agreed upon between us and the UK.

[Pause]

The Chairman: I would like to make sure that we are on the same wavelength, Honourable Members. One of these is part of a letter from a Mr. A.K. Galloway, Clerk of the Privy Council, and the other forms part of the draft Constitution.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, I think the confusion may have arisen because what my Honourable colleague, the Leader of the Opposition, was referring to was really the interim document, which has already been promulgated and commenced. Those provisions he spoke about do not really appear in this substantive instrument, which would give effect to the Constitution.

The Chairman: Let us continue.

Clauses 2 to 10

The Clerk:

- Clause 2 Interpretation.
- Clause 3 Revocations.
- Clause 4 Establishment of Constitution.
- Clause 5 Existing Laws.
- Clause 6 Existing offices and officers.
- Clause 7 Legislative Assembly.
- Clause 8 General election.
- Clause 9 Pending legal proceedings.
- Clause 10 Power reserved by Her Majesty.

- Schedule 1 to the Order Instruments revoked.
- Schedule 2 to the Order Part I, Fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Members will recall that in the talks at Lancaster House, we proposed that the fundamental rights and freedom of the individual would form part of the Constitution, but would not be put into force until sometime during 2006. Mr. Chairman, we have had to give it much talk since then, as we have had discussions with various bodies. As I intimated in the opening statement of this debate, we would prefer to see this particular section, Part I, the fundamental rights and freedom of the individual, placed in a separate Act—for many reasons, some of which are best not elaborated here. Simply, we believe that it would be more workable, and more accepted by the general public and learned scholars as well, if this were a separate Act, just as the United Kingdom themselves have.

Therefore, at this stage I will move that Part I, the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual, be taken out of the proposed draft Constitution, and when that comes back we will deal with it in a separate Act. Further, I propose to have the various sections and rights done in a draft Bill, and hope to have that to send to the United Kingdom so that they understand clearly where we stand and what we are trying to do.

I do make that Motion at this time, Mr. Chairman.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, those of us who were here after the 1992 Elections remember clearly certain amendments that were proposed, as well as the fact that there was a request not to have a Bill of Rights in the Constitution. I understand that that is a different situation, because what the Honourable Leader of Government Business is proposing is not that we will not have a Bill of Rights. The issue is how it is crafted, and whether it is a constitutional instrument, or in legislation, whether by act or law.

Although I hear his proposal, I would ask if the Chairman would allow me a minute or two to confer with my colleagues. We will reply fairly quickly, because we would like to move forward with this, rather than dilly-dally.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, I propose to take a suspension for 5 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 3.50 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.53 pm

The Chairman: Please be seated.

Clauses 1 to 11

The Clerk:

- Clause 1 Fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual
- Clause 2 Protection of right to life
- Clause 3 Protection from inhumane treatment
- Clause 4 Protection from slavery and forced labour
- Clause 5 Protection of right to personal liberty
- Clause 6 Provisions to secure protection of law
- Clause 7 Protection of right of prisoners to humane treatment
- Clause 8 Protection for private and family life in the privacy of home and other property
- Clause 9 Protection of the right to marry etcetera

Clause 10 Protection of freedom of conscience.
 Clause 11 Protection of freedom of expression

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Mr. Chairman, the parliamentary Opposition proposes an amendment to Section 11. Is this an appropriate time to raise it?

The Chairman: The Protection of Freedom of Expression.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Mr. Chairman, as outlined in the Position Paper that we presented to London, we proposed that Section 11, Subsection 2 include the following additional wording: "No law shall make any provision that abridges the freedom—"

The Chairman: I am sorry. Could you say whether it would be subparagraph 4 where you would put that in?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: No, Sir. The proposal is that the above-mentioned wording be added to the Bill of Rights, as subsection 2 of section 11, and that the other subsections of section 11 be renumbered accordingly.

The Chairman: I see.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: The objective is to ensure that there is no doubt about the protection of the freedom of the press. The proposed amending provision is: "No Law shall make any provision that abridges the freedom of the press." That provision will, of course, be subject to the usual exceptions, limitations and restrictions, which are contained in the substantive section—section 11. It does not stand alone; it is part of section 11.

The Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition, were you going to comment on this?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: No, the Second Elected Member for George Town has already explained, Mr. Chairman. However, I know that the Clerk would be eternally grateful if we circulated what my colleague just read, so we will do so. That is all I wanted to ensure.

The Chairman: All right.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Can you repeat the wording, since it is not written?

The Chairman: I think that the question of typing should not be a problem, if you have a text that you want to have typed.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: I actually do have it in writing. We can simply photocopy my page, Mr. Chairman, if that is easier.

The Chairman: All right. The Sergeant-at-Arms could simply pick that up and get some photocopies.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Mr. Chairman, I see, perhaps, a little doubt on the faces of some of the Members on the other side. I can try to explain the impact of this.

Section 11 deals with the protection of freedom of expression. It says:

"1) Except with his consent, no person shall be hindered in the enjoyment of his freedom of expression, and for the purposes of this section the said freedom includes freedom to hold opinions and to receive and impart ideas and information without interference, and freedom from interference with his correspondence or other means of communication.

"2) Nothing contained in or done under the authority of any law shall be held to be inconsistent with or in contravention of this section to the extent that the law in question makes provision-

a) that is reasonably required-

i. in the interests of defence, public safety, public order or public morality; or

ii. for the purpose of protecting the rights, reputations and freedoms of other persons or the private lives of persons concerned in legal proceedings, preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, maintaining the authority and independence of the courts, regulating telephony, telegraphy, posts, wireless broadcasting, television or other means of communication or regulating public exhibitions or public entertainments; or

b) that imposes restrictions upon public officers,

"except so far as that provision or, as the case may be, the thing done under its authority is shown not to be reasonably justifiable in a democratic society."

Therefore, there is a whole host of restrictions, limitations and conditions placed, by virtue of those provisions, on the freedom of expression. All that is being proposed by the Opposition, now, is that the following additional words be added to section 11 as a new subsection 2: "No law shall make any provision that abridges the freedom of the press." The following subsections would be renumbered accordingly. That way, it would be absolutely clear that that provision would be subject to those expressed restrictions and limitations, in the same way as all of the other freedoms of expression.

The Chairman: Would you repeat the text of that subsection?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: "No law shall make any provision that abridges the freedom of the press."

The Chairman: I will not, as you know under the Standing Orders, be putting a question on this, but I would invite any comments from the members of the Committee.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, as I see it, we have no problem with that. This particular section—Clause 11—deals extensively with the protection of freedom of expression. At all times, when anything untoward happened in any particular section of the press, the members of the public would be protected. That would be my concern, and I am sure that that would be the concern of the Members. For instance, subsection 2, which would become subsection 3 under the Members' proposal, would read:

"Nothing contained in or done under the authority of any law shall be held to be inconsistent with or in contravention of this section to the extent that the law in question makes provision-

- a) that is reasonably required-
  - i. in the interests of defence, public safety, public order or public morality; or
  - ii. for the purpose of protecting the rights, reputations and freedoms of other persons or the private lives of persons concerned in legal proceedings, preventing the disclosure of information received in confidence, maintaining the authority and independence of the courts, regulating telephony, telegraphy, posts, wireless broadcasting, television or other means of communication or regulating public exhibitions or public entertainments; or
- b) that imposes restrictions upon public officers,

"except so far as that provision or, as the case may be, the thing done under its authority is shown not to be reasonably justifiable in a democratic society."

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, the public would be protected all around. There would be much room for peace, and what we would normally call public rights, or the rights of the person.

The Chairman: I had requested that the proposed amendment be circulated. Sergeant, could you please have a copy of that circulated?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Mr. Chairman, there is only one difficulty with that. It is on the same page with another proposal, which will come shortly. I think one of my colleagues has another copy, so that is all right.

The Chairman: Is your copy typed?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: This has simply been lifted from the position paper we referred to earlier. It is page 27: Protection of Freedom of Expression.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town, do you have any further comments on Clause 11?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Mr. Chairman, I do not disagree with anything that the Honourable Leader of Government Business has said about that. However, that very short amendment was proposed to us by certain members of the press corps, during the round of talks. The point I found most compelling was that, in seeking to craft a Constitution that is reflective of the wishes, aspirations and attitudes of our country, it does say something about a country, about the way it views the press and the importance of freedom of the press, if there is express provision in that Constitution about it. I do not disagree, and this is something that we dealt with, to some extent, in London. I do not disagree that this section, as currently drafted, more likely than not covers the freedom of the press as well, even though the press is not significantly mentioned. However, for the reasons that I just articulated, we feel it is a good thing to include it in the Constitution, if that is possible.

The Chairman: My understanding was that the Government's side generally accepts this proposal, and if that is indeed the case, we will have it circulated. However, I will ask the Clerk to continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: That is correct, Mr. Chairman. We have no problem with that. I think we are all on the same wavelength, for the same reasons.

Clauses 12 to 18

The Clerk:

Clause 12	Protection of freedom of assembly and association
Clause 13	Protection of freedom of movement.
Clause 14	Protection from discrimination on grounds of race, etcetera

Clause 15	Protection from deprivation of property
Clause 16	Provisions for periods of public emergency
Clause 17	Enforcement of fundamental rights
Clause 18	Interpretation of Part 1

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Before we leave Part 1, Mr. Chairman, there is another provision that the parliamentary Opposition proposes be included in the Bill of Rights.

The Chairman: Is it within the 18 clauses that we have just read?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: No, Sir. That is why I left it to the end. It is to give constitutional protection to the public's right to public information, in furtherance of more open, transparent and accountable government—Clause 2 of the Constitution Modernisation Checklist.

The proposal, Sir, is this: that there be added, as a fundamental right, the following: "Every person in the Cayman Islands shall have the right to access of public information in possession of the Government of the Cayman Islands, including any board, authority, agency, committee, organisation, or other deliberative, consultative or advisory bodies established by the Legislative Assembly, or the Government, under any law or otherwise, save where the disclosure of such information will adversely affect the security of the Cayman Islands or the United Kingdom public safety, public order, public morality or the interests of other persons, which shall be protected as provided for by law."

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I will add quickly to that. In other words, if we look at the very last part of the provision, what it is really saying is that freedom of information legislation will specify the exceptions to this provision that is being proposed. It is not a free-handed provision that is being sought, but the legislation concerning freedom of information would specify what this would not apply to. I wanted to clarify that, so that it was not thought that this was simply an open-ended proposition with regard to access to public information.

The Chairman: Similarly, Second Elected Member for George Town, could we get that circulated?

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Chairman, I agree with the principle articulated by the Second Elected Member for George Town, speaking for the Opposition, when he articulated this position. However, Sir, I have some concerns that the kind of society the Cayman Islands is, and the importance of confidentiality in our continuing quest to remain a jurisdiction of excellence in financial matters, would be perceived to be under some threat, particularly in light of the compliances and the demands of international organisations and authorities that we have being made upon us, periodically, at this time. I believe that we are in the process of establishing a Freedom of Information Bill, and certainly, these matters will be best left to be covered in that Bill. I am afraid that to include and incorporate that into a Bill of Rights will be a radical departure from the Bill of Rights of any other country. It may even be some other kind of legal contravention, as far as our political administration is concerned. I would rather this clause not be included in the Bill of Rights. Certainly, I cannot support it, and I have been, for many years, a stalwart proponent of the Bill of Rights. I want to end by saying that I do not see the necessity of this being included in the Bill of Rights, because it really does not concern itself with a life-and-death situation.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I will try to deal with what the Honourable Minister of Education has said, as closely to the order in which he dealt with these matters as I can. We are cognisant, on this side, of the need for confidentiality in regard to Government business in some respects. We are also conscious of the concerns and perceived threats to which the Minister of Education has referred.

However, we are satisfied, having had the benefit of considerable advice and discussions, that the provisions that are contained in this draft—that is, ". . . save where disclosure of such information will adversely affect the security of the Cayman Islands or the United Kingdom public safety, public order, public morality or the interests of other persons which shall be protected as provided for by law"—are more than adequate to ensure that any sensitive information can be withheld lawfully.

As to his other point about this going further than the Bill of Rights in other jurisdictions, that is indeed so, in relation to those in this region. However, I think we should be conscious of the fact that what is being proposed in Cayman now is what was proposed in the Universal Declaration on Human Rights, which was signed following the end of World War II, more than 50 years ago. These are what I call the first generation of human rights. In many other, more progressive jurisdictions, they are known as the third or fourth generation of rights. It is quite amazing to note, in some jurisdictions—and surprisingly, in some of the African states—what has now become a human right. Although this might be a bit progressive for the ultra-conservative Minister of Education, we are certainly not breaking any new ground by proposing that freedom, or the right to public information, is something that should be protected as a human right—not at all.

As for his point that legislation is coming that will set out what information is available, the terms under which it is available, and the circumstances in which it can be given etcetera, that is well and good. That would certainly be a necessary vehicle to give life and effect to this proposal. However, it is one thing to have that mechanism in place; it is quite another to have it enshrined in whatever legislation exists in terms of the protection of human rights, as a human right. It gives it a standing that the other, inferior, legislation simply would not be able to do.

Again, it says something about the kind of society we are trying to create in this rather slow march to a more democratic, open, accountable and transparent government—all of which are buzz words that have been around now for four or five years, which the UK is fond of and which all of us here have grown very fond of ourselves. Even when we are not entirely fond of the concepts, we are certainly fond of trotting out the words on occasions such as these. We firmly believe that this is something that should be enshrined in whatever legislation we have that sets out the human rights that are protected in these Cayman Islands.

The Chairman: We have just had the script with the text of the recommendations circulated, and so that we are all on the same wavelength, I will read through this again.

The proposal being made by the parliamentary Opposition, under the title Right to Public Information, reads as follows: “Every person in the Cayman Islands shall have the right to access of public information in possession of the government of the Cayman Islands, including any Board, Authority, Agency, Committee, Organisation or other deliberative, consultative or advisory body established by the Legislative Assembly or the Government under any law or otherwise, save where the disclosure of such information will adversely affect the security of the Cayman Islands or the United Kingdom public safety, public order, public morality or the interest of other persons which shall be protected as provided by law.”

In reply to that, the Honourable Minister of Education did express concern, and also informed the House that the Freedom of Information Bill is now under active consideration.

As I mentioned earlier, we are not taking a vote on this. It is a matter of consensus, as we move along. Those areas that are accepted will be included in the Motion brought by the Leader of Government Business at the end.

The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Borden: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I took careful note of what the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town said about our evolving this document after many years, and that this is just beginning. There is an old Latin expression, festina lente, which, when translated into English means, “hasten slowly”. Mr. Chairman, this is our first serious attempt at crafting a Bill of Rights; therefore, I suggest that, rather than concentrating on including everything at this one time, we cover the most fundamental and sensitive areas, and, as we garner experience, then we include other areas.

As for this whole business of the interests of other persons, there is no precise definition of what the interests of other persons are or can be; rather, it is left to the perception of the person seeking to enquire into those interests.

I am humbly suggesting that to open public information—every board, authority, agency, committee, organisation or other deliberative consultative or advisory body established by the Legislative Assembly—will be to open Pandora’s box. What might start out as the most genuine of interests is going to wind up being something that is detrimental to the development of these Islands.

I certainly support freedom of information, but certain parameters have to be laid out. Remember, the Cayman Islands is a service-based economy; if we do this, we are opening ourselves up to more than natural inquiry and inquisitiveness. We are going to be creating a monster, which we will come to regret having done. I cannot, in good faith, support this, and I speak for the United Democratic Party Government.

Thank you.

The Chairman: We have heard the comments, on behalf of the Government side, from the Honourable Minister of Education, and we have taken note of the comments by the Second Elected Member for George Town. I think the consensus is that the Government bench is not very happy with this most recent proposal. As I mentioned, we are not taking a vote at this stage; this will be taken into account at the end of the deliberation of the Committee.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I think that both sides understand the position that each side has taken. However, our thoughts are that, whether via the Constitution, an Act or legislation, the Bill of Rights will not come into effect until the year 2006. We assume that freedom of information legislation would be placed prior to that, and that any such legislation that would be in place would have taken care of the fears expressed by the Minister of Education on behalf of the Government. That is how we see it: hence the proposal. That is the reason why, although we hear what the Government is saying, we would still press for that to be part and parcel of the Constitution, and it is on the record.

The Chairman: Thank you very much. Those points have been noted.

Madam Clerk, would you continue please.

Clauses 19 to 33

The Clerk:

	PART II – THE GOVERNOR
Clause 19	The Governor.
Clause 20	Deputy Governor.
Clause 21	Acting Governor.
Clause 22	Governor's Deputy.
Clause 23	Emoluments, personal staff and expenditure of the Governor.
Clause 24	Exercise of Governor's functions.
Clause 25	Governor may act contrary to the advice of Cabinet.
Clause 26	Powers of pardon, et cetera
Clause 27	Establishment and procedure of Advisory Committee.
Clause 28	Powers to dispose of land.
Clause 29	Public seal.
Clause 30	Offices and appointments.
	PART III – THE EXECUTIVE
Clause 31	Executive authority.
Clause 32	The Cabinet.

The Chairman: Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Clause 32 deals with the Cabinet and the proposal is that, under 1 (c), there is a recommended amendment. We would recommend that the wording be: "six other Ministers, one of whom would be Deputy Chief Minister, appointed by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister from among the elected Members of the Legislative Assembly."

Section 32 (4) reads: "Notwithstanding subsections (2) and (3) of this section, the Governor shall not appoint as Chief Minister a person who has held office as Chief Minister during two consecutive parliamentary terms unless at least one parliamentary term has expired since he last held that office; and for the purposes of this subsection a parliamentary term shall be deemed to be a period commencing when the Legislative Assembly first meets after being constituted under this Constitution or after its dissolution at any time, and terminating when the Assembly is next dissolved." We recommend the deletion of this subsection.

The Chairman: That is, Section 32 (4).

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Section 32(4).

Section 32(6) says: "If occasion arises for making an appointment of any Minister between a dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the polling in the next following general election, a person who was an elected member of the Legislative Assembly immediately before the dissolution may be appointed as a Minister as if he were still a member of the Legislative Assembly."

Our recommended amendment to that would be: "If an occasion arises for making an appointment of any Minister between a dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the polling in the next following general election, a person who was an elected member of the Legislative Assembly immediately before the dissolution may be appointed as a Minister by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister, as if he were still a member of the Legislative Assembly".

The Chairman: Those are the suggestions under section 32. Are there any further comments on that?

Mr. Aiden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

On behalf of the Opposition, I can say that the Government's proposed change to section 32(1)(c) of the draft Constitution, which reads, "six other Ministers, one of whom would be Deputy Chief Minister, appointed by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister from among the elected members of the Legislative Assembly", is something that we are prepared to agree with. However, we are unable to agree with the proposal to delete subsection (4), which relates to term limits on the holder of the office of Chief Minister, limiting his tenure to two consecutive parliamentary terms, unless at least one parliamentary term has expired since he last held that office.

That provision appears in the draft Constitution because it was one of those points that was agreed between the Government and ourselves at the summit on 29 November, 2002, and put forward in London during the meetings at Lancaster House, from 9 to 11 December, 2002.

It is a position that we made plain in our position paper, and that was arrived at as the result of significant representation from the general public over the course of our consultative exercises.

What has been expressed to us is concern about the creation of an autocratic office, which is something that I think has been reflected in the attitude of Caymanians, over the course of many years, to the establishment of this office of Chief Minister. Caymanians have seen the way that the office of Chief Minister operates in most of the other Overseas Territories, and it is not something of which they generally approve.

Indeed, Mr. Chairman, those of us who are in the play would say that the move to a Chief Minister is more than overdue for the Cayman Islands. Full ministerial governments have existed in most of the other Overseas Territories for many years. We are many years behind in that respect, but our people have staunchly resisted that move, because they wanted to ensure that whoever is in charge of the country has sufficient checks and balances imposed on the office. They do not want a situation such as exists in Antigua, for example, which is an independent country, but in which one family has essentially run the Government for the last 40 years. The imposition of term limits on the office of Chief Minister would go a long way towards alleviating those concerns and mitigating those sorts of situations, if not entirely preventing them from happening. That is why we included that provision in our position paper. That is why we sought to persuade the Government, last year, to agree with us that that provision should go into our draft Constitution, and that is the reason why it is there. It is a position that is a considered one, on our part, and that we are going to stand by.

I do not think I can say more than that. The Government have clearly taken their position, and the record will have to reflect the difference of opinion.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Chairman, why is it that we always pick the most invidious examples from a book that is representative of the whole spectrum? Is it some defect in our psyche? Democracy is not best served if we impose this restriction. Consider that the person who is Chief Minister has first to come up through the ranks of his party, and maintain the confidence of his Ministers in Cabinet, as well as the rank and file of his party. That is one set of checks and balances. Even before he reaches that level, he has to convince his constituents to elect him. Democracy, as I understand it in this case, is best served by letting the person who, by popular will, rises to lead his party. Those kinds of restrictions should not be imposed upon him.

Certainly, the example cited of Antigua is an example in the extreme. There is no other jurisdiction in the Caribbean where that situation obtains today. Even as we speak, it is under serious and significant challenge, which is threatening its lifespan. I do not believe that, in a small jurisdiction such as this, we should impose these kinds of restrictions on a system that we wish to work to its best effect.

Indeed, I remember when we had the Constitutional Commissioners, Smith and Wallace, visit. Sir Frederick Smith told us that the best determinant of the tenure of any elected representative is the confidence that representative gains at the polls, from his constituents, and the confidence he gains in the Cabinet, from his colleagues. I do not think we need to write in any other restriction but that, and I hear the voices of an oligarchy, which is jealous and would like to keep some people under their thumb. As someone who is supportive of Westminster's style of democracy, I cannot impose this restriction on anyone.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for West Bay

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Chairman, I am cognisant of time, but I am also cognisant of the fact that potentially, these records would be reviewed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. I think it is always good for there to be perspective given to comments.

I am significantly younger than the Second Elected Member for George Town. For as long as I have known myself, I have known that constitutional change in the Cayman Islands has been resisted—not so much because Caymanians have looked at other Overseas Territories. Most Caymanians have no idea what is happening in other Overseas Territories, what their constitutional modernisation agendas are, or what their Constitutions are. I think that what Caymanians have feared all along, about the Chief Minister, is that they saw themselves having no tangible way of determining who was going to be the Chief Minister. Caymanians did not want horse-bartering and horse-trading to exist, as happened after the 2000 General Elections, or for that to be the premise upon which a Chief Minister is chosen.

I believe firmly that there has been misinformation, over the years, about the position of Chief Minister; however, the one truth that has been put out there, about which Caymanians have clamoured, is the fact that there was no organised politics in the Cayman Islands. Caymanians went to the polls every four years, but they had little to no direct contact with their MLAs. There was no way that they knew who their MLAs were going to support; no one knew who the Cabinet was going to be. No one went to the polls on the basis of who the Cabinet, or the Leader of Government Business, was going to be. I believe firmly in my consultation—and our consultations have been wider than the consultations of the Opposition on this point, and just as deep. I always like to remind my good friend, the Second Elected Member for George Town, that he held no public meetings for one full year, whilst we, in West Bay, held more than five public meetings in the first year after being elected. Therefore, he cannot come here now, with his hypocrisy, and start preaching about consultation, and all these great virtues. This is simply a very narrow-minded view that has been put forward—and I know the quarter from which it has come forward, in the People's Progressive Movement. Mr. Chairman, we have to maintain democracy in the Cayman Islands.

We need to move forward, in terms of party politics—organised, safe, party politics that are in the best interests of the community. The best interests of our community are served by telling our people that we are confident that they will go to the polls and make their democratic voices heard.

Even if we were to go down the line of thought put forward by the Opposition, that a Chief Minister could be so autocratic, they are certainly not term-limiting his tenure as an Elected Member. Are they telling us that this person, who is so awful and so autocratic, is not going to run the country from behind the scenes? Is he still not going to tell whomever he puts up as Chief Minister what to do? Mr. Chairman, this is farcical. We are in the year 2003, and here we have, in these Honourable Chambers, this sort of nonsense still being perpetuated. I tell you, as a young person in this country, that it certainly does not speak well. I am glad that young people are not going to hear—I hope they do not hear—these proceedings, because this really upsets me. It upsets my core as a young human being called a Caymanian.

Caymanians still do not know the constitutional status in other Overseas Territories, and the Member knows that. They have not followed any developments that have scared them, in constitutional changes in other Overseas Territories. That is not what has scared them. What has scared them is that the office of Chief Minister is significant, and it is significant for a reason. We need a captain on our ship. Every ship has a captain. When the older men went to sea, the captain did not simply give up his captaincy of his vessels halfway across the Atlantic because he had reached 100,000 nautical miles, and was now going to pull up some other person to become the captain of the ship. He continued being the captain of the ship, because he enjoyed the skill and he was there to be the captain.

People did not see themselves being able to influence, or know directly, how they were going to choose their Chief Minister. It was therefore logical that, in the early 90s, this caused much concern. I voted in 1992, and I remember the constitutional arguments. I do not know about the Second Elected Member for George Town, but I can tell him that in moving around my district in those days, when I was an extremely young man, I completely understood what people were saying. People were saying that they needed to know who their Chief Minister was going to be before they went to the polls. That is going to happen in 2004. Let us move the Cayman Islands forward. Let us not be driven by personalities. Let us be driven by what is going to be good for our children and our grandchildren. If the Cayman Islands decide, 10 years from now, to elect someone to the office of Chief Minister and keep him there for 30 years, and they have 30 years of unparalleled growth, all the better for our future generations.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, thank you. I would also like to comment on the proposal that the section in question be deleted. I think we have a very good insight into this matter that is being proposed by the Opposition. I suspect it is coming up again as the result of persons who, over 12 years ago, made similar recommendations. I would like to refer to the report of the Constitutional Commissioners 1991—Sir Fredrick Smith and Mr. Walter Wallace. This was in May 1991; it was the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners then. On page 13, under the heading, Limitation on Terms of Office, it reads: “We received a number of representations that the term of office of elected members of the Executive Council and the Legislative Assembly should be limited, for example, to two terms of four years each. Such a provision would be undemocratic and, to the best of our knowledge, would be without precedent in any Commonwealth country. Moreover, it could mean that the electors in a constituency could be deprived of an able, experienced, well-liked representative who would have been their choice for a third or more term of office had he not been debarred from standing as a candidate because of the limitation of terms. It could in fact mean the choice of second best. It could also serve to discourage an able candidate in the private sector from seeking a career in politics, knowing that it could only be for a limited period. We are therefore unable to support the proposal.”

Mr. Chairman, I think that is perhaps one of the best descriptions, from people who viewed the whole situation here objectively. For the same reasons, I do not support the concept.

The Chairman: Honourable members, we have aired this fairly well. I will be taking the next point from the Second Elected Member for George Town, and then one after that before we move on.

Mr. Aiden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I am sorry that the Second Elected Member for West Bay has left, because the rather unhelpful tone and attitude with which he addressed this issue this evening does not do a great deal to promote the kind of cooperation we generally seem to obtain here. I will forgive his youthful exuberance and passion, but I caution him in the use of the word, “hypocrisy”—certainly in relation to me. Such language is not only unparliamentary, but it is a difficult position for him to maintain, because he was a member of his Government’s negotiating team, which agreed to term limits a year ago. The impassioned argument he just put against the position is something he should have rehearsed a year ago.

Mr. Chairman, I am not going to rehearse, myself, what I said earlier, but simply address the point raised by the Honourable Minister of Health about what the Constitutional Commissioners in 1991 said about term limits.

They were referring specifically to Elected Members generally, not to the Chief Minister.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: They were referring to everyone.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, they were not referring to everyone. They were referring to limitations on the terms of office of Elected Members . . .

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: ...of the Executive Council and the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: They were referring to limitations on the terms of office of Elected Members of the Executive Council and the Legislative Assembly. They were not referring to the situation in relation to the office of Chief Minister, because the proposal that we have put forward would not prevent any Member from continuing in Cabinet for as long as he or she were elected, or appointed, to that position. It would simply put a limitation on how long you could hold the office of Chief Minister.

Mr. Chairman, I understand the Government's position, and I doubt that they are going to change, so I am not going to try to persuade them. For the record, however, I thought it was important for those points to be made.

The Chairman: Thank you very much. I will invite the Clerk to move forward with the sections.

Clause 33

The Clerk: Clause 33 Tenure of office of Chief Minister.

The Chairman: I am sorry. There was one section we did not deal with, and that was clause 32(6). I am not sure what the position of the Opposition is, on that.

Honourable Leader of Government Business, would you read that again please?

[Pause]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: It reads: "If occasion arises for making an appointment of any Minister between a dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the polling in the next following general election, a person who was an elected member of the Legislative Assembly immediately before the dissolution may be appointed as a Minister as if he were still a member of the Legislative Assembly."

There is also a recommended amendment, which reads: "If occasion arises for making an appointment of any Minister between the dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the polling in the next following general election, a person who was an elected member of the Legislative Assembly immediately before the dissolution may be appointed as a Minister . . ." and the addition is as follows: ". . . by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister."

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question? I know that my colleague, the Elected Member for East End, also has some concerns about the next recommended amendment, but I will stay with this one, looking at the word "may". The word "may" is not part of the recommended amendment; it is not new, because subsection (6) actually reads: ". . . a person who was an elected member of the Legislative Assembly immediately before the dissolution may be appointed..."

If the occasion arises for making an appointment of any Minister, I want to be very clear in my mind, and I want to make sure my colleagues interpret it in the same way. Is this saying that if a Minister has to be appointed between the dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the polling in the next following election, a Minister may be appointed who was not an Elected Member prior to dissolution of the House?

I am asking because it says "may". Why is the word "may" used and not "shall"?

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Health Services.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Before the Minister of Health Services speaks, perhaps he can clear up the issue, if he can understand my real question.

My interpretation is that you would not have that as part of the Constitution unless that is what was going to happen, if the occasion arose.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Chairman, my understanding of it is this: If an occasion arises after the House has been dissolved, and the election day would naturally follow, a person who was an Elected Member prior to the dissolution could be appointed by the Governor as a Minister, if he needed this person to be appointed. He should do so in the way we are suggesting: after the advice of the Chief Minister. It would also seem to me that in such an instance, it may not even be that the person was a Minister prior, but that the Governor could make such an appointment, if need be.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I understand that.

The Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I heard what the Minister said, but perhaps there is some barrier in my understanding. I am going to make one last attempt. I understood what he said, but it starts off with, "If the occasion arises for making an appointment of any Minister . . ." Therefore, for anything else here to happen, that occasion has to arise, which means the Governor needs to appoint a Minister. The timing of that is between the dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the results of the next general election; therefore, this subsection is giving His Excellency, the Governor, the option to appoint someone who, before the dissolution of the House, was an Elected Member—who does not have to be an Member of Cabinet, but simply an Elected Member of the House. However, because the House was dissolved, the Member is no longer an Elected Member.

The words, “in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister” are fine. That falls in line with the system we speak to. However, if the occasion arises, and the Governor is going to make the appointment, this word “may” tells me that he has the option to appoint someone else, or that he does not have to make the appointment. If he does not have to make the appointment, then what are we talking about? To me, this subsection is giving the Governor the authority to do so whenever the occasion arises.

If the occasion arose, and he did not have to do so, then we do not need anything. He would not have to do it if the occasion did not arise, but if the occasion arose, then he would need to do it. If the identification in this subsection is merely an option, then what are we dealing with?

It is not that I do not understand the other side of the coin, which is to say that if the occasion arose, the Governor must have the option. What I have to question is this: If he has an option, then we cannot say that the occasion has arisen, because once the occasion has arisen, it means there is a vacancy.

The Chairman: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, I am in agreement that there is some ambiguity here. Where it says, “If the occasion arises”, perhaps what it could be changed to is: “When the occasion arises that a Minister has to be appointed”. I agree with the Leader of the Opposition when he says that “if it arises” means that the occasion has arisen. It is there, so something has to be dealt with.

If we leave it to say, “when it arises” then it is only when that occasion arises—at that point in time—that the Governor shall do it. However, “if” leaves the condition that the occasion has arisen. You are making the assumption that it has arisen, and that the Governor has decided that a Minister needs to be appointed. At that point, he may appoint someone who was an Elected Member. I agree that it seems ambiguous to say, “He may do that,” or “He may do something else”.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Forgive me, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. As I move along, I am trying to think it through. Let me see if the other scenario that has appeared before me sounds sensible to you.

When it says, “If the occasion arises”, it simply means “if the occasion arises”. As we have read through it, this question has come to mind: Is it possible that the occasion might arise, but the Governor might choose not to appoint a Minister, because it is only three days before the election, and another seven days before a Cabinet is named?

Hon. Roy Bodden: He could reassign the subjects.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Excuse me. Mr. Chairman, if I may. I know there is some cross-talk, but it is meant to clear the air, and not to be disrespectful. I caused this, but I am now getting a clearer understanding of it. Regardless of what the circumstances are, the occasion might arise. However, he might deem that it is not necessary to appoint a Minister, even though there is a vacancy created, because the time span that will evolve is very short, and appointing a new Minister would really be of no assistance.

I think I am taking back what I as saying, Mr. Chairman. I think we are all right.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, I do not want to make this even more complicated, but if you refer to the Constitution dealing with Executive Council, you will see that in section 6 (2), it states: “The seat of an elected member of the Executive Council shall become vacant—” and 6 (2) (b) states: “when the Assembly first meets after a dissolution . . .” which would suggest that he is in office until the Assembly meets after the dissolution. If that is indeed the case, then—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am sorry, Mr. Chairman. Are we talking about him dropping down dead or something?

The Chairman: I thought I would simply bring that section to your attention.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I quite appreciate that, Sir.

The Chairman: Now that we are all happy about it, let us move on.

Madam Clerk, I think the Leader of Government Business was moving ahead.

Clauses 33 to 35

The Clerk:

Clause 33 Tenure of office of Chief Minister.

Clause 34 Tenure of office of Ministers.

Clause 35 Performance of functions of Ministers in certain events.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, section 35, which deals with the performance of functions of Ministers in certain events, reads: “If the Chief Minister is unable, due to illness or his absence from the Cayman Islands, to perform the functions of his office, the Governor may authorise some other Minister to perform these functions.”

We would recommend an amendment to this, to read: “If the Chief Minister is unable, due to illness or his absence from the Cayman Islands, to perform the functions of his office, the Governor may authorise the Deputy Chief Minister to perform those functions. If both the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister are unable to perform, for the aforesaid reasons, the Governor may authorise some other Minister to perform those functions.”

The Chairman: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I am going to throw another monkey wrench in here about that word “may”, because I believe that in the absence of the Chief Minister, the Deputy Chief Minister should perform the functions, at all cost.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Do you want to change it to “must”?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: It should be “shall”.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: All right. There is no problem with that. It is a matter of semantics.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Now for the second “may”. “If both the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister are unable to perform, for the aforesaid reasons, the Governor may authorise some other Minister to perform those functions.” Someone has to perform those functions. We heard the Second Elected Member for West Bay talk about the captain of the ship. Somebody has to be authorised to be captain in the absence of a captain.

I believe that this should be on advice from the Chief Minister, as well.

The Chairman: Are you suggesting that the second “may” should also be changed to “shall”?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, and it should be on advice from the Chief Minister.

The Chairman: I would like to open that for discussion.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is the same argument again. It is the same time element, again.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Chairman, I believe that clearer functioning of the bureaucracy would best be served if the first “may” were changed to “shall”, but the second “may” remained as it is. The situation of the absence of the Chief Minister and the Deputy may arise only for the duration of a day or two—a short period—in which case it would not be necessary, or even convenient, for the Governor to consult with the Chief Minister.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Chairman, I totally understand the Minister of Education and initially, those were my thoughts too. However, that is fine. I understand the rationale that he has given for it to remain as “may”, but certainly, in the first one, we have to have a captain of the boat.

The Chairman: There seems to be a common consensus on that. If that is indeed the case, we would ask the Clerk to move on.

Clause 36 to 38

The Clerk:

Clause 36	Allocation of responsibilities to Ministers.
Clause 37	Summoning of Cabinet.
Clause 38	Proceedings in and quorum of Cabinet.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Clause 38 deals with proceeding in and quorum of the Cabinet. Clause 38(3) says: “No business shall be transacted at any meeting of the Cabinet if there are less than five members present, in addition to the person presiding.”

We propose the following amendment: “No business shall be transacted at any meeting of the Cabinet if there are less than five, of which four are voting, members present, in addition to the person presiding.”

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, we do not have any difficulty with what seems to be intended. I am simply questioning, on behalf of the Opposition, whether we could not employ better language than, “of which four are voting”. As far as I am aware, all Members of Cabinet vote. I understand what is intended: they want only those who are Elected Members of the Legislative Assembly—who are Ministers—to be able to vote.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: It is the same thing, because all Members of Cabinet—and certainly, in the new situation, the ex-officio Members—will not be able to vote.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: How so?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, we are not drawing up the Constitution. We are giving the United Kingdom an expression of our opinion as to what we would like. They are going to draw up the correct Constitution.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, if that is the case, then it is better to say, “Elected”. Then it is as safe as it can be; that is the intent. That makes it absolutely clear.

The Chairman: The suggestion from the Opposition is that the word “voting” could be replaced by the word “elected”.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business, do you have a comment on that?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Perhaps I will reread it. It says, “No business shall be transacted at any meeting of the Cabinet if there are less than five, of which four are . . .”, and if we go to “elected”, it would be, “. . . elected members present, in addition to the person presiding”.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That was a point that I queried, because if you have seven elected Ministers of Cabinet, there may be the odd occasion, rare as it might be, when four are off the Island. It is not impossible. If more than three elected Ministers of Cabinet are physically off the Island, and if there is business to be conducted by Cabinet, and a decision to be made, it cannot be made as this is proposing.

This speaks to Ministers being present. This does not speak to somebody being off the Island, and another Minister being able to act for that Minister. It speaks to the physical presence of the person.

I understand the intent, but I think we need to think about it carefully, because we might be putting ourselves in a situation in which something might physically occur, and it simply cannot be done, for whatever period of time it takes for somebody to get back on the Island.

Understanding the intent—because as I understand it, the intent is to ensure that the majority of the Elected Members of Council participate in the decision, so that it is physically impossible for a decision to be made without that majority being present—then we look at the other scenario, in which it might be simply that circumstances cause more than three Ministers to be off the Island.

It might be one single Meeting that demands that more than three Ministers be off the Island, and it may be very important. However, something else might occur that was not even planned for during that interim, and we do not know who must wait on whom. Therefore, I think we need to think about that.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Chairman, I agree with the assessment, although this keeps speaking simply to the physical numbers. The same situation would occur if five were off the Island, because then you physically could not have the Meeting of Cabinet.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, if it reads as it is, then no matter how far we go, what it says is that there is a quorum of five, besides your presiding officer. This means that, possibly, you could have three Elected Members. That is the only scenario I am putting forward. If you have the caveat that says four must be voting, then it means you cannot have a quorum of the Cabinet unless four Ministers are on the Island and present at that meeting.

If that is what Members are saying, “Nothing could happen,” about, I do not agree. Although it might not be often, it is very possible for that to happen, more so in this day and age than any other time.

I wish for us not to believe that it is impossible—not for one minute. In this day and age, it is very easy for one single Meeting to demand that four Ministers be present at that Meeting, who are off the Island; it is far from impossible. In fact, it is getting more likely with every day that goes by.

That is all that I am saying.

[Pause]

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, are you satisfied with that?

[Pause]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, we will take that into consideration, if we could move on.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, the view is that we should take under consideration the comments that were made on section 38(3). Madam Clerk, would you move on, please?

Clause 39

The Clerk: Clause 39 Submission of questions to Cabinet.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Section 39, which deals with submissions of papers to Cabinet, says: “No question shall be submitted to the Cabinet for its advice except by and with the approval of the Governor, acting in his discretion; but if the Governor declines to submit any question to the Cabinet when requested in writing by any member of the Cabinet to do so, that Member may require that there be recorded in the minutes his written application, together with the answer given thereto by the Governor.”

We would like to offer an amendment to that, and add: “Any question submitted to the Governor, by any Minister, shall stand referred to the Cabinet for its consideration”.

The Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, for the love of me, I cannot explain it yet. It makes all the sense in the world to me, but there is something hanging in the back that is not quite right. I do not know what it is.

I want to say this simply because I heard the Honourable Leader of Government Business when he presented the Motion, and I heard the Deputy articulate it. It makes all the sense in the world, but let me ask the question, because I cannot put my finger on it. Is this anything to do with the powers of the Governor, as is proposed in the draft Constitution?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: That is what it deals with.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What I am trying to say is: if this changes, does it cause anything else to have to change? That is the question that I want to ask. I am not suggesting it; I just wondered. Whatever the reason is that obtains now, if His Excellency—if we simply speak it as it is—refuses for a paper to go on the agenda (the Constitution calls it a “question”), and if our recommendation, accepted or not, is that he cannot do so, that means that if it is brought through the proper process from the Minister, it must go on the agenda.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: He could refuse to take the advice.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I understand that part of it, but is there any physical reason why we would not want there to be a free hand for a Minister bringing a paper to Council?

I am asking that question because something is lingering in my mind and I cannot figure it out.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, if I may, I seek to add something to the debate about this.

It is all to do with the ultimate control of the Executive. If a Minister of the Government is unable to get a matter on the agenda, then quite clearly, the Government cannot take a position in relation to it.

Even under our system of very limited—if any—executive authority on the part of the Cabinet (even if we want to stay that way, and if the UK wants us to stay that way) I do not think it is necessary to control the agenda. There are circumstances in which the Governor can refuse to follow the advice of the Cabinet. What he has to do, then, is to explain why it is that he is not following it. That is why I do not believe the UK wants that particular power to be exercised very often. However, I do think it is seeking to have too much control, really, for them even to control the agenda of Cabinet. In this day and age, I believe that the Elected Members of the Government should be able to determine what goes on the agenda. If the UK decides that that is not what they want to happen, then let them say so, and let them deal with it. We would certainly agree that this particular proposal of the Government should go into whatever goes to the UK. Having considered the matter, we were going to bring a similar one, ourselves. We are quite happy with that.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In the meantime, Mr. Chairman, I am certain that what I was holding there will go away.

Clauses 40 to 41

The Clerk:

Clause 40 Attendance of other persons at meetings
Clause 41 Secretary to the Cabinet

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, under section 41, which deals with the Secretary to the Cabinet, section 41 (4) reads: “The Secretary to the Cabinet and the Cabinet Office shall also have general responsibility, under the authority of the Governor and the Chief Minister, for the development and co-ordination of Government policy.”

We propose to amend that to say: “The Secretary to the Cabinet and the Cabinet Office shall also have general responsibility, under the authority of the Governor and the Chief Minister, for the co-ordination and implementation of Government policy.”

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In principle, we certainly have no problems with what is proposed. However, I consider, very seriously, that a part of this exercise is to flesh things out, and to make sure that we have thought things through when it comes to what proposals may go through, where we agree and where we might not agree. The way I understand it, this Secretary to the Cabinet, under the authority of the Governor and the Chief Minister, will have general responsibility for the co-ordination and implementation of government policy.

When it comes to implementation, I am trying to think of the Financial Management Initiative (FMI), and, unless things have changed—and I know nothing about it—the way that we were moving forward in regard to the responsibilities of Chief Officers and the chain of command in the Ministries. Eventually, we are going to get to performance agreements with the various levels of the chain of command. I simply want to ensure that the words, “general responsibility” satisfy the situation, and that there will not be any overriding conflict with the levels of authority, or who reports to whom.

The Chairman: Thank you. I wonder if the Honourable Leader of Government Business would comment on that. I think that the question that arose during the debate had to do with the development of policy.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, where the present provision is that the Secretary to the Cabinet will have responsibility for the development and co-ordination of government policy, we feel that that person should be there to co-ordinate and see to the implementation—within the Ministries, in particular—of government policy, but not that he would have responsibility for its development.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, we do not disagree with that at all. My only question—and as I said I am looking forward a little bit—is in regard to the arrangements with Chief Officers, Ministers and the whole chain of command with the FMI. It says that the Cabinet Secretary will have general responsibility for the implementation of government policy. I only ask the question to ensure that there is no crossing of the lines when it comes to who is responsible to whom. Does a Chief Officer answer to the Cabinet Secretary? Does the Chief Officer answer to the Ministry? I am not suggesting that that is how it is; I simply want to ensure that we have made it clear. If the Cabinet Secretary is also responsible for the implementation of government policy, then I simply want to ensure that we are clear with the direction in which it goes.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, we were very clear on this matter. The Chief Officers are responsible to their Ministers and—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Are they also responsible for implementation?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: They are responsible for the implementation of government policy, but not at the Cabinet level. “Cabinet level” means that the Ministers work on their government policy and their Cabinet Secretary sees that government policy is co-ordinated. I am not sure that he is to see that it is implemented; I think that he has more to do with co-ordination.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is exactly my point, Mr. Chairman. What we are talking about is co-ordination and implementation. That is all I am saying.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I am not sure that he can implement policy. He would have some role to play, as he works between Ministers, and of course at some time you would expect that the Chief Officers are going to come into play somewhere. However, they would not have direct responsibility to him. He would not have a responsibility for them.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, it might help if we look at the whole chain of command. It says, “The Secretary to the Cabinet and the Cabinet Office shall also have general responsibility . . .”, but “. . . under the authority of the Governor and the Chief Minister...” No matter whether you are a Chief Officer or not, the Governor is still at the top of the chain of command. Therefore, everything comes under the authority of the Governor.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you for that clarity, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Madam Clerk, if you would continue please.

Clauses 42 to 44

The Clerk:

Clause 42	Powers of Solicitor-General
Clause 43	Composition of the Legislative Assembly
Clause 44	Qualifications for elected membership

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, section 44 deals with the qualifications for elected membership to the legislature. It says:

“1) Subject to section 45 of this Constitution, a person shall be qualified to be elected as a member of the Legislative Assembly if, and shall not be qualified to be so elected unless:

- a) he is a Caymanian; and
- b) he has attained the age of twenty-one years; and
- c) he is, at the date of his nomination for election, domiciled and resident in the Cayman Islands; and
- d) if at least one of his parents is a Caymanian (or if deceased would if alive have been a Caymanian at the date of his nomination for election), he has resided in the Cayman Islands for a period or periods amounting to not less than five years out of the seven years immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election; or
- e) if neither of his parents is a Caymanian (or if deceased would not if alive have been a Caymanian at the date of his nomination for election), he has been a Caymanian for at least twenty-five years and he has resided in the Cayman Islands for a period or periods amounting to not less than twenty years out of the twenty-five years immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election.

2) In determining whether a person is resident in the Cayman Islands for the purposes of subsection (1) of this section any period of absence by reason of the following shall be disregarded-

- a) the performance of duty on behalf of the Government;
- b) attendance as a pupil at any educational establishment;
- c) attendance as a patient at any hospital, clinic or other medical institution;
- d) employment as a seaman aboard an ocean-going vessel; or
- e) employment as a crewmember on any aircraft.”

Mr. Chairman, we propose that the provisions of this section be amended, and be replaced with the provisions of Section 18 of the current Constitution, except that Section 18(2) would be amended to read as follows: “For the purposes of subsection 1(b) of this section a qualified citizen is a British dependent territory citizen and a British citizen by virtue of a connection with the Islands.”

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Mr. Chairman, I am not sure where to start. Over the course of late last year, there was extensive discussion between the Government and us—the members of the Opposition—about this controversial issue. We also had significant input from the Bar Association in developing these qualifications for elected membership. The main difficulty with what is in the current Constitution is that it requires a battery of Louisiana lawyers to figure out what it means. What is proposed in section 44 now, which was in our position paper and which has found its way, with the agreement of the Government, into the draft Constitution, is much clearer. It is also more inclusive, as it strikes the right kind of balance to ensure that those persons who have grown up here—even if they did not have one Caymanian parent—having lived here long enough and being Caymanian, are not shut out from participating in the political process.

At this time, the Government has gone down a certain route, in relation to including long-term residents in the infrastructure of these Islands, by conferring upon them Caymanian status. I am not sure whether or not they have concerns about that, or whether it has caused them to adopt this current reactionary approach to qualifications for elected membership. At a minimum, however, we in the country deserve some explanation as to why they have decided to revert to what is in the current Constitution. If there is a good basis for it, then we are not going to be dogmatic, and say we will not support it, but no reason at all has been put forward.

As I say, we believe that section 44 strikes the right sort of balance, because what it does, in the case of persons who have at least one Caymanian parent and who are Caymanian, is simply to require a residency requirement of five out of the preceding seven years. However, if you are not born of indigenous Caymanian stock, you have to have been Caymanian for 25 years before you can throw your hat into the ring, plus you have to have resided here for 20 out of the last 25 years immediately preceding the date of the nomination for election. Consequently, it does strike the right kind of balance. It allows persons who may not have been born here but who grew up and have lived here, and who are Caymanian, to participate in the process. At the same time, the period of residence, and the period during which you have to have been Caymanian is long enough. They would have to have been here, in real terms, for 30–35 years before they would qualify to stand for election.

This was subsequently developed, with considerable input from a wide cross-section. It has the support of the Bar Association and the Government accepted it, so I am at some loss, now, as to why they want to revert to the current Constitution. Perhaps they could explain.

The Chairman: Do we have a comment from the Government side?

We propose to be adjourning in Committee at 5:45 pm, and adjourning the House thereafter, because certain Members have an appointment, so we will go on for the next five minutes and then we will be suspending Committee and then adjourning the House thereafter.

Is it the wish of Members that we should suspend at this time? Proceedings in Committee will now be suspended until the next sitting of the House.

House Resumed at 5:40 pm

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, we have now reached the hour for adjournment. May I have a motion for the adjournment?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we propose to take the adjournment at this time and we offer the adjournment until Monday 24 November 2003 at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until on Monday 24 November 2003 at 10 am.

All those in favour please say Aye. All those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 5:42 pm the House stood adjourned until Monday, 24 November 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
24 NOVEMBER 2003
11.15 AM
Fifth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable First Elected Member for George Town, the Leader of the Opposition, to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of the Cayman Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever, Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 11.17 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received no apologies for absence, but I have received an apology for late arrival from the Honourable Third Official Member.

Honourable Members, I wish to apologise for the late start, which was occasioned due to certain procedural matters being attended to by the Government.

Broadcasting of Committee Proceedings
On the Proposed New Draft Constitution

The Speaker: I also wish to say that, although as a rule Committees are held in camera, because of the nature of the Government Motions No. 5/03 and No. 6/03 now before the House, the decision has been made that proceedings of the Committee stage will be broadcast and open to the public.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS
OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have received no requests for statements by Honourable Ministers or Members of the Government.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 5/03

Debate on the Report of the Proposed New Draft
Constitution

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The House will now move into Committee.

House in Committee at 11. 21 am

COMMITTEE

The Chairman: On Friday, when we suspended the Committee stage of the Motion, we were in the process of discussing section 44, which deals with Qualifications for Elected Membership.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I know we were going to move on to 44; I am not quite sure if we had started to discuss that section. Would the Chair allow us a minute or two to revisit section 43?

The Chairman: The request is in the hands of the Committee. If there are no objections to that request, we will move back to section 43.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I just wish to make a point, and make sure that we have aired it through clearly.

The Chairman: Is it the section on the Composition of the Legislative Assembly?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes.

The Chairman: Proceed.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I made a mistake; it is section 41 and not section 43.

The Chairman: That is why I asked you to confirm.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am sorry. My apologies—fixations.

Section 41. Secretary to the Cabinet. In section 41, subsection 4, there is a recommendation for a change. As it has been proposed in the draft Constitution, subsection 4 reads: “The Secretary to the Cabinet and the Cabinet Office shall also have general responsibility, under the authority of the Governor and the Chief Minister, for the development and co-ordination of Government policy.”

The recommendation only deals with the last phrase. Instead of saying, “for the development and co-ordination of Government policy”, the recommendation is “for the co-ordination and implementation of Government policy”.

I want to air a view: If we look at how that will operate as part of the Constitution, it means that the Cabinet Secretary will have general responsibility, under the authority of both His Excellency, the Governor and the Chief Minister—the official arm and the political arm—for the coordination and implementation of government policy.

On Friday, when we spoke about it, there was a discussion suggesting that his authority would be from the Cabinet. The way this is worded, however, it speaks to the Governor and the Chief Minister. What it means is that there will be a civil servant responsible for the implementation of government policy, with authority from both arms, and no one else in the service will have that authority. If this is what is desired, it is not a problem. What I am not 100 per cent sure of is at what level, in the chain of command, the post is. You could well have people higher up in the chain of command who do not have this authority. The question is: Is it desirable for that authority to lie here? If it is, it is fine. I only want to ensure that we understand clearly, if this is placed in the Constitution, what it physically means. Mr. Chairman, this is one item that I believe London will have no difficulty inserting into the Constitution, once all of the Committee agrees with it.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, I heard the Leader of the Opposition, and he raised a good point. However, I should say that we have a hybrid situation, because of the type of Constitution we have. Normally, Cabinet secretaries would be responsible to the Cabinet and the Leader of the Government, whoever that is. However, because we have a Governor and a Chief Minister we have that situation. I would ask—

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Then you have that to contend with as well. That is the hybrid I am talking about. Mr. Chairman, I wonder if we could take a break and let me look at it with some advice.

The Chairman: Is it the wish of the House that we take a five-minute break at this time?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: It will take more than five minutes—perhaps 10 minutes.

The Chairman: I was asking initially for five, but you might need more like 10 or 15 minutes.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That is fine.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: All right.

Proceedings suspended at 11.28 am

Proceedings resumed at 12. 21 pm

The Chairman: The proceedings of the Committee are resumed. When we took the suspension, we were dealing with section 41 in regard to the Secretary to the Cabinet. The Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, we agreed in the discussion on section 41(4) that as far as the Cabinet Secretary’s responsibilities, the word “implementation” could come out. What we recommend is “the Secretary to the Cabinet and the Cabinet Office shall also have general responsibility under the authority of the Governor and the Chief Minister for the coordination of government policy”, leaving the word “implementation” out completely.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I think that sorts the situation out.

The Chairman: Thank you. Madam Clerk?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, for smooth flow, there was also section 38, which the Government said they were going to look at.

Perhaps if we deal with that, we could then move—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Last week, we said that we were going to leave that as it is.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If memory serves me right, last week you said that you all were going to consider the matter. The point was raised about the four elected—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, but when it was explained, I marked it out on my notes, meaning that we would be prepared to leave it as it is in the recommendations in the draft Constitution. That is the way it is, so I do not think we need to traverse that ground again.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: No, no, I just think we wanted to have it on the record.

The Chairman: I think that point has been clarified. Section 38(3) will be left as recommended.
Madam Clerk.

Clause 44

The Clerk: Clause 44 Qualifications for elected membership.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, when we suspended last Friday, this section had actually been discussed by our side in some detail. I think that the Leader of Government Business had outlined what the proposed amendment to it was, by his Government. We had explained the basis for what is in the draft Constitution, which is essentially what is in the position paper that we had put forward, and which had been agreed by the Government here and in London. That is what appears in the draft Constitution. We had asked the Government if they would explain the basis for their reversion to what is in the current Constitution.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, I think that at that point, the Government put its amendment and said that that was what we were proposing at the time. The Opposition said they were not going to support it in any instance, and I think we left it at that. I was preparing to move on to something else. I do not think I can say anything more than that we are prepared to leave it as it is, as we feel it gives sufficient protection all around.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I am not sure that I understand exactly. Is he saying to leave it as it is in the draft, or as it is in the current Constitution?

The Chairman: Honourable Leader of Government Business, could you repeat what you said?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, I said that I was prepared to leave it as it is in the current Constitution. The Government has agreed to leave it in the current Constitution, as it gives everyone protection.

The Chairman: Honourable Leader is this an addition to the words “and British citizen”?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Mr. Chairman. To reiterate, we propose that the provisions of section 44 be amended and replaced with the provisions of section 18 of the current Constitution, except that section 18(2) would be amended to read as follows: “...for the purposes of subsection (1)(d) of this section a qualified citizen is a British Overseas Territories citizen and British citizen by virtue of connection with the Islands”.

The Chairman: I think that is fairly straightforward. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, to traverse some ground that was covered on Friday, we, on this side, would like to be able, as far as possible, to come to some agreement with the Government on these matters. However, the Government has given no basis, thus far, for altering what is in the draft Constitution. What is in the draft Constitution was arrived at as a result of considerable consultation and dialogue, not just among ourselves, but with the wider population and, indeed, with the Caymanian Bar Association. We believed that it had the dual benefit of being inclusive, in the sense of persons one would term perhaps as “new Caymanians”, meaning they did not have a Caymanian forebear. At the same time, the residency requirement, as regards tenure as a Caymanian, was long enough to ensure that those persons who would qualify to stand for elected membership would not be fly-by-nights.

It was a position that was the subject of debate and discussion during the Summit, and in London, and we are somewhat at a loss as to why the Government has now decided to revert to what is in the current Constitution, which had proven to be problematic and controversial. They have not proffered any sort of explanation as to what has caused this change of heart. We can be persuaded, Mr. Chairman, but we need some basis to move from what is a considered position.

The Chairman: I have listened to both sides on this matter and I am satisfied that the Government side has given sufficient reason for the proposal that this be changed to read in a manner as was just read by the Honourable Leader of Government Business. As I stated, the main change to me appears to be the addition of "and British citizenship". If we look at the interpretation of "Caymanian", we will also see, in section 102, that "Caymanian" means a person who possesses Caymanian status and British Overseas Territories citizenship or British citizenship by virtue of a connection with the Cayman Islands. I am not sure that we can gain a lot more by dealing with this issue further. I am sorry that we could not get both sides of the House agreeing on this, but this is one of those issues on which we perhaps will not get a full agreement.

Therefore, in the interests of the House, I would suggest that we move this forward as expeditiously as possible. We are not taking a vote on this; we are trying to gain a consensus. The vote will be taken at the end of Committee stage.

Madam Clerk.

Clauses 45 to 48

The Clerk:

Clause 45	Disqualifications for elected membership
Clause 46	Tenure of office of elected members
Clause 47	Delay in vacation of seat to allow for an appeal
Clause 48	Speaker and Deputy Speaker

The Chairman: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, since we are in open forum in this Committee, I did not intend to read everything. I wanted to read our recommendations, but in this instance, I will read the entire provision that we are going to amend.

The Chairman: Please proceed.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Section 48 reads:

"1. At the first sitting of the Legislative Assembly after a general election, and as soon as practical after a vacancy occurs in the relevant office otherwise than on a dissolution of the Assembly, the elected members of the Assembly shall by majority vote elect-

- (a) a Speaker from among persons who are not elected members of the Assembly but who are qualified to be elected as members of the Assembly and are not disqualified in any way for elected membership; and
- (b) a Deputy Speaker from among the elected members of the Assembly other than Ministers; and the election of the Speaker and the Deputy Speaker shall take precedence over any other business of the Assembly.

2. A person shall vacate the office of Speaker or Deputy Speaker –

- (a) upon a dissolution of the Legislative Assembly;
- (b) if he informs the Assembly, by writing under his hand addressed to the Assembly and received by the Clerk of the Assembly, that he resigns his office;
- (c) in the case of the Speaker, in any circumstances which would cause him to vacate his seat if he were an elected member or, in the case of the Deputy Speaker, if he ceases to be an elected member of the Assembly.
- (d) in the case of the Speaker, if on the date of his election as Speaker he is a party to, or a partner in a firm or a director or manager of a company which is a party to, any contract with the Government or if, on any date after such election he or a firm in which he is a partner or a company of which he is a director or manager becomes a party to any such contract or he becomes a partner in a firm or a director or a manager of a company which is a party to any such contract, and he does not, before the expiration of thirty days from the date in question, disclose to the Assembly or, if that is impracticable, to the Clerk of the Assembly in writing the nature of such contract and his interest, or the interest of such a firm or company, therein and the Assembly does not exempt him from vacating his office under this paragraph; or
- (e) on the passing, by votes of ten of the elected members of the Assembly, of a motion expressing no confidence in him as Speaker or Deputy Speaker, as the case may be".

Mr. Chairman, we propose that the provisions of this section be amended and replaced with the provisions of section 31A(1) of the current Constitution. I have already elaborated on the reasons why we believe that the current Constitution carries a valid and practical way to appoint or vote for Speakers to the Legislative Assembly.

The Chairman: As was said earlier, much debate has already ensued on this. I am hoping to take further comments in Committee stage, but I would not want us to bog ourselves down with tedious repetition of what has already been said in debate.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. You need not worry about that, Sir. However, it is important that our position be placed in the record, lest it be said that we, by saying nothing, have tacitly agreed. Our position, which is one that we have had for a considerable time now, is that the credibility of the holder of this office is undermined if that individual owes an allegiance to a particular group, or party, within the Legislative Assembly. The position that we took, which was included in our Position Paper and which the Government ultimately agreed to at the Summit in November of last year, and in London in December of last year, is that which is reflected in the draft Constitution. It is a position in which we believe firmly, and to which we intend to stick steadfastly. We believe that at the end of the day, the integrity of this very House, and the operations of Parliament, are improved—and confidence in it, and in its operations, is much higher, not just among Members, but also the public at large—if the Speaker can truly be seen to be an impartial creature. For those reasons, Mr. Chairman, we are going to continue to vote in favour of the provision in section 48 of the draft Constitution.

The Chairman: Honourable Member, you will not be denied that. We will be dealing with each amendment, and the question will be put on each, so you will have the opportunity with other Members who wish to vote in favour of, or against, each one of the amendments, as the question is put. That will be done so that the records will show those who vote in favour or against each question.

Madam Clerk.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. May I just raise another point? In 44(2)(e) of what is proposed in the draft, which was read by the Leader of Government Business, the position of the Government is to revert to the provisions of section 31A)(1). Subsection (f) says, “...on the passing, by the votes of two-thirds of the Elected Members of the Assembly, of a motion expressing no confidence in him”.

If we use their proposal, and check the math, we might have to suggest something else with regard to that section, from their position.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, that point, raised by the Leader of the Opposition is a technical point. Perhaps we should give attention to it, to see whether the two thirds majority, as recommended under the present Constitution, is workable, as opposed to the ten proposed. We can work out the mathematics, and this is certainly a matter into which we can look, because, as mentioned, each question will be voted upon. Madam Clerk, could you please continue?

Clauses 49 to 51

The Clerk:

Clause 49	Determination of questions as to membership of Assembly
Clause 50	Penalty for sitting or voting in Assembly when unqualified
Clause 51	Leader of the Opposition

The Chairman: Honourable Leader of Government Business, or Leader of the Opposition, is there a question?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, in section 51, which deals with the Leader of the Opposition, we recommend that provision be made for a Deputy Leader of the Opposition, who should be appointed by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Leader of the Opposition. As I said in the debate, we believe it is practical and offers better structure for the make-up of Parliament, and for good governance.

The Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Following in line with what has been proposed with regard to the Chief Minister and Deputy Chief Minister, we concur with the Government's position on that.

The Chairman: Thank you so much. Madam Clerk, could you continue.

Clause 52 to 54

The Clerk:

Clause 52	Power to make laws
Clause 53	Royal instructions
Clause 54	Standing Orders

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Is it a point of order?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Sir.

The Chairman: What is the interruption?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, I thought we were allowed to debate the clauses as we went through them.

The Chairman: I thought we had agreed initially that we would be debating on exception, that those that were not debated initially had been agreed upon and that amendments were being debated at this point. However, if you wish to debate something that has already received this sort of mutual agreement of the House, I have no problem with that.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Mr. Chairman, the Government put forward a document, which they have been causing the Committee to stop and discuss but—

The Chairman: May I interject here? The next amendment suggested by the Government, following 51, was 58, on voting. We have not reached that point, but if there is something in between that you would wish to raise, I would be happy to entertain it.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Surely, Mr. Chairman, the Opposition is entitled to stop.

The Chairman: Second Elected Member for George Town, that is precisely why I am allowing you to continue at this point.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Sir.

Clause 52. Power to make Laws. Subsection (2) deals with the ability of the legislature to pass a law enabling the holding of a referendum on a question declared by resolution, and adopted by a majority of the elected Members, to be a matter of national importance. Consistent with the position we have maintained from the beginning, we would wish to see included, in the Constitution under this section, a provision to enable a people-initiated referendum to be held.

The Chairman: The recommendation by the Second Elected Member for George Town is open for discussion.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, out of an abundance of caution, I would say that included in that provision would be the consequential provision, which would call for a law to be passed that would settle the terms of conditions under which such a referendum would be triggered and held.

The Chairman: The Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, we propose to leave the recommendation as it is in 52(2). We debated this throughout this country a long time ago; we have debated it before in the Legislative Assembly. We debated it in London, and this is what has come back from London, after the discussion. Although the Opposition might hold some sort of opposing view, the UK did not accept it. This is what they sent back to us, and we believe this is the best way to go. If any matter arises, we can make a law and call for such referendum in specifics. Certainly we intend to leave it as is recommended by the UK.

The Chairman: Madam Clerk, could you please continue?

The Clerk:

Clause 53	Royal instructions
Clause 54	Standing Orders
Clause 55	Presiding in Assembly
Clause 56	Assembly may transact business notwithstanding vacancies
Clause 57	Quorum
Clause 58	Voting

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, we propose to make some changes here. I will read what this section says, if I may.

Section 58. Voting. The draft Constitution says:

“(1) Save as otherwise provided in this Constitution, all questions proposed for decision in the Legislative Assembly shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present and voting.

“(2) The speaker shall not vote, and any other member presiding shall have an original but no casting vote.

“(3) In the event of an equality of votes on any question the motion shall be lost.”

Mr. Chairman, we propose that the provisions of this section be amended and replaced with the provisions of Section 35 of the current Constitution; otherwise, we are leaving it as it is in the present Constitution. I should like to read that also.

The Chairman: Continue.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Section 35 reads:

“(1) Save as otherwise provided in this Constitution, all questions proposed for a decision in the Legislative Assembly shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present and voting.

“(2) The Speaker or other member presiding shall not vote unless on any question the votes are equally divided, in which case he shall have and exercise a casting vote.”

Mr. Chairman, we have already said, in the debate, that we see no reason to change that. It has worked, and has not caused any great problems in the country, so we would leave it as it is in the current Constitution.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I believe the Government's position is predicated on their proposal that the Speaker should continue to be able to come from both outside and inside the House, which is why it appears, the way it is, in the current Constitution. Consistent with our position that the Speaker should only come from outside, we are satisfied with what is in the draft Constitution in section 58 and would recommend that that position be maintained, consistent with the Speaker coming from outside the House only.

The Chairman: Thank you very much. Madam Clerk, would you continue?

Clauses 59 to 62

The Clerk:

Clause 59	Summoning of persons to assist Assembly
Clause 60	Introduction of Bills
Clause 61	Governor's reserved power
Clause 62	Assent to Bills

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, I would like to read section 62(2)(c), where it deals with states or international organisations. It says, “. . . to be inconsistent with any obligation of Her Majesty or of Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom towards any other state or any international organization”.

We recommend the deletion of this provision, and see it as necessary.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: We agree entirely, Mr. Chairman.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, it is a very important area. Let us not fool ourselves that is one the UK can stick with. I think they will hold argument on this matter, but in order to remind the public, I would like to read what section 62 says. I know that will take a minute or two.

The Chairman: Continue.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman.

Section 62. Assent to Bills. This section says:

“(1) A Bill shall not become a law until -

- a) the Governor has assented to it in Her Majesty's name on Her Majesty's behalf and has signed it in token of his assent; or

- b) Her Majesty has given Her assent to it through a Secretary of State and the Governor has signified Her assent by Proclamation.

(2) When a Bill is presented to the Governor for his assent, he shall, subject to the provisions of this Constitution and of any Instructions addressed to him under Her Majesty's Sign Manual and Signet or through a Secretary of State, declare that he assents or refuses to assent to it or that he reserves the Bill for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure:

Provided that, unless he has been authorised by a Secretary of State to assent thereto, the Governor shall reserve for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure any Bill which appears to him, acting in his discretion-

- a) to be in any way repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the provisions of this Constitution;
- b) to determine or regulate the privileges, immunities or powers of the Legislative Assembly or of its members.”

We are proposing to change subsection (c), Mr. Chairman. It says:

- c) to be inconsistent with any obligation of Her Majesty or of Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom towards any other state or any international organisation;
- d) to be likely to prejudice the Royal prerogative;
- e) to affect any matter for which he is responsible under section 24(1)(c) of this Constitution.”

I do not think we have gotten that far, as yet, because we propose to question that matter, and get more information from the United Kingdom on it.

Mr. Chairman, as I said, we see this as important to governance here—but governance from both sides. We recognise the United Kingdom's responsibilities, but we believe that they must now take cognisance of the wishes of the people here. We know that this is going to cause some consternation between us and them, but so be it. We do not want the public questioning these particular areas, as we have already seen a letter in the paper that does so, more or less. Although they have not named them, these would be the areas about which they are talking—the Governor's reserved authority.

We are not giving up on that matter. We are moving forward, and at the same time, we will debate, talk, and try to get some modicum of agreement from the Foreign Office on this.

The Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I may. When the Leader of Government Business says that the Government intends to question section 62(2)(e), I just want to have a clearer understanding, from our side, so that we can know whether we should be synchronised or whether we do not agree with the position.

We clearly agree with the proposal of the Government that section 62(2)(c) should be deleted, but with the Leader of Government Business speaking of questioning it, I want to make sure exactly what it is that we are questioning.

The Chairman: For clarity, perhaps we could refer to this section that is under reference, which is section 24(1)(c) of the Constitution. This refers to the special responsibilities of the Governor, in regard to his powers. Perhaps the Leader of Government Business could expand on section 62(2)(e) a little further, to let us know exactly what he means.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business, on section 62(2)(e), the Leader of the Opposition was asking if you could further clarify what you meant. It deals with the reserved powers of the Governor.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Quickly, Mr. Chairman, while they are—

The Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. So that it is clear: This section 24(1)(c) being looked at is from the proposed Constitution, and not the present Constitution. I wanted to be sure that we are on the same page.

The Chairman: That is quite correct.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I believe the idea behind this, Mr. Chairman, was as it related to section 24(1)(c)(i), dealing with defence. The Leader of Government Business—and indeed, other members of the party—are giving serious consideration to the introduction of the Home Guard. They wanted this aspect discussed, as it related to defence, to see whether it would be something that the Governor and Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) would endorse, as a part of the defence locally, although he had responsibility for it. That was the aspect that was being questioned—nothing more, nothing less.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It was a matter for our internal workings, as we knew we had already announced on this. As you can see, while I was reading from the mark-up on our Constitution, it was not on the substantive proposals that we have made.

The Chairman: Madam Clerk, please continue.

Clauses 63 to 67

The Clerk:

Clause 63	Return of Bills by Governor
Clause 64	Disallowance of laws
Clause 65	Privileges of Assembly and members
Clause 66	Sessions of Assembly
Clause 67	Prorogation and dissolution

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman—

The Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If I may, Sir, I have a quick question.

Section 65. Privileges Assembly and members. Under section 65, Privileges of Assembly and Members, we have a Constitution that exists at present, and we have the Law relating to that Constitution, regarding the privileges of Assembly and Members. I want to get it clear in my head. Whenever we have a new Constitution that reads like this, does it mean a new law has to be created under that Constitution, or will the present law remain in force? I want to make absolutely sure of that.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Mr. Chairman, I think the answer lies in section 5 of this Constitution, which deals with existing laws. I do not want to read it all, but essentially, it says that all the laws that apply now, unless otherwise revoked, will continue to apply.

The Chairman: Thank you very much.
The Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: In this, I guess they have made no changes to what is normal in the Constitution now, and normal in most (if not all) of the British Overseas Territories' constitutions.

The Chairman: Thank you very much. Madam Clerk, if you would continue, please.

Clauses 68 to 70

The Clerk:

Clause 68	Recalling dissolved Assembly in case of emergency
Clause 69	General elections and bye-elections

Clause 70 Electoral constituencies

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, section 70, dealing with electoral constituencies, says:

“(1) For the purpose of elections to the Legislative Assembly, the Cayman Islands shall be divided into seventeen electoral constituencies.

(2) The boundaries of the electoral constituencies shall be those set out in the Second Schedule to this Constitution:

Provided that the said Schedule may from time to time be modified by order made by the Governor in accordance with section 72(6) of this Constitution.

(3) Each electoral constituency shall return one member to the Assembly.”

Mr. Chairman, we have said that the concept of 17 single-member constituencies would be accepted, as proposed by the Electoral Boundary Commission 2003, but full implementation should come into effect in the 2008 General Elections.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to quote something I said the other morning. The following are questions I asked at that time: (1) “Do you believe that the panacea to good representation, which is the essence of democracy, is one man, one vote?” (2) “Are we sitting here telling the people today that good, or better representation, is ‘one man, one vote’?” (3) “Is that what will give us good schools, better roads, a better economy, more houses, and a better standard of living?” (4) “Is it equality or is it performance?”

I went on to say, “I do not need four or five representatives in my district to perform and give good representation.” I said, “I have done that these last 20 years in my political involvement in this House.”

Mr. Chairman, I have listened to what the Opposition had to say, and we have discussed it as a group, and a party. I do not want anyone to think that I am proposing any particular situation to suit McKeeva Bush. The issues are big; the country is bigger than all of us.

Again, in a spirit of cooperation with the Opposition, we propose to leave George Town with the six seats, and to make that recommendation to the United Kingdom. It is at this time recommended that there be a phased implementation, and that the district of George Town be divided into six single-member constituencies, as recommended by the Electoral Boundaries Commission, with the districts of East End and North Side. The remaining districts should be contested as multi-member constituencies, as they were in the 2000 General Elections.

We further recommend that George Town North be renamed Seven Mile Beach North (and we are going to do that when we get to the boundary stage, but we say so at this time), and be a single-member constituency. That is our recommendation.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. We are a little happier now that the Leader of Government Business has indicated that his Government is not proceeding down the road he had outlined in his debate in this Honourable House some time earlier, of assigning another seat to West Bay. For that we are grateful. There is a debate on the substantive motion about single-member constituencies that will ensue following the completion of this Committee’s work; therefore, I will not spend a great deal of time outlining the single-member constituencies issue now. It is safe to say that we do not accept that it is right, democratic or practical for us to operate two electoral systems in the country, for the next election or, indeed, at any time. We cannot support the proposal of the Government that George Town (the largest electoral district) be used as a model, or as a guinea pig, for trying out single-member constituencies, while the other districts proceed as multi-member constituencies.

We reject the Government’s recommended proposal. We stand by what is in the draft Constitution, that is: that the entire country move to single-member constituencies, or, failing that, then all constituencies should remain as they are. We stand, however, by what is in the draft Constitution, to which the Government agreed last year.

The Chairman: The Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, thank you very much. I do not propose to reply too much, because we will have that opportunity later. I want to reply to two points the Member raised when he was talking about the country and saying they cannot accept that it is democratic or practical to operate two electoral systems. Mr. Chairman, we have done that for a long time. For years and years now, North Side and East End have operated that way. They, themselves, have made these claims. I know some people can take one argument that they make, and then twist it around to suit another to which they are objecting, when they have supported it. The fact is, they have made the case that we should go to single-member constituencies and we already have two—North Side and East End—that are single-member constituencies. Therefore, we have been operating two electoral systems.

We believe that this is the best way to get this going, and we have compromised with the Opposition in all shapes and forms; as for me, I do not intend to any further. If we are ever going to get single-member constituencies, I think this is a good way to start. You will have East End, North Side and George Town operating as such. Of the six districts we have, 50 per cent would operate as single-member constituencies. We propose, further, that in 2008, we go the other way. We have had problems throughout the other districts, and these districts seem to be the ones in which there is no problem with it. Otherwise, the Opposition Members do not like it; they have a problem with it, as they said. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I do not propose to say anything further on this. I think that we have given much ground on this, and that this is the best way to go, for the country.

The Chairman: I would like to repeat, for Honourable Members, that at the end of each question that will be put later on in the Motion, all Members will have the opportunity to express their position in favour or against the particular question. That will also be recorded.

Secondly, it is now 1.10 pm. We would like to hear the penultimate section for consideration. Perhaps we could ask Madam Clerk to continue, so that we could complete the Committee side of this Motion at this point. Madam Clerk.

Clause 92 Attorney-General

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Section 92. Attorney-General. 92(2) of the recommended Constitution, dealing with the Attorney-General, says that: “Power to make appointments to the office of Attorney-General is vested in the Governor, acting after consultation with the Chief Minister.”

We would elect to recommend that the power to make appointments to the office of Attorney General be vested in the Governor, acting on the advice of the Chief Minister. We believe that this would give us more autonomy, and that the Islands would have much say in who would be their Attorney General.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin J.: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. We are delighted to hear the Government articulate that position. It is a position we have urged from the very beginning—indeed, a position on which the Government agreed with us, last year. Whether or not it finds favour with Her Majesty’s Government is entirely a different matter. However, I am glad that we can go forward in unison on this critically important point.

It is absolutely critical to our long-term survival and our continued success, as a country, that the basis of the legal advice we receive is from someone in whom the Government can repose their entire confidence, knowing full well that the loyalties lie with the Government, and that there is not any question about them having to be influenced or controlled by Her Majesty’s Government. We are delighted with that position, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. There is another matter in section 92. It is a question that I raise, because I am struggling to see how it dovetails with similar situations, within the Public Services especially.

Section 92 (3) says: “Subject to the following provisions of this section, the Attorney-General shall vacate his office when he attains the age of 55 years”.

I know subsequent subsections allow for continuation under given circumstances, but in the normal run of things, in the Public Services, is it 55? I notice that, if I am correct and memory serves me right, the positions of Attorney-General, Solicitor-General and the Auditor-General all speak to vacating the office at 55.

The question I wish to ask is this: We may well, at some point in time—and not necessarily 30 years from now—have a career civil servant who moves up the ladder (either by training or tenure or both) and fills one of these posts. If the remainder of the civil service is not on the same time-line, there is some disparity there, and an anomaly. When it comes to the rest of the Public Service Pensions (Amendment) Law (2002), when it speaks to how long and what age, why would we want this to be different? That is my question.

It seems insignificant, but sooner or later, it is going to happen. While we are looking at it, we might as well try to deal with it right now. I am not so sure that everything I am saying is absolutely correct, but there is some difference somewhere, and I think it needs to be looked at.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Mr. Chairman, to make somewhat light of it, I am sure, as you can attest, that the best years of a man's or a woman's life, these days, come after 55.

The Chairman: I totally agree with you.

[Laughter]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Seriously, on that basis, if we are going to say that the Attorney General must go at age 55, and if we apply that to the Elected Members of Executive Council and look at the current make-up, most of those would be disqualified from continuing. It is really something of an anachronism. These days, at 55, people have just reached the height of their professional lives, because they have the benefit of tremendous experience, and are still youthful and strong enough to carry on in that important office. I think we should move it to 65.

Mr. Chairman: The Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, I hear the arguments of the Members opposite, and certainly, I have no problem with that. However, there is a proviso there which says: “. . . the Governor may permit an Attorney-General who attains the age of 55 years to continue in office until he has attained such later age, not exceeding the age of 65 years, as may have been agreed between the Governor and that Attorney-General”.

Mr. Chairman, I do not know why they keep banging on this 55—and when I say “they”, I mean the United Kingdom. That is one thing that we will have to query with them: whether they would allow for that extension, as for a judge. We already looked at that: judges go up to age 70, I believe, or 65 in the very first instance, provided, perhaps, that they can be extended. Therefore, that is something that we can also discuss and ask clarification on.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: To close, I mentioned that there was a subsequent subsection that would allow for that. However, I think the real point at hand is that it is very possible. Let us take what obtains presently. Speaking very seriously, we now have a Caymanian who is the Honourable Attorney-General. I am not querying it here in this forum, but I do not know what his terms of employment are—whether he is a “permanent pensionable establishment” (PPE), or whether he is on contract.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Right, but the question is this: Is that going to remain—where we have Caymanians with short-term contracts who are civil servants? Alternatively, are we going to speak to another situation which is more—lucrative may not be the right word, but—more appropriate?

Let us take the Honourable Third Official Member, who is the Financial Secretary. I am pretty certain that the situation is different with him. If we wish for the situation to be different with the Attorney General, then that is fine, but how do we marry the situation to one where the benefits are parallel, so that it does not seem to be a situation that is unfair, one way or the other? I do not have the answer to how it should be. I am saying that it creates a difference when you have Caymanians working side-by-side, and the contractual arrangements are different, and the benefits are different.

If it is someone from overseas—as has normally been the case—and it is a simple three-year contract with the ability to be renewed, as far as I know what obtains now is that the Governor himself dictates the terms of employment of the Attorney General. Although that is not stated clearly here, is that what is going to obtain again, or how is it done?

That is all I am trying to say, Mr. Chairman. Perhaps, given the circumstances, we need to wade through it, to ensure that what is entrenched in a new Constitution is satisfactory to all who may be concerned, including ourselves. That is the real point.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Part V. The Judicature. The matters dealing with the judicature are very extensive, and the UK has been adamant on these. We know that we went through a struggle, earlier this year, with how to deal with a situation in which we have somebody with whom we do not want to live—to put it simply. That proved sore enough as it is. The UK is not giving much ground on these areas. We do not even know how much we are going to get out of our proposal, in which we are saying that he should be appointed acting on the advice of the Chief Minister, which is really acting on the advice of Cabinet. We are preparing to put it forward and stand our ground on it; perhaps we will also raise the other matters with them.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Chairman, I have just been reminded that perhaps we could make the argument, with the United Kingdom, that were the person on the PPE, 60 would be the age at which the pension would kick in. That being the case, it would seem a much more logical and natural age for him to retire. Even if he were on contract, that would be the age at which he would be expected to demit office under ordinary circumstances.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Roy Boddén: Precisely—and we could still work it with a provision that, if an extension were needed, or agreed by both sides, it could be effected.

The Chairman: Madam Clerk, would you continue please?

Clauses 93 to 95

The Clerk:

Clause 93	Solicitor-General
Clause 94	Auditor-General
Clause 95	Applicability of pensions law

The Chairman: Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Mr. Chairman, before we leave this part, I would note that the concerns about the upper age limit that we discussed at length for the Attorney-General also apply to the Solicitor-General, and the Auditor-General, in equal force.

The Chairman: Yes, Thank you very much.
Madam Clerk.

Clauses 96 to 102

The Clerk:

	PART VII: FINANCE
Clause 96	Revenue and expenditure
Clause 97	Reporting
Clause 98	Audit

PART VIII: MISCELLANEOUS

Clause 99	Complaints Commissioner
Clause 100	Register of Interests

Clause 101	Freedom of information
Clause 102	Interpretation

First Schedule to the Constitution – Forms of Oaths and Affirmations

Second Schedule to the Constitution – Electoral Constituencies

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, under this aspect of the Constitution, we were successful in getting the UK to agree to add the words, “to the people of the Cayman Islands” in the Oaths and Affirmations. For that I am thankful. I think that is a step in the right direction.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, we have concluded the major deliberations in Committee, but I have been informed that there might be one other issue.

The Honourable Minister of Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

It just came to my attention, so I am sorry for the short notice. We have already looked at sections 73 and 74, and the only reason I am going back to this is that it should be non-controversial. I think it is just an error.

If you look at section 73 (1), it says, “Subject to section 73. . .” I believe that should say “section 74”, as opposed to 73.

The Chairman: Thank you very much.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Secondly, if you look at section 74(1)(a), the very last word says “suspected”. I believe that if we cross-reference that with section 26(1)(a) of our current Constitution, that word is supposed to be “suspended” as opposed to “suspected”.

Lastly, Mr. Chairman, perhaps at some stage, we need to address our minds to section 75, which presently refers to “constituency”, to see whether, if we are moving towards “one man, one vote” for George Town, it would be necessary to add “/district”, seeing that some districts will not be constituencies.

The Chairman: The suggestion, Honourable Members, is that in section 75, because there will be three districts that will be operating under the “one man, one vote”, as single-member constituencies—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to be rude, Sir, but everybody is presuming this.

The Chairman: Just a second, please. The others will be on the multiple system, so the reading should be that, after electoral constituency, there should be a “/district”. I do not know the Honourable Members’ position on it.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I repeat again, Sir, because I listened carefully to what you just said. It sounds as though everyone, including you, is presuming that this is going to happen. I am not being rude . . .

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: . . . but what you said was, “Since this is going to be the case. . .”

The Chairman: Leader of the Opposition, we are in Committee stage on a Bill. I think it was understood, initially, that whatever happens here, and even the debates in the House, will be sent back to the UK, and the UK will make the final decision. I think we are all under the impression that it is not this House that will be finalising the Constitution. We are making recommendations that will be sent back to the UK.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you very much for clearing that up.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, to agree with what you said, we are making the recommendations as we see them and as we want them to be.

The Opposition has said they do not want this to happen, and they do not want other things to happen. These are recommendations that will go to the United Kingdom. They should not read anything more into it than there is. That is what we support, and you take your position.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, you did question the Chairman.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, I would like to come back to the point raised by the Honourable Minister of Planning. In the first line of 75(1), where she suggested that, after “electoral constituency”, we should insert the word “district”, is that the consensus of the—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: 75(1)?

The Chairman: Yes.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: What is the wording?

The Chairman: Where it reads: “Any person who is registered as an elector in an electoral constituency”, it would be “constituency/district”.

The Honourable Minister of Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

If we are going to take the proposal, which was put forward previously, that it would only be the district of George Town for “one man, one vote”, we would have remaining, then, not constituencies, but also electoral districts. Therefore, we need to address the mind to the idea that if the UK makes the decision to accept our proposal, it would have a consequential amendment to section 75, with the addition of the word “district”.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, if that is the consensus, we will insert the word “district”, and it can be voted on when we get to that point.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Chairman. If I may.

The Chairman: Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. To make it clear and consistent with our position, we would not support that. It would not be needed, since our position remains as is proposed in the draft Constitution.

The Chairman: As stated to the Honourable Members, you will have the opportunity, when the question is being put on each section, to vote accordingly.

I propose, at this time, to take a suspension in Committee, but I am going to extend it a little beyond the normal time so that the Members can have a chance to prepare the Motion that will be brought to the House at the end of the Committee. Therefore, I will propose that we return to Committee stage at 3.30 pm. We now suspend for lunch.

Proceedings suspended at 1.34 pm

Proceedings resumed at 5.13 pm

The Chairman: Honourable Members, the proceedings in the Committee are concluded, and I will now resume the House.

House Resumed at 5.13 pm

REPORT

Report to the House on the Motion to Approve Proposed Amendments to the Proposed New Draft Constitution

The Speaker: I will now call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the House moved into Committee to consider the draft Constitution and, as was intimated by the Motion, we would come back to accept recommendations or amendments thereto.

Before I move further, I would ask that we suspend Standing Order 10(2) in order to meet after 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: So ordered. The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow us to continue beyond the hour of 4.30 pm.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue beyond 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, in Committee, we discussed the various proposals in the draft Constitution. I now set out what was discussed and recommended, and we would propose that a vote be taken at each point.

Committee stage recommended proposals to the Cayman Islands (Constitution) (Amendment) Order 2003, commonly referred to as the draft Constitution. Mr. Speaker, in accordance with the provision of Standing Order 19(2), I beg to report that the proposed new draft Constitution has been considered by a Committee of the whole House. In accordance, therefore, with the provisions of Standing Order 19(3), I do subsequently move that this Honourable House approve the proposals set out in the proposed new draft Constitution, with the following amendments.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Honourable Members, it is my understanding that the copier has broken down, so I am going to ask Members to share their copies with others until we can get this problem rectified.

While we are awaiting that, Honourable Members, I would like to draw your attention again to the section of the Standing Orders under which we are now working: Standing Order 19(1-3). In particular, Standing Order 19(3) states:

“When such a paper”—meaning in this case, the new draft Constitution—“contains proposals, the Member of the Government who presented the paper may, following consideration in Committee, subsequently move that the House approve the proposals set out in the paper, without amendment or with such amendment as he may incorporate in the motion arising out of consideration in the Committee.”

That is just for clarity. Continue, Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Committee, as I said, has finished its work, thus far, on the draft Constitution. Our recommendations will go to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in the United Kingdom. We, as the people's elect, are bound to get the best possible instrument we can. Trying to please everyone is not an easy task, and I doubt that we ever could.

I see that the Chamber of Commerce has written a letter, in regard to the draft Constitution, concerning self-determination. We have said that we think it would be best for our people, and for good governance, if we could have a better structure of government after the next General Elections in November 2004. That is what we proposed. For those of us who wish to see more autonomy, we will continue to negotiate with the United Kingdom on those matters.

Before we move to the recommendations, I would like to read into the records what Benjamin Franklin said, many years ago, at the United States Constitution Convention.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, do you have copies to lay upon the Table of the House?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I would like to table this reading.

Mr. Speaker, I am reading this because it is a little like how I feel, and I doubt that I could be as eloquent. I certainly could not explain it better.

This is what he said: “I confess that I do not entirely approve of this Constitution at present; but, Sir, I am not sure I shall never approve of it, for, having lived long, I have experienced many instances of being obliged, by better information or fuller consideration, to change opinions even on important subjects, which I once thought right, but found to be otherwise. It is therefore that, the older I grow, the more apt I am to doubt my own judgment of others. Most men, indeed, as well as most sects in religion, think themselves in possession of all truth, and, that wherever others differ from them, it is so far error. Steele, a Protestant, in a dedication, tells the pope that the only difference between our two churches in their opinions of the certainty of their doctrine is, the Romish Church is infallible, and the Church of England is never in the wrong. But, though many private persons think almost as highly of their own infallibility as of that of their sect, few express it so naturally as a certain French lady, who in little dispute with her sis- ter, said: 'But I meet with nobody but myself that is always in the right.'

"In these sentiments, Sir, I agree to this Constitution with all its faults - if they are such - because I think a general government necessary for us, and there is no form of government but what may be a blessing to the people if well administered; and I believe, further, that this is likely to be well administered for a course of years, and can only end in despotism, as other forms have done before it, when the people shall become so corrupted as to need despotic government, being incapable of any other. I doubt, too, whether any other convention we can obtain may be able to make a better Constitution; for, when you assemble a number of men, to have the advantage of their joint wisdom, you inevitably assemble with those men all their prejudices, their passions, their errors of opinion, their local interests, and their selfish views. From such an assembly can a perfect production be expected?

"It therefore astonishes me, Sir, to find this system approaching so near to perfection as it does; and I think it will astonish our enemies, who are waiting with confidence to hear that our counsels are confounded like those of the builders of Babel, and that our states are on the point of separation, only to meet hereafter for the purpose of cutting one another's throats. Thus I consent, Sir, to this Constitution, because I expect no better, and because I am not sure that it is not the best. The opinions I have had of its errors I sacrifice to the public good. I have never whispered a syllable of them abroad. Within these walls they were born, and here they shall die. If every one of us, in returning to our constituents, were to report the objections he has had to it, and endeavor to gain partisans in support of them, we might prevent its being generally received, and thereby lose all the salutary effects and great advantages resulting naturally in our favor among foreign nations, as well as among ourselves, from our real or apparent unanimity. Much of the strength and efficiency of any government, in procuring and securing happiness to the people, depends on opinion, on the general opinion of the goodness of that government, as well as of the wisdom and integrity of its governors. I hope, therefore, for our own sakes, as a part of the people, and for the sake of our posterity, that we shall act heartily and unanimously in recommending this Constitution wherever our influence may extend, and turn our future thoughts and endeavours to the means of having it well administered.

"On the whole, Sir, I can not help expressing a wish that every member of the convention who may still have objections to it, would, with me, on this occasion, doubt a little of his own infallibility and, to make manifest our unanimity, put his name to this instrument".

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, before you continue, out of an abundance of caution, I think I should read again the Motion that is before the House. This was in accordance with the provision of Standing Order 19(2).

Your statement said: "I beg to report that the proposed new draft Constitution has been considered by a Committee of the whole House. In accordance, therefore, with the provisions of Standing Order 19(3), I do subsequently move that this Honourable House approve the proposals set out in the proposed new draft Constitution, with the following amendments".

The question is that this Honourable House approve the proposals set out in the proposed new draft Constitution, with the following amendments.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those opposed, No.

Ayes.

Point of Clarification

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, if I may, Sir, I would like some clarification on the question on the Motion. It says: BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House approves any proposals and/or amendments arising out of consideration by the Committee.

I think we put that question before we went into Committee. Are we now putting a new question, or are we going to apologise for putting that question and now put this one?

What are we doing?

The Speaker: There is no need for apology. When section 3 was mentioned—and if you give me a second I will turn to that—it said: BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House approves any proposals and/ or amendments arising out of the consideration by the Committee.

There were no details or substance given to that, so we are not in any way infringing Standing Order 24(8). I am making this point so that it does not come up. Standing Order 24(8) says that a motion shall not be brought, within six months, the substance of which has been considered in the previous six months. That is not a question before us. We have not yet dealt with the Motion that we have now before the House.

Point of Clarification

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, may I ask for another point of clarification? I want to make sure that we have it right. I had understood in our other discussions that the House was proposing to take each proposed amendment separately in terms of voting. However, the Motion—

The Speaker: As a procedural matter, I can see the point that you are making, Second Elected Member for George Town. To make sure that everyone is happy with the procedures, this Motion can be taken when all of the amendments have been put in place. I will defer that until the amendments have been put in place.

Let us read the Motion again so that we all understand it. We will not be mentioning each section by section. What the Motion states is that this Honourable House accepts the proposals set out in the proposed new draft Constitution, with the amendments. What I propose to do is to vote on those amendments. Continue, Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The following amendments are proposed to schedule 2 to the Order. We recommend that Part 1 of Schedule 2, Fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual, be dealt with as a separate Act or Law.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I hate to interrupt again, but it would be helpful if all Members on this side had a copy of the Motion so that we could follow it. At the moment, we are struggling to share, because we only have two copies.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, it was intimated to the House that the staff were having problems with the copier. We had two copies and we gave those copies to the Opposition, except for the ones that I have and that you, as the Speaker, have.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, they will get that in a minute, if I could just rest one minute, Mr. Speaker.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Leader of Government Business. As I mentioned earlier, the reason each Member did not get a copy is that the copy machine is not working properly. Thank you, Honourable Member, for getting copies from the Government side and providing them to the Opposition. Thank you very much.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am thankful; however, the Government side is left without any. We will get them bit by bit, as soon as the staff has them. We will continue, however.

Mr. Speaker, I trust that you are going to take a vote on each recommended amendment, as we proposed. We recommend that Part 1 of Schedule 2 – Fundamental Rights and Freedoms of the Individual, be dealt with as a separate Law.

Proposed Amendments to Schedule 2 to the Order

Question Put on Amendment to Part I of Schedule 2

The Speaker: The question is that Part 1 of Schedule 2, Fundamental Rights and Freedoms of the Individual, be dealt with as a separate Act or Law under the proposed new draft Constitution.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that Part 1 of Schedule 2 “Fundamental Rights and Freedoms of the Individual” be dealt with as a separate Act or Law.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could sit, rather than stand, throughout the presentation of this Report.

The Speaker: If it is all right with the House, then it is not a problem.

Question Put on Amendment to 32(1)(c)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The recommended amendment to section 32(1)(c) is: “. . .six other Ministers, one of whom would be Deputy Chief Minister appointed by the Governor acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister from among the elected members of the Legislative Assembly”.

The Speaker: The question is that section 32(1)(c) be amended to read: “. . .six other Ministers, one of whom would be Deputy Chief Minister, appointed by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister from among the elected members of the Legislative Assembly”.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that section 32(1)(c) be amended to read, “six other Ministers, one of whom would Deputy Chief Minister, appointed by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister from among the elected members of the Legislative Assembly;”

The Speaker: The next section being recommended is section 32(4). The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Question Put on Deletion to Section 32(4)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, we recommend that section 32(4) be deleted.

The Speaker: The question is that section 32(4) of the draft Constitution be deleted.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, could we have a division, please?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, would you record the Division?

[Pause]

The Speaker: For the records, I mentioned earlier the question of the constitutional amendments and that the Official Members of Government are not voting on this.

The Clerk:

Division No. 8/03

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField

The Speaker: The results of the Division: 8 Ayes, 5 Noes, 1 Absentee. The Motion is in favour of the Government.

Agreed by Majority that section 32(4) be deleted.

The Speaker: The next section is 32(6). Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Question Put on Amendment to section 32(6)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, the recommended amendment to section 32(6) is:

“If occasion arises for making an appointment of any Minister between a dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the polling in the next following general election, a person who was an elected member of the Legislative Assembly immediately before the dissolution may be appointed as a Minister by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister as if he were still a member of the Legislative Assembly”.

“If occasion arises for making an appointment of any Minister between a dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the polling in the next following general election, a person who was an elected member of the Legislative Assembly immediately before the dissolution may be appointed as a Minister by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister as if he were still a Member of the Legislative Assembly”.

The Speaker: The question is that the amendment under 32(6) reads as follows: “If occasion arises for making an appointment of any Minister between a dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the polling in the next following general election, a person who was an elected member of the Legislative Assembly immediately before the dissolution may be appointed as a Minister by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister as if he were still a Member of the Legislative Assembly”.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that section 32(6) be amended to read: “If occasion arises for making an appointment of any Minister between a dissolution of the Legislative Assembly and the polling in the next following general election, a person who was an elected member of the Legislative Assembly immediately before the dissolution may be appointed as a Minister by the Governor, acting in accordance with the advice of the Chief Minister as if he were still a member of the Legislative Assembly”.

The Speaker: Section 35. Performance of functions of Ministers in certain events. The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Question Put on Amendment to section 35(1)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, the recommended amendment to section 35(1) is: “If the Chief Minister is unable, due to illness or his absence from the Cayman Islands, to perform the functions of his office, the Governor shall authorise the Deputy Chief Minister to perform those functions. If both the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister are unable to perform for the aforesaid reasons the Governor may authorise some other Minister to perform those functions”.

The Speaker: The question is that section 35(1) be amended as follows:

“If the Chief Minister is unable, due to illness or his absence from the Cayman Islands, to perform the functions of his office, the Governor shall authorise the Deputy Chief Minister to perform those functions. If both the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister are unable to perform for the aforesaid reasons the Governor may authorise some other Minister to perform those functions”.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that section 35(1) be amended to read, "If the Chief Minister is unable, due to illness or his absence from the Cayman Islands, to perform the functions of his office, the Governor shall authorise the Deputy Chief Minister to perform those functions. If both the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister are unable to perform for the aforesaid reasons the Governor may authorise some other Minister to perform those functions".

The Speaker: Section 39. Submission of questions to Cabinet. Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Question Put on Amendment to section 39

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the amendment recommended to section 39 is as follows:

"Any question submitted to the Governor by any Minister shall stand referred to the Cabinet for its consideration".

The Speaker: The question is that section 39 be amended as follows:

"Any question submitted to the Governor by any Minister shall stand referred to the Cabinet for its consideration".

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that section 39 be amended to read, "Any question submitted to the Governor by any Minister shall stand referred to the Cabinet for its consideration".

The Speaker: Section 41. Secretary to the Cabinet. Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Question Put on Amendment to section 41(4)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The recommended amendment to section 41 (4) is as follows: "The Secretary to the Cabinet and the Cabinet Office shall also have general responsibility, under the authority of the Governor and the Chief Minister, for the co-ordination of Government policy."

The Speaker: The question is that section 41(4) be amended as follows:

"The Secretary to the Cabinet and the Cabinet Office shall also have general responsibility, under the authority of the Governor and the Chief Minister, for the co-ordination of Government policy".

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that section 41(4) be amended to read, "The Secretary to the Cabinet and the Cabinet Office shall also have general responsibility, under the authority of the Governor and the Chief Minister, for the co-ordination of Government policy".

The Speaker: Section 44. Qualifications for Elected Membership.

Question Put on Amendment to section 44 (1)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the recommended amendment to section 44(1) is: "We propose that the provisions of this section be amended and replaced with the provisions of section 18 of the current constitution except that section 18 (2) would be amended to read as follows: "For the purposes of subsection 1(d) of this section, a qualified citizen is a British Dependent Territories citizen and British Citizen by virtue of a connection with the islands who either..."."

The Speaker: The question is . . .

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry Sir, before you put the question—

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that it is technically correct to describe individuals as "British Dependent Territories citizens" anymore, since the passage of the recent Act. I think it should be "British Overseas Territories". I am suggesting that to the Honourable Member so he can make the amendment.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: It should be "British Overseas Territories". Yes.

The Speaker: Thank you very much. You are quite correct; it is now "British Overseas Territories citizen". The question is that section 44(1) be amended as follows:

“We propose that the provisions of this section be amended and replaced with the provisions of section 18 of the current constitution except that section 18(2) would be amended to read as follows: “For the purposes of subsection (1)(d) of this section, a qualified citizen is a British Overseas Territories citizen and British Citizen by virtue of a connection with the islands, who either . . .”.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: A point of procedure, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Continue, Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Health was not in the Chamber at the time the question was put and he, therefore, was not entitled to vote.

The Speaker: I have made a ruling. When I observed the Minister he was standing by his chair. I am satisfied that he was in the Chamber and we will proceed. Section 51: Leader of the Opposition.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Question Put on Amendment to section 51

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the recommended amendment to Section 51 is that we recommend that provision be made for a Deputy Leader of the Opposition who should be appointed by the Governor acting in accordance with the advice of the Leader of the Opposition.

The Speaker: The question is that Section 51 be amended as follows: “We recommend that provision be made for a Deputy Leader of the Opposition who should be appointed by the Governor acting in accordance with the advice of the Leader of the Opposition”.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Question Put on Deletion to section 62(2)(c)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: There is a recommended amendment to section 62(2)(c). We recommend the deletion of section 62(2)(c).

The Speaker: The question is that section 62(2)(c) be amended as follows: “We recommend the deletion of section 62(2)(c)”.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that Section 62(2)(c) be deleted.

The Speaker: Section 70. Electoral constituencies. Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Question Put on Amendment to section 70 (1)

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we recommend:

“The concept of seventeen single member constituencies be accepted as proposed by the Electoral Boundary Commission 2003, but Full implementation should come into effect in the 2008 General Elections.

“At this time it is recommended that there be a phased implementation and that the district of George Town be divided into six single member constituencies as recommended by the Electoral Boundary Commission 2003 along with the districts of East End and North Side. The remaining districts should be contested as multi-member constituencies as they were in the 2000 General Elections.

“We also recommend that the name George Town North be renamed Seven Mile Beach North and be a single member constituency”.

The Speaker: The question is that section 70 (1) be amended as follows:

“The concept of 17 single-member constituencies be accepted as proposed by the Electoral Boundary Commission 2003, but Full implementation should come into effect in the 2008 General Elections.

“At this time it is recommended that there be a phased implementation and that the district of George Town be divided into six single-member constituencies as recommended by the Electoral Boundary Commission 2003 along with the districts of East End and North Side. The Speaker: It sounds like the Ayes have it.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can we have a division please?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, a division.

The Clerk:

Division No. 12/03

Ayes: 8

Hon. W. McKeever Bush
Hon. Gilbert A. McLean
Hon. Roy Bodden
Hon. Juliana O'Connor-Connolly
Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
Hon. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.

Mr. Anthony A. Eden
Ms. Edna M. Moyle
Mr. V. Arden McLean

Absent: 1

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField

The Clerk: 8 Ayes, 5 Noes, 1 Absentee.

The Speaker: The results of the Division: 8 ayes, 5 Noes, 1 absentee.

Agreed by Majority that the concept of seventeen single-member constituencies be accepted as proposed by the Electoral Boundary Commission

2003, but Full implementation should come into effect in the 2008 General Elections.

Further, that at this time it is recommended there be a phased implementation and that the district of George Town be divided into six single-member constituencies as recommended by the Electoral Boundary Commission 2003 along with the districts of East End and North Side. The remaining districts should be contested as multi-member constituencies as they were in the 2000 General Elections.

Further, that the name George Town North be renamed Seven Mile Beach North and be a single-member constituency.

The Speaker: Section 92. Attorney-General. Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Question Put on Amendment to section 92(2)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, the recommended amendment to section 92(2) is: “Power to make appointments to the office of Attorney-General is vested in the Governor, acting on the advice of the Chief Minister.”

The Speaker: The question is that section 92(2) be amended as follows: “Power to make appointments to the office of Attorney-General is vested in the Governor, acting on the advice of the Chief Minister.”

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that the Power to make appointments to the office of Attorney-General is vested in the Governor, acting on the advice of the Chief Minister.

The Speaker: Section 75. Consequential Amendment. The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Question Put on Consequential Amendment to section 75

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: There is a consequential amendment in section 75(1) that “district” be inserted after the word “constituency” as it appears in the first line of section 75(1).

The Speaker: The question is that section 75 be amended as follows: “that “district” be inserted after the word “constituency” as it appears in the first line of section 75(1)”.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I think that for the sake of clarity, and other than an abundance of caution, since I see the Opposition “slashing” that, we should use that distinction there, and “/district” be inserted after the word “constituency” as it appears in the first line of section 75(1).

The Speaker: Yes, also as an abundance of caution, I will read the question again. The question is that section 75 be amended as follows: that “/district” be inserted after the word “constituency” as it appears in the first line of section 75(1)”.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The Speaker: The results of the Division: 8 Ayes, 5 Noes, 1 Absentee.

Agreed by Majority that “/district” be inserted after the word “constituency” as it appears in the first line of section 75(1).

The Speaker: Typographical Amendments. Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Question Put on Typographical Amendments

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: There are two typographical amendments.

1. In section 73 (1): By deleting “73” as it appears in the first line and by substituting the number “74” therefor.

2. In section 74(1)(a): By deleting the word “suspected” and substituting the word “suspended” therefor.

The Speaker: The question is that the following typographical amendments be made—

1. In section 73 (1): By deleting “73” as it appears in the first line and by substituting the number “74” therefor.
2. In section 74(1)(a): By deleting the word “suspected” and substituting the word “suspended” therefor.

All those in favour please say Aye; those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that the following typographical amendments be made—

1. In section 73 (1): By deleting “73” as it appears in the first line and by substituting the number “74” therefor.
2. In section 74(1)(a): By deleting the word “suspected” and substituting the word “suspended” therefor.

Question Put That the Proposed New Draft Constitution, as amended, be forwarded to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for their consideration

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I believe that we have covered all matters discussed in Committee. So that everyone understands, those not being mentioned were agreed. I do believe that the Opposition has been able to record their support and non-support as to how they felt. However, we would now propose that these matters be forwarded to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and that we wait, then, to hear from them in regard to the Constitution.

The Speaker: The question is that the proposed new draft Constitution, as amended, be forwarded to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for their consideration. The Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. For clarity's sake, as I listened carefully to the Leader of Government Business, what he did say was that all matters not mentioned in the Motion were agreed upon. There were other matters that were not agreed upon during Committee stage, and I wish to ensure that the Hansard of those proceedings will also be forwarded to London.

The Speaker: The vote, nonetheless, is being taken on the proposed new draft Constitution, with the amendments with which we have dealt. Therefore, the question is that the proposed new draft Constitution, as amended, be forwarded to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for their consideration.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The Clerk: 8 Ayes, 5 Noes, 1 Absentee.

The Speaker: The results of the Division for the proposed new Constitution, as amended, to be forwarded to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are 8 Ayes, 5 Noes, 1 Absentee.

For clarity, I would like to point out that, as was explained when we started the debate, all the minutes of the debate on this Motion, and on the proposed new draft Constitution will be forwarded to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO).

Agreed by majority that the Proposed New Draft Constitution, As Amended, be forwarded to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for their Consideration.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much for that clarification. At all times, it was said that all the documentation pertaining to this constitutional debate would be sent to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. We have said that in this House, and we have said it outside. That is what was requested, because that is the only way that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office would have a true picture of what took place in Committee. That is why we did what we did in Committee, so that there would be clarity for the FCO. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, there should be no doubt in anyone's mind that we are sending the proposed documentation, from the debate on the Motion, to the examination on the various sections and clauses of the Constitution in Committee, and the proceedings as relating to what has just taken place.

Mr. Speaker, as I said, there are those who would like to see much more in the Constitution, and we, as a Government, propose that we will continue discussions with the FCO in regard to those matters that the Chamber of Commerce has raised, and others, as we go along. However, as we can all see, the FCO has made it abundantly clear where they stand in regard to the Territories, and the constitutional development of the Territories. I do not think it could be clearer.

Mr. Speaker, for those who have asked why we now go to this point, as I have told the Chamber of Commerce, I would not wish upon any persons—whether it be this party, the Opposition party, or independents—that they should have to conduct business in the current climate locally, and with all the pressures and obligations under which we are put internationally. The country is not back in the 1800s. We are not in 1960. We are moving into the year 2004, when there is tremendous pressure on various aspects of governance in this country.

Although, as I have said, I would have liked to see much more in the Constitution, and although I would never proffer to be as eloquent as Benjamin Franklin, I think the reading earlier puts it quite squarely as to where we should stand. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Remember this: It is not the Constitution that is going to make better governance. That will give us the wherewithal, but we, as Honourable Members, and anyone else to come, are the human element that will carry this country forward. Mr. Speaker, to reiterate, all documentation will be sent to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. We will then await their reply.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Point of Clarification

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I have a suggestion, and I say it purposely, in this forum, just before we close off for the day. Might I suggest that, whenever the 'bundle' is completed, and whatever is sent to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, copies are made and sent to each of the Members here.

The Speaker: The suggestion by the Leader of the Opposition is that each Member be provided with a bundle of the information sent to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, when it is sent.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, this is a meeting of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands. The practice and procedure is that every Member gets a bound copy of Hansard—a verbatim report of everything that is done, good, bad or indifferent—and they will get it.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we have reached the hour of 6.15 pm but there is still one item on the Order Paper for today, which is the Debate on the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundaries Commission 2003. I do not know if it is the will of Members that we should continue, or whether we should take the adjournment at this point. I am in the hands of Members.

[Pause]

The Speaker: I gather that it is the wish of Members that we should adjourn at this point. The Honourable Leader of Government Business, please give the Motion.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, earlier we had intimated that we would work later, but since then, we did say to the Opposition that we would complete this aspect of business on Wednesday—to deal with the other Motion.

Mr. Speaker, I believe all Members want to call it a day.

I thank you, the staff, and in fact, the Official Members, who did not have to be here. It was good to have them here. Although they did not take part in the debate, they could offer advice. Perhaps we should take note of that.

Mr. Speaker, having said that, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until next Wednesday 26 November 2003 at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until Wednesday 26 November 2003 at 10 am.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 6.16 pm the House stood adjourned until Wednesday, 26 November 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
26 NOVEMBER 2003
10:42 AM
Sixth Sitting

The Speaker: I will call on the Honourable Minister of Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.45 am

The Speaker: Please be seated.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies for late commencement of Sitting

The Speaker: Firstly, I wish to apologise for the late start of the Assembly, which was due to certain procedural matters having to be put in place.

Apologies for Absence and Late Attendance

I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Second Official Member and apologies for late arrival from the Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Broadcasting of Committee Stage on Government Motion No. 6/03

I would also like to mention, Honourable Members, as previously stated, that although as a rule proceedings of Committees are held in camera (with the exception of Finance Committee), because of the important nature of Government Motion 06/2003, which is the debate on the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundaries Commission 2003—as in the case of Government Motion No. 5/2003, which was on the debate of the proposed new draft Constitution—the proceedings in Committee of Government Motion No. 6/2003 will be broadcast and open to the public.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS
OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have received no statements from Honourable Ministers or Members of Cabinet.

Suspension of Standing Order 24(5)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I believe we proposed to seek the suspension of Standing Order 24(5), and I so move.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 24(5) be suspended in order to debate Government Motion No. 6/2003.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 24(5) suspended.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 6/03

Debate on the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundaries Commission 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move the following Motion standing in my name, which reads:

“BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House debates the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003 laid on the Table of the Legislative Assembly on 3 October 2003;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, upon the completion of the debate, this Honourable House resolves itself into a Committee of the whole House to consider the Report and report to this House that the Committee has considered the same;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House approves any proposals and/or amendments arising out of consideration by the Committee.”

The Speaker: I propose to put the question in two parts—on the two first resolutions, and then lastly on the third resolution.

The resolution reads: “BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House debates the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003 laid on the Table of the Legislative Assembly on 3 October 2003;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, upon the completion of the debate, this Honourable House resolves itself into a Committee of the whole House to consider the Report and report to this House that the Committee has considered the same;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House approves any proposals and/or amendments arising out of consideration by the Committee.”

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The third resolution reads: “AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House approves any proposals and/or amendments arising out of consideration by the Committee.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

The Speaker: I think the Ayes have it. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, may we have a Division on the last question put, Sir?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, may we have a Division on the last resolution?

[Pause]

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I propose to make a change in the former procedure. The Motion was moved by the Honourable Leader of Government Business. I have read the details of the Motion and I will now rule that the Motion will be open for debate, rather than putting the question on any parts of the Motion.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Firstly, let me apologise to the House for being late. I was collared by approximately 10 people, just outside the precincts, and had to deal with several matters.

Mr. Speaker, I do not propose to say much on this in opening, because I believe that the merits of these Boundaries Commission Reports have been debated. There will be Members who will want to further expound on their views, and to make recommendations from the Floor of the House—each to his own. At this point, I do not propose to go any further on it, because we will examine it in Committee. I will leave it at that.

The boundaries are important, we know, and the Report is important. We have already said where we propose to go with the Report: that is, for George Town to begin on “one man, one vote” in the coming General Election. That will be bring the number of districts voting “one man, one vote” to three. I should say that there will be eight constituencies: East End, North Side, and then the six in George Town. However, there will still be the involvement of three of what we know as “the historic districts”.

Mr. Speaker, there is a change in the proposition that is before us. The Report talks about George Town North. That would read as Seven Mile Beach.

I beg Members to move as quickly as we can, and to deal as efficiently as we can with our time on these matters. Thank you kindly.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise this morning to offer my contribution to this important debate on the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundaries Commission 2003. It is the first Report of its kind in the history of these Islands. If for no other reason than that, I expected that the Honourable Leader of Government Business would have spent a bit more time outlining what the work of the Commission has been, what the results of the Report are, and what their recommendations are. However, in light of the fact that he has not done that, I propose to spend some little time remedying that omission.

Mr. Speaker, it is important that we recall how the Electoral Boundary Commission came to be created. The Constitutional Commissioners were charged with the responsibility of, and given a broad mandate to consider, what was appropriate in terms of constitutional modernisation in these Islands. Having gone about their business, and having held the various meetings they held, they concluded that there was broad-based support for the move to single-member constituencies. Indeed, on page nine of their Report, they state as follows: “Apart from the inclusion of a Bill of Rights if there is any other issue that received as much widespread support in our review process it is the introduction of single member constituencies with each elector having one vote only.”

That is in the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners, dated 7 March 2002.

Mr. Speaker, that finding of the Commissioners came as no surprise. If I might, I will refer to the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners 1991, Sir Frederick Smith and Mr. Walter Wallace.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: On page 16 of their Report, they note the following . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Members, the Report to which the Second Elected Member for George Town is referring is a public document, and has been well circulated. Therefore, I will not request that he lay it upon the Table of the House.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: They said, back in 1991: “At present, there are six constituencies in the Islands, two single-member constituencies and four multi-member constituencies. Constituency boundaries and the number of members returned by each constituency are set out, not in the Constitution, but in the Elections Law. This arrangement ensures flexibility and we do not suggest it should be changed. We are concerned however that, under such an arrangement, it would be possible for the Government of the day to use its majority in the Assembly to amend the Elections Law to re-draw constituency boundaries etc to its political advantage. While it is true that such an amendment could if necessary be disallowed, we much prefer the alternative proposal put to us that an independent Boundaries Commission be provided for in the Constitution. The Committee should comprise a Chairman appointed by the Governor in his discretion and two members, one appointed on the advice of the Chief Minister and one on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition.”

That, Mr. Speaker, is precisely the procedure that is provided for in the draft Constitution, and precisely the procedure that was laid down by the interim Order in Council, which was given effect, I believe, in May 2003. They go on to say: “Allied to this is the question of whether single-member constituencies should not in due course replace the present largely multi-member system. We heard views for and against such a proposition but judged that there was a great deal of support for the established democratic principle of “one man, one vote”, ie, single-member constituencies. We agree, since we consider it inequitable that, depending entirely on place of residence, an elector should have either one, two or three votes”—I pause here, Mr. Speaker, to note that back then, George Town only had three seats, as did West Bay, and for completeness, Bodden Town only had two—“and because election results can be distorted by electors choosing to cast only one vote in favour of only one candidate instead of two or three votes in favour of two or three candidates.”

They conclude by saying: “Although it could not be implemented in time for the next general election, due by November 1992, it is our hope that thereafter consideration would be given to requiring the Boundaries Commission to submit recommendations for drawing new constituency boundaries so as to provide for single-member constituencies.”

Mr. Speaker, that was in 1991. As I said earlier, it came as no surprise that more than a decade hence, and with the benefit of their increased experience and growing sophistication, the electorate was even more in favour of the move to single-member constituencies—at least that was the determination of the Constitutional Commissioners, last year.

Following that recommendation, there ensued the now over-worn debate about whether or not single-member constituencies were something we should support, as elected representatives. Very early in the day, the Government took the position that it was not something they would support as recommended, but that it was a process that should be phased in. There were even concerns expressed, by some Members of the Government—I was looking at them this morning in Hansard—that the result of single-member constituencies would be racial, social and economic division in the country, and that the matter needed to be carefully scrutinised.

As I have indicated over the course of the last few days, when I debated the other Motion (that is, the draft Constitution), the finding of members of the Opposition, in the 20 or 21 meetings we held over the course of this debate on the constitutional modernisation process, was that, with the exception of Cayman Brac, there seemed to be general support for the move to single-member constituencies. I hasten to add today, as I did when I last spoke, that the numbers in attendance at the meetings we held—indeed the numbers in attendance at any meetings held in connection with either the Electoral Boundary Commission work or the work of the Constitutional Commissioners themselves—could not be described as overwhelming. We are certainly not suggesting that we have any scientific basis for the position we take.

What we can say is that the impression we gained, from those who attended our meetings, from wider discussions in the community and from representations made to us by a broad cross-section of people in this community, is that there is general support for the move to single-member constituencies throughout Grand Cayman.

Therefore, that was one of the contentious issues we felt should form part of a referendum. I am not going to spend the valuable time of the House rehearsing that drawn-out process. Suffice it to say that as a result, and towards the end of that process—at the summit held on 29 November—the Government appeared to come around to our view. In London, we collectively supported the introduction of 17 single-member constituencies throughout the Cayman Islands. That is why the draft Constitution contains that provision. However, that agreement put in train a fairly complicated, involved and expensive process, because the Order in Council that came into effect in May did establish an Electoral Boundary Commission. The Leader of the Opposition recommended the appointment of Mrs. Adriannie Webb, a well-known attorney-at-law, to the Commission. The Government recommended the appointment of Mr. Eddinton Powell, a well-known corporate manager, financial controller and officer with a major corporation in these Islands, as their representative.

Further, Mr. Speaker, we imported the person of Mr. Carl Dundas, an extremely experienced and well-known expert on the whole question of the establishment of electoral boundaries. They carried out what can probably be described as a yeoman's effort in the relatively short time they had to review the work of the Constitutional Commissioners, who had themselves proposed the boundaries of 17 single-member constituencies. It is their work that we are here this morning to discuss.

Mr. Speaker, the Electoral Boundary Commission was established under section 28A of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) (Amendment) Order 2003. I have already outlined who the Chairman of that Commission was, and who the other members were. Their mandate was: “to submit a report to the Governor, as soon as practicable after its appointment, recommending the boundaries of seventeen electoral constituencies into which the Cayman Islands should be divided with a view to each such constituency returning one member to the Legislative Assembly.

“In preparing the aforementioned report, the Commission was mandated to:

- a) take no account of the racial distribution of electors within the Cayman Islands;
- b) take account of the natural boundaries within the Cayman Islands;
- c) have regard to existing electoral districts;
- d) Subject to those provisions, the Commission is required to ensure that-
  - i. the electoral constituencies shall contain, so far as is reasonably practicable, equal numbers of persons qualified to be registered as electors; and
  - ii. Cayman Brac and Little Cayman shall (between these two Islands) return at least two members to the Assembly.”

Mr. Speaker, the Commission convened its inaugural meeting on 24 July 2003. It then proceeded to begin its work, holding 10 meetings between 24 July and 24 August 2003. It used the media and public meetings to urge qualified persons to register to vote. It undertook field visits to each of the 17 prospective constituencies, to boundary lines and to housing developments in the vicinity of such boundary lines. The Commission invited and received submissions, from members of the public, on the construction of the boundaries of the 17 single-member constituencies. It held a public meeting in each electoral district, including Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. It invited oral submissions from the Supervisor of Elections; the Deputy Supervisor of Elections; the former Chairman of the Constitutional Review Commission; the Census and Survey Supervisor, in the Census office; and the Registering Officers in the electoral districts.

The Chairman, on behalf of the Commission, had several interviews with the radio and press on the work of the Commission.

The Commission also accessed data that the Elections Office had for registered voters as of 1 July 2003. It examined, closely, the data used by the Constitutional Review Commission in preparing the number of voters in the proposed constituencies contained in their Report. They had the Supervisor of Elections, Mr. Kearney Gomez, and the Deputy Supervisor, Mr. Orrett Connor, explain the process. They received a copy of the Report of the Cayman Islands 1999 Population and Housing Census, and invited a representative of the Census Office to meet with the Commission and discuss that Report.

The Commission reported the findings of the Census Report—particularly that on the night of 10 October 1999, 40,786 persons spent the night in these Islands—and also determined that the fastest-growing area was Savannah, in the Bodden Town district.

They examined the growth patterns in the Cayman Islands from 1802, when the population was 933 persons, through to 2001, when the resident population was 41,900 persons.

They conducted field visits to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. On Monday 11 through Wednesday 13 August, they visited boundaries of the 15 prospective constituencies in Grand Cayman with the Chief Surveyor, Mr. Grant Vincent; the Support Services Manager of the Elections Office, Mr. Rupert McCoy; and the Geographic Information System Technician and Secretary to the Commission, Miss Janet Dixon. They held public meetings, as I have said earlier, in all districts; there were Elected Members at all of those meetings.

Mr. Speaker, I have gone through that in some detail to make the point about the tremendous amount of work, effort, and expense that has gone into this process thus far, all predicated on the agreement of Honourable Members of the House that single-member constituencies were going to be a feature of our new Constitution.

In my previous debate, I hazarded a guess as to what the cost might have been, and I am not going to go over that again today. It is safe to say that a tremendous amount of time, effort and money has been spent to bring the process thus far, and it is inconceivable that, at this late stage, the Government should renege on the agreement they made, which put this action in train.

For the Leader of Government Business to get up and move the Motion this morning, and offer no explanation—no rationale—for this about-face, is quite extraordinary.

Mr. Speaker, the Commission had a mandate, which required it to divide the Cayman Islands into 17 electoral constituencies, each of which would elect a Member of the Legislative Assembly. The Commissioners note in their Report that this issue was clearly controversial at the public meetings held by the Commission. They say that: “. . . it appeared to cause unease to some who attended the public meetings of the Commission in Cayman Brac and West Bay, while George Town, North Side and East End were supportive of single member constituencies; Bodden Town audience had mixed views on the issue. The former Chairman of the Constitutional Review Commission told this Commission that the “one-man one-vote” issue was the most frequent one raised with his Commission, which felt that the best way of giving effect to that aspiration was the single member constituency system, and hence that Commission recommended that system.”

However, before we get too carried away about the unease, referred to in that quotation, of some Members who attended the public meetings of the Commission, we should bear in mind the attendance of those public meetings. In the Report, the Commissioners note that in West Bay (which had the best-attended meeting), a mere 37 persons attended; in George Town, 15 attended; in Bodden Town, 16; in North Side, 7; in East End, 3; in Cayman Brac, 11; and in Little Cayman, 0 persons.

Therefore, when that unease to which they refer is borne in mind, it must be borne in mind in the context of the sort of attendance the Commissioners enjoyed at those meetings. Those numbers are hardly representative of the population, or indeed, the much smaller number of persons who qualify to vote in these Islands.

Mr. Speaker, I will come back to the Report, specifically to what the Commissioners say about the process of single-member constituencies and the considerations they bore in mind when deciding where these boundaries should be drawn.

Before I do that, I think it is important that we come to some understanding of the whole purpose of single-member constituencies and indeed, the important role it was intended that single-member constituencies play in the development of our new Constitution, and in the achievement of some of the laudable goals set, not just locally, but by Her Majesty's Government. These were outlined initially in the White Paper euphemistically entitled, “Partnership for Progress and Prosperity”, and indeed, set out again in some detail in the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist that accompanied the instructions to the Overseas Territories to proceed with the Constitutional Modernisation Review.

Mr. Speaker, if we are to achieve more representative and participative government—if we are to achieve a more open, accountable government—we have to create the mechanisms that will allow that to happen. The critical role of single-member constituencies in that whole process cannot be gainsaid, for a number of reasons. One has been repeated over and over, and has created a haunting drumbeat from the Elected Members for North Side and East End for years and years. I am not speaking only of the two Members who currently occupy those two seats; it is a feeling that persons in East End and North Side have had for as long as I can remember: a feeling of being second-class citizens. Why is it that, because I am in East End, by an accident of residence, I only get one vote, while those who live in West Bay get four? It is simply not fair; it is not equitable. That is the current system under which we operate. That is the first reason why a move to single-member constituencies is necessary as part of the creation of a more democratic society. It is fundamental to the evolution of our constitutional status, and of our democratic state.

The second reason, Mr. Speaker, is the accountability factor. As you well know (as one with a long record in this Honourable House, and having successfully contested a number of elections), when you represent a district the size of George Town, in which more than 50 per cent of the population resides—and I pause here, Mr. Speaker, because, if I had not fully appreciated it before I was elected to this Honourable House, I certainly appreciate it having had the benefit of three years now—you represent not only those who were able to vote for you (that is the registered voters), but all who reside within the boundaries of your electoral district. For George Town, that means more than 20,000 persons.

The accountability factor becomes critically important when you say to me, “I have this particular problem,” and I say to you, “I really cannot help you with that; you need to go and see Mr. Linford.” You go and see Mr Linford and Mr Linford says, “Well, really that is not my Ministry; you need to go see Dr. Frank”. Dr Frank says, “You need to go and see Mr Kurt”—round and round.

We all share, as the four Elected Members for George Town, equal responsibility for our constituents. I am not suggesting for a moment that this is something that I practise, or that you practise—or that anybody practises—I am saying that this system affords that. The move to single-member constituencies will place each Elected Member under the bright and glaring light of scrutiny and accountability to their constituents. No longer will anyone be able to say, “You had better go and see one of the other ones, because I cannot help you.” It is your obligation and your responsibility.

The other factor, which always seems to get under the skin of some Elected Members of this Honourable House when it is raised—particularly when I raise it—is what is referred as the “coattail” effect. The move to single-member constituencies will lessen the impact and influence of the coattail, because it becomes far more difficult to persuade a smaller number of voters in a particular constituency that they should support some candidate, who is otherwise unworthy, simply because he happens to be a member of a team led by someone who is regarded as worthy, who is popular and influential. When the elections are over, the electors in that particular constituency need to be certain that the individual they elected is able to discharge his functions, duties and responsibilities to them in his individual capacity as their representative—not just to be able to say, “Well, I am with this particular team; therefore, we will look after whatever your needs are.”

Those are the laudable reasons why a single-member constituency is the way to go in our effort to seek a more accountable, more democratic system of government.

Mr. Speaker, the Leader of Government Business has, for some days, been talking about the biggest coattail effect of all, when referring to my election, because I ran on the platform with the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. Let me say this: I would never be so immodest as to propose that my standing with the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, who gained almost 81 per cent of the vote last time around, did not have some influence on my standing in those elections. However, I make it quite plain that I got 60.5 per cent of the vote, in the most sophisticated and complicated electoral district in these Islands. If anyone is in doubt as to where I stand on this, I said it before and I will say it again: Let us move to single-member constituencies in all the districts, and then see who is successful and who survives the process.

I am quite happy to go to single-member constituencies. If the result means my exclusion from this Honourable House, then so be it. It is the process that is most important, and not my return to this House. I do not want to be part of any legacy that involves the attempted creation of a Constitution and a process that is aimed primarily at my return to this Honourable House. Any member of this Honourable House—and indeed, the Government—should be ashamed to be promoting this system they are promoting of single-member constituencies for George Town, while maintaining intact multi-member constituencies in West Bay. They should be ashamed to make such a self-centred, selfish and self-serving proposition.

Mr. Speaker, during the process, and as part of our endeavour to bring education and information to the populace on the whole question of constitutional modernisation, the parliamentary Opposition organised a public lecture, delivered by the Honourable David Thompson, Member of Parliament, who was then the Leader of the Opposition in Barbados. It was held on Wednesday 1 May 2002. I crave your indulgence to refer to what that honourable and learned Member of Parliament said about the importance of single-member constituencies to the promotion of a more democratic system.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, would you lay a copy of your quotation upon the Table, please?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I would be pleased to do so.

Mr. Speaker, on page 10 of his lecture notes, he said: “In my view the issue of one man, one vote is the single key constitutional issue that needs to be resolved to give full legitimacy to your democratic government. If it is true that the ability of a strong government to railroad its proposals through with the backing of a large majority often representing less than half the electorate strikes at the heart of representative government, then the move towards single-member constituencies is a vital. Not that it solves the problem. But it provides the framework for doing so. The rest is up to the people.”

“It is heartening to read in your Commissioners’ report that one of the most important issues on which there was widespread support is the introduction of single-member constituencies. This is a positive development for Cayman Islands. The current system of multi-member constituencies is incompatible with the party system and democracy.”

“The coat-tails of a strong party leader can be long. Clinging to them can be a number of individual candidates who are otherwise unworthy of election. They may add nothing to the character of the government but can be swept in without tide of populism.

“If, however, you put each candidate and his party under the microscope individually and in a single member, one-man one-vote contest, his soul must be laid bare to the voter. And even if he slips through the cracks, five years of non-performance will surely take care of him. Alternatively the party will pull him into line.

“This level of scrutiny is obscured in the multi-member process. In the multi-member process the instinct is to vote for one man and those clinging to his garments.”

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, would you pass a copy to the Serjeant so it can be copied to Members?

Please continue, Honourable Member.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: In their Report, the Electoral Boundary Commissioners endorse that view. They said, on page 14 of the Report: “The single member constituency is a tried and tested electoral system, which is used by successful mature and emerging democracies alike. Small and large States and territories use it.”

Then they go on to talk about the delimitation system, and note that the Commission has delimited 17 constituencies in the Cayman Islands, in accordance with its mandate. They go into some detail as to the efforts they took to try to get this right.

They say that while constructing the constituency boundaries, the Commission, accompanied by the Chief Surveyor, the Support Services Manager of the Elections Office, and the Geographic Information System Technician “. . . traversed the respective proposed boundaries for a visual inspection in order to refine each boundary line, so that they could be clearly identified. The refinement enabled the Commission to take account of geographical limits of ongoing housing developments and to avoid boundary lines running through the middle of houses. The Commission took account of electoral district boundaries, traditional boundaries in localities and housing development limits, where desirable. It also had regard to natural boundaries, such as roads, canals and the seacoast. In some cases, the Commission took account of sub-division of land in development areas.”

Much has been made, and will continue to be made, during the process of this debate and otherwise, about the fact that North Side and East End are already single-member constituencies and therefore (if it goes as they are proposing) that when George Town is divided into six single-member constituencies, and added to the two in North Side and East End, we will have eight of the 17 operating as single-member constituencies. This is what the Commission said about that on page 17: “In light of the fact that the Commission was directed to take account of natural boundaries within the Cayman Islands and have regard to existing electoral districts the Commission was of the view that East End and North Side also deserved special consideration, despite their lower number of electors, as these two electoral districts had in fact been operating essentially as single member constituencies for some time and were distinct communities. Accordingly no changes have been recommended for these two constituencies except for minor adjustments to the North Side / East End boundary.”

As far as Cayman Brac is concerned: “In its mandate the Commission was directed to ensure that ‘Cayman Brac and Little Cayman (between these two islands) return at least two members to the Assembly’, whilst at the same time taking into account the various factors in Subsection 28B of the Constitution”—that is, having no regard to racial, social and economic factors, etcetera.

Then they talk about West Bay, Bodden Town and George Town. Reading from page 17, it says: “The Commission then looked at the remainder of Grand Cayman from West Bay to Bodden Town and sought to achieve parity in electors whilst at the same time making an effort to honour traditional electoral boundaries as well as boundaries within districts. A special effort was made to keep traditional districts intact wherever possible.”

As far as that part of the exercise is concerned, it appears that the Commission’s recommendations have been generally accepted, for I have not heard any demurrer from the Government about where the new boundary lines are proposed to be drawn. Certainly, on our part, we are happy with what the Commissioners have said about where the boundary lines for the proposed 17 single-member constituencies are to be drawn. Therefore, the issue squarely between us is whether or not the entire country should move to single-member constituencies.

Mr. Speaker, we might examine what I will charitably call the logic of the Government in this proposal—I should say the current position of the Government, for they have changed positions so many times that it is quite bewildering. Therein lies the fallibility, perhaps, of what they have proposed, for we contend that the proposal of the Government is based purely on self-interest and expediency. It has no basis in principle—none whatsoever. Had it been based on principle, had they been moored in their position to any sort of principle, it would not have been so easy for them to flip-flop as they have, jostling to try to find which system and which process gives them the best advantage in the next elections. Might I have an opportunity to refer to the Hansard of this Honourable House, from June 2002?

The Speaker: Please continue, and if you could, quote the page also. Just for clarity, Honourable Members, we are reading from the unedited copy of Hansard.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, so that it is all in the records, it is the Hansard Report 2002 Session, Second Meeting, 19 June 2002. On page 9, it is the Honourable Leader of Government Business speaking.

“While we support in principle the Commissions proposal to introduce single member constituencies, we have concerns with respect to the specific proposals they have advanced. The Review Commission proposes to entrench in the Constitution a defined set of 17 constituencies with the precise boundaries for these constituencies attached as a second schedule to the proposed Constitution.

“While the Commission was assisted in drawing these boundaries by the office of the Supervisor of Elections and the Lands and Survey Department, the Commissioners themselves recognised that their proposals required further study and revision. For example, the Commissioners seemingly failed to consider whether the proposed constituencies would serve to divide our people along racial, ethnic, social or economic lines. I am certain that this is a matter that would be of grave concern to all Members of this Honourable Assembly, since it would threaten the social stability and cohesion that have been so central to our reputation and past prosperity.

“In fact, the Review Commissioners themselves proposed the establishment of an electoral boundary commission and mandated that as soon as practicable following its establishment, the boundary commission should report to the Assembly on whether the proposed constituency boundaries ought to be changed.”

Mr. Speaker, I pause here to say that that has been done, and that is why we are here this morning. Back to the narrative:

“When the United Democratic Party said that Bermuda is having problems, we were laughed at, of course. But I ask Members across, if they have not yet done it, to take the time out to do so. Find out what the difficulties are that Bermuda is having with this proposal. Find out if you think it is a joke.

We support the concept of modernising the electoral system in the general direction of single-member constituencies, as proposed by the Review Commission. However, we believe that the full implications of the Review Commission’s specific constituency proposals require careful study and review. Therefore, in our view, it is premature at this time to move ahead with their proposals for 17 single-member constituencies.”

That was the position on the 19 June 2002.

Mr. Speaker, again, if I might, I crave your indulgence to refer to a letter under the hand of the Honourable Leader of Government Business, addressed to the Leader of the Opposition, dated 2 December 2002.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, since that is not available to all Members, I would ask that you lay a copy of it upon the Table of the House

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I would be happy to do so.

The Speaker: It is my understanding from the Elected Member for North Side that it has, indeed, been tabled. Thank you very much. Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am not proposing to read the whole of the letter. It is safe to say that it is dated 2 December 2002, and addressed to the Leader of the Opposition, under the hand of the Leader of Government Business, on the letterhead of the United Democratic Party. I refer to the relevant part, which deals with their position on single-member constituencies. However, in order to understand what was said there, I need to read the opening few paragraphs of the letter.

“Dear Mr Tibbetts,
Re: Constitutional Modernization

“On behalf of the United Democratic Party (UDP), I write to express our appreciation for your attendance and participation, and that of the other members of the People’s Progressive Movement (PPM) at the meeting held on Friday, 29th November at the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

“Our intention in arranging this meeting was to forge consensus on our differences, prior to attending the meeting in London on 9th-11th December, with the Foreign & Commonwealth Office. FCO has arranged and invited the UDP to bring five delegates, and an equal number from the PPM to attend.

“The United Democratic Party is pleased at the very productive outcome of last Friday’s meeting and at the progress that we have made in addressing those issues over which the public has expressed concern.

“We now confirm the issues we discussed and the agreement reached at Friday’s meeting.”

We now go on, to page 2 of the letter, item number 6, “Single Member Constituencies”.

“Agreement was reached for the introduction of 17 Single Member Constituencies within the six electoral districts for the 2004 elections, which conforms to the universal concept of one-man, one-vote.”

There is not a word there about concerns regarding the division of the country along racial, economic or social lines, not a single caveat about the question of single-member constituencies not having support in West Bay or anywhere else: clear, unequivocal agreement. That position was put forward in London at the talks from 9-11 December, last year. There was no dissent about it. That is what appears in the draft Constitution, predictably, and that is what put this whole train in motion.

Now, on the eve of the Report's being sent back to London, and with the debate in this Honourable House commencing, the Government resiles from their position and we are in a quandary. If the United Kingdom Government goes along with what they propose, all of the work, effort and expense required to get the process to where it is—to produce this Report, which seems to have consensus, certainly in terms of where the boundary lines should be drawn—will be for nought.

Those are two positions. Then Mr. Speaker, to our absolute astonishment, on Monday 17 November, when the Honourable Leader of Government Business moved the Motion to initiate debate on the draft Constitution, they announced another position.

The position this time (although in fairness we did learn about it earlier that morning, because it appeared in headlines of the Caymanian Compass) was that George Town and West Bay should only have five seats, and that the elections in West Bay in 2004 should be contested on the basis of a multi-member constituency in which each elector would have the right to vote for five persons. In the capital, however, we are going to try out single-member constituencies; George Town is going to be divided into five constituencies but, unlike West Bay, each elector only has the right to vote for one person.

One does not fully appreciate how preposterous a proposal that is unless one has regard to the population and the number of voters in these two districts.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, we are aware that a resolution has already been passed in the House whereby George Town will be divided into six constituencies and the district of West Bay will remain as recommended by the Boundaries Commission.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am very much aware of that. I am examining the history of the Government's position on this, because my concern, as I said from the very beginning, is that their position is devoid of principle. It is a position taken based on what they perceive, in my respectful submission, will give them the best possible advantage in the next elections—and that is a position that is changing all the time!

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, I take the point you are making. I am simply being very careful that we do not infringe the Standing Orders by reviving a debate upon which a decision has already been taken. That is the point I was trying to make.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The 1999 Census, to which I referred earlier, placed the population in George Town at 20,626 persons, or 52.9 per cent of the national population. The population in West Bay, as determined by that same Census, was 8,243 persons, or 21.1 per cent of the national population. In relation to the number of registered voters, as at 1 July 2003, West Bay had 2,922 registered voters; George Town had 4,490.

Therefore, based on the voters' list as at 1 July, George Town had 39.1 per cent of all registered voters, and West Bay 25.45 per cent.

Based on that, I ask the question, academic though it may be at this stage: What possible basis could be put forward to justify an additional seat for West Bay? The only answer to that is the one that I have proffered more than once: it has absolutely nothing to do with seeking to obtain the fairest, most practical, forward-thinking democratic process that we can possibly obtain. It has to do with securing the return to Government of the current United Democratic Party. It has everything to do with that, in my respectful submission.

Somehow, however, some persons with good sense, with some semblance of decency and what is right, must have persuaded the Government to rethink that ridiculous proposition. We have now before us another position, which is only marginally better, and at the same time, is still inequitable. We are going to take the largest electoral district, the most populous district in these Islands—currently 52 per cent of the population resides in George Town—and we are going to use this to practise whether or not single-member constituencies are practical, workable or the right thing. However, West Bay shall be preserved as a multi-member constituency, in which the Honourable Leader of Government Business will continue to hold sway.

[Laughter]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, it would be laughable, if the consequences were not so serious, and so grave.

We are still waiting to hear what the Government is going to say. They have now had quite a bit of time to think about the reason they are going to put forward, as to why this should be the case. It is not enough to say that because the two Elected Members for George Town who are members of the Opposition have been pushing for single-member constituencies, George Town should be carved out and made into single-member constituencies while the rest of the system (which we complain is inequitable and completely out of sync with the new democratic, representative and accountable model of government we are seeking to achieve) should continue as in the past. Not one reason has been put forward, aside from that and the fact that they say they have “tested the temperature of the water”—and certainly as far as West Bay is concerned, the people there do not want it.

We have said from the beginning that this is one of those issues that ought to go to a referendum. Although we believe that single-member constituencies are the fairest, most democratic, most accountable means of electing representatives, we are certainly not seeking to push this down anybody’s throat. If the electorate generally resist it—which is not the impression we have gained from them—then so be it. We cannot have one country and two different systems. That is the sort of position that has been eschewed by the Honourable Minister of Education, in another context, over and over again: you cannot have one country and two systems. He said it about labour, and he is right there; I ask him to say it again about this process.

Mr. Speaker, think of the practical consequences. How can I, as an Elected Member for George Town, explain to my constituents, who are members of the capital—the largest electoral district, the largest district, period, with more than 50 per cent of the population—why they should give up their right to four votes and get one, while West Bay continues to be able to vote for four persons, Bodden Town for three, and Cayman Brac for two? I am not that kind of salesman, Mr. Speaker. I do not have those powers of persuasion, to seek to persuade reasonable, rational, intelligent people—as my constituents are—that George Town should give up their votes, while West Bay and the rest of the districts maintain theirs. It is entirely irrational, completely illogical, and devoid of principle.

Mr. Speaker, would this be a convenient time, Sir?

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we will take a 15-minute break. I will ask you to try and be back promptly, in time. Thank you.

Proceedings suspended at 12.06 pm

Proceedings resumed at 12.35 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. The Second Elected Member for George Town is continuing with his debate.

You have spoken for one hour and nine minutes.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Much has been made by the Government—as I alluded to earlier—of the fact that East End and North Side are single-member constituencies. It has been posited by them that the country has always operated under two electoral systems. Although that argument may have a superficial attraction, it is, in my respectful view, simply not right.

East End and North Side are not single-member constituencies in the generally accepted sense. They are electoral districts which have been delineated by the natural boundaries of those communities. What transpired is simply a reflection of the small populations both districts have—that is all.

The Electoral Boundary Commissioners recognise that, for the overriding factor in determining where constituency boundaries should be drawn is generally to achieve parity, as far as possible, among the electoral constituencies. For historical reasons, and because of the realities of those constituency boundaries in North Side and East End (in fact they are not really constituency boundaries; they are district boundaries that have developed naturally over time), they accepted that those two districts could not be treated in the same way as Bodden Town, West Bay and George Town. They accepted that it would be artificial in the extreme to seek to extend the boundaries of either North Side or East End, so as to obtain an additional number of electors to meet what they have determined to be the nationally accepted level, which is somewhere around 700.

Neither North Side, nor East End, approaches that 700 figure. North Side, on 1 July this year, had 502 electors, and East End, 589. Therefore, one would have had to extend those districts significantly—into what is currently Bodden Town—if one were seeking to achieve the average of 700. I suspect that the average would have been a bit lower, had that been done.

As far as Cayman Brac is concerned, had the Commission simply had regard for numbers, there is no way that two seats could have been warranted in Cayman Brac. I am certain that, as of 1 July 2003, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman only had 855 registered voters.

For historical and practical reasons—not the least among which is the fact that Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are separated by miles of water from Grand Cayman—Members (or at least one Member of the Legislative Assembly for that district) often have to be in Grand Cayman. There are other factors, other considerations, which warrant Cayman Brac’s having two seats.

One can understand those historical factors and practicalities. I believe that the Commissioners were quite right to make a distinction in relation to those three districts.

None of those considerations apply in relation to West Bay, Bodden Town or George Town. There is absolutely no basis for a distinction. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, all of the other electoral districts—West Bay, George Town and Bodden Town—ought to move to single-member constituencies together, in tandem.

If the Government had said, “We sense that there is going to be considerable resistance to taking away four votes from persons in George Town and West Bay and three from the people in Bodden Town, so let us phase it in; let us reduce it in a timely manner, and instead of there being four, or, as is in the proposal, six constituencies in George Town, let us have three in George Town with double-member constituencies, two in West Bay, and leave Bodden Town the way it is," one could perhaps have seen some sense in that (not that we support it), but not in what is being proposed now.

I am going to turn now to consider this proposal of the Government's in a broader context, and its impact, if it were accepted, on the very foundations of the parliamentary democracy that we have developed over the course of the past 172 years.

Mr. Speaker, we have a very proud tradition of parliamentary democracy in this country, stretching back over 172 years. Even before we had the right to form a form of legislature, we did so. We took it upon to ourselves, even though it had not been authorised by Jamaica, of which we were a dependency, or by the mother country. Our very proud, independent and self-reliant people understood the importance of the organs of Government—of there being a system under which the affairs of the country were administered. Of critical importance to this argument was the importance of representative democracy.

172 years ago, on that celebrated occasion at what is now Pedro St. James, met the first legislature of these Islands to which persons were elected. 172 years is not a long time in the context of the history of the world, but in the history of these Islands, which for many years were simply little rocks scattered in the North-Western Caribbean, to which few people paid any heed or attention, that is a long time.

That is the stock from which we come. Those institutions, which we recognised even before we were entitled to recognise them, are things that those of us who have been elected to this Legislative Assembly are charged and entrusted with protecting and furthering—rather than being party to their erosion and destruction. That, in my respectful view, is the road down which we are headed. It is, in my respectful submission, the hallmark of this Government.

Mr. Speaker, over the course of the past two years, we have repeatedly seen, in my respectful view, breaches of the rule of law, and a lack of adherence to proper parliamentary procedure.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

I think the Member is misleading the House when he talks about breaches of the rule of law and the breaking of parliamentary rules. I would like to find out what he is talking about, in regard to this Motion. This Motion is about boundaries, so it is not relevant.

The Speaker: The point of order that has been raised is asking that the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town expand on what he means by breaches of the rules of law and the breaking of parliamentary procedures, as he has just mentioned. I think he suggested that this was being done by the present Government over the past two years. Perhaps he could expand on that.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I am happy to expand on that. I did preface what I said by saying, "In my respectful submission, or in my view...", for I expected that the Government would challenge it.

The Speaker: Were you saying that, in your opinion, or in your view, this was the position—not as a statement, as such, of fact?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, it is not my intention in this debate to prove a case with evidence of what the Government did or did not do. I am expressing this as my view, or the view of the Opposition.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a further point of order in regard to what is under discussion.

In our view, a Member can have his opinion. However, you cannot state that as a matter of fact.

[Inaudible Interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The opinion needs to be fact. How can it be otherwise, Mr. Speaker? You cannot get up and accuse the Government of breaking the rule of law.

I would like to find out where we are going in the debate. We are debating boundaries, and I think the Member is not relevant. I am not going to get into anything else, because it could be a long, drawn-out debate, but the Member is not relevant, in my opinion. I ask the Chair for guidance on it.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I have given a lot of latitude on both of these Motions—Motion No. 5/03, dealing with the proposed new draft Constitution, and Government Motion No. 6/03, on the Report of the Electoral Boundaries Commission—mainly because of their national importance. However, I would ask Honourable Members, when speaking, to be very careful of the statements being made. It is not good enough, sometimes, to say that in your opinion, somebody is a thief or a liar or something else. It can be taken wrongly by the listening public.

Therefore, I will ask that we desist from that, and stick to the Motion before the House. I have given a lot of latitude, but I would like us to confine our debate more closely to the Motions before us.

Second Elected Member for George Town, please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

If I might, I will refer to the Partnership for Progress and Prosperity document presented to Parliament by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs by Command of Her Majesty, March 1999.

On page 13 of that document, Her Majesty's Government addresses the whole question of constitutional relations between the United Kingdom and its Overseas Territories. They say, in paragraph 2.8:

"The governance of the territories must have a firm base. Democracy, human rights and the rule of law are all as relevant in the Overseas Territories as elsewhere. The principles which should underlie modern constitutions are clear. There must be a balance of obligations and expectations, and both should be clearly and explicitly set out.

Future action will focus on:

- measures promoting more open, transparent and accountable government;
- improvements to the composition of legislatures and their operation . . .
- . . . respect for the rule of law and the constitution;
- the promotion of representative and participative Government."

Mr. Speaker, I crave your indulgence to refer to the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist, which accompanied the instructions to initiate the Constitutional Modernisation process.

The Speaker: Continue, please.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Paragraph 2.3 says that the proposals for Constitutional Modernisation ". . . should promote more open, transparent and accountable government, and contribute to the fair and equitable exercise of power and delivery of public services."

Paragraph 2.4 says: "Consideration should be given to improvements to the operation and composition of the legislature and the promotion of democratic process."

The Speaker: This is an observation, Second Elected Member for George Town. We are debating, as you rightly know, the Reports of the Electoral Boundaries Commission, not the Constitution. You are reading from the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist. I want to draw that to your attention, and ask you if you could return to the Motion as soon as possible.

I appreciate, however, the point that you are making.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: With respect, Sir, the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist deals specifically with the Electoral Boundary Commission.

The Speaker: I am quite aware of that, Second Elected Member for George Town, but I am saying that this is specifically to do with the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist. We are dealing with the Electoral Boundaries Commission. Would you please sit?

We are dealing with the Electoral Boundaries Commission. We already discussed, in detail, the proposed new draft Constitution, at which time every opportunity was given to make reference to this Checklist.

I would ask you to continue, and try to stick as closely to the Motion before the House as possible.

Thank you. Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, paragraph 2.7 says: "The proposals should promote representative and participative government and help enable all sectors of the community to influence government policy and practice. They should indicate whether reforms are necessary to constituency boundaries, the electoral system and the franchise."

Mr. Speaker, the point I am seeking to make is the connection, or nexus, between an electoral process that is fair, democratic and practical, and the outcomes sought by Her Majesty's Government in the development of a new constitution.

I come back to the point I made at the start of my address in this Honourable House: that the creation of a fair and equitable electoral constituency system is critical to the development of a modern, democratic, representative constitution that promotes democracy and representative government. The point I go on now to make is that the process urged by the United Democratic Party's Government, in my respectful submission, will undermine the democratic traditions and foundations that have been established in this country over the past more than 170 years. Rather than promoting a more democratic, accountable and representative form of government, they take us back to places we have never been before.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, please state your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Member is making an accusation about the undermining of a system. Unless he can prove that to this Honourable House, I would like the remark to be withdrawn.

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order. Honourable Members, I have been taking very close notes of what has been said, as I usually do. I believe I have taken correct notes of what was said by the Second Elected Member for George Town. He said, "The process urged by the United Democratic Party's Government, in my respectful submission, will undermine the democratic system established many years ago", or something to that effect.

It is a matter of semantics whether "respectful submission" is the same as "in my opinion". I am not going to go into the legalities of the semantics of that. I would ask the Second Elected Member for George Town to continue along the lines that he first started doing, and let us get away from inflammatory remarks that, perhaps, he may be unable to substantiate.

The Second Elected Member for George Town, please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I hope that you are not going to come to the point where I have to carefully couch everything I say to appease the Leader of Government Business. If I cannot speak what I believe in this Honourable House, Mr. Speaker, I will never be able to speak it anywhere else.

The Speaker: Would you please sit, while I comment on that?

I do not think that taking a position like that is going to help the discussions very much. What we are trying to do is not to ask you to appease anybody. As you rightly said this morning, you have been in this House for three years. I have been here sixteen. Therefore, I do know the procedures that Members are supposed to take. I would not ask you, as the Opposition, to say anything to appease the Government Bench—that is not what I am talking about.

What I am saying is if you are going to make a statement in this House, be prepared to support what you are saying. I have asked you before to get away from saying, "In my opinion this, and in my opinion the other". Especially when you are saying, "It is my respectful submission", I expect that you have a basis for what you are submitting. This is what I am asking, not only from the Second Elected Member for George Town, but from all Honourable Members, on both sides of the House.

This is precisely what I am asking you to do. Now, would you continue please, Second Elected Member for George Town?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I just want to be clear. Are you saying, Sir, that I am unable to say anything in this Honourable House that I believe, without having a document to prove it? If I say that I do not believe that the Government are being fair about something—

The Speaker: I take it, Second Elected Member for George Town that you are challenging what I have said.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Sir.

The Speaker: I have made a ruling. Would you please continue? I am not about to explain my position.

I will tell you what, Honourable Members: the time is now 1 o'clock. Perhaps Members are in need of some refreshments. Let us go away, and cool the tempers down, and try to get back here at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.01 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.26 pm

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town continues with his debate.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we took the luncheon adjournment, I had started to talk about the importance of the integrity of the electoral process.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town has 30 minutes remaining.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you. I had started to talk about the integrity of the electoral process, and how virtually every other aspect of the administration of this country hinges upon that factor. If we compromise the integrity of the electoral process, we compromise the result. It is the view of the Opposition that the proposal of the Government to create six single-member constituencies in the district of George Town whilst maintaining multi-member constituencies in Bodden Town, West Bay and Cayman Brac is going to erode the legitimacy of the electoral process. It is going to call into question the veracity of the result. We cannot, in the view of the Opposition, expect to stand up to any scrutiny, let alone the glaring light of international scrutiny, if we incorporate this electoral process, by which some members of the electorate are treated in one way, their votes having certain weight—which is a quarter, or in the case of George Town, one sixth of the weight of some other constituencies. That is what the result of this would be.

I have already outlined the historical basis for there being a distinction for East End, North Side and Cayman Brac. I repeat: There has been no proper basis put forward by the Government, thus far, as to why there should be a distinction between George Town, Bodden Town and West Bay. Mr. Speaker, we need to bear in mind our role as parliamentarians, as stewards of the democratic process. We need to bear in mind the importance of our insisting that, regardless of what the result will be for us personally, the system of government we create and perpetuate—and in this case, modify, or seek to modify—is one that can stand up to scrutiny, here or anywhere else in the world.

One of the things that have made Cayman the success story it is, is that we have always had free and fair elections. The integrity of the electoral process has never been seriously questioned. At all cost, even if it were our respective seats, we must not be party to creating a process that leaves the legitimacy of our electoral exercise—and consequently the result of that exercise—in doubt. I repeat once more, Mr. Speaker, that in our view, what the Government is proposing will have that effect, if it falls on fertile ground when these Reports reach the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

I crave your indulgence, Mr. Speaker, to refer to an editorial that appeared in Cayman Net News on Friday 21 November 2003, which addresses this whole question of single-member constituencies. If it is the wish of the House, I am happy to lay a copy of this upon the Table of the House.

The Speaker: It is a public document. It should not be necessary.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: It is entitled, “The Governor Must Challenge Leader”, and it reads as follows:

“In what is now their fourth position on the issue in eighteen months, the United Democratic Party (UDP) announced through their leader in another local publication that they are in favour of yet another change in the long-awaited proposed new constitution.

“This time they are pushing for division of the country by proposing single-member constituencies in George Town, but not in the rest of the country.

“The situation has now degenerated from the sublime to the ridiculous and, we would venture to suggest, anything further the UDP has to say on the subject could be conveniently ignored as being unreliable at best.

“It should frighten the residents of this country to think that the ruling government might actually believe that they could institute the single-member constituency for the next elections only in the district that poses them the biggest threat to their control of power.

“The appalling ethics of such an attempt aside, the move would have no recognised basis in international law.

“The United Nations International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which is supposed to extend to the Cayman Islands, states (in Article 25) that every citizen shall have the right and the opportunity to vote at elections by universal and equal—that’s right, EQUAL—suffrage without (Article 2) distinction of any kind.

“Clearly, if single-member constituencies are to be adopted in George Town alone, then that is a “distinction” based upon the residency of the voter, resulting in unequal suffrage within the country.

“Indeed, it is arguable that the existing archaic system produces its own inequality in that electors are able to cast multiple votes in the districts of George Town (4), West Bay (4), and Bodden Town (3), but in the less heavily populated districts of East End and North Side, each voter may chose only one candidate.

“In other words, the argument goes, the votes of people of West Bay or George Town are effectively four times that of a voter in North Side or East End, thereby producing a distinction or inequality based on residency.

“For a great many years, the United Kingdom has shirked its responsibility towards the people of the Cayman Islands by failing to apply or enforce internationally accepted standards of civil and political rights. This has got to stop, and there is no time like the present.

“As things stand at the moment, we have a government that is unrestrained in many respects and an opposition that is fighting the fight, but immobilized. The people are thus at the mercy of events they are powerless to change or, apparently, even to influence.

“The Cayman Islands has a Governor appointed by the United Kingdom, with real executive powers, not a figurehead Governor General. We therefore call upon His Excellency to exercise his authority for once and take whatever steps are necessary to fulfill his mandate to provide peace, order and good governance in the Cayman Islands.

“It is reliably reported that it was, in fact, the Governor who intervened by convening an emergency meeting of the Cabinet that fateful Friday to put a stop to the recent grants of Caymanian Status, which produced the nearest thing to a riot ever seen here at the police station by persons seeking Police Clearance Certificates.

“The Governor must therefore intervene in this most recent debacle and stand for good order. When all is said and done, the United Kingdom has the power, if all else fails, to disallow any legislation purporting to change the electoral system in a discriminatory fashion, which action we suggest as a matter of good governance.”

That editorial, I believe, summarises quite nicely the thrust of the argument I have sought to articulate over the course of the past hour and a half, leaving aside the question of whether or not the Governor should intervene. I shall never be one for inviting the exercise of more power by the Governor—not in this jurisdiction. I think that, by and large, the UK already exercises more than many of us would like to see them do.

I come now to the question of how this is going to work. I alluded to that earlier, when I asked how I, or any of the other Members who represent George Town, would seek to persuade our constituents that they should trade the four votes they currently have for one, whilst West Bay, Bodden Town and Cayman Brac continued to have more than one vote. Aside from that—which I believe an insurmountable hurdle on its own—there is going to be tremendous confusion, concern and anxiety amongst the electorate when the elections come around. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, the same publication, Cayman Net News, to which I referred earlier—

Mr. Speaker: That is of 21 November, 2003.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, this particular publication is from 24 November 2003. It is the same Cayman Net News, but it is not the same publication. I apologise, Sir. It has, on its front page, that very issue. The headline says, “Two Elections, One Mess.” If I may refer to it, I quote:

“The prospect of having two different systems of elections when Caymanians go to the polls to choose their leaders next November is producing rampant criticism in the community from those in both the public and private sectors.

“The Leader of Government Business, the Hon McKeeva Bush has suggested that the country’s most populous district of George Town be used as a testing ground for the proposed single-member constituency plan in the 2004 General Elections, while the rest of the country stays with the current system.

“‘It would be a mess,’ said one government official who wished to remain anonymous, ‘It would create cost duplication and confusion. Trying to explain two systems to the public would be nearly impossible. It would lead to an inordinate amount of spoiled votes, which could jeopardise the election.’

“The official also felt that the proposed plan, if adopted, had the potential to cause deep divisions in the community. ‘Try explaining to the people of George Town that they only get one vote while the people of West Bay get five.’

“Though the official did not indicate which of the two systems—the current one or the 17 single-member constituencies—he preferred, he thinks the government must choose one for the whole country. ‘You just don’t run two systems parallel like this,’ he said, ‘you run one or the other.’

“The proposed system has also run afoul of many in the legal profession. ‘I find the proposal very odd,’ said one prominent local attorney, ‘Two types of election system might create different standards in the constituencies. The election’s legitimacy could possibly be challenged.’”

Therefore, Mr. Speaker—

Hon. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Member would table that publication.

The Speaker: The publication of the Cayman Net News is a public document, but if Honourable Members would like a copy to which they can refer, I have no objection to the Serjeant’s photocopying that page. The Second Elected Member for George Town is laying the paper upon the Table.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, the story under that headline mirrors the concerns of the Opposition, both about the legitimacy of what is being proposed, and its practicality.

We say that that proposal is fraught with practical problems. It has no basis in principle; it is a transparent attempt to seek electoral advantage, particularly in the district of West Bay, during the next elections. That is what lies at the heart of such a preposterous proposal. I will leave my submissions in relation to that aspect of it there.

I want to move on, Mr. Speaker, to talk about the whole electoral process, which has resulted in the submission of this Report of the Electoral Boundary Commission.

Much has been said about the need to ensure not only that the Cayman Islands have the best constitutional document that it possibly can, but also that we seek to rein in some of what many consider to be the excess afforded Her Majesty’s Government, in seeking to give the Governor additional powers under the draft Constitution. Our concerns, from this side of the House, have more to do with creating a constitutional document to rein in the potential excesses and abuses in an elected Government. We need to create a process that prevents the elected Government from manipulating the electoral process, because we believe that that is precisely what is transpiring at this time. We should not have a system that permits the elected Government to seek to create an electoral process that affords them the best possible advantage.

We, in this Honourable House, need to remember why it is that we are here. We need to understand that the decisions we take, particularly in relation to this matter, should be based firmly on principle. They should be able to withstand any sort of scrutiny. They should be devoid of attempts at gerrymandering or worse. One should not be able to read the Hansard of this Honourable House years from now, ask why a ridiculous proposal was ever made, and only be able to ascertain why it was made by having a look at the history books. The electoral process that we seek to achieve for this country should be one that is a model for the rest of the region, one that permits the election of those who are best-suited—not those whom individuals or party leaders believe are best-suited to their particular means, but those who are best-suited to represent and lead this country.

The only way we are going to achieve that, Mr. Speaker, is to have a system that gives each person equal rights (one vote: no more, and no less), a system that shrinks the length of the coattail of the party leader—a system requiring those who stand for election to stand up on their own hind legs and persuade their hoped-for constituents to vote for them on the basis of merit. We certainly should not have a system in which one constituency operates in one manner, and other constituencies operate in another.

I have outlined the position of the parliamentary Opposition in relation to this matter. I have done so in as much detail as I possibly could. The Government has not stated, publicly, the basis for the novel position they are proposing in relation to the creation of six single-member constituencies in George Town. Perhaps when I sit down, one of them will endeavour to do so.

As I said at the start, we would have hoped that the Leader of Government Business would outline their position when he introduced the Motion. He has not done so. We, and the rest of the country, are left waiting for reasons to be articulated. When I resume my seat, I am going to listen very carefully to what the arguments are in response to the positions I have outlined. I will listen even more carefully to see if I can get some kernel of a reason, from what is said, as to why George Town should be treated differently than West Bay, Bodden Town or, indeed, Cayman Brac. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister of Health Services, Aviation, Agriculture and Works.

Hon. Gilbert A McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a contribution to make on the matter before the House—the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundaries Commission 2003. The Second Elected Member for George Town, in good lawyer's fashion, has attempted to lead the opinion in the House to be one of a multiplicity of wrongs. The truth is that there could hardly be much more straightforward a matter than what we are dealing with. The Second Elected Member for George Town cited the historical background to this and, indeed, that is correct. Way back in 1991, the then Constitutional Commissioners recommended that we should look at the question of electoral boundaries.

All of that is fact, but I hardly think it is something to lament. It was something that took place, at a certain point in time, and that brought a certain matter to the forefront, just like the Constitution itself. From 1991 until now, approximately 12 years have elapsed, and we do not have one change in the Constitution. That is the sad truth and situation of the Cayman Islands, when it comes to dealing with matters that are really of great significance to us, rather than those that tend more toward physical development in the country.

Nothing can be more important than the Constitution, and in this case, the Constitutional Commissioners recommended looking at the matter of the Boundaries Commission. The Constitutional Commissioners who were appointed by the former Governor also made recommendations on electoral boundaries, and we know what their recommendation contained. Their recommendation radically cut the Islands up into 17 pieces, and said these should be the new electoral boundaries. They obviously did not take account of existing district boundaries, which the delegation of the Opposition and the Government asked to be taken into account when we went to Lancaster House, United Kingdom, to discuss the Constitution.

The Boundaries Commissioners who did the latest Report did take those into account, and they have kept the district divisions within the old boundaries. I listened as the Second Elected Member for George Town attempted to lead us to believe that something different would take place if, tomorrow, we had six single-member districts in George Town, one in North Sound and one in East End, while the rest were multi-member districts, and that that had never happened in the Cayman Islands before.

I want to quote from the same document from which he quoted, which was the Report of the Constitutional Commissioners, 1991, by Sir Frederick Smith and Mr. Walter Wallace. On page 16, under the heading "Constituencies (and a Boundaries Commission)", it begins with the very clear statement that we have presently a mix of constituencies.

"At present, there are six constituencies in the Islands, two single-member constituencies and four multi-member constituencies."

It could not be clearer. Every ching-ching in George Town and Bodden Town knows this. It has been that way from a small forever.

There used to be three representatives in West Bay, three in George Town, two in Bodden Town, one in North Side, and one in East End. There was one in Cayman Brac, at one stage, and then it went to two. There have been changes over the years. The last time there was a change that brought about additions was in 1993. One was in Bodden Town; one was in West Bay.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Gilbert A McLean: There was one in George Town, also? Yes. I am sorry. That is correct; one also went to George Town. The total number of elected representatives in the House moved from 12 to 15. There have always been . . .

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: . . . two different systems.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: There have always been, as my colleague says, two different ways of going into elections in the Cayman Islands. It has always been that way.

Also of significance is that the seats have always been added in the districts that have the most voters. In 1993, West Bay, George Town and Bodden Town had the most voters; therefore, the seats went to those three districts. They stayed as multi-member districts; North Side and East End stayed single. We should dismiss outright, therefore, any suggestion that we have one country with two systems. We have one single system, and that is the election system in which, every four years, we go to the polls to vote. That is the system. The fact that, in some districts, a person may cast three or four votes—or two, in some instances—is the specific way that the people vote in these districts presently.

The Commissioners, in 1991, went on to make the point, on page 16—under the same heading as Constituencies (and a Boundaries Commission)—that: “Constituency boundaries and the number of members returned for each constituency are set out, not in the Constitution, but in the Elections Law. This arrangement ensures flexibility and we do not suggest it should be changed. We are concerned however that, under such an arrangement, it would be possible for the Government of the day to use its majority in the Assembly to amend the Elections Law to re-draw constituency boundaries etc to its political advantage.”

The Second Elected Member for George Town did not make that point, but I would make it, because the Commissioners make it. However, the draft Constitution proposes that it be in the Constitution—at least, that is what has been sent to us by the British Government. In this instance, therefore, the British Government has addressed that point raised by the Constitutional Commissioners in 1991. It goes on to say: “While it is true that such an amendment could if necessary be disallowed, we much prefer the alternative proposal put to us that an independent Boundaries Commission be provided for in the Constitution.”

That is what has happened, by the Order in Council that set up the Boundaries Commission, which has made its Report, which we are discussing here today.

Another thing we know as a fact—and that point is made in the second paragraph—is that: “Allied to this is the question whether single-member constituencies should not in due course replace the present largely multi-member system. We heard views for and against such a proposition but judged that there was a great deal of support for the established democratic principle of “one man, one vote”, ie, single-member constituencies.”

The Second Elected Member for George Town has indeed been saying that here, in one breath. However, in the second breath, he disagrees with it—that is, single-member constituencies.

The Commissioners of 1991 said: “We agree, since we consider it inequitable that, depending entirely on place of residence, an elector should have either one, two or three votes; and because election results can be distorted by electors choosing to cast only one vote in favour of only one candidate instead of two or three votes in favour of two or three candidates.”

All of this is a fact, Mr. Speaker, and a reasonable, logical consideration. However, we have been in the mood, at least since 1993, in which North Side has one seat; East End, one; Cayman Brac, two; Bodden Town, three; George Town, four; and West Bay, four. If we are talking about increasing the total number of Members in the Legislative Assembly to 17, and the same principle or methodology is applied, wherein the seats are added to the districts with the most voters, they will have—naturally and mathematically—to go to George Town. This means that if we stay with the multi-member system in George Town, then the people of George Town will have to cast six votes, not four. Do we want to do that? I suggest not.

I do believe we need the 17 representatives. I make that judgement purely from the position of a Minister of Cabinet, and seeing the amount of work that is required of each and every Minister. There is no doubt in my mind that some of the subjects could be shared further. They could be better acted upon, in greater detail and with greater efficiency. I believe that there should be 17 seats in total, and that the Cabinet should be made up of seven Ministers instead of five. There is no doubt in my mind about that. I am convinced that it is best for this country. We are faced with this situation, however: Do we add to the number of votes in George Town, in the hands of one person, or do we break up the district into many districts, called constituencies, and allow it to go that way?

To get some guidance on that, we would need to look at what the Commissioners said, when they went from district to district and polled the people on this matter. Mr. Speaker, we need to take into account what the Commissioners stated in section 12 of their Report, which begins on page 9 and goes on to page 10. I attended the meetings in Bodden Town, and I attended meetings when the Commission comprised of Mr. Benson Ebanks and others did their survey. However, let us look at how much burning interest the public has in this matter.

In West Bay, at one of the best-attended meetings, there were 37 persons. In George Town, the biggest district, with a population of 4500, there were 15. Bodden Town beat George Town, in this case: they had 16. In North Side, there were 7; in East End, there were 3; in Cayman Brac, there were 11; and in Little Cayman, nobody turned out.

If we could get away from this attitude of trying to create an alarming situation out of everything that occurs in this country, and deal with matters of great concern—such as trying to get ourselves a little more responsibility and authority under the Constitution—we would be much further ahead than with the argument I heard being put forward by the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Speaker, that is all. The largest turnout was 37 persons. In George Town, the biggest district in the Cayman Islands, it was 16. It was not that these people did not try to get people to come out—they did. It was advertised, it was on television, it was on the radio, and it was in the newspaper.

I will state, believing it to be true, that we—as a people—elect representatives every four years to go out and speak for us. After they have done that one-day job, everyone is too busy living, making money, and doing this and that. We do not pay any attention to politics. I think it is unfortunate, but we only have our elected representatives—whom we elect—and they are the beating posts. We get to curse them and accuse them; we get to do everything in the world, but we expect them to act on our behalf. That is not wrong, because we are elected to speak for the people. We have to be interpreters of their will—of what they want us to do.

When I first came to this House, I did not know a great deal about the process here, except that I had always been interested in politics. Some nights, I would go to sleep listening to Captain Keith Tibbetts, and Mr. Berkley Bush, and those people, debating. I would fall asleep with the radio on my chest, listening to them. That was where my interest began, but I did not know the rules of the House. I got some idea of them when I was a Permanent Secretary, and I would go to the House with my Minister.

We come here to learn and to know. What is the use of our coming here to learn, and to know what has to be done, if all we can do is to put forward arguments of obstruction, as if we were calling down fire and brimstone for something to happen in the Cayman Islands, and to quote from the Cayman Net News, which today is pounding the Government of the day through the ground, and the next day is making kings of the Opposition? Then, it loves the Government of the day and is killing the Opposition. I am unimpressed with all of that.

All I hope for, in this country, is that we get to the stage where we have media that can go down the middle, tell the story like it is, and educate the people in the majority (and at this stage, when I say educate, I mean educate politically, in the way that we need to be educated)—media that teach us our citizens' rights, give us information so that we understand how to participate in the process of government and governance, and show at least a little respect to the 15 souls who are in here. Where the public is concerned, I think the greatest role that we serve is to be people they can criticise—yet it is they who elect us.

Mr. Speaker, the Commissioners got to poll a number of people who took enough time to go out to listen to them. If we look at what has occurred in our country in the past three years, they found that the total number of voters in 2000, which was our last General Election, was 11,636. By this year, 2003, that number had dropped to 11,483: 208 people have died, and only 52 have come on the register across the three Islands. I would never stand here and say that I believe there are not more; in fact, I believe they are hundreds of people who are eligible to be on the register. Why are they not there, Mr. Speaker? They do not have the interest. They do not have the interest. What is their excuse? Their excuse is, "They are not doing anything anyhow, so it does not matter if I vote. What am I going to vote for?" It is pitiful.

If our country had a little more hardship, I suspect that there would be a lot of people wanting to vote. They would all be smart enough, due to the hardship, to understand how important voting is.

They blame the 15 of us here, including the Opposition, for their lack of interest in not voting or putting their names on the voters' list. Well, I am one of the 15 who do not accept that as being any excuse, from any of them. It is an individual responsibility; it does not have anything to do with me. It is their lack of interest in their responsibility, not mine. In truth, I believe that applies to every one of us.

Mr. Speaker, the Commissioners made the point that there were some districts that had an interest in going to single-member constituencies. What the Commissioners found is on page 14, under "Single Member Constituencies". They arrived at this conclusion by representation; I suppose more of it was done on a one-to-one basis, and there were some people who presented written point submissions to the Commissioners, but in George Town they had to make this judgement based on 15 people. Here is what they said: "The Commission's mandate requires it to divide the Cayman Islands into seventeen electoral constituencies, each of which will elect a member of the Legislative Assembly. This issue was clearly a controversial one..."

They did not say that it was one about which everybody was in agreement; they said it was controversial. There was no unanimity.

"The issue was clearly a controversial one at the public meetings held by the Commission. It appeared to cause unease to some who attended the public meetings of the Commission in Cayman Brac and West Bay, while George Town, North Side and East End were supportive of the single member constituencies; Bodden Town audience had mixed views on the issue."

That is a fact, because I was there and I made my views known, but there were others who also made their views known, and there was no general agreement on it. Some said, "Yea," and some said, "Nay". However, the Commissioners are supposed to arrive at a conclusion. It is not that this is a mathematical exactitude that is going to guide them; they have to use their reason and their logic and so on, as well as the terms of reference for which they were appointed—requested—to do a job. They were following their terms of reference.

The former Chairman of the Constitutional Review Commission, Mr. Benson Ebanks, and his other Commissioners, told the Commission that the “one man, one vote” issue was the most frequent one raised with his Commission. They felt that the best way of giving effect to that aspiration was the single-member constituencies system; hence, the Commission recommended that system. Mr. Benson et al. concluded that the best thing they could recommend was single-member constituencies. Overall, however, there was nothing to say that that is what all the people wanted.

The present Boundary Commissioners found that there was general agreement in George Town, North Side and East End.

Mr. Speaker, I go back to the point that, if we are to get two more seats in the Legislative Assembly—if there are to be 17 of us, with seven Ministers in Cabinet—we have got to find some place to put those other two people. The only logical place is in George Town, because the largest concentration of votes is there. In fact, the Second Elected Member for George Town noted that there is something like 50 per cent of the voting populace in George Town. What, then, would one logically do? I suggest that the seats would go in George Town. Do we want, in the election next year in November, to give the people of George Town six votes to cast?

Mr. Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town asks how he can sell, to the people of George Town, the idea that they must give up four votes to cast one. If one vote is the proper and right way to vote, as that Member advocates, why would the people of George Town (whom he represents) not want to do the better thing, leaving the others, who might crave the wrong thing, to do it for a little longer—at which time it shall be snatched away from them and we will all have to do the right thing?

As to the quotations from the Cayman Net News about having two systems in one country, and how the Governor must beat up the Leader of Government Business and stop him from doing what he is doing, I cannot see that that is going to happen. That would not be good governance. A proposal is being put forward; it will be voted upon, and the majority will carry—that is the way democracy works.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know what they will do in the United Kingdom. I am bold enough to suggest, knowing some of what I know, that the United Kingdom Government wants the Cayman Islands to change its system from multi-member voting to having everyone vote single-member. However, they also want to posture as though they do not want us to do this. They want it to be our decision—very well. What is so wrong with our saying, “Okay, we agree with you, Mother. We will do it, but let us do it gradually”? That is what this Government has said from day one. They did change their posture (which, from my own position, I did not agree with) so that we would do what the Opposition party said they wanted done, and for which there was, as we have heard, such strong support, marching and all the rest of it. We took that position, as it was explained to me, for peace: to have general agreement when we went to the UK. Well, we went there, and we came back, with certain disagreements.

I do not believe for one minute that this shows that this Government cannot make decisions. That it can do; it has a proven track record. However, the decision at this time, in the opinion of the Government, is that it is better, overall, to proceed. We articulated this to the United Kingdom Government, explaining that we had changed our view based on the desire to cooperate, as they were asking us to do, and that we should simply take up now where we left off. If we want to see two more seats, it is logical to place them in the district with 4500 votes.

Mr. Speaker, I am not about to get into the argument—or even to try to refute the fact—that it was originally suggested here last Monday, in looking at the distribution, that one seat would go, which would bring it to five in West Bay and five in George Town. That is old news. It has been voted upon that the six seats will go in George Town, so that is the past.

In this Report, the Boundary Commissioners have placed a map, on which they have been able to keep the district boundaries, as we know them, and divide the Islands so that they get as close as possible to equal numbers.

We are suggesting that George Town North should be renamed Seven Mile Beach. One could argue that it is really part of George Town, but in truth, everybody calls that area West Bay Road, or Seven Mile Beach, so as far as appropriateness goes, I do agree with the recommendation that it be called Seven Mile Beach North. I think it is worth noting that that section has 737 votes. George Town Central has 783; George Town West has 730; George Town South has 723; George Town East has 807; and Prospect has 758. There is only one other instance in which the numbers in any district come near the 700 mark, and that is Boddan Town West, with 751 votes. That includes all of the Savannah area, and Newlands, and so on. That is the closest they could get.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, we have now reached the hour of 4.30 pm. I have received notice that it is the wish of Members that the business of the House should continue until 8 pm. There had been a circular saying that we would continue until 6 pm, but I think Members would wish to have the business of the House concluded as expeditiously as possible, because I know that certain Members are travelling. If that is the wish of the House, I would ask the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to allow the continuation of the House.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) for business to be conducted past the hour of 4.30 pm, and carried on until 8 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow the House to continue until the hour of 8 pm.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services is continuing.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I was commenting that the numbers in George Town are outstandingly higher, and that there is only one instance in any other district, proposed segment or constituency, in which the numbers get near to it.

I heard the Second Elected Member for George Town speak about having a referendum to determine this. For the life of me, I cannot see why such a thing would be necessary, when the enthusiasm of the populace has already been shown: we are having major numbers, such as 16 people, turn out. Why would we expect the people to turn out in their hundreds and thousands to vote on an issue, as the Honourable Member is saying? Mr. Speaker, I do not think he is doing anything more than political posturing, although he accuses the Government of that. While he articulates the virtues of single-member constituencies and “one man, one vote”, I am not sure if he believes it. You cannot want it, and not want it, at the same time. I have never known any instance in which the representatives of George Town particularly worried about the interests of Bodden Town. In fact, I remember the late Mr. Haig Bodden, MLA, saying that Cayman ended just east of Crewe Road. He is on the record as having said that.

That has been the way. There has been a general feeling like that, I suggest, in the Eastern districts of this Island, which is not dissimilar to the way the people of the Brac feel—that they are left out because of everything being in Grand Cayman. Mr. Speaker, it is a most peculiar society in which we live.

The idea of calling a referendum to decide this, to me, is way off the beam. It would not make sense—it could not make sense—to do such a thing. If the Second Elected Member for George Town is concerned about the money that has been spent to hire these Commissioners—two sets of them: the Constitutional Commissioners and the Boundaries Commissioners—then what would it cost to set up what would be the equivalent of a General Election now, to decide whether we should have boundaries, and then next year to have to set it up to go to the polls to vote? To me the suggestion is not logical. It does not bear the attraction, in the least bit, to do such a thing.

We speak of democracy. What makes for democracy is free and fair elections, at regular intervals—that I have the right to vote, and I am not going to get shot on the road going to the polls because someone suspects that I might be supporting Party A or Party B; that elections are held at regular intervals; and that there is no cheating in the ballot boxes. We should be proud that we have such a heritage, when so many elections, in other parts of the world—including that great bulwark of democracy, the United States—have accusations of improper voting practices, like what occurred in the state of Florida. That view is held by people right up until today.

We do not have that here: that is what makes for democracy.

Whether John Brown will exercise his four votes, or cast only one or two, or whether Mary Jane will cast two or three, I am not here to say. Everyone must personally be persuaded as to what to do, just as everyone must personally be persuaded to be registered to vote. That is where the principle of democracy comes in.

It is recommended that the district of George Town be divided into six electoral districts, perhaps changing the name of one. North Side is a single-member district; East End is a single-member district. I have never heard of any problem in my life when the people in those districts, going into the town halls or the civic centres, did not understand that they had to go in there to vote for one person. The last time, they chose my cousin, the honourable Elected Member for East End. I do not think they had any problem casting three votes when they should have cast one.

Therefore, there will be no great uproar or problem for our elections officers, or for the Supervisor of Elections, who is one of the most experienced, steeped-in-the-system men you can find in the western hemisphere. I think he has run the past four or five elections, which is twenty odd years. In fact, I know it to be the case, for the former Supervisor of Elections, Mr. Vernon Jackson, left Government when I did, in 1983, and this is now 2003, so it has been twenty years. It is not going to cause him any problem. The people who assist him every year know it backward and forward. The only thing it would mean, perhaps, is buying a few more ballot boxes. Also, in the different sections, there would be some more polling stations. What else are we talking about?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Someone is saying, on this side, that it would be a quicker count, for sure. In each section, the count would be quicker overall. It may take about the same time, but perhaps not.

Mr. Speaker, I do not agree with the argument put forward by the Member speaking for the Opposition. What he has said would cause trauma to the Cayman Islands happens during every election. It would simply be doing what has been done from a small forever, where we had some single-member constituencies and some multi-member constituencies—all of which might remain. It is suggested that Bodden Town, West Bay and Cayman Brac, representing approximately 50 per cent of the votes, would all go to single-member constituencies in 2008, whether we wanted to or not.

I believe that there is a case to be made for phasing them in; surely, it cannot do us any damage. The greater damage, I think, is being done in this Legislative Assembly, where time is taken, though not to persuade the Members in here—we are not persuading ourselves. I believe that if our proceedings were not broadcast, half of the things that are said here would not be said. It is an attempt to keep the pot stirred among our populace, which was so interested in this, in the first instance, that the largest turnout on the issue was 37 persons.

Mr. Speaker, I personally do not have a problem with the proposal being put forward by the Government at this time. I know it will not do any more damage next year than it has ever done in the years before that. I think we should all attempt to arrive at a conclusion, to get on to the other business of this House, and simply to be honest and straightforward—not to try to make anyone believe that some strange outer space occurrence is happening in the Cayman Islands. Let us not rely on the editorials and front page of the Cayman Net News; there are other newspapers as well, and there are other media.

Let us not try to create something it is not necessary to create, which could further mislead the people whom we should be trying to educate.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your invitation, Sir.

"These are the times that try men's souls." This is no time for playing cat-and-mouse; this is a time for men of good will to stand up and let their voices heard.

I have to remark that I have indeed been fortunate to have been allowed, by the constituency I represent, to have been here to witness these times. However, I have to remark, equally soberly, that I am concerned about the trends that things are taking, as we approach what should be a serious, contemplative and conscientious undertaking.

I heard, on the news, an announcement in which a member of the Opposition said we should be prepared for an acrimonious debate, and I was so alarmed that I mentioned it to a few of my colleagues. I normally would have kept the mention confined to my good friend and fellow representative from Bodden Town, but I mentioned to a couple of my other colleagues that I was concerned. The way in which it was said could not but be interpreted as a call to arms. I have said before that our ultimate responsibility, as representatives of the people, is to inform, illuminate, and to elevate their understanding. If we are going to take time to announce that issues that should be approached seriously and soberly are going to be introduced by acrimonious debate, then I say we are failing in our obligations. We are abnegating and abandoning our responsibilities.

Perhaps the Opposition would do better to read a little Edmund Burke, to find out exactly what the role of a representative is: how he or she has a moral obligation to uplift and elevate his or her constituency. I am equally concerned with insinuations about a system, and a government, that is purported to be corrupt and inefficient. If that is the compliment we give to ourselves, then it is no wonder that the public does not hold us in high esteem.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that all of us—all of us: both the Government and the Opposition—have a moral obligation to hold each other in mutual respect, and to recognise the importance of the roles that we both play.

The Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission, 2003, and the constituencies, is indeed a very serious business. However, I do not believe that democracy is "one man, one vote." I believe that the essence of democracy is the ability to cast one's vote without the fear of intimidation or interference; without threat of violence, or any other threat; and without sanctions, civil disorder or civil disobedience. That is the essence of democracy. I have traced it from its birthplace in Athens, when Pericles, that Great Athenian citizen, advocated it, down to this time.

There are many jurisdictions that do not have a system of "one man, one vote", yet their democratic systems are just as open, just as legitimate and just as accepted as our own.

That is the first point I wish to make. The second point is that school is out, among many people, as to whether the "one man, one vote" system is indeed the best system for a jurisdiction with the peculiarities of the Cayman Islands. When this proposal was aired, I spoke to eminent persons such as Sir Shridath Ramphal, and some other distinguished and eminent Commonwealth citizens, who told me that the decision should be made based on the peculiarities of the jurisdiction, ascertaining and guaranteeing that the persons exercising their franchise would exercise them, first of all, with a clear understanding of what they were doing.

Just yesterday, I encountered someone who asked me to explain what "one man, one vote" meant. I have said this before: We, the representatives of the people (the Opposition included), should be more responsible, and should be seeking to elevate and illuminate the understanding, not to cloud the issue, or obfuscate it by threats of civil disobedience and accusations about a government that is bent on entrenching itself.

Mr. Speaker, we should ensure that our people know. Those of us who are not going that way in the upcoming election will be going that way four years hence, and that is not a long time to elevate and educate a populace so that they can understand what we are doing.

The Government is playing its role responsibly, but the Opposition is not being complementary and, Mr. Speaker, I sense that the object of the exercise, for them, is to displace the Government, at all cost. It should not be so.

At the same time, they pretend to be reasonable, fair and responsible. What have they done to illuminate and inform our understanding? They have threatened civil disobedience, threatened to bring people into the streets, and to join with those who are going. Mr. Speaker, I heard one member of the Opposition saying that they were going to the United Kingdom. Anyone who can pay his or her passage can go to the United Kingdom and make an appointment. If they believe that is the panacea to the challenges we face, then maybe they should go.

The Opposition is behaving with the perspicacity of wasps in winter, and this is only the autumn. Perhaps they should consider that, and change their behaviour a little.

First they were in an uproar because West Bay should not have gotten another seat. Well, West Bay did not get another seat. George Town got six, and we agreed. It was our position from the beginning that we would move gradually into the single-member constituencies. We gave the Opposition what they wished. Now they are saying, "That is not enough, because we have single-member constituencies, but we do not want West Bay, Bodden Town and Cayman Brac to remain as they are." Mr. Speaker, what do they want? What do they want?

I heard them returning here—so much so that I draped my Leader up and asked him, "Well, if they got everything they wanted, my Leader, what did we get?" They boasted of it, Mr. Speaker; they boasted of it in these very halls, and yet they had no mandate from the people. We had the mandate, so now they are claiming that it is not good enough for them. The Opposition is behaving like a spoilt brat, who, when he is losing the game, pulls his marbles, puts them in his pocket, and wants to go home.

Mr. Speaker, I cringe at some of the things I have heard because they could not—could not—have been spoken but by someone consumed by a youthful exuberance. Therefore, I have to be most charitable in forgiving. Mr. Speaker, this is not about the Government trying to gerrymander; this is not about the Government trying to fix things. These recommendations were made by an independent Boundaries Commission. The point was made, and has to be made again:

There was no overwhelming evidence that the people of the Cayman Islands were interested in every constituency being single-member at this time; nor did they give such an approval.

It was read by the last Honourable Member speaking that in some areas, there was confusion. Is this not reason then, why we should gradually phase this in? I said before that, in my understanding, throughout of the history of attempts at constitutional reform in this country, there has been—from Lord Oxford and Asquith in 1971—no overwhelming outpouring of persons at public meetings.

There are a number of reasons to account for that. Not the least of those reasons, I suggest, is the fact that the electors assume a certain level of responsibility from their elected leaders. They expect certain levels of decisions to be taken by those leaders. If this is the case, then we go back and explain to those persons why the decisions were taken, and explain to them what the effects of those decisions are going to be.

It is the same now, Mr. Speaker—it is the same now.

I should crave your indulgence to read from the proposals in the Report by the Constitutional Commissioner, the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Oxford and Asquith KCMG, 1971, on page 9.

The Speaker: Please continue, Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: He said: "To assist in the formation of these judgements I visited the colony, arriving in Grand Cayman on 22 January, 1971. My consultations, spread over a month, included talks with the Administrator and senior officials, meetings on several occasions with elected members of the Legislative Assembly and interviews with members of the public, including lawyers in private practice and members of the Chamber of Commerce. I made myself available for interview at all main centres of population in the Islands and about 100 people took advantage of these opportunities."

Mr. Speaker, in one month, the gentleman saw 100 people. A similar pattern has occurred throughout subsequent Constitutional Commissioners' visits. That means it can be interpreted—it should be interpreted—to mean that the electors are saying, "We have representatives. We are depending on these representatives to make interpretations, and tell us".

Mr. Speaker, I like to read. I like to study; I like to understand. Edmund Burke told us this; I read it some time ago. He says, "Your representative owes you, not his industry only, but his judgment; and he betrays, instead of serving you, if he sacrifices it to your opinion."

It is left to us to tell our people how we see these kinds of things as being of effect upon them.

They would not know; that is why they put us here. We have to report to them.

Then, Mr. Speaker, ultimately, the members of the Opposition talk about referendum. Under the Westminster system, the greatest referendum is at the end of those four years, when one is returned or not. That is the greatest referendum. It would be preposterous for us to hold a referendum, now, to find out whether we should have single-member constituencies, when the election is approximately 12 months away. Referendums are expensive, and there would be no guarantee that we would not have a trickle of voters. Judging by the audiences that the Boundaries Commission had, we may have, in some places, 35 people voting; 16 people voting; seven people voting. What an expense that would be, when we can stick to the plan we had, by phasing this in gradually, and achieve the same results.

Is it that the Opposition is seeking an advantage over the Government? It is, Mr. Speaker. Theirs is to win the victory—to get organised; fight; work; win. I do not believe that there is any miracle to that. I do not believe that there is anything elusive. The Government is not, by doing this, casting for themselves any unfair advantage. The Government is simply doing what they said they would do. The Government is simply doing what governments have mandates to do: to exercise policy with wisdom, restraint, and fairness. For the Opposition to say otherwise means that they are irresponsible.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say something else—I cringe. I find reprehensible the insinuations that are being made, on occasions, both inside and outside the House, towards the Government. It is a mark of disrespect. Not only is it taken up by the Opposition, but it is taken up by persons outside the House—by far too many. What we need on this occasion is rigorous honesty, maturity, and the ability to represent things fairly. Of course, anyone can find a newspaper editorial or a front-page story to substantiate a position. That is how arguments are made, but a newspaper's editorial represents the bias of its editorial board, or its editor. That is not to say that such an editorial has a monopoly on the truth. Facts are sacred; comment is free. I do not believe that there is anything to be gained in quoting from a newspaper editorial—no more than to say, "This is but the reflection of a segment of the population", or, "This is but the reflection of this particular newspaper." That would never convict a person in a court.

We have a history in this jurisdiction of having free and fair elections. I say this with specific reference to the comment made by the Second Elected Member for George Town, speaking on behalf of the Opposition—the remark that the legitimacy of the exercise will be in doubt if we go through with this. That is a very irresponsible statement, and unless that Member was trying to incite something that does not currently exist, I would have to disregard it. However, I do not wish for him to go and challenge on that statement, because I am beginning to understand what he is trying to do. What I am not prepared to do is to let him get away with what he is trying to do, unchallenged. The gentleman is not only trying to cast aspersions, but to impute untoward, improper motives to the Government. Seriously, Mr. Speaker, that cannot go unchallenged in this Honourable House, as long as this Member sits as a representative.

We have a history of free and fair elections, even in the most heated of political campaigns. Indeed, so civilised are the contestants in the Cayman Islands that there is hardly a challenge after the elections. The records will show there is hardly even a recount. People take their whippings and move along. That is a rarity, not only in the region, but in the world. Therefore, for a member of the Opposition to spout off now, and to insinuate that there is going to be some question of the legitimacy of the exercise, is nothing short of irresponsibility of the highest order.

The fact that we are phasing in the system does not mean that the election process is going to be compromised. I hear pains over there—I do not know if it is labour, or death. I do not know what it is, but I only say there is going to be more. Whether it is sighing or crying, there is going to be more. There may even be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Mr. Speaker, we would be wise to introduce this as the Government planned—phased. The Opposition's energies would be better spent trying to exercise responsibility.

I want to mention this last fallacy. I think it is patently fallacious for anyone to expect that, in any debate on boundary and ancillary matters, there is going to be consensus between the Government and the Opposition. If there were consensus on every issue, then something would be wrong, and knowing what I know, I would have to be suspicious. In a democratic system, that could never prevail in every instance. The behaviour of the Opposition remarks eloquently about the root cause of the problem. They are not interested in democracy or its promotion. What they are interested in is power—power, power, power. I warn them that they should be careful, because power has a way of mocking those who seek it recklessly. Power has a way of mocking those who couch the truth in false garments. It might come back to haunt them, Mr Speaker.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I certainly could not allow the opportunity to pass, and not speak on this most important matter before the House. I do not intend to waste the time of this Honourable House by going into matters that have already been covered. However, being one of two representatives who come from single-member constituencies cies, it is only fair, reasonable and expected that I make my contribution on this issue.

Mr. Speaker, much has been said about dividing the country up into 17 single-member constituencies. Much has been said about that which currently exists, and the way the process works now. No one in this Honourable House, save the Elected Member for North Side and me, has experienced a single-member constituency, as far as I am aware.

I can support no less than single-member constituencies, because I understand their value to the people represented in a single-member constituency—the value of having one representative. In East End, everyone knows who their representative is. They do not have to be running around looking for one, two, three or four—they have one. They know exactly who that person is. Politically, that person is me.

The Minister of Education named a number of things that he believes make up the essence of democracy: a lack of fear, or intimidation, and the like, in casting one's vote. Mr. Speaker, I believe that another, which he missed, is that of equality in casting that vote, so that each person's vote is as valued as that of another person elsewhere in the country. Someone in East End should have the same value, in their vote, as anyone in George Town or West Bay. However, when you have one person, elsewhere in the country, casting two and three votes, there is something wrong with that. It gives the people of East End and North Side the feeling that, politically, they are of less value than anyone else in the country.

We would like to educate our people and tell them that that is not true. Nevertheless, we have seen the exercise of that on one more than one occasion, particularly in recent times, with the rest of the country having the majority of the elected representatives. An example is what currently exists in West Bay, with four people getting elected on one ticket. They can exercise more control over the process—whereby they can go to bargaining table, under the previous system we had—in the absence of party systems. It will probably continue under party systems as well. That is something over which we have no control.

If the country were divided up into single-member constituencies, it would be that much easier for East End and North Side to feel equal with the other people, and know that their representative is equal with other representatives as well.

One of the things that make for true democracy is the right to go to the polls at regular intervals to elect your representatives. However, in an atmosphere such as we currently have, it does not spell—and does not show—equality. While it is true that every four years we will all be tested on our stewardship—

[Inaudible interjection]

Point of Order

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr Speaker, may I bring to your attention the fact that the Leader of Government Business is disturbing me by cross-talking, please?

The Speaker: The Honourable Elected Member for East End, please continue. I would ask all Honourable Members to please desist from the cross-talk. Please continue.

[Inaudible interjections]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Leader of Government Business is disturbing me with his comments. I would like him to stop.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr Speaker, I really take objection to this.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, are you rising on a point of order?

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I am rising on a point of order, because what they are trying to do is to make it look, publicly, as though I am doing something wrong here. I am sitting here and taking notes. I was talking to Members on my side. If he is so disturbed, then he should sit down, if he is not saying anything.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, let us try to show mutual respect for each other. I know it is getting late in the day, and nerves are beginning to get frayed, but let us try to continue in the best way possible. The Elected Member for East End, please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I sat here and did not disturb one person speaking in this Honourable House. Every time someone does it to me, I am going to bring your attention to it.

Mr. Speaker, it is true that the Boundary Commissioners, in their works during this year, did not have what would be considered good attendance. However, I noted that in 1991, when we had a constitutional review, it was much the same. I quote, with your permission, from the Report of The Constitutional Commissioners 1991, by Sir Frederick Smith and Mr. Walter Wallace.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: On page 9, under, "The Conduct of the Review", beginning at paragraph 3, they said: "We also had separate meeting with individual members of the public, both in Georgetown and, in the evenings, in each of the six electoral districts. Altogether, we met with 92 persons representing 16 organisations; 63 individual members of the public; and a further 120 persons attended the public meetings which we held in each district."

“In addition we spoke at two luncheons, kindly given for us by the Chamber of Commerce and the Caymanian Bar Association during each of which there were lengthy sessions of question and answer. We visited Cayman Brac where we conducted both private appointments and a public meeting and although we also visited Little Cayman with the same intention, no one apparently wished to make representations to the Commission.”

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, when we say that people are not interested, and that this is one of the reasons we need to make these decisions for them, I cannot support that position. It has been, from time begun, that people do not come out to these types of exercises. We heard the Minister of Education quote from the 1971 Report. People just do not come out. That is not to say that it is not our responsibility to educate them, and let them know what decisions their representatives have made on their behalf.

Since this Report was made to his Excellency, the Governor, I cannot recall any of us trying to educate the populace on what the Report contained, with any effort being made. I am not saying that we did not mention it in public meetings, but we are making decisions, and the Government has proposed a change in what the Commissioners have recommended.

I have heard that this is an independent review. I have heard that proffered in here, Mr. Speaker. If it is such an independent review, why is it that the Government recommended one of the Commissioners, and the Opposition recommended another? Two of the people on that Commission were recommended and appointed—one by either side of this Honourable House. Therefore, it cannot be an independent review. It cannot be an independent Commission. If we were not in agreement with the Commission's being conducted, then we should not have made appointments to it. We cannot come, now, and say that it was an independent Commission and that we cannot stand by it. Both representatives from the parties have signed this Report.

The Government is proposing that we have single-member constituencies in George Town, and that East End and North Side remain the same. I believe I have said in here before that it would be impossible, rather foolish, and unreasonable for me to ask for an additional representative in East End, or, for that matter, for one to be placed in North Side. We cannot do that, because then we will really have further inequity. However, I must make this clear: I do not know if anyone else was asked this question, but when I was asked, during the campaign in 2000, whether I supported the concept of “one man, one vote”, I said, “Yes.” If the country does not go to “one man, one vote”, then East Enders and North Side should have dual votes too. I said it then: I contend that the country must go to single-member constituencies.

It is totally and absolutely unfair for the Government to propose that there be six single-member constituencies in George Town. That is preposterous. I cannot understand how the UK is going to change, now, from the position that we all went to England to discuss, and agreed upon.

Point of Order

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr Speaker, the Leader of Government Business is again disturbing me.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I rise on a point of order.

The Speaker: Please state your point of order,

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The point of order is that these arguments have been around this Assembly all day today—the same words over and over again. I simply bring that to your attention, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you very much. I know that on a motion like this it is difficult for all Members to speak, and not at some point repeat some of the words that were said, because we are debating the same Report. However, I would ask that we take cognisance of the Standing Orders which speak to tedious repetition.

Please continue, Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is going to be interesting to hear, when the Leader of Government Business replies to this Motion, whether he repeats anything anyone else has said in here. It is going to be very interesting to hear that. I will have my ears perked. I will have them wide open to hear what will be said.

Mr. Speaker, one of the areas that I would like to cover is that of the Speaker. The proposal was for the Speaker to come from the outside. That was not agreed to in the most recent Motion.

The Speaker: I wonder if this is a convenient time, Honourable Member, to take the afternoon break.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes.

The Speaker: We will take a 15-minute break and be back here at 5.50 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 5:35 pm

Proceedings resumed at 5.54 pm

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End is continuing with his debate.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When we took the suspension, I was going to go on to the difficulties of having a Speaker from inside the Legislative Assembly when we have single-member constituencies. I was going, with your permission, to read from the Report of the Constituency Boundaries Commission for Bermuda 2001/2002.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, has that Report been tabled in this House, or made available to Members? If not, I will I ask that it be tabled.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Yes, Sir.

The Government proposes to phase in single-member constituencies with George Town, out of the four multi-member constituencies, being the first, and for it to be completed in 2008. Whenever there are single-member constituencies, there is a problem with the Speaker coming from the inside. That is one of the reasons the Opposition has always supported the Speaker coming from the outside. Mr. Speaker, I will read now, with your permission, from this Report of the Constituency Boundaries Commission for Bermuda, which illustrates the difficulties in which one will find oneself, whenever such occurs. I begin in paragraph 34:

“34. In the course of the public meetings and in some of the written submissions to the Commission, as well as in other public statements, the phrase was frequently used of “one man one vote of equal value.” This means that the public expects that the constituencies created would result in a vote in one constituency being of equal value to the vote in another so far as is practicable.”

“35. This expression of view could presumably be the reason why there was also a call from sections of the public for serious consideration to be given to changing the existing electoral systems of “first past the post” to one of some form of Proportional Representation which, they seemed to believe, would better ensure a democratic form of government. The Commission repeatedly stated that such a matter was not within its authority under the Constitution (Amendment) Order of 2001.”

“36. Having regard to the expectation in paragraph 34 above, consideration should be given to the situation that currently exists, and that will continue to exist under the Constitution (Amendment) Order, where voters in one or other of the constituencies are denied full representation in the House of Assembly. This is occasioned by the existing provision for the election of the Speaker of the House.”

“37. Under current law, in sections 32(1)(b) and 42(2) of the Constitution, the Speaker of the House is elected from among the members of the House. He presides at each sitting of the House and he is not permitted to vote unless on any question the votes are equally divided in which case he has a casting vote [see section 44(3)]. This means that the member who is elected by his constituents to represent them, but is chosen by his fellow MPs to be the Speaker, does not have the same opportunity as his fellow MPs to represent his constituents by speaking on their behalf in the House. It might be said that in the situation of double member constituencies, the constituents still had recourse to the other constituency representative but there will be no such recourse possible in a situation of single member constituencies.”

Mr. Speaker, we have to remember that Bermuda, at the time, had double-member constituencies.

“38. A proposal for provisions for the selection of the Speaker from outside the elected members – so as to fully satisfy the call for “one man one vote of equal value – the most important thing being of equal value” – found favour with a majority of members of the Commission. However, the point was made within the Commission that this matter also, as in the case previously mentioned in paragraph 35, was not in the Commission’s remit and that the majority view was that it would therefore be improper to include it as a specific recommendation of the Commission.”

Mr. Speaker, these are the problems we fall into when we get single-member constituencies. It would be foolhardy of me, being from a single-member constituency, to be a Speaker, because then one would not have the time to deal with one’s constituents. I bring that specifically to show why a Speaker should always come from the outside.

We have had it fairly decently since we have had a Speaker, because our first Speaker was from the outside. There was no reason for the first Speaker of this Honourable House to have to deal with constituents. The second Speaker ran into the same problems I am talking about, which this Commission identified in Bermuda. However, because Cayman Brac and Little Cayman was a multi-member constituency, it was not that difficult for the individual—the late Captain Mabry Kirkconnell—to preside as Speaker.

This argument is only to show that when we go to single-member constituencies, there is going to be a need to have a Speaker from the outside. In 2008, we will have to have a Speaker from the outside. If we have to have one then, why can we not have one now? If we are going to full single-member constituencies in 2008, what is the reason why we cannot go now?

The explanation given by the Government for having recommended that George Town go to single-member constituencies now, and the rest—Cayman Brac, Bodden Town, and West Bay—stay as they are, with multi-member constituencies, does not hold any water. The only reason I can see would be time, and that reason has been negated by going with George Town as a single-member constituency now. If there is time for the people of George Town to understand single-member constituencies, then there is plenty of time for the rest of the country to understand single-member constituencies also. It makes absolutely no sense for us to take George Town, turn it into six single-member constituencies and leave West Bay, Bodden Town and Cayman Brac intact. The Government has not, in my view, proffered any reasonable reason why we cannot go to single-member constituencies throughout the country.

I heard the Minister of Health say that half of the country, or thereabouts, will be single-member constituencies, and that the other half will be multi-member constituencies. If half can be single-member constituencies—"one man, one vote"—in the upcoming election, is it only because the Commissioners said it was not well received in West Bay, Bodden Town and Cayman Brac?

We hear that we are elected as representatives, and that we are given the mandate to make decisions on behalf of the people we represent. To some extent, I agree with that. However, it is expected that we do so in a manner that is in their best interests. It is expected that we use judiciously that same mandate that we are given, and that we let them know what is in their best interests. We cannot do it just to say, "We did it." We cannot make decisions to use areas, or make decisions that will put a number of those people up as guinea pigs. The whole country expects us to make decisions that are in their best interests, and in their democratic interests.

Mr. Speaker, it is true: some will be voting for four, some for three, some for two, and the remainder for one—"one man, one vote."

I am sure that every Honourable Member of this House knows what "one man, one vote" means. If we can do it in 2004, what is going to change in the population—in the residents, in the electorate, in the districts of West Bay, Bodden Town and Cayman Brac—by 2008? What is going to change their minds? The Government have not said what campaign they are going to go on; they have not said how they are going to change these people's minds. I have not heard that. I have not heard anything about how they are going to prepare the people of George Town. At the very least, we need to prepare the people of George Town.

If we are relying on what the Commissioners said about who found single-member constituencies favourable and who did not, it is on page 14 of the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003 that they said:

"It appeared to cause unease to some who attended the public meetings of the Commission in Cayman Brac and West Bay, while George Town, North Side and East End were supportive of the single member constituencies; Bodden Town audience had mixed views on the issue."

We then look on page 10 of the Boundary Commissioners' Report. For West Bay, there were 37 persons at that meeting, and the Commissioners reported that that was 37 out of a possible 2922 electors. Mr. Speaker, there is no way that that can be representative of the electorate in West Bay; therefore, that cannot be a reason. Bodden Town had 16 persons out of a possible 2125 electors—we cannot use the numbers in the Commissioners' Report. If we are going to use them, we have to compare them with the possibility of the total number coming out. If we are going to use them as a percentage, then they are going to be a percentage of the total electorate. You cannot say that, if in Little Cayman, there were none; and in Cayman Brac, out of a possible 855 people, there were 11—and that is in 2003—that this represents the wishes of the people of this country.

This Commissioners' Report is being accepted with exception, as far as I understand. It has not been said when the Motion was moved. It was not said by the Leader of Government Business, who moved the Motion, but I suspect that the Commissioners' Report is being accepted with the exception that only George Town be implemented for the 2004 General Elections. The basis that the Government Members are using is that the turnout in George Town said they wanted it. I have heard, "Mind, you get what you ask for". Mr. Speaker, 15 persons cannot be representing 4490. Likewise in West Bay, 37 cannot be representing 2922, so that basis has already been destroyed.

It is unfortunate that the Government sees the necessity to try to curtail any debate on anything they propose, but I have a job also, the same way the Government has, and I am expected to do that job.

I am going to speak from the position of being a single-member representative. Mr. Speaker, I know that all the people in East End support single-member constituencies, and they would like to see them throughout this country. Although there were only three people at the meeting in East End—and I was one of them—it cannot be said that they are not interested.

I could also proffer the view that they lack interest because they already know what it means. They saw no need to come to talk to the Commissioners. When we talk about only three people being at the East End meeting, we cannot make assumptions as to why people were not there. I did not discuss the "one man, one vote" with the Commissioners, because I know exactly what it is. I discussed other matters, concerning the rest of the country, and their going to single-member constituencies.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know who the Government is talking to. I agree with the Minister of Education: until recently, people were asking me to explain the concept of "one man, one vote." They were not East Enders, and they were not North Siders, but they were from the rest of this country. Therefore, I agree that there are people out there who do not have a full understanding of what the concept of “one man, one vote” is. Certainly, there are many people to whom I have talked. As recently as a few hours ago, a lady was walking out of the door and wondered if we would be going to single-member constituencies. That lady happened to be from Bodden Town, but she understands. When I said that the Government was proposing it only in George Town, her remark was, “Oh, my God.”

We cannot make the assumption that what we decided was in the best interests, or to the best of knowledge, of the people of this country. There are many people out there who know what single-member constituencies are all about, and they want to trade in the multi-member constituencies for accountability. That is what single-member constituencies bring most of all: accountability on the part of the representative.

Mr. Speaker, I do not have any experience of hanging on to anybody’s coattail; I do not know what it is about. If that is the reason we want to leave this in place, then it is downright disgraceful. Why is it that we cannot stand on our own, as I and the Member for North Side did?

[Inaudible interjections]

Point of Order

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Leader of Government Business is deliberately disturbing me again, and I bring it to your attention once again.

The Speaker: Please continue, the Elected Member for East End

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Minister is distracting me. I cannot concentrate on what my position is. I would appreciate if he would cease and desist.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, there is certainly nothing wrong, in the parliamentary procedures, with a little cross-talk. What I do ask is that this does not get to the point where it is disturbing other Members in their speeches. I know it comes from both sides of the House. As I said earlier, I know that it is getting late, and nerves are getting frayed, but I would ask that we continue in the good style in which we have been going all day, except for one short period.

Please continue, Honourable Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate that, but I am going to move on from that.

The Minister of Education was right. “These are times that test men’s souls.”

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, if you have one.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Leader of Government Business says, “If you have one.” Perhaps he does not have one, so you cannot test him.

[Interjection]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I am not going to follow the Leader of Government Business.

I think the Boundary Commissioners have done an excellent job in dividing the country up into the 17 single-member constituencies. That was proposed by the Constitutional Commissioners, and then agreed by the Members of this Honourable House. I think they have done an honourable job. However, when we try to change what they have proposed in such a manner, it corrupts the whole process that was completed, on which much work was done—much time.

Mr. Speaker, the Government proposes that we change George Town North to Seven Mile Beach South; I do not think the members of the Opposition have any problems with that. The Commissioners did exactly what they were asked to do. They kept within the boundaries of the districts, as they exist, and retained the names of those districts—exactly what they were asked to do, firstly in their terms of reference; and secondly, by the people in this country. In my discussions with them I suggested the same thing: to try to retain the names, because of the sensitivities within the individual districts concerning these. The people wanted to ensure that they kept their names.

Mr. Speaker if we are not going to single-member constituencies, may I humbly suggest that we stay the way we are, whatever has been said about increasing the membership of this Honourable House by two Members? Although I do not have a problem with increasing the membership, I still believe—as I have always believed—that if the reason for it is that we need seven Members of Cabinet, then that is not a good enough reason. We currently have 15 Elected Members of this Honourable House, and a simple majority of 15 is eight. For any Members, party, team or group to contest the election, they need eight to form the Government, and you can get seven out of eight.

One may suggest that a single person as a Back Bencher is too risky. When we look at the current Constitution, in which you need nine Members voting in favour of a no confidence motion, you are still going to need a Minister to do that.

Therefore, I do not support, in its entirety, the view that we need additional seats. It is increased expenditure—that is exactly what it is. Any Government made up of eight Members, if they treat the Back Bencher who supported them to get into Executive Council well, will not be removed from Cabinet.

I have always contended that it is additional expense on the country. We do not need it. If we are not going to single-member constituencies, then I submit that we leave it as it is.

As we, the Opposition, initially said, in all the areas in this country to which we went to discuss single-member constituencies, there were few people who did not support it. Like the Commissioners, we cannot speak with any authority based on the number of persons who attended our meetings, but certainly we did it. We did not hear many oppose an increase to 17 Members. There were not many people who made representation to me to oppose an additional two Elected Members of the legislature. That may very well have come from the fact that all Members, from the word go—and before the Constitutional Commissioners started their work in 2001—had been speaking in public, and in this Honourable House, about increasing the membership. Therefore, people were set in their minds that there was a need to have an additional two Members. I believe this country wants to see their elected representatives responsible for the political leadership of the country. Without any disrespect to the First Official Member or the Third Official Member, the people want to see Elected Members held responsible for things such as the financial aspects of their country. Therefore, they were sold on it. They decided a long time ago that that is what they wanted; thus, there was very little opposition to the increase in membership of this Honourable House. I did not oppose it publicly, but I have always said that, theoretically, there is no need for it. If that is what it takes, however, then so be it.

Mr. Speaker, there will be a time in this country—somewhere, somehow, and possibly in our lifetime—when the House will be divided down the line, with a simple majority making up the Government. We are only going to have two Back Benchers then. If we follow the recommendation of 11, we are still going to need a Minister to remove Cabinet, so 17—two additional—Members is not going to change that. The country can operate with 15 Members in the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, the Boundary Commissioners recommended that the additional Members go to George Town, which is fair and reasonable based on the number of electors. The Government has now taken the view that that will be their position; I am glad to hear that, because it makes it a little more equal than what we have had.

I do not intend going into any long, drawn-out debate on this issue. I think this Honourable House, and this country, knows exactly where I stand: single-member constituencies, or leave it as it is until we can get there. If it is about time, then leave it until 2008, and do everything at one time.

We have heard much about Bermuda, and how they went from multi-member constituencies to single-member constituencies in the last General Election. According to all reports, it has worked well. They moved from 40 representatives down to 36 in one General Election. The Report of the Constituency Boundaries Commission for Bermuda 2001/2002 was submitted to the Governor in 2002, and earlier this year, they had their General Elections. They went from multi-member constituencies to single-member constituencies, and it went well. They had just about a year to do it, as well. Also, I must say that they did not have many people turning up at the Commissioners' meetings and appointments either—as we had here.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, their Commissioners' last meeting was in February 2002. If I may again refer to the same Boundaries Commission Report, which I will lay upon the Table as soon as I am through, paragraph 24 says: “A deadline date for the submission of views by the general public was fixed at 15th March 2002. By that date, 73 submissions were made orally at the four public meetings by 60 persons. In addition to the oral submissions, 177 written submissions were received. Of these 177 written submissions, 103 were by way of responses to a questionnaire prepared and published in the newspapers by an organisation called The Association for Due Process and the Constitution. The remaining 74 submissions were made independently.”

Mr. Speaker, if we are saying that the people of the Cayman Islands did not come out because they do not care, that means the people in Bermuda do not care either.

Our Commissioners, in 2003, said that there were 11,483 registered voters in this country. However, they did mention that the number of unregistered electors in this country ranged possibly to 3000. In Bermuda, in 2002, there were 39,198 eligible voters. If they went ahead—with relatively small numbers out of 39,198 eligible voters—with single-member constituencies within one year, why is it that the Cayman Islands cannot do it? The people of Bermuda are no smarter than the people of Cayman.

Mr. Speaker, nowhere in this Report does it say that the people of Bermuda came out in full force and supported it. This Report also speaks of the differences between the Opposition and the Government of the day, though in due course they came to agreements on all the issues relating to single-member constituencies.

The Speaker: Order.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Minister of Education said he queried the Leader of Government Business and asked what he—the Leader of Government Business, and their delegation—had bought back from England, since the Opposition were saying that they had got what they wanted. That may have been said, but not in the manner in which the Minister of Education was trying to portray. I am confident that when the five members of the Opposition, and the five members of the United Democratic Party (UDP) Government—including your good self, Sir—went to the Hyatt on 29 November 2002, we all went there in good faith. We discussed these issues relating to our Constitution, and single-member constituencies in particular. I did not walk away from there elated that the People's Progress sive Movement (PPM) had won, or that the UDP had conceded anything. I believe there were different views. The UDP—including your good self, Sir—agreed that this was the way to go. I do not think it shed any less light on them, deciding that they would support single-member constituencies. I certainly did not come away from that meeting thinking of any Member present representing the UDP as any less a politician, representative, or human being—I did not. I believe that that day, we worked very hard, and we came to what we considered the best possible conclusion. There were a couple of issues on which we did not agree, but that was the best possible solution for that day.

It is said that the UDP conceded, and we hear, particularly of single-member constituencies, that it was done “in the spirit of cooperation”. Mr. Speaker, I did not offer that—not once. It is the UDP leadership who have said they conceded because they wanted something else. That is written; that is a public document. The Leader of Government Business made a statement in this Honourable House, saying that.

It is extremely unfortunate that the Government could not continue to support single-member constituencies, because we all know that single-member constituencies, “one man, one vote”, is the right way to go.

If it is not the right thing to do—if we did not recognise it as being the right thing to do—then the Government would not propose that we would have full single-member constituencies in 2008. The majority of politicians, and former politicians, have at some time supported single-member constituencies. I do not understand the reason, now, that we want to put them in George Town and nowhere else. The Government must have their reasons; it is only fair that the Government let their people—our people—know those reasons. The reasons they have given are not good enough. I submit that it is wrong to put single-member constituencies in one part of this country and not in the remainder. We have no evidence to support that all the people, or the majority of the people in George Town, want it. Nevertheless, we are proposing it. We have no evidence—none whatsoever.

Mr. Speaker, single-member constituencies, and the Commissioners, are both a part of the modernisation of the Constitution of this country. In the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist that was sent, over which there was much controversy in 2002, number 2.19, or 18 (depending on which Checklist you are looking at), says: “Do the changes suggested by the OT government have the support of the majority of the population? What is the evidence for such support? Has there been extensive local consultation (with or without the assistance of a Constitutional Commissioner or Commission) followed by a debate in the legislature in which the suggested changes have been approved by motion?”

That is what we are doing now, Mr. Speaker. However, I submit that there is no evidence to support the manner in which the United Democratic Party (UDP) Government is proposing to change the proposals of the Boundary Commissioners. There is no evidence. If that is the case, why are they supporting the six, as recommended for George Town?

Mr. Speaker, there is no evidence in this country to support it. We have talked about the number of people who went out and made representation to the Commissioners. That is not evidence that the majority of the population supports or does not support it. In George Town, there are 20,000 people. This did not say “electors”; it said “population”. Population is inclusive of all—electors, potential electors, expatriates, all. I will submit that if a system had been put in place to try to find out what the population felt about single-member constituencies—the population, not only the electors—there would have been an overwhelming affirmative to single-member constituencies. In the majority of instances, the expatriate population in this country comes from single-member constituency countries.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: They do not vote.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Although it is true that the expat population does not vote in this country, it was not me requesting that the population be canvassed. It was not me; it was the mother country. This is their country.

Mr. Speaker, I repeat: “Do the changes suggested by the OT government have the support of the majority of the population? What is the evidence for such support?”

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: What has this got to do with boundaries?

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Get up on a point of order; that is what you do.

If evidence is not sent to England, showing that the majority of the population supports the modernisation of the Constitution, I would like to know how England is going to accept what the UDP Government is proposing.

If you look at the numbers, which I did earlier, Cayman Brac, West Bay and Bodden Town make up 5902 of the electors in 2003, as reported by the Boundary Commissioners. East End, North Side and George Town, which the Government is saying should have single-member constituencies, have 5581. It is practically split right down the middle. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, if the UDP Government can contend that they represent 50 per cent of the population, who do not want it, then we are contending that we represent 50 per cent of the population who do want it throughout.

Why are we phasing it in? When it really comes to it, the People’s Progressive Movement (PPM) have gone throughout this whole country. I have heard many in West Bay make representation to us and say they want single-member constituencies. We had a total of 21 meetings on the modernisation of the Constitution, and there were many people at those meetings throughout this country.

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Leader of Government Business is again disturbing me. I bring it to your attention once again.

Point of Order

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, just a few minutes ago, I observed the Elected Member for East End having to cut his microphone off, because Members on his side were talking, laughing and disturbing him, yet he continues to sit down and talk about people disturbing him. Mr. Speaker, he is misleading the House.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I took pains to send to each one of you a circular on what constitutes a point of order. I will say no more than that, but to ask you to please read that, as I know the time is getting late. It is 7 pm, but we did say that we would continue until 8 pm. As I said earlier, I would ask the Elected Member for East End to be a bit more patient with some of the cross-talk, because it comes from both sides of the House. I would ask that we please continue in the good spirits in which we have been doing so far.

Point of Order

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I rise on a point of order.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, please state your point of order.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I have been observing the Member speaking as well, and I have been listening. I have listened to one speaker on his side, and I have listened to him. Mr. Speaker, do not tell me, as long as I have been in this House, that he is not in breach of Standing Order 41. He is using someone else's argument. He is repeating himself, and things he has said earlier. I draw that to your attention, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, Honourable Minister. As I said earlier, on a motion as important as the ones before the House (Motion No.6/2003 and Motion No. 5/2003) it is the wish of the United Kingdom Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) that as many as possible make their position known to the FCO—on this one document that we are dealing with now.

Therefore, it is inevitable that there might, out of 14 Elected Members speaking on this, be some repetition.

However, I do accept that there has been quite a bit of repetition on this. Even though I stated earlier that we would give a lot of latitude on it, I would ask Members to confine their debates to the relevant points, and try to avoid tedious repetition.

Honourable Member for East End, would you please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Now that we have cleared that one up, I was on the issue of evidence being provided in support of any changes suggested by us to England.

I understand that this Checklist is entitled, the "Constitutional Modernisation Checklist." I have heard the argument that the Report of the Cayman Islands Boundary Commission 2003 has nothing to do with the modernisation of the Constitution; it has nothing to do with the Checklist. I would like to know, Mr. Speaker, what it does have to do with. This is all part and parcel of the modernisation of our Constitution and this Checklist applies across the board.

One of the other things that the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist asks for, in number 2.1, is that: "The proposals should promote more open, transparent and accountable government, and contribute to the fair and equitable exercise of power and delivery of public services."

"Consideration should be given to improvements to the operation and composition of the legislature and the promotion of democratic process."

Mr. Speaker, I submit that the promotion of democratic process in this country is going to single-member constituencies. That is promoting the democratic process—not phasing it in over two elections. If that were the case, if the Commissioners had found that, then that is what they would have reported. We need to prove that whatever we propose is in the promotion of the democratic process of this country. I submit that having George Town alone as six single-member constituencies is not promoting the democratic process.

If we put single-member constituencies throughout this country, we can demonstrate that we are promoting the democratic process—but not in one district, and leaving three others.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End, you have repeated that line several times. I have given latitude on this, but I think it is reaching the point of tedious repetition. I would ask you to move away from that line of argument, and continue your speech. I have given a lot of latitude on this, so I would ask that you cooperate with me. There have been many mentions of that same point.

I know that it is difficult with so many people having to speak on the same thing, but please move away and continue on your line of argument, because you have been doing well so far.

Please continue.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Speaker, I shall bow to your ruling, and move away from that. I will finish my debate soon, but first I would like to point out a couple of other things that the Commissioners have reported. On page 7, where they list the numbers of electors, they go on to say: “The foregoing numbers of electors show a decline in the size of the official list in all districts since 2000, due to the number of deceased persons—208 on the lists, exceeding new registrations of 52 for the same period.”

Mr. Speaker, what we need to get busy with is ensuring that all electors are registered in this country. As electors, they will have the right. We will not have the situation where there will be inequity—there will be less chance of it.

I suspect that those are spread throughout the country, and that there will be a need to revisit the boundaries, and appoint a new Electoral Boundary Commission, perhaps in the next few years, to ensure that we maintain some equality in the number of registered voters. As representatives, we need to ensure that we promote that, in the interests of democracy.

Mr. Speaker, on page 10, on “Equal representation”, the Commissioners said, “There were also strong suggestions that one person one vote, in the context of single member constituencies, was preferred and the Commission should consider parity in numbers for the proposed constituencies.”

From the people who made representation to them, it is obvious that what they received was support for single-member constituencies. I cannot support anything short of full single-member constituencies for this country, and I will not, coming from a single-member constituency. I cannot. It is unfair to the people of this country, and it is unfair to the people I represent; therefore, I will not support the Motion by the Government to change the recommendations of the Boundary Commissioners.

Mr. Speaker, my last quotation is from the Honourable David Thompson, MP, when he was here as a guest speaker of the People's Progressive Movement, in May of last year, on the modernisation of the Constitution. I quote, “Our laws, economic development and political activity can work properly only if constitutional boundaries are in place, well recognized and respected. Citizens must have a proper opportunity to participate in government at all levels. The shape of government, central and at community level, crucially affect the vibrancy and vitality of our society.”

“The constitutional development of countries that have followed the Westminster model has more to it than any principled commitment to fundamental human rights. It was founded on the re- quirement of power sharing between the traditional ruling class and the people.”

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, I will call on the Honourable Leader of Government Business to reply.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

When we announced this Motion, and when we took the Motion the other day, and had the debate on the Constitution—in which all of these matters that I have heard here today were debated—I did not expect that we would come here today and have to be this long in a debate on which most people had already given their opinions. However, I did expect what turned out to be a rough day when I heard that the Second Elected Member for George Town said, on the radio, that this was going to be a week in which the Government “could prepare itself for acrimonious debate”. It certainly has been that, and, in my opinion, sometimes worse.

In opening, the Second Elected Member for George Town said he expected me to have outlined the Commissioners' Report. Mr. Speaker, I repeat: We had gone through that over and over again. There was no need for me to have done otherwise; therefore I thought to keep the debate brief.

The Member started off by saying that we would create divisions in the country, in various ways, if we attempted to implement “one man, one vote” in George Town before implementing it in West Bay. I have to ask, why will creating the system in George Town first create a division, if they say that “one man, one vote” is the right way to go? To briefly address this matter, there is no answer to that question. The fact is that division can only be created if those Members on the other side go out and do that. The Government has simply agreed with what they have asked for.

They say that we put in place an expensive proposition. I do not know how expensive it has turned out to be; I have not seen the cost, but they have been in the forefront asking for all these matters and issues to be addressed. They wanted the Boundary Commission in the first instance. The Leader of the Opposition was the Minister who was in charge of the Government at the time when the whole proposition of modernisation began. When they had put in place their supporters as the Commissioners, on and on it went.

Did they not give thought to the expense at the time? How much more expensive it would have been if we had acceded to the request for a referendum!

“At what price democracy”—that is correct. How can you ask the question, “At what price democracy” while complaining about the expense? There is no waste. The system is here for us to use, and we have simply said that the people in certain areas are not ready. The worst thing that we can do with the system is to try to shove it down people's throats—those who do not want it at a General Election or, in fact, at any point. That is the worst time; that would be undemocratic. Of course, they do not know that, because they see democracy looking through a glass dimly. They see democracy out of rose-coloured glasses.

Another point has been raised about single-member constituencies. As usual, the Opposition have been talking out of both sides of their mouths. On the one hand, they support it, and on the other hand, they do not. Single-member constituencies, they say, have been tried and tested. It is true; they have been tried and tested, but where? Not in the Cayman Islands. Our system is tried and tested; we have not had any fallout from it.

They went on to say that East End and North Side have feelings of being second-class citizens. Why would the people in those districts feel that? Nobody has complained to me, and I have not heard it on a widespread basis that there was any feeling that the good people of East End or North Side were second-class citizens. As far as I am concerned, some very good people are there—upstanding citizens of this country.

Mr. Speaker, they asked a loaded question. Trying to create strife, they say, “Why is it that those districts, of East End and North Side, should have one vote, and West Bay four?” Mind you, they are only dealing with West Bay now, but that answer is simple. If those districts were bigger (not necessarily as big as West Bay; East End does not need to be as big as that—they could have been the size of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, for instance) they might have had two representatives. It is obvious why West Bay has four Members, and obvious why we have more Members than East End and North Side. Blind Bartemaus could figure that out. We have more people. West Bay has approximately 3000 voters—that is only the voters. How many does East End have? How many does North Side have? They have 500 and something votes, and you want two people up there?

On this matter that it is self-serving and not based on principle, I suppose they are talking about the coattail effect, because I have heard that often today. Although the Second Elected Member for George Town talks about the coattail effect, he said that “one man, one vote” is essential for better representation.

Mr. Speaker, let us look at the contradictions in what he said. If “one-man, one vote” gives better representation, then George Town would be better off, would it not? That must be the logical conclusion one would come to, from what he said. If “one man, one vote” gives better representation under single-member districts, then the logical conclusion must be that George Town would be that much better off in the next standing, and have six. Where is this bias that they want to talk about?

It is also foolish for anyone to base their argument that we should have “one man, one vote” on the grounds of the effect of a popular person, who can bring in a team, or a group, with him, in a General Election. The fact is that when you have a good group of people associating together on one platform, with the same aims, and the same objectives, they all complement one another. That is what happens when you run together in a team. If you have a very popular person among them, he is likely to gain more support for them. That is the so-called “coattail effect” of which they say they are scared, but what is wrong with that? Why is it such a bad thing to have happen? I would want to associate with people who could complement and help me.

We have heard about coattail effects in every part of the world. Reagan, other presidents—sweep! Clinton—sweep! They made a “clean sweep” practically. In other words, they took their individual parties through because of their popularity. The same thing happened in the United Kingdom with Blair, who was so popular that he took his party through. What is so bad about the coat-tail effect? I simply do not understand what it is they are talking about. If one person is so strong, and so popular, that he can bring in a team or a group, then that same Member will use his influence to get the same support for his colleagues in the party system, with “one man, one vote.” If I am popular in West Bay South, or in all of West Bay, no matter how much they split up the constituency, my popularity will exist throughout the district, where people will be voting in each constituency. Nobody can tell me that it is any different, because that is a fact.

If you have strength, politically (if people respect you, in other words, because it boils down to your accomplishments and the respect they have for you), and if you are popular, then no matter where they put you, you are going to have that influence, whether you are in a party system, a team or a group. It makes no difference. This is an attempt to scare up people that, because someone is strong in one district, it is a bad thing, because he can take others on. I need to tell the Elected Member for East End, who ran out of here, and who had so much mouth just now that he could not stop talking, a little bit. I hope he comes back in, Mr. Speaker; I am going to save it. A popular person will use his influence to get the same support for his colleagues.

Mr. Speaker, the people would vote for those persons they thought would be supported, to get unity. That is another reason why they vote in blocks. No matter whether I am in West Bay South, West Bay North, West Bay East, or West Bay Central: if I am popular, it means that my work has been recognised and they respect me. To get the unity to help me, they are going to support the people who are with me, but how will that help West Bay more than George Town? I do not understand the members of the Opposition making this big racket, because the First Elected Member for George Town had 70 odd percent of the vote, which meant that he was the most popular person. For whatever reason, he only dragged the other man with him. It meant, however, that the people had that much respect for him to carry that one with him.

If he cannot get that same support in a different situation, it means that he has lost support—that is all it means. It means that he has lost his persuasiveness, that people see that he is not effective, and that the people are saying, “It is no good supporting him, or anyone else who is running with him.” That is how it will be. That is the common sense part of it.

Mr. Speaker, it does not matter how much they holler and scream, or use all sorts of antics and semantics to say that what the Government is doing is wrong; it does not matter how much they try to insult me by trying to make the public believe that I am misbehaving in the House. I have seen them do that; I know what they are doing.

Mr. Speaker, the bare fact is that we have a problem. The United Kingdom would like us to modernise and go to “one man, one vote.” Some people want it; some people do not. We believe, as a Government, that the Opposition wants the offer we have made, in trying to satisfy the Opposition and start the modernisation the United Kingdom wants, while trying all sorts to satisfy our people. George Town indicated that they supported it, or so the Commissioners said. The Second Elected Member for George Town, who is screaming loudest that he does not want it, now, was the Member screaming louder than anyone else, before, about why George Town should have it. Why do they believe that it is such a great wrong today?

If the system starts in George Town now, we give the other districts more time to see it work in George Town over the period 2004-2008. I know that they have used a lot of lame-brained excuses about why it should not happen. That is the problem that we have.

Mr. Speaker, they can say how many people were at this meeting, or that meeting, but the fact remains that they went out to West Bay, and carried in a bus with people in it, and they only had 52 people. We have had many meetings in our district, with many people. We had, at the last meeting in our district, over 150 people. At our meeting in Cayman Brac, there were 150 people there. In Bodden Town, we had close to 90 people there. We have never heard anything that leads us to believe that there was general support in any of those districts for single-member constituencies. The Opposition went to West Bay, dragging people up on the platform with them. They got 52 people: the hardest core of those who would never support me, no matter if Christ was sitting with me. That is democracy. [Pause]

I will tell you about sense, Mr. Speaker, if that Member wants to know about sense. The Second Elected Member for George Town said that they were sensible people. Perhaps they are, but is he saying that all those 1490 odd people who voted for me last time were fools? I do not think so.

However, I know they do not have any regard for West Bay. It is not today that I learned that; I knew it a long time ago, about that young man.

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin Jr.: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, are you rising on a point of order?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: On a point of order, Sir, yes. I have let the Honourable Leader of Government Business go on, unchallenged, with statements that are simply not true. However, when he says, as a statement of fact, that I have no regard for West Bayers, I must challenge him. I am married to one.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, I would like to know what section of the Standing Orders you are referring to as a point of order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, he is misleading the House. He stated, as a fact, that I have no regard for West Bayers. He is not entitled to do that, Sir.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Honourable Leader of Government Business, I would ask you to refrain from any such accusations.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I am not going to argue with the Speaker. It is far too late in the night, and too early in the Speaker's tenure, for him and me to get into an argument at this point, argumentative though I could be.

Mr. Speaker, when I said that 1490-odd people voted for me, and that those who were there at his party meeting were but a few who would oppose me if Christ were with me, he said that they were sensible people. I said, “Are you saying that those people who voted for me are not sensible?”

What conclusion could I draw from that, Mr. Speaker? They have been sitting over there making their dirty remarks, and they think they can get away with it. I challenge him to say how he could otherwise have said it.

The Speaker: Please continue, the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on the matter of the coattail effect, much reference was made, and has been made, over the past several days of the meeting of this House, about West Bay. I said before that if the people want me back, then they will put me back. The Second Elected Member for George Town cannot do anything about it. That is why that Member gets so upset, and why there is so much anger. That is why his speeches are so laced with anger. He held up one newspaper, read the editorial from it, and talked about ethics. Ethics, Mr. Speaker?

Look at the editorial; I say no more. He said that the editorial summarises, quite nicely, his arguments—the Governor should do something. To tell you the truth though, I am loath even to mention it, because I have not paid that newspaper, or its editor, any mind. One of these days, I will have to say more from this Table, but I will not do so now.

What is the Governor going to do? The Governor can tell the United Kingdom that some people want single-member constituencies and some people do not want it, but what is he going to do? What is he going to say, other than that? He cannot say a piece more, and he has not said anything, because the United Kingdom has said that this is a local matter—that is why. There is nothing for him to say, because this is our system; this is our country. He cannot say anything. If the editor of that so-called “newspaper with ethics” knew what he was talking about, he would not even write about what the Governor could do about it.

Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Opposition what they have done to enhance this country? All the bamboozling in the newspapers about McKeeva Bush is not helping the country move one iota, progressively. They have not done anything—they have not offered anything—to help this country. We have had, throughout these three years, to battle. They are talking about shame; they are talking about self-service. We have had to battle throughout these three years, with a worn-out system, to try to make things better, even when the system was screaming to be changed. Every single one of them, over there, who understands anything about the governmental process or the system under which we operate, knew it.

Even when we were being abused by an Attorney General (which they say they saw, in their professional capacity, whatever that meant), they blocked and disrupted us, in any fashion they could. They did not come with any help or assistance for the Government.

I have had to tackle issues, and so have other Ministers and Members of the Cabinet, that really matter to this country, such as saving our financial sovereignty, and dealing with our international obligations. What did they do to help us, but to block us when we could have started on the way to modernisation? All you could hear from the People’s Progressive Movement was, “No, we are not doing it. Our leader is not the Leader of Government Business. We are not supporting anything that the Government wants to do.”

The bare fact is, Mr. Speaker, that if their leader were the Leader of Government Business, the Constitution would have been amended from last year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, we need to change the tape, so if you could, give us a couple of minutes. I would ask all Honourable Members to please remain in your seats while the tape is being changed. Thank you.

[Pause]

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, you may continue, please.

Point of Order

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, Sir.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town, please state your point of order.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Leader of Government Business stated that he can say, as a matter of fact, that had the Leader of the Opposition been the Leader of Government Business, the Constitution would have been changed a long time ago. He is not entitled to say that as a matter of fact. If that is his opinion, that is another matter, but to say it as a statement of fact, he has to adduce evidence of it, as you, Sir, have made very plain to us today. He is not entitled to state that as a matter of fact, and he must therefore withdraw it.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, do you have supporting information to corroborate that statement?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Mr. Speaker, I do not have anything black and white. What I have is a good memory, and what I know is what I saw taking place before my eyes. What I know is who was appointed; what I know is who those appointments were supporting. I also know that if I had not taken over in November 2001, there would have been some agreement to get some changes in the course of this term. That is what I know. I do not have it in black and white.

The Speaker: Is that in your opinion, the Honourable Leader of Government Business?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Oh yes Sir, in my opinion.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Elected Member for East End said that we had agreed to change our position because I wanted something. As I said, we wanted some implementation in order to deal with some matters in Government. I went to the country on television, in public meetings, at the Chamber of Commerce, and also on the various radio stations. I said it because the fact is that all of us, in Government, were feeling the pressure. If we had been able to get two more Ministers last year, we would have been in a better position. The work would have been done, and we would not have been spending the amount of time that we spend, in the Glass House, on various issues, because the work would have been spread around.

I am convinced—because of what I see—that, had there been changes made, we could have been dealing more effectively with the United Kingdom. Had there been changes made, we could have dealt more effectively with an Attorney General who was adamant that he was not going to leave the country. What did the Opposition, in their manoeuvring, do to help us? Had we a different constitution, we could have dealt more effectively with the situation—but no. There should be no changes. That was not the way the Constitution started. It was not the way the modernisation process started, with Governor Smith, and the appointment of the three Commissioners.

Mr. Speaker, I have nothing to hide, because I am telling the truth. I listened at length to the Elected Member for East End. He went on about the coattail effect, and said that he had no experience of coattails. That was such an awful thing, according to him. He does not know how lucky he is that the Leader of the Opposition was supporting the third candidate in East End. Had that not been so, he would not be here today. The numbers show that the incumbent, at the time, would have won. Does he not understand that? The facts are the facts, and reality is reality, but he comes talking about coattails. He did not have the coattail; he had the seat. He did not need coattails.

Mr. Speaker, they say that democracy is under threat in the Cayman Islands: where? The People's Progressive Movement have submitted that there is not evidence of a majority of support for single-member constituencies, yet the People's Progressive Movement is supporting single-member constituencies—after admitting that there is no evidence of public support for it. They are supporting what they want, not what the people they were elected to represent want.

What they are saying is, "We do not have evidence to show that you, the people we represent, want single-member constituencies, but we are going to give it to you anyway. We are not here to do what the majority want, but what we want."

Mr. Speaker, the Second Elected Member for George Town is saying that they want a referendum. That is not what the Elected Member for East End said. That is why they are on that side, and we are the Government. They could not make up their mind as to where this country should go, and what it should do, and there lies their problem.

The People's Progressive Movement keep saying that the reason for the change of the Government's position, pertaining to single-member constituencies, is not good enough. Now, Mr. Speaker, we truly understand why they do not think it means anything that they are unsure what the people they represent want.

According to them, we should force the people into it, even if they do not want it. That is what they are saying. Democracy is under threat. Democracy is under threat from the People's Progressive Movement. If they were the Government, this is exactly how they would operate.

Since the results from the Commissioners are inconclusive, our decision, on this side, is based on feedback from us, the representatives of the people. If we are doing our job, then we should know what the people we represent want.

The four representatives for the district of George Town say that, from their feedback, the George Town people are receptive to the change to single-member constituencies.

In West Bay, all four representatives for the district say, from our feedback, that the people definitely do not want to change to single-member constituencies.

In Bodden Town, two of the three representatives said that their people did not support it, so it is not just the two on our side who said it. I am going to tell you something else, Mr. Speaker. Although I say two, I challenge them to say that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town did not stand here and say that he could find no support for it from the people of Bodden Town. He said that, and if that has been changed, he is sitting in his seat and can say so. He said so here.

Both of the representatives for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman say that their people do not support it.

The Elected Members for East End and North Side say that their people are happy with it. Historically, they have been happy with it, because they have only ever had one.

Mr. Speaker, what this equates to is good representative Government. What the United Democratic Party is proposing is to give the people who want them single-member constituencies, and for those who do not want them to keep what they have.

This is democracy: giving the majority what they want. You cannot change democracy, no other how. In a democracy, the minority has a say, but the majority rules. We talk of the "essence of democracy". That is the essence of democracy.

It is not a coincidence that what the representatives have found their people want is the same feedback that the Boundary Commissioners found, during their exercises. You cannot change that fact, no matter how you try to twist the figures, as I heard the poor Elected Member for East End trying to do, and getting lost in it.

Mr. Speaker, the United Kingdom has sent down a draft Constitution, which means that they have accepted that the Constitutional Modernisation Checklist has been complied with. Otherwise, they would not have sent the proposed new draft Constitution.

If the Opposition believes that that is not fact, then they should tell me otherwise. I am not saying that the United Kingdom did not expect for other things to come into play—that could never be so. They sent the Checklist, but by God, there would be other things that would arise during the course of debate and the examination of the various issues.

The Opposition can use all the big words they want; they can criticise us all they want, but the fact is that we are doing what the people want.

In closing, there is one other concept that needs defining, especially for the Opposition, and that is the term “split votes”. In a multiple-representative constituency, electors are able to vote for the candidates of their choice. They are not obligated to vote for all those who run with the person with the biggest coat-tail. That is not necessarily going to be the case. That person, as I said earlier, will have some—

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, we have reached the hour of 8 pm. Do you propose to be closing off shortly?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I will stop there.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: May I have a motion for the adjournment, Honourable Leader of Government Business?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment, at this time, until 10 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until Thursday, 27 November at 10 am.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 6 pm the House stood adjourned until Thursday, 27 November 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
27 NOVEMBER 2003
10.50 AM
Seventh Sitting

The Speaker: I will call upon the Elected Member for East End to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales, and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.53 am

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS
(Deferred)

The Speaker: I have received information that Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks will be sworn in during the afternoon sitting, so we will defer this item until that time.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Economic Report January-June 2003
(Deferred)

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I would like to seek the permission of this Honourable House to defer the tabling of the Economic Report for the period, January-June 2003, until the earlier reports for the period, January-December 2002 are tabled. The first quarter of 2003 can be tabled at the same time. Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: The question is that the Economic Report January-June 2003 be deferred until tomorrow's sitting. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Report deferred until Friday 28 November 2003.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for late arrival from the Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, and the Elected Member for North Side.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS
OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have not received any notice of any statements by Honourable Ministers and Members of the Cabinet.

Suspension of Standing Order 14(3)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, would you suspend Standing Order 14(3)?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(3), in order that Government Business take priority.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(3) be suspended in order that business other than Private Members' Motions is given priority on the Order Paper.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. So ordered.

Agreed. Standing Order 14(3) suspended.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 6/03

Debate on the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business is continuing. I would say here that after the completion of the winding-up by the Honourable Leader of Government Business, we will be moving into Committee. The Motion will then be taken in a similar manner to what was done with the proposed new draft Constitution.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday, I had nearly completed my contribution and I do not propose to be long at this point. However, quite a bit was said by the Elected Member for East End about the Bermuda situation. He quoted, at length, matters pertaining to the Report of the Constituency Boundaries Commission for Bermuda 2001/2002, but I can tell him, and this Honourable House, that there was no headlong rush in Bermuda to get to "one man, one vote", at which they arrived earlier this year. I wonder whether he understands how long it took Bermuda to get to where it is today, as single-member constituencies, and where Bermuda came from.

I did some background checking on this, and in 1938, Bermuda had nine parishes. The right to vote was afforded only to male free-holders, or land owners. If a person owned property worth over £60 in whichever parish he lived, there he could run. There were four seats in each parish, so one person could cast as many as 36 votes. Of course, down through the years, there have been some changes, but nothing much until 1968. They would hold somewhat the same position, but reached the agreement of having four seats (the same four seats to a parish) split into two constituencies—two seats to each constituency. That was what I had proposed before we compromised with the Opposition: that we would take the four-member constituencies and split them into two. That was the phased-in approach. However, the Opposition would have none of that, if they remember. They did not want that, either.

Bermuda came from a position of around 36 votes for each person (if he owned land), down to 1968, when they agreed to four seats per parish—the same four Members per parish—but to split the parish into two constituencies with two seats each. They went from 1968, until this year, when they changed to single-member. They took 35 years to get to where they are today—"one man, one vote".

Therefore, there was no headlong rush by Bermuda to get to where they are, and they came from a very pitiful position. The world looked on and some people said it was the wrong position. One person could vote 36 times, simply because he owned £60 of property in his parish, from 1938 to 2003 (and I only went back to 1938). There was no headlong rush by the Bermudians. Therefore, in using them as an example to say, "Look where they are today; this is what they did with their Boundary Commission in one year", we must look at where they came from, and how long it took for them to get to where they are.

Mr. Speaker, the Elected Member for East End said that the proposal for single-member constituencies as a phased-in process in the district of George Town is unfair to him and his district. I do not understand why he tries to make everything personal to him. I guess he is seeking some kind of sympathy, but certainly there is no unfairness to the good people of East End. How could he draw that conclusion?

For that matter, I hear the Elected Member for North Side talking, but there is none to her either. There is none! East End and North Side have one representative, and they have one vote, for one person. That is, and always has been, the case—at least for the past 40 odd years. It will not change for the next election. How is that going to be unfair to them? If the districts were big enough to get two representatives, then they would have had two votes. If they had three, they would have had three votes—or up to three votes, because there is no mandatory requirement for anybody to cast four votes in any four-member, or multi-member, constituency.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, none of those districts will suffer any changes, or any less democracy than what obtains in others. The essence of democracy is for people to have franchise, free of unwarranted or illegal pressure. The essence of democracy is that they can choose their representative. The essence of democracy is for that representative to give good representation, and to be accountable to his people. If anyone can say that that is not the case in this Honourable House, they are completely wrong, and not telling the truth.

Before I close, what we are proposing for the George Town district is rational. I will get to that in a minute, but I would like to refer to something I said on Friday, if I may, about the Commissioners. It seems that some people look at the debate of this Honourable House, and read all kinds of things into what is said. On Friday, I spoke about the involvement of a Commissioner in what I, and many other people in this country, see as the political fray—getting onto a political platform with politicians berating their opposites, or the Opposition berating the Government, and the Commissioner himself making political remarks. Mr. Speaker, I said what I did about the process on Friday and that stands. I do not change from that, but what no one should try to read into it is that there was an attack on the Commissioner's honesty, or on his family's integrity. There was no such attack on his personal integrity.

We have a problem. The United Kingdom would like us to modernise. From where I stand personally, and where I have been these past 20 years; from what I see, and the way I have seen the Government grow; from the problems that have changed from one year to the next, and the pressures that we are under, we need to modernise.

In 1992 I said, "No," to the Chief Minister system. I said, "Let us take a half-way step; let us get to the point where we can say that we have somebody who can lead the Government, so that people can say, 'He is the leader'". I offered the words "Leader of Government" because that is where Bermuda went first. When I went to the public with that, I think the whole Island understood it, based on the vote, and that is where they went. However, I did say that would be a stepping-stone to the Chief Minister system. It has been ten years—ten years.

In 2000, everyone in this House, who was elected, went back to the country and said, "There should be modernisation; there needs to be a change in the system of government. The system of government is not working according to the problems we face in modern-day Cayman". The people supported us on those changes. It went from one thing to the next after that, but I stand here to say, without any fear of successful contradiction by anyone, that had I not been the Leader of Government Business, you would have had some changes by now. Be that as it may—no changes. We compromised; we backed off our positions to keep the peace, and to keep the Cayman Islands from looking as though it were in some sort of turmoil—for no other reason. We got to the point where we went to the United Kingdom and we still said, "Let us have some of these things implemented. Give us two Ministers with whom we can work, and change, and get some of the workload off". Mr. Speaker, the Opposition would have none of that.

We came back with a Constitution.

I have to wonder about this, Mr. Speaker, I wonder often. However, I know why: I was told why in the United Kingdom. I did not agree with their position on the Attorney General or the European Union; therefore, my Government would suffer because of it. That is what I was told, and I had to wonder, when the draft Order in Council created a few things that they wanted, such as the Boundary Commission, why the Opposition Leader was being appointed as "Opposition Leader"—the nomenclature that is used in independent countries and in dependent territories. However, that is the constitutional nomenclature: Leader of the Opposition, the person who enjoys the support of the minority party, as the Leader.

Why were they giving him that appointment? He was appointed to that position because, as the Order in Council read, he was the leader of the minority party in the Assembly.

When it came to the appointment of the Leader of Government Business, they left it at that—no change. Fine! When I was in the UK as the Leader of Government Business, they referred to me as "Chief Minister". They have gone, in recent times, from the equivalent, to that. However, the glaring point in that Order was that I was supposed to be appointed by the Governor, in his sole discretion—not because I led the majority party, but whoever he thought could get the majority support, not of the majority party, but of the House. All sorts of things could have been done with that. I rejected it, and the party rejected it. They changed their position and made it so that the Leader of Government Business, under the Constitution now, is appointed because he is the leader of the majority party in the Assembly.

We went from there, Mr. Speaker, to talk to our people and we polled various organisations. I must congratulate the Caymanian Compass for doing an excellent job of printing every aspect, week by week, of the draft Constitution as it had come back. We went out, sat down, and talked, so there was a whole educational process. The people in the various areas took their positions—as many as chose to. People in our district—over 100, or 175 at a meeting at a time—said, "No, we do not want to go this route". I was saying, "Look, this is what I support. I am your representative, but this is what I support. I want, then, to go to a phased position, so that at least I will have more time to talk to you in regard to "one man, one vote"

The people in George Town who came out, and the party that holds the majority now in George Town—the Opposition's party—said, "We support it; it must come. "One man, one vote" must come". Therefore, Mr. Speaker, we tried to compromise again by saying, "Okay". The public at large, in some areas, were saying, "No, we will allow you to have your district "one man, one vote"—a phased-in process". We hoped that they would have accepted it, but by God, they are not convinced yet. They read something else into it.

Where are we, Mr. Speaker? Some people want it and some people do not want it. We believe that the offer we have made, trying to satisfy the Opposition and start the modernisation that the United Kingdom wants, while trying also to satisfy our people in the various districts, is the best way to go.

The Opposition wants it; those in George Town indicated that they supported it. The Second Elected Member for George Town, who objected strongly, is the one shouting most for it. We believe that it is the right way to go. If the system starts in George Town now, it gives the other districts more time to see it work in George Town, over the period of 2004 to 2008. I believe that is fair.

Mr. Speaker, I do not think that I can add any more to this matter at this point. Let us all remember that we work here for the good of the public, not for our likes or dislikes—not to do anything we think is best for “me”—far be that from the truth! I am asking no one to do anything for me. If the people in West Bay choose me and my party, they will do it on the basis of free and fair elections, when opposite and independent candidates will have their chance to come up against the Government.

I intend to represent my people as I have always done: to the best of my ability. That is what I have done these past 20 years; I will continue to do so.

Mr. Speaker, I stop at this point.

The Speaker: Honourable Members this Honourable House will now resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, with the exception of the three Official Members voting, to consider the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003, and then to report to this House that the Committee has considered the same.

House in Committee at 11.19 am

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, before we get to that aspect of it, if you look at section 16, Delimitation system, which names the seventeen constituencies, we had proposed to make a name change to the George Town North constituency, to “Seven Mile Beach”.

[Pause]

The Chairman: Honourable Members, we are going to take a five-minute break here, so that the Government Bench can organise certain procedural points. I would ask you to remain in your seats.

Proceedings suspended at 11.29 am

Proceedings resumed at 11.35 am

The Chairman: Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, as I said, we were on page 17 of the Report, dealing with the seventeen constituencies. The George Town North constituency was proposed for a name change to “Seven Mile Beach North”.

The Chairman: George Town North will be changed to “Seven Mile Beach North”. This proposed amendment is open for discussion.

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Mr. Chairman, the Opposition certainly recognises that many of the names proposed by the Commission will include certain areas that have, at present, their own names, so to speak, within districts. I believe the Government has conferred with regard to the specific areas within the district of George Town that we know are within that proposed constituency. Perhaps the Government might give some indication as to their thoughts with regard to areas such the Rock Hole area, and the Watlers Road area, which would be part and parcel of that.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The thought is that people in the Seven Mile Beach area, from what I gather, would like to remain "Seven Mile Beach". They wanted to make a change, and some proposals were made. We recognise that that would probably be a small constituency. Therefore, do we agree with that? The Commissioners mixed the two to make George Town North the size they had determined would be so many votes. It was a matter of trying to pacify both sides. If you look, from Watlers Road down has historically been called "Seven Mile Beach" or "West Bay Road". I would never presume to call the constituency "West Bay Road North" or "South"; therefore we came up with the name "Seven Mile Beach".

The Chairman: The approximate number is 737 people, Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I was just about to say that, Mr Chairman. If I may —

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, what I am saying is that if they had taken, for instance, what was traditionally known as "Seven Mile Beach" or "West Bay Road", you would probably not have had 700, so they threw in Watlers Road, and the area of the swamp that goes out straight to the North Sound.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, the dilemma is that the entire proposed constituency is 737 votes, as of July 2003. The land mass may be considered, because of the stretch on Seven Mile Beach. I am without the Minister of Education's empirical data, but I believe that in the areas we consider to be George Town, the voters number more than those on the West Bay Road. It is a dilemma. In other words, while I hear what you are saying, and this is not one about which we want to argue—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, we want to get it right.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Right, but there is a dilemma. If we were to look at sheer numbers, that may well be the reason why the Commissioners have come up with this name—because of the combination of votes for the area. I do not know this for a fact, because I did not discuss it with them, but if you take from what we would call Merren's/Pageant Beach, and come back this way, the number of voters is greater, I believe, than going down on the West Bay Road. The question is, given that scenario, what do you name it? That is the dilemma that I see.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: What would be your suggestion?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The way it is, is why I believe it was done like that. I hear that the people on the Seven Mile Beach strip might wish for recognition with regard to where they are, but there is a difficulty, I believe.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr Chairman, I think the points made by both sides bear relevance, and as stated by the Leader of the Opposition, there is a dilemma. I do not know if I would call it a dilemma, but at least it is something for discussion. It might make a satisfactory "what is in a name?" or a "rose by any other name" situation.

If we look at what was done in the case of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, we have Cayman Brac West and Little Cayman as one constituency. Perhaps "George Town North and Seven Mile Beach" might be the compromise.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: "George Town North and Seven Mile Beach"? I think that satisfies both sides, if there are no objections from the people in Watler Square up to Seven Mile Beach.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: I am certain that the other representatives, including the Chair—while I know that the Chair will not have a comment—appreciate what we are saying. The fact of the matter is that the majority of these people may not even know what we are talking about until after the fact. We certainly would not like to have to deal with that. I think the Minister of Community Affairs will appreciate what I am saying.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, is it agreed then, that the amendment will read "George Town North / Seven Mile Beach"?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I have no problem with that, Mr Chairman. As I said, that will be satisfying both sides. In the spirit of co-operation with the Opposition, we will go that route.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr Chairman, I would like to make a brief comment at this point. I would like to thank the Leader of the Opposition for that particular spirit of compromise, which allows us to protect the identity of the persons in those particular areas, and at the same time, protect the identity of the persons who see themselves as part of what has always been considered a more distinct community, which is the Seven Mile Beach community, as well. I think it is in this particular spirit that we need to continue to reflect upon the Report of the Cayman Islands Boundary Commission 2003, noting that we will eventually be able to move from a dual system, where we have single and multi-member constituencies, to having all single-member constituencies.

The fact that the district of George Town has been given the opportunity to have single-member constituencies is not something that we, as representatives of George Town, should resist. We also know that there are a lot of people out there who are still confused about the concept of single-member constituencies. We should do as much as we can to educate them as to exactly how it works. This particular compromise, with regard to the naming of one of the constituencies, suggests, perhaps, that the Opposition, in terms of their speeches, were not necessarily representing their true position, since their true position is that of compromise.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr Chairman.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr Chairman, I do not suppose that the Second Elected Member for George Town has to stop me, since he had over two hours to speak on this particular issue. I did not speak, because I felt that single-member constituencies were what the Elected Members for George Town had been advocating for some time. When I say this, I mean from both sides of the House. Therefore, the fact that we are going to have single-member constituencies in George Town really is a result of the actions of all the Members.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr Chairman, I do not wish to interrupt, but I would not like the Honourable Minister of Community Affairs to speak in that manner again, as though it is a foregone conclusion. I do not think we should be speaking in that manner—saying, “the fact that we are going to have”—for I do not know about that.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: I actually entered this discussion in a manner that suggested, in fact, that we seem to be acting like sensible adults, in terms of giving consideration to people’s political identities, but also realising the fact that the system has to evolve. The mere fact that the Leader of the Opposition seemed to have accepted a constituency name, to me, points at least 51 per cent in the direction that he accepts that this is a direction in which we are going. Otherwise, the name would not have been so important to him. He would have said, “I am not going to get into the naming of the constituencies, because I am not accepting the single-member constituencies”.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, as a procedural point, even though the Committees are normally less formal than the proceedings of the House, I would nonetheless like us to maintain the same discipline, so that when a Member is speaking, we allow the Member to speak without getting on the open mike and cross-talking with that particular Member. Remember, you are not addressing each other; you are always addressing the Chair. The Chair has to recognise the individual before the individual starts speaking.

Please continue, Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Borden: Mr Chairman, I have listened to both sides and I will crave your indulgence to introduce a little Shakespearean wit. “Tis the season to be charitable.”

May I respectfully suggest that we move on now?

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr Chairman, these proceedings in Committee can either be productive or they can deteriorate into the sort of cross-talk that just occurred. The point of the Committee now is to try to reach agreement, the Government and the Opposition both having clearly outlined what their philosophical positions are in relation to whether we move to single-member constituencies throughout the Islands, or whether it be limited to George Town. We have established quite clearly where we stand on that. There is no need, in my respectful submission, to do what the Minister of Community Affairs—who did not participate in that debate—has just done. We need not reopen those wounds. Let us stick to the technical aspects of it and get on with the business of the Committee.

The Chairman: Madam Clerk, would you please continue?

I believe, Honourable Members, that when the interruption was made by the Honourable Leader of Government Business on section 16, Delimitation system, on page 16, the Clerk had reached Appendix 1 on B1.

Madam Clerk, would you continue please —

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry. We have not finished on page 17, and there would need to be some reworking there.

The Chairman: Please continue, the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The names on page 17, which say: “West Bay Northwest, West Bay Central, West Bay East and West Bay South” would be the electoral district of West Bay, which would be a multi-member constituency. That will have to change.

Then you would have: “Seven Mile Beach/George Town North; George Town Central; George Town West; George Town South and George Town East”, with the six seats that are proposed—Prospect would be the sixth seat—as single-member constituencies.

The Chairman: To clarify: Is that new constituency, the renamed constituency, going to be called “Seven Mile Beach/George Town North” or “George Town North/Seven Mile Beach”? This is a small point, but it is necessary.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: “George Town North/Seven Mile Beach.”

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Even if for no other reason, it sounds better.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, would you repeat those amendments for the records?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, West Bay North, West Bay Central, West Bay East and West Bay South would remain –

[Inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Order, order, please!
Please continue, Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: . . . which would be the electoral district of West Bay, a multi-member constituency.

The Chairman: Honourable Leader of Government Business, you might want to repeat that, because you did say, “West Bay North”.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: North West.

The Chairman: Therefore, the first one—West Bay North West, West Bay Central, West Bay East and West Bay South—remains as a multi-member constituency.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: That is right, Mr. Chairman. Then you would have, to repeat, George Town North/Seven Mile Beach; George Town Central; George Town West; George Town South and George Town East and Prospect—six single-member constituencies.

Then, Mr. Chairman, you would have Savannah/Newlands, Bodden Town West, and Bodden Town East, which would remain as the electoral district of Bodden Town, and which would be multi-member constituencies.

Then, Mr. Chairman—

The Chairman: Please continue.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: You would have the electoral district of North Side, which is a single-member constituency presently, and will remain so in the new proposals, and the East End district, which is a single-member constituency now, and will remain so in the new proposals.

The Chairman: Please continue.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Cayman Brac West, Little Cayman and Cayman Brac East would remain as the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and be multiple voters.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, since this Report is going to the United Kingdom, would you wish to read it in the order it is here, so that it would provide better clarity for the people following it? I think it says Cayman Brac East, and Cayman Brac West, and Little Cayman.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: It says Cayman Brac West, and Little Cayman, and Cayman Brac East.

The Chairman: If you look on page 17 of the Report . . .

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: What I was looking at was the actual map that they had proposed, but since we are dealing with this page, let us read it as you have it, Sir.

The Chairman: The amendment would be applying to this.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Cayman Brac East, and Cayman Brac West, and Little Cayman would be the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and would be a multi-member constituency, as it is today, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: For the record, and so that it will be absolutely clear—I think the Leader of Government Business is finished with that section.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: For the record, the Opposition’s position has been already explained, and we will not go into all the details of that. We did not have a problem with the renaming of the constituency which, in the Report, is called, “George Town North” to “George Town North/Seven Mile Beach” but that is not based on the premise of single-member constituencies only for George Town. That is based on the premise of the Commissioners’ Report, which assigns names to each of the seventeen constituencies. That is the position that we accept from the Report.

Therefore, to make the record very clear, the Opposition does not have a problem with the change of name, but our position for single-member constituencies is throughout the three Islands—not just for the district of George Town. I just wish to make that absolutely clear.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. To be clear that I understand the position of the Opposition regarding the Boundary Commission's Report, would the Opposition support seventeen single-member constituencies throughout the Cayman Islands, including Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I can see the wheels turning. There is no other way that we can deal with the situation. As I mentioned before, we accepted that there were people in the Brac who had aired to us that they were not very supportive of it. However, our position, when we gave our Position Paper to London, was that we still had to support the "one man, one vote" concept; what the Boundary Commissioners have presented to us is what we have to support. If that is the question, then that is the answer to the question. For whatever purposes (the Member for Cayman Brac might want it for future reference), we have to make the point very clear.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the answer given by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, but I would like to make the point clear, as he said. My question was: Does the Opposition support single-member constituencies for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: If you—

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: It is phrased in a manner that can be answered with a "yes" or a "no". I would appreciate it being answered in that manner.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman—

The Chairman: Order, order, order! Order, please. I am going to ask you again, Honourable Members, please observe the discipline that we should be maintaining in the House. When one Member is speaking, please allow that Member to speak. I cannot hear both sides at the same time, when both sides are trying to speak on the microphone. It is going to be confusing. Remember these Hansard transcripts are going to be sent to the United Kingdom, and they will want to know what is going on. If we have this confusion, it will be impossible for them to decipher.

If the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac was finished with his point, I now recognise the Honourable Leader of Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I gave the Member for Cayman Brac an answer. He, by his own volition, chose to respond in the manner in which he did, which forces me to answer him in kind. What I will do for him, since he does not understand the Queen's English, is this: If he puts it in writing to me, I will answer the question, in writing, back to him.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: Honourable Leader of Government Business?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, I think the Opposition needs to co-operate with this because we are trying to get clarity as to what they are supporting. They need . . .

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I do. I would like to get some clarity as to where the Opposition Leader is on the matter of the district of Bodden Town. Cayman Brac . . .

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, perhaps because they want to confuse everything this morning, we will get confused. However, it is very important that there is clarity as to where they stand on the matter. I do not know anything about what is in Hansard. I am asking you a question directly: Do you support that or do you not?

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I can. You can question me.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, let me repeat again: You do not address a question directly to another Member. The question should be addressed to the Chair. The question directed to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is asking: what is his position in regard to the electoral districts of Bodden Town and Cayman Brac?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, only Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Chairman: Yes, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The question is whether or not they should be two single-member constituencies. If the Honourable Leader of the Opposition does not wish to answer that, then we can move on.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I am not trying to avoid the question. I answered the question, but the way the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac replied, it was as though he would choose for me how

I answered the question. I gave an answer to the question, and there will be a verbatim record that he can have.

Mr. Chairman, I am not looking a fight, but he should not come at me like that because it gets the other side of me. I am going to be very honest here this morning. I prefer not to get into those things with him. The answer that I gave, Mr. Chairman, is in the record. It has to do with our Position Paper, which we sent to London. That position was very clear. What I will do is to allow the Second Elected Member for George Town, who is the designated person responding to the Position Paper, to finish off the answer, in order to make it very clear for the Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr.—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Before I finish, Mr. Chairman, please do not let anyone come back, now, to say that I have to answer it. I am not afraid to answer anything, I can promise you. I am trying to avoid this, but the damage has already been done. Now, the choice is anyone else's.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, before you move on, please . . .

The Chairman: Honourable Members, I am going to take the statement now from the Honourable Leader of Government Business, followed by a statement from the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, I wait eagerly to hear the position, whether it comes from the Second Elected Member or not. I accept that he is the general secretary to the party; he has been doing most of the talking. If he is going to answer my question, then that is all right. I think the country is owed a clear answer as to what the Opposition's position is in regard to the electoral district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Do they support "one man, one vote", or do they not support it?

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I am very surprised that anyone is in doubt about what the position of the Opposition is in relation to this matter. The position is set out in the Position Paper that we prepared almost eighteen months ago, which was sent to London and given to the members of the Government delegation. We read from it in London.

I put the position in my debate on the draft Constitution and in the recent debate on this particular matter—the Report of the Electoral Boundary Commission. I spoke for two full hours on each occasion, and I really do not know why it is that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and the Leader of Government Business did not understand what I said. I tend to be quite clear about these things. For those who have not read what we gave them more than a year ago, I will read it again:

The Chairman: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Page 39 of our Position Paper, Electoral Constituencies, reads: "The Parliamentary Opposition believes that the issue of one man, one vote is the single most important constitutional issue that needs to be resolved to give full legitimacy to our democratic government. The present system in which a resident of George Town has four votes and but the residents of East End only one, is unfair and, in our view, undemocratic. We strongly support the proposal to move to one man, one vote."

"We see no basis or logical reason for the concept of one man, one vote to be phased in as has been proposed by the Government. It is a simple, generally well understood concept to which, we believe, the electorate will have little difficulty adapting.

"There has also been general support for the proposal of single member constituencies, the notable exception being the electoral district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman which has only approximately 840 registered voters. The concern in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, as we have understood it, is that the creation of two single member constituencies will divide the Island of Cayman Brac east and west and that this will be potentially damaging. There is particular concern that with the party system coming into being, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman could wind up electing a member of the governing party and a member of the opposition. Some fear that in that event the side of the island that is represented by an opposition member will not fare as well as the side represented by the Government member. In short, it is said that Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are simply too small in size and population to be divided.

"The Parliamentary Opposition has given much thought to the peculiar situation of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman which are geographically remote from Grand Cayman. We have also discussed the abovementioned concerns with a number of persons from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. If these fears are to be taken as representative of the wishes of the majority of the electorate in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, then we believe that a means must be found to reconcile them with the fundamental democratic principle, one man, one vote. Based on the representations made to us, we believe that this can be achieved by permitting Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to remain as one constituency, but that instead of each voter having two votes as is the case presently, each voter should be entitled to vote for only one candidate. The two candidates with the highest number of votes would be declared elected.”

That is the position we took more than a year ago. It is very clear.

The Chairman: I am going to make one major clarification and then ask the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to speak. She has been waiting for quite a while.

To summarise, your recommendation was that every district—the other five, excluding Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—should be subjected to “one man, one vote”. You made a special case for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman because of their peculiar positions, but it would be “one man, one vote”.

Therefore all areas—for clarity, each district—would be under “one man, one vote”, including Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, we prefaced everything we have said in relation to the constitutional change—particularly the contentious issues—with the point that we felt a referendum should be held on the contentious issues.

The Chairman: Before you get to the referendum—

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Not before, Sir—

The Chairman: Let us get to the point I am trying to make here. I am trying to get this clear and I do not want to have it clouded.

We are saying that every district, from what you read to the House, should be subjected to “one man, one vote”, even though there were certain conditions applying to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman because of their peculiar situation. However, the bottom line is—and this is what I need to make clear—that the recommendation of the Opposition is that each district should be subjected to “one man, one vote”.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: All right. Please explain why not.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, as I started to say, we have prefaced all of our positions in relation to these contentious issues, and we identified the issue of single-member constituencies as a contentious issue a long time ago. We said these issues should be put to a referendum. Failing a referendum—with which the Government has refused to go along—our indications were that there was, and still is, general support for the move to single-member constituencies, the notable exception being Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. We got a very clear message from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. To seek to reconcile their concerns with the concept of “one man, one vote” we put forward this proposal, which is that the district would still have two seats; they would still be one constituency, but each voter would only vote for one individual, with the first two past the post being considered to be elected. That is the position we took 18 months ago, Sir. It has not changed.

The Chairman: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, if I may?

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Can I ask that the Opposition table their Report while we are in Committee? Up until now that has not been done.

I think the Chair has already intimated that he accepts that this Committee is open.

The Chairman: This Committee is an open committee.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business, you were asking that the Report from which the Second Elected Member for George Town spoke be made available to all Members of the Committee. Since that is also being incorporated in the minutes of this meeting, I think that is fair.

I do know that the Members who went to London had copies in London, but all Members of the Committee here did not receive copies. Therefore, if the Second Elected Member for George Town would cooperate, I would ask the Serjeant-at-Arms to please provide copies.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say, if I may, that as far as I know, that Report has not been made public.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: As usual, Mr. Chairman, the Leader of Government Business is wrong. It has generally been made available.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Chairman, I will leave them if they say that their Report has been made public. I do not know about its being made public. We made our Reports public, but I do not know –

The Chairman: Gentlemen, I think that the Second Elected Member for George Town did give an undertaking to have copies made available. Therefore, I would now turn attention to the Honourable Minister of Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

A couple of facts: firstly, it was my understanding, as I sat here—and I stand to be corrected—that the Leader of the Opposition said that there would be 17 single-member constituencies. Having had the privilege of being cognisant of what their Position Paper said, I was seeking clarity on that. I still do not think that there has been clarity on that point. That is the first point.

I can do this in two ways, Mr. Chairman: I can stop and get a response, or go on.

The Chairman: If you would, stop there, because I must say that the Chair is still a little hazy on the position. The Leader of the Opposition did, in fact, say that he basically supported “one man, one vote” and 17 single-member constituencies. However, when I addressed that point to the Second Elected Member for George Town, he said that that was not the correct position. Therefore, I need to know exactly what the position is, for the record. We need to know.

If I can, I will address this to the Leader of the Opposition. Leader of the Opposition, are we saying that you support “one man, one vote”, with 17 single-member constituencies? We need to get that correct.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Chairman, I trust that you will be more accommodating, in that you will allow me to explain. I understand your question.

The Chairman: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I was just thinking back on what I said when we were talking about what the Commissioners had recommended. What I said was that the Opposition had no problem with the change of name of “George Town North” to “George Town North/Seven Mile Beach”. However, we did not agree with the Government’s position, which was that the district of George Town be divided into six single-member constituencies and the rest remain the same, and that what the Commissioners recommended, we would support.

The Chairman: That was the 17 single-member constituencies.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, that was what I said, and I know that was what I said. I accept that, but after I said that, I remembered the position that we had taken on the Position Paper. It is almost the same, but there is one small difference in it. I want to explain that.

The Chairman: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: You asked the question about “one man, one vote”, and I can answer that by saying that, as a matter of a principle, we—that is, the Opposition—would support the concept of “one man, one vote”, which is parity in the democratic process.

When we did our Position Paper, Mr. Chairman, it was based on feedback. One of the contentious issues was moving from the system we have now to single-member constituencies. Part and parcel of our call was a referendum on the contentious issues—that being one of them. If that were not going to be the case, then our position—regardless of whatever other positions were taken—would have to be that “one man, one vote” was what we were going to support.

In our various meetings throughout all of the districts, including Cayman Brac (we did not go to Little Cayman but we went to Cayman Brac on more than one occasion), we understood from several of the people who attended the meetings that they had their own specific difficulties. In instances like that, even if I have a difference of opinion from a conceptual point of view, it is difficult to say to them, “You are wrong in your thoughts.” Having taken all of that on board, we mulled it over, thought about it, and talked to some more people on the phone on more than one occasion to try to get some more views about it. What we ended up with is what was read by the Second Elected Member for George Town, which stays with the principle of “one man, one vote” throughout the entire voting procedure.

The exception, however, would be that some of the people in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman felt that, in dividing it into two different constituencies (the example they used was stated by the Second Elected Member for George Town), if one from each side were elected, then one constituency may get more attention than the other.

We then said that, understanding their position, we could see that if it were one constituency, but each elector could still only vote for one person, it would not change the principle. It would not change the voters in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman compared to the voters in Grand Cayman, in that they would still only be voting for one person. They would have two representatives, but it would be the first two individuals past the post at the end of the day. That is how we could reconcile our position with that, and not feel like there were dual standards for the voters. That was the position.

That might have taken a little while, and I know what I had said earlier on, but the position is based on our Position Paper, on reflection, and on listening very carefully to what the Second Elected Member for George Town read. I was in some haste to make sure that our position was different from the Government’s position, because we do not support doing George Town alone.

If that could also work in the Brac, then it would not be something with which we would have great difficulty. The reason we did not chime in on that all along is that I have already heard all the different things being said. That is another tear-up again. You would soon get a letter saying, “Let George Town have six representatives, but everyone votes for one person, too”. That is not something that makes any sense, because at the end of the day, the principle of “one man, one vote” and single-member constituencies is not about a specific district. It is about a system of governance. Does what I just said give any clarity to it, Mr. Chairman? Does that satisfy the question you were asking?

The Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition, I will pass on to the Honourable Minister of Planning, who, I think, wanted to comment on your reply.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I quite clearly understood the attempt by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, but I am still left with a deficit of two constituencies. If one takes the presentation that was given by the Second Elected Member for George Town, with the position that they have put out on page 41 of their Position Paper, then that would not leave us with 17 constituencies, but rather 15, which takes us down a different route. It would be 15 single-member constituencies, with the one being multi-member.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, what it would mean—

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Let me finish please. Thank you. Before we engage our efforts and concentration in the position as put forward in the Opposition's Paper, let me clearly say that I have had the opportunity—and I am sure the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac can speak likewise—to canvas the vast majority, if not all, of the constituents, of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I could not find even one person who would concur with what we would term a cannibalistic type of politics, as put out in the Opposition's Paper. We would in no way, shape or form, Mr. Chairman, be bringing forward any support for this position, as we are quite happy with the position that we have enjoyed for many, many years.

The Chairman: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Chairman, I am wondering if perhaps we have reached some new and uncharted ground, if the Opposition can now acknowledge that we can have one country, but two systems, and whether they have reneged, as well, on the position that that is unworkable. We are now hearing that they are willing to accept “one country, two systems” based on the concept of single-member constituencies in George Town, North Side and East End, but not in the other districts.

The Chairman: I will be going to the Second Elected Member for George Town first, but the Second Elected Member for West Bay has been waiting for quite a while.

[Pause]

Mr. Chairman: All right, if you defer: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I am not going to get into an argument, but I would like to remind the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay that the position we take is not new, although he may have just awoken himself to it. We published this position 18 months ago.

The Chairman: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I will give way again, Sir.

The Chairman: No, would you continue please?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Chairman, I would clarify one thing, as it is getting on to lunch-time now, and the temperature in here is getting warm. When the Second Elected Member for George Town said “18 months ago”, in terms of publishing the Report—and he has mentioned it a few times now—I think he actually means about 12 months ago. Eighteen months ago would have been sometime in February 2002.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, I believe that we have given this particular point a lot of discussion. I believe we do have a proposed amendment, which will be brought into a motion at the end of the Committee stage. I will read that again so that we are all on the same wavelength. I would ask each Honourable Member to pay attention.

It is being recommended that West Bay North West, West Bay Central, West Bay East and West Bay South will remain as a multi-member constituency, the electoral district of West Bay; that George Town North/Seven Mile Beach, George Town Central, George Town West, George Town South, George Town East and Prospect will be single-member constituencies with the name change from George Town North to George Town North/Seven Mile Beach; that Savannah/Newlands, Bodden Town West and Bodden Town East will remain multi-member constituencies in the electoral district of Bodden Town; that North Side and East End will remain as they have been, as single-member constituencies; and that Cayman Brac East, Cayman Brac West and Little Cayman will remain as two multi-member constituencies in the electoral district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business, do you have any other points on that section you wish to have clarified?

If not, Madam Clerk, would you please move on?

The Clerk: Appendix 2. Maps showing the boundaries of each constituency.

The Chairman: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: With your guidance, Mr. Chairman, I am looking at Schedule, Electoral Constituency Boundaries, with the written specifications.

The Chairman: This will be a further matter for the Supervisor of Elections to deal with in more detail, at a later point. We are here now, dealing only with the Boundaries Commissioners' Report as it is, but not to go into the details of the boundaries at this point.

The Clerk:

Annex 1	The Mandate of the Commission.
Annex 2	Names of Signatories to Submission to the Commission.
Annex 3	Population Growth.

The Chairman: Honourable Members, this concludes the debate in Committee. It is now 12.45 pm. We will now resolve back to the House. Please be seated.

House Resumed at 12.47 pm

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I propose to take the luncheon break at this time. We will need some time to prepare the Motion that will be brought by the Leader of Government Business when we return at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.48 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.01 pm

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS
OR AFFIRMATIONS

The Speaker: I would invite the Mr. Donovan Ebanks to come forward and be sworn in. Please stand.

Oath of Allegiance
(Administered by Clerk)
Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks

Mr. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: I, Donovan Ebanks, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors, according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: On behalf of the Honourable House, I welcome the Honourable Temporary First Official Member and would invite him to take his seat. Please be seated.

REPORT

Report to the House on the Committee's Amendments to the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: When we went into Committee, we did so with the intention of making a few changes to the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003. That has happened, Mr. Speaker. I will, for the report, Mr. Speaker, move the Committee Stage Proposal to amend the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003.

"WHEREAS, in accordance with the provisions of Standing order 19 (2), I beg to report that the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003 has been considered by a Committee of the whole House.

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands does approve, in accordance with the provisions of standing order 19 (3), the proposals set out in the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003 with the following amendments to the last paragraph of paragraph "16. Delimitation system" of the Report as follows—

"Proposed amendment to paragraph "16. Delimitation system."

"That the last paragraph of paragraph 16 of the Report entitled 'Delimitation system'

1. be amended by deleting "George Town North" and substituting therefore "George Town North/Seven Mile Beach"; and
2. reflect the following—
  - i. That West Bay Northwest, West Bay Central, West Bay East and West Bay South shall remain a multi member constituency as the electoral district of West Bay;
  - ii. That George Town North/Seven Mile Beach, George Town Central, George Town West, George Town South, George Town East and Prospect shall be 6 single member constituencies;
  - iii. That Savannah/Newlands, Bodden Town West and Bodden Town East shall remain a multi member constituency as the electoral district of Bodden Town;
  - iv. That North Side shall remain a single member constituency;

- v. That East End shall remain a single member constituency; and
- vi. That Cayman Brac East and Cayman Brac West and Little Cayman shall remain a multi member constituency as the electoral district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Speaker, these are the amendments proposed in the Committee, which has just completed its business. We further propose for those multi-member constituencies to come into effect, in 2008, as single-member constituencies. By that time, we will have been through the electoral process, with George Town being six single-member constituencies, and we will have some idea as to how that would work and how much more progressive it would have made the system

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business, is that a part of the Motion or that is just an addition?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, that is the understanding, Mr. Speaker, but if Members want to have it as part of the Motion, I have no problem with that.

The Speaker: Is it the wish of Members that this, which was meant to be an understanding among Members, should form a part of the substantive Motion? [Pause] Honourable Leader of Government Business, it seems that it should remain as an understanding.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, perhaps Members can say for themselves. I hear some cross-talk saying, "No", but I will leave it as such, because it was an understanding that that was what would happen.

The Speaker: I will now, Honourable Members, put the question on this Motion.
The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I just want to ensure that the proposed amendments are in two parts. I am wondering whether you would be prepared to take two separate votes, or whether it has to be dealt with all in one.

QUESTION PUT ON THE MOTION TO AMEND THE REPORT OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ELECTORAL BOUNDARY COMMISSION 2003

The Speaker: No, Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I will be dealing with this Motion as it is. The question is: "BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands does approve, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 19 (3), the pro- posals set out in the Report of the Cayman Islands Electoral Boundary Commission 2003 with the following amendments to the last paragraph of paragraph "16. Delimitation system" of the Report as follows:

"Proposed amendment to paragraph '16. Delimitation system'

"That the last paragraph of paragraph 16 of the Report entitled "Delimitation system"—

1. be amended by deleting "George Town North" and substituting therefore "George Town North/Seven Mile Beach"; and
2. reflect the following—
  - i. That West Bay Northwest, West Bay Central, West Bay East and West Bay South shall remain a multi member constituency as the electoral district of West Bay;
  - ii. That George Town North/Seven Mile Beach, George Town Central, George Town West, George Town South, George Town East and Prospect shall be 6 single member constituencies;
  - iii. That Savannah/Newlands, Bodden Town West and Bodden Town East shall remain a multi member constituency as the electoral district of Bodden Town;
  - iv. That North Side shall remain a single member constituency;
  - v. That East End shall remain a single member constituency; and
  - vi. That Cayman Brac East and Cayman Brac West and Little Cayman shall remain a multi member constituency as the electoral district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Speaker All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

The Speaker: I think the Ayes have it.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can we have a division please, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, would you call the Division?

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, would it oblige the Chair, if, in the Division, you could break them down singly, Sir?

The Speaker: Could you repeat that, Honourable Minister?

Hon. Roy Bodden: In the Division, could you break them down, and put a separate question on each one, Sir?

The Speaker: I think that should be in order.

Does any Member have an objection to that?

If not, let us continue by voting on each one individually.

The Honourable Minister of Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is not an objection, per se, but for your consideration. Since a division is a challenge to the Chair on a vote that was already put, it would logically follow, in my respectful submission, that the Division should be on the question that was put in its totality, as opposed to separate sections.

The Speaker: Thank you very much. Honourable Members, notwithstanding the sage advice I have received—with which I would have been inclined to go along, because of the very sensitive nature of the subject we are dealing with—I would certainly want to oblige the House by conceding to the point raised by the Honourable Minister of Education. Therefore, I will put the question on each section.

On the first question: That the last paragraph of paragraph 16 of the Report entitled “Delimitation system”—

1. be amended by deleting “George Town North” and substituting therefore “George Town North/Seven Mile Beach”.

The Speaker: All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: That the last paragraph of paragraph 16 of the Report entitled “Delimitation system” be amended by deleting “George Town North” and substituting “George Town North/Seven Mile Beach”.

The Speaker: In Part 2, the Motion continues: “That the last paragraph of paragraph 16 of the Report entitled “Delimitation system”—

2. reflect the following—

- i. That West Bay Northwest, West Bay Central, West Bay East and West Bay South shall remain a multi member constituency as the electoral district of West Bay;
- ii. That George Town North/Seven Mile Beach, George Town Central, George Town West, George Town South, George Town East and Prospect shall be 6 single member constituencies;
- iii. That Savannah/Newlands, Bodden Town West and Bodden Town East shall remain a multi member constituency as the electoral district of Bodden Town;
- iv. That North Side shall remain a single member constituency;
- v. That East End shall remain a single member constituency; and
- vi. That Cayman Brac East and Cayman Brac West and Little Cayman shall remain a multi member constituency as the electoral district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.”

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

The Speaker: I think the Ayes have it.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can we have a division please, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, Division. I would like to remind the House, again, that only Elected Members are voting on this issue.

Division No. 15/03

Ayes

Hon. W. McKeever Bush
 Hon. Gilbert A. McLean
 Hon. Roy Bodden
 Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly
 Mr. Rolston M. Anglin
 Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks
 Hon. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.
 Mr. Lyndon L. Martin

Noes

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts
 Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.
 Mr. Anthony S. Eden,
 Ms. Edna M. Moyle
 Mr. V. Arden McLean

The Speaker: The results of the Division are: 8 Ayes, 5 Noes, and 1 Absent. The Motion is therefore carried.

Agreed by Majority that the last paragraph of paragraph 16 of the Report entitled "Delimitation system" reflect the following—

- i. That West Bay Northwest, West Bay Central, West Bay East and West Bay South shall remain a multi member constituency as the electoral district of West Bay;
- ii. That George Town North/Seven Mile Beach, George Town Central, George Town West, George Town South, George Town East and Prospect shall be six single member constituencies;
- iii. That Savannah/Newlands, Bodden Town West and Bodden Town East shall remain a multi member constituency as the electoral district of Bodden Town;
- iv. That North Side shall remain a single member constituency;
- v. That East End shall remain a single member constituency; and
- vi. That Cayman Brac East and Cayman Brac West and Little Cayman shall remain a multi member constituency as the electoral district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman."

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 7/03

Licensing of Caymanian Craft Persons for taking and possession of Chitons, Periwinkles and Bleeding Teeth

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Private Member's Motion No. 7/03 stands in my name: Licensing of Caymanian Craft Persons for taking and possession of Chitons, Periwinkles and Bleeding Teeth. I am waiting for the podium, Sir.

The Motion reads as follows-

"WHEREAS the Cayman Islands lack locally made Crafts catered to the tourism industry;

"AND WHEREAS many craft persons utilise chitons, periwinkles and bleeding teeth as integral part of their craft work;

"AND WHEREAS the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) prohibits the taking and possession of these species;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) be amended to remove section 6(5) in its entirety;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) be amended to add "chitons, periwinkles and bleeding teeth" to Section 18 (1);

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the license for the above be granted to Caymanian Craft persons only, at a nominal charge.

I am happy to move such a Motion.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The question is: "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) be amended to remove section 6(5) in its entirety;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) be amended to add "chitons, periwinkles and bleeding teeth" to Section 18 (1);

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the license for the above be granted to Caymanian Craft persons only, at a nominal charge."

The Motion is open for debate. Does the Member moving the Motion wish to speak thereto?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

It has been noted by many that the Cayman Islands lack in locally made crafts. I recently had the opportunity to visit and converse with one such crafts-person here in Grand Cayman, and several in Cayman Brac. I was quite impressed with the capabilities, locally, to produce craft. Mr. Chester Watler, here in Grand Cayman, has proven that out of local products—out of local wood—much can be done. In my constituency of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the owners of Nim Things and many others, who have recently portrayed their craft work, and their potential, at the National Gallery showcase in the Brac have led me to be convinced, happily, that we have great potential in the Cayman Islands to do a lot more than we are doing in the form of craft work for the tourism industry. The industry is fantastic. It brings a lot of people, and it brings foreign exchange, but that is only enhanced and truly impacted if we produce things locally that will end up with that foreign exchange going into the hands of our Caymanians.

Recent amendments to the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) have placed the three items that are contained in this Motion—chitons, periwinkles and bleeding teeth—under section 6, which deals with prohibited items. There is another section of the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) section 18, the licensing section, where individuals can be licensed and still provide a type of control, and still aim to achieve what we recognise the need to conserve and preserve—the marine life—for future generations.

It is amazing the type of products that our craftspeople can make using chitons, periwinkles and bleeding teeth. I saw a set of earrings and a necklace made from chitons—what we call ‘sea beef’—out of which I never thought anything could be made. I was quite impressed and quite stunned at the beauty of these items.

What has made the situation even more difficult for the craftspeople is a particular section of the Law. Section 6(5) not only charges the individual who removes these items from the marine environment, but it actually reads as follows: “6(5) Any person who takes from Cayman waters or receives or has in his possession any – (a) chitons (b) periwinkles; or (c) bleeding teeth, taken from the Cayman Islands waters is guilty of an offence.”

Mr. Speaker, an offence under the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) carries with it a fine of up to $500,000. Therefore, the craftspeople have found that they cannot, themselves, sell these products, even from stock that they have already had. The traditional vendors, such as the National Museum, cannot buy them anymore, because they would be guilty of an offence to have them within their possession.

Mr. Speaker, chitons (for the sake of this debate, I will refer to them as they are locally known: ‘sea beef’) are items that are in plenty of supply. It is an item that we have never used as a mainstay, but now we have crafts persons who have found a productive use that is in high demand. The one crafts person in Cayman Brac who utilises this product told me of the many people who keep coming back each year requesting another item made from the chiton. However, he is not in the position now to fulfil their orders, because it will put him in violation of this particular section of the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision).

The use of periwinkles and bleeding teeth is commonly known throughout the craft industry, and many craftspeople have been affected on all three Islands. The recent effort of one of our Caymanians from the district of West Bay, Mr. Shaun Smith, as well as another Caymanian entrepreneur who has launched Joe Tourist, has given a market for local craftspeople to tap into the ever-growing cruise ship industry.

The National Museum has provided a great opportunity for crafts persons to demonstrate and display their items and when such items as bleeding teeth periwinkles or sea beef are used, it adds nicely to the visit of the individual who purchases them, because it has a story to be told. They are not only taking back a beautiful necklace, but they are taking back part of Cayman. Over a year ago I purchased from one of the craftspeople in the Brac a Caymanite necktie pin. Every time I wear that pin, I always boast that I am walking with a piece of the rock from Cayman Brac. Mr. Speaker, the visitors to our shores who leave with these locally made craft items that are Caymanian—Caymanian—will leave with the sound of Cayman; the smell of Cayman; the feel of Cayman; and a piece of Cayman with them. We need to encourage such craftspeople to utilise their God-given skills, and combine those with the God-given resources in Cayman to make local craft.

Mr. Speaker, this Government, the United Democratic Party Government, has done more for marine conservation, during our term, than has been done in many years. We have demonstrated that we strongly believe in the preservation of our marine life. The Leader of Government Business, the Minister of Tourism, Environment and Commerce, has led the charge, and has demonstrated that we are strong about protecting the marine environment. However, it is always necessary to have a comfortable balance between protection of the environment and the preservation of our culture and tradition, and what has made us Cayman.

I am pleased to be sponsoring two Motions here today. This is the first, and there will be a second one coming later, both aimed at trying to develop that balance—developing a balance in preserving the environment that will still be strong on preservation, but will allow our Caymanians to continue to benefit from the crafts that they have learnt, the skills that they have learnt, and the products that they have learnt to manipulate and make into attractive sellable items.

So often, we hear complaints about products bought in Cayman, and when you look at the back of them, they are made in China or somewhere else. I am hopeful that this Honourable Legislative Assembly in its entirety, from both sides of the aisle, will see fit to give encouragement and motivation to these craftspeople, to show our understanding of the plight that they face on a daily basis. It is not easy, especially in a constituency such as Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, where you do not have the type of volume that you normally have. These people take on these tasks—some out of their own homes, some out of their garages, and some from buildings on the side—all in pursuit of improving the product that we promote in the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to dwell on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, because it is from there that my motivation for this Motion comes. As you and this Honourable House in its entirety will be aware, there are many initiatives on the way, under the leadership of the Minister of Tourism; the new Minister of District Administration; the previous Minister of District Administration (now the Minister of Health); and previously you, yourself, when you were Minister of Planning. Mr. Speaker, these initiatives are geared toward developing the industry that we have as our solar—as our only—pillar, in our economy: the Tourism product. We look at trying to benefit from some of the 2 million tourists who come to these shores via cruise ships, we look at promoting Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to attract more stay-over visitors, and we look at improving air service to the Brac to facilitate better air lift to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, to improve the attractiveness and accessibility of these Islands.

Mr. Speaker, it is good to bring people to the Islands, but we must ensure that once we bring them, we have proper infrastructure in place to accommodate them and meet their demands for visiting a tourist destination—such as souvenirs and locally made crafts. I am not in the industry, so I cannot attest to this, but I have been told by many that a commonly asked question when visiting the Cayman Islands is: Where is your craft market; where can we buy local crafts?

As we know, there are efforts on the way to develop the local craft market here in George Town. I spoke yesterday with a gentleman from West Bay who is pioneering this initiative, and he commented on how often the visitors ask for local crafts. That is the same situation in the constituency of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Speaker, we must seek every way possible to meet that balance of protecting the marine environment, but allowing opportunities for our local people to develop crafts and utilise the products. The amendment that this Motion seeks allows that balance to occur. It removes it from the prohibited section 6(5), and still provides protection to these three items by protecting them under section 18(1), which is only accessible to those who are licensed by the Marine Conservation Board. The Motion even tightens it by asking for those licences to be restricted to Caymanian craftspeople. Mr. Speaker, as legislators, we are all aware that the reasons—the impetus—for the protection of these items was not about Caymanians. It was not about Caymanians removing these items for their own personal consumption.

Mr. Speaker, this amendment allows us to protect these species in our waters by allowing them to be fished or removed only by individuals licensed by the Marine Conservation Board. I would like to stress, for the sake of Hansard and the minutes of this Legislative Assembly, that these individuals are not becoming rich from local crafts. They are seeking to utilise their own skills. They are doing it out of pleasure, as a hobby, but they are not making any large sums of money. Under proper accounting systems, if they really accounted for and gave appropriate value to the time they put into these crafts, they would never be covering their costs.

I would like to stress that the fee that will be determined as a charge for the licence should be a nominal amount, such as $1, simply to facilitate that there is a process in place for licensing. It should not be set at a rate that prohibits individuals from achieving such a licence.

Mr. Speaker, I have presented to this House my motivation and my understanding of the Motion as the end result, if it is accepted by this Honourable House. I have presented to this Honourable Legislative Assembly the reasons why I think we should support this Motion. We all understand the time factors involved in our agenda for this week and next week, and the magnitude of work ahead of us, so I will not occupy any more time. I invite all Honourable Members to support this Motion. This Motion is good for our Caymanian people. It is not deliberately scheduled to be only for Cayman Brac. It is something that affects us all, because all craftspeople, on all Islands, utilise periwinkles and bleeding teeth in their craft-work.

Chitons are something probably unique to Cayman Brac, and for that I give a special plug. The use of chitons in crafts is a unique product for one location in Cayman Brac, and I give a special plug to anyone who would really like to see that product. It is a truly beautiful craft item, once properly polished.

Mr. Speaker, I now resume my seat. I invite this Honourable Legislative Assembly to support this Motion that has been moved. I thank the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay for seconding this Motion.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Motion No. 7/03, brought by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, is a motion that the Opposition can support. I have personally had occasion to talk to some of the individuals in that local craft industry regarding the desired accessibility of the items listed in the Motion. I too have seen the end product, and I have to admit that, as local craft, it certainly is an art unto itself. The end product is one that I am sure the tourists will be enticed to purchase, so without a shadow of a doubt, the few people who deal with these items, and make the various products that are local crafts for sale, certainly need to be encouraged in that area.

There are just a few observations—some minor—that should be taken on board. We agree that a nominal fee should be attached to the licence itself. When we speak to fish pot licences, the cost is $10 a year or something like that. While the users of fish pots are not craftspeople, it is part of the culture. So that there is no discrepancy or disparity in it, perhaps, we should bear in mind that situation, so that there are no complaints about what one costs and what the other does not cost.

The second observation we have made, Mr. Speaker (I am sure that everyone here, and the Department concerned, is cognisant of the fact), is that one of the major reasons these items were originally listed in section 6 of the Law as protected species was because it was the thought by the Department, as expressed to us, that such items were being taken without any regard at all for their ability to procreate and to proliferate their existence—meaning that their numbers were noticeably diminishing. Although it is not an item that I would have expected to see in the Motion itself, I think that when we speak to these licences, it is good to express, on record, that in dealing with these licences there has to be some mechanism by which applicants can prove they are indeed what they purport themselves to be—that is, dealing with the arts and crafts. It is not impossible for there to be some market developed for someone simply to gather them.

Mr. Speaker, there is another situation that is not impossible: We might get to a situation where some people simply gather and some people purchase to do the craft. That in itself is not necessarily something that is wrong. We need to be careful, in how it is developed, that the licences are issued and we are pretty safe with regard to being able to ensure that there is truth to the applications.

The other observation is: We would hope that periodically, the department responsible—the Department of Environment—would be able to do monitoring checks to ensure that stocks are not depleting noticeably, because those who are involved now are satisfied that the stocks are plentiful, and that there is enough for them to use in their arts and crafts and still allow the remainder to be prolific and not be depleted, I think we would want some mechanism to ensure that regular observations are made. It would serve them no purpose to have feast and famine, not realise what was happening and, after a short period of time, find that the stocks of these items are diminishing radically.

Those are observations, which we think need to be noted to ensure that these chitons, periwinkles and bleeding teeth—these three items in the Motion—can continue to be prolific, and that they abound throughout the various locations in the three Islands, as we now have them.

Mr. Speaker, since the Law itself came, there have been other observations made. Perhaps this Motion itself is not exactly the appropriate time, but there are a few other areas of the Law itself (similar to this one) that we believe might need some examination. We will deal with them at another time. I think it is fair comment to say that, with the best intentions in the world, after laws are made and they have safe passage through this legislature, it is only then, sometimes, that one realises their effect in certain areas. Therefore, you have to do what is being done now, which is quite fair. Perhaps in the near future, we might be able to look at a few other areas that may need attention.

Mr. Speaker, in summary, the Opposition is quite happy to support the Motion. We certainly look forward to seeing those individuals involved in the local crafts having the opportunity to harvest these items that they need, so that they can continue to produce the beautiful crafts that they make. I think that enough has been said, and we should move on. Finally, we are indeed happy that we can find commonality in a Motion of this nature.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much. I will be very brief, and say that we agree with the resolution the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac has discussed with the Department and the Ministry. In fact, I had quite a bit of discussion with the Department, and the Member took on our concerns and the recommendations from the Director of the Department. I would like to thank them for working with us on this matter, as I know that both Members from Cayman Brac had recommendations from their constituency in regard to this matter.

Regarding those things in the Law being monitored at a point: Mr. Speaker, these things are being monitored and that is why they were included in the Law in the first instance. The Department will continue to do that. I say no more, Mr. Speaker, but to say that we will work with the Members in order to assist these people who work in this area of local arts and crafts.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister of Planning.

Hon. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to render very brief remarks in support of my colleague, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac, on Private Member's Motion No. 07/03.

I realise that it was against the background of the intent for environmental—in particular, marine—conservation that this legislation was brought. However, seeing that at the time, I was in the Speaker's position, I did not have an opportunity to go on record as to my position. Needless to say, I am in full support of the balancing exercise, and would wish to congratulate the Honourable Leader of Government Business for his initiative in this regard, which has been recognised not only locally, but in the UK as well.

I would, however, wish to say that when one looks at the General Penalties section, under Offences and Penalties, as found in section 30—and with your permission, I would just wish to read it to get the background—it says: “Whoever contravenes this Law or any regulations made hereunder is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine of five hundred thousand dollars and to imprisonment for twelve months and in addition thereto the court so convicting may order the confiscation of any vessel or equipment that it is satisfied has been used for the purpose of committing or facilitating the commission of such offence or was intended to be used for such purpose.”

I read that, Mr. Speaker, because at a meeting we held in Spot Bay, where we dealt with various constituency matters, this section was brought to the attention of our constituency as a part of an information-sharing exercise that the responsible representatives carried out. It became very clear, shortly thereafter, that there are constituencies that have become very innovative in the craft area, and use chitons, periwinkles and bleeding teeth for their livelihood.

One gentleman in particular, Mr. Tenson Scott, at Nim Things, has been given the God-gifted talent of making some extremely nice crafts, which have been getting the attraction of the local persons from Cayman Brac as well as Grand Cayman, but in particular from the tourists who come from time to time to our shores. He was very much in fear (for the want of better terminology) that he would be faced with a maximum fine of $500,000, or probably imprisonment, and made representation to my colleague as well, and perhaps to other Honourable Members here in this House. Therefore, it is a delight to see that there is going to be support from both sides of the House in this regard.

This may seem like a non-priority issue, when compared to the other financial and perhaps more complex matters. However, seeing that this is a matter that relates to the livelihood of one of our local constituents, and perhaps some others in Grand Cayman, of whom I am not cognisant, I encourage the persons responsible for legislative drafting to give this issue a high degree of priority. Not only does the gentleman in Cayman Brac have stock in his craft that he should not be having at this time, but it also prevents his return. It places him between a rock and a hard place. I am grateful that the Honourable Leader of Government Business has taken cognisance of the fact that in the rebalancing exercise, this is something that can be put under the licensing department, as opposed to the prohibitions section of the Marine Conservation Law 2003 Revision).

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to say that at the time of drafting, which I trust will be in the eminent future—perhaps at a more appropriate time—my colleague and I could also have an opportunity to sit down with this side, and perhaps the other side of the House, for some other sections that are also having some detrimental effects to our constituency in particular, with a view to clarifying those as soon as possible.

I thank you for your indulgence, and I look forward to recording my support to this Motion.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Certainly, Mr. Speaker. Days like today regain my confidence in the legislative system of this country. As the Honourable Leader of the Opposition pointed out, at the time of passing laws, it is with all good intention, but many times it is only afterwards that we identify certain shortfalls, or certain coverage, that was never intended. It is always good that once we, as legislators, find those (once our constituents voice them, they have merit), we review them and we come back to the Legislative Assembly bringing appropriate changes, and both sides of the House support those changes.

Mr. Speaker, I listened quite carefully to the comments of the Leader of the Opposition on behalf of the Opposition Members, and I do think that the point in regard to the $10 per year license fee, to make it parallel and comparative to that of the fish pot, has significant merit. For those determining the appropriate fee through regulation, I would urge that cognisance be paid to that fee, and to the need to have some form of parity between the licences charged.

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition also mentioned the need to have some control, to ensure that those who were being licensed to remove these species from the marine life were actually using them for the intended purpose of craft. I would also submit that these individuals would be covered under Trade and Business Licenses for that particular item, which would be used for the qualifying criteria for the grant of the licence.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Leader of Government Business—the Minister of Tourism and Environment—for exercising his duty in representing tourism, as well as representing the environment, and bringing that balance together in the form of accepting this Motion on behalf of the Government. The Leader of Government Business has always demonstrated a true interest in working with the people of the constituency that my colleague and I represent, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. He, too, has heard the representation made on this subject, as he has had representation made to him at a public meeting in the Brac as well as privately. I think it says much about the United Democratic Party, and its leader, that he has seen fit to accept this Motion.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to thank my colleague, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, for verbalising her support for this Motion, which we both know affects our constituents directly. We look forward to its safe passage, and to the votes being cast from both sides of this House in support of this Motion.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is: BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) be amended to remove section 6 (5) in its entirety;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) be amended to add “chitons, periwinkles and bleeding teeth” to Section 18 (1);

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the license for the above be granted to Caymanian Craft persons only, at a nominal charge.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Private Member’s Motion No. 7/03 passed.

PRIVATE MEMBER’S MOTION NO. 8/03

The Protection of Diadema Antillarum Urchins

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Private Member’s Motion No.08/03, entitled The Protection of Diadema Antillarum Urchins, reads as follows:

“WHEREAS the Cayman Islands witnessed the near extinction of the Diadema antillarum urchin (long spine black sea urchins) in the 1980s;

“AND WHEREAS the population of the Diadema antillarum urchin has seen some resurgence in recent time, but the stock is still in need of protection;

“AND WHEREAS the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) prohibits the taking and possession of any urchins; and

“BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Section 18 (2) (c) of the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) be amended to make an exception for the collection of the black short-spine rock-boring urchins (Echinometra lacunter) for use as bait for line fishing.”

I am happy to move such a Motion.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great privilege to be able to second that Motion.

The Speaker: The question is: “BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Section 18 (2) (c) of the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) be amended to make an exception for the collection of the black short-spine rock-boring urchins (Echinometra lacunter) for use as bait for line fishing.”

The Motion is open for debate. Does any Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Earlier this morning, the Leader of the Opposition referred to my inability to understand the Queen’s

English. I have just challenged my ability to speak Latin, and a little bit of the Queen’s English. For the sake of this presentation, however, I will use terms with which we are more familiar: sea eggs, or more appropriately, the long-spine sea eggs, versus the short-spine sea eggs.

Mr. Speaker, again, as mentioned earlier, this particular Motion aims at a cultural tradition. In the constituency of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, we have individuals—in Grand Cayman also, I am sure, especially in the district of East End, and perhaps in West Bay—who swear by the use of the short-spine sea egg as an instrument to assist them in catching their fish. They will tell you that with that particular bait they can give you a guarantee that they will catch that day. Without that bait, they cannot give such a guarantee. I do not proclaim to be a fisherman, and for the limited fishing that I do, my bait is the soldier crab. I have seen the effectiveness of this particular bait.

Currently, the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) prohibits, under section 18(2)(c), the removal of any echinoderms. Sea eggs fall within that particular family. Mr. Speaker, that particular section captures much more than sea eggs and sea urchins; we need to preserve the protection of things such as starfish. However, both the long-spine and the short-spine sea eggs have seen a great resurgence, especially in Cayman Brac. The short-spine, which was never under threat, appears everywhere. A constituent has taken photos; I have some, but not here today. I will be happy to share with the Members the abundance of the short-spine sea eggs in Cayman Brac.

This Motion seeks one simple thing, and that is to allow our fishermen to use the short-spine sea eggs for the purpose of bait for fishing. Again, it seeks that balance between the protection of the marine environment and the preservation of a tradition, and to achieve that balance in a way that does not open up this particular species to unhindered abuse. The Motion prescribes that it would be allowed for the use of bait for line-fishing.

From an enforcement perspective, this gives it some teeth, because the enforcement officers would be able to make judgments as to quantity. Given the fact that it is an individual going line-fishing, he would be able to make assessments based on the individual. If someone is seen with those items, and is known to be a fisherman, he can then argue that he is using them in accordance with the amended law, for bait for line-fishing. If they are in the possession of someone who is not a fisherman, and who is not, at the same time, walking with line in hand to go fishing, it allows for easier enforcement.

Mr. Speaker, I truly agree with the necessity to protect all of our marine life. I believe we still need to keep strong, stringent requirements on the long-spine sea egg, because the population has not rebounded to its normal level. However, the short-spine sea egg, which has not been noted by those who do the research as being under threat, was not part of the red tide that affected the long-spine sea egg.

Mr. Speaker, I am seeking that this Honourable Legislative Assembly once more observe the fact that we have legislated in such a manner that our Caymanians are feeling the pinch—our Caymanians, of whom I am proud. The particular individual mentioned by the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, Mr. Tenson Scott, did not come and say, “It is ludicrous; take it out”. He said, “I understand the intent, and I am not asking for the complete removal of that particular section; I am asking to amend it in a manner that allows me to use them for fishing bait”. Mr. Speaker, it is applaudable when a constituent comes to you with a constructive observation, explaining that he understands the intention, the impetus and the reasoning, but is seeking, within the protection of the marine environment, that some scope is given so that he can continue what has been a tradition.

Mr. Speaker, individuals such as Mr. Tenson partake in our tourist industry actively, full-time, participating not only as craftspeople, but also as fishing guides, who like to know that, when groups come, they can be reasonably assured that they will go home with a catch.

Mr. Speaker, Mr. Tenson has proven that this particular bait is a very effective one. For many years, he has developed his technique, his locations and the use of this particular bait. This amendment allows him and others like him to continue their tradition. I am hopeful that this Honourable Legislative Assembly will see fit to give support for this also. I sense, to a great degree, an air of co-operation in this Parliament—this evening, especially. I hope that we can continue in such spirit. There is very little more that I can add, but for the sake of clarity, I wish to explain the exact intention of this Motion. It seeks to differentiate between the long-spine sea urchin and the short-spine sea urchin. It seeks to allow for the use of the short-spine sea egg for bait for line-fishing.

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Mr. Speaker, a point has been made, and I would like to dwell upon it a little. We must remember that there are other sections of the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) that limit line-fishing—fishing from the shore, which is where this particular bait would normally be used—to Caymanians, or to those who are licensed to fish. In terms that we all understand, sea eggs are used to catch squabs for us. Line-fishing from the shore would be limited to Caymanians, or those who are licensed. We have already taken initiatives in the licensing procedure to make sure that the fees are set in such a way that they are prohibitive to a certain degree, but will at least deter many people from acquiring such a licence.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is a true concern, and it is one over which I deliberated, in putting this Motion together. However, in consultation with those in enforcement, I have been convinced that, worded as it is, and with the other protection that line-fishing from the shore is limited to Caymanians, we would come to the same conclusion: that this would be used predominantly by Caymanians for the purpose of line fishing. It should clearly be understood that there are not many—not even many Caymanians—who use the short-spine sea egg for fishing. It is only those who have developed that method over the years. In fact, when I spoke to the fisherman in Cayman Brac, he mentioned that there were three individuals in Cayman Brac who utilise the sea egg as bait for fishing.

I say that only to put into perspective the numbers about which we are talking, because it is not the easiest bait to acquire. In our constituency, Cayman Brac, we still have the great availability of the soldier crab. It is much easier to search for the soldier crab than to go on the shore and remove the sea egg, which has to then be carried in a sensitive and very delicate manner to your location. It is not an easy task to split the sea egg to remove the very small portion on the inside that is used for bait. This demonstrates the very nature of the way this product protects itself—it is not going to be overused. We are proposing that provision be made within the Law to allow this handful of individuals to continue their tradition, and to ensure that those who utilise them for tour guides will have a happy, productive experience.

I would also like to add a point of interest, Mr. Speaker. The fisherman of Cayman Brac mentioned to me that when he goes fishing with the short-spine sea egg, he will normally tell the individuals, “You do not have to pay me; I will just go with you”. At the end of the day, they are so happy with their experience that their tip is greater than what he would have charged originally.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I present my case on this Motion. It is not a motion that is going to determine whether the Cayman Islands are a success or not; it is not a motion that is going to determine the survival of our species. It is a motion that will affect a few very important members of our community. I ask this Honourable Legislative Assembly to give its unified support to this much-needed amendment to the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision).

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise on behalf of the Opposition to support this Motion. However, that is not all I have to say. I am an avid fisherman, but I am not a scientist, so I will refer to these creatures as black and white sea eggs. I think the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac mentioned the red tide that wiped out most of the sea urchins in the country. I believe it was sometime during the mid- to latter part of the 1970s that that happened in Cayman. It is true that in recent times, there has been a resurgence of both types: the long-spine and the short-spine sea urchin; in East End they are in abundance.

Mr. Speaker, I believe the records will reflect that I was the person who brought to the attention of this Honourable House the way these urchins were being destroyed in East End. I think that was when the amendments to the Marine Conservation Law (2002 Revision) were being piloted through the House, earlier in 2002. At the time, I brought it to the attention of the Honourable House because we had nationalities other than Caymanians who were eating these things. I had had a number of representations that constituents in East End had seen these different nationalities coming out of the sea with buckets full of these short-spine urchins.

At that time, we were amending the Marine Conservation Law (2002 Revision) and proposing a seasonal ban on conchs as well. I told the Government in this Honourable House at that time that we were going to put undue pressure on some of the fishermen in East End.

Earlier today, in another Motion, the Leader of Government Business, the Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac talked about how it is good for us when we legislate laws and see the mistakes, or the omissions, thereafter, and come back and do something about them. At that time, I spoke quite passionately about the number of East Enders who rely, almost exclusively, on fishing as a livelihood, and I can name them, as can the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac: people like Mr. Benjamin Scott, who is in his 60s (Mr. Speaker, I think you know about whom I am speaking); Mr. Turo Bodden, who is over 80; Jerlo Rankine and Nelson Christian. Mr. Nelson is retired; however he still goes fishing. For people such as Mr. Turo Bodden and his wife, their only means of livelihood is fishing. This man is one of the old, traditional Caymanians, God bless his soul, and his brother-in-law, Mr. Standford Rankine (who recently passed away) was another. These people rely entirely on fishing, and they will attest, as the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac said, that they are not going to get a particular fish unless they use particular bait. The same way the Members of the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman constituency swear by the little short-spine sea urchin, the people in East End swear by the conch bait.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that this is another opportunity—like the one for which the two Elected Members for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are calling in this Honourable House—to assist with maintaining and supporting a culture that is dying, by making certain exceptions for certain individuals in the community to maintain it.

We recently passed another Motion concerning Bleeding Teeth, et cetera, and I supported that,

Mr. Speaker. I think this is timely. I decided to speak early, in case the Government, whenever they speak to accept this Motion or not (I suspect it will be the Leader of Government Business) should indicate that they will be receptive to doing the same for fishing with conchs.

People, such as those I named, support the protection of the marine environment. They support their families by fishing. Their families are not that big because their children have moved on, but the husband and wife still go fishing, and that is how they live. There is no crime in that, Mr. Speaker. Then, when the snapper season is on, they need conch to catch snappers. Mr. Turo is out to sea all night, all by himself. This man is in his little 14 foot boat, all night, as are Benjamin and Jerlo. They might relax during the day, but at night they are out fishing.

They are not going to the Eastern Sound to take boatloads of conch; they would never be caught doing that. Occasionally, they need five or six conchs when they go out fishing all day. I think it is only fair, and only reasonable. If the Government is not mindful to make amendments now then perhaps it will be necessary to bring an amendment to the Motion. I am wondering how receptive the Government would be if I were to bring in a similar Motion for conchs. I know that the Marine Conservation Board has some authority to lift the ban on conchs at certain times. However, I am sure that the people in the East End and Cayman Brac constituencies, even if they had to be licensed for $10 as with the other licence for the removal of chitons and bleeding teeth, I am sure they would gladly pay that—even one of their children would pay that for them. Another person we find in East End is Pancho Forbes, who fishes for a living, and is retired now.

In the interests of time, Mr. Speaker, I am wondering whether the Government would be supportive of that. We support the Motion that is currently before us. I simply have some concerns that it does not get out of hand because, Mr. Speaker, just as there is only a little piece in there to be used for bait, there is not much to be eaten, and there are more people here who will eat them than fish with them.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: I would like to mention that we have reached the hour of 4.30 pm. I know that certain Members have told me they have an engagement at 5 pm, and that they would wish to leave at 4.30 pm. However, if it would take only a few more minutes to conclude this Motion, perhaps we could ask the Leader of Government Business if he would suspend Standing Order 10(2) so that we can continue until this Motion is completed.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, as we propose to finish this Motion in the next couple of minutes, I would ask for the suspension of the relevant Standing Order 10(2) to continue after 4:30 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended so that the proceedings can continue beyond the hour of 4:30 pm.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue beyond 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: Please continue, Honourable Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am not going to be very long.

Mr. Speaker, as I was saying, we support the Motion, but when we took the interruption to extend the time, I was saying there are many people in this country— not Caymanians—who eat these things, and consider them staple food or delicacies. I do not know what they are, but they certainly take them in large quantities if given the opportunity. Therefore, we have to be careful who we license to take them for fishing, because it could be abused. In regard to the people in Cayman using it for fishing, whether it is from shore or from boats, the Opposition have no problems with that.

Therefore, I respectfully ask the Government to respond to my queries as to how receptive they would be to doing a similar thing for the taking of conchs for fishing. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I listened to what both Members said and I know, as I said earlier, that the Members for Cayman Brac and the Member moving the Motion had discussions with the Department of Environment. Our concerns were addressed, and we found a way in which we could help these people who are doing local crafts. In the interests of building local crafts, we acceded to that request. The sea-urchin matter is one that we have to be careful with, because it does some assistance to the environment, of course. Everything is put there for a reason. Again, however, the Department of Environment has worked with them on this matter. Therefore, I can give my concurrence with it.

Regarding the matters raised by the Member for East End, Mr. Speaker, we were trying to stop the depletion of conch. I am not saying that one or two fishermen will cause the depletion. However, if we open it up, it is going to be for everybody—unless they are expecting me to say in a regulation that Mr. ABC is permitted to do this, and Mr. EFG is also permitted, but no one else. I do not know how else it could be done. I do not know if I can make regulations naming people; I do not think that is permitted. If there is any other way in which I could help, I would try. However, the depletion of conch is something that we are trying to stop. I know that since we did that (although I was criticised for it), reports are that things are beginning to look better for the marine life. I would like to try to help everybody but you cannot do that. I have not talked to the Department of Environment, so I cannot give a definitive answer at this point. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have listened to the comments made by the Opposition. I have also listened to the acceptance of the Motion by the Honourable Leader of Government Business. I am very pleased to learn that the Opposition will be supporting the Motion and that the Government will be accepting. This is a motion that has come forward under my signature. It was seconded by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, for which I am grateful, but it has been jointly put forward by the two representatives of Cayman Brac: the Honourable First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and me. We have listened to the concerns expressed by the constituents that we are elected to represent; we have brought the necessary amendment to the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision), and it would appear that such amendment will be passed. I am happy to have participated, and I would like to thank my colleague, the First Elected Member Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, for her assistance in bringing this Motion forward. I now invite all Honourable Members to support this Motion through their affirmative vote. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is: “BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Section 18 (2) (c) of the Marine Conservation Law (2003 Revision) be amended to make an exception for the collection of the black short-spine rock-boring urchins (Echinometra la-cunter) for use as bait for line fishing.”

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Private Member’s Motion No. 8/03 passed.

ADJOURNMENT

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, before I move the adjournment, I would like to remind those members of the Business Committee to be aware of the meeting afterwards.

Also, Mr. Speaker, I do not think we will begin tomorrow at 10 am, as there is a Cabinet meeting in the morning. To be on the safe side, let us come back at 2.30 pm tomorrow.

Let me also say that in looking at the other business we have left, and looking at the commitments that Members and Ministers of Cabinet have—in particular, in dealing with Immigration Bill, which we want passed before the end of the year, for reasons everybody knows—we might have to work until 8 pm and later some nights, until 22 December 2003.

Mr. Speaker, accordingly, we move the adjournment of the House until 2.30 pm tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until Friday 28 November 2003 at 2.30 pm.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.38 pm the House stood adjourned until Friday, 28 November 2003, at 2.30 pm.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
FRIDAY
28 NOVEMBER 2003
2.58 PM
Eighth Sitting

The Speaker: I invite the Third Elected Member for West Bay to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings resumed at 3:01 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: I have received no apologies for absence or late attendance from Honourable Members.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS
AND OF REPORTS

Annual Economic Report 2002

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economics.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay upon the Table of this Honourable House the Annual Economic Report for the year 2002.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, when I have laid the Economic Report for June 2003, since the three of them are connected, I will just make one statement in regards to the three Reports.

The Economic Report January – March 2003 and
The Economic Report January – June 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay upon the Table of this Honourable House the Annual Economic Reports for the quarters January-March 2003, and January-June 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As these Reports are connected, I am quite happy to table before this Honourable House the three Reports, as I have mentioned. There are three Reports: the first one is for the year ending 31 December 2002; the second one is for the quarter January-March 2003; and the third is for the half-year ending 30 June 2003. The Annual Economic Report for 2002 is the first such report in many years. The January-June 2003 Report reflects our adjustment to the new fiscal year.

Annual Economic Report 2002

International Developments

Commencing with the Annual Economic Report for 2002, a review of this document will reveal that global economic growth rebounded to 3.0 per cent in 2002 from a low of 2.3 per cent in 2001. This improvement was largely on account of an expansion in consumer spending. Fiscal and monetary easing in developed countries also provided support to the rebound.

The United States economy grew by 2.4 per cent in 2002, compared to 0.3 per cent the previous year, bolstered by vibrant housing and auto markets. Business spending, however, remained weak, and unemployment climbed from 4.8 per cent in 2001 to 5.8 per cent in 2002.

Strong growth of 6.5 per cent was seen in the developing Asian economies, namely China and India.

The Euro-area saw a slowdown from 1.4 per cent in 2001 to 0.8 per cent in 2002, while Japan recorded a growth rate of 0.3 per cent in 2002, followed by a 0.4 per cent expansion in the previous year.

Caribbean economies suffered from an overall downturn in tourism, amidst fears of another terrorist attack and a weaker United States economy. With a decline in stay-over visitors to the region, export earnings declined, unemployment increased and fiscal imbalance widened.

The Cayman Islands Economy in 2002

The Macroeconomy

1. Economic Growth: Cayman's economy grew by 1.7 per cent in 2002, compared to 0.6 per cent in the previous year. This expansion benefited from an upturn in global economic activity, following the events of 9/11, as well as an upsurge in domestic construction activity.

2. Inflation: Consumer inflation rose to 2.4 per cent in 2002, compared to 1.1 per cent in 2001. This higher rate was largely influenced by increases in the cost of medical care, which increased by 20.3 per cent, and in education (5.8 per cent). Other categories of goods and services showed modest increases.

3. Labour: As the economy improved, the unemployment rate fell, from 7.5 per cent in October 2001 to 5.7 per cent in April 2002 and 5.4 per cent in October 2002. Caymanian employment benefited greatly in the light of declining labour imports and specific 'job-matching' government programmes.

4. Merchandise Trade: The value of imports declined from $510.7 million in 2001 to $494.5 million in 2002, while exports rose from $2.4 million in 2001 to $3.0 million in 2002.

5. Money in Circulation: The value of Cayman Islands notes and coins in circulation increased slightly by 0.4 per cent, from $51.4 million in 2001 to $51.6 million in 2002.

6. Credit from Retail Banks: At the end of December 2002, net domestic credit from retail banks on the Island amounted to US$1.6 billion. Inclusive in this sum was US$1.4 billion in loans and advances to the private sector, of which credit to businesses and households amounted to US$801.9 million and US$626.5 million, respectively.

7. Government Finance: During 2002, the fiscal operations of central government resulted in an overall surplus of $18.4 million, or approximately 1.2 per cent of GDP. This surplus represented a significant reversal from the $31.2 million overall deficit recorded in 2001. Total revenue increased by 10.1 per cent to $314.1 million in 2002, as a result of revenue measures. Total expenditure declined by 6.6 per cent to $295.7 million as government curtailed both current and capital expenses.

8. Public Debt: Government debt stood at $132.1 million at the end of December 2002, down $11.4 million for the year. Disbursements amounted to $10.9 million, while principal and interest payments amounted to $22.6 million and $4.5 million, respectively. Exchange rate losses amounted to $0.3 million mainly on account of a weakening of the United States dollar against the Euro.

Sectoral Developments in 2002

Both the financial services and tourism industries showed mixed results. In contrast, there was an upsurge in activity in the construction and real estate industries. Utilities consumption did not show much variation.

1. Financial Services: Banks and trust licences fell from 545 in 2001 to 508 in 2002, while new company registrations declined from 8,456 in 2001 to 7,016 in 2002. However, the fact that there was an increase, particularly in the area of company's registration, should be noted as a positive accomplishment for the year. In this period of time, insurance licences increased from 572 to 629; mutual fund registrations rose from 3,648 to 4,285; stock exchange listings grew from 418 to 710; and new ship registrations rose from 207 to 233.

The numbers of licences and registrations can be affected by both domestic and international influences, such as merger activities; therefore, looking at the net worth of these entities provides a better indication of the viability of these sectors in the country's financial sector. In this regard, bank assets grew from $823.2 million in 2001, to $945.4 million in 2002, for an increase of 15 percent, while bank liabilities increased from $784.7 million to $856.4 million, or only 9 per cent in the same period. Insurance premiums from captives grew from $3.0 billion to $4.2 billion, up 40 per cent, between 2001 and 2002. On the other hand, stock market capitalisation on the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange declined from US$38.1 billion in 2001 to US$36.3 billion in 2002, a reduction of 4.8 per cent.

2. Tourism: Cruise arrivals rose from 1.2 million in 2001 to 1.6 million in 2002, but the number of stay-over arrivals declined over the period, from 334,071 to 302,797. With reduced stay-over visitors, occupancy rates for hotels fell from 55.3 per cent to 50.6 per cent, and for apartments/condos, from 42.9 per cent to 40.2 per cent.

3. Real Estate: The value of real estate transfers rebounded from a seven-year low of $173.5 million in 2001 to $274.0 million in 2002. Most of the increase in 2002 was for a few large, high-end properties. A number of factors accounted for the expansion of sales: a moderation in property prices, concessions on government stamp duty, a reduction in real estate agents' fees, and lower interest rates.

4. Construction: The construction industry showed signs of a recovery, with the value of planning approvals rising from $162.7 million in 2001 to $247.8 million in 2002. Most of the increase was for condos along the Seven Mile Beach area, and for commercial properties in George Town. The value of construction projects receiving building permits trebled from $108.4 million in 2001 to $335.5 million in 2002. The Ritz Carlton Hotel and Condominium Development accounted for about one-third of the value of projects receiving building permission. Other major projects included the Meridian Condominiums and the expansion of the Morritt's Grand Resort.

5. Utilities: Utilities consumption was mixed in 2002. Water consumption declined by 1.2 per cent from 1.07 billion gallons in 2001 to 1.06 billion gallons in 2002. Electricity usage grew by 4.6 per cent, moving from 407 million megawatt hours (MWH) in 2001 to 425.6 million MWH in 2002. While the number of telephone/fax minutes paid declined by 1.5 per cent from 40.3 million to 39.7 million during the same period, the number of internet lines grew by 6 per cent in the one year period.

Outlook for 2003

Mr. Speaker, the outlook for 2003 is for a modest increase in economic growth from 1.7 per cent in 2002 to 2.0 per cent in 2003. This projection assumes that the United States economy will grow by 2.3 per cent in 2003, as noted in the updated forecast in the Economic Report, January – June 2003.

At the time of the writing of the Annual Economic Report 2002, inflation was projected to increase slightly from 2.4 per cent in 2002 to 2.8 per cent in 2003. Results from the first two quarters of 2003, however, suggest that inflation will be much lower than previously anticipated – around 0.5 per cent.

Preliminary results from the Labour Force Survey showed an unemployment rate of 4.6 per cent in April 2003, lower than previously anticipated and down from 5.4 per cent in October 2002. The projected unemployment rate for 2003 has therefore been revised downward, from an average 5.6 per cent to 4.6 per cent.

Economic Report, January-March 2003

Mr. Speaker, I would now like to present a synopsis of developments during the first quarter of 2003 as presented in the Economic Report, January – March 2003.

1. Inflation: The Consumer Price Index rose by 0.2 per cent in the first quarter of 2003, compared with 2.1 per cent during the comparative period last year.

2. Financial Services: The financial services industry recorded mixed results in the first quarter of 2003. Increases were seen in mutual funds registrations, insurance company licences, and stock exchange listings. However, there were declines in the number of bank and trust licences, new companies registered, and stock market capitalisation.

I should mention, Mr. Speaker, that in the area of bank licences, this would be mainly in the area of category B licences and it is not a question of natural attrition taking place. This was as a result of a conscious decision by the Government to put in place a requirement for books and records, and physical presence, and quite a number of category B banks had difficulty in meeting and complying with these new demands. These demands, or requirements, were necessary in terms of the heightened regulatory regime, and to make sure that the Government had a sense of what these entities were doing. Therefore, some of them have opted to move to other jurisdictions where the requirements will quite likely be less stringent. Quite a number of others have complied, and it gives us a sense in terms of better management and regulation of our financial industry.

In addition, we are aware of the fact that we had increases in fees, but we found that quite a number of the entities continued to pay the increased fees without much complaint or difficulty. However, what quite a number of them did—and this was not as a result of the fee increases—was to rationalise their operations, so where they had, for example, three B licences, they collapsed those into a single licence. One or two of the category A licences were downgraded to category B licences, which were deemed to be more suitable to the operation. Hence, we still have a good book of banks on our books.

a) Mutual Funds: Mutual fund registrations grew by 13 per cent from 3,828 in 2002 to 4,324 in March of 2003.

b) Insurance Licences: The number of insurance licences increased by 9.4 per cent: from 577 in the first quarter of 2002 to 631 in March of 2003. Captive insurance premiums also increased by 40 per cent during the corresponding period, to US$4.2 billion in 2003.

c) Stock Exchange: Stock exchange listings grew by 11.3 per cent to 717, but market capitalisation fell by 11.4 per cent to US$35.9 billion.

3. Tourism: Cruise arrivals registered a 14.7 per cent growth during the first quarter, rising from 457,090 in 2002 to 524,392 in 2003. However, air arrivals declined by 5.5 per cent from 92,531 in 2002 to 87,418 this year.

4. Real Estate: The value of property transfers rose significantly by 49.0 per cent during the first quarter, from $57.2 million in 2002 to $85.2 million in 2003. This increase was influenced by historically low interest rates, concessions by the Government, and lower property prices.

5. Construction: The value of planning approvals reached a three-year high during the first quarter, rising from $36.2 million in 2002 to $44.6 million in 2003. Building permits also saw an increase in value by 57.7 per cent, from $20.0 million in 2002 to $31.5 million in 2003.

6. Utilities: Electricity consumption was up by 2.5 per cent. Water production contracted, by 11.5 per cent, mainly on account of a decline in stay-over visitors. Paid telephone and fax minutes fell from 10.3 million during the first quarter of 2002, to 10.1 million during the first quarter of 2003, while internet lines rose in use 10.3 per cent, to 9,862 lines.

Economic Report, January - June 2003

Mr. Speaker, I would now like to provide a summary for the first half of 2003, as presented in the Economic Report, January – June 2003. As you recall, January to June 2003 represented a short fiscal year, as Government made the transition to the new July to June fiscal year.

1. Inflation: The Consumer Price Index rose by 0.5 per cent as of June 2003, compared with 1.9 per cent during the comparative half-year period last year.

2. Labour: Work permits in effect as of June 2003 amounted to 13,355—a 1.4 per cent decrease compared to the previous year.

3. Trade: Imports increased by 10.6 per cent to $262.9 million during the first half of 2003. This growth is significant, since the value of imports had been declining prior to 2003.

4. Financial Services: The financial services industry again posted a mixed range of results as of June 2003, when compared to June 2002. Increases were seen in mutual fund registrations, insurance company licences, and stock exchange listings. However, once again, there were declines in the number of banks and trust licences, for reasons as I mentioned earlier. There were also declines, as I mentioned earlier, in stock market capitalisation, and new companies registered.

a) Mutual Funds: Mutual fund registrations grew by 12.7 per cent to 4,522 in June 2003, compared to the previous year.

b) Insurance Licences: The number of insurance licences increased by 9.9 per cent: from 587 at the end of June 2002 to 645 in June 2003. Captive insurance premiums also increased by 46.7 per cent during the corresponding period to US$4.4 billion.

c) Stock Exchange Listings: Stock exchange listings grew by 40 to 715, and market capitalisation fell by 1.3 per cent to US$38.9 billion.

d) Bank and Trust Licences: Bank and trust company licences stood at 477, a reduction of 49—consistent with the information I provided earlier.

e) New Company Registrations: New company registrations during the first half of 2003 amounted to 3,474 and represented a 4.9 per cent decline compared to the same period last year.

Mr. Speaker, it is to be recognised that while there has been decline in growth, growth is taking place; it is very important for this to be known, so the assumption should not be made that there is a decline in activities within the financial industry. Thus, we see that we normally have our peaks and valleys and everybody recognises the economic trends that have been occurring, especially since the year 2001.

The fact that we are having new registration of companies of this magnitude is very important to recognise.

5. Tourism: Cruise ship arrivals registered a 9.5 per cent growth between June 2002 and June 2003, rising from 849,500 in 2002 to 930,600 in 2003.

Air arrivals, however, declined by 5.1 per cent from 169,445 in June 2002 to 160,796 this year.

6. Real Estate: The value of property transfers rose considerably, by 51.4 per cent during the first half, from $111.2 million in 2002 to $168.4 million in 2003. This increase was influenced, as mentioned earlier, by historically low interest rates, competitive borrowing packages, and an extension of the stamp duty concession from 14 May - 14 November.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I would like to interrupt you temporarily, so that we can get the suspension of Standing Orders 10(2). It is my understanding that it is the wish of Members that we continue until 5.30 pm.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, we propose to continue after 4.30 pm. Therefore, I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to allow that to happen.

The Speaker: The question is that the Business of the House continues until 5.30 pm. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow proceedings to continue beyond 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: Please continue, Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I have now reached the subject of construction activity.

7. Construction: The value of planning approvals increased during the first half of this year, rising 6.8 per cent, from $105.7 million in 2002 to $112.9 million in 2003.

Building permits saw a decrease in value by 42.4 per cent, from $174.4 million in 2002 to $100.5 million in 2003. This decline was anticipated, since construction activity is well advanced on many of the notable large projects such as the Ritz Carlton Hotel and Condominiums.

8. Utilities: Electricity consumption was up by 5.4 per cent between June 2002 and June 2003.

Water production increased by 5.1 per cent in this time period.

Paid telephone and fax minutes fell from 20.5 million during the first half of 2002 to 19.4 million during the first half of 2003. Internet lines increased to 9,857, up 10.0 per cent over a one-year period.

Summary

In summary, Mr. Speaker, the global economy has been making slow but steady progress since reaching a low in 2001. The recovery appears to be broad-based, with many countries reporting better performance this year compared to the last. The same is occurring for the Cayman Islands.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Stamp Duty (No.2) Regulations 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay upon the Table of this Honourable House the Stamp Duty Regulations 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, thank you. As you and other Honourable Members are aware, in accordance with section 27 (2) of the Stamp Duty Law (2003 Revision), these regulations are subject to a negative resolution by this Parliament. The effect of the regulations is to continue the present 5 per cent stamp duty rate until 12 January 2004. These regulations have been approved by Cabinet, but they are subject to a negative resolution, as mentioned early.

The original purpose of the 5 per cent stamp duty rate is well known to all Honourable Members. The Government introduced a 5 per cent rate in November 2001 as a stimulus measure for the local economy following the devastating 9/11 terrorist attack in the United States of America. Since that time, this has served as a very good stimulus to the local real estate industry, and the extension by the Government is one that was anticipated by the entire country. As a consequence, the support for the extension of keeping the rate at 5 per cent is welcome by the community and it is one that is recommended to this Honourable House.

The Report of the Standing Business Committee

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to lay upon the Table of this Honourable House the Report of the Standing Business Committee for the Second Meeting of the 2003 Session of the Legislative Assembly, and the Report of the Standing Business Committee for the Third Meeting of the 2003 Session of the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: So ordered. Would the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: No, Mr. Speaker.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS

Question No. 94 Deferred

No. 94: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture What efforts are being made by Government to address the complaints of local recording artists that local music and songs do not receive sufficient air-time on most local radio stations.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Minister is temporarily out of the Chamber. I believe that we also need to suspend Standing Order 23(7) to take questions after 11 am.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health Services.

Standing Order 24(5)

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Minister who is answering the question had to leave the Chamber to attend to an official matter. Perhaps it would be better if we dealt with this on Monday 1 December 2003. It is the same Minister who is answering to the Motion that would follow.

The Speaker: Is it that you are requesting that it be deferred until Monday?

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I would ask, in the absence of the Minister, that we do so. Perhaps the Leader of Government Business would take the suspension, because I think there are some statements.

The Speaker: Since we are not taking questions at this point, perhaps the question should be, in accordance with Standing Order 23(5), that question No. 94 be deferred until Monday' sitting of the House. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Question No. 94 deferred until Monday 1 December 2003.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

European Countries/Overseas Countries and Territories Forum and the Overseas Territories Consultative Committee Meeting – London and Brussels

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As Honourable Members are aware, the Honourable Financial Secretary and I will be leaving for London and Brussels this weekend for talks with Dawn Primarolo, the United Kingdom Paymaster General, and to attend the European Countries/Overseas Countries and Territories Forum (EC/OCT) and I will also be attending the Chief Ministers' conference in London.

As Honourable Members will recall, several weeks ago, I received a letter from Dawn Primarolo, setting out the United Kingdom's position on the European Union's Directive on Taxation of Savings (Tax Saving Directive) and confirming that Cayman could either adopt the Directive or have Her Majesty's Government use its reserved powers to legislate directly for Cayman in relation to this matter. In this letter, the Paymaster General also indicated that she would be available to discuss the matter of the Directive with me, in person, the next time I was in London. As a result, the Financial Secretary and I will be meeting with her next Monday in the UK, with a view to being able to clearly articulate the Cayman Islands' position on the Directive, which has not changed from what I have publicly stated on many occasions.

Mr. Speaker, I intend to make it clear to the Paymaster General that this insistence by the United Kingdom that Cayman has only two options—either to adopt or be forced to accept the European Union's Savings Directive, if the same comes into being—is a retrograde step. The Cayman Islands is not a part of the European Union; it is not entitled to the generous subsidies that other European Union (EU) countries are granted. It is prejudiced, by its statutory provisions in many EU countries, from competing in many financial markets throughout Europe. It has no treaty benefits, and at present none are being offered.

The United Kingdom has no legal obligation to extend the EU Savings Directive to the Cayman Islands, and its present position of a one-size-fits-all regime in relation to this initiative is contrary to the United Kingdom's stated position on taxation in the European Union.

The United Kingdom's position that the Cayman Islands must either accept the EU Savings Directive in whatever form it turns out to be implemented, or have the same implemented by the United Kingdom, has severely threatened the competitiveness of the Cayman Islands' position as a leading financial centre, and will continue to do so.

In the light of all of this, the Government is not of the opinion that it is in the best interests of our people to sign or to accept the initiative, on the basis that nothing is being offered by other European countries in return for a costly and misguided initiative. The position of the United Kingdom in regard to the Cayman Islands is both bewildering and disappointing, and contrary to the Partnership for Progress and Prosperity.

Mr. Speaker, I will be providing a detailed briefing of the meeting upon our return from the United Kingdom.

I have a further statement, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Please continue, Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Strategic Policy Statement for the 2004/2005 Financial Year

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I should like to make a short statement in regard to the Strategic Policy Statement for the 2004/2005 Financial Year.

As Honourable Members will be aware, the Public Management and Finance Law 2001 will come into full effect for the 2004/2005 financial year. This means that the Strategic Policy Statement for 2004/2005 must fully comply with the requirements of that Law, including establishing financial targets and allocations based on accrual accounting.

Preparing targets on this basis is significantly more complex than preparing them solely on the cash basis, as has been the case for so long. It has required a full set of accrual financial statements (complete with eliminations) to be prepared for both the current 2003/2004 financial year and each year in the next three-year forecast period.

As Honourable Members will appreciate, preparing these accrual forecasts for the first time is a sizeable task that only a handful of governments around the world have been able to achieve. Accomplishing this change will be another major milestone in the Financial Management Initiative Project and will put the Cayman Islands in a very elite group of countries that budget and report in a true, fair and transparent way.

While the "accrualisation" work has been underway for some months, there have been some delays in obtaining the necessary accrual information for 2003/2004, particularly in relation to the opening balance sheet. This, in turn, has meant that the process for preparing and finalising the 2004/2005 Strategic Policy Statement has been impeded.

Mr. Speaker, the Government takes its obligation to provide full and accurate information to this Honourable House seriously. We do not want to unintentionally mislead the House by providing a strategic policy statement that is not complete and fully checked.

While it would have been possible to table a strategic policy statement today, as originally planned, we feel it prudent to take a few more days to ensure that the Statement is suitably robust and accurate.

Consequently, the Government plans to table the 2004/2005 Strategic Policy Statement on 22 December, rather than by Monday, as required by the Public Management and Finance Law 2001. While this delay is regrettable, it is understandable, given the complexity involved in undertaking the accrualisation task for the first time.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank you and the House for its indulgence in this matter.

As a matter of procedure, I have been informed that the Honourable Minister of Information Technology is able to answer Private Member's Motion 05/2003, which is on the Order Paper; thus, this Motion may be moved as set down on the Order Paper, and a debate may proceed until at least 5.30 pm.

The Speaker: We will take the question when the item is mentioned by the Clerk.

Suspension of Standing Order 14(3)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, we move the suspension of Standing Order 14(3) in order to move forward with the business on the Order Paper.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(3) be suspended in order that we may take a Private Member's Motion at this time. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 14(3) suspended.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 5/03

Implementation of legislation to ensure more local content on locally licensed radio stations

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 5/03, standing in my name.

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government considers implementing legislation to provide for more local content on our locally licensed radio stations."

The Speaker: Is there a seconder? The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I second the Motion.

The Speaker: The question is: "BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government considers implementing legislation to provide for more local content on our locally licensed radio stations."

The Motion is open for debate. Does the Member moving the Motion wish to speak at this time?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great pleasure, today, to be moving this Motion to try to assist our local musicians in getting a bit more of what they have termed "fair treatment" in terms of airplay from local radio stations. Before going on, I would like to acknowledge the presence of the Chairman of the Cayman Islands Music Association's Broadcasting Section and one of our other local artists, Mrs. Barrie Quappe, who have come along today to listen to this item which, of course, is of such interest to our local musicians.

Mr. Speaker, the battle for fair, regular and consistent airplay of local music has been going on since the doors of Radio Cayman opened for business more than 25 years ago. Sadly, the increase in radio stations has only allowed this battle to escalate, instead of getting any better, in regard to local musicians. In comparison to the heavy airplay that is given to international recording artists, local artists have always—and are still—treated as being secondary. While the Cayman Islands Music Association has submitted and agreed that there has been an improvement with some radio stations in the recent past, it is interesting to know that this slight increase has only been achieved as the result of constant protests and phone calls, letters from Ministers, and even letters from advertisers to the stations. I found that point interesting, because we would have expected that one of the reasons the radio stations would not have been playing local music as much would be a concern for the lack of advertising. I have copies here, and I could table them if any Member wanted to see them, from significant numbers of local companies that advertise with the radio stations. They are all writing in support of the local musicians getting more airtime.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, out of an abundance of caution, I would recommend that you table those.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I will just make note of what some of the advertisers are saying, and I will quote from one of them. This one comes from CUC: "As you are aware, the Cayman Islands Music Association has recently lobbied for increased radio station airtime for local musicians and CUC is supportive of this effort."

"CUC has over the years supported the development of local talent, whether in sports, academics or performing arts. We believe that doing so, together with the efforts of all corporate citizens, we can make a real positive difference in the community in which we live."

"We wish to commend the Music Association for their efforts, to thank the radio stations that are participating, and to encourage all other radio stations to participate by allocating a reasonable amount of airtime for the local musicians."

I have similar letters from Funky Tangs Ltd., Cox Lumber, Flowers Bottled Water, Foster's Food Fair Ltd., the Daily Grind, Cayman Airways, Puritan Cleaners, Atlantic Department Store, and Maedac Supply Company. This was only a sampling, Mr. Speaker, of local businesses that have recognised the need to support our local musicians, and have been willing to express their support, which will allay any fears or concerns that the radio stations may have, from a financial standpoint, that the playing of more local music could in some way reduce their advertising.

Therefore, we have one more reason: if we do not have to concern ourselves that our people are going to stop advertising, then that is one incentive the radio station should have for support.

I would like to believe that the radio stations that decide to play more—and give more support to—local music would get additional support from advertisers, and that that could be seen as an incentive that would allow them to play a bit more local music. Apparently, even that addition and support has not encouraged the radio stations to give any sort of fair treatment to local artists. In addition to getting those letters from the advertisers, the Music Association was able to get a petition, with 150 signatures. They presented that to the Ministry and to the radio stations, to show the amount of support for this plight that the Music Association finds itself in.

In response to some of the questions I was hearing, the people who signed that petition are not all people who are in the music industry. The significant majority was people who are in the industry, but there were also other locals who have taken note of the situation, and also feel that we should have enhanced local content on the radio stations.

The question that one has to ask is, "Why is it that a local recording artist has to go through so much hassle to get their music played?" There is the obvious situation that the foreign artists do not have to call the Ministry, get petitions signed or beg for airplay in the Cayman Islands, yet their music is simply played over and over again. The only reason for that is that they are on the hit-parade in America. They have already gotten the opportunity through airplay on their local stations; their music has already gained popularity and made it, so to speak. Our local stations are more than willing to play, in some instances, all foreign music.

Basically, what the radio stations are saying to local artists is, "Go to America and make a hit, and then we will ensure that your song is played on a fair and regular basis in your own country." I think we can all agree that that is more than unfair; it is absurd, to say the least. If our radio stations do not assist our local artists, it is hard to expect that we are going to get other countries assisting them. Even though that may seem unfair and unbelievable, we are happy to say that some of our local artists have had just that happen. They have had much success in other countries, such as the UK, Jamaica and Central America, where some of the locally produced music is riding high on their radio charts. Although those same songs received regular rotation abroad, sadly, they received minimal exposure in their own country, the Cayman Islands.

It has even gone beyond the music not being played. It would have been bad enough if we just did not play the music, but in some cases, our local radio stations have decided to start degrading and insulting the actual local content, and the songs that have been produced locally. What we found to happen is that on some of the radio stations, we have foreign DJs imported to the local stations. One station went as far as to play local songs and then "flush it"—complete with a toilet sound-effect—to ridicule and make fun of our local artists. Their recommendation was that the local music should be flushed, and they actually did it, complete with the toilet sound-effects, on the air. Another station attempted to create local music awards by playing a local song one time, and then allowing callers to degrade or promote the tune over the air. Locals do not get a chance to call in and have an opportunity to degrade international artists, or foreign DJs. We think that this scam to shame local music is another example of the unfair way our local artists are being treated in their home country.

When it came down to the American Hit Parade or the Grammy Awards, the Music Association was quick to point out that they had made an attempt to organise a fair local music awards ceremony, so they could get some feedback as to the support for local music. The radio stations could get involved, in some way, in playing those songs that had the biggest local support. Needless to say, the radio stations were not interested in doing anything like that, and they never heard back from that station.

Mr. Speaker, the Cayman Islands Music and Entertainment Association has received every excuse in the world as to why our local products are not being aired as regularly as other international artists. The excuses are too many to list, but the feeling is that if the stations would look for excuses to try to play the local music instead, we would not have the problem that we have currently. If we were in Jamaica, the Bahamas, or most other Caribbean countries, we would not be having this battle. In those countries the airwaves are filled with local music.

One of the reasons why that is the case in Canada, for example, is that it is law that local Canadian content must make up 35 per cent of broadcasted music. Since that legislation has come into place, the benefits have been tremendous—so much so that today, Canada is the second largest music source in the world.

In the light of that, I would like to refer to a music article from Applaud, which I would be willing to lay upon the Table after I have finished.

The Speaker: Please continue, Honourable Member.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, it says:

"How did it happen? How did Canada—that vast cold country with a mere 30 million people—become the second largest source of international music talent in the world, after their neighbours the United States?"

It goes on to say: "Canada has become the second largest supplier of international talent by developing, over three decades, a strong and confident music industry. Canada first learned—with a great deal of sometimes traumatic trial and error—to service its domestic market, and then how to tackle the world market."

It says: "The elements that have built this success story are many. The first was the decision to enact domestic content radio regulations, which began January 1, 1971—and which have been copied in a number of other countries.

"Still controversial in some quarters, those regulations helped build not only careers for artists, but an entire infrastructure of studios, producers, engineers, distributors, managers, publishers, promoters, publicists, urban entertainment weekly papers, music TV channels, and music journalists.

"The odds against the successes Canada has achieved are enormous. The population, given the geographical area, is miniscule. It's a big country, which makes it hard to tour profitably. Most importantly, Canada is the mouse that lives next door to the American elephant—the largest single music market on the planet, and by far the most influential.

“As a result, the financial infrastructure in Canada has always been fragile; there is not, to put it simply, much major financial support, especially for small record companies.”

There we have, Mr. Speaker, an example as to what happened in Canada after the legislation to ensure local content was put in place, from as early as 1971. We have seen that many other countries have decided that this was such a positive move that they have followed suit. In doing the research for this Motion, I have looked at some of the other Territories. I know there is some legislation being examined now for Trinidad and Tobago; there is some that has been in place in South Africa, New Zealand and Australia.

We recognise that this was done from 1971, and everyone would prefer that legislation would have been the last resort. Although we would have hoped that in a small country like ours, it would not have been necessary, it appears that, sadly, nothing else has worked here in the Cayman Islands. It looks like the only alternative—the only hope for our music industry to get a fair shake in its own country—is going to be that the Government will have to legislate, in some way.

Mr. Speaker, it is important to note not only that the playing and promotion of local music has an effect on local musicians and the artists who produce them, but that next to Tortuga Rum cakes, local musical CDs are Cayman's second largest export. Every time a local CD goes abroad it is a promotion for our Islands. It is an audio postcard, a memory of the Cayman Islands. Tourists love to hear music from the country they are visiting, and what would we do without the tourists? When tourists are in their condos, their rental cars, their hotel rooms, or at the beach bar, they hear the exact rotation of music on local radio that is being played back in their home town—mostly from America. Why should that be the case? The answer to that is that in order to get heavy air rotation in the Cayman Islands, your song needs to be on the American charts. There is no way, that we can feel, Mr. Speaker, that that is fair for our local artists.

In the petition that was presented to Government, all the individuals—some involved in the music industry, some shop owners and others involved in different ways—signed for the same reason. They signed to say that they want a change. They want to hear more local music on the local radio. In addition to that petition, most of our local musicians have independently sent requests to the Ministry, and letters of protest as well, explaining some of the difficult circumstances that they have had to bear during the time that they have been working in the industry.

Mr. Speaker, there is an argument that has been presented in the past. That is that the quality of music that was produced here in the Cayman Islands was not of a high enough technical quality to be produced and replayed on the radio stations. However, if I could quote from Cayman Net News, Issue No. 358, Tuesday 11 March 2003, where there was a response to a letter carrying the requests of the Cayman Music and Entertainment Association, it says:

“Mr Martins said the radio stations once complained that the music was badly recorded, that they did not receive it and it was not licensed properly.

“He added: ‘Within the last year we have in effect negated all of those complaints because we have shown them there is a lot of material here. We have given them 800 titles of local music that is properly recorded.

‘The engineering standards which we admit in the past had some problems has improved in the last six to ten years and the music is being properly licensed. We are not asking them to play junk. We’ve never asked them to play music in bad taste or that is not recorded properly. They have 800 songs in a variety of styles; they have soca, gospel, country, folk, and steel band.’ ”

Mr. Speaker, again, another excuse has been addressed by the industry. At great expense, the Cayman Islands are home to one of the largest and best high-tech studios in the entire Caribbean. We actually have people coming here to record—Hopscotch Studios is of a high level, and the quality of music is excellent now. That is another excuse. Hopscotch has invested hundreds of thousands of dollars. and he has produced first-class recordings that have never yet been aired in our country.

Mr. Speaker, what the Cayman Music and Entertainment Association has asked for is this: they would be happy if the Government would legislate that we would get two local songs per hour. On average, there are 12 to 15 foreign songs aired per hour, and they are asking for two songs of these 800 that have already been presented. More are being presented all the time; I think it is somewhere around 1000 now.

In trying to give our local artists a fair shot, I do not think anyone could say that this is an unreasonable request. The radio stations do not need to make any major changes. It is not going to be any financial burden on them. They can play the music they always play, and go about their regular daily business. We simply want them to add two local recordings to their hourly rotation. We have some stations that claim they play two local songs per hour or more. Those stations would have nothing to worry about with this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, one of the concerns in discussing the Motion, even today, was how that would be monitored. Of course, we are all very concerned about creating bureaucracy and more authorities that would be burdened with the duty of monitoring. The Cayman Music and Entertainment Association has committed to doing the monitoring of the radio stations itself, at this stage, and reporting to the respective authority.

If the Government contemplates, or agrees to produce, such legislation, it is not expected that we would have all the radio stations in court tomorrow. We would expect that this would be seen by the radio stations as an incentive, that it would show that Government is serious and committed to getting some airtime for the local artists, and that that in itself would be enough for the radio stations to do their part to step up to the plate and give our Caymanian musicians a fair shot.

The Cayman Music and Entertainment Association feels that if the radio stations see that the Government is sincerely behind them in their efforts, then that will encourage and ensure that the legislation will not need to be enforced. We will not have to have radio station police out there making sure that the songs are played.

The Music and Entertainment Association has committed to monitoring the airplay and informing the Government, or the respective authority. If at some time it does become necessary to have it monitored, or to have records kept, that would be further in the future. We feel that initially, once the Government of the day sends a message to say that we do support our local artists, that we do feel they deserve a fair shot in their own country, and that they do have a right to get some airtime, then that would be sufficient.

Sadly enough, the Cayman Music and Entertainment Association would have preferred that the earlier attempts and discussions would have made this unnecessary. However, they have come to the realisation that, unless something is done, as far as legislation is concerned, they do not have a chance, and it will be a continued long fight—longer than what has transpired already. We recommend that some assistance be given to them.

Before I finish, I want to give some facts that may assist, which were provided by the Music Association. They are to do with the production of local music.

The first one is, that, contrary to belief, Cayman does have several export items. The world famous Tortuga Rum Cakes, and thousands of locally produced and recorded compact discs featuring local artists, are exported off Island every year. In addition, thousands of CDs leave the Island with visitors who have enjoyed our local music at local venues, or have heard the local music on radio. The Tortuga Rum Company has a Miami-based warehouse covering 27,000 square feet, and employs 22 people in that office and an additional 110 staff in Cayman, for the main purpose of distributing Caymanian-made rum cakes, and a long list of other products, including locally produced CDs that are shipped to customers all over the world. There are over 1.8 million boxed Tortuga Caymanian-made rum cakes sold every year, and at least 50,000 locally produced CDs are sold every year. 50,000, Mr. Speaker! That is a surprising number, and we feel that with some additional airtime, exposure and rotation, that number can only increase.

It also says that our local music has been featured as background music for popular American soap operas and Hollywood films. Local CDs are hot-selling items in gift shops throughout the Florida Keys, in dive shops all over the USA, and in record stores throughout the Caribbean, and even at Disney World in Orlando.

Some other information is that local musicians have been nominated for the prestigious Juno awards—Canada's version of the Grammy. Local musicians have been in the Top 10 Hit Parade in Europe, Jamaica, Barbados, Trinidad and other countries.

When a tourist takes home a local CD, it often features a Caymanian sitting on the cover, information about the Island on the inside sleeve, and the Cayman Airways toll-free number on the back. A local CD is a powerful promotional item for these Islands. It is an audio postcard, and often a visual brochure, a long-lasting memory for about $15, and there is no cost to the Department of Tourism for this promotion. Almost 40 local retailers sell local recorded music, creating revenue and jobs.

It also draws a comparison. When a tourist visits Hawaii, he will hear traditional Hawaiian or hula music in every hotel, beach bar, lobby and elevator. In Brazil, a tourist will hear the samba, day and night, echoing through the cities, avenues and streets. In Jamaica, the airwaves are filled with the sound of reggae music, and in Cayman when you turn on a radio, you will hear the latest American Top 40 hits.

The Government's tourist survey and study tells us clearly that vacationers visiting the Islands want a true Caymanian experience. What they are getting, Mr. Speaker, is the same music that they hear when they turn on their radios when they are at home, wherever they are. The Cayman Music and Entertainment Association is saying that nearly every hotel room, condo, rental car or taxi has a radio. The radio, with the island sound of local music, is a perfect, and powerful, tool to promote a Caymanian experience, a way we can help the Department of Tourism promote things Caymanian. Music is a key ingredient. With some 5,000 cruise passengers riding in taxis and tour buses on any given day, our radio stations should be blasting out local recording artists all day long.

More play of local music equals more sales of local CDs, more promotion for the Cayman Islands, more export, and more commerce. Some local musicians spend thousands of dollars to record and produce a good quality CD, yet these same musicians have been battling local radio stations for fair and regular airplay for nearly 20 years.

Mr. Speaker, in this short presentation, I hope I have been able to show why, after hearing the cries of the members of the Cayman Music and Entertainment Association (many of whom are constituents of the district that I represent, West Bay) we decided that we should do something to try to encourage the Government to take into account the difficulties that our local artists are having. When we were researching this Motion, we looked at one of the concerns they were having in the UK: they were going to allow foreign ownership in the radio stations, and they were concerned that this would mean less local promotion for their artists. They were looking at legislation to ensure that, even though the radio stations were owned by foreigners, they still had to carry significant local content.

Mr. Speaker, sadly, even though our radio stations are owned by locals, for the most part, it still appears that we are going to have to ensure that our stations give the local artists not even equal opportunity, but just an opportunity—that is all they are asking for. Out of 12 -15 songs, just two songs per hour is more than reasonable, and more than fair.

I am hoping that this Honourable House will send a clear message to the radio stations, the people of the Cayman Islands and our local musicians that, as a Government and as their representatives, we support their untiring efforts, and that we will do what we can to ensure, as their representatives, that they are given a fair chance in their own country.

I look forward to hearing the other debate, hopefully in support, and I look forward to the passing of this Motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, since I am not going to be here next week, I would like to rise to give my full support to the resolution before the House.

We had hoped that there would be no need for this, but people in the music industry have, for years, been talking to the various stations. I know there is an improvement, but there is a long way yet to go. Certainly, we would like to offer our support.

It not only gives exposure here locally, but visiting tourists, and others listening to the radios here, will talk about it wide and far. That offers further exposure. It is time that we “lift our own” in this fashion, and support them in this way. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the Government and I know that, once the Ministers rise and give their positions on it, and we move forward, it will be better for the Cayman Music and Entertainment Association.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, rise to offer my support. The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay has done an excellent job of presenting a very comprehensive argument as to why it was that he decided he wanted to bring this Motion. I gladly seconded the Motion once we had talked about it.

Mr. Speaker, from the time I was a young man growing up, I always had a keen interest in music—a plain love for music, although as I have grown older, for those who hear my voice, it is obvious that I cannot sing. Nonetheless, in growing up in a household where I had a brother who loved to sing and who actually could sing, my interest was sparked even more. I will get back to that in a minute.

People have often said, and continue to say, in Cayman, “We are losing our culture. Where is our culture going?” I submit to this Honourable House that one of the key ways in which people in communities continue to develop, enhance and promote their culture—what makes them distinct—is indeed through their music. Music is one of the oldest and most important ways in which human beings have learned to express themselves.

I can remember being a young boy and going to the dance with older cousins and sometimes with my mother. That was increased when my older brother become the lead singer in a local band, because she was always so proud to show up and to be there to see him perform. I can remember going by the house in which they used to practise, and seeing Jah Mitch on the guitar, Bobby Banks on the drums, Gary Ebanks blowing his saxophone, and Danny Christian playing percussion instruments and the guitar as well. Mr. Speaker, we are reminded that there are many legendary musicians in Cayman, some of whom are still around and some of whom are a blessed memory and of whom I do not have any knowledge. I would have to apologise to the House, again, for being a bit too young to know about some of these legendary performers.

However, I can remember many different types of music coming into vogue in Cayman. I can remember, as a young man, being a part of break-dancing troupes and going around to different teenage parties, rapping, and mixing on what seemed, at the time, to be impressive turntables, although from what you see today, you quickly realise how much the technology has greatly improved.

We see, in this Motion, and in the presentation that was made by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, that the legislature—the highest forum of debate and a call for consciousness in any country—has taken an interest in a particular issue. From the letters of support that have been sent around from corporate citizens like CUC, Funky Tangs, Cox Lumber Company, Flowers Bottled Water, Foster’s Food Fair, the Daily Grind, Cayman Airways, Puritan Cleaners, Atlantic Department Store, and Maedac Supply, it is . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Member, we have reached the hour of 5.30 pm. Is it the wish of the House that we should continue and complete the Motion? The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, before I move the adjournment of the House, I would like to say to Honourable Members that on the afternoon of 15 December, the Immigration Bill will be moved. Between now and then, Members will get the draft Bill. The morning of 15 December, at 10 am, we intend to have a Finance Committee on several matters, so the afternoon of the 15 December will begin the introduction on the Immigration Bill and then debate will take place on the 17 (which will be the Wednesday), 18 and 19 December. Hopefully, it will be passed on 22 December. We would hope that Members would pay heed to the good season and try to finish work on 22 December.

Mr. Speaker, we will be working late, because I do know that the Honourable Minister of Human Resources also has the Employment Bill to come before the House. I am hoping that the draftsman can have the Bill down by Monday. Some time during the course of the coming week, God willing, Members will have the Immigration Bill.

I would also like to apologise to Members for being late today, as we had planned to come back at 2.30 pm. We had intimated that there was going to be a Cabinet meeting, and I would like to say that it was no fault of yours, Mr. Speaker, that the House was late. It was our fault, because Cabinet was that much longer than we expected.

Mr. Speaker, I wish Members well for the coming two weeks' business in the House. I now move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday, 1 December 2003 at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until Monday 1 December 2003 at 10 am. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 5.30 pm the House stood adjourned until Monday, 1 December 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
1 DECEMBER 2003
10.45 AM
Ninth Sitting

The Speaker: I invite the First Elected Member for George Town and the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.48 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS
OR AFFIRMATIONS

Oath of Allegiance
(Administered by Clerk)
Mr. A. Joel Walton, JP

The Speaker: Please stand.

Mr. A. Joel Walton: I, A. Joel Walton, do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, her heirs and successors according to law, so help me God.

The Speaker: On behalf of this Honourable House I welcome you, the Honourable Temporary Third Official Member, and invite you to take your seat.
Please be seated.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have apologies for absence from the Honourable Third Official Member, the Honourable Minister of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, and Mr. Lyndon Martin, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS
OF THE CABINET

Question No. 94
Deferred

No. 94: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture what efforts are being made by Government to address the complaints of local recording artists that local music and songs do not receive sufficient air-time on most local radio stations.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, unfortunately the Second Elected Member for George Town will be arriving a little late so I propose for you to allow it to be deferred until later on in this sitting.

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder on that?

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr Speaker, I second the motion.

The Speaker: The question is that in accordance with the provision of Standing Order 23(5) that Question No. 94 be deferred until a later time during this sitting. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Question No. 94 deferred until later during the sitting.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have received no statements from any of the Ministers or Official Members of Cabinet.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we will defer those two Bills until the Honourable Minister, who is moving the Bills, arrives.

SECOND READINGS

The Notaries Public (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled, A Bill for a Law to Amend a Notaries Public Law (2003 Revision) and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: Does the Honourable Second Official Member wish to speak to the Bill?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Mr. Speaker, thank you. I wish to present to this Honourable House a Bill shortly entitled The Notaries Public (Amendment) Bill 2003. Mr. Speaker, the Bill seeks to amend a Notaries Public Law (2003 Revision) in order to change the procedure for the appointment of notaries public. Earlier this year the Cabinet instructed the Attorney General's office to undertake a review of the Notaries Public Law with a view to recommending changes to the procedure for the appointment to such office. The Notary Public is defined as an official who, depending on the country, has the power to acknowledge signatures, administer oaths and affirmations, and to take depositions and issue subpoenas in law suits.

Notaries public are most often used to acknowledge signatures especially on court papers such as affidavits. Although notary publics are, in effect, public officials, most of them are people who work in the private sector. I have noted for example, in the United States, before a person can be appointed as a notary public, a state test is required and administered. In the Cayman Islands, as elsewhere, one or more employees of large institutions which process documents such as banks, insurance companies, large law firms, have a number of their employees as notaries public.

The office of notary public is a very ancient one. This being the case, while we do not think that a test is needed in the Cayman Islands at this time, it is Government's opinion that an applicant should understand at least the evidential significance of the act of notarisation and that he should have the responsibility and experience to discharge duties effectively. It is also believed that an applicant should be a mature person preferably with business, legal or accounting experience.

Accordingly, in order to give effect to the wishes of Cabinet, clause 3 of the Bill seeks to repeal and replace section 3 of the Law to provide that –

3. (1) The Governor [in Council] may authorise any person who-

- (a) has been employed in a management position for a period of three years or more; or
- (b) has been employed as an attorney-at-law for a period of three years or more; or
- (c) has been employed as a certified public or chartered accountant for a period of three years or more; or
- (d) has been employed in any other profession specified from time to time by the Governor; and
- (e) has applied in writing to the Attorney General in the form in the First Schedule,

“to be appointed by the Clerk as a notary public.”

It is also provided in the Bill that –

- (2) “An applicant shall provide the Attorney General’s office with any further information that the Governor requires in considering an application under this section and such additional information shall include but is not limited to-
- (a) two character references;

(b) police record;

(c) a photograph of the applicant certified by a justice of the peace, a notary public, a minister of religion, a police officer (gazetted), a medical practitioner or an attorney-at-law, to be a true likeness of the applicant.”

In order for the Government to be assured that a person, once appointed notary public, continues to be the kind of person who should be a notary, the Law is seeking to provide that the Clerk of the Courts shall not register any person as a notary public unless that person also gives an undertaking to the Clerk in which he agrees to file with the Clerk of the Courts a notice setting out any changes after his appointment relating to his residence, profession or occupation, any criminal convictions or whether he has been adjudged bankrupt.

Where it is brought to the Governor in Cabinet that a notary public has failed to file this undertaking with the Clerk of the Courts, the Governor may suspend the notary public from office or revoke the appointment and in so doing, direct the Clerk to endorse a notation on such suspension or to remove his name from the Register.

Mr. Speaker, the Bill also seeks to amend section 12 of the principal Law to provide that where a notary public performs any notarial acts while suspended, that person would have committed an offence.

Finally, it is hoped that if the Bill is passed by this Honourable House that the new procedures will give added importance to the appointment as a notary and that we will be assured that only responsible and diligent persons are added to the role of notaries public in these Islands.

It is a very short Bill, Mr. Speaker, and I would therefore seek the support of Honourable Members of this Legislative Assembly in its passage. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. This Bill put forward by the Honourable Second Official Member to the Legislative Assembly is one that the Opposition can agree with. However, there is a question in our minds with regard to the proposed repealing of section 3 of the Law and the new section that is proposed in this Bill.

Before I get to that, let me say that the Honourable Second Official Member has made it clear, and we understand that Government's desire is to ensure that individuals who are appointed as notaries public will not only have the necessary background qualifications and experience to have clear understanding of the acts which they will perform, but will also have the knowledge to be able to ensure that they are being party to documents that are bona fide, et cetera. We would concur with those thoughts and agree that we would need to streamline the Law better so that there would be specific monitoring. We also agree with the section which calls for any change in the person's status under certain conditions to be reported to the Registrar.

I just want to speak a bit on the proposed new section 3. In the Law, section 3 now reads: "The Governor may authorise any person who has applied in writing to the Attorney-General in the Form in the First Schedule to be appointed by the Clerk as a notary public."

In the Law the definition of the Governor in section 10(6) is "Governor" means the Governor acting in his discretion. This is in the substantive Law and it leaves me to assume that if there is a specific definition, in the main Law under section 10 which clarifies what it means, then I presume when the word "Governor" is used in any other section it means "Governor in Cabinet." We need to get that cleared up, although that is not the most important part of my contribution. To make it absolutely clear, in Section 10 of this substantive Law sub-section (6) reads, "In this section - "Governor" means the Governor acting in his discretion."

I think it is fair to assume that if sub-section 6 of section 10 specifies the definition of Governor in that section, then the reason why it was specified in this Section would mean that in the other sections it would be Governor in Cabinet. That sounds logical to me, although it may not be the case. Therefore, assuming that logic, I see in the proposed Bill that the proposed section 2 has a definition of "Governor", except in section 10, means the Governor acting on the advice of the Cabinet of the Islands;. That clears the matter up. That is as I thought. Getting back to section 3, which would mean the Governor acting on advice of Cabinet under the Memorandum and Objects and Reasons and I will quote: "It was agreed by Cabinet that an applicant should understand the evidential significance of the act of notarisation and that he should have the responsibility and experience to discharge his duties effectively." Fine.

It goes on to say: "It is also believed that an applicant should be a mature person preferably with business, legal or accounting experience." That is kind of fine.

It goes on: "To give effect to this Bill, in clause 3, repeals and replaces section 3 to provide that the Governor may authorise any person" and I quoted section 3 of the main Bill already which says; "the Governor may authorise any person who- (e) has applied in writing to the Attorney General in the form in the First Schedule, to be appointed by the Clerk as a notary public."

Therefore, what is proposed will provide that – "3. (1) The Governor may authorise any person who-

- (a) has been employed in a management position in a company or in a public office for a period of three years or more; or
- (b) has been employed as an attorney-at-law for a period of three years or more; or
- (c) has been employed as a certified public or chartered accountant for a period of three years or more; or
- (d) has been employed in any other profession specified from time to time by the Governor; and

[This is the one that is causing us problems because it has definite ramifications]

- (e) has applied in writing to the Attorney General in the form in the First Schedule, to be appointed by the Clerk as a notary public."

Therefore, what is proposed has expanded the original section 3, but in expanding it has raised the possibility for individuals being disenfranchised and not being allowed to be notaries public who could qualify and serve to good purpose. We understand the Government's position, and what has been put forward by the Honourable Second Official Member, is that in the majority of cases where individuals who have been appointed as notaries public they exercise their authority in the business world. As the Honourable Second Official Member has pointed out, the larger corporations have several of their employees acting as notaries public and they pay their annual fee to the Government. They, in turn, charge their clients for each signature applied on documents and there is a schedule on the back of the Law which defines each fee for the type of document signed or the work done under which the notary public performs the act.

However, the way that it is described in this proposed new sub-section (d) of section 3, where it says any person who "has been employed in any other profession specified from time to time by the Governor.", what I understand by that is that it is clearly because in the majority of cases that the Government has experienced via the applications that the applicants are in some profession. If we go through all of the sections that are proposed, sub-section (d), which one might have hoped would be the catch all section, "has been employed in any other profession."

There is, from time to time, the need for individuals or families to have documents notarised. They are not necessarily either in a position or have the intention of going to a professional institution that is a law firm or accounting firm or some other type of institution of that nature, to get their documents signed. While I accept that this instance may be in the minority, it still does exist. I am a Justice of the Peace and from time to time I have requests from individuals and when I examine the documents a justice of the peace's signature is not sufficient; it has to be notarised. Hence, as a justice of the peace I cannot perform the act that they need. I do not believe that the Law should be crafted in such a way – and I do not think this is intentional – but it almost does not allow in any instance for any person who the Governor in Cabinet may consider to have the experience and the knowledge to be able to responsibly perform the acts of a notary public to be appointed. When we read what is proposed our position is, while we accept that the reasoning and the purpose behind the desire of the Government in bringing forward this amendment to the Law is such that it ensures the quality of the appointments, however, what we do not accept is – and this appears to be inadvertent - that it appears to be one which in the future would not allow certain people to be appointed as notaries public, who would perform a necessary and vital service for the various communities that we have, especially in the outer districts.

There is also a point that has just been drawn to my attention. There are some documents which have to be dealt with here that are used overseas. In many instances the signature with the stamp of a justice of the peace is not recognised because many of the international countries do not actually have justices of the peace; they depend on notaries public to witness certain documents, certain signatures and I do not know if the Government has experienced having reported to it some type of abuse of the authority invested in a notary public. Whether that is the case or not, we subscribe to the Government's attempt to streamline these appointments in a manner that can be monitored and that also calls for disclosure by the people who are appointed on a continuous basis to ensure that the Government has full knowledge of the position that these individuals find themselves in from time to time.

However, we are not satisfied that the Bill as is proposed, and especially the proposed section 3 to repeal the existing section and qualify who can be appointed as notaries public, actually serves the purpose that is intended. We do not necessarily want to propose an amendment to the Bill, but we are hoping that the Government will understand the position that we take and will take on board that point. We would like them to propose some other sub-section within that section, which will capture such individuals that could be appointed from time to time so that there is absolutely no doubt, which is the way it appears to us now. It is fine how it is for a certain sector, but it does not capture what we believe it needs to if we are going to not disenfranchise certain individuals from being appointed notaries public.

For example, there are individuals in the outer districts who do not necessarily subscribe to the belief that they should visit George Town and we should respect that. There certainly should be, either the elected representatives or other recognised, individuals in the districts, who could be recommended, and have their application put before the Attorney General to be brought to Cabinet, as deserving individuals who they could be sure would have the experience, knowledge and integrity to perform the function of notary public in the correct manner. We just want to make sure that the proposed amendment does not prevent this from happening.

Without trying to put words into the mouth of the Honourable Second Official Member, what we wonder is whether proposed sub-section (d) would, in their opinion, capture this or not. We do not think that it is clear enough because it speaks to a professional qualification or being employed in any other profession they speak to as a profession. I do not know if there is any definition of 'profession or professional' either in the proposed Bill or in the Law itself, but it describes in the proposed section 3 the various positions and qualifications that are required outside sub-section (d) which allows for the Governor to specify from time to time in any other profession.

I think the point is made and if the Government is able to bring forward a reasonable argument which proves that our fears are totally unfounded or is able to propose an amendment which takes care of those fears then we would be happy to support the Bill. Otherwise, it puts us in a position where we cannot support it because of the arguments that have been put forward.

In addition, if we move into the proposed amendments in section 3, subsection 2: “An applicant shall provide the Attorney General with any further information that the Governor requires in considering an application under this section and such additional information shall include but is not limited to-

- (a) two character references;
- (b) a police record;
- (c) a photograph of the applicant certified by a justice of the peace, a notary public, a minister of religion, a police officer (gazetted), a medical practitioner or an attorney-at-law, to be a true likeness of the applicant.”

Mr. Speaker, I call all of those titles out just to say that if I look at that I can understand – and I am being cynical – what the Government thinks of the ordinary members of the Legislative Assembly, because we can sign passport pictures of people, but we cannot sign for an applicant for notary public. If it is good for one, then I do not see this as being more important than a passport document. That is a point that I wonder whether to reconsider, meaning if representatives are not allowed to do this then maybe we should not be allowed to sign passport pictures, which would be inconvenient for many people I know. Those are the two main points which we would like to be clarified. Taking care of those two points would allow us to support the Bill. If that is not the case, I do not see how we can, because I think that the concerns are genuine and the points that are raised are ones with merit that need to be addressed. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Does any one else wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: I will be careful not to be repetitious of the comments made by the Leader of the Opposition, but I think it is important that a number of points be brought out when looking at this proposed amendment to what is a very important Law, because not only does this have a tremendous impact on the business world, because of the numbers and types of documents that have to be notarised, but it also has an impact on the private lives of the citizens in our community. One of the first things we all sought to do once we were elected was to become notaries, because we understood how important it was for us to discharge this very vital and necessary function within our community.

I will concentrate by looking first at the new proposed sub-section 3 of the Law and I would, first of all, have to agree that there is a need to ensure that there is a category in that sub-section that does capture the persons in our community who are mature, responsible, but do not necessarily fall into the proposed section 3 through sub-section 3(d). If we were to look at persons appointed as justices of the peace we will see that some of those would not fall within any of those three proposed categories, therefore I think it is important that we have a section in there that captures that.

If we look at the current legislation we see that it allows for the Attorney General's office to have the discretion in the first place and I believe it is important that it has the discretion to vet applications and make those determinations, because if the Attorney General's office cannot make those determinations, then who can? I think it is vitally important that we capture that particular element that I think is missing from the proposed amendment.

I would also like to turn to the proposed amendments 3(a), (b) and (c). It is also important that we be careful as to specifying specific time frames regarding how long a person needs to be employed. If I look at my profession, which is covered in 3(c) we see that there are people who will have qualified as certified public accountants well before they would be allowed to become notaries: "the person has been employed as a certified public or chartered accountant for a period of three years or more."

Once we start putting specific time frames into the proposed Bill it could become problematic in that a person could have gone through all the requisite studies, training, and become a qualified person and then not be able to become a notary. I think the essence of what we are trying to capture here is that for those specific professions that those persons who are members of those professions can practice as notaries. I know in my case, for example, that I was able to qualify as a certified public accountant after only being out of college for a year and a half because of my prior work experience. However, as this specific amendment stands, I would have had to wait another year and a half before I could have become a notary because it calls for me to be employed, not qualified, as such for three years. Therefore, I think we need to be careful with the specific time frames because again we could start eliminating people who would responsibly carry out those duties.

I also think it is important that we do look at this whole issue of persons who, for whatever reason, are no longer desirable to be notaries. We do have in subsection 10 of the current Law certain specific carve-outs of misconduct, and again I think once the matters are brought to the office of the Honourable Attorney General as to why a person no longer needs to be a notary, then the person should simply be removed. However, I think we have to be careful not to catch too many good and responsible people, who should be notaries, and eliminate them simply because we may have had some problems with a specific few.

Mr. Speaker, while we are looking at the current legislation, I would also draw to the Honourable Second Official Member's attention, that section 7 can cause problems when a person either simply forgets or is too busy – and for the most part a lot of notaries are very busy professional people – to pay his annual fee. I will read section 7: Payment of Annual Fees: "Each notary public shall, in respect of each year after the year upon which his name was entered upon the register, pay to the Treasury on or before the thirty-first day of January in such year the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars, and where such person has not paid the said sum within the time specified, his appointment as a notary public shall lapse and he shall no longer perform any notarial act."

One of the things that happens, is that it becomes mandatory for the person to go back through the entire procedure to become a notary again; they have to reapply. Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that when we look at that specific section that we could impose some sort of penalty. Double the fee for example, so that a person would have to face some consequence for not paying on time, but he certainly would not have to go back through the entire process to become registered again. Regarding that section, there may also be a need to have some sort of flexible grace period because I can remember having a specific issue this year when I paid my fee. Although I showed up before the end of business – before 5 o'clock – the person who was responsible for collecting the fee had actually sent off the money bag (as it were) and told me that he could not take my fee because they had already closed up for the day. That might have been the MLA punishment for being late. [Chuckles] However, in all seriousness, Mr. Speaker, showing up before the end of business on the appointed day for paying fees can point to the difficulties that may arise from section 7, and perhaps just looking at that again, to have some sort of monetary incentive for people to pay would also strengthen their actual prompt payment of fees. We are all busy and it happens to the best of us.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I propose to take the morning break at this time and we will try to get back in 15 minutes which will be 11.55 am.

Proceedings suspended at 11.40 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.23 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Second Elected Member for West Bay continuing [the second reading debate on The Notaries Public (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill, 2003]

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just before we took the morning break I had turned my attention to section 7 of the current Notaries Public Law for which there is not any proposed amendment at this particular time. During the break I had time to reflect on this matter and to discuss it with Honourable Members of the House. There is one thing that seems obvious and not conducive to moving forward in terms of amending this piece of legislation, making it more effective and more streamlined from an administrative standpoint. It is this whole issue about when fees are due. What incentives are there to further ensure that people are going to continue to practise as notaries public and indeed pay their fee on a timely basis? This is what we ultimately want to do – ensure that notaries public do pay their fees on time.

One could argue that if a person is a notary, and if we are raising the bar as to who should become a notary, then people should remember. That is true, Mr. Speaker, but we also have to acknowledge that for the most part, persons who are notaries, do lead extremely busy lives and we are all human and so may slip up one year. I had one Honourable Member give me an example of how he was in the Legislative Assembly for the weeks leading up to 31 January, and actually just physically being so busy and caught up in the proceedings of the Legislative Assembly that he completely overlooked it. That goes to show that we are all human and we are never going to devise anything that is perfect. The one thing I would say that does help is getting a notice to pay and it is timely; I got mine some two weeks ago.

I wonder if it might not be something useful to the public to ensure that anyone who has not paid his fee after 31 January is listed as a person who has been struck from the notary list. People do actually obtain this list and use it for the purpose of trying to find a notary. I have had constituents call me and say that they have looked on the Government website and found my name listed as a notary, and that is how they became aware that I was one, and that they needed to get a specific document signed.

Therefore, I wonder if one of the things that could be considered by the Honourable Second Official Member is just how up-to-date that list is, and maybe a person being struck may not find favour, but certainly making sure that the list is updated, especially after the cut-off date of 31 January. From 1 February, persons who have not paid their fee are acting outside the law if they notarise anything. Therefore it is very important for public protection that we ensure that access to a complete, accurate and up-to-date list is available.

I will stop here because some of the other points that I was going to raise pertaining to the other subsections, have already been spoken on, so I would not seek to repeat them. Therefore, Mr. Speaker I thank all Honourable Members for their attention.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be brief on this since hearing the opening and the response by the Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for West Bay. I too, had problems with subsection (d) which reminds me of four or five years ago when I sat in Cabinet and this was being suggested by the Honourable Second Official Member's predecessor. I opposed it vehemently and there is another Member in here who shared my sentiments. I have a feeling that in his own wisdom he will bring the proper changes to the subsection. There are too many people without these specific qualifications in a certain professional field that are responsible and capable of making these decisions. There have been so many them in the past who have provided these services, and I look forward to seeing the change.

My concern, which I feel will now be eliminated, was that many of our Caymanians would have been limited. People, who, in the past, have made significant contributions to the economic development of these Islands, would have been outside of the scope that had been proposed in the present legislation. These people have been overlooked for too long and we should not continue to endorse any legislation that will bring that about. I look forward to hearing and seeing the amendment which will be brought and I encourage all Members to support amending this section of the Bill.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, I call upon the Honourable Second Official Member to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me begin by thanking all Honourable Members of this House for their usual very constructive and helpful debate. It was very engaging. I take on board the point made by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, as well as other Members, in terms of suggested amendments that would make the Law far more palatable and accommodating.

Let me point out that it was never the intention of the Government, in any way, to exclude persons who would otherwise be ineligible to be appointed as notaries. There is a recognition that some tightening up of the current Law is needed and so the effort is really to ensure that there are proper benchmarks or thresholds in place. However, in the same breath we want to ensure that no one who is considered responsible and mature enough is excluded. In so doing, Mr. Speaker, I wish to point out that the discretion to appoint persons as notaries is vested in the Governor in Cabinet, in other words, upon the advice of Cabinet and not the Governor in sole discretion. The only exception is where the Governor acts as pointed out in section 10.

It is proposed, in keeping with the very engaging debate that has taken place, to put in place two committee stage amendments that will be dealt with at the appropriate time.

Firstly, it is proposed to ensure that the language in clause 3 is wide enough to cover persons who might otherwise, if strict interpretation is given to the current wording, be excluded. It is proposed that there is language which is sort of omnibus and would allow Cabinet to consider persons who are not professional in the forensic sense, but who are very mature, responsible and otherwise competent, to be appointed as notaries. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the appropriate amendment will be made at the appropriate time.

Secondly, it is proposed to also amend subclause (2) to correct the obvious inadvertence where the Members of the Legislative Assembly were omitted. It could not have been intended that they were not going to be allowed. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, this will also be dealt with by a committee stage amendment.

I also take on board the very helpful suggestion from the Second Elected Member for West Bay. Administrative mechanisms ought to be put in place to ensure that when a person fails to pay his fees before 31 January, and whose registration has consequently lapsed, an administrative process can be implemented which will allow for this fact to be published and to be made available to the public so that such people ought not perform the duties of notaries in the interim. Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, I will speak to the Clerk of the Courts to ensure that all of that is taken on board.

It only falls for me, to thank all the Honourable Members and you, Mr. Speaker, for indulging us with a longer than usual adjournment to have the amendments ready for this Honourable House. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled, The Notaries Public (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2003 be given a second reading. All those in favour say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Notaries Public (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill, 2003 given a Second Reading.

The Status of Children Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move a Bill entitled The Status of Children Bill, 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly, I wish to present to this Honourable House the Status of Children Bill, 2003.

On the 15th March, 2001 the Legislative Assembly approved a private member's motion which requested the abolition of the distinction between the succession rights of legitimate and illegitimate children.

After considering the motion and taking into account the Government's policy relating to the protection of the rights of children in the Islands it was decided to draft a bill providing for the equal status of children. The Government has also noted that as far back as 1980 countries such as Jamaica and Barbados have provided for such equal status and that more recently the Bahamas and Bermuda have followed suit.

This Bill therefore seeks to give effect to such reform." By implication "It also seeks to reinforce the principal of gender equality and to recognise that both fathers and mothers play crucial roles in the development of children . . .

Clause 3 provides that for all the purposes of the Law of the Islands the relationship between every person and his father and mother shall be determined irrespective of whether the father or mother are or have been married to each other, and all other relationships shall be determined accordingly.

Clause 4 provides that the parent and child relationship as determined in accordance with section 3 shall for all purposes be followed in the determination of other kindred relationships following therefrom.

Clause 5 provides that unless a contrary intention appears, any reference in an enactment or instrument to a person or class of persons described in terms of relationships by blood or marriage to another person shall be construed to refer to or include a person who comes within the description by reason of the relationship of parent and child as determined in accordance with section 3 and 4.

Clause 6 provides that this Bill shall apply in respect of every person, whether born before or after the commencement of this Bill, and whether born in the Islands or not, and whether or not his father or mother has ever been domiciled in the Islands.

Clause 7 deals with presumptions of paternity. It provides, among other things that unless the contrary is proven on a balance of probabilities, there is a presumption that a male person is, and shall be recognised in law to be, the father of a child in certain circumstances. Some of these include circumstances where –

(a) the person was married to the mother of the child at the time of its birth;

(b) the person was married to the mother of the child and that marriage was terminated by death or judgement of nullity within 280 days before the birth of the child, or by

(c) divorce where the decree nisi was granted with 280 days before the birth of the child; the person marries the mother of the child after the birth of the child and acknowledges that he is the natural father;

Clause 8 deals with the presumptions of parentage arising out of the use of fertilisation procedures. For example, where a married woman has undergone a fertilisation procedure as a result of which she becomes pregnant -

(a) her husband is presumed to be the father of any child born as a result of the pregnancy even if he did not provide any or all of the sperm used in the procedure, but only if he consented to the procedure, and

(b) the woman is presumed to be the mother of any child born as a result of the pregnancy even if she did not provide the ovum used in the procedure.”

Clause 9 provides that where a man and a woman, in good faith, go through a form of marriage that is void, they shall be deemed to be married for the period during which they cohabit, and the presumption referred to in clause 7(1) (b) applies accordingly.

Clause 10 deals with applications for declaration of paternity. It provides that any person who-

(a) being a woman, alleges that any person is the father of the child;

(b) alleges that the relationship of father and child exists between himself and any other person; or

(c) being a person having a proper interest in the result, wished to have it determined whether the relationship of father and child exists between two named persons, may apply in such manner as may be prescribed by rules of court to the court for a declaration of paternity, and if it is proved to the satisfaction of the court that the relationship exists the court may make a declaration of paternity whether or not the father or the child or both of them are living or dead.

Clause 11 deals with applications for declaration of paternity where there is no presumption. Where there is no person presumed under clause 7 to be the father of a child, any person may apply to the court for a declaration that a male person is his father, or any male person may apply to the court for a declaration that a person is his child.

An application may not be made under subsection (1) unless both persons, in respect of whom the relationship is sought to be established, are living.

Where the court finds, on a balance of probabilities, that the relationship of father and child has been established, the court may make a declaratory order to that effect, and, subject to clauses 13 and 14, that order shall be recognised for all purposes. . .

Clause 15 provides for parentage testing orders. In proceedings where the parentage of a child is in issue the court may make a parentage testing order requiring a parentage testing procedure to be carried out on any of the following persons for the purpose of obtaining information to assist in determining the parentage of the child-

(a) the child;

(b) a person known to be a parent of the child;

or

(c) any other person, if the court is of the opinion that the information that could be obtained if the parentage testing procedure were to be carried out in relation to the person might assist in determining the parentage of the child.

A parentage testing order may be made by the court on the application of a party to the proceedings, or of its own motion.

Clause 16 provides that where the court makes a parentage testing order it may make such other orders as it considers necessary or desirable-

(a) to enable the parentage testing procedure to be carried out; or

(b) to make the parentage testing procedure more effective or reliable.

Clause 17 provides that in any proceedings in which the parentage of a child is an issue the court may take into account any test taken by a relevant party pursuant to the Immigration Law (2003 Revision) which establishes or rejects paternity of that child.

Clause 19 prohibits the taking of bodily samples by unqualified persons. A "qualified person" is defined as meaning a registered medical practitioner or any other person belonging to a class of persons prescribed by the regulations for the purposes of this clause. . .

Clause 21 provides that nothing in the legislation shall be construed to require the Registrar to amend any prior registration showing parentage other than recognition of an order made under clauses 10, 11 or 13.”

Clause 22 repeals section 35 of the Succession Law (1995 Revision) and the Legitimation Law (1997 Revision). This deals with the rights of illegitimate children.

I propose to move three committee stage amendments to this Bill. One will be a minor amendment to the definition of 'parent' in clause 2 of the Bill and one will be to repeal section 21 of the Matrimonial Causes Law which deals with the declaration of legitimacy in any suit brought under that law. We also have an amendment that will deal with the commencement of this Law and that will be so that the Law shall come into force on such date as may be appointed by order made by the Governor in Cabinet. [Pause] The legislation when passed will not affect any determination concerning the parentage of a child made by court before the commencement of the provisions.

According to statistics provided by the General Registry in 2000 there was a total of 618 children born in the Cayman Islands. Of those children 182 were born to mothers never married.

Similarly in 2001 the total was 622 children and 199 of them were born to mothers never married.

In 2002 the total number of children born was 582 which were lower than the previous year with the number being born out of marriage being 173 children.

To date (in 2003), the total number of children born was 477 with 140 of them being born to mothers never married.

As you can see from these statistics, a significant number of children stand to benefit of the passage of this Bill.

I now seek the approval of this Honourable House in passing the Status of Children Bill 2003 subject to the amendments at the Committee Stage.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Perhaps this is a convenient time for us to take the luncheon break and we will return at 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.53 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.42 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

It gives me great privilege and pleasure this afternoon to rise to offer my contribution on this very important Bill which is before the House, shortly entitled The Status of Children Bill 2003.

It has been noted in the Object of Memorandum and Reasons that this Bill has its genesis in the passing of a Private Member's Motion on 15 March 2001. That Motion was moved by me and seconded by the Elected Member for East End. The objective of that Motion was to seek to have legislation passed to remove the discrimination between legitimate and illegitimate children in so far as succession rights were concerned.

The Bill currently before the House goes substantially further than that. I am pleased, because the main reason why the Motion, which I brought to this Honourable House more than two years ago, did not seek to go further than that, was because of concerns which my colleagues and I shared about the implications of more general provisions in so far as the issues of Immigration were concerned. Since that time a lot of water has gone under the bridge in relation to Immigration Issues and indeed there is before this Honourable House an Immigration issue which is shortly to be debated. Prior to that, there have been extensive discussions and debates. The Immigration Review Team has done a tremendous amount of work and produced a lot of reports and the concerns and the implications of removing the distinction between illegitimate and legitimate children have been addressed in that new Immigration Bill.

Mr. Speaker, I am happy to see that in this Bill, The Status of Children Bill, the proposal is to remove the distinction between illegitimate and legitimate children, generally.

It might be helpful if I were to briefly remind this Honourable House of what the Motion which I brought, and which was the subject of this resolution, actually said. I will forego reading what the provisions of section 35 of the Succession Law, which the Motion sought to have amended actually said – that is, the detail of it because it is rather long. However, I will quote what I consider to be the pivotal WHEREAS section and the resolutions which were sought.

“AND WHEREAS the above provisions of the Succession Law discriminate unfairly against an illegitimate child whose father acknowledged paternity and supported that child voluntarily, as well as against the natural father of such a child;

“BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that section 35 of the Succession Law be amended to extend to all illegitimate children, and to the natural fathers of such children, the same rights and succession on intestacy enjoyed by legitimate children and the fathers of legitimate children;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Succession Law also be amended to provide for an appropriate method of establishing paternity prior to, as well as following either the death of the man alleged to be the natural father of an illegitimate child, who had not, prior to his death, been adjudged to be the punitive father of the said illegitimate child under the provisions of the Affiliation Law (1995 Revision), or the death of the illegitimate child.”

Mr. Speaker, the situation in the Cayman Islands up to now is, that as a result of, what I regard as antiquated legislation, we have a situation whereby children of fathers who were not married to the mother at the time of the child's birth (or subsequently married to them) and who were, what I would call, good fathers in the sense that they have always made a contribution to the upkeep and maintenance of the child, were discriminated against by the Succession Law because when they died without leaving a Will, those children whom they had looked after throughout their childhood, were unable to benefit from the deceased's estate in the same way that a legitimate child would have. However, the real irony of that situation has been that where a father has been adjudged by the court to be a putative father, usually as a result of an application by the mother on the basis that the father had not been maintaining the child, a child in those circumstances would be able to benefit from the deceased's intestate estate.

The irony of that is that the children of good fathers, who were not required to be brought before the court to have an order made, did not benefit, whilst children of those fathers who were recalcitrant and were forced before the court to have an order made, did benefit.

That was the main objective of the Motion which I brought to this Honourable House. Underlying that distinction, what currently exists is discrimination based on long, if I might say – I am being very careful less I might be misunderstood as what I regard as outmoded principles – principles which have their basis in the Common Law and in the English Common Law concept of nullius filius. Mr. Speaker, it might help again the background to this Motion and indeed to the Bill. I know there will be some anxiety and some discomfiture on the part of certain quarters in the community about the passage of this Bill. None of us should for a moment try to pretend that this is not a significant move on the part of this legislature. Perhaps, hypocritically, many in the community are in recognition of a certain set of affairs and they have tried to either ignore its existence, or worse, continue to uphold it as a basis for discriminating between children. Either the parents are married and the children are legitimate (and thereafter entitled to all of the benefits that that union accorded), or the parents are not married and that child is accorded second class status in the community.

Those, in my respectful submission, are outmoded concepts. They are based on positions and matters which, by and large, no longer have currency, no longer have even a proper basis in the modern society we live in. I hasten to say that this is not by any means a statement which seeks to undermine the importance of the institution of marriage. It is aimed at ceasing discrimination against the innocents who are products of relationships which do not have the benefit of the marital union.

At Common Law, succession was based on the supremacy of the male, the expressed purpose being to produce children of undisputed paternity. The reason for that was that these children would ultimately inherit their father's property as natural heirs.

Mr. Speaker, if I may refer to the Hansard of 15 March 2001, which contains the details of my debate which ensued on that Motion back then, and read a short excerpt from it simply because I think it underlines again why the Law is the way it is now, and why it, in my respectful view, needs to be changed to reflect the realities of modern day society.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: During that debate I said the following. "The primacy of succession can be seen reflected in the view of Sir William Blackstone, in his Commentaries on the Laws of England. In 1765, and I quote from that text, "The incapacity of the illegitimate child consists principally in this: he cannot be heir to anyone, neither can he have heirs but of his own body for being nullius filius" Which simply means, Mr. Speaker, nobody's child. "He is therefore of kin to nobody and has no ancestor from whom any inheritable blood can be derived." [2001 Official Hansard Report, p. 93]

That was the Common Law position – the position which would have obtained in Cayman at the time of settlement. The Succession Law, as antiquated as I and others might think it to be, as it currently stands is still a significant improvement on what was the Common Law position. It is time that we moved on to a more modern position and one that is more in keeping with our recognition of the importance and stature of children irregardless of what sort of relationship they are the result of.

In this day and age the welfare of the child and the promotion of the child's interest is the paramount consideration of those who are charged with the responsibility for the welfare of children and indeed by the courts in their consideration of matters which affect the rights of the child.

In the UK as long ago as 1969 they passed the Family Law Reform Act which gave recognition to the succession rights of children in the way that this Motion sought to have section 35 of the Succession Law here amended. In other jurisdictions in the region, Barbados and Jamaica in particular, a long time ago, they moved their legislation and sought to amend the Common Law position to recognise the paramountcy of the interest of the children over any other social concerns or inhibitions which might have existed and might continue to exist which continue to perpetuate this sort of discrimination.

I think it is very useful to outline again what the concerns are that have been around for a long time in other jurisdictions, which have taken the step to do away with the distinction between illegitimate and legitimate children for all purposes. May I again refer to what I did say on 15 March 2001 when I referred to the Law Commissions working paper on illegitimacy published in the UK in 1979. They sought to address some of these concerns and arguments that are often put forward in favour of maintaining a distinction or, to be more accurate, a discrimination between children in wedlock and those who are not.

They put it this way and I can refer to the Official Hansard Report (15 March 2001) [page 93].

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The Commission put it this way: 'It is not now easy to put convincing arguments in favour of discrimination, because such arguments would logically justify a return to the strict common law position, and it is difficult to believe that there would be any substantive support for turning the clock back in this way. Nevertheless, arguments in favour of preserving the principle of discrimination may still be used by those who are prepared reluctantly to accept as an accomplished fact, the changes which have already been made toward improving the legal status of the illegitimate child but think that no further reforms should be made. We therefore briefly summarise the arguments in favour of discrimination. There are three in number though they are perhaps not altogether distinct.

"First, it is said that the legal distinction between 'legitimacy' and 'illegitimacy' reflects social realities. This was certainly true at one time. The birth of an illegitimate child was regarded as bringing disgrace not only on the mother but also on the immediate family. The child could no more expect to be recognised as a member of the family and be received into the family home than he could expect to inherit family property. He was not a real member of the family group. However, although there may still be cases where the illegitimate child is in this position, the evidence suggests that a significant and increasing proportion of all illegitimate children born each year are recognised by both parents, at least the parents have a relationship of some stability...

"Secondly, it is said that the distinction serves to uphold moral standards and also to support the institution of marriage. In relation to the preservation of moral standards, it is difficult to say how far the fear of producing illegitimate children influenced sexual behaviour in the past; since the risk of an unwanted pregnancy can now usually be avoided by contraceptive measures it seems improbable that such fears still influence sexual behaviour to any substantial extent. Support for the institution of marriage is of course of great importance, especially in the present context, because a married relationship between parents should in principle be more stable than an unmarried one, so creating a better environment for the child's upbringing. However, many marriages are not stable, and statistically it seems that marriages that are entered into primarily for the purpose of ensuring that an expected child is not born illegitimate are especially at risk. In a large proportion of marriages where the girl is under 20 she also pregnant; and the failure rate of marriage where the girl married young is statistically high. We therefore find it difficult to accept that the institution of marriage is truly supported by a state of the law which the conception of a child may encourage young couples to enter precipitately into marriages which may have little chance of success.

"The third argument in favour of preserving discriminatory treatment asserts that the legal relationship between the child's parents should be relevant in determining the child's legal status: that as the legal relationship of marriage results in legitimate status for the child, so a relationship which does not accord with the norm should not result in normal status for the child. On this view it is regarded as significant not only that a legitimate child is the issue of a legally recognised union, the incidents of which are fixed by law and which can only be dissolved by formal proceedings but also that marriage, at least in its inception, is intended to be permanent. The relationship of an illegitimate child's parents, on the other hand, is not in; general legally recognised and may never have been intended to be more than transient. However this argument is based on the premise that a child's status ought to be affected by that of his parents. This is the proposition which we do not accept; it is, after all, the child's status, and the nature of the relationship between his parents need not and should not affect this.'

"That, Mr. Speaker, I believe is the most compelling argument of all. I will read it again: 'However this argument is based on the premise that a child's status ought to be affected by that of his parents. This is the proposition which we do not accept; it is, after all, the child's status, and the nature of the relationship between his parents need not and should not affect this.'

"In other words, to quote or misquote scripture – the sins of the father ought not to be visited on the child. Continuing: 'In general, where a child is involved, the law is that his welfare is the first and paramount consideration; transcending even the consideration of doing justice between his parents or between his parents and outsiders. We do not think that the arguments mentioned above in favour of discrimination are sufficiently strong to justify a refusal, as a matter of law, to apply the same welfare principle to children simply on the ground that they have been born out of wedlock. In particular, we see no justification for preserving the status quo . . .'"

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Minister, when he moved this Bill, did outline what the current statistics are at present in the Cayman Islands in terms of the births where the mother has never been married. I think that the actual number of children born outside wedlock is probably even higher than the statistics which he gave. His statistics, as I understood them, are based on the number born to a mother who has never been married, but there are a significant number of children born to mothers who were once married and who are no longer married. Those children, for the purposes of the matter under consideration, would be illegitimate as well. Therefore, I think the number of actual births of illegitimate children is probably somewhat higher than the figures given by the Honourable Minister and it would help, not to change anybody's position, the whole context of this debate if those were available. The figures that I had only went up to 1999, so his figures are more up to date than mine.

However, those that I was able to ascertain back in 2001, related to the period 1990-1999. The average of births per annum then was 548 and the average of 43 per cent of those births was outside wedlock. Those were the figures that I was able to obtain. A significant percentage of our population is going to be stigmatized, if births outside the benefit of a marital union continue to be a stigma. I believe we have a duty and a responsibility as members of the Legislative Assembly not to allow that to continue.

There is no basis for it, other than age old prejudices which exist: some for moral reasons; some for biblical reasons where these children would have been conceived against the biblical injunction; some for reasons relating to inheritance; many relating to questions of status in the community; many having to do with the difficulty of being able to prove that children born outside the marital union are children of the father or the male of that union. Most of those concerns, aside from those involving biblical and moral aspects, have gone by the wayside.

These days we have very good means of proving the paternity of a child and, while many of us will still have concerns about what might seem to be a promotion or acceptance of children being conceived outside wedlock, I believe those concerns ought to be outweighed by the welfare of the child, who had nothing to do with where he came from or what the state of the relationship was between his mother and father which resulted in his conception; I think that is the most compelling argument of all. We should not continue to allow mere accident of birth to determine the status of a child; whether a child inherits or does not inherit; whether the child is Caymanian or not Caymanian; whether the child is accorded a certain stature and acceptance in the community or not.

The Honourable Minister who moved this Bill – and I was reminded when I looked through the Hansard that he was on the other side of the floor when he supported that Motion, he was seated next to me. At that time I think he often considered himself, the only Member of the Opposition. It is, I believe, a good thing that he is able in his capacity now as Minister having supported the Motion that I brought to be able to move this very important, far-reaching, forward-thinking Bill.

Mr. Speaker, I think I have sought to outline again very briefly the underlying philosophy of the Motion that was brought which has resulted in the Bill, but I would like to take a few minutes now to consider some of the provisions in the Bill itself. Mr. Speaker, if I could have a moment. [Pause]

Turning to Part II of the Status of Children Bill, on page 10, entitled "Equal Status of Children", section 3(1) provides: "Subject to subsection (2) for all the purposes of the Laws of the Islands a person is the child of his natural parents and his status as their child is independent of whether he is born inside or outside of marriage and all other relationships shall be determined accordingly."

Section 3(2) provides: "Where an adoption order has been made under the Adoption of Children Law (1996 Revision) or the law of any other jurisdiction the child is in law the child of the adopting parents as if they were his natural parents."

Therefore, subsection (1) is subject to that provision, which is quite in order. If you adopt a child, the child, for the purposes of the law, severs the natural relationship and his adopted parents stand in the shoes of his natural parents.

Section 3(3) provides: "The rule of construction whereby in any instrument words of relationship signify only legitimate relationship in the absence of a contrary expression of intention is hereby abolished."

Those are probably the most critically important provisions in this entire legislation. It is on section 3 that the whole basis of the removal of the distinction of legitimacy and illegitimacy in terms of children is based. If you look at the end of the Bill (which relates to the Laws which are being repealed as a result of this) you will see that section 35 of the Succession Law (which is the section I sought to have amended) and the Legitimation Law (1997 Revision) are repealed. Therefore, as far as the Succession Law section 35 is concerned (with that having been repealed), the distinction between succession rights for children also goes. As far as the Legitimation Law is concerned, legitimation is concerned with where a child is born out of wedlock, but his parents subsequently marry each other; he is not considered to be legitimate but legitimated. With the passage of this Bill, the Status of Children Law, the necessity for the provisions in the Legitimation Law is no longer there and hence the repeal of that.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is another piece of legislation which I alluded to when I started speaking which also will be significantly impacted by the passage of this Bill and that is the Immigration Law. Under the current Law distinction is made between the rights of legitimate children and illegitimate children for the purpose of determining whether or not they have Caymanian status.

If I may have a moment, Sir. [Pause]

I am reminded by my colleague, the Elected Member for East End, of what the Honourable Minister of Community Service said in his debate to which I earlier referred. The Elected Member for East End clearly wanted to make sure that any credit that needs to be given to the Honourable Minister of Community Services is given by me during my debate and so I will read that.

The Honourable Minister of Community Services did actually make reference to the importance of the immigration issue in relation to the removal of the distinction between illegitimacy and legitimacy when he spoke on 15 March 2001. He says, on page [97] of the relevant Hansard (referring to me, I think), “So, I thank him and wish to say also that the Minister for Social Services, the Honourable Edna Moyle, has obviously expressed a long awaited interest in this Motion. I am happy that it has come here. It will coincide brilliantly with my Motion on immigration that also deals with the question of illegitimacy. I am hoping that get as much support for that Motion as I have given this one. Thank you.”

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, there has been recognition, on both sides of this Honourable House, of the importance of resolving that issue. However, as the Law currently stands the distinction between legitimate and illegitimate children, for the purposes of immigration, continues. I should say before I go on, that I am grateful to the Honourable Minister of Community Services, with whom I had a chance to speak before he moved this Bill. He has proposed that the Status of Children Bill, if passed by this Honourable House (as I expect it to be), should not come into effect immediately. I hope it will become clear as I go through this law with your permission, and make a few references to the proposed new Immigration Bill, if I can call it that.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: I hope that it will become clear why I believe it is important that when this Bill is passed it will not come into effect until we have also passed and brought into effect the new Immigration Bill. As the Law currently stands under section 21 of the Immigration Law, page 17; “21. (1) After the 15th October, 1992, any person under the age of eighteen years who is the legitimate child, step-child or adopted child of a person who possesses Caymanian status shall, for the purposes of this Law, himself possess Caymanian status and shall, continue to possess such status unless and until he loses it under any other provision of this Law.”

Translated into ‘lay’ language this means if any legitimate child, step child or adopted child of a person who has Caymanian status for the purposes of this Law, possesses Caymanian status and shall continue to possess that status unless until they lose it under any other provision of this Law and that relates only to persons who obtain status and essentially who were born after 15 October 1992.

Mr. Speaker, I take that back. I do not think that section applies the way that I have said. That subsection, I believe, applies to any person after 15 October 1992 who is under the age of 18 and who is a legitimate child, step child or adopted child of a person who possesses Caymanian status.

The explanation which I gave in relation to that which is subsection (1) of section 21 actually applies to subsection (2) which is, “(2) Any person born on or after the 15th October, 1992, whether born in or outside the Islands, shall possess Caymanian status if-

(a) at least one of his parents, at the time of his birth, possesses Caymanian status; and

(b) one of his parents, at the time of his birth, is domiciled in the Islands.”

However, the discriminatory section is subsection 1 which relates to only legitimate children, where it says, “(3) Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing, subsection (2) shall, in relation to an illegitimate child, have effect subject to the following modifications-

(a) subject to paragraphs (b) and (c), the status or domicile of the putative father, or of any person holding himself out as the father of the child, shall not be taken into account, and the status or domicile of the mother shall alone be regarded;”

Therefore, the result is that as the Law currently stands, the status or domicile of the father of the child, for the purposes of determining whether or not the child is entitled to Cayman status, is not to be taken into account: only the status of the mother. Therefore, that is a discriminatory feature which will be removed in due course by the passage of the Status of Children Bill.

The reason why I have suggested (and I believe the Honourable Minister has agreed) that these two new pieces of legislation need to coincide is that the new Immigration Bill proposes that on page 18 of the Bill, the definition section, ‘child’ means the biological or adopted child whether or not legitimate.

So while it is arguable perhaps that the discriminatory provisions presently contained in the Immigration Law might be repealed, by implication, by the passage of the Status of Children Bill, 2003, we are hoping to get the Immigration Bill passed by the end of this year. However, I think that it would be unfortunate if we had a situation whereby, for persons who happen to be in this two or three-week period, there was some question of whether or not that particular provision in the Immigration Law had been repealed. I think that it is probably better if we do it very cleanly and make sure that the two pieces of legislation which complement each other go through at the same time and there is no question about the immigration status of children born during this period.

Moving on to the whole question about the establishment of paternity, the Private Member's Motion No. 07/01 (which I have referred to) also sought for legislation to be passed to establish a basis on which paternity could be proven. Mr. Speaker, in section 7, part 3 of the Status of Children Bill, on page 13 there is a fairly comprehensive list of presumptions in which the paternity of a male person is to be determined and some of those relate to presumptions which already exist at Common Law but, many of them go significantly further. Subsection (1)(a) “(1) Unless the contrary is proven on a balance of probabilities, there is a presumption that a male person is, and shall be recognised in law to be, the father of a child in anyone of the following circumstances -

“(a) the person was married to the mother of the child at the time of its birth;”

That has been the Common Law position since ancient times. There is a presumption that if there is a marital relationship existing and a child is born to the wife of that relationship that the father is her husband. The presumption is rebuttable but requires significant proof.

“(b) the person was married to the mother of the child and that marriage was terminated by death or judgement of nullity within 280 days before the birth of the child, or by divorce where the decree nisi was granted within 280 days before the birth of the child;”

Some of my colleagues on this side had some debate and concern about the 280 day period. However, I think that those concerns have been allayed since they have come to learn that, in fact, the gestation period of the human being, is not the commonly referred to nine months but, is, in fact, 40 weeks which is what the 280 days relates to. It is also important, in this context, to understand that all of these are presumptions which are rebuttable by adducing evidence and that the standard is only the standard of balance of probabilities.

“(c) the person marries the mother of the child after the birth of the child and acknowledges that he is the natural father;”

Again that is a rebuttable presumption; if there are questions which arise subsequently no doubt those can be resolved by DNA testing.

“(d) the person was cohabiting with the mother of the child in a relationship of some permanence at the time of the birth of the child, or the child is born within 280 days after they ceased to cohabit;”

Where persons are living together in a permanent relationship; the Law will create a presumption that, for any child born to the mother during that period, the father is the man she has been living with. Again, if there is a question about that, the presumption is rebuttable. However, in the absence of any question the child would be presumed to be the child of that man for all purposes including immigration and succession.

“(e) the person has been adjudged or recognised in his lifetime by a court of competent jurisdiction to be the father of the child;”

There should be little question about that.

“(f) the person has, by affidavit sworn before a justice of the peace or a notary public or by other document duly attested and sealed, together with a declaration by the mother of the child contained in the same instrument confirming that the person is the father of the child, admitted paternity, but such affidavit or other document shall be of no effect unless it has been recorded with the Registrar General;”

Therefore, the man can swear an affidavit, make a declaration, and the mother would have had to do the same. If registered, there would be a presumption that the man is the father of the child.

“(g) the person has acknowledged in proceedings for registration of the child, in accordance with the law relating to the registration of births, that he is the father of the child;”

Where the man goes along to the Registrar General and signs the birth certificate there will be a presumption that he is the father of the child.

“(h) the mother of the child and a person acknowledging that he is the father of the child have signed and executed a deed to this effect in the presence of a counsel and attorney, but such a deed shall be of no effect unless it is notarised and recorded with the Registrar General prior to the death of the person acknowledging himself to be the father;”

I think that is quite clear, Mr. Speaker.

“(i) a person who is alleged to be the father of the child has given written consent to that child adopting his name in accordance with the law relating to the change of name;”

Again, Mr. Speaker, that is a very common situation in these Islands where, as time goes on, the man who had not previously been registered as the father of the child at the time of the child's birth, agrees that the child should bear his name and in those situations again there will be a presumption that he is the father of the child.

“(j) a person who is alleged to be the father of the child has by his conduct implicitly and consistently acknowl- edged that he is the father of the child.”

There are quite a number of instances where you can see that he supports the child on a regular basis where he brings the child home to live with him on weekends and holds the child to be his. Again there will be a rebuttable presumption that he is the father of the child. It will make the life of the child that much easier, make the child's social acceptance that much easier as well and the reality is he will acknowledge what is very commonplace in these Islands.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I am at the risk of being tedious in repeating this, but I have heard concerns expressed even with the confines of this Honourable Chamber, these provisions are merely rebuttable presumptions that the Law creates. Therefore, simply because there is a presumption in law that you are the father of the child does not mean that you cannot, through the appropriate course, establish, in fact, it is not yours, even though you were married to the mother of the child at the time the child was conceived as she was having an affair with somebody else. Therefore, that would be one factor that would weigh in the evidence but the one that would be unanswerable is if a DNA test is carried out and it is clear that you could never be the father of the child, the presumption is rebutted and that is the end of the matter.

So, I do not think that we need to be unduly concerned or anxious about the presumptions that are being created by the Law. We need to remember that the reason why the Law would create those presumptions is not about the mother or the father; it is about the child. The welfare of the child is what is of paramount importance to all of us and it is a principle that has been recognised in the Commonwealth for a long time. It is the innocents, who are products of relationships, who should be afforded every opportunity and given every protection under the Law. I am afraid that the mother and father who are grown up and tougher will have to do whatever they have to do to ensure that their rights are protected. If the man is not the father of the child he will have to establish that he is not. For too long it is the children who have suffered as a result of these relationships and these problems which are a result of the human condition.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I should perhaps spend a little time discussing when none of these presumptions apply by which paternity or parentage can be proven under the Status of Children Bill.

In section 9: “For the purposes of section 7, where a man and a woman, in good faith, go through a form of marriage that is void, they shall be deemed to be married for the period during which they cohabit, and the presumption referred to in section 7(1)(b)..” which is where “the person was married to the mother of the child and that marriage was terminated by death or judgement of nullity within 280 days before the birth of the child, or by divorce where the decree nisi was granted within 280 days before the birth of the child;”

The presumption referred to in that section applies accordingly. Therefore, if a marriage is void – and this can happen where the ceremony of marriage is completed but there is some legal impediment to the parties being married. For instance, if the mother is under the age of 16, or if one of the parties is still married to someone else and during the period of cohabitation a child is conceived, a provision such as this is there to protect the child. It will create a presumption that the man is the father of the child and all of the rights which would accrue to a child born within the benefit of a marital union will also apply.

In cases where none of the presumptions apply, section 10 makes provision. Section 10(1): “Any person who-

- (a) being a woman, alleges that any person is the father of the child;
- (b) alleges that the relationship of father and child exists between himself and any other person; or [That is in the case of a man]
- (c) being a person having a proper interest in the result, wished to have it determined whether the relationship of father and child exists between two named persons, may apply in such other manner as may be prescribed by rules of court to the court for a declaration of paternity, and if it is proved to the satisfaction of the court that the relationship exists the court may make a declaration of paternity whether or not the father or the child or both of them are living or dead.”

So the instances that are contemplated are where a woman, who is alleging that someone is the father of her child, can make an application to the court. That has almost always been the case. However, it has never been the case in these Islands that a man alleges that the relationship of father and child exists between himself and any other person.

Also where (c) “being a person having a proper interest in the result, wished to have it determined whether the relationship of father and child exists between two named persons,” that is a provision which is giving local standing before the courts to some person who has a proper interest in knowing whether or not this man is the father of this child. They can apply to the court whether the father is living or dead for a declaration that this is the case. This is often important and there has been no mechanism till now in the case where someone who believes he is the child of someone who has passed on. However, because he was not the legitimate child, he was unable to share in the benefit of his alleged father's estate.

Even where the father is dead it will be possible, in appropriate circumstances, for the court to make an order on application by, for instance, the personal representative of his estate, or by the aggrieved child, who believes himself to be the natural child of that father, but having been left out of the sharing up, to make an application to the court for paternity to be proven. Whether that has to take place by exhuming the body to get a DNA specimen or whether a specimen can be taken from some other relative which is close enough to make the comparison, it can be done. There is the legal framework in which the application can be made and an order can be made to the court. This Bill is far-reaching; appropriately so. This is not a complaint, but a recognition that this is a significant piece of legislation that is being proposed to be passed.

Mr. Speaker, page 13 section 11 (1): “Where there is no person presumed under section 7 to be the father of a child, any person may apply to the court for a declaration that a male person is his father, or any male person may apply to the court for a declaration that a person is his child.” Again, where it is a situation that falls outside the presumption which is set out in section 7, if you believe that John Brown is your father you can make an application to the court and the court will then set in train a certain process which will compel John Brown to do whatever the court says is necessary for the court to be satisfied that it can determine whether or not he is your father. That is also the case the other way round where the father can make such an application to the court to seek a declaration that he is the father of a particular child.

The companion to that is subsection 3 of Section 11: “Where the court finds, on a balance of probabilities, that the relationship of father and child has been established, the court may make a declaratory order to that effect, and, subject to sections 13 and 14, that order shall be recognised for all purposes.”

So, consequently, you get an order from the court saying that you are the father of this child and, for whatever purposes that are necessary, that order is adequate.

Again, to facilitate those orders and the results sought by those orders, section 15 makes provision for parentage testing. Section 15(1) provides: “In proceedings where the parentage of a child is in issue the court may make a parentage testing order requiring a parentage testing procedure to be carried out on any of the following persons for the purpose of obtaining information to assist in determining the parentage of the child-

- (a) the child
- (b) a person known to be a parent of the child; or
- (c) any other person, if the court is of the opinion that the information that could be obtained if the parentage testing procedure were to be carried out in relation to the person might assist in determining the parentage of the child.”

Therefore, as far as (c) is concerned, it contemplates the sort of situation I alluded to earlier where there is someone who is believed to be a relative of the child, perhaps a sibling, and you want to determine whether or not this individual shares the same parents, then the court could bring alleged sibling before the court and make an order in relation to them that perhaps a specimen be given to assist the court in determining whether or not John Brown is also the father of this particular individual; John Brown known to be the father of this sibling. This parentage testing procedure is bound to meet with some objections or at least resistance and consternation on the part of some people because it is a process by which the court can, and will, order that certain people present themselves and permit specimens to be taken from their person to enable them to carry out their exercise and their function in determining the parentage of a child.

In making those decisions as to whether a testing order should be made, the court under the same section, section 15, an order “may be made subject to such terms and conditions as the court determines” and “in deciding whether to make a parentage testing order, the court shall

- (a) consider and determine any objection made by a party to the proceedings on account of medical, religious or other grounds; and
- (b) if it determines that an objection is valid, take the objection into account in deciding whether to make the order.

Therefore, the court has certain latitude in determining whether or not such an order should be made and, if so, subject to what terms and conditions.

In subsection (5) “Where the court makes an order under this section and a person over the age of 18 named therein refuses to submit to the parentage testing procedure, the person is not liable to a penalty in relation to the refusal to comply with the order but the court may draw such inferences as it thinks appropriate.”

In other words, if you are over the age of 18 and you refuse, which you can do, then the court can draw such inferences as it thinks appropriate which may and are bound to include a provision that the reason why you refused to submit to the test is that you believe that there is a least a risk that paternity could be established. It may not be limited to paternity, but it would most likely establish that you were a parent of the child.

Those, Mr. Speaker, are the crucial provisions of this very important Bill. I hope that what I have said this afternoon in relation to it has provided this Honourable House and perhaps the wider public with a better understanding of the underlying philosophy behind the Private Member's Motion which has resulted in the Bill and indeed, I hope the underlying philosophy behind the Bill itself.

I also hope that I have been of some assistance to this Honourable House in outlining the specific provisions of the Bill and the mechanisms it proposes and that by doing so, we will all have a better understanding and perhaps be a little less anxious and concerned about the implications of the Bill.

Nonetheless, there are bound to be concerns that persist and anxiety that exists for the future because it will significantly affect people's rights. The principal one is bound to be the whole question of succession, because where children are born outside the marriage union, and they have brothers and sisters who, in the present context, are legitimate and would therefore inherit the entire estate of their father, in those circumstances those individuals now would have to share with other persons who, in many instances they know full-well, are their siblings, but because of accident of birth they happened to be born outside the four corners of the marital union.

We will simply have to work through those concerns. We will have to continue to explain to our people that while that is the overall case that those concerns exist; if we are going to build a fair, reasonable and progressive society and community we are going to need all of us, all fathers in particular, acknowledge the responsibility of fatherhood, and that necessarily involves the financial consequences and benefits that flow to the children of those fathers.

In this day and age where human rights are a regular feature, all of us, even those who are the most conservative amongst us, are having to come to realise that we are not living in a homogenous society anymore, not all of us have the same values and mores; not all of us believe in the same institutions – even the institution of marriage. We are going to have to pass legislation which affords to all in the community, particularly the innocents, the same benefits as those who may be born in more recognised and regularised (for want of a better word) relationships.

We cannot continue to perpetuate the old philosophy and the old principles of nullius in filius where those who are born outside the benefit of the marriage union are considered to be, by and large, nobody's child and are not able to enjoy and derive the benefits which their siblings, who happen again by accident of birth, to be born within the confines of a marriage, do enjoy.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that this is a very progressive piece of legislation. I again commend the Honourable Minister for having the courage to bring it. It has been some time coming – it is more than two and a half years. I had almost given up hope that we would get there before this term was over, but I commend him for having brought it and offer him the wholehearted support of Members of the Opposition in its passage. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I have listened carefully to the arguments which have been adduced. It would be remiss of me if I did not say something in support of this important piece of legislation. It is something that has always been close to my heart, being an advocate of human rights and being someone with a social conscience which was pricked by historical precedence and prejudices, not only in Caymanian society but in many plantation societies in the Caribbean.

Several years ago I read an article about illegitimacy in these societies by a social anthropologist by the name of William B. Goode and I wish that had had the presence of mind to bring the article because I have two of them which he wrote in an anthropological journal. However, I see that there is a companion Bill to be discussed and perhaps I will bring it then, because I think that some of the passages which he wrote can serve to inform us about the necessity to remove these kinds of barriers.

In order to avoid repetition, I want to take a slightly different approach. I am happy that we are doing this because I have taken cognisance of the whole effort by the United Nations in their child protection efforts, particularly as it comes to protecting the rights of the child. I know some years ago the United Kingdom did not ratify that convention and the rights of the child, and since we fall directly under the auspices of the United Kingdom, by inference, it would not have been ratified by the Cayman Islands either. Therefore, it is of critical importance that this legislation is brought – and I want to commend the Honourable Minister for bringing it – because it is long overdue.

Mr. Speaker, this whole business of legitimacy and illegitimacy had its genesis in our part of the world by the kind of settlement patterns that were effected, particularly those emanating out of plantation society and the privileges of the planter class and the oligarchy vis-à-vis those people who were deemed to be less of a social standing and of lesser social importance. Not surprisingly, therefore, a lot of these prejudices and positions were based on skin colour.

You will find that the people who were excluded by these laws were not only of a lesser social standing, but in many societies they tended, for obvious reasons, to be those who were of darker complexions. We have come down from that time. At the very beginning the way these kinds of persons were described told us exactly what was thought of them. It was primarily contemptuous, even for English people who liked to consider themselves 'civilised' for whatever that meant, because in many of the societies these people were termed not only illegitimate but there was a special description for them, "bastards". There were many jurisdictions where the laws were called "bastard laws". They clearly excluded these people from inheriting properties and they were really maligned. Later on, it was couched in softer, gentler terms in terms of affiliation laws, but it was clearly prejudicial against people born outside of legitimate unions, hence the term that anthropologists used by calling them 'children of illegitimate unions'.

Nowadays, I am happy that situations have evolved where we are not so harsh. Nevertheless, in some societies prejudices still exist. Over the coming online of the United Nations Convention on the rights of the child, which is really an effort to eliminate these kinds of prejudices and these kinds of double standards, it is necessary for societies to craft these kinds of laws. I would suggest that this law, because I have been through the clauses, is far reaching and wide in its scope and certainly will be acceptable in the most liberal of societies. I am happy that we are taking this step because it is entirely necessary.

I listened to the Honourable Mover when he gave his statistics about the number of children born, and the number of children born to mothers out of formal unions – into what anthropologists call informal unions. The statistics do not surprise me. While there are some people who would take a moralistic view and would attempt to use these statistics to come to some kind of position as to the morality of the society, someone of my intellectual bent would shy away from that. What is important to me is that we have some kind of legal mechanism to ensure that the persons born into these kinds of circumstances are not only enfranchised but they are also made capable of inheritance rights – of inheriting properties.

I am happy to see that we are arriving at a more sensible way of accepting paternity because it seems to me that in societies like the Cayman Islands there have always been questions and problems on this whole notion of paternity. I do not want to anticipate future Bills, but I was relieved to see that in a companion Bill we have taken the opportunity to make right what I consider one of the gravest injustices in this society – namely this whole business of the nationality of a child. Suffice it to say that this particular piece of legislation, when it is enacted, we can be assured that we will be up to what the United Nations Convention on the rights of the child anticipates.

It is necessary for us to do this, particularly in light of the fact that it is these kinds of circumstances that make certain people in this society at risk. This is particularly true more so in the case of young men than in young women, who with an absence of a father-figure and absence of role-models find it difficult during some years in their upbringing to adjust themselves. It seems, not being gender biased, that girls and young women find it easier to cope under these kinds of circumstances than young men. When the identity crisis sets in, young women fair much better than young men. I am happy to see that all these things have been taken into consideration in this legislation, and that it is clearly earmarked.

Sometimes, Mr. Speaker, frustrated fathers, or men who purport to be fathers, come up to us legislators — and these men want really to do well, but the way the law was skewed was really biased against them, and there are far too many cases in which, even after expensive exercises like DNA testing, some men who want to be responsible still are not given the kind of support that they would need in admitting paternity and having legitimate paternity rights and privileges.

I am happy to say that this proposed legislation takes this into account and will make it easier for those people who are responsible, because that is another notion that I would wish to dispel. While it is true that there is a lot of irresponsibility and a lot of irresponsible young men, not everyone is so disposed and there are many young men out there who would like to fulfil their paternal obligations to their children.

I also want to say that this is important because many people may not know that per capita the Cayman Islands has one of the highest divorce rates, not only in the region, but in the world. People should check that out and they should be minded to understand that, which speaks volumes about the kind of society we live in and the kind of stresses and pressures that we are under. That is an empirical fact. If you check the court records and do comparative studies with other jurisdictions you will find, and this not my information but information that I gleaned from international journals, that we have one the highest divorce rates in the world – just like we have among young men one of the highest imprisonment rates for young men per capita in the world.

Therefore, this kind of legislation not only has immediate effects but has great prospects for being curative in the long run. I have spoken to many young men who struggle with the fact that there is an absence of a father figure. It does not necessarily have to be a biological parent; it can just be a stand-in person: someone of the calibre that can be respected and can be a role-model and be a source of moral, psychological and emotional support. Hence, again, this is a positive move and along with the proposed companion legislation it can only move us up to the standard which United Nations international conventions require.

I think that the legal aspects of it in terms of the ability to be inclusive, to inherit, to be considered legitimate, have already been very well articulated by persons who are more imminently equipped to articulate this than myself, but I am proud to give it my support. As I said, being a human rights man, this piece of legislation removes one of the primary prejudicial aspects. However, the work is not over because the prejudices still exist in the minds of many people.

Before I conclude I want to say that what is important in a society like ours that is sometimes more puritanical than is necessary to be, is not that we cast judgements on the circumstances into which people were born or out of which they came, but rather that we make provisions for the ability to include them so that they can be legitimised in our society, so that they can realise some sense of self-worth, and can realise that they have a constructive role to play.

I want to say in conclusion that there are many men out there who will find this inspiring and motivating because it will mean that they now have some protection, some means of legitimacy when they step forward to make their paternity claims, whether those were in a legal union or in a non-formal union, because there are many persons who want to be responsible. In the final instance, of course, it eases a lot of pressure off the Government in terms of the mechanisms they would have to put in place. We do not want to become the kind of society where you have to chase down people and take them to court and execute them to be responsible. However, by setting up a mechanism such as this, we will provide the necessary incentives, and the sanctions, whenever it is necessary to call upon them, for people to be responsible.

I am happy to lend this my support and look forward to the ancillary legislation which would bring us up to the 21st century standards as set by the United Nations Committee on the rights of the child.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to support the matter of the Children's Bill that is before this Honourable House.

In March 2001, the Second Elected Member for George Town and I brought the Motion that he referred to, to amend section 35 of the Succession Law to legitimise children's status in this country. I welcome, and I must applaud the Minister for bringing this Bill. I know that this Bill, when passed into Law, will probably not be as well received in this community as we would want it to be, therefore I would like to take a little different approach than the Second Elected Member for George Town did. He went through the legal aspects of it, and I think that the time has come that some of us try to explain to the country the real moral reasons why these things have to be done.

Morally, it is right. I too will be affected by this Bill but I have to stand up to the responsibilities that my forefathers and I took on and my father took on (bless his soul). I too have a child that was born out of wedlock but it did not reach the point where I did not acknowledge the child. That child is registered in my name. Thus that part of it does not affect me; however, the other aspect of it which will affect me is from my siblings stand point. Mr. Speaker, many people in this country find themselves in that situation. They say you can pick your friends but you cannot pick your family. If it is your family then there is nothing you can do about it – it has happened prior to your being, or sometimes after your coming into this world. Nevertheless, it is not of your making, therefore you have to accept it.

In most instances they are not acknowledged and it causes something to a human being when they have no father. I am not particularly talking about nowadays where women make that decision to have a child. I am not here to stop any woman, because nowadays women take better care, financially, of their children than most two-member families – husbands and wives. Provisions are made for that in section 8(2). Therefore, I am not here to say that a person's birth certificate should not have a father presented on it, because this is the 21st century and women are very liberated and they certainly are capable of raising children as a single-parent, in a number of instances, better than two parents can.

Therefore, when there was, in the past, the argument surrounding the situation that there is no such thing as a fatherless child, while that can be so considered in today's world, technologically women have made the choices. They have choices now that they can do such on their own. I believe, Mr. Speaker, it reads in section 8(2) “where a woman (whether married or unmarried) becomes pregnant by means of a fertilisation procedure using any sperm obtained from a man who is not her husband, that man is presumed not to be the father of any child born as a result of the pregnancy.” I totally agree. Women have the ability to make those choices and I wholeheartedly support that.

However, Mr. Speaker, there are many men in our community, like the Minister of Education said, who want to take up that responsibility and, for whatever reason, they were never adjudged to be the father – whether they approved of it, of being the father on a certificate or registry or not - they were never in the position where they can be adjudged to be the father.

I had an experience about a year ago when a young man came to me and said that he had been off the Island at the time of the registration of his child. He subsequently went to get his name placed on the register and he was refused under the law, because no-one can come at a subsequent period and claim their fatherhood on that birth certificate. It prompted me to again look into the matter after having been involved with the Motion in 2001. Upon calling the Acting Attorney General at the time, he assured me that this Bill was with the drafts persons, and, in the not too distant future, it would be brought to this Honourable House. Now, Mr. Speaker, I am glad to be a part of the passage of this Bill because now I can call that young man and tell him that in a few months he will be able to be legitimately called the father of that child, by virtue of signing an affidavit or the likes.

I would also like to acknowledge that there are members of our community out there who – and there is no need for us as citizens of this country, or as legislators to constantly hide our heads in the sand – hide and refuse to take up the responsibilities of being a father. Sections of this new Bill, which I hope will become Law in the not too distant future, make provisions for anyone to make an application to the courts.

In the past, under the Affiliation Law, if the mother had not taken the unmarried father to court within the first year of that child's life, then it was virtually impossible to get any court order or affiliation order against that father. Now that is, in my submission, certainly unfair to the child. If it can be proven that a person is the father of that child, there has to be some way to ensure that that father takes up the responsibility.

Too much of it is happening. I know it is not unique to the Caribbean, but certainly in the Caribbean, many of us believe in our minds that our status in the community is based on how many children we can father. I cast no aspersions on anyone in this Honourable Chamber or anywhere else because I also said that there are many in our community who are fathers who want to be fathers and there are other mitigating circumstances that will not allow them to do that. However, there are many who will not live up to the responsibility of being fathers. You have children born out of wedlock and the children are left without direction. In most cases, the mother alone cannot support those children. This law goes a long way to try to correct those injustices that are being visited upon the children in our community.

Regarding one of the sections of the Law, I spoke to one of the drafts persons and some of my colleagues, perhaps the Government may be mindful to look at the section Part III (7)(h) where it says "the mother of the child and a person acknowledging that he is the father of the child have signed and executed a deed to this effect in the presence of a counsel and attorney,..." I think the drafts-person has indicated that should be 'attorney-at-law' and maybe the Minister can make a change in Committee stage.

Now, Mr. Speaker, another section of the law that I have a little problem with is section 10 (1) and (2) and it reads: "10 (1) Any person who –

- (a) being a woman, alleges that any person is the father of the child;
- (b) alleges that the relationship of father and child exists between himself and any other person; or being a person having a proper interest in the result, wished to have it determined whether the relationship of father and child exists between two named persons, may apply in such other manner as may be prescribed by rules of court to the court for a declaration of paternity, and if it is proved to the satisfaction of the courts that the relationship exists the court may make a declaration of paternity whether or not the father or the child or both

"(2) Where a declaration of paternity under subsection (1) is made after the death of the father or of the child, the court may at the same or any subsequent time make a declaration determining, for the purposes of section 7(1)(f), whether any of the requirements of that paragraph have been satisfied."

The Speaker: Honourable Member, we have now reached the hour of 4:30 pm and I have received notice that it is the wish of Members that the business of the House should continue until 6:30 pm. I would now call on the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, it having been decided that we should work a bit late this evening to try to finish as much business as possible, I beg to move that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow business to continue past the hour of 4:30 pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended in order that we may continue proceedings until 6:30 pm. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue until 6.30 pm.

The Speaker: I propose at this time to take the afternoon break for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 4.32 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.53 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Elected Member for East End continuing.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we took the suspension I was dealing with application for declaration of paternity and I was going on to explain my understanding of it and ask for some clarification. However, during the break I discussed it with the drafts-lady and now I have a better understanding of it so I will not go into that. I see the validity of, in section 10 (2) where it says "(2) Where a declaration of paternity under subsection (1) is made after the death of the father or of the child, the court may at the same or any subsequent time make a declaration determining, for the purposes of section 7(1)(f), whether any of the requirements of that paragraph have been satisfied." Therefore,

Mr. Speaker, I will not go into that area since there seems to be a good reason for doing it.

I was about to conclude as soon as I had made that point and I think all that is left for me to do is to give this Bill my support and hope that it is received by the community in the spirit that it was presented, in that we are trying to ensure that illegitimate children have equal paternal rights in our community; something that has long been outstanding, that under the law has been lacking, and requires equality in order that children born out of wedlock are not considered any less than children born in wedlock. Mr. Speaker, I again commend the Minister for bringing this Bill and I lend my support quite readily to it. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, I would invite the Honourable Minister for Community Services to exercise his right of reply.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say in my reply first of all, this very important piece of legislation, The Status of Children Bill 2003, has been given a very thorough examination by the Members of this House on both sides. In particular I would like to recognise the way in which the Second Elected Member for George Town, who brought the Private Member's Motion that initiated this Bill, actually dealt, very systematically, with the contents and the motives behind this legislation.

It is important for us to recognise that the welfare of a child, if it is to be of paramount importance, cannot be supported by laws with the objective of discriminating against children because of the accident of their birth. Therefore, I think we will be very surprised by the reaction of our community to this very progressive legislation. In fact, I am not expecting that our community will reject or be critical of this legislation, but in fact will welcome it with open arms simply because our community recognises at this time how very important it is for us to focus on the development of children – our future – in this society.

When we look at the statistics I revealed of persons that were born to unmarried women, and if we are to accept what the Second Elected Member for George Town said, that if we were also to take the persons that were born to married women but were still regarded illegitimate simply because those persons were not married at the time in which those children were conceived, then we would see that the numbers would even be greater.

If I were to go back and refer to the numbers I gave, as provided by the general registry in 2000, we would see a total of 618 born in the Cayman Islands. Of those children, 182 were born to mothers never married. Even if we were to look at just these statistics we would see that we would be doing a great injustice to a very large segment of our population, and, as the Second Elected Member for George Town noted, the statistics would reveal that there are some 43 per cent of our children born in what had previously been defined as illegitimate birth.

Therefore, I think that the society as a whole will agree with us here today. The fact that the Opposition and the Government have brought this to fruition says something about what the reaction of the society will be. I think that they will, first of all, be happy that the Government and the Opposition have been able to come together and work in the spirit of cooperation and collaboration to achieve something for the general good. I think that they will be convinced that seriously, this is a necessary development for us here in the Cayman Islands.

Again, I would like to mention the fact that this Bill is as a result of the Private Member's Motion that was brought by the Second Elected Member for George Town. I recognise the fact that the Member for North Side had intended to bring this particular piece of legislation, or at least some type of legislation in this particular way. However, as she was the sitting Minister responsible for Community Affairs at that particular time, it was therefore brought by other Members on the Backbench who I also supported at that particular time. I am happy that I am the Minister at this time responsible for presenting this to this Honourable House.

In closing, I would like to thank the Attorney General, the Honourable Second Official Member; this Honourable House; and also the Legal drafts-person who has so ably assisted us with the development of this piece of legislation. I thank all Members for their contributions and the acceptance of this very noble piece of law. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Status of Children Bill 2003 be given a Second Reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Status of Children Bill 2003 given a Second Reading.

The Children (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move a Bill for a law to amend the Children's Law 2003 and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, during the debate of the Children's Law 2003 in June of this year, I acknowledged that part 10 and schedule 9 of the law – child minding and day care for young children – did not adequately make a distinction between nannies and child minders. At that time I gave an undertaking to submit an amending Bill as soon as possible, clarifying this matter.

In these Islands most persons who come under the category of nanny are actually helpers and it was not the intention of the Ministry to provide that such persons should be registered under the law. The Children Amendment Bill 2003 seeks to clarify the persons who are required to be registered under part 10 of the Children Law, as well as to clarify the definition of nanny.

The Bill provides that “A nanny is a person who is employed to look after a child wholly or mainly in the home of the persons so employing him. Further, a person acts as a nanny for a child if he is employed to look after the child by –

- (a) a parent of the child;
- (b) a person who is not a parent of the child but who has parental responsibility for him; or
- (c) a person who is a relative of the child and who has assumed responsibility for his care.”

In passing, Mr. Speaker and Honourable Members, I should advise this House that the Children Law was assented to by the Governor and published in Gazette No. 23 of 17th November 2003. I now seek the approval of this Honourable House in passing The Children (Amendment) Bill, 2003.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the amendments that are being put forward by the Honourable Minister are straightforward, and just so that everyone will know, the Opposition is in support of the amendments.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Minister of Community Services wish to reply?

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I probably would like to reply just by saying that I wish for more days like this. [Laughter]

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Children (Amendment) Bill, 2003, be given a Second Reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Children (Amendment) Bill 2003 given a Second Reading.

The Judicature (Amendment) (No.2) Bill, 2003

Motion to change the Order of Business

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With the leave of this Honourable House I am going to ask if Item 13, which is the Summary Jurisdiction Amendment Bill, could be taken first and then The Judicature (Amendment) Bill is sort of a consequential amendment if the amendment to the Summary Jurisdiction Law goes through.

The Speaker: The question is that the Summary Jurisdiction (Amendment) Bill, 2003, be taken before the Judicature (Amendment) (No.2) Bill, 2003. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

Agreed: the Summary Jurisdiction (Amendment) Bill, 2003, be taken before the Judicature (Amendment) (No.2) Bill, 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered. The Honourable Second Official Member.

The Summary Jurisdiction (Amendment) Bill, 2003

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move for the Second Reading of a Bill for a law to amend the Summary Jurisdiction Law 1995 Revision to extend the jurisdiction of this court in civil causes or matters and to make new provisions for rights of appeal in civil causes or matters and incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Mr. Speaker, thank you very much. The Bill, as I said in the introduction, seeks to amend the Summary Jurisdiction Law 1995, among other things, to extend the jurisdiction of the Summary Court and to make new provisions for civil appeals under the Law.

As Honourable Members of this House are aware, the Summary Courts have jurisdiction to hear cases involving civil matters where the value or amount in dispute does not exceed C$2,000. This figure was fixed in Law 10 of 1975, and it means that many claims still involving comparatively small amounts must still be heard by judges of the Grand Court. Given the passage of time and inflation, among other things, this limit is clearly impractical in 2003. A Grand Court Rules Committee, after several meetings, invited the Attorney-General's chambers to propose an amendment to the Summary Jurisdiction Law which would increase the limit to a more realistic figure in order to better employ judicial resources and provide a more suitable forum for the resolution of small claims.

The figure which is set out in the Bill before this House is $20,000. In other words, it is proposed that the jurisdiction be increased from $2,000 to $20,000. It is further recommended that a number of other minor amendments to this law, as well as the Judicature Law, which I am to present later, should be made in order to improve the practice and procedures generally; to apply Grand Court cost rules to Summary Court civil proceedings; and to bring the ability of the Summary Court to enforce orders in line with the practice and procedure that currently obtains in the Grand Court.

In keeping with such thinking, clause 2 of the current Bill before the House seeks to amend section 22 of the Summary Jurisdiction Law.

Section 22 currently provides that "Subject to any other law, the jurisdiction vested in the courts shall be exercised . . . in the manner provided by this Law, Rules made under section 53 and by the [Criminal Procedure] Code, and in any case for which no provision is made, but subject to any directions given by the magistrate in any particular case, in substantial conformity with the practice and procedure for the time being observed in England . . ."

Clause 2 repeals reference to "conformity with the practice and procedure . . . observed in England . . ." because it is felt that there are currently comprehensive local Rules to address the concerns and, as such, there is no need to resort to English practice and procedures in any case.

It should be noted that the jurisdiction of a Grand Court and a Court of Appeal to make orders for costs in respect of civil proceedings is contained in section 24 of the Judicature Law itself. The Rules Committee advised that one of the purposes of the amendment was to give to those courts a statutory jurisdiction to make what is referred to as "'wasted cost' orders against legal practitioners who are guilty of conducting litigation in a manner that can be described as . . . improper, unreasonable, or negligent . . ."

The proposed amendments to section 33 by clause 3 of the Bill will ". . . bring the jurisdiction of the summary court in line with that of the Grand Court and the Court of Appeal in relation to orders relating to costs." In other words, the Summary Court magistrate will be able to make orders for wasted costs.

"Clause 5 of the Bill repeals and replaces section 35 of the Law to specify the types of order the summary court may make for the enforcement of judgements." I am advised that the magistrates of the Summary Court hold the view that the need to refer a minority of delinquent judgements to the Grand Court is indeed cumbersome and diminishes the authority of the magistrates themselves. Accordingly, it is proposed that magistrates should be given wider powers of enforcement. In so doing so, they will not be given any powers to appoint receivers and to make sequestration orders, but a new section 35 as set out in clause 5 provides ". . . that without prejudice to any other powers conferred upon the court in respect of any case in which any sum is adjudged to be paid as a fine or penalty by a person convicted of an offence, any judgement or order of the court made in a civil cause or matter may be enforced by one or more of the following means –Clause 5(35) (a) by writ of fieri facias;" [simply means, as I understand it, that the person is supposed to be able to get the bailiff to execute the judgement in their favour. It is really a writ of execution to give effect to the order of the court]

(b) by garnishee proceedings;" [means that if a person is in possession of property for a judgment debtor, then the person who wins the case is entitled to get an order to prevent the person who is in possession of that debt or property from disposing of it so it can be attached in the hands of a third person to be recovered]

(c) by a charging order;

(d) by an order for committal; or

(e) by an attachment of earnings order"

Clause 6 seeks to "repeal and replace section 39 which deals with civil appeals and clause 7 repeals sections 40 to 46." and contains provisions relating to appeals to the Grand Court from a decision of the magistrate in civil matters. A look at the current Law tells us that sections 40 to 46 dealing with appeals are lengthy and in some respects inappropriate. It is considered more appropriate to allow the Rules Committee to make rules to dictate the procedures and practice to be employed in dealing with appeals to the Grand Court from the Summary Court.

Clause 8 seeks to repeal section 47 which empowers a judge to remove a judgement into the Grand Court. It is felt that if the Summary Court is given wide enough powers to enforce its own judgements, there will be no need to remove the matters to the Grand Court for the purpose of enforcement. It is also proposed that as part of this enforcement mechanism, the Summary Court will have the power to commit persons to prison for non-payment of debts.

Clause 9 of the Bill before this House also seeks to amend the schedule to the Law "to provide that the civil jurisdiction of the court shall extend to any proceedings, whether arising in contract or tort (or both) or in respect of trespass to lands where the debt or damage does not exceed $20,000.” As I said before, part of the problems at the courts is that, because of the relative amount in terms of jurisdiction that the Summary Court enjoys, a lot of unnecessary minor matters go to the Grand Court to be dealt with and the whole purpose is to amend the Law so that more matters can be dealt with in the Summary Court.

That, Mr. Speaker, in a nutshell, is the purpose of the Bill before this House and I therefore commend it to Honourable Members for their support. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer just a short contribution on behalf of the Opposition in relation to this very important amending Bill. The Honourable Second Official Member has outlined quite well the purpose and effect of the proposed amendments and I would just like to offer a few observations.

With regard to the effect of the Bill in extending the financial jurisdiction of the Court from $2,000 to $20,000, I think that that is something that will be met with a great deal of enthusiasm by both the legal profession and those whom they represent. It is something that has been called for at least the last decade – as the Honourable Second Official Member has indicated. The financial jurisdiction of the Summary Court was fixed at $2,000 when the Court was formally established in 1975. A lot of water has gone under the bridge since then.

The Summary Court has really been relegated, in the last decade or so, to dealing with very small claims because of that. At the same time, the Grand Court has been forced to deal with claims over $2,000 but not significantly, in many cases, more than $2,000. The result of this, in many respects, has been that the cost of doing business in the Grand Court has become prohibitive, and in many cases claims in that area between $2,000 and $10,000 are not pursued because the costs in the Grand Court are necessarily more than they are in the Summary Court because the procedures are more formal and requires more work and more documentation to be filed.

It is important that the Summary Court is there and that its financial jurisdiction is extended because the process is a lot simpler, a lot more expeditious and in many instances the process there can be handled by persons acting on their own without the need to go and hire the services of a lawyer. Therefore, I think, as I said, that this would be met with a great deal of enthusiasm from all quarters.

As far as returning the ability to the Summary Court to enforce its own judgements, this is something that I personally am very happy to see. Those of us who practised regularly in the Summary Court were never very happy at the amendment to the Summary Jurisdiction Law some years ago, which basically removed the right to enforce judgements to the Grand Court. There was an old process that was called The Summons for Commitment Process which I think went out of the window because many of the judges, particularly those who came from the UK, felt that it was a roundabout way of committing people to jail for non-payment of debt.

Those of us who lived and grew up in this region understood that it was a very effective means of making people who had the means to pay, but who otherwise would not pay, to find the money very quickly. The way the process worked was that the court, having given a judgement, would make an order that this debt be paid by instalments of $100 a week, for instance. If the judgement debtor failed to pay the debt you could then issue a summons for commitment, in which case he had to come to court and show cause why he should not be committed to jail for non-compliance of the order which was in effect non-payment of the debt. However, those who came from other environments thought that this was akin to imprisonment for non-payment of debt and that debtors' prisons were something that had gone out of vogue in the UK some time ago.

Therefore, when the Law was amended in 1995 and when the new Grand Court Rules came into effect, summons for commitment provisions were repealed and many who operated in the Summary Court, myself included, felt that we had made the whole process unnecessarily complicated and expensive, because essentially to enforce many judgements you had to actually have the matter removed to the Grand Court to get various orders made. Consequently, they have taken away a significant amount of discretion and jurisdiction from the magistrates who deal with these things on a day to day basis. It has taken almost a decade but I am glad to be able to say it has finally been accepted that the Summary Court should have the ability to enforce its own judgements and to deal with its own process. I am delighted to see that that has happened.

As far as the wasted cost orders are concerned, these have always been quite controversial. I remember when they were introduced in 1995. In the Grand Court there was considerable resistance from some quarters of the legal profession. It was feared that lawyers would be on the receiving end of wasted cost orders which would require them to personally pay the costs wasted as a result of something they did or did not do in relation to a particular matter. However, I believe that process has worked well; the judges have been very careful and very deliberate in their considerations of these sorts of matters. Some wasted cost orders have been made, but by and large, I think the profession is satisfied that in those instances the orders ought to have been made.

It is important, not just as part of the discipline of the profession is concerned, but it is important that clients do not have to pay lawyers or pay the other side as well as their own lawyers when lawyers do not do what they are supposed to do, or have behaved improperly, or simply have been negligent in the conduct of a case. It is important that they understand they will face financial consequences when they behave in that manner or do not behave responsibly as they should. To extend that jurisdiction now, Mr. Speaker, to the Summary Court is something that will be accepted. I think it is something that is warranted, and I am sure that the magistrates will be judicious in their exercise of that jurisdiction, much in the same way as the Grand Court judges have.

Therefore, by and large, I can say that I think that the Summary Jurisdiction Law amendment is something that I would also commend to all Honourable Members of this House and to say that the Opposition gives it our wholehearted support.

I feel compelled at this juncture to say that in the short time that the learned Second Official Member has been Attorney General I believe we have seen more of these essential amendments to—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: —legislation in those four months or so that he has been there than I believe we did in the complete tenure of his predecessor. So again I commend this Bill to Honourable Members and offer the support of the Opposition.

Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Second Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would like to thank the Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town for his insightful and helpful contribution on behalf of the Opposition and I thank all Honourable Members for their support. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the Summary Jurisdiction (Amendment) Bill 2003 be given a Second Reading.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Summary Jurisdiction (Amendment) Bill 2003 given a Second Reading.

The Judicature (Amendment) (No.2) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I move for the Second Reading of a Bill for a Law to amend the Judicature Law 2002 revision and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Mr. Speaker, very briefly.

This is a companion Bill to the Summary Jurisdiction (Amendment) Bill 2003 and the proposed amendments herein are really just consequential. Therefore the Bill seeks to amend the Judicature Law 2002 (Revision) to include provisions in that Law which conform to the proposed amendments to the Summary Jurisdiction Law as set out in that Law itself and the Bill.

There are three clauses and most importantly, clause 2 amends section 30 to provide that summary court may imprison a person for the non-payment of a judgment debt and clause 3 seeks to amend the third schedule to provide that the schedule also relates to charging orders by the Summary Court.

I seek the support of Honourable Members in the passage of this Bill.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, this one is very simple, as the Honourable Second Official Member has explained, and is consequential to the previous Bill. The Opposition is in support.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Second Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, if I might echo the words of the Honourable Minister of Community Service, I wish for more days like this.

[Laughter]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I wish to thank Honourable Members for their support.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the Judicature (Amendment) (No.2) Bill, 2003 be given a Second Reading.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Judicature (Amendment) (No.2) Bill 2003 given a Second Reading.

Suspension of Standing Order 46(2)

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, with the approval of the House, instead of moving the suspension of Standing Orders at this time there has been an indication among Members that they would like to adjourn a bit earlier than the 6.30 pm agreed originally. There is an event in support of the AIDS Awareness Week and Members would like to attend. Thus, instead of the suspension of Standing Orders I would beg to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 am Wednesday.

The Speaker: The question is that we do adjourn this Honourable House at this time. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 5.38 pm the House stood adjourned until Wednesday, 3 December 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
3 DECEMBER 2003
10.39 AM
Tenth Sitting

The Speaker: I call on the Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Affairs to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.42 am

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Third Official Member; the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce and Leader of Government Business; and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Also, I have received apologies for the late arrival of the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay and the Honourable Minister for Planning.

Presentation of cloth bound copies of
Founded Upon the Seas: A History of the Cayman Islands and Their People
By Professor Michael Craton
To all Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly

The Speaker: Honourable Members, this morning we are about to witness a very important event in the history of these Islands, which is the presentation of the book Founded Upon the Seas by the Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

I have allowed this time for that presentation, and I would now call upon the Honourable Minister to make the presentation.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

It gives me great pleasure on this momentous and historic occasion to present, to you, your good self, and to my honourable colleagues in the Legislative Assembly, cloth bound copies of the text, Founded Upon the Seas: A History of the Cayman Islands and Their People, written by Professor Michael Craton.

The Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly expressed keen interest in this project from its inception until the recent launch, and they share the enthusiasm and the interest of the general public in this work. Since the Members of the Legislative Assembly are the acknowledged leaders of the country, it goes without saying that they are among the most eminent persons; therefore, it is my great privilege and honour to make this presentation this morning.

I crave your indulgence to give you, Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Leader of our Assembly, the first copy. Thereafter, I will present copies to the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, and my other distinguished colleagues in the Assembly.

The Speaker: So ordered.

[Pause]

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Continue, Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: I rise on this occasion to express to you my gratitude and appreciation for allowing us to conduct this important piece of business, although it would not normally fall on the Order Paper of the Legislative Assembly, and to say that, in the interests of time, I would be more than willing to give any inscription or autographing that Honourable Members may require at a more convenient time, if that is their wish.

The Speaker: Thank you very much. I do note that Dr. Philip Pedley, Director of the Cayman Islands National Archives; and Mr. Mitchell Davis, Director of Legal Studies at the Law School, are both here. I believe that Dr. Pedley is also prepared to do some autographing. Because of the importance of this event, I would suspend for 10 minutes to allow Dr. Pedley to carry out this very important duty.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker. I know that you are going to suspend, but if you would, allow me just to say a few words.

The Speaker: Certainly.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I simply want to say, on behalf of the Opposition, that we wish to congratulate all of those individuals who have been involved, from the very inception, with the progress of this publication, and also to congratulate the Minister of Education himself.

The publication itself is one that each household in the Cayman Islands should have, and I would encourage the public to get a copy for themselves. I have not read the entire thing through, but I have seen it before and had a look into it; it is a wealth of information for all of us regarding our forefathers and how we got here.

Again, on behalf of the Opposition, I would like to say a very special thank you to the Minister of Education, and all those involved, including the Director of the National Archives, Dr. Pedley, and the Director of Legal Studies at the Law School.

The Speaker: Thank you very much. I would ask Honourable Members not to go too far, because after the procedure of autographing has been completed, I would like to get started promptly.

Proceedings suspended at 10.50 am

Proceedings resumed at 10.58 am

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

Suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8)

The Speaker: I would call on the Honourable Minister of Education to suspend Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) so that we can take questions beyond the hour of 11 am.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to suspend Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) in order that we may entertain questions beyond the usual hour of questioning. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) be suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond the hour of 11 am. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 23(7) and (8) suspended to allow Question Time to continue beyond 11 am.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

Question No. 94

Deferred Friday 28 November and Monday 1 December 2003

No. 94: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture what efforts are being made by Government to address the complaints of local recording artists that local music and songs do not receive sufficient airtime on most local radio stations?

This question deals with a matter that is currently before this Honourable House in the form of a Private Member's Motion. The fact that this question appears on today's Order Paper is something of a happy coincidence, because the question was actually submitted by me about four months ago.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, in giving the answer I have to apologise for its length. Indeed, its length reminds me of some of the theses that my predecessor offered when he was asked these kinds of questions. The similarity ends at that point.

Summary of Government's Assistance to the Cayman Music and Entertainment Association

The Government has been addressing this issue from a number of different perspectives over the past decade. Funding has been provided to the Music and Entertainment Association since 1998 in order to promote and develop local talent in international forums. The Ministry of Culture has organised workshops and seminars to further develop local musicians. Local bands have been contracted to perform at local and overseas events, and correspondence has been written to various public agencies and private organizations, encouraging them to cooperate more with local musicians for the benefit of the community.

In order to provide a comprehensive response, the following background information is provided, outlining the Government's efforts to address this issue.

1998-2000

Since 1998, the Government has provided funding to facilitate professional development and international exposure for individual artists and the Cayman Music and Entertainment Association (CMEA) through their participation in MIDEM. MIDEM is a significant forum for professional and developing artists to network, share their talents and skills, and learn about new innovations in all aspects of the music and entertainment industry.

Since early 1994, the Association's predecessor has brought to the Government's attention the issue of the lack of airplay of local music on the radio stations. Correspondence was addressed directly to the radio stations, and was generally met with some success immediately after the communication, but the changes were short-lived. This resulted in frequent and often terse dialogue between the Association, individual musicians and the radio stations in an attempt to address the same issue, since 1994.

2001-2003

When the responsibility for culture was transferred to the Ministry of Education in late 2000, we sought to maintain our relationship with CMEA, but changed the focus of our assistance to the Association and individual musicians within the Cayman music and entertainment community.

The Music and Entertainment Association's participation at MIDEM 2001 was again facilitated by funds from the Government and resulted in greater networking opportunities for individual artists and the Association. During that same year, the Ministry received correspondence and met with several musicians to hear their concerns, for which they required our assistance to bring about appropriate redress. Correspondence was sent to the Chief Secretary asking for his assistance to convey these issues to Radio Cayman.

In April 2001, the issue of the lack of airplay for locally produced music was included in the Ministry's contribution to the debate on the 2001 Throne Speech and Budget.

Preparations began in July 2001 to organise a month-long music and education campaign. With the help of an accomplished musician, educator and trainer, the Ministry of Culture produced Outer Limits in August and September 2001. Outer Limits was a collaborative project to help students, community workers, educators and musicians learn innovative techniques for using music to reach and teach students who were not able to fully realise their potential through mainstream education. This widely successful campaign included workshops and professional development sessions for local musicians; interactive workshops with students and local musicians; and a concert, in which local musicians were featured on the same stage with the professional musician.

Following this campaign, the Ministry provided support for the Music Association's Junkanoo Fete, which was held downtown in late December 2001. This event featured an impressive roster of local bands for an evening of quality entertainment for our residents and visitors.

The year 2002 brought more representations from the Music and Entertainment Association and individual musicians to the Ministry and other government agencies, to review the issue of the lack of airplay of locally produced music. Further, suggestions were made to the Government to develop legislation that required all new and renewed broadcast licences to be granted with the "requirement to play at least 3 local songs per hour of broadcast". With regard to existing legislation, the Music Association pursued and achieved, on their own steam, stipulations to be attached to the granting of work permits for foreign artists and entertainers. These stipulations required the inclusion of local musicians in each production, where possible, and required that a percentage of the fees paid for such permits be paid to the Music Association (a jurisdiction fee).

CMEA and other local artists provided, on several occasions throughout 2002, copies of their work to all of the radio stations. Various correspondences were sent from the radio stations citing reasons why locally produced music was omitted from their music rotation. Reasons included: "lack of proper licensing information; poor quality of recording; format incompatibility; music was not original; and copyright infringement".

These issues have subsequently been addressed directly by CMEA and individual artists. CMEA has produced, and continues to host, professional development workshops for all local musicians, artists and entertainers.

In 2003, CMEA participated in the Ministry's retreat and detailed their achievement goals, one of which was to address the ongoing issue of inconsistent and limited airplay of locally produced music on local radio stations. Further, the Ministry continued to receive repeated requests for assistance to help convey these concerns to local radio stations. The Ministry responded by writing a letter to all privately owned stations, asking for their cooperation in addressing this issue. Most radio stations responded in writing and the Association has noted marked improvement in the broadcasting of local music.

With respect to local talent promotion, both the Ministry and Department of Tourism have, over the years, contracted with local bands to perform at both local and overseas functions.

To date, CMEA has confirmed that some success has been achieved through their repeated requests and efforts, but the radio stations have been slow to respond and have yet to be consistent with their actions.

The Ministries of Culture and Information Technology, and the Information and Communications Technology Authority (ICTA) have investigated the feasibility of drafting and enacting legislation "requiring local radio stations to play a defined number of local songs each hour of each day." This proposal has met with some legal obstacles, which are outlined below.

If these conditions were "to be imposed by legislation or even license conditions, enforcement becomes very complicated" on the following bases:

- a. Definitions – What criteria makes a song "local"?
- b. Monitoring – Who will be authorised to conduct formal monitoring of radio stations to ensure compliance?
- c. Quality – Who will be responsible for determining what is good-quality "local music"?
- d. Radio Format – Licence applications must stipulate planned broadcasting format. Should all stations be required to play "local music", irrespective of their stated format?
- e. Enforcement – The options that exist for enforcement actions appear limited in number and limiting if imposed.

Unless the "definitions, monitoring and other procedures were watertight," radio stations could very successfully appeal any judgments imposed.

The issue is a very complex one, and requires much research to devise a solution that will bring about redress that will benefit local artists; encourage more amicable relationships between radio stations and local artists; and finally, benefit the community as a whole. To that, the Ministries of Education and Information Technology have been, and will continue to investigate alternative solutions.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Aiden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As I alluded to earlier, there is currently before this Honourable House a Private Member's Motion relating to this whole question of local content and locally licensed radio stations. That Motion seeks a resolution of this House to have Government consider implementing legislation to provide for more local content on our locally licensed radio stations.

In his very comprehensive response, the Honourable Minister of Culture seems to be indicating that his Ministry has spent some considerable time and effort investigating whether or not it is possible to legislate in the manner sought by the Motion. He has outlined what his Ministry considers to be some significant obstacles or difficulties in so doing, but I am interested in the last sentence of his response, in which he says that his Ministry will continue to investigate alternative solutions.

My question to the Honourable Minister is this: Is that an indication that his Government has decided that implementing legislation, as has been sought or proposed, is something that he regards as unviable?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

It is not so much that I regard it as unviable, as it is that—as I outlined in the answer—it will be difficult to arrive at any effective redress through legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I can say that I thought of legislation. I know that that is what was resorted to in Canada. However, as I indicated in the answer, that, itself, poses a number of problems with which we are going to have to come to grips. What I am trying to avoid is further burdening the Ministry for which I have constitutional responsibility, the Information and Communications Technology Authority (ICTA), or the Ministry with responsibility for Communications, with a burgeoning bureaucracy. Literally, we would have to have someone with headphones on, listening to these radio stations for every hour that they are on air.

I have to admit that there is a fair amount of intransigence among these persons. Some of them are downright arrogant, and I am not pleased. I have been in communication with them myself, on the telephone, in person and through written correspondence, and they are usually very disobliging, arrogant and contemptuous. I really—and I use this word advisedly—resent their attitude. If I can say what my disposition is, I am going to accept the Motion, and rely on our good intellect, if we have to resort to legislation, to craft it in such a way that it is going to be effective. However, I do so realising full well, and hoping, that we could have come to a more amicable solution.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I simply want to ask the Minister if, in the Ministry's research on legislation and the possibility of enacting it, which he outlined in his answer, they found that there was legislation available, throughout the region, to support what we were looking for, and to force radio stations to play local music.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: No, Mr. Speaker, our research did not lead us to that discovery, which is not to say that it does not exist. I can tell you, however, that in other regions where (should I express it this way) the culture and the contribution of music to the culture of the jurisdiction is more pronounced and more developed, such a struggle does not exist at this time. In our Caribbean neighbours, there is a much greater consciousness and awareness of the contribution of local music to the culture and development of the society than exists in the Cayman Islands.

I have long thought that the most effective way of addressing this and bending the ears of the radio station owners is simply by a boycott, if we could ever bring ourselves to boycott—by withholding advertising. I have said to the musicians, "Go and organise; lobby with the people with whom you deal, to boycott these radio stations. Do not give them any advertising and they will soon be off the air because that is what they thrive on—advertising. If they do not get radio ads, they will soon be off the air, or they will have to be more obliging to your requests." However, that is difficult to organise in a place like the Cayman Islands, where we do not have much experience in collective behaviour.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, because all Members will have an opportunity again to debate this issue on the Private Member's Motion No. 5/03, I will allow one more supplementary before we move to the next question.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I would simply ask the Honourable Minister of Education if he could let this Honourable House know whether or not the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, who proposed the Motion, and the Second Elected Member for West Bay, who seconded the Motion, were apprised of his reticence to bring legislation in this regard before they bought this Motion to this Honourable House?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: No, Mr. Speaker. I did not say that I am reluctant. It is not reticence on my part, because it is something that I have thought about. As I have indicated, I am going to accept the Motion. I only wanted Honourable Members to be aware that legislation, as an option, has with it its own set of intractable issues, which we will have to hurdle.

No, the Honourable Members who brought the Motion did not know, because I did not discuss that aspect with them. In all fairness to them, they did not know. I welcome the Motion, because I think it is high time that this issue is aired through national debate.

Question No. 95

No. 95: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration how many Attorneys-at-Law are currently entitled to practise in the Cayman Islands and of this number –

- a) How many possess Caymanian status;
- b) How many are employed by Government;
- c) Of those employed by Government, how many possess Caymanian status;
- d) How many are employed in the private sector; and
- e) Of those employed in the private sector, how many possess Caymanian status.

Mr. Speaker, I should say again that this was a question that was submitted quite some time ago, so if it seems not to be current or relevant at the moment, that is why.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Attorneys in the Cayman Islands fall into a number of categories:

- A) Attorneys in private practice;
- B) Attorneys employed "in-house" by companies or non-governmental organisations (NGOs) – (e.g. ICTA);
- C) Attorneys employed in the Chambers of the Attorney General;
- D) Non-practising attorneys

A. Attorneys in private practice

1. Are required to be admitted to practice by a Grand Court judge and have their name entered on the Court Roll;
2. Pay an annual practising fee and receive an annual practising certificate;
3. If the attorney does not possess Caymanian status he/she is obliged to have a valid work permit;

4. As at 1 September 2003 there were 268 practising certificates in issue;
5. As at 1 September 2003, 189 work permits had been issued in respect of attorneys in practice with firms of attorneys.
6. Thus 79 practise certificates were issued to persons not requiring work permits to practise as attorneys.

B. Attorneys employed "in-house" by businesses and authorities (ICTA, CIMA, etc.)

1. Businesses and independent public authorities employ "in-house" counsel to handle their legal affairs.
2. Although there is nothing in the law to prevent Caymanian and non-Caymanian "in-house" counsel from being admitted to the Court Roll and obtaining a practising certificate, in the case of "in-house" counsel requiring work permits, the Immigration Board has imposed a condition that they should not apply for or renew practising certificates.

That simply means that once they are "in-house" counsel, they are not entitled to practise otherwise.

3. Nine work permits were in issue to attorneys employed "in-house".

C. Attorneys employed in the Chambers of the Attorney General

1. Are not required to be admitted to practice nor to be entered on the Court Roll. Attorneys in the Attorney General's Chambers (Government Legal Department) are not required to obtain practising certificates, although all Caymanians have in fact been admitted to the Court Roll, and that is the case with one expatriate attorney in the department as well.
2. Currently there are 13 qualified attorneys employed in the Chambers of the Attorney General, as follows (these do not include persons involved in legislative drafting and in other departments):

Government Legal Department:

1. Attorney General (SB)*
2. Solicitor General (Acting) (SHJ)*
3. Senior Crown Counsel (Criminal)(AR)*
4. Senior Crown Counsel (International Requests)(CR)*
5. Senior Crown Counsel (Civil)(LH)*
6. Crown Counsel (Criminal)(AM)
7. Crown Counsel (Criminal)(SW)
8. Crown Counsel (Criminal)(MA)
9. Crown Counsel (Criminal)(GJ)

10. Crown Counsel (Civil)(KM)*
11. Crown Counsel (Civil)(VE)
12. Crown Counsel (Civil)(SL-L)*
13. Crown Counsel Jacqueline Ziemniak*

There are also three Articled Clerks in the Department and all three are Caymanian.

- A. Articled Clerk (LC)*
- B. Articled Clerk (RE)*
- C. Articled Clerk (JP)*

* = Caymanian

Thus there are a total of 13 practising attorneys employed by Government in the Attorney General's Chambers (Government Legal Department), of whom eight possess Caymanian status. The three articled clerks also possess Caymanian status.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps I missed it, but I thought the Honourable Second Official Member said that the list from which he read (the Government Legal Department) did not include legislative counsel—in other words, legislative draftspersons. I wonder if he could tell this Honourable House how many are employed in that capacity, and if those numbers should not properly be added to the 13 qualified attorneys that he has indicated are employed in the Chambers of the Attorney General.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

There are four as I recall: Ms. Brant, Mrs. Neblett, Mr. Simamba and Mr. Stephen Miller.

The Speaker: Are you asking a supplementary, Honourable Second Elected Member for George Town? The Honourable Second Official Member.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Those are in addition to the 13 that have been named in the answer here.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I also note that there is no indication in relation to the attorneys who are employed at the Cayman Islands Law School as lecturers. I wonder if the Honourable Second Official Member could give us an indication as to the numbers there.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, although there are seven lecturers at the Law School, only three of them are, in fact, attorneys.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do not want to belabour this point, because this is not the real thrust of the question, but I wonder if the Honourable Second Official Member could explain what that means? I am sure he does mean that they are not legally qualified. Does he mean that they are not admitted in this jurisdiction, or that they are not admitted in any jurisdiction? That is the four who are not, as he said, attorneys.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, my information is that these four are persons with academic qualifications in law, but are not, in fact, attorneys who are on a roll anywhere.

Question No. 96

No. 96: Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr. asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Administration how many persons of Caymanian status have completed the University of Liverpool (LLB) programme over the course of the past three years and have been unable to obtain either:

- a) Articles of clerkship and/or
- b) Employment as Attorneys-at-Law following completion of articles and the required professional qualification.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The answer is:

(a) During the period 2000-2002 the Law School, through which most of these enquiries would have been made, is not aware of any Caymanian graduates of the Professional Practice Course (which, this year apart, is a necessary precursor to registering for Articles) who, being desirous of obtaining Articles, have been unable to do so.

However, the Law School has recently become aware that one Caymanian individual, who completed her academic legal training in England, and two Caymanian graduates of the LL.B programme from previous years, have not succeeded in obtaining articles of clerkship. It is not known for how long such individuals have been seeking training positions, but with respect to the LL.B graduates, it can be no earlier than since early 2003, when such persons became eligible, for a transitional period, to register 12 months of articles prior to completing the PPC/Legal Practice Course (LPC).

During the 2003 academic year it also became apparent that a number of prospective Cayman Islands Law School graduates experienced some difficulty in obtaining offers of articles. In order to assess the extent of the problem, the Director of the Law School wrote to all of this year's prospective Caymanian graduates on 21 March 2003. Seven responses were received by the Director by 26 May. Of these responses, only one spoke of having experienced repeated difficulty (it is understood that this individual has since received sponsorship from a local firm to continue his legal training in the UK), whilst five others indicated that serious attempts to seek training contracts had yet to be made. One respondent replied in positive terms.

Subsequent thereto, there were discussions between the Minister responsible for Labour, the Honourable Leader of Government Business and the Caymanian Bar Association and the Cayman Islands Law Society with a view to addressing the issue.

Following those discussions, it now appears that most persons wishing to register for articles have now been accommodated.

(b) During the period 2000-2003, the Cayman Islands Law School is aware of two Caymanian graduates who were not employed as attorneys-at-law following completion of articles. Of these two, it is believed that at least one has since secured a position as an attorney elsewhere.

Supplementaries

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Second Official Member can say, then (as I gather from tenor of his response), that the situation, in relation to the considerable turmoil that has existed over the course of the past few months, is now satisfactory, as far as his portfolio is concerned—that the matter has now settled down; that, as he said, those Caymanians who seek articles of clerkship are being accommodated; and that he does not foresee a problem for the foreseeable future.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am a bit loath to speak about the foreseeable future. What had happened is that, because there was some necessity to revamp the Law School's Professional Practice Course this year, there was an unusual number of persons who were seeking articles right away. The usual position is that these persons would have had to complete the Professional Practice Course first, and then register for articles. However, because the programme has been revamped, so as not to disadvantage these people, it was agreed that they would be allowed to register for 12 months of articles prior to completion of the PPC course, then return to the PPC course, and after the completion of that, finish their additional six months of articles, as the case may be. That caused unusual traffic this year for articles—it is correct.

At the beginning of the year there were a lot of anxieties and, in some cases, people were claiming that they were actually being discriminated against. There were, as I said, ongoing discussions that took place between the Honourable Minister of Labour, the Leader of Government Business, the Bar Association and the Law Society, with a view to resolving it. What happened is that the discussions actually bore fruit and so, as the Honourable Member rightly says, the problem is now, we hope, behind us.

There is at least one person, of whom we are aware, who is still seeking to have articles registered. I am not sure exactly what is happening to her, but as far as we are aware, the problem has, in fact, abated. Thank you.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I propose to take one more supplementary on this question.

[Pause]

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

The Proposed Employment Bill, 2003

The Speaker: I will call on the Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Employment Bill 2003 is prepared and ready for public scrutiny after wide public consultation.

As Minister, I am satisfied that this Bill has had the widest consultation from its inception, beginning with the Employment Forum, which is a body representing the widest sectors of Caymanian society. No doubt there will be those who will still not be satisfied with the Bill, but I am convinced that it is the best instrument at which we can arrive at this time.

Reactionaries and those who do not wish to see employment issues fairly addressed may choose to thumb their noses at these efforts, but realists and those with a social conscience will breathe a sigh of relief.

Those wishing to apprise themselves of what is in the Bill can receive copies from the Legislative Assembly, the Employment Relations Department or the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture. It is with this underpinning, Mr. Speaker, that I request your permission to table this proposed Bill.

The Speaker: So ordered.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READING

(Deferred)

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I propose to defer the Second Readings on items (1), (2) and (3) under the Second Readings, which are—

- (1) the Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) (Amendment) Bill 2003;
- (2) the Monetary Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003; and
- (3) the Companies (Amendment) (Disposition of Property) Bill 2003, to accommodate the Minister for Community Services, who is to be away on urgent business.

He has the Committee Stage Reporting and Third Reading of his two Bills: the Status of Children Bill 2003 and The Children Amendment Bill 2003. At this time, Honourable Members, I resolve the House into Committee.

House in Committee at 11.42 am

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Status of Children Bill, 2003

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House, may I assume that, as usual, we should authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to correct minor errors and suchlike in these Bills? The first Bill we will be dealing with is the Status of Children Bill 2003. Would the Clerk please read the Bill and state the clauses?

Clause 1

The Clerk: Clause 1 Short title

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Chairman, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52 (1) and (2), I, the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Services, Youth, Sports and Gender Affairs, would like to move the following Committee stage amendment—That clause 1 be renumbered as subclause (1) of clause 1 and that the following subclause be inserted after that subclause.

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak thereto?

[Pause]

The Chairman: If no Member wishes to speak, the question is that the amendment stands part of clause 1.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment passed.

The Chairman: The question is now that clause 1 be renumbered as subclause (1) of clause 1, and that the following subclause be inserted after that subclause – “(2) this Law shall come into force on such date as may be appointed by order made by the Governor in Cabinet.”

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 1 as amended passed.

Clause 2

The Clerk: Clause 2 Interpretation

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Chairman, I move that clause 2 of the Bill be amended in the definition of “parent” by deleting the word “father” where it appears for the second time, and substituting the word “mother”.

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak thereto? If no Member wishes to speak, the question is that the amendment stand part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment passed

The Chairman: The question now is that clause 2 of the Bill be amended in the definition of “parent” by deleting the word “father” where it appears for the second time, and substituting the word “mother.”

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 2 as amended passed.

Clauses 3 to 6

The Clerk:

- Clause 3 All children of equal status.
- Clause 4 Kindred relationships
- Clause 5 Rule of construction
- Clause 6 Application

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 3 to 6 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 3 through 6 passed.

Clause 7

The Clerk: Clause 7 Presumptions of paternity

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Chairman, I move that clause 7(1) be amended in paragraph (h) by deleting the words “a counsel and attorney” and substituting the words “an attorney-at-law”.

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak thereto? If no Member wishes to speak the question is that the amendment stands part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment passed.

The Chairman: The question now is that clause 7 as amended stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 7 as amended passed.

Clauses 8 to 21

The Clerk:

Clause 8	Presumption of parentage arising out of the use of fertilisation procedures
Clause 9	Determination of paternity in void marriages
Clause 10	Application for declaration of paternity
Clause 11	Application for declaration of paternity where no presumption
Clause 12	Acknowledgement against interest
Clause 13	Effect of new evidence
Clause 14	Appeals
Clause 15	Parentage testing orders
Clause 16	Orders associated with parentage testing orders
Clause 17	Parentage tests under the Immigration Law (2003 Revision)
Clause 18	Rules
Clause 19	Taking of bodily samples by unqualified person
Clause 20	Transitional provisions regarding dispositions
Clause 21	Amendment of prior registration

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 8 through 21 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 8 to 21 passed

Clause 22

The Clerk: Clause 22 Repeals

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Chairman, I move that clause 22 of the Bill be amended by inserting after subclause (2) the following—“(3) Section 21 of the Matrimonial Causes Law (1997 Revision) is repealed.”

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak thereto? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I wish not necessarily to speak on the amendment, but to ask a question. I was wondering whether the Affiliation Law was repealed when the Children’s Law came into effect and, if it has not been repealed, whether we should be looking to repeal sections of the Affiliation Law at this stage.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Chairman, my understanding is that we intend to make consequential amendments to the Affiliation Law, but no, the Law has not been repealed.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Mr. Chairman, I thought not. There are certain sections in there concerning adjudging a father to be the father of a child when that child is at a particular age—up to one year. I wonder if that would not be a consequential change as a result of this Bill. Since we are doing a section of the Matrimonial Causes Law at this stage, I wonder if maybe we should not—

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Yes—

Mr. V. Arden McLean: The Minister can reply.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Chairman, prior to the coming into force of this Status of Children Bill, we will make consequential amendments to the Affiliation Law in the next sitting of this Honourable House.

The Chairman: Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, the question is that the amendment stands part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment passed.

The Chairman: The question now is that clause 22 as amended stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 22 as amended passed.

Clause 23

The Clerk: Clause 23 Previous court determinations.

The Chairman: The question is that clause 23 stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 23 passed.

The Clerk: A Bill For A Law To Reform The Law Relating To Children By Providing For Their Equal Status And For Incidental And Connected Purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the title of the Bill, the Status of Children Bill 2003, stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Title passed.

The Children (Amendment) Bill 2003

Clauses 1 to 6

The Clerk:

- Clause 1 Short title and commencement
- Clause 2 Amendment of section 21 of the Children Law 2003 - review of provision for day care, child-minding etc.
- Clause 3 Amendment of section 72 – registration
- Clause 4 Amendment of section 77 – inspection
- Clause 5 Amendment of section 79 – offences
- Clause 6 Amendment of Schedule 9 – child minding and day care for young children.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 1 through 6 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 1 through 6 passed

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Amend the Children Law 2003 and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the title stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Title passed

The Chairman: This now concludes this section of the Committee. The question is that the two Bills be reported to the House.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that the Bills be reported to the House.

The Chairman: The House will now resume.

House Resumed at 11.57 am

REPORTS ON BILLS

The Status of Children Bill, 2003

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I have to report that a Bill entitled, The Status of Children Bill, 2003 has been considered by a Committee of the whole House and was passed with amendments.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled, The Status of Children Bill 2003 be given a Third Reading and passed.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Status of Children Bill 2003 given a Third Reading and passed.

The Children (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Community Services.

Dr. the Hon. Frank S. McField: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move that a Bill entitled, The Children (Amendment) Bill 2003 be given the Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled, The Children (Amendment) Bill 2003 be given a Third Reading and passed.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Children (Amendment) Bill 2003 given a third reading and passed.

Suspension of Standing Order 46(2)

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 46(2) so that the Bills set down for business can be taken.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 46(2) be suspended in order to take the Second Reading on the three Bills on the Order Paper.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing order 46(2) suspended.

SECOND READINGS

The Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move for the Second Reading of a Bill entitled, The Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) (Amendment) Bill 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Mr. Speaker, thank you.

The principle of mutual assistance is not a new concept. The giving of legal assistance by one country to another in the administration of justice before the courts has been a feature of public international law for a considerably long time. Before the enactment of the Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law in 1976 and the Mutual Legal Assistance (United States of America) Law (1999 Revision), the ability of the Cayman Islands courts to assist foreign countries rested in what is usually described as Judicial Committee in public international law. Currently, our ability and legislative framework to provide international cooperation is often described as fragmented. The purpose of this Bill is to try to bring some cohesiveness to the ability of the Cayman Islands to provide assistance to other countries in the fight against international and other crimes.

There are currently a number of pieces of legislation that provide gateways for assistance to foreign countries. We have the Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) Law (2000 Revision). In relation to drug-related offences, the Cayman Islands are able to cooperate with other countries at both the investigation and proceedings stages by virtue of the Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) Law (2000 Revision). This Law was enacted to give effect to the United Nations Convention Against the Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances 1988, usually referred to as the 1988 Vienna Convention in short. The Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) Law (2000 Revision) prescribes the content of requests and specifies the conditions which it must be satisfied in order for assistance to be provided.

There is also the Mutual Legal Assistance (United States of America) Law (1999 Revision), usually referred to as the MLAT Law. It is a main arm for legal assistance with the United States of America. This piece of legislation complements the existing extradition arrangements between the United States and the United Kingdom, as extended to the Cayman Islands. Under the MLAT Law, assistance may be provided not only at the stage of criminal proceedings, but also at the stage of the investigation of criminal matter.

The procedure for obtaining assistance is in the form of a request relating to a particular case, which is examined by the Honourable Chief Justice, who is the central authority under the law. He examines it for compliance with the conditions necessary to give assistance. If these conditions are satisfied and there is no objection on the grounds of public interest, assistance is usually granted.

There is also what is known as the Evidence (Proceedings in Other Jurisdictions) (Cayman Islands) Order 1978, which is an alternative means of providing assistance to the requesting country. It is usually characterised by a request from court to court. However, this particular arrangement has some difficulties in respect of criminal matters. Before any assistance can be provided, proceedings have to have been instituted. It follows, therefore, that there is a difficulty, in respect of the Cayman Islands, in providing assistance at the very early stage—which is the investigative stage—when the assistance is probably most required.

There is also the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, which was enacted in 1996. This is another gateway for the provision of assistance to foreign countries. Section 29 of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision) says that a constable may, for the purpose of an investigation to which this Law applies, apply to the Grand Court for an order that a specified person or entity produce certain materials, documents, etcetera, of a particular description. The obtaining of restraint orders at the request of foreign countries and the registration of external confiscation orders is specifically provided for under Part III and the Schedule to the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision).

If I might, I would touch on what I would describe as the shortcomings of the current Cayman Islands Law. There are certain areas in which the current Cayman Islands Law falls short of generally accepted international standards in the giving of international assistance in criminal matters.

Firstly, assistance in obtaining, in the Cayman Islands, evidence for use overseas at the investigation stages, is unavailable, except in the limited circumstances indicated earlier. Secondly, assistance such as the transfer of prisoners to give evidence, assist investigators, or search for material relevant to overseas investigations is sometimes unavailable from the Cayman Islands because of the gap in the current legislative framework. When one examines the laws in other jurisdictions, it is readily apparent where our weaknesses are.

In the United Kingdom, until recently, there was a piece of legislation described as the Criminal Justice (International Co-operation) Act 1990. This was passed to give effect to the European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters and the United Nations Convention Against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, 1988, or the 1988 Vienna Convention. That legislation, the UK Criminal Justice (International Cooperation) Act 1990, extends to all types of crimes.

Other jurisdictions, such as Anguilla, Bermuda, Jamaica, the British Virgin Islands, Trinidad and Tobago, have all enacted equivalent legislation to the UK Act, and accordingly, are in a position to provide legal assistance, or assistance in these matters, at the early stage.

The current Law that we are seeking to amend, the Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) Law (2000 Revision), prescribes the content of requests and specifies the conditions to be satisfied in order for assistance to be given. Where evidence is requested, materials are to be provided or a search is required, an application must be made to the Grand Court. This will provide the necessary safeguard against any potential abuse.

The Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) (Amendment) Bill 2003 seeks to extend the ambit of the Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) Law (2000 Revision) to enable the Cayman Islands to offer, to Schedule countries, the same legal assistance in relation to all serious crimes as is offered in relation to drug-related offences. The Bill would have the effect of making legal assistance for all indictable offences available, at the investigate stage, to countries that are party to the 1988 Vienna Convention and such other countries as may be specified in the legislation from time to time.

In the usual manner, we have had consultations with our friends in the private sector and their stakeholders, including the Cayman Islands Law Society. Their input has been most encouraging, and has been taken on board.

The Bill before this House reflects a consensus on the part of stakeholders in this exercise. I therefore commend the Bill to this Honourable House and seek support for its passage.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise merely to record the support of the Opposition for this Bill before the House, The Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) (Amendment) Bill 2003, particularly since the Government has had consultation with the Cayman Islands Law Society and, I suspect, the Caymanian Bar Association as well. Therefore, we gladly lend our support to any cooperation that is necessary internationally.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Mover of the Bill wish to exercise his right to reply?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Before I do so, I have omitted to give notice of a proposed Committee Stage amendment that we intend to move at the appropriate time. Having said that, I would like to record my gratitude to the Honourable Members of this House for their support in the passage of this Bill.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled, The Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) (Amendment) Bill 2003 be given a Second Reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) (Amendment) Bill 2003 given a Second Reading.

The Monetary Authority (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Temporary Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: I would ask if the Leader of Government Business could defer consideration of this Bill until later on in this meeting, if that is possible.

The Speaker: The question is that the Monetary Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003 be deferred until a later time during this Meeting of the House.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Second Reading of the Bill deferred to a later Sitting in the Meeting.

The Companies (Amendment) (Disposition of Property) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Temporary Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled, The Companies (Amendment) (Disposition of Property) Bill 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Yes, Mr. Speaker. It is very brief. The Bill itself has only one amending clause. That is clause 181, which currently allows for the property, or the assets, owned by a company struck from the Register of Companies of the Cayman Islands to be vested in the Financial Secretary. The proposed amendment seeks to make better provision for the disposition of such property, while not significantly altering the substance of the existing provision. It would serve to enhance the language and make it more precise; that is the extent of this proposed amendment.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Mover of the Bill wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you. I would thank the House for its support of this proposed amendment.

The Speaker: The question is that The Companies (Amendment) (Disposition of Property) Bill 2003 be given a Second Reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Companies (Amendment) (Disposition of Property) Bill 2003 given a Second Reading.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider Bills.

House in Committee at 12.20 pm

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House, may I assume that, as usual, we should authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to correct minor errors and suchlike in these Bills? Would the Clerk please state the Bill and read the clauses?

The Notaries Public (Amendment) (No.2) Bill, 2003

Clauses 1 to 2

Clerk:

Clause 1 Short title.

Clause 2 Amendment of section 2 of the Notaries Public Law (2003 Revision) – definitions.

The Chairman: The question is clauses 1 and 2 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 1 and 2 passed.

Clause 3

The Clerk: Clause 3 Repeal of section 3 and substitution—authorisation of appointment.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you Mr. Chairman. In accordance with the provision of Standing Order 52(1) and (2), I, the Honourable Second Official Member, give notice that I seek to move the following Committee Stage amendment to the Notaries Public (Amendment) Bill 2003:

That clause 3 be amended as follows –

- (a) in subclause (1), by inserting the following paragraph as paragraph (e) and that the existing paragraph (e) be renumbered as paragraph (f) –

“(e) is considered by the Governor to be otherwise qualified to carry out the functions as a notary public”.

Mr. Chairman, there might be a typo. Where (f) appears, there should be (e).

This amendment was put in to address some concerns that were raised during the debate as to whether certain persons might otherwise be excluded. The purpose of this amendment is to ensure that persons who would otherwise be qualified to serve as notaries are not in any way excluded.

It is also being asked that clause 3 be amended as follows—

- (b) in subclause (2) by inserting in paragraph (c) after the words “medical practitioner”, the words, “a Member of the Legislative Assembly”.

The purpose of this is that there was some inadvertence in the list of persons who could certify passport pictures or provide references, so Members of the Legislative Assembly have now been included. It was, as we said during the debate, sheer inadvertence.

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak thereto?

[Pause]

The Chairman: The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. This question is to get clarity from the Second Official Member that this amendment to add the words, “Members of the Legislative Assembly” is only for the Members to certify that the photographs are a true likeness of the person applying for notary public licence, and not, as the Caymanian Compass carried it, that we wanted to be appointed notaries public. Am I correct?

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The Honourable Elected Member for North Side is correct. The Bill currently before the House sets out a list of things that the Governor may require, in addition to other documents, to be provided by an applicant wishing to become a notary public. Clause 3(2) provides that:

“An applicant shall provide the Attorney General with any further information that the Governor requires in considering an application under this section and such additional information shall include but is not limited to –

- (a) two character references;
- (b) a police record;
- (c) a photograph of the applicant certified by a justice of the peace, a notary public, a minister of religion, a police officer (gazetted), a medical practitioner, or an attorney-at-law [and now, a Member of the Legislative Assembly] to be a true likeness of the applicant.”

The purpose of the amendment was to include Members of the Legislative Assembly (MLAs) in that list of persons who can give that certification.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The other section in clause 3(2), as the Second Official Member just read, is that a medical practitioner, as well as other members of the public—such as an attorney-at-law, and the likes—can sign to attest to the true likeness of the applicant. However, when we look at the definition of “medical practitioner” in other laws, and, in particular, the recent Status of Children Bill 2003, which just went through Committee Stage, a ““registered medical practitioner” means a medical doctor or nurse registered under the Health Practice Law, 2002”.

I wonder whether we are extending such, in this Notaries Public (Amendment) Bill, to nurses as well, and whether the definition of “medical practitioner” includes nurses, because there are different levels of nurses that could be construed as “nurses”. I wonder if the Second Official Member can comment on that.

The Chairman: The Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The Notaries Public Law (2003 Revision) does not contain a definition of “medical practitioner”. The closest I can come to a definition that can be employed is, “health practitioner” means a person registered as being authorised to practise in one or more of the health professions. Usually, the use of a particular expression in a law takes its definition from the context. I am not aware that there was any attempt in the Notaries Public Law (2003 Revision) to restrict the definition of “health practitioner” or “medical practitioner.” It would take its ordinary meaning, which means persons who are involved in the practice of medicine, in whatever form.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you. I wonder if the Second Official Member could say whether I understood him correctly when he gave his impression of this. Would that mean a doctor, or anyone in the medical profession? My interpretation of a medical practitioner is a doctor. “Health care workers” can also include doctors, but I do not see the parallel between a doctor and a nurse, or someone who is merely working in that profession. I do not think it should be extended beyond “doctor”.

While we only need a set of eyes to see that it is a true likeness, I believe this requires some degree of ethical professionalism on the part of the individual who is designated to do so.

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I was leafing through the Health Practitioners’ Law (1995 Revision) to see whether there was a definition of “medical practitioner”.

It is correct that some persons interpret the expression to mean “doctors”, but I am not aware of any forensic definition that says that “medical practitioner” is confined to doctors. The Schedule to the Health Practitioners Law (1995 Revision), Part 2—Health professions, says:

“The following are the health professions subject to this Law –

- (a) medicine;
- (b) dentistry;
- (c) optometry;

- (d) pharmacy;
- (e) nursing;
- (f) physiotherapy;
- (g) radiography;
- (h) medical technology;
- (i) psychology;
- (j) osteopathy;
- (k) chiropractics;
- (l) veterinary; and
- (m) nurse practitioner or physician’s assistant.

Perhaps we should use the language “medical doctor” rather than “medical practitioner”, if the Honourable Elected Member for East End is more comfortable with that. Would that help?

The Chairman: The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you. “Medical doctor” sounds much more attractive than “medical practitioner”, when you have pharmacists and the like, and all those required to be registered. It gets worse by the minute as the interpretation is read. I do not have a problem with pharmacists, but either we have “medical doctor”, or we remove that altogether. Those are the choices we have.

The Chairman: Honourable Second Official Member, were you suggesting that you would withdraw the amendment before the Committee now and substitute “medical practitioner” by replacing it with “medical doctor”?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Mr. Chairman, I would seek the concurrence of the Committee to do so—to move it on the Floor.

The Chairman: So ordered.

[Pause]

The Chairman: Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I want to make it clear that I am not withdrawing the amendment. I am merely seeking the concurrence of the Committee of the whole House to make an amendment where the word “practitioner” appears, to delete “practitioner” and substitute therefor the word “doctor”. There would still be an amendment except that it would read “medical doctor”.

The Chairman: The question is that the word “practitioner” be deleted in clause 3(2)(c), as it appears in the fifth line, and that the word “practitioner” be deleted and replaced by “doctor”.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment to amendment passed.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment stands part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment as amended passed.

The Chairman: The question now is that clause 3 as amended stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 3 as amended passed.

Clauses 4 to 7

The Clerk:

- Clause 4 Amendment of section 4 – registration of notaries public
- Clause 5 Amendment of section 10 – proceedings for misconduct
- Clause 6 Amendment of section 12 – notarial acts while suspended
- Clause 7 Amendment of the First Schedule – form of application for appointment as notary public.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 4 to 7 stand part of the Bill.

The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: I think that in clause 7, there would have to be a consequential amendment. In the one that was previously circulated, in clause 2, there was an amendment to include “a Member of the Legislative Assembly”, which should also be included here. Also, in “medical practitioner”, the word “practitioner” should be removed, as was just done, and replaced therefor with “doctor”.

The Chairman: The question is that all consequential amendments be a part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: All consequential amendments be made.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 4 to 7 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 4 through 7 passed.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Amend the Notaries Public Law 2003 Revision; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the title stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Title passed.

The Summary Jurisdiction (Amendment) Bill, 2003

Clauses 1 to 10

The Clerk:

- Clause 1 Short title
- Clause 2 Amendment of section 22 of the Summary Jurisdiction Law (1995 Revision)—general provisions as to practice and procedure
- Clause 3 Repeal of section 33 and substitution – costs
- Clause 4 Repeal of section 34 – execution.
- Clause 5 Repeal of section 35 and substitution – enforcement of orders of the court.
- Clause 6 Repeal of section 39 and substitution –civil appeals.
- Clause 7 Repeal of sections 40 to 46 – unrepresented litigant to be informed of right of appeal, etc.
- Clause 8 Repeal of section 47 – judgment may be entered in Grand Court in respect of proceedings determined in summary courts.
- Clause 9 Amendment of the Schedule – civil jurisdiction of the court.
- Clause 10 Transitional.

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 1 through 10 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 1 - 10 passed.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Amend the Summary Jurisdiction Law (1995 Revision) to Extend the Jurisdiction of the Court in Civil Causes or Matters and to Make New Provision for Rights of Appeal in Civil Causes or Matters; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the title stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Title passed.

The Judicature (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2003

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clauses 1 and 2 passed.

Clause 3

The Clerk: Clause 3 Amendment of section 2– definitions and interpretation.

The Chairman: The Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

In accordance with the provisions of standing order 52(1) and (2), I, the Honourable Second Official Member, do beg to move the following amendment to the Misuse of Drugs (International Cooperation) (Amendment) Bill 2003 –

That the Bill be amended as follows –

(a) in clause 3 –

- I. by re-lettering paragraphs (a) and (b) as paragraphs (b) and (c), respectively; and
- II. by inserting above paragraph (b) the following paragraph –

“(a) in subsection (1) by inserting the following definition in its appropriate alphabetical place –

“a law corresponding to this Law” means a law of a requesting Party which provides for legal assistance in criminal matters to foreign states and pursuant to which assistance of the kind sought under this Law could be similarly obtained;”;

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly moved. Does any Member wish to speak thereto? If no Member wishes to speak, the question is the amendment stands part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment passed.

The Chairman: The question now is that clause 3 as amended stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 3 as amended passed.

Clause 4

The Clerk: Clause 4 Amendment of section 4 – Central Authority

The Chairman: The question is that clause 4 stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 4 passed.

Clause 5

The Clerk: Clause 5 Amendment of section 8 – refusal of mutual legal assistance

The Chairman: The Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, In accordance with the provisions of Standing Orders 52(1) and (2), I, the Honourable Second Official Member, beg to move the following amendment:

(b) by inserting after clause 5 the following clause—

5A The principal Law is amended by repealing subsection (1) of section 10 and substituting the following subsection—

“(1) Subject to sections 8 and 9 –

- (a) upon receipt of a request relating to the Convention, the Authority shall execute the request in accordance with Article 7; and
- (b) upon receipt of any other request, the Authority may execute the request in accordance with this Law.”;

The Chairman: This is a new clause, and under Standing Order 52(8), it would normally have come after other clauses in the Bill have been considered. However, I will take it at this time, since it has already been moved.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I am obliged.

The Chairman: Does any other Member wish to speak thereto? If not the question is that clause 5 stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 5 passed.

The Chairman: The question is that the new clause 5A stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: New clause 5A passed.

Clause 6

The Clerk: Clause 6 Amendment of section 14 – protection of persons appearing in response to a request

The Chairman: The question is that clause 6 stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 6 passed.

Clause 7

The Clerk: Clause 7 Repeal and replacement of section 23 – conflict of laws.

The Chairman: The Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In accordance with the provision of Standing Orders 52(1) and (2), I, the Honourable Second Official Member, beg to move the following amendment—

- (c) in clause 7, in the new section 23(2) proposed for insertion in the principal Law, delete the words “made pursuant to an agreement” and substitute the words “made pursuant to a Law or an agreement”; and
- (d) by inserting, after clause 7, the following clause—

"7A. The principal Law is amended by inserting after section 23 the following section –

- 23A.(1) Where a request has been made for the purpose of –
- (a) identifying or tracing proceeds, property, instruments or such other things for the purposes of evidence;
  - (b) immobilising criminally obtained assets; or
  - (c) assisting in proceedings related to forfeiture and restitution, the provisions of sections 32 to 38, and the Schedule, of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision) shall mutatis mutandis apply, except that –

- (i) any reference in those provisions to a designated country shall be construed as a reference to a country or territory specified in the First Schedule of this Law; and
- (ii) any reference in those provisions to the institution of proceedings shall be disregarded.

(2) For the purposes of this Law, the powers of the Grand Court under paragraphs 6(1) and 7(1) of the Schedule of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision) are exercisable where either an external confiscation order has been made or it appears to the Grand Court that there are reasonable grounds for thinking that such an order may be made."

The Chairman: The amendment has been duly made, I will first take the question on clause 7 and then on the new clause 7A.

Does any Member wish to speak to the amendment? If not, the question is that the amendment stands part of the clause.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Amendment passed.

The Chairman: The question now is that clause 7 as amended stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause 7 as amended passed.

The Clerk: New clause 7A Insertion of section 3(a) – application of certain provisions of the proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2001 Revision).

The Chairman: This clause has been taken to have been read a first time. The question is that this clause be read a second time.

Agreed: Clause read a second time

The Chairman: The question now is that this new clause be added to the Bill as clause 7A, and that subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Clause added to the Bill as Clause 7A

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 5/03

Implementation of legislation to ensure more local content on locally licensed radio stations

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, the Motion, moved by the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay and seconded by myself, calls for the implementation of legislation to ensure more local content on locally licensed radio stations.

Having heard the answer to Question No. 94 earlier in this sitting, it is obvious to Honourable Members of the House that the Ministry responsible for Culture has already done quite a bit of work in this area, and has shown a commitment to trying to resolve what has become a vexing issue.

The call by the Cayman Music and Entertainment Association, I might remind Honourable Members, is reasonable. They are asking for two songs to be played during an hour of broadcast time, and, Mr. Speaker, there are some 14-15 songs played per hour. Therefore, their request is not, by any stretch of the imagination, to dominate the programming of any radio station.

What is also encouraging is that they have said they, too, recognise that monitoring this would be inherently difficult without additional expenditure from the public purse, and they do not expect that.

They believe, as the Mover and I do, that having this Motion debated in this forum serves to send a clear message to the general public, and to radio stations, that the Legislative Assembly sees both the importance of this issue and the necessity for greater cooperation in getting to a situation where more of our local artists, here in Cayman, have the possibility to have their music aired on a more regular and consistent basis on the radio stations.

What the Cayman Music and Entertainment Association has proposed is that they themselves would be willing, and indeed, are waiting, to monitor the situation themselves, to see what changes the various radio stations will make in terms of airplay for local artists. That is probably one of the single most important considerations, as Members come to vote on this resolution. It is critical that the general public understands that Government, while it can facilitate and encourage solutions to certain problems, cannot be the be-all and end-all, always expected to provide every single facet of a solution to a problem. Ultimately, the more Government does, the more monies Government has to raise to get things done, the more monies the private sector and the private citizens of this country inevitably have to pay by way of duties and other fees.

From a cultural standpoint, and from the point of view of tourism and simple Cayman pride, this resolution is worthy of the support of Members of this Honourable House.

The support that has been shown to this call, not only by the public, but by businesses in Cayman, should tell us all that there is a need to bring this issue to the consciousness of people. People must understand that it is worthy of debate and consideration; it is worthy of our passing a resolution to say, "This is how we feel about it. We feel that more needs to be done."

Ultimately, there will be those who will argue as to how this should be done: whether it is something that should be statute driven, whether we should be passing legislation, or making conditions on the licenses radio stations get from the Information and Communications Technology Authority (ICTA). People will argue as to the mechanics, but I do not think many of us are going to argue about the need for more to be done. I hope that having this Motion and debate in the Legislative Assembly will go some way—hopefully a long way—towards having people understand more about the issue, and having radio stations act more favourably in terms of addressing it.

I am aware, as are all other Members, that when it comes down to this business of music, there are different tastes. There will be some people who will say, "Well, I like listening to this type of music; I like listening to another type of music. There are certain artists I like and others I do not like". Mr. Speaker, there are artists from other countries on whom, if I am driving down the road, and their music comes on, I change the radio station. There will be people who will argue along the lines that say, "Well, the radio station should be free to play what it wants to play, and if you do not like what they are playing, then you turn the dial and listen to another radio station".

That is not what we are arguing here. We are not saying that people should not have that right. We are saying that locals who are involved in the music industry should have the opportunity to have their music aired more regularly and more frequently on local radio stations.

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay has outlined the statistics in terms of the numbers of albums and songs that are available from local musicians. When we got the letters from the Cayman Music and Entertainment Association, with the number of available titles, I was blown away—as most members probably are. I do not think most of us ever dreamt that there was that amount of local music available in Cayman. There has also been a dramatic increase in the quality of music that is available here, and that is actually produced and cut here in Cayman.

After all has been said and done, I believe that this Motion deserves the support of the House, the community, and the local radio stations.

I look forward to voting in favour of this Motion, and I look forward to debate, and also support, from other Members for this very important Motion.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Apologies

The Speaker: Before calling on another Member to speak, I have received, this afternoon, apologies for absence from the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology. I would like to have that duly recorded.

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour and my pleasure, this evening, to rise to offer the contribution on behalf of Members of the Opposition in relation to the Private Member's Motion that is before this Honourable House.

As I said this morning, when I was proposing parliamentary question No. 94—which asked what efforts were being made by Government to address the complaints of local recording artists that local music does not receive sufficient airtime on most radio stations—it is a happy coincidence that this question came along at this particular point. It would have been gathered, from both the question and the tone of the supplementary questions that followed, that this issue is one that is squarely in the minds of members of the Opposition, as well as being an issue that calls for redress and action by the legislature.

Much has been said, by those who have spoken before, about the number and quality of local recordings that are available. I do not propose to say very much more about that aspect, save that I think it is remarkable, and very worthy of commendation, that a community as small as this has been able to produce such a quantity of recordings, and, indeed, in recent times, recordings of the quality to which we have now all become used. I am firmly of the view that many of the local recordings I hear are of superior quality, both in terms of production and in terms of the quality of the work itself—that is, the quality of the artistic rendition—to many that come from elsewhere. I have always felt that this posture that the locally produced efforts of our home-grown musicians are substandard is, quite frankly, simply an excuse for not wanting to promote local work.

It has been said many times, not just in the Caymanian context but generally speaking, in the wider world, that efforts emanating from the grass-roots of any society take a long time to receive recognition in that particular community. Often it is only when those efforts receive international recognition and accolades that it finally dawns on the communities from whence they have come to say, "You know, this is really good stuff." This is stuff we can be proud of, and material we can be happy to say is a Caymanian product.

I refer to the situation with Miss. Lassie (Mrs. Gladwyn Klosking Bush) of South Sound, who recently passed away. I note that sadly because she was a dear friend of mine. Miss Lassie had been drawing or making her "markings", as she called them, for a long time. As far as the people in this community were concerned, these were the markings of someone who was not entirely with it, in the terms of her mental state. She herself acknowledged, in the past, that many people thought she was mad because she drew these strange things all over the place—on the shutters of her home, on an old car, on an old fridge. It did not matter where it was; these were just things that she did because she was moved to do so.

When people from the outside saw these works, and remarked in wonderment about them, acknowledging that they were truly artistic renditions, the Cayman community finally came on board to understand that we had a prize and a treasure amongst us.

That is often the way these things go. In the case of Miss. Lassie, fortunately, the efforts of the Cayman National Cultural Foundation—and Mr. Henry Muttoo and Mr. Dave Martins in particular—served to highlight and promote her work. It did not take legislative action or the like to impress it upon the consciousness of our people that this was important work, worthy of international recognition, that the country could hold up and be proud of.

In the case of our song recordings, that does not seem to be the case. Some of our local songs have achieved substantial success on the charts in other parts of the world. Many have been very popular locally, not only in the recent past, but in the past generally. Notwithstanding that, it seems that there is a certain resistance—a certain lack of willingness—on the part of most of the local radio stations to play local music on a regular and consistent basis. This point has been made before, so I will not belabour it, but the reality is that what makes songs popular is airplay. Unless songs receive significant airplay, they are unlikely to sell many copies. For the radio stations to say that they do not play more of these songs because the songs are not very popular creates a vicious circle from which we will never escape. Unless the songs receive airplay, and people hear the songs and get to like them and associate with them, they are not going to go and buy the records.

A significant effort has to be made by the Government, and a clear message needs to be sent to those responsible for the administration of the radio stations, that it is simply unacceptable, in this community, for local works to be excluded or treated as second-class products.

We have talked many times, in this forum and elsewhere, about Cayman's cultural identity, about the importance of our recognising that we do have one, and the importance of acknowledging, respecting and promoting it. I believe that the challenge to the survival of a distinct Caymanian identity, over the course of the next decade, in particular, is a significant one. It is one that those of us who sit in these Hallowed Halls have a duty to promote, to ensure that Cayman continues to develop its own distinct identity, so that we do not get lost in the tremendous influences and pressures that are brought to bear on this very small society by exposure to television, radio and other media, which tend principally to promote an American, and to a lesser degree a European, product—and even, Mr. Speaker, (I say this carefully), a regional product that is not truly Caymanian.

Over the years we have taken bits and pieces from all over the world. That is the way Cayman has developed. None of us are indigenous in the true sense of that word. Some families may have had the privilege of having been here (as mine has) for seven or eight generations, but all of us came from somewhere else. Our forebears, and those who have come since, have all brought to Cayman bits and pieces of the places from whence they came, and used what local resources were available to create a culture that is distinct, though subtle. It is so subtle in some respects that it often takes people who come from somewhere else a long time to realise that there are distinctive Caymanian things. It is not only the way we speak, or the foods we eat; it is the way we behave, and the way we interact with each other. If one is sensitive enough, and if one is not so arrogant as to presume that these things do not exist in Cayman, one learns, over time, that this is a distinct culture. This is a society with its own mores and values and culture.

The creation and development of music are important components of all of that—of trying to create something that our people can hold onto, about which they can stand up and say, “Yes, that is Caymanian and I am proud of it. I am proud to be Caymanian and to be associated with that”. Music is a truly important medium for the expression of our own cultural identity. I doubt that there is any single medium that is more powerful in moving people, and causing people to feel a certain way about things, than music. We often joke about this. When there is a good soca session happening, I have seen grown men and women of the highest society—not only in Cayman but in Jamaica, Trinidad and elsewhere that I have travelled—simply following the instructions of one man (or woman, as the case may be) who holds a microphone and tells them to jump up on one leg, or bend down. It is not because they believe in that individual so much, or that he or she has such power. It is the power of the music, and the feeling and passion that it creates. It is a powerful medium, for good or for bad.

It is critical that we have the ability to hear, as a country and as a community, the artistic expression of our own people through local recordings, because music is powerful and important as a means of expressing cultural identity. Whether that takes legislation to effect, or debate in the Legislative Assembly, as we have now, we can modify attitudes and conduct. It is sad, Mr. Speaker, that it should come to this—that we have to stand up in the Legislative Assembly and implore those who control the airwaves to give the Caymanian product a chance. We should not have to do that.

Some of my colleagues across the Floor have spoken about its importance as a part of the tourism product. I am not going to spend a great deal of time talking about that again, except to say that I could not agree with them more. When people come here from elsewhere, they do not want to see a mirror image of what they have left back home. They do not want to hear the same things that they could hear back home. What is the point in coming—to get better weather, and access to the beach?

To get a true experience, and the true flavour of the Islands, they need to have an opportunity to experience things that are truly Caymanian. This is true not only about the music, but about the food as well, and about the people. Our community, our country and our society are under tremendous pressure in what I call these “transitional years”. All around us, those who have recently come here seek to promote the things with which they are more au fait, the things with which they have better experience: American music and food, British food—even Jamaican food.

We have a duty as a society, if we are not going to get lost in homogeneity. If we are going to have something that is distinct, we are going to have to work at it. We are going to have to mould people's attitudes and open their consciousness so that they start to understand the importance of embracing and promoting things that are home-grown and distinctively Caymanian.

I will talk about some examples of the kinds of music that Cayman produces, and has produced, not only now, but for years. I still have an album that was cut by the Tornados when I was a boy. It was cut in the Bahamas, but it is a Caymanian product and the music still sounds good. I no longer have anything to play it on, and I am hoping that someday, someone will produce a CD of the Tornados' music. We have been producing music in this country for a long time, and Cayman is one of those places distinct from the rest of the Caribbean. I have never been to Honduras, but I am told we share some common features with them, in terms of the kind of music we like to listen to. As the Minister of Education reminds me, that is because of our common ancestry.

If you go to a Caymanian dance, fete or session, you will hear a full range of music in every genre you could consider—from country to rock-and-roll, from soca to reggae, from dance-hall to soul—because that is the way Caymanians like to listen to music. I have had people say to me, time and time again, “This is a Caribbean island. How is it that you all love country music so much?” Then you explain to them the experiences of our people, how the seamen went off and were exposed to this country music, and brought it back home over the course of the last 40-50 years. It is an important part of our culture and our identity, and the kind of music that we like. At the same time, you do not plan to have any session, or any party, unless you have soca, reggae and soul as well. That is just the way we are.

I am told that in St. Lucia, they like country music as well, but I have never been there. You can go to virtually any other Caribbean country—and I have been to most of the eastern Caribbean countries—and country music is an alien form of music. They just do not listen to it. Those are important cultural distinctions that are important to us.

When you listen to the Charlie Pride of Cayman music, Andy Martin, you know that that is as good as you get anywhere. It truly is. There is absolutely no one who can justifiably complain about the quality of Andy's work, or its production.

Mr. Speaker, I keep being reminded by my colleagues, as though I need to be reminded of this, that Mr. George Nowak, better known as The Barefoot Man, is largely responsible not only for his own considerable personal success but for the promotion of Caymanian music, and the promotion of the work and efforts of people like Andy Martin. For that, he must be commended. I am sure that it is a labour of love, but it also the devotion of a lifetime, and a continuing one.

The real point I want to make about this is that I can listen to any record that is played on the radio, and no matter what genre it is, no matter what the quality, I can tell if it is a Caymanian piece of work. Whether it is in the country style, calypso, soca, reggae, or even hip-hop, I can tell. Do not ask me how I can tell, because I could not quite put my finger on it. There is something about it, to someone like me who has lived and grown up in this community. I can tell that it is a Caymanian piece of work. It is that critical but unidentifiable component (unidentifiable, at least, to me) that is so important. That is the distinction; that is the reflection of our cultural difference. We take the country music, and it is clearly country music when you hear it, but it has a Caymanian flair and flavour about it. That is true of all the genres. That is what those who come here want to hear. That is what we must continue to instil in the hearts, minds and consciousness of our own people. That is what they should want to hear, what they should be proud of, and what they should be willing to promote.

I am old enough to have been around in the early days of Bob Marley and The Wailers, and to have listened to some of their first efforts. I am also old enough to have grown up in that era when my mother used to quarrel about my listening to that old ganja-smoking music. For a long time, the efforts of Bob Marley, who died at age 36 in May 1981, were looked upon as primitive, not only in his own hometown but in the region, and certainly in Cayman. In retrospect, when you listen to some of those earlier recordings, they do sound primitive. There is an absence of all these "synthesisers"—I wish that the Temporary Honourable Third Official Member, Mr. Walton, could help me with this, because this is his field. It is clean and clear, and perhaps stark at times. You could even say "raucous". However, because of his work and efforts—and not just his, but those of Peter Tosh, Bunny Wailer, Burning Spear, Jimmy Cliff, and all of those who battled against the prejudice, the discrimination and the idea that "this is not quite up to what the market requires"—they did succeed.

Reggae music, particularly the work and effort of Bob Marley, has transformed the world. There is nowhere that you go in this world where people do not know who Bob Marley is, now. The important messages that he sent in his short life resonate throughout the world.

There was an event on Monday evening of this week, in Celebration Park, in which a significant number of us demonstrated our support for those who are living with HIV and AIDS, and the work of Cayman AIDS Foundation. One of the things they handed out to those of us who were fortunate enough to be there was a poster. The whole theme was discrimination, and prejudice, and the need to remove these from our minds, our consciousness and our thinking. The poster is of a large group of persons, including some Members of this Honourable House. It was taken on Seven Mile Beach—I am not sure how long ago. Across the top of it was a line from—guess who? Bob Marley. "None but ourselves can free our minds".

It is those sorts of things, I am sure, that never occur to the composers when songs are being composed and promoted. Most of us do not even think of the full implications of them either; it simply sounds good for a while. Over time, however, if the message is the right message, it seeps into our beings. We say these lines, or they come through our consciousness, into other things we are doing and thinking, because they are so powerful and important. Cayman will get to that point; of that I am confident. This will be an important source of music regionally, and, in due course, internationally.

We will not forever be—and you and I will be long gone, I am certain—a population of 40,000. Many of these things require significantly larger populations to gain the sort of momentum that is necessary to move the effort, the work and the product into the international market. We have to acknowledge that. However, this important work that is being done now ought, at least, to be given the opportunity to succeed locally. If that requires the passage of legislation to require radio stations to play two songs an hour, then so be it.

I understand that, because he sits where he sits, the Honourable Minister of Education may have some concerns about how easy or difficult it might be to pass legislation that will give the required effect. I do not buy into that. We have passed some of the most complicated legislation, with the most serious implications, in this Honourable House.

In response to my parliamentary question this morning, the Honourable Minister of Education noted that one concern was the ability to define properly what a local song is. We define what a local song is. I do not think that is particularly difficult. Even with my limited ability, I could create a definition, which I believe would be acceptable, as to what a local song is—it is a song produced by persons who are resident here.

Who would be authorised to conduct formal monitoring of radio stations to ensure compliance? We give people that responsibility. There are not that many radio stations. We do not have to monitor them 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year to know whether or not they are generally compliant. We already know who is promoting and who is not promoting Cayman music.

I can say, because I believe that we should be fair, that Radio Cayman and Rooster 101 make a real effort to play local music, though whether it is two per hour I cannot say. That may or may not have been a result of their own initiative; I suspect that some of the pressures that have been brought to bear on them by the Cayman Music and Entertainment Association and other proponents of Cayman music have had a significant impact on their attitude, but that is good.

I am sure that no one in the Music Association, and no one in this Honourable House, would expect Rooster 101, which is a country music station, to play locally produced reggae or calypso. No one is going to be unreasonable about these things. If you are a radio station that is dedicated to one particular genre, as long as you play sufficient numbers of locally produced music from that genre, then you are all right.

I made a quick note to myself a little earlier, and I came up with the following radio stations. If I have missed any please forgive me. There is Vibe; there is Radio Cayman, which has three stations: 105.3, 89.9 and the one that is dedicated to Cayman Brac; there is ICCI; there is Rooster 101; there is Ocean 95; there is Z99 and there is Heaven 97.

Again, no one would expect Heaven 97 to play soca music, unless it was religious. I must say that I do not think soca and religion go too well together, although I have heard it done. There is a certain irreverence about soca music that does not sit very nicely with gospel music, but that is just me and my conservative Caymanian nature coming through.

Mr. Speaker, I hope I have made clear where the Opposition stands on this matter. We are not seeking to be adversarial, or even critical of the Honourable Minister of Education, at this stage. However, we do not believe that the concerns or hurdles that have been identified to him by the Ministry or elsewhere (because we are not suggesting that these are his concerns) are sufficiently large hurdles to warrant the view that legislation is too difficult.

As the Second Elected Member for West Bay has said, I hope that, because this has been identified by both sides of this Honourable House as a matter worthy of the House's time and resources, the clear message will go through to those responsible for the airwaves: If they do not get their own house in order, and if they are not prepared to do what is right, honourable and in the bests interest of Cayman—not only the musicians, but Cayman, its people and those who visit here—then this Legislative Assembly will be prepared to take other action to ensure that local music is properly promoted on our own radio stations.

Mr. Speaker, this is a subject that we could spend considerable time debating, one I hold near and dear to my own heart. I know the other Members of the Opposition do as well. The whole question of Cayman's culture—its cultural experience and our supposed lack of culture—is one that has occupied a great deal of thought and attention in my own mind for many years.

Unfortunately the experience of the musicians is not a great deal different from the experience that many of us in Cayman have to deal with on a day-to-day basis as we go through our lives. This is not distinct to Cayman. I think it is part of the whole exercise of growing up, as countries and as communities, that all of the former colonised peoples have had to go through—and in our case, we are still in that unhappy state. Somehow, if you were born here, if your work was produced here, or if you were educated here, it is not quite up to par with whatever obtains elsewhere. The mere fact that you, or the product, came from somewhere else gives that product a higher intrinsic value than the home-grown equivalent. It is a natural prejudice.

As one who battled through all of the prejudices and discrimination inherent in having an education from the Cayman Islands Law School, I understand that. It is not something I accept. Battle I have done and battle I continue to do. The battle is to prove over and over again that what you do is as good or better than anything anyone else does, is able to do, or can produce.

In my practice as a lawyer in Cayman, I found that, after a while, it ceased to matter to those I represented. However, it is a prejudice that you have to deal with over and over again, and you never quite win. Every morning, you get up and you go back to battle again. Perhaps one day we will reach a point (I will be long gone I am sure) when these things will not matter at all, and the fact that something is from Cayman will be a stamp of approval, and mean that it is a good thing.

In the meantime, as long as we are here and able to carry on the fight, we must send the message to all and sundry as many times as we can, through as many media as we can, that we are going to promote and stand behind the Caymanian product. In this instance, it is local recordings. The unanimous vote of this Honourable House in favour of this Motion should send the message that needs to be sent to all of those who matter, to make them understand: "Do the right thing or we will pass legislation to ensure that you do".

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Temporary Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I have been reminded by my colleague from East End that this is a potential conflict of interest, but be that as it may. Official Members do not normally speak on things like this, but after listening to my colleague, the Second Elected Member for George Town, speak with such passion and conviction and, knowing him as I do and knowing that he has absolutely no musical talent whatsoever, I am forced to my feet. Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity.

[Laughter]

Hon. A. Joel Walton: He can actually play the records and listen to music in his car; he is a lip-sync artist.

The other speakers have focused on the cultural and social sides of music, and productions of that nature—the spoken word and so on. I want to talk about the economic side, to try to keep this in line with my responsibilities here.

Local content follows and takes on a broad meaning. It is about songs, advertising jingles, and spoken dialogue, like the words of our own Quincy Brown, for example. It is about news, and it is also about special features and programming. It is not only about songs. The particular Motion was clear on that. It talked about general local content which can come through in many different forms.

Let us take dialogue, for example. As a child, growing up and listening to RJR and JBC, which were Jamaican stations at that time, I can remember listening to Miss Lou and Mas Rannie. Here in our own Cayman Islands, we have Aunt Sookie, Ezekiel, Quincy Brown, and other people who do this type of thing, but it never really gets airplay. Some of the other Members have spoken about tourism—that has economic value, in its integration with the tourism product.

An advertisement, for example, is itself a song. It is a form of production, requiring not only a musician, but also lyricists, arrangers, and producers, that creates new job and career opportunities for people who would be inclined towards that type of activity. However, because that practice is limited here, and because the majority of the advertising is done overseas by people who are not resident on the Island, their ability to make a career in that area is limited.

The music industry is a viable industry in its own right. Take a country like Sweden, for example. Those of us who grew up in the 1970s will remember the group ABBA. I think that at one time, ABBA had a line in the Swedish balance of payments. After them came other groups. More recently, groups such as Ace of Base, and so on, came out after that explosion.

The amount of foreign exchange that Sweden earned from the ABBA product has been tremendous. You now have ABBA teens, as well.

I went to school in Canada in the late 1970s and early 1980s and, because of where Canada is, at that time it was suffering a barrage of what we would call imported radio stations. They had Styx, which was a major three-piece rock group at the time out of Canada; they had Burton Cummings who had local interest; they had Anne Murray, of course, and they had Gordon Lightfoot. Outside of that, Canadian music was very much left.

The Canadians took a definite decision that they wanted to promote music as an industry and as a cultural activity for its 23 million people. Yes, it is a difference, but still they did it.

Today you have people like Celine Dion, for example: a mega star. You can certainly argue that without the help of Government in that process it would not have happened.

My colleague mentioned Bob Marley, a major foreign exchange earner for Jamaica. Eddie Grant from Guyana, who made his fame in England with the Equals, actually brought his wealth back to Barbados, but he has contributed. He built a major studio and has a viable industry running out of Barbados. It is hard to conceive of it today, as it would have been 50 years ago in Jamaica, when the majority of Jamaican acts were actually performing covers of American R&B songs.

Another point that gets to me is the continuous criticism that doing cover music is a bad thing. Some of the major artists today got their start covering other people's material. It is bad if you cover it and do not acknowledge it, but covering somebody else's material is not inherently a bad thing.

I was listening to the Second Elected Member for George Town speaking, as he was trying to get a handle on it. I understand his problem. My colleague, the Attorney General, was talking about "knowing the unknown". He was talking about being able to identify local music, and saying that he could hear a hip hop song, a country song, or a soca song, and know it is local. What he was trying to explain is that music is truly global. It is not just international any more; it is truly a global activity.

Every culture—no matter how small it is—brings an inflection, so that someone presents that material in a slightly different light. Of course, the First Elected Member for George Town, the Leader of the Opposition, speaks of it in the context of food, and speaks of its unique flavour. That is the cultural side of this product that we will be able to bring to economics.

The music industry, as I said, employs lyricists, poets, and writers. It promotes the development of studios, arrangers, producers, engineers, and artists to create album covers. Many of my covers have been done by Neil Murray in his personal time. He is an excellent artist, it is a job opportunity for him, and I get my job done.

It creates CD pressing. You have to create the CDs, and that can be done locally. There is packaging—the cellophane that goes on it. There is also distribution, of course.

It promotes the development of radio stations and, in future years, television stations, because videos will come after. As soon as we are able to get a fix on the actual audio material, we will get a whole new industry developing in the form of videos—videos of songs or short skits, of dialogue and so on.

For Cayman, this is like the jewellery industry, which developed here under the radar—I mean the Caymanite and black coral industries. This is a major foreign exchange earner and so, too, could be music. As in the case of film, it is a new industry, and a whole new realm of possibilities for our very small country.

Developing a fledgling industry is always difficult, Mr. Speaker; it always has challenges—challenges of definition. What is local? I like what I have heard before. It allows almost anything produced locally to be considered local. Although the song itself might not have been written by somebody resident here, it would give the opportunity for studios, which are located here, to encourage overseas acts to record here. That brings foreign exchange, because these people have to come and pay for studio time, stay in hotels, rent cars, eat, and so on. It is a much broader vision that we are able to bring to this, to encourage the development.

Mr. Speaker, I think I have said enough. I hope that we can get the message across that the leaders of the country are serious about local content in domestic broadcasts. I know we will by the fact that this Motion has full support by both sides of the House. I hope that, having given that direction, those who are still not quite sure that it can work will be able, at least, to engage in dialogue, to see us doing this sensibly and reasonably, not only for the benefit of musicians, playwrights, poets and producers, and so on, but also for their own businesses, and for themselves.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources, and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, the Motion on the Floor of the House, and the circumstances that led to its arrival here, are matters with which I am very familiar, having first come face-to-face with the challenge shortly after assuming responsibility for the Ministry. I have a journal of entries, by month and year, of significant steps taken in trying to effect greater exposure from the radio stations for locally produced music.

It is appropriate, and relevant, to ask ourselves what we are seeking to achieve. I often wonder, as I listen to the content of some of these radio stations, whether the owners and the disc-jockeys have forgotten their geography. I wonder whether they realise that we are in the Cayman Islands, in the Caribbean, or whether they think we are some little town in the United States, based on the content they impose upon us. Mr. Speaker, in my contacts with these persons (including the proprietors), the responses I got were arrogant, contemptuous, and down-right insulting. The attitudes and behaviours of the disc-jockeys are but reflections of the dispositions of the owners of these stations, who, when I have been in contact with them, have displayed little or no empathy, and no understanding of the whole business of why locally produced music should receive airplay. I want to give this Honourable House an example of what I consider to be their arrogance and their contempt.

One of the radio stations, which shall remain anonymous at this time, had what they thought was some kind of game, though I called it gimmickry. The name of the game was, “Flush It”. They played a song—a local song; they used only local music—and at the end of the song, one of the disc-jockeys would say, “Flush it”, after which time you would hear the sound of a flushing toilet, and they would proceed to make fun. If that is their sense of humour, then it was very puerile to me. I took it as a gross insult.

I never heard that done to any music of a foreign nature. I did not say anything, because I did not want to incite any untoward behaviour, but I did remark on a number of occasions to some friends and associates, who were in my presence when I heard it, that Cayman was the only jurisdiction where they could have gotten away with that. If that had happened in Jamaica, or Barbados, or any other jurisdiction in the Caribbean, then I know they would have to have been escorted home, more than likely in a helicopter, because they would have gotten pelted—and not with rotten eggs either.

Worse was the fact that these persons were not Caymanians; these were people coming here on work permits, and insulting our production. The direction in which I am going to take my debate is a political direction, because I am very concerned. Many years ago, it was fashionable to talk about imperialism. What they are imposing on us is a kind of cultural imperialism. It is so dangerous and so subtle that it will mesmerise us, and we will not even realise that we are being mesmerised. They are insisting that we be completely acculturated into believing that what we do and produce locally is second-rate or of no value, but that what comes from outside, and is promoted by them, is best for us.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say something else. I do not necessarily believe that enforced behaviour is the best behaviour, but I have come to the conclusion—and I came to this conclusion long before coming here and listening to the debate by Honourable Members—that the only way we are going to solve this problem is to find a way to force a change of behaviour upon these radio stations. As I have said, that in itself poses some challenges, but we shall have to find a way to get around them.

I have said to officers in my Ministry that I would not like to know that these radio stations have any advertising emanating out of the Ministry of Education, Human Resources and Culture. If they cannot be fair to Caymanian artistes and musicians, then I do not see why the State's funds should be used to bolster their profit lines. I would wish that there could be more people, more entities and more organisations which would take such a line, because I believe that one way of getting our message across effectively is to hit them on their balance sheets and their ledgers.

It is patently fallacious for them to believe that they can treat us with continuing contempt and expect to get away with it. When I threatened them with legislation, a couple of them had the nerve to call me up and threaten that they could get even at election time, when it was necessary, of course, to have an effective campaign. I have never shirked from a good political fight, and I told them, "That is fine, but you had better pray that I lose, because if I win, that will be the time I come for your jugular". It is not an issue to which they are prepared to yield easily. It has come to the point where we shall have to seek redress through legislation.

I would hope that the proprietors of these stations are so busy and so detached with other interests that they do not realise what is happening, and what is being done, for it should never have had to come to this serious a measure. I listened to every one of them. Every one of those stations thrives off local advertising, so it should be, as the old Jamaican saying goes, hand wash hand. If they thrive off local advertising, it is only reasonable that they give some airtime to locally produced music. Being a Caymanian, I believe, as the Second Elected Member for George Town says, that all kinds of music run through my veins. I can appreciate a little country at times. The only person's music to which I do not care to listen (for obvious reasons) is a certain Michael Jackson, but any other music, I have ears for.

Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that I am unique as a Caymanian, in that regard. On behalf of the Government, I am prepared to accept this Motion, and to support it. If the only way to get a level playing field is through the law, then that is the business of the State—to ensure that the playing field is level, so that the game can be played by all those who wish to play it. I think that we are deluding ourselves if we believe that every tourist who comes to our shore wants to hear North American rock-and-roll, or North American-type music. Certainly, the fame of The Barefoot Man has spread, and continues to spread. With The Barefoot Man we have the other members of what I call the "Barefoot Tribe", Andy Martin and some others. It is only reasonable that these persons get an opportunity to ply their trades in dignity, and in all seriousness, so that they can realise economic returns for their efforts.

However, it goes even further. Some of the establishments do not want to employ local acts and I have been engaged in that too. They form all kinds of excuses, such as, "The people are not professional". What does that mean? I know that the Music and Entertainment Association has made great strides. The Ministry for which I have responsibility has helped them on a number of occasions. Thank heavens, they are now mainly self-supportive, but they cannot last as an entity unless our radio stations and our establishments give them the airtime and playing time that they deserve.

I want to finish by saying that any organisation or entity that believes that we are not serious can procrastinate, and continue their arrogance and contemptuous behaviour, until the Law comes into play. Then they will understand that these efforts must be acknowledged, and these persons must get the opportunities they deserve.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, does the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My job at this stage is quite a pleasurable one. I only have duty now to thank all the Members of this Honourable House who have contributed towards this Motion for the support that they have given. I especially want to thank the Cayman Islands Music and Entertainment Association for the assistance that they have given in researching this Motion. I want to thank the Second Elected Member for West Bay for his support in moving the Motion, especially, as the Minister of Education has just said, in light of the possibility of political ramifications in the upcoming General Election, when it comes to advertising, and the dependency on the radio stations.

I wanted also to express support, on behalf of the Minister of Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology, under whose portfolio the ICTA rests. I spoke to her earlier, and she was not aware that the Motion was going to be completed today. She is over in Cayman Brac, on official business. She wanted me to express her support for this Motion, and to make it known that she gave her commitment, and that of her Ministry, to ensuring that this issue is dealt with as expeditiously as possible. She wanted to make a contribution as well, Mr. Speaker, but not knowing that it was coming forward today, she is not in the Chamber. However, she wanted to express her continued support for the local musicians in the industry, and her commitment to ensuring that this matter is dealt with.

I am happy to have brought the Motion, which has apparently gained the support of both sides of this Honourable House. I look forward to the radio stations, after this House has successfully passed the Motion, getting a clear message of support from all the Members of the Legislative Assembly as to the need for some protection being given to our local musicians.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is: BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government considers implementing legislation to provide for more local content on our locally licensed radio stations.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Private Member's Motion No. 5/03 passed.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 6/03

Review of all Laws, Regulations and Policies in Regard to Special Needs Persons

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I bet to move Private Member's Motion No. 6/03, standing in my name.

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government considers undertaking a review of all Laws, Regulations and Policies in regards to special needs persons and make the necessary modifications to bring them in line with local and internationally accepted best practices."

The Speaker: Is there a Seconder?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The Motion is now open for debate. Does the Member wish to speak thereto?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

This Motion, which I have had the privilege of bringing to this Honourable House, is another of those issues we would have hoped, in the interests of good citizenship, would not have been necessary, because there is an understanding given to what we term "special needs" or "disabled" individuals.

It was not until recently that there was an article in our local newspaper, on Friday, 29 August 2003, with the headline was "Reaction to plight of blind girl." With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I would like to read a few lines from that.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: It reads: "Most businesses spoken to by the Caymanian Compass have shown an accommodating attitude towards the plight of a young blind girl.

"Recent allegations on behalf of the girl and her benefactor, The Lions Club of Grand Cayman, were that local businesses were refusing to admit her with her leader dog.

"Keisha Ram Kisson, the first recipient in the Lions Club of Grand Cayman leader dog programme, is in the process of returning 'Baby' – the leader dog she was presented with last year – to the training school from where he came. According to recent communication from the Lions Club, local shops, restaurants, and public transport vehicles were not allowing the dog on their premises.

"Programme Director Osbourne Bodden observed various George Town food and retail establishments, as well as public buses, on occasion, refused to accommodate Keisha and Baby. 'The most frequent reason given, he stated, was the general objections of customers.

"There is ignorance throughout society on this matter. 'If the customers leave, it becomes a matter of economics at the end of the day,' he stated."

Mr. Osbourne Bodden's response—that the ignorance of society is the reason we had a young lady with a disability, who is basically blind, unable to use a dog that was provided to her by one of the community organisations to try to assist her in her daily life—made me aware of how uninformed society is when it comes to dealing with disabled and special needs individuals.

Perhaps fortunately, I have often been exposed to persons with special needs, having been involved in the Special Olympics for quite a while. Having lived in the district of West Bay, and being a representative of the district, there is a certain amount of exposure to special-needs individuals—which is not necessarily true for the rest of the members of our society. Because of that "unknown", it appears that there is not as much acceptance of the special needs and the difficulties that those individuals have as we would like to believe.

The purpose of my debate and this Motion is hopefully to bring more awareness and to try to clear up some of the ignorance to which Mr. Bodden referred, about the people in our society. As we are a growing society, those numbers will obviously be increasing. My hope is that if we do have more understanding and awareness of those needs, society will be more receptive to the special conditions that may be necessary to allow those people to live more independently.

What I would like to start by doing is defining "disabilities".

“Disability Awareness

“There are several ways of defining disability. The two most widely used definitions are the medical model and the social model (the social model being the one most disabled people themselves, generally, prefer as this emphasises the social restrictions that can prevent disabled people from having an equal opportunity to take part fully in all aspects of life.

“The medical model

“This definition of disability was composed by the World Health Organisation (WHO) in the early 1980s. This definition defines impairment, disability and handicap as follows:

- Impairment - loss or abnormality in structure or function;
- disability - inability to perform an activity within the normal range for a human being, because of an impairment;
- handicap - inability to carry out normal social roles because of an impairment/disability.

“These definitions were initially derived for the convenience of medical personnel. They reinforce the misconception that disability is allied to ill health and that disabled people need the care and attention of the medical profession. These definitions also put the responsibility for functional inability with the disabled person and imply that the answers to solving the problems that arise from living with a disability lie with the medical profession.

“The social model

“The social model looks at the way in which the lives of disabled people are affected by the barriers that society imposes. Having a disability certainly implies that there is some functional limitation that has been caused by an illness, accident or medical condition. In some situations, the limitation is accommodated, i.e. person with hearing loss may use a hearing-aid to restore his/her hearing; short sightedness can be corrected by wearing glasses or contact lenses.” Somebody who is blind may use a seeing-eye dog.

“Day-to-day activities may be more difficult for a disabled person because of pain, difficulty in moving or communicating, or because of a learning disability, but an accepting and accommodating society would significantly reduce the effects of disability.

If the social and environmental barriers were eliminated, disabled people would have a more realistic opportunity of living equally alongside non-disabled people.” [From the Disabled Living Foundation’s Fact Sheet on Disability Awareness]

“Types of Impairment

“The subsequent effects of an illness, accident or medical condition upon the way a person functions can be divided into two main categories; visible and invisible. A visible impairment is one that can be seen; for example a wheelchair user has an obvious physical impairment. Consequently, many people associate disability with using a wheelchair when in fact wheelchair users make up only a small percentage of the disabled population. There are many other forms of visible and invisible impairments and some examples are listed below. They should not be considered in isolation; a person with advanced diabetes, for example, may have a visual impairment and mobility difficulties due to slow circulation and loss of sensation.

- Physical impairment - this denotes difficulty in moving or using all or part of the body. The upper limbs may be restricted making it difficult to reach, grasp and manipulate objects; or there may be a mobility impairment often caused by partial or complete loss of function in the legs, but conditions that affect balance or loss of sensation can also result in mobility difficulties. A person with a mobility impairment may not necessarily be dependant on a wheelchair; he/she may still be ambulant, but find walking difficult.” [From the Disabled Living Foundation’s Fact Sheet on Types of Impairment]

Then we have sensory impairment, learning disability, communication difficulties, mental illness and other hidden disabilities as well. One of the biggest difficulties that disabled people face is the lack of the social integration. Knowing the difficulties, which may be visible or invisible, and the challenges they create for disabled individuals, I think that as a conscious government, we should consider trying to help bring awareness to our society about the needs of these special individuals.

Mr. Speaker, disabilities can affect anyone. We really have no control as to how we may be affected. Whether it is because of genetics or age, we may some time later on in our lives face some of those same difficulties.

“Cultural and Social Influences

“What will influence whether and to what extent our lives will be affected by disability? The causes of disability are very diverse and will affect people of all social and cultural backgrounds, but there are some factors that will make us more vulnerable to the causes. For example:

- where we live in the world – e.g. polio and TB are still rife in some developing countries where healthcare provision is inadequate and vaccination programmes have not been fully established;
- income - low income families are more likely to live in homes that are poorly heated, have a less nutritious diet etc, leading to a higher susceptibility to some illnesses;
- lifestyle – the way we live our lives has a direct influence on our health and wellbeing. Stress, smoking, lack of exercise, recklessness are just a few ways that we put ourselves at risk;
- genetic vulnerability—our body make up may determine whether we are susceptible to particular illnesses or diseases.” [From the Disabled Living Foundation’s Fact Sheet on Cultural and Social Influences]

“Barriers to Ability

“Disabled people argue that if attitudes towards them, the way physical environments are designed and the way society is organised were changed, then the effect of their impairments would be minimised, giving them a fairer chance of equality.”

That, Mr. Speaker, is the main purpose for the bringing of this Motion. Although it is not easy to legislate for goodwill, there is a certain amount of legislation that is necessary to ensure that special consideration is given to those individuals. For those Members who may need an example, one that I can think of is handicapped parking.

The Planning Department may enforce that, when someone is building a building, they have to make provisions for a certain amount of handicapped parking. The parking is established and supposedly used by handicapped people. However, when people who are not handicapped and do not have special permission to park in those spaces do park there, the police have difficulty enforcing it. In most cases, that parking is provided on private property, so the police have difficulty ticketing the individual who may be parked there, even though he does not have the required parking permit, or the disabled individuals’ permit. Again, because of a lack of consciousness, we have people who do not have the right to park in the specified parking places parking there, making it more inconvenient for the disabled individuals for whom the parking spaces were originally designed.

Although legislation is difficult, and we would like to see it as a last resort, we do recognise that there are instances in which, without proper, enforceable legislation, even the best intent in the world does not serve its designed purpose.

In light of that, I would say that: “Goodwill should be given criteria for action otherwise it might remain just an expression of good intent, but never try to over-organize it, it thrives on freedom and much of its beauty and spontaneity would be killed off if unduly curtailed by strict rules.

“Rules should be raised as rare plants nurtured and allowed to grow into strong trees which only then can be called laws. The media (TV, radio, newspapers and magazines) should be extensively used to make people aware of the presence of disabled people, of their difficulties, of what they can do for society and what they can expect in return. It is a whole process of awareness awakening, and positive education about how people can put their natural goodwill to effective use. It is a smooth powerful education by suggestion and spreading of ideas. TV, films, documentaries and interviews are all available or can be accessed on demand. Good use must be made of them until the idea that disabled people are worthy, interesting and productive is well-anchored in the public mind. People with disabilities will then be able to stake their claim to social facilities of which the main one is physical accessibility to places reserved up to now to the non-disabled.

“As an example of progression from awareness to law, take the safety belt. It started as an idea with which inventors experimented until eventually they developed a good reliable safety device. People started to use it; its use was first recommended by authorities then strongly advised and finally enforced by law. People do not begrudge the minor inconveniences of the safety belt because they know it is useful and saves lives. Mobility facilities for the disabled persons should follow the same route.” [Rajah, Zorah (2004). Legislation of mobility facilities for disabled persons as backup to existing goodwill.]

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we have now reached the hour of 4.30pm. I have received notice that it is the wish of Members that the business of the House should continue until 6.30pm, or the completion of this Motion that is before this House, which is the last item on the Order Paper for today.

I will now call on the Honourable Minister of Education to move Standing Order 10(2) for the suspension, for us to continue.

Hon. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order that the business on the Order Paper can move beyond our normal adjournment hour of 4.30pm.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended in order for us to continue the proceedings of the House.

All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) suspended to allow proceedings to continue beyond 4.30 pm.

The Speaker: The House will continue its proceedings, but I will now take the afternoon break. We will suspend for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 4:30 pm

Proceedings resumed at 5:06 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Before we took the break, I was in wind-up mode. I was making the point that: “As far as people with disabilities are concerned, law is no substitute for good manners and educated goodwill; it is only there as a guard against those who, through selfishness or for the protection of their money, choose to live at the expense of society. Initiating legislation in view of acquiring”—Caymanian—“structures within which disabled people can feel at ease is a must.” [Rajah, Zorah (2004). Legislation of mobility facilities for disabled persons as backup to existing goodwill.]

The position of disabled people is that what they most crave is the ability to live and survive in society, and to co-exist as much as possible in an independent fashion. You may ask, “How can we assist with independence and what does living independently mean?”

“It means that services are provided on disabled people’s own terms—the choice and control, such as we want it, is ours—it should not be institutionalised and so on someone else’s terms.

“At one point in time, independence was seen as independence at home—now for many disabled people it should be seen as independ- ence at work too.” [From The British Council of Disabled People – Improving the Quality of Life for Disabled People.]

Since this was an attempt to give some education to society, I want to mention what has been given to me as the terminology that is used.

It says: “The language used when addressing disabled people or used generally to describe disability has an impact on the way disabled people are perceived. It is therefore essential that the language presents a positive image not a negative one, and does not cause offence.

“The tone of address should also be sensitive to the feelings of disabled people—and accurate. Disabled people are no braver than non-disabled people; neither do they consider themselves to be victims or battling against tragedy. Patronising, sensational, or sentimental words and phrases should be avoided. Disabled people are not self-pitying and their lives are not uninterrupted drudgery. Language that reinforces impressions of apathy or dependence should not be used.

“A disabled person, like anyone else, will have his/her own preferences about how he/she would like to be addressed or described, and it is therefore best to ask the individual concerned. For example, some people may use the term people with disabilities in preference to disabled people.

“Terminology that is totally unacceptable includes:

- handicapped - this conjures up the image of a subservient person begging for money, cap in hand. The label implies that the individual is to blame for the difficulties he/she encounters when it is environment and society that causes the handicap;
- the disabled - this lumps people together in a group separate from the rest of society. It is stereotyping according to one aspect of a person, not acknowledging that disabled people have individuality;
- a person is not a condition - to refer to someone as an arthritic or paraplegic is dehumanising. When referring to a specific condition use the form person with . . . ;
- invalid - Invalid is also used to suggest a person who is ill or sickly, and as disability is not the same as illness, the word should not be used as a description of disabled people;
- wheelchair bound* or *confined to a wheelchair are terms that imply that the disabled person is tied or imprisoned within their wheelchair, when the wheelchair itself is purely a way of providing independent mobility and freedom. A wheelchair user is a more acceptable term;

- backward, retarded or mentally handicapped are terms that carry a stigma and imply that a person is unable to learn. Learning difficulty or learning disability should be used in preference;
- normal to describe non-disabled people - this implies that disabled people are deviations from the normal." [From The Disabled Living Foundation – Terminology]

Those are all terms that tend to belittle or dehumanise disabled people. As a society, it is important for us to learn about, and be familiar with, issues and terminology that is sensitive to disabled people.

What I would like to leave the Members with is this: "There are ways in which disabled people's quality of life can be improved over which you can have a positive influence. Please use your influence – disabled people have a right to it." [From The British Council of Disabled People—Improving the Quality of Life for Disabled People.]

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer a contribution on behalf of the Opposition on this Private Member's Motion No. 6/03 entitled, Review of all Laws, Regulations and Policies in regard to Special Needs Persons.

I stop to pause and say déjà vu. I think it was back in 2000 that a Motion of a similar nature was brought to this Legislative Assembly based on the needs of these special-needs persons, and I have yet to see anything put in place. Visibly, we have a few wheelchair ramps and different things, but other than that, there is nothing.

The People's Progressive Movement, at its conference on 6 September 2003, put forward certain resolutions for the parliamentary Opposition to research and to bring to this House. One of those is draft Resolution No.10 – Provision of Special Needs People:

"Whereas the Cayman Islands is a society that believes in God and traditional values, and whereas there are people in our society with special needs;

"And whereas all people are created with equal worth and are entitled to basic human rights:

"Be it therefore resolved that the People's Progressive Movement calls on Government to provide legislation to protect the needs and rights of people with special needs in our community;

"And be it further resolved that the People's Progressive Movement calls on Government to provide the necessary facilities in order to enhance the abilities of special needs persons so that they can lead a full and productive life."

When I read this Motion—and it is to be hoped that when the Honourable Mover is winding up on the Motion, he will clear this up for me—he says: "BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government considers undertaking a review of all laws, regulations and policies in regard to special needs' persons and make the necessary modifications to bring them in line with local and internationally accepted best practices." If my memory bears me out, I do not believe that this country has any specific laws in place, or regulations, or a policy in regard to special needs persons. If these are the laws that the Honourable Mover is referring to, it would be incumbent upon him to bring an amendment to this Motion.

The Opposition accepts that we need to undertake something with laws, regulations and policies in regard to special needs persons, but perhaps that amendment should be: "That the Government considers putting in place legislation, regulations and policies in regard to special needs persons."

There is only one Law (I believe under the Development and Planning Law (2003 Revision)), we are required to put in place wheelchair access and special parking. Under the Traffic Law (2003 Revision) there is fine for parking in a handicapped place at any public parking lot.

This Motion deals with an issue that is dear to my heart; the needs of our special needs persons in these Islands. I have been involved with special needs persons from way back when I was on the Miss Cayman Committee. I think it is the Miss World Contest that says that funds must be earmarked to be used for special needs facilities or persons with special needs. When I got involved on that Committee, I met with Ms. Joy Basdeo and Ms. Jackie Balls, and we raised some $14,000 in Hands Across Cayman. If my memory serves me correctly, that is what started the Sunrise Adult Centre. Therefore, these people have been a part of my life for quite some time.

For years these Islands have neglected our people with disabilities. They were shunned and not accepted by the public. We have improved, and made a few strides in education: we have the Lighthouse School. However, my question to the Honourable Minister is: What happens when these special needs persons complete their education and time at the Lighthouse School? Where do they go from there? Are these things that we should be putting in legislation? I am asking the question.

Mr. Speaker, the United Nations on International Norms and Standards relating to Disability states, if I may, says:

“The Legislative Process

“One of the dominant features of the 20th century jurisprudence has been the recognition of law as a tool of change. An important feature of an effective legal system is its capacity to reflect the changing needs and demands of a society in which it operates. Although legislation is not the only means of social control, it definitely is one of the most powerful vehicles of change and development. Continuous law making becomes a natural response of a developing legal system to new challenges and needs. Today, almost every area of national legislative concern is affected in one way or another by international treaty standards.”

The question I must ask the Government, when they accept this Motion is: We must ensure that all conventions that the United Kingdom has accepted on special needs persons with disabilities will be extended to the Cayman Islands (or that they will be if they are not already). We must not disregard, and make light of, the importance of national legislation to protect our special needs persons.

The Canadian Constitution was the first Constitution to include a comprehensive equality clause, and if you will allow me, Sir, I will read that.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: In the Canadian Constitution, it reads: “Every individual is equal before and under the law and has the right to the equal protection and equal benefit of the law without discrimination and, in particular, without discrimination based on race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, sex, age or mental or physical disability.”

I also believe that it is the Constitution of Germany that has added a phrase to their General Equal Protection Clause: “No one may be disadvantaged on account of his disability.”

I will go further and say that I think it is Uganda that says: “Society and State shall recognise the right of persons with disabilities to respect and human dignity.”

I say here on behalf of the Opposition, that perhaps it is time we include, under the fundamental rights of our Constitution, clauses similar to what is in the Canadian Constitution.

Throughout the world, persons with mental disabilities suffer abuse. They are mistreated, and in some cases, there is even forced sterilisation of these people. Mr. Speaker, we cannot allow the Cayman Islands to reach this stage with our mental people. Some may have had it done already, but I think it is time for us to walk in a different light.

The Mover of this Motion said—these are not his words exactly—that it is the responsibility of each and every one of us to educate our people on the needs of our special needs persons. I feel that this can be done. Rather than the Government deciding to look only at legislation, let us set up a committee of professionals. Let us research, see what is needed and put in place things that will assist our people with special needs. We could have our districts raise awareness about persons with disabilities, the rights of those persons, their potentials, and their contribution to society.

When I go to the Hyatt Hotel to visit my son, and I see some of the students (as I call them) from the Sunrise Adult Centre being employed, I feel very proud. I know that those persons are proud because at the end of the day, when they get a pay cheque they feel that they have earned it and they can make a contribution to their livelihood. This is the direction that we must go, as far as the Cayman Islands are concerned.

The World Programme of Action Concerning Disabled Persons, paragraph 154, stipulates that: “disabled persons and their organizations should be given equal access, employment, adequate resources and professional training with regard to public information, so that they may express themselves freely through the media and communicate their points of view and their experiences to the general public.”

I think before we barge into reviewing legislation, there is much research that can be done on this subject so that we, in the Cayman Islands, can end up with a product that really benefits our special needs persons.

The Motion calls for the reviewing of legislation. I believe that before we can put specialised legislation in place, the Government and the Opposition must have all the information about the status of our disabled persons. There must be a clear definition, as the Honourable Mover of the Motion stated quite clearly, of disabled or special needs persons. As the Honourable Mover said, there could be someone with a visual impairment walking along, and we may never realise that such a person is a special needs person because of that visual impairment. We must ensure that all aspects of disability are included in all relevant policy-making and national planning.

I pause to say that one of the first things that we need to put in place, after we have accepted this Motion, is this: we need a social policy that can deal with all social aspects of the Cayman Islands. If we deal with that, we can deal with our special needs persons. There is no policy to do with special needs persons in this country. If I am wrong, and someone can present it to me, I am quite willing to apologise. The disability of a special needs person is not a single issue. There are many arms to that issue. That is why I feel there must be coordination of any work that is going to be done on this issue. As I said before, we need to establish a national coordinating committee to serve as the national focal point on all disability matters.

This committee should be permanent—not a committee that is set up to do what we want to do with this Motion, and then passes away. This committee must be permanent, and must be based on legal as well as administrative regulation. The functions of the committee would be to research all national and international laws (because these go hand-in-hand with respect to special needs persons), and policy, as well as to coordinate and advise on all activities of all government agents and non-governmental organisations (NGOs) working on the issues affecting special needs persons. The committee should be made up of professionals, as I said before; representatives of relevant organisations; and those persons with special needs. They can tell us what they feel, and how they are treated. We must give them the opportunity to have input into legislation and policies that affect their lives. The importance of such a committee cannot be overstated. We will achieve nothing if we look only at reviewing legislation.

This reviewing of legislation—and as I said before, it can only be the Planning Law and the Traffic Law that have any mention, that I can recall, of the handicapped special needs person—must be a review of all legislation. If necessary, bring new legislation, because at the end of the day, the research could tell us that this country needs a disabilities act to deal with all aspects concerning the special needs person.

I have a gentleman in my district—and I am sure everyone here knows the farmer, Mr. Daniel—who comes to me constantly. He goes to Fosters to shop, to the handicapped parking space and he can find nowhere to park because there is someone like you or me who has no disability, but we have no respect.

[Inaudible interjection]

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: No obvious disability, as my colleague here says—but I have none at all.

They have no respect for that sign that says “handicapped parking”, so they park there. It is no use for us to sit here, in this Legislative Assembly, amend the Traffic Law, and say that these handicapped parking spots must be provided at these public places—and I think we went as far as to set a $500 fine, if you were found parking there without your license plate and your handicapped sticker—if they are not going to be enforced. It is a waste of time and of the country’s money. It is a lack of respect from those who should be enforcing this for persons with disabilities.

I was happy to have attended, some weeks ago—and I did miss the representatives from West Bay at that function, I must say—the opening of the new facility that has been leased for the Sunrise Adult Centre. I was quite happy that the Minister who took over from me did not remove the funds I had left in the budget to lease a facility for the Sunrise Adult Centre students. I do not know if you have ever visited the facility where those persons were being taught, next to the West Bay Primary School, but it was a total disgrace. It was one of the priorities that I took on board shortly after taking over the Ministry, and it became a reality four to six weeks ago. There is a nice facility.

However, I think the time has come for the country to look at a village concept for our special needs persons, where they can live amongst people like you and I—ordinary people without handicaps, so that we can get them into the workforce. They can make their own money, they can spend it and they can live on their own. However, Mr. Speaker, I stand here today, and I know I will be rebutted.

That facility must be more centralised so that my special needs children in the district of North Side can have access and be able to be in the same school—in the same village—as all the others. We cannot look at it in terms of how it suits us. We must look at the broad picture of what is best for all the districts in the Cayman Islands.

For too long, we have ignored our special needs persons. The Minister who is going to reply, on behalf of the Minister with responsibility for this, is a person who has been pushing. I am going to read, if you will allow me, Sir, Private Member’s Motion No. 18/99, Consideration for the Protection and Assistance of the Physically Challenged.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: This Motion was moved by Miss Heather Bodden, then Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, and seconded by Mr. Roy Bodden, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town at the time (now Honourable Roy Bodden, the Minister of Education). It said:

“WHEREAS there are a number of persons in our Caymanian society who are physically challenged;

“AND WHEREAS over the past few years physically challenged persons are entering the mainstream workplace and are becoming more integrated;

“AND WHEREAS there is also an increased need for handicapped parking to be provided and demarcated at all buildings catering to the general public;

“AND WHEREAS there is a need to further enhance and promote facilities which provide for the varied needs of the physically challenged;

“BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government considers enacting legislation which ensures that the physically challenged, as well as other special needs groups, are provided for when public buildings are constructed;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government considers mandating laws for the provision of appropriate handicap access to all facilities and aircraft;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT provision for placards, disabled stickers and handicap licence plates be provided for the physically challenged.”

One resolve clause that I think has been put in place is the one for the placards, the disabled stickers and the handicapped license plates. The other ones are still in limbo. Mr. Speaker, that is why I said, “Déjà vu,” when we started this debate.

The Opposition supports the Motion, but if you would allow me, Sir, at this time I would like to move an amendment to the Motion to read as follows:

[Amendment]

“Be it resolved that Government considers putting in place laws, regulations and policies in regard to special needs persons, and for those laws, regulations and policies to be brought in line with local and internationally accepted best practices”.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second that Motion.

The Speaker: The Motion made by the Elected Member for North Side has been duly seconded. Does any Member wish to speak on that? If not, I will ask the Mover of the Motion, the Elected Member for North Side, to please continue.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The reason for bringing this amendment (as I have said in my debate, but I would like to stress once again) is that there are no laws, regulations or policies in these Islands for us to review. Therefore, I feel—and I am certain the Government will understand—that there is a need for us to look at legislation, regulations and policies; to enact those laws and regulations; and to put in place those policies before we can review legislation that affects people with special needs.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I would ask the Government to consider the amendment. Remember that the amendment is not based on politics; the amendment is based on the needs of the special needs persons. I am certain that that is why the Mover and the Seconder brought this Motion—because they saw the needs of these people and how they were being affected.

The Speaker: If I may, Honourable Member, do you have a written copy of your Motion so that it can be circulated?

Continue, Honourable Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I call on the Government to accept the amendment to the Motion. Let us act as adults, because it is based on the needs of special needs persons. I would hope that there is no Member of this Legislative Assembly who would come here with a Motion for special needs persons, hoping to use it politically. It would not be my dream to see special needs persons in this country become political footballs.

This is for our special needs persons. I would therefore ask all Members of this Legislative Assembly to accept the amendment that I moved.

The Speaker: Honourable Member for North Side, in the absence of a written amendment to the Motion, would you please read it again so that all other Members who intend to debate this would know precisely what they are debating. If you could, read that amendment through again for us, please.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It would be:

“Be it resolved that Government considers enacting laws, regulations and putting in place policies in regard to special needs persons in line with local and internationally accepted best practices.”

The Speaker: Thank you very much.
The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I guess I get a second bite at the apple of debate. I know there is an amendment to the Motion, but I hope I can clear up the intent and the misunderstanding that seems to have occurred with this Motion, because, as the Member for North Side said, I think we are all in agreement with the need for improvements.

The Motion reads: “BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government considers undertaking a review of all Laws, Regulations and Policies in regard to special needs’ persons and make the necessary modifications to bring them in line with local and internationally accepted best practices.”

The Motion is not saying that there are existing Laws, Mr. Speaker. The Motion was being all-inclusive. It means all existing Laws in the Cayman Islands. If there is a vacuum that needs amendment in regard to special persons—for example in a transportation, traffic, labour or immigration law—it is all-encompassing. What we are saying is that instead of making specific legislation for special needs, we should take into account all laws in regard to special needs persons, and make the necessary modifications to any law. It could be as wide-ranging as the Monetary Authority Law. We are saying we want to include whatever law may be necessary. We want a revision to be made to any existing law to take into account the needs of our special needs people.

I wanted to ensure that it was clearly understood what the initial intent of the Motion was. It was not (as the Member for North Side seemed to have misunderstood) that we wanted to review only the existing laws that relate to special needs people. I agree with her; there is an absence of those laws. There are very few in existence. This is meant to review all existing laws that may need to be amended.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Honourable Elected Member for North Side has done an exemplary job in outlining the position of the Parliamentary Opposition and the People's Progressive Movement (PPM) in relation to special needs persons. I think she read, verbatim, a Motion that was moved at the PPM Conference on 6 September relating to special needs persons, which I think sets out very clearly and concisely where the People's Progressive Movement stands on the issue of special needs and special needs persons. I have no intention of traversing that ground again.

I would like to deal with the proposed amendment to the Motion that is on the Floor of this Honourable House. I am happy that the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay has said what he said, because it means that he should have no difficulty in accepting the amendment that is being proposed. With the greatest respect to him, I think it is difficult to get, from the Motion in its current form, the meaning which he has urged on us all, and which we are happy to hear.

Forgive me, Mr. Speaker, but the way it is drafted is not a model of clarity. The Honourable Elected Member for North Side is trying to make it quite clear that what we are seeking is to make provision where there is no provision—to assist, promote and protect the rights of special needs persons. Therefore, I would urge Honourable Members of this House—in particular the Mover and the Seconder of this Motion—to accede to the proposed amendment.

This whole question of the needs of this important sector of our community is something that I myself am very concerned about, particularly in the context of those who are visually handicapped, challenged or impaired—whatever term we choose to use. The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay made reference to the very sad situation in relation to Keisha Ramkissoon, and the efforts of the Lions Club of Grand Cayman (of which I am currently president) in obtaining for her a leader dog, and having her go through the training exercises, overseas, to enable her to use this dog. From the outset, we recognised that there were going to be challenges in relation to a leader dog in these Islands, but I do not believe that any of us contemplated that we would be met—or that she would be met, to be more accurate—with the degree of prejudice and discrimination that did exist.

Indeed, I spoke to the Minister of Health some time ago about the need for Government to bring legislation that would give protection to Keisha and persons with her particular impairment in this community, and afford them easier access. We discussed it at some length, but as things transpired, the legislation was not forthcoming, and the sad events that have happened did happen. From a personal standpoint, I can say that one of the most poignant moments for me, in my 14 years as a Lion, was saying goodbye to that dog at the airport a couple of months ago. It really is an indictment on this community, and the caring Christian society that we hold ourselves out to be, that as a people, we were unable to accept and accommodate the use of this dog in Keisha's daily life. That is what it amounted to, Mr. Speaker.

I do not think that the community was able to grasp the concept that this dog was an extension of Keisha. This dog was, in a real sense, Keisha's eyes. Therefore, wherever she went, the dog needed to go. In her work at the Police Station, in trying to get on a bus to get home, or in trying to rent an apartment, she met with the same sort of resistance, prejudices and unwillingness on the part of many people, simply because they objected to a dog being there.

In my view, that comes from the fact that it has not yet seeped into the consciousness and consciences of our people that this dog is not simply some beautiful little pet that Keisha (or anyone with her impairment) carries around because it is a nice thing to do. It is an important functionally part of her being—or it was, I am sad to say.

I contemplated, over the course of this year, seeking to bring a Motion to this Honourable House to deal specifically with the whole question of the seeing-eye dog, or the leader dog, in relation to Keisha. I would have had the support of my parliamentary colleagues in the Opposition and, I am sure, the support of the People's Progressive Movement, but I was loath to do so because of my role as President of the Lions Club. I had some difficulty in seeking to promote what might have been viewed, by some of the more cynical in this Honourable House and outside it, as an effort, on my part, to promote a project of the Lions Club of Grand Cayman (which is my club)—or even worse, to confuse the two positions, or to abuse my office here. I was very loath to do so. I deeply regret not having done so earlier, in relation to that specific matter. I was operating on the premise that the Government would have been able to bring before this Honourable House the legislation that would have afforded that sort of protection. It simply did not happen in time, Mr. Speaker, and I am not seeking to blame the Government—just so they understand that. It is just that it did not happen.

Over the course of that and other events that have been related to us, and following the passage of the resolution at our conference on 6 September, we did propose to bring a Motion along the lines of the amended Motion the Elected Member for North Side is seeking. However, when we learned that the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay had filed this Motion, we decided that we would be able to have the debate we wished to ensue on this matter in the context of his Motion.

This is not about (and should not be about) the promotion of individual political agendas, or seeking to obtain whatever benefits or accolades accrue as a result of it, for either party, for the Government or for the Opposition—as the Elected Member for North Side has said. This is about some of the most vulnerable, needy, and worthwhile people in our community. I believe we all have their interests firmly in mind. Rather than seek to file a competing motion, we have dealt with it in the manner that we are doing this evening.

Coming back to what I referred to earlier, the insensitivity of the community in relation to the special needs of our people—that hang-up about the whole untouchable, un-discussable issue of special needs—is something that has its roots deep in our history. I can attest to this from personal experience. Until quite recently, the whole question of special needs persons, persons who were not quite “normal”, as people would say, was seen in this community as a source of shame and embarrassment. Families hid persons with disability from exposure to the wider community. By and large, we have gotten past that, but there is still a certain stigma that is associated with disability—or with special needs, according to the new terminology—that we have not quite gotten past. I believe that the kind of treatment Keisha Ram Kissoon experienced is simply an extension, an expression, of that failure to completely come to grips with the question of special needs persons in the community.

We have made huge strides. The Special Olympics is a wonderful thing, and I think the community as a whole has embraced them. Much worthwhile work has been done, such as the Sunrise Centre, the Lighthouse School. All of these things have worked miracles, not only in terms of how they have allowed people who are challenged in this way to develop, blossom, flourish and become truly productive human beings, but because of what they have done to our sociology, and to the way we view these sorts of people. However, we still have a long way to go.

Keisha Ramkissoon’s case is important because Keisha is the kind of individual she is—very vocal, articulate, intelligent, and not afraid to stand up and say, “I have been treated wrongly”. She is also very visible. She is not someone who hides away and never has been. That has brought the whole question of special needs people to the forefront of the social conscience of this community.

From the perspective of the Lions Club of Grand Cayman, we are deeply wounded at what transpired—not simply because of the financial investment the Club made in this dog, in her training, in her support—but also because our pride has been wounded. The Lions Club of Grand Cayman is not used to projects not working. That is not an experience that we have often, thankfully. We have resolved, as a Club, that we will not allow this setback to stand in the way of our trying to do a similar thing again, when either Keisha or some other worthwhile and suitable individual is identified for such a project. We had in mind another individual, from Cayman Brac, who we were hoping would be able to embrace this programme. However, we have run into a significant problem now. Leader Dogs for the Blind, which is the institute we deal with, is not used to sending their dogs out of the continental United States, and on this occasion, when they took a chance on us, things have not worked out at all. Luckily, we have been able to return the dog, which has undergone retraining and will, no doubt, be assigned to somebody else. It could have been a lot worse.

The importance of this is that it brought me and the members of the Parliamentary Opposition to understand that what our country needed was not just a piece of legislation to protect the Keisha Ram Kissoons, and promote the interests of the visually impaired, but what the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay was seeking to do, and the Elected Member for North Side is now ensuring happens. We must enact the requisite laws and regulations, and cause to be developed the necessary policies, to protect, promote and further the interests of special needs persons generally. Whatever has to be done to ensure that we bring our legislation up to what has been termed, in the Motion, “internationally accepted best practices” must be done.

If we can get that sort of resolve from this Honourable House, and continue to press the Government to issue the necessary drafting instructions to have a Bill brought to this Honourable House before our term of office is over—in the same way that we have addressed the needs of children by passing the Status of Children Bill—then even if none of us return, we would be able to say that we have done our part in trying to make Cayman a better, more caring and more sensitive place for all people to live. The way any country treats those who are most vulnerable, those who operate in this world with daily challenges—particularly physical and mental challenges, and particularly these days, when people are more pressed for time, less helpful, less willing to lend a hand—says a lot about that country, or that society.

It is easy to promote and help people who are “normal” (to use that unfortunate word), because they are the people with whom we are used to interacting. When we reach down and assist those who are less fortunate and more vulnerable than ourselves, those who have to meet challenges daily in getting from point A to point B, that says a lot about the kind of society we are—and from our perspective, the kind of society we are trying to build and promote.

Let us strive to create a society in which the Keisha Ramkissoons can feel wanted, nurtured and accepted. That is what we should strive for, and that, I believe, is what the Honourable Mover of this Motion is seeking to do. That is what the Elected Member for North Side has urged passionately on this Honourable House and the broader community—not just now, but in the past—and that is what the Opposition would like to see.

I hope that we can amend this Motion, as proposed by the Elected Member for North Side, and that we can get a unanimous resolution, which will have the effect of our enacting new legislation and regulations, and developing policies to promote, further, and protect the interests of special needs people in this community.

I thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, before I call on the next speaker on this amendment, I would like to make a few comments, and my own observations.

Had I seen the amendment before it was made, I might not have allowed it because in my opinion there is no significant difference between the proposed amendment and the substantive Motion—the difference being that the amendment is asking Government to consider “enacting” and the substantive Motion is asking Government to consider “undertaking a review”. One could very well argue that in undertaking a review (as the substantive Motion has stated) any necessary modifications would be brought, which would be enacting any necessary legislation that would have to be brought. One could also argue that before one could enact the laws and regulations, one would have to review what was already in place, and make modifications to that. Therefore, had I seen the written text of this, I would have sat with the Mover of the amendment prior to entering into debate on it.

The second point is that it is going to be very difficult for Members to debate this amendment and also debate the substantive Motion without repetition—something that we want to avoid in this honourable House. The text of both motions is primarily the same except for that subtle difference in one calling for “enacting” and one for calling “undertaking a review”.

It seems to me that one is complementary to the other, since before enacting, one would need to undertake a review, and one could lead to the other. I am not going to argue this point. I am going to make a ruling on it, but because it seems that one is complementary to the other, I do feel that little further debate should be taken on this. I cannot see a motion being taken on this amendment that would be contrary to the motion that is going to be taken on the substantive Motion, since there is very little difference between them. That is my position on it.

I will have to put the question on the proposed amendment before doing so on the substantive Motion. I am going to do that. I will allow others to speak on this, but I remind you that you could be entering into the danger of repetition since both motions are basically the same, with that subtle difference. I will open it up further for Members to speak, but remind you that if you speak on the substantive Motion and there is repetition, I will call your attention to that.

Does any other Member wish to speak on the amendment?

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In re-reading the original Motion as the Member for North Side spoke, I realised that there is ambiguity in the way the Motion is worded. The Elected Member for North Side made the argument from the point of view that the Motion, which I seconded, was calling for a review of specific legislation that deals with special needs persons. She is quite right in saying that we do not have a Special Needs Act, or a Disabilities Act, in the Cayman Islands. What the Motion was doing, as the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay pointed out, was seeking for all Laws to be reviewed. If there was a vacuum in a law that did not deal with the lives of special needs persons, then that law would be amended so as to ensure the protection and enhancement of life of people with special needs.

For example, Mr. Speaker, if the Labour Law did not deal with discrimination against special needs persons, we would ensure that that happened. The amendment that has been brought is complimentary to our Motion—as you have said, Mr. Speaker—once our Motion is interpreted in that particular vein. If we are going to be cooperative, and have a motion that will meet its objective of enhancing life for persons with special needs—and that is what we are here for—then we could amend the original Motion to read more clearly, take out the ambiguity and add the amendment that the Elected Member for North Side is proposing as a second resolve clause.

We would anticipate that the final Motion we should be voting on would be something along the lines of:

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government review all current laws, regulations and policies and make the necessary modifications to bring them in line with local and international best practices in regard to the needs of special needs persons;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government enact legislation to protect special needs persons that is in line with local and international best practices.”

I think the two of those combined achieve both ends of what we are trying to do.

I am not a person who is as technical as I should be in terms of procedure in the House. I did have a few more comments to make. Should I make them now or should I sit down?

The Speaker: Honourable Members, it seems to me that both sides of the House are happy with the compromised position. I am going to take about five minutes and I would ask all Members to remain in their seats. I want to make sure that I get the resolve of the Motions correct, so that when I am placing the resolve clause at the end, I will have the wording correct.

We will take five minutes so that I can have that, and I would ask you all to remain in your seats.

Proceedings suspended at 6.14 pm

Proceedings resumed at 6.31 pm

The Speaker: I would call on the Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture to move the Motion for adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Roy Borden: Mr Speaker, I beg to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until tomorrow at 10am.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until Thursday 4 December 2003 at 10 am.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those Against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 6.31 pm the House stood adjourned until Thursday, 4 December 2003, at 10 am.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
4 DECEMBER 2003
10.39 AM
Eleventh Sitting

The Speaker: I call on the Second Elected Member for West Bay to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Let us bow our heads and hearts as we pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially, we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on Earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.41 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Third Official Member; the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce and Leader of Government Business; the Honourable Minister for Planning, Communications, District Administration and Information Technology; and also apologies for the late arrival of the Honourable Second Official Member.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

Report and Recommendation of the Minister Responsible for Lands Recommending the Crown Grant (Unclaimed) Block 65A Parcel 47 to the Estate of Tyler Welcome, (deceased)
(Deferred)

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg that this Item be deferred until a later sitting in that the Honourable Minister for Planning is not available to lay it and to the best of my knowledge no one else has been deputed to do so.

The Speaker: The question is that the Report and Recommendation of the Minister Responsible for Lands Recommending a Crown Grant (Unclaimed) for Block 65A, Parcel 47 to the Estate of Tyler Welcome (deceased) be deferred until a later sitting.

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. So ordered.

Agreed. Report deferred to a later sitting.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS
OF THE CABINET

Complaints from members of staff of First Caribbean Bank

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the Minister with responsibility for Human Resources, I feel obliged to inform this Honourable House that I have received numerous complaints from several members of staff of First Caribbean Bank regarding the uncertainty of their job security as a result of the proposed amalgamation and organisational changes. In an effort to address this matter, I have held several meetings with management to attempt to determine the number of employees that will be affected, but even this basic information has not been easy to achieve. We are constantly faced with posturing and delaying tactics by management that are obviously aimed at frustrating the efforts of the Department of Employment Relations as they set out on what is recognised as a difficult task of protecting employment rights in these Islands.

The existing Labour Law regrettably offers limited scope in this area. Therefore, I hope that when the new Employment Bill is brought to this Honourable House it will be supported by all Members because without the new and enhanced set of Employment Legislation in the future, it will be virtually impossible to ensure that our citizens are protected and have access to the best available jobs.

After all, what good is it for our country to have economic success if the average worker cannot participate? Even though the dates of the merger of computer systems and the closure of buildings have been set, the Management of First Caribbean Bank have remained vague and insensitive about the fate of the Caymanian staff, many of whom have worked there all of their working lives.

This situation has the potential to create social unrest and stress, if left unchecked. It is unconscionable that an organisation could think that it could come to a country, use up its human resources and then discard it like fodder when it suits their expediency. That might happen under the watch of another administration, but not on my time. Not while the United Democratic Party (UDP) are the custodians of the good ship Cayman.

We intend to continue to vigorously pursue this matter. Whenever any Caymanian loses his or her job and a non-Caymanian is still employed in the Company in a similar capacity, we will not only question whether it would be in the best interest of the community for the Immigration Board to approve new work permits, but we will also enforce the relevant sections of the Labour Law to the fullest extent possible.

Down-sizing without a thoughtful humanistic strategy can destroy an organisation's effectiveness. Down-sizing is extremely difficult. It taxes all of a management team's resources, including both business acumen and humanity. Typically, the extremely difficult decisions of who must be laid off, how much notice they will be given, the amount of severance pay, and how far the company will go to help the laid-off employee find another job, are given less attention than the start-up of a new computer system or the square footage of new offices. These are critical decisions that have as much to do with the future of the organisation as they do with the future of the laid-off employees.

Far too often we have seen down-sizing executed with a brisk compassionless efficiency that leaves laid-off employees angry and surviving employees feeling helpless and de-motivated. Companies in Cayman must begin to realise that helplessness is the enemy of high achievement. It produces a work environment of withdrawal, risk adverse decisions, severely impaired morale and excessive blaming. All of these put a stranglehold upon good employment relations. Having a clear, well-defined vision of the company is imperative before the lay-off is executed. Management should know what it wants to accomplish, where the emphasis will be in the new organisation and what staff will be needed.

However, based on the uncertainty of the management of First Caribbean Bank, I can understand the concern of the staff over future employment. The methods employed in many poorly executed lay-offs treat employees like children: information is withheld and doled out; managers control over their employees is violated; human resource representatives scurry around from one hush-hush meeting to another. How management treats laid-off employees is how it vicariously treats remaining employees. Everything you do in a lay-off is done in the arena with everyone observing. How laid-off employees are treated, is how surviving employees assume they may be treated.

Apparently, the First Caribbean Bank branch in Cayman does not recognise this. I would like to take this opportunity to advise all businesses in Cayman that I recognise that down-sizing is immensely difficult. However, when the need for a reduction in staff is unavoidable, treat all employees with respect, communicate too much rather than withhold information, research the Labour Law and follow the spirit of the legislation. Afterwards, give employees the psychological space to accept and to discuss what has happened. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 6/03

Review of all Laws, Regulations and Policies in Regard to Special Needs Persons

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: Honourable Members, before calling on the Elected Member for North Side, I would just like to say that I was very pleased yesterday with the compromise position that was reached on a bipartisan level between the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay and the Elected Member for North Side on Private Member's Motion No. 6/03; it is most commendable. I feel that I would go further to say that they are to be congratulated for the good spirit of compromise that was demonstrated here yesterday.

The Elected Member for North Side during her Debate of Private Member's Motion No. 6 moved an amendment to that Motion that was seconded by the Second Elected Member for George Town. However, in discussing it, we found that it was so closely related to the substantive Motion that it in fact complemented the substantive Motion; so much so, that it was agreed that it could rightly and properly form one of the two resolutions to the Private Member's Motion. So this Private Member's Motion No. 6 has accordingly been amended.

I will be calling on the Elected Member for North Side to withdraw the amendment which she made, since it is in fact included in the amended Motion. When she withdraws that amendment, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay will then move an amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 6/03 that will include the amendment which was proposed by the Elected Member for North Side.

The Elected Member for North Side.

Withdrawal of Amendment Standing Order 25(6)

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under Standing Order 25(6) I beg to withdraw the amendment I proposed to Private Member's Motion No. 6/03. I would like to thank the Government, particularly the Fourth Elected Member for the District of West Bay, and the Second Elected Member for the same District, for incorporating the amendment moved by me and seconded by the Second Elected Member for George Town in their amended Motion. The incorporation amendment I made, reads in the second resolve –
“ . . . and be it further resolved that the Government enact legislation in regard to the protection of Special Needs persons and put in place a policy that is in line with . . . ” I think the word “local” should be amended to read “with locally and internationally accepted best practices.”

Therefore, I withdraw my amendment.

The Speaker: The question is that the amendment brought by the Elected Member for North Side be withdrawn under Standing Order 25(6). All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Amendment withdrawn.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Amendment

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Before moving the amendment I would like to say that I think this is good evidence of the unanimous non-partisan support to show that the best interests of our disabled people are obviously the main concern. In whatever way we have to get that final result, it is obviously the wish of both sides of this Honourable House. I would like to thank the Elected Member from the District of North Side for ensuring that the Motion encompasses all of the required needs and possible amendments that may be necessary to accomplish that.

I, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, in accordance with the provision of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), seek leave to move the following Amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 6/03 as follows—By deleting the resolve clause of Private Member's Motion No.06/03 which reads: “BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government considers undertaking a review of all Laws, Regulations and Policies in regard to special needs' persons and make the necessary modifications to bring them in line with local and internationally accepted best practices.” And by inserting therefor the following –

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government review all existing laws, regulations and policies and make the necessary modifications to bring them in line with locally and internationally best practices in regard to the needs of special needs persons;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government enact legislation in regard to the protection of special needs persons and put in place a policy that is in line with locally and internationally accepted best practices.”

The Speaker: Is there a Secunder? The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The question is: “BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government review all existing laws, regulations and policies and make the necessary modifications to bring them in line with locally and internationally best practices in regard to the needs of special needs persons;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government enact legislation in regard to the protection of special needs persons and put in place a policy that is in line with locally and internationally accepted best practices.”

The Motion is open for debate. The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Mr. Speaker, we crave your indulgence, Sir. I think all of us agree that once we have spoken on the original, the amendment, or this current Motion, that we have spoken on the issue. I was in the middle of making a short contribution to this Motion when we took the break yesterday. I would like to finish off by bringing a few points to the attention of Members and making sure that it is clearly understood where the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay was coming from, and certainly where I was coming from, in giving my support in seconding this very important Motion.

Having read and listened to the Member for North Side speak to the original Motion, it was clear that the Motion was indeed ambiguous. In her debate there were a few points brought out that I would like to assure her were not the case.

I think in reading the Motion, and the way that she read the Motion, the interpretation was that there was currently some sort of disability policy that we were seeking to have reviewed. The new Motion now clarifies that we were actually going the other way and wanting to have all Government policy, all laws, all regulations reviewed to make sure that if there was anything in there that either was biased against special needs persons or did not fully encapsulate the needs and requirements of special needs persons, then those laws would be brought in line to ensure that to be the case.

I think most Members in this House who read the newspaper realise that there is a young man by the name of Kevin Anglin from West Bay who has won two or three medals which I am pretty sure were all gold medals at the Special Olympics. Anglin is not the most common last name, so he is obviously my cousin; therefore I am not necessarily bringing this Motion from the same background as the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay who has been involved with Special Olympics and hosted Special Olympics dinners at his house. He did not say that, he did not want to brag about those things, but those are important considerations because he has been involved and it has been something that has meant a lot to him. The Member for North Side has also pointed out that she was involved deeply in terms of this cause from many years ago.

My perspective is slightly different: I have about three family members who this Motion would impact upon. Having seen their lives, I realise how necessary it is for the Legislative Assembly to reach out through laws and policies to ensure that we become the type of modern society we need to become.

I would like to look at the positive side of the ledger. Much has been said about the young lady and the guide dog, Ms. Keisha Ramkissoon, and certainly that was a most unfortunate set of circumstances. Situations like that do prompt and remind us sometimes that maybe we need to think and focus on a particular issue.

However, the Member for North Side mentioned going down to the Hyatt and seeing special needs persons employed there. You can also go by other job sites, Red Sail Sports, the National Trust, the Health Services Authority and you see special needs persons. You see Coby Ebanks at the Hospital; you see Oral Powery – I think he still cares for the National Trust property as he has done for many years; you see Kevin Anglin and others at the Hyatt; you see a young lady by the name of Kimberly (I cannot remember her last name) at Red Sail Sports, I see her walking or riding home from work almost every day.

Therefore, we need to give credence and acknowledge the fact that we do have corporate citizens in this country who are helping, who are not just saying, “once you come from Lighthouse School we are not employing you, we do not want anything to do with you because you are not “normal.” Much has to be done but I think as legislators, in our debate contributions and in our thought process we need to ensure that we acknowledge the very good work that is happening in this area.

Special Olympics is a very commendable cause. The work of persons like Shari Bovell, Deborah Ebanks, Cindy Scotland and Darrel Rankine must be commended in this country because these are people who have taken their time and embraced this cause. The truth is, this is not one of those things where you are going to get the type of huge public outpouring of time, like certain other activities, because it does take special people, in a lot of instances, to deal with special needs people.

I am reminded of the work of a good friend of mine from High School, Mr. James Myles. I will stop there because if I keep going on I will leave someone out and anyone who is listening if I have left your name out I apologise because when you are on the floor and something pops into your head you cannot list everyone. Accordingly, I apologise to anyone – the Member for North Side and her early work.

For many years many of the incumbents in this legislature have pushed and struggled trying to get monies in the budget. I am sure that I could not even start to name names because I would inevitably leave someone out. However, needless to say, many of the current and past legislators in this country have indeed seen this as a cause that is worthy of their consideration. As the Member for North Side mentioned, there have been Motions in the past. There has been a push for years to have a change in the facility in West Bay for the Adult Care Centre for special needs persons. I think we all know that for years that particular building was condemned by the Fire Service. Therefore, we are progressing, we are moving in the right direction.

I think this Motion now brings back to our collective consciousness and back to a focal point in our minds the need to do more; the need to keep on in this struggle as we continue to spend those monies. I think it is fair to say that not just this current legislative class, but any future legislative class does struggle when allocating resources and “the normal” majority demands government funds and government services and you do have a much more silent minority a lot of whom cannot even communicate properly with you.

Therefore, sometimes, as you are developing budgets, you do have certain other projects that take priority because of the vociferous nature of the persons who are demanding that particular service. They are out there in the headlines of the Cayman Compass; there may be a few boat operators who need a new facility for parking their boats. However, at the end of the day, I think it is good to have Motions like this to bring these important points back to us for us to consider.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is fair to say that this Government is committed to doing whatever it can and being as balanced as it can in ensuring that we do continue to allocate the resources where we can: not only for this proposed law and the review of laws, but for facilities and programmes that will enrich and contribute to a wholeness of life for persons who are special needs persons.

Again, Mr. Speaker, it makes me proud of the ambition and the reliability of the special needs persons who are able to work, because if we had 90 per cent of our school leavers having that kind of ambition and such levels of reliability then I think that all Members in this House would agree with me that a lot of the labour issues that we talk about and lament over would be non-existent in this country, because, Mr. Speaker, they always show up for work. I knew of one who had to be sent home because he was sick – he had to be sent back home by his employer. He knew nothing else but his job and the fulfillment and satisfaction that it gave him. Yet we have many people who are “normal” who look at their employment contract and see that they have 10 sick days and they make sure that they take 10 sick days.

At the end of the day, any reasonable person who will listen to, or read the debate, will understand what I am saying. We have a very, very special group of people in this country. We have to continue the journey.

Just a quick thought on this whole issue of guide-dogs. I remember while in university a young man staying in the apartment building with me, had a best friend who was blind: his first name was Mike. This blind friend also attended university with us. There were other persons like him, but he was the one that I knew and the one that I spoke to. There he was, marching around campus with his guide dog and with his cane, going from class to class and getting his university degree. When you walked around campus you saw people who were wheelchair-bound but still attending university and getting their degrees.

While we have made strides and we are moving in the right direction in the Cayman Islands, we still have a way to go. We need to ensure that we do not just pigeon-hole all special needs persons and say, “You have to now go to the Lighthouse School”. We have to get to the stage where some of them are in the mainstream schools because they are mainstream people—they are intelligent people. While the programmes at the Lighthouse School are good programmes and while they do accommodate, what is wrong with a person who is deficient in sight having a guide dog and going to the regular high school if that is where he belongs and can be accommodated? There is nothing wrong with that. There is nothing wrong with these persons being a part of mainstream society and getting a job and possibly going on and getting a university degree. We see it happening in other countries.

I am always tempered in things that I say, Mr. Speaker. I do realise that we are a small society with limited resources, and so the facilities that a country the size and wealth of the United States can build and provide for their population, are different than those in the Cayman Islands because they have millions of special needs persons.

I would also like to say that today is a good day. I actually feel proud to be debating a Motion that has now gone through two different amendments and it is now encapsulating the thoughts of both sides of this Honourable House. This is what the public likes and wants to see, more of. I know it is the Christmas season and that probably has something to do with how congenial and cordial and how accepting we have all been. Mr. Speaker, I truly wish that this type of cooperation and collaboration continues into the New Year because this makes all of us better; it makes what we are doing on behalf of our constituents better—on behalf of our people more effective and more efficient.

I lend my unequivocal support, Mr. Speaker. I do hope that anyone who speaks after me would resist talking about playing politics and so on because I think it is fair to say that no side of this Honourable House is playing politics with special needs persons and those issues. I think genuinely both sides of this House care deeply about the requirements of special needs persons and ensuring that we progress along the lines of making their lives fuller, more enriching and therefore making our community better.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am not going to get into politics in the House of politics because I totally agree with the Second Elected Member for West Bay. This reaches far across the political divide. I certainly would like to congratulate the Second Elected Member for West Bay and particularly the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay and the Elected Member for North Side on their cooperation – as a matter of fact this whole Honourable House between yesterday and today, in particular, when there was absolute cooperation on this issue. What is important about it is that it sends a clear message to the people of this country that this House, contrary to what they may believe, works in the interest of this country. Everyone must be commended for exceptional conduct, especially in the last few days.

I rise to support this Motion, Mr. Speaker, and do so unconditionally. However, I would like to touch on a few things concerning the special needs in this country. Let me go back in time and explain a life-changing experience that I had with the same special needs individuals: I think we call them challenged individuals.

Mr. Speaker, during employment with my former employer, Caribbean Utilities Company, sometime in the early 1990s I was invited by Darrel Rankin (whom the Second Elected Member spoke of having contributed so much to the Special Olympics in this country) to go to one of the special needs tryouts at the Truman Bodden centre. I had a young child about a year and a half old, and two of those special needs people that we are talking about took my child. At first, I was rather apprehensive about it but they took that child for at least four hours. They changed my child's diapers, they fed him, they did everything for him that day and that was a life-changing experience for me.

I went back to CUC and recommended that they adopt the Lighthouse School as their own, when it was next to the Government Hospital. Since that day, there has been no special occasion at the Lighthouse School that CUC's employees have not attended. During the rest of my tenure at CUC I would attend all those events, particularly the Sports Day at the Lighthouse School. This Motion coming now is so convenient. I think it was just two days ago one of the employees of CUC called me and said they were just on the way from having lunch with the Special Needs people. Let me publicly thank and congratulate CUC for adopting those people and continuing to support them. I have never had the opportunity to do that, but like the Second Elected Member for West Bay said, I think the corporate community in this country has done a lot, and those who have done should be congratulated.

One of the things that I have some problems with in this country when it comes to the way we treat special needs is – and while it may sound simple, it is not – it is about parking, Mr. Speaker. I am enraged at times when I go to the supermarket and see 4-6 handicapped parking spaces – those spots that are conveniently placed close to the door for persons with special needs – challenged individuals – being used by seemingly 'normal' individuals. I have gone so far as to call the Police Department, but of course the Police Department says that it has no jurisdiction over the parking lot.

Mr. Speaker, that is one of the things that I think this Motion should include. Those 'seemingly' normal people who park in a handicapped parking are not normal; they are worse off than the people who need the help. If it were left to me they would be jailed. They should serve time so that they will understand what those people are going through who need those spots next to those doors. I see young individuals, because it is convenient, not wanting to walk 200-300 feet to the building from the outer parking spaces. That in itself is downright disgusting in this country. If we do not do something about it we will be as bad as those people are: we will be condoning their actions. The Police need to go into parking lots and prosecute these people together with whatever it takes in legislation. While I realise that this Motion is going through, I trust that the Government will move with much haste to get it back to this Honourable House in order to stop some people in this country who abuse the special needs people of this country. It does not speak well for our society when we treat those who are less able worse than we treat ourselves.

I totally agree with you and anyone else in this Honourable House, in particular the Second Member for West Bay, in saying that we have come a long way; however, there is still much to be done. I know in my short life there was a time that I can recall when these people were locked away. Nobody wanted them to appear in public. We have gone past that now. However, what has happened is that the rest of this country has not embraced them being among them. If it is not your family you could not care less where they park, you could not care less what you contribute to them. We have to become a more thoughtful and caring society – a society that respects its challenged individuals by showing care and thoughtfulness and it will be for a better society; a society that all will be appreciated in.

I too, have [family]—not immediate family, but extended family as you well know, Mr. Speaker, that this will affect. I am not only motivated by them but by all and how they are treated in our country. Mr. Speaker, so many times we see – and I just want to make this clear, without any disrespect to anyone – people who come into this country who are of a different nationality who also abuse the special needs people in our country.

The marriage officers in this country also need to be checked up on because many times it is out of convenience why people marry special needs people. They fall into it as well and it should enrage any right thinking citizen of this country. It is wrong. Mr. Speaker, I have seen it and I have witnessed it. Therefore, I have no apologies to make to anyone. None! Let the chips fall where they may. Those marriage officers who do it know who they are and they have to stop it.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to Mrs. Marge Quinland, former principal of the Lighthouse School, who worked tirelessly to bring some equality to the lives of these people. She, too, is from the district of East End. The new principal of the Lighthouse School is now Mrs. Bovell.

Mr. Speaker, I also see Darrel Rankine who is from the district of East End.

My most recent contribution to the Special Needs Olympics was the dinner some time last year and, Mr. Speaker, I recall you being there. Ms. Liz Walton, as well (I think she is the secretary of the Immigration Board); her entire life has been dedicated to helping these people.

Mr. Speaker, we need to bring more people out, but we also need to ensure that those people who are devoting their lives to bringing some kind of equality to the lives of these special individuals have legislation that protects them and assists them with their commitment. Combined with their commitment we can reach some place.

People in this country forever discriminate against these special needs persons. However, let us search ourselves and look at what has happened in the world with special needs persons. I would like to draw our attention to Stevie Wonder and Ray Charles. Mr. Speaker, they do not know what it is to see the light of day, but they have more money than many of us in this country because of their talent that is hidden some place in there. We need legislation in place which will enhance and develop the talents of our special needs persons and give them opportunities.

Yesterday, the Third Official Member spoke of how in Sweden, music (Abba), was a line item in the budget to support them. The special needs persons in this country should be a line item in our budget for that also. In this country, there are certain issues that this Honourable House, regardless of who occupies it, will experience bipartisan support. I would submit that whenever and however that is done, there will be bipartisan support. Mr. Speaker, many of us recognise the need to support these people but never bring it to the forefront. These are the kinds of Motions that need to be brought to the forefront of this Honourable House to raise the conscientious of the people of this country.

We can stand here and speak for the rest of our lives, but that does not mean that it will affect the conscience of people who park in handicapped parking spaces. If their conscience is pricked tonight and they do not park tomorrow, they will be back there on Saturday because they will forget: society is like that. We need laws legislated that can be enforced. People need to know that there is a consequence for whatever they do that deprives the special needs /challenged individuals.

Mr. Speaker, if all of us had the life-changing experiences with these individuals that I have had, then we would understand what it is to get on our knees and thank God for the healthy children that we have. However, we do not have that experience; many of us pass by and never think of them. Perhaps we, as a people, need to start thinking of others in our community who are not as fortunate physically, and otherwise, as we are. Perhaps we need to get back to the basics. My hope is that in the not-too-distant future, more people in this community will see the need to make that contribution, whatever the size, towards assisting our challenged individuals.

There are some of these individuals in East End, not many: I enjoy these people. This is not something that happens only at birth to the individual. I know a young man in East End who, last December, lost an eye and is now challenged. We also have older folks who are challenged, therefore it is not about a kid at the time of birth having some defect. We need to think of these things from a broader perspective.

The young individual who lost an eye, but is robust and physically fit, no one considers him a challenged kid. Then there are other individuals who at the time of birth are challenged and that is so unfortunate. As a matter of fact a pair of twins within my constituency has that problem – one has a hearing impairment and the other a visual impairment. It is so difficult for the mother to secure the hearing instruments and the proper glasses. She has a run-around here and a run-around there before these things can be renewed, repaired or whatever the case may be.

This is what needs to be done: people's needs must be put first. We, who call ourselves normal, physically and mentally—I wonder about that sometimes—can wait, but these people should come first. Give them a life that makes them comfortable.

The Member for North Side recommended in her contribution that a committee be set up to look at all of the laws, the international requirements and the likes and I support that. However, it does not make sense for us to set up a committee that is not going to be effective: one that the Government (any government, not necessarily this one) is not going to take recommendations from. It can be made up of people from across the community—and there are people out there who help.

It may sound as if I am the prophet of doom, but that is not necessarily true. Many persons and corporate citizens assist, but where the whole initiative is dying is with the ordinary person on the street who has no respect for these people. They expect to treat them the same way they would treat you and me. However, as the Member for North Side said, that is where the committee would educate and sensitise people to the need to treat these people with some degree of equality.

Mr. Speaker, those that I have come in contact with, do not want our sympathy; they want to be treated equally. They do not need any pity, they just want to be treated as individuals. More persons in this community need to treat these people as individuals.

We heard the Second Elected Member for West Bay talk about these kids and young adults who are challenged and how they go to the Special Olympics and they win medals, achievements, and they work. As he says, if all in this community were ready to go to work as willingly as the challenged are, we would have a more vibrant community.

These people want nothing from this country other than to be treated equally. Why is it that we cannot enforce that ramps are put throughout George Town? Yes, we have a few ramps and I suspect that from here on in there will be ramps, but what about the other buildings that were built before now with no consideration? Let us get these people to put ramps in too. Let us look at many of the buildings that were built here before and continue to be built with two floors and no elevator. These are the things that we need to ensure that are done so that when those special needs persons walk into that building they go about their business the same way that you and I would do.

I am not going on anymore because I think enough has been said. My appeal is not for the passage or the support of Honourable Members. I know this is going to be passed. My appeal to the people of this country is to treat these people differently. Show them that they are the same as we are. They may be a little slower getting to the car, but leave the spot that is nearest to the supermarket door vacant for those who need to get there to do their shopping. They do not want someone to leave them at home and go out there and do it for them; they want the opportunity to pick that tomato as well. Why should they have to rely on someone to choose a tomato for them? They want to be able to do it and there is nothing wrong with them getting there and doing it. However, they have a physical problem and they need to get a little closer to the door and when they reach there, to see some able-bodied 19 or 20 year-old coming out and jumping into his car, truck, or motorbike and driving off from their spaces, do you think that is fair? We need legislation that can be enforced.

All these people want is the opportunity to get there and you are telling me in this country we cannot afford the challenged persons in this country the right to park alongside the door? Mr. Speaker, woe be to this society because at some stage we are going to pay for our sins and that is one that we will pay dearly for.

For those who cannot read what is on that tire stop, it has a wheelchair painted right in the middle of it and it is in blue. Those are the ones that you must not park in; they are the ones for the vehicles with their licence numbers starting with DV and for the old lady who has come out to shop. That is what they are for. They are not for persons 20 and 25 years old. Let them go park a half mile away and run back getting a little physical exercise and exercise their minds while they are coming.

Mr. Speaker, it is ridiculous. I appeal to this community to treat our special needs people better; treat them with some respect and equality. That is what we need in our community; more caring, more sharing and more thoughtfulness for others.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Some Honourable Members: Hear, hear!

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Boddan: Mr. Speaker, I rise to state the Government's position with regard to the Motion on the floor of this Honourable House. I listened very attentively to the arguments which were adduced on both sides of the House and I notice that there is a unanimous acknowledgment that more effective legislation is needed. Of this I will say more later.

Permit me to say now that we have come a far way from the time when people who were different were treated as some spectacles, freaks of nature and outcasts. I do not know how many Honourable Members know the origin of the word 'bedlam'. Bedlam really originated from an exhibition of people in London who were mentally different. In many cases they were thought to be mentally deficient. History records that it was a source of entertainment where those persons who were normal would go on a Sunday evening or on a weekend and observe these people often in cages or in cubicles, where they were exposed and kept under the most inhumane conditions because that was the norm. They were considered freaks of nature and they were treated inhumanely, the food was thrown to them, the conditions were unsanitary.

Mr. Speaker, as history evolved and the science of psychology and human behaviour became more widespread, it was realised that these people were that way through no fault of theirs: similarly with the physically challenged.

Any number of circumstances contribute to persons who are physically challenged: from medication to oxygen deprivation, to genetic imbalances, accidents, and also it is not necessarily monopoly of the young just like it is not necessarily a monopoly of the elderly.

The important point I wish to underscore however, is that the most effective guarantee against these kinds of people being discriminated against and taken advantage of is an education and an awareness and an appreciation of their worth.

Many years ago when the McDonald Corporation came into existence they had a policy of hiring only smart people; bright high school graduates to do repetitive tasks. It was soon discovered, however, that these people soon became bored and incapable of performing tasks with any significant durability. Someone came up with the bright idea of hiring persons who were mentally challenged and the rest is history as they say.

The McDonald's Corporation still has one of the best records of hiring these kinds of people because it was discovered that these people are very good at doing repetitive tasks, whereas people who were considered normal failed because they soon became bored, lost their concentration and as a result of that lost their speed.

I said that to show that these people have worth even though many people do not recognise and acknowledge it. I believe that we, in the Cayman Islands, have come a long way because there is beginning to dawn upon us an appreciation of the worth of these people.

About two or so years ago, I had the occasion to meet with some hearing-impaired people because I believe that there is an organisation which caters to these people and they were lamenting the fact of there being blatant discrimination in this society against them and their inability to access jobs. One or two of these people have been university graduates and they were lamenting the ignorance in the Caymanian society as to their worth. Spearheading this organisation were some normal Caymanian people who were giving their time to organising these people and while it is true that legislation is necessary, it is my understanding that the current Law which is on the books of the statutes in the Cayman Islands is sufficient to ensure these people are protected.

I think the ideal remedy is something which has to do with a combination of the Law, education and awareness. Often I get complaints and I see it too, about people parking in the handicapped parking spaces. In other countries I have seen severely handicapped people drive. They have special purpose vehicles, their licence plates indicate, or some other information on the vehicle notifies drivers, particularly those in the rear, that it is a handicapped driver. They are allowed all of the privileges and opportunities of normal people once they can function in a way that is acceptable.

It is the mark of the maturity of our society that we recognise these people as having important and necessary roles to play. They are here with us and so we must accept them and appreciate them; thus, the Government is willing to take onboard the resolutions in this Motion.

The Government is willing to do its part to ensure that these people are appreciated, that they do not need pity. They only need opportunities to be equal to perform in dignity, to be able to live in dignity and to be free from the deleterious effects of discrimination. In the proposed Employment Bill we have a section which clearly makes it an offence to discriminate against these kinds of people.

I think it is another matter for us to sensitise business owners, particularly business establishments like restaurants, that they need to have a more open policy when persons come in who have to use guide dogs, or seeing-eye dogs as they are called, to be sympathetic and to make special provisions. Certainly, in the Cayman Islands, I think that business owners and people who build buildings are lucky because in other jurisdictions the requirements are much more stringent. You cannot put up a building or an office without ample provisions for the handicapped. You cannot open a parking lot without specially designated area – and not necessarily only a block saying that this is reserved for handicapped persons, but special ramps and special provisions including special provisions in the event of emergencies like a fire for these persons. To ensure employment practices too you cannot discriminate. The international conventions suggest that these provisions will have to be strictly adhered to.

Much has been elaborated already, therefore I do not need to go into any greater detail – only to say that the Government is cognisant of the role these persons play. The Government is willing to do what needs to be done to ensure that these persons not only exist, but are successful in their lifestyle. The Government also wants to do what is necessary to avoid discrimination and to ensure that when these persons move out into the wider society that they are treated no less dignified than those of us who are normal, and that the facilities which are required for them to surmount their challenges are available.

I thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

There is not a lot more in depth that I can go into that has not been shared by the previous speakers. I must say that the last two days have been extremely uplifting. I have not seen such unison since 8 November 2001. I must say that my faith is restored in the two freshman representatives from West Bay – the Second and the Fourth Elected Members. They have moved from 'freshman', jumped 'sophomore' and are now 'juniors' in this legislature. The kind of politics that came out of this is what is good and best for those people who so desperately need that help.

I would just like to emphasise as others have, that there is nothing that drives my blood pressure high more than seeing, especially in the supermarkets, the abuse of these parking spaces for the handicapped. A couple of evenings ago at Foster's Food Fair, I went around a car to see if it had a licence plate and while I was doing that a young person jumped out. As the Honourable Minister of Education has said, education is needed in this area. Perhaps we can put together something like the information on the Immigration Bill and sensitise our people. In the United States you respect the parking for handicaps and it is enforced.

As was mentioned yesterday by the Elected Member for North Side, when the Motion was brought by the Member at that time for Bodden Town, Ms. Heather Bodden, and seconded by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town (presently the Minister of Education), there were some changes made; however, the kind of strength and force that we need to put into this, has not taken place. I recall with a degree of embarrassment, as the then Minister of Health, we had a visiting president of the Nurses Association from the United States who came in on a cruise ship and wanted to stop by the Ministry at the Glass House. Luckily enough, the then Senior Assistant Secretary of the Ministry for Health found out that this individual was physically challenged and was restricted to wheelchair movement. We were able to visit with her over at the Hospital which has been provided with these services.

However, as a Government, starting at the Glass House, and other government buildings, would be a fine example for the public to follow. I am sure that without a doubt they will have them in the new Government Administration Buildings or I certainly hope so. I feel that starting at the Glass House, and in other buildings wherever they may be, as was alluded to by the Member for East End, many of these buildings were built before the requirement for ramps by the Planning Department. Let us go forward with sensitivity that we, as Legislators, will share this with our constituents. There we go again, the new Legislative Assembly Building would be a prime example, it would be a crying shame if we did not take advantage of that opportunity as we move over there, God willing, next year.

I would also like to mention the efforts by Mrs. Mary Trumbach, Ms. Edna Moyle, the Elected Member for North Side, and others in the Lighthouse School, the Sunrise Adult Training Centre, and all of us, as Caymanians who sympathise and try to make the lifestyle of these people more comfortable. I am encouraged and I feel very special that this has brought such cohesion and bipartisan support and may this House continue to function like that.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I think that like so many other Members have said, today is a great day in this Honourable House. We have been able to reach consensus on both sides in trying to ensure that our special needs individuals get as much care and comfort as our society can give to them. Therefore, in my wind up I do not propose to spend a lot of time; I think it is obvious that we have support and there are not a lot of questions. Basically our general concern and consensus, from my understanding, is that education and sensitivity are the keys for improving our society towards the special needs individuals and as legislators there is a commitment on our part to do that.

As the Member for East End said, when we get caught up in our normal day-to-day activities we tend to pass these individuals by and it is only when we have those life-changing experiences, those personal encounters, that we tend to recognise the value of those individuals.

One of the things that the Member for North Side made mention of, and it has been represented to me as well, is the need for involvement from people when the decisions are being made, or the legislation is being considered or enacted. We need to ensure that the people involved are people that work with those individuals on a daily basis and in as many cases as possible, we should involve some of those individuals because while we may look on from the outside those people who actually live it on a daily basis are much better prepared in explaining and expressing the difficulties that they themselves have with normal daily activities.

I think it is important to also note that while much cognisance has been given to all of the individuals that work with the special needs people; we can continue with Ms. Bonnie Moxam from the Sunrise Adult Training Centre in West Bay and the dedication that she has shown.

What we may have failed to recognise is the great family support that we get as a society which transcends to the special needs individuals, or perhaps even more so because our families tend to care very well for the individuals with special needs. In some cases that may be the reason why the rest of society does not get involved, because we depend on the family to do it themselves. However, I am happy to see that we do have those organisations like the Special Olympics who have been willing to make the sacrifice and try to, as much as possible, integrate the special needs individuals into society and allow them to make their wishes reality, to just be treated as normal individuals and be given the same opportunities.

It is again evident, Mr. Speaker, that in some cases we, as a society, tend to be just moving along on a fast track and it sometimes takes some specific instance, and I again refer to the instance of Keisha Ramkasoon which was brought, as the Second Elected Member for George Town said, perhaps because of her outspoken ability of not hiding behind the situation. This, again, was a catalyst to make us aware that the Caymanian society is definitely lacking in its sensitivity to the needs of our special needs people. While I am sad to see that, as the president of the Lions Club said, on an initiative that has had a setback, hopefully the positive that will come from it is that Cayman, as a whole, will be more cognisant of the needs of these types of individuals and work more together to ensure that we do not get into those same kinds of situations and have our special needs people continue to suffer.

I know we often talk about legislation coming here and nothing necessarily being accomplished by it. However, I would like to believe that one of the common threads identified in just about all of the debates is the obvious concern that all the Members in here have expressed: the consideration and violation of the handicapped parking spaces.

While we were going through the debate I mentioned to the Honourable Attorney General, the Second Official Member, to try to find out what was actually necessary with regard to legislative changes, because I too have been told that even in one of the Police meetings in West Bay a few weeks ago one of the concerns of one of the parents was that they were having a difficulty with their handicapped son and getting parking for them.

I was happy to see that, according to the Attorney-General, the Law, as it is presently worded, is sufficient according to his interpretation. Being the Chief Legal Advisor to the Government I can only hope that he would be correct. Mr. Speaker, with your permission I just want to go through the stages of the Law as presented by him to me.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I am quoting from the Traffic Law 2003 Revision.

Section 108 (1) makes the reference to the disabled person's badge. "There shall be a badge of a prescribed form to be issued by the Director for motor vehicles driven by, or used for the carriage of, disabled persons; and subject to this section, the badge so issued for any motor vehicle or motor vehicles may be displayed on it or on any of them."

Section 98 (4) of that same Law says: "The Commissioner may, by notice published in the Gazette, designate parking places on roads for motor vehicles driven by, or used for the carriage of, disabled persons, and such parking places shall be demarcated by lines of a prescribed colour and measurement painted on the carriageway and by traffic signs of a prescribed form and design erected adjacent to the designated parking place."

Then, if we go to the definition section we will see that, "'road' means any public place where a vehicle may be driven or parked and such areas adjacent thereto as may be prescribed."

After that we see that: "'public place' means any place to which the public has access as of right or upon payment or upon invitation express or implied."

Therefore, there we have in our current Law, the designation of the special vehicle badge, the Commissioner being able to publish in the Gazette and designate parking spaces, and then in 108 (5)(b) it says, "Whoever parks a motor vehicle contrary to subsection (4), parks a bicycle or otherwise causes an obstruction in a parking place designated under section 98(4) or uses a badge in contravention of this section is guilty of an offence."

Section 115 says, "Whoever contravenes, fails to comply with or is in breach of this Law or any regulation for which no penalty is elsewhere prescribed is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine of five hundred dollars and to imprisonment for six months."

It appears that where we have the problem is in section 98 (4) where it says, "the Commissioner may, by notice published in the Gazette, designate parking places on roads for motor vehicles."

What appears to have been lacking is the Commissioner simply gazetting by notices, publishing in the Gazette and designating these parking places. Therefore, while we have been hearing that revisions of the Laws are necessary, it seems that it is a small administrative detail that could have been easily carried out. The definition of roads already includes public spaces as parking lots. The public places were defined in this Traffic Law. However, it appears that what needs to happen is that a notice needs to be published in the Gazette designating what the parking places are on roads for motor vehicles.

In speaking to the proposal as to how simple that is, it seems the Commissioner of Police could have requested an extraordinary gazette and we could be enforcing that position, and all the frustration that has been expressed by the Members in here and the members of the general public, and the inconvenience that is being caused to so many of our special needs people may, with a little bit of administrative work, have been at least able to have been enforced. That is a good way of starting our education process.

I know the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town made mention of the Immigration Bill, and the heavy education campaign that was given on that. I too agree. I am sure the Government through the Government Information Systems would have no difficulty – even if they wanted to find a corporate sponsor – they could go out and start putting in place flyers and starting the education process.

Once again, like the Member for East End said, if it did require any funding I am sure we have the full support of this Honourable House to ensure that whatever education purposes, whatever could be done to sensitise our society to the needs of our special needs people, would have the unanimous support of this Honourable House.

Hopefully, Mr. Speaker, our responsible press will use this opportunity as well to not only offer the contributions that were made to this debate, but to do their part, hopefully too, in the educational process of our society, and maybe even sending a warning out to those people that have been parking for so long without enforcement being done. Since we do have the Honourable First Official Member here as well, hopefully in the very near future we will be getting the official gazetting of these parking places, as necessary, by the Commissioner of Police which will allow the Police to enforce the Law for those people who in the past have been so insensitive to those needs.

I could go along again just to say that it is getting down to Christmas and it is good that we are having such unity in the House when it comes to these areas which are so near and dear to each and every one of us. My plea would be that we, as representatives of the people – and maybe the Christmas is the right time to start – could also start to educate the public as to the sensitivities and the needs of our special needs people and to the importance that they play in society. If we all do our part in encouraging society as a whole to be more inclusive and to encourage the integration of those people, I think we will have a bright, prosperous Christmas and a happy New Year.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is: “BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government review all existing laws, regulations and policies and make the necessary modifications to bring them in line with locally and internationally best practices in regard to the needs of special needs persons;

“AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government enact legislation in regard to the protection of special needs persons and put in place a policy that is in line with locally and internationally accepted best practices.”

All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Private Member’s Motion No. 6/03 duly passed.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I propose to take the morning break at this time and I would ask that each Member try to be back in 15 minutes.

The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Not to correct you in your procedure but to say to you that I think it should have been, “Private Member’s Motion No. 6/03 as amended was passed.”

The Speaker: Duly noted. Thank you very much.

Agreed. Private Member’s Motion No. 6/03, as amended, passed.

Proceedings suspended at 12.20 pm

Proceedings resumed at 12.30 pm

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

FIRST READINGS

The Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

Suspension of Standing Order 45 and 46 (1) and (2)

The Speaker: The Temporary Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I rise to ask for the suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) to allow the Bill entitled The Development and Planning (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2003 to be taken at this time.

The Speaker: The Question is that Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) be suspended to allow for the First Reading of the Development and Planning (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2003. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Orders 45 and 46 (1) and (2) suspended.

The Development and Planning (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Bill has been deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

Suspension of Standing Order 46(4)

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to ask for the suspension of Standing Order 46 (4) to allow the Second Reading of the two Bills, the first one being the Insurance (Amendment) Bill 2003 and the second being the Development and Planning (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2003.

The Speaker: The Question is that Standing Order 46 (4) be suspended in order to allow the Second Reading on the Insurance (Amendment) Bill 2003 and the Development and Planning (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2003. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 46(4) suspended to allow Second Readings of Bills.

SECOND READINGS

The Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Temporary Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled The Insurance (Amendment) Bill 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Mr. Speaker, yes. I have some brief notes on this Bill which will, hopefully, assist its passage.

In the Cayman Islands we already have in place separate account legislation under Section 7(6)(c) of The Insurance Law (2001 Revision). This is primarily used for long term life and annuity business and seeks to protect policy holders from having their funds intermixed with other policy holders.

The problem that has developed in this area is that while this is a widely used provision in both domestic life and offshore life insurance, the Law only implies protection of the premiums and not of accumulations on those premiums. This weakness is not in line with international practice and it serves to call into question the stability of the domestic market by failing to protect domestic policy holders and, in turn, may make Cayman appear to be less competitive internationally.

Accordingly, The Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2003, is brought to make explicit that separate account protection extends not only to premiums paid on those particular contracts, but also to end accumulated values that arise from those premiums being held, thus protecting the policy holder.

It also proposes a procedure by which the affairs of an insolvent separate account may be settled. Additional purposes include clarifying that liabilities of a separate account may in no instance be chargeable against the general account, making explicit the proposition that a re-insurance claim is afforded separate account protection.

Thirdly, making explicit the procedure for establishing a separate account.

Fourthly, extending protection to policy holders and beneficiaries as is in the case of many of Cayman's international competing jurisdictions.

The Bill is very short and in light of the merits which I shall attempt to summarise very quickly, I propose that the Bill entitled The Insurance (Amendment) Bill 2003 be given a Second Reading.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Just to say, Mr. Speaker, thanks for the support of the House on this short amendment.

The Speaker: The Question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Insurance (Amendment) Bill, 2003 be given a Second Reading. All those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Insurance (Amendment) Bill 2003 has been given a Second Reading.

The Development and Planning (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill, 2003

The Speaker: The Temporary Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to move the Second Reading of the Development and Planning (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just two quick comments. Honourable Members will recall that a couple weeks back, we made an Amendment via negative resolutions to the Stamp Duty Law to allow the extension of concessions under that Law to continue for a further two months. As has been the case in the past, this Bill seeks to do the same thing in the case of the infrastructure fund fees and the building permit fees, seeking to extend them for the period 22 November 2003 through to 21 January 2004. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Honourable Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. A. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, just to say thanks to the Members of this Honourable House for their tacit support of this short Bill.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Development and Planning (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2003 be given a Second Reading. All those in favour please say, Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Development & Planning (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2003 has been given a Second Reading.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider the Bills.

House in Committee at 12:40 pm

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee.

With the leave of the House, may I assume that, as usual, we should authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to correct minor errors and such like in these Bills? Would the Clerk please state the Bill and read the clauses.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
10 DECEMBER 2003
10.25 AM
Twelfth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable Elected Member for East End to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever, Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make his face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 10.28 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

East End Primary School Students – Years 5 and 6

The Speaker: It is indeed a pleasure this morning to see the number of students (I think 39 in all) visiting us from Years 5 and 6 of the East End Primary School. I want to extend my appreciation to the Honourable Elected Member for East End, Mr. V. Arden McLean, for organising with the teachers for the students to be here with us today. I also want to recognise the Principal, Mr. Daniel, who is heading the group, Ms. Mills, Mrs. Hyre and Mrs. Evans, who is a member of the support staff. Did I miss anybody? I do not think so. We welcome you all and we trust that you will have an interesting morning with us.

Unfortunately, we will not have Question Time today, because the Official Member responsible for answering the question is unable to be with us today. However, we would invite you to come back at another time, when you can experience that part of the House.

Later on, after taking the First Reading of the Bills, we will be suspending for a short while so that you, the students and teachers, will have the opportunity to meet all Honourable Members. I will also have the opportunity to present the children with some of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association (CPA) turtle pins. I am looking forward to that part of this morning's proceedings.

Apologies

The Speaker: I have received apologies for absence from the Honourable Third Official Member; the Honourable Minister of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, and Leader of Government Business; the Temporary Honourable Third Official Member; and the Honourable Minister of Planning, Communication, District Administration and Information Technology; and for late arrival from the Honourable Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF CABINET

Questions Nos. 97 and 98
Deferred

The Second Elected Member for George Town to ask the Honourable Minister responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics

No. 97: What is the total expenditure of Government on Official Travel from 1st November 2001 to present, giving a detailed breakdown of expenditure by Ministries and Departments.

No. 98: What is the total amount of Stamp Duty waived by Government in relation to land transfers from 1st November 2001, to present, giving details by calendar year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Health Services.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I wish to inform the Honourable House that the Honourable Third Official Member is on Cayman Brac today on official business. It is he who would be answering the two questions. I beg that these two questions be deferred for today and set down for a future meeting.

The Speaker: The question is that Questions Nos. 97 and 98 be deferred until a later sitting during this Meeting.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Question Put: Agreed. Question Nos. 97 and 98 deferred to a later sitting.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MINISTERS/ MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have received no statements from Honourable Ministers or Members of the Cabinet.

Suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2)

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) so that the business, as set down in Items 1-3, can be taken.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) be suspended.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) suspended.

The Cadet Corps Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Cadet Corps Bill 2003 seeks to establish the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps as a legal entity in the Cayman Islands. The Cadet Corps, as Honourable Members may know, has been in operation for some time now. However, the Corps has not been legally constituted in that this Bill has to be assented to before the Corps can receive its proper commission and be recognised by Her Majesty's Government as a legally constituted entity operating within the Commonwealth.

The Corps is co-educational and it has, as its members, boys and girls beginning at age 11 and extending up to age 19. Initially conceived to operate within the confines of our school system, the Corps was established in conjunction with the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force, and works in close liaison with the Police Force. Indeed, the Commandant and his deputy were seconded from the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force. However, with the assent of this Bill, the Corps will function as an independent entity, operating out of the Ministry of Education and under the auspices of the office of His Excellency, the Governor. This is the case with the Cadet Corps that operate in many other areas of the Commonwealth Caribbean, and especially in the Caribbean region.

It should be stated at the outset that the Cadet Corps, unlike the Boy Scouts, is a military organisation. Its aims, objectives and practices are military and paramilitary, as against the Boy Scouts, the Girl Guides and some of these other organisations for young people. It was thought that the establishment of a Cadet Corps would provide, for the young men and women of high school age, another option and another area of constructive participation. This is especially so since it came into existence predominately in response to what was then deemed an alarming outbreak of youth violence, particularly gang-related violence. There are a number of organisations that cater to the constructive channelling of youthful interests and energies, and the Cadet Corps adds to that repertoire.

Mr. Speaker, in other jurisdictions, the Cadet Corps forms an integral part of extracurricular activities. In Jamaica, Barbados, and Trinidad, as well as other Commonwealth Caribbean countries, the Corps is an important part of activities for young people.

The model for the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps is the Barbados model. I chose the Barbados model especially because, although it is still a military organisation, it does not have the emphasis on the type of military training that the Corps does in Jamaica, for example. We have been working in close liaison with Major Skeete of the Barbados Cadet Corps. We have developed our training manual, and the instructions and practices of our Corps, as a result of consultations with the Barbados Cadet Corps.

I want to give credit to two young Caymanians who were instrumental, when they heard that a Cadet Corps was being formed, in contacting me at the Ministry. Both these young Caymanians are medical doctors, and one, Dr. Sidney Ebanks, was, until recently, a commissioned officer in the Jamaica Defence Force, Naval Wing. This young man gave me invaluable advice in the establishment of the Cadet Corps, and referred me to the United States Code of Military Justice, which is a very important document in the establishment of any kind of organisation similar to the Cadet Corps. The other young man is Dr. Matthew Grant, who, of his own volition, constructed the Cadet Corps Training Manual, complete with logo. Mr. Speaker, I hope that at some future stage, both these young men can find time in their busy medical careers to seek active secondment to our Cadet Corps, so that they can, in their spare time, serve as the positive role-models I know they are to the cohort of young Caymanian boys and girls who have thus far enlisted in the Corps.

The functions of the Cadet Corps include the following — I quote from clause 5 of the Bill:

- "(a) to provide a formal, well-regulated and highly disciplined organisation operating within all sectors of the school and youth communities in the Islands;
- "(b) to attract as cadets, significant numbers of young people between the ages of eleven and nineteen;
- "(c) to instil in cadets, spiritual, moral, national and humane values of honesty, justice, discipline and social responsibility;
- "(d) to maximise in cadets, self-respect, self-confidence, self-reliance, self-discipline and loyalty;
- "(e) to encourage in cadets, powers of leadership and the ability to work as team members;

- "(f) to provide for cadets progressive training of a challenging and exciting nature in order to foster alertness, physical and mental endurance, and camaraderie;
- "(g) to provide for cadets, military-style discipline, skills, achievements and values; and
- "(h) to establish the highest possible standards in all areas of operation of the Cadet Corps."

The first company of the Cadet Corps was formed at the George Hicks High School. It is a four-year programme. We started with a cohort of approximately 30 cadets. During the passing-out parade, which was held at the Governor's House during the tenure of the former Governor, Peter Smith, we were proud that the youngsters acquitted themselves so well.

There is now a second company of the Cadet Corps, comprised of schoolchildren from various schools. It is my understanding from the Commandant that these candidate cadets will be ready for the passing-out parade in February. The cadets undergo a most rigorous preparation programme. Indeed, they have to sit an examination. It is those candidates who have been successful in that examination who are qualified to pass out as full cadets.

From my experience, the Corps is well supported by parents. I am pleased that the Cadet Corps itself has taken on independence and self-reliance, which bodes well for the future of the organisation. We have a good cadre of volunteer officers. The only two paid members of the Corps staff are the Commandant and his deputy. Because the Corps is a co-educational organisation, the Deputy Commandant is a female.

When the Corps was started, and it was understood that it was a military-type organisation, some persons in the community did not understand, perhaps because they were ignorant to the functioning of a Cadet Corps. I got some calls from some people, the details of which I will not go into now.

What frequently happens in a frontier society is that some people allow their shallowness and ignorance to get the better of them, and, regrettably, have closed and insular minds.

The function and the establishment of the Corps are such that it follows the establishment of Cadet Corps in various other parts of the world, including Britain. While it is true that it falls under the Ministry of Education, that is only borne of convenience. The Ministry of Education is responsible for the education, training, and upbringing of youth, and the Cadet Corps is an organisation comprised of youth. However, Mr. Speaker, in the Cayman Islands, as in other parts of the Commonwealth Caribbean and the wider world, the Corps is under the auspices of other authorities. I, as Minister, have nothing to do with the Corps—no more than that I am the Minister of Education. I am not a commissioned officer in the Corps; I am not even an honorary Cadet Corps member.

In Barbados, especially, Major Skeete emphasised that the ultimate success of the Cadet Corps lies in the participation of teachers. Regrettably, up to this point, there has been little or no interest demonstrated on the part of teachers to help in the Corps. Indeed, I would say that the contrary is true. There seems to be a disinterest or nonchalance. In Barbados, for example, it is mandatory that teachers participate as officers in the Corps. It is recognised that this is the most effective way, because the teachers have first-hand knowledge of the students. The persons with whom we consulted in Barbados and Jamaica said that this is the ideal. I would hope that with the passage of this Bill, we could get more volunteers and contributions from teachers joining the ranks of officers of the Corps.

The Bill sets out the full organisation, including the Officers. It lays out the Cadet Corps Law: the code of conduct for acceptance, promotion, and dismissal; the responsibilities and obligations of officers of the Corps; and their relations with the wider community. Mr. Speaker, I commend this Bill to the Honourable House as an instrument that will serve to provide, for our youth, another means by which they can responsibly demonstrate their role in society—where they can access training, exposure and experience that will prepare them for a 21st century Cayman by building their self-confidence, self-esteem, appreciation for others and respect for law and order—and that will also instil in them spiritual and community values.

I encourage all Honourable Members to give their support to this Bill because it will set out the guidelines for, and establish within legal borders the functioning and the governing of, an organisation that offers great scope for the development of our young people. I thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Elected Member for East End.

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to make my contribution to the Bill that is before us, to establish the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps. Before I do that, I crave your indulgence in thanking Members, and particularly you, Sir, for accommodating the East End Primary School. It is indeed an historic day, not only in their lives, but in my life, and in the lives of other Members of this Honourable House. As far as I know, today is the first day that the East End Primary School has ever visited the Legislative Assembly to see the proceedings. I am aware that other classes have visited during the time when the House was in recess.

We should all encourage our schools to come here and see the proceedings, because these are the future politicians of this country. I see quite a few in East End that are geared to take over, which is good. It means that the future of this country is bright. I thank you, I thank Honourable Members, and I thank the staff for making all the necessary arrangements to accommodate the principal, the teachers and the students.

I now turn to the Cadet Corps Bill 2003. I rise to support, on behalf of the Opposition, the Cadet Corps Bill 2003. We believe that a Cadet Corps, such as has been established in the country for some time, is necessary. Mr. Speaker, I have not had any military training, but I have had my experiences with the Sea Scouts, and although that organisation has never leaned toward a military type of discipline, Miss Vernicia had that military intent in her when I was under her command as a boy scout. Those types of volunteer organisations not only bring discipline to the individual, but they also fare well in a community. With no disrespect, and without being sexist, I believe that a community, and a country, is better off when discipline and respect are instilled from a very early age, particularly in boys.

I believe that the Leader of the Opposition is a former member of the Cadet Corps in Jamaica. In his piloting of this Bill, the Minister of Education said that the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps is not inclined as far, militarily, as the one in Jamaica. Although it is not that far inclined (and I do not expect it to be that far), I believe it will serve the country well. The Commandant, whom I know, has his interests rooted right in this country, as does the Deputy Commandant. Their interest is a better future for our country.

There are a couple of things that, perhaps, the Minister can clear up for me in his reply. I am a little perplexed as to the enrollment in the Cadet Corps.

Section 33 says: “33. (1) Any pupil of a school for which a Unit has been established may apply to be enrolled in the Cadet Corps.”

I wonder if that can be defined. Does it mean that only the schools in which it is established? What efforts are being made to ensure that a unit is established in all schools in this country with students between the ages of 11 and 19?

It is quite fitting that today we have students in our gallery listening to the proceedings—at least half of whom will, in the next school year, be moving on to the middle schools of the country, be they private or Government schools. They will be turning 11, and will be eligible by age to become members of the Cadet Corps.

I am reminded by the Elected Member from North Side that efforts are being made right now to attract the same year group that we have here today—Year 6—for an introduction to the Cadet Corps. Mr. Speaker, those efforts may be carried out; I do not know. If they are not, I would ask that the Minister consider getting the Cadet Corps officers to visit the primary schools, particularly around Years 5 and 6, to get them introduced to its type of fun—and I know it is not all fun Mr. Speaker. Certainly, however, it broadens the perspective of these children, and it further promotes their camaraderie. That is one of the problems our country has always had. The children of the outer districts, in particular, never get the opportunity to integrate with other members of the community (for example, the districts, George Town, West Bay, Cayman Brac, and the likes) until they start getting into that age bracket of 11 years of age. The opportunity to engage the children in Years 5 and 6 would give them some idea of what to expect when they get into the middle and high schools.

It is something for them to look forward to, and for their parents to encourage them to get into. I understand that the principal has to recommend that a student become a Cadet Corps member, but the parents also play a pivotal role. Many parents in this country are searching for that type of institution—not that they become baby-sitters, but parents know that not only will a child going to a Cadet Corps become disciplined, but respect for the community at large, and respect for self-discipline, will be instilled, making that child a better child. I know that many parents will try to leave their children at an organisation for baby-sitting, and consider it a baby-sitting agency. However, a Cadet Corps will never be subjected to that, or perceived as that type of agency.

This is my last point, and it is something I would like to bring to the Ministers' attention. I noted section 5(2) says: “(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of any Law, members of the Cadet Corps shall be entitled, in the performance of the Cadet Corps' Functions, to carry arms, but no arms shall be carried except with the authority of the Commandant given under and in accordance with the general or special directions of the Governor in Cabinet.”

I see, under section 20, that: “(1) A person ceasing to be a commissioned officer or a non-commissioned officer shall forthwith deliver up to a person appointed by the Commandant for that purpose or to the officer in charge of the place at which he was last stationed, his commission, identity card, and all arms, equipment, uniform and any other appointments which have been supplied to him which are the property of the Cadet Corps.”

“(2) A commissioned officer or a non-commissioned officer who, having ceased to belong to the Cadet Corps, fails without good cause to comply with subsection (1) is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine of five hundred dollars and to imprisonment for six months, and to pay the value of the property not delivered up, which value may be ascertained by a summary court and recovered in the same manner as a fine or deducted in whole or in part from any credit due to the ex-officer.”

I wonder if there is not a need to include, in section 2, some provisions for arms that have been assigned to officers. If an officer has out the property referred to in Section 1, and the property includes arms — as I read in the Bill — then perhaps the provisions need to be there to ensure that the arms, specifically, are surrendered.

We support the creation of the establishment of the Cadet Corps. I only hope that the Minister of Education will reply to the few queries we have had about it.

I look forward to a much larger Cadet Corps than we have. I, too, would encourage teachers, and others in this community, to play their part in volunteering for this much-needed service. I always thought that we could extend the Cadet Corps to the point where we had a compound for the Corps — a permanent home. It could be extended even further to give the Juvenile Court jurisdiction in recommending adolescents to that arm of the Cadet Corps, whereby we could have boot camps, and the likes.

[Inaudible interjections]

Mr. V. Arden McLean: Certainly I do not advocate the mixing of these two different behaviours, but perhaps one day the Minister of Education will be receptive to creating a different arm of the Cadet Corps, an arm that is much more disciplined, as he indicated that this one is not as disciplined as some within the Commonwealth, and in particular, in Jamaica. If we had another arm of the Cadet Corps that could be used by the Juvenile Court, adolescents could be sent there. They would be in barracks, and the likes. That is what I would like to hope we would reach, one day, instead of trying to curb their behaviours with counsellors, as we do currently, or alternatively, and ultimately, behind bars.

Again, Mr. Speaker, we support the Bill, and we look forward to hearing the Minister's reply. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Lyndon L. Martin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a population, we spend much time criticising our youth, talking of this generation and our lack of hope for the future because of "Generation X". I am pleased to support this Bill, which seeks to create a very positive alternative for channelling the energy of young people. As leaders, we are here providing positive alternatives, rather than simply criticising.

This Bill seeks to establish the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps for the purpose of instilling in our young persons the values of honesty, justice, discipline and social responsibility. I am pleased to see that, so far, both sides of this House sides have voiced our acceptance and support of such a Bill — a Bill that, most importantly, will create a Corps that instils self-confidence and self-respect, as well as respect for community, law and order, and rules.

Self-confidence, or the lack of it, is one of the largest contributors to the social breakdown among our young people. A young person who lacks self-confidence seeks alternatives. He seeks a way to make himself the big man — the man of the hour. If, through the mechanisms of a paramilitary operation like the Cadet Corps, we can instil self-confidence in our young people at an early age (age 11 -19), we are addressing much greater problems. We are addressing problems that are now costing us thousands and thousands of dollars in incarcerating young people in Northward Prison, after they have looked to those alternatives to building up self-confidence.

Young people have a desire to be part of a grouping, network, or team. If we do not provide an option such as the Cadet Corps, they will go towards negative alternatives, such as gang activity, where they feel they belong to, and are part, of a group.

It is easy for us to criticise, and say that gang activity is wrong. Yes, it is wrong. However, we must not only look at it as being wrong; we must look at the causes, and look at ways of correcting those causes.

The Cadet Corps has added a spiritual component to their programme, along with the education and the discipline, which is a very positive addition; one that will lead to a fuller individual.

The Elected Member for East End pointed to the need of ensuring that the Cadet Corps concept spread throughout the country. I would like to endorse that wholeheartedly.

I would like to thank the Minister of Education. From the onset of this programme — in his first statement, as well as at a meeting held in my district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman — he gave his commitment that the Cadet Corps would eventually be extended to the Cayman Brac High School.

I would also like to thank a member of the Cayman Brac community who voiced his support of the Cadet Corps to the Minister of Education at a public forum in the Brac — a gentleman by the name of Mr. Todd Eldridge — for whom I have great respect. For many years, he served in the United States Army, and, during my very short period of being in the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) at the University of Tampa, he served as my Commandant. I know he is now a resident in the Brac, and has offered to assist once the programme reaches that district. I would use this opportunity to remind the Minister of Education that Mr. Todd Eldridge is available.

There is no more to be said, other than that I am happy to be part of a government that has seen fit to bring this Bill, formalising what has now been in operation for some time and giving to the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps an opportunity for greater recognition. I give the Honourable Minister of Education and his Committee my assurance that we will give whatever support is necessary to have this programme introduced into Cayman Brac. We, too, have situations and issues with our young people in Cayman Brac. We would love to have an alternative such as the Cadet Corps into which to channel our individuals.

We must also look at a more distant option, almost to the point where it is a mandatory pass-through for our students coming through the senior years of high school, to allow all of our Caymanian students to benefit from the discipline of this organisation.

With those words said, I wait for the opportunity to cast my vote and give my support for this Motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I would also like to make my contribution to this Bill. I must say that if the Minister of Education had accomplished nothing else but seeing this brought to fruition, he would have done a wonderful thing for the young people of the Cayman Islands.

To the best of my knowledge, I am the only individual in this Parliament who has served three years in the United States Army. I can attest to the discipline that this has brought, and will bring, to our young people.

The eight weeks of basic training that I underwent will always stay with me. It teaches one to listen, and understand commands. At specific times, you do not ask questions; you respond automatically. This is broken into your mind day after day and night after night, because in the event of a confrontation, if you stop to ask why, you may not have the luxury of continuing to live.

This Bill has proven to be a nucleus, and a very firm foundation, for our young people. It is the initial step in the disciplining of our young people. We have all talked about some deterioration in a handful of our youth. This is an excellent opportunity to bring them into line.

I agree with the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac when he says that consideration should be given to making this training and participation in the Cadet Corps mandatory. I would also suggest that in the Home School Association meetings, the parents should be encouraged to look into this. All the children should be encouraged to go into this, not only those who are having problems with discipline.

I was saddened to know that it is not being fully embraced by some of the teachers. I would not say that it should be mandatory for the teachers, but I suggest that they be strongly encouraged to assist. When we look at the benefits that will come down the line if children participate in that formative stage of their lives, from 11 years upwards, and the relief these Islands will have from some of the disciplinary problems we are now experiencing, it is incredible.

Clause 5(1)(g) says: "5. (1) "The functions of the Cadet Corps include the following— ... (g) to provide for cadets, military-style discipline, skills, achievements and values."

This is what it is all about; making those children understand the value of life at an early age. The sooner we can get that through their young heads and minds, the better off we will be down the line.

Once again, I give my full support to this Bill. I have been the beneficiary of this type of discipline. And it has stuck with me all of my life. I feel sure that this will be exhibited in those youths who take part in the Cadet Corps, and that we will see some wonderful results as we go forward.

I take my hat off to the Minister. He has been talking about this for many years, from the time I can remember back though the more than 11 years that I have been here. It is good to see something being brought to fruition.

I encourage all of us, as legislators and as parents, to look at this and encourage our children to participate. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, I will call on the Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture to exercise his right of reply.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I have listened keenly to the contributions of Honourable Members, and I thank them for their indications of support. In the process of those contributions, Mr. Speaker, there were some areas on which Members requested clarification and amplification, and I have made some notes.

Before I get to that, however, I want to say a little about the general make-up of the Corps and its curriculum.

The curriculum is a four-year programme: star one, star two, star three and star four. Cadets take approximately one academic year to progress from one star level to the next. The subjects of the curriculum are: drill and discipline, first aid, orienteering, map reading, direction finding and self-defence. Students are also taken on periodic camps, in which the camp is structured in military style. They have to stand watches, so some cadets stand watch while others sleep. Each one gets a turn experiencing the responsibilities of setting up the camp, including pitching their tents.

We are in the process of negotiating some land off Frank Sound, which is about 26 acres. It is anticipated that this is where the field quarters of the Cadet Corps will be, so that during the summertime we can have regular camps, and when we have visiting Cadet Corps, as we expect to do, we can bivouac them at that particular site.

The company headquarters is across from here in the old Public Works compound, which is set out in military style. The Commandant tells me that we are still in the process of equipping that headquarters as a military-style headquarters. It will be complete with a small kitchen and storage facilities, although no arms will be stored there. Rather, the arms will be stored at the Police armoury and will be under the command of the Commandant, working in tandem with the police.

It is only when the cadet has reached the senior level of star four that they will be introduced to the safe and responsible practising and handling of fire-arms.

The Corps operates under the strictest of disciplines, and absolutely no indiscipline is tolerated. It is a military-style operation, with military code mechanisms for delinquents.

Regrettably, Mr. Speaker, I would discourage any court from sending anyone, and indeed, I would instruct the Commandant not to take anyone, because we want only the best. These are youngsters who are being trained for a specific responsibility. We will have to devise some other organisation for the undisciplined, and for those who are delinquent. I would refer them to the Minister of Community Services. The Corps wants the best people, because these youngsters are going to be introduced to areas of responsibility that only the most dependable, mature and responsible youngsters can handle. Although it is true that I do not wish to see any youngster written off, the Cadet Corps is really not the place for delinquents and those people who break the law.

While we now have a Land Wing, we are later going to introduce a Sea Wing, a naval element, to the Corps. To this extent, it is hoped that we can get one of our own—one of the young doctors of whom I earlier spoke—to head up this section, since it will be in keeping with his experiences in the Jamaica Defence Force.

We set the most serious, the highest and the loftiest ideals for these youngsters to achieve, and so far, both girls and boys have been bearing us out. Mr. Speaker, it is a source of pride to see the progress that the youngsters have made from the inception of the Corps until now. I hope that some time next year, we will get a chance to see our cadets perform in tandem with cadets from other areas of the region and the United States. In 2004, we are planning a military tattoo, in which the people of the Cayman Islands will be able to see our cadets perform in drills and in military-type exercises, in competition and in tandem with other cadets from the region.

I agree with the Elected Member for East End that the Corps should visit primary schools. However, we could not do that until we had a product to show. We do not want to have any shoddiness; the youngsters must be at their best. They are taught all the skills that are necessary, from how to clean and prepare their boots for parade, and they are assessed gradually. On a weekly basis, they are assessed on their conduct, deportment and drill, and turn out is a very important part of this exercise. I would say that the First Company, the Alpha Company, will be ready to set themselves up as ambassadors and models. I will speak to the Commandant and encourage him to have them visit.

However, one of the problems that we have is a logistical problem. As yet, we have no unit of transportation capable of carrying a company of cadets at a time.

Credit is to be given to the Ministry, for when we started this Corps, there was no special provision in the Budget for its establishment. It is a credit to the Permanent Secretary and other members of the Ministry that we were able to do this on what was literally a shoestring budget. The Corps is grateful to receive contributions from corporate citizens, and it is my understanding that there is an account set up by the Commandant to receive these. Not only are financial contributions acceptable, but we will accept other kinds of material that can be useful in preparing the youngsters.

I also agree with the Elected Member for East End that section 20 should include officers of the Corps. Perhaps we could do this at the Committee stage of the Bill.

As to mandatory membership in the Corps, I would prefer that the Corps remain a voluntary organisation. Field exercises dictate that sometimes the youngsters have to be out in the sun doing rigorous exercises for four to five hours at a time. As a result of that, before any youngster is accepted into the Corps, he or she has to undergo a physical examination by a qualified medical practitioner. The Corps is not for any and every youngster; rather, it is for those youngsters who demonstrate willingness, and an interest in joining the Corps. If it were mandatory, what would perhaps happen is that we would get people coming in half-heartedly, who were not interested. We would prefer it if the youngsters themselves demonstrated a willingness to join.

The reason it was not extended to more schools was that at the beginning, we only had a small number of volunteer officers, and those officers, according to the ratios under which we operated, were not enough so that we could include the private schools. Now, however, we are getting a larger officer corps, so we are definitely willing to accommodate any private school that express an interest in having a company set up in their schools.

In many jurisdictions—and I would venture to say that in short order, this would be the case in the Cayman Islands—youngsters applying for scholarships, or any kind of educational training, have their resumés embellished if they are members of the Corps. It demonstrates that, already, they have a sense of responsibility and a sense of seriousness, and that they understand what leadership means. Therefore, I would say that it is a definite advantage to youngsters to join the Cadet Corps, particularly if they are applying for public assistance in future studies.

Mr. Speaker, with the passage of this Bill, I look forward to the Cadet Corps growing in stature and importance. The significance of the passage of this Bill is that it will allow us to receive a commission from the United Kingdom Government, so that the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps will be eligible for military assistance from the United Kingdom's Government. One of the things we are going to be working on, once we get the commission, is an arrangement so that members of the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps can have access to the United Kingdom's Armed Forces, if they wish. Upon successfully passing out of the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps, if they wish to embark on a military career, we will be eligible for training and material assistance from the United Kingdom Government.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would like to express gratitude to the Commandant and his staff, and especially to the number of persons who have volunteered to turn out as officers of the Corps. Already, the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps is making a name for itself. On Sunday, I had the opportunity to hand out the prizes at the Second Annual Cayman Islands Cadet Corps Marathon, which is a major fund-raising undertaking set up by the Corps itself. I can say with some pride that the reputation of that event is growing. It is gaining in stature as an international event, because among the runners were several from overseas countries. I have turned out on Saturday mornings to see parents who are very enthusiastic and energetic in coming to support their youngsters in the Corps, and this heartens me. I will refrain from calling names lest I run afoul in omitting some names. Suffice it to say that I am encouraged by the support that parents give. I am encouraged by the support from the wider public, and hope that when the Corps goes on its drive to broaden its mandate and increase its supplies, this public support continues.

I am most grateful for the unanimous support announced by Members of this Honourable House. I am happy to say that at the outset, I received support—moral and otherwise—from several Members of this Legislative Assembly. I would like to single out the Elected Member for North Side, but there were also Members on the Government side who gave their support and encouragement. My colleague of long-standing, now the Minister of Health and I spoke for many years about the possibility of establishing such a corps in the Cayman Islands. I am happy that it could come about during our tenure in the Legislative Assembly.

The Cayman Islands Cadet Corps is not the property of the Ministry of Education or the Minister of Education, but rather it is the property of the youth of the Cayman Islands. Yes, I will honour the undertaking made to Cayman Brac, of which I was reminded by the Second Elected Member of Cayman Brac. Indeed, the very first commandant of the Corps was a police officer from Cayman Brac who has repeatedly expressed to me his interest in returning to the Corps once a unit is set up on Cayman Brac. I hope that within the year 2004, we can recognise this.

I thank all Honourable Members for their support, and wish for the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps that it may grow from strength to strength. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Cadet Corps Bill 2003 be given a Second Reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Cadet Corps Bill 2003 given a Second Reading.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider the Bills.

House in Committee at 11.58 am

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: The House is now in Committee.

With the leave of the House, may I assume that as usual, we should authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to correct minor errors and suchlike in these Bills. Would the Clerk please state the Bill and the clauses?

The Cadet Corps Bill 2003

Clauses 1 to 2

The Clerk:

Clause 1	Short title and commencement
Clause 2	Interpretation

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 1 and 2 of the Bill stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clauses 1 and 2 passed

Clauses 3 through 6

The Clerk: PART II—Constitution and Administration of the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps.

Clause 3	Establishment of Cayman Islands Cadet Corps
Clause 4	Constitution of the Cadet Corps
Clause 5	Functions of the Cadet Corps
Clause 6	Administration

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 3 to 6 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clauses 3 to 6 passed.

Clauses 7 through 14

The Clerk:	PART III—Appointments, Enlistments, Service and Discharge
Clause 7	Grant of commission in the Cadet Corps
Clause 8	Appointments
Clause 9	Enlistments
Clause 10	Secondment to the Cadet Corps
Clause 11	Special contracts of appointment
Clause 12	Clerks, store-keepers and other employees
Clause 13	Volunteers
Clause 14	Identity card

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 7 to 14 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clauses 7 to 14 passed.

Clauses 15 through 26

The Clerk:	PART IV—Powers, duties and privileges of members of the Cadet Corps
Clause 15	General powers of Commandant
Clause 16	Command of authorised officers

Clause 22	Medical privileges
Clause 23	Special pensions in the event of death or incapacity attributable to performance of duty
Clause 24	Authorised officers' funeral expenses
Clause 25	Powers of arrest
Clause 26	Detention of persons arrested without warrant

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 15 to 26 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. The Elected Member for North Side.

Ms. Edna M. Moyle: Mr. Speaker, for clarity, I thought that the Honourable Minister of Education, in his winding up, said that an amendment that had been suggested of "officer" being included in clause 20 would be done at this stage. Am I correct?

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Chairman, it was suggested by the Honourable Elected Member for East End that section 20 should include "officers", and I gave the commitment. However, upon reading the section, I think that it already includes officers because it says: "A person ceasing to be a commissioned officer or a non-commissioned officer shall forthwith deliver up to a person appointed by the Commandant for that purpose or to the officer in charge at the place in which he was last stationed, his commission, identity card, and all arms, equipment, uniform and other appointments which have been supplied to him which are the property of the Cadet Corps."

Therefore, I think that is covered.

The Chairman: Thank you, Honourable Minister of Education. I will put the question again. The question is that clauses 15 to 26 stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Clauses 15 to 26 passed.

Clauses 27 through 32

The Chairman: The question is that the first, second and third schedules stand part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Schedules 1 to 3 passed.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to establish the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps for the purpose of instilling in young persons values of honesty, justice, discipline and social responsibility; to make provision for the organisation, training and discipline of the Cadet Corps; and to make provision for incidental and related matters.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title stands part of the Bill.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Title passed.

The Chairman: This concludes the Committee stage of the Cadet Corps Bill 2003. The question is that the Bill be reported to the House.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Agreed that the Bill be reported to the House.

REPORTS ON BILLS*The Cadet Corps Bill 2003

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister of Education, Human Resources and Culture.

Hon. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to report to this Honourable House that the Bill entitled the Cadet Corps Bill 2003 was considered by a Committee of the whole House and passed without amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly reported and is set down for Third Reading.

Suspension of Standing Order 47

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the suspension of Standing Order 47 so that the Third Reading can be taken on the Cadet Corps Bill 2003.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 47 be suspended to allow for the Third Reading of the Cadet Corps Bill 2003.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 47 suspended.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister of Education.

THIRD READING

The Cadet Corps Bill 2003

Hon. Roy Boddan: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move that the Bill for a Law to establish the Cayman Islands Cadet Corps for the purpose of instilling in young persons values of honesty, justice, discipline and social responsibility; to make provision for the organisation, training and discipline of the Cadet Corps; and to make provision for incidental and related matters be given a Third Reading and be passed by this Honourable House.

The Speaker: The question is that the Bill shortly entitled The Cadet Corps Bill 2003 be given a Third Reading and passed.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Cadet Corps Bill 2003 given a Third Reading and passed.

The Speaker: Honourable Members, before we announce the adjournment there is another matter that we wish to deal with today, which is not on the Order Paper. Therefore, procedurally, we will adjourn this House because this Order Paper has been completed. Immediately thereafter, we will reassemble, so that we can deal with this matter. We will adjourn for about five minutes.

The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: I beg to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 12.15 pm today.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 12.15pm Wednesday 10 December 2003.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 12:10pm the House stood adjourned until 12.15 pm Wednesday, 10 December 2003.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
WEDNESDAY
10 DECEMBER 2003
12.14 PM
Thirteenth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Lyndon A. Martin: Let us pray.

Almighty God from whom all wisdom and power are derived. We beseech thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Phillip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we maybe enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together. Our Father, who art in Heaven, hallowed by thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on Earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil. For thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever, Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us, the Lord make his face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of his countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 12.17 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

READING BY THE HONOURABLE

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 46(4) suspended.

SECOND READING

The Immigration (Amendment) (No.2) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Temporary Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled, the Immigration (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2003.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Yes, Mr. Speaker. There has been much discourse, and we look with much anticipation to the advent of the new immigration legislation. It is perhaps somewhat surprising that we bring an amendment to the existing Law at this very late stage.

The Bill, as the Memorandum and Objects states, simply seeks to repeal the restriction on applications for the grant of Caymanian status imposed by sections 23(6) and (7). The repeal of these subsections will allow persons whose applications for the grant of Caymanian status have previously been rejected to apply, if they wish, under the next and final quota re-issued by Cabinet under the current law.

As we all know, the current Immigration Law (2003 Revision) is to be superseded by new legislation early in the New Year—we would hope on 1 January 2004.

In October, the Government indicated that it would be issuing a final quota for grants of Caymanian status under this Law. It was announced yesterday (and it was in the media yesterday and today) that this quota has been set at 600 grants on the grounds of residency, and 75 grants on the grounds of naturalisation. In setting this quota, the Government was particularly mindful of all those who have aspired to gain Caymanian status. There is a provision in the Law that was meant to prevent, what would be termed “churning of applications”, which is the submission of successive applications in successive years. Approximately a year ago, we did amend the Law to allow persons who had been unsuccessful in application under one section of the Law to apply under another section if they gained such eligibility.

As this quota that has now been issued represents the final quota to be issued under this Law, the Government felt that these unsuccessful applicants should, perhaps, be given some freedom to re-apply, bearing in mind that those unsuccessful applicants will invariably be made up of persons who, unfortunately, simply failed to meet the minimum criteria that the Board would have set, but even more unfortunately would include people who, although they met the Board’s minimum criteria, were simply unsuccessful because of the limit prescribed by the quota. It is that element of persons—people who would have met the Board’s minimum standards, but who simply could not succeed by virtue of the earlier quotas—to whom the Government feels obliged to be fair and equitable in offering this final quota.

As we all know, the quotas started in recent times, in 2001. Those people were barred for two years. The Law has a mandatory bar of one year and a discretionary bar of a further year. The Board exercised that discretion; those people were barred for two years, and that bar expired for those people last Friday. Those people are now free to re-apply, regardless of whether this Bill passes today or not. The persons who applied in 2002 and were unsuccessful were similarly barred for two years, and the persons who applied in 2003, from my information were barred for one year. Whether it is one year or two does not matter. Applicants who were unsuccessful against the 2002 and 2003 quotas are currently barred from re-applying by law.

This Amendment simply seeks to empower those people to re-apply, if they wish. Hence, it repeals the existing 23(6) and (7) and replaces 23(6) with a new section, which says: “(6) Where an application for the grant of Caymanian status has been rejected prior to the date of commencement of this new Law, the applicant may at any time after the date of the communication of the decision to him make a further application for such a grant.”

Therefore, anyone who was refused prior to the date of commencement of this Law can apply any time after the date of that refusal.

Obviously, it would not be expected that people who had sought to appeal their decision would continue the appeal and make a new application simultaneously. Therefore, there is a provision that a person can discontinue an appeal and make an application, if they wish to go that route.

Finally, the Law in section 17(1) currently makes provision for the Immigration Appeals Tribunal to order costs if it sees fit. That provision is there for the Tribunal to enforce some reasonable respect and to mitigate against frivolous appeals and the wasting of the tribunal's time. In other words, at the time we set up the Tribunal, the provision was put in the Law that if the Tribunal agreed to convene and hear a matter, but people did not show up, it had the power to order costs. Clause 2 seeks to maintain or preserve that power.

If there is a matter before the Tribunal at the conclusion of which it would have ordered some costs, and the appellant opts to discontinue, then that right, which the Tribunal would have had under the Law (if the appeal had continued to conclusion) is preserved—even if the appellant opts to discontinue the appeal. It does not give the Tribunal any power that the Law does not already give them. It simply preserves the right that the Law already gives them when an appellant opts to discontinue.

I would like to make it clear that if you discontinue, the Tribunal is not going to add up the tab and say, "We spent six or 18 hours considering this matter and these are the costs that we incurred". That is not what is meant by the costs that the Tribunal would normally order. The Tribunal exists to consider the appeals, but if appellants operate in a frivolous way and cause the Tribunal to incur unreasonable costs, the provision is there for them to exercise that discipline and say, "You have to pay us. We turned up at 3.00 because you agreed that it was convenient for you to be heard then. We took our time, and turned up, and you did not show up." We cannot operate like that when we have people volunteering to serve on these Tribunals.

The provision is put there so that the Tribunal can exercise some discipline. It is only in that regard, so I do not want it to be construed that if you discontinue an appeal you are going to get a bill. That does not follow. If there were some reason, and the Tribunal had a basis to levy costs for something at the end, then the fact that you opted to discontinue does not discharge that situation.

Because of the urgency of this matter, and the fact that the deadline for this quota will be on 12.00 pm on 31 December 2003, it is intended that this Law will come into force when it is passed by this Honourable House today. I trust that the purpose behind it is clear, and I would urge Members to lend their support to it.

Thank you, Sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Opposition is in full support of this amending Bill to the Immigration Law. In fact, when another amendment was brought over a year ago (one to which the Temporary Honourable First Official Member referred) we voiced our opinion that what is being done now should have been done then. Mr. Speaker, we have long held the view that section 23(6) and (7) of the existing Law (which is being repealed now) was not one that led to fairness throughout the system for prospective applicants or for people who have applied. Those sections allow the Board to tell applicants upon refusal that they have to wait one or two years to re-apply. In our view, those sections disenfranchise individuals who are not necessarily any less deserving than the new applicants who would have been able to apply during that window within any quota that was given.

As a matter of fairness, we held the position, as we have always held, that that should not have been the case. We are very happy that the Government has recognised this—albeit belatedly, and under this specific circumstance.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: As the Minister for Education has just said, it is never too late to do what is good. We totally agree. We are happy with it.

I wish to make one quick example to prove a point. I will call no names, but a young man came to me approximately three weeks ago. We all know who the person is. He has been here for 30 years; in fact, he has been here just shy of 31 years. He made an application to the Board this year under the orthodox method, and within the quota. He did not try to get in through the other method, which we will not go into today.

That person showed me the letter. It was not an unkind letter, but it was a letter of refusal. It simply told him that the quota was 200 and that, unfortunately, he did not get in amongst the first 200 so his application had been refused. It then told him that he had to wait for a year to re-apply. He is not one of a few; I am fairly certain of that. If this is not done, then within this quota of 600—which is the final quota before the new Law—someone like him will have to wait out the year from the date of that letter being sent. By the time that year has expired, he will have been here for 31 years. He will then have to apply for permanent residence, if the new Law is passed as it is being presented. He can apply for permanent residence immediately, but then he will have to wait one year to acquire British Overseas Territories Citizenship. After that, he will have to wait five more years before he applies for Caymanian status.

That is one example to show you what would have occurred without this amendment. Therefore, we are very happy that the Government has seen the wisdom of making this amendment, albeit we were strong proponents of the amendment coming in 2001.

I have listened to my colleague, the legal luminary to my left, who subscribes to the belief of the Mover of the amending Bill. In section 3(2), it says: "3. (2) Where a person discontinues an appeal the Immigration Appeals Tribunal may make such order for costs as it thinks just."

I have listened carefully to what the Temporary Honourable First Official Member had to say. I cannot stand here, as I was doing vehemently before, to say that I do not agree with him. I cannot say that. But I want to say that I am tested not to disagree. I will explain myself. The immediate thought, Mr. Speaker, is that once this Bill is passed the Law would give an individual the right to withdraw an appeal. One would immediately think that if the Law allows for that now, then it is a clean withdrawal. You go about your business. If the purpose of that exercise is to allow you to apply again, then you withdraw the appeal and you apply. I do appreciate what the Honourable Temporary First Official Member is saying. As it is, the Law allows the Appeals Tribunal to consider this a case of frivolity, as he termed it.

The other question that I have is that even though this amending Bill is being proposed, the section that gives the Appeals Tribunal the authority, as he quoted, is section 17 (1). This reads: “17. (1) On an appeal, the Immigration Appeals Tribunal may make such order, including any order for costs, as it thinks fit.”

As it reads, to me that does not say that they have to wait until the appeal is concluded. I am not an expert, but I am going by what it says. One could argue that if what is proposed in the amendment in section 3(2) is not in there, then section 17(1) is still in force, even when this amendment is passed. If it is the position of the Government and their legal luminaries that it needs to be in there to ensure that it can be done, then perhaps they are right. I am not making a federal case of it, but I could not resist making the point. When the Temporary Honourable First Official Member is winding up what I think will be a short debate, perhaps he would clarify that issue so we can go on about other business.

I wish to make another point. Again, I am not making a strong case, but it is just to think about. In the proposed Bill, section 1(2) reads: “1. (2) This Law comes into force on the date it is passed by the Legislative Assembly.”

I firmly believe that I understand the reasoning for this. Given the fact that today is 10 December, there is a short window until 31 December. However, if we look in the Constitution, section 39 (1) reads:

“39.—(1) A Bill shall not become a new law until –

- (a) the Governor has assented to it in Her Majesty’s name and on Her Majesty’s behalf and has signed it in token of his assent; or
- (b) Her Majesty has given Her assent to it through a Secretary of State and the Governor has signified Her assent by Proclamation.”

It goes on. section 39(3) of the Constitution also says: “39 (3) This section shall have effect in relation to any Bill passed by the Legislative Assembly subsisting immediately before the appointed day but not assented to before that day as it has effect in relation to Bills passed after the appointed day.”

We are more inclined to ask the Government to put the Legislative Assembly staff and His Excellency on notice to go through the procedure immediately, to ask him to do it within a 24-hour period and get it done that day. The principle of retrospective legislation is one that we should run away from.

Again, this is not the strongest case in the world out of which to make a big argument, but if it is physically possible to make it happen in the other way, then as a legislature we are better off doing it like that. I have seen the odd occasion in my 11-plus years here when attempts have been made to pass legislation retrospectively, and it has caused more problems after the fact than we wished for. I am not suggesting that this is one of those occasions. I am only saying that if we look at the time-span needed to complete the process in the normal fashion, and we only speak of a day, then this is what is going to happen; let me say it. The Government has not said that.

The Honourable Temporary First Official Member may care to say it when he is winding up, but I expect that the Government would have to go on a campaign very quickly so that the individuals who are involved know, or get to know, that they have this right to make their application now. They may be sitting despondently, thinking that they are going to get caught. They are going to have to be advised, and I do not think that a day is going to make a difference. Take that day and let them know. That is my view. I do not want that to cloud the main issue at hand, but I want the Government to consider it because the point that I make is valid.

The Government may wish to reword this section, or simply to extract it and let nature take its course, knowing full well that this is one of those amending Bills that we all desire to happen as quickly as possible. I have no reason to doubt that His Excellency the Governor (or, as the case may be, the Acting Governor), would not put his signature to it very quickly. That is an observation.

So as not to be long and protracted, we support this amending Bill. We believe that it is only fair for those people, such as the individual in the example that I used, who would otherwise have been caught and disenfranchised from security of tenure for an extended period of time, when that should not have been the case.

We wish to commend the Bill and will certainly assist in its safe passage. We wait to hear the Government’s position on the other points that have been raised. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of clarification. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition queried the status of section 17(1), and the proposed provision as it deals with costs. I want to point out, for the purposes of the House that as it relates to cost, the provision in the proposed amendment is really a transitional provision, as are the other provisions there. They are merely transitional, and will eventually fall away. What will happen is that section 17(1) will remain the provision in the Law as it relates to costs. All of this, including the provision dealing with costs, is transitional.

In respect of the issue of the retrospectivity, it is not unconstitutional to have retrospective provision in the Law. There is a school of thought that says that it is inappropriate; however, that observation is aimed at what is called penal legislation, which might create an offence or charge someone with something. For want of a better term, the powers that be frown upon that sort of legislation when it is penal. In other words, persons who would not have committed an offence at an existing time find themselves committing one, because the Law was passed later and relates back to the period when the transgression took place. I am not taking issue here; I am simply saying that not all retrospective legislation is frowned upon. The problem is when it is penal. When it is purely social or administrative, there is nothing wrong—if it is the wish of the House that it operates retrospectively.

The Law will take its effect when it is passed, even if it is assented to three days later by His Excellency the Governor.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, would the Temporary First Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I apologise for the short delay.

I guess there is some truth in the fact that I was told a year ago that we should have been doing something different from what we were doing, but I think that is—

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: No, that is not inconsistent with the normal dialogue here; whatever you are doing is not enough.

I am grateful for the support from the other side, as expressed by the Leader of the Opposition. I am particularly grateful that those concerns that have been rising up in relation to the cost aspect have quietened down. With regard to the effective date of the legislation, we announced yesterday that this was what we were looking to do, and that people who had been unsuccessful would have an opportunity to re-apply, if the legislation was successful. The campaign, as such, has started, and will obviously be stepped up once the legislation succeeds.

It is not a lengthy Bill and I would not expect the process required to achieve assent to take long. It could even be assented to before the day is out. It certainly could be assented to tomorrow. At the same time, I do not think it is inherently wrong to say that this is the date that it comes into effect. People who made applications as of tomorrow would not be invalidated, because this Law has not been assented to yet.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I hear the concerns, but it seems a bit fine and technical to my ears.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Donovan W. F. Ebanks: My legal advisor over there on my right tells me that I can survive with it as it is, so there is nothing inherently wrong with it.

With those few remarks, I thank the Members for their support. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the Immigration (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2003 be given a second reading.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Immigration (Amendment) (No. 2) Bill 2003 given a second reading.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider the Bill.

House in Committee at 12.53 pm

COMMITTEE ON BILL

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House, may I assume that, as usual, we should authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to correct minor errors and such the like in this Bill? Would the Clerk please state the Bill and read the clauses?

The Immigration (Amendment) (No.2) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Before I move the adjournment of this Honourable House, I would take this opportunity to inform Members that it is proposed to hold a meeting of the Finance Committee on Monday 15 December 2003. The matters to be dealt with are expected to be circulated to Members today. It is proposed that at 9.00 am on Monday morning, the Finance Committee would meet. The House would resume thereafter, to deal with the Immigration Bill, 2003.

Having given notice of that, Mr. Speaker, I would like to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until on Monday 15 December 2003 at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is—

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, before you put the question, may I also say that, as it is expected that the Immigration Bill, 2003 will take some debate, we will work late on Monday 15 December, and onward, for the rest of the days of the week. It has been suggested that we work until at least 8.30 pm.

[Pause]

Hon. Gilbert A. McLean: Mr. Speaker, having taken some advice, I would like to move that the House be adjourned and resume after the Finance Committee has completed its business on Monday 15 December 2003.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until the Finance Committee has concluded its business on Monday 15 December 2003.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 12.59 pm the House stood adjourned until Monday, 15 December 2003, following conclusion of the Standing Finance Committee.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
MONDAY
15 DECEMBER 2003
2.47 PM
Fourteenth Sitting

The Speaker: I invite the Honourable Minister of Tourism, Environment, Development and Commerce, the Leader of Government Business, to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Proceedings resumed at 2.51 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

No.98: What is the total amount of Stamp Duty waived by Government in relation to land transfers from 1st November 2001, to present, giving details by calendar year.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, the Second Elected Member for George Town is outside of the premises and is not available right now; therefore, I would ask that those two questions be deferred to a later sitting in this Meeting.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder to the Motion?

Mr. Anthony S. Eden: I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: It has been moved and seconded that Questions No.97 and No.98 be deferred to a later sitting during this meeting.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Questions No. 97 and No. 98 deferred.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MINISTERS/MEMBERS
OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have received no statements from any of the Honourable Ministers or Members of Cabinet.

Suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move the suspension of Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) in order to have the two Bills on the Order Paper taken.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) be suspended.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Orders 45 and 46(1) and (2) suspended.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

The Monetary Authority (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Bill has been deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

Suspension of Standing Orders 46(4)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move for the suspension of Standing Order 46(4) in order to take the Second Readings of the Bills on the Order Paper

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Orders 46(4) be suspended.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 46(4) suspended.

SECOND READINGS

The Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risks) (Amendment) Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, there are one or two aspects of the Bill that we need to clarify. Therefore, I am going to ask that at this time, we move this item further down the Order Paper. Perhaps we will get to it, or perhaps we may not get to it until later in the year.

The Speaker: The question is that the Second Reading of The Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risks) (Amendment) Bill 2003 be deferred until a later sitting of this Meeting.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risks) (Amendment) Bill 2003 deferred until a later sitting.

The Immigration Bill 2003

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I rise to debate The Immigration Bill 2003—a Bill for a Law to repeal The Immigration Law (2003 Revision); The Immigration (Amendment) Law 2003; The Immigration Regulations (2003 Revision); The Immigration Directions (2001 Revision); The Immigration (Business Staffing Plan) Regulations (2000 Revision); and The Immigration Appeal (Asylum) Rules 2003; to Make Alternative Provisions for Matters Pertaining to Immigration; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly moved. Does the Mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Bill was originally laid before this Honourable House by me on 25 September 2003. Following a ten-week period of public consultation, it is back before this Honourable House, in its amended form, for our debate and approval.

Before I move into the merits of the Bill, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank members of the Immigration Review Team for their efforts. More specifically, and especially, I want to place on record my sincere appreciation—and, of course, that of the Government—for the sterling work done by Mrs. Sherrie Bodden-Cowan, the Chairman of the Reform Committee. From the beginning, the work to get this Bill to the House today has taken up a vast majority of her time. In fact, she has been consumed by the work to get this country a new way to handle immigration. We certainly owe her a debt of gratitude for all this work, which she is not being paid to do. She has laboured simply out of love of country, and care and concern for the future direction of these Islands. I would also like to place on record our thanks to the legal people in the Drafting Department, who have worked with her over this long period of time.

As I read earlier, this new Bill proposes to repeal and replace the current Immigration Law (2003 Revision). It will revolutionise our immigration policy and provide a blueprint for the future of these Islands, and our people.

This very important piece of legislation comes at a time when the issue of immigration has become a major area of focus, and a source of some concern in developing countries as well as in those developed countries in Europe, North America, and Australia.

Elections in Europe are often fought with the candidates' stand on the issue of immigration taking centre stage. Assassinations have taken place, and incumbent governments have been ousted. Concerns over losing control of our borders are being expressed by even the most liberal of politicians.

The issue of immigration is an emotive one, Mr. Speaker. It is not an easy subject, or one for which there are easy answers. It is often a case of balancing the need to protect your current citizens (and your country) from being overrun by newcomers, wanting to settle, with the need to ensure that you continue to attract quality labour sufficient to grow and maintain your country's economy. In many countries, the indigenous population is not growing fast enough to fulfil the country's labour needs. That, Sir, is true of our Islands.

Over the past 30 years, with the help of the Almighty, our Islands have grown and prospered beyond the imagination of our forefathers. We have a highly reputable financial community envied by the world — even by those who call us their "partners in prosperity". We have a thriving tourism industry. Our God-given beauty has guaranteed the attraction of world-wide attention from those who dream of visiting our shores.

Therefore, it is not surprising that our population has grown, from just over 10,000 people in 1970, to about 41,000 persons by the year 1999. The number of persons on the Islands who are not Caymanians increased, between 1989 and 1999, from 8,387 to 18,529. Our current work permit force ranges between 14,000 and 16,000 people per annum.

Past governments have tried and failed to resolve this issue. Other governments chose to ignore it. However, Mr. Speaker, as the elected Government of these fair Islands, it behoves us to find an answer, a solution that will work for these small Islands in the middle of the Caribbean. We cannot ignore it, for it will not go away; it is growing every day.

Like others before us, we made promises to our electorate that we would tackle this problem. Unlike the others before us, we will not allow this issue to defeat us. We will make good on our promises. We have produced, for debate in this House, a Bill that will create a new immigration policy of growth management, together with a comprehensive system of progressive rights that will be fair, both to our own people and to those from other countries who work and live amongst us.

On to the Bill.

PART III - ADMINISTRATION

It is a known fact that no matter how hard we legislators work to ensure the success of any policy, the legislation so passed will only be as good as the administrative bodies set up to deal with it. In the past, the Department of Immigration and the Chief Immigration Officer have been responsible for everything from the security of our borders through controlling immigration at our ports of entry, from refugees, to asylum seekers, to the granting of work permits and the granting of trade and business licences. These tasks have often been accomplished with inadequate staff, and with financial restrictions on overtime and salaries.

Immigration is, and always will be, one of the most important departments in government. They are the first people who meet our visitors; they are our protectors against illegal entry into our country; and they organise and operate the entire work-permit system—which, as I said earlier, presently comprises 14,000 to 16,000 work permit holders. We must ensure that under the new Law, this department is properly staffed, and that the duties of the Chief Immigration Officer, and those responsible for the operation of the boards, are carried out.

We have proposed a new structure of boards to deal with the very large volume of work permits, business plans and applications for the grant of permanent residency and status that is expected under the new Law. These boards will be comprised, as before, of a voluntary chairman and members who are willing to give up their free time to assist this country in its Immigration Policy. They will also count, amongst their members, representatives from the Chief Immigration Officer, the Secretariat, the Department of Employment Relations, and the Education Department.

The Work Permit Board will replace the present Immigration Board. This Board will be responsible for dealing with all work permits not issued under business staffing plans. We have decided to keep the usual structure, where members are appointed from the various districts, since persons from each district should know the needs of that district better than anyone else.

As more business staffing plans become approved, this Board will be able to concentrate on the needs of the individual employers, such as those employing domestics and gardeners, and small Caymanian businesses needing one or two work permits, who are usually lost in the present race to get to the Immigration Board for even one work permit application. A separate board will deal with business staffing plans. This Board will draw its members from the private sector.

We believe that Government should have a very close working relationship with the private sector. We should tap their wealth of knowledge and experience whenever possible. Government therefore proposes that six persons, representing a wide cross-section of businesses, be appointed. These people will be in a better position to decide the needs of the large to medium-sized businesses on the Island. They are likely to know whether a certain plan portrays the genuine needs of the business, or whether it is some made-up requirement intended to dupe the Board into granting work permits for positions that any Caymanian could fill, but for which none were considered.

A third board will be created for the consideration of grants of permanent residence and the right to be Caymanian. Often, these more important applications get left on the shelf for months at a time, while the Board deals with the immediate need to feed the present demand for work permits.

Under the new Law, this simply cannot continue. In our modern day, we cannot continue under the present system; we have to modernise. The transition provisions alone will provide the possibility for thousands of persons to apply over the next three years for grants of permanent residency. Whether they are successful or not, a board must dedicate its time to processing such applications.

Under the present quota, we see a number of pictures in the newspaper. These applications, too, have to be processed in the New Year, and processed as quickly as possible.

By expanding the number of boards, we hope to take some pressure off the current members of the Immigration Board, who have carried this weight of work for far too long. It is hoped that persons in the private sector will be more willing to volunteer their time if they can be assured that this will be a weekly, or monthly job, and not an everyday job as it is under the present system. People do not realise the amount of time and work that goes on in this country at the Board level for immigration, or the amount of work that the Immigration Department itself has to carry out.

The Board makes a decision and deals with an application, and then all the other work must be left to the Immigration Department, which has done an excellent job, though at times we all complain.

With the privilege of membership, there will, however, be certain duties and responsibilities required of Members. Under this Bill, Members will not only be expected to declare any conflict of interest, but will be required to physically leave the room whilst the matter is being debated. This should ensure that complaints of undue or unfair influence are kept to a minimum. In addition, Members will be under a duty of confidentiality, which, if broken, will be an offence under the new Bill, making them liable to investigation by a constable of the Royal Cayman Islands Police and to prosecution if found guilty.

These boards will be dealing with highly confidential matters involving a person's private business as well as future plans for companies involved in the Business Staffing Plan scheme. Confidentiality is critical if members of the public are to have the confidence in the Boards to go to them with open and honest applications.

It is proposed that the three Boards will be overseen by an administrator, a civil servant who would co-ordinate their work, their secretariats, and the members who sit on them. This is a senior position for someone of the same rank as that of the Deputy Chief Immigration Officer. With it comes responsibilities such as will be legislated in the new Bill.

WORK PERMITS

Without a doubt, the unprecedented increase in immigrants settling here over the past 30 years has contributed greatly to Cayman's economic success and to certain social tensions, which are increasingly evident. It is fundamental that in the development of this new immigration legislation, a clear policy decision be taken by Government in relation to the continued growth of Cayman's permanent population base, and the development of the Islands generally.

The choice is stark: either we accept that Caymanians will continue to be a declining percentage of the country's permanent population, or we develop and implement a policy designed to significantly reduce the numbers of persons who are permitted to remain here for a sufficient length of time that they become entitled to claim security of tenure.

The Law provides for the grant of a work permit to any person (and their prospective employer) who has applied to the Board for the grant of a work permit. At present, there is no limit to the length of time that a person may be continuously employed on a work permit. This has led to the current situation where, when the United Democratic Party came into power, there were more than 6,500 persons present in the Islands who had been employed on work permits for very long periods—some in excess of 20 and 30 years, with no security of tenure.

An illegal moratorium on grants of Caymanian status on the grounds of residency or naturalisation had been put in place in 1991. Although it was lifted in November 1992, the incoming Government saw fit to re-impose it during their eight years of government. Nothing has been done over the last decade to resolve this issue or amend our outdated Immigration Laws in any significant way.

By and large, Caymanians feel increasingly overwhelmed and out of control of their country. Long-term residents have become disaffected and clamour for security of tenure, the right to become fully integrated into our society and the right to vote. Within this Immigration Bill, we have developed a comprehensive and integrated immigration framework, which establishes a graduated system of rights and creates timeframes for the making of applications for the grant of work permits, permanent residence, and Caymanian status. We have set benchmarks which identify the point at which a person will become eligible to apply for Permanent Residence, British Overseas Territory citizenship and ultimately the right to be Caymanian.

Recent experiences have led us to accept that in the future, the Cayman Islands will have to be more mindful of international views on human rights, particularly in relation to the rights of residency and citizenship for long-term residents, including work permit holders. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, we have had careful regard to these internationally recognised standards in crafting our new immigration policy and legislation.

Under this framework, persons who have been resident here for five years or less, or who have not yet arrived, will either become eligible for Permanent Residence and subsequently British Overseas Territories citizenship prior to ten years of continuous residence, or they will leave. It is not intended that these new timeframes will apply to existing work permit holders who have resided here for five years or more—that is, those people who are here presently. They will be dealt with separately, under the transition provisions, to which I will turn in a minute.

This accords with the European Convention on Nationality to which the United Kingdom became a party in 1997, and our own past immigration legislation, which provided for the possibility of applying for a grant of Caymanian status after ten years of residence.

The proposed new framework is as follows, and applies to persons coming into the Islands, not to existing residents who have been here, as I said, over five years:

- Between years 1-7: Work permits would be considered, and may be granted, by the Board on a three to five year basis for a maximum period of seven years.
- Between years 7-9: A final two-year work permit could be granted by the Board to employees identified under the Law as exempted employees, and in exceptional circumstances.

- At year 8: Work permit holders would become eligible to apply for a grant of permanent residence with the right to work in a particular occupation.
- At year 9: Permanent residents would become eligible to apply for naturalisation as British Overseas Territories citizens.
- Between years 14-15: Permanent residents who have become British Overseas Territories citizens would become eligible to make application for the grant of Caymanian status.

Adoption of Term Limits on Work Permits

We cannot continue to grow the permanent population of this country at its present pace by permitting all who come here to work to remain indefinitely—not in the way that we have been doing. Therefore, we have had no choice but to put in place a fixed-term policy that, in the medium to long term, will significantly reduce the number of work permit holders who will qualify for permanent residence and Caymanian status in the future.

We are fully aware that criticisms have been made of this proposed policy. It has been said that it will have a deterrent effect on high-calibre employees coming here to work. However, Mr. Speaker, we have also taken careful note of recommendations made by the Select Committee of the Legislative Assembly on Immigration between 1997 and 2000, the ideals set out by Vision 2008, and the recommendations made by the Immigration Review Team. Even the officials visiting us from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office of the United Kingdom have expressed the view that our current immigration dilemma stems from the lack of a policy regarding work permit term limits.

We are also aware that many other countries have adopted term limits, including Australia, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, Guernsey, Jersey and, of course, the United Kingdom itself. We have, therefore, concluded that such a policy could and should be adopted here in the Cayman Islands.

However, in the interests of Caymanian businesses and our key industries, we must strike the right balance between the need to limit the continued growth in the number of long-term residents and the need to attract and maintain a top-quality workforce. The policy that we have developed recognises the diversity of the economy and our reliance on international business as one of its principal components. At the same time, it does not discriminate against small businesses. The potentially negative perception of the term-limit policy can be mitigated by building into that policy a considerable degree of flexibility.

In this Bill, we have made provision for the designation of certain key personnel, who are key figures in a business, as exempted employees. This means, Mr. Speaker that such employees will be exempted from the normal fixed-term policy of seven years.

However, it does not mean that they are exempted from the work permit requirements, or that they are guaranteed to become long-term residents. Such persons must qualify and go through the same process as everyone else, applying for permanent residence once they reach year eight if they wish to remain after year nine. If they do not, they too will have to leave prior to the ten-year ceiling we have set. For an employee to be exempted from the normal fixed-term policy of seven years, his employer must demonstrate that one or more of the following is true:

(a) The employee is recognised as having particular expertise in his field of practice, trade or employment; or

(b) The employee is, or will be when he arrives on the Island, involved in training Caymanians and developing their skills in the field in which he is or will be employed or practises, and his expertise in this regard is important to the effective continuation of such training or development; or

(c) He is, or will be when he arrives, a professional employee whose expertise or skills are not available in adequate measure in the Islands, and it is of economic and social benefit to the business or to the Islands to attract such skills to the Islands; or

(d) His absence from the Islands will be detrimental or cause serious hardship to his employer, to Caymanians, or to the Islands; or

(e) The person has business contacts which are important to the continued success of the business or its contribution to the Islands; or

(f) There exists other economic or social benefit to the Islands by virtue of securing or retaining that person's specialist skills or expertise within the Islands; or

(g) The circumstances of his particular case are considered by the Board to be exceptional and to justify a special reason to employ him or to allow him to be designated as an exempted employee.

As can be seen, Mr. Speaker, this is very stringent criteria. It is intended to ensure that employers are held accountable, and that they cannot easily persuade a board to allow them to retain non-critical employees in the long term—that is, beyond the seven years. Such employees will be found at all levels and in all areas of our various businesses. They will not only be found among chief executive officers, bankers, attorneys, doctors and other professionals, but may be technical, administrative, service or managerial staff, depending on the needs of that particular employer.

It is up to the employer to make the case to the Board that a particular individual or post is crucial to that employer.

Establishment of Transitional Provisions

In looking at this whole issue, one of our main concerns (and that of the general public), was whether and to what extent the policy of term limits should be applied to existing work permit holders. Based on current figures, if all present work permit holders were exempted from the term-limit policy, over 13,000 persons would qualify to apply for permanent residence within the next seven years.

Obviously, the Cayman Islands would not absorb such a large number of permanent residents in such a short period of time without dire social consequences. Therefore, we have created specific transitional provisions based upon the length of time a person has been resident in the Islands on the day the Law comes into effect, and counting any unexpired period on such persons' work permits, to deal with persons who are already here.

In addition, we have seen fit, where we could find special cause, to grant Caymanian status to approximately 3,000 long-term residents and persons who have made outstanding contributions to the community. This has helped to deal with the problem, but there are still approximately 5,000 work permit holders who have been here for over eight years, who will have to be dealt with by the Immigration Board or by the transitional provisions in the Bill.

(a) Work permit holders who have been in the Islands for less than five years in aggregate on the date of commencement of the new Law will be fully subject to the provisions of the new Law. After the seventh year, they will become ineligible to apply for any more work permits unless they have been identified as exempted employees, or in the case of exceptional circumstances, as outlined in the new Law.

(b) For persons who have been in the Islands for more than five but less than six years, or more than six but less than seven years, the Board can, at its discretion, grant additional work permits for up to 36 and 24 months, respectively. For persons here for more than seven, but less than eight years, the Board can, at its discretion, grant work permits for up to 12 months. Again, Mr. Speaker, this allows persons in those categories to get through to year eight, and to apply for permanent residence. If they do not succeed, they will be given a final work permit of 12 months to allow them time to settle their personal affairs and to allow their employers to find replacements.

(c) Special attention has been paid to persons who have been in the Islands between eight and 15 years. This is a large group, which will already be eligible to apply for the right to permanently reside in the Islands under the new Bill. They are our most experienced employees, and concerns had been raised that if this group were forced to qualify for permanent residence within the first 12 months of the Law coming into effect, and assuming most of them did not, employers would be faced with the mass exodus of experienced employees within the next two years.

We understand their concerns; we hear them. Therefore, it is now proposed that at the discretion of the Board, all such persons would be given work permits for three years to allow them a longer period to qualify for grants of permanent residence. In the event that they do not qualify, they would have a final 12 months within which to settle their affairs and leave the Islands. This gives employers a four-year window in which to ensure that those workers qualify for permanent residence, or to replace them, and train their replacements.

However, Mr. Speaker, I would urge employers to take a good long look at their long-term employees and, when the point system is published in the regulations, to make a reasoned judgment as to which employees are likely to qualify and which are not. Do not leave it to the last year and then expect the Board to assist you, if you have not made proper plans and assisted yourselves.

(d) Persons who are within their 15th year, or more, as work permit holders in the Islands on the date of commencement of the new Law will, subject to a thorough test of good character and evidence of substantial contribution to the community, be granted permanent residence with the right to work. In the event that permanent residence is granted and the person becomes a British Overseas Territories citizen, such person will automatically be eligible to apply for a grant of Caymanian status based on the criteria to be set forth in the new Law.

Criteria for the Consideration and Grant of Work Permits

It is fundamental that the new Law sets criteria to ensure that no Caymanian who is able, willing and qualified is deprived, directly or indirectly, of gainful occupation. There must be a requirement that employers provide Caymanians with proper training and opportunities to be promoted to the highest levels possible, according to their abilities.

There needs to be greater clarity of this paramount consideration in the new Law, and comprehensive provisions must be made requiring that, prior to the grant or renewal of a work permit, it shall be the duty of the Board to satisfy itself of certain stringent criteria in relation to both the employer and the worker.

In relation to the employer, the board should satisfy itself that:

i. The prospective employer has a genuine need to employ the person in a full-time position. So often, Mr. Speaker, we hear of permits being held by people who have no work for the person, and no genuine need to employ that person. This leads to the worker working illegally; it is an abuse of the system and the cause of more people being on this Island who cannot afford to support themselves, and whose presence is not a necessity.

ii. They should also have to prove that there is no person of Caymanian status within the Cayman Islands who is ready, willing and able to undertake the job in question, and that the prospective employer has taken all necessary measures, including advertising internally and externally, to ascertain this fact.

iii. They must also show that there is no Caymanian in the employment of the applicant suitable or capable of filling the position.

iv. The prospective employer has established an adequate training or scholarship programme, as well as comprehensive succession planning to ensure that a Caymanian is being trained to fill this position.

All too often, we see employers merely paying lip-service to these requirements. We see adverts appearing in the newspaper of these Islands that are custom-made for the expatriate they have already hired.

Employers must now be held accountable. They must be told that it is no longer acceptable to fob off Caymanians, and the Board, with empty promises. They must step up to the plate and show what they are doing to train Caymanians. They cannot expect to receive any help or assistance from this Government, or from the boards we appoint, unless they are committed to hiring and training our people. This Law will ensure, through these provisions, that the upward mobility of Caymanians is not simply talked about, as it has been for years, but becomes a reality.

Concern has been expressed that the recent grants of status will be to the disadvantage of Caymanians. These provisions ensure that, for the future, Caymanian children will not be left behind. As parents, guardians and elected trustees of this generation, all we have to do is ensure that our children are raised in an environment where they are educated and encouraged, to allow them to take their rightful place in their community, if they work hard at it.

In relation to the worker, the Board should satisfy itself of the worker's character, health, and professional or technical qualifications, and have evidence of his experience and expertise to undertake the position applied for. They should also be satisfied that the worker is receiving sufficient wages to support himself and his dependants, that he is being properly accommodated, and that his presence will bring eco-conomic and social benefit to the Cayman Islands. The worker should also have a basic knowledge of the English language.

Generally, Mr. Speaker, the Board should also consider the requirements of the community as a whole on such other matters as may arise from the application.

I will now go through some of the other highlights of the new work permit system.

The Admission of Dependants

Work permit holders will have to satisfy the Board that their resources and proposed salary are sufficient to maintain their dependants. In contrast to the current directives, the Board will no longer distinguish between professional, skilled and unskilled workers, as it is unacceptable to discriminate against persons based solely on their chosen professions. In the event that applicants cannot satisfy the Board that they have the resources to comfortably maintain their dependants, the application for the grant of a work permit will be refused. That means that persons with large numbers of dependants or children who propose to come to the Islands to fill unskilled domestic positions, or other skilled positions, will be unlikely to qualify for grants of work permits in the first place.

It is a basic premise of any human rights legislation that the separation of families is unacceptable. Therefore, applicants will no longer be given the choice of leaving their dependent children behind. That is why Caymanians and others applying for work permits must carefully consider the whole package when they select new employees. In the first instance, they must find out how many dependants an applicant has. It is our duty, as representatives here in this House, to say to our people, when they come talking about permits, "Have you considered the full ramifications? Do you really need this person? If you want my assistance, you need to satisfy the criteria of the Law first of all".

We do know that we can get pressured from our constituents in regard to work permits. Although everyone in Cayman talks about the number of people we have here, everybody wants somebody. Everyone wants to have his or her own, and some people have two. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, this new Law is going to lay down the rules, so that without any question, they will have to apply themselves to the criteria outlined in the Law.

Change of Employment, Occupation, Promotion or Re-designation

Whereas it is not the Government's intention to restrict the movement of labour unnecessarily, or to create a system of indentured work permit holders, it must be acknowledged that employers often go to great expense recruiting and then training new employees. This will become even more so, with the fixed-term system. Therefore, it would be unfair to employers to permit such workers to change employers during the term of the work permit, unless there were special circumstances so to do. Therefore, changes of employment during the term of a work permit will only be permitted if:

- a) the position has become redundant;
- b) the position has been filled by a Caymanian;
- c) the employer has changed due to corporate action (for example, a buy-out, take-over, merger, amalgamation, etc.);
- d) the worker has been victimised by his employer, or by other employees of that employer; or
- e) the worker has been given consent in writing by his present employer, who has no objection to the change of employment.

Once a worker has completed the term of his work permit, he will be free to change employment without the consent of his former employer, within the seven-year timeframe provided for the consideration and grant of work permits.

No employer will be permitted to promote, re-designate or change the occupation of the worker, as described in the work permit, without application to and the prior approval of the Board for any promotion, re-designation or change. Consideration should be given by the Board to such application only after it has satisfied the criteria.

Temporary Work Permits and Business Visitors' Visas

Under the new Law, Mr. Speaker, temporary work permits can be granted by the Chief Immigration Officer for periods of up to six months. This is intended to facilitate short-term workers, who are genuinely coming to the Islands for specific projects, or seasonal workers. As a result, it will no longer be necessary for the Immigration Board to consider short-term, six-month work permits.

In addition, for business visitors who visit the Islands regularly for periods of up to fourteen days at a time, Business Visitors' Visas will be available on an annual basis. This will ensure that visitors such as regional managers, internal auditors and medical specialists are free to come to the Islands on a regular basis, to perform their duties with the least amount of red-tape necessary.

These are in addition to those persons holding or eligible for Cay Passes.

Business Staffing Plans

A new and improved Business Staffing Plan system will ensure that employers are training Caymanians and putting in place proper succession planning for the medium to long-term future.

Within twelve months of the new Law coming into effect, any company, partnership or firm of over 15 work permit holders must submit a plan to the Board containing certain information listed in the regulations. Upon receipt of a business plan, the new Business Staffing Plan Board will consider each plan, with any agreed amendments, and issue a Business Staffing Plan certificate. The Business Staffing Plan certificate will permit that business to submit work permit applications during the term of the business plan in respect of the posts listed, and for the lengths of time stated in the business plan. It will allow employers to identify up front the key positions, and will ensure that work permit holders filling such key positions are designated as exempted employees—meaning that they will be exempted from the fixed-term policy of seven years. I think this is a better system for dealing with work permits for large to medium-sized businesses.

Currently, 25 of our key companies on the Island are operating under the Business Staffing Plan system. This relatively small group, accounting for approximately two thousand of the work permits presently under issue, has reported satisfaction with the new system, although, like any new system, it can always be improved.

Provisions Relating to the Grant of Work Permits to Specific Professions

Work permits for professional employees will be subject to specific restrictions relating to employment in the private sector. The Attorney General, and in the case of health practitioners, the Health Practitioners Board, is to be consulted and advised in relation to such application.

Professional employees are defined as persons qualified as lawyers, teachers, accountants, medical professionals, architects or surveyors, or in any other occupation recognised by the Board as a profession.

No professional should be granted a work permit as a self-employed person, save in exceptional circumstances.

No professional in any company, firm or partnership operating within the Islands should be made a shareholder or partner, whether an equity partner or not, until an application for a change of occupation has been made to the Board, and the Board has approved such change.

In considering such an application, all employers must be able to satisfy the Board that they have established adequate training and sponsorship programmes to ensure that Caymanians are being trained in that profession. The Board must also have regard for the effect such a change of occupation would have on the opportunity for advancement, to partner level, of qualifying Caymanians already engaged in the same profession within that company, firm or partnership.

This will guarantee that our young professional Caymanians, particularly in law firms, accounting firms and so on, do not get left behind, or lost in those firms. Under this Law, they will have to be considered for partnerships as a matter of priority. That is why we say that this Law protects the advancements of Caymanians, and, in fact, gives new opportunity for advancement to Caymanians.

Concluding my comments on the new and improved work permit system, I am confident that our appointed boards will now have the ammunition they need to protect the interests of our younger generation, and, at the same time, to ensure that businesses are encouraged to grow and flourish within our Islands.

INTRODUCTION TO PERMANENT RESIDENCE AND RESIDENCE

We, as a country, must carefully consider the type of persons we would choose to keep as long-term, permanent residents. For our population to grow and diversify, we need all types of persons, from all kinds of backgrounds. At the same time, we must ensure that these people are fully integrated into our society: that they have assumed our culture, instead of us assuming theirs.

The conferment of the right to permanently reside in the Cayman Islands upon any category of non-Caymanians is an important right, guaranteeing the holder and his dependants the ability to permanently establish themselves within the Islands. The present provisions in the Law relating to the right to permanently reside were originally enacted to encourage wealthy retirees to settle in the Islands after having made a substantial investment in a local business or property.

In the early 1990s, Executive Council directives adopted provisions to offer security of tenure to long-term residents intending to continue in gainful occupation. The only requirement of the Law is that a person be resident in the Islands for a period of six months prior to applying for permission to permanently reside in the Islands. This includes the Islands' many work permit holders, as well as persons with close Caymanian connections. The present Law lacks the comprehensive criteria that should be used by any Board prior to determining whether it would be in the interests of the community to grant the right to permanently reside in the Islands to any particular work permit holder.

The new Bill, and the regulations that follow it, will have comprehensive criteria for the grant of permanent residence. It has been carefully structured to ensure that all successful candidates, and their dependants, are expatriate residents we are willing to embrace as long-term members of our community and, ultimately, as Caymanians. Although wealthy retirees, investors, entrepreneurs and, in particular, the spouses of Caymanians will also be eligible to apply for certain rights of residence within the Islands, only long-term residents will be eligible to apply for the right to permanently reside in the Islands with immigration restrictions or control.

Right to Reside Permanently For Long-Term Residents

1. Time frame

Any person legally and habitually resident within the Cayman Islands for a period of eight years would be eligible to apply, for himself and his dependants, for a grant of the right to permanently reside. This recommendation is based on the term limit policy, as explained earlier. Following the implementation of the transition provisions, the only residents falling into this category who will be eligible to apply for a grant of permanent residence will be those able to justify the continuation of their residency past the normal term limit of seven years for all work permit holders and their dependants.

2. Criteria

The criteria for the granting or refusal of such an application has been created with regard to the following:

- (a) the skills, qualifications, finances, character, health, etc. of the applicant;
- (b) the needs of the Cayman Islands at any point in time to attract persons with those characteristics to live and remain in the Islands as part of our nation and community; and
- (c) the applicant's unwavering commitment and contribution to the Islands, his knowledge of the Islands and the people, and his ability to become part of the local community.

Future grants of permanent residence will be based on a point system similar to those already in place in Canada, Australia and New Zealand and recently adopted, to some extent, by the United Kingdom for entrepreneurs. Such a system would award points in the three categories mentioned above. This system will be set out as a schedule to the regulations in the new Law and not in the new Law itself, allowing more flexibility in the event that the country's needs change over the years.

3. Right to Work

All persons who receive grants of permanent residence will be given employment rights certificates. This will entitle the permanent resident to work with any employer, but should, in our view, remain restricted to a particular occupation, subject to any change approved by the Board. An important part of the criteria upon which permanent residence will be granted will be the skills, education, qualifications and expertise of the applicant. Therefore, it is in the best interests of the community that successful applicants continue to utilise the very skills sought by our Island, after they receive permanent residence.

4. Spouses of Permanent Residents

Spouses of permanent residents can also apply for the right to reside and work in a particular profession within the Cayman Islands, but in the case of that spouse, the right to permanently reside (and any employment rights certificate) would be lost if there is a dissolution of the marriage.

5. Children of Permanent Residents

Once they have reached the age of 18 years, children of permanent residents will, in most circumstances, be granted the right to reside permanently with the right to work. It is only fair that children who have grown up here would be offered the same privilege as their parents. It also prevents any hardship arising from the division of families. Such grant would be made only on proof that the applicant is of good character and conduct. It will be restricted to those children who have resided in the Cayman Islands for at least seven years prior to their application, save for time such persons, who clearly intend to continue to reside in the Islands, have spent abroad in full-time education. Children who reach the age of 18 but are enrolled in full-time tertiary education should, at the Board's discretion, be permitted to remain as their parents' dependants until they complete their full-time tertiary education or reach the age of 24, whichever is earlier. At this time, they will have the same rights outlined in the previous paragraph for 18 year olds, save that the qualifying period of residence should be seven years plus a year for every year past the age of 18 that the applicant spends in full-time tertiary education.

6. Loss of Permanent Residence

If the holder is ordinarily resident outside the Islands for more than 90 days in any 365 day period, he may, at the discretion of the Board, lose his right to permanently reside here. Under the British Nationality Act, 1981, any person outside the territory for more than 90 days in any one year, or more than 450 days in the last five years, would not be eligible to apply for a grant of naturalisation. It is our opinion that, since the whole purpose of granting a right to permanently reside is for people who genuinely want to be a part of the community, the same time period required by the British Nationality Act should apply to our permanent residents. Absences that are the result of involvement in full-time education programs, health reasons or international business will not be taken into consideration.

Residence and Employment Rights Certificates (RERCs)

1. Spouses of Caymanians

Under the current Law, spouses of persons of Caymanian status have no legal right to reside and work in the Cayman Islands. Under the new Law, spouses may be issued with residency and employment rights certificates (RERCs) without restrictions, for a period of seven years, providing they are married to a Caymanian, are of good character and have taken up residence in the Cayman Islands. All applicants, Mr. Speaker, should be subject to a test of good character, and should satisfy the Board that the marriage is genuine and intact, and not entered into for the purposes of settlement in the Islands or to gain an immigration advantage under the law. Marriages of convenience will not be tolerated, and the Board will be entitled to investigate the way the marriage came about. A spouse will lose his or her certificate in the following circumstances:

- a) upon the dissolution or annulment of the marriage, unless the holder has been married to a Caymanian spouse for 10 years or more;
- b) upon the spouse ceasing to possess Caymanian status;
- c) upon the spouse or the holder ceasing to be ordinarily resident in the Islands;
- d) when the holder has commenced living apart from the spouse under the decree of a competent court or under a deed of separation; or
- e) when the holder is living apart from the spouse under circumstances where, in the opinion of the Board, the marriage has irretrievably broken down.

In the event that the spouse is also the parent of a Caymanian child, application could be made for a continuation of the certificate until the child has achieved the age of 18 years. If the child is enrolled in tertiary education, the parent may apply for a continuation of that certificate until the child has completed tertiary education or reached the age of 24 years, whichever is earlier.

This should ensure that if a non-Caymanian spouse is involved in an abusive relationship they would not be forced to remain in that marriage for the sake of a Caymanian child.

2. Dependants of Spouses of Caymanians

Dependants of spouses of Caymanians, who are under the age of 18 years and who have been declared on the initial application, will be permitted to accompany the spouse and to reside in the Islands, provided that the Board is satisfied that the spouse can maintain these dependants in order to ensure that they do not become a charge on the Government.

They will not, however, become Caymanian as the result of being the step-child of a Caymanian. As you will see in my earlier comments on the automatic rights to Caymanian status, only biological or adopted children of Caymanians will have that right. Should the spouse of a Caymanian move on to acquire status, the children will acquire rights at the same time as their natural parent.

Once they have reached the age of 18 years, the dependants of spouses of Caymanians should, in most circumstances, be granted the right to permanently reside with the right to work, provided that the spouse still possesses a certificate, or has become a Caymanian. This offers the children the same privilege as their parents, and prevents any hardship arising from the division of families. Such grants should be made only after the proof has been provided that the applicant is of good character and conduct, and should be restricted to those children who have remained resident in the Cayman Islands for at least seven years prior to their application, save for periods spent abroad in full-time education.

In the event that the dependants reach the age of 18, but are enrolled in full-time education, they may be permitted, at the Board's discretion, to remain as dependants on the spouse's certificate until they have completed full-time tertiary education or reached the age of 24 years, whichever is earlier. At that time, the dependant should have the same rights as those outlined for the 18-year-olds, save that the qualifying period of residence should be seven years, plus a year for every year past the age of 18 spent in full-time tertiary education.

Mr. Speaker, the provisions will ensure a fairer process for persons married to Caymanians, who will no longer need to be part of the regular work permit system. At the same time, it ensures that any dependants a spouse brings with him or her are tied to that spouse, and cannot automatically gain Caymanian status simply because their parent becomes married to a Caymanian. It changes the whole regime.

Residential Certificates for Wealthy Retirees (RCRs)

One of this Government's goals is to attract to the Islands wealthy retirees who wish to reside in the Islands for the purpose of retirement. It is in the best interests of the economic and social future of the Islands to allow such persons to invest here and to spend part of their year here in the Islands. Mr. Speaker, under the new Law, such persons will be offered a track system, which will entitle them to receive a 25-year certificate from the Chief Immigration Officer, which can be renewed at the end of that time.

In most circumstances, such persons will be over the age of 55 years and of independent means, although the Board will have the discretion to grant it to younger applications. This form of residence will not allow a person the right to work, and will not be issued to any applicant who has dependent children who are younger than 16 years of age. This restriction is intended to ensure that these individuals do not have dependants who also want to reside in the Cayman Islands.

Applicants can only qualify as persons of independent means if they satisfy the Board that they have made a substantial investment in a development in the Islands, or in other local businesses. They must also provide satisfactory evidence of access to a continuous source of income that is available to them without restriction, and without the need to engage in employment in the Islands.

1. Dependants of Wealthy Retirees

Spouses and dependent children over the age of 16 years who are at college, university or some other tertiary educational establishment should be entitled to reside in the Cayman Islands on a Residential Holder's (Dependant's) Certificate. Upon the death of the certificate holder or upon the dissolution of the marriage, a spouse's right to reside should cease, unless he or she applies to the Board for his or her own certificate. In the event that a spouse qualifies in his or her own right for a certificate, application could be made upon surrender of the Residential Holder's (Dependant's) Certificate for a grant of a certificate in his or her own right, subject to the application satisfying the criteria outlined above.

The right of a dependent child to reside in the Cayman Islands with a parent who holds a certificate should cease upon that dependant completing his or her tertiary education or attaining the age of 24 years, whichever is earlier.

2. Loss

A wealthy retiree may, at the discretion of the Board, lose a certificate if any of the following reasons exist:

- a) in the event that the holder's investment within the Islands falls below the minimum requirement of investment as provided in the regulations;
- b) in the event that the holder's continuous source of income falls below the minimum required sum; or
- c) if the holder is not ordinarily resident in the Islands for a period of more than 90 days in any 365-day period, save for educational purposes, health reasons, or international business.

We might look at that in the Committee stage, with a view to cutting it down. Some people have talked to us, feeling that 90 days may be too long. However, this is something I will take advice on before we get to Committee stage.

Residential Certificates for Entrepreneurs and Investors

Additional special provisions have been introduced in this new Bill to attract eligible wealthy investors and entrepreneurs, who can make a significant contribution to the economy, or the cultural or artistic life of the Cayman Islands.

Any person who has a proven track record in business, who has a substantial personal net worth, who has invested substantial funds in a business or development licensed in the Cayman Islands, and who will create employment opportunities for a minimum number of Caymanians will be invited to apply to the Chief Immigration Officer for a 25-year certificate, which will entitle him or her, and his or her spouse, to work in their business investment. This certificate can be renewed thereafter.

1. Dependants

In this category, spouses and dependent children will be entitled to reside in the Cayman Islands with the certificate holders on a Residential Holder's (Dependant's) Certificate. Upon the death of the certificate holder or upon the dissolution of the marriage, a dependant's right to reside should cease. In the event that a spouse qualifies in his or her own right for a certificate, application could be made upon surrender of the Residential Holder's (Dependant's) Certificate for the grant of a certificate in his or her own right, subject to the application satisfying the criteria outlined above.

The right of a dependent child to reside in the Cayman Islands in this category, with a parent who holds a certificate, should cease upon that dependant reaching the age 18 years. Those dependants who reach the age of 18 but are enrolled in full-time tertiary education may continue as dependants on their parent's certificate until they complete full-time tertiary education or reach the age of 24 years, whichever is earlier. Upon loss of this right, the dependant can either apply in his or her own right for a certificate, or apply under the point system for permanent residency with the right to work, if he or she has been resident in the Islands for eight consecutive years prior to the application.

2. Loss

How would they lose that certificate, or that right?

a) Their investment in a business or in the Islands falls below the investment required in the new directives, or they lose of the licence to own and operate the business. (Evidence of the investment should be provided each year in the form of a financial statement).

b) The applicant does not reside in the Islands for a period of 90 days in any 365-day period, save for educational purposes, health reasons, or international business.

This residency requirement has also been the subject of much debate. Under the current Law, a permanent resident need only visit the Island once a year, for a day. Originally, it had been proposed that they be required to spend 180 days here, since they would have to be outside most countries for 183 days in order to receive any tax benefits. It would be in the best interests of the Islands for them to spend that time here. They would shop in our supermarkets; dine in our restaurants; rent a car, perhaps; hire cleaning services and so on. This would be all good for our economy. However, it was pointed out by certain associations that most wealthy persons have several addresses worldwide, and that such a stringent residency requirement may discourage such people from applying.

The Government has therefore proposed to reduce the period to 30 days at Committee stage. This will ensure that such persons spend some time here, that the residency is not used merely for convenience, and that they at least spend a month in every year here. At the same time, it will give such people the flexibility they need to travel internationally. It is intended that this same amendment will be made for the Wealthy Retirees category, as I said earlier.

General Provisions for Loss of Caymanian Residence

In addition to the provisions for the loss of each type of residence, as already explained, residence of any type will be lost in the following circumstances:

a) if the holder organises or engages in subversive political activity, or organises, causes or promotes racialism within the Islands;

b) upon proof that any information applied in the original application was false and concealed any material fact;

c) if the holder has been convicted of any offence under the Immigration Law;

d) if the holder has been convicted of an offence under any other Law;

e) if a deportation order is made in respect of him, or the holder has been previously deported, removed or repatriated from the Islands; or another law within the Cayman Islands, in respect of which a term of imprisonment in excess of 12 months could be imposed, the time for lodging an appeal has elapsed and no appeal is pending;

f) if the holder is repeatedly convicted of lesser offences to those referred to immediately above this recommendation so that, in total, he is sentenced to imprisonment for a period exceeding 12 months;

g) the holder has been convicted of an offence under the laws of another country, and the Board is of a view that as a result of that conviction, the holder's continued presence in the Islands would be contrary and not conducive to the public interests;

h) if the holder becomes a destitute person;

i) if the holder is mentally disordered or mentally defective as defined in the Mental Health Law (1997 Revision);

j) the holder is certified by any medical practitioner to be suffering from a communicable disease that makes his entry in the Islands dangerous to the community;

k) the holder is responsibly believed-

i. to be a prostitute and to have come to the Islands for the purposes of prostitution; or

ii. to be living on, or receiving; or

iii. to have lived receiving the proceeds of prostitution; or

l) the holder is deemed by the Governor to be an undesirable inhabitant of the Islands.

THE RIGHT TO BE CAYMANIAN

The possession, acquisition or conferment of the right to be Caymanian to any person born or resident within the Cayman Islands entitles that person to an unfettered right to reside, to work, and to participate in the economic life of the Islands. Subject to provisions of other laws, the conferment of the right to be Caymanian also gives the person the opportunity to participate in the political life of the country. There is no distinction in the present Law between a Caymanian as of right and a Caymanian by grant. As a result, all persons falling under the above-mentioned categories are called Caymanian status holders.

Prior to debating the provisions in the Bill for the right to be Caymanian, I would like to pause for a minute to clarify the confusion that has arisen in the community over the difference between being Caymanian and having a Caymanian passport—that is, being a naturalised citizen.

1. Granting of Citizenship

As a result of our somewhat unique position as an overseas territory of the United Kingdom, a person's legal rights as a person of Caymanian status are separate and independent of his right to apply for, or possess, citizenship. In reality, we have no means of controlling who is granted British or British Overseas Territories citizenship as a result of his or her connection with the Cayman Islands. The conferment of such citizenship is dictated by The British Nationality Act, 1981, as amended from time to time in the United Kingdom. The current criteria for the grant of British Overseas Territories citizenship are as follows:

- a) the applicant must be resident within the territory for five years;
- b) the applicant is settled within the territory for a period of 12 months, save for spouses of British Overseas Territories citizens (BOTCs). That is, the applicant is within the territory without any restriction on his right to remain within the territory;
- c) the applicant is of good character;
- d) the applicant has physically resided in the territory for 260 of the last 365 days prior to application;
- e) the applicant is a minor and is born to parents who qualify as above; and
- f) the applicant is a minor who is born within the Cayman Islands.

These criteria ensure that most other nationals ordinarily resident and settled within our territory will qualify for a grant of citizenship within the Cayman Islands after five years. This does not include work permit holders, due to the legal requirement that a person must be settled (as opposed to habitually resident) in the territory in order to be eligible. Persons who are permanently resident, or who possess Caymanian status, are considered settled in the territory and are, therefore, eligible to apply for a grant of British Overseas Territories citizenship.

As a result of the differences between the criteria to become a British Overseas Territories citizen of the Cayman Islands under the British Nationality Act, 1981, and the criteria to apply for the grant of Caymanian status under The Immigration Law (2003 Revision), there are a large number of persons within the Cayman Islands who hold citizenship but not Caymanian status, or vice versa. Now, we have rectified some of that.

The concept of being Caymanian has become fractured over the past years of growth and immigration to the Islands, and is increasingly difficult to define. Descendants of "original settlers"—that is, persons who can trace their ancestry back several generations—consider themselves "true" Caymanians, and are increasingly concerned by the threat that they may be outnumbered by the immigrants, who have continued to arrive in the Islands in large numbers since the early 1970's.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(2)

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we have now reached the hour of 4:30 pm. I have received notice that it is the wish of Members that the business of the House should continue beyond 4:30 pm. Accordingly, I would ask the Leader of Government Business to move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2), and would mention also that I do propose to take the afternoon break of 15 minutes after the suspension.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order to conduct business after 4:30 pm. I would think that Members would want to work later into the evening. I understand that that is what was agreed, in order to try to finish up some of the work. Christmas is drawing near and we do not have many days left in the year. We had proposed to work late tonight and, in fact, to come back tomorrow after Cabinet, by 2:30 pm. I think we had said that we would work until 8:30 pm tonight, and I think we need to work, to complete some of this business, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended so that the House may continue proceedings until 8:30 pm this evening.

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to allow proceedings to continue until 8.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 4.31 pm

Proceedings resumed at 5.06 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Leader of Government Business is continuing, with 33 minutes remaining.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

In November 2001, when the United Democratic Party came into office, there were over 6,000 persons living in the Islands who were not Caymanian, but who had resided here for 10 years or more, and over 300 persons who had resided here for over 30 years. These long-term residents, who have settled or resided in the Islands with a fixed intention of remaining here, are concerned with the lack of security of tenure offered by the current Immigration Law (2003 Revision), and many were planning to leave, or to settle elsewhere. In addition, international law, specifically in the realm of human rights, requires jurisdictions to accept certain immigration standards in their treatment of nationals and residents. In particular, as previously outlined, the European Convention on Nationality, 1997 provides that third parties resident in this jurisdiction be given an opportunity for citizenship once they have resided here for 10 years or more.

It was the Government's view that a compromise between these two interest groups was necessary, and provisions had to be made to ensure that those with close ties to the Cayman Islands, whether by birth, descent, or residence, were afforded the right to be or to apply to be Caymanian. In addition, to ensure that there was greater integration generally between all Caymanians, we have decided to abolish the term "Caymanian status" and that instead, persons would be called "Caymanians" if they fall into one of the following categories:

a) persons who possessed Caymanian status under any earlier law;

b) persons who, at the time of their birth, are Caymanian as of right, hereinafter referred to as "Caymanians as of right";

c) persons who have become Caymanian by grant of the Immigration Board, hereinafter referred to as "Caymanian by grant of the Board";

d) persons who, after the date of their birth, became Caymanian by automatic acquisition, hereinafter referred to as "Caymanian by automatic acquisition".

A. Born Caymanians as of Right

1. Definition in Current Law

The present Law provides for persons born in or outside the Islands to persons who possess Caymanian status to acquire Caymanian status at the time of their birth if at least one parent is domiciled in the Islands at that time.

2. Definition in the New Law

Under the new Law, a new definition of "Caymanian as of right" has been created. This definition therefore reads as follows:

a) Any person born after commencement of the new Law, whether in or outside the Cayman Islands, at the date of whose birth at least one of his parents was settled in the Cayman Islands and was Caymanian, as hereinafter defined.

b) Any person born outside the Islands, after the commencement of the new Law, at the date of whose birth at least one of his parents was Caymanian otherwise than by descent, as hereinafter defined.

"Caymanian by descent" has been defined as a person born outside the Islands to a parent or parents who were Caymanian, but were not settled in the Islands. In other words, the power of persons settled overseas to automatically confer the right to be Caymanian on children born outside the Islands will not extend to the children of those children.

Where a person is "settled" has been defined as the place in which that person has his present home, in which he resides, or to which he returns as his place of permanent abode, and not for mere special or temporary purpose. For the purpose of the Law, a person shall not be deemed to be settled within the Cayman Islands unless he resides in the Cayman Islands without being subject, under the Immigration Law, to any restriction on the period for which he remains. A person shall be deemed no longer settled within the Cayman Islands if he voluntarily goes and resides outside the Cayman Islands (except for a special or temporary purpose), with the intention of making his home outside the Islands.

3. Recommendations for the Definition of a Child in the new Law.

It is also important that the new Law contain a clear definition of "child" in its definitions section. The definition of "child" in the new Law includes the biological or adopted child of a person of Caymanian status, whether legitimate or illegitimate. However, the new Law requires proof in the case of an illegitimate child as follows:

a) proof that the child has been legitimated by reason of the operation of the Immigration Law—that was the 1997 Revision, as amended; or

b) where the person of Caymanian status claims to be the father of the child, proof to the satisfaction of the Chief Immigration Officer that he is, in fact, the father of the child, and undertakes responsibility for the maintenance of the child.

If the father of an illegitimate child requires his status as a Caymanian to be taken into account in determining whether a child is Caymanian, he must be held legally responsible for the child's maintenance and support during its minority. To require otherwise,

Mr. Speaker, would lead to a society in which Caymanian men simply fathered children without responsibility. Such children, depending on the circumstances of their mother, could end up relying on the Government of the Cayman Islands for their support and maintenance. We do not have to look far to understand this particular situation. We see it, we know it, and it happens. All of us, as representatives, are sometimes confronted with that situation.

B. Caymanian Status by Grant of the Immigration Board

1. Status on the Grounds of 10 Years' Residency

Under the new Law, any person ordinarily resident within the Islands for ten years will not be eligible to apply for the grant of Caymanian status on the grounds of their residency alone. In view of the fact that a grant of Caymanian status entitles the holder to all the rights and privileges of a Caymanian, it has been decided that such a grant should be reserved for persons married to Caymanians, widows or widowers of Caymanians, persons of Caymanian descent and British Overseas Territory citizens, by virtue of their connection to the Cayman Islands.

2. Status on the Grounds that a Parent or Grandparent is a Born Caymanian

Unlike the old Law, no qualifying period of three years has been retained. If a person is the child or grandchild of a Caymanian as of right, he will be entitled to apply to the Immigration Board for the grant of Caymanian status once he becomes ordinarily resident in the Islands.

3. Status on the Grounds that the Applicant is a British Dependent Territories Citizen

For British Overseas Territories citizens who have been naturalised or registered, a time period of five years from the date of their certificate of naturalisation or registration has been added to ensure a proper waiting period prior to the applications being made by them to become Caymanians.

4. Status on the Grounds that the Applicant is the Spouse of a Caymanian

For spouses, widows, and widowers of Caymanians, the new Law provides that for the first seven years, they will exercise the right to apply for a work permit or residence certificate. After seven years of marriage, they will become eligible to apply to become Caymanian by grant from the Board. Such a right would be lost if they were to divorce prior to attaining ten years of marriage. After ten years, provided the person was residing in the Islands, it would be difficult (if not impossible) to refuse them rights of citizenship.

It should be borne in mind, Mr. Speaker, that at the time that the spouse of a Caymanian acquires the right to become Caymanian, children of that spouse will also become Caymanian by automatic acquisition, provided that these children are ordinarily resident in the Islands at that time.

5. Status on the Grounds that the Applicant is the Widow or Widower of a Caymanian

A provision has been added that the widow or widower must have been married to the Caymanian for at least seven years. This is the same time period as required for spouses. Having regard to the overall timeframes contained in the new Law, it would be inequitable for a widow or widower to have the right to apply to the Board to become Caymanian without any regard for the length of time the applicant had been married.

Under the current Law, in the event that the applicant had been married to a Caymanian for one day, he or she would be eligible to apply. However, accepting the difficult situation in which widows or widowers usually find themselves, the new provisions allow such persons to apply to the Chief Immigration Officer for the right to permanently reside in the event that they were not married for seven years at the time of the spouse's death.

6. Caymanian Status Over the Age of 18 Years

This section has been amended to allow any person whose status would be, or was, in fact, lost on his 18th birthday to apply to the Board for the grant of the right to be Caymanian. In the event that the applicant is over the age of 18 years, the new grant will take effect on the date that it is granted by the Board. This has been varied by the Government because of the difficulties experienced in the past by applicants who possessed Caymanian status until the age of 18 years, but were not aware that they had to apply for a continuation during their 17th year. In view of the fact that many 17-year-olds are busy studying, or may be away at school, it is unfair that the right to be Caymanian should be lost forever. It should be left to the discretion of the Board to decide whether or not to bestow the right to be Caymanian on an applicant who has lost the right at 18 years.

C. Caymanian Status by Automatic Acquisition

Any child of a Caymanian or a Caymanian status holder will have the right to be Caymanian until the age of 18 years, except for children not ordinarily resident in the Islands.

D. The Criteria for the Immigration Board's Consideration on the Grounds of Caymanian Status

All eligible groups should fulfil the following basic criteria:

a) applicants should be of good character and conduct, and there should have been no objections received, from persons of Caymanian status, to the grant;

b) applicants should have sufficient financial means to support themselves and their dependants;

c) applicants should have clean records; they should not have used or been involved in illegal drugs;

d) applicants should not have been involved in financial problems, including bankruptcy or liquidations of companies or entities, especially where creditors have not been repaid the whole of their debts;

e) applicants should be in good health and should not suffer from any form of communicable or mental disease that would make them a danger to the community; and

f) applicants should not have been involved in organising, or engaged in, any subversive political activity; they should not have organised, caused or promoted racialism or any other illegal activities within the Islands.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, each category should have specific requirements as follows:

a. Persons Over 18 Years with Caymanian Parents or Grandparents

Other than the general requirements outlined, applicants under this section should qualify upon proof that their parent or grandparents were Caymanians as of right, and that they now reside in the Cayman Islands.

b. British Overseas Territories citizenship (BOTC) by Naturalisation or Registration

This could potentially be the largest group of applicants. It may include every category of resident, from wealthy retirees who have previously been granted the right to permanently reside, to long-term work permit holders granted that right, as well as those born in the Islands, their spouses and minor children. In order to stagger the integration of such a potentially large group into the economic and political fabric of the Islands, it has been decided that such persons will not become eligible until they have held BOTC for a period of at least five years immediately preceding their application.

In addition to the general requirements outlined above, the Board should also ensure that the following criteria have been considered:

- i. the economic situation of the Islands and the due protection of persons already engaged in the same or similar businesses as the applicant in the Islands;
- ii. the desirability of retaining, in the control of Caymanians as of right, the economic resources of the Islands;
- iii. the number of dependants who would be entitled to reside and/or become Caymanian, were the application to be granted;
- iv. the economic and social consequences that would result, were the application to be granted; and
- v. that the grant would not be contrary to, and is conducive to, the public interest.

c. Spouses, widows, and widowers of Caymanians

It was earlier stated that in order to be eligible to apply, both categories of applicants should have been married for at least seven years. In addition, all applicants should have to satisfy the Board that:

a) they have been residing in the Cayman Islands for at least three years immediately preceding the application;

b) they are not living separate or apart from their spouse at the time of the application and have not lived separately or apart from their spouse for more than three months during the past seven years immediately preceding the application;

c) the marriage is genuine and intact, and not entered into for the purposes of settlement in the Islands, or to gain an immigration advantage under the Law.

In deciding whether an applicant complies with the above time limits, the Board should take into account any period spent apart from the spouse, or away from the Islands, except where such period was for medical, educational and/or international business purposes.

E. Loss of Caymanian Status

Once a person has obtained Caymanian status, there should be very limited circumstances in which such status could be lost. They are restricted in the new Law to the following:

a) upon the Board being satisfied that any information to the Board was false, or concealed any material fact;

b) upon the Board being satisfied that the holder has been ordinarily resident outside the Islands for a period of five years and in circumstances where he or she is no longer domiciled in the Islands;

c) the holder is a subject of a deportation order made by the Governor in Cabinet;

d) the holder being the spouse of a Caymanian in circumstances where the Board is satisfied that the marriage was entered into to gain an advantage under the Immigration Law;

e) the holder being the spouse of a Caymanian, the marriage becomes dissolved or annulled; or the holder commences to live apart from the spouse under the decree of a competent court or under a deed of separation; or in circumstances where, in the opinion of the Board, the marriage has irretrievably broken down—in all instances within three years of the grant of Caymanian status by the Board;

f) the holder being deemed to possess status by automatic acquisition—that is, by virtue of being the child of a person who is Caymanian by grant of the Immigration Board, but has not been resident in the Islands for a period of seven years immediately before reaching the age of 18 years.

ENTRY AND LANDING

In addition to the new provisions outlined above, Part VI, Part VII and Part VIII of the new Law deal with entry and landing provisions, asylum and deportation. They streamline and modernise the current provisions, bringing our asylum legislation up to the United Kingdom's standards and ensuring that unrealistic requirements—such as the obligations of an immigration officer to meet the passengers of every vessel, including cruise ships, which often pre-clear their passengers by providing the country with a passenger list in advance—are no longer necessary.

In addition, fines for committing offences under the Law have been increased. It does not take much imagination to understand why a person might risk working without a work permit if the fine for doing so is $2,000, but the cost of a work permit would be $10,000.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, this piece of legislation has been a long time coming. It is an issue that has been debated and discussed for at least the last decade, and before. It has been the subject of recommendations made by a Committee of this whole House, sitting for three years; Vision 2008; the Immigration Review Team; The Caymanian Bar Association and other private sector bodies who wanted to have an input. This very Bill has recently been through an intensive period of public scrutiny, and various amendments have been made as the result of input from the Council of Associations, the Caymanian Bar Association, the Cayman Islands Law Society, and other private sector groups.

Let it be known, Mr. Speaker, that this United Democratic Party Government will continue to do everything in its power to protect Cayman for Caymanians, be they new Caymanians or old Caymanians. We will continue to ensure that our reputation as a well-regulated country, with sound legislation and good governance, will continue for the sake of our next generations, as well as our own.

I have been questioned as to why the Civil Service is not included. There will soon be a new Public Service Law, and at that point, we will deal with the aspect of civil service.

As I see it, this Law is important. It brings into being a whole new way of governance for immigration, and new policies. Everyone involved has worked tirelessly to get to this day. I ask Members to bear that in mind, and to let us work in one accord on this matter.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Opposition is glad to see forward movement in regard to the new Immigration Bill. The points I raise will be directly related to the Bill and its various sections. Other Members will concentrate on the broader aspects of the legislation.

In going through the proposed Bill itself, I want to refer to certain sections. In order to save time, I would crave your indulgence to be able to refer to the Bill itself once, and sometimes to be able to read directly from certain sections in short order.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Sir.

Members of the parliamentary Opposition sat at length and went through the original Bill that was provided to us. We now have the amended version being considered in the Legislative Assembly today; hence in cross-referencing both of these documents, we have some points to raise, some points we wish the Government to consider, and perhaps a few changes that might result in a better document. I am going to refer to those as I move along now.

Definitions: In the definition section of the proposed Bill: “professional employee” means a person qualified as a lawyer, accountant, medical professional, architect, surveyor. . .” and what has been added into this last amended version is “. . . teacher, minister of religion or qualified in any other occupation recognised by the Work Permit Board as a profession;”.

Originally, we wondered as to the definition. Even though two professions, “teacher” and “minister of religion”, have been added to the definition, the question in the air is: “How is the Work Permit Board going to decide what other occupation is recognised as a profession? Is this something that is going to be issued, either in regulations or by directive? Is the Board, from time to time and depending on its composition, going to decide, as a matter of policy within itself, what professions fit the category of professional employee?

It is all a matter of clarity. That is what we are seeking. Although this is specific to certain professions, one might not wish to leave the Board with latitude regarding what they might consider a qualifying profession. Someone could make an application under the category of professional employee, and there is no fixed definition. The applicant might consider himself a professional employee, but the Board counters against it. If we leave it in the air for the Board to decide, from time to time and depending on its composition, or depending on the question that arises, how do we decide who is right? If there is a way of achieving clarity, then it would be good to deal with it now.

We also see in the definition section that “step-child” means a child of one of the parties to a marriage born in wedlock to a previous marriage of such party.

According to this definition as we understand it, if an individual is the child of one of the parties to a marriage, but when that individual was born, both of his or her parents were not married, that individual cannot be considered a step-child. We had a recent amendment to The Status of Children’s Law—or rather, it was a new Bill that was passed and became the Status of Children Law, 2003. I am having it cross-checked, but I am of the present opinion that this definition might well run counter to the principles that are applied in that Law in regard to non-discrimination between legitimate and illegitimate children.

If we are to follow that new Law, which speaks to non-discrimination, then I would subscribe to the view that this present definition is discriminatory. If that piece of legislation supersedes this, then there is a question of legality, so we have to look at this very carefully. Without debating it at length, I want to believe that I understand the intention. Understanding the intention, and what obtains when we compare it with the other Law, are matters that cannot be discarded. We need to look at that carefully before we get to Committee stage to ensure not only that this is the intent, but that it is correct for the definition to remain as is. The Status of Children Law that was recently passed was very specific about not discriminating between legitimate and illegitimate offspring. This is doing exactly the opposite: it is clearly drawing the line, and saying that a child, to be deemed a step-child, has to be a legitimate child. This is something that has to be considered. It is well worth raising.

For ease of reference, the green copy of the Law I was referring to was entitled, A Bill for Law to Reform the Law Relating to Children by Providing for their Equal Status; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes. Part II, Equal Status of Children, section 3(1) reads: “(1) Subject to subsection (2) for all of the purposes of the Laws of the Islands a person is the child of his natural parents and his status as their child is independent of whether he is born inside or outside of marriage and all other relationships shall be determined accordingly.”

“All other relationships” would also mean a case in which the child was illegitimate, and one of the parents was afterwards married to someone else, if, after entering the marriage, that person (other than the father or mother, depending on which is the natural parent) wished for the child to be the step-child within that marriage. Therefore, there is a specific difference that we need to be looking at.

Section 3(2) speaks to adoption; hence, I do not have to refer to that, because we are not speaking of an adoption in the definition here.

Section 3(1) of the Status of Children Law, 2003 needs to be compared with the Immigration Law, to make sure that we have it right within this piece of legislation. From what I have just read, it would appear that it needs to be corrected. It is not right as it is.

Section 8. Meetings of Boards: Moving on, I will read section 8(1) of the Immigration Bill, 2003: “Each Board shall meet at least once in every calendar month and upon such other occasions as, in the opinion of its Chairman, may be necessary or desirable in the public interest.”

This refers to the three boards to which we speak, not the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Board. They have their own special section, which defines it.

Section 8(4)(c) says that “five members present shall form a quorum.”

When we look at the composition of these boards, the numbers are not consistent. For example: “The Caymanian Status and Permanent Residency Board shall consist of . . .”

. . . a Chairman, a deputy Chairman, one member for each of the six electoral districts, the Chief Immigration Officer or his designate, an Administrator or his designate, a Secretary and an assistant Secretary, which totals 12 people. The Business Staffing Plan Board shall have a Chairman, a deputy Chairman, six representatives from the business community, the Director or deputy Director of Employment Services, the Chief Education Officer, the Chief Immigration Officer, an Administrator or his designate, a Secretary and assistant Secretary, which makes 14.

There is clarity in each subsection as to which members of each board cannot vote. We note that the Chairman, the deputy Chairman and the six other members, at all times, are voting members, but in one board, you have four additional members who cannot vote, and in another board you have six. Therefore, you have eight voting members, and depending on the board, between four and six who cannot vote.

However, section 8(4)(c) says that: “five members present shall form a quorum.”

It does not say that “five voting members present shall form a quorum.”

I am quickly looking for the subsection which refers to which members cannot vote, Mr. Speaker. As I understand it, the Business Staffing Plan Board will have a Chairman, a deputy Chairman and six other representatives from the business community. It also has the Director or deputy Director of Employment Services, the Chief Immigration Officer, the Chief Education Officer, an Administrator or his designate, a Secretary and an assistant Secretary. That Board has six individuals who are not voting members. Unless there is something I am missing here, they are still treated as members. It is just that their membership is qualified, and they cannot vote. If: “five members present shall form a quorum”.

Then, as it reads, it is possible for that board to have a quorum without being able to vote. There are six people who are members who cannot vote, but five members present form a quorum. I make that point to say that this needs to be looked at.

Where we see five members forming a quorum, we assume they would be voting members. It needs clarity to ensure that there is no question about it. I am assuming that the five members forming a quorum are simply the majority of those who are present and can vote. If there are eight voting members, a majority of eight is five. If our take on it is correct, then a qualification is required to ensure that the five members present, forming the quorum, are voting members.

Section 9. Duty of confidentiality: This is not a section about which we are complaining, but it is a very important section. With your permission, I will read it. Section 9(1) reads: “The fact and any particulars of, or relating to, any matter falling for consideration by, or the decision of, a Board shall be treated as confidential by each member of that Board and he shall not disclose any such fact or particular otherwise than in the proper performance of his duties under this Law or in compliance with the order of a court of competent jurisdiction.”

That is crystal clear. Section 9(2) reads: “(2)

The failure of any member to comply with subsection (1)-

- (a) is an offence; and
- (b) constitutes a sufficient ground for the termination of his appointment.”

I raise that point because we consider it important that all members of the Board, voting or non-voting, are not only aware of this, but are always reminded of it, to ensure that confidentiality remains intact.

That is not the only point. I am sure we all appreciate the reasons why confidentiality should remain intact; I do not have to go into a long story about that.

However, there are other individuals who have access to the same information, but are not members of the Board. We hold the view that there should be something in this Law referring to people who have access to this information, but are not members of the Board. They, too, should have to pay cognisance to that fact—meaning that they are not excused from being held liable in the same manner as the members of the Board. It might be that we wish not to include that in the legislation, but I would subscribe to the view that it should be there. When it comes to sensitive information about individuals, or even entities, one may never know whether certain information may be given out—not only publicly, but to interested parties who can benefit or thwart the efforts of such an entity. That is not a fair situation and no Board should have to be party to that, whether directly, indirectly, purposely or inadvertently. There should be some consideration of the liability of all individuals who may have access to such information. We agree with the section regarding the members of the Board. We are saying that perhaps consideration needs to be made for it to go a little further.

We have not been specific with this recommendation, because I cannot stand here knowing exactly how it works, where we would draw the line, or who would have access at any point in time. That is why the recommendation is a general one. In the worst-case scenario, Mr. Speaker, if it is deemed that the legislation is not the logical and practical place for it to be, then something, somewhere, should ensure that those who have access to this information recognise the need to retain confidence, and that there are some sanctions, if that confidence is not retained.

Section 15. Appeals from the decisions of the Boards: Section 15(1) is another important section, and we are happy to see that the latest version has been added to, in regard to the following: “Any person aggrieved by, or dissatisfied with, any decision of a Board other than a decision under Section 14 . . .”

When we got the original copy of the Bill, it spoke of someone being able to appeal by way of a re-hearing of the Immigration Appeals Tribunal. We were worried that there were no specific criteria to allow the appeal. We are happy to see that there is a new subsection 15(2), which says: “(2) An appeal under subsection (1) may be lodged on the ground that—

- (a) it is erroneous in law;
- (b) it is unreasonable;
- (c) it is contrary to the principles of natural justice; or
- (d) it is at variance with the Regulations.”

For the purposes of clarity, when I used the word, “allowed”, I did not mean that an appeal is granted. I meant that the appeal is allowed to be heard on these grounds. We had questions about the fact that the Immigration Appeals Tribunal would have to have a complete re-hearing if an appeal were going to be heard, but there were no set criteria to allow that. Now that we have these criteria in subsection (2), we do not have any problems with it. From the point of view of the person who is lodging the appeal, it is fair that the Appeals Tribunal should hear the entire case, and be able to come to a decision on the Appeal with the full information available to it. Beforehand, we had some concerns that what might be termed "frivolous appeals" could be lodged, and could waste everybody's time. Now, at least, it is one of these four criteria that would allow the appeal; otherwise, there is no ability for that appeal to be heard.

The right to appeal is not an automatic one. It is one that has to be made on the ground that:

- "(a) it is erroneous in law;
- (b) it is unreasonable;
- (c) it is contrary to the principles of natural justice; or
- (d) it is at variance with the Regulations."

We thought we would raise that point because it is important for it to move forward in that manner.

Section 18. Decisions to be administrative: We move on to section 18(3), which reads: "Failure of a Board to inform an applicant of the right of appeal referred to in subsection (2) shall not of itself give rise to a right of appeal under section 15 and failure to give reasons as required by subsection (2) when first promulgating its decision to reject an application shall not give rise to such a right of appeal if the Board gives them to the applicant subsequently."

That is quite fair. However, Mr. Speaker, we believe that if any one of the Boards makes a decision, there should be a defined and reasonable time period in which they shall give those reasons to the applicant in writing. I do not see any other specific section or subsection here. In my view, this is saying that if you were the applicant, Sir, and your application were refused, then the Board would not have to give you any reasons. If you were to do certain things to spur it on, and if, after dragging it on and on, they finally did give you a reason, you would not have any right to appeal.

We believe there should be a specific time-line by which the reasons should be passed on to the applicant. That is only fair, when we look at both sides of the coin. If the Board has sat, and considered, and made a decision, then there must be logical reasons for that decision, one way or the other. There should be no difficulty, outside of physically producing letters, and no reason why the applicants should not be advised. I do not want to proffer here that I would know what this means in actual man-hours. What I do know is that these letters of reply to the applicant are sent out in any case; therefore, they should contain the reasons. I do not want to make a recommendation to say that that is how it must be worded in the Law, because, again, I am not sure about the logistics of that. I can only say it as I see it.

What we can say is fair is that as soon as it is possible, we should make it specific, within the Law, when this information should be passed on. Perhaps those who are involved will have a good feel for that. It has to be less work if the whole thing is done once, rather than in two letters. If one puts one's feet in the shoes of the applicant, it must not be left the way it is. I have heard, on numerous occasions, people complaining about the refusal of applications for work permits. They cannot understand why, and do not know what recourse they may have.

Mr. Speaker, in the new proposed Bill, there is a specific section that speaks of an applicant not having the ability to go back to the Board. I cannot remember exactly which section it is, but I remember reading it. At the least, the person must know exactly why the application was refused. If that person considers that one of the four criteria under which an appeal can be lodged has been met, then that person will have the right to make an appeal.

Our recommendation is that there should be some onus on the boards to have a specific time-line in which to give reasons to the applicant for such refusal.

Section 20. Categories of Caymanians: Mr. Speaker, we move on now to section 20, about which we have had much talk. The new section 20(1)(e) reads: "20. (1) A person shall, for purposes of this law be deemed to possess the right to be Caymanian if - . . .

- "(e) the Governor, in his opinion finding special reason for so doing, grants such right to him".

We have received letters of input from various individuals and groups, and consistently, every one of them was of the opinion that the Governor in Cabinet should not have the right to deem a person to be Caymanian.

When the matter was at its peak a short time ago, the parliamentary Opposition took the position that if the Governor in Cabinet were to retain this right, then there should be a specific limit set on an annual basis. The limit that we thought was fair and reasonable was the number six. That was twisted all over the place to try to say that we only wanted six grants of status annually, for anyone. However, that position was only to do with the Governor in Cabinet's ability to issue such grants. We thought long and hard about our position on that specific situation, so as not to prevent the Governor in Cabinet from making grants of status. Even if I cannot think of an example now, one could arise in which an individual might not be able to become Caymanian under the other provisions of the Law.

The whole world, including all of us, might agree that it is not only desirable, but the right thing, to make that person Caymanian—depending on what the circumstances are, and perhaps what the specific contribution to society might be.

Rather than say that it should never happen, we are allowing for that possibility, although it may perhaps be a rare occasion. Our middle ground is to set a limit of six for the Governor in Cabinet on an annual basis. That is our recommendation and the Government will have to decide what their position is.

I am making serious attempts to stay focused on what is being proposed, so as not to dilute the thought, as tempting as it may be. However, I wish that Government would give serious consideration to this, because I am totally convinced that when the original law was made, it was made in that spirit. The practice that obtained for years was never one in which more than that were given out on an annual basis—not that I know of. Perhaps the Government can speak about its own position. Our view is that in order to be fair to all the individuals who are eligible under the Law, granting status should be the job of one of the boards.

It allows for double standards, and sometimes triple standards, which aggrieve people. There is only one way to avoid that, and that is to have everybody move through the same process. I am sure that that is why these recommendations from individuals and outside groups have that conclusion in mind. We hold fast to that opinion, and believe that if there is any middle ground, or any compromise, it must be reached through limitations. These limitations would have to be in very small numbers. That is why we have come up with the number six. That would allow any special circumstance to be taken care of, but at the same time, the legislation would encompass the comfort of knowing that there could not be grants in larger numbers, which would be done in a different manner, and be unfair to individuals who would find eligibility under the Law.

This Bill is very specific. Once it is passed, the Law is going to have a definite and specific methodology by which a person can become a Caymanian or a permanent resident. There will be no quotas, and eligibility will be on fixed time-lines once this last quota that was issued is dealt with. Whoever is left after that quota is filled will have to fall in line with the new Law. We accept that, because we know that you have to draw the line somewhere, and you have to deal with it. We are not arguing about that. In fact, that is what we were trying to say from the very beginning.

It makes a difference if you have the open ability to extract individuals from that stream and deal with them differently. If we wanted to be totally fair to all involved, we would ensure that that could not occur. That is our position, and it is based on that principle. At the end of the day, we will have to see whether anybody picks up on it, or whether the Government retains the position that it has.

I was speaking about a clear definition of the way forward for individuals, so they know exactly where they stand. There is a difference between that and what obtains now, with quotas and the lack thereof. I am sure no one can disagree with me when I say that many individuals got to the point where they felt as though they had to know the right people in the right places to get some results. I am sure that the intention of this new Law is exactly the opposite: people know exactly where they stand from the day one and there is no argument about it. No one can say, “This one got this treatment and that one got the other treatment. What happened to me?” There is strength in our argument if one speaks to logic. I wish to make the point.

Section 21. Caymanian as of right: There is a quick point in section 21, where it says:

“In this Part “Caymanian as of right” means a child—

- (a) born after the commencement of this Law whether in or outside the Islands, at the date of whose birth at least one of his parents was settled in the Islands and was Caymanian”.

I want to be sure of this Mr. Speaker. I cannot say that I am 100 per cent sure, but if there is merit to what I am saying, it is important to raise the point. I will explain myself.

It speaks of a child born after the commencement of this Law. One might subscribe to the belief that a child born before the commencement of this Law would be dealt with; however, when this Bill before us is passed into law, the Law that we are under now will be repealed because we cannot have two immigration laws. The question is: What happens for a child who would fall into this category, but was born before the commencement of this Law, and has not done what was necessary? There may be individuals—

[Inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: As I said, there may be individuals who were born prior to this Law, but who have not gone through whatever process they had to go through to be recognised as a Caymanian. They may be living overseas. The way this reads, Mr. Speaker, it only speaks of the time after the commencement of this Law, which means there would be no window for such individuals, if I limit my thought process to this section. I do not know if there is another window elsewhere.

Perhaps to be safe, it should read, “a child born either before, or after, the commencement of this Law” rather than “born after the commencement of this Law". That point is simply to ensure that there is no possibility of someone finding himself in an untenable circumstance, with everyone wanting to utilise the Law to regularise his situation, but not being able to do so. As we have seen in the Law that exists now, many times we are so near and yet so far. There is no provision to allow that person to become Caymanian. We wanted to ensure that there is consideration there.

Section 22. Acquisition of the right to be Caymanian by grant of the Board: This may not be right in the fore in the line of importance, but when we use the terminology "ordinarily resident", there is always some type of question as to whether one was ordinarily resident or not. We wonder whether there may not be room for some specific definition of that terminology. It would be good if there could be a specific definition, which would prevent any question arising, or anyone feeling that the interpretation of the Board is unfair.

The Minister spoke about section 22(7). That subsection reads: "(7) Where the marriage referred to in subsection (6)(a) has not subsisted for a period of seven years or the grant of the right to be Caymanian has been refused by the Board, the surviving spouse may apply to the Chief Immigration Officer for the right to permanently reside in the Islands and the Chief Immigration Officer shall take into account the applicant's health and character".

What we find strange, Mr. Speaker, is the last phrase: ". . . but such right to reside shall be lost upon the applicant's remarriage."

Here we have a surviving spouse, either a widow or a widower. The Chief Immigration Officer has examined that individual's position, and has decided to grant him the right to permanently reside in the Islands. The person is not 70 years old, and might be in as good a physical condition as you, yourself. With life being what it is, that person may decide to remarry. What happens if that individual, who has the right to reside permanently, does not marry a Caymanian? It is not impossible. What this law is saying is that if I am the surviving spouse, and the Chief Immigration Officer gives me the right to reside permanently, the caveat is that I had better not get married to a non-Caymanian; otherwise, I will lose that right automatically. I am sure that is not the intention. However, that is what it says.

I cannot see that being the intention, because it serves no purpose—unless we are saying that if the surviving spouse acquires the right to reside permanently, the only way they keep that right is if they marry a Caymanian. Again, I do not think that is the intention, but unless I am missing something, that is what it says to me.

I read again, "Where the marriage referred to in subsection (6)(a) has not subsisted for a period of seven years or the grant of the right to be Caymanian has been refused by the Board, the surviving spouse may apply to the Chief Immigra- tion Officer for the right to permanently reside in the Islands and the Chief Immigration Officer shall take into account the applicant's health and character, but such right to reside shall be lost upon the applicant's remarriage."

The reason I said "marry a Caymanian" is that the way this reads, even if he marries a Caymanian, he would lose the right, because it says "remarriage". At least if he were married to a Caymanian, other sections would trip in to allow him the right to reside in the country. I think that needs to be clarified, whatever the intention is. Frankly speaking, I want to believe that I understand the intention. However, I would have to totally disregard that last phrase if I said I understood its intention. When I put that into the equation, as my old friend, who is now deceased, would say, it leaves much muddy water.

Standing Order 13(2)

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I do not know how important it is for a quorum to be here, but there does not seem to be one.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, if are you bringing the attention of the House to the lack of a quorum, I will take a suspension and ask Members to remain in their seats while we seek to get a quorum in the House.

[Pause]

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, would you please continue?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker

Section 23. Matters for the Board's consideration: In the first Immigration Bill we received, section 23(b) said: "In the course of processing an application for the right to be Caymanian the Board shall satisfy itself that— . . ."

"(b) adequate consideration has been given to the number of dependants who would be entitled to reside in the Islands or become Caymanian by automatic acquisition should the application be granted".

I am glad to see that they have cleared up that section. We understood what the intention was, but it did not read with clarity, or even with a full sentence. What has been added now makes it absolutely clear: "(b) adequate consideration has been given to the number of dependants who would be entitled to reside in the Islands or become Caymanian by automatic acquisition should the application be granted".

This was in the old Law and was simply drawn into the new Bill, but section 23(e)(ii) says: “(e) the applicant— . . .

- (ii) has to his credit three good character references received by the Board directly from three respectable Caymanians”.

I know this is a word inherited from the last Law, and if we look at the Law that was previous to that, I believe it was there too, but who is a “respectable” Caymanian? We might say we know what we are talking about, but this is legislation. Is it possible to be very clear with that definition, with regard to references, Mr. Speaker?

There may seem to be the school of thought that such trivial matters need not be addressed. However, there are individuals who take issue with specifics such as this when it comes to defining who is a “respectable” Caymanian. If we are going to use that word, then it must be defined; otherwise, let us find a more suitable word, which, in its general application, is more acceptable. It is all relative, and has to do with one’s perspective. One does not want to be seen to be making classifications within the society that are unnecessary. That is the point that I wish to raise. If we want to keep it, define it. Otherwise, ditch it. That is the best way I can say it.

Section 24. Procedure in relation to applications for grant under section 22: Section 24(4) is not a position with which we want to argue, but perhaps talking it through for a minute would ensure that we are all straight and clear in our heads. This section reads: “(4) Where an application has been rejected, the applicant shall not be permitted to make any further application until after the lapse of one year from the date of the communication of the decision.”

I am glad to see, at least, that they have taken out the option for the Board to make it two years. What is proposed is one year, straight across the board, for these applications.

We recently amended the existing Immigration Law (2003 Revision) to delete the section that applies to this, simply because people who were refused in recent times would not have been able to apply before the new Law came into place, which means they would be disenfranchised from being among the 600 in the quota that was issued. That amendment will allow such people to apply.

As for the fact that we will no longer have any quotas, we want to look at it from the point of view that if someone applies and is refused, and if we do not make some specific time-line for it, he might apply the next month, and if refused, keep applying every month until the Board gets sick of him and grants it. That may be a consideration.

I do not think we would want to say that one should not have that specific time-line. We do not have a quota, so it has nothing to do with the quotas anymore, or that he might be as worthy but just did not fit the bill. Perhaps after talking that through, Mr. Speaker, we can agree with that one, without making a case against that. Looking at it in that light, we see that because there is no quota anymore, it would not put any individual at a disadvantage over the next one. It is only a matter of streamlining the application. All right, that one is fine.

Section 27. Revocation on conviction: In section 27, it is also good to see that a word has been changed twice from what was proposed. This is perhaps the only section where the terminology “Caymanian status” can be used, simply because the earlier Law will have referred to “Caymanian Status.” Section 27 reads:

“Where the grantee of the right to be Caymanian or of Caymanian status under this or any earlier Law is convicted by any Court of an offence—

- (a) for which he is sentenced to an immediate term of imprisonment of twelve months or more, other than for non-payment of a fine; and in respect of which conviction his rights of appeal have been exhausted; or
 (b) which, in the opinion—and previously it was “of the Board”—“was made possible by, facilitated by or connected with the grant of the right to the offender, the grantor [previously “the Board”] may revoke that right on its own motion.”

In both instances, the word “Board” has been changed to “grantor”. It is important to make mention of that, because even though we would wish for the Governor in Cabinet to be limited to a number of grants, the fact of the matter is that the way the Law is proposed, grants made by the Governor in Cabinet in special circumstances are literally irrevocable. The way the Law is proposed, replacing, “the Board” with “the grantor” means that whichever entity makes the grant has the right to revoke it. We are in agreement with that section coming into play.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Member state specifically which section of the new Bill he is reading from?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Right now, Mr. Speaker? Right now it is section 28, or was it the one with the grantor you are talking about?

The Speaker: The one with the grantor.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: That was section 27, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Could you read through your section 27 to see if it agrees with what I have?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Section 27 says: “Where the grantee of the right to be Caymanian or of Caymanian status under this or any earlier Law is convicted by any Court of an offence-

- (a) for which he is sentenced to an immediate term of imprisonment of twelve months or more, other than for non-payment of a fine; and in respect of which conviction his rights of appeal have been exhausted; or
- (b) which, in the opinion of the grantor . . . ”

Does your copy say Board?

The Speaker: Yes.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I remember correctly, the Honourable Acting First Official Member sent out a replacement for pages 39 and 40 earlier, which has the change. It was a notice sent out to us last week Wednesday, before we broke until today. I hear what you are saying. Where it says “Board” there, and where it says “Board” on the last line of that section, both of those should change to “grantor”. As I said, we agree with that. The reasoning behind that is that it does not make any grant by Cabinet irrevocable, anymore. It allows Cabinet, under the circumstances provided in that section, to revoke.

The Speaker: Thank you, please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Section 28. Categories of permanent residence: Section 28(2) says: “(2) The Chief Immigration Officer may grant the right to reside permanently in the Islands to applicants in the following categories:

- a) wealthy retirees; and
- b) entrepreneurs or investors.”

We move and cross-reference this to section 35(1) (b). For clarity, let me just read from the beginning of section 35:

“(1)A person who has net worth in the prescribed amount . . .” —and I am assuming that regulations will prescribe that— “. . . and who-

- (a) has and is likely to continue to have the necessary professional, technical and other knowledge to successfully carry on the business proposed; and
- (b) has invested the prescribed sum of money”—again, assumed in regulations—“in a licensed employment-generating business in the Islands;

may apply to the Chief Immigration Officer for a Residential Certificate for Entrepreneurs and Investors.

(2) Where the Chief Immigration Officer is satisfied that-

- (a) the applicant has a clean criminal record;
- (b) the applicant is in good health and possesses adequate health insurance coverage; and
- (c) the investment is likely to make a significant contribution to the economic and cultural life of the Islands, he shall issue a certificate for a period of twenty-five years renewable at the discretion of the Chief Immigration Officer.”

What I read are the specific criteria under which section 28(2) can be granted, with the Chief Immigration Officer granting the right to reside permanently in the Islands to an applicant in the category of Entrepreneur or Investor.

With your permission, I will read shortly from the recommendations on page 23 of the Second Report of the Immigration Review Team, their contribution regarding Residential Certificates for Entrepreneurs and Investors (RECs), to make my point.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

“D. Residential Certificates For Entrepreneurs And Investors (REC’s)

It is the IRT's view that the purpose of these provisions should be to attract eligible wealthy investors and entrepreneurs who can make a significant contribution to the economy or the cultural or artistic life of the Cayman Islands.

1. Definition

A person could qualify for an REC who has a proven track record in business, a substantial personal net worth and has invested a substantial sum in a business licensed in the Cayman Islands that will create employment opportunities for a minimum number of Caymanians. Such investment should make a significant contribution to the economy or the cultural or artistic life of the Islands.

Although it is not recommended to legislate the actual sum to be invested or number of Caymanians to be employed, as this would lead to less flexibility in the system, it is recommended that Executive Council [Executive Council is now Cabinet] set this sum and number through Directives to the Board and that these figures be substantial. For example in Canada a persons net worth must stand at US$5 million and the requisite investment should not in most cases be less than US$1 million. In addition employment of at least ten Cay-manians should be guaranteed. It would be open to Executive Council to amend these figures from time to time, bearing in mind the country's needs."

I asked permission to quote there because the difficulty I have with section 35 is that the criteria under which the Chief Immigration Officer can grant this 25-year Residential Certificate does not include any protection for Caymanian-owned businesses, with regard to someone coming in and gobbling them up, because of their ability. I know we have this principle of laissez faire, and let competition be the order of the day. However, you could compare that to what we consider, locally, to be the biggest wholesale group: the joint venture between the Foster Group and the Kirkconnells. There are other entities elsewhere of which this group would not be one-hundredth the size. If those entities were allowed to come in here, they could sweep them into non-existence. I do not have to go into a long explanation for that to be clearly understood. With their prices, they could open up competition in the same wholesale business and lose for five years, until these other people go right out of business. They would be able to win the war, despite losing a few battles along the way.

While we want to encourage these entrepreneurs and investors and give them the freedom to come here, spend and invest their money, buy homes and live here, and while it is all well and good for the country, there has to be some balance, even if they employ Caymanians. Part of the criteria means that one makes a judgement call as to the type of business it is, how it would affect existing local businesses, and whether we want to simply encourage it, without making any consideration of what I just spoke about. We believe that it is something that needs to be considered.

There are other sections that speak to all of these things when work permits are applied for, but this specific section does not mention it. I have read out the criteria under which the Chief Immigration Officer could grant this 25-year right to reside permanently. It does not mention anything like that; therefore, there needs to be specific mention. If it is the Chief Immigration Officer, you could easily say that you are confident that that person would bear such matters in mind when considering this, but if it is not in the Law, then that person is not obliged to bear it in mind. If the person does bear it in mind, but it is not in the Law, then someone may be able to appeal, and say that it was unfair because it is not in the Law but the consideration was there.

This is one of those sections in which we might seriously consider letting it be dealt with by a Board, rather than the Chief Immigration Officer. The ramifications are serious. On one hand, we have to encourage investors, but at the same time, we have to balance that activity with our Caymanian enterprises, and their ability to progress, prosper and compete. When the competition is unfair, as it can be, then the whole purpose of having an Immigration Law can be undermined. The Immigration Law may be skewed towards the person coming here, rather than towards us. I am certain that is not the intention. The more I think about it, the more I believe that we should seriously look at this.

Is this a situation we want to isolate to any Chief Immigration Officer, or is this not better served if it is dealt with by a Board, with the same criteria that the Board has to examine when it is granting a work permit?

The issue of wealthy retirees is a whole different matter. The competition of which I speak in this category is not in that one. That is why I would not necessarily want to put both categories in the same kit and caboodle, or to suggest that retirees should be dealt with by the Board. We are not saying that, because there is a difference between the two. I wanted to make that absolutely clear.

Section 29. Persons legally and ordinarily resident in the Islands for at least eight years:

Mr. Speaker, section 29(1) reads: "(1) A person who has been legally and ordinarily resident within the Islands for a continuous period of eight years immediately preceding the application may apply in the prescribed form and manner to the Board for permission for himself and his dependants, if any, to reside permanently in the Islands."

I am raising this point to ensure that we know where we are going with this. In the definition section, "dependant" in relation to a person, means the spouse of that person, or one of the following relations of that person, namely a child, step-child, adopted child, grandchild, parent, step-parent, grandparent, brother, sister, half-brother or half-sister, being, in each case, wholly or substantially dependent upon that person.

I understand the wide-reaching definition that has been made. You could almost inevitably say that many of us, if not all, have experienced some individual circumstance that relates to one of the categories included in that. I understand that.

However, 29(1) reads: "A person who has been legally and ordinarily resident within the Islands for a continuous period of eight years [and who is applying for the right to reside permanently] may apply in the prescribed form and manner to the Board for permission for himself and his dependants".

The questions I want to ask will make it clear why I am leaning in this direction. There are immediate questions for that person making the application. Are these dependants resident in the Islands with that person at the time? Have these dependants been resident in the Islands with that person throughout his or her stay here? If not, are we opening something that we are not so sure we can deal with? If we are conscious of it, and we believe that that is the correct thing to do, then this is fine. However, when we look at that wide-ranging definition, and we look at the fact that the previous Law (the one that exists now) limited many individuals from bringing their dependants to the Islands, then I subscribe to the belief that many individuals will be eligible for the grant of permanent residence who may well include in their application forms many others who are not resident with them in the Islands.

I bring this up because it does not say anywhere here that if the application has six or eight dependants included in it, it does not stand a chance of being granted. I am not suggesting that that should be the case. What I do not want to happen is for the Bill to become Law in this fashion and then, without anything in the Law saying it, for someone to realise that they do not want this to happen. Then we would find individuals feeling as though they were being discriminated against because their list of dependants was longer than another person's list, when in fact, if we looked at the individuals, we may not necessarily wish for that person to be denied permanent residence. Perhaps if the criteria were crystal clear and set out, that person could continue until such time as he or she acquired Caymanian status, at which point in time several of the individuals (if not all) may well have ceased to be dependants, and the problem would solve itself.

While that is not a situation for which there is any easy answer, we would not want to pass this legislation and leave it up in the air like this, for people to try to make sense out of something on their own. Depending on the mindset of the individual or group of individuals on a Board at any time, we could have different standards being applied. We do not want that.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have 36 minutes remaining.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am hoping that that point will be addressed.

I am moving on as quickly as I can. Section 29 (6) reads: “(6) Upon the death of the holder of a Residency and Employment Rights Certificate or upon the dissolution of the marriage, the right of the surviving spouse to reside in the Islands may be revoked at the discretion of the Board but the said surviving spouse may, within a period of three months of any revocation, apply for the grant of a Residency and Employment Rights certificate upon satisfying the requirements of this section.”

That, in itself, is also crystal clear. However, I have had situations come to light to me with individuals in certain circumstances. There is only one question here that we need to ensure is addressed.

Section 29(1) begins: “Upon the death of the holder of a Residency and Employment Rights Certificate or upon the dissolution of the marriage, the right of the surviving spouse. . .”

The surviving spouse is what we are talking about now.

In one case, the spouse is married and the partner dies, or there is a divorce, and the remaining spouse does not hold the Residency and Employment Rights Certificate, was not working and does not hold a work permit. Whether it is the survival of a partner's death, or a divorce, that person has 90 days to “. . . apply for the grant of a Residency and Employment Rights Certificate upon satisfying the requirements of this section.”

Does it put that person at a disadvantage to the point where the Law says that he or she does not have the right to reside in the Islands during that interim? Is that person going to be told, “You have to leave”? It is a question.

Section 30. Residency and Employment Rights Certificate for spouse of a Caymanian: Another one I want to look at is section 30(3)(e), which says: “(3) In considering the application, the Board shall satisfy itself— . . .

- (e) that the applicant has sufficient financial means to support himself and his dependants listed on the application as accompanying him.”

Section 30(1) says: “The spouse of a Caymanian may apply to the Caymanian Status and Permanent Residency Board for permission to reside in the Islands and if such application is successful the Board shall grant to the applicant a Residency and Employment Rights Certificate”.

What section 30(3)(e) is saying is that the Board needs to be satisfied that the applicant has sufficient financial means to support himself and his dependants listed on the application as accompanying him. On the one hand, I understand what that applies to, with the same situation about dependants. However, if the applicant is married to a Caymanian—let us take the situation of the spouse of a Caymanian man who is the breadwinner—do the financial means of which they speak extend to the income of the spouse, or does it speak to the specific individual who is making the application, who is not the Caymanian?

We want to ensure, Mr. Speaker, that there might not be an isolated situation in which the spouse of a Caymanian may be making the application, but may not, at that point in time, have an income. Do not forget that this application is going to allow that person the right to work. When the application is made, the person does not necessarily have an income. I want to ensure that what this refers to would include the income of the Caymanian spouse. Otherwise, if there are dependants, the individual would never meet the requirements. There could be one dependant, and there might be a problem. I want to ensure that we do not have any confusion there, and that the way this is worded does not limit the sufficient financial means referred in subsection 30(3)(e) to that of the applicant solely, but that the income of the Caymanian spouse is included. It says “the applicant”. That is what brings the question to mind. We want to ensure that it is clear.

Section 32. Loss of Residential and Employment Rights Certificate: Section 32 says: “(1) The holder of a Residency and Employment Rights Certificate who is the spouse of a Caymanian or has obtained a Residency and Employment Rights Certificate as a result of his marriage to the holder of a Residency and Employment Rights Certificate pursuant to section 29(5) shall forfeit his rights under that Certificate if [and I go to subsection(e) (iii) where we come to this funny old one again] (iii) in circumstances where in the opinion of the Board the marriage has irretrievably broken down.”

Perhaps this is because no one can devise a different way to say, but it is very personal to me. There are existing situations that may cause problems in marriages, and the person who is penalised is not the person who is at fault. I cannot promise anyone that I have the correct answer for it. What I do know is that, inevitably, it seems to be an injustice when this occurs, and what this is saying is that in certain instances, that is exactly what will happen. I will say it in raw terms. If I am the spouse of a Caymanian, and that Caymanian is worthless, and in and out of jail all the time, but I work hard, work my fingers to the bone and even support that person to try to make life half-way better for us, if I cannot take it anymore, I run the risk of losing whatever residency rights I have.

If we want to speak of fairness, I am sure everyone agrees that that is not fair. How that is solved is another matter.

Section 32(1)(e) says: “(e) in circumstances where in the opinion of the Board the marriage has irretrievably broken down.”

It does not even speak to the reason why; it speaks only to the result, and that is where I have a problem. It means that if you get this small right, you will suffer anything under the sun to retain it, because you want to be able to work here. In my opinion, that is not fair. I am certain that is not the intention of the legislation. There are instances when this will work fine as it is worded, but there are other instances in which justice will not be served. Therefore, I have to bring that point.

Section 35. Residential Certificate for Entrepreneurs and Investors: Section 35(1) says:“(1) A person who has net worth in the prescribed amount and who—

- (a) has and is likely to continue to have the necessary professional, technical and other knowledge to successfully carry on the business proposed; and
  - (b) has invested the prescribed sum of money in a licensed employment-generating business in the Islands;
- may apply to the Chief Immigration Officer for a Residential Certificate for Entrepreneurs and Investors.”

I spoke to that earlier. Section 35(2) says: “(2) Where the Chief Immigration Officer is satisfied that—

- (a) the applicant has a clean criminal record . . .
  - (c) the investment is likely to make a significant contribution to the economic and cultural life of the Islands,
- he shall issue a certificate for a period of twenty-five years”.

Added to what I spoke about earlier, this still does not leave out the possibility of unfair competition to local businesses. I wanted to reinforce that point along with the one I raised earlier.

Section 37. General provisions relating to loss of permanent residency: Section 37(1) says: “(1) Without prejudice to the rights of the Board to revoke permanent residency under this Law, the holder of a certificate of residency of any kind shall lose his rights under that certificate where — .

- (g) he is medically certified to be suffering from a communicable disease that makes his into the Islands dangerous to the community”.

This is simply a matter of the choice of words. As far as I am concerned, this person is living here. He is not just coming to enter now. This section says: “Without prejudice to the rights of the Board to revoke permanent residency under this Law, the holder of a certificate of residency of any kind shall lose his rights. . . ”.

That means that the person holds that certificate and is living here. Where it says “his entry into the Islands”, it should read “his continued residence in the Islands”, because it is assumed that the person is living here.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business referred to the civil service, and the Public Service Law is supposedly coming. We have not had the benefit of that, but assuming that what the Minister said is what will obtain, I still have a problem with that.

Part V – Gainful Occupation of Non-Caymanians.

Section 38. Persons exempted: Section 38(1) says: “(1) This part does not apply to—

- (a) (i) a person employed by the Government of the Islands in respect of his employment”.

I am assuming that that the Public Service Law refers to work permits. I do not know if that is what it is going to say, but it says that it will deal with them. Whatever happens in that Law, the only way it changes our position is if everything that applies to the private sector in this Law also applies to the civil service in that Law. If that is the case, then we should simply leave it in this Law. Whatever else, the Public Service Law would then be different with regard to the immigration situation.

One of the very important principles that is applied throughout this Bill, and rightly so, is the protection of Caymanians at all ages and levels, to ensure that there is equal opportunity in the future for upward mobility and training. The civil service is the largest single employer in these Islands. Regardless of all the good intentions of the Government and its various departments (not only central government but the Statutory Authorities and other government-owned corporations and agencies), how can the largest employer subscribe to a different principle than the private sector? It is that same largest employer that wants to make the Law and say, "Do as I say but not as I do". If the Minister of Education were on this side of the fence, he would say, "Physician, heal thyself". That would be the way he would explain it.

I say that without knowledge of what this Public Service Bill is going to be like, or what it contains. However, I cannot see how it will be as all-encompassing as this piece of legislation before us. Otherwise, why go to all of that trouble and not simply include all government agencies under the same terms? I will tell you this: if there are special terms because it is the civil service, we are going to have to see what they are. We will talk about that at length, too, because something does not sound right to me if there are special conditions attached.

We must lead by example. Every single soul who is in here today (and some who are not) knows of instances where there have been unfair practices, especially when it comes to succession planning. I do not have to go into any gory details, but we all know that. That is one of the fundamental principles applied in this piece of legislation. The Government of the Cayman Islands can be no exception. That is our position. It would be one of God's real miracles for this piece of legislation about which they speak—the Public Service Law—to contain everything that will make it right, so that I will shake my head and say, "Yes, that is the way it should be and that is fine." However, I cannot say any more about it at this point in time, because I do not know what it contains. We will have to see.

Section 42. Considerations of application for work permit by Board: Time is going. If we very quickly look at section 42(3)(e), it says: "(e) his facility in the use of the English language".

I want to believe that should be "his ability".

Section 44. Responsibility of the Board in processing applications for professional employees:

Section 44 reads: "In considering an application for a work permit for a professional employee the Work Permit Board shall—

(a) consult with the appropriate authority".

We are a little confused. We have the definition of a professional employee, with which I dealt before. There is also the latitude for whatever other categories the Board may consider to be professional. Our take on this is that these professionals are attached, in most instances, to some organisation; for example, the Law Society, the Bar Association, or the Society of Medical and Dental Practitioners. I do not know if we are right, or which authority they speak of. Where it says that the Board shall consult with the appropriate authority, the simple question is: Will all these individuals be attached to some entity of that nature for the Board to consult? Is this simply a situation of when it applies?

Section 46. Grant or refusal of work permit: If we go on to section 46(2)(c), it says: "(2) . . . the Board may grant a work permit for a period of up to five years to— . . .

a) persons authorised by the Board in a Business Staffing Plan Authority".

That one must be simple, but it totally evades me because I do not understand it. I do not know exactly what that means.

Section 46(3) says: "(3) The granting under this section of a self-employed work permit shall confer on the applicant therefor the right to be granted, on the payment of the prescribed fee under the Trade and Business Licensing Law (2003 Revision), any licence required under that Law for the carrying on of the gainful occupation authorised by the work permit, but such grant shall not of itself confer any right to a licence under the Local Companies (Control) Law (1999 Revision)."

My only question is: Who is allowed a self-employed work permit? I am not 100 per cent sure what categories of persons are allowed self-employed work permits under this section. I think we ought to be specific and clear if these permits are going to continue to exist.

We can look at section 46: "(46) Subject to section 50, the Board in considering an application under section 40— . . ."

Section 40 says that a person or his perspective employer may apply for a work permit, which is a normal thing. Section 50, to which section 46 is subject, has a whole slew of different categories. It might seem to be clear, via that section, who is eligible for a self-employed work permit—and also when it refers to section 40. When the Minister is winding up, I would like some reference to this, with regard to a very clear and unambiguous application of who is allowed to have a self-employed work permit.

Moving on, 46(8) says: "(8) An application for, or the grant or renewal of, a work permit maybe refused or revoked on any of the following grounds".

I am glad that that wording has changed, because I see that the word "refused" would now apply to an application for a work permit, and the word "re- voked” would deal with the grant or renewal of a work permit. The way it was worded prior to this, Mr. Speaker, was a bit confusing.

Section 49. Prohibition against unauthorised promotion or re-designation: The other thing that is very important, and to which I want to state our agreement here, is section 49, which reads: “(49) During the currency of a work permit, the holder of that permit may not be promoted or re-designated without having applied for and received the approval of the Board, and the Board in considering the application—

- a) shall satisfy itself that the employer has complied with the requirements of the Business Staffing Plan, if any; and
- b) shall have regard to the effect that such promotion or re-designation would have on the opportunity for advancement to that level, of qualified Caymanians already engaged in the same profession or capacity within that business enterprise.”

This is the same point that I made before. It is absolutely important to protect our own in the process, and to allow fair opportunity for upward mobility. We are certainly in agreement with that principle being applied.

Section 51. Temporary work permit: Section 51(2) says: “(2) A temporary work permit granted under subsection (1) shall be for such period not exceeding six months as the Chief Immigration Officer or person granting the permit shall think fit and such grant may neither be extended nor renewed.”

Section 51(1) says: “(1) The Chief Immigration Officer, or in his absence his deputy, may on application in the prescribed form, accompanied by such documentary or other evidence as may be prescribed, by or on behalf of a business visitor who desires to enter or remain in the Islands temporarily for the purposes of any gainful occupation, grant to such business visitor a temporary work permit in the prescribed form upon the payment of the prescribed fee.”

The question is: Is this the only form of temporary work permit allowed in this new law? If it is not, then I am not so sure that we have thought the whole thing through. We do not have any problem with the fact that it cannot be renewed or extended, and I am assuming from the way it is worded that it does not prevent an employer from making an application for a regular work permit, whether for one, two or three years. I also notice that it may be for less than, but up to, six months. Therefore, the applicant will simply have to make it specific in the application what time period he or she wishes to apply for. I asked the question: If this is the only type of temporary work permit, will it take care of all those we know of who have need of such types of applications?

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have three minutes remaining.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are only a couple more points.

Section 66. Requirements to be satisfied by visitors: Section 66(3) speaks to a non-refundable repatriation fee. I do not know whether all repatriation fees under this subsection should be non-refundable. I think we need to look carefully at that, because it does not say that it is non-refundable for any reasons. It simply says that it is non-refundable. It seems to me that all of the fees under section 66(3) are non-refundable.

Section 67. Safeguards regarding permission to land, etc.: Section 67(1)(a),(b) and (c) need some tidying up.

Section 69. Detention of persons who have been refused permission to land, etc.: Also, Section 69 (2) needs some tidying up, and this is not do with intent but actually how it is worded. It is a bit confusing, and I suspect that it may have simply been picked up from an existing law, and just needs tidying up.

Section 70. Duty of master with respect to removal of person landing unlawfully where permission to land is refused: Section 70(1)(b) is also one that needs tidying up.

Section 71. Register to be kept and particulars furnished by hotel keepers and others: Section 71(2) says: “(2) It is the duty of the keeper of any premises to which this section applies to keep a register in the prescribed form”.

I know that the existing Law has it. I do not know how it will be enforced now, or if it will be enforced, and I am wondering whether or not that is something that needs to be looked at.

Section 77. Prohibited immigrants: The final thing I want to speak about is Section 77, and I will do this as quickly as I can. Section 77 (e) and (f) read: “(e) a person who has previously been deported, removed or repatriated from the Islands;

- (f) a member of a class of persons deemed by the Governor on economic grounds or on account of standard or habit of life to be undesirable immigrants and so declared by Order published in the Gazette”.

Because of this, we have a situation that exists right now where spouses of Caymanians have had to be separated from their families for 10 to 15 years, with no seeming light at the end of the tunnel as to whether it is possible or not. I am not trying to suggest that when people do certain things they should not be declared prohibited immigrants. What I do know is that there should be some finite period of time in which a review is made in these instances. Just as we have a parole board for prisoners, there should be some method by which these situations can be examined to see whether, after a certain period of time, these people can be allowed to be reunited with their families. There are children and spouses involved, and there is a lot of turmoil because of the separation of the families.

As we move along, my colleagues will speak about other areas, but I thought it best to bring out these individual and specific points in the Bill that is proposed, to ask the Government to make consideration and to see if amendments are in order. Certainly, we would wish to act in concert with this Bill, so that we can move forward in a constructive manner. However, we also found it very necessary to speak of these individual situations, because we would like to see it tidied up as much as possible.

Thank you very much Mr. Speaker. I do trust that the Bill will have safe passage. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak? Does any other Member wish to speak?

If not, would the Mover —

Honourable Member, the next time I will not allow you to speak, because I had given ample time, but you may continue.

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps I can be forgiven, Sir. Having listened to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition for the last two hours, I would have expected that a member of the Government would respond to the substantial number of proposed amendments that he made, and that we on this side would have listened to what they had to say before one of us was required to speak. Since that is not the case, I am forced to my feet at this late hour.

This is a very important Bill that is before the House. In my view, it has come to the House very late in the day. It is a matter that should have been dealt with by the Government as a matter of expedition some considerable time ago. If that had happened, there is no doubt in my mind that we would have avoided the controversy that has raged about the issue of some 2,500 grants of status by Cabinet, and all of the other consequences, social or otherwise, that have followed and are bound to follow that exercise by Cabinet.

My colleague, the Leader of the Opposition, has spent two hours going through the Bill in some detail, section by section. I believe he has proposed, on behalf of the Opposition, a number of important amendments, and pointed out a number of errors, which are inevitable in the course of drafting a Bill as comprehensive and as complex as this one. In what is, perhaps, something of a switch of roles, I am proposing to offer debate on a more philosophical basis, he having done the job which I am used to doing—that is, of analysing the law section by section.

May I have a moment, Sir?

The Speaker: Certainly.

[Pause]

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, immigration has been an important feature of Caymanian society from the very beginning. It is a feature that has, in recent times, created concern, debate and in some instances, alarm. However, it is also the single most important feature that has contributed to Cayman's amazing development and prosperity over the course of the last three decades or so. I do not believe that can be gainsaid.

In 1970, the population of these Islands was just over 10,000 people. Even at that point—or perhaps I should say particularly at that point—concerns were expressed about ensuring that we regulated the number of persons who came here, and the economic activities in which they could participate in this country. The fear was that by their sheer number and wealth, they would be able to pursue the economic advantages of these Islands which had recently become apparent, if proper regulations were not in place.

Therefore, in 1971, our predecessors in this Honourable House passed the Caymanian Protection Law, 1971. It is instructive to have a look at the memorandum and objects of that Bill, passed all those years ago, to understand the basis for the legislation that is currently in place in these Islands, and the rationale that underlies that legislation. I ask your leave, Mr. Speaker, to refer to the Caymanian Protection Law, 1971, Law 23 of 1971, and in particular to the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: It reads, Mr. Speaker: “By reason of the tax advantages afforded to many people by taking up residence in the Cayman Islands, and the unprecedented prosperity of the tourist industry, there has arisen a grave risk that the social character of the Islands as well as the way of life of the population may be adversely affected by the influx of private and business settlers, and other consequential factors. It is sought to enact legislation calculated to control the situation by affording means of protecting the traditional way of life of the Islanders by cushioning the impact of the establishment of international business interests and of settlement here by peo- ple who formerly had no interest in the public and private affairs of these Islands.

“It is also sought to take advantage of the opportunity to consolidate and bring up to date the law affecting immigration and deportation.”

It may seem to us, this distance from 1971, that those who went before us were prescient, or prophets, or something of the like, for given the smallness of the population at that point, given the limited number of business opportunities that were then available, or seemed to be available, and given the fledgling nature of the financial and tourist industries at that time, it took a special people not only to understand, but to have the courage to put into place legislation that even now, many would claim might have the adverse effect of discouraging investment and immigration, and discouraging people from coming here, setting up shop, and doing business.

Those brave souls in 1971 did have the vision, the fortitude, and the courage to pass the Caymanian Protection Law, 1971, which has formed the basis of our immigration legislation up to this point. It was not passed, Mr. Speaker, all by itself. It was part of a package that involved the Local Companies (Control) Law, 1971 and the Trade and Business Licensing Law, 1971. All three pieces of companion legislation came into effect on or about the same time. All were designed to cause one particular result; that is, to regulate immigration and the doing of business in these Islands by persons who were not Caymanian. They have worked reasonably well. In fact, they worked very well in the early days. In fact, there has only been one truly significant change in the underlying premise of the legislation since then. That was the Caymanian Protection Law, 1984, which many say (me included) simply did not go far enough, at that time, to address the growing concerns these Islands faced.

If we had not had the benefit of the 1971 pieces of legislation, but in particular the Caymanian Protection Law, 1971, one wonders where these Islands would be, in terms of who would be in control of the economic and political fortunes of these Islands. We have not been a people who have been very prolific in producing more Caymanians—not by way of natural increase. Natural increase in these Islands has been very modest, while the overall increase in population has been nothing short of mind-boggling. The majority of that number has been the result of immigration. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, if one has a look at the First Interim Report of the Immigration Review Team, of which I had the honour to be a member, the team has set out a summary of some very instructive statistics.

I am reading from the Report at page 8: “In 1970 the population of these Islands was just over 10,000. The last census in 1999 placed the figure at approximately 41,000. Indeed, the 1999 census figures demonstrated a population increase of 55.4 per cent over the 1989 figures [that was a 55 per cent increase in 10 years] and the census report noted that at this rate of growth the Islands’ population would double by the year 2015.

“More significant than the overall population growth however, is the census finding that only 53% of the population is Caymanian, either through parentage or grants of status. This figure declined from 67% in 1989 with Caymanians now making up a mere 42% of the workforce. Meanwhile, between 1989 and 1999 the number of Caymanians in the country grew from 16,868 to 20,491, a modest increase of 1.9 percent per annum. Over the same period the non-Caymanian population more than doubled, growing at 8.2% per annum. The number of non-Caymanians living in the Islands at the time of the 1999 census was 18,529, up from 8,387 in 1989. On September 14, 2001, there were 13,851 work permits in force.”

We see something about the demographics of the growth of the Caymanian population since 1970. Unfortunately, because of the tremendous growth of the population, the tremendous business opportunities and the economic advantages that this population growth and the good management of the country caused, what has happened is that we, as a people, became more and more concerned, understandably, about being outnumbered in our own country, about being overwhelmed by the sheer volume of persons from other places. That is an understandable and reasonable concern for us to have. Even up until now, we, as a people, have not come to truly appreciate that continued development is a pre-cursor to the requirement for more immigration. That is a reality. The fortunes of this country have been tied to development, and development means more people required to build the places, to provide services to the places and then to actually carry on the business in the places that these buildings are built for in the first place.

That is a reality with which we have never been able to come to grips, or to reconcile. If you ask the average Caymanian, they are all going to express concerns about the number of foreigners who are here, and how the foreigners are taking away their jobs and business opportunities. However, the moment you say that you are either going to either restrict or deny work permits for their particular business, there is a huge outcry, “I am concerned about the overall number, but please do not mess with the ones that I need.”

That has been the attitude that we have had forever and ever. Either consciously or unconsciously, as a people and as legislators—including, certainly, those who came before me—we have decided that the best thing to do was to do nothing, and simply hope that things would be okay.

Let us restrict the opportunities for these people to participate in the usual activities that one does in any society. Let us restrict their right to vote; if we significantly restrict their right to vote, we will be able to prevent them from exercising real influence over the political directorate, and who makes up the political directorate of the country—so we have said. If we go further, and make it impossible for persons not born here (or at least not born of indigenous Caymanian stock) to be able to stand for election, we will be secure. This is the situation, so that the political decision-making in the country will be vested in the hands of those who have Caymanian roots, forever and ever, Amen.

The policy has been to continue to restrict the rights and abilities of those who were not born here, or not born of persons who were Caymanian. We did that in relation to the election, as far as the Elections Law (2000 Revision) was concerned, and through the Constitution. We did it by reducing and restricting the categories of persons who were entitled to Caymanian status under the Caymanian Protection Law, 1984, and subsequently the Immigration Law (2003 Revision). If we look at the qualifications for Caymanian status in 1971, it seems unbelievable that it would be so easy to be Caymanian, or to be a person of Caymanian status. If I may refer to it, Sir, the 1971 legislation provides, at section 14: “14. Every British subject who—

- (a) is qualified as of right for Caymanian status under section 15; [we will have to look at section 15 to see what that means] “or
- (b) has been granted Caymanian status under section 17, and has not in either case lost such status, is a person of Caymanian status.”

Section 14(b), which I just read, relates to a grant of status by the Board on the basis of residence.

“15. Any British subject who—

- (a) was born in the Cayman Islands or of parents at least one of whom at the time of his birth was domiciled or ordinarily resident in the Cayman Islands; or
- (b) was domiciled in the Cayman Islands at the time of the coming into effect of this Law and has been declared to be so domiciled under subsection (1) of Section 16; or
- (c) has been ordinarily resident in the Cayman Islands for a total period of five years out of the seven years immediately prior to the coming into effect of this Law; or
- (d) has been and remained a grantee of Caymanian status under section 17 for a period of five years and upwards; or
- (e) is the child, or a step-child or an adopted child under the age of eighteen years, of a person to whom any of the foregoing paragraphs of this section apply . . .
- (f) is a citizen of the United Kingdom and Colonies by reason of the grant by the Governor of a certificate of Naturalisation under the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Acts 1914-1943, or a certificate of Naturalisation or of registration under the British Nationality Acts 1948-1965 or any Act amending or replacing those Acts, is a person of Caymanian status, as of right.”

Back in 1971, any British subject—any person who was born of a person who was a British subject who was domiciled and ordinarily resident in the Cayman Islands at the time of his birth—was entitled to status. They did not need any Caymanian connection or Caymanian roots. However, even then, the threat that was perceived, and the level of concern and alarm, was nothing near what it has become over the course of the last two decades or so, because the numbers were a lot less.

The reason I am trying to set out this background is so that we understand a little more about the way Caymanians have felt, and the way many still continue to feel about (as some of them say) “giving away the country” to those persons who were not born here, or were not born of indigenous Caymanian stock.

It is important that we understand a little about the indigenous Caymanian. There are those who always say, “Oh, there is no such thing as an indigenous Caymanian”. There is no such thing as an indigenous American, or if you go back far enough, an indigenous Englishman, either.

Throughout human civilization, the human species has been nomadic. About the only place in the world that people can claim not to be truly indigenous is Africa: the birthplace of mankind. All of the rest of us, at some point or another, came to someplace from somewhere else.

Simply the fact that we can only trace the settlement of these Islands back to about 1700, which only gives us about three hundred years of settlement, simply means that we were that much later in creating our community, and in developing our society. However, it makes us no less indigenous, because there was no one here before us.

I was having a look at Founded Upon the Seas. It is very good work by Michael Craton, which was kindly presented to us by the Honourable Minister for Education. I read the following words, and I crave leave to refer to them at page 33 of that book.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: It reads: “People did not settle permanently on any of the Cayman Islands before about 1700, though, as we have seen, some temporary settlements existed before then. To be truly permanent, settlements require the presence of women and families, and it is only after 1700 that we have certain record of these.”

It is said also in this book, and elsewhere, that some of the first settlers here were the Boddens (or the Bowdens), and the Walters (or Watlers, as they became)—two of whom are reputed to have been members of Cromwell's disbanded army in Jamaica.

Those people who came to these Islands in the late 1600s and 1700s, who came here voluntarily or were washed up on our shores as the result of a shipwreck, but who persevered in this inhospitable environment—as this place must have been back then—were a different breed of people altogether. To imagine what this place must have been like, in the late 1600s and early 1700s is very difficult, but we know from the Cayman in which I grew up that it was virtually all swamp, that it was mosquito-infested, and that there were few things growing, and little capability to grow things to eat. There were none of the creature comforts that one would normally associate with a civilised society or country. Those people, who came here voluntarily, or who were forced to come but remained and persevered, were a special breed of people—resilient, tough, independent, hard working, God-fearing, and sea-faring people. That is the stock from which we come; that is the stock from which I come. My mother is a double Boddens; both of her parents were Boddens.

I am the fifth generation on my father's side to be born in these Islands. If that does not qualify me as indigenous, then I do not know what else does. With every fibre of my being, I resent suggestions that all those who have just come are the same (and I do not mean legally), or that we have no right, as a people, to determine who we wish to remain here, or to embrace, because we are all just settlers. There are settlers and then there are settlers. There are those who beat mosquitoes or whose forebears beat mosquitoes, and suffered through all sorts of bad times and hurricanes, who built, and struggled, and made this country. Those people, and their concerns and their fears, are real. They should not be simply pushed aside because there are now more who have come over the course of the last 30 years than there are of those who were either born here or born of parents who were born here.

I was reminded by someone just the other day of a letter I wrote to the press back in September of 1998, in which I spoke about tolerance and exploitation. We have taken many licks and received a really bad name internationally, because, they say, of our exploitative and unfair immigration policies. I have been a proponent of immigration reform for as long as I can recall. The records speak from long before I was honoured to take a seat in this House. Let me make it clear: I do not believe it is fair to allow people to stay in your country for extended periods of time, and not accord them the right to apply for the closest thing to citizenship that we can grant.

I was a big proponent for immigration reform. I was a member of the Immigration Review Team that produced these three reports. Let no one believe from the tenor of my argument now that I am against what is in the Bill, at all. I simply need to debunk some of these myths about the kind of people we are. I have said before, and I say again, without fear of contradiction, that Caymanians are among the most tolerant people in God's created Earth. We have gone from a population of 10,000, to approximately 41,000, over the course of three decades. We have welcomed to our shores over a hundred different nationalities, resident currently, with all their different cultures, attitudes and approaches to things. This community is still one of the most harmonious, in every sense of the word, that one could seek to find. Try that anywhere else; try adding that number of nationalities—that sheer number of persons—into any society anywhere else, over such a short period of time, and see if you do not have serious social and racial tensions come into play.

That is a testimonial to the kind of people we are. Do you know why we are like that, Mr. Speaker, in my respectful view? It has to do with our history—not just “ancient” history (if I can use that word in the context of 300 years), but our recent history as well. We have always known the need to go somewhere else to make a living, for there was very little here that we could do. That is why we became seafarers by nature, because it was from the sea that we were able to derive a living. When the time and the opportunity arose that we could go elsewhere, in the 1950's, 1960's and 1970's, when we could sail the high seas on the National Bulk Carrier and different American and other ships, we understood how important it was to our families, and to the development of this society, that we had the right to go and work in somebody else's country, on somebody else's ship. We also knew how important it was to be able to interact with other cultures, and to be tolerant of other people's ways and ideas. That is what our men, in particular, brought back to this country. Those are the kinds of attitudes and experiences that have contributed to the society that we have. That is why we greet people from anywhere with a smile.

In some ways, we have been too tolerant, and we have been less than courageous in recent times in dealing with the consequences that flowed, and continue to flow, from our tremendous success and development. In some instances, we have allowed people to get away with economic murder and exploitation, because we are afraid that if we take a principled stand, we may drive that business away.

We have now reached a point where we have developed the maturity to understand that we cannot make everybody happy all the time, and that those of us who are charged with that responsibility, having conducted whatever consultation is necessary, have to make the decisions we believe are in the best long-term interests of these Islands. There will always be those who squawk about everything, or about something, that we do.

The Honourable Minister of Tourism, the Leader of Government Business, said that successive governments have failed to address the immigration issue. I could not agree with him more, and for that they should never be forgiven. However, I remind him that he was a part of one of those governments as well, and so should take at least some miniscule part of the blame for the matter not having been addressed thus far.

The reason it has not been addressed up until now is that any time we sought to deal with an immigration matter, particularly in relation to work permits or Caymanian status, there were segments of the community that went up in arms about it. Caymanians feared that if we gave more people Caymanian status, and if we removed the requirement of work permits and the control inherent in those, their rights and opportunities would be stymied. As far as work permits are concerned, the business community does not want you to mess with them. That is their lifeblood. As bad as the system might be or might seem, let us not rock the boat.

I do not know how many select committees on immigration we have had. We have had Vision 2008, with everybody suggesting reform, but it was not until the 2000 Government was elected that the Leader of the Opposition, who was then Leader of Government Business, had courage enough to appoint an Immigration Review Team, which has produced these three reports. Let us give—and I hope they do not take me the wrong way—the devils their due. This Government has had the courage to carry through on most of the Immigration Review Team's proposals, and for that I laud them. I only wish, as I have said before, that they had dealt with this before they took the step to grant status through Cabinet. I would not have had anything to complain about for most of this year, Mr. Speaker, had that been the case.

There are two things that we have to consider. One is the interests of Caymanians—if I can be so bold again, I will call them indigenous Caymanians. We also have to balance the interests of those who have been here for extended periods of time. That includes persons who are on work permits. As a people, and as a nation, we have to recognise how unfair we have been to persons who have been here for long periods of time, and I believe this proposed legislation does so.

I must tell you that I do not feel quite so strongly about persons who came here after the age of majority and made conscious decisions to stay and do various things. I acknowledge that they should get status—I am not trying to say that they should not—but I do not feel quite as powerfully about them, or the unfairness to them, as I do about their children.

All of us know of many persons who, if they were not born here, came here when they were too young to remember anywhere else as home; who have grown up here; who speak like we do; who like the same foods we do; who like the same music we do; who, if you did not know otherwise, you would presume were Caymanian. I have had many experiences with that, not only since I have been here over these past three years, but in my former incarnation. I have been presented time and time again with persons who have an immigration issue, persons I presumed were Caymanian from the time I first saw them, simply from the way they behaved, spoke and looked. Not only is it grossly unfair to those persons to deny them the right to be Caymanian, but we are depriving this society, this community and this country of the benefit of their abilities and talents. Often—and this is where the rubber usually meets the road—many of those young people have tremendous academic potential, but are unable to apply for a scholarship. Virtually every scholarship that I know of in these Islands first requires that the applicant be a person of Caymanian status. Those whose families do not have the economic means to send them to school generally knock about, or in many instances, wind up in the civil service, where they are very useful employees. However, it is not what they really want to do, and it is not what they are most able to do. Without much more than a high school education, it is very difficult for them to progress to where they would like to go.

Again, as a nation, we have to recognise the inequity and the sheer stupidity of marginalising these groups of people. We have to give them a vehicle through which they can obtain the right to be Caymanian, and be able to exploit and benefit from the advantages that this right confers. They, in turn, will contribute much to the further development, progress and prosperity of these little Islands.

They are the ones who really should get status (or the right to become Caymanian—I am going to have to get used to this new terminology). When we embrace those persons, and confer upon them the right to be Caymanian, we do not even notice the difference. Most people have presumed all along that they are Caymanian, because they speak and behave the way we do.

I have always said that we are not producing enough Caymanians the old-fashioned way, so the next best thing we can do is to embrace those who are as much like us as we could want. By increasing those numbers, and adding them to the number of Caymanians, we also reduce this fear that the number of foreigners is significantly exceeding that of Caymanians, because we have made more Caymanians.

That is a very good reason to produce this kind of legislation, which will give those who have been here for long periods of time, who are Caymanian in their outlooks, attitudes and speech, the ability to gain the benefit of being Caymanian. There should not be some long, convoluted process, as is the case under the current legislation. It must be simple and straightforward; it should determine very swiftly whether one is entitled or not. I believe that the legislation, by and large, does have that effect.

In relation to the work permits issue, many have eschewed this question of fixed- or limited-term work permits, particularly in the financial industry. The rationale always put forward is that if we do not have an open-ended provision that allows people believe, at least, that if they come and settle in our country, and pursue their careers here, they will be able to do so indefinitely (and in the case of professionals such as lawyers, accountants and the like, that ultimately they can hope to become partners, live happily ever after and make millions in your country), then you are not going to be able to attract the calibre of person that you want.

I do not subscribe to that. In my experience, which is not insignificant, I have never been party to hiring a lawyer who came here prepared to sign a five-year contract. Virtually no one comes here with the thought in their head that this is where they are going to settle for life. They come here and experience the place, and I have heard many of them say that this place grows on you. There is nothing wrong with that. However, if people come knowing initially that, save in exceptional circumstances, they are not going to be permitted to stay beyond seven years, then they come with that thought in mind. I do not believe that that is going to prevent too many people who wish a jaunt in the Caribbean from coming. I simply do not believe that to be the case.

Even if that were the case, we have to balance that supposed deterrent effect against the situation that we currently face. How long can this society, tolerant though it is, be expected to accept increasing numbers of foreigners as part of its permanent population?

Mr. Speaker, I am not one who believes that 41,000 is enough, that we should chop it off here and the population should not get any bigger, because all sorts of bad things are going to happen. I do not believe that at all. Over time, these Islands are quite capable of sustaining a population significantly larger than 41,000. The risk that we run, if we do not slow the pace at which we are absorbing people as part of the permanent population, is that we are going to destroy the very things that make the place so attractive in the first place. We are already at risk of doing that. This is not today; this is not even as a result of what Cabinet did in relation to the 2,500 grants of status. I think that has exacerbated things, but this is a situation that existed even before that. There is a resentment in certain quarters to "them foreigners coming here and taking away all our opportunities. They making all the money, and we still suffering".

The more people there are, as part of the permanent population, who do not speak or act the way we do, who are insensitive to things that Caymanians regard as important, the more we heighten social tensions, and the more we run the risk of developing real problems. If we pace ourselves, if the permanent population is able to grow at a reasonable pace so that people are absorbed and integrated into the community, and if we build the Caymanian population and Caymanian society, good things are going to continue to happen to these Islands. However, if we reach the breaking point—and I do not think we are so far off from it now—where young professionals in this community in particular feel that they are not being given opportunities for advancement because foreigners are being brought in to do things that they could do, and if we do not have provisions in the law, such as there are now in the Bill (which says that before you are promoted to partner you need immigration clearance to do so), we are going to have serious problems in this country.

The first of June next year will be 20 years since I joined my firm. I have knocked around the financial industry in these Islands for some considerable time. I know by experience, and not because somebody else tells me, the inherent prejudices and discriminations that exist. I know the attitudes that are often demonstrated. I have never allowed them to keep me back, nor do I dwell on them, but I acknowledge and recognise them. Unless there are provisions in the law that promote and protect the interests of Caymanians, there will continue to be that kind of discrimination and prejudice, and we are going to wind up with serious problems.

Although this whole question of limited-term permits is controversial, and although I myself struggle with it, because it is going to affect my firm as it is going to affect anyone else's firm, I am confident that in the long term it is the best that we can do. We have to balance one against the other. If it has a deterrent effect on the calibre of persons who come in—which I do not believe it that will have—then we will have to look at it again. I believe that the provisions here allow the Board sufficient flexibility if a firm can make a proper case as to why somebody should be retained beyond seven years.

Perhaps I can explain some of the rationale of the Immigration Review Team when we were thinking this whole thing through. We adopted ten years as the benchmark for a number of reasons. We felt that it is the period by which most people would feel that they belong to a community. It was also the period by which, under one of the European conventions, the United Kingdom was bound, and by extension, we were bound, to offer persons the right to apply for citizenship. That citizenship is British citizenship, not Caymanian status or the right to be Caymanian, but it seemed like an appropriate benchmark, or period, by which we should be giving people the right to permanently reside.

Having established that benchmark, Mr. Speaker, we had to work backwards to come up with a period by which people were either in the system for good, or out of the system. For that period, we came up with seven years, because if people were permitted to remain here beyond seven years, they were then entitled to apply for permanent residence. If they get permanent residence, they can then move on to British Overseas Territories citizenship, and then, in due course, to status. For all persons who are here, we knew we would create certainty, fairness and an opportunity to participate in the process.

However, we were determined to recommend that the number of persons who got beyond the seven-year mark was significantly reduced. That is the only way we would be able to significantly reduce the number of persons we were going to add to our permanent population base, and ultimately, make Caymanian. There has to be a filter; otherwise, we wind up with a perpetuation of the system we have now, about which we are all complaining. Five years from now, we will have another slew of so many thousand persons who are screaming, yelling and clamouring that they have been here so long they should be entitled to status. If we were ever going to stanch that flow, we had to build in a filter to reduce the number of persons who reached the point at which they would ultimately qualify to apply to become permanent members of this society.

That is a social policy decision. If the Honourable Minister of Community Affairs were here, he would say that it is social engineering. However, a certain amount of that, particularly in a society as small as we are, is necessary. Because we are so small, it can work very quickly and effectively. We will be able to determine what the results are, and if adjustments are necessary, as I am sure they will be, we will make the adjustments. However, we must do something. I think the country as a whole accepted that we could not continue with the status quo. We could not continue this nonsense of quotas of 15 or 18 persons per year, when we have thousands of persons who have been here for well over 10 years. Although the Government should never be forgiven for indiscriminately granting status to 2,500 persons in one fell swoop, the fact remains that a large number of those persons would have to have been dealt with under this legislation. Had this legislation been passed, and had its provisions been applied, we would not have wound up with the significant number of persons who really should not ever have been granted status as a result of that exercise by Cabinet.

However, that is an argument for another day and I am not going to—

The Speaker: Honourable Members, we have now reached the hour of 8.30 pm. May I have a motion for the adjournment from the Honourable Leader of Government Business?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, the Member was going so well that I was wondering whether he wanted to finish up another hour.

The Speaker: I am at the mercy of the House, if you wish to go on for another hour.

Mr. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: No, Sir.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I think that it is the wish that we adjourn on this time, and accordingly we propose to work tomorrow, after Cabinet concludes business. I would think that out of caution, we should say from 2.30 pm until we finish the Bill. Mr. Speaker, accordingly, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 2.30 pm tomorrow afternoon.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until on Tuesday 16 December 2003 at 2.30 pm

All those in favour, please say Aye. All those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 8.30 pm the House stood adjourned until Tuesday, 16 December 2003, at 2.30 pm.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
TUESDAY
16 DECEMBER 2003
3.37 PM
Fifteenth Sitting

The Speaker: I will invite the Honourable First Official Member to grace us with prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. James M. Ryan: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.
